PROCEEDINGS AND DEBATES OF THE 105th CONGRESS, FIRST SESSION

Vol. 143

WASHINGTON, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 1, 1997

No. 134

House of Representatives

The House met at 10 a.m. and was called to order by the Speaker pro tempore [Mr. QUINN].

DESIGNATION OF THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following communication from the Speaker:

WASHINGTON, DC,
October 1, 1997.

I hereby designate the Honorable JACK QUINN to act as Speaker pro tempore on this day.

NEWT GINGRICH,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

PRAYER

The Chaplain, Reverend James David Ford, D.D., offered the following prayer:

For all Your favor to us, O God, and for the grace that You give to us in our lives, we offer this prayer of thanksgiving and praise.

While problems exist in our land and in the world and tensions can overwhelm even the strongest among us, yet we know that Your good spirit can lead and guide us when we need direction, give us comfort and assurance when we hurt, and forgive us when we miss the mark.

For all these blessings, O God, that are new every morning and with us all the day long, we offer these words of thanksgiving and praise.

This is our earnest prayer. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair has examined the Journal of the last day's proceedings and announces to the House his approval thereof.

Pursuant to clause 1, rule I, the Journal stands approved.

Mr. McNULTY. Mr. Speaker, pursuant to clause 1, rule I, I demand a vote on agreeing to the Speaker's approval of the Journal.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the Chair's approval of the Journal.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. McNULTY. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 5, rule I, further proceedings on this question will be postponed.

The point of no quorum is considered withdrawn.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Will the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SHIMKUS] come forward and lead the House in the Pledge of Allegiance.

Mr. SHIMKUS led the Pledge of Allegiance as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate by Ms. McDevitt, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed without amendment bills of the House of the following titles:

H.R. 394. An act to provide for the release of the reversionary interest held by the United States in certain property located in the County of Iosco, Michigan; and

H.R. 1948. An act to provide for the exchange of lands within Admiralty Island National Monument, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed with an amendment in which the concurrence of the House is requested, a bill of the House of the following title:

H.R. 2472. An act to extend certain programs under the Energy Policy and Conservation Act.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair announces he will entertain five 1-minute speeches from each side.

SUPPORT THE ENERGY POLICY ACT AMENDMENTS OF 1997

(Mr. SHIMKUS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SHIMKUS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to ask support from my colleagues for legislation I introduced with the gentlewoman from New York [Mrs. MCCARTHY] to classify biodiesel and its blended versions as an alternative fuel under the Energy Policy Act of 1992.

Biodiesel is a renewable alternative fuel for diesel engines derived from soybeans. The production, sale, and use of biodiesel is good for the environment, good for family farmers, and good for the economy. Biodiesel runs cleaner than regular diesel fuel, which means that fewer emissions, such as particulate matter, hydrocarbons, and carbon monoxide, are released into the environment. Meanwhile, soybean farmers are given a new market in which to sell their product, which helps them and the economy.

Mr. Speaker, this legislation does not create a tax credit, a tax incentive, or a Federal mandate. In fact, it costs the taxpayers nothing. This bill gives fleet managers the option to use biodiesel in heavy-duty fleet vehicles, such as city buses, boats, and trucks, in order to comply with the Federal mandates of the Energy Policy Act of 1992.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to support the Energy Policy Act amendments of 1997.

UNION BOSSES TAKING MONEY FROM WORKING FAMILIES TO PAY FOR THEIR POLITICAL AGENDA

(Mr. TIAHRT asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. TIAHRT. Mr. Speaker, we have heard a lot about campaign finance reform, and America thinks it is important that we have the freedom to support candidates that lift up the same ideals they do, freedom to determine which candidate will push for the public policies that will create a better America for their children.

But many working men and women in America cannot do that. See, every month they have taken from their paychecks compulsory union dues, and more than 80 percent of those dues come right here to Washington where union bosses obtain it. These union bosses are taking money from working families who are struggling to provide for their families, and they spend it on their own political agenda and on their own union candidates.

Mr. Speaker, that is not freedom, that is oppression. It is wrong, the Supreme Court said it was wrong in the Beck decision, and so we cannot have campaign finance reform without freeing American workers from the unlawful burden.

Let us make the Beck decision the law of the land.

VETERANS AWAIT CONGRESSIONAL MOVE ON FROZEN IRAQI ASSETS

(Mr. DOGGETT asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. DOGGETT. Mr. Speaker, the current issue of the Stars and Stripes, the oldest national veterans newspaper in this land, tells the whole story. The lead headline is "Veterans Await Congressional Move on Frozen Iraqi Assets."

It is referring to the need for a congressional move on the Helms amendment, an amendment that would bar completely the right of every gulf war veteran to assert their claim against the frozen assets of Saddam Hussein. That amendment is wrong, and this morning this House has an opportunity to approve a motion to approve it on a record vote, to go down clearly on the side of the veterans of this country, who have defended this country, and respond to this issue.

And yet even this very morning in the morning newspapers, the author of the Helms amendment still insists on a position that would deny 1 red cent, veterans would not get 1 red cent, from Saddam Hussein if his position prevailed.

Let us approve the motion and send a message across the hall to Senator HELMS that we will stand up for veterans.

CAMPAIGN FINANCE LAWS DID NOT STAND IN THE WAY OF THE CLINTON-GORE REELECTION CAMPAIGN

(Mr. BOB SCHAFFER of Colorado asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BOB SCHAFFER of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, when Americans opened up their newspaper last week, this is what they found:

DNC Teamsters and the Teamsters traded funds. Clinton-Gore campaign implicated in scheme to raise illegal donations. Court records show that the Clinton-Gore Reelection Committee and the Democrat National Committee conspired with Teamsters to divert money to a union boss's election. They conspired to hide these illegal contributions, and they conspired to swap funds with Teamsters. We know this because three aides to Teamster boss Ron Carey pleaded guilty to these felony charges of diverting funds through various political groups to the Teamsters. It was payback time over at the Clinton-Gore Reelection Committee, and so an illegal laundering scheme was hatched, and no campaign finance laws were going to stand in their way.

Here is how the laundry cycle worked: Take the union funds, put it to Democrat Senate and House election committees; the Clinton-Gore campaign pays back by calling their wealthy donors to send cash to the Carey reelection campaign.

And here we have just one more example of a Presidential legacy that makes Richard Nixon's legacy look like an ethics guide to the Boy Scouts.

MAKE MY OVERRIDE

(Mr. TRAFICANT asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. TRAFICANT. A spokesman said the White House will reform the IRS and any congressional bill that goes too far will be vetoed; "veto," the magic word. I expect to see Groucho's duck any day here.

Beam me up, Mr. Speaker, and it is time for Congress to take a stand. Who is kidding whom? The White House reforming the IRS would be like Barney Fife trying to reform Al Capone. My colleagues know it, I know it, and the American people know it.

Let us tell it like it is. If the President wants to carry water for the Internal Revenue Service, let him, and it is time for Congress to strap on the six-shooters and tell the President, "Make my override. Veto this."

Let us straighten those bums out.

ASKING QUESTIONS ABOUT CAMPAIGN FINANCE REFORM

(Mr. ROGAN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. ROGAN. Mr. Speaker, for the last several weeks we have been treated to a daily passionate call for campaign finance reform from our friends on the other side.

To those in the audience who listen to these debates and are actually persuaded by the seriousness of this litany, I suggest they ask a few questions to those people who make a daily practice of delivering these impassioned speeches.

Ask them if accepting campaign contributions from foreign governments should be illegal. If so, why are they silent on the subject, and who do they perceive to be the ones violating this on a routine basis?

Should laundering money from foreign sources to conceal its origin be illegal? If so, ask them who they see as being responsible for this practice.

Should shredding evidence to conceal criminal activity be illegal? If so, who do they see as being responsible for this practice?

Should raising money in Buddhist temples be illegal? Should fundraising on Federal property be illegal? If so, why are they so strangely silent on these real practices?

Listen closely to what these members are not saying, rather than what they are saying, and get a great education as to where they really stand on campaign finance reform.

ARKANSAS AND AMERICA HAVE COME A LONG WAY IN 40 YEARS

(Mr. DAVIS of Illinois asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DAVIS of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to commend the gentlemen from Arkansas, MARION BERRY, ASA HUTCHINSON, VIC SNYDER, and JAY DICKEY, for their eloquent and passionate remarks in commemorating the 40th anniversary of the integration of Central High School in Little Rock, AR. They reminded me that 40 years ago I too lived in Arkansas and, like JAY DICKEY, was a college freshman. Our heroes were Ernie Green, Melba Patillo, Gloria Ray, Thomas Jefferson, Minnie Jean Brown, Daisy Bates, Wiley Branton, and the rest of the Little Rock Nine.

Someone commented that in 40 years Arkansas has come a long way. I agree. But then I say so, too, has America.

AMERICA'S VETERANS VERSUS TOBACCO COMPANIES

(Mr. EDWARDS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. EDWARDS. Mr. Speaker, in the next hour this House will have a clear choice. It is a choice between America's veterans versus tobacco companies. It is a choice between veterans versus partisanship.

As someone who represents over 40,000 Army soldiers and 60,000 veterans in my district, I am disappointed and outraged that a Republican leader in the other body would add language to the foreign aid bill that actually gives tobacco companies precedence over Desert Storm veterans regarding claims against frozen Iraqi assets. What a slap in the face to every Desert Storm veteran and all veterans everywhere.

Desert Storm veterans were first in combat. They should not be last in line regarding legitimate claims against the Iraqis.

Mr. Speaker, I did not see tobacco companies fighting in Desert Storm. But I did see American service men and women fighting there, and I did have constituents who died on the sands of Kuwait in service to their Nation.

□ 1015

Those people, not tobacco companies, should be put first in line. They stood up for us; today we should stand up for them, and I hope my Republican colleagues will join the gentleman from Texas [Mr. DOGGETT] and the Democrats, and will work together to defeat the Helms amendment to the foreign aid bill.

MANPRINT FOR THE U.S. ARMY

(Mr. SKELTON asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. SKELTON. Mr. Speaker, today, it is my pleasure to share with my colleagues a good news story, one about our Nation's military and, in particular, our Army. It involves a materiel acquisition program first developed in the 1980's for Army soldiers. It is called MANPRINT, which stands for manpower and personnel integration.

The MANPRINT program objective is to improve the performance of Army weapons and equipment through a man-machine total systems approach. That is, MANPRINT focuses on the interrelationship of the soldier and his or her weapon or equipment and the human requirements for maximizing system performance. In a nutshell, it does not make any difference if there is a tank that is capable of firing 10 rounds per minute if its crew can only operate it at three rounds per minute. Regardless of its technical capabilities, the tank is a three-round-per-minute tank due to the human factors that limit its output. This is the kind of problem MANPRINT addresses.

MANPRINT is an umbrella term that refers to seven disciplines that are critical to optimizing the man-machine, total-system approach. They are manpower, personnel, training, human factors engineering, system safety, health hazards, and soldier survivability. The central idea is to integrate considerations of these domains continuously into the acquisition process.

Thanks to MANPRINT the Army now has a vastly increased confidence that its new systems will perform as expected in the hands of its soldiers—and, at the same time, save lives and dollars. As I will explain later, MANPRINT has, in fact, already saved hundreds of soldiers' lives and billions of dollars. It has returned thousands of percent on a trickle of investment dollars. It is, or should be, a governmental downsizer's dream come true. Moreover, in this day of increased reliance on technology, we are only beginning to explore the ramifications the Army's concept could have for our entire society.

There is an element of urgency associated with this Army program, however, and the very real danger that we could repeat mistakes of the past—the type where U.S. inventors or progressive thinkers create great ideas which we fail to appreciate and implement. Instead, other countries capitalize on them. You will recall the Dr. W. Edward Deming's ideas on quality were ignored in this country in the 1950's and then successfully adopted by the Japanese. We may be on the verge of committing such a mistake with the Army's MANPRINT program. The Army resources devoted to MANPRINT have been continually slashed during the drawdown. At the same time, the United Kingdom has picked up on the U.S. Army's idea and is already in the process of implementing it throughout all services in the royal force. Moreover, as the Japanese recognized, Deming's quality ideas applied to all technology, not just defense. Not surprisingly, the British are starting MANPRINT programs in the Departments of Trade and Industry as well.

In order to reduce the likelihood of our making the same error with MANPRINT as we did with Deming's quality management, I want to make sure my colleagues are familiar with this highly successful soldier-oriented concept for the design, development, manufacturing, and fielding of the Army's newest weapon's systems.

ARMY ACQUISITION PROGRAMS LED TO ADOPTION OF MANPRINT

I am sure that many of you recall the manpower and readiness problems that plagued the Army force modernization program in the early 1980's. It seemed that whenever a new system was put into the hands of the soldier, actual field performance often failed to match the standards predicted during its development. The Stinger anti-aircraft missile, for example, was designed to hit incoming aircraft better than 6 percent of the time. But if it had been placed in service as originally designed, it would actually have achieved hits only 30 percent of the time when operated by soldiers in combat units. The Stinger's problems were eventually corrected. But the problems of soldier utilization were so great in the Division Air Defense Gun, known as the DIVAD or Sergeant York, that the program had to be canceled. In the case of the Dragon anti-tank missile, that soldier's nightmare is still in the Army's inventory.

In addition to unacceptable performance from new systems, the Army experienced problems in crew performance. When the Army replaced an existing system with a newer, more technologically complex system, the newer system often generated requirements for soldiers of a higher level of skill and for more soldiers per system. The Army personnel system simply could not provide enough soldiers of the caliber required to operate and maintain such sophisticated systems.

The Army's first study on what to do about the disappointing performance and unaffordable manpower costs of new weapons systems and equipment was conducted by retired Generals Walter T. Kerwin and George S. Blanchard in 1980. In examining the Army's concerns about the mobilization, readiness and sustainability of new systems, the report concluded that it was primarily a lack of consideration of the human in the system that was causing the problem. Human performance assessments either were not done or were too late to influence weapons design. Supporting the Kerwin and Blanchard findings, the General Accounting Office [GAO] published reports in 1981 and 1985 attributing 50 percent of equipment failures to human error. GAO, too, stressed the need for integrating into the acquisition process human disciplines, such as, in particular, manpower, personnel and training needs.

The recommendations for a new soldier-oriented approach to systems acquisition were taken very seriously in the mid-1980's. With the full support of the entire Army leadership, military and civilian, Gen. Maxwell Thurman, as the Vice Chief of Staff, directed that an entirely new approach to systems acquisition be adopted by the Army, one which required that systems fit the soldiers rather than that the soldier—through selection or training—fit the systems.

This new concept also affected industry because, as we all know, defense contractors actually design and develop Army systems. In the mid-eighties, the concept required a radical change in the way contractors did business. To successfully compete in the new Army acquisition process, industry had to focus on the human element and design systems that fit soldier's needs and capabilities. In the MANPRINT process, human parameters are specified in the same manner as any other component of the system. System performance is measured with the humans quantitative performance included as an inherent part of the total system performance. No longer could performance in the laboratory be extrapolated as satisfying the requirements of performance in the field.

The MANPRINT philosophy and examples of the array of concepts inherent in MANPRINT are documented in a book, "MANPRINT: An Approach to Systems Integration" (Van Nostrand Reinhold, 1990), edited by Dr. Harold R. Booher, who was the first senior Army civilian official appointed to direct the Army's MANPRINT program.

COMANCHE AND MANPRINT

Nowhere has the new soldier-oriented partnership between Government and industry been more visible than on the Army's Light Helicopter Experimental [LHX] program. Better known to us today as the Comanche, the LHX in 1986 was the Army's true experimental program, testing where it was possible to introduce cutting-edge technology into its inventory without running headlong into the problems of unsatisfactory performance and runaway personnel costs. Even opponents of Comanche cannot ignore the great advances achieved in this program beyond the standard of normal acquisition practices.

Perhaps the first indication that MANPRINT was not only viable but could revolutionize the military's procurement process was the successful development of the Comanche's T-800 engine. The MANPRINT approach fostered hundreds of design improvements affecting both maintenance and reliability. In one striking example, the tool kit for the organization mechanic was reduced from 134 tools to only 6. The trunk-sized caster tool kit used on other helicopters was reduced to a canvass pouch half the size of a rolled-up newspaper. Furthermore, this reduction cost Government and industry nothing and will save taxpayer dollars.

For the Comanche itself, MANPRINT resulted in more than 500 design improvements in system performance and logistics. The cockpit was designed outward, from the pilot seat, using simulations and modeling, lessons learned from previous aircraft programs, and user inputs. In addition, when fielded, the Comanche would allow the aircrew to select what information is needed during missions. The result is an anticipated system with a much improved pilot-crew workload. A typical performance benefit is illustrated in the reduced number of steps it takes for the pilot to acquire a target. The OH-58D Kiowa Warrior required 34; the Comanche, 5.

Incorporation of MANPRINT considerations during Comanche development also introduced entirely new concepts to the acquisition process. The source selection competition included MANPRINT in all evaluation areas. It became impossible for a company to win the contract without a plan to integrate MANPRINT in the design, development, and manufacture of Comanche. In addition, seasoned maintenance personnel and other soldiers with field experience in operational units were assigned to the contractor's plant as representatives of the users in the operating commands. These soldiers were invaluable in fitting the machine to the operator. For example, they completed a rotor design change in 30 days that would otherwise have taken 12 months to achieve contractor-Government approval.

MANPRINT was also responsible for technological advances. To provide for easy maintenance to aircraft components, Comanche was built around a box-like, load-bearing keel. In most helicopters, the load is carried by the external skin. In Comanche, the load-bearing keel made it possible to locate easy-access panels almost anywhere on the aircraft. Consequently, maintenance personnel can easily reach all of the internal components. In this case, a maintenance requirement drove the technological design, which in turn resulted in an aerodynamic improvement.

In another instance MANPRINT and transport considerations suggested the need for an improved rotor blade removal capability. The contractor design team already had a rotor blade design which met Government specifications and was concerned about the added expense. Nevertheless, because of soldier concerns, MANPRINT prevailed. A new blade was designed at a cost of approximately $60,000. Life cycle cost calculations have indicated that the new blade will remain easier to manufacture and should save approximately $150 million in personnel, maintenance, and transport costs from the original design.

From the outset soldier safety has been a major design objective. Safety experts studied more than two decades of helicopters accident reports to determine how the designers could make Comanche a safer aircraft. As a result of their efforts, the Comanche's safety-related design features are projected—when compared to other helicopters such as the OH-58 Kiowa and AH-1F Cobra—to save 91 soldiers lives and avoid at least 116 disabling injuries.

A 1995 report by the Analytic Sciences Corp.—Minninger, et al.—documents the performance improvements and savings on Comanche attributable to MANPRINT. The report found Comanche cost avoidance in manpower, personnel, training, and safety to be a whopping $3.29 billion. This return resulted from a design investment of approximately 4 percent of the Comanche R&D budget. Calculated as a return on design investment, MANPRINT in the Comanche program yielded over an 8,000-percent return. Moreover, if the costs of the remaining MANPRINT disciplines—health hazards and soldiers survivability—are included in the calculation, the return on investment for the entire program remains well over 4000 percent.

MANPRINT APPLIED TO OTHER ARMY SYSTEMS

MANPRINT is not only limited to new or major acquisition systems. It works with systems already in the inventory as well. In 1994, McDonnell Douglas conducted a study covering 4 years of MANPRINT design improvements on Longbow Apache. More than 80 MANPRINT problems, issues, and concerns were identified and resolved. Each of them yielded an improvement either for the operator or the maintainer of the aircraft. Once again, improved human performance proved cost effective. From a $2.7 million investment, a return in manpower and safety costs reached $268 million, approximately a 2,000-percent return on investment.

The Fox vehicle modification is an illustrative example of MANPRINT's contribution to smaller, less visible acquisition programs. The Army uses the Fox—a mobile sensing module built into an eight-wheeled armored vehicle—as a nuclear, biological, and chemical reconnaissance system for identifying contaminated areas. In a recent system improvement project, the Army wanted to reduce the crew from four soldiers to three. But operational evaluators labeled the vehicle, when operated by three soldiers, "unsuitable and ineffective." The program appeared doomed because it was out of money and time. But MANPRINT experts, using two different types of integration models, redesigned the Fox and it was subsequently shown to be fully effective in its projected missions. The MANPRINT effort cost $60,000 and was completed in a short time; additional operational testing was avoided and the Army saved $2 to $4 million from projected program costs while removing on crew member requirement from each vehicle.

MANPRINT VIABILITY TODAY

A recent Army Audit Agency [AAA] report evaluated how the Army, after its radical downsizing, is "incorporating MANPRINT into weapon systems development." The good news is that nine Army weapons systems were evaluated and all but one were considered to have incorporated MANPRINT adequately. Based on the AAA's audit assessment, the Army can expect positive MANPRINT results in such current programs as Land Warrior, Javelin, and Extended Range Multiple Launch Rocket System. The Command and Control Vehicle program and several nondevelopmental programs examined by AAA, including the Embedded Global Positioning System/Inertial Navigation System, also include good MANPRINT initiatives. Because of MANPRINT, the Army can have increased confidence in many of the systems it will be fielding in the not-too-distant future.

The Army cannot rest on its laurels, however. Several developments cloud the future of MANPRINT.

First, the AAA report noted that not all systems under development have incorporated MANPRINT. The now-canceled Armored Gun System is an example in the recent past of a program in which MANPRINT considerations were purposely rejected. It is not a coincidence that the Army canceled the program.

Second, the new DOD acquisition system may make it easier to omit MANPRINT from programs. The new system rightly attempts to give program managers more latitude by removing regulations that previously proved too restrictive. But this new-found freedom in itself may make it more difficult in the future to ensure an appropriate incorporation of MANPRINT. It would be very unfortunate if an unintended consequence of streamlining the acquisition process proved to be a reduced emphasis on MANPRINT.

That need not be the case, as the AAA report points out. The new acquisition system, if approached correctly, affords the opportunity for greater integration of people-oriented concerns into the acquisition process. If the "unbound" program managers appreciate the value of optimizing the man-machine interface, they are free under the new system to tailor their programs to incorporate people-oriented considerations. Consequently, a major effort is needed to adapt MANPRINT to the new acquisition process.

A third concern is the erosion of the MANPRINT program in recent years as the Army has experienced the drawdown. The Army made a commitment to understand and incorporate the features that optimize man-machine performance in the mid-1980's but until recently has been in danger of returning to old ways. MANPRINT personnel have been reduced 55 percent while the active Army has come down approximately 37 percent. The AAA audit report concluded that the Army's training process, which started out so well in 1986, is now inadequate. Career paths no longer identify MANPRINT as important. Nor does MANPRINT always play as prominent a role in source selection as in some programs, such as Comanche. Finally, the technology resources devoted to the research and development needed to advance the state of the art for quantitative tradeoffs of manpower, personnel skills, and training have shrunk significantly.

Fortunately, thanks to the AAA audit report, Army leadership has been reminded that MANPRINT is a golden nugget and seems determined that it must be revitalized. A panel of senior officers has been working for several months to ensure that the wounds inflicted on the program by the drawdown are not fatal and that MANPRINT recovers its health.

In closing I want to congratulate the Army for developing MANPRINT and for continuing to support the program in a time of very scarce resources.

I also want to suggest that the Army's approach to systems integration is relevant to the other military departments, to the entire Department of Defense, and probably to the remainder of the Government. Acquisition reform seeks to advance technology while holding down procurement costs. Downsizing seeks to ensure essential Government functions are accomplished with a minimum of staff. MANPRINT can be an essential ingredient in both initiatives. With respect to the military, it ensures that the weapons and equipment supporting a reduced force structure will perform as expected on the battlefield.

But the possible applications for MANPRINT go far beyond the military in our constantly evolving technological-based society. Our regulatory agencies like the Federal Aviation Agency, the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, the Food and Drug Administration should push this concept to the forefront with the systems and equipment they regulate. Also it would seem our medical and educational systems could benefit from a technological development and management process which focuses on the end user. One may wonder what a difference it would make if these systems were made to operate primarily for the doctor and the patient or the teacher and the learner rather than fitting these individuals to the system as an afterthought. We have not been in such an enviable position to take advantage of a technological cultural change since Deming's total quality management. Let's not miss our opportunity this time around.

COMMUNICATION FROM THE HONORABLE CHARLES E. SCHUMER, MEMBER OF CONGRESS

The SPEAKER pro tempore [Mr. QUINN] laid before the House the following communication from the Honorable CHARLES E. SCHUMER, Member of Congress:

CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES,
HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington, DC, September 26, 1997.

Hon. NEWT GINGRICH,
Speaker, U.S. House of Representatives,
Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. SPEAKER: This is to formally notify you pursuant to Rule L(50) of the rules of the House that I have been served with a subpoena duces tecum issued by the Supreme Court of the State of New York, County of Kings, in the case of Ellen Frankel v. Jeffrey Frankel, Index No. 10369/96.

After consultation with the Office of General Counsel, I have determined that the subpoena relates to my official duties, and that compliance with the subpoena is consistent with the privileges and precedents of the House.

Sincerely,

CHARLES E. SCHUMER,
Member of Congress.

MOTION TO INSTRUCT CONFEREES ON H.R. 1757, FOREIGN RELATIONS AUTHORIZATION ACT, FISCAL YEARS 1998 AND 1999, AND EUROPEAN SECURITY ACT OF 1997

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The unfinished business is the motion to instruct conferees on the bill H.R. 1757 offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. DOGGETT].

The Clerk will report the motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. DOGGETT moves that the managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the bill, H.R. 1757, be instructed to reject section 1601 of the Senate amendment, which provides for payment of all private claims against the Iraqi Government before those of U.S. veterans and the U.S. Government (i.e., U.S. taxpayers).

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. DOGGETT] and the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. WHITFIELD] each will control 30 minutes.

Mr. WHITFIELD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that we limit debate on this issue to 15 minutes per side.

Mr. DOGGETT. Mr. Speaker, I object. It has been delayed long enough and we need the full 30 minutes as provided for in our rules.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Objection is heard.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Texas [Mr. DOGGETT].

Mr. DOGGETT. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 4 minutes and 10 seconds.

Mr. Speaker, the men and women of our Armed Forces gave America their best in the gulf war against Saddam Hussein, and now these brave veterans deserve nothing less than our best from this Congress.

Unfortunately, many of our Desert Shield and Desert Storm veterans will never be able to forget their experience, because they have the lingering effects of illness and disability: fatigue, muscle and joint pain, severe headaches, and other limitations as a result of their defense of our national interests. They call it Persian Gulf syndrome from being exposed to biological and chemical weapons.

About 3,000 of our Desert Storm and Desert Shield veterans have filed claims concerning the illnesses against frozen Iraqi Government assets. Following the invasion of Kuwait by Iraq in 1990, the United States Government froze $1.3 billion of Iraqi assets in this country. This motion is to assure that our veterans are not forgotten with reference to those claims.

In 1991, the U.N. Security Council resolved that Iraq is liable, under international law, for the injury that it caused to foreign nationals as a result of its unlawful invasion of Kuwait. The claims of our veterans were clearly contemplated by this internationally approved resolution.

Accordingly, in 1994, when the Democrats were in control of this House, legislation was approved by an overwhelming majority under the leadership of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HAMILTON] that established an Iraqi claims fund and gave first preference, as we should, to the claims of our veterans. This House went on record as saying, we give our priority to those who sacrificed their life and limb for the future of our Nation. Unfortunately, the Senate did not act on this bill.

This year, 1997, the Senate has acted. The Senate version of the State Department or foreign authorization bill, which is now pending in conference committee, would place these same Desert Shield and Desert Storm veterans out in the storm without one red cent being recoverable from the frozen assets of Saddam Hussein.

This injustice is imposed on our veterans by subordinating their claims to the separate commercial claims that existed before the war ever took place and they made their sacrifices, claims that those who did business with Saddam Hussein like the seven largest tobacco companies, and undoubtedly among those enterprises that were doing business with Saddam Hussein were some of those who provided the very materials that were used in the war against our veterans. Who would like to go on record supporting a provision which turns out to benefit corporations at the expense of our soldiers? But that is exactly what the Senate provision would do. It puts our veterans in last place with no practical way to access the frozen assets of the Iraqis. Fortunately, the House has not yet acceded to this outrageous demand.

Additionally, I would note that this is not only a veterans' issue, it is a taxpayer issue. Why is it that the American taxpayer should be placed in last place behind the claims of the tobacco companies? But the same Helms amendment that does damage to veterans also subordinates the rights of the American taxpayer to reclaim money owed to the United States Government by the Iraqis.

This was first reported in a front-page story in USA Today entitled, "Helms Bill Favors Tobacco Firms Over Vets," referring to the authorization bill in conference, and recognizing that across the Hall in this Capitol building, it is apparently possible for one person and one person alone to deny a hearing to block individually the appointment of an Ambassador to Mexico. But please, Members of the House, do not allow one individual to block 3,000 vets from asserting their claims against the Iraqi Government.

Amazingly, I say to my colleagues, this morning's AP, this very morning, reports the author of the Helms amendment continuing, continuing this morning to defend his total bar to our veterans and American taxpayers against these Iraqi assets.

My motion would quite simply instruct our House conferees, who are meeting even today, to not accede to the demands of the tobacco companies and the other commercial claims and put those ahead of veterans. As the National Gulf War Resource Center has told this House, the Helms amendment, if passed, would amount to a grotesque injustice against gulf war veterans. Let us not have that injustice.

Mr. WHITFIELD. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I am delighted that today we have the opportunity to talk about very serious issues facing the American veterans. All of us obviously support the American veterans. There is no question about that. In this House on July 16, we passed an appropriation bill, $90.7 billion for the VA, and that was more than the Clinton administration had asked for.

Of course, we want to do more than that, and there are bills pending in the House right now that would give veterans and retirees the opportunity to go to military bases, be treated, and have Medicare reimburse them both at the VA and also at the military bases. In addition to that, the Committee on Veterans' Affairs favorably considered H.R. 2206, the Veterans Health Program Improvement Act of 1997, and it was reported out favorably. It would improve the VA's ability to provide health care to Persian Gulf veterans by authorizing as many as 10 VA facilities to establish demonstration projects aimed at improving care to Gulf veterans with undiagnosed illnesses.

In addition, and this is particularly important, this bill would also specify that Persian Gulf veterans are eligible for VA health care for any problem related to service in the Gulf, not just those problems that may be linked to exposure to toxic substances or environmental hazards.

One of the great histories of our country is that we have been always supportive of our veterans. I also represent a district that has over 30,000 veterans, and Fort Campbell, home of the 101st Airborne, is in my district.

But I rise today in opposition to this amendment for many reasons. First of all, even if the amendment is adopted, it is not going to mean one thing for the American veteran. They will not receive one benefit, even if the amendment of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. DOGGETT] is adopted. So let us look at the facts of this case, and of course we all want to be emotional about veterans' issues, because they have dedicated their lives, and they have sacrificed for this country.

Mr. Speaker, let us look at the facts here. We are talking about establishing a mechanism so that money frozen in Iraqi assets after the Persian Gulf War or at the start of it, $1.2 billion, which has been sitting in a fund, untouched by anyone, since 1990, would be given back to individuals and companies who provided commerce to Iraq. Many of these were small businesses. Many of them have gone bankrupt, and there are over 813 individuals who also are asking to be reimbursed for their expenditures and their losses.

Now, if we do not adopt section 1601 as a part of this legislation, if the conferees kick it out, then in essence what is going to happen is nothing. The money is still going to be there, the veterans still are not going to be able to get to it, and let me also say this: The argument has been made that if we do not allow private claims to go over the Government claims, then the veterans somehow are going to get all of this money. But if we look at the Treasury Department's statement on this and the document that they provided, all of the claims, there is only $1.2 billion, and the priority for reimbursement by this administration is not the veteran, but it is the Commodity Credit Corporation of America. It is OPEC, it is the Export-Import Bank.

So this is not about veterans, this is not about tobacco companies, but I would commend the gentleman for his ability to cloud the issue. We do not want to mislead the veterans and make them think that they are going to get something that they are not going to get, because even if his motion is adopted, even if the conferees agree to it, it does not change anything about the veterans' ability to get any of this money that belongs to small businesses, large businesses, and individuals who did business.

Mr. EDWARDS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WHITFIELD. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. EDWARDS. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the gentleman saying this issue should be based on the facts. Did I understand the gentleman correctly to say that the veterans' programs were appropriated $90 billion this year?

Mr. WHITFIELD. Mr. Speaker, $90.7 billion.

Mr. EDWARDS. $90 billion this year? Mr. WHITFIELD. Right, for 1998.

Mr. EDWARDS. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman were off by a factor of about $40 billion to $50 billion, would he agree that his facts were not correct? Because I know he would not want to mislead the veterans and make them think they are going to get something they are not going to get.

Mr. WHITFIELD. Mr. Speaker, reclaiming my time, let me say this. I looked at the Congressional Quarterly this morning, and the figure that I saw set out in there was $90.7 billion for the VA. If the gentleman is saying that I am wrong, and I am wrong, then I would apologize about that.

Mr. EDWARDS. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman would yield further, I know it was not intentional, but I appreciate the gentleman saying that we should not make veterans think they are going to get something that they are not going to get. Last year the appropriation was in the approximate range of $37 billion. If they receive $90 billion this year, I want to commend the chairman of the VA appropriations subcommittee and the chairman of the authorizing committee for their tremendous work on behalf of the veterans.

Mr. WHITFIELD. Mr. Speaker, reclaiming my time once again, I would just say this to the gentleman. I would be happy to look this up and I will get back to the gentleman on it, because I do not want to mislead anybody on the amount of money available, and of course whatever is available is really not enough for veterans, but in trying to balance all of the demands on the taxpayer dollars, we have a great difficulty.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. DOGGETT. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 10 seconds.

The gentleman who claims to represent so many veterans, while at the same time opposing an amendment in their vital interest, should have his facts correct. There is no reason why veterans should not be able to access this money and the conference committee able to adjust the differences under this instruction.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. McHALE], a member of this body who serves on the Committee on National Security, who had the courage to resign his seat in the Pennsylvania House to serve our country in the gulf war, who is a marine and remains active not only as a veteran of that war, but as a colonel in the Marine Reserve.

Mr. McHALE. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Texas for the promotion. It is lieutenant colonel, not colonel. There are many fine reasons why it will never be colonel.

Mr. Speaker, beginning in August, 1990, our Nation deployed 540,000 men and women in uniform to the Persian Gulf. They answered the call to service. Of those who answered that call, 211 did not come home, 357 were wounded, for a total of approximately 550 casualties during the course of that war.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today, as the gentleman from Texas indicated, as a veteran of that war to urge strong support for the Doggett motion.

In addition to those who were wounded and killed in that war, we now recognize that as many as 100,000 of our forces may have been exposed to nerve gas. And, finally, there are currently 28,000 gulf war veterans receiving disability compensation.

I listened to the comments from the gentleman who spoke earlier in defense of the tobacco interests and other commercial activities, and I appreciate the defense that he has to raise. But I am holding in my hand an article from the September 10 issue of USA Today, which headline reads, in part, "Bill favors tobacco firms over vets."

Mr. Speaker, USA Today got it right. Tobacco firms over vets. We can reverse that priority today Mr. Speaker. I rise in strong support of the Doggett motion. That motion would simply instruct the conferees on the foreign relations authorization bill to strike section 1601, which very clearly and intentionally places our veterans in line behind the tobacco interests in making claim on the $1.2 billion fund that is available for compensation.

Mr. Speaker, the two largest groups of claimants against the Iraqi funds are the tobacco companies and our veterans. I once stood in a chow line in northern Saudi Arabia and looked at the helmet of the marine who was in front of me and it said, "It's not about oil." I would say today, Mr. Speaker, it is about tobacco.

There are 3,000 gulf war veterans who have indicated formally that they wish to pursue a claim against this again. In 1991 we needed the help of our men and women in our Nation's uniform. Today they need ours.

Mr. Speaker, the tobacco industry sells $49 billion worth of tobacco products each year, generating profits of approximately $7 billion, thereby continuing the single greatest cause of preventable death in the United States. Four hundred thousand graves dug each year by the tobacco industry. How dare we tell our brave men and women in uniform that they must stand in line behind the tobacco profiteers. That is outrageous. Shame on this body if we allow that to happen.

Mr. Speaker, this measure was surreptitiously inserted in the bill in the Senate. The Doggett motion simply says to our conferees: Remove that provision. Stand by our men and women in uniform.

Based on that principle, and frankly the tremendous moral obligation that I feel toward my fellow veterans of that war, I urge on both sides of the aisle overwhelming support for the Doggett motion.

Mr. WHITFIELD. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, first of all, I would like to point out that there are over 400 companies that have claims against these funds that the Iraqi Government owed money to. There are over 832 individuals. In addition to that, there were many Government agencies.

This is not a debate about tobacco. Now, I know that in this Congress tobacco is not in favor, and I respect that. But this is not about tobacco. This is about a process to free up Iraqi funds to small businesses, large businesses, and individuals who are owed the money for services provided. Many of them have gone bankrupt.

The largest claimant is the Commodity Credit Corporation for $900 million. Now, if we paid the Commodity Credit Corporation $900 million, there is only $1.2 billion in the fund and no one else would even be considered.

Now, I would also like to point out, not that I am here to defend anyone in the Senate, but I do respect the body, and I respect the Members. They were all elected like we are. But there has been the impression left today that this was some sinister move by the senior citizen, or the senior Senator and citizen from North Carolina. I would like to point out to the body that this legislation was first proposed in 1993, and some of the cosponsors were Senator ROBB, a Democrat from Virginia, Senator PATTY MURRAY from Washington State, and others.

Mr. Speaker, I have a letter here dated September 29, 1997, from CHUCK ROBB and CHUCK HAGEL, both in the U.S. Senate, saying that they support this section 1601.

Mr. Speaker, if this were really an issue about veterans, of course we all would be there, we would want to help veterans. But the bottom line is there is not any way they are going to get any of this money, unless this body takes up the measure again and tries to go forward with it, and there has been no effort to do that by anyone.

But simply adopting the amendment of the gentleman from Texas does not do anything except put us back where we are with Iraqi funds frozen and many small businesses, many individuals, sitting there without being reimbursed.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. DOGGETT. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. SKELTON], a leading member of our Committee on National Security, a strong defender of our national defense, and someone who has indicated deep personal and professional commitment to our service men and women.

Mr. SKELTON. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. WHITFIELD] spoke about us clouding an issue. This issue is not clouded. It is as clear as day.

The purpose of our military in this country is to protect our freedoms and to protect American interests. Today I speak for the veterans, I speak for those in uniform, I speak for the military who fought for America against Saddam Hussein and against Iraq. Some of those Americans died. Some were injured. Some came home very, very sick and still suffer as a result of toxics obtained in that area and from that war.

What kind of a message are we sending the troops that now stand guard in Macedonia, in Korea, Ft. Leonard Wood, anywhere else around the world, if we do not adopt this resolution unanimously? That is what I call upon us to do.

We should not put business interests ahead of those who fought for and sacrificed for our country, whether those business interests be tobacco or otherwise. Our American military should come first. It is up to the Congress under the Constitution to raise and maintain the military. I stand by them. Let us work with them. Let us support them. This is an opportunity to do just that.

Mr. Speaker, I heard in testimony in our committee some of these young soldiers who were suffering from what is known as gulf war syndrome. Not just fatigue. Some had deformed limbs, some had scars on their bodies, very difficult anxiety that they are going through.

I say this, Mr. Speaker, let us look at those veterans and listen to those veterans and then cast our vote in favor of them. They deserve no less.

Mr. WHITFIELD. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I certainly respect the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. SKELTON] and we know that he has been a defender throughout his career, not only of the active military, but also those retired and veterans everywhere, and I commend the gentleman for that.

I would also like to point out, however, that during the consideration of this, the Disabled American Veterans testified relating to this issue, and I would just like to read a statement that they made. In fact, the statement was made by Mr. Violante, who was representing the Disabled American Veterans.

"While the DAV is certainly supportive of the principle of ensuring that there is just compensation for any damages or injuries received by a veteran or his or her family as a result of the war in the Persian Gulf, we are very concerned about the precedent established here. In recent history, veterans have always been cared for by the VA (previously Veterans' Administration, currently the Department of Veterans Affairs) with respect to the injuries received in services to their country."

And that is true. That is the obligation of VA. That is the obligation of this Congress to provide adequate funding to take care of them. And then he goes on to say, "However, the Iraqi claims legislation establishes a procedure whereby veterans could be compensated directly from the assets of the 'foreign enemy' government. This precedent could have far-reaching ramifications which could adversely impact upon the current VA system."

Mr. Speaker, it would be a first time that we have reacted in this type of way. We know that the U.S.S. Stark, which there were injuries and death on the U.S.S. Stark before the start of the Persian gulf war, the Iraqi Government agreed to compensate in that incidence and those people were compensated. Their families were compensated.

But I would simply point out that there are veterans and members of veterans groups who are very concerned about the new direction that we are moving off here, diverting responsibility away from this government into the hands of some foreign power that we have defeated in a military endeavor.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. DOGGETT. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 10 seconds.

Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Kentucky is referring to testimony given in 1994. This Congress made it clear that in no way would the right to claim against Saddam Hussein's assets interfere with the right of every veteran to the rights assured under the Veterans Administration, which were preserved. The Veterans of Foreign Wars took exactly the opposite direction.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 1½ minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. TIERNEY], a Member of this body who has expressed significant concerns on behalf of our veterans, some 67,000 that he represents in Massachusetts.

Mr. TIERNEY. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Texas [Mr. DOGGETT] for drawing to the attention of the House this serious matter. I also acknowledge the interest of the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. WHITFIELD], our colleague across the aisle, and his concern for the veterans and want to draw a distinction between the legitimate claims our veterans have to health care services within the system and within the processes, and a separate matter of having a legal claim for wrongs and injustices done to them when Iraq violated international law.

Mr. Speaker, I think people need to know the distinction we are talking about here is $1.3 billion in assets frozen when Iraq entered into Kuwait, and those assets are there and available now. The U.S. Government has them for claims by people who feel they are legitimately pursuing some injustice to them, whether it be a contractual matter or personal injury.

What we stand to see happen over in the Senate and now in the conference committee is that veterans would be precluded from pushing their claims, but other corporations and other entities, in particular tobacco companies, would be allowed to exclude the veterans and go forward with their claims.

Mr. Speaker, what this particular resolution on behalf of my colleague from Texas says is that the veterans will at least have the ability to put forward their claims to stand there with the others and make their case for the wrongs that were done to them.

We have to remember that these were violations of international law that people are suffering from problems that have manifested themselves, sometimes very much later after their service was done. Veterans in my district and throughout this country have the continuing feeling that sometimes their concerns are lost. This is one way of assuring that they are given equal footing and a right to pursue the claims that they have.

Mr. WHITFIELD. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I would like to point out that under existing law that is there today, veterans are precluded from pursuing any of this. As you know, there is a United Nations Commission with funds available and the U.S. Government has made claims against it but has never made any claims on behalf of veterans. As I said earlier, even if we adopt the gentleman's amendment from Texas, it is not going to make any difference.

My whole point is, of course, we all support veterans. But this amendment does nothing. If it eliminates it, all we are is where we began; that is, the money is still frozen. It is not going to be distributed to anyone.

What about the fact of this? In America, America was built on the free enterprise system where people went out and earned money and they worked hard and they were either successful or they were not successful. But as I said, we have 813 individuals; we have various commercial enterprises who did business; they are owed the money. In many ways, it is their money. They are going to be denied any opportunity of getting it.

Under section 601, there is a procedure for private claims with the Commission and then there is a procedure for the Government. As I said earlier, even if the Government makes the claim on behalf of veterans, they have already prioritized it in such a way that the Commodity Credit Corp., OPIC, and Eximbank would get the money first, leaving the veterans without anything.

That is why I think we need to do everything we can, as I said earlier, to support these bills reported out by the Committee on Veterans' Affairs that would address in a real way some of the problems of Persian Gulf syndrome. These bills provide real relief, not imaginary relief.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. DOGGETT. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. EVANS]. I can think of no one better able to respond about the Committee on Veterans' Affairs than the ranking member.

Mr. EVANS. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of the Doggett motion to instruct conferees concerning H.R. 1757, the Foreign Relations Authorization Act.

It is very clear that our Senate colleagues, in this Helms amendment, have established an Iraqi claims fund to provide a means to handle conflicting claims for frozen Iraqi assets stemming from the Persian Gulf war. Among those who have filed claims for such frozen assets are gulf war veterans and tobacco companies. In determining who has priority to such claims, the Helms amendment would give preference to private corporate interests, such as tobacco companies, over our veterans.

It is inconceivable that Americans would support such priorities at the expense of our Nation's veterans. We should instruct the conferees to reject the Helms amendment to the foreign relations bill. Many veterans who served our Nation during that conflict have been afflicted with undiagnosed illnesses that many people call Persian Gulf syndrome since they returned home.

As forcefully stated by veterans service organizations and veterans advocates, this ill-conceived provision which pits gulf war veterans against tobacco would add insult to the illnesses many veterans contend with daily.

To suggest we have done enough to help those veterans of that war with the problems that they are facing I think is to ignore the facts. Under both Democratic and Republican administrations, I am afraid to say, we have not done enough for our Persian Gulf veterans.

Having access to these assets, perhaps as a result of a class action suit, the same way that Vietnam veterans sued the chemical companies dealing with the agent orange issue, is something that could be a real possibility for these veterans to obtain assistance they have not received from the Federal Government under those Democratic or Republican administrations.

While I have supported the legislation that has dealt in small part with the Persian Gulf veterans, I think it is woefully inadequate today. Our Government has not honored the claims of those people who fought and defended those people in the Persian Gulf region. This at least offers them one other fund, one other road, one other avenue that they can take to get the help they need.

Mr. WHITFIELD. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I would just say once again that of course we want the veterans to pursue any legal remedy that they have. I know that there is an attorney in Houston by the name of Gary Pitts who is working with a lot of veterans to pursue claims in various ways. But the bottom line, as I have said before, is that the money will not be there.

Let us work on real solutions to this problem. Let us get this legislation through that I have referred to. Let us take concrete action that will not raise false hopes for veterans, because we are raising false hopes here. That is my whole point.

These men and women have devoted an important part of their life. Their families have suffered. Many of them continue to suffer in the Persian Gulf syndrome. Why should we raise false expectations over this particular issue? We need to be involved with real solutions to this problem.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. DOGGETT. Mr. Speaker, how much time remains on each side?

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. QUINN). The gentleman from Texas [Mr. DOGGETT] has 16 minutes remaining, and the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. WHITFIELD] has 14½ minutes.

Mr. DOGGETT. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1½ minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. REYES] a new Member of this body who has already distinguished himself as a member of the Committee on National Security and as a representative for the many men and women at Fort Bliss, TX, and the many veterans in the El Paso area.

Mr. REYES. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the gentleman yielding me the time.

This morning I rise, regrettably, as a member of the Committee on Veterans' Affairs representing a district containing nearly 60,000 veterans and as a veteran myself, because I think it is a sad day, indeed, when we have to debate such a clear issue as this as we are today.

Thousands of our soldiers served honorably in the Persian Gulf and secured freedom for that part of the world. However, this did not come without a high cost. As we are all aware, Persian gulf war veterans came back with undiagnosable conditions suffering from a variety of ailments as a price for their service. Our country has an obligation to these men and women who risked life and health for the safety and security of our country and for freedom throughout the world.

One result of the Persian Gulf war was that Iraqi assets were frozen during the course of that conflict. These funds amounted to $1.3 billion. The Foreign Relations Authorization Act, which is currently in conference, establishes the Iraqi Claims Fund which allows claims against these frozen assets. Our veterans should not be placed in the back of the line in making claims against these assets. A provision provided from the Senate would put veterans behind other interested claimants, including tobacco companies and other commercial claimants. While commercial entities certainly must be allowed to file for compensation, our veterans must come first, for they paid the heaviest price.

I join today with the gentleman from Texas [Mr. DOGGETT] and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. EVANS] and others to stand firmly with all veterans of this country in urging the conferees to strike the Senate provision favoring commercial entities over veterans.

Mr. DOGGETT. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. LUTHER], an advocate for veterans.

Mr. LUTHER. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the Doggett motion and first want to thank the gentleman from Texas [Mr. DOGGETT] for his outstanding leadership on this issue.

Specifically, I oppose the process where a provision is inserted in a bill giving any priority to commercial interests over veterans when it comes to these frozen Iraqi assets. This provision was inserted without any hearings in committee or subcommittee. We recently saw, just a couple of months ago, where a $50 billion tax break for special interests was inserted in the budget bill, and now, just as we are in the process of repealing that, we see this provision. These are examples of why the American public has lost confidence in their Government, why they are disgusted with the political process, why many of them refuse to even vote any longer.

When I came to Congress, I promised to change the old way of doing things and to have openness in this body. That is what this provision is about. I urge fellow House Members to reject the old way of doing things. Support openness in government, support ordinary Americans, and support this motion.

Mr. DOGGETT. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. TURNER], another distinguished member of the Committee on National Security, an advocate for veterans.

Mr. TURNER. Mr. Speaker, I thank my colleague from Texas for his leadership on this very important issue.

It is very clear to me that the Senate has put our veterans at the end of the line in making their claims against the $1.3 billion fund frozen in the gulf war. Under the Senate amendment, those who served on the front lines will be at the back of the line when it comes to making their claims. Veterans who courageously served in the gulf war deserve better. Our Nation owes a debt to those veterans that we must try to repay, and we certainly are moving in the wrong direction if we put them at the back of the line in making their claims.

It is amazing to me that we did not even at least see the Senate give veterans equal access to these funds but, rather, they put them at the back of the line.

The American people have a long tradition of supporting our veterans who have served us so courageously. I urge the Members of this body to join in supporting this motion to instruct our conferees to give our veterans their fair share of these funds.

Mr. WHITFIELD. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Would the gentleman from Texas enter into a dialog for a moment? What I would like to ask the gentleman is: Let us say we adopted the amendment without anything else; is there a mechanism, would veterans be able to get to this money?

Mr. DOGGETT. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WHITFIELD. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. DOGGETT. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the gentleman raising the question. As the gentleman well knows, to be more specific in this motion, which is not truly an amendment, it is the Helms amendment by Senator HELMS of North Carolina that is the problem here. The House bill does not speak to this issue. The only motion I could offer, after consulting with the parliamentarian, was of the nature here.

I would like to have spelled out the entire mechanism for veterans recovery, but I believe that if we instruct our conferees in this fashion, the conference committee will be authorized to continue its negotiations, as it is negotiating now, to give veterans first preference, I would prefer, or at least treat them equally to the tobacco companies. I think they have earned that. I believe that that is the effect of this motion.

To not approve this motion, even under the statement of Senator HELMS as reported in Stars and Stripes by his explanation, we are assuring that veterans will never recover one penny of Saddam Hussein's assets if the Helms amendment sticks. That is why all these veterans groups are coming out against the Helms amendment and speaking out so vigorously against it and in favor of the motion that I am offering.

Mr. WHITFIELD. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman.

I would just simply say that adopting this motion, as I said, does nothing. If we go through this process, the Government continues, this administration continues, to go by the priority that it has established: The veterans are not going to get anything. So the administration would have to change its position on this.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. DOGGETT. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute and 30 seconds to the gentlewoman from Michigan [Ms. STABENOW], a woman in this body, because there are women who fought for this country in the gulf war as well, an outspoken advocate for veterans, especially those suffering from gulf war syndrome.

Ms. STABENOW. Mr. Speaker, I first would like to thank my colleague from Texas who has brought the attention of the House to this issue that is so critical to our veterans.

It has been said earlier today, and I feel compelled to respond, that this body, that our Government, has always been there for the veterans. I can assure my colleagues that the veterans in my district believe they have to be vigilant, fighting to make sure they have VA benefits, fighting to make sure they have the health care that they need, and especially those who fought in the gulf war.

The families in my district, the men and women who came back exposed chemically to illnesses that have ruined their lives, I have individuals in my district whose health will never be the same, who have been impacted so severely, they do not feel that their Government has been with them. They are fighting every day.

We are making small steps forward in finally recognizing what happened to them and creating some health care. But this amendment by Senator HELMS, the Helms language, takes us a tremendous step backward. It says to all of those who fought, who came home sick, whose lives have been forever changed because they served our country, that they are at the back of the line, that tobacco companies and others are more important.

Shame on us as a Congress if we allow the Helms language to stand. I urge my colleagues to support this very important motion.

Mr. DOGGETT. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from San Antonio, TX, Mr. RODRIGUEZ, a member of the Committee on National Security, one of our new Hispanic Members who ably represents many Hispanic veterans who made the ultimate sacrifice. And I might note, Mr. Speaker, that our Hispanic population has contributed more congressional honor winners than any other group in this country.

Mr. RODRIGUEZ. Mr. Speaker, let me first of all thank the gentleman from Texas [Mr. DOGGETT] for his efforts in ensuring that veterans are prioritized as No. 1.

I have sat back and listened to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr.

WHITFIELD] indicate that it does not make any difference. If it does not make any difference, I would ask him to reconsider and accept the amendment and do the right thing.

I think it is unfair that as we move forward and listen to Senator HELMS and his prioritizing, there is no doubt that businesses out there have suffered. There is no doubt that the industry and construction has suffered, but we need to just ask one question: Who suffered the most in the Persian Gulf? It was our veterans who were out there. They were the ones out there on the front line. They were the ones that made the difference. They were the ones that made it happen, and we need to be there for them.

For us to not consider them as our first priority when we look at that $1.2 billion is not appropriate and it is unfair. We need to make sure that we are fair and that we are not insensitive, and so I will ask for my colleagues' support to make sure the conference committee takes into consideration and puts veterans No. 1.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of Mr. DOGGETT's motion to instruct conferees concerning H.R. 1757, the Foreign Relations Authorization Act.

There is not enough money from the $1.2 billion Iraqi frozen assets to pay all the claims of our citizens, businesses, and Government. Therefore, we have to decide who should take first, and how much they can potentially get. This is a tough decision. I recognize that many individuals and businesses who have dealt with Iraq have faced losses on shipments, commodities, and unpaid consulting and construction contracts. We must ask ourselves: Among us, who paid the highest price in the Persian Gulf war? I do not even have to leave my district to answer—the gulf war veteran suffering from disease and illness. I can think of several cases off the top of my head, one even involving birth defects to a veteran's child.

The other side argues that care for veterans has traditionally been the sole responsibility of the Government, which it is. But what do you do when the Government does not recognize the illness as service-connected? What do you tell the veteran whose own Government is telling him that he or she does not have a problem? I believe that telling the veteran that he or she will not get a chance to collect on a claim is adding insult to injury. While our Government deliberates on whether and how to compensate those so clearly affected by their service in the gulf war, how can we break the bank for anyone else?

I respectfully advise the conferees to look beyond the heated and sometimes misleading rhetoric on priorities of businesses versus veterans. Then, I believe, they will do the right thing.

Mr. WHITFIELD. Madam Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume to say that I think this debate has been quite helpful today because it has truly focused the issue of the importance of veterans to the American people and to the sacrifices that they have made.

My purpose in having this debate today was to bring attention to this whole process of how, as is usual in wars, they always set up these commissions to distribute money owed to people who provided services, and they allow governments to come in and make claims against them. This administration and this Congress, they have not done anything in a positive way to make sure that veterans are compensated and, as I said before, if the Doggett amendment is adopted, it still does nothing.

So I would urge the committee and the House to work diligently on Medicare subvention so that retirees can go to military bases and have Medicare reimburse them, because they can provide the services more economically. I would urge this House to allow veterans to go to VA hospitals, as they do, and when they are reimbursed through CHAMPUS or by private insurance, allow VA hospitals to keep that money instead of sending it back to the general fund.

I would also urge this House to move H.R. 2206, that would improve the VA's ability to provide health care to Persian Gulf veterans; and, more importantly, would specify that Persian Gulf veterans are eligible for VA health care for any problem related to service in the gulf, not just to those problems that may be linked to exposure to toxic substances or environmental hazards.

It is obvious to me that we all want the same thing, and I am delighted that the gentleman from Texas raised the issue, and I would like to say I hope that we will adopt it by unanimous consent.

Madam Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. DOGGETT. Madam Speaker, I yield myself 25 seconds to say that I think this is the first time I have found a debate here maybe really persuades an opponent, who is still opposing a measure but says we should adopt it by unanimous consent.

I would join the gentleman in urging Speaker GINGRICH to set every measure the gentleman mentioned on this calendar. I do not understand why Medicare subvention has not been set out here. I do not understand why a mechanism for our gulf war veterans to make claims against Saddam Hussein has not been put on the calendar.

I do not understand why this motion was tucked away at midnight last night and then adjourned instead of addressed. I think our veterans should be put first instead of last again and again by this Republican leadership.

Madam Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from New Haven, CT [Ms. DELAURO], who has been an articulate spokesperson not only on the needs of our veterans but on the tremendous dangers of nicotine addiction.

Ms. DELAURO. Madam Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding this time to me.

We have a responsibility as public servants. That is what our job is here as the U.S. Government, as Democrats, as Republicans. This is not a partisan issue. This is a national issue.

We need to reward our veterans for their brave actions and their sacrifice. Veterans must come first. And it is very interesting this morning to take a look at what is going on, on this floor and who is speaking on this side of the aisle, on the Democrat side of the aisle. The gentleman is a lone voice on the other side. Where are his Republican colleagues to come here this morning and to talk about what veterans have done to protect our rights and our liberties in this country?

We stand here. We have the opportunity to serve this country because veterans fought for this great Nation of ours. I support this motion. I thank the gentleman from Texas [Mr. DOGGETT] for bringing it before the House.

I oppose what the tobacco companies would be allowed to do in making their claims before veterans in this country. It is wrong and we should vote for the Doggett amendment.

Mr. DOGGETT. Madam Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Texas, [Mr. CHET EDWARDS]. We are fortunate, indeed, to have in this body someone who represents more members of our military in a populated area than anyone else in the world, I believe, Fort Hood, TX, the former chair of the Veterans Health Subcommittee within the Committee on National Security, I believe, and now on the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. EDWARDS. Madam Speaker, sometimes silence says a lot and, frankly, I am disappointed that out of over 200 Republican House Members, not 1 Republican has come to the floor of this House to stand up for veterans versus tobacco companies this morning.

Most Americans will never know a young man named Arden Cooper. He was 22 years old, fighting against the Iraqi Forces in Kuwait. He saw a comrade of his lying in the sand wounded by Iraqi fire, and despite murderous fire, he went to his friend's aid and put his body over that of his comrade's in order to try to save his life. In doing so, Arden Cooper gave his life to his friend and to his country. When he was given a Silver Star for his bravery, his parents had to accept it posthumously.

To me Arden Cooper represents the very best of American veterans. Ordinary citizens, Americans, willing to fight and, if necessary, yes, die for their country. And while not all Americans died on the sands of Kuwait like that 22-year-old young American, many of Arden Cooper's comrades breathe every breath today in pain because of the injuries and the illnesses sustained in standing up to Saddam Hussein.

The choice today is very clear. It is a choice of whose side we are on, the side of those who made profits selling cigarettes to Saddam Hussein and his citizens, or do we want to side with those who put their lives on the line to fight for America's freedom and stand up to Saddam Hussein and his forces?

I am outraged that a Republican leader from the other body would be so bold as to put the interests of tobacco companies or any company ahead of the interests of the men and women who fought, were injured, yes, even those who died in Desert Storm. To put the interests of tobacco companies in front of the interests of veterans is absolutely, in my book, morally wrong. I think it is a slap in the face not only to Desert Storm veterans but to all veterans in America who have ever served this Nation.

The gentleman from Kentucky, and I respect his privilege to stand and speak for the other side on this issue, but I must take objection to his comment that we are only talking about $1.2 billion here. Well, maybe $1.2 billion is not a whole lot to the richest tobacco companies in the world, but to one of my constituents living in my hometown of Waco, who lives in a tent, confined in his own bedroom because of illnesses sustained in Desert Storm, to someone like that, a few thousand dollars, not $1.2 billion, could be the difference between living life in dignity and respect and just surviving.

Madam Speaker, in just a few days, on Veterans Day, Members from both sides of the aisle will go back home and ride in Veterans Day parades. They will give patriotic speeches thanking our veterans for their service to our country. Well, I do not think that is good enough. It is not good enough to just support veterans on Veterans Day or to pay tribute to those who died on Memorial Day. We ought to stand up for our veterans every day, and certainly we ought to stand up for them today.

I will join with any Member of this House to see that American veterans are put at the front of the line, not the back of the line, when it comes to claiming frozen Iraqi assets in America.

Mr. DOGGETT. Madam Speaker, how much time is remaining?

The SPEAKER pro tempore [Mrs. EMERSON]. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. DOGGETT] has 4 minutes remaining.

Mr. DOGGETT. Madam Speaker, I yield myself the balance of my time.

Members, with this motion, we probe once more the influence of the powerful tobacco lobby on this Congress: The same tobacco companies that begin the addiction of 3,000 children in America every day to nicotine; the same tobacco companies that rank among the top soft money contributors to soften up the political leadership of this Congress; the same tobacco companies that give that soft money to produce a hard, bad deal for the ordinary working American; the same tobacco companies that snuck into this Congress earlier this summer and got themselves a $50 billion tax break, masquerading under the title "Technical Amendments to the Small Business Job Protection Act," and then were so ashamed of it, they could not find anyone to claim authorship of that provision urged on by former Republican chair Haley Barbour.

That same group seems to have no shame, because not having gotten enough in the past from this Congress with their audacity, they come forward today through the senior Senator from North Carolina, and they ask to have their claims put on top of the heroic men and women who fought our Nation's battles in the gulf war.

The gentleman from Kentucky keeps referring to our clouding the issue this morning. Well, my colleagues, the only cloud here is a smoke cloud, a cloud of smoke that lingers over this Congress as long as the tobacco industry has a stranglehold on it.

A vote for this motion is simply a vote to assure an opportunity, not a guarantee, an opportunity for our gulf war veterans to make their case before the commission and to have a decision rendered based on the evidence that they are entitled to some payment for the illness and the disability that they are suffering.

As my colleague from Texas just pointed out, $1.2 billion is probably just pocket change to the seven largest tobacco companies that have been blocking, since Democrats were in control of this Congress, that have been blocking the access of our veterans to get to these funds.

Let me emphasize, contrary to what we heard from the opposition, from the gentleman from Kentucky, that in no way does this motion interfere with the obligation of the Federal Government to meet the needs of our veterans. I am merely suggesting that a young veteran who suddenly finds himself without the capacity to provide for his or her family, cut down in his youth, ought not to have to rely solely on a Veterans Hospital and on veterans disability payments, which often are not adequate to meet the true needs of a family; and that that veteran ought to have the right to say Mr. Saddam Hussein violated international law, as the United Nations even concluded, in invading Kuwait, and I ought to be able to get back some of the loss that my family has suffered as a result of his violation of international law, and my claim is every bit as legitimate as the seven tobacco companies that sold the cigarettes that the Iraqi soldiers were smoking there in the desert, and may still be laying around the desert somewhere, when they dealt with Saddam Hussein before he started this war.

It is my contention that these disabled veterans, as the VFW has concluded, as the State Department has concluded, will get nothing unless they have priority.

The front page of the "Stars and Stripes" magazine tells it all: "Our veterans await the decision of this Congress, even as Senator HELMS speaks out today that he would bar every cent of their claim."

I ask my colleagues to stand first with our gulf war veterans because they stood first for this country. We have a simple decision on this record vote. Stand with GI Joe, stand with GI Jane, who defended our democracy, not Joe Camel, who continues to exploit our children.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I would rise in support of my colleague from Texas, Mr. DOGGETT, to instruct the conferees on the Foreign Policy Act (H.R. 1757). Representative DOGGETT's motion instructs conferees to reject a Senate provision which would position private claims ahead of U.S. Government claimants—including gulf war veterans—against frozen Iraqi assets. The provision authored by Senator HELMS prioritizes the claims in such a way that tobacco companies and other commercial claimants would be paid from the fund before our veterans.

Mr. Speaker, as a friend of veterans I must urge my colleagues to vote in favor of Mr. DOGGETT's motion which would prevent any money taken from our veterans. Many of our soldiers have been afflicted with undiagnosed illnesses since defeating Saddam Hussein's forces in the Persian Gulf region. The U.S. Government has a duty to take care of its veterans. Their claims against available assets do not relieve the Government of its obligations to veterans, but rather provide additional compensation to veterans who have suffered at the hands of Iraq's violations of international law.

Instead of gulf war veterans, tens of thousands of whom are ill, Senator HELMS wants those with contracts, including seven large tobacco companies, to have priority to receive the funds. I must urge my colleagues to reject section 1601 of the Senate amendment, which provides for payment of all private claims against the Iraqi Government before those of U.S. veterans and the U.S. Government.

Mr. DOGGETT. Madam Speaker, I move the previous question on the motion.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mrs. EMERSON). The question is on the motion to instruct offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. DOGGETT].

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. DOGGETT. Madam Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

FURTHER MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A further message from the Senate by Mr. Lundregan, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate agrees to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 2378) "An act making appropriations for the Treasury Department, the United States Postal Service, the Executive Office of the President, and certain Independent Agencies, for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1998, and for other purposes."

REPORT ON RESOLUTION PROVIDING FOR CONSIDERATION OF H.R. 901, AMERICAN LAND SOVEREIGNTY PROTECTION ACT

Mr. SOLOMON, from the Committee on Rules, submitted a privileged report (Rept. No. 105-288) on the resolution (H. Res. 257) providing for consideration of the bill (H.R. 901) to preserve the sovereignty of the United States over public lands and acquired lands owned by the United States, and to preserve State sovereignty and private property rights in non-Federal lands surrounding those public lands and acquired lands, which was referred to the House Calendar and ordered to be printed.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

Mrs. ROUKEMA. Madam Speaker, last evening I was unavoidably detained and arrived too late for the vote on the Mollohan-Shays amendment. I would like to have the RECORD note that had I been here to vote, I would have voted against rollcall vote 475 to H.R. 2267.

(Mrs. ROUKEMA asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Madam Speaker, we are bound by the Constitution to conduct a census every 10 years. Article 1, section 2 of the Constitution calls for an actual enumeration. The 14th amendment calls for the Representatives to be apportioned by counting the whole number of persons in each State. Any deviation from conducting the census under this constitutional mandate is a question for the Supreme Court to answer.

This is what this bill will now do. It will bar the Census Bureau from using sampling until this vital question is answered. Any other course of action would not be prudent or constitutional. It is for this overriding reason that I would have opposed the Mollohan-Shays amendment.

PROVIDING FOR CONSIDERATION OF H.R. 1127, NATIONAL MONUMENT FAIRNESS ACT

Mr. SOLOMON. Madam Speaker, by the direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 256 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. RES. 256

Resolved, That at any time after the adoption of this resolution the Speaker may, pursuant to clause 1(b) of rule XXIII, declare the House resolved into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for consideration of the bill (H.R. 1127) to amend the Antiquities Act to require an Act of Congress and the concurrence of the Governor and State legislature for the establishment by the President of national monuments in excess of 5,000 acres. The first reading of the bill shall be dispensed with. General debate shall be confined to the bill and the amendments made in order by this resolution and shall not exceed one hour equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Resources. After general debate the bill shall be considered for amendment under the five-minute rule. It shall be in order to consider as an original bill for the purpose of amendment under the five-minute rule the amendment in the nature of a substitute recommended by the Committee on Resources now printed in the bill. The committee amendment in the nature of a substitute shall be considered as read. No amendment to the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute shall be in order except those printed in the report of the Committee on Rules accompanying this resolution. Each amendment may be offered only in the order printed in the report, may be offered only by a Member designated in the report, shall be considered as read, shall be debatable for the time specified in the report equally divided and controlled by the proponent and an opponent, shall not be subject to amendment, and shall not be subject to a demand for division of the question in the House or in the Committee of the Whole. The Chairman of the Committee of the Whole may: (1) postpone until a time during further consideration in the Committee of the Whole a request for a recorded vote on any amendment; and (2) reduce to five minutes the minimum time for electronic voting on any postponed question that follows another electronic vote without intervening business, provided that the minimum time for electronic voting on the first in any series of questions shall be fifteen minutes. At the conclusion of consideration of the bill for amendment the Committee shall rise and report the bill to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted. Any Member may demand a separate vote in the House on any amendment adopted in the Committee of the Whole to the bill or to the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute. The previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit with or without instructions.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mrs. EMERSON). The gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON] is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. SOLOMON. Madam Speaker, in trying to live up to the majority leader's request that we be out of here by noon time, we are going to try to expedite.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

Mr. CONDIT. Madam Speaker, is it appropriate for me to propound a parliamentary inquiry at this time?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentleman from New York yield for a parliamentary inquiry?

Mr. SOLOMON. Not at this time, Madam Speaker. I want to get through this so we can live up to our obligation.

Mr. CONDIT. Madam Speaker, I offer a motion.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from California cannot take the gentleman from his feet by a motion while he is engaged in debate.

The gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON] is recognized.

Mr. SOLOMON. Madam Speaker, for purposes of debate only, I yield the customary 30 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Ohio [Mr. HALL], pending which I would yield myself such time as I might consume. During consideration of this resolution, all time yielded is for the purposes of debate only.

Madam Speaker, this bill before us is a simple resolution.

Mr. SOLOMON. Madam Speaker, the proposed rule that I am offering is a modified, closed rule providing for 1 hour of general debate divided equally between the chairman and ranking minority member on the Committee on Resources which will probably be taken up on the floor Monday or Tuesday, and not today.

Additionally, this resolution makes in order the Committee on Resources' amendment in the nature of a substitute as an original bill for purposes of amendment which shall be considered as read. Furthermore, this resolution provides for the consideration of the amendment printed in the Committee on Rules' report which shall be considered only in the order printed in the report, may be offered only by a Member designated in the report, shall be considered as read, shall be debatable for the time specified in the report equally divided and controlled by the proponent and opponent of the amendment. The amendments shall not be subject to amendment, nor are they subject to a demand for a division of the question in the House or in the Committee of the Whole.

At the appropriate time, I intend to offer an amendment to the rule that would allow for the consideration of an amendment to be offered by the gentleman from Utah [Mr. HANSEN], the bill manager. This amendment is a germane amendment that reflects the concerns of both the gentleman from Utah [Mr. HANSEN] and the gentleman from New York [Mr. BOEHLERT].

If my colleagues will recall, the gentleman from New York [Mr. BOEHLERT] had given us an amendment in the Committee on Rules that was not germane. He has done his due diligence and made the amendment in order, so we are living up to our commitment to make all of the filed amendments that were germane in order, and that is what my amendment will be about.

Mr. Speaker, the rule allows for the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole to postpone during consideration of the bill and to reduce votes to 5 minutes on a postponed question if the vote follows a 15-minute vote.

Finally, H.R. 256 provides for one motion to recommit, with or without instructions.

Now, Mr. Speaker, on September 18, 1996, the President of the United States, claiming authority under the 1906 Antiquities Act, proclaimed the Grand Staircase Escalante National Monument in Utah. According to a U.S. News and World Report article, "the White House went to great lengths to keep secret its plan to create by executive fiat a massive 1.7 million acre national monument in southern Utah."

Madam Speaker, dusting off the 91-year-old Antiquities Act to circumvent public hearings and a likely congressional battle, the stealth-like initiative was designed to boost the President's popularity with environmentalists during his campaign last year. In fact, Madam Speaker, the administration did not even inform, did not even consult with any of Utah's elected representatives of any political party. However, members of the administration did take the time to notify Governor Miller of Nevada, Governor Romer of Colorado, and Senators REID and BRYAN of Nevada.

Why would the administration go to great lengths to hide its plans from the public and the Utah delegation? Perhaps the answer lies in a memorandum sent by Katie McGinty, the chair of the President's Council on Environmental Quality. She wrote, "Any public release of information would probably foreclose the President's option to proceed." That is in writing, and we have a copy of it.

Additionally, Interior Department Solicitor John Leschy wrote to an outside consultant, "I can't emphasize confidentiality too much. If word leaks out, it probably won't happen." Talk about stealth and hiding things from the American people, Madam Speaker.

When President Roosevelt signed the Antiquities Act, which was designed to respond to a national movement back in 1906 to stop the vandalism and looting that was occurring on landmarks of prehistoric, historic, and scientific interest and value, the act made a great deal of sense back in those days. During the early 1900's there were few mechanisms for setting aside or protecting large portions of land. However, during the next several decades, concern for conservation became more widespread, and Congress responded by passing very powerful laws which serve the cause of conservation more fully.

Let me just give an example. Since 1906, the Congress has created the National Park System, the National Wildlife Refuge System, the National Wilderness Preservation Act, and the Wild and Scenic Rivers System. The principal effect of laws such as these has been to make it much easier to preserve large portions of land. Therefore, what made sense in 1906 is not necessarily applicable today.

Madam Speaker, most people believe the issues should be debated in the public forum, and this bill amends the Antiquities Act of 1906 to prevent the President from unilaterally creating large national monuments. By requiring an act of Congress and the comments of the Governor from any particular State in which the proposed monument is located, we can be certain that a fair and open process is certain to continue.

This legislation is a commonsense proposal. I would urge my colleagues to support the rule and the underlying legislation.

Madam Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

MOTION TO ADJOURN

Mr. CONDIT. Madam Speaker, I have a preferential motion at the desk.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mrs. EMERSON). The Clerk will report the motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. CONDIT moves that the House do now adjourn.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion to adjourn offered by the gentleman from California [Mr. CONDIT].

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the noes appeared to have it.

RECORDED VOTE

Mr. CONDIT. Madam Speaker, I demand a recorded vote.

Ms. SANCHEZ, Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas and Ms. ROYBAL-ALLARD changed their vote from "no" to "aye".

So the motion to adjourn was rejected.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

Mr. GIBBONS. Madam Speaker, on rollcall No's. 480 and 481. I was unavoidably detained due to a medical emergency. Had I been present, I would have voted "yes" on rollcall vote 480 and "no" on rollcall vote 481.

FURTHER MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A further message from the Senate by Mr. Lundregan, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed with an amendment in which the concurrence of the House is requested, a bill of the House of the following title:

H.R. 2267.—Making appropriations for the Departments of Commerce, Justice, and State, the Judiciary, and related agencies for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1998, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the Senate insists upon its amendment to the bill (H.R. 2267) "An Act making appropriations for the Departments of Commerce, Justice, and State, the Judiciary, and related agencies for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1998, and for other purposes," requests a conference with the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and appoints Mr. GREGG, Mr. STEVENS, Mr. DOMENICI, Mr. MCCONNELL, Mrs. HUTCHISON, Mr. CAMPBELL, Mr. COCHRAN, Mr. HOLLINGS, Mr. BYRD, Mr. INOUE, Mr. BUMPERS, Mr. LAUTENBERG, and Ms. MIKULSKI, to be the conferees on the part of the Senate.

PROVIDING FOR CONSIDERATION OF H.R. 1127, NATIONAL MONUMENT FAIRNESS ACT

Mr. HALL of Ohio. Madam Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Madam Speaker, this is a modified closed rule. It will allow for consideration of H.R. 1127, which is a bill that amends the 1906 Antiquities Act to limit the ability of the President to establish national monuments. As the gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON] described, this rule provides for 1 hour of general debate equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Resources.

Under this rule, five amendments printed in the committee report are allowed, each debatable for 10 minutes. No other amendments may be offered.

First of all, I do want to thank the members of the Committee on Rules and the gentleman from New York for making in order most of the amendments that were submitted, including four Democratic amendments.

Unfortunately, Members were notified on Thursday, September 25, that they had until Monday noon to submit amendments. That is only 2 working days. This modified closed rule only permits amendments that were submitted in advance, and these will be debated under severe time restraints. Thus, the House is denied the opportunity for full and fair debate normally permitted under an open rule.

On rare occasions, these restrictions are acceptable for matters of the highest priority or when urgent House action is required. However, this bill fits neither requirement. The bill was reported more than 2 months ago, and the House could have taken it up at any time.

Madam Speaker, this bill is not only low priority, it is entirely unnecessary in my opinion. This measure eliminates the President's ability to create new national monuments under 50,000 acres without specific congressional approval. However, Congress already has the power to add to, change, or reverse the designation of national monuments.

The bill would tie the President's hands in dealing with threats to our Nation's natural, historic, and scientific resources. If we pass the bill, the President will certainly veto it.

Madam Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. SOLOMON. Madam Speaker, I continue to reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. HALL of Ohio. Madam Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. VENTO].

(Mr. VENTO asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. VENTO. Madam Speaker, I rise in opposition to this rule. The fact is that this bill is being considered under severe time restraints and severe limits in terms of the amendments that are written in the rule.

While I appreciate the fact that the Committee on Rules did respond to my request to offer the amendment that I resubmitted, with the modifications to it, but the fact is that the nature of the time allotments on this, and the limitations on this are simply not justified.

Mr. SOLOMON. Madam Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VENTO. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. SOLOMON. Madam Speaker, let the gentleman understand that we made in order all amendments that were filed, including the gentleman's, and even gave him the opportunity to modify.

Because of the windows of opportunity, we have put a time limit of 10 minutes on each amendment. However, if the gentleman desires more time, I am sure that the gentleman from California [Mr. MILLER] or the gentleman from Utah [Mr. HANSEN] would be willing to grant more time. This was sort of the understanding that we had.

Mr. VENTO. Madam Speaker, I thank the chairman and, of course, I acknowledge exactly what he had repeated as I yielded to him. The concern is and the reason is that there is no urgency in terms of this matter, the issue of this matter has been before the Congress, an introduced measure since the beginning of this Congress. It has been over 3 months actually since this bill, the so called Monument Fairness Act, was acted on by the House Committee on Resources. The effort at this late date and at this time, in fact, to try and squeeze in this bill, as it were, this week or next week simply does not do justice to the nature of the issue that is before us.

I say that because this 1906 act, this antiquities law that is proposed to be substantially cut and modified by this proposal, is one of the foundations of modern conservation law in terms of what has happened in this century as our Nation and our people and values came to realize the importance of conserving the great landscapes that make up our Nation which are the legacy of future generations of Americans.

It is hardly the time in the 20th century, when we have come to a realization where the United States has led the world, really, in terms of conservation and preservation of these special landscapes, that we would propose at this date to move into the 21st century without extending and maintaining this essential power for the President.

While it is true that in the past 90 years we have developed the national parks, we have developed fish and wildlife areas and important landmark laws like the 1964 wilderness law, Madam Speaker, while it is true that we have developed these new laws that addressed the preservation of landscapes and provide Congress and, in a more limited way, the States and the administration an opportunity to act, in fact, deal with the risks and the problems that face these essential landscapes, the fact is that this fundamental power of the 1906 act is a very pervasive one and a very important one in terms of being the foundation of our efforts to, meet the objectives and goals of the American people in preserving these important natural, cultural, and scientific areas.

As a matter of fact, this is the legislation that is the essence of having developed important crown jewels that we hold up now as proudly as the accomplishments of this century as areas of landscape preservation, like the Grand Canyon, like Denali in Alaska, like Glacier Bay in southeast Alaska, and many, many other areas that are equally important and recognized by all America as our special places and valued.

To bring this bill up and to consider it with these abbreviated sorts of amendments and to try to jam it to conclusion in this session and in this manner is inappropriate and, I think, does not reflect well on the deliberative process that I would think would accompany a significant change in natural resource policy that is important to this House and our Nation.

Stripping away the President's power, the power that 13 Presidents have exercised in 105 different instances in creating and designating and declaring these national monuments, is a very important landscape and environmental law that we should not take away, initiated, by, of course, the pioneer of the modern conservation movement, Theodore Roosevelt, in 1906 and used through most of the Presidents, including President Clinton.

If we disagree with the actions of a President, whatever President it is, this Congress has the opportunity to act and historically has acted, effectively in terms of addressing this issue, but not to upset the very power that the Presidents have, in an emergency to act to protect our landscapes and resources for future generations of Americans.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Utah [Mr. HANSEN], 7 minutes.

(Mr. HANSEN asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the gentleman from New York yielding the time to me on this important piece of legislation.

Everyone has alluded to the idea of what Theodore Roosevelt was able to do. One of our great Presidents, no question about it, was the man who took care of conservation, started the ball rolling. What did he have to work with back at the turn of the century? Was there any legislation there that would allow him to go out and see these beautiful parks of America, let us take care of it? There was nothing there. So the 1906 antiquities law came along.

What does it do? Does it offer any protection to anything? Absolutely not. Nothing. So the President did not have the 1915 park bill. If he had, he would have used it, and later it was used. He did not have the 1969 NEPA bill. He did not have the 1964 wilderness bill. He did not have the 1976 FLPMA bill, Wild and Scenic River, Horse and Burro Act, did not have any of those things. What he did have? He had the 1906 law that has far outlived its usefulness.

What does that law say? The law says that the President of the United States sees an area, this should be protected for archeological reasons or historic reasons, and every President but one always stated the reason. Rainbow Bridge is a reason; two trains came together where it was. Whatever it may be. This President forgot to state the reason in this one. What does the next sentence in the law say? It is very clear. It says that he shall use the smallest amount of acreage to protect that archeological or historical thing.

Now we have a very interesting thing that occurred. On September 18, 1996, safely in Arizona, the President of the United States stood up and he declared 1.7 million acres as a national monument. Did this President say, here is this archeological thing I have tried to protect? Wait a minute, here is this historic thing I want to protect? He did not say a word about it. In fact, he had never even been there, different than Teddy Roosevelt who had been to all those areas. President Roosevelt had seen those areas, had walked on them, hunted on them, knew about them. He was an expert on it.

Does this President even know where it was? He did not even know where the thing was. Why did he do it? What is the historical nature? Did anyone say anything about this? Did I hear that from this side or this side? What was the archeological reason? Can anybody give it to me? And what is the smallest amount, as the law says? Should we now cut the President off and say, Mr. President, you cannot do this anymore; we have other laws?

No. There may be a hairy mammoth up there in northern Minnesota that we will find, and I would assure my good friend from Minnesota, who would want a national park there or national monument, the President could go up, under this law, and he could take 50,000 acres and no one says a thing about it. Come on, think about it.

Do any of you guys in here know anything about surveying? I do not know very much. Let me say this: How big is 50,000 acres? The size of Washington, D.C., is 50,000 acres.

He can do that anywhere in any one of your States. He can go in and plunk it down right in the middle of Ithaca, NY, or wherever he wants to. You have 50,000; we do not say a thing about it. All we are saying is, this law has outused its purpose. Now let us just bring it to 50,000.

What does this bill say? It says, in the event the President of the United States wants more than 50,000 acres, he had better talk to the Governor. Does he have to listen to the Governor? No. But we are saying for 30 days he has to talk to the Governor of the State and then he has to come to Congress. And, incidentally, we all admit that Congress is given the right to take care of the public lands of America; the Constitution gives them that. And then he can come to Congress, and Congress can say, all right, Mr. President, we will give you more or less.

If he goes over, this bill says, for 2 years it sits there, and then it sunsets, unless Congress moves on it.

I would just say to my friends, please do not get conned into the idea of saying there is protection here. Does the antiquities bill stop coal mining in an area? No. You can still mine coal in a national monument. Does it stop mineral development? No. Conoco is drilling exploratory in the Grand Escalante Staircase as we speak. Does it prevent grazing? No. Grazing will continue. On the contrary, the national monuments are there to be seen.

This flies in the face of what the environmental community thought they had. They shot themselves in the foot on this one. They thought they got protection. What did they get? They got hundreds of people standing there. I was down there not too long ago. I was in the Government vehicle; State people were with me, all these folks standing around. They said: Hey, you folks are government. Tell us what is the national historic thing that I came to see in the monument, and where is the monument? We said: Folks, you are standing in it. I hope you enjoy it.

Next question: What is there to see? We do not know. So they are going there, all these people now. It is great for Escalante. It is great for Cannonville. It is great for Tropic. It is great for those little communities where they did not have a tax base. Now they have people coming in by the hundreds, and they are building motels, and they are building gas stations. And now all we can see out there is a panorama of people trying to find something to see like they do Rainbow Bridge, like they do the Golden Spike, like they do the other monuments. But there is nothing to see.

So why did we do it? Well, we have been asking the White House: Why did you do this anyway? Strangely enough, we are now even subpoenaing the records. They actually said I could look at them, and I did. There was not one thing in there about protecting it. And, in fact, the chairman of the President's Environmental Protection Council said this: This ground is not worthy of protection. That is in black and white.

So then you ask yourself, what about the time it happened? Do you know what they said? They said: Who do we want to stand with us safely on the south rim of the Grand Canyon? Do we want the mainstream Utah folks? That was not stated. What was stated: Do we want the enviro crowd to accept it wildly?

Let us be honest, whether it is a Republican or a Democrat, this was done for political purpose only. That is it. It had nothing to do with anything as far as protecting an area. My dad ran uranium mines down there. I can tell you, I agree with Kathleen McGinney, it does not deserve protection.

Mr. VENTO. Madam Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HANSEN. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. VENTO. Will the gentleman have a bill to repeal the declaration of the President with regard to the Escalante Grand Staircase national monument?

Mr. HANSEN. Madam Speaker, let me say this to the gentleman. If we had any sense and the President had time enough to talk to us, we would have said the Grand Staircase Escalante should be 50-mile mountain, and it should be Paria-Hackberry. I would agree, it is almost national park status. There is one little tiny part of it. They did not talk to us. In fact, no one from the delegation was even alerted, which I find a little offensive.

Mr. HALL of Ohio. Madam Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. HINCHEY].

(Mr. HINCHEY asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. HINCHEY. Madam Speaker, life is certainly full of inconsistencies, and nowhere is that more evident than on the floor of the House of Representatives today. We have before us something called the rule on the National Monument Fairness Act of 1997.

Of course this act has nothing to do with fairness whatsoever. It has to do entirely and completely with trying to, in some misguided way, strike back at the administration for declaring a national monument in the Grand Staircase in Escalante in southern Utah, an act which, as a matter of fact, has been hailed by people all across the country, including many in Utah and many public officials in Utah.

Why we are doing this is certainly beyond me, but inconsistent it certainly is. In introducing the rule on this act, the chairman of the Committee on Rules inveighed against the closed nature in which the President engaged in establishing this national monument while, in fact, that was not a closed process at all. It was a very open process and heralded in many places all across the country. What is closed, in fact, is this modified closed rule in which we are seeking to address this very important issue.

Another inconsistency. Just recently, in a budget bill, we passed legislation which appropriated $5 million for the purchase of the Reagan ranch in California. Now, that may be a very good idea. I do not know. And I am sure most people do not know because there were no hearings. There was no open process. No one knew anything about it. The people in the surrounding area, I understand, are very upset about the fact that this ranch has now been purchased, or is about to be purchased, for $5 million. Talk about a closed process, this majority here seems to have the patent on closed processes.

Let us talk for a moment about one of the specific amendments here, the amendment that is being introduced by my good friend from Utah which would set up a process whereby before any national monuments can be designated, 30 days notice has to be given to the State. That may not be a bad idea, but then it goes further and it says that after 2 years, after the monument has been designated for 2 years, the Congress is going to have to take some affirmative action.

What that means is, in effect, that the National Monuments Act will be made null and void, because virtually any Member of the Congress would be able to hold it up.

Now, my dear friend from Utah was talking a few moments ago about how a national monument can be installed anyplace in the country by whim of the President. Not so, my colleagues. That is not the case at all. First of all, national monuments can be declared only on public land, and the Grand Staircase Escalante National Monument involves public land in the State of Utah, and that is what this is about.

This is about designating land that is owned by all of the people of this country, public lands owned by all of the people of this country to be a national monument.

Now, we were told also that there are no specifics in this proclamation. Quite the contrary, Madam Speaker. The proclamation that the President used in declaring the Grand Staircase Escalante National Monument is replete with specifics. Let me mention just a few.

The monument holds many arches and natural bridges, including the 130-foot high Escalante Natural Bridge, with a 100-foot span, and Grosvenor Arch, a rare double arch. The upper Escalante canyons in the northeastern reaches of the monument are distinctive: In addition to several major arches and the natural bridges, vivid geological features are laid bare in narrow serpentine canyons. It goes on and on. There are innumerable specifics in this proclamation that set forth precisely why this area was designated a national monument.

So what we have before us today is not an act that seeks fairness, it is an act that seeks some perverse kind of revenge for having done something that some people may not approve of, although is approved of by the overwhelming majority of the American people and by notable public officials in the State of Utah, including the Governor of the State of Utah.

This was, in fact, the right thing to do. The President has used this act in precisely the way it was intended to be used, precisely the way 13 other Presidents have used it in the past. And if this act were in effect when other national monuments were intended to be enacted, they never would have taken place. The people of this country would have been deprived of some of the most important aspects of our natural heritage.

This rule is a bad rule, Madam Speaker, and the amendments that it makes germane are bad also and they ought to both be defeated.

Mr. SOLOMON. Madam Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I am shocked, literally shocked, at my colleague from New York, whose district borders mine, complaining about this rule. The rule is totally open to every Member of this Congress to offer amendments. We made in order every single request that we had, with the exception of the gentleman's colleague, who now has turned his amendment into a germane amendment and we are about to move to make that amendment in order as well.

I really hesitate to be critical of my colleague, but he ought to know that what he said is not true about the rule. The rule is fair and open and it is supported by everyone in the Chamber.

Mr. HINCHEY. Madam Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SOLOMON. I will not yield to the gentleman from New York, because the gentleman would not yield to another colleague.

Well, I will yield to the gentleman to show how fair we are.

Mr. HINCHEY. Madam Speaker, I would point out to my friend that only 2 days time was given to file amendments and there is only 10 minutes allowed for debate on each of the amendments that have been allowed. So in my colleague's own language, and appropriately so, this rule has been described as a modified closed rule, and closed it certainly is.

Mr. SOLOMON. Madam Speaker, reclaiming my time, if the gentleman had requested an amendment, it would have been made in order.

Madam Speaker, I yield 2½ minutes to the gentleman from Alaska [Mr. YOUNG], chairman of the Committee on Resources. He is really one of the most respected Members of this body because he always tells it like it is.

(Mr. YOUNG of Alaska asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Madam Speaker, I have been listening to this thing with great interest. If my colleagues read the bill, it is a very simple and very good bill.

It limits the President's ability. Up to or below 50,000 acres, he can do anything he wants to do. If we read the Antiquities Act, it was never meant to be used as Jimmy Carter used it when they set aside 87 million acres in my State as a national monument. It was never meant to set Escalante aside. That was never the intent of the Antiquities Act. It was to save the Statue of Liberty or some historical house or something that was being threatened by, in fact, outside encroachment.

The most interesting thing I hear today is this body, especially that side, is willing to let the President run this country by himself when the Constitution says we have the authority, and only the Congress of the United States, to set aside and designate lands. I am not about to elect a king. He may think he is a king, but I say he is just a President and he has to answer to this Congress.

This gentleman from Utah puts it very clearly, that we now say, all right, sir, Mr. President, if there is a Statue of Liberty or a Washington Monument or Mount Vernon being threatened, he can declare that a national monument if they are not already. But if there is anything larger than 50,000 acres, which is bigger than the gentleman's district, then he has to come back to the Congress. And what is wrong with letting the Congress do the job instead of just letting the President do the job?

But more than Escalante, I want to tell my colleagues a little thing about Escalante. No one was consulted in the State of Utah. The Governor was not; our colleague was not. In fact, he was washed down the drain by this President on behalf of the environmental community. Washed out of this Congress. He was defeated because this President did not have the decency to communicate with those elected close by.

And by the way, it is not a monument. It is actually an area that is basically of little value other than the coal. It is ironic to me this large massive amount of coal is now off limits.

The second thing is there is private land involved here, 200,000 acres of land owned by the State of Utah, that is surrounded by, now, this monument. There are private land holdings within the monument that are no longer of any value. It is a taking without compensation.

We are trying to solve a problem that this President has abused; that Jimmy Carter abused. It is a bill that should be passed, and I would suggest, respectfully, let us go with the amendments that have been offered by the gentleman from Utah; let us pass this legislation; let us put, I suggest, Congress back in the role of selecting the lands that should be a monument.

Mr. HALL of Ohio. Madam Speaker, I yield 6 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. MILLER], the ranking minority member of the committee.

(Mr. MILLER of California asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. MILLER of California. Madam Speaker, I rise in strong opposition to this rule.

It is unfortunate that we are being rushed both in this rule and I guess in consideration of the underlying legislation. This is a bill that was reported out of our committee in June, and now we find, just before the House is in a rush to leave for the religious holidays, that we have this bill jammed to us on the floor and time limitations placed upon the amendment.

This is an important bill. Understand that. This is not a minor bill, this is an important bill, and it should be open to full and fair debate because this bill stands the Antiquities Act on its head.

Now, those who are supporting this legislation would have us think that somehow the President was wandering around the country willy-nilly declaring areas to be national monuments and to preserve Federal lands. That is not the case at all.

They would have us believe there has been no consultation, no discussion, no awareness of this. The fact of the matter is there has been years of consultation, years of discussion within the Utah delegation, within our committee, within the Congress, within the Senate, within the House, among the Governors, among the administration; and the fact of the matter is that nobody could arrive at a conclusion about the protection of these lands.

The people of Utah have expressed over and over again that they want an expansive Utah wilderness bill to protect these lands and other lands in that State. The President took these lands to protect them.

Why did he protect them? Because when we go out to Utah and we travel the lands, we will see an interesting phenomenon: people driving tractors across the land, people punching roads into the land because they think that that somehow will disqualify them from being nominated as a wilderness area. And it is going on on a weekly and daily basis out there, so somebody had to take action.

Now, under the existing law, the President took action, as he properly did and rightfully did, to protect the lands in this State that belong to the people of the United States, all of the people of the United States. But the Senators from Utah and elsewhere have filibustered, they have blocked amendments. They would not let this happen. The President took the action to protect the lands.

Now, the gentleman from Utah, the Senators from Utah or anybody else who wants, can come here and introduce legislation to modify the Escalante area. The gentleman says some of it is worthy of a national park and the rest is not much. Bring that bill to the floor. Let us have that debate.

Many people think that the wilderness area should be much larger than that. There are many other areas that should be protected. The gentleman has his own bill. Other people have brought bills in the past to modify actions of the President. Some 40 times we have modified those actions.

But rather than deal with that, rather than deal with this on the merits, is it too large, too small, is it the right area, the wrong area, is it a valuable area or an invaluable area, they would rather gut the Antiquities Act. They would rather put it back into the hands of the Senators who have filibustered the protection of these lands in the first place. That is what they want to do.

That stands one of the crown jewels of environmental protection on its head. It guts the Antiquities Act. When it is all said and done we put it right back into the hands of the great "hall of whims" down at the other end of the aisle here where they cannot resolve anything.

We have asked year after year after year for a Utah wilderness bill. They cannot resolve it. So we are not going to let people lay waste to these lands because the politicians cannot make up their minds to do what the people in the State want them to do. That is what this debate is about.

This bill is a bad bill, the amendments will not cure it, and we ought to defeat the rule and we ought to defeat the bill.

Mr. VENTO. Madam Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MILLER of California. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. VENTO. Madam Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding to me. I certainly concur with much of his statement.

The fact that President Carter, the fact that President Clinton used this action was precisely because there were imminent actions. And my colleague from Alaska, our chairman, surely knows that the protection of the D-2 lands, had it been extended, expired because Congress failed to act. The only tool he had available that would really work was this 1906 act.

Today we would not have the protection of many of these key areas in Alaska but for the fact that the President had this backup power. It is important to have the '64 Wilderness Act, the 1916 Park Act, and many others, but the fact is the President needs that so that he can protect the public interest, the national interest, in terms of these lands, whether they be in Alaska or Utah.

The gentleman disagrees, and I respect the fact that we have disagreement with regards to this, but the President acted in this instance because there were mineral leases that were going to go on.

Talking about consultation, there are major flaws in terms of these bills.

Mr. VENTO. The fact is that when there is an instance where there is a conservation action that may take place with regard to wilderness designation or park designation, we have a group of individuals in this country that will go on seeking mineral leasing, seeking permits, simply with the effort to in fact frustrate, and at great expense to the taxpayer. We have to go back at that particular point if we want to achieve the conservation, the preservation of that land, and pay for what the taxpayer already owns, that is, the Federal Government already has. We have to go back and pay, basically, in essence being blackmailed in these instances in order to conserve these lands. That is wrong.

Mr. MILLER of California. The gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. VENTO] is right. My colleague wants to keep alluding to Katie McGinty's memo. But the fact of the matter is, with advanced notice, the Senate would have tried to stop this, would have tried to put this into an appropriations bill, and left these lands unprotected.

That was the fact that was on the ground and evident to everyone in this Nation before the President had the courage to act and protect these lands.

Mr. SOLOMON. Madam Speaker, I intend to close for our side, if the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. HALL] would like to yield back the balance of his time.

Mr. HALL of Ohio. Madam Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Madam Speaker, I have no more speakers. I would just say that the chairman has referred to this as being an open rule. It is really a modified closed rule.

I just want to correct that particular statement and say that the bill is a high priority from the standpoint if you are an environmentalist and really care about these lands. On the other hand, the bill can wait and it is not necessary that we continue to stay here and debate this piece of legislation.

I would just say that I would hope that people would consider this rule and vote according to what the gentleman from California [Mr. MILLER] and what the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. VENTO] and what the gentleman from New York [Mr. HINCHEY] have said about this. I think they have made very, very good points about this legislation.

Madam Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. SOLOMON. Madam Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Utah [Mr. COOK], a very distinguished new Member of this body.

Mr. COOK. Madam Speaker, I thank the gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON] for yielding me the time in the closing arguments here.

Madam Speaker, I rise to speak in strong support of the rule on the underlying legislation, the National Monument Fairness Act. With all due respect to my friends and colleagues from New York, Minnesota, and California, I just cannot see what the real problem is. Because, Madam Speaker, I think this act will only enhance the ability of a President to work with Governors and State lawmakers to preserve America's scenic wonders, something I feel very strongly about, something that ought to be done.

The Antiquities Act can be a wonderful tool for enshrining significant natural, archaeological and historical sites. H.R. 1127 will still allow a President to declare national monuments, up to 50,000 acres, in the same way that he declared the Escalante Grand Staircase.

But when he is going to designate a monument that size, 1.7 million, in fact, anything over 50,000, he is going to have to consult with State legislatures and Governors. Because if he does not, there will be sunset provisions or some other way to make sure appropriate notification, not denial, of the opportunity to use the Antiquities Act is done.

History shows us that this bill will not affect very many of the vast number of prospective sites. The vast majority of all previously declared areas are much, much smaller than 50,000 acres. But common sense and fair play dictate the large piece of land in a State that is to be set aside as a national monument, the Governor and the States' legislatures ought to be consulted. Failure to do so absolutely flies in the face of representative government and democracy itself.

That kind of offense is really unnecessary. This would totally be prevented by the simple notifications required.

Mr. SOLOMON. Madam Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Madam Speaker, I sum up very briefly, not using all of our time that we have. I just want to quote one more time, if I might, because it is really what this bill is all about that the rule makes in order; and that is the statement by Katie McGinty, the chair of the President's Council on Environmental Quality, when she wrote, "I will say again, any public release of information would probably foreclose the President's option to proceed," that is, hiding it from the American people.

Interior Department Solicitor John Lishy said something similar when he said, "I can't emphasize confidentiality too much. If word leaks out, it probably won't happen."

That is what this legislation is all about. The American people are always entitled to know what their Government is doing.

Now, the rule is a fair rule, whether it is modified closed, modified open. It is a rule that made in order every single request by every single Member for any germane amendment, including the gentleman from New York [Mr. BOEHLERT], the noted environmentalist, over here, who I will offer an amendment in a minute to this rule, making in order his amendment, which is now germane to the issue. And that is out of fairness.

We have then taken care of anyone and everyone who wanted to offer amendments to this, including the gentleman from New York [Mr. HINCHEY]. Had he wanted an amendment, it would have been made in order.

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. SOLOMON

Mr. SOLOMON. Madam Speaker, I offer an amendment.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the basic request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

Mr. OBERSTAR. Madam Speaker, reserving the right to object, I do so for the purpose of simply stating that it is my understanding that the bill before us will extend the programs authorized under ISTEA for 6 months, without substantive changes, at exactly one-half the amount provided in the budget resolution for fiscal year 1998 and under a distribution formula which is the exact same percentage that the States received in fiscal year 1997.

Is that the understanding of the Chairman?

Mr. SHUSTER. Madam Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. OBERSTAR. Further reserving the right to object, I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

(Mr. SHUSTER asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks and include extraneous material.)

Mr. SHUSTER. That is my understanding.

Madam Speaker, I would like to express my appreciation to the gentleman from Texas, chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means, for his cooperation in allowing this bill to be brought up in an expeditious manner.

H.R. 2516 is an extension of the current ISTEA programs for the 6-month period October 1, 1997, through March 31, 1998.

I would first like to briefly explain how the bill works.

EXPLANATION OF THE BILL

The bill provides one-half of the funding allocation for surface transportation programs in the fiscal year 1998 budget resolution and authorizes those programs for 6 months of the fiscal year.

The bill is intended to fully comply with the budget resolution.

For the Highway Program, H.R. 2516 apportions these funds to the States according to the fiscal year 1997 final funding percentages in ISTEA.

The bill then directs that the funds distributed to each State be divided between the existing ISTEA Program categories in the same proportion as 1997.

Choosing the 1997 funding distribution while maintaining the fiscal year 1997 proportional ISTEA Program distribution is a balanced approach which will help ensure that States can continue to fund projects.

For donor States that are concerned about extending the ISTEA formulas, fiscal year 1997 was the most favorable funding year in ISTEA for donor States because of the 90 percent of payments program.

The bill also continues all allocated programs which are continued in BESTEA at 50 percent of their fiscal year 1997 funding levels.

The transit, safety and motor carrier programs are similarly continued by extending fiscal year 1997 authorizations for 6 months at one-half the fiscal year 1997 amounts.

WHY WE ARE OFFERING THIS BILL

It is with great reluctance that we are acting on this 6-month extension.

As I have outlined, extending ISTEA for any period of time is not the preferred course of action for the committee.

Our strongly desired course was to bring up beset before the full House for quick action.

However, this 6-month extension will provide States sufficient funding to carry out their highway construction programs for most of fiscal year 1998 so that we could obtain higher funding levels for BESTEA in the budget resolution next spring.

This bill will provide significant relief to the States. H.R. 2516 provides $12.4 billion in highway funding, of which $11.5 billion is distributed to the States. In addition, the States have nearly $10 billion in unobligated balances of funds apportioned in earlier years. Together, the States will have approximately $21 billion in funds to obligated during fiscal year 1998.

When the fiscal year 1998 transportation appropriations bill is signed into law, States will be able to obligate these new fiscal year 1998 funds as well as unobligated balances. That bill should provide about $21 billion in obligation authority.

We also anticipate quick action next spring on a multiyear reauthorization. When enacted, that bill will provide additional funding for fiscal year 1998 as well as beyond.

We have chosen 6 months because this is the maximum amount of funds that could be distributed for a part of fiscal year 1998 and still implement a formula change when the multiyear bill is passed later in the year.

If more funding was distributed, then some States would receive partial allocations that were larger than their full allocation for fiscal year 1998 in BESTEA.

We are sympathetic to the concerns of Members, States, and industry about a 6-month extension. However, it is the only way to ensure that sufficient funding is received for the multiyear reauthorization bill that we all want to pass.

We will continue to work with all parties to further refine this legislation, or if possible, enact a multiyear bill this fall.

UNANTICIPATED CHANGE TO MANDATORY BASELINE

An unanticipated consequence of this 6-month bill has been a change to the 10-year baseline for minimum allocation.

H.R. 2516 provides that $319 million of minimum allocation is exempt from the obligation limitation.

This amount is one-half of the fiscal year 1998 allocation of the exempt baseline for minimum allocation be made exempt in this bill.

However, providing this number in H.R. 2516 has had the result of freezing the baseline for minimum allocation at $640 million over the next 10 years.

This occurs because the recent Budget Reconciliation Act changed the baseline rules for programs that expire to eliminate adjustments for inflation. This change was made without any discussion or consultation.

As this situation proves, this was not a mere technical change.

The minimum allocation program authorized in section 157 of title 23 provides that such sums as necessary be expended for minimum allocation.

As a result, CBO has estimated that minimum allocation would grow from $640 million in fiscal year 1998 to $800 million in 2007.

This anomalous scoring effect would reduce minimum allocation by a total of $752 million over that period.

I had wanted to alter H.R. 2516 to prevent this reduction in the minimum allocation baseline.

I have spoken with the Budget Committee about this problem and they have assured me that the baseline for minimum allocation in the fiscal year 1999 budget resolution will restore this inadvertent cut.

This issue is critically important for the Federal-Aid Highway Program. Minimum allocations is the program which ensures that States receive a fair share of funds from the highway trust fund. Any cut would be devastating to the so-called donor States.

Madam Speaker, I insert in the RECORD an exchange of letters between the gentleman from Texas [Mr. ARCHER] and myself concerning this legislation.

The letters referred to follow:

COMMITTEE ON TRANSPORTATION AND INFRASTRUCTURE, CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES, HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Washington, DC, September 26, 1997.

Hon. BILL ARCHER,

Chairman, Committee on Ways and Means, Longworth House Office Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR BILL: Thank you for your letter of September 26, 1997 regarding H.R. 2516, a bill to extend the Intermodal Surface Transportation Efficiency Act of 1991 through March 31, 1998. H.R. 2516 was marked-up by the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure on September 24, 1997 and reported to the House on September 25, 1997. I intend to move this legislation as expeditiously as possible to minimize any disruption in the program while Congress crafts a multi-year authorization bill next spring.

As described in your letter, the Committee on Ways and Means generally has limited expenditures from the Highway Trust Fund to certain purposes and time periods through provisions in the Trust Fund Code. Your Committee believes that this six month extension will require conforming amendments to the Trust Fund Code to permit continued expenditures. Your letter included a draft of the legislative language required to be added to H.R. 2516 which would extend the general expenditure authority from the Highway Trust Fund through September 30, 1998 and modify the eligible purposes for expenditures. Your proposal also makes similar changes to the Aquatic Resources Trust Fund. With your concurrence, I will add these provisions in an amendment to H.R. 2516 when it is considered by the House.

Finally, I concur that the Committee on Ways and Means has raised valid jurisdictional claims regarding the matters raised in your letter and appreciate your Committee's expedited consideration of these issues. I will place a copy of this exchange of letters in the Congressional Record during consideration of the bill. I want to thank you for your cooperation and assistance on this issue of high priority to my Committee.

With kindest personal regards, I remain

Sincerely,

BUD SHUSTER,
Chairman.

COMMITTEE ON WAYS AND MEANS,
U.S. HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington, DC, September 26, 1997.

Hon. BUD SHUSTER,

Chairman, House Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure, Rayburn House Office Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR BUD: I understand that on Thursday, September 25, 1997, the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure reported H.R. 2516, a bill to extend the Intermodal Surface Transportation Efficiency Act of 1991 through March 31, 1998.

As you know, each trust fund in the Trust Fund Code includes specific provisions within the jurisdiction of the Committee on Ways and Means which limit purposes for which trust fund monies may be spent. Statutorily, the Committee on Ways and Means generally has limited expenditures by cross-referencing provisions of authorizing legislation. Currently, with respect to the Highway Trust Fund, the Trust Fund Code provisions approve all expenditures out of the Highway Trust Fund permitted under the highway authorization Acts of 1956, 1982, 1987, and 1991, but only as those Acts were in effect on the date of enactment of the 1991 Act. Thus, an Act not referenced in the Trust Fund Code must be approved by the Committee on Ways and Means before the authorizations are funded. Similarly, expenditures from the Highway Trust Fund into the Boat Safety Account and the Sport Fish Restoration Account in the Aquatic Resources Trust Fund require conforming Trust Fund Code language.

I now understand that you are seeking to have the bill considered by the House as early as next week. In addition, I have been informed that your Committee will seek a Manager's or Committee amendment to the bill which will include language I am supplying (attached) to address the necessary trust funds provisions. The amendment would extend through September 30, 1998, the general expenditure authority and purposes of the Highway Trust Fund contained in section 9503(c); extend, through September 30, 1998, authority to make expenditures from the Highway Trust Fund to the Boat Safety Account in the Aquatic Resources Trust Fund; and extend through September 30, 1998, authority to make expenditures from the Highway Trust Fund to the Sport Fish Restoration Account in the Aquatic Resources Trust Fund relating to small-engine fuels receipts.

Based on this understanding, and in order to expedite consideration of this legislation, it will not be necessary for the Committee on Ways and Means to mark up this legislation. This is being done with the further understanding that the Committee will be treated without prejudice as to its jurisdictional prerogatives on such or similar provisions in the future, and it should not be considered as precedent for consideration of matters of jurisdictional interest to the Committee on Ways and Means in the future.

Finally, I would appreciate your response to this letter, confirming this understanding with respect to H.R. 2516, and would ask that a copy of our exchange of letters on this matter be placed in the Record during consideration of the bill on the Floor. Thank you for your cooperation and assistance on this matter.

With best personal regards,

BILL ARCHER,
Chairman.

Mr. BARCIA. Mr. Speaker, I must express grave concerns about this measure in light of reports in yesterday's press. Assurances were made to our chairman, Mr. SHUSTER, and our ranking member, Mr. OBERSTAR, regarding the passage of this 6-month extension of ISTEA. They worked tirelessly this year to put together a bill which met the Nation's transportation needs. They withdrew it in favor of this temporary alternative with assurances of an opportunity to address the irresponsibly low transportation funding levels in the budget agreement. It would appear that the leadership has already closed that door.

I find your statements in yesterday's Congress Daily, Mr. Speaker, to be deeply troubling. You were quite generous, during recent visits to our State of Michigan, in pledging your support for more funding for our deteriorating road system. Since that time, you have personally intervened in stopping a bill which would have delivered a much needed increase to our State, and yesterday, you reneged on your promise to seek more transportation funding for the Nation.

Mr. Speaker, the people of Michigan sincerely want to believe your promises, and I can think of one individual in particular who is most interested in whether you will. Monday night our Governor, John Engler, experienced what literally thousands of Michiganites experience every week: his car blew a tire when it hit a pothole on Interstate 96. The next time the Governor calls you, I don't think there will be any doubt what he will be calling about.

Mr. Speaker, yesterday you expressed concern for returning money to our citizens. If you want to return money to the people, Mr. Speaker, free the highway trust fund to fix our broken roads. The gas taxes were collected to fix roads, and it should be spent to fix roads, not to offset spending on other programs. Let's keep our word to the American people and use our transportation trust funds for transportation.

I thank Mr. SHUSTER and Mr. OBERSTAR for their efforts.

Mr. PETRI. Mr. Speaker, I want to express my support for this short-term extension of ISTEA. The bill serves many important purposes. It allows States to continue to operate and manage their programs without interruption in the new fiscal year. At the same time, it will allow us to fully consider and make our case for increased transportation investment during budget negotiations next year. We then will be able to move the multiyear reauthorization bill, H.R. 2400, that the committee has developed.

It is important to note that funds going to the States in this extension are not based on ISTEA averages or some chart approved by conferees 6 years ago. It is based on the year 1997—the best year for donor States since that is the year that the equity program known as 90 percent of payments came into play and provided donor States a more equitable return.

I know there may be some States or contractors who want the safety and security of a long-term bill. Certainly we had hoped to provide them with that and a 6-month extension is not the preferable course of action. But, as my own State has told me, while we want a long-term bill, we do not want a long-term bill at any cost. There may be some uncertainty, but the potential payoff can be great.

If we were to authorize 6 years of transportation spending under the budget agreement, the highway trust fund balance would soar to roughly $80 billion. It is totally unacceptable for this Congress to continue to collect taxes from American citizens at the gas pump and then not spend those revenues for urgently needed transportation improvements. Even under H.R. 2400, where we begin to more fully spend highway trust fund revenues, the balance will grow to about $50 billion before stabilizing. The committee will not move forward with legislation that does not set us on a course of living up to the promise of the highway trust fund made over 40 years ago that taxes imposed on the traveling public would be used only for preserving and upgrading our Nation's transportation system.

We need the time provided in this extension to review changing economic conditions and spending and revenue projections in order to set a realistic, responsible level of funding for transportation for the future. H.R. 2516 allows the State programs to continue while we pursue our goal of a multiyear reauthorization bill and higher funding levels.

I urge the House to approve H.R. 2516.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, the amendment is agreed to. There was no objection.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. SHUSTER. Madam Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks on H.R. 2516, the bill just passed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 5 of rule I, the Chair will now put the question on each motion to suspend the rules on which further proceedings were postponed on Monday, September 29, 1997 in the order in which that motion was entertained, and then on approval of the Journal.

PERMANENT ENTRY AUTHORITY FOR CERTAIN RELIGIOUS WORKERS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The unfinished business is the question of suspending the rules and passing the Senate bill, S. 1198, as amended.

The Clerk read the title of the Senate bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. SMITH] that the House suspend rules and pass the Senate bill, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the Senate bill, as amended, was passed.

The title of the Senate bill was amended so as to read:

"A bill to amend the Immigration and Nationality Act to extend the special immigrant religious worker program, to amend the Illegal Immigration Reform and Immigrant Responsibility Act of 1996 to extend the deadline for designation of an effective date for paperwork changes in the employer sanctions program, and to require the Secretary of State to waive or reduce the fee for application and issuance of a nonimmigrant visa for aliens coming to the United States for certain charitable purposes."

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

AUTHORIZING APPROPRIATIONS FOR REFUGE AND ENTRANT AS- SISTANCE, FISCAL YEARS 1998 AND 1999

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The unfinished business is the question of suspending rules and passing the Senate bill, S. 1161.

The Clerk read the title of the Senate bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. SMITH] that the House suspend the rules and pass the Senate bill, S. 1161.

The question was taken.

Mr. MILLER of California. Madam Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Evidently a quorum is not present.

The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members.

The vote was taken by electronic device and there were—yeas 230, nays 193, not voting 10, as follows:

Mr. BARTON of Texas changed his vote from "yea" to "nay."

Messrs. BARCIA, BACHUS, PAXON and LOBIONDO and Ms. MCKINNEY changed their vote from "nay" to "yea."

So the motion to adjourn was rejected.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

EXPEDITING LEGISLATIVE SCHEDULE

(Mr. ARMEY asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. ARMEY. Mr. Speaker, as of course we all know, we were here late last night as we moved work forward the best we could in the face of many motions to adjourn or to rise during the course of the day. But our purpose was to try to do our very best to help our colleagues that need help on this very special day in their lives.

We would have been done with all recorded votes today at 11:30, at which time there was a motion to adjourn that was offered before us. We have, of course, some unfinished business in the form of some remaining postponed votes on motions to suspend that tend to occupy our time today, and despite the fact that the announced time for adjournment was 3 o'clock and we have made every effort to move that to 12:30, which was met by our completion of work that required votes at 11:30, we continue to still be here with a great many Members who are finding their life beleaguered by anxiety.

REQUEST THAT POSTPONED MOTIONS TO SUSPEND RULES AND PASS BILLS OR AGREE TO RESOLUTIONS BE CONSIDERED AS PASSED IN FORM CONSIDERED BY THE HOUSE ON MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 29, 1997, AND THE JOURNAL STAND APPROVED

Mr. ARMEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the remaining postponed motions to suspend the rules and pass bills or agree to resolutions be considered as passed in the form considered by the House on Monday, September 29, 1997, and that the Journal stand approved today.

The SPEAKER pro tempore [Mr. PEASE]. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

Mr. MILLER of California. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the motion that the gentleman has made, but the history is all wrong. The history was that these votes were rolled from Monday night when the House went out early, coming to town late Monday, fully expecting to vote on these motions, and they were rolled to somehow teach a political lesson, the first time in the history of this House we have seen this kind of activity take place in front of the religious holidays. That was a conscious decision. This was a conscious decision.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

Mr. MILLER of California. Reserving right to object, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. ARMEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask for regular order, and I ask that my unanimous consent request be granted by the body.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, if we were to adjourn now without acting on the pending suspensions, what would the parliamentary effect be?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The answer is that those motions would become unfinished business of the House.

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. They would simply be pending next week?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. No; tomorrow, on the next legislative day.

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. Which would be next week, if we adjourn, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Not if the House convenes tomorrow.

Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

Mr. MILLER of California. Mr. Speaker, I object.

EXPRESSING THE SENSE OF CONGRESS REGARDING THE OCEAN

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The unfinished business is the question of suspending the rules and agreeing to the concurrent resolution, House Concurrent Resolution 131, as amended.

The Clerk read the title of the concurrent resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. SAXTON] that the House suspend the rules and agree to the concurrent resolution, House Concurrent Resolution 131, as amended.

The question was taken.

Mr. MILLER of California. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, this is a 5-minute vote.

There was no objection.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 237, nays 175, not voting 21, as follows:

Mr. LIVINGSTON changed his vote from "yea" to "nay."

So the motion to adjourn was rejected.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

REQUEST THAT POSTPONED MOTIONS TO SUSPEND RULES AND PASS BILLS OR AGREE TO RESOLUTIONS BE CONSIDERED PASSED IN FORM CONSIDERED BY HOUSE ON MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 29, 1997, AND THE JOURNAL STAND APPROVED

Mr. ARMEY. Mr. Speaker, I wish to take a moment to remind my colleagues that despite our very best efforts to complete this business as early as possible and to be done with business today, any of these suspension votes that are not handled today will, in fact, be regular order of business, necessarily handled tomorrow, and we would certainly want to avoid that if at all possible.

So in light of that, Mr. Speaker, again I ask unanimous consent that the remaining postponed motions to suspend the rules and pass bills or agree to resolutions be considered as passed in the form considered by the House on Monday, September 29, 1997, and that the Journal stand approved today.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, as the only Jewish Member of the leadership of either party in this House, I feel obligated to make some observations at this point and to make a suggestion to my distinguished colleague from Texas, the majority leader.

I believe that the parliamentary situation that we have found ourselves in for the last several hours does not bring credit to either party in this House, and I would suggest to the majority leader that there is a solution to this problem. I know the majority leader is reluctant to accept this solution. I would urge him to do so.

The solution is to roll these votes until next Monday. The alternative of having votes tomorrow places the Jewish Members of this House, both Republicans and Democrats, in an intolerable situation. The Jewish Members cannot be present tomorrow. The Republican Jewish Members cannot be present, the Democratic Jewish Members cannot be present tomorrow, and the majority leader understands that.

If I may continue, I think what we have done in the last several hours does not bring credit to this House and it does not bring credit to either party in this House.

I would urge the majority leader to amend his unanimous request and do the correct thing, even though I know he is reluctant to do that. But I would urge him, in a sense of comity, in a sense of what is good for this institution, to continue those votes to a time when Members can be present and vote.

Mr. SERRANO. Mr. Speaker, I object.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Objection is heard.

REQUEST FOR PERMISSION FOR CHAIR TO REDUCE TIME FOR ELECTRONIC VOTING ON REMAINING MOTIONS TO SUSPEND THE RULES

Mr. ARMEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Chair be authorized to reduce to not less than 2 minutes the time for voting by electronic device on the remaining motions to suspend the rules.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

Mr. WATT. Mr. Speaker, I object.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. WATT] objects.

CANADIAN RIVER RECLAMATION PROJECT

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The unfinished business is the question de novo of suspending the rules and passing the bill, H.R. 2007, as amended.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. THORNBERRY] that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 2007, as amended.

The question was taken.

Mr. SERRANO. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. This will be a 5-minute vote.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 226, nays 176, answered "present" 1, not voting 30, as follows:

Mr. TAYLOR of North Carolina changed his vote from "nay" to "yea." So (two-thirds not having voted in favor thereof) the motion was rejected. The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

Mr. EHLERS. Mr. Speaker, on rollcall No. 487, I missed the vote due to an urgent need to return to my office between votes. Had I been present, I would have voted "yes."

REQUEST FOR REDUCTION OF TIME FOR VOTING BY ELECTRONIC DEVICE ON REMAINING MOTIONS TO SUSPEND THE RULES

Mr. ARMEY. Mr. Speaker, I have here before me an enumeration of over 10 hours' worth of votes on motions to adjourn and motions to rise taken since September 4 in this body. Had we had those 10 hours for our work, we would not be in such shape.

Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that after the 5-minute vote on the next suspension, the Speaker be authorized to reduce the time for voting by electronic device for the balance of the postponed suspensions today to not less than 2 minutes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

Mr. ENGEL. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, and I will not object, but I want to echo the statement of my colleague from Texas [Mr. FROST].

Mr. Speaker, there are a number of us here that would like to go home out of respect for the religious holiday. I think that the request of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. ARMEY] is more than fair. I think that there is right and wrong here on both sides. I am tired of the disrespect, and I would respectfully urge my colleagues to accept what the majority leader has said. I think that is a compromise and it is a fair compromise.

Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

Mr. WATT of North Carolina. Mr. Speaker, I object.

MCCOSUKEE SETTLEMENT ACT OF 1997

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The unfinished business is the question of suspending the rules and passing the bill, H.R. 1476.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. THORNBERRY] that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 1476. The question was taken.

Mr. SERRANO. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays. The yeas and nays were ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. This is a 5-minute vote.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 229, nays 176, not voting 28, as follows:

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. PEASE). It should come as no surprise to Members that we are taking votes this afternoon and our colleagues would certainly appreciate it if Members would remain on the floor so that the votes are not delayed any longer than necessary.

REQUEST THAT POSTPONED MOTIONS TO SUSPEND RULES AND PASS BILLS OR AGREE TO RESOLUTIONS BE CONSIDERED AS PASSED IN FORM CONSIDERED BY THE HOUSE ON MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 29, 1997, AND THAT THE JOURNAL STAND APPROVED

Mr. ARMEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the remaining postponed motions to suspend the rules and pass bills or agree to resolutions be considered as passed in the form considered by the House on Monday, September 29, 1997, and that the Journal stand approved today.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

Mr. WATT of North Carolina. Mr. Speaker, I object.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Objection is heard.

REQUEST FOR PERMISSION FOR CHAIR TO REDUCE VOTING TIME ON REMAINING MOTIONS TO SUSPEND THE RULES

Mr. ARMEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that after the 5-minute vote on the next suspension, the Speaker be authorized to reduce the time for voting by electronic device to not less than 2 minutes.

Mr. ENGEL. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I once again appeal to my colleagues on both sides of the aisle. I have been a Member of this body for 9 years. We all respected each other. We come from different faiths and different backgrounds and different regions of the country.

I would ask my colleagues on both sides of the aisle to go along with what the majority leader has said in respect to the Jewish Members here who need to get home for the religious holiday. I might say to my colleagues that I respect everyone else's religion; please respect mine.

Mr. WATT of North Carolina. Mr. Speaker, I object.

SECURITIES AND EXCHANGE COMMISSION AUTHORIZATION, FISCAL YEARS 1998 AND 1999

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The unfinished business is the question of suspending the rules and passing the bill, H.R. 1262.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. OXLEY] that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 1262, on which the yeas and nays were ordered.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 230, nays 170, not voting 33, as follows:

PROCEEDINGS AND DEBATES OF THE 105th CONGRESS, FIRST SESSION

Vol. 143

WASHINGTON, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 1, 1997

No. 134

Senate

The Senate met at 10 a.m., and was called to order by the President pro tempore [Mr. THURMOND].

PRAYER

The Chaplain, Dr. Lloyd John Ogilvie, offered the following prayer:

Almighty God, Creator of the world, Ruler over all, our Adonai, Sovereign Lord of our life, we join with our Jewish friends in celebrating Rosh Hashanah, "the head of the year," the beginning of the days of awe and repentance, a time of reconciliation with You and one another. We thank You that we are all united in our need to repent, to return to our real selves for an honest inventory, and then to return to You with a humble and contrite heart. Forgive our sins of omission: the words and deeds You called us to do and we neglected, our bland condoning of prejudice and hatred, and our toleration of injustice in our society. Forgive our sins of commission: the times we turned away from Your clear and specific guidance, and the times we knowingly rebelled against Your management of our lives and Your righteousness in our Nation. Sound the shofar in our souls, blow the trumpets, and wake our somnolent spirits. Arouse us and call us to spiritual regeneration. Awaken us to our accountability to You for our lives, and our leadership of this Nation. We thank You for Your atoning grace and for the opportunity for a new beginning.

Help the Jews and Christians called to serve in this Senate, the Senators' staffs, and the whole support team of the Senate to celebrate our unity under Your sovereignty and exemplify to our Nation the oneness of a shared commitment to You. In Your holy name. Amen.

RECOGNITION OF THE ACTING MAJORITY LEADER

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The able acting majority leader, the distinguished Senator from Colorado, is recognized.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Thank you, Mr. President.

SCHEDULE

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. President, this morning the Senate will consider the Treasury-Postal appropriations conference report. Under the order, there will be 60 minutes of debate followed by a vote on the adoption of the conference report. Therefore, Senators can expect a rollcall vote at approximately 11 a.m. or earlier if debate time is yielded back.

Following that vote, the Senate will resume consideration of the D.C. appropriations bill. It is the intention of the majority leader to finish action on this measure today.

As a reminder to all Members, in observance of Rosh Hashanah, no rollcall votes will occur this week after 1 p.m. today. All Senators' cooperation will be appreciated in allowing the Senate to conclude action on the D.C. appropriations bill and any available appropriations conference reports.

RESERVATION OF LEADER TIME

TREASURY, POSTAL SERVICE, AND GENERAL GOVERNMENT APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 1998 CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. President, I submit a report of the committee of conference on H.R. 2378 making appropriations for the Treasury Department, the U.S. Postal Service, the Executive Office of the President, and certain independent agencies, for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1998, and for other purposes, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senate will now proceed to consideration of the conference report accompanying H.R. 2378 which the clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The committee on conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 2378) having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses this report, signed by a majority of the conferees.

The Senate proceeded to consider the conference report.

(The conference report is printed in the House proceedings of the RECORD of September 29, 1997.)

PRIVILEGE OF THE FLOOR

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. President, before proceeding with my statement, I ask unanimous consent that the following staff be allowed floor privileges during the consideration of the conference report on H.R. 2378. That will be Pat Raymond, Barbara Retzlaff, Tammy Perrin, Lula Edwards, and Frank Larkin.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. President, my colleague and I, Senator KOHL, are bringing before the Senate today the fiscal year 1998 appropriations bill of the Department of the Treasury, the U.S. Postal Service, and the Executive Office of the President, and certain independent agencies.

This bill contains $25.6 billion in mandatory and discretionary funding for fiscal year 1998. Reaching this level of funding has not been an easy task, and I would like at this time to publicly thank the ranking member, Senator KOHL, for his cooperation and continued effort in supporting this bill. We have tried our best to be supportive of the requests of individual Senators, and I think our bill reflects that.

This bill funds 40 percent of all Federal law enforcement. Adequate funding for this activity has been a top priority for both Senator KOHL and myself. In addition to providing sufficient funding for law enforcement, this bill goes a long way in encouraging the IRS to stay on track with modernization while at the same time addressing their needs for the year 2000 computer program.

Also, this bill provides for a new $195 million antidrug campaign for the Office of National Drug Control Policy targeted at our Nation's youth. This is $20 million above what the administration has requested.

In addition, this bill provides $10 million for the Drug Free Communities Act, a program which 27 Members of the Senate cosponsored. These funds will be used for the establishment of local counterdrug efforts focusing on successful local initiatives.

The bill also includes $159 million for the high intensity drug trafficking areas, or HIDTA's, as they are known. This provides funding for the existing HIDTA's, which are in Houston, Los Angeles, Miami, New York, the southwest border, Washington/Baltimore, Puerto Rico/Virgin Islands, Atlanta, Chicago, Philadelphia/Camden, Cascade, the gulf coast, Lake County, the Midwest, the Rocky Mountains, San Francisco, and Detroit. In addition, funding is provided for the new HIDTA's in West Virginia, Tennessee, Kentucky, central Florida and Wisconsin.

The bill also provides $10 million for the ATF's Gang Resistance Education And Training Program, or GREAT, as it is known, which many of my colleagues also support. This program provides grants to local law enforcement agencies.

There is also $13 million for an anti-drug technology transfer program targeted at State and local law enforcement. This new program aims at getting much-needed counterdrug technology currently used by Federal law enforcement out to those in the State and local communities in their efforts to help them in their efforts in fighting the drug war.

These are just a few of the items funded in this bill, Mr. President. This bill has taken lots of very, very hard work to stay within the budget agreement and still fund many important programs within the jurisdiction of the bill. I think this bill takes a strong stand for law enforcement while at the same time meeting the needs of many non-law enforcement agencies within the bill.

Therefore, I urge my Senate colleagues to support this bill. I believe it goes a long way in supporting what we all believe is important, primarily to continue to do what we can to reduce crime in the Nation.

Mr. President, this bill is the result of lots of hard work on behalf of Members and staff, too. I wish to thank all of them for that effort. I believe it deserves our support.

I now yield to Senator KOHL, our ranking minority member.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Wisconsin.

Mr. KOHL. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. President, I rise in support of this bill which provides funding for the Department of the Treasury, Executive Offices of the President, General Services Administration, and related agency programs. We have tried to be as critical and constructive as we can be. And I believe we have provided a strong funding bill.

Throughout this year we have had to grapple with a number of difficult issues, such as: accusations of IRS staff browsing at taxpayer files; IRS modernization efforts going awry; unidentified century date change requirements; and the appropriate funding level of the Office of National Drug Control Policy, ONDCP, media campaign.

These are issues we will continue to review and examine in 1998. And I hope we see some real progress occur as a result of the funding that we have provided.

In addition, we continue to be concerned with the level of crime through out our country. We realize that the money that is available through illegal drug and gun trafficking is enormous. As long as this kind of profit is available by doing illegal things our job will be more difficult in providing the necessary funding and technology required to deter that.

As a result, we have worked vigorously to fund the law enforcement agencies' priorities. And I hope that we can continue to work together to continue to fully fund much needed crime prevention programs such as GREAT, the Youth Crime Gun Interdiction Initiative, the Drug Free Prison Zone demonstration project and others.

I have enjoyed reviewing the diverse and complex issues of the agencies funded through this bill. I look forward to continuing to work with the subcommittee members and these agencies. Only through a constructive dialog, in a bipartisan fashion can we continue to build and maintain the agencies contained in this bill.

Finally, I want to say that I have enjoyed working with you, Mr. Chairman, and with your staff.

Thank you, Mr. President. I reserve the balance of my time.

OIRA

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, I ask the Chairman, is it correct that it is Congress' intent that the budget appropriated for the Office of Management and Budget includes sufficient funds for the Office of Information and Regulatory Affairs, OIRA, to coordinate and implement the Congressional Review Act?

Mr. CAMPBELL. That is correct.

Mr. NICKLES. I thank the Chairman. It has become evident that OIRA has not been implementing and coordinating the Congressional Review Act despite its organizing statute and President Clinton's Executive order. To make the Congressional Review Act work, Congress and the agencies need OIRA's expertise to coordinate agency input to the General Accounting Office on the new rules they promulgate. The General Accounting Office has reported to us that they have been frustrated by OIRA's refusal to work with them in their role of helping Congress understand the impact of each major rule.

Mr. CAMPBELL. I thank the Senator.

We have several requests for time on both sides of the aisle, Mr. President. I would be happy to have Senator KOHL yield time to Senator WELLSTONE.

Mr. KOHL. I yield to Senator WELLSTONE.

Mr. WELLSTONE. Thank you, Mr. President.

I thank both my colleagues, Senator KOHL from Wisconsin and Senator BEN NIGHTHORSE CAMPBELL from Colorado, for their fine work.

Let me, first of all, say, Mr. President, I understand this is a conference committee report, we will have a vote on it and there are many, many good things in this bill. I understand the good work of all Senators. I also want to express my personal gratitude to Representative BERNIE SANDERS in the House and Senator HARKIN for a provision, with the support of my colleagues, that they now have in this bill which really puts our country on the side of taking some action against coerced child labor in other countries. I think it is a terribly important provision, and I am very pleased to see this provision in this conference report, Mr. President.

So it is with a little bit of regret that I speak against this bill. I intend to vote against it, though, again, I want to make it clear why because there are a lot of good things in the bill.

When we had this bill before us in the Senate, I had sent a letter out to colleagues saying that I thought it was not appropriate for us to take a pay increase, cost-of-living increase, salary increase, whatever you want to call it, which I would raise our salaries to about $136,000. I sent a letter to all my colleagues, and then we in the Senate voice voted for the proposition that we would delete that pay increase. So the Senate took a position when we voice voted that we are not going to have a recorded vote because there is unanimity, there is a consensus in the Senate, that this cost-of-living adjustment for Members is not the right thing to do. I regret to say that in the conference committee we did not keep this pay increase out of this legislation. So now we are here today with the pay increase.

Now, a filibuster is beside the point. There is much in this bill that is very good. It is going to pass. I understand that. But I want to go on record as a Senator from Minnesota about this pay increase, not to talk about the process, though I must say I think my colleagues have done a pretty good job of not being recorded for or against this pay increase.

To me, there is something more important. That is why I speak in the Senate this morning and why I am going to vote against this conference report. I hope other Senators will as well. I put the cost-of-living increase or pay increase for Senators and Representatives in the context of the debate that we have had on the floor of the Senate over the last several years. I have traveled in the country and spent a lot of time in poor communities, and I cannot even begin to tell you the number of Head Start teachers who tell me how important early Head Start is, how it would make so much difference if they could have a chance to work with kids when they are 1 and 2 years of age to give them a head start. We have a pittance of funding for that. We say we do not have any more money for it, and yet we give ourselves a salary increase.

I cannot begin to describe the conversations that I have had with people all across the country about child care, affordable child care, which by the way is not just a problem for low-income people, but is a problem for middle-income and moderate-income families as well. Again, we have made precious little investment in children for child care but we give ourselves this salary increase.

I was at the University of Iowa on Monday and there I found a focus on Pell grants. I can't tell you how many people in the higher education communities say, "Look, by doing so little by way of expanding Pell grants—yes, you did the tax deductions and tax credits—you are still not dealing with the students most in need." Expansion of the Pell grant is by far the most effective way to do this. We say we cannot do it, but we give ourselves a salary increase.

Mr. President, most poignantly of all, or at least most poignant to me, we voted not long ago for some $50 billion in deficit reduction, and the two major programs that we targeted were, first, the Food Stamp Program, which is the major safety net program in this country when it comes to nutrition for children; and second, benefits for legal immigrants. Now, we have restored some of the benefits, though, again, we still have eliminated food and nutrition assistance for legal immigrants, and by the year 2002 there will be a 20 percent cut in food assistance for children.

Over 50 percent of the cuts we have made come from the Food Stamp Program, which is the major food nutrition program in this country and is our major safety net program. This is the program that has led to a significant reduction in malnutrition and hunger among children, and yet we said that in the name of sacrifice and in the name of deficit reduction and in the name of tightening our belt that we would cut the major nutrition programs for children in America, and at the same time we are now about to vote for a conference report that gives ourselves a salary increase, putting our salaries over $136,000 a year.

I don't think a salary increase is appropriate, Mr. President. I just don't think it is appropriate. That is my own view. I have had a chance to come to the floor of the Senate and express that view honestly, openly and directly. I expressed that view in the letter I sent to my colleagues before this ever came out of the Senate. I sent another letter to conferees saying, please stick to the Senate position. We had a unanimous vote in the Senate to stop this pay increase and yet we still now have the increase in this piece of legislation.

I just don't see the justice of it, colleagues. I don't see how we can cut basic benefits to the most needy and vulnerable citizens in this country—food and nutrition benefits for children in the name of belt tightening, sacrifice and deficit reduction—and at the same time give ourselves a salary increase, putting our salary over $136,000 a year. I don't think it is appropriate. I don't think it is the right thing to do.

As good a job as both colleagues have done on this piece of legislation, I will vote against this bill and I hope other colleagues will as well.

I yield the floor.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. President, before I yield 2 minutes to my friend from Kansas, Senator BROWNBACK, I commend Senator WELLSTONE for personally taking the lead on many of our children's issues in the U.S. Senate. I have always admired him for that. He knows my background from a home for orphans as a youngster, and I have always really appreciated his willingness to fight the battles for so many children in Congress who do not have a voice themselves.

In this bill there are many dollars, in fact, many tens of thousands of dollars, that are going to eventually help youngsters. The GREAT Program is a good example, the Youth Crime Awareness Program is a good example. Just because we fund money through the Federal agencies doesn't mean that some of it has not gone to help reduce gang violence or trying to get youngsters away from a life of crime.

I point out that I think in the other bills that have come before the Senate we have tried to at least keep the baseline steady, in fact, increased funding for many children programs in other areas of the national budget.

Mr. WELLSTONE. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. CAMPBELL. I am happy to yield to the Senator.

Mr. WELLSTONE. This is less in the spirit of a question, but I want to make it clear to my colleague, because I appreciate what he said, I have no objection to increases for other programs for children in the Government, and I understand full well some of the important programs in this piece of legislation.

That is not my quarrel. My quarrel is the proposition that we did not eliminate the pay increase for ourselves. And I think we should have included increases for the other programs I spoke about.

Mr. CAMPBELL. I yield 2 minutes to the Senator from Kansas [Mr. BROWNBACK].

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kansas.

Mr. BROWNBACK. Mr. President, I thank my colleague from Colorado for yielding.

I want to express my appreciation and congratulations to the conferees on the bill and what they put together. Overall, it is a good bill. There is a provision in this that I disagree with, and I will join my colleague from Minnesota in voting and stating my position against this bill because it does contain the COLA for Members of Congress.

That amendment was offered by myself and the senior Senator from Minnesota and was a bipartisan amendment which prohibited the Congress from receiving a cost-of-living adjustment in fiscal year 1998. Mr. President, I strongly believe that Congress should not receive a COLA until we balance the budget. The Senator from Minnesota and I have different reasons for doing this but the same objective, which is to object to the COLA for Members of Congress. I note, as well, that Members of Congress have not received a COLA for several years to date. I have been involved in those fights when I was in the House. The problem for me is that I think while we are moving to balance the budget and we are asking everyone to sacrifice in getting that done, that we should not be receiving a COLA during that period of time. While we have passed legislation to balance the budget, we are not quite there yet. But we are close.

Mr. President, it has never been my purpose in this debate to cast aspersions upon any of my colleagues or the institution of the Congress. I have great respect for the Senate and the people with whom I have the privilege to serve—all of the people in the Senate and all the people in this body. But I continue to believe that we should not receive a COLA while we are still running deficits. We should lead by example and not raise our COLA while we are still getting the Government's fiscal house in order.

Therefore, I oppose this conference report and call on my colleagues to do the same. I believe this is the kind of leadership that is necessary to finish the work of balancing the budget and beginning to pay down our massive public debt. I think our children deserve no less. For that reason, I do oppose overall the conference report. For that reason, even though I think it has many, many, very good features and I congratulate my colleagues for putting it together, I cannot support the COLA at this point in time.

I yield the floor.

Mr. CAMPBELL. I thank my colleagues from Kansas and Minnesota.

I point out a couple of things: It has been 5 years in which most of the Members voted down a cost-of-living increase for themselves; also, as they both remember when we were here on the floor with this bill a month or so ago, it was Senator BROWNBACK's amendment and cosponsored by Senator WELLSTONE and me to delete that COLA increase from the original bill.

So I think I have a pretty strong record. In fact, I have never voted for a pay increase in the U.S. Senate. And in fact when we did go to conference, as the Senator probably knows, both Senators probably know, there was a vote. It was a tie vote. It was not deleted. But Senator KOHL and I both voted against a pay raise in conference, if you want to use that phrase, but some people have a disagreement. However, we lost.

The question here is, should we sink a $26 billion bill because we didn't get our way in conference or we didn't get our way on the floor? I have been torn with this myself, too. It is a difficult decision for all of us, but frankly I just think there is so much good in this bill that there are other options. Certainly we can return it to the Treasury. If Members do not want it, certainly they can give it to charity as I have done in the past. They can give it to scholarships.

From my perspective, Mr. President, this bill is extremely important. Today is the date that funding runs out. It seems to me we need to pass the bill even if we don't agree with the various parts of it.

Mr. BROWNBACK. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. CAMPBELL. I am happy to yield to the Senator.

Mr. BROWNBACK. I say to the Senator from Colorado he has been a leader in this effort on Members of Congress not receiving a COLA, and did put this in the bill that came from the Senate. That was the Senate provision, that there would not be a COLA for Members of Congress. That was the Senate provision. It was the House that put in otherwise.

I recognize the work that the Senator has done, and I appreciate that very much. I also recognize the totality of the bill and the excellent qualities within it. I just want to note that because it had that provision I could not support it, but by no means question you or other Members of the Senate. Our provision did not have the COLA in it.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I rise today in opposition to the Treasury, Postal, and general Government appropriations bill. I do so with respect for the managers of the bill, my good friends Senator CAMPBELL of Colorado and Senator KOHL of Wisconsin. They have done a fine job of bringing divergent interests together, crafting a bill that takes care of essential Government functions. Clearly, there is much that is right with this bill.

One thing that is right is funding for the Global Trade and Research Program at the Montana World Trade Center in Missoula, MT. This vital program is the only world trade center housed in a university. This important link will allow new global business markets to be identified and targeted to create new jobs in Montana.

But, Mr. President, I will vote against this bill because it contains a pay raise for Members of Congress. Look, I'm not against pay raises. Who couldn't use a few extra dollars in every paycheck. The question is: who needs the raise. Clearly, Montanans do. And I think with this bill we are missing the point and sending the wrong message.

The message this bill sends is simply "we are going to protect ourselves instead of creating an economy that protects average families." That just doesn't make sense.

A vote to raise Members' pay is the wrong priority for Congress. This is not the kind of leadership the Congress needs. I believe that we will be as effective as leaders as the level of confidence vested in us. Clearly, voting to raise our pay will undermine public confidence in Congress. Particularly when we have an economy that isn't protecting average Americans.

It is clear that income for the average Montanan is not rising. Just Monday, the Census Bureau released consumer income statistics for 1994 to 1996. The numbers are startling and, I hope, a call to action for this Congress. Let's look at Montana. Median household income in Montana from 1994 to 1996 was $28,838. That's household income, money that an entire family has to spend for the year on bills, groceries, education, health care, and all the other expenses that take a bite out of their wallets. Montana's median income for those 3 years is over $6,000 lower than the national average and ranks 43d in the Nation.

And, compared to our regional neighbors, our median income ranks as the lowest. Now, we have all seen the stock market rise over the last few years. And clearly, a healthy percentage of Americans are making significant money. But it hasn't trickled down, to borrow a phrase, to the average Montanan.

I grew up on a ranch where it was a day's work for a day's pay. Americans work hard. And we in Congress work hard, but let's not lose sight of who we work for. We work for the citizens of our States and our country. We have a responsibility to protect them and to advance their ability to get a fair wage for a fair day's work. That should be the job of this Congress, not whether we in this Chamber are getting a raise.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. McCAIN. Mr. President, I am sorry to say that I cannot support the legislation before the Senate today. While this bill contains many good provisions, I have never supported any legislation to raise the pay of Members of Congress, and I will not support this bill.

Yes, the Republican Congress has accomplished much this year. We have passed legislation which puts us on track toward balancing the Federal budget and providing much-needed tax relief for Americans. We have reformed the welfare system, our nation's immigration policies, ensured our national security, and many other laudable accomplishments.

But there are many tasks the American people expect us to complete that we have yet to accomplish.

We still face a $5.4 trillion national debt, which will increase by hundreds of millions of dollars for several more years. In fact, current predictions are that we will not eliminate annual deficits until 2001 or 2002, and our national debt will have increased to nearly $6 trillion by that time. We have a long way to go before we can claim to have ended the fiscal irresponsibility that has saddled our children and grandchildren with this staggering debt.

We still face the daunting tasks of ensuring the future viability of the Medicare and Social Security systems, improving access to and affordability of health care for all Americans, reducing the size and intrusiveness of our Federal Government in people's lives, and ensuring the continued economic health of our Nation.

Members of Congress already rank in the top 1 percent of wage earners in this country. Public service in the Congress should not be a means to becoming wealthy, but an opportunity to serve our country.

I intend to vote against this legislation. And if it passes, I will not accept a pay raise. I have donated to charity every pay raise Congress has approved for itself since I have been in office, and I will do the same with this raise.

Mr. President, I find it quite ironic that, at the same time the Congress is proposing to raise pay for Members, we are also wasting more millions of taxpayer dollars on unnecessary, wasteful programs.

Mr. President, this bill contains the usual earmarks and set-asides requested by Members of Congress for their home States or districts.

I am particularly disappointed to note that the conferees retained all but one of the provisions to which I had objected in the Senate bill. And that one provision that was not retained in the conference bill—an earmark of $4 million each for repair work at the Truman and Johnson Presidential Libraries—has, instead, been clearly earmarked in the conference report language.

I would like to list for my colleagues the Senate bill language, retained in this conference agreement, that are earmarks for unnecessary or low-priority spending or that are protectionist in nature.

There is $1.25 million earmarked for the Global Trade and Research Program at the Montana World Trade Center, which the report indicates is a one-time set-aside to support research and dissemination of information on exploration, definition, and measurement of contributions to economic globalization. I should note that the Senate had allocated $2.5 million for this program, and the conferees very frugally cut this earmark in half.

Section 107—Prohibition on reorganizing the Aberdeen, SD, office of the IRS until toll-free phone line assistance reaches an 80-percent service level. We all know the difficulties experienced by all taxpayers in getting accurate, timely information from the IRS. But why should the taxpayers in Aberdeen, SD, be guaranteed continued access to an area IRS office? What about taxpayers in North Dakota? Or rural Ohio? And what if it makes sense to save money by closing some IRS offices in order to devote more resources to achieving the 80 percent service level for IRS telephone assistance?

Section 108—Prohibition on reorganizing the IRS Criminal Investigative Division if the result is a reduction of criminal investigators in Wisconsin and South Dakota from the 1996 level. Again, I question whether the Congress is the right body to decide whether the IRS' criminal investigative resources should be concentrated.

Section 123—Requirement to establish the port of Kodiak, AK, as a port of entry requiring U.S. Customs Service personnel in Anchorage to serve that port. Neither the Senate report nor the conference report offer any particular rationale for this directive.

Earmark of $3 million for the Rocky Mountain High Intensity Drug Trafficking Area, plus $1.5 million earmarked for methamphetamine reduction efforts at the facility. I ask my colleagues, do we know whether the Rocky Mountain area is most needful of this extra money?

Sections 507 and 508—Provisions requiring compliance with Buy America trade restrictions. I have long sought to remove all protectionist restrictions on free trade, and having made some progress, I guess the conferees wanted to ensure that nothing would change in the global marketplace.

Not surprisingly, the conferees also added several provisions from the House bill that are the same type of wasteful spending:

Earmark of $10 million for three newly designated High Intensity Drug Trafficking Areas—one in the three-State area of Kentucky, Tennessee, and West Virginia; one in central Florida; and one in Milwaukee, WI that was not included in either bill. We all support heightened efforts to combat drug trafficking throughout the United States, but I wonder how the Appropriations Committee determined that these three locations were the highest priority areas for funding for antidrug efforts?

Section 410—Earmark of "such sums as may be necessary" to repay debts to the U.S. Treasury incurred by the Pennsylvania Avenue Development Corporation. How much is "necessary"? And what sense does it make to appropriate Federal tax dollars to repay the Federal Treasury?

Section 412—Directed sale of the Bakersfield Federal Building at 800 Truxton Avenue in Bakersfield, CA, including all land and improvements. It is unclear from the conference agreement or the House report language whether the Federal Government wants to dispose of this property, or if the Congress has unilaterally decided to demand that it be sold.

Mr. President, these are just the provisions that are included in the bill. The report language of this conference agreement contains numerous other earmarks and set-asides. Let me note just a few:

Three Hundred thousand dollars to staff a dedicated commuter lane in El Paso, TX. This was an earmark in the Senate report that is repeated in the conference report, for emphasis, I guess.

Language "encouraging" the Customs Service to provide extended hours at the Opa-locka Airport in Florida.

Language "urging" GSA to consider the needs of the U.S. Olympic Committee and to give the USOC priority in acquiring a Federal building in Colorado Springs, just in case the current occupants—the U.S. Air Force Space Command—decide to move out.

I ask unanimous consent that a list of objectionable provisions in this conference agreement be printed in the RECORD at the conclusion of my remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(See exhibit 1.)

Mr. McCAIN. I think it is important to note for my colleagues that this conference agreement, like each of the four other conference agreements the Senate has approved in the past few days, contains a clause in the statement of managers language that specifically endorses every single earmark and set-aside in the underlying reports of the House and Senate, unless specifically stated otherwise in the conference report. Mr. President, the bottom line is that Members of Congress can use the language in these reports, which "urges" or "encourages" or "strongly supports" some action, but which falls short of an earmark or directive, to pressure agencies to act accordingly.

Mr. President, I will say once again that this practice of wasteful spending must stop.

Sections 507 and 508—Provisions requiring compliance with "Buy America" trade restrictions.

REPORT LANGUAGE

[NOTE: Conferees explicitly endorse all earmarks and set-asides included in either the House and Senate reports, unless specifically addressed in the conference report statement of managers. The following listing includes only those objectionable provisions specifically included in the conference report language; additional items can be found in the underlying House and Senate reports on the bill.]

Earmarks

$500,000 earmarked for contract awards to the National Law Center for Inter-American Free Trade to support federal government efforts to conduct legal research specific to relevant trade issues.

$500,000 to support the Global TransPark Network Customs Information Project.

$300,000 to staff a dedicated commuter lane in El Paso, Texas.

$2 million add-on for Customs Service monitoring and enforcement of the U.S./Canada Softwood Lumber Agreement, and language stating the conferees' "expectation" that the Customs Service will cease to enforce any interpretive ruling "that would have the effect of undermining enforcement of the Lumber Agreement, including any ruling that would have the effect of classifying lumber that would otherwise be classified under the heading of 4407 of the Harmonized Tariff Schedule in a different classification because it has been drilled or otherwise subject to minor processing, until Congress can address this issue".

$2 million of GSA funds directed to be spent in accordance with House report, which earmarks the funds to initiate a pilot project in the development, demonstration, and continuous research of emerging digital learning technologies.

$1 million of GSA funds earmarked for a digital medical education project.

Directive language that GSA provide funding in FY 1999 for protection and maintenance of Governor's Island in New York, as necessary to ensure no undue deterioration of the property prior to disposal.

$4 million earmarked for repair and restoration of the Truman Library, and another $4 million for similar work on the Roosevelt Library.

Words of encouragement:

Language "encouraging" the Customs Service to provide customs service at Opa-locka Airport in Dade County from 9:00 a.m. to 10:00 p.m. daily, instead of the current 9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. daily schedule, because the conferees believe the diversion of aircraft after 5:00 p.m. to Miami International Airport creates unnecessary congestion at the nation's busiest cargo airport.

Language "urging" GSA to strongly consider the U.S. Olympic Committee's need for additional space and to give priority to the USOC request to gain title to or otherwise acquire a building in Colorado Springs currently occupied by the U.S. Air Force Space Command and owned by GSA.

Mr. FAIRCLOTH. Mr. President, I rise to make a few remarks concerning the fiscal year 1998 Treasury appropriations conference report. First, I would like to thank the chairman of the Senate Treasury Appropriations Subcommittee, and my good friend, Senator CAMPBELL. He and his staff have been most gracious in working with me on a range of issues of concern to North Carolina, including funding in the budget of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms for two new data acquisition stations [DAS] for the Cumberland County sheriff's office and the Guilford County sheriff's office. These two stations will allow law enforcement in both western and eastern North Carolina access to sophisticated technology to examine bullets and bullet fragments found at crime scenes. These DAS stations will be powerful crime-fighting tools, and I want to thank the chairman for helping to make this possible.

I also want to thank the chairman for his inclusion of language I requested to repeal section 1555 of the Federal Acquisition Streamlining Act [FASA]. As many of my colleagues in the Senate know, this language was originally passed in 1994 without any hearings, and without any debate in Congress.

It was intended to give State and local governments access to the General Services Administration [GSA] purchasing schedule. GSA sells everything from office supplies to cars and law enforcement equipment.

The problem is this—if every State and local government purchases their supplies directly through the Federal Government, thousands of small businesses who currently provide those supplies will go out of business.

Section 1555 has not yet been implemented—a temporary moratorium was enacted in 1995, and most recently extended until the end of this session of Congress as part of the Emergency Supplemental Appropriations Act for fiscal year 1997.

If section 1555 were not repealed, most businesses would no longer be able to sell products to their local governments, but would be driven out by unfair competition. Perhaps a select few would be included in the General Services Administration's purchasing schedules, but heaven help the small business man or woman who must come to Washington, DC, for permission every time he or she wants to sell office supplies to their local city council or county commission. Tragically, this is the kind of result that section 1555 would bring about, and it would devastate small businesses across the country.

I have heard from numerous small business men and women who regard this provision to be a potential disaster, were it ever to be implemented. Thankfully, it will not be, now that language to repeal this statute has been included in this conference report. Section 1555 should never be implemented, it should be repealed as soon as possible. I strongly support the repeal language included in the bill.

CONGRESSIONAL PAY RAISE

Mr. President, there are two other matters addressed in the Treasury appropriations conference report which forces me to oppose the bill, in spite of much that I have already described which is good.

Most troubling to me is language added to this conference report which removes a Senate amendment placing a 1-year freeze on congressional pay. I am opposed to a congressional pay increase. I am deeply disappointed that Members of Congress will now receive a 2.3-percent cost-of-living adjustment [COLA], and I do not plan on accepting this increase when I receive it.

In fact, I believe that to accept this pay raise next year would be in violation of the 27th amendment to the Constitution. I know that Chairman CAMPBELL and others joined me in opposition to this pay increase, but due to some procedural shortcuts, a conference was convened late on the evening of September 29—on a day when no votes had been scheduled, and I had already made commitments to be in North Carolina—for the sole purpose of attaching this pay increase for Members of Congress.

I am also deeply disappointed that an amendment I offered to remove computer games from all Government computers was not included in the conference report. I am pleased, however, that Senator THOMPSON, chairman of the Committee on Governmental Affairs, has indicated his interest in pursuing this issue in the future. I look forward to working with Senator THOMPSON to ensure that Government employees are not wasting taxpayers' dollars playing computer games when they should be working.

Due to the inclusion of the pay raise for Members of Congress and the removal of my amendment to remove computer games from Government computers, I regret that I must vote against the Treasury appropriations conference report on final passage.

THE CONGRESSIONAL PAY INCREASE

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, I rise today to express my deep concern about one provision within the bill before us today. The fiscal year 1998 Treasury-Postal Appropriations Act contains a cost-of-living adjustment—a pay raise—for Members of Congress. This increase represents a major change in policy. It has not been the subject of hearings. It has not been aired in public. The timing and merit are questionable. In light of these concerns, I intend to vote no on the pay raise, and no on the bill.

Each year I have been in the Senate, we have acted to suspend cost-of-living adjustments for Congress. In light of our ongoing efforts to balance the Federal budget and restore people's faith in the process, I think this has been the right course. Simply stated, allowing our own pay to increase sends the wrong signal at a time when the budget is out of balance and real wages are stagnant for many workers.

Like it or not, we in Federal office have a responsibility to set an example, to set the tone for responsible dialog about the Federal budget. Accepting a pay raise at this time undermines any credibility we might have on budget issues.

In July, Congress passed a historic law that will balance the Federal budget. After years of partisan rancor, bickering, disputes, and Government shut-downs, we were able to put aside differences and agree on a compromise that makes sense, and gives the people what they have been asking for.

Now, most of us who worked on this package, and made the tough calls over the past few years understandably want to promote the compromise and take credit for finishing the job. And I think we should. But taking a pay raise on the heels of passing a balanced budget sends the wrong signal. It says to the people, "we didn't really mean it."

As a member of the Appropriations Committee, it is very difficult for me to vote against the Treasury-Postal bill. In fact, it is rare that any of us on the committee opposes one of our own bills. In this case, I have to make an exception, even though there are many worthy programs and projects funded in this bill.

I hope my colleagues will hear my reasons and listen to them. As elected leaders, we are held to a different standard. We have a responsibility to set the tone, to earn the respect of our constituents. The public will be watching this vote. To them, it is not about funding the executive branch agencies. Instead, it is about whether we are willing to live up to our own standard of fiscal responsibility in 1997.

Mr. KOHL. Mr. President, I rise today to voice my opposition to a provision within the Treasury, General Government, Civil Service Appropriations Act.

I am the ranking member of the subcommittee which crafted this legislation, and there is much to support in the bill. However, I am opposed to the provision in the bill to provide a 2.3-percent cost-of-living-adjustment to Members of Congress.

I have heard the arguments on both sides of the issue and I cannot agree that it is appropriate for Congress to receive this pay raise. While we have made progress in balancing the budget, we have not made the kind of progress which justifies this raise. The American public is rightly holding us to a higher standard, and until we meet that standard, congressional pay should remain at its current level.

Earlier this week, we had a vote in the House-Senate conference committee on whether to keep the pay raise in the bill. I was prepared to offer a motion to reject the pay raise, and, indeed, voted against the measure. As this body knows, the House voted to insist on its position, and we could not muster a majority in the Senate to similarly insist on this Chamber's position against the pay raise.

Mr. President, this bill before us also includes many provisions and important programs. If this were an up-or-down vote on the pay raise, I would again oppose the measure. But, this bill is more than that—it funds the Treasury Department, the Internal Revenue Service, the White House, and dozens of other Federal agencies.

In addition, the bill includes many anticrime programs, including those operated by "Drug Czar," the Treasury Department, and the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms. I'm pleased that the legislation includes $3 million for the designation of a high-intensity drug trafficking area for Milwaukee, WI. Unfortunately, the drug epidemic often crosses State lines, and it is necessary for Wisconsin law enforcement agencies to coordinate with Federal authorities. If the drug czar concurs with the language in this bill, this money will help my State better combat the growing drug problem.

The legislation also includes a $1 million increase in the Youth Gun Crime Interdiction Initiative. Milwaukee is one of a small number of cities selected last year to participate in the program which uses resources from the Federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms to trace weapons in an attempt to track the seller. The program saw its first success in April when Milwaukee Police arrested a grocery store security guard and charged him with Federal firearms violations. Lawrence M. Shikes plead guilty to purchasing guns and reselling them to juveniles, gang members, and drug dealers in the Milwaukee area. This is an important program, and one of the reasons that I am voting for the overall bill.

Mr. President, while I am voting for this bill, I strongly oppose to the congressional pay raise provision. Because of this conviction, I will not accept any increase in my salary. Since coming to the Senate in 1989, I have not accepted any salary increase, and I will return any future pay increase to the U.S. Treasury to reduce the deficit.

Since this is one provision of a larger bill, I will vote in favor of the measure.

Mr. CAMPBELL. I suggest the absence of a quorum and ask that the time continue to be charged to both sides.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call.

Mr. ABRAHAM. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. ABRAHAM. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to be permitted to speak as in morning business for up to about 5 minutes.

SECTION 110 OF THE ILLEGAL IMMIGRATION REFORM AND IMMIGRANT RESPONSIBILITY ACT

Mr. ABRAHAM. Mr. President, today, I want to bring to the Senate's attention an issue of great concern, not only to my home State of Michigan, but also to many other Northeastern States that border Canada. Section 110, a rather small provision of the 1996 Illegal Immigration Reform and Immigrant Responsibility Act, has generated waves of controversy here in the United States and in Canada because of its unintended negative impact on trade and travel between the two countries.

Section 110 requires the Immigration and Naturalization Service to develop an automated entry and exit system to document the entry and departure of every alien arriving in and leaving the United States. The term "every alien" certainly would be interpreted to include both Canadians and American permanent residents who cross our land borders with Canada.

This interpretation conflicts with the decades-old practice of not requiring Canadians to present a passport, visa, or border crossing identification card at the border. As previously described, this interpretation was not intended by the law's authors. My former colleague, Alan Simpson, who preceded me as chairman of the Senate Immigration Subcommittee, and Representative LAMAR SMITH, who is the current chairman of the House Immigration Subcommittee, wrote in a letter last year to the Canadian Government that they did not intend to impose a new requirement for border crossing cards on Canadians who are not presently required to possess such documents.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that this letter be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

His Excellency RAYMOND CHRÉTIEN,
Ambassador of Canada,
Canadian Embassy, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. AMBASSADOR: This is in reply to your letter regarding congressional intent in the implementation of Sections 104 and 110 of the "Illegal Immigration Reform and Immigrant Responsibility Act of 1996." Ms. Strom and Mr. Day were accurate in their description of our intent regarding those provisions.

With regard to Section 104, it was not our intent to impose a new border crossing card requirement on Canadians who do not now need to possess such a card to enter the United States. With regard to Section 110, again, it was not our intent that Canadian citizens who now enter the United States without an I-94 will be required to obtain that form in the future.

Of course, any Canadians who elect to possess a border crossing card will be subject to the requirements for an improved card; and any Canadians who are now issued an I-94 form will be subject to the new exit control provisions of the law. But, again, we did not intend to impose a new requirement for border crossing cards or I-94's on Canadians who are not presently required to possess such documents.

Respectfully yours,

ALAN K. SIMPSON,
Chairman, Subcommittee on Immigration, U.S. Senate
LAMAR S. SMITH,
Chairman, Immigration and Claims,
House of Representatives.

Mr. ABRAHAM. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the letter from the Canadian Ambassador to Congressman SMITH to which his letter responds be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Hon. LAMAR S. SMITH,
Chairman, Immigration and Claims,
House of Representatives, Washington, DC

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: I wish to bring to your attention some language of the "Illegal Immigration Reform and Immigrant Responsibility Act of 1996" which, depending on how it is interpreted, could have significant cost implications for the United States as well as affect the mobility of millions of Canadians.

Section 110 of the Act requires the Attorney General to develop an automated entry-exit control system at ports of entry. We understand that this provision was introduced to document the entry and exit and gather information on immigration violations committed by foreign nationals who are entering the United States legally either with a U.S. non-immigrant visa or through the privilege of a visa waiver pursuant to the Visa Waiver Program initiated in 1986. Officials in both the Immigration and Naturalization Service and the State Department have brought to our attention that the final language of Section 110 uses the word "alien" without any qualification. This could be interpreted as including the millions of Canadian citizens who enter the United States every year and are not issued an I-94 form.

My officials have discussed the matter informally with Ms. Cordia Strom, your Chief Counsel, and Mr. Richard Day, her counterpart, in the House immigration Subcommittee. Ms. Strom and Mr. Day confirmed our understanding of the legislative intent as stated above. They indicated that Congress did not intend to require the issuance of documentation and the control of departure for the millions of Canadians who have, since well before 1986, traditionally enjoyed the privilege of a summary inspection. Such interpretation would have a very negative impact on cross border mobility at high volume border crossings such as the Rainbow bridge in Niagara Falls or the Detroit-Windsor Tunnel. I would therefore be grateful if you could confirm that Congress did not intend to make Canadians subject to this provision.

I am also concerned about an interpretation of Section 104 of the same Act that appeared in "Interpreter Releases" in their October 7, 1996 issue. The "Section-by-Section Summary" of that publication on Section 104 suggests that all aliens must use a border crossing card with a biometric identifier by September 30, 1999.

In their efforts to facilitate mobility in the context of the Border Accord, both Canada and the United States, encourage frequent travellers to consider the benefits of using dedicated inspections lines by enrolling in INSPASS or CANPASS. Enrollment in these programs is voluntary. Making it a mandatory requirement would become a major impediment to cross border mobility for millions of American and Canadian travellers. Our reading of Section 104 of the Act does not lead us to such a conclusion. I would therefore also appreciate your confirmation that it was not Congress's intention to require all Canadians, travelling to the U.S. by September 30, 1999, to hold such a card.

Thank you in advance for your cooperation on these matters.

Yours sincerely,

RAYMOND CHRÉTIEN,
Ambassador.

Mr. ABRAHAM. Unfortunately, the INS appears to maintain, regardless of the intention, that the law clearly calls for a record of every entry and departure by noncitizens entering or departing the United States. I will be sending a letter to INS Commissioner Doris Meissner to ask how the agency interprets section 110, how the agency plans to implement the law, and how we might work together to remedy what I see as an enormous problem on the horizon.

Bumper-to-bumper traffic is not an unusual occurrence in many parts of the country, whether its a morning or afternoon commute or a trip to a football game. This also occurs every day at already busy border crossing points. But imagine if you will, the traffic nightmare of back-up for miles and miles that would result from implementing this new provision at all U.S. border crossings. Under the section 110 statute, every Canadian citizen and American permanent resident must present a visa or proper immigration form to border inspectors. In 1996 alone, over 116 million people entered the United States by land from Canada. Similarly, over 52 million Canadian residents and United States permanent residents entered Canada last year. The new provision would require a stop on the U.S. side to record the exit of each person in every car. That's more than 140,000 every day; 6,000 every hour; 100 every minute. And that is just when you exit the United States. Those person entering the United States from Canada will also confront a similar circumstance. These delays will affect American citizens alike.

Now imagine the economic impact of such a policy. The free flow of goods and services that are exchanged every day through the United States and Canada has provided both countries with enormous economic benefits. Together, trade and tourism between the two nations is worth a billion dollars a day for the United States, and Canada is the United States' largest trading partner. The State of Michigan is an important beneficiary of this long-standing close relationship. The Ambassador Bridge in Detroit is the largest land border crossing point in North America. The United States automobile industry conducts $300 million worth of trade with Canada every day. Michigan, and Detroit in particular, would be severely impacted by excessive delays that would surely arise if truckers were forced to show a visa or fill out immigration forms at each port of entry. New just-in-time delivery methods have made United States-Canadian border crossings integral parts of our automobile assembly lines. A delivery of parts delayed by as little as 20 minutes can cause expensive assembly line shutdowns.

Tourism is another industry that would surely be affected by the implementation of section 110. Suddenly, people in Windsor, Canada, who thought they'd head to Detroit for a Tiger's baseball game or Red Wing's hockey game think again and stay home—with their money. In fact, this provision would force all Canadian residents who visit their family and friends in America to obtain a visa or obtain other immigration forms. It is for these reasons that we have twice rebuffed previous attempts in the Senate to impose a tax on border crossings.

Mr. President, our borders are already crowded. In 1993, nearly 9 million people traveled over the Ambassador Bridge I referred to earlier, 6.4 million traveled through the Detroit-Windsor tunnel, and approximately 6.1 million crossed the Blue Water Bridge in Port Huron. Think what it would mean to load them down with paperwork and fee payments. Optimistically, the new controls might take an extra 2 minutes per border crosser to fulfill. That is almost 17 hours of delay for every hour's worth of traffic. It's just not practical, and we must act to prevent it from happening.

As chairman of the Senate Subcommittee on Immigration, I intend to hold hearings in both Michigan and Washington to learn more of the impact of section 110. I am certain these proceedings will be useful in determining how to clarify the act and make the case to my colleagues that we must remedy this situation.

The illegal immigration law passed last year focused on those persons who enter our Nation illegally, not those who come here legally to make a better life for themselves and their families—let alone those who visit family here on a regular basis or help carry out our crucial, ongoing trade with Canada. I should also note that Canadians have not historically presented significant illegal immigration problems and that I appreciate very much the unique and close relationship Americans and Canadians share. Section 110 will not go into effect until September 1998. In the meantime, it is my hope that Congress will take the time to closely consider the problems I have outlined and conform the act to reflect current policy and our special relationship with Canada.

Mr. President, I yield the floor. I suggest the absence after quorum.

TERMINATING INVESTIGATION OF LOUISIANA ELECTION

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I wish to advise the Senate that the Committee on Rules and Administration met this morning at 10 o'clock for the purpose of voting in executive session to review the investigation by that committee into the 1996 Louisiana election. The committee reviewed the evidence, heard the report of the chairman, then voted unanimously on a resolution to terminate the investigation by the Committee on Rules and Administration into that election.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of my remarks before the Rules Committee this morning, the text of the committee motion, and several letters, be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

STATEMENT OF CHAIRMAN JOHN WARNER, COMMITTEE ON RULES AND ADMINISTRATION, LOUISIANA CONTESTED ELECTION, OCTOBER 1, 1997

INTRODUCTION

This business meeting today is called to brief the Committee on the findings of our preliminary investigation of allegations that fraud, irregularities, or other errors affected the outcome of the 1996 Senate election in Louisiana. Our focus primarily will be on those matters the Committee has investigated since the Committee's vote on July 31 to continue the investigation.

HISTORY OF CONTEST PRIOR TO JULY 31, 1997

Mr. Jenkins' petition addresses one of the closest Senate contested cases in history: Senator Landrieu's margin was just under 6,000 votes out of 1.7 million cast. Mr. Jenkins' amended petition alleged that "a pattern of misconduct, irregularities, fraud, and political machine corruption violating state and federal law changed the result of the election . . ." He also alleged that "state, parish, and precinct officials inadequately administered the 1996 general election and failed to ensure the sanctity of the electoral process in Louisiana so that the results of the 1996 United States Senate election are in doubt."

On April 10, two outside counsel, Bill Canfield and Robert Bauer, respectively selected by the majority and minority members of this Committee to review the pleadings filed by the parties, reported their assessment of only the following: Jenkins' petition and related evidence, the rebuttal material submitted by Senator Landrieu, and the surrebuttal information presented by Mr. Jenkins. It is important to note that their review did not include any field investigation. These counsel jointly recommended that the allegations of fraud, including vote buying, multiple voting, and fraudulent registration, should be investigated by the Committee. They also recommended that the next phase be conducted under their direction, subject to guidance from the Chairman and the Ranking Member. Counsel further recommended that certain types of evidence be dismissed, such as evidence of mismatched signatures and phantom votes. On April 15, the Committee heard from Mr. Jenkins and counsel for Senator Landrieu concerning the Bauer-Canfield joint recommendations.

On April 17, the Committee, voting on partisan lines, adopted much of the Bauer-Canfield recommendation, but directed the Chairman to conduct a preliminary investigation. In doing so, the Committee indicated that it would not ignore potential evidence of fraud, including mismatched signatures and phantom voting. I also announced that I desired that the investigation be conducted by a team of outside counsel with extensive investigative experience.

Shortly after the Committee vote on April 17, Senator Ford, on behalf of the minority, expressed his desire to conduct the investigation jointly, and requested that an investigative protocol be developed between counsel for the majority, McGuire Woods Battle & Boothe, and counsel for the minority, Perkins Cole. At the same time, I initiated efforts to secure the assistance of detailees from the FBI. After extensive negotiation and the adoption of a protocol, we were able to secure two detailees from the FBI, and additional personnel from the General Accounting Office, and we negotiated the issuance of subpoenas for election records and documents from Mr. Jenkins and Senator Landrieu.

In the meantime, our majority outside counsel from McGuire Woods Battle & Boothe, headed by Richard Cullen and George Terwilliger, began a review of Louisiana's election laws and to what extent these laws and implementing regulations were followed in the November election. This examination revealed that many of the laws and regulations—statutory safeguards designed to protect the integrity of the election system—had not been observed: Fraud could have occurred.

The full preliminary field investigation then began in earnest on June 9, when two FBI agents were detailed to the Committee, and arrived in New Orleans to work with assistance from two retired FBI agents hired by the Committee. Outside counsel for majority and minority provided guidance as to the agents' activities.

A short twelve working days later, the minority unexpectedly pulled out of the investigation and the FBI terminated the detail of the two agents, despite my request that the detail be continued.

During those twelve days, our investigative teams had interviewed a number of witnesses who had submitted taped statements to Petitioner that they participated in or observed vote fraud. As has been well publicized by the minority, these witnesses recanted their testimony, stating that they had been paid and coached by a person hired by the Petitioner to make up their stories of fraudulent voting.

The complete picture on these witnesses, however, was complicated by the fact that there were reports of threats associated with the witnesses' initial reports, making it unclear if those who did recant were truthful in the first instance, or truthful in their recantation. It is also clear that many of these witnesses were acquaintances who clearly had the opportunity to discuss their testimony. Moreover, a small number of witnesses, alleging fraudulent voting, stuck to their original testimony and never recanted. Senator Ford and I made separate referrals of the evidence of alleged witness tampering and threats to the Department of Justice. In addition, I made a referral of this information to Doug Moreau, the District Attorney for East Baton Rouge, Louisiana, who had opened his own investigation into allegations of election fraud during 1996.

Meanwhile, the Committee had charged detailees from the Government Accounting Office to examine election records for discrepancies between vote totals recorded on election documents and machines. This examination focused specifically on four of the seven categories of "phantom votes" alleged by Petitioner.

An interim report provided to the Committee on July 9 revealed that the allegations of widespread irregularities in these four categories could not be substantiated. While this review confirmed many of the discrepancies identified by Mr. Jenkins, the GAO detailees concluded that all but 153 of the several thousand "phantom votes" were explainable. The problems with Petitioner's analysis resulted from three primary factors: (1) transcription errors in the election records themselves; (2) errors in the compilation of numerical results by Mr. Jenkins; and (3) the fact that Mr. Jenkins did not have available to him all of the election documents which were available to the Committee. In short, many errors identified by Mr. Jenkins could be explained by our review of certain election records.

It is important to note, however, that while the irregularities in these four categories were not nearly as widespread as alleged by Mr. Jenkins, there were a number of precincts that did contain errors which might have been the result of fraudulent activities. In addition, there was one instance where 100 votes were erroneously credited to Senator Landrieu.

Let me for a minute return to the withdrawal of the minority. When the minority withdrew from this investigation, they focused on two facts. First, a number of witnesses to fraud had recanted their original testimony. Second, the allegations of widespread irregularities in four of seven categories raised by Mr. Jenkins were not significant enough to impact the election.

At that time, however, there were other significant areas of potential fraud which had not been examined at all. Mr. Jenkins had submitted hundreds of allegedly mismatched signatures which merited audit. He had alleged that massive numbers of voters had not completed legally required forms, which merited review. He had identified over one thousand voters registered to housing that had been abandoned. Petitioner had made allegations of fraudulent registration that had not been examined even though the Bauer-Canfield report had cited it as worthy of review. And allegations of political machine corruption, including the illegal use of corporate funds, deserved review. Remembering that the investigation had already ascertained that many of the statutory safeguards had been ignored, there was clearly the possibility that fraud could have occurred in these areas. It was our duty to further investigate these significant allegations.

On July 31, the Committee affirmed my recommendation to continue the investigation, approved the use of designated funds and authorized me to issue subpoenas.

ACTIONS SINCE JULY 31, 1997

Immediately after the Committee's action of July 31, I wrote the Attorney General of the United States to request the reassignment of FBI agents to the Committee; this request was rejected. As an alternative, I then hired three additional retired FBI agents using Committee funds. I also sought renewed assistance from GAO, and after significant delay, they provided personnel to review election records assistance in late-August and accountants to examine financial documents in early September. To date, our investigation has encompassed a review of literally thousands of documents and the interview of hundreds of persons.

Subsequent to July 31, I issued 40 subpoenas to individuals, organizations, and companies with knowledge or documents related to the election. Some of these were for personal appearance at hearings, some for documents, and some for both. I would like to thank the United States Marshal's office in New Orleans for their help in serving many of these subpoenas in a timely and professional manner. These 40 subpoenas were in addition to the 134 Senator Ford and I agreed to issue in May for election records and documents from the parties.

The Committee also held four full days of field hearings in Louisiana and another hearing here in Washington. I will turn to the findings of these hearings in a moment.

Our sole focus was to fairly and impartially gather a body of evidence—to determine the presence or absence of fraud or irregularities—upon which the Committee, and ultimately the Senate, could make a reasoned judgment with regard to the petition submitted by Mr. Jenkins.

RESULTS: ELECTION RECORDS AND INTERVIEWS

Election records, if properly prepared and maintained, are the post-election means to a prompt and reliable assessment that fraud did not penetrate an election. Indeed, with the advent of electronic voting machines, these records are often the only evidence available to demonstrate—corroborate—that an election was conducted properly and that the machines accurately reflect legitimate votes. Without reliable records, investigation of vote fraud allegations must involve time consuming and intrusive examination of the actions of both individual voters and groups involved in the political process.

If the legal requirements of the registration and voting process are adhered to and reliable records of the same are created and maintained, allegations of fraud can be expeditiously examined. If widespread fraud occurred, reliable records should readily yield evidence of the vote fraud. However, the absence of such records and effective registration and voting processes creates opportunity for fraud to exist.

Thus, candidates, election officials, and voters all share a common interest in electoral procedures that meet the requirements of the law. Anything less challenges the fundamental public interest in reliable and final elections.

Review of "suspect" precincts and voter interviews

Our GAO detailees have thoroughly examined the election documents in 34 precincts across the state. These precincts were identified by the Committee as "suspect" because of a variety of factors: Places where multiple voting was alleged, unusual registration patterns, late closing of machines, etc.

This analysis revealed numerous irregularities with these records: names on a poll list but not on a register, and vice versa; poll lists which are supposed to be duplicate have names out of order; and names on poll lists more than once.

Had irregularities not existed and had other safeguards not been ignored, our investigation may have been completed sooner. But these irregularities did exist, warranting further examination of a sampling of voters to assess whether this election was tainted by—and affected by—fraud. In certain of these precincts, Committee staff compared signatures on precinct registers with the signatures on registration cards to identify potentially questionable voters.

Our investigators have now interviewed voters from a third of the "suspect" precincts. With few exceptions, these voters have confirmed the fact that they voted. In the few exceptions of fraud that we have uncovered, there is no evidence of an organized, widespread effort to secure fraudulent votes on behalf of any individual, and certainly no evidence of any effort to secure votes specifically on behalf of Senator Landrieu.

Duplicate social security numbers

We have identified over 1500 voters with the same social security number as another voter, and we have learned that a number of these pairs of voters both voted. However, our investigation has revealed no scheme or effort to cast illegal votes, and more significantly, the evidence we have gathered to date indicates that the majority of these duplicate social security numbers appear to be the result of erroneous entry of social security numbers.

Voters registered at abandoned housing

We have reviewed Petitioner's allegations that over a thousand voters in Orleans Parish were registered at housing that had been abandoned before the election. First, our review of a sample of these voters revealed that none of them had registered before the housing became abandoned. Second, a comparison of registration records and records from the Housing Authority of New Orleans revealed that of 522 voters from four precincts that were reviewed, 41% still lived in housing that Mr. Jenkins alleged was vacant. Third, an additional 45% of these 522 voters had moved to other housing within Orleans parish, and were legally permitted to vote in their old precinct.

Inactive voters required by law to complete address confirmation forms

Under Louisiana law (18:192), address confirmation postcards are sent to voters every four years. Voters whose postcards are returned because the addresses are apparently invalid, are placed on "inactive status", and these voters are required by law to complete an "Address Confirmation Sheet" confirming that they still live within the parish, before they are permitted to vote.

Petitioner alleged that approximately half of the inactive voters in certain parishes did not fill out the required forms. He also expressed concern that the list of inactive voters is available to the public, and thus could be used to send imposters to the polls.

Of 170 precincts reviewed in Orleans Parish, we found approximately one voter per precinct who had not completed the requisite form and no more than seven in any one precinct. Overall, 55% of those required to fill out the form did not do so. In addition, in the 29 "suspect precincts" in Orleans Parish, we found that few voters had completed the form as required, but this still only amounted to approximately two voters per precinct. We also attempted to contact voters in the suspect precincts who should have completed these forms. Although many could not be contacted, of the nine we did contact, each of them confirmed that they voted, and several reported that they had completed the form, indicating sloppy record keeping.

While it may be argued that these are illegal votes under Louisiana law, it is also clear that these are errors that could have been brought to the attention of the precinct commissioners at the time of the election, and the issue may be waived for failing to raise it at that time. In addition, the disparate nature of these irregularities is far more indicative of negligence than a pattern of fraud.

ILLEGAL CORPORATE CONTRIBUTIONS

We have attempted to examine whether local political organizations or gambling-related corporations illegally influenced the election in violating federal and state campaign finance laws. Foremost in this review was an examination of the activities of a group known as the Louisiana Independent Federation of Electors ("LIFE") and the marketing firm utilized by LIFE, Carl Mullican Communications, and those of several gambling companies.

Our review indicates that some federal and state election campaign laws may have been ignored, avoided, and even intentionally violated. There is evidence that gambling money used to pay canvassers, and donations given to local political organizations, may have resulted in illegal donations to federal candidates. However, there is no significant body of evidence that this use of money or other infractions of campaign laws was intended to aid the campaign of Senator Landrieu. Rather, the activities appear to be directed at local initiatives and elections. The absence of significant evidence of an organized effort to directly and illegally assist Senator Landrieu makes it appropriate to let the existing system (i.e., the Federal Election Commission and appropriate state authorities) assess where possible election campaign violations might have occurred.

VOTE BUYING AND TRANSPORTING VOTERS TO THE POLLS

There is evidence that voters were transported to the polls which is illegal under most circumstances under Louisiana law. However, our investigation has revealed little evidence of fraudulent vote buying, and no evidence of an organized effort to buy thousands of votes so as to impact the Senate election.

EMPLOYEES FORCED TO CAMPAIGN

We did confirm the existence of an organized effort to use city employees in support of election efforts. We did not, however, find any evidence that this was directed toward the benefit of Senator Landrieu. Nor did we find any significant evidence of illegal coercion. Moreover, this type of evidence normally does not support an election contest.

AREAS UNDER EXAMINATION

Before making my recommendation with regard to Mr. Jenkins' petition, I note that there are two areas of examination that require greater discussion.

First, we were unable to conduct a direct examination of possible fraudulent registration by using the State's voter registration computer database. This system, when prepared and operated properly, is a significant safeguard against multiple registrations. In addition to the many voters registered with the same social security number, we learned that there are over 200,000 registrants who have no social security number in the database, making it easier for fraudulent registrations to be submitted without detection.

A federal district court has ruled that the Commissioner of Elections may no longer collect social security numbers, raising issues about the propriety of his maintaining those he has collected. This issue caused the Commissioner to refuse to comply voluntarily with a subpoena, and to advise us that he would resist our request in court. This position has been confirmed by the fact that Doug Moreau, the District Attorney for East Baton Rouge, is currently in court litigating the Commissioner's refusal to provide him a copy of the state voter registration computer database (which include social security numbers). Mr. Moreau is seeking these records to assist him in his investigation of possible illegal election activities during the November 1996 elections.

Second, under Louisiana law (18:102(1)), a convicted felon may not legally vote until he has completed this sentence, including any period of parole or suspension. These voters are supposed to be taken off the voter database and not be allowed to vote. It was recently reported that there are over 100,000 convicted felons that may not have been purged from the voter registration records, possibly leading to illegal votes. The Office of the Commissioner of Elections advised Committee staff last week that only about 2,100 felons remained on the registration records, with the number that voted less than the 2,100. Yesterday, it was reported in Louisiana press that parish registers are finding felons on their registration rolls at a number higher than indicated by the Commissioner of Elections.

I spoke with the Governor last evening and he assured me—as he also stated in his letter to me which I received on Monday of this week—that he would call for a bipartisan investigation of this issue of felons possibly voting in the election. I also spoke with the East Baton Rouge District Attorney who informed me that he would be examining this issue also.

There is no way, at this time, to itemize the amount of time and Committee effort that could be expended in assessing these two areas, although it clearly could be very substantial.

RECOMMENDATION

While it is not necessary that the evidence gathered during a preliminary investigation prove that the election outcome was the result of fraud or irregularities, that evidence must indicate that further investigation is likely to result in that conclusion before proceeding to a full and lengthy investigation.

The facts submitted by Petitioner, and gathered by this Committee to date, do not meet that level of proof. It may be impossible, given the state of observance—or lack thereof—of election laws, and lax record keeping by Louisiana officials, for Petitioner to ever overcome this burden. This observation has been made by the Governor and the Moreau.

But the failure of election safeguards and lax record keeping do not suffice to overcome an election. More is required. There must ultimately be proof that the election would have been decided differently, or proof of such a magnitude of fraud, irregularities, or other errors that the true result of the election are unknown.

While there were some irregularities in this election, and isolated incidences of fraud, there is insufficient evidence in the aggregate, at this time, to indicate further investigation would result in the degree of evidence necessary to overcome petitioner's burden.

Our investigation to date has revealed a failure of safeguards and discrepancies in records. It has revealed possible campaign finance violations, although no indication of such violations on the part of Senator Landrieu. It also has revealed isolated instances of fraudulent or multiple voting and improper or duplicate registration. But it has not revealed an organized, widespread effort to illegally affect the outcome of this election. It has not revealed an organized, widespread effort to buy votes, or to procure multiple votes, or secure fraudulent registrations. It has not revealed such gross irregularities in the election and record keeping process that—by themselves and in the absence of massive fraud—meet the burden, which is always on the plaintiff, to prove that fraud or irregularities affected the outcome of the election. Finally, it has never been alleged, and no evidence has been uncovered, that Senator Landrieu was involved in any fraudulent election activities.

I would like to discuss briefly the challenges faced by the Committee in conducting this investigation—and I mean problems beyond the very difficult ones caused by the partisan division on the Committee concerning the conduct of the investigation.

The last time the Committee handled an election contest alleging voter fraud was in the Hurley v. Chavez contest in 1953–54. In 1954, there were actual paper ballots which could be reviewed, rather than electronic voting machines which print out results you hope are reliable. In 1954, there was no Federal Election Commission and few, if any, prohibitions on how money could be spent on campaigns. In 1954, there was not the communications system which made it easy for candidates, groups, and others to work together, both legally and illegally, by fax, by e-mail, or by cell phone.

But in both 1954 and 1997, there were many of the same problems with which this Committee has struggled: the need to balance a voter's right to privacy versus the need for information; the tendency to assume that all elections should be run perfectly even though most of the individuals actually running the precincts are volunteers putting in long hours with limited training; and the difficulty in deciding how and whether to determine if irregularities had an impact on the outcome of the election.

All of these have been problems which the Committee has faced and overcome in fulfilling its constitutional duty as "the Judge of the Elections, Returns, and Qualifications of its own Members..."

From the inception of this case, I have viewed the obligation of this Committee to be to fairly and objectively judge all the facts, with the Senate as our client. I submit to this Committee and the Senate a record which I believe is a credible discharge of the Committee's duty to the Senate.

COMMITTEE ON RULES AND ADMINISTRATION— COMMITTEE MOTION, OCTOBER 1, 1997

1. Whereas Louis "Woody" Jenkins filed a Petition for Election Contest with the United States Senate on December 5, 1996 and an Amended Petition for Election Contest on December 17, 1996, and Senator Mary Landrieu filed a Request for Summary Dismissal on January 17, 1997; and Petitioner Jenkins filed Petitioner's Answer to Request for Summary Dismissal on February 7, 1997;

2. Whereas the Committee on April 17, 1997 authorized "the Chairman, in consultation with the ranking minority member, to direct and conduct an Investigation of such scope as deemed necessary by the Chairman, into illegal or improper activities to determine the existence or absence of a body of fact that would justify the Senate in making the determination that fraud, irregularities or other errors, in the aggregate, affected the outcome of the election for United States Senator in the state of Louisiana in 1996";

3. Whereas the Committee on July 31, 1997 authorized "the Chairman to continue the investigation of the 1996 election for United States Senator from Louisiana authorized by the Committee Motion of April 17, 1997";

4. Whereas during the Committee's continued preliminary investigation, the Committee examined a number of areas of potential fraud, irregularities or other errors which had not been reviewed before July 31, including but not limited to the following allegations:

(A) use of funds from gambling interests to influence the Senate election;

(B) inaccurate and unreliable election records in certain precincts;

(C) apparent discrepancies in voters' signatures;

(D) duplicate voter registrations;

(E) illegal transportation of voters to the polls;

(F) improper and unreported campaign expenditures;

(G) voters registered at vacant public housing; and

(H) voters failing to submit required address confirmation forms;

5. Whereas the preliminary investigation has uncovered evidence that many of the statutory and regulatory safeguards meant to protect the integrity of the registration, voting, and campaign finance processes were violated, ignored, or enforced unevenly by election officials and others;

6. Whereas the Chairman has throughout this preliminary investigation conferred with the Governor of Louisiana and the District Attorney for East Baton Rouge, Louisiana, and both of these officials have written regarding their concerns about the election procedures, the violations of many election safeguards, and the absence of records corroborating the election results;

7. Whereas the Governor of Louisiana wrote to Chairman Warner on September 29, 1997, and concluded that:

"These issues are not about party affiliation. They are not about individual candidates or specific elections, even though this election in question clearly has illustrated some of the problems. The issue is the integrity and sanctity of our election process and its results. I share wholeheartedly with you your basic premise that our foremost duty is to ensure that our elections are conducted fairly and in accordance with law.

"I particularly share your frustration that our system of record keeping precludes adequate standards of accountability and that our lax enforcement substantially lowers public confidence in our elections. Witness to this is the fact that we recently learned that we have thousands of felons still on the voter rolls.

"Regardless of the future course of your investigation with the Rules Committee, Louisiana has a duty and an obligation to fashion a remedy for the many ills which have so amply been illustrated throughout these past months.

"Therefore, I will call for a bipartisan state legislative initiative with hearings focusing on every element of our registration and election process, involving Democrats and Republicans, and all appropriate state and local registrars, elections officials, and enforcement authorities."

8. Whereas the District Attorney for East Baton Rouge wrote to the Governor of Louisiana on September 2, 1997, and concluded that:

"We are currently conducting an investigation into election and voter registration irregularities. During the investigation, we have come across many concerns, including a number which I feel should be brought to your attention. That is because it appears that many of the Louisiana laws which were designed to assure the integrity of voter registration records and voting procedures may not be achieving the goals intended by the Legislature when enacted. The immediacy of the situation is that if the current procedures are not addressed, then the simple passage of time will result in the inability to insure that our laws provide either registration or election result integrity.

* * * * *

"These various practices, among others, create the opportunity for fraud in registration and voting and make it, for all practical purposes, impossible to discover, after the fact, if it occurred."

9. Whereas the breakdowns in Louisiana's electoral system indicate significant institutional problems which create the opportunity for fraud and irregularities to affect the outcome of Louisiana's elections; and

10. Whereas, notwithstanding the breakdowns in Louisiana's electoral safeguards, the Committee has not found a cumulative body of evidence of fraud, irregularities, or other errors—after review of a significant number of potential areas of fraud, irregularities, or other errors—to meet the petitioner's burden, as determined by Senate precedent, which burden is: to show not only proof of fraud or irregularities, but also that, upon completion of a full investigation, such fraud or irregularities, in the aggregate, did affect the result of the election or clearly make the true result of the election unknown.

Now, therefore, the committee hereby states that it finds that the evidence collected to date does not meet the applicable burden to justify further consideration of the amended petition by the Committee, or by the Senate, and the Committee terminates its investigation of the 1996 election for U.S. Senator from Louisiana and directs the Chairman to so inform the Senate;

The committee further hereby directs the Chairman to prepare a committee report, with minority or supplemental views as appropriate, which details the actions taken by the Committee, the legal standards applicable to the petition, and the evidence developed during the preliminary investigation;

The committee further hereby directs the Chairman to determine whether the evidence obtained during the preliminary investigation indicates that evidence of violations of federal or state election, campaign finance, or other laws or regulations should be referred to the Governor of Louisiana, the Department of Justice, the Federal Election Commission, law enforcement authorities in Louisiana, or other investigative authorities, and to report such determinations to the Committee for further action by the Committee and the Senate, according to Senate Rules; and

The committee further hereby authorizes the Chairman to maintain appropriate copies of relevant records for the official Committee files and to return or otherwise forward to the appropriate parties, as determined by the Chairman, all original documents submitted to the Committee in response to subpoenas issued in furtherance of the Committee's investigation.

NINETEENTH JUDICIAL DISTRICT,
EAST BATON ROUGE PARKS, OFFICE OF THE DISTRICT ATTORNEY,
Baton Rouge, LA, September 2, 1997.

Re: Voter registrations and elections.

Hon. MURPHY J. "MIKE" FOSTER,
Governor, State of Louisiana,
Baton Rouge, LA.

DEAR GOVERNOR FOSTER: We are currently conducting an investigation into election and voter registration irregularities. During the investigation, we have come across many concerns, including a number which I feel should be brought to your attention. That is because it appears that many of the Louisiana laws which were designed to assure the integrity of voter registration records and voting procedures may not be achieving the goals intended by the Legislature when enacted. The immediacy of the situation is that if the current procedures are not addressed, then the simple passage of time will result in the inability to insure that our laws provide either registration or election result integrity.

Though there are too many to be detailed in a letter, I will attempt to highlight some of the problems which we have found.

I would like to mention at the outset that the purpose of this letter is to point a finger at problems, not at people, so that they may be identified, discussed, understood, and solved. Blame assessment, if it occurs, will come at its time and in its forum.

Our investigation began with a focus on the Election Code, LRS 18:1 et seq, which was enacted to "... regulate the conduct of elections ...". It governs all aspects of elections, including officials, voters, registration, voting procedures, results, reporting, and even campaign finance.

Recent discoveries have prompted me to write this letter. The first is the finding of duplicate, inaccurate and/or incomplete information in the voter registration computer database. As of approximately one month ago, that database admittedly contained thousands of instance of duplication of social security numbers as well as over 200,000 registered voters who were shown as having no social security number. From our continuing review, this number is much higher today than it was then.

There are also a number of persons who are shown on the State Voter Registration Computer System to be registered in the same or in different parishes with the same social security number. Investigation has shown that in some cases, the registration seems to be of the same person who has moved, and in some cases, the registration seems to be of a completely different person. Regardless of which of these scenarios is true for any particular record, to maintain the status quo is to invite fraud.

These problems fly in the face of the enactments of the Legislature contained in Louisiana Revised Statute 18:104 and 101 which requires that citizens who register to vote provide certain unique information to the Registrar of Voters in order to be properly identified and registered, and that there be no citizen registered in more than one place. Among the statutory requirements is the applicant's social security number. Despite this statutory mandate, the Commissioner of Elections office recently sent a directive to all registrars instructing that the obtaining of a social security number would no longer be required from a voter applicant. The directive was presumably based on a judicial decision rendered in a lawsuit filed by an individual against a Registrar and the Commissioner of Elections. The State of Louisiana was not made a party to the suit. Pursuant to the requirements of LRS 18:64, the Registrar of Voters was represented by an Assistant Attorney General. However, the State as an entity was neither made a party nor represented. Based upon that ruling the Commissioner's office is advising registrars around the state that they are no longer required to follow the mandate of LRS 18:104.

Permitting a discussing of the legal issues involved, if the necessary identifying information is not required when a voter is registered, then it is a matter of which you should be aware.

The second recent discovery occurred in attempting to match voter signatures from "Motor Voter" applications to signatures on the precinct registers which are signed on election day. Though no handwriting analysis has been done, there are a number of obvious discrepancies apparent in many of the records. This, of course, has been one of the concerns raised by the National Voter Registration Act (NVRA), and appears to have caused a problem in our election records.

Further complicating all of these matters is the lack of administrative rules, which has resulted in inconsistencies among the various offices of the local registrars, not the uniformity envisioned in the law.

These various practices, among others, create the opportunity for fraud in registration and voting and make it, for all practical purposes, impossible to discover, after the fact, if it occurred.

There are many other problems we have found which cause a great deal of concern, but they will not be detailed here. The purpose of this letter, instead, is to inform you of the existence of some of these problems in our system of registration and elections so that you can take whatever action you think is necessary to correct the problems. I stand ready to assist you in identifying the depth of, and solutions to, these problems.

If there are any questions, please feel free to contact me.

Yours truly,

DOUG MOREAU,
District Attorney.

STATE OF LOUISIANA,
OFFICE OF THE GOVERNOR,
Baton Rouge, September 3, 1997.

Hon. DOUG MOREAU,
District Attorney, 19th Judicial District,
Baton Rouge, LA.

DEAR MR. MOREAU: Thank you for your letter of September 2, 1997, about your concern for the integrity of the election process in Louisiana. Your remarks have caused me grave concern as to whether our election laws require extensive legislative review in order to ensure that election results in Louisiana are reliable, and so that the public may have confidence in our election process. The first duty of government is to protect the democratic election process against all risks of fraudulent practices, so that those who are chosen in the election process are indeed the true choices.

I am so very concerned about the questions which you have raised that I will forward a copy of your correspondence to Senator Randy Ewing, President of the Senate, and Representative Hunt Downer, Speaker of the House of Representatives, recommending that these questions, as to election process integrity, be reviewed by a joint committee of the legislature, with assistance of appropriate legal counsel and the power of subpoena. With such legislative oversight we will be able to ensure that the election results based on the election laws of Louisiana are above any suspicion as to their reliability.

I thank you most sincerely for calling these matters to my attention.

Sincerely,

M.J. "MIKE" FOSTER, Jr.

U.S. SENATE, COMMITTEE ON RULES AND ADMINISTRATION,
Washington, DC, September 26, 1997.

Hon. J.J. "MIKE" FOSTER, Jr.,
Governor of Louisiana,
Baton Rouge, LA.

DEAR GOVERNOR FOSTER: This letter follows up our telephone conversation earlier today and the important personal meeting we had several weeks ago at the Southern Governors Conference. The Committee on Rules, which I chair, will meet next Wednesday to receive my report on the status of the Committee's preliminary investigation on behalf of the Senate, into allegations that fraud and irregularities affected the outcome of the November 5, 1996 election for U.S. Senate in your state.

My report will contain references to Louisiana's election laws, the presence or absence of adequate regulations, and the need for a proven level of enforcement of such laws and regulations. You have expressed to me your concerns related to Louisiana's election process and have told me that you plan to make your own evaluation of this system, in conjunction with members of your state legislature.

I particularly commend Doug Moreau, District Attorney for East Baton Rouge whom I have consulted on several occasions. He is continuing to perform investigation into areas which overlap with our own efforts.

One area in particular that Mr. Moreau is pursuing is a complete review of the state's voter registration computer database, which we have both discovered contains a significant number of voters with the same social security number or with no social security number at all. We were unable to obtain the complete database because the Commissioner of Elections would not voluntarily comply with a subpoena, as confirmed by the fact that Mr. Moreau is now in court seeking to enforce his subpoena.

At such time as the ongoing Senate preliminary investigation ceases—and I will know more details after my full Senate Committee meets next Wednesday—I want to offer, in compliance with Senate Rules, the opportunity for Rules Committee staff to brief the appropriate forum you establish for your legislative review.

My experience in this case leads me to recommend that—in light of the number of instances where the electoral safeguards, including record keeping, were not followed in the November 1996 elections, from the precinct level right up to the office of the Commissioner of Elections—your review should include an examination of what legislative or regulatory changes and enhanced adherence to present laws are needed to ensure that an official body, be it a body of the U.S. Congress, a court of law, or an appropriate governmental authority in your state, can more readily reach a credible and well documented decision about a statewide election contest.

Our foremost duty is to ensure our elections are conducted fairly and in accordance with law. We remain willing to provide you our observations and suggestions, within Senate rules, to assist you in your efforts to protect our electoral process.

Sincerely,

JOHN WARNER,
Chairman.

STATE OF LOUISIANA,
EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,
Baton Rouge, LA, September 29, 1997.

Hon. JOHN WARNER,
Chairman, Senate Committee on Rules and Administration, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR WARNER: I am in receipt of your letter of September 26 in which you informed me of your Rules Committee report to be delivered Wednesday and detailed some of your observations and wisdom gained through years of oversight.

So much of your thought process and concerns directly parallel my own. The allegations of fraud and irregularities which may have affected the outcome of the November 1996 U.S. Senate election are serious and disturbing. But, of even greater long term consequence are the suspicions that you and I apparently both share that there are chronic, systemic, and structural problems in the Louisiana election process.

These issues are not about party affiliation. They are not about individual candidates or specific elections, even though this election in question clearly has illustrated some of the problems. The issue is the integrity and sanctity of our election process and its results. I share wholeheartedly with you your basic premise that our foremost duty is to ensure that our elections are conducted fairly and in accordance with the law.

I particularly share your frustration that our system of record keeping precludes adequate standards of accountability and that our lax enforcement substantially lowers public confidence in our elections. Witness to this is the fact that we recently learned that we have thousands of felons still on the voter rolls.

Regardless of the future course of your investigation with the Rules Committee, Louisiana has a duty and an obligation to fashion a remedy for the many ills which have so amply been illustrated throughout these past months.

Therefore, I will call for a bipartisan state legislative initiative with hearings focusing on every element of our registration and election process, involving Democrats and Republicans, and all appropriate state and local registrars, elections officials, and enforcement authorities.

Nothing in a democracy is more sacred than the integrity of elections. On behalf of the state of Louisiana we offer our deepest appreciation for your efforts in identifying the problem areas in our elections system, and we gratefully accept your offer to have Rules Committee staff provide important information and examples of problems to our state hearings.

Again we sincerely appreciate the earnestness of your efforts and hope that your diligence and the ensuing hearings in Louisiana will profoundly impact our elections system for the better.

With kinds regards, I am,
Sincerely,

M.J. "MIKE" FOSTER, Jr.,
Governor.

Mr. SANTORUM addressed the Chair.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Pennsylvania.

Mr. SANTORUM. Mr. President, I rise today to congratulate the chairman of the Rules Committee for one of the most difficult tasks that any Member will be called upon to take in the U.S. Senate, and that is to look into the election of another Member of the Senate. It immediately has partisan overtones and can take a very ugly turn.

I can say that having sat through many of the hearings, both open and closed hearings, having sat with the chairman and seeing the efforts of this case and seeing the level of detail to which he took personally getting involved in this investigation and trying to ferret out the validity of the charges that were alleged, I am very proud of Senator WARNER's work on this investigation. He did it with the skill of the trained lawyer that he is. He did it in a way, really as the Senate's counsel, if you will, and also did it with, I believe, an extraordinary air of bipartisanship when, in fact, the partisan wranglings had boiled over far beyond what he actually deserved.

He did an excellent job. He did a thorough job. He used the resources that he had to the greatest extent that he possibly could. He took lots of arrows, in many cases in the back. But he stood tall and kept his eye on the ball, and that was to find out what happened in Louisiana, whether these charges that were put forward were, in fact, legitimate. He is determined, as well as the other members of the committee, that at this point there is not sufficient evidence to suggest that there was a systematic case of fraud in Louisiana, and so the investigation must come to a conclusion.

I support the chairman in that decision. I supported him, as did every other member of the Rules Committee, in the decision that he came to after this thorough and thoughtful investigation of the information that was presented to him.

I just wanted to take the floor today to commend him for a job well done. No doubt he will be criticized by many for ending this investigation, but I want to stand with him in saying that I think he reached the conclusion that was the only conclusion that could be reached at this point.

Having said that, obviously, just like with any of us, if information comes out subsequent that is a smoking gun or that is really problematic, then that evidence can be brought before the Rules Committee and we can take a look at it. To this point, that has not occurred, and I think the chairman has acted judiciously with respect to the evidence before him.

I wanted to stand and offer my gratitude for his excellent work and state my support for his effort. Thank you, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. FORD. Mr. President, let me thank the chairman of the Rules Committee, the distinguished Senator from Virginia, for his honest, straightforward, and direct investigation and statements in closed session and in public today. I think it is evident from his effort, with the vote of 16 to nothing, bipartisan, that we now cease and desist as it relates to the investigation of the Louisiana election, and the distinguished Senator MARY LANDRIEU be seated as a true Senator without any cloud over her head whatsoever, so she can get about the business of full-time representation of Louisiana.

I thank the chairman. I thank the members of the committee. I think it is now time that we put this behind us and proceed with the business of the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate will be in order. The Senator from Florida.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 1998

Mr. MACK. Mr. President, what is the pending business before the Senate?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senate will now resume consideration of S. 1156, which the clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 1156) making appropriations for the Government of the District of Columbia and other activities chargeable in whole or in part against the revenues of said District, for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1998, and for other purposes.

The Senate resumed consideration of the bill.

Pending:

Coats modified amendment No. 1249, to provide scholarship assistance for District of Columbia elementary and secondary school students.

Graham-Mack-Kennedy amendment No. 1252, to provide relief to certain aliens who would otherwise be subject to removal from the United States.

Mack-Graham-Kennedy modified amendment No. 1253 (to amendment No. 1252) in the nature of a substitute.

AMENDMENT NO. 1253 TO AMENDMENT NO. 1252

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment of the Senator from Florida is the pending business.

Mr. MACK. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that Senator DEWINE be added as a cosponsor to my amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. MACK. Mr. President, this amendment was offered last Thursday. We still have not had one Member come to the floor to speak in opposition to it. It has received support from both sides of the aisle and is supported by Senator ABRAHAM, the chairman of the authorizing subcommittee. It has received positive editorial support from a wide array of newspapers, including the Washington Times and the New York Times. It has also received the endorsement of Empire America. Yesterday I introduced into the RECORD a letter of support from Jeanne Kirkpatrick, Jack Kemp, William Bennett, Lamar Alexander and Steve Forbes.

This is a narrowly targeted amendment which merely ensures that Central Americans receive the due process which they were originally promised. It is focused on an identifiable group of people and ensures their opportunity to apply for suspension of deportation. It is not a grant of immunity.

I have not been able to obtain an up-or-down vote on my amendment, so I will be moving to table my own amendment. I will oppose the motion to table, and ask for the support of my colleagues in opposing the motion to table.

So, Mr. President, I therefore move to table amendment No. 1253.

Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion to table.

Mr. MACK. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that this vote be delayed until 12:15.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Several Senators addressed the Chair.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Florida.

Mr. GRAHAM. Mr. President, I am pleased that after almost a week we are on the verge of having an expression of the Senate on this important issue. I ask unanimous consent that Senator BOXER also be added as a cosponsor of this amendment.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GRAHAM. I ask unanimous consent that a statement by the President, which was released on July 25 of this year, at the time the administration supported the principles of the Immigration Reform Transition Act of 1997, also be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE WHITE HOUSE,
OFFICE OF THE PRESS SECRETARY,
July 25, 1997.

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

To the Congress of the United States:

I am pleased to submit for your immediate consideration and enactment the "Immigration Reform Transition Act of 1997," which is accompanied by a section-by-section analysis. This legislative proposal is designed to ensure that the complete transition to the new "cancellation of removal" (formerly "suspension of deportation") provisions of the Illegal Immigration Reform and Immigrant Responsibility Act of 1996 (IIRIRA; Public Law 104-208) can be accomplished in a fair and equitable manner consistent with our law enforcement needs and foreign policy interests.

This legislative proposal would aid the transition to IIRIRA's new cancellation of removal rules and prevent the unfairness of applying those rules to cases pending before April 1, 1997, the effective date of the new rules. It would also recognize the special circumstances of certain Central Americans who entered the United States in the 1980s in response to civil war and political persecution. The Nicaraguan Review Program, under successive Administrations from 1985 to 1995, protected roughly 40,000 Nicaraguans from deportation while their cases were under review. During this time the American Baptist Churches v. Thornburgh (ABC) litigation resulted in a 1990 court settlement, which protected roughly 190,000 Salvadorans and 50,000 Guatemalans. Other Central Americans have been unable to obtain a decision on their asylum applications for many years. Absent this legislative proposal, many of these individuals would be denied protection from deportation under IIRIRA's new cancellation of removal rules. Such a result would unduly harm stable families and communities here in the United States and undermine our strong interests in facilitating the development of peace and democracy in Central America.

This legislative proposal would delay the effect of IIRIRA's new provisions so that immigration cases pending before April 1, 1997, will continue to be considered and decided under the old suspension of deportation rules as they existed prior to that date. IIRIRA's new cancellation of removal rules would generally apply to cases commenced on or after April 1, 1997. This proposal dictates no particular outcome of any case. Every application for suspension of deportation or cancellation of removal must still be considered on a case-by-case basis. The proposal simply restores a fair opportunity to those whose cases have long been in the system or have other demonstrable equities.

In addition to continuing to apply the old standards to old cases, this legislative proposal would exempt such cases from IIRIRA's annual cap of 4,000 cancellations of removal. It would also exempt from the cap cases of battered spouses and children who otherwise receive such cancellation.

The proposal also guarantees that the cancellation of removal proceedings of certain individuals covered by the 1990 ABC litigation settlement and certain other Central Americans with long-pending asylum claims will be governed by the pre-IIRIRA substantive standard of 7 years continuous physical presence and extreme hardship. It would further exempt those same individuals from IIRIRA's cap. Finally, individuals affected by the legislation whose time has lapsed for reopening their cases following a removal order would be granted 180 days in which to do so.

My Administration is committed to working with the Congress to enact this legislation. If, however, we are unsuccessful in this goal, I am prepared to examine any available administrative options for granting relief to this class of immigrants. These options could include a grant of Deferred Enforced Departure for certain classes of individuals who would qualify for relief from deportation under this legislative proposal. Prompt legislative action on my proposal would ensure a smooth transition to the full implementation of IIRIRA and prevent harsh and avoidable results.

I urge the Congress to give this legislative proposal prompt and favorable consideration.

WILLIAM J. CLINTON.

THE WHITE HOUSE, July 24, 1997.

Mr. GRAHAM. Mr. President, this is an extremely important and urgent bill, because the continuation of the 1996 law, with what I will describe as its inadvertent retroactive application to this class of people, is causing great distress and unnecessary instability in communities that are principally affected. As those who participated in the press conference earlier today underscored, this is a group of people who came here largely at our request. They came here because communism had taken over their country. They came here because the Soviet Union was establishing a satellite state in our own hemisphere. They came here in order to participate in those ultimately successful efforts to establish a democratic government in Nicaragua.

Now for us to change the rules from those that were in place at the time we extended that invitation, to have the practical effect of denying these people even the opportunity to be heard on their request for a permanent residence in the United States, is outrageous and inconsistent with basic American principles.

I underscore what Senator MACK and I have said throughout this debate. This is not an amnesty provision. By the passage of this legislation, no one automatically has their status in the United States altered. What they do have is the right to use the rules that were in effect when they came to this country to apply for permanent legal status in the United States. I think that is just fair and consistent with the relationships that we want to establish with, particularly, our neighbors in this hemisphere.

Mr. President, I applaud my colleague for having asked for this tabling motion which, obviously, is not a motion in which he is going to urge success, but it is our means of getting an expression of opinion by the U.S. Senate on this fundamental issue. I urge defeat of the motion to table and then a quick adoption of this amendment. Thank you, Mr. President.

Mr. DEWINE addressed the Chair.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Ohio.

Mr. DEWINE. Mr. President, I rise in strong support of the Mack amendment. I, of course, therefore will oppose the motion to table. This amendment will ensure that fundamental principles of fairness are respected in regard to the cases of some 316,000 immigrants, some of them from Central America.

In the immigration bill Congress passed last year, we changed the criteria for suspension of deportation. Certain retroactive changes in that bill, at least as they have been interpreted by the INS, had the unintended effect of applying these new criteria to applications of suspension for deportation which were already in the pipeline when the bill was passed.

The Mack amendment will ensure that those immigrants whose cases were in the pipeline when the 1996 immigration law took effect will have their cases decided according to the criteria in effect at the time that the law actually passed. It is only fair that we should not change the rules in mid-stream for these worried immigrants.

Let me take us back to the 1980's when we granted these 316,000 Central American immigrants temporary protection from deportation. We knew at that time the terrible consequences of war—the grinding poverty, human rights abuses that had driven these men, women, and, yes, children, to our shores.

At that time, we told these immigrants that their protection from deportation would be permanent if certain conditions were met—that is what we told them then—7 years of continuous residency, good behavior, proof of extreme hardship awaiting them in their native country. We basically said, "As long as you can prove that, then this will be permanent."

When Congress changed the law in 1996, we clearly did not intend to change the rules for these people who already, at that time, were in the pipeline. We, in essence, had made a commitment to them. We, in essence, had made a deal with them, and I don't believe we should go back on that deal today.

Mr. President, the Mack amendment would keep faith with these individuals. It is not, as my colleagues from Florida have already pointed out, an automatic grant of amnesty, nor is it an automatic grant of permanent residency. Far from it. It is merely a restoration of the original conditions these immigrants have to fulfill if we are going to allow them to remain in this country.

I had the opportunity this morning to participate in a press conference concerning this issue. I also had the opportunity a few months ago to travel to Nicaragua. I had made several visits to Nicaragua in the 1980's, about a decade ago. For me to go back to Nicaragua a few months ago was a very pleasant experience, and it was pleasant because I had seen where Nicaragua was. I had the opportunity a few months ago to see where Nicaragua is today. Yes, it is still the second-poorest country in this hemisphere and, yes, there is high unemployment and, yes, there are many, many problems. But what we see in Nicaragua today is a fledgling democracy. We see a country that is becoming what we envisioned and had hoped for and worked for in the 1980's, and that is a democracy.

Today, for the first time in history, all five Central American countries are democratic; all five are working to bring about the reforms that truly are an example of democracy.

When I traveled to Nicaragua, I had the opportunity to speak with then President-elect, now President Aleman and talked to him about his vision for his country.

One of the unintended consequences of the bill we passed in 1996, and one of the unintended consequences of the deportation of these 316,000 immigrants would be that we would strike a hard blow against democracy in Nicaragua and El Salvador and the other Central American countries. Anyone who has looked at these countries today understands what an economic impact and political impact it would have if all these citizens, all of these individuals were instantly returned to their native countries.

The ability to absorb these individuals simply does not exist. It does not exist from an economic point of view. Further, this would take away a major source, frankly, of income to these countries, a major source of help to the economy, not United States foreign aid, but rather the remittances that are sent back by Nicaraguans who are living in the United States. Those remittances are a major contribution to the Nicaraguan economy today. To take that away, I think, would have a very severe and devastating blow to the economy of Nicaragua and the economy of the other Central American countries.

That is not the principal reason to support the Mack amendment, but it is a fact, and it is a fact of life.

The central reason to support the Mack amendment is what has been stated on this floor by Senator Mack on several occasions, as well as Senator GRAHAM, and that simply is this is a matter of equity, it is a matter of fairness, it is a matter of keeping our word, and it is a matter of doing what is right.

I urge my colleagues to support the Mack amendment and, therefore, vote against the motion to table the MACK amendment.

Mr. President, I yield the floor. Mr. COATS addressed the Chair.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Indiana.

AMENDMENT NO. 1249

Mr. COATS. Mr. President, we had, I think, a very constructive debate on the school choice issue, scholarships for D.C. children. Unfortunately, while having obtained a majority vote in support of at least a test of a program to provide some educational opportunities to D.C. children, we were not able to break a procedural vote of 60 necessary to move forward with this legislation. That limited our options considerably. While Senator LIEBERMAN and I were pleased with the fact that we received more votes than we ever have on this issue, we were still two short of the necessary number to break the promised filibuster on this, and that limits our options.

Mr. President, this is an issue that is not going away. I have always said this is not something that will be legislated from the top down in Congress but will be a grassroots movement from parents and PTA's and administrators and educators and others throughout America who are demanding better education for their children. Unfortunately, in many instances, they are not finding it in some of their public schools.

This is not a condemnation of the public school system. There are many fine public schools across this country. There are dedicated teachers, dedicated administrators, schools that are providing opportunities for their young people.

I am a product of the public schools, as is my wife. Our children are products of public schools, and we have found schools that have provided a sound education for our children.

Unfortunately, there are people in this country who don't have the options that we have had, who don't have the options that those of means have in terms of where they live, the school systems they choose to support, to be a part of and options that, should they find themselves in the situation where they are living that their public schools are not providing the education their children need or a school that has such a high incidence of violence and crime and other problems that they don't feel their children are safe there, they don't have the option that many of us have of transferring their student to a private school or another school outside the system or moving to an area where they can receive the kind of education they want their children to receive.

There is a very interesting story this morning in the Washington Post: "Popularity Grows for Alternatives to Public School. Some Districts Reacting to Threat of Competition."

The whole point we were trying to make yesterday is that we are not trying to undo the public school system. We are trying to provide options and alternatives for parents who are trapped in those public schools. But, by the same token, we hope that the competitive pressure will shake them out of their lethargy and cause them to bring about the changes and reforms necessary to make them viable once again.

In quoting from the Post, an article by Rene Sanchez, it says:

In a movement flustering schools across the nation, more parents than ever are choosing alternatives to public education for their children, so much that what once seemed only a fad to many educators is instead starting to resemble a revolution.

Charter schools are expanding at breakneck pace. Religious schools are overflowing with new students. Home schooling is attracting unprecedented numbers of parents who only a few years ago would never have dreamed of teaching their own children.

Those migrating from public education say the roots of their disenchantment vary. Some parents are frustrated with bureaucracy, others fear student violence. Some want their children to spend more time learning values, others call the one-size-fits-all model of most large public schools an ineffective and impersonal way to learn.

But today those trends have begun to send a powerful message to public schools, even prompting some of them to acknowledge a threat of competition for the first time.

Our system is built on competition. We pride ourselves in America as producing the best product at the best price because of competitive pressures that force us to do better, that force us to make better products at lower cost, that force us to respond to someone else who is attempting to accomplish the same goal and might have found a better way to do it. It is that that has made this such a dynamic economy, one that employs so many people gainfully, and one that provides such a quality of living for so many Americans. That is the American way.

That system works everywhere except where there is a public monopoly, a State-run government public monopoly. That public monopoly has existed in public schools for far too long in far too many places. There are vigorous private school and parochial school options available in many parts of this country, but they are, sadly, lacking in some of the areas where they are needed the most.

But more than that, the problem is not lack of alternatives. The problem has been a system which leaves the lowest income and frequently the minority students of this country living in our urban areas with only one choice. And that choice, unfortunately, has been a failed public school. They have been denied opportunities to gain skills to enter the workplace. They have been denied opportunities to receive an education that qualifies them to go on to college or university education. They, therefore, are trapped, trapped in a system, a system which says, "We will do anything we can to maintain the status quo, and yet at the same time we will prevent you from an alternative by blocking any attempts to provide scholarships or vouchers or stipends or support to assist you in paying the tuition if you choose to move from a public school."

We had that debate yesterday. It was a very instructive debate. I thank my colleague from Connecticut, Senator LIEBERMAN. It is bipartisan obviously, Democrat and Republican, one from Connecticut, one from Indiana, joining forces. I appreciate the support we had from a few of our Democratic colleagues across the aisle. Unfortunately, we did not get enough to move on with this.

But there is a revolution going on in public education. It is a healthy one. It is a healthy one because parents are suddenly rising up and saying: We will not accept the platitudes and the promises that come from the public school system when now 15 years after the report "A Nation At Risk", 15 years later, essentially, we see no dramatic changes or no effective changes in many of our public schools. We will not accept any longer the promises of a system which cannot overcome its inertia and its bureaucracy, which cannot direct a majority of its funds to educating students but yet eats up a majority of those funds or a very substantial portion of those funds in administrative costs.

So this issue will be back. It will be back over and over again, and it will arise not because two Senators chose to offer an amendment to the D.C. appropriations bill; it will arise because constituents of Members throughout the country will demand in town meetings and in letters and in calls to their Congressmen and Senators, will demand opportunities and alternatives. No longer will inner-city poor parents, welfare parents and others living at or near the poverty line, allow their children to be condemned to a lifetime of inability to succeed because of the failure of the public school system to provide their children with an education.

They will demand that their Congressmen and their Senators provide opportunities, that their councilmen and their mayors and their school systems either provide a sound education for their children or give them the opportunity to seek that elsewhere. What parent would not do that? What parent in this Senate body would not do that? We all would because we have that choice. Minority children in many cases do not have that choice.

Mr. President, I would like to say just one more thing before I yield the floor. There was another quote in the Washington Post this morning in an article covering this particular issue. That quote was a disturbing one. There are boundaries to public discourse. There are boundaries that we all try to live by, boundaries of civility and honesty and good taste. When those limits are violated, it undermines this institution and it makes democracy more difficult.

I think deep disagreements are possible without bitterness. I have done my best to conduct my debates, including this school choice debate, in that spirit. But today in the Washington Post a quote was attributed to the Senator from Massachusetts. The Post has misquoted me in the past, and I sincerely hope that they have misquoted the Senator from Massachusetts. That quote reads:

Kennedy reminded Republicans that "D.C. is not a test tube for misguided Republican ideological experiments on education. . . . Republicans in Congress should stop acting like plantation masters and start treating the people of D.C. with the respect they deserve."

Mr. President, this is not just a racially offensive, irresponsible charge; it is the total inversion of reality. It is the opponents of school choice who want to require, compel, force minority children to remain in substandard schools. It is the opponents of school choice who want to confine poor minority children within the four walls of failed institutions, and sometimes just the four walls because the roofs are in disrepair.

Despite the infusion of hundreds of millions of dollars into this system, much of it is wasted irresponsibly in not providing either buildings or education to the children of the District of Columbia.

If there is a plantation here, it is a paternalistic plantation of those who somehow justify restricting the choices and options of poor children as a defense of their civil rights. As Alveda King said in room 207 just off the Senate floor here a week ago: One of the greatest civil rights issues for minority people today and for African-Americans is those who deny young black children the opportunity to receive an education. That condemns them, because of their income, because of where they live geographically, to a failed public school that fails to educate their children and condemns them to a lifetime of failure.

Let me suggest how we can respect the people of the District. We can respect them to make good choices in the interests of their children. We can respect them enough to give them options other than coercive assignment to failed and dangerous schools. We can respect them with resources, not with more lip service, platitudes, or promises. We can respect the right of a parent, the knowledge of a parent, the caring of a parent to make wise decisions for their children without the paternalistic attitude that only Congress or only bureaucrats, only the State, or only Government knows what is best for our children. This charge that supporters of school choice are plantation masters is deceptive and it is racist and it is hypocritical.

It is time for all of us, liberals and conservatives, to search our conscience. There are Members of this body who voted against scholarships for African-American children whose families have not darkened the door of public schools for generations. There are Members of the administration and this body, hours after those scholarships were defeated, who attended back-to-school night at Sidwell Friends, a school safe from leaking roofs and commonplace violence and failed education that prevails in so much of the District's public schools.

Does not anyone see the irony, does not anyone see the hypocrisy, does not anyone see the injustice in all of this?

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. FAIRCLOTH addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Carolina.

AMENDMENT NO. 1274

(Purpose: To ensure the effectiveness of the charter school program)

On page 9, line 17, strike "$1,235,000" and all that follows through "134);" on line 24 and insert "$3,376,000 from local funds (not including funds already made available for District of Columbia public schools) for public charter schools: Provided, That if the entirety of this allocation has not been provided as payments to any public charter schools currently in operation through the per pupil funding formula, the funds shall be available for new public charter schools on a per pupil basis: Provided further, That $400,000 be available to the District of Columbia Public Charter School Board for administrative costs: Provided further, That if the entirety of this allocation has not been provided as payment to 1 or more public charter schools by May 1, 1998, and remains unallocated, the funds shall be deposited into a special revolving loan fund to be used solely to assist existing or new public charter schools in meeting startup and operating costs: Provided further, That the District of Columbia Education Emergency Board of Trustees shall report to Congress not later than 120 days after the date of enactment of this Act on the capital needs of each public charter school and whether the current per pupil funding formula should reflect these needs: Provided further, That until the District of Columbia Education Emergency Board of Trustees reports to Congress as provided in the preceding proviso, the District of Columbia Education Emergency Board of Trustees shall take appropriate steps to provide public charter schools with assistance to meet all capital expenses in a manner that is equitable with respect assistance provided to other District of Columbia public schools: Provided further, That the District of Columbia Education Emergency Board of Trustees shall report to Congress not later than November 1, 1998, on the implementation of their policy to give preference to newly created District of Columbia public charter schools for surplus public school property;".

Mr. BROWNBAC. Mr. President, I want to thank the chairman of the District of Columbia Appropriations Subcommittee for including the Brownback-Lieberman-Coats D.C. charter school amendment in the manager's amendment. I am also pleased that our amendment has bipartisan support. These charter school provisions are critical to ensure the success of charter schools in the District. Here in the Nation's Capital, unfortunately, the progress of creating charter schools has been slow. Legislation to create charter schools in the District was enacted in the last Congress but the District currently only has two charter schools.

I, along with the distinguished ranking member of the subcommittee, Senator LIEBERMAN, had the opportunity to visit one of these charter schools. The Options Public Charter School, which is just a few blocks from Capitol Hill, is the perfect example of the innovative approach charter schools bring to public education. It enrolls about 100 of the D.C. public schools most at-risk students, grades 5 to 8, and works closely with each student. As a result of this charter school education, the high school graduation rate for the Options Public Charter School is 75 percent compared to the approximate 50 percent graduation rate in the D.C. public schools.

To make sure the D.C. public charter school system follows the success of the Options Public Charter School and continues to grow, I, along with Senator LIEBERMAN and Senator COATS offered an amendment to expand funding for the D.C. public charter schools from $1,235,000 to $3,376,000 to ensure that current and future charter schools have adequate funding. In fiscal year 1998, the District of Columbia could have as many as 20 new charter schools. The $1.2 million appropriation is based on the budget of the two current charter schools. This amendment would also make sure there is sufficient funding for current public schools which would like to convert to a charter school.

Our amendment would also require the D.C. education emergency board of trustees to report to Congress on their implementation of policy providing preference to new charter schools for surplus D.C. public school property. It would also establish a revolving fund for D.C. charter schools for funds not spent by May 1, 1997. Under the current legislation, any remaining funds for charter schools must go into the D.C. general fund by May 1, 1997. This provision in the amendment would simply make sure that any funds appropriated for the D.C. charter schools will only be spent on the D.C. charter schools. In addition, the D.C. education emergency board of trustees would be required to report to Congress on the capital needs of each charter school within 120 days of enactment and to take all possible steps to provide assistance in capital costs for charter schools in the meantime.

I am pleased that our amendment is included in the manager's amendment and has the support of our Democratic colleagues. The charter school application process is underway in the District and new charter schools could begin to operate as early as January. Our goal is to make the Nation's Capital a shining city for the world to follow. One of the key elements of achieving this goal is to provide high quality education for the District's children. Charter schools in the District will inject accountability into D.C. public education, more options for parents and, most important, high quality education to the District's children.

BOSNIA

Mr. ROBERTS. Mr. President, I rise today to voice my concern regarding actions last night in Bosnia. NATO forces, of which we constitute the major part, have again seized several Bosnian Serb radio transmitters because they were hostile to the peace-keeping goals of our forces.

No doubt that was the case. I have no question about that. But I suggest that were we at war and the issue more clear such action would be more than warranted. But we are not, Mr. President. We are trying to implement the Dayton accords, and as such I am concerned this action is not only questionable but may very well be counterproductive.

What did the stations do to warrant this action? They said bad things about the SFOR troops and our mission, and they tampered, apparently, with an hour-long program taped by Louise Arbor, head of the International War Crimes Tribunal.

The good news, Mr. President, is that no violence has occurred yet in regard to the seizure. But I remind my colleagues that the last time we did this our troops were stoned and we quickly returned the station. But we made the Serbs promise not to interfere with pro-Moslem or pro-SFOR messages. Is anyone really surprised, Mr. President, that the Serbs did not live up to that promise?

First question: Now what? Do we have a plan this time? Do we intend to monitor and control all of the media in Bosnia to ensure that only messages that meet our criteria are heard by the people of Bosnia? Is that what the NATO mission has become—one-sided and totally controlled by NATO? Will we put NATO media and our intelligence personnel, let's be frank about it, in charge to produce programs that fit our mission? Are we shining the light of truth into Serb darkness or are we holding a censorship flashlight?

If that is the case, I think you can make a good case that we are enforcing the peace and we are aggressively establishing media control, then let's not kid ourselves and continue to call our role even-handed peacekeeping.

But here is the second question: What will we do if the Serbs react violently to the seizure? General Clark has stated rightly that we will use lethal force to protect our forces. Is this the issue that will precipitate that lethal force? Is this how we would explain loss of life to the parents of an American man or woman in uniform stationed in Bosnia?

Mr. President, we need to hear from the administration on last night's action and they need to outline the plan to get us out of this tar baby.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Ohio.

ANOTHER TRAGEDY

Mr. DEWINE. Mr. President, I rise today to call the attention of my colleagues to a story on the front page of last Thursday's Washington Post. This article tells the story of the beating death of a little 4-year-old girl, a little girl by the name of Monica Wheeler in Washington, DC. Monica was found dead in the bathroom of a man who was an acquaintance of her mother's. The police have ruled her death a homicide. In addition to being severely battered, Monica was suffering from malnutrition and showed signs of genital bleeding.

Now, Mr. President, 3 years ago, one of Monica's siblings, her brother, Andre, then age 2, was also found dead—in the same man's bathroom. That earlier death was ruled at that time an accidental drowning, but the police now are reopening that case.

Mr. President, it is up to the police and the courts to find out the truth about this particular tragedy. But one thing we know for certain is that there are far too many children returned to the care of people who have already abused and battered them, people who should not be allowed to take care of children at all. We know this occurs time and time again across this great country of ours.

Mr. President, every day in America three children actually die of abuse and neglect at the hands of their parents or their caretakers. That is over 1,200 children every year.

And almost half of these children are killed after—after—their tragic circumstances have already come to the attention of local child welfare agencies.

Mr. President, at the end of 1996, over 525,000 children were in foster homes. Over a year's time, it is estimated that over 650,000 children will spend some time in foster homes. Shockingly, 25 percent of the children in the foster care system at any one given point in time will languish in foster care longer than 4 years—25 percent of the kids. Ten percent will be in foster care longer than 7 years.

This problem has been brewing for many years. It is, at least in part, the unintended consequence of a law passed by this Congress in 1980, a law requiring that reasonable efforts be made to reunify families. In practice, this law has resulted in unreasonable efforts, unreasonable efforts, Mr. President, being made to reunite families that are really families in name only, families that simply never should be reunited.

I have been working to change this for almost 3 years now. About 10 days ago, along with Senator CHAFFEE, Senator CRAIG and Senator ROCKEFELLER, I introduced a bill that I hope will represent the culmination of this effort. The PASS Act—the acronym we have given to it stands for the Promotion of Adoption Safety and Support for Abused and Neglected Children Act—would make a difference. It would, Mr. President, save young lives. It would put an end to a tragic policy that has put parents' interests above the health, the safety, and yes, even the survival of innocent children.

Mr. President, it would help child welfare agencies move faster to rescue these children. Every child deserves a better fate than being shuttled from foster home to foster home for years on end. That is why, Mr. President, we are working to pass this important bill.

Once this bill is passed, Mr. President, then let's work together on the next step in the continuing battle for our children's right to live in safe, stable, permanent and loving homes.

Mr. President, the tragedy of this little child who died in Washington, DC, a few days ago, this little 4-year-old girl, Monica Wheeler, should not be repeated. I think we have an obligation in this Congress to move as quickly as possible to change a 1980 law that has done a lot of good but that frankly had an unintended consequence. That unintended consequence is that children, even after there is evidence of abuse, even after there is not just evidence, even after there is overwhelming indication of abuse, children are placed back in homes time and time and time again. One of the reasons that occurs is because of the 1980 law.

We must act, Mr. President, to clarify that law, to clarify the reasonable efforts requirement of the law, so that the safety of children will always be paramount, and that these tragedies will be eliminated.

I yield the floor and I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GRAMS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ROBERTS). Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GRAMS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to speak as in morning business for 5 minutes.

LEGAL PROTECTION FOR DATA BASES

Mr. GRAMS. Mr. President, I rise today to make a few remarks about an important issue facing our Nation in the information era—the issue of legal protection of data bases. The U.S. Copyright Office recently released a comprehensive report on the issue of data base protection. I welcome this new information and look forward to both the prompt consideration of the report by Congress and to the introduction of much-needed legislation that will protect the enormous investments of data base producers, to assure scientists, educators, businesses, and other consumers that they will continue to have access to accurate, verifiable information.

The Copyright Office report provides the requisite legal and legislative analysis that Congress needs in order to act in an appropriate and timely manner to respond to the legitimate concerns of all parties.

It is an important step in the process of addressing recent technological and legal developments that have left valuable American data bases vulnerable to unauthorized copying and dissemination.

The report states that it is expected that all member countries of the European Union will implement the European Union's directive on data bases by January 1, 1998—a fact that underscores the international implications of this issue for American data base producers. The directive provides a new form of protection for data bases to supplement copyright law. The directive extends this new protection only to data base producers located in a European Union member state and will not protect data bases originating in the United States until we adopt our own data base protection legislation.

Mr. President, the United States, as the world's leading producer and exporter of data bases of all types, needs legal protection abroad far more than any other nation. Unless the United States adopts this protection, the data bases of U.S. companies will be at risk. Smaller U.S. firms without global operations will be the most vulnerable. The worst-case scenario is that this could potentially force U.S. companies to move their operations out of this country and into countries that offer data base protection. Such a move poses a serious threat to U.S. jobs.

After studying the report, I believe current U.S. law and precedent are insufficient to adequately protect the enormous investment of money and effort that typically goes into creating data bases, both print and electronic. This is especially true given the declining copyright protection afforded to data bases after the Supreme Court's 1990 decision in Feist, and the inherent vulnerability of data bases to piracy made easy in the new digital environment.

America's data base producers employ or represent thousands of editors, researchers, and others who gather, verify, update, format, and distribute the information contained in their data base products. They also invest billions of dollars in hardware and software to manage these large bodies of information.

Mr. President, comprehensive data is indispensable to the successful operation of today's American economy, including information about communications, finance, medicine, law, news, travel, defense, and many other topics. As one of America's leading growth industries—one that generates jobs and supports American families—the information services industry creates a wealth of user-friendly, reliable, and up-to-date information critical to the lives of American citizens. Congress must provide the legal protection that ensures the future viability of the information services industry. Thank you, Mr. President.

I yield the floor.

The Senate continued with the consideration of the bill.

Mr. GRAMM addressed the Chair.

AMENDMENT NO. 1253

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, as I understand it, we have scheduled a tabling motion of the Mack amendment, and Senator MACK himself has moved to table the amendment. I thought it would be timely for me to come over and say a little bit about this amendment.

Let me make it clear that I intend to vote against tabling the amendment. I think this amendment should be debated, and I think it is important to try to outline why. That is the purpose that has brought me to the floor today.

First of all, we are talking about, in the Mack-Graham-Kennedy amendment, an amendment that changes the immigration laws of the country. I remind my colleagues that we are considering the D.C. appropriations bill and, therefore, this amendment has nothing to do with the subject matter of that bill.

Second, I believe that this is complicated legislation, dealing with very complex, very important, and, quite frankly, very emotional issues that ought to be dealt with by the Immigration Subcommittee, by the people who wrote the law that we just adopted last year, and by people who are experts in this area. I do not believe that an amendment that has the sweeping impact of this amendment should be dealt with as a rider to an appropriations bill when, by and large, other than three or four Members of the Senate, nobody has closely examined the pending amendment.

Now, let me outline very briefly what the amendment, in my opinion, seeks to do, and let me also say that I am not a member of the committee that has jurisdiction. My concern about this amendment was generated by the chairman of the Immigration Subcommittee in the House, who is my colleague from Texas, who is very concerned about this amendment, and who is very much opposed to it. Basically, what this amendment seeks to do is to change the immigration bill that we wrote just last year. Now, our colleague from Florida argues that, well, it doesn't appear that maybe we wanted to do what we did. It is hard for me to judge that and, quite frankly, I don't know. But let me outline what the amendment will do and the concerns that I have.

First of all, one of the provisions in the immigration bill last year was a provision to try to end the practice of people coming into the country illegally and then using the system to stay here. I am very sensitive to this issue. We had an effort that was undertaken last year to cut back on legal immigration. I was a leader in killing that effort because I want people to have an opportunity to come to America legally. I am not one of these people who believes that America is full. I believe that we have a system for people to come here under existing law—to come to the country legally, to come to work, to build their dream, and to build the American dream.

I am a strong supporter of legal immigration, but I am a strong opponent of the illegal immigration of people who come to the country illegally and, in doing so, jump in line in front of 7 million people who are waiting to come legally. One of the things we did last year in the immigration bill was set a cap on the number of people who were in the country illegally but who were able to stay here by claiming extraordinary hardship if they were returned home. The cap was 4,000 people a year that we would allow to remain in the country under these extraordinary circumstances.

What the Mack amendment does is waive that cap for a huge number of people, certainly in the range of 300,000, and critics—I can't speak for whether they are right or wrong—who are concerned about it suggest perhaps a larger number. I think what this does is produce sort of a rolling amnesty. I remind my colleagues that in trying to gain control of our ability to have some say about who comes to our country, without limiting legal immigration, we took the extraordinary step of granting amnesty to people who had violated the law. But part of the deal was that it was a one-time agreement and that we weren't going to continue to do it. My concern here is that we are creating a rolling amnesty.

A second very real problem is that we are talking about people who came to this country, many of them from El Salvador, Guatemala, and Nicaragua, when there was a war going on. The war in El Salvador was a war where Communist insurgents were trying to overthrow the government and deny democracy and capitalism to the people in El Salvador. The war in Nicaragua was a war against a Communist dictatorship. What happened during this period is that people came to this country illegally.

Now we are hearing the argument that there was a wink and a nod and there was an agreement. But I don't see anywhere in law that that was the case. Now, I can't today make a judgment about whether people who came here from Nicaragua fleeing communism should be granted the ability to stay. I would have to say that I am more sympathetic to them than I am to people who came here from El Salvador, because they were supporting a Communist insurgency, and now the El Salvadoran Government is saying, "Please keep those people in America, don't let them come back to El Salvador."

My point is this. I think we need to look at each one of these cases. But the war in each country from which these people were fleeing is over. We were successful in stopping Communist insurgency in El Salvador. We won in Nicaragua. Now people who were fleeing a conflict, now that the conflict is over, are saying, "We don't want to go back." Well, now, in some circumstances, they should not have to go back. But I don't think the Senate is ready today, without the benefit of hearings, without the benefit of consideration by the subcommittee and full committee, without an extensive debate, to make that determination. I don't know what we should do in each of these circumstances. If we could narrow the scope, if we could put the focus on those who came from Nicaragua, if we could find some middle ground, I might be willing to do that. But I don't see any effort to find a middle ground.

So this is one of these circumstances where we are trying to change a law that is just now going into effect—the first real test we have had in the new immigration bill—where we set a cap on the number of people who come to the country illegally and we subsequently allow to stay here. The first time we come up with a test based on, obviously, very real human drama—in many cases, strong cases by individual families—we are getting ready to set aside the bill that we so recently adopted and grant a rolling amnesty. Apparently, nobody else seems to care, but I care. That is why we have the rules of the Senate as we do, so that one person who cares can be heard, so that there can be a debate.

So I intend to vote against tabling. I hope the vote will be 100 to 0. But it won't change anything. We can vote not to table this amendment 100 times and it won't change anything, because I don't intend to step aside on this issue. Now, we have rules of the Senate. There can be cloture. We can file cloture and we are going to wait the several days that the Senate rules require it to mature.

We can have extensive and thorough debate. This amendment is amendable.

It is amendable with a motion to recommit with instructions. It will be amendable when the second-degree amendment is disposed of. It will be amendable when we vote to name conferees. It will be amendable when we vote to take up the House bill and insert the Senate language. It will be amendable in many different ways. And, until we find a solution, I intend to see that it is amended.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senate will now proceed to vote on a motion to table amendment No. 1253 by the Senator from Florida. On this question, the yeas and nays have been ordered, and the clerk will call the roll.

DEPARTMENTS OF COMMERCE, JUSTICE, AND STATE, THE JUDICIARY, AND RELATED AGENCIES APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 1998

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senate, having received H.R. 2267, the House companion bill to S. 1022, will now proceed to its immediate consideration. All after the enacting clause is stricken, the text of S. 1022, as amended, is inserted. The House bill is read a third time and passed. The Senate insists on its amendment and requests a conference with the House.

The bill (H.R. 2267), as amended, was passed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ROBERTS) appointed Mr. GREGG, Mr. STEVENS, Mr. DOMENICI, Mr. MCCONNELL, Mrs. HUTCHISON, Mr. CAMPBELL, Mr. COCHRAN, Mr. HOLLINGS, Mr. BYRD, Mr. INOUE, Mr. BUMPERS, Mr. LAUTENBERG, and Ms. MIKULSKI conferees on the part of the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, S. 1022 is indefinitely postponed.

Who seeks time?

Mr. FAIRCLOTH. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BRYAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. GREGG). Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Nevada.

Mr. BRYAN. Mr. President, I want to advise the floor leaders it is my intention to request approximately 12 minutes as in morning business to discuss another issue. I don't want to interrupt their flow on the floor, but it looks like this may be an appropriate time to do so.

Mr. FAIRCLOTH. We have no objection whatsoever.

Mr. BRYAN. I ask unanimous consent I might speak as in morning business for a period up to 12 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

RADIATION EFFECTS

Mr. BRYAN. Mr. President, earlier today the Labor Subcommittee of the Senate Appropriations Committee held a hearing on a report prepared by the National Cancer Institute regarding the health effects of fallout from atmospheric testing of nuclear weapons in the 1950's and 1960's.

Today, 35 years after the last atmospheric test, we are just beginning to get a clear picture of the effects of the radioactive fallout from these tests.

While we should obviously continue to do everything we can to help the victims of these tests, I hope we can also learn something from our mistakes in the past.

This August, the National Cancer Institute released the results of its nationwide study of radioactive fallout from atmospheric nuclear tests conducted at the Nevada Test Site in the 1950's and 1960's.

In 1982, Congress directed the Department of Health and Human Services to develop methods to estimate radioactive iodine-131 exposure, to assess thyroid I-131 doses, and to assess risks for thyroid cancer from the exposures.

Ninety atmospheric tests were conducted at the test site mainly in the years 1952, 1953, 1955, and 1957.

All 48 contiguous States received some degree of exposure to radioactive iodine-131 fallout from these atmospheric nuclear bomb tests.

Everyone in those States was exposed.

Let me repeat that—everyone was exposed.

People living hundreds of miles to the north and east of the Nevada Test Site in Montana, Idaho, Utah, South Dakota, and Colorado were exposed.

Within these 5 States, 25 counties had particularly high fall-out exposure ranging from 12.0 to 9.0 rads.

A "rad" is a radiation absorbed dose, which is the amount of radiation absorbed by the tissues in the body.

The tragic conclusion of this study is that children, who lived in these high exposure areas, and who were aged between 3 months and 5 years at the time of the tests were at the greatest risk for iodine-131 exposure.

Since children's thyroids are so small, their exposure was disproportionately higher than adults.

Children who drank contaminated milk—particularly from cows maintained for family use—and which ate pasture vegetation, have an even greater exposure.

The children in this age group exceeded the average per capita thyroid dose by a factor of about 3.7 following the tests because of their greater milk consumption and their smaller thyroids.

After each of the 90 tests, people living in these States were exposed to varying levels of iodine-131—for about 2 months following each test.

This means the air, milk, and other dairy products, eggs and leafy vegetables were all contaminated, and that contamination lingered for a significant period of time after each test.

The National Cancer Institute has concluded from the limited data available on people who were exposed, as children, to iodine-131 from the nuclear tests' fallout that this exposure is linked to thyroid cancer.

NCI estimates between 10,000 to 75,000 people who were exposed as children may develop fallout-associated thyroid cancer during their lifetime.

Nearly all were under 15 years of age at the time of exposure, and 75 percent were under 5 years of age.

NCI is currently working with scientists in Belarus and Ukraine to study thyroid cancer following the Chernobyl nuclear accident in 1986.

Thousands of children exposed to the accident's fallout received radiation doses to their thyroids.

These doses ranged from comparatively small to 10 times higher than U.S. residents received from the Nevada tests in the 1950's and 1960's.

There was a clear increase in thyroid cancer from the Chernobyl accident in this population.

The wide range of radioactive fallout exposures to such a large number of people that resulted in an increase in thyroid cancer will be most helpful in assessing the impact of the Nevada tests on those exposed.

Additionally, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention researchers are studying the health effects of radioactive iodine released from the Hanford, WA nuclear weapons plant in the 1940's and 1950's.

The Hanford study results are to be available in 1998.

The Institute of Medicine [IOM] is currently also working with the Department of Health and Human Services to review the data from the National Cancer Institute's study to assess the risk to the exposed individuals.

The IOM will also develop recommendations for physicians regarding how to treat people who might be at risk of disease because of their I-131 exposure.

These recommendations should be available within 6 to 9 months.

What child growing up in the 1950's and early 1960's was not encouraged to drink as much milk as possible to build strong and healthy bodies? In the 1950's and 1960's, health experts advocated each youngster should consume four glasses of milk each day. No one in those years expected young children living hundreds of miles to the north and east of the Nevada Test Site drinking their milk were going to face a possible increase in thyroid cancer incidence.

But that is the consequence being faced by those exposed.

In addition, it is becoming increasingly clear that some of the scientists and engineers associated with atmospheric testing knew, or at least suspected, that there were health and safety consequences to the fallout.

Some of the Government personnel working on the testing program actually sent their families away from the area during and immediately after tests to protect them from the fallout.

A story reported yesterday in the New York Times is even worse, the Atomic Energy Commission apparently warned the Eastman Kodak Co. and other film companies of planned tests, so that the film companies could take steps to protect their film stocks from being damaged.

Somehow, the AEC decided it was more important to protect photographic film, than the health and safety of tens of thousands of citizens who were exposed and who, today, we know will suffer thyroid and other genetic problems as a consequence of that exposure.

The last atmospheric test took place 35 years ago, but signs of atmospheric testing are still present in many areas, including southern Nevada.

Recently, in fact, scientists discovered the presence of radioactive contamination in dust in some attics in Las Vegas.

Nevadans have had plenty of experience with the Department of Energy.

During the cold war, we were proud to do our patriotic duty, and host the Nevada Test Site, the United States' major continental nuclear weapons testing facility.

We were all very proud of our participation in what we expected to be an exciting new age, we thought we were at the center of a new technology that would dominate the 21st century.

Of course, as these recent studies have shown pretty clearly, we were all completely ignorant of the tremendous dangers and costs of the nuclear age, and most of the captivating ideas of the 1950's never developed. In point of fact, nuclear power is on the decline.

Nuclear plants close regularly, due either to serious safety related problems, or dismal economic performance.

The legacy of the nuclear age, however, is still with us, the tens of thousands metric tons of commercial high-level nuclear waste, and an incomprehensible volume of defense related waste generated by the production of nuclear weapons.

Over Nevada's vigorous objections, our State has been targeted as the final resting place for these dangerous, poisonous wastes.

The Department of Energy, and the nuclear power industry, have spent millions of dollars attempting to convince Nevadans that they have nothing to fear, that this waste is perfectly safe, and poses no threat to our health and safety.

Unfortunately, Nevadans have had enough experience with the Department of Energy and its scientists to hold a certain amount of skepticism regarding these claims.

The report being reviewed by the committee today is yet another confirmation that the Department has historically cultivated a culture where concerns for public health and safety are subsumed to the pressure to reach the agencies ultimate goals, whether it is the development of nuclear weapons, or the disposal of commercial high-level nuclear waste.

The Yucca Mountain project is no exception.

In the 15 years Nevada has fought being designated as the repository for commercial high-level nuclear waste, we have seen repeated instances of the Department ignoring or explaining away scientific findings that do not conform to its repository program.

Signs of water percolating through the repository site were repeatedly ignored.

Seismic activity in the area, including an earthquake that did serious damage to the buildings housing project offices, were dismissed.

For every objection that has been raised, the Department has been quick to assure us that they are meaningless, and that even if there were problems, the engineers can design around them.

Recently, several new discoveries have added to the uncertainty about the suitability of Yucca Mountain as a repository site, and called into question the models and assumptions Yucca Mountain scientists have relied upon for more than a decade.

For example, analysis of material removed from the exploratory tunnel at Yucca Mountain have shown pockets of unusually high concentrations of chlorine 136, a radioactive isotope generated by nuclear detonations.

The presence of high levels of chlorine 136 at the proposed repository level is assumed to result from penetration of water from the surface, where it picked up chlorine 136 fallout from atmospheric testing at the NTS 50 years ago.

This rapid penetration of water through the welded tuff of Yucca Mountain contradicts the Department of Energy's assumptions about the nature of the geology at the site, and calls into question the validity and accuracy of much of the characterization effort.

Despite repeated assurances by the Department of Energy and the nuclear power industry that the nature and behavior of radioactivity and radionuclides are well understood and predictable, and thus nothing for Nevadans to worry about, evidence continues to mount that the scientific community actually knows little about this field.

Just 1 month ago, scientists studying the Nevada Test Site, an area adjacent to Yucca Mountain, discovered that plutonium resulting from underground nuclear testing have migrated underground far faster and further than previously expected—nearly a mile in less than 30 years.

The empirical data collected at the site contradicts the models that are being relied on by the Department to evaluate the environmental impacts of underground testing at the Nevada Test Site.

The cumulative effect of these, and other, scientific assurances that later prove to be inaccurate, misleading, or even outright dishonest has been to seriously damage the credibility of the Department of Energy and the nuclear industry in Nevada, and elsewhere across the Nation.

Nevadans, and many others, will continue to suffer the consequences of our failure to properly understand the nature and effects of radioactivity in the past.

Despite these historical lessons, however, the proponents of nuclear energy continue to press forward with their misguided efforts to bolster the industry at the expense of the health and safety of the public.

The most recent incarnation of the industry's avarice is the nuclear waste legislation currently working its way through this Congress. In a misguided attempt to remove waste from reactor sites, where it can be, according to the industry itself, safely stored for the next 100 years, the industry has proposed shipping 80,000 metric tons of its waste on 16,000 shipments through 43 States to Nevada where it will be stored in exactly the same type of storage currently available and, in some instances, currently in use at existing reactor sites. This unprecedented shipping campaign will bring shipments of high-level nuclear waste within 1 mile of the homes of more than 50 million Americans, creating potential public health and environmental consequences of staggering proportions.

The nuclear power industry's attempt to ship its waste to above-ground storage in Nevada is corporate welfare at its worst. In a desperate attempt to rejuvenate a dying industry, the nuclear power industry is willing to sacrifice the health and safety of millions of Americans to improve its bottom line.

Mr. President, there is simply no need to move this dangerous, poisonous waste at this time. The Nuclear Regulatory Commission and the industry itself concedes the storage of the waste at reactor sites is safe. The Nuclear Waste Technical Review Board, an independent oversight board created by Congress, has said that centralized interim storage is presently not needed.

The nuclear power industry's waste legislation has passed the Senate and I fear will likely pass the House in the near future. Fortunately, President Clinton has committed to veto this ill-advised piece of legislation, and we are fortunate to have the votes in the Senate to sustain the veto.

It is time for the nuclear utilities to give up their efforts to establish interim storage in Nevada and enter into serious negotiations with the Department of Energy regarding support for the continued storage of high-level nuclear waste at reactor sites until an objective, defensible characterization of Yucca Mountain can be completed.

In the 1950's and 1960's, most public policymakers could not understand the terrible consequences that would result from atmospheric testing. Today, more than 40 years later, every taxpayer is contributing to compensate those downwind victims for the cancer, genetic, and other health effects from the fallout of those tests. It would be inexcusable for us, with what we know today, to create yet another situation where future legislators, our successors, 50, 100, or even 150 years from now will need to make similar arrangements for new generations of victims of the legislation the nuclear power industry is asking us to approve in this Congress.

Mr. President, I yield the floor, and if there is any time remaining, I yield back the remainder of the time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who seeks time? The Senator from North Carolina.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

VA-HUD APPROPRIATIONS

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, one of the pleasures and honors I have in this body is to serve as the chairman of the appropriations subcommittee that funds veterans' programs, housing, as well as environment, space, science, and emergency management.

On the veterans side, we have a very heavy responsibility to the people who, in my State and throughout the country, have been willing to put their lives on the line to protect our freedoms, and I think they deserve the best that we can give them. That is why in past years, I have been very disappointed and troubled at this administration's approach to funding for veterans' medical care. Quite frankly, they were willing to sacrifice these important programs, at least on paper, in order to pretend that they were reaching a balanced budget. I think that is just plain wrong.

I was also disappointed earlier this spring when the President and the congressional leadership proposed to take $300 million out of veterans' medical care as a part of the budget agreement. I said at the time that we would not let that happen.

I am pleased to report that last night in a bipartisan, bicameral session, the Senate and House negotiators on both sides, Democrats and Republicans, approved a measure that provides more funding than the President, more funding than the budget agreement for veterans' medical care. The conference agreement that we hope will soon be signed into law provides $17 billion next year for medical care for veterans. This level of funding ensures that we keep our promise of continued care to all eligible veterans.

We will also be able to continue our efforts to improve the VA medical system, which has been under great stress and which we hope is making progress toward more efficient, more effective, more humane care and treatment for our veterans who need care.

It is sometimes easy during peace and prosperity to forget temporarily the promises that we as a country have made to those veterans who were willing to risk their lives to protect us. I said throughout this budget process I did not intend to let us forget, and I hope we will move quickly to send this bill to the President.

In addition to the tough battles we fought in the veterans' medical care area and the difficult decisions we made, we had to make some tough decisions and take some difficult actions with respect to housing. Over the last several weeks, many elderly residents in public housing complexes in Missouri and I am sure in other States represented in this body, have expressed their deep concern about the possibility of their housing subsidies being ended.

HUD was required by law and did send notices to thousands of senior citizens across the country over the last few months telling them that their rent subsidies were scheduled to expire this fall. That is required by law. But for most of the seniors who received the notices, it is very frightening because it threatens to tell most of them they will no longer be able to afford their homes and will be forced to move.

I visited residences of complexes in St. Louis and Springfield, MO, and listened as the residents described their fears about losing their rent subsidies. I told them I would do everything in my power to help them stay in their homes.

I am pleased to announce once again that last night the House-Senate conference agreed to provisions that we crafted, that I crafted to protect elderly housing. During the years I have spent as a member of the Senate Banking Committee and now as chairman of the VA, HUD, and Independent Agencies Appropriations Subcommittee, I made preservation of affordable, low-income housing, especially for seniors, for the elderly, a top priority and a long-term commitment.

Unlike the administration which, for some reason, continues to emphasize the possibility of vouchers as a one-size-fits-all approach to housing needs of low-income families and the elderly, I believe that elderly housing complexes, which are good, safe places, comfortable for the elderly residents, should be maintained. Frankly, it is terrifying to seniors who may have lived 10 to 15 to 20 years in the same housing complex to tell them suddenly they must move: "Here is a voucher, go out and pound the pavement and try to find housing."

Mr. President, if you have visited these complexes, and I am sure you have them in your State as we have them in all of our States, all you have to do is go into one of those complexes and meet with the residents, many of them in walkers, using canes, in wheelchairs and think just a minute of giving those people vouchers and asking them to go out and look for housing.

What a ridiculous thought that is. We are not going to force them to go out and look for housing.

How many of us who have parents and grandparents or other relatives in elderly housing complexes want to see them torn away from their communities and forced to find new housing? I really believe that seniors should be treated differently from young persons eligible for subsidized housing.

While the trend in recent years has been to provide vouchers for recipients to use for housing of their choice in a variety of neighborhoods, many seniors—most of whom I talked to—prefer to remain in senior-only housing complexes. I think it makes sense for them to remain in communities where they have grown accustomed to living and have made friends and feel comfortable.

As chairman of the Senate appropriations subcommittee, I included language in the HUD-VA bill that was agreed to last night which does allow these seniors to remain in their homes, to remain in their complexes. Specifically, we provided for the renewal of project-based section 8 contracts at a rate affordable to the elderly.

Good, affordable elderly housing, more than just an example of a successful private-public partnership, is a community of people who live together and care about each other. We cannot afford to lose this type of housing. We cannot afford to lose the type of community this housing represents.

Washington sometimes loses sight of people and the importance of local communities. But I do not plan to let Washington lose sight of these elderly housing communities or the people who live in them now or in the future.

Mr. President, I thank the Chair. I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. SANTORUM). The clerk will call the roll. The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I will use my leader time to make a statement on a couple of issues.

TRIBUTE TO GEN. JOHN SHALIKASHVILI

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I have very mixed feelings about the decision announced yesterday at the White House. After nearly four decades of exemplary service to his adopted Nation, Gen. John Shalikashvili will step down as the top soldier of our Nation's military forces. We understand that by statute he is required to do so, but it does not make the reality any less of a disappointment.

With his 39 years of distinguished service, General Shali, as he has come to be affectionately known, has earned the respect and admiration of men and women in uniform, the Nation and indeed the whole world. His brand of quiet, steady leadership will be greatly missed.

The General Shali story is as unusual as it is remarkable. Born in Warsaw, Poland, on June 27, 1936, John Shalikashvili was just 3 years old when Hitler's tanks rolled into his homeland. Five years later, Stalin's troops invaded Poland from the east. His family fled to Berlin, Germany, after World War II and then later moved to Peoria, IL, when John Shalikashvili was 16 years old. He graduated from Peoria High School in 1954 and received a degree in mechanical engineering from Bradley University 4 years later.

General Shali began his extraordinary military career in an ordinary way—as a draftee in 1958.

He graduated from officer candidate school a year later and was commissioned a second lieutenant in the Army. During the next 23 years, General Shalikashvili served in a variety of command and staff positions before becoming a brigadier general in 1982.

In addition to serving on the Army staff, Shali served in Germany as an assistant division commander in the 1st Armored Division. In 1986, he was promoted to major general, and, from 1987 to 1989, he served as Commander of the 9th Infantry Division in Fort Lewis, WA.

In 1989, he was promoted to lieutenant general and returned to Germany to serve as the deputy commander in chief of the Seventh Army. Then, in 1991, he was selected to command Operation Provide Comfort, the relief operation that returned hundreds of thousands of Kurdish refugees to northern Iraq.

In 1991, he became the Assistant to the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and later served as the Supreme Allied Commander in Europe and the commander in chief of the U.S. European Command from June 1992 until October 1993.

On October 25, 1993, Gen. John Shalikashvili completed his rise to the top of the military. President Clinton appointed him to serve as the 13th Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. In that position, he has served as the principal military adviser to the President, the Secretary of Defense, and the National Security Council. During that tenure as Chairman, Shali was integral to the United States-led efforts to restore democracy in Haiti, enforce sanctions against Iraq, and keep peace in Bosnia.

His guidance, his commitment, and dedication truly made a difference in each of these and more than 40 other missions in which our troops participated over the last 4 years.

In addition to his extraordinary operational successes, the general has also made significant contributions to improving the Department of Defense. He was instrumental in adjusting our military forces to post-cold-war realities and budget levels, always ensuring that the troops received the best equipment and training in the world.

There is not a single soldier in our military today who has not benefited from the concern General Shali has consistently displayed for his or her well-being. His commitment to improving the quality of life for those serving in the Armed Forces has been second to none, and I am sure that they, like the rest of their fellow Americans, salute him.

I think his Commander in Chief best expressed the high regard in which General Shali is held. In his comments at General Shali's farewell ceremony yesterday, President Clinton stated:

When future students look back upon his time, they will rank John Shali as among the greatest chairmen of the Joint Chiefs of Staff America ever had.

Mr. President, on behalf of the U.S. Senate, the men and women in uniform, and millions of his countrymen, I concur with President Clinton's assessment and thank General Shali for his 39 years of service to his country. I wish him and his wife, Joan, the very best as they begin a new chapter in their lives in the State of Washington.

THE COMPREHENSIVE TEST BAN

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I come before the Senate this afternoon to talk briefly about the Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty submitted to the Senate by President Clinton last week. This treaty represents another useful and important step toward reducing the spread of nuclear weapons. I stand ready to do all that I can to ensure that the Senate considers the CTBT in a timely manner and votes to allow the United States to join 145 other signatories of this treaty to put an end to nuclear testing.

It was on July 16, 1945, at a site called Trinity in the desert near Alamogordo, NM, that the United States conducted the first test of an atomic bomb. In a fraction of a second, the detonation not only released over the isolated test site an amount of energy equivalent to what we consume in the entire United States in 30 seconds—it also changed the world. The nuclear age had loudly begun. For decades to come, humanity would be forced to grapple with the consequences borne out of what occurred at Trinity.

Much has happened since that first test in the New Mexico desert.

The United States was quickly joined in the nuclear club by Russia and several others. We saw the onset of the cold war and an arms race between the United States and the Soviet Union. As each country strove to keep pace with the other, the United States and Russia engaged in a buildup of thousands of nuclear weapons with a destructive power unprecedented in human history.

The United States would go on to conduct more than 1,000 additional nuclear tests; and the Russians more than 700. Several other countries would carry out a total of roughly 300 tests of nuclear weapons.

The Russians would test the largest weapon ever designed by mankind—a monstrous device that, in a split second, produced enough energy to power the entire United States for a whole day. At the height of the cold war, the United States and the Russians had deployed between them roughly 60,000 nuclear weapons.

Taken together, these frightening developments would make a four decade old comment by the preeminent scientist of the 20th century, Albert Einstein, even more poignant. Einstein played a large role in the conceptual development of the atom bomb. Moreover, in 1939, in a letter he sent to President Roosevelt, Einstein urged the President to begin a nuclear weapons program immediately. Later in life, after observing the early stages of the arms buildup and the development of ever more destructive weapons, Einstein commented, "I made one great mistake in my life, when I signed the letter to President Roosevelt recommending that atom bombs be made."

Fortunately, the outlook has improved markedly since the darkest days of the cold war. The United States and Russia have cooperated repeatedly during the past several years to reduce the nuclear threat. Each country has ratified the START I Treaty.

Following President Clinton's lead, the Senate ratified the START II Treaty, and we hope the Russians will follow suit by year's end. If START II is implemented, each side will reduce its strategic arsenal down to about 3,500 deployed weapons. In addition, once START II enters into force, Presidents Clinton and Yeltsin pledged to immediately begin negotiations on START III. Under the terms of the Helsinki agreement, START III would establish ceilings of as low as 2,000 strategic weapons.

While much has been done to reduce the threat posed by nuclear weapons, much remains to be done. And, President Clinton's submission of the Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty represents a useful step in the right direction.

The CTBT prohibits any test involving a nuclear explosion, regardless of the test's purpose, size, or location. On behalf of the United States, the President was the first to sign this treaty last September. He would subsequently be joined by representatives from more than 140 other nations.

We will soon hear from the usual critics of arms control, voicing objections to the treaty that are as predictable as they are likely. They will say the CTBT is unverifiable. They will say that it will lead to the inevitable erosion of our nuclear weapons capability. And, they will be wrong on both counts. Although we will have plenty of time to thoroughly address their objections in the days ahead, I will briefly address each of those criticisms.

As to the verifiability of the Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty, this is a familiar refrain uttered by those who oppose arms control agreements in any form. The treaty's verification regime includes a comprehensive international monitoring system composed of hundreds of seismological, radionuclide, hydroacoustic, and infrasound sensors spread out all over the globe. This network is backed up by the ability of Members to conduct onsite inspections of questionable activities. This combination should be more than sufficient to deter would-be cheaters and, if deterrence fails, catch those who try to violate the treaty's restrictions.

As to the concern that CTBT will erode our nuclear capability, I have 4.5 billion reasons why that will not be the case this year and tens of billions more reasons in subsequent years. Last week, the administration reached an important agreement with our weapons development labs. These labs are staffed by the world's foremost nuclear weapons experts. The labs stated that if they are provided with $4.5 billion this year and similar amounts in each subsequent year, they will be able to conduct a program that will ensure with a high level of confidence the safety and reliability of the nuclear weapons in our stockpile. In short, the cessation of nuclear testing need not erode our nuclear capability.

The CTBT is an important step down the path toward a safer world. In simple terms, the United States, the country with one of the largest and certainly the most sophisticated nuclear weapons arsenals in the world, has the most to gain from freezing the competition in place. Countries already possessing nuclear weapons will have a difficult time making qualitative and quantitative improvements to their existing arsenals. And as for countries without nuclear weapons, the CTBT will place an additional hurdle in their path if they seek to develop and deploy such weapons.

I do not believe we can rest with the submission, and, hopefully, ratification of this treaty.

Many more challenges face us if we are to reduce to acceptable levels the threat posed by nuclear weapons. For example, despite the fact that the cold war ended years ago, the United States and Russia still maintain at least 3,000 strategic nuclear warheads poised and ready to launch at a moment's notice. As noted by former Senator Sam Nunn, one of the most distinguished and insightful defense experts to ever serve in this Chamber, while this practice may have been necessary in the cold war, "today it represents a dangerous anachronism." Moreover, tens of tons of nuclear materials and thousands of nuclear weapons remain outside international controls.

Tens of thousands of highly trained employees of the Russian nuclear complex, each armed with the ability to design and build nuclear weapons, go unpaid for months at a time. Future security measures must be designed to speak to these concerns as well.

While I will be doing all I can to ensure smooth ratification of the CTBT in the Senate, I will also be attempting to help design measures that speak to these other security problems. Outside experts such as former Senator Nunn, General Lee Butler, the last Commander in Chief of the now-disbanded Strategic Air Command, and Dr. Bruce Blair, a thoughtful arms control expert at the Brookings Institution, have all raised these same concerns and begun to design solutions. It is an important opportunity for the Senate, the Pentagon, and the country to begin to consider them.

At Helsinki, the administration acknowledged its awareness of these problems and indicated a commitment to resolve them. Unfortunately, the administration appears to have put the detailed discussion of many of these measures on hold until START II enters force and the START III negotiations begin. I hope the administration would begin exploring these steps today. The only real linkage between START and these other measures is that they both can enhance our security. There is no reason why United States action in one arena should be held in abeyance until the Russians act in another.

In summary, Mr. President, I look forward to working with the administration and the other supporters of the CTBT in this body to ensure that the merits of this treaty are fully aired. If that happens, I am confident the CTBT will be ratified, and another step will be taken toward turning back the clock that unfortunately began ticking 52 years ago at a place called Trinity.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Wyoming.

Mr. THOMAS. Are we in morning business?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

CAMPAIGN FINANCE REFORM

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President, we have spent several days recently and this week talking about campaign finance. I would like to share some of my thoughts. It is one of those issues that have become so complicated and so convoluted that it seems to me it is very difficult for a person to really bring it down to the simple basics, particularly if you haven't listened to all of it.

Proponents of campaign finance reform bills will have you believe this is the top issue and in the interest of Americans, that everyone on Main Street is waiting breathlessly for some significant action that would be more important than tax relief or the balanced budget—no. I think that is not so. When I go back to Wyoming nearly every week, people don't come and talk to me about campaign finance. They want to discuss health care, they want to discuss public lands, they want to discuss taxes.

This is not to say that it is not important, certainly not to say that I am against finance reform, because I think there should be some thoughtful changes in terms of campaign financing. I just don't believe that it is a catastrophic issue. I don't believe it is an issue that is the most important thing on our agenda as it sometimes is termed.

The steam behind the issue, as a matter of fact, is generally that of enforcing the laws that are now on the books. That is what the hearings were about. That is what brought it up. It is not new laws that are needed—enforce the ones that are now there, not merely adding more to be unenforced.

I am in favor of campaign finance reform. I have been very involved in political systems, as a matter of fact, long before I was ever in elective office, because it seemed to me over a period of years that it is pretty clear that politics and campaigns are how we govern ourselves. That is how you and I in our precincts decide the big issues in terms of government. So I just think we need to make it the kind of a process in which people can be involved, the kind of a process in which the first amendment opportunities to speak are there and are extended to everyone—not just limited to the press.

On the other hand, we can't overlook the defects we saw in the last campaign cycle. The answer, however, is not to marshal the powers of the Federal Government and increase governmental intervention. We can reintroduce principle, we can introduce integrity and serious compliance into this important function of governing ourselves by strengthening and enforcing the reporting and disclosure laws, by limiting the influence of soft money on the national level, by requiring that a majority of the funds in a campaign come from the district in which the election takes place, by banning compulsory contributions.

I don't think we ought to pass a bill just because we want to go through the rhetorical process, just because we want to shift the attention from not adhering to the law to writing new laws.

We are talking about being home, and I hear more than anything else in Wyoming, "Wait a minute, the issue is not new law; the issue is enforcing the laws we have." I think disclosure is the most important of the election issues. In that case, voters can determine where the money comes from to go to a candidate and make their own judgment as to whether or not that is reasonable. It is a simple way to bring our system of privately financed campaigns on track by strengthening and enforcing existing disclosure laws.

Privately financed—I think it is a mistake to move more and more to how the taxpayers finance campaigns. It seems to me that has proven not to be useful. Candidates in parties must offer fuller and more timely disclosure of campaign receipts and spending activities. Reports must be prompt and early. Now there is a period of time between the last reporting and the election in which donations and contributions are not reported until after the election is over. That is wrong. We ought to change that. Candidates' reports are often late and partial and voters are kept from knowing what they should know about contributions prior to the time of voting. People need to be better informed. We can do that and we should.

Soft money—I am concerned about the increased amount of soft money being spent on a national level. I say again, I was very involved in my party prior to being elected, and I saw us use money of that kind to do things that I thought were useful, and continue to think are useful—party building, voter identification, voter registration, getting people to vote and participate in government. That is what soft money is for.

Unfortunately, the receipts for campaigns have increased some 200 percent from the 1992 Presidential election to the 1996 cycle. That is a little scary. That is a lot. This money is not subject to the kind of disclosure requirements and restrictions in the kind of things that so-called hard money is. Voters have the right to be suspect of this kind of dough, it seems to me, since there are really not stringent accountability standards. We must develop, I think, a contribution limit on soft money. It doesn't need to be small. It can be healthy, but it should not be unlimited, and it should be for party building.

We talk sometimes disdainfully about politics. Politics is how we govern ourselves. That is how you and I who live in our precincts are able to make an impact. I feel very strongly about that.

Fundraising in the district—pretty evident that is the important thing. I support the idea of having at least 50 percent of the money that goes into the campaign come from the district from which the candidate runs.

Now, I am the first to admit—and that is one of the difficulties with all kinds of election controls and election restrictions—there are ways to go around that. In my State there are large companies that run mines, for example, that contribute to campaigns from out-of-state headquarters. They will simply contribute from instate headquarters, and it will be the same money. But, nevertheless it is important. I think there is a great shift of money from one place to another outside of the eligible voters, simply because of interests that are somewhere else, that go to this campaign. I suggest that at least 50 percent come from the area in which the candidates come.

Compulsory dues being used for campaigns I think is a real mistake. Labor unions are the only ones that really are able to do that. I think it certainly ought to be voluntary on the part of the member whether or not those dues are used for that purpose. There are some polls recently that say that is greatly supported, 4 to 1, by members of unions. I think that is right. They should not be restricted from using their money for that purpose if they choose to, but they need to choose.

Mr. President, in summary, voting is one of the highest privileges of being a citizen. Not only is it a privilege, it is an obligation and a responsibility if we are to have a government of the people, by the people and for the people, then the people must participate, must be given an opportunity to participate.

It is ironic to me, it seems to me we are in a time where we have the technical ability to have more information available to more people than ever in history. Can you imagine what it was like to vote 100 years ago? How much do you think people knew about national elections? Very little, I suspect. Now we know anything that happens in the world, and we know it in 10 minutes. Yet we seem not to have the kind of participation that we really ought to have in a citizen government. That is what we ought to be striving to have as we deal with election finance—voters being responsible, voters fulfilling their obligation, voters being knowledgeable, and voters being able to choose.

One of the real meaningful ways, of course, is that individuals can contribute to that point of view that they support. We should work hard to ensure that campaign system is free of some of its current laws and yet open and free and not governed in every detail by some bureau somewhere that decides what you can say in an ad. Those kind of things are not useful and, indeed in my opinion, move us in the wrong direction.

I hope we continue to work on this issue. I hope we do some things. I hope we stay away from the convoluted notion that we ought to have somebody in some bureaucracy, somewhere, manage all of the election activities. Here again, these kind of things belong in our communities, they belong in our States, they belong in our towns, they belong in our school boards. That is where they ought to be.

I yield the floor.

SETTING GOVERNMENT LIMITS

Mr. BROWNBACK. Mr. President, I rise today to speak on two bills that I have introduced aimed at limiting the size of Government and restricting its growth. One reduces the Federal Government by restricting the ability of Congress to spend money, and the other limits Government by sunseting the Internal Revenue Code.

First, I will discuss the Economic Growth and Debt Burden Reduction Act. Although I have only been in Congress a short time, I have reached an inescapable conclusion, and that is that Congress is much better at exercising fiscal recklessness than fiscal restraint. Accordingly, I have authored legislation that specifically restricts Congress' ability to embark on spending sprees by making it illegal to use excess Government revenues for anything other than debt reduction or tax cuts.

Congress has historically been wholly unable to exercise fiscal restraints when given resources in excess of the current demands of the Government. I believe we need to limit the size of the Government, and this bill forces it to do so.

Mr. President, we are going to soon approach a historic opportunity. For the first time since 1969 we are going to balance the budget. It was the last time we actually had revenues and expenditures equivalent. Now is the time for us to begin this great national debate as to, once you go into balance and you start moving into surplus, how should those surpluses be spent. In other words, whenever revenues exceed expenditures, what should they be spent upon.

We can say go on another spending spree and spend more money, or we can pay the debt down, or we can say we will cut taxes further on an American public that is taxed too heavily.

The bill that I put forward puts it this way: If revenues are projected to exceed the agreement levels, those excess revenues are immediately captured and reserved for tax cuts. If tax cutting legislation is not enacted, the additional revenues revert to deficit or debt reduction. This prevents any unanticipated revenues from being plowed back into higher expenditures and higher spending. And it seems to me that is what the American public wants us to be. They want us to pay down this massive $5.4 trillion debt—and we get from deficit into debt, start paying the debt down—and if we can't agree on cutting taxes further, then we can apply that immediately and require that it go toward the debt reduction. So we can reduce the mortgage on America, which is on our children. They are going to have to reduce the overall tax burden in this country today, which is about 38 percent of the average two-wage earner, two-child family—a 38-percent tax rate. That is at all levels of government, including Federal, State, and local.

SUNSETTING THE INTERNAL REVENUE CODE

Mr. President, the other bill I introduced would sunset the Internal Revenue Code, except for the section relating to Social Security and Medicare. As my colleagues know, last week, the Senate Finance Committee held hearings on the Internal Revenue Service, and during those hearings, the Congress and the American people heard detailed accounts of endless cases of the IRS's abuse of power.

I believe the IRS needs to be reformed and, more fundamentally, I believe our Tax Code needs to be changed. The current Tax Code, along with the regulations, consists of more than 10 million words. It is impressive in size and oppressive in operation. It is antigrowth, antifamily, and it is not the sort of environment that we can put forward economically and hope to have the next century be another American century. That is why I have joined with Congressman PAXON on the House side in sponsoring a bill that would sunset the current Internal Revenue code by the end of the year 2000.

What we hope to do with this is start the great national debate about what sort of tax system should be in place. Should we go to a flat tax or a consumption-based tax, or truly do tax simplification? But let's set the time-frame and a goal and work toward it like we have done on balancing the budget, when we said that, in 7 years, we would balance the budget and then we will figure out how we are going to get that. That is how we have done and that is why we are going to get it balanced. Let's do the same on fundamental tax reform. Let's set a time certain in which to accomplish it and let's begin the great national debate.

I hope a number of my colleagues will join me in sponsoring this effort to sunset this Tax Code and start the next millennium in this Nation with a taxation system that is pro-family, pro-growth and pro-American. We can do that and start this great debate now. I hope my colleagues will join in sponsoring both of those bills.

Mr. President, I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BROWNBACK). Without objection, it is so ordered.

CAMPAIGN FINANCE REFORM

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, few if any issues before the Senate this year are more important than campaign finance reform.

Americans from all walks of life are fed up with the current campaign financing system and its excessive reliance on unlimited contributions that make conflict of interest a way of life. They are fed up with a campaign process driven by the high cost of television commercials. They are fed up with candidates who spend more time raising money from special interests instead of serving the public interest.

And who can blame them?

In recent years, the amount of money spent in Presidential campaigns has doubled every 4 years. Senate and House races now cost millions of dollars. Election campaigns have become more and more negative, with misleading TV spots that traffic in half-truths or outright falsehoods. And corrupting and corroding it all are the massive abusers of the current loophole-ridden campaign financing laws.

The constant hunt for campaign dollars demeans our electoral process and undermines the very foundation of our country. We have the best political system that money can buy, and it's a disgrace to everything our democracy stands for.

The time for change is now. We must take elections off the auction block. We must limit campaign spending. We must return the election process to the people, in which every voter is equal, no matter what their income, or what job they hold, or where they live.

Democrats understand this. Democrats in the Senate are unanimously committed to campaign finance reform that limits campaign spending. All 45 Democrats in the U.S. Senate have pledged their support for the bipartisan McCain-Feingold bill. President Clinton, too, has clearly stated his unequivocal support for this important legislation. He has taken the extraordinary step of announcing his intention to use his authority under the U.S. Constitution to require Congress to meet in special session if it fails to take up this urgently needed reform.

But where are the Republicans?

Have they united behind a proposal—any proposal?

Are they willing to join with Democrats to clean up the cesspool, and limit the amount of money and the power of money in American elections?

Sadly, the answer is "no."

The Republican prescription for these flagrant abuses is more money in politics, not less. They prescribe an even larger overdose of money for elections, in which their friends in big businesses and their lobbyists and special interests can write more checks and fatter checks to the Republican Party.

Their recipe for campaign finance reform is to tilt the balance even more unfairly against American workers. They want to increase the power of large corporations, and squash even the limited power that American workers have today. Republicans want to handcuff labor unions in the battle for a living wage, for decent health care for working families, and a secure retirement for the elderly. They want to silence union support for candidates who stand up and speak out on those basic issues.

In short, Republicans want to impose a gag rule on American workers.

The Republican antiworker scheme is a poison pill for campaign finance reform, and the Republicans admit it. The majority leader, Senator LOTT, told the Washington Times that his amendment would kill the bill because Democrats would mount a filibuster. He said, "I've set it up where they're going to be doing the filibustering."

Columnist Robert Novak agrees. Writing about the Republican amendment to impose a gag rule on workers, he says its "primary purpose in Congress is not to win Republican supporters for campaign reform but to lose Democratic supporters Republicans are divided between the many who bash labor to kill reform and the few who appease labor to save reform."

The Lott amendment is a killer amendment, because it unfairly punishes working Americans and their unions for participating in the elections. The Lott amendment bars unions from collecting dues from any workers—even members who voluntarily join the union and participate in setting its goals—unless those workers sign an authorization form to allow part of their union dues to be spent for political purposes.

This isn't reform—it's revenge. It's a blatant attempt to punish working Americans for their role in the 1996 elections—and an equally blatant attempt to silence working Americans in future elections.

Republicans intend this procedure to cripple any union's ability to participate in elections. They know that imposing such a requirement on any organization would have the same result. Yet, they don't propose it for the National Rifle Association or the big tobacco companies or the American Farm Bureau or the Chamber of Commerce. They don't ask corporations to get permission slips from their shareholders before the corporation can spend funds for political purposes. The Lott amendment should be called The Rampant Republican Hypocrisy Act of 1997. How hypocritical can they get?

The real measure of whether Republicans are serious about campaign finance reform is whether they will support honest limits on campaign spending.

The McCain-Feingold bill that all 45 Senate Democrats support will ban so-called soft money—the millions of dollars in campaign funds that today are virtually unregulated. This immense loophole in our current campaign laws allows contributions worth hundreds of thousands of dollars to be made to political parties. The parties then spend the money to help elect candidates for Federal office. While the amount of money that an individual voter can give to a candidate is limited to $1,000 per campaign, candidates for Federal office can receive millions through the back door using this soft money loophole.

Clearly, any legislation worth the name reform must ban this shameful practice.

In addition, the McCain-Feingold bill limits the ability of outside groups to run ads supporting specific candidates. This practice has become another source of soft money for Federal candidates. If you don't have enough money in your own campaign to pay for your ads, then get a friendly outside group to support them.

The McCain-Feingold bill says that organizations are free to run ads on genuine issues. That's free speech, and it's protected under the Constitution. But if an outside group runs an ad supporting a specific candidate, then the cost of that ad should be counted as part of the candidate's campaign, and should be subject to the Federal election laws.

The McCain-Feingold bill also increases disclosure requirements for campaigns, so that the public will be able to see much more clearly the sources and the amounts of all contributions that any candidates accept.

It is time for Congress to stop talking about reform and start acting to make it happen. This bill is not a perfect bill. All Senators can find some provision in it that they do not like. But the McCain-Feingold bill is an honest reform and the best hope to end the most flagrant abuses under the current system. I urge Democrats and Republicans alike to support this bill and send it on to President Clinton, so that we can clean up the current mess and restore the voters' shattered confidence in our democracy.

It is time to take our campaigns away from the special interests and give them back to the people. It is time to make our democracy worthy of its name.

Mr. President, I am not sure whether these have been printed in the RECORD so I will ask unanimous consent to print in the RECORD two editorials, one from the Washington Post and one from the New York Times, that comment on our Republican leader's amendments and parliamentary maneuvering so as to require the first and only vote that will be available to the Members of the Senate to occur on his particular gag rule on American workers.

The Washington Post says in the first sentence:

Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott, having magnanimously allowed campaign finance reform legislation to come to the floor, now proposes to kill it with an amendment affecting the use of labor union dues for political purposes. . . .

Everyone understands what kind of vote this is—a vote not on labor law but on campaign finance at one remove.

They have it right.

And the New York Times points out in its editorial:

Trent Lott, as expected, has come up with a perverse stratagem to kill campaign finance reform this year. . . . Mr. Lott's purpose today is to scuttle the bill by making it unacceptable to Democrats. . . .

[Members] should realize that if they let Mr. Lott kill the bill by subterfuge, their criticism of Democratic excesses will be mere opportunism and hollow rhetoric.

I ask unanimous consent that both of these editorials be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the editorials were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Washington Post, Oct. 1, 1997]

LEADER LOTT'S AMENDMENT

Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott, having magnanimously allowed campaign finance reform legislation to come to the floor, now proposes to kill it with an amendment affecting the use of labor union dues for political purposes. He thinks he can summon the votes for the amendment, after which the theory is that the Democrats, who are the principal beneficiaries of labor support, will do the rest of his work for him by halting the underlying bill. The transparency offers him the best of both worlds: The bill will be defeated, but he won't have been the one to have done it.

The amendment would require unions to get the written permission of individual members before spending any of their dues for political purposes. The Paycheck Protection Act, its sponsors call it with mock solicitude. "Our political system depends upon one's freedom to participate without even the slightest degree of compulsion," assistant majority leader Don Nickles says. But in fact under labor law such freedom already exists; there is no such compulsion. No worker in this country can be forced to join a union. In some states, workers covered by union contracts who decline to join can be required to pay the equivalent of union dues, but they already have the right, under a 1988 Supreme Court decision, to have the political portion of those dues refunded. The reform bill would codify that decision; the amendment would go beyond it, not necessarily incapacitating the unions but creating an extra hill for them to climb.

Question One is whether Mr. Lott is right in thinking he has the votes. Everyone understands what kind of vote this is—a vote not on labor law but on campaign finance at one remove. A number of Republicans have indicated support for the reform legislation—perhaps enough, assuming all 45 Democrats also vote no, to set the Lott amendment aside. Do they vote with their leader or do they vote for reform?

Question Two is what happens if Mr. Lott prevails. Once again it is a question of senatorial will. Proponents of reform said before the August recess that they were willing to tie up the Senate—prevent it from taking any or most other action—until they got a clear shot at a clean version of the reform bill. You presume they meant not just a chance to talk for a few days, take a test vote on a defective amendment and quit, rather than that they intend to press for a straight up-or-down majority vote on the bill itself. Do they do it at the risk of violating the accommodative code by which the Senate normally lives, or do they cave? What finally matters most to them? That's what the vote on Leader Lott's amendment will begin to tell.

[From the New York Times, Oct. 1, 1997]

TRENT LOTT'S POISON PILL

Trent Lott, as expected, has come up with a perverse stratagem to kill campaign finance reform this year. The Senate majority leader would add a provision to the McCain-Feingold bill requiring unions to get approval from workers before using their dues or fees for political purposes. The idea might deserve consideration another day, but Mr. Lott's purpose today is to scuttle the bill by making it unacceptable to Democrats.

After months of disclosures about excesses in both parties, all 45 Senate Democrats have joined 4 Republicans to support the McCain-Feingold legislation, which would prohibit unlimited donations to the parties by wealthy individuals, labor unions and corporations. These contributions were at the heart of the access-buying scandals of the Clinton campaign, and they figure in the influence of money from tobacco and other industries on Capitol Hill. Mr. Lott knows there are nearly enough senators to approve the bill, so he wants a poison pill to repel Democrats and shatter its bipartisan support.

Only one additional Republican would be needed to join other Republican backers of reform to block Mr. Lott's plan. But it will not be easy for Republicans to resist his seductive amendment. Even two reformers, Senators John McCain of Arizona and Susan Collins of Maine, support the principle behind the amendment, though they have said they oppose the amendment itself as a threat to reform at this crucial point. Many other Republicans would like to vote for something that would punish labor for its recent campaign spending, particularly the $35 million that paid for attack ads directed at Republican candidates in 30 Congressional races last year.

The McCain-Feingold bill would codify a nine-year-old ruling of the Supreme Court holding that non-union members who pay union dues or fees as a condition of employment are entitled to demand that the fees not be used for political purposes. If Republicans want to vote on a broader provision giving that right to all union members, they should accept the Democratic offer to consider it on another day without the threat of a filibuster. It would only be fair to consider a similar curb requiring corporations, which outspent unions nearly 9 to 1 on politics last year, to get approval from shareholders when making political expenditures.

If the four Republican supporters of McCain-Feingold stand firm, only one other Republican will be needed to defeat Mr. Lott's disingenuous amendment. Senator Alfonse D'Amato of New York, no particular champion of campaign reform in the past, is in for a tough re-election fight next year and has always had the backing of at least some labor unions. Senator Jim Jeffords of Vermont, a long-time champion of campaign reform, should see the wisdom of standing up now. Senator Olympia Snowe of Maine, where campaign finance reform has been approved locally, can join with Senator Collins to save the reform legislation.

Other senators who have shown independence on this issue in the past, like John Chafee of Rhode Island, should also come to the rescue. Down the road, still more Republicans will be needed to save the bill, because it will take 60 votes to thwart a promised filibuster. For now, they should realize that if they let Mr. Lott kill the bill by subterfuge, their criticism of Democratic excesses will be mere opportunism and hollow rhetoric.

CENTRAL AMERICAN REFUGEES

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I would like to speak for just a few moments about a very special provision that is now before the Senate, which we will vote on next week, and that is the amendment which has been proposed by Senator MACK, Senator GRAMM, and myself, which is pending on the D.C. appropriations bill. Without this amendment, thousands of Central American refugee families who fled death squads and persecution in their native lands and found safe haven in the United States would be forced to return to their countries. Republican and Democratic administrations alike promised them repeatedly that they will get their day in court to make their claims to remain in the United States.

Last year's immigration law, however, turned its back on that commitment and treated these families unfairly. This legislation reinstates that promise and guarantees these families the day in court they deserve—that's all, just the day in court they deserve to be able to make their case, which they were promised at the time they came to the United States, by Republican and Democratic administrations.

That particular guarantee was eliminated in the bill last year. It is the attempt by Senator MACK and Senator GRAHAM and myself to maintain that commitment to these families.

Virtually all of these families fled to the United States in the 1980's from El Salvador, Nicaragua, and Guatemala. Many were targeted by death squads and faced persecution at the hands of rogue militias. They came to America to seek safety and freedom for themselves and their children. The Reagan administration, the Bush administration, and the Clinton administration assured them that they could apply to remain permanently in the United States under our immigration laws. They were promised that if they have lived here for at least 7 years and are of good moral character, and if a return to Central America would be an unusual hardship, they would be allowed to remain. They have to meet those particular requirements and if they don't meet those requirements, then they are unable to remain in the United States. Last year's immigration law violated that commitment.

President Clinton has promised to find a fair and reasonable solution for these families, and the administration will use its authority to help as many of them as possible. But Congress must do its part by enacting this corrective legislation.

Earlier in the course of today's debate, our colleague from Texas, Senator GRAMM, talked at some length about this particular amendment and about the situation in which these refugees find themselves. I would like to just clarify and respond to some of the comments that were made earlier in the day.

The first comment was this legislation reverses our immigration laws enacted just last year. The answer is the law was changed on these families retroactively, we took steps, gave guarantees, and then took action. These families had very little to do with it, and now the law was changed. They played by the rules laid out by President Reagan, President Bush, and the Clinton administration. They were promised their day in court. But last year's law went back on that promise. All we are trying to do is to make sure they are given their day in court.

Then the comment was made that this should go through the Immigration Subcommittee, not on an appropriations bill. Our chairman, Senator ABRAHAM, spoke in support of this amendment. He is the chairman of the Immigration Subcommittee, and I am the ranking member. We are in strong support of this particular proposal, as I believe the members of the committee are.

The further point that was made by Senator GRAMM was we need to stop illegal immigration, that this is an amnesty. Mr. President, it is an insult to these hard-working refugees, and their families who have suffered so much pain and hardship and who relied in good faith on the solemn promise they were given to call them illegal aliens or call what we are doing an amnesty. Virtually all of these families are already known to the Immigration and Naturalization Service. They are not illegal aliens working underground. These are families who applied to come to the United States under INS programs, and they are here on a variety of temporary immigration categories. They have acted in accord with what our Government told them to do.

Not all these families will qualify to remain here under the terms of this amendment. They still must meet certain standards that existed in the law before the law was changed and applied retroactively. The Immigration Service estimates that less than half of those who qualify to apply to remain in this country will be approved. These families are law-abiding, tax-paying members of communities in all parts of America. In many, many cases, they have children who were born in this country and who are U.S. citizens by birth. They deserve to be treated fairly.

I just want to take a few moments to talk about who these people are. Zulema Balladares came to the United States from Nicaragua in 1986. If she is deported, she will be leaving her husband and four children who are lawful, permanent residents here in the United States. The Balladares have strong ties to the United States. They own their home, and two of their children serve in the U.S. Army, both served in Bosnia. Their children's ages range from 13 to 21 and have all resided in Miami for the past 10 years, the majority of the children's lives.

Justina Jiron entered the United States 12 years ago along with other family members. She has two U.S. citizen children. Her youngest, a baby, has a need for surgery and ongoing medical treatment as a result of a birth defect. Thankfully, she has health insurance to cover the expenses. However, unfortunately, if she is deported back to Nicaragua, her baby will not be able to obtain the needed medical treatment, because it is not available there. Since this lack of surgery and care is life threatening to the child, the deportation of Ms. Jiron will result in sending a U.S. citizen to death.

Enrique Sequeira, now 21 years old, came to the United States from Nicaragua at the age of 13 in 1988. He has been an outstanding student in the United States and has received numerous academic awards. In addition to excelling academically, Mr. Sequeira is a member of the Junior ROTC and has been involved extensively in community work in Miami. He was granted suspension of deportation November 1996, but the INS appealed that decision based on the Immigration Reform Law of 1996. If the INS appeal is granted, Mr. Sequeira faces disrupting his bright future and returning to a country he has not lived in since he was a young teenager.

Leonte Martinez is extensively involved in community service helping underprivileged youths of all nationalities in several church-sponsored programs. He owns his own home and earns $38,000 a year with medical benefits for his entire family. He has been in the United States since 1986. He is married to a lawful permanent resident, has three children, two of them U.S. citizens. His mother-in-law, a lawful permanent resident, resides with his family. Mr. Martinez was granted suspension of deportation in January 1997. According to the immigration judge, his was the best case she had ever heard. Apparently it was not strong enough, because INS is appealing in order to be able to deport him.

Finally, Roberto Bautista came to the United States 10 years ago from El Salvador. His wife and two children have been in the United States for 12 years. They are a typical upstanding American family. He and his wife hold down two jobs, pay their taxes, have no criminal histories, have health insurance, and have never been on public assistance. Their daughter graduated from the University of Miami and is presently employed by a graphic artist for a newspaper. Their son is an honors student at Georgia Tech, studying engineering, and was awarded the Silver Knight award by the Miami Herald for his outstanding volunteer service.

These individuals are entitled to have administrative process to make a judgment as to their ability to remain here in the United States or whether deportation would serve as a particular hardship. That is all we are attempting to do, under the Mack and Graham amendment. We ought to have enough respect for individuals and individual rights and liberties to treat fairly these families that were subject to extraordinary persecution in their own countries during a time of civil war, where many of these individuals were working and supportive of U.S. efforts to try to build a better country and democratic institutions. Because of the fear of terror, the death squads and others that were loose in the land, they came to the United States and have played by the rules. They were given certain assurances that, if they played by the rules, worked hard and supported their families, they would not be summarily dismissed, they would have a judgment that would be made to see whether they had participated in this country and made an important contribution to the life and well-being of this country.

I have given you a few examples, and there are scores of other examples, where people are giving back to the United States something for all that has been given to them.

I think this is a matter that should be favorably considered.

I am very hopeful that we will have the opportunity to vote on this. I believe we have overwhelming bipartisan support. I think I see a colleague from Pennsylvania, who is a cosponsor of this measure as well.

I yield the floor.

Mr. SANTORUM addressed the Chair.

Mr. LEVIN. Will the Senator from Pennsylvania yield for a unanimous-consent request?

Mr. SANTORUM. Certainly.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that following the statement of the Senator from Pennsylvania, I be recognized to proceed in morning business for up to 20 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BROWNBACK). Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. LEVIN. I thank my friend from Pennsylvania.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Pennsylvania.

THE DEPORTATION OF IMMIGRANTS

Mr. SANTORUM. Mr. President, let me first address the issue the Senator from Massachusetts was referring to with respect to deportation of immigrants in this country. I am a very strong supporter of the Mack amendment. I believe people are entitled to due process and the right to be heard. Promises were made by many administrations and Congresses. These people were welcomed into this country as a result of the political strife that was going on in various countries in Latin America. I think it would be a true injustice for us to have changed the rules in midstream for many, literally thousands of people who are awaiting deportation hearings right now, to deport them in lieu of that hearing.

So I stand with Senator MACK and Senator GRAHAM from Florida, Senator KENNEDY, and Senator ABRAHAM from Michigan in support of the Mack legislation.

CAMPAIGN FINANCE REFORM

Mr. SANTORUM. The subject matter on which I want to spend the majority of my time speaking on is the issue of campaign finance reform. As Members have gotten up to discuss the issue, I think one might be led to the impression that those of us who oppose McCain-Feingold are not for any changes in campaign finance rules and that we don't see that there are some problems there. I want to make it very clear that, as a Senator who is on the Rules Committee, which is the committee that has the jurisdiction on this subject matter—we have been bypassed by these floor maneuvers but we do have jurisdiction and have looked into this subject quite extensively—that I don't know of anybody on the Rules Committee on either side who does not believe the current campaign finance system has some problems with it and there are things that we can do to fix it.

We disagree on how to do that. Let me just, if I can, draw the differences between how one side wants to do it and the other side; sort of the big picture, not really talking so much about specifics but a general philosophy. Then I will get into more specifics.

The general philosophy of those of us who oppose the McCain-Feingold approach is that we believe that we can fix the campaign finance system in this country by making it purely voluntary, so that no one is going to be forced to contribute to an election. That is something that you would think is as fundamental as any right that we have in this country, that you should not be forced by your employer, by your union, by your association, or by your family to contribute to anyone the resources that you have worked hard to earn. So, one general tenet is that contributing to campaigns must be completely voluntary. I think that is a tenet you would suspect would be universally shared. It is not universally shared. People in support of McCain-Feingold, by and large—there are some exceptions, but few—do not support the concept that campaign contributions should be voluntary. That is one difference.

Second, that we achieve a better campaign system, a better campaign and a better campaign financing system, by increasing participation, by having more voices in the political discourse, not fewer. Those of us who oppose McCain-Feingold strongly hold to that reading of the first amendment that ensures, guarantees, one of the highest guarantees in the Constitution, the right of speech, political speech, and political discourse.

In this country today, political speech does not mean—it means this, what I am doing. But it does not only mean standing up on the street corner and sounding off on what you believe in. These days, if you are standing on the street corner sounding off on what you believe in, basically you are labeled some sort of freak. We believe the first amendment covers organized political speech, that is, people who ban together, who want to speak on a particular issue and marshal whatever resources they have, whether it is resources in manpower to distribute fliers that they print at a half a cent apiece, or to buy a radio ad on a local radio station or to, in fact, hold public meetings and public debates. Whatever medium they want to use, I think is appropriate to be protected by the Congress and by the first amendment.

On the other side, you have people who want to limit that activity. They want to limit people's ability to speak in the political arena because they find certain kinds of speech offensive, like people who advertise in opposition to a Member of Congress or a Senator saying that they voted in such a bad way and don't vote for them, and they do it within 60 days of the election; that is bad; somehow people getting together and expressing their opinion in a public forum is a bad thing that has to be prohibited by the Congress.

I don't believe that. I don't like it when someone does it to me, and it's been done to me and it will be done to me unless we pass one of these bills that says you can't. By the way, even if we did do that, I believe the Supreme Court would strike it down in a heartbeat. But I believe it will be done again.

I don't have a problem with it, even though it happens to me, because I think people have a right if they don't like what I am doing to speak up about it, even if I think the attack is unfair, because I trust the American public. I know a lot of people around here on a pretty regular basis don't trust the American public, but I trust the American public and the voters of America to sort of figure out all of those things on their own with the help of all the other information that they are going to get from networks like C-SPAN2, as we are on today, and other independent sources, that that ad, as nasty as it is, as horrible as it is, is not going to change somebody's opinion overnight. People are smart enough to take all that information, realize it is an ad, discount it to the degree they usually do and filter it into the mix, as we do with all speech.

But the other side believes that it is dangerous speech. I believe that there is nothing inherently dangerous about speech; there is something inherently dangerous about limiting speech, because once we start to limit speech, then that takes freedom away from the masses, from the people and gives that freedom and control to a bunch of people in Washington, DC, who think they know what is best for you.

You probably hear many Senators talk in those terms when it comes to a variety of other subjects in Washington, DC. I suggest that this attempt to take power away and freedom away from people and centralize it in Washington is consistent with what the other side of the aisle generally wants to do when it comes to every decision in your life. As a result, we have the huge Government that we have in Washington, DC. We have grown and grown and grown because we have taken more and more freedom away from people, whether it is in the form of freedom to use the money that you have earned by higher and higher taxes, or whether it is freedom in the form of regulation on regulation on every aspect of business and your life.

We have taken that responsibility, we have taken your freedom and have centralized that decisionmaking in Washington, DC. This is another attempt to do that. This has the salutary effect, from those who believe in big government, of stifling your criticism of big government. This is a win-win. This allows them to continue to grow government without you being able to speak out against it. So they can stifle you at the same time they continue what they want to do in the first place. I think that is very, very, very dangerous to the future of this country.

Columnist George Will called the filibuster—I don't know whether that is what it is or not, but let's use that term—that the filibuster of the McCain-Feingold finance reform is the most important filibuster in the history of America. I don't know if I agree with that, but I would say it is certainly one of the most important because it goes to the heart of our democracy, it goes to the heart of the political discourse in this country and how free are we going to allow this country to be at its most fundamental core, its democratic core. How free are we going to allow you to be, the average citizen in America?

There are those who say, "Well, you are just too free right now and you have too much power right now. We need to take some of that back for your own good. For your own good we're going to take some power away from you so you don't go out and do things that are going to hurt you."

My, my, and believe it or not, you have the national news media just along for the ride. They think this is great. And why not? Because if we limit your speech, the speech of those who are speaking everyday on the network news and in the newspapers and on the radios becomes that much louder, because the din of your speech has quieted down, and so their speech becomes much more important to the whole debate. You have the media very much for squelching other input, so they become much more powerful and much more important in the political discourse.

I suggest that if Congress were proposing a law to limit the amount of speech that newspapers and radios and television reporters can speak, there would be an absolute hue and cry of "freedom of the press"; "How dare you restrict"; "It is the most essential element of our democracy." "The first amendment"—"Oh, I'm sorry, just this part of the first amendment," because when it comes to the other part of the first amendment, they are all for shutting you up. They want to shut you up, but they don't want to be even in the least infringed upon. That is the hypocrisy that is going on in the national media today.

Let's get down to the bottom line here. What do those of us who would like to see campaign finance reform see as a solution to some of the problems?

No. 1, I suggest we make sure the system is voluntary; that there should not be a system where any individual in America is forced to contribute against their will. That is not the law of the land today. There are tens of thousands, probably hundreds of thousands, maybe millions, of workers in this country who are forced to contribute money to campaigns in which they do not believe. That should be an embarrassment to every single Member of the Senate and should be an outrage to every member of our society. When it comes to union dues being used for political purposes, that is exactly what occurs. So we have a very simple provision that says you can't do that anymore, it has to be voluntary.

Poll union members—not the union bosses, union members—and ask them whether they would like the right to be able to give money voluntarily instead of having it taken out of their dues. By overwhelming numbers—I just saw a poll in California—by a 4 to 1 margin, union members themselves said they want that choice.

Yet—and I always find this really funny because people for McCain-Feingold say, "well, we have to fight the special interests; it's the special interests that are the problem." Then they stand up here and fight against a bill that says all contributions should be voluntary. Why? Because the unions and their big money backing them in their campaigns won't allow them to do what's right. This just exposes it for what it is. This is about power. They just want to make sure that they can keep all the money funneling toward them, and then go about taking away power from you. Keep the money flowing on that side and then take the power away from you.

I don't necessarily think that is the right approach to take. When it comes to union dues being used involuntarily for political campaigns—there is absolutely no excuse for not having the voluntary campaign finance system. That should be at the fundamental core. The only reason it is not is because of the special interests supporting the other side of the aisle, the special interests that they get up and rail against: "Oh, this is horrible; special interest money and, by the way, we're going to stop campaign finance reform because of the special interest money we get from involuntary contributions being maced out of the people who work in unions. Maced is actually too kind of a word because some people get maced when they don't go along, because they have no choice. It is not a matter of being maced and losing your job. You just have to go along. You can't even say no.

So No. 1, it has to be a voluntary system.

No. 2, a goal of a campaign finance system should be to increase participation by the people who are most affected by the election, and that is your constituents. The goal of the bill that I am going to be introducing is to increase the amount of influence—I use that term advisedly—influence that constituents within the State in which you reside, such as my State of Pennsylvania, to influence the election disproportionate from anybody else, whether they be political action committees or people from California—I like people from California but they are not from Pennsylvania and, frankly, the people from Pennsylvania should have more of a say who the Senator is from Pennsylvania than the people from Washington State, Maine or anyplace else.

What I have suggested in my bill is we are going to increase the amount of contributions that can be given by people in Pennsylvania. The proposal that I have is to take the $1,000 limit and increase it to $4,000 per individual per election for people who reside in the State in which you run. Everybody else is kept at the $1,000 limit. But people in your State are going to have more of an ability to contribute.

I know, because I was a challenger twice. I am a rare breed of cat around this place. I defeated an incumbent Congressman to get into the House and defeated an incumbent Senator to get into the Senate. There are not very many of us around who have that honor, I guess, or burden, one of the two. So I know what it is like to be a challenger. I know what it is like to be the big underdog. I know what it is like to be outspent 3 to 1, and I didn't like it.

But I will tell you what I didn't like more than anything else. I didn't like the fact that my opponent, who was a sitting Congressman, had the ability to raise money all over the country. Because of being in Congress, he had connections. He could raise money from all over the place. He was known, not only all over the country, but all over the State. Nobody knew who I was.

I remember when I first ran for office, they took a poll 6 months before the election in 1990, and my name recognition in my district was 6 percent. I thought that was pretty great; "Yea, it is 6 percent." Then my pollster informed me that usually when they put somebody's name on the ballot, they get about 8 percent, because about 8 percent of the people are afraid to answer that they don't know the person, figuring if they were on the survey, they should know the person. So I got below what Mickey Mouse would get. Nobody knew me.

It was hard for me to raise money. I didn't have any money. And it was harder only because I could raise $1,000 at a time. If I was lucky enough to find someone who would support me who had any kind of resources, all I could get was $1,000. That makes it very, very hard for a challenger. You have to find a lot of people to help you, to get at least a bit of seed corn to build a campaign organization.

There was a comment from a person who was going to run for the U.S. Senate in Pennsylvania next year. She was headed toward running, but she announced abruptly she was not going to run. The reason she gave for not running was that she found it incredibly hard to find so many people to give her $1,000 at a time. She just couldn't find that many people to build up the seed corn necessary to start a campaign. Once you start a campaign, you can broaden out your search, you can get, as I have done—I have 35,000 donors, I believe, to my committee. And that is a lot of donors. I am very proud of that.

The average contribution is well under $100. But you have to get to there. And it takes time. It takes some money to start. Unless you are a millionaire, which I plead guilty of not being, then it is very difficult for the average Joe Citizen to get enough resources together to start a campaign when you have to raise it $1,000 at a time.

When you consider the fact that in a Senate race in Pennsylvania it is going to cost about probably $9 or $10 million, someone giving you $4,000 hardly warrants notice in the big scheme of things.

So to suggest that somehow, you know, this person has inordinate influence is ridiculous. And you are going to get hundreds of people to give you that kind of money. I guarantee you, within those hundreds of people there will be hundreds of different opinions on probably the same issue. So to suggest you are going to do one for one—it just doesn't work that way.

Anybody who believes—this is another fallacy of campaign financing—that Members of Congress get donations to do favors for people, I mean, that is just ridiculous. I mean, it is absolutely absurd. And that is why I am for limits on contributions, and I am for low limits. I think $4,000 is a low limit because I don't want someone to be able to give $100,000 or $200,000 or $500,000 because then, whether it occurs or not, the appearance of impropriety is there. With a small donation, relatively small, I am talking in terms of a $10 million campaign, $4,000 does not, I think, stick out to say they are buying a more disproportionate interest here.

The fact of the matter is, we have low limits. I think we should keep them relatively low, but they should be high enough so people can have some ability to form a little bit of seed corn to start a campaign if they want to run for office. So I believe that raising the limit, oddly enough, would help challengers and open-seat candidates more than it will help incumbents.

Incumbents can raise money now. They are one of the few who can raise money now. This is to help challengers. The other thing—follow me on this concept—what I believe has happened over the past 25 years and why campaign reform has come to be such a “scandal,” although I think it is a somewhat created scandal in some respects; in many respects it is a scandal because people are breaking the laws—is what we did in 1974. It was well-intentioned. It was to limit the influence of special interests and limit the influence of big donors. Remember, $1,000 was set in 1974. If you index that to inflation, it would be over $3,000 today. That is why we increase it from $1,000 to $4,000. And campaigns have increased by 10 or 20 times as far as expenses since 1974.

What we have done—if I can give an example of a heart—you have a main artery that flows into the heart that provides the blood for the heart muscle so the heart can pump. What we did in 1974 was we occluded partially, we blocked that artery. We said, we are no longer going to allow a free flow of resources, blood, into the heart muscle, the candidate; we are going to block it.

It was an artificial block. It was artificial in the sense that the heart still needed the resources, but you have limited the ability for direct resources to flow into that heart.

If you are lucky, what happens if you are a human being and that happens? What happens is, you build up what is called collateral circulation, other circulation to feed the heart, to keep it alive and going and working.

Collateral circulation in politics is called soft money. By limiting the amount that you or anybody can give directly to a candidate, you have not stopped the need for the money to get to the candidate; all you have done is stop the main, most efficient, most disclosed, most apparent way of feeding that heart muscle, of feeding that candidate.

So what has happened is the money still wants to get there because the candidate needs it to run a race, and so what has happened is these collateral sources have been built up. We have built up all these soft money trees to feed the candidate behind the scenes, undisclosed or disclosed not as efficiently or not as readily as the direct pipeline to the heart or to the candidate.

So what I want to do is do a little angioplasty. Let us clear out the heart artery to allow some more resources and blood to flow so you can watch it. What I propose in my bill is to require monthly reporting—not quarterly, but monthly. Let us have more disclosure. Let us have more prompt disclosure. Let us find out who is giving the money and how much they are giving.

So we have, by doing that, and by raising the limits of people who live in the State, you will reduce the need for this other circulation for this other money to come into the system.

I think the best way to cure soft money is not Government to restrict it because, you know, we restricted hard money, that money, that direct pipeline, that main artery going into the campaign, we restricted it, and what happened? They figured out another way, constitutionally another way. We try to restrict that, and guess what will happen? They will figure out some other way. I mean, look, the big problem here is that Government is too big, it spends too much, and it regulates too much. It is involved in everything. We have this huge Government that people want to have some say in how the Government governs. They want to have some say in who is elected to make those decisions. And they have every right to do so.

What the folks who are for McCain-Feingold say is, “Well, we don't want you to have that right. We want to limit your right to do that.” I think that is ridiculous. I think that is, frankly, undemocratic, certainly undemocratic, and I will go as far as to say it is un-American. We are a country that fought hard, we fought wars, we fought a Revolutionary War and many others to maintain our freedom. And first among them—the first amendment—first among them is the freedom of speech.

What this debate is fundamentally about is the freedom of political discourse, of your right to influence the course of an election, and, therefore, the course of the country. It is your only chance. This is a Republic, not a democracy. We are not all gathered here in the Senate—we do not get all 250 million people in the room and everybody says “aye” and “no.” That is not how we do things. You elect me for better or for worse. You elect a Member of the Senate, two Members in the Senate from each State, and however many House Members you have, and those people represent you.

If you want to be represented here, you have to work through the electoral process to influence the decision as to what Member of Congress is elected and what Senator is elected. That is your outlet. What the people in this room, many who are for McCain-Feingold, want to do is limit the people's ability to impact that election. When I say “people,” I don't just mean individuals, but associations and others who have every right under the first amendment to be heard.

So when you hear all this talk about, “Oh, special interests,” remember one thing, the biggest special interest that is holding up this bill is labor unions who do not want voluntary contributions to be the law of the land. That is No. 1. So anytime you hear “special interests” from people who support McCain-Feingold, ask this question: “Are you for voluntary contributions for every member of society?” When they say, “No,” then you say, “Don't talk to me about special interest because I know what special interest is buying you. So don't talk to me about, ‘Oh, we need to get rid of special interests when your first vote is to defend it and to exhibit the power.’”

Voluntary contributions, increased participation, particularly from people who are within the boundaries of the district or your State, and increased disclosure. It is much easier for the cardiologist to be able to find a problem with the flow of blood to the heart by looking at one source where it is supposed to be. It is much easier to determine where the problem is than looking at all the other different sources that may be feeding that heart.

So if we allow the resources to be channeled, and we have disclosure of those resources promptly—monthly—then you are going to have a system that I think everyone will be proud of that will encourage participation, that will be voluntary, and that will be disclosed.

I yield the floor.

Mr. LEVIN addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Ms. COLLINS). The Senator from Michigan is recognized.

Mr. GORTON. Would the Senator from Michigan yield for a unanimous-consent request?

Mr. LEVIN. I would be happy to.

Mr. GORTON. I ask unanimous consent, Madam President, that I be permitted to speak in morning business at the conclusion of the remarks of the Senator from Michigan.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Michigan.

THE INDEPENDENT COUNSEL LAW

Mr. LEVIN. Madam President, I want to speak today about the independent counsel law and the political pressure being put on the Attorney General to appoint an independent counsel in the campaign fundraising investigation.

One Member has called on the Attorney General to resign. Some Members of the House are threatening impeachment proceedings against the Attorney General unless she reaches their conclusion on the appointment of an independent counsel.

For 18 years I served as either the chairman or ranking Democrat on the subcommittee of the Governmental Affairs Committee with jurisdiction over the independent counsel law. I have been actively involved in three reauthorizations of this important statute. And having experienced and studied the history of this law, I am deeply disturbed by this type of pressure being exerted.

Politically motivated attempts to intimidate the Attorney General runs directly counter to the fundamental purpose of the independent counsel law and counter to our constitutional system that makes the prosecution of crimes the sole responsibility of the executive branch.

The independent counsel law was enacted in the aftermath of Watergate. The Watergate committee recommended, and the Congress agreed, that we need a process by which criminal investigations of our top Government officials should be conducted in an independent manner as free as possible from any taint of favoritism or politics.

This was necessary, we decided, in order to maintain the public's confidence in one of the basic principles of our democracy, that this is a country that follows the rule of law. So we established a process whereby the Attorney General would follow certain established procedures in reviewing allegations of criminal wrongdoing by top Government officials and decide at certain stages whether to ask a special Federal court to appoint a person from the private sector to become a Government employee to take over the investigation and conduct it independently from the chain of command at the Department of Justice.

We wanted the public to have confidence that the investigations into alleged criminal conduct by top Government officials were no less aggressive and no more aggressive than similar investigations of average citizens. We particularly wanted to remove partisanship from the investigative and prosecutorial decisionmaking process.

We established the requirement that if the Attorney General receives specific information from a credible source that a crime may have been committed by certain enumerated top Government officials, the Attorney General has to conduct a threshold inquiry lasting no more than 30 days to determine if the allegation is frivolous or a potential legal problem. The top officials who trigger this so-called mandatory provision of the act are the President, the Vice President, Cabinet Secretaries, Deputy Secretaries of the executive branch departments, plus very top White House officials who are paid a salary at least as high as Cabinet Secretaries or Deputy Secretaries and the chairman and treasurer or other top officials of the President's campaign committee.

If, after the threshold inquiry, the Attorney General determines that there is specific information from a credible source that a crime may have been committed by a covered official, the Attorney General must then conduct a preliminary investigation lasting no more than 90 days in which she gathers evidence to determine whether further investigation is warranted. If after the conclusion of the 90-day period the Attorney General determines that further investigation is warranted with respect to a covered official, then she must seek the appointment of an independent counsel from the special court made up of three article III judges appointed for 2-year terms by the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court.

In crafting the independent counsel law, we contemplated a role for Congress with respect to the appointment of an independent counsel in a specific case. We included a provision that is tailored to the purposes of the statute. The independent counsel law explicitly provides that the appropriate avenue for congressional comment on the appointment of an independent counsel is through action of the Judiciary Committee.

The law provides that either a majority of the majority party or a majority of the minority party of the members of the Judiciary Committee may request the Attorney General to appoint an independent counsel.

Upon receipt of such a letter, the law provides that the Attorney General must respond in writing to the authors of the letter explaining "whether the Attorney General has begun or will begin a preliminary investigation" under the independent counsel law, setting forth "the reasons for the Attorney General's decision regarding such preliminary investigation as it relates to each of the matters with respect to which the congressional request is made. If there is such a preliminary investigation, the report shall include the date on which the preliminary investigation began or will begin."

The Attorney General is not obligated to trigger the statute when she receives such a letter. She is not required to initiate a threshold inquiry or conduct a preliminary investigation. She is only required to respond within 30 days. That is the process that we provided for in the independent counsel law for Congress to express an opinion in triggering the statute. That is how the procedure works.

The Attorney General has the sole discretion to determine if the statute is triggered and if an independent counsel should be appointed. That is a constitutional requisite of the statute, and without that discretion, the Supreme Court has said that the separation of powers principle is violated. Congress has the very specific way I indicated to express its opinion on the subject to the Attorney General. In the last analysis, as our chief law enforcement officer, it is her decision alone to make.

While the independent counsel law was designed to make sure that a covered official doesn't get preferential treatment with respect to a criminal investigation, equally important was the concern that the official not suffer worse treatment or a selective process prosecution that would not be applied to an ordinary citizen. In the din surrounding these calls for the Attorney General to seek the appointment of an independent counsel, that very important feature has been lost.

In 1981, our subcommittee that has jurisdiction over the independent counsel law held the first oversight hearings on its implementation. We had a number of knowledgeable witnesses, and we had several years of experience with the statute to review.

One of the cases that the subcommittee reviewed at the time was the case of Hamilton Jordan and Tim Kraft, top White House officials in the Carter administration, who were accused of using a controlled substance at a party in violation of the criminal code. Then Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti testified at the time that under ordinary circumstances the Department of Justice, exercising its discretion on when to prosecute, would not generally prosecute a case such as that against a regular citizen even though there might have been a violation. But because the law at the time didn't permit the Attorney General to consider prosecutorial policies of the Department in deciding whether or not to seek appointment of an independent counsel, the Attorney General felt obligated to seek appointment of independent counsels in those two cases.

Here is what then Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti told our subcommittee in 1981 about this decision:

In normal circumstances, the Department does not investigate or prosecute every possible felony or every possible fact, or circumstance that comes to its attention. Historically, and within the law, it exercises discretion. It stays its hand in individual cases, not for the purpose of advancing or threatening personal interests, but for the purpose of doing justice and advancing the common good.

This discretion is one of the great prerogatives that devolves upon the Department of Justice and the Executive under the common law. It is enormously important, and it is honored every day in every U.S. attorney's office in tradition and in practice.

Any discretionary power, of course, can be abused. And if the Department's investigational and prosecutorial discretion should be exercised capriciously or irregularly, it would threaten and not advance the interests that it is designed to serve.

For that reason, over the years we have developed guidelines that structure and restrain the exercise of our discretion in individual cases, thereby introducing a measure of principle and regularity into a sensitive and subjective process.

Attorney General Civiletti went on to say the following:

In some instances these guidelines take the form of explicitly written standards concerning specific statutes and specific kind of offenses and procedures. In other instances they are unwritten understandings or policies that are followed within the Department.

What's the point of the reference to regularity if the purpose of the special prosecutor provisions is to ensure that the high officers in the Government will receive an impartial treatment at the hands of the Department of Justice?

His answer:

I am not sure that the statute goes as far as it might to accomplish that objective because the special prosecutor is given the freedom to disregard the standards, the limits, the discretionary judgments that have been entered over the last 100 years in the Department of Justice, and set about on his own course, which for each special prosecutor could be entirely different under different standards and promote great misfortune to the subject of the particular investigation."

Now, in light of Attorney General Civiletti's testimony, the subcommittee decided to amend the independent counsel law to require—and it is a requirement; it is not discretionary—to require that the Attorney General follow policies of the Department of Justice relative to the question of whether to prosecute a case even where evidence of a violation may exist.

We concluded that it was important to not let the independent counsel law be used as a weapon to punish a top official who would not otherwise be subject to prosecution if he were a regular citizen. Senator Cohen, with whom I cosponsored the 1982 reforms, and I were both clear that the purpose of the independent counsel law is to provide for criminal investigation of a top government official in a manner no better and no worse than anybody else.

We are not just talking about the written policies of the Department of Justice. Congress specifically rejected that limitation and included language in the statute requiring the Attorney General to follow both the written and unwritten policies of the Department of Justice.

Section 592(c)(1) of the independent law reads as follows:

In determining under this chapter whether reasonable grounds exist to warrant further investigation, the Attorney General shall comply with the written or other established policies of the Department of Justice with respect to the conduct of criminal investigations.

So we have an independent counsel statute where the Attorney General has the sole discretion whether to seek appointment of an independent counsel, but she has no discretion whether to apply the Department of Justice policies in making that decision. She must do so.

Now, what is the Justice Department's policy with respect to what has become the primary allegation against the President and Vice President—making fundraising phone calls out of the White House? It is alleged by some that the conduct falls under an obscure statute, 18 USC 607, which makes it unlawful for a person to solicit or receive a contribution, as defined by the Federal Election Campaign Act, in any Federal room or building. Here is what the statute says:

It shall be unlawful for any person to solicit or receive any contribution within the meaning [of the Federal Election Act] in any room or building occupied in the discharge of official duties by any [Federal employee] or in any navy yard, fort or arsenal.

This statute has several elements, and I would like to discuss the key elements. The first element is whether there are certain requirements with respect to the solicitor of the contribution referred to in the statute and with respect to the person being solicited. As many commentators and legal experts have noted, this law was enacted to protect Federal employees from political pressure by their fellow workers and bosses. It was part of the Pendleton Act, which was a major effort in reforming the civil service system enacted in the late 1800's. It is directed at preventing a Federal employee from being pressured at work to make a political contribution, at preventing a sort of "shake-down" by a Federal employees' superiors. And it is placed in the part of the United States Code that addresses what Federal employees can and cannot do.

So, some have argued that either the solicitor is required to be a Federal employee or the person being solicited is required to be a Federal employee, or both. Some have argued that in order to cover the President and Vice President or Members of Congress, they would have to be specifically mentioned. That is an ambiguity that the Watergate Special Prosecution Force wrestled with when it recommended in the 1970's that Congress amend the statute "to clarify the question of its applicability to elected as well as appointed officials." We didn't take them up on their suggestion, by the way, so that question has never been answered specifically in the law.

The Justice Department's prosecution manual on prosecuting under section 607 apparently tried to answer this question, since it now says that "The employment status of the parties to the solicitation is immaterial; it is the employment status of the persons who routinely occupy the area where the solicitation occurs that determines whether section 607 applies." Yet, the discussion of section 607 in the manual still refers to section 607 under the title "Patronage Crimes."

But following these most recent guidelines by the Justice Department, it seems most likely that the statute could apply to private persons as well as Federal employees and to Members of Congress and the President and the Vice President as well as appointed officials, whether they are the ones making the solicitation or the ones being solicited. But there is still some uncertainty about this.

The next element of the statute is clear. It relates to the solicitation or receipt of a campaign contribution. And the question here is where and when does a solicitation occur. Does it occur when the request is made or when the request is received? There is a Supreme Court case on this very issue which concludes that the solicitation occurs when and where the solicitation is received. In the 1908 case of U.S. versus Thayer, the Supreme Court considered a solicitation conducted through the mail. The Court had to decide whether the solicitation occurred at the place the soliciting person mailed the letter or where the solicitation was received. The Court held, in an opinion written by Justice Holmes, that the solicitation occurred where the employee received the letter, which was his place of work. By analogy, then, with respect to a phone call, the solicitation would occur not from where the call is made but where the call is received.

The solicitation addressed by this statute has to occur where Federal employees are carrying out their official duties. That is what the purpose of the statute is. Section 607 says the solicitation has to occur "in any room or building occupied in the discharge of official duties by any person" mentioned in section 603, which means, by Federal employees. We recognize this purpose in the Senate when we described this law in our own Senate Ethics Manual. The September 1996 Senate Ethics Manual says:

The criminal prohibition at section 607 was originally intended and was historically construed to prohibit anyone from soliciting contributions from federal clerks or employees while such persons were in a federal building. In interpretations of this provision, the focus of the prohibition has been directed to the location of the individual from whom a contribution was requested, rather than the location from which the solicitation had originated. . . . The Department of Justice has noted that the statute was intended to fill a gap in protecting federal employees from assessment by prohibiting all persons from soliciting such employees while they are in a federal building.

In the 1954 case of United States versus Bursleson, the U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of Tennessee threw out a case brought under section 670 because the court determined that the elements of the statute had not been met since Federal employees were solicited at the facility of a Federal contractor, not on Federal property. That, the court said, was dispositive of the case.

The Department of Justice has adopted this approach as part of its prosecutorial policy with respect to this statute. As the American Law Division and the Congressional Research Service concluded in its report on section 607 in March of this year:

There is no indication from reported cases or Department of Justice material on the statute that there has ever been enforcement of the statute, in the more than 100 years of its existence, in such a manner as to suggest an interpretation of the law as applying to solicitations made by mail or telephone from a federal building to someone not in a federal building.

Now, that is our own Congressional Research Service saying that the policy of the Department of Justice is to not bring a section 607 case unless the person being solicited is located at a Federal workplace.

A third element of section 607 which has been the subject of discussion is the requirement that the solicitation referred to in the statute be a so-called hard money contribution, a contribution covered by the Federal Election Campaign Act, and not a soft money contribution, a contribution outside of the legal limits of our Federal campaign laws.

Ever since the Attorney General referred to this issue in her letter to the Judiciary Committee, commentators and Members have been working mightily to show that the Vice President was actually raising hard money, and thus covered by the statute, and not just soft money, which others have claimed was the case.

Now, it is hard to imagine that the Vice President thought he was raising hard dollars since the amounts of the solicitation were for far more than the limits for hard money. But even if one could show the intent to solicit hard money contributions, it would seem that the second hurdle to prosecution would be controlling. The Department of Justice has simply not prosecuted conduct where the person being solicited is not on Federal property at the time of the solicitation. The issue of whether the solicited money ended up in a hard money or soft money account would not even need to be addressed under the facts as we know them.

Parenthetically, if the hard money/soft money distinction were controlled, look at what some of us would be seeking to enforce—a statute that makes it a crime for a person to solicit $1 for his or her campaign, but makes it perfectly legal for that same person to solicit a million dollars or more from that same person for a political party which is totally committed to his or her election and will not only spend the money raised, but might even go into debt for that purpose. Now, that is an absurd interpretation that some Members of Congress are not only trying to uphold but, indeed, say is required.

Because the Attorney General raised this issue in her letter to congressional leaders about triggering the Independent Counsel Act, she should make clear what the policy of the Department of Justice is with respect to that, as well as the other elements of this possible crime.

Former U.S. Attorney Joseph DiGenova was straightforward in his assessment of how the Department of Justice should handle possible prosecution of the President or Vice President under section 607 when he said on a recent television show that no prosecutor in his or her right mind would bring a prosecution for those phone calls under this statute with the facts as we know them regarding the President and the Vice President. Other commentators have made similar arguments.

I ask unanimous consent that the following columns be printed in the RECORD immediately following my remarks: Articles by Richard Cohen, E.J. Dionne, Jr., Philip Heyman, and William Raspberry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(See exhibit 1.)

Mr. LEVIN. If we take these elements and apply them to the case of the President or Vice President making phone calls from the White House, it becomes clear to me that the facts do not fit the statute.

Any phone calls they may have made, would have been solicitations made at the place where the person being called was located. We know that from the Supreme Court's decision in U.S. versus Thayer. And we know for section 607 to apply, that location has to be a location where Federal employees are performing their official duties.

In applying the prosecutorial policy and practice of the Department of Justice in this case, with respect to this law, the Attorney General, may well and properly find that she would not prosecute a noncovered official under these facts. If so, she is not allowed by law to seek the appointment of an independent counsel.

Madam President, the pressure being put upon the Attorney General to appoint an independent counsel is undermining the basic principle of this law and the nonpartisan spirit which has been so important to its operation. The effort to shoehorn the conduct of the President and Vice President into the prohibitions of an arcane law, never used under similar circumstances, violates our understanding of the criminal justice system—just as it would if cases had been brought against Senators who have already made similar calls from their Senate offices.

One Senator was reported in the Wall Street Journal several years ago as saying he "figures he spends two hours a day dialing for cash from his Washington home, his car, and his mobile phone;" he says he can even place calls from his Senate office. "I do it wherever I am," the Senator is quoted as saying. "I can use a credit card. * * * As long as I pay for the calls, I can make calls wherever I want to call."

Another of our colleagues was reported, when phoning to remind potential donors of a fundraiser, to have left a recorded message on an answering machine to call him at his Senate office for more information.

And, a third Senator's signature appeared on a solicitation letter in which potential contributors were invited to call his Senate office with questions about the fundraising solicitation. Have these Members been criminally prosecuted for a violation of section 607? No. Should they have been? No. The judgment of the Attorney General not to prosecute in these visible cases is further evidence that there has not been a policy to prosecute under section 607 when a solicitation is made to a person not on Federal property when solicited.

When President Reagan was in the White House, he called the Republican Eagles who were meeting in a Government building—the auditorium at the Commerce Department. The President called and among his remarks, he said the following:

I am genuinely sorry I couldn't be there in person with you today. . . . but we have the Eagles down to the White House quite often so I will be seeing you soon. In the meantime I'm sending Secretary Schultz, Secretary Regan and other members of the Cabinet over to keep you abreast of what's going on. In fact you will be seeing more of my Cabinet today than I will. . . . Let me say to you Eagles how important your contributions are to the Republican Party. . . . [T]o keep a lamp burning, we have to keep putting oil in it. You there today help to keep the light of the Republican Party burning brightly.

That call was made 15 years ago in September 1982. And here, with this call, the persons being urged on were actually in a Federal building—just what section 607 seems to cover. And it's very likely that the contributions referred to were hard money contributions. But should there have been an independent counsel appointed to investigate President Reagan to determine whether or not he violated section 607? No—it shouldn't have happened then and shouldn't happen now. But where were the threats, where was the orchestrated chorus then?

If we don't want our President or Vice President making fundraising calls, then we should pass a law to that effect and make it explicit. If its OK for them to make them from their taxpayer subsidized home or cars but not from their offices, then make it clear in the law. I question whether we really want criminality to hinge on whether the President makes a fundraising call from the Oval Office or from his upstairs office in the family section at the White House or from his car or from the phone booth on the corner? I, for one, would rather the President or Vice President not make fundraising calls, period. That's what we intended when we enacted public financing of our Presidential campaigns—but the soft money loophole changed all that. We've got to fix that. We should eliminate the soft money loophole—not utilize an ambiguity surrounded by a technicality to push the President or Vice President into an independent counsel investigation as if it is intended to be some form of punishment. The independent counsel process was never intended to be used this way.

Madam President, the Attorney General has a job to do. It has been given to her by the Constitution and the independent counsel law. She is now required to act to the best of her ability to follow the law—to conduct a thorough criminal investigation of all of the allegations; to follow the evidence wherever it leads; to follow the requirements of the independent counsel law—and this has too often been forgotten—including the requirement that she follow Justice Department discretionary policies about whether to prosecute when deciding whether to seek an independent counsel.

The political pressure on the Attorney General does a disservice to the Nation which is awaiting an objective and fair review. The political pressure on the Attorney General undermines the independent counsel law, which is dependent upon an application free from partisan pressure. If she finds that the criteria for triggering the independent counsel law has been met and that the Justice Department practice has been to prosecute in a case similar to this, so be it. But if she finds the criteria haven't been met, or if she finds that there has not been a policy of prosecution under section 607, so be it.

If those calling for an independent counsel want the Attorney General to follow the letter of the law with respect to section 607 because they think it means a possible criminal investigation and prosecution—and I have already shown why I disagree with that position—then they also have to urge the Attorney General to follow the letter of the law with respect to the appointment of an independent counsel. And the letter of that law has required, since 1982, that the Attorney General follow the policies and practices of the Department of Justice in determining whether independent counsel should be appointed. Again, it has not been the policy or practice of the Department of Justice to prosecute a solicitation under section 607 if the person being solicited is not on Federal property. If the Attorney General agrees, then she is not permitted to seek an independent counsel under the 1982 amendment to the independent counsel law.

Those urging the independent counsel appointment can't have it both ways. If they look at the spirit of section 607, or if they look at its letter, the Attorney General would be on firm ground should she seek not to appoint an independent counsel.

Madam President, I thank the Chair and I yield the floor.

DON'T MAKE GORE THE FALL GUY

(By Philip B. Heymann; Philip B. Heymann, a former Deputy Attorney General in the Clinton administration, is a professor at Harvard Law School and the Kennedy School of Government)

CAMBRIDGE, MA.—I have publicly supported those who have called for Attorney General Janet Reno to appoint an independent counsel to investigate the campaign donations intended for the 1996 Presidential campaign.

I have also argued that both the Democratic and Republican parties turned donations intended and used for campaigns, which are strictly regulated, into what looked like unregulated "soft money," not to be used for campaigns, by running it in and out of their national parties.

From a prosecutor's point of view, it would be absurd to reject these arguments and instead decide to single out Vice President Al Gore for investigation by an independent counsel. Making phone calls soliciting donations from a Government office rather than some private location is not an adequate basis for prosecution in this case.

Most prosecutors won't bring a case if three conditions apply: when there are serious doubts about whether a law technically covers the conduct in question, when the main purpose of the statute was not violated, and when the conduct is not inherently immoral. All three conditions apply to the facts of the Gore allegations.

When it comes to whether the law—Section 607 of the Federal Criminal Code—technically applies to Mr. Gore's phone calls, much remains uncertain. It is "unlawful," the section says, "for any person to solicit or receive any contribution . . . in any [Federal Government] room or building occupied in the discharge of official duties."

Fair enough. But to violate the law, must the person solicited be in a Federal building? In the 100 years since the law was enacted, it has never been applied unless the person solicited was on Federal property.

Must the person solicited be a Federal employee? After all, the main purpose of the statute was to protect Federal employees against being dunned by their bosses. In 1979, the Justice Department's Office of Legal Counsel concluded that "compelling arguments can be marshaled on either side of this issue." By now, the statute probably also applies to solicitation of non-employees, but the law has never been spelled out.

Does the statute cover the President and the Vice President? The wording specifically includes members of Congress and fails to mention the President and the Vice President, but again, the law is unclear. The Justice Department's Office of Legal Counsel has said that there are differences of opinion but that the law probably applies.

One thing is certain: the Vice President's actions were not inconsistent with the only plain purpose of this statute. Section 607 was drafted to protect Federal employees from being coerced into giving money. Since Mr. Gore was soliciting campaign money from outside sources, he did not violate the law's main purpose.

It is almost impossible to think of a reason that would lead to care whether the Vice President made calls from working quarters in the White House (where they may be forbidden) or the living quarters of the White House (where they are permitted) or from some nearby private location or cellular phone.

Of course, in a larger sense, an overriding purpose of many of our campaign finance laws is to prevent the purchase of access and influence. But where Mr. Gore made the phone calls is irrelevant to that purpose. The solicitations are either right or wrong, or either consistent or inconsistent with our statutes, without regard to where they took place.

In sum, it is hard to justify calling for prosecution of Mr. Gore. There is no obvious violation of the purpose of the law or claims on our sense of morality. Even if one tries to justify a prosecution on the grounds that the violation was a willful disregard of Section 607, this provides very frail support in a case where so many uncertainties remain about the law's scope.

So why are so many people calling for prosecution? First, because it would destroy the Democratic front-runner for President. Political figures of both parties have long urged prosecutions to knock off their current or potential opponents. It remains a very bad idea to bend general standards of prosecution either to reach or to avoid political figures.

Second, the Independent Counsel Statute denies the Attorney General the power to exercise even the most obvious of prosecutorial discretion unless she is prepared to say that the Justice Department would, as a matter of policy, never bring a prosecution in these circumstances.

But there is a third and final reason. Attorney General Reno has painted herself into a corner. In 1996, access was sold on a scale we haven't seen since 1972. Presidential campaigns solicited money from corporations and unions, which are forbidden to contribute to campaigns. And from individuals, they asked for donations in excess of what they are allowed to give. Hundreds of millions of dollars from these sources was given to the national parties, which then spent it as the Presidential campaigns directed.

This strategy to evade campaign finance laws was so transparent that the Justice Department could easily have dismissed the notion that the donations were given to political parties for noncampaign purposes. That conclusion would have meant that the donations were in violation of the law, and required the appointment of an independent prosecutor to investigate.

But instead, the Justice Department concluded there were no violations and accepted the parties' claims that they were technically within the law.

Now the Attorney General may find that the Vice President's phone calls from the White House technically violate Section 607, but still do not warrant appointment of an independent counsel. But it would be hard for the Attorney General to explain this decision credibly. Some will ask, if a technicality can be used to protect the President, isn't a technicality enough to prosecute the Vice President?

There is a compelling response to this question. Even if the Vice President's calls violated Section 607, that remains a case that few prosecutors would bring. What does warrant an independent counsel is the thorough evasion of our Federal election laws by dozens of politicians, including both Presidential candidates.

I continue to support calls for an independent counsel to investigate solicitation of donations from forbidden contributors. But Mr. Gore should not be made the scapegoat, simply because the Attorney General has not been willing to appoint an independent prosecutor for these allegations. Besides being unfair, that would simply deflect public attention from the real issue.

[From the Washington Post, Sept. 23, 1997]
WHO NEEDS AN INDEPENDENT COUNSEL?

(By Richard Cohen)

If President Clinton had some gumption and, maybe more important, a taste for confrontation, he would call in the press, order up the TV networks and announce he was pardoning both himself and Al Gore for anything relating to campaign fund-raising. He would do that, he would solemnly announce, so that Congress would write a law that makes some sense.

The current laws do not. In fact, there is something downright absurd about marshaling the Justice Department and then maybe an independent counsel to look into whether Clinton and Gore actually asked someone somewhere to make a political donation. This, we are told, might be a felony—like, say, armed robbery. As anyone can see, it is actually an absurdity.

What do we care—Mr. and Mrs. USA—whether Gore or Clinton was in the business section of the White House when he picked up the phone or upstairs in the private quarters? What do we care whether Gore was in his office or ducked across the street to a pay phone? What do we care whether he used a credit card or called collect? Yet these are some of the very issues involved in this molehill-into-a-mountain scandal.

As everyone but congressional Republicans seems to know, the law involved was designed to stop elected federal officials from putting the arm on their own staffs. This was once a routine practice and, indeed, is not unknown to this day. In some jurisdictions, county or municipal workers are expected to make political donations to the reigning organization. Senate Republicans in need of some pointers can ask Al D'Amato how this is done.

If Clinton or Gore had done something along those lines, an independent counsel would be justified. Or had either one of them—or anyone within a mile of Clinton—offered a job or a government program in exchange for a contribution, that too would be serious stuff. Then it would not matter if the call was made from the presidential shower or the Situation Room—with a Donald Duck phone or the vaunted red one. A crime would have been committed.

But in the absence of any such accusation, the Republicans press ahead anyway—and, in the process, do the White House a favor. The question of who called whom where obscures the uncontested fact that Clinton cheapened the White House with his greed for campaign bucks. The coffees, the sleepovers, the Lincoln Bedroom for the campaign version of frequent flyer miles—all these turned what used to be called The People's House into a bed and breakfast for fat cats.

Sooner or later the public—but probably never the press—is going to understand that the Republicans are calling for an independent counsel for what, in essence, may not be a crime and should not be a crime anyway. Back in 1975, that was the conclusion of four Watergate special prosecutors—Archibald Cox, Leon Jaworski, Henry Ruth and Charles Ruff. In a report, they said the law was so confusing and antiquated that Congress ought to change it. Congress, of course, has done nothing of the sort.

What's more, if an independent counsel is summoned, the result will be a partisan donnybrook. Attorney General Janet Reno will have to turn the matter over to a three-judge panel headed by the toxically partisan David B. Sentelle. (He supposedly named his daughter Reagan after you-know-who.) He is the same appellate judge whose panel fired Robert Fiske and replaced him with Kenneth Starr, a frank ideologue himself. Starr has since conducted an open-ended investigation of Whitewater, which has so far produced nothing more than questions about his competence. He seems lost in Arkansas.

The GOP has a case to make about the way this White House raised money. But for a party whose sole attribute is a belief in less government, it is awfully quick to bring in the government's heaviest guns to swat what is, after all, a mere gnat of an alleged infraction. Once summoned, though, the Lord High Independent Counsel can do pretty much what he or she wants. That would mean, among other things, that Gore would have to spend more and more time in the attic, searching for old records, canceled checks and high school yearbooks. He has already had to hire two criminal lawyers.

The whole thing is a study in disproportion, in a madness that, in other places, would entail an examination of the water supply. Campaign financing badly needs reform but, rather than do that, congressional Republicans are trying to lynch Clinton and Gore for what, it appears, is their most serious offense: winning the last election. No independent counsel is going to change that.

[From the Washington Post, Sept. 30, 1997]

(By E.J. Dionne, Jr.)

The issue of whether Attorney General Janet Reno should recommend an independent counsel to investigate fund-raising by President Clinton and Vice President Gore is hopelessly ensnared in politics, weird legal interpretations and Washington power games.

If Reno fails to name a counsel, Republicans are talking about impeaching her. If she names a counsel, she will be seen as bowing to threats and falling into a trap she built for herself. Neither is a good option.

Reno should never have declared that Vice President Gore was legally untouchable if he was raising "soft" money in those telephone calls from his office, but under suspicion if he raised "hard" money.

This casuistic distinction between the first kind of money, which goes to general party purposes, and the second kind, which can be spent directly on candidates, was blown away when Bob Woodward of The Post reported that the Democratic National Committee put some of the money Gore raised into "hard money" accounts.

Reno acknowledged she learned this from The Post, not from her investigators, and was forced to reexamine her position on whether a counsel should be named.

But whether the money was "soft" or "hard," those phone calls, on their own, don't justify an independent counsel. That's especially true given widespread disagreement over whether the 1883 law they purportedly violated even applies in this case. And as Phil Kuntz reported recently in the Wall Street Journal, Sen. Phil Gramm was quoted in 1995 saying that he placed fund-raising calls, on his credit card, from his Senate office. He later denied explicitly soliciting money. The Justice Department, wrote Kuntz, "considered and decided against pursuing" the case.

Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-Ky.), who has threatened Reno with impeachment, urged the Senate Ethics Committee not to pursue Gramm, according to Kuntz, because so many other senators were probably guilty of the same thing. So Reno can't hang her decision on the phone calls.

But, yes, there are broader and much more troubling questions about the ways Democrats ripped apart the campaign law in 1996. So assume Reno seeks an independent counsel. Who picks the counsel? None other than the three-judge panel headed by Judge David Sentelle.

Judge Sentelle's panel, you'll recall, dismissed the original Whitewater counsel, Robert Fiske, and appointed Kenneth Starr. Sentelle thought the fact that Reno had picked Fiske raised the appearance of conflict of interest.

But appearances didn't seem to bother Judge Sentelle when he lunched with Sens. Jesse Helms and Lauch Faircloth, both North Carolina Republicans, shortly before he replaced Fiske. The same Sen. Faircloth had accused Fiske of a "cover-up." Five past presidents of the American Bar Association issued a statement saying the meeting was "unfortunate, to say the least" and gave rise "to the appearance of impropriety."

"Sentelle has polluted the waters," said Fred Wertheimer, president of Democracy 21 and a fierce critic of both parties' 1996 fund-raising tactics. "The notion of the independent counsel is to depoliticize the process, and the Republicans in Congress want to turn it into a political process."

Reno may have good reasons for dragging her feet on the independent counsel. Perhaps she's not happy with the Starr investigation or thinks she appointed too many counsels in Clinton's first term. It's possible she doesn't trust Judge Sentelle and—like many Democrats—has developed doubts about the independent counsel law.

If any of this is true, she should come right out and say so. In the current issue of the conservative American Spectator, former Reagan Justice Department official Terry Eastland has it right on this point. "There would be nothing necessarily wrong if Reno had changed her mind about the [independent counsel] law . . . and tried to reshape her enforcement of it accordingly," he writes. "But this would be vital information, something worth knowing and evaluating."

Similarly, Eastland said in an interview, if Reno doesn't trust the Sentelle panel, "that's the kind of thing that has to be candidly stated and argued for."

An intriguing alternative to turning to Judge Sentelle comes from Wertheimer and from columnist Al Hunt: Reno should appoint her own counsel within the Justice Department, someone "of unimpeachable reputation, and give that person the charter to do the job" of investigating all finance abuses in 1996, Republican as well as Democratic.

This idea, at least, would require Reno to say exactly what she's thinking and why. Whatever she does, Reno shouldn't let herself be railroaded by Republicans with obvious partisan motives. But she also has to restore confidence in the way the 1996 finance abuses are being investigated.

CAMPAIGN FINANCE OVERKILL

(By William Raspberry)

I make no excuse for President Clinton or Vice President Gore. Indeed, I'm quite prepared to accept that they violated—knowingly violated—federal law with regard to campaign fund-raising.

Still, the hearings before Sen. Fred Thompson's Governmental Affairs Committee make me a little uneasy. The prospect of an independent counsel investigation, given the tendency of those things to get out of hand, is positively chilling.

If that sounds like partisan irresolution, it gets worse. I don't like the idea of high officials getting away with law violations, and yet I can't imagine what punishment of the alleged violations I would accept as equitable.

A bad analogy might demonstrate my dilemma. Say your state—for reasons you don't comprehend and which may not in fact make much sense—has enacted a 28-mph speed limit on an unremarkable two-mile strip of interstate highway. What do you do with motorists who come zooming through at, say, 32 mph?

You don't want to send the message that anyone can violate the speed laws with impunity; speed kills, and you have to believe that those who enacted the limits did so in the interest of public safety.

On the other hand, how many licenses would you snatch, and how many drivers would you send to jail for doing something that (it seemed to you) endangered the public not a whit?

Laws ought both to have some purpose and to advance that purpose. The purpose of the fund-raising laws is clear and commendable; to prevent the buying and selling of public office. But how does the law that has Al Gore in such trouble advance that purpose? It forbids solicitation or receipt of contributions in any federal "room or building occupied in the discharge of official duties." Did Gore solicit campaign contributions from his office phone? Sure he did. Clinton, too. Would the republic have been more secure if they had toddled off to the corner drugstore to make the calls? (Waiting until they got home after work would have been no solution; both live in buildings "occupied in the discharge of official duties.")

People who study these things say the prohibition, part of the civil service reform of a century ago, was designed to keep public officials from pressuring their staffs into making contributions. It did not contemplate telephoned solicitations made to private citizens.

But that's not all that bothers me about the investigations. Thompson's hearings are supposed to have some legislative purpose and, in truth, one keeps hearing about the need for campaign finance reform. But one could be forgiven for wondering if the true purpose isn't to bolster Republican Thompson's own presidential prospects and to destroy Democrat Gore's.

That is, perhaps, a small point. This isn't: The Supreme Court has said money is speech. If that makes sense (and it does to me), how can it make sense to put arbitrary limits on the amount of speech that's permissible?

That's not a trick question; it worries me a lot. It's inconceivable that there should be limits on the amount of time, doorbell-ringing, envelope-stuffing or other forms of political "speech" supporters can contribute to candidates of their choice. Why should we countenance limits on money speech?

The obvious answer is that we don't like the idea of rich people buying influence over public officials or otherwise subverting the government to their private purposes. (It's easy, though not necessarily fair, to assume that the purposes of the rich are more likely to be against the public interest than are the purposes of, say, organized labor.)

Maybe there's no way out of the dilemma. Either we allow free speech in all its forms, or we arbitrarily limit it for people we don't trust. The latest attempt to split the difference—allowing larger amounts of "speech" on behalf of political parties and smaller amounts for candidates—has pretty much come a cropper. Soft money/hard money indeed!

Public financing of campaigns is the most frequently offered solution. But how do you ensure fairness to lesser-known candidates, and how do you ensure the free speech rights of those who talk with their pocketbooks?

We have two things going on at the same time: a serious campaign-finance dilemma and a juicy campaign-finance scandal.

Guess which one will get the attention.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senator from Washington is recognized for 10 minutes.

RETURNING MORE FREEDOM TO OUR LOCAL SCHOOLS

Mr. GORTON. Madam President, yesterday, President Clinton assailed my proposal to give more money to schools all across the country and restore authority for directing those funds to parents and teachers and school board members. The debate about the future of our public schools is vitally important to the future of this country. A front-page Washington Post article today notes: "...more parents than ever are choosing alternatives to public education for their children..." and are doing so in such great numbers that the phenomenon is starting to resemble a revolution. We should read this as a warning signal that parents are beginning to lose faith in their public schools. We must act decisively to restore that faith, improve education, and prepare our children for their future. More of what we are doing now is not enough.

On one point, the President and I do agree: We can improve public education. We part company, however, on who can best make decisions to improve our public schools. I believe that parents and teachers and local school board officials will make the greatest strides in improving education because they are in our homes and classrooms and high schools with our kids. But with his remarks yesterday, President Clinton says to parents and teachers: I don't trust you.

I find it remarkable that the President believes that restoring decision-making authority to parents and teachers and our elected school board members is somehow dangerous. The Gorton education reform amendment increases the amount of money school districts have to work with, thus, expanding the programs they can target to both disadvantaged and high-achieving students.

A recent study found that if Federal education funds for kindergarten through high school are sent directly to school districts, as the Gorton education reform amendment proposes, school districts would receive an additional $670 million. Why would they receive more? Because the funds would bypass the Department of Education and State educational bureaucracies and save that amount in administrative application and compliance costs. Washington State school districts would receive $12.5 million more to target to their most needy students; Arkansas schools would receive $7 million in increased education funds; Mississippi would get $9 million to target disadvantaged students and other school programs.

President Clinton and opponents of giving parents and teachers a larger role in our children's education presume that local school districts will act irresponsibly if Federal strings disappear. This adds insult to injury. How can the President say with a straight face that programs would be "abolished" just because a bureaucrat does not direct them? Those who share the schools and classrooms with our children every day are not going to squander an opportunity to use an increase in Federal funds to address the problems they see every day.

It is also extremely disingenuous to state that my proposal would somehow "close the Department of Education," as President Clinton suggested yesterday. Higher education and dozens of functions relating to education in general will remain in the Department—perhaps too many such functions—but hundreds of bureaucrats who now write rules and regulations to inflict on every school in America will go, and their salaries will be used to hire new teachers and provide better education in every school in our Nation.

Just on Sunday, Madam President, the Columbus Dispatch, in an editorial, summarized the dispute in this fashion:

It's hard to see what the U.S. Department of Education has accomplished in its 20 years of existence to improve this country's system of schooling. The Senate's block grant approach is worth a try.

The will to change and improve our public school system and restore parents' faith in the quality of education it can provide to our kids is there. It is at home in our cities and towns and communities. Will we untie parents' and teachers' hands and let them do their jobs? The biggest point I believe today's Washington Post article makes clear is that parents are not turning to the Federal Government to improve their kids' education—parents and teachers are coming up with alternative solutions because they want the best possible education for their kids.

We must return and restore more freedom, not less, to our local schools, so that we can restore the public's faith in public education.

Mr. GLENN addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. FAIRCLOTH). The Senator from Ohio.

CAMPAIGN FINANCE REFORM

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, I want to address the campaign finance matter that we have been involved with this year. I would like to start off by saying that I think sometimes we give the impression, with all of our horror stories about some of the things that have happened in campaign finance over the past few years, both on Capitol Hill and in the Presidential elections in both parties—that we sometimes emphasize to the point where we might add to the cynicism of the people of this country instead of helping placate or correct some of the reasons for that kind of cynicism.

I want to add that I think the majority of elected officials here in Washington, the majority of the people that run for office, whether high political office here in Washington, in the Congress, or even running for the Presidency or Vice Presidency, or the people back home running for State offices, are by and large some of the finest, most dedicated people we have, and they are dedicated to doing just as fine a job as they possibly can. So I think that sometimes we tend to overdo the criticism to the point where it adds to the problem we are trying to cure.

Having said that, there are problems, and there is no doubt about that. We have to look at the big picture sometimes. I think we get so bogged down into nits and gnats of what a particular advantage is this way to one party or that way to another party, that we sometimes need to stand back and look at the big picture of why some of us feel campaign finance reform is very, very important.

Let's drop back to the point where we see how our political system developed, why it developed the way it did. You know, we have the finest constitutional system of government in the world. We are the envy of much of the rest of the world for our political system. It represents all the people more perfectly than any system of government that has been devised. Winston Churchill put it well once when he said we have "the worst system of government, except for every other system of government ever tried."

We do more towards representing the individual and more towards making sure that every single person has a fair shake in our society than any other government that ever has been, even with the problems that we have. And we have to admit we do have a lot of problems. I see these problems as being mainly ones of danger signs up there to cure these little specks of rot that have crept into our system that could do major harm to our body politic in the future if we do not correct them now.

If we have such a great system of constitutional government, how about the people running that Government? The Constitution does not provide for how we are going to staff the Government. And mere words written on paper—be they the Constitution of the United States, and sacred though that it is—that does not guarantee that we will have a good running Government under that constitutional system unless we have good people in there to make that system work. That is the key, and that is fundamental, because that is what our political systems in this country are. Our political systems are basically the personnel departments to run that constitutional Government.

Those political parties that we have right now that wind up after an election staffing and giving direction to that constitutional system of government—those political parties are not provided for in the Constitution. We don't find anything in the Constitution that says there will be so many people in the Democratic Party, so many people in the Republican Party, and so on. No. In fact, our political parties have just sort of developed over a period of time under our constitutional system.

That is as it should be, I guess. They have evolved. They have changed through the years to better reflect the interests of the people of this country.

But there is one thing you have to have to make that constitutional system of Government work. And that is in any democracy to long endure we have to have in Government the confidence of the people—the confidence of the people. Unless you have that, a democracy may not long endure because people will want to experiment with trying the other systems of government, or they will want to go up and join splinter groups that reflect more their own little, narrow interests of what their parochial views are in their local community and where they think the country should go in the future to benefit them personally. We will see more and more of that, if the confidence of our people in Government goes down.

Look across the seas. We see Italy. I don't know how many it is now—50-some different Governments since World War II. I think they have averaged about one per year, or something like that. They only have a government by a coalition of different groups—disparate groups of people getting together and not making a permanent government for a lengthy period of time, and making temporary alliances for short-term advantage. That is not the hallmark of America. And to see us setting up any possibility of that kind of a situation would play a game of roulette for the future of this country.

Our country was founded on the basis not that we take this group, set it aside, and give it certain advantages. Not that there is a ruling class up here someplace, and they have certain advantages, and we set one class off against another. Our Government was set up on the basis of the importance of each individual—not groups, not special groups, but each single individual; and each individual was a king in this country, each individual was royalty in this country, if you will. Our Government was set up not to have a royalty that dictated their ideas, and everyone else had to live under that kind of rule. We have our constitutional system here where authority wells up from the people through their elected officials. It was that confidence in those elected officials that let us move ahead and become the kind of Nation we have become. We are a representative form of government. We are not a perfect town meeting government as we have seen in New England—the most pure form of democratic expression I guess that we have in our country. We cannot take a referendum on every single vote, in a national referendum—on every single issue—as they can at a town meeting. No. We say we will send people to work full time representing us, and we will trust those people. We will trust those people—that is the important word—to make those decisions on our behalf.

If we start having trust in those people eroded, and we see that trust going downhill, then I see a big danger for our country. Our Nation was founded on this representative form of government that represents all the people all the time. And any time we depart from that kind of a feeling in this country of our Government representing all the people all the time, we engender less faith in our system, and we set up a potential of a slide downhill in our ability to cope with the future.

I don't think the United States of America is ever going to get taken over by the likes of Russia, China, and North Korea and Iraq, or anybody, or put together by any combination. Our country is going to be militarily secure, I believe, into the indefinite future as far as we can see because we are cognizant of the fact that we live in an uncertain world. We will have to protect ourselves. And we are so far ahead of anybody else in military technology and power that I don't see that as a hazard for the future of this country at all. But I do see a danger for our country if we have this increasing cynicism, this cynicism of our people that seems to be growing, and particularly among our young people. If that cynicism grows to the point where our young people in particular feel that politics is just too dirty, "I do not want to touch it, wash my hands if I shook hands with a politician, I just do not want to have anything to do with politics"—if they have that kind of view, then what happens? We will have less support for our political system; that is, the department of personnel for this constitutional system of Government; less support for those parties. We will have less trust of elected Government officials and our representative form of Government. We will have people tending more to split off into special interest groups instead of supporting mainstream parties that have served us well for all of the history of this country—when we get away from representing all the people all the time, we start down a slope that I think is a danger to the future of this country.

One person, one vote, one person, one influence—let's say. We are divided up into so many million little bits of influence in this country in our system of government, one person, one vote, one influence—that is what people think about. We tell our kids. "When they are growing up, when you get to be old enough, you register to vote because your vote is every bit as important as the vote of the President of the United States." And we mean it. And it is. That vote counts every bit as much when the tallies come out on election night—no matter what the rank of the person, be it some gutter bum who got registered and decided to vote, or be it the wealthiest person in this country, or be it the President of the United States. All the votes are equal in that tally. And it is a vote. It is representing those people who are elected to represent all the people and represent them all the time. And that is the basis on which they are elected.

That one influence from each person is supposed to be that person's influence, and influence is the future of this country. That, throughout our history, has given us the confidence to work together.

So, when I see a cynical attitude developing toward Government and politics and those in Government instead of confidence in elected officials, we see question marks all the time about whatever is going on in Government—automatic suspicions, automatic paranoia: "You better watch those people in Washington. They are out to get us," in a certain way or whatever. That to me is the beginning of a danger signal. It is the beginning of the potential of a slide downhill and confidence in Government that to me can lead to many other problems and leave us less able to take care of ourselves as a nation in the future than we have been in the past.

This is erosion of trust to the point where people want no part of politics. They just didn't want any part of it at all because of what they see. It is something that we don't want to see happen.

It is rather peculiar because we see some of this cynicism developing and expressing itself in polls. When people are polled, they let their cynicism all hang out. It is right there in the polling—repeated polling that shows that cynicism has been growing with regard to how people view their Government. And the confidence they have. That is really amazing because we have had rare times in our history when economic times and the general social pattern across the country has been any better. There the lowest unemployment rate, the lowest inflation rate, and Federal employment is coming down. We have a chance of balancing our budget. The times are good, and unemployment is low. We have no big foreign threat out there to us physically. You think people would be very, very happy about this whole thing. But instead of that there has been this gnawing, growing, rotten little specks of cynicism growing on our body politic that I see as a real danger for the long term.

I think we can come back to what I mentioned a little while ago. People no longer feel confident that their primary interests are our primary concern here in Washington. They feel, "Why vote? Why get out there and vote? Why participate in a political party?" Why try an exercise that one little bit of influence they have to put together with millions of other little bits of influence which will direct the future of this country? Why should they try to exercise that little bit of influence when they see that the real influence in Washington, the real influence in our political parties, the real influence in Presidential elections, in congressional elections, in Senate elections, is too often money? It buys access.

Why do we think of Roger Tamraz on the Democratic side who is willing to put $300,000 into a Presidential race because he wanted to get in and try to influence somebody. If he could get to the President, or to the Vice President, or get to somebody, and if he could get them to say, "I will approve your oil pipeline" in Southwest Asia, he was going to make billions out of it. He made no bones about it. He put in $300,000, and he said the next time he would put $600,000 in. Fortunately, it didn't work, to the credit of the people that were in charge—the President, and the other people around there.

But I will tell you. It raises a warning signal to us about what can happen.

I used that example on the Democratic side. How about on the Republican side? How about when you put out invitations to a group called "The Season Ticket Holders" for $250,000 each. One hundred people can join this thing, and for that you are going to get a guaranteed dinner with the chairman of your choice in the Congress. It says it right in there. No problem. You are invited to all the policy matters. You are invited. If you are a businessman and you want to contribute $250,000, or have your corporation give that kind of soft money—and soft money can be given in any amount—then you are guaranteed that you will be able to come in and represent your business interests with the committee chairman of your choice.

It is not in the executive branch. It is here where the laws are formed—right here in Congress. At the bottom of the invitation, it says "Benefits Upon Receipt."

We wonder why the people are a little bit suspicious out there about what is going on.

That was out of the hearings we had in the Governmental Affairs Committee. I could go on and on with a number of other examples. I just used those two to make sure that we all understand that this isn't something that is just one or two or very few people.

It is something that has become endemic in Government. It is something that is pervasive. It is something that is a rot on the body politic. It hasn't ruined it yet. Most of that apple, most of that body politic, most of whatever it is still is in good shape and the people are just as dedicated as they have ever been and the public servants are just as dedicated as they have ever been. But if we let this practice on either side of the aisle grow into the long-term future, we are creating a problem for the future of this country. And that we do not need and we do not want and we cannot afford.

Trust is down. Suspicions are up. People cynically question those of us in office, and we cannot blame them.

Now, some other things have caused some problems in this area, too. One is that campaign spending has gone up and up and up and up and up. A report from the Federal Election Commission—let's go back about 10 years. Let's go back to 1985 and 1986. That is just over 10 years. At that time, the total, all congressional campaigns—just congressional not including the Presidential campaigns—in the 1985-86 cycle, the total spending for everything to do with Congress, Senate and the House of Representatives, was $472 million. Ten years later it is $790 million—$790 million just for congressional races, House and Senate.

This is interesting. The number of candidates has gone up in that period. I guess more people are running in primaries and so on that are subject to Federal elections. Back in 1985-86, there were 1,873 people who ran for national office, congressional campaigns. That has gone up to 2,605. I guess that should be encouraging to us in that maybe more people are running for office. I wish I knew the quality of those people who are running for public office and whether we are getting the best and brightest out there in the system instead of more people deciding to take a whack at running for Congress. Why not? I do not know how you could judge that. Someone could do a political science doctoral thesis trying to analyze that, as to what is happening to the quality of people running for office.

When you go from $472 million in 10 years to $790 million, the money chase is on. The money chase is on, and 70 percent of it goes to TV. If you are not coming into people's homes via TV, you are not, in effect, knocking at the door, as we used to do and greet the people and have a handshake. TV has replaced all that. If you do not come into that person's living room and say hello to them via TV, you are not in the campaign anymore. That requires about 70 percent. So the importance of TV has gone up, and that has raised the cost of campaigning tremendously.

I point these out as a danger to the future as I see it. We had one cataclysmic event back a few years ago, and that is what we all know of by the general term "Watergate." The revelations of Watergate resulted in our saying enough is enough. Congress got to work. It passed some legislation, put some limits on, deciding we were going to regulate some of these things in the future, not let them run rampant like they were because the whole public psyche in this country had been jerked up short at that time. I tell you, everybody was disturbed about this, and we couldn't wait every day to hear what the new revelations were.

Watergate, for the first time, resulted in the resignation of a President of the United States, something that, growing up, we thought would have been absolutely impossible.

But out of those national concerns came reforms, and the reforms served us well, I believe. They worked. We had testimony yesterday from our former colleagues here, Senator Nancy Kassebaum Baker, and a former colleague here also and later Vice President, Walter Mondale, before our Governmental Affairs Committee. They talked about how the reforms put in place following Watergate, they felt, really worked very well. There were some regulations put on. People had some questions about first amendment rights and all these different things that are brought up and discussed in the Chamber now also, but the reforms after Watergate seemed to have worked pretty well.

But then came a series of court and FEC decisions that undermined it and created some loopholes for those Watergate reforms. We started seeing the rise of soft money, and it rose and it rose, and then it really went out through the ceiling in the last election. And that was by far the biggest change that had occurred.

So we are now on a money chase, be it Presidential or be it here in the Congress. I have heard criticism on the floor, as well as in some of the press conferences of some of the Members here, being caustically critical of—and some of the press being caustically critical of—the President going out and fundraising when he says at the same time we need campaign finance reform. Isn't this being hypocritical? I say, no, I do not think so at all because we have not really changed the rules. As the President said, he is not interested in unilateral disarmament at this point.

As I said at our hearing yesterday, if both sides agree that this money chase should not go on the way it is and we agree to limit both sides, then certainly the President should not be out fundraising. If we agree to that, the other side could agree to it also. It would be a little bit like if I was over in England and I got used to driving on the left side of the road and I liked that, and I came back to this country and I put in legislation to say, let's have driving on the left-hand side of the highway become the norm in this country and we are going to pass a law that permits that to happen, but I say I believe in this so fervently I am going to go drive on the left-hand side of the road even before the law is changed, you know what the result would be. I guess we can say the same thing here. I think the President is right in going ahead with fundraising as long as the law is the way it is and the Republicans are doing exactly the same thing.

So I think some of our campaign practices need to be revised, and that is what we are talking about with campaign finance reform.

You know what all the current practices are. We see them every day right here on Capitol Hill. Some people can't go through more than, let's say, a two-pay period here without receiving an invitation here in Washington or someplace to a barbecue, to a coffee, to a reception, to a dinner. Are these all situations where you go and you say, I have to pay $500 or I have to pay $100 or I have to give $1,000 or I can't go to this thing? No. A number of these things, quite a lot of them, as a matter of fact, mean just getting acquainted with people and doing the first stroking, if you will, and setting up a situation where you can go back later and ask for some money, and, hopefully, they will see fit, once you become acquainted with them, to contribute to your campaign. That is the nature of politics. That is the way it is.

But then later on there are some people who creep into this whole process—even though I think the major part of the process is still legitimate and aboveboard—who do want special access. They are not looking to just support someone whose beliefs they believe in, whose statements of purpose, whose ideas of public office are something that they personally believe in—which would be the best of democracy, if we could guarantee that was the type of support being given to individuals.

No; they are people who come in and then want to do what I talked about a little while ago. They want either to buy a ticket to become a season ticket holder and have that guaranteed dinner with the committee chairman of their choice or they are a Tamraz who makes no bones about it; he wants to get his pipeline approved, and he is willing to give $300,000 to get a shot at a few words with the President in hopes he can influence that person to come around to his way of thinking—which did not occur, I repeat.

Is that influence imaginary? Buying access; is that imaginary? No, it is not. When we had insurance legislation here a couple years ago, it came out in the paper that some of the big contributors and big lobbyists were called in—I believe it was on an insurance bill—and actually wrote part of that bill on the Hill here. They called in the lobbyists who made the huge contributions and let them write their own portion of the bill. That was even defended by one of the Members by saying, well, they knew more about it than anybody else. They certainly did, but that did not mean they were going to write it in a way that was for the benefit of all the people all the time. They had bought their way in with influence, and they were writing it for the benefit of some of the people and the benefit of their special interest, you can bet on that, or they would not have been in here doing that.

We saw recently the results of $50 billion being inserted into a bill to benefit the tobacco companies, the biggest contributors. Their chief representative, who reportedly in a magazine makes about $50,000 a month, former Republican National Committee chairman, was the one who apparently worked his way and got that in. That is what people are unhappy about.

I have given both Democratic and Republican examples here because I want to point out that this is not something which is just all on one side of the aisle.

Sometimes the States get out ahead of the Federal Government in these United States of ours. They get out ahead of us in that they can operate, they can act more swiftly to take on a problem as they see it developing. Some of the States have seen their political systems be corrupted, or the danger of being corrupted, by political influence at the local level, and they have taken some action.

The State of Maine has recently passed legislation, the basic theme of which is they are going to try State funding for State races. They are saying, we are going to cure this thing; and rather than try to write more complex laws on top of already complex laws, we are going to say, no, we are not going to do that anymore. We are just going to say, in the best interests of the people in getting the government, getting our elected officials, to make sure they address the concerns of all the people all the time, once they get through the primary, then let's get them some financing here so they do not have to go out on this money chase and promise everything under the sun to get enough money to have a chance of winning an election.

There are 12 other States, as I understand it, that are looking at a similar program right now. Maybe that is the answer for the future. We have seen court rulings and FEC regulations and rulings create loopholes that let people have access to getting around our election laws. Perhaps Federal financing is a way to correct that. I personally think that is something we will come to eventually, whether we like it or not. We will be forced into it because it looks as if, unless something drastic changes in the Chamber here—we may get a bill through, but it appears that it is going to be watered down enough that it may not be the overall comprehensive campaign finance reform that some of us believe, sincerely believe, is necessary if we are going to correct this problem into the future.

I do not rule out the possibility that at some time in the future we are going to have Federal financing of Federal campaigns because I think the people of this country may demand that. I am one of the original cosponsors of a bill here in the Senate, the Kerry-Wellstone bill, to take a look at this, to see if we could not work out something that is satisfactory in that particular area.

So I think we need to watch this experience of the States as they try to take back their State governments and make their State governments representative of all the people all the time, not all the people part of the time and special interests the rest of the time. We need to watch this very, very closely.

Let me address one other area. We haven't had much discussion recently in the Governmental Affairs Committee hearings that we have been having, we have not had much emphasis on enforcement. There have been those who said we have all these laws on the books now. They are not working, so why add more laws on top of them and make more laws that won't work either? That is a pretty good argument, as a matter of fact. But I don't believe that is the way we ought to go. What we should do, we should make a FEC that can enforce the legislation, enforce the laws of the land, enforce the regulations they have put out, and make sure that anyone who violates those regulations is brought up short and is penalized and do it immediately, not years and years later.

Instead of that, what have we seen? We have seen, through the years, the budget for the Federal Election Commission either remain about the same or actually be cut, from year to year. Instead of giving better enforcement, they are only able to give less enforcement. Maybe the people who have perpetrated those cuts on our system here had that in mind. Maybe they did not want to see the FEC be anything more than, what has been termed in the past, a toothless tiger. I think if we have laws they should be enforced. I think whatever is required to help the FEC do that, we should provide the money to do exactly that.

This year we have reached even a ridiculous example. They asked for an additional $4.6 million over there in addition to their, I think it is, $28-point-something million. They asked for an additional $4.6 million to give them special investigative authority, investigative capability to go out and see what happened in the 1996 election. And the committees up here have not only not approved the additional money for them, they have sent word over there specifying they are not to hire more people. They are not to hire more people. That is the word that FEC is operating under from the committees on the Hill right now this very day. They are not to hire more people to look into these alleged violations of law that happened in the last election.

In other words, we are creating a Nation of political scofflaws out there, if you will. Because they know you are not likely to get caught if you do something wrong, because that is just the way the system is. It does not have the capability of picking up all the wrongs in the system. So you have a chance of getting away with all sorts of misdeeds if you want to try it.

So, we need a strong FEC. We had one estimate given to us the other day by one person who studies these things a lot of the time, that they thought the FEC budget should probably be doubled. It should be somewhere around the $50 million mark, instead of hovering around the $30 million or under mark. I would vote for that.

I think we also need to make some changes in the Federal Election Commission, in that I don't believe they are organized on the proper basis. When we say you have six commissioners over there, three will be Republican and three will be Democrat, that sets it up for political bickering right off the bat. It is organized for political disunity going in. It is not organized to get to election fraud and violations without fear or favor, no matter what the politics of it are, Republican, Democrat, or independent. It is set up with three and three, which just breeds political gridlock. And that is exactly what they have had through the years, in many cases. Much of the time.

One of the suggestions that had been made in the past is that we, instead of having the commissioners appointed on a political basis the way they are now, we should have the commissioners appointed from former Federal judges: People who would be stable; they have been used to giving fair consideration of the law and cases, that has been their training, that has been their background; and to be appointed for their nonpolitics, for their apolitical views, if you will, because they would best be able to judge, then, when a Democratic or Republican transgression occurs, they would best be able to give it the proper attention and proper consideration. Rather than just saying I am a Democrat so I better protect my Democratic interests over here no matter what, or I am a Republican so I'll see that we forgive that violation or whatever it is on the Republican side—no. That is not in the best interests of the people of the United States. The best interests of the people of the United States is in having a Federal Election Commission that enforces the law without fear or favor, wherever the violation occurs. And that means, I think, that we have to reorganize at the top level over there.

Going into our committee investigations this year, we were faced with a tough choice.

Before I leave that, for just a moment let me give a few figures here on the FEC, what their budget problems have been. For fiscal 1995 they had over 10 percent of their budget rescinded halfway through the fiscal year, the largest percentage agency rescission of any Government agency. In fiscal 1996 they sought $32 million but they received only $26 million, with some of those funds fenced for other particular purposes. For fiscal 1997 they had their travel budget limited and fenced such that it was difficult to conduct depositions and court appearances, including those undertaken in connection with the Christian Coalition litigation. In fiscal 1998, being considered right now, they asked both the House and Senate for $29 million, plus an additional $4.9 million—I correct my figure I gave a moment ago at $4.8 and $28 million, I guess I said—but they asked both the House and Senate for $29 million plus an additional $4.9 million just to deal with cases arising from the 1996 Federal election. The actual budget is still in conference, but they have been told specifically not to hire more staff to look into those problems of the 1996 election.

Let me tell you one other thing, and this I think is rather amazing. I didn't know this until a few days ago myself. Their total enforcement cadre over there is 30 lawyers to oversee all these hundreds and hundreds and hundreds of cases filed with the FEC. There are 30 lawyers. How many investigators would you think the FEC would have to go out in the field and investigate wrongdoing out there, get the information, go to boards of elections, bring that information back, really create these cases—how many investigators do we figure the FEC has? Do you know what the answer is right now, as of this day, the 1st of October, 1997? They have two, two investigators. And that is up from only one just a short time ago. I guess that is heartening. That is a 100 percent increase, isn't it? We have gone from one up to two.

Two investigators for the FEC. Their lawyers in the enforcement division go out but they don't do investigations. They will go out and do depositions. They will go out and do a court case someplace that has been developed here, but their work is basically paperwork handled at the Washington level. So the investigative capacity at the FEC is not much, two people for the whole agency.

I propose we somehow get some little cadre of FBI people who really know something about investigation and assign them, at least for a period here of a few years, to help out over there, doing real investigative work trying to clean up the problems of campaign finance where the laws have been broken. And there have been laws broken in a number of areas.

Where do they need to look? Starting out our hearings this year I suggested we, instead of just going with Republican investigations or Democratic investigations, I proposed that we pick some areas where we know there are difficulties with campaign finance and then we bring those up, one after the other, and have a series of hearings on each one of these subjects. Let the chips fall where they may, Democrat or Republican, and find out what is wrong with the system, get it out there, get it out in the open. If we need additional law, let's have additional law. If we just need to enforce existing law better, then let's do that, too. But let's find out what the problems are first and then enforce them and make a system that really is run on a tight basis.

What are some of these areas I want to look at? One is foreign money. There are all sorts of allegations about money coming in from wherever, whether it was the Chinese or Chinese Government, where it was being channeled, where it was coming through and who it was going to, and did it affect elections or did it not affect elections—we had all sorts of problems with foreign money potentially coming into the American system. We had one on one side looking at whether it is the Democrats are where the money is coming and John Huang and Charlie Trie, and did that money come from the Government of China? On the other hand, we had the spectacle of Haley Barbour and the Republican National Committee getting loans of money, $2.1 million out of Hong Kong, funding it through the National Policy Forum in this country and into the Republican coffers. So we had bipartisan foreign money problems, there isn't any doubt about it.

So we should be looking at that? That is one area. There are other areas, though, that we have only touched on briefly in the last few hearings that we have had, that I think we also have to look at if we are going to really do the right job, looking into campaign finance reform or campaign finance violations, No. 1; and things the FEC should be monitoring on a steady basis.

How about the second one, third-party transfer? If I have maxed out my contributions that I can give, I say, "I am maxed out." But I turn to somebody else and I say, "OK, look, I'll give you $1,000 and you go over there and you give that in your name and that clears it and I'll just give you the money." That is illegal. We have lots of information about that being done. That whole thing is an area we have really not even explored much yet, yet it was violated time after time after time.

So, foreign money, do we have to look into that? Of course we do. The third party transfer of funds? Of course we do.

Another area was the area of misuse of tax exempt organizations, so-called 501(c)(3) and (c)(4) organizations, where they have organizations given certain tax-exempt status and, for having that status, they are prohibited from political activity. But in this last election that whole thing ran amok. Organizations were being put together with that kind of charter and they were deliberately channeling money through. We have example after example of that, and we have not really had a chance to bring those things out yet, either. So that is another area we ought to be looking at.

Another area the FEC ought to be following, if we gave them adequate resources to do so, is tax-exempt organizations.

Then we had the biggest increase of all and that is in the area of soft money, where you can give any amount you want to give, any amount you want to give. If you are a billionaire you can walk in and put $1 billion down if you wanted to. Do you think that might buy some influence? I think it might buy some, yes. You can put down any amount you want. As I talked about a little while ago, we had the restricted membership of 100, if they would contribute $250,000 to that season ticket holder group that I mentioned just a moment ago when I was lining up one on the Democratic side and one on the Republican side to give some balance to this. The soft money can come in in any amounts now, but it is supposed to be just for party building. It is supposed to be used for things like get-out-the-vote drives and general advertising on general views of the Republican Party or the Democratic Party. Was that misused? There is no doubt whatsoever about the misuse of soft money and the pernicious influence that it had with this last election. The area of influence of soft money has just skyrocketed from election to election since the new FEC ruling just a few years ago.

Another area is the straight old quid pro quo. We could add that as a fifth. If I give you so much money as a public official, then I want you to pass a certain law for me; and you do it. There are examples of quid pro quo also. So, these are all areas that we cannot ignore from the past. There are many of those things, just in those areas that I mentioned, that are flat illegal. Soft money is not illegal. It is perfectly legal now, but we have to make it illegal with McCain-Feingold, which I support fully and I am a cosponsor of. This is probably the most runaway part of campaign financing that we have had in recent elections—certainly in this last election.

Now, along with soft money, that I make such a fuss about, there is one other part. If we are going to correct this, there is one other thing we have to do, too. We cannot just see the money that was formerly going to soft money, to the parties and being misused then, being put into State races or into congressional races. We can't just see that money then not go into soft money but go over into issue advocacy ads and independent expenditures for the so-called issue advocacy ads that can be put on in a particular campaign in the last few days and influence a campaign, quite apart from the person running in that campaign who doesn't even have control of who is coming in and putting on TV ads either for or against him or her.

So we can't just do away with soft money and hope that will solve the problem, because soft money is probably going to gravitate over to the area of issue advocacy or independent expenditures. If we are going to correct one, we have to correct the other; we have to deal with them together.

So the question is, how do we prevent soft money not only from going into issue advocacy ads or independent expenditures, but also we want to make sure that we don't create a loophole here where the soft money now will go by the many, many millions of dollars over to the States, which it would be legal to do right now, go to the States, and the State parties then would use it in particular campaigns within the State by putting on independent ads or issue advocacy ads in support of congressional candidates, even those that are not State races, but there is an interest in them. So you see how complex this whole thing becomes.

Mr. President, those are a few views on some of the things that I see with regard to campaign finance this year.

There are a couple of statements I would like to quote on the floor today. Will Rogers is looked at as one of our great political commentators, in a humorous way, from years past. He did it in a way that got the attention of the people. He was pretty caustic in his comments sometimes. He made a statement once that might be applicable today, though. He said:

Wouldn't it be great if other countries started electing by the ballot instead of by bullet, and us electing by the ballot instead of by bullion?

I think he was right.

Another is a statement by Kin Hubbard, Frank McKinney Hubbard:

When a fellow says, "It ain't the money but the principle of the thing," it's the money.

And you can bet on that.

Jesse Unruh of California some years ago said:

Money is the mother's milk of politics.

And that's sure true. It is as true today as it has ever been before.

Let me finish up where I started off today with this. I am afraid by our talk here about what is the potential for the future that we talk about this in such terms to make our point on the floor that sometimes we emphasize them to the point that we are about to increase what we are trying to prevent, and that is cynicism in this country.

By talking about the difficulties of campaign finance and the transgressions against campaign finance law—which should never have occurred in the last election on both sides of the aisle, and they have to be corrected. I am not trying to say they are not important, but they are. My whole statement today has been along the theme that this is a beginning of a rot we have to correct. So I am not trying to minimize these things.

I hope most of the people of the country realize that most of the people who run for high office do so with very good purpose in mind. Most of the people here, I would say, are very talented people. Most of them could probably be making more in business or in some corporate position or outside of public office than they do here. Not all of them, but certainly many people could. We have people running for office who are very fine people.

But this is a danger when we see things like what happened in this last election—the potential with foreign money, although all the sums talked about or rumored, whatever came from foreign money is a tiny little pittance, just a tiny little nothing almost compared to what was spent. That $790 million I indicated was spent in the last election just in congressional elections. Not even the Presidential election is included in that.

So a few million dollars that may have come from some foreign source is a fairly small amount, but it is a danger sign. We have to regulate that. We have to cut it off. We have to make our restrictions enforceable if we are not to see that grow into the future, and that is the danger; that is the danger. We have to make sure that with third-party transfer of money, we don't just find rampant disregard of our laws, and then people just saying, "I know my

We have to make sure that doesn't occur. We have to make sure the misuse of tax exempts, which ran rampant this last time, as conduits from people who had special interest money to put in—and they put it in by the millions. We have evidence of where that went and how it went. I hope we are able to put that on in the hearings before our campaign finance investigation ends on the Governmental Affairs Committee.

All these areas—whether it is foreign money or third-party money or tax-exempt money or soft money or quid pro quo—all these areas must be enforced with existing law. Then we can go ahead with bringing soft money under better regulation than we have ever done in the past. In fact, there isn't any regulation on it to speak of now. Then we are making real progress.

I believe the McCain-Feingold bill, which I fully support, is a start. I don't view it as anything more than a start. I don't think Senator MCCAIN or Senator FEINGOLD feels it is anything but a start right now, but it is a start. It is a start in showing people that, yes, we can act here in Washington; yes, when we do see a danger for the future, when we see some rot beginning on this body politic, we can cut that out, we can correct it, we have the capability to do it and we can restore confidence.

Where we see cynicism and we see disregard for law, we see cynicism about what may be going on with our Government, we can replace that, once again, with real confidence, real faith in letting the people of this country know that we are concerned and are willing to do something about it.

That is the reason why I support the McCain-Feingold proposal so wholeheartedly. They are important, and I am hoping that we can really have a vote up or down eventually. I know the so-called legislative tree has been filled that will try to thwart the passage of this legislation, but I am hoping we will really see a vote possible on this legislation before we finish with it. I guess the schedule is we will finish with it sometime next week.

Mr. President, this was a rather lengthy statement. I will undoubtedly have more to say about this next week.

I ask unanimous consent that the full text of my prepared remarks be printed in the RECORD, and I yield the floor.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

(By Senator John Glenn)

"Wouldn't it be great if [other countries] started electing by the ballot instead of by bullet, and us electing by the ballot instead of by bullion?"—Will Rogers.

"When a fellow says, 'It ain't the money but the principle of the thing,' it's the money,"—Frank McKinney Hubbard ("Kin Hubbard").

"Money is mother's milk of politics."—Jesse Unruh.

Well, Mr. President, I have often wondered if and when this day would come. I recognize that both the distinguished Majority Leader and the equally distinguished Minority Leader have worked long and hard to get this bill to the floor and I congratulate them on their efforts. I also want to express my appreciation of Senators McCain and Feingold as the authors of this legislation and for their leadership on an issue that truly goes to the heart of American values. Their bipartisan cooperation has pointed us in the right direction and I hope that we can follow their example. We now have an opportunity to restore faith in our American system and renew our commitment to government for all the people, all the time and not some of the people some of the time, special interests buying access too much of the time.

One thing is clear to me. Our current system is sick and must be healed. We must work together to find a way to bring that needed reform. Our nation is confronted by many concerns and we have spent much of this year addressing some of those problems through the budget, reconciliation, defense authorization, appropriations bills, and the Chemical and Biological Weapons Treaty. With this debate we turn our attention to a more fundamental question: the role of money in our electoral system. I believe that a simple principle should apply in our democracy. We should encourage the active participation of the greatest possible number of citizens and restrain the undue influence of narrow factions and special interests. Only by insuring that our electoral system is open and fair can the notion of "consent of the governed" have true meaning.

How we finance our election campaigns is a central feature of how American citizens judge the integrity of our democracy. Many Americans see our current campaign fund raising practices as a form of corruption and because they believe that some interests have an unfair advantage when it comes to governmental decision making. I believe that this contributes to a corrosive cynicism that undermines America. When voters continually witness the political money chase they conclude that our system is for sale, that politicians are bought, and that policy decisions are made to favor the highest bidder.

We have all noted the increasing numbers of people who lack confidence in government and do not trust the government to do the right thing. We have witnessed declining voting participation.

Some would have us believe that campaign finance reform isn't of any interest to the American public. Some say the public doesn't care, why should we care? I think that's flat wrong. I think the public does care.

Let's face it, the public continues to lose faith in their federal government. Recent polls have shown that 70% of Americans want campaign finance reform, but only 30% believe it will happen. And perhaps most disturbing of all, three out of four interviewed do not trust us in Washington to do what is right.

Let me read a quote about government leaders from one of those people interviewed: "I don't expect too much . . . They're all crooked. It's just a degree of crookedness."

That's chilling. And I'm afraid it's a sentiment that is all too common.

Campaign finance reform is a perfect example of why the public doesn't trust us.

Another recent poll (Center For Responsive Politics, conducted in early April) found that 60 percent of the people polled thought campaign finance reform should be a high priority this year. And, late last year, (Mellman Group, October, 1996) showed that 59 percent supported the concept of public financing of elections to clean up this mess.

Yet, despite its desire to see solutions, the public simply hears out of Washington that no one cares about campaign finance reform. The public sees both Democrats and Republicans sling mud at each other over each party's excesses, but they don't hear a real desire to clean up the mud. They hear about attempts to block reform, that reform isn't the "American way."

Poll after poll shows the public wants campaign finance reform. I think we should listen.

At the same time we have seen spending in campaigns rise through the roof. According to the Federal Election Commission (FEC) the cost of all Congressional campaigns more than doubled from $354.7 million in 1981-2 to $765.3 million in 1995-96. Major political party efforts at the local, state and national level increased from $254.1 million in 1981-2 to $881 million in 1995-96.

Of course most of this money has been used to purchase more and more broadcast time at ever increasing costs to reach more and more voters over an ever longer campaign. One could conclude that the amount of money raised and spent has had a negative effect on voter attitudes and participation.

WATERGATE AND REFORM

We all remember the Watergate era that led to the campaign finance rules under which we currently operate. Reform at that time was long overdue. Important improvements were made at that time. Prior to the enactment of the Federal Election Campaign Act and its amendments, some campaigns conducted business through slush funds and hush money. Major reforms included the establishment of the Federal Election Commission, requiring reporting of contributions and expenditures by federal candidates, limits on individual contributions, and spending limits and partial public financing of presidential campaigns.

Unfortunately, those reforms have been eroded over the years by FEC rulings and Supreme Court decisions such as Buckley v. Valeo—overruling spending limits for Congressional candidates and equating money with free speech—and Colorado Campaign Republican Committee v. FEC—allowing political parties to make independent expenditures.

THE ROAD TO REFORM

With this debate we continue the long battle to reform our campaign finance system. The former Senator from Oklahoma, Senator Boren first brought the need for reform to the attention of the Senate in 1985. The battle having been joined, it was difficult to get it considered in the 99th Congress. Former Senator Goldwater of Arizona played an important role.

In the 100th Congress, the Senate conducted a historical record number of cloture votes. In 1988, we saw a scene right out of Frank Capra's "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" with an all night filibuster and the Sgt. At Arms arresting absent Senators and bringing them to the Senate chamber. I believe that our inability to bring about reform has made things worse.

CURRENT PRACTICES

Let me be clear. I do not believe that raising money for campaigns is corrupt. I do not believe that our government is corrupt because public officials raise money for campaigns. I believe that fund raising and public policy decision making can be kept separate. I believe that those who choose public service have a high calling. This is an honorable profession and I have always been proud to serve.

However, with the explosion of fund raising and the erosion of our laws, many citizens believe that the credibility of our electoral process has been impugned by the view that special interests have special access and therefore have undue influence.

We must reform our system to restore faith in our democracy.

We all are witnesses to the perception that money has a growing influence. Political parties and candidates are engaged in an endless pursuit of campaign funds made up of both hard and soft money. Not a day passes without a full schedule of events, receptions, coffees, meetings, dinners, lunches, discussions, and, forums—many ultimately intended to establish the climate to eventually raise money.

Soft money, campaign contributions not directly used in behalf of federal candidates and not required to be reported has become the crack cocaine of politics and parties and candidates are addicted.

As the ranking member of the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee I have spent all year looking into campaign fund raising. It is clear to me that many contributors believe that they get what they are seeking. They pay for access in the legislative and executive branches, and they get it.

We have been examples of contributors who want to appear to have influence by being seen with important officials and to have their pictures taken as a way to impress others. We have also seen contributors who have a special interest or particular project that they want considered. Through their contributions they obtain access.

Many contributors do have interests that can be affected by government decisions. No one can underestimate the impact on the American people when headline after headline links governmental action and campaign contributions. The $50 billion tax benefit for tobacco companies in this year's tax bill, inserted in secret and with no debate, only serves to make many citizens believe that the integrity of our electoral process has been compromised by special interests.

NEEDED REFORM

Eventually, Mr. President, I believe that the answer to our concern is to eliminate the role of private money in campaigns. We should allow campaigns to be fairly and equally underwritten by all Americans through a some form of publicly supported financing.

That is why I joined with my colleagues Senator Kerry of Massachusetts and Senator Wellstone of Minnesota in cosponsoring a bill, the Clean Money Clean Campaign Act, based upon the Maine plan to limit campaign spending, prohibit special interest contributions, eliminate fund raising efforts, provide equal funding and a level playing field for all candidates and end the loopholes that have wrecked our current system. Through a publicly funded system we can end the current abuse and establish a system that takes us back to our major responsibility, representing the interests of "all the people, all the time".

I recognize that the time has probably not yet come to move to federal financing, but I believe that the more the American people focus on the current system and its exploding abuses, the more likely it will be that the support will grow for such a change.

MCCAIN-FEINGOLD

The bill before us originally contained spending limits for Congressional candidates. In an effort to reach out for a consensus on this issue, those provisions have been eliminated. Nevertheless, we now consider a bill which I believe addresses many important concerns.

We must address the question of soft money contributions. We must find a way to require the disclosure of funds used for express advocacy and issue advocacy.

I believe we have to take a hard look at the FEC. We must have enforcement of election law—present or future—or we encourage scofflaw parties and candidates. The FEC cannot do an adequate job. Currently the FEC has 30 enforcement attorneys. Mr. President, that is fewer than the number of lawyers currently working on the Governmental Affairs investigation. The FEC has two—count them—two full time investigators. In order to insure better enforcement we must consider that the $28 million FEC budget should be increased and if expected to do an adequate job it should be nearly doubled. Furthermore, while the FEC is being expanded I believe that investigative assistance should be provided by at least a small group of FBI agents.

SUMMARY OF FEC BUDGET WOES

Fiscal 1995: Had over 10% of budget rescinded half way through the fiscal year, the largest percentage agency rescission of any government agency

Fiscal 1996: Sought $32 million but received only $26 million with some funds "fenced" for particular purposes.

Fiscal 1997: Had travel budget limited and fenced such that it was difficult to conduct depositions and court appearances including those undertaken in connection with the Christian Coalition litigation

Fiscal 1998: Asked both the House and Senate for $29 million plus an additional $4.9 million just to deal with cases arising from the 1996 federal election. Actual budget is still in conference but have been told specifically not to hire more staff. Summary of FEC Provisions in Clean Money Clean Campaign Bill

Adds "independent" Commissioner selected by independent commission to the FEC

Limits Commissioners to one six year term
Prohibits contributions from individuals not qualified to vote (juveniles, felons and foreign nationals)

Permits the Commission to conduct random audits of PACs, candidate and party committees

Grants the Commission the authority to seek an injunction to halt illegal act PRIOR to the election

Lowers the threshold for opening an investigation from reason to believe a violation has occurred to reason to open an investigation

Mandatory requirement to file disclosure reports either electronically or by fax.

Through this debate I hope that we can work together and make needed improvements to our system of campaign finance. We must clean up campaigns and restore faith in our government.

Ms. COLLINS addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair recognizes the distinguished Senator from Maine.

HEALTH CONCERNS CAUSED BY INCREASING AMOUNT OF IMPORTED FOOD AND VEGETABLES

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, Americans have long been urged by our doctors, our teachers, and our parents to eat at least five servings every day of fruits and vegetables. When we follow this good advice, we assume that the fruits and vegetables that we are consuming are wholesome. Recent reports, however, have raised questions about the safety of imported food products. Our markets are increasingly filled with imported food that may not meet U.S. food safety standards. Thus, American consumers seeking a healthy diet face the unappetizing risk of unknowingly subjecting themselves to tainted imported food.

As the chairman of the Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations, I am conducting an investigation into the safety of food imports. I have asked the General Accounting Office to examine whether or not the Federal Government adequately protects the American people from tainted imported food. We need to know how imports are currently being inspected, what resources are being devoted to food safety and whether the highest risks are being given the highest priority in the inspection process. We should make certain, Mr. President, that our food safety programs are effectively and efficiently managed to safeguard the public's health.

Recent news reports have shown several instances where tainted imported food has caused serious illnesses. Food safety programs and food safety problems are not limited to beef and poultry, and it is not just food coming from domestic facilities that can cause health problems.

Imported fruits and vegetables in increasing numbers are causing serious illnesses. In March, over 260 children and teachers from Michigan developed hepatitis after eating frozen strawberries that were imported from Mexico. Those berries were illegally provided to the School Lunch Program, which requires food used to be produced in the United States. Instead, the tainted Mexican berries had been shipped to over 1,500 locations across the country, including my home State of Maine. In another example, over 2,000 people were infected with cyclospora in the last 2 years from eating tainted raspberries from Guatemala, making it the largest outbreak of food-borne disease in recent years.

Mr. President, I believe Congress must thoroughly examine the safety of imported food products. Currently, the Food and Drug Administration and the Department of Agriculture's Food Safety and Inspection Service have shared responsibility for the regulation and inspection of imported food. Agriculture officials are responsible primarily for meat and poultry, while the Food and Drug Administration regulates and inspects other food products. Standards in enforcement are thus different, depending on the type of food. In addition, the significant increase in food imports has resulted in a system where consumers cannot be assured of the safety of the food they eat. A New York Times article on September 29 of this year, just this past week, indicates that food imports have doubled since the 1980s, straining the limits of our current inspection system.

Later this week, President Clinton is expected to announce several initiatives to increase and improve Federal attention to food safety. I welcome the President's increased interest in the safety of imported food products, and when his proposal is transmitted to the Congress, I will closely examine it to determine if it is, in fact, an effective and adequate response to this problem.

As chairman of the Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations, I want to make sure that our current programs are being effectively managed and that both existing and new resources are efficiently administered to promote safe food, especially imported food.

Mr. President, the safety of food product imports is literally a life-and-death issue for many Americans, especially our elderly and our children. Food safety deserves close attention of the administration and the Congress, and I look forward to working with my colleagues in the months ahead as my subcommittee continues its investigation and conducts hearings on this important matter.

THE VERY BAD DEBT BOXSCORE

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, at the close of business yesterday, Tuesday, September 30, 1997, the Federal debt stood at $5,413,146,011,397.34. (Five trillion, four hundred thirteen billion, one hundred forty-six million, eleven thousand, three hundred ninety-seven dollars and thirty-four cents)

One year ago, September 30, 1996, the Federal debt stood at $5,224,811,000,000. (Five trillion, two hundred twenty-four billion, eight hundred eleven million)

Five years ago, September 30, 1992, the Federal debt stood at $4,064,621,000,000. (Four trillion, sixty-four billion, six hundred twenty-one million)

Ten years ago, September 30, 1987, the Federal debt stood at $2,350,277,000,000 (Two trillion, three hundred fifty billion, two hundred seventy-seven million) which reflects a debt increase of more than $3 trillion—$3,062,869,011,397.34 (Three trillion, sixty-two billion, eight hundred sixty-nine million, eleven thousand, three hundred ninety-seven dollars and thirty-four cents) during the past 10 years.

U.S. FOREIGN OIL CONSUMPTION FOR WEEK ENDING SEPTEMBER 26TH

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, the American Petroleum Institute reports that for the week ending September 26, the U.S. imported 8,262,000 barrels of oil each day, 1,726,000 barrels more than the 6,536,000 imported each day during the same week a year ago.

Americans relied on foreign oil for 56.5 percent of their needs last week, and there are no signs that the upward spiral will abate. Before the Persian Gulf war, the United States obtained approximately 45 percent of its oil supply from foreign countries. During the Arab oil embargo in the 1970's, foreign oil accounted for only 35 percent of America's oil supply.

Anybody else interested in restoring domestic production of oil? By U.S. producers using American workers?

Politicians had better ponder the economic calamity sure to occur in America if and when foreign producers shut off our supply—or double the already enormous cost of imported oil flowing into the United States—now 8,262,000 barrels a day.

BAILEY HOWELL

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, the State of Mississippi is very proud of the induction of Bailey Howell into the Basketball Hall of Fame.

His college career at Mississippi State University still stands as the most impressive in the school's history.

He was second only to Wilt Chamberlain in the 1959 NBA draft, and he became one of the best professional players ever.

Today, he is living in Starkville, MS, where he spends much of his time engaged in church-related activities. He is a wonderful role model for today's star athletes.

I ask unanimous consent that two articles from the Clarion-Ledger describing his great career be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the articles were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Clarion-Ledger, Sept. 29, 1997]

HOWELL TO ENTER HALL OF FAME

(By Mike Knobler)

Mary Lou Howell will never forget what she said to the 6-foot-7 stranger in 1958 at a Baton Rouge church.

"I asked the dumbest question of all, 'Do you play basketball?'" Howell recalls. "I know he thought, 'Oh, this girl is really dumb.'"

"When I told my father, he said 'He won't be interested in you. He's really big-time.'"

Dad, it turns out, was only half right about Bailey Howell, who has been married to Mary Lou for 38 years and tonight becomes the first Mississippi man inducted into the Basketball Hall of Fame.

Bailey Howell's brilliant career, at Mississippi State University and with four NBA teams, included enough honors and statistical superlatives to fill most of this newspaper.

Thirty-eight years after his final MSU season, Howell still holds numerous school records, including highest career scoring average, most points in a game and most rebounds in a game, season or career.

No wonder he was the second player picked in the 1959 NBA draft, behind only Wilt Chamberlain.

But talk to Howell and the people who know him and you hear less about the numbers and more about the man behind them, a man dedicated to his family, to his God and to never-ending competition.

Former Boston Celtics teammate Satch Sanders tells of Howell's approach to pregame layup drills. Most players jogged through them casually; Howell sprinted fullspeed.

"You had to get out of the way," Sanders says. "We'd say, 'Bailey, save something for the game.' His philosophy was: If you ever take it easy going to the basket, there's a strong possibility you'd do that in a game."

Son-in-law Scott Stricklin tells of a two-on-two game he played during his first vacation with the Howell family. It was Stricklin and Howell against the two other sons-in-law.

"The other guys wound up with bruises and knots on their heads," Stricklin says. "He was almost 60 and playing with guys in their 20s, but he was so competitive it was like an NBA championship game."

Howell competes even when he's mowing his lawn. He times himself, always pushing to work faster and more efficiently. "I'm one-third through," he'll shout.

That kind of relentless intensity helped make him a dominating center in college and a six-time all-star forward in the NBA.

Howell won NBA championships with the Celtics in 1968 and 1969 after winning State's first Southeastern Conference championship in 1958. One of Howell's few regrets is that that 24-1 team in 1958 wasn't allowed to try for an NCAA championship. The Bulldogs were chosen for the NCAA Tournament, but Mississippi government leaders barred State from participating because it would have played against racially integrated teams.

Decades later, coach Richard Williams paid his respect to Howell by including him in the official traveling party for State's 1995 trip to the NCAA regionals and its 1996 trip to the Final Four.

VERY SPECIAL HONOR

Delta State University coach Margaret Wade and player Lusia Harris are the only Mississippians in the Basketball Hall of Fame. Howell joins them tonight. He'll be escorted by friend, teammate and Hall of Famer John Havlicek.

"It's just a very special honor and a thrill," Howell says. "To be recognized alongside those individuals that are in there, it's just really, I really struggle with words to express just how special it is."

Bailey and Mary Lou Howell will be accompanied at tonight's induction ceremony in Springfield, Mass., by their three daughters. One of those daughters, Beth Hansen of Jackson, named one of her sons after her dad. Bailey Hansen will be there tonight, too.

Children and family have always been important to Bailey Howell. One time, it carried over onto the basketball court.

As most parents do, Bailey and Mary Lou used to spell out things around the house that they didn't want their young daughters to understand. One night as an opponent lined up for a free throw, Bailey turned to a teammate and said, "If you get this rebound, hit me. I'll be going b-a-c-k-d-double o-r."

During the season, the Howells used to live wherever Bailey played—first Detroit, then Baltimore, then Boston and finally Philadelphia. In the offseason, though, they always returned to Starkville, where Bailey and Mary Lou still live.

When Bailey Howell retired in 1971, he thought about going into coaching.

"At 35, at the age where moving my children was really bothering them, I decided that wasn't something I could do," he says.

But he stayed involved in basketball by working for shoemaker Converse for almost 23 years. And for six of the last seven years, he has served as a role model at the NBA's mandatory rookie orientation camp run by his former teammate Sanders, an NBA vice president.

"He'd talk about staying grounded, thinking in terms of family, religion," Sanders says. "Just homespun good sense. Bailey has always been a highly respected player, but more than that he has always been very grounded. The Hall of Fame as far as I'm concerned will be a better place with Bailey in it."

WORKING FOR CHURCH

Nowadays, Bailey Howell, 60, puts his dedication to work for the Church of Christ in Starkville. Bailey and Mary Lou spent a month this summer with a church group teaching conversational English in Sopot, Poland, near Gdansk.

"His mind is very God-centered," Mary Lou Howell says. "We go to church and to Mississippi State sporting events."

The Bulldogs have had many talented players since Howell, but those who remember Howell's playing days say his ability, charisma and class set him apart.

Lee Baker, then sports editor of the defunct Jackson Daily News, won't forget the night he covered the final game of Howell's junior season at Mississippi State. When Baker arrived home, his wife was in the hospital delivering their son.

He went to the hospital, then headed to the newspaper to write.

"We were going to name him John Berrian, after my grandfather," Baker says. "At the end of my column, I announced the arrival of John Bailey Baker. My wife didn't know her son's name until she read it in the paper."

WITH HOWELL IN SHRINE, CELTICS KEEP WINNING

(By Jeff Donn)

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.—Baily Howell still shudders at the memory of his first season with the Boston Celtics.

Bob Cousy was retired. Bill Russell was no longer the future of basketball. And the Celtics' march of eight straight NBA championships ended in 1967 when Philadelphia finally broke through.

"My first year there we lost, so here comes the kiss of death!" said Howell, a star at Mississippi State. "Before I even got to the Celtics, the team was getting old together."

Winning, though, had not gotten old to them. With Howell, player-coach Russell, John Havlicek and Sam Jones, they went on to claim the last two of 10 titles within 11 seasons—something no other team has approached. And they have been reaping honors since, their latest on Monday with the entry of Howell into the Basketball Hall of Fame.

Others inducted Monday night were three coaches—Pete Carril of Princeton, Don Haskins of Texas-El Paso and Antonio Diaz-Miguel of Spain—as well as 1980s NBA scoring leader Alex English and women's stars Denise Curry and Joan Crawford.

Howell, a 6-foot-7, 220-pounder and the forerunner of today's power forward, is the 185th Celtics player and 23rd team entry, including coach Red Auerbach, in the Hall of Fame. No other team approaches those numbers.

Howell averaged 18.7 points and 10 rebounds game.

"Today, everything is such big business," said Howell, 60, who now manages commercial real estate. "The game is a game people love to watch and love to play at all levels. It's not just how much money somebody makes and how much profit."

Carril's Princeton teams made their name by upending more athletic opponents. On the sidelines was Carril, a rumpled elf with mussed hair who gesticulated like a New York City cabby.

Yet Carril, 67, now an assistant coach for the NBA's Sacramento Kings, is the only Division I college coach to win more than 500 games without the help of sports scholarships.

Did Princeton's half-court game and low scores ever get tedious?

"The only time I ever heard the word 'boring' was from the other side," Carril said.

Haskins also made a reputation by outplaying better known opponents. His team—then called Texas Western—fielded five black starters to defeat Adolph Rupp's all-white Kentucky stars in the 1966 NCAA championship.

With his unorthodox high-release jumper, English was the consummate scorer, hitting for 19,682 points in the 1980s, but unable to make it to the NBA Finals.

"He scored so easy and so often that it looked like he was bored out there," Howell said.

NOTICE OF PROPOSED RULEMAKING

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, pursuant to section 303 of the Congressional Accountability Act of 1995 (2 U.S.C. sec. 1383), a notice of proposed rulemaking was submitted by the Office of Compliance, U.S. Congress. The notice publishes proposed amendments to regulations previously adopted by the Board implementing various labor and employment and public access laws to covered employees within the legislative branch.

Section 304(b) requires this notice to be printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, therefore I ask unanimous consent that the notice be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the notice was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

OFFICE OF COMPLIANCE—THE CONGRESSIONAL ACCOUNTABILITY ACT OF 1995: AMENDMENTS TO PROCEDURAL RULES

NOTICE OF PROPOSED RULEMAKING

Summary: The Executive Director of the Office of Compliance is proposing to amend the Procedural Rules of the Office of Compliance to cover the General Accounting Office ("GAO") and the Library of Congress ("Library") and their employees. The Congressional Accountability Act of 1995 ("CAA"), 2 U.S.C. §§ 1301-1438, applies the rights and protections of eleven labor and employment and public access laws to covered employees and employing offices within the Legislative Branch. Five sections of the CAA, which apply rights and protections of the Employee Polygraph Protection Act of 1988 ("EPPA"), the Worker Adjustment and Retraining Notification Act ("WARN Act"), the Uniformed Services Employment and Reemployment Act of 1994 ("USERRA"), and the Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970 ("OSHAct"), and which prohibit intimidation or reprisal for the exercise of rights under the CAA, become effective with respect to GAO and the Library on December 30, 1997. This Notice of Proposed Rulemaking ("NPRM") proposes to extend the coverage of the Procedural Rules to include GAO and the Library and their employees for purposes of proceedings relating to these five sections of the CAA and the general provisions of the rules relating to ex parte communications. These proposed amendments to the Procedural Rules have been approved by the Board of Directors of the Office of Compliance.

Dates: Comments are due within 30 days after the date of publication of this NPRM in the Congressional Record.

Addresses: Submit comments in writing (an original and 10 copies) to the Executive Director, Office of Compliance, Room LA 200, John Adams Building, 110 Second Street, S.E., Washington, D.C. 20540-1999. Those wishing to receive notification of receipt of comments are requested to include a self-addressed, stamped post card. Comments may also be transmitted by facsimile ("FAX") machine to (202) 426-1913. This is not a toll-free call. Copies of comments submitted by the public will be available for review at the Law Library Reading Room, Room LM-201, Law Library of Congress, James Madison Memorial Building, Washington, D.C., Monday through Friday, between the hours of 9:30 a.m. and 4:00 p.m.

For further information contact: Executive Director, Office of Compliance, at (202) 724-9250 (voice), (202) 426-1912 (TTY). This notice will also be made available in large print or braille or on computer disk, upon request to the Office of Compliance.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION

1. Background and Purpose of this Rulemaking

The Congressional Accountability Act of 1995 ("CAA" or the "Act"), Pub. L. 104-1, 109 Stat. 3, 2 U.S.C. §§ 1301-1438, applies the rights and protections of eleven labor and employment and public access laws to covered employees and employing offices within the Legislative Branch. With respect to GAO and the Library, five sections of the CAA will become effective as of December 30, 1997: (a) section 204, applying rights and protections of the Employee Polygraph Protection Act of 1988 ("EPPA"), restricts the use of lie detector tests by employing offices; (b) section 205, applying rights and protections of the Worker Adjustment and Retraining Notification Act ("WARN Act"), assures covered employees of notice before office closings and mass layoffs; (c) section 206, applying rights and protections of the Uniformed Services Employment and Reemployment Act of 1994 ("USERRA"), protects job rights of covered employees who serve in the military and other uniformed services; (d) section 215, applying rights and protections of the Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970 ("OSHAct"), protects the safety and health of covered employees from hazards in their places of employment; and (e) section 207 forbids intimidation or reprisal against covered employees for exercising rights under other sections of the CAA.

The Procedural Rules of the Office of Compliance establish procedures for considering matters that involve employing offices and covered employees other than GAO and the Library and their employees. The purpose of this rulemaking is to extend the rules to cover GAO and the Library and their employees for purposes of any proceedings in which GAO or the Library or their employees may be involved as employing offices or covered employees.

The Board of Directors has also proposed to extend its substantive regulations implementing sections 204, 205, and 215 of the CAA to cover GAO and the Library and their employees. The NPRM was published in the September 9, 1997 issue of the Congressional Record, at 143 Cong. Rec. S9014.

2. Record of Earlier Rulemakings

To avoid duplication of effort, the Executive Director plans to rely generally on the record of earlier rulemakings. The current Procedural Rules of the Office of Compliance were proposed, adopted, and amended in three phases during the past two years. See 141 Cong. Rec. S17012 (daily ed. Nov. 14, 1995) (NPRM); 141 Cong. Rec. S19239 (daily ed. Dec. 22, 1995) (final rules); 142 Cong. Rec. H7450 (daily ed. July 11, 1996) (NPRM); 142 Cong. Rec. S10980 (daily ed. Sept. 19, 1996) (final rules); 143 Cong. Rec. S25 (daily ed. Jan. 7, 1997) (NPRM); 143 Cong. Rec. H1879 (daily ed. Apr. 24, 1997) (final rules). A copy of the Procedural Rules of the Office of Compliance is available for inspection at the Law Library Reading Room, at the address and times stated at the beginning of this Notice, and may also be viewed or downloaded from the Office of Compliance's internet Website at <http://www.compliance.gov/proful3.html>, or <http://www.access.gpo.gov/compliance/proful3.html>.

3. Proposed Amendments

The Executive Director is presently aware of no reason why the procedural rules to cover GAO and the Library and their employees should be separate or substantively different from the rules already adopted for other employing offices and their employees. The Executive Director therefore proposes in this NPRM to extend the coverage of the rules already adopted to include GAO and the Library and their employees, and to make no other substantive change to the rules. Specifically, the NPRM proposes to amend the definitions established in section 1.02 of the Procedural Rules of the Office of Compliance: (a) by including the employees of GAO and the Library in the definition of "covered employee," (b) by including GAO and the Library in the definition of "employing office," and (c) by adding a new paragraph (q) to section 1.02 specifying that GAO and the Library and their employees are included in these definitions only for the purposes of proceedings involving sections 204, 205, 206, 207, or 215 of the CAA or for purposes of the rules regarding ex parte communications. A technical correction is also necessary in the language being amended.¹

4. Request for Comment

The Executive Director invites comment on these proposed amendments generally and invites comment specifically on whether there is any reason why the rules for GAO and the Library and their employees should be separate or different from the rules already adopted for other employing offices and their employees.

Signed at Washington, DC., on this 30th day of September, 1997.

RICKY SILBERMAN,
Executive Director,
Office of Compliance.

Accordingly, the Executive Director of the Office of Compliance hereby proposes the following amendments to the Procedural Rules of the Office of Compliance:

TREASURY/POSTAL APPROPRIATIONS CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. GRAHAM. Mr. President, I appreciate the chance to record my comments regarding the conference report on the Treasury-Postal appropriations bill.

This legislation will help fund national functions, such as law enforcement and delivery of the mail. The law-enforcement provisions include an important anticrime initiative for Florida, which is strongly supported by public-safety officials. The anticrime provision would fund the establishment of a high intensity drug trafficking area in central Florida.

I have worked closely with colleagues Senator CONNIE MACK and Congressman JOHN MICA of Florida to include this measure in the conference report.

In an effort to fight crime and to support law enforcement, I voted for the conference report for the appropriations for the Treasury Department, the U.S. Postal Service, the Executive Office of the President, and certain independent agencies for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1998.

This conference report also contains a provision to adjust congressional pay for cost of living. When the Senate considered its version of this appropriations bill, the legislation did not include a pay adjustment for Members of Congress. The record reflects that I support the Senate version of this legislation that was submitted to a House-Senate conference.

If I had the opportunity to vote on the proposed adjustment as a separate, stand-alone measure, I would have voted "no."

By Mr. KERREY:

S. 1242. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to allow the nonrefundable personal credits, the standard deduction, and the deduction for personal exemptions in determining alternative minimum tax liability; to the Committee on Finance.

ALTERNATIVE MINIMUM TAX LIABILITY LEGISLATION

Mr. KERREY. Mr. President, I am introducing legislation today to ensure that families are not denied the tax relief we promised them under the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997.

What we promised under the Taxpayer Relief Act was a child credit to help families raise their kids and an education credit to help make higher education more affordable. As it turns out, the reality may be far different. What we may be doing is throwing middle-class families into the alternative minimum tax [AMT] simply because they take advantage of the new child and education credits. This will happen because under current law, individuals pay the greater of their regular tax owed minus nonrefundable tax credits or the AMT which cannot be reduced by these nonrefundable credits.

Under current law, the child credit and the education credit won't be allowed under the AMT. As a result, average-sized families with children are more likely to be thrown into the AMT simply by using these credits. Believe me, this is not the place we want to be sending them.

The bill I am introducing today is identical to one that was introduced last week by Congresswoman KENNELLY of Connecticut. By her calculations, in 2002, a full 2 million families will be in the AMT because of the family credit alone. For illustrative purposes, I will give you just one example of the kinds of people who will get hurt: A two-parent family with a gross income of $67,700 and three children, including one in college, would fall into the AMT and lose nearly $1,500 of the $2,500 in combined child and education credits that we promised them.

The legislation I am introducing today is simple. It would allow taxpayers to take the nonrefundable personal credits—the dependent care credit, the child credit, and the education credit under the AMT. It would also make the standard deduction and the personal exemptions deductible under the AMT.

As Congresswoman KENNELLY has noted, "The AMT was meant to ensure that sophisticated taxpayers couldn't zero out their taxes. It was never intended that your children would throw you into the AMT." We need to deliver on the family tax relief promises we made in the Taxpayer Relief Act. I urge my colleagues to join me in support of this legislation.

By Mr. KERREY:

S. 1243. A bill to amend title 23, United States Code, to enhance safety on two-lane rural highways; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

THE RURAL HIGHWAY SAFETY ACT

Mr. KERREY. Mr. President, I recently introduced the Highway Safety Priority Act which proposed to make safety a primary consideration in highway investments.

Traffic accidents are part of a national health epidemic responsible for the loss of 1.2 million preretirement years of life a year; more than is lost to cancer or heart disease. It is the leading cause of death for Americans between the ages of 15 and 24. Last year, more than 41,900 Americans died from this epidemic and more than 3 million suffered serious injury. In Nebraska traffic accidents claimed 293 lives in 1996 up from 254 the year before. Most tragic, is the fact that this epidemic is almost 100 percent preventable.

To address this problem, the Congress must focus resources where they will do the most good. Throughout America there are two lane, two way roads which expose drivers to an unacceptably high level of risk. These high risk "killer roads" suffer from poor engineering, poor pavement, narrow shoulders and increasing levels of traffic. Because these roads are often in rural areas, feeding into the larger arteries, they are frequently overlooked by State and local roads departments in favor of the larger more modern and inherently safe portions of the National Highway System.

If we are to be serious about reducing death and accidents on America's roads, we need to pay greater attention to the roads which feed into the National Highway System. The Lincoln Journal Star reported in May that 70 percent of all Nebraska accidents occur on rural roads.

Today, I introduce legislation which proposes an aggressive efforts to make killer roads safer. This legislation, like the Highway Safety Priority Act was prepared with significant assistance of Dr. Jerry Donaldson, of Advocates for Highway Safety. Dr. Donaldson is one of the Nation's pre-eminent highway safety experts.

As the Senate prepares to consider the new highway bill, I urge my colleagues to consider and support the Rural Road Safety Act.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 1243

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

By Mr. GRASSLEY (for himself and Mr. SESSIONS): S. 1244. A bill to amend title 11, United States Code, to protect certain charitable contributions, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

THE RELIGIOUS LIBERTY AND CHARITABLE DONATIONS PROTECTION ACT

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce the Religious Liberty and Charitable Donations Protection Acts. This bill represents a giant step forward in protecting the religious freedom of many Americans who tithe. In the House of Representatives, Congressman RON PACKARD will today introduce a companion measure. I ask consent that the bill be printed in the RECORD following my remarks.

As my colleagues may know, bankruptcy judges across the country have been ordering churches to refund large sums of money when a parishioner declares bankruptcy. This causes serious hardship to churches and is a frontal assault on religious freedom of worship. After the Supreme Court's recent decision striking the Religious Freedom Restoration Act [RFRA] down as unconstitutional, I believe that Congress has a responsibility to act now to protect religious freedom. Because I chair the Subcommittee on Administrative Oversight and the Courts—which has primary jurisdiction over bankruptcy—I have an obligation to respond to this renewed threat to religious liberty.

Of course, there are other areas where Congress needs to protect religious freedom, and I look forward to assisting Chairman HATCH—who is a strong leader in protecting religious liberty—in these efforts.

But in the context of tithing and bankruptcy, I feel the time to act is now. The Supreme Court just vacated and remanded a case from the Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals which had ruled that RFRA protected churches from bankruptcy lawsuits seeking the return of money given as a tithe. This is a particular concern to me, since my home State of Iowa is in the eighth circuit and will be affected by this court case. The pastor of the church involved in this case, Pastor Steven Goold of the Crystal Free Evangelical Church, testified before my subcommittee as to the difficulties his church has faced in trying to protect itself from bankruptcy judges, including the huge legal costs associated with fighting the bankruptcy judge's ruling. Pastor Goold supports this legislation, as does Americans United for Separation of Church and State. So, the bill has broad support from many diverse sectors of our society.

In addition to preventing Federal judges from ordering churches to pay refunds of previous tithes, the legislation I'm introducing today will protect postbankruptcy tithing in chapter 13 cases. As currently interpreted, chapter 13, which permits debtors to repay their creditors at a discounted rate, also allows debtors to budget a moderate amount of money for entertainment expenses. But, several courts have said that debtors can't budget money to tithe to their church. In other words, if you're in chapter 13 bankruptcy, you can budget money for a hamburger and a movie, but you can't take that same money and give it to your church—even if you believe your faith requires that.

This is an obvious assault on the freedom of religion. Would our founding fathers have wanted a Federal judge to tell a citizen that he's not allowed to tithe to his church? Obviously not. Such a situation is antithetical to the American tradition of liberty and separation of church from State.

As a result of my hearing, I have made several minor changes to accommodate various concerns that have been raised about possible unintended consequences. I hope that the legislation as now drafted will receive the support of every Member of Congress who is concerned about protecting freedom generally and restoring freedom of religion—our first freedom—to its rightful place in American society.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

By Mr. JEFFORDS (for himself,
Mr. CONRAD, Ms. COLLINS, Mr.
MURKOWSKI, Mr. REID and Mr.
AKAKA):

S. 1247. A bill to amend title 38, United States Code, to limit the amount of recoupment from veterans' disability compensation that is required in the case of veterans who have received special separation benefits from the Department of Defense; to the Committee on Veterans' Affairs.

THE SPECIAL SEPARATION BENEFITS IMPROVEMENT ACT OF 1997

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, today I rise to introduce the Special Separation Benefits [SSB] Improvement Act of 1997. This legislation would address the unfair provision that double-taxes veterans who participate in the special separation benefits downsizing program run by the Department of Defense [DOD].

Since 1991, in an effort by the DOD to downsize the armed services, certain military personnel have been eligible for a special separation benefit [SSB]. However, since the inception of this program recipients who are subsequently determined to have a service-connected disability must offset the full SSB amount paid to that individual through the withholding of disability compensation by the Department of Veterans Affairs [VA]. Because of these cost cutting provisions, veterans who participate in the DOD's downsizing by selecting an SSB lump sum payment are forced to pay back the full, pre-tax amount in disability compensation—offsetting money that the disabled veteran would never see. This is a gross injustice to veterans by double taxing their hard earned benefits.

My bill would ease this double taxation for all members who accept an SSB package, and make these alterations retroactive to December 5, 1991. Thus, service members not able to receive payment concurrently since 1991 will be reimbursed for their lost compensation portion that was taxed. The near-term costs of this bill were estimated by the Congressional Budget Office to be less than $500,000 through the year 2000 and about $2 million in 2002—barely a fraction of a percentage of our annual spending on compensation and benefits for former military personnel.

Mr. President, I urge my colleagues to join me in correcting the double-taxing of veterans' benefits by the Government.

Mr. MURKOWSKI. Mr. President, I rise today as an original cosponsor to the Special Separation Benefits [SSB] Improvement Act of 1997. Offered by my colleague on the Senate Committee on Veterans' Affairs—Senator JEFFORDS, this legislation will correct a current injustice where service-connected disabled veterans, who participate in the special separation benefits program [SSB], are wrongly doubled taxed on their benefits.

In 1991, the Department of Defense [DOD], in an effort to downsize the armed services, established the SSB, which gives military personnel a lump sum payment to retire. However, for those veterans who are subsequently determined to have a service-connected disability, their SSB benefit amount is offset by withholding the veteran's disability compensation from the VA. A veteran only receives the SSB benefits after taxes are withheld. At the same time, disability compensation is not taxed. The injustice is that the veteran must repay with his or her disability compensation the pre-tax amount of the SSB payment—in effect double taxing the veteran's benefits.

The Special Separation Benefits [SSB] Improvement Act of 1997 eases the double taxation for all members who participated in the SSB program retroactively to December 5, 1991. These servicemembers will receive payment for their lost compensation portion that was taxed. According to the Congress Budget Office [CBO], the near term costs are estimated to be less than $500,000 through the year 2000. For this small amount, Congress has the opportunity to correct an injustice against our veterans who have given so much.

I hope that my colleagues can join me in cosponsoring this legislation.

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

REMARKS OF SENATOR JON KYL AT THE FIRST INTERNATIONAL CONSERVATIVE CONGRESS

• Mr. KYL. Mr. President, I ask that the text of the my remarks before the First International Conservative Congress be printed in the RECORD.

The text of the remarks follows:

REMARKS BY SENATOR JON KYL AT THE FIRST INTERNATIONAL CONSERVATIVE CONGRESS—SEPTEMBER 28, 1997

DEFINING A CONSERVATIVE APPROACH TO DEFENDING THE WEST

Thank you for inviting me to address the conference.

A conservative and internationalist approach to foreign policy is consistent. For example, during the Cold War Ronald Reagan worked not just to contain communism but to expand democracy. NATO expansion is a contemporary example where conservatives believe the U.S. should remain involved internationally to promote democracy, free markets, and to hedge against a revival of communism. A successful internationalist policy requires that you have firm clear national goals and the means and will to achieve them strategically.

The Clinton Administration pursues a foreign policy without clear goals or the will to act decisively and is squandering the national security means left to it by a dozen years of Republican presidency. It emphasizes hope over reality and reliance on arms control agreements like the Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty (CTBT), the Anti-Ballistic Missile (ABM) Treaty, and the Chemical Weapons Convention (CWC) over a stronger defense. And political benefit over national security, as in its decisions to cave in to the concerns of some in industry in irresponsibly relaxing export controls on key items like encryption technology and supercomputers.

Today's debate is similar to that which took place during the Cold War between those who favored detente and arms treaties and those who believed in a rational, tough policy of peace through strength. During the Cold War, the proponents of detente argued that the U.S. should overlook violations of promises and arms control agreements because of our tense relations with the Soviet Union and China. Today, the supporters of "engagement" say we should overlook violations of such treaties because of our improved relations with Russia and China. The result is the same—a muddled, confused foreign policy. But it hasn't stopped the Administration from proposing even more treaties, even as existing treaties are continually violated by all but the U.S.

PROLIFERATION

I want to focus on how conservatives in the West believe we should deal with the threat posed by the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction and ballistic missiles, which is the key national security challenge facing us today.

As with so many other areas, the Clinton Administration's efforts to address this issue have been long on rhetoric and short on action. In 1994, President Clinton issued Executive Order 12938 declaring that the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction and the means of delivering them constitutes "an unusual and extraordinary threat to the national security, foreign policy, and economy of the United States," and that he had, therefore, decided to "declare a national emergency to deal with that threat." The President reaffirmed this Executive Order in 1995 and 1996. But since issuing this order, the Administration has primarily focused on concluding arms control agreements and sending diplomatic protest notes to combat this growing threat.

THE THREAT

Rogue nations that are hostile to the United States are the primary proliferation threat, though the Russian arsenal remains the largest potential threat. Iran is of particular concern. Tehran is aggressively pursuing the development of nuclear weapons. On January 19, 1995, the Washington Times reported that Western intelligence agencies believe Iran is using its civilian nuclear power program as a cover for acquiring the technology and expertise to build nuclear weapons. According to the Times, the CIA estimates Iran is about 5-7 years away from building nuclear weapons, but could shorten that timetable if it received foreign assistance.

Iran's chemical and biological weapons programs began in the early 1980's and are now capable of producing a variety of highly lethal agents. Iran currently has Scud-B and Scud-C missiles also working to develop the ability to domestically produce longer-range missiles. On September 10, 1997, the Washington Times disclosed that Russia is assisting Iran with the development of two ballistic missiles that could be fielded in as little as three years. One of the missiles will reportedly have sufficient range to allow Tehran to strike targets as far away as Germany. In addition, other rogue states like Iraq, Libya, Syria, and North Korea are also aggressively pursuing ballistic missile and nuclear, biological, and chemical weapons programs.

HOW SHOULD THE WEST RESPOND TO THE PROLIFERATION THREAT?

We need an integrated strategy combining three elements: (1) responsible export controls, (2) firm economic and diplomatic actions to create incentives and disincentives to prevent the spread of missiles and weapons of mass destruction, and, (3) ultimately, robust defenses to deter and respond to attacks.

The Clinton Administration has irresponsibly relaxed U.S. export controls on key technologies like encryption, machine tools, and supercomputers. For example, in 1994, the Administration approved the sale of machine tools to China that were intended to be used to produce McDonnell Douglas civilian airliners. Just six months after the export licenses were approved, the company discovered the machine tools had been diverted to a facility where cruise missiles and fighter aircraft are produced for the Chinese military. In addition, China has purchased 47 supercomputers from the U.S. and one of Russia's premier nuclear weapons facilities has bought four supercomputers from a U.S. firm as well.

Multilateral control regimes like the Australia Group, restricting chemical trade, the Missile Technology Control Regime, and the Nuclear Supplier Group can limit the spread of sensitive technology. But as we learned through our experience with COCOM during the Cold War, even the best controls only slow the spread of the technology because determined nations find ways to circumvent the controls or eventually develop the technology themselves. We also must guard against a reliance on arms control agreements like the CWC and the CTBT that are not global or verifiable, and therefore not effective or useful.

We should make it unprofitable for countries to supply missiles and weapons of mass destruction technology to rogue regimes. For example, the annual foreign aid bill recently passed by the Senate conditions U.S. aid to Russia on a halt to nuclear and missile cooperation with Iran. Western nations can also impose economic sanctions on supplier countries and companies to provide disincentives for them to continue this dangerous trade. In addition, we should use convert action to raise the costs to countries that are suppliers of this sensitive technology.

Ultimately, we need to maintain strong defense capabilities to deter and respond to attacks involving weapons of mass destruction and ballistic missiles. By maintaining a robust, credible nuclear weapons capability, the U.S. can deter rogue nations from using weapons of mass destruction against U.S. forces or our allies. The U.S. should also improve our chemical and biological defenses. As we learned during the recent Senate debate over the Chemical Weapons Convention, the U.S. military's chemical and biological defense programs are underfunded and are inadequate to meet the current and projected threat.

BALLISTIC MISSILE DEFENSE

The West is nearly defenseless against the expanding missile threat we face. Space-based systems offer a promising long-term solution and should be pursued. Sea-based missile defenses based on the Navy's AEGIS class ships, however, have the potential to provide near-term, flexible, and affordable protection for U.S. forces and our allies abroad. Sea-based systems would allow for ascent phase intercept of missiles armed with chemical or biological warheads.

Sea-based systems are more affordable because the U.S. has already invested $50 billion in the AEGIS fleet. Development of a sea-based theater missile defense could be completed in five years and deployment of 650 interceptors on 22 ships could cost as little as $5 billion. This system could then evolve into a national missile defense system, whose development, production, and deployment could be completed in 6-10 years for $12-17 billion, according to preliminary CBO estimates.

CONCLUSION

There are two points of view on how to address this threat. We can either talk tough, and even in the face of incontrovertible evidence, overlook arms control violations for fear of damaging our relations with other nations. Or we can follow the path of peace through strength.●

THE AMERICAN FISHERIES ACT

● Mr. BREAUX. Mr. President, the American Fisheries Act, S. 1221, was introduced last week by Senators STEVENS, MURKOWSKI, HOLLINGS and myself. This bill represents another major milestone in our long efforts to reserve U.S. fishery resources for bona fide U.S. citizens as well as take steps to substantially improve the conservation and management of our Nation's fishery resources through a reduction in the overcapitalization of our fishing fleets. To put the bill in perspective, I wish to remind my colleagues of the steps taken in the past to establish our fishery conservation zone now called the Exclusive Economic Zone or EEZ, to support an American preference for harvesting and processing fishery resources within that zone, to eliminate foreign fishing in our EEZ whenever sufficient U.S. capacity existed, and finally to reduce the conservation and management problems associated with excess capacity. The historical basis for such a bill is well established in U.S. fishery policy.

THE OPEN SEAS

For hundreds of years, a basic component of the freedom of the seas had been the freedom of fishing. Nations claimed narrow territorial seas where they exercised sovereignty on and above the surface down to and including the seabed, subject only to the right of innocent passage. Originally, this territorial sea was limited to 3 miles out from the coastline—that distance being the range which a cannonball could be fired from the shore to protect the coastal State's interest. Outside of the territorial sea, all nations enjoyed free access to fishery resources on the high seas, subject only to limitations imposed by international agreements and a general yet unenforceable understanding to conserve the resource.

ESTABLISHING THE EXCLUSIVE ECONOMIC ZONE

This concept was radically changed in 1945 with the issuance of the Truman Proclamation which declared that the continental shelf contiguous to U.S. coasts was "appertaining to the United States, subject to its jurisdiction and control." Although the Truman Proclamation did not carry the force of international law, other nations followed suit in extending their jurisdiction beyond 3 nautical miles, some nations went out to 12 miles while others went all the way out to 200 miles. Congress contributed to this trend when it passed the 12 Mile Fishery Jurisdiction Act. In passing the Fishery Conservation and Management Act in 1976, Congress established a 200-mile fishery conservation zone where the United States would exercise sovereign rights over the conservation, harvesting and management of the resource. In 1983, President Reagan declared through Proclamation 5030 that the U.S. would exercise broad sovereign rights from the seaward limit of the territorial sea to a distance of 200 miles from the shore, thus establishing the Exclusive Economic Zone. The EEZ regime was reflected in the U.N. Convention on the Law of the Sea and although the United States has not ratified this treaty, we maintain that it is generally reflective of customary international law applying to the EEZ among other things.

AMERICANIZING THE FISHERIES

For more than 200 years, the Federal Government has been looking after our fishermen, starting as early as the Treaty of Paris of 1783 which secured fishing rights off the coast of New England. However, our management of fishery stocks was limited to our narrow territorial sea. This principle worked well until technology became very sophisticated in the early 1950's. Harvesting efficiency and capacity greatly increased and the presence of large foreign fishing fleets off our coast threatened the survivability of numerous stocks. In the 1950's, as large foreign fishing fleets loomed off our coast, Congress acted to protect the rights of our fishermen with the Fisherman's Protective Act of 1954. The Fish and Wildlife Act of 1956 also affirmed the rights of U.S. fishermen to waters off our own coast. In 1964, Congress passed the Prohibition of Fishing in the U.S. Territorial Waters by Foreign-Fishing Vessels and then in 1972, Congress passed the Prohibition of Foreign Fishing Vessels Act, again attempting to reserve the right to harvest U.S. fishing resources for U.S. fishermen. These laws were all precursors to the Fishery Conservation and Management Act of 1976 to which the names of Senators Magnuson and STEVENS were later added.

The Magnuson-STEVEN'S Fishery Conservation and Management Act. The Magnuson-STEVEN'S Act established a 200-mile Fishery Conservation Zone and further established U.S. management jurisdiction over all fishery resources within that zone. As a House cosponsor of the bill, I can recall the great debates of the day as the Magnuson-STEVEN'S Act was being discussed. Members feared retaliation by other nations because of our unilateral extension of authority out to 200 miles, but the fear of the foreign fishing fleets just off our coast was greater. Of special significance was the concept that U.S. fishermen should have the first right to harvest the fishery resources found within our 200-mile limit. Specifically, section 201 of the Magnuson-STEVEN'S Act states "After February 28, 1977, no foreign fishing is authorized within the exclusive economic zone * * * unless certain conditions are met as set forth within the act. Section 2(b)(1) of the Magnuson-STEVEN'S Act stated as a purpose: "to exercise sovereign rights for the purposes of exploring, exploiting, conserving, and managing all fish within the exclusive economic zone." This Americanization provision allowed for the gradual reduction of foreign fishing within U.S. waters as U.S. capacity increased.

THE AMERICAN FISHERIES PROMOTION ACT

However, the great promise of the Magnuson-STEVEN'S Fishery Conservation and Management Act to Americanize the fisheries was slow to come to fruition. As many Members may recall, numerous bills were introduced and debated to help the U.S. fleet establish itself in the new fishery conservation zone. In 1979, 60 percent of the edible and industrial fish we used was supplied by foreign companies despite the fact that 20 percent of the world's fishery resource was within our own zone. Foreign fleets still dominated our fishery conservation zone. As Chairman of the Subcommittee on Fisheries and Wildlife Conservation and the Environment within the House Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries, I authored the American Fisheries Promotion Act. Popularly coined as the fish and chips bill, the legislation was designed to promote development of U.S. fisheries by providing a statutory mechanism to phase out foreign fishing within our fishery conservation zone. Unfortunately, the phase out of foreign flag vessels did not fully achieve the goal of reserving the full economic benefits of our resources to U.S. citizens.

REFLAGGING ISSUES

Foreign companies were able to circumvent the intent of these laws by reflagging. Foreign-controlled companies could reflag their vessels under U.S. documentation laws and gain the same priority access to U.S. fishery resources as bona fide U.S. citizens were intended to enjoy. To counter such actions, Congress passed the Anti-Reflagging Act of 1987 which was designed to stop this practice and prohibit foreign ownership/control of U.S. fishing vessels. The exact method of ensuring this occurred was by requiring that a majority controlling interest in any corporation who owns fishing vessels operating in the U.S. fishery were bona fide U.S. citizens. To protect the financial investments of vessels already within the fishery, grandfather provisions were included in the bill. Unfortunately, interpretation of the grandfather provision has effectively nullified the original intent of that landmark legislation. Although the vessels now carry the American flag, effective control of the vessels is under foreign hands. This bill will restore the rights of bona fide United States citizens to have priority access to U.S. fishery resources which are well established under U.S. and international law. In essence, we seek to return to a de facto standard as set forth in section 201(d) which establishes that the total level of foreign fishing shall be the portion of the optimal yield which will not be harvested by U.S. vessels.

OVERCAPITALIZATION OF THE FLEET

A second issue that we deal with in this bill is the issue of overcapitalization of the fishing fleet. The increasing demand for fish products throughout the world has created an incentive for increasing the size and capabilities of the world's fishing fleets. Traditionally, the United States has operated under an open access system of fishery management and increased demand has led to increased entry into the fishing industry. It is not disputed that the harvesting and processing capacity in the world far exceeds that required to efficiently harvest most resources.

The Magnuson-STEVENS Act's first National Standard requires that any fishery management plan be consistent with conservation and management measures to prevent overfishing while achieving optimal yield from the fishery. Controlling overfishing has been done in basically four types of programs—controlling the when, where, how and how much of fishing. Fishery managers control the when—establishing seasons in which a particular species may be fished. Fishery managers control the where—setting closed areas where fishermen cannot fish. Fishery managers control the how—restricting certain forms of fishing gear. And finally, fishery managers control the how much—setting total allowable catches to limit harvest. However, these methods have not always been successful and the collapses of the New England ground fishery and Bering Sea crab fishery are examples of that. The existence of "derby style" fishery where an excessive number of boats attempt to catch a limited resource in the shortest period of time possibly is one symptom of inadequate controls. Such derby style fishing in overcapitalized fisheries has led to a range of serious conservation, management, bycatch and safety problems in our fisheries. It is time to establish some form of control of fishing capacity, particularly if the capacity is under the control of foreign fishing companies. This bill will establish such control by reducing capacity with a preference for American companies—as Congress has long intended.

Mr. President, there are some areas of this bill which I will want to address further. For instance, the menhaden and tuna industries use large vessels to harvest their catch, primarily through purse seining. These fisheries operate outside of our Exclusive Economic Zone and are not subject to management by our traditional Regional Council system nor have they experienced the problems associated with overcapitalization. I will seek to ensure there are no unintended consequences of this bill on their industry. Mr. President, I think this bill continues the work that was started in 1976 and I look forward to a healthy and open debate on these very important issues.●

CLARIFYING TREATMENT OF INVESTMENT ADVISERS UNDER ERISA

● Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, on Friday, September 26, 1997, I introduced legislation which amends title I of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 [ERISA] to permit investment advisers registered with State securities regulators to continue to serve as investment managers to ERISA plans. At the end of last Congress, the Investment Supervision Coordination Act, landmark bipartisan legislation that adopted a new approach for regulating investment advisers, was passed and signed into law. Under this legislation, beginning July 8, 1997, States are assigned primary responsibility for regulating smaller investment advisers and the Securities and Exchange Commission is assigned primary responsibility for regulating larger investment advisers. Prior to the passage of the legislation, the issue arose that smaller investment advisers registered only with the States—and prohibited from registering with the SEC—would no longer meet the definition of investment manager under ERISA because the current Federal law definition only recognized advisers registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission. As a temporary measure, a 2-year sunset provision was included in the securities reform legislation extending the qualification of State registered investment advisers as investment managers under ERISA for 2 years. The purpose of this provision was to address the problem on an immediate basis while concurrently giving the congressional committees with jurisdiction over ERISA matters the opportunity to review and act on the issue. We have reviewed this issue and have developed the legislation that I am introducing today to permanently correct this problem.

Without this legislation, State licensed investment advisers who, because of the securities reform legislation, no longer are permitted to register with the Securities and Exchange Commission will be unable to continue to be qualified to serve as investment managers to pension and welfare plans covered by ERISA. Without this legislation, the practices of thousands of small investment advisers, investment advisory firms and their supervision of client 401(k) and certain other pension plans will be seriously disrupted after October 10, 1998.

For business reasons, it is necessary for an investment adviser seeking to advise and manage assets of employee benefit plans subject to ERISA to meet ERISA's definition of investment manager. It is also important, for business reasons, to eliminate the uncertainty about the status of small investment advisers as investment managers under ERISA. This uncertainty makes it difficult for such advisers to acquire new ERISA plan clients and may well cause the loss of existing clients.

Arthus Levitt, chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission, has written a letter expressing the need for this legislation and his support for this effort to correct this problem. I ask that a copy of Chairman Levitt's letter be inserted in the RECORD.

It is my understanding that this bill is supported by the Department of Labor. In addition, this bill is supported by the Institute of Certified Financial Planners, the National Association of Personal Financial Advisors, the International Association for Financial Planning, the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants, and the North American Securities Administrators Association, Inc. Mr. President, the sooner that Congress responds in a positive fashion to correct this problem, the better for small advisers and the capital management marketplace.

The letter follows:

U.S. SECURITIES AND EXCHANGE COMMISSION,
Washington, DC, April 7, 1997.

Hon. JAMES M. JEFFORDS,
Chairman, Committee on Labor and Human Resources,
U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR CHAIRMAN JEFFORDS: I am writing to urge that the Senate Committee on Labor and Human Resources consider enacting legislation to amend the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 ("ERISA") in a small but terribly important way. Unless the Congress acts quickly, thousands of small investment adviser firms, and their employees, risk having their businesses and their livelihoods inadvertently disrupted by changes to federal securities laws that were enacted during the last Congress.

At the very end of its last session, Congress passed the Investment Advisers Supervision Coordination Act. This was landmark bipartisan legislation that replaced an overlapping and duplicative state and federal regulatory scheme with a new approach that divided responsibility for investment adviser supervision: states were assigned primary responsibility for regulating smaller investment advisers, and the Securities and Exchange Commission was assigned primarily responsibility for regulating larger investment advisers. We supported this approach.

Under the Coordination Act takes effect in the next few months, most of the nation's 23,500 investment adviser firms—regardless of their size—will continue to be registered with the SEC, as they have for many decades. Once the Act becomes effective, however, we estimate that as many as 16,000 firms will be required to withdraw their federal registration. Indeed, this requirement is crucial if the Act's overall intent of reducing overlapping and duplicative regulation is to be realized. But the withdrawal of federal registration is also what causes the problem for these firms under ERISA.

As a practical business matter, it is a virtual necessity for a professional money manager (such as an investment adviser) seeking to serve employee benefit plans subject to ERISA to meet ERISA's definition of "investment manager." The term is defined in ERISA to include only investment advisers registered with the SEC, and certain banks and insurance companies. Once the Coordination Act becomes effective, large advisers registered with the SEC will of course continue to meet the definition. But small advisory firms will not be able to meet the definition of investment manager because they will be registered with the states rather than with the SEC. Thus they may well be precluded from providing advisory services to employee benefit plans subject to ERISA, even if they have been doing so successfully for many years.

The sponsors of the Coordination Act were aware that the interplay between the Act and ERISA could have substantial detrimental consequences for small advisers, and thus added an amendment to ERISA during the House-Senate Conference on the Act. The ERISA amendment provided that investment advisers registered with a state can serve as "investment managers" for two years, or through October 12, 1998. My staff has been told that this "sunset" provision was included in the ERISA amendment so that the appropriate congressional committees with jurisdiction over ERISA could have a reasonable amount of time to review the amendment before deciding whether to make it permanent. Apart from that important procedural issue, I am not aware of any other considerations that would suggest the need for the ERISA amendment to expire in two years.

I believe that the Congress should move as quickly as possible to enact legislation that eliminates the sunset provision, and permanently enables properly registered state investment advisers to continue their service as investment managers under ERISA. There is no reason to wait until 1998 to do so. In fact, many small investment advisers believe that the ongoing uncertainty about their status as "investment managers" under ERISA is making it difficult for them to acquire new ERISA plan clients, and may even cause them to lose existing clients. Some advisers think the harm they could suffer, even before the expiration of the sunset provision next year, could be irreparable, and it is easy to see why.

It is only through the swift action of your Committee that these unintended and unnecessary consequences for thousands of successful small businesses can be avoided. If you or your staff would like additional information about this matter, please do not hesitate to contact me at 942-0100, or Barry P. Barbash, Director of the Division of Investment Management, or Robert E. Plaze, an Associate Director in the Division, at 942-0720.

Sincerely,

ARTHUR LEVITT.●

FEDERAL JUDICIARY PROTECTION ACT OF 1997

● Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I am proud to join as a cosponsor of the Federal Judiciary Protection Act of 1997, S. 1189.

This legislation would provide greater protection to Federal judges, law enforcement officers, and their families. Specifically, our legislation would: Increase the maximum prison term for forcible assaults, resistance, opposition, intimidation, or interference with a Federal judge or law enforcement officer from 3 years imprisonment to 8 years; increase the maximum prison term for use of a deadly weapon or infliction of bodily injury against a Federal judge or law enforcement officer from 10 years imprisonment to 20 years; and increase the maximum prison term for threatening murder or kidnapping of a member of the immediate family of a Federal judge or law enforcement officer from 5 years imprisonment to 10 years. It has the support of the Department of Justice, the U.S. Judicial Conference, the U.S. Sentencing Commission, and the U.S. Marshals Service.

It is most troubling that the greatest democracy in the world needs this legislation to protect the hard-working men and women who serve in our Federal judiciary and other law enforcement agencies. But, unfortunately, we are seeing more violence and threats of violence against officials of our Federal Government.

Earlier this year, for example, a courtroom in Urbana, IL, was firebombed, apparently by a disgruntled litigant. This follows the horrible tragedy of the bombing of the Federal office building in Oklahoma City 2 years ago. More recently in my home State, a Vermont border patrol officer, John Pfeiffer, was seriously wounded by Carl Drega, during a shootout with Vermont and New Hampshire law enforcement officers in which Drega lost his life. Earlier that day, Drega shot and killed two State troopers and a local judge in New Hampshire. Apparently, Drega was bent on settling a grudge against the judge who had ruled against him in a land dispute.

There is, of course, no excuse or justification for someone taking the law into their own hands and attacking or threatening a judge or law enforcement officer. Still, the U.S. Marshals Service is concerned with more and more threats of harm to our judges and law enforcement officers.

The extreme rhetoric that some are using to attack the judiciary only feeds into this hysteria. For example, one of the Republican leaders in the House of Representatives was recently quoted as saying: "The judges need to be intimidated," and if they do not behave, "we're going to go after them in a big way." I know that House Republican Whip TOM DELAY was not intending to encourage violence against any Federal official, but this extreme rhetoric only serves to degrade Federal judges in the eyes of the public.

Let none of us in the Congress contribute to the atmosphere of hate and violence. Let us treat the judicial branch and those who serve within it with the respect that is essential to its preserving its public standing.

We have the greatest judicial system in the world, the envy of people and countries around the world that are struggling for freedom. It is the independence of our third, coequal branch of Government that gives it the ability to act fairly and impartially. It is our judiciary that has for so long protected our fundamental rights and freedoms and served as a necessary check on overreaching by the other two branches, those more susceptible to the gusts of the political winds of the moment.

We are fortunate to have dedicated women and men throughout the Federal judiciary and law enforcement in this country who do a tremendous job under difficult circumstances. They are examples of the hard-working public servants that make up the Federal Government, who are too often maligned and unfairly disparaged. It is unfortunate that it takes acts or threats of violence to put a human face on the Federal judiciary and other law enforcement officials, to remind everyone that these are people with children and parents and cousins and friends. They deserve our respect and our protection.

I urge my colleagues to support the Federal Judiciary Protection Act of 1997 and look forward to its swift enactment.●

ENERGY AND WATER DEVELOPMENT APPROPRIATIONS CONFERENCE REPORT FOR FISCAL YEAR 1998

● Mr. ASHCROFT. I would like to make a statement regarding the transfer of FUSRAP to the Army Corps of Engineers.

Mr. President, yesterday I cast a vote in favor of the Energy and Water Development Appropriations Conference Report for FY 1998 with hesitation. Missouri has a major FUSRAP site in St. Louis which contains nuclear contamination from the Manhattan project and other hazardous waste. For 15 years we have worked with the Department of Energy to clean up this site. During such time I have expressed concern over the delays but in just the past 2 weeks we have come to the point where DOE has begun preliminary cleanup efforts. Given this recent progress, the news of the FUSRAP program's transfer out of DOE has, quite understandably, caused a great deal of distress in the St. Louis community. While I am not questioning the corps' ability to handle the FUSRAP project, concern has been expressed that further delays will be caused by the transfer and undo much of the recent progress.

With site recommendations already made, feasibility studies concluded, and contracts let, it is encouraging that the corps will honor the preliminary groundwork laid by the St. Louis community. The plan designed by the community further illustrates their ability to continue to administer the program from St. Louis. Further, I was pleased to learn that the cleanup and restoration of contaminated sites falling within the purview of FUSRAP shall be managed and executed by the St. Louis area Civil Works District of the Corps of Engineers, ensuring that the local community will continue to be very involved in designing cleanup plans at the FUSRAP site and effectively maintain community input in the process.●

FLORIDA SHERIFFS YOUTH RANCHES

● Mr. GRAHAM. Mr. President, I want to take this opportunity to recognize a program that for the past 40 years has served over 30,000 troubled boys, girls, and their families. This program has assisted these troubled youth by providing an opportunity to learn to resolve conflicts and learn proper values as they work toward a lawful, productive, and secure future. I speak specifically of the Florida Sheriffs Youth Ranches, which have been in continuous operation since October 2, 1957.

The first of these ranches was established on the banks of Florida's historic Suwannee River under the direction of the Florida Sheriffs Association.

For four decades, this ranch and the many others established in its wake have provided a home for neglected, troubled, and abused boys and girls. They offer in-home counseling and parent effectiveness training to hundreds of families throughout Florida each year. The programs for youth include residential care, camping, foster care, adoption, after-care, and individual and family counseling.

Through these youth ranches, the Florida Sheriffs Association and our State's individual sheriffs, deputies, and office staffs have made a vital contribution in the fight against juvenile delinquency and the breakdown of the American family.

Mr. President, the Florida Sheriffs Youth Ranches are a shining example of law enforcement working with communities to help troubled youth and their families. I offer my sincerest congratulations and thanks for their four decades of service to the people of Florida, and wish all of the individuals involved the best of luck for the next 40 years and beyond.●

GERMAN-AMERICAN DAY

●Ms. MOSELEY-BRAUN. Mr. President, October 6 is German-American Day, and it is my pleasure to recognize the more than 57 million Americans who trace part of their ancestry to Germany.

Since the arrival of the first German immigrants in Philadelphia in 1683, German-Americans have distinguished themselves through their cultural, economic, and political contributions to life in the United States. Through their participation in American society, German-Americans have demonstrated their loyalty to their new homeland and their strong support of our Nation's democratic principles.

The German-American Friendship Garden in Washington, DC stands as a symbol of the positive and cooperative relations between the United States and the Federal Republic of Germany. I urge every American to acknowledge and honor the contributions to our Nation made by German-Americans, and to celebrate October 6 as German-American Day.●

HISPANIC HERITAGE MONTH

●Mr. CLELAND. Mr. President, it is with great pleasure that I join my colleagues in recognizing September 15 through October 15 as Hispanic Heritage Month. It is important that we reflect on the great contributions that Hispanic-Americans have made to our Nation.

Hispanic-Americans embrace the American society and culture, while at the same time perpetuating a unique cultural heritage of their own. In so doing, they are contributing to our Nation's diversity—a quality Americans take great and justifiable pride in maintaining.

As one of the fastest growing segments of our society, Hispanic-Americans are an increasingly vital part of our economy. Hispanic-owned firms contribute significantly to our economic growth, and their ranks are increasing every day. In my own State of Georgia, which once served as the boundary between Spanish and English America, the number of Hispanic-owned businesses has risen 184.9 percent over the past 10 years.

But the contributions of Hispanic-Americans go well beyond the economic arena. Their strong commitment to family, community, and country sets an example for all our people. For example, many have demonstrated their commitment to our Nation through dedicated military service. And Hispanic culture continues to enrich American art, music, and literature.

Hispanic Heritage Month seeks to increase national awareness and understanding of and respect for Hispanics and their tradition of achievement in this country. Across the Nation, events are taking place which demonstrate our rich Hispanic heritage. Through these festivities, every American will be given the chance to experience Hispanic culture. I urge every citizen to do so. You will be educating yourself and giving the Hispanic-American community in your area the recognition it deserves.●

TRIBUTE IN COMMEMORATION OF 25TH ANNIVERSARY OF UNIFORMED SERVICES UNIVERSITY OF THE HEALTH SCIENCES [USUHS]

●Mr. SARBANES. Mr. President, I rise today to congratulate the Uniformed Services University of the Health Sciences [USUHS] as it celebrates 25 years of service to our country. It was on September 21, 1972 that Public Law 92-426 established USUHS to provide a corps of uniformed medical officers who would provide continuity and leadership for uniformed medicine in the United States. For 25 years, USUHS had remained our Nation's only military medical school, ensuring top-quality medical care to the men and women of our armed services. This institution has consistently produced first-rate career medical officers who excel in meeting the needs of military medicine and military readiness.

USUHS provides a unique curriculum that contributes greatly to our military preparedness by providing knowledge that is vastly different from that taught in civilian medical schools. In fact, the American Medical Association [AMA] has recognized that training in military medicine mandates special course work and instruction not necessary in the civilian sector, and calls the existence of USUHS vital to the continued strength, morale and operational readiness of the military services. This specialized training includes trauma, mass casualties, combat surgery, medical logistics, nuclear medicine, tropical infectious diseases, and medical responses to terrorism.

Following 18 graduations at the University, the total of USUHS School of Medicine [SOM] graduates is 2,470; the 2,276 active duty USUHS physicians represent 17 percent of the current physician force in the military medical system. Over the years, the university's graduates have consistently demonstrated a high level of performance during their various deployments in combat areas and in support missions, including Desert Storm and Somalia. This performance based upon their extensive military training has been validated by three Surgeons General, the American Medical Association and the Military Coalition, the Retired Officers Association, the National Association for Uniformed Services, and the American Legion, among others.

It is also important to underscore the long-term commitment made by USUHS graduates to our armed services. Although USUHS graduates are required to serve 7 years of active duty beyond the time they devote to internships and residencies, the average time served is actually 18.5 years. Indeed, 85 percent of those graduates who have completed their initial service obligations and could leave active duty for the private sector remain on active duty in the Armed Forces where they often hold significant leadership and operational positions. For example, four USUHS-SOM graduates currently work directly for the President of the United States in medical support positions. That so many USUHS graduates have made a career of military medicine provides the continuity that is so critical to our military medical services.

In addition to its original mandate, USUHS has further expanded its mission to meet the changing needs of the armed services. Additional programs provided by USUHS include the Graduate School of Nursing, recently granted full accreditation by the National League for Nursing, which prepares advanced practice nurses to deliver primary care and services to all eligible beneficiaries; the Graduate Medical Education Programs, established in 1986 to provide DOD-wide consultation on internships, residency, and fellowship training for physicians; the Graduate Education Program which has provided 444 students with graduate degrees in the basic medical sciences; and the Continuing Education for Health Professionals Program which facilitates the continued professional growth of health care professionals in the uniformed services and reduces DOD travel and other expenses by bringing medical training directly to the health care professional.

For 25 years, this institution has consistently produced first-rate career medical officers who excel in meeting the needs of military medicine and military readiness. USUHS is a cost effective means of providing these uniquely trained physicians and deserves significant recognition of its accomplishments over its 25-year history in providing top-quality medical care.●

TRIBUTE TO JONATHAN CAMERON BOSTER

●Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, I rise today to honor Jonathan Cameron Boster, a fallen firefighter who gave his life in service to his community. While nearly 100 fire service personnel nationwide sacrifice their lives every year, Jon's death is even more poignant because he was just 19 years old.

At 10 p.m. on April 8, 1996, Grant County Fire District 5 was responding to a structure fire in Moses Lake, WA. The water tanker Jon was driving rolled off a curved rural road, killing him and injuring one other firefighter. Jon's comrades could not turn back because of their commitment to the community. They did what Jon would have done; they fought the fire.

Jon was a fun-loving young man with bright eyes and a charming smile. A Montana State all-star basketball player in high school, Jon also played football and ran track. He enjoyed water and snow skiing, fishing and hunting. Jon delighted in his niece and nephew and his greatest joy was playing with them.

His driving desire, however, was firefighting and his world revolved around his ambition. He was a resident firefighter and E.M.S. provider and a State-certified first responder and defibrillator technician. He planned to attend the Washington State Fire Academy.

Each October, the National Fallen Firefighters Foundation holds a memorial in tribute to the firefighters who died the previous year. On October 5, 1997, Jon will be honored and a plaque listing his name and the names of each fallen firefighter will be unveiled and dedicated.

Every fallen firefighter is a hero, and each death a loss to an entire community. While Jon's death is sorrowful, we can take comfort in knowing that Jon gave his life in pursuit of his goal, racing not just to a fire, but toward a dream.●

GEN. A.M. "BUDDY" STROUD

●Mr. BREAUX. Mr. President, November 8th will be a significant and emotional day for the more than 13,000 members of the Louisiana National Guard. That day will mark the conclusion of the extraordinary and distinguished military career of their beloved adjutant general, Maj. Gen. Ansel "Buddy" Stroud.

For 17 years, "Buddy" Stroud has provided strong and innovative leadership as Louisiana's top guardsman. In fact, anyone familiar with the Louisiana National Guard can attest that today's Louisiana National Guard is better trained, better equipped, and better prepared to defend our Nation than ever before. And much of that high degree of training and preparedness is due to the visionary and determined leadership that General Stroud has always provided.

Under General Stroud's able command, the Louisiana National Guard has always enjoyed widespread popular support in my State and has often made the difference in times of crisis and natural disaster in our State. In 1992, when Hurricane Andrew pounded the South Louisiana coast and inflicted heavy damage on a number of communities from New Orleans to Lafayette, General Stroud and his men were on the scene almost immediately. I suspect that without his leadership—and without the dedicated, hardworking guardsmen under his command—Louisiana's recovery from Andrew would have been much more painful and prolonged.

The Louisiana military personnel under General Stroud's command also distinguished themselves in another endeavor. During 1990-91, more than 6,400 men and women were activated for duty in Desert Shield/Desert Storm in the Persian Gulf. In all, 2,000 Louisiana Guardsmen saw duty in the Persian Gulf war. Our Nation and the people of Kuwait owe these men and women—and thousands of other guardsmen from other states—our sincere gratitude for their service in this noble cause.

Earlier this year, when the rapidly rising Mississippi River threatened to overwhelm our State penitentiary at Angola, General Stroud's guardsmen helped save the day by shoring up the levees. Because of the Guard's immediate response to this potential disaster, a costly evacuation of thousands of prisoners was averted.

Under General Stroud's leadership, the Guard has not only been present in times of natural disaster. Buddy Stroud has given thousands of Louisiana high school dropouts a second chance by creating a bootcamp-style program that instills discipline and guides these former dropouts toward the achievement of their high school diploma. Another program created under General Stroud's leadership, the Louisiana National Guard's Youth Challenge Program, was recently honored as the best overall youth challenge program in the United States.

Buddy Stroud was born on April 5, 1927 in Shreveport, LA. After his high school graduation, he attended college at Baylor and Texas A&M and graduated with his B.S. degree from the University of the State of New York. His long and distinguished military career began with his enlistment in the Army in 1944. Three years later, in 1947, he began a half century of service in the Louisiana National Guard, which culminated in 1981 with his promotion to the rank of major general.

General Stroud served his Nation in a number of other capacities. He is former president of the National Guard Association of the United States and has served on that organization's executive council for the last 4 years. He has also served as president of the Adjutants General Association of the United States.

Among General Stroud's professional achievements is a 1977 study which he directed for the Department of the Army on full-time training and administration for the Army Guard and the Army Reserve. The study, known as the Stroud Study, was accepted by the Army as a guideline for requirements of the National Guard and Army Reserve for full-time manning programs and was the basis for launching the AGR program. Most recently, General Stroud's unique contributions were recognized by the people of Louisiana when the State legislature directed that the Louisiana Military History and Weapons Museum should now bear his name.

While he will no longer serve the Guard in a full-time capacity, I know that retirement will not diminish "Buddy" Stroud's dedication to the Louisiana National Guard. In fact, I am certain that, even in retirement, he will find a way to continue making a significant contribution.

For many years, it has been my honor and privilege count "Buddy" Stroud as a friend. I could begin to count the number of times we worked together on behalf of the Louisiana National Guard, and because of our joint endeavors, I will always have fond memories of the important work that we did—together—for the Louisiana National Guard and the people of Louisiana. Most of all, however, I will always value Buddy's friendship.

Mr. President, Buddy Stroud is a truly extraordinary American. I know I speak for all Louisianians and all Americans when I salute him for his more than half century of distinguished service to his country and his State and wish him only the best in his well-deserved retirement.●

NATIONAL FLOOD INSURANCE REAUTHORIZATION ACT OF 1997

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, I now ask unanimous consent that the Banking Committee be discharged from further consideration of S. 1179, and further that the Senate proceed to its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The clerk will report.

The bill clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 1179) to amend the National Flood Insurance Act of 1968 to reauthorize the National Flood Insurance Program.

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. D'AMATO. Mr. President, I rise today to support the passage of the National Flood Insurance Reauthorization Act of 1997 (S. 1179). This legislation, which I introduced on September 16, 1997, provides for a simple and straightforward 5-year extension of the National Flood Insurance Program [NFIP] until September 30, 2002. This legislation will place this important program on a steady and secure foundation so that it continues to provide protection to flood insurance policyholders and the Federal taxpayers. I thank my friend and colleague Senator PAUL SARBANES for cosponsoring this measure.

The National Flood Insurance Program, which is administered by the Federal Emergency Management Agency [FEMA], enables over 3.7 million American families to insure their homes and possessions. In my home State of New York, 85,000 families participate in the NFIP. The NFIP allows these families, on Long Island and along the Great Lakes and the State's many rivers, to purchase insurance coverage to protect their homes in the event of a catastrophic flood.

The NFIP employs a comprehensive approach to alleviating the risks posed by catastrophic floods. Floodplain communities participate in FEMA's community rating system and are offered incentives to adopt and enforce measures to reduce the risk of flood damage and improve flood prevention building criteria. To avoid the danger of repetitive losses, the program provides stringent building standards designed to reduce the risk of future damage. These flood protection standards must be met before any structure which suffers substantial damage may be rebuilt. In addition, persons who receive disaster assistance and fail to subsequently purchase flood insurance are barred from receiving future assistance.

Mr. President, the NFIP plays a critical role in reducing the costs of Federal disaster relief. Current NFIP policyholders pay approximately $1.3 billion annually into the NFIP fund. Without this premium income, the Federal Government would likely pay spiraling costs in disaster relief. The NFIP has the added benefits of improving State and community planning and Federal support for locally driven disaster prevention and mitigation activities.

Reauthorizing the NFIP is an important step forward in reaffirming the commitment of the Federal Government to help American families protect their homes and to protect the Federal taxpayer from the risks of catastrophic floods. Clearly, we must do more. Lenders and private insurers who participate in the NFIP must do more to ensure compliance. States and local communities must improve their disaster planning, prevention, and response activities. FEMA must redouble its efforts to increase participation in the program to improve the safety and soundness of the NFIP fund. Also, the Federal Government must do more to prevent and mitigate against the losses which will inevitably occur from future floods.

Mr. President, I note that this bill has the full support of the administration. I wish to thank the members of the Banking Committee for their bipartisan support of this important measure and I urge our colleagues in the House to support its swift enactment.

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be deemed read a third time and passed, the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table, and that any statements relating to the bill appear at the appropriate place in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The bill (S. 1179) was deemed read the third time and passed, as follows:

S. 1179

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "National Flood Insurance Reauthorization Act of 1997".

SEC. 2. EXTENSION OF NATIONAL FLOOD INSURANCE PROGRAM.

Section 1319 of the National Flood Insurance Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 4026) is amended by striking "September 30, 1997" and inserting "September 30, 2002".

SENATE COMMITTEE MEETINGS

Title IV of Senate Resolution 4, agreed to by the Senate on February 4, 1977, calls for establishment of a system for a computerized schedule of all meetings and hearings of Senate committees, subcommittees, joint committees, and committees of conference. This title requires all such committees to notify the Office of the Senate Daily Digest—designated by the Rules Committee—of the time, place, and purpose of the meetings, when scheduled, and any cancellations or changes in the meetings as they occur.

As an additional procedure along with the computerization of this information, the Office of the Senate Daily Digest will prepare this information for printing in the Extensions of Remarks section of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD on Monday and Wednesday of each week.
