SEC. 312. AMERICAN FOLKLIKE CENTER. (a) FINDINGS AND PURPOSE.—

(1) FINDINGS.—Congress makes the following findings:

(A) The American Folklife Center in the Library of Congress was created by Congress in 1976, building on the vast expertise and archival material existing at the Library since 1928.

(B) As an instrumentality of the Congress, it is fitting that the American Folklife Center should have a direct and close relationship with the representatives of the people, who are best able to oversee the ongoing activities of the Center to preserve and promote the cultural traditions of the people, and to ensure that the resources of the Center be readily available to all Americans.

(C) In over 20 years since its creation, the American Folklife Center in the Library of Congress has—

(i) increased the size of the Archive of Folk Culture from 500,000 to 1,500,000 multi-format ethnographic items;

(ii) engaged in 15 cultural surveys and field documentation projects in all regions of the country;

(iii) provided publications, documentary equipment on loan, and advisory and reference service to persons and institutions in all 50 States;

(iv) produced exhibitions and other educational programs on American Folklife at the Library and around the country;

(v) begun sharing its unique collections in digital form via the Internet; and

(vi) served as a national center for the professions of folklore, ethnomusicology, and cultural studies.

(D) Congress has consistently provided encouragement and support of American Folklife as an appropriate matter of concern to the Federal Government, passing legislation to reauthorize the Center 8 times since its creation in 1976.

(E) The American Folklife Center is the only unit in the Library of Congress which is not permanently authorized. Since its establishment in 1976, the Center's collections and activities have been fully and successfully integrated into the Library of Congress. It is useful to statutorily conform the American Folklife Center with the rest of the Library of Congress.

(2) PURPOSE.—It is the purpose of this section to authorize permanently the American Folklife Center in the Library of Congress to preserve and present American Folklife.

(b) REAUTHORIZATION AND AMENDMENT.—

Not more than 3 of the members appointed by the President pro tempore of the Senate or by the Speaker of the House of Representatives may be affiliated with the same political party.

“(3) In making appointments under paragraph (1)(C), the Librarian of Congress shall include at least 2 members who direct or are members of the boards of major American folklore organizations other than the American Folklore Society and the Society for Ethnomusicology.”;

(B) by striking subsection (d) and inserting the following:

(ii) by striking paragraph (2).

(2) ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS.—Section 7(a)(4) of the American Folklife Preservation Act (20 U.S.C. 2106(a)(4)) is amended by striking “, but no individual so appointed shall receive compensation in excess of the rate received by the Deputy Director of the Center”.

(c) PERMANENT AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—Section 8 of the American Folklife Preservation Act (20 U.S.C. 2107) is amended to read as follows:

“There are authorized to be appropriated to the Center to carry out this Act such sums as may be necessary for each fiscal year.”.

(d) BOARD OF TRUSTEES, TRANSITION PERIOD.—The term of office of members of the Board of Trustees appointed by the Librarian of Congress under the amendments made by subsection (b)(1) shall be 6 years, except that of the 4 members first appointed by the Librarian, 1 shall serve for a term of 2 years, 2 for a term of 4 years, and 1 for a term of 6 years.

SEC. 313. For purposes of section 8147 of title 5, United States Code, the Government Printing Office is not considered an agency which is required by statute to submit an annual budget pursuant to or as provided by chapter 91 of title 31, United States Code, and is not required to pay an additional amount for the cost of administration.

JOINT EXPLANATORY STATEMENT OF THE COMMITTEE OF CONFERENCE

The managers on the part of the House and the Senate at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 4112) making appropriations for the Legislative Branch for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1999, and for other purposes, submit the following joint statement to the House and Senate in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon by the managers and recommended in the accompanying conference report.

Amendment No. 1: The Senate deleted several provisions of the House bill and inserted substitute provisions. Many items in both House and Senate bills are identical and are included in the conference agreement without change. With respect to those items in the conference agreement that differ between House and Senate bills, the conferees have agreed to the following:

TITLE I—CONGRESSIONAL OPERATIONS

SENATE

Appropriates $469,391,000 for Senate operations and contains several administrative provisions, including two additional provisions, regarding frequent flyer miles and reimbursements to the Attending Physician's office, and an adjustment to an allowance amount not included in the Senate amendment. A technical amendment to Administrative Provision Service 1 has been made to the Official Office Expense allowance of the State of Florida to correct a printing error reflected in the Senate tables. The State of Florida's Official Office Expense Allowance effective October 1, 1998 is $302,307. The State of Florida's total annual allowance effective October 1, 1998 is $2,381,991. The total Senate Official Office Expense Allowance effective October 1, 1998 is $19,997,232. The total Senators' Official Personnel and Office Expense Allowance effective October 1, 1998 is $190,654,592. Inasmuch as this item relates solely to the Senate, and in accord with long practice under which each body determines its own housekeeping requirements and the other concurs without intervention, the managers on the part of the House, at the request of the managers on the part of the Senate, have receded to the Senate.

The managers on the part of the Senate note that concern has been expressed that the Senate Sergeant at Arms' proposed new computer information system could reduce the services available to individual offices currently provided through the office of the Sergeant at Arms. It is the understanding of the Committee on Appropriations of the Senate that this system will improve the research services available to the Senate. The Sergeant at Arms is directed to prepare a report on the proposed changes to the computer information services program for the Senate Committee on Rules and Administration and the Senate Committee on Appropriations thirty days in advance of implementing any new system. The report should detail the cost to the Senate of both the old and new systems, a comparison of the services available on the old and new systems, and the advantages and disadvantages between the old and new systems for users.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Provides a death gratuity and appropriates $733,971,000 for salaries and expenses, House of Representatives and includes several administrative provisions as proposed by the House. Two additional provisions have been included dealing with telecommunication regulations and authorizing reimbursement to the Chief Administrative Officer's budget for certain furniture and equipment expenses. Inasmuch as this item relates solely to the House, and in accord with long practice under which each body determines its own housekeeping requirements and the other concurs without intervention, the managers on the part of the Senate, at the request of the managers on the part of the House, have receded to the House.

JOINT ITEMS

JOINT ECONOMIC COMMITTEE

Appropriates $3,096,000 for the Joint Economic Committee instead of $2,796,000 as proposed by the House and Senate.

JOINT COMMITTEE ON PRINTING

Appropriates $202,000 for the Joint Committee on Printing and an additional $150,000 for the Committee on House Oversight as proposed by the House instead of $202,000 for the Joint Committee on Printing as proposed by the Senate. The Senate has provided $150,000 for the Senate Committee on Rules and Administration elsewhere in the bill.

JOINT COMMITTEE ON TAXATION

Appropriates $5,965,400 for the Joint Committee on Taxation as proposed by the Senate instead of $6,018,000 as proposed by the House. The conferees agree that the Joint Committee on Taxation, a joint item that supports both the House and Senate equally, serves a critical role in preparing tax and revenue estimates for Members of Congress. The conferees expect the Joint Committee staff to be fully responsive in assisting with revenue estimates for Members of Congress who are not members of the tax committees. Upon the request of any Member of Congress, the Joint Committee shall expeditiously provide a revenue estimate, describe all assumptions it makes in performing its calculations and provide all primary and secondary source materials to Members or their designees. The Joint Committee shall also state the assumptions and source material in a manner that will allow the calculations for the revenue estimate to be replicated by Members or their designees. The conferees note that such revenue estimates are needed in a timely manner and are critical to the consideration of legislation and amendments. The conferees expect the Joint Committee to be both responsive and timely in its responses to Members of Congress who do not serve on the revenue committees.

In addition, the conferees have provided funds for pay parity ($2,442,064) and an adjustment to the longevity schedule ($1,687,284) but fence those amounts pending approval by the appropriate authorities, including the named authorizing committees.

The conferees commend the U.S. Capitol Police (USCP) for its desire to improve the management of its administrative operations. The Appropriations Committees will expect to hear from the Chief of the Capitol Police the details of steps taken to implement improvements during the presentation of the Police fiscal year 2000 budget, specifically the USCP's priorities and the schedule to accomplish those improvements.

Inasmuch as this item relates solely to the Senate, and in accord with long practice under which each body determines its own housekeeping requirements and the other concurs without intervention, the managers on the part of the House, at the request of the managers on the part of the Senate, have receded to the Senate, including an additional amount above the amount in the Senate bill.

The conferees have agreed to language in the House report directing the Clerk of the House, in consultation with the Secretary of the Senate and the Public Printer, to evaluate ways to improve the cost-effectiveness of printing Congressional documents and to make appropriate recommendations. The conferees request that the Secretary of the Senate work with the Clerk of the House of Representatives on this project.

ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISION

The conferees have agreed to an administrative provision in the House bill that amends the Legislative Branch Appropriations Act, 1998 to authorize "not to exceed" $11,017,000 to be transferred from the revolving fund.

TITLE II—OTHER AGENCIES

BOTANIC GARDEN

The amendment provides for the investment of such funds in Treasury securities or other Federally-guaranteed obligations and credit of the investments and investment proceeds to the account.

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS

Salaries and Expenses

Provides $238,373,000 for salaries and expenses, Library of Congress instead of $234,822,000 as proposed by the House and $239,176,542 as proposed by the Senate. Of this amount, $6,850,000 is made available from receipts collected by the Library as proposed by the House instead of $6,500,000 as proposed by the Senate; and $10,119,000 is to remain available until expended for acquisition of library materials as proposed by the Senate instead of $9,869,000 as proposed by the House. With respect to differences between the House and Senate bills, the conferees have agreed to the following budget changes from FY 1998:

1. Mandatory pay increases	+$6,448,000

The conferees have also agreed to a provision in the Senate bill providing $2,000,000, to remain available until expended, for a four-year project to digitize collections for the "Meeting of the Frontiers" United States-Russian digital collection and to a Senate provision of $250,000, also to remain available until expended, for the Library's efforts in connection with the commemoration of the bicentennial of the Lewis and Clark expedition.

The conferees agree with the directives in the Senate report concerning full-time equivalent jobs and direct that the funds provided may only be expended within current FTE levels.

The conferees agree with language in the House report directing the Library to develop measurements of the extent of the collections security problem and with language in the Senate report urging the Library to continue efforts to assist the Senate with a legislative information retrieval system.

The conferees direct the Library to develop a strategic plan no later than January 15, 1999, coordinating all aspects of the Library's interior and exterior physical security. The plan should identify the Library's central requirements and detail how those requirements are proposed to be met in the short term and in the long term. The Library should consult with the Architect of the Capitol and include in the report those aspects of building security currently provided by the Architect. The Library should also consider the U.S. Capitol Police as a source of information and should consult with the Capitol Police for advice on the best industry practices.

COPYRIGHT OFFICE

LIBRARY BUILDINGS AND GROUNDS

STRUCTURAL AND MECHANICAL CARE

Appropriates $12,672,000 for structural and mechanical care, Library buildings and grounds, Architect of the Capitol instead of $11,933,000 as proposed by the House and $12,566,000 as proposed by the Senate. Of this amount, $910,000 shall remain available until expended. With respect to object class and project differences between the House and Senate bills, the conferees have agreed to the following operating and capital budget changes from FY 1998:

Operating Budget

1. Personnel compensation and benefits	+$299,000
2. Attrition savings	-39,000

The conferees direct that the Architect of the Capitol obtain the concurrence of the Capitol Police Board in the submission of budget requests involving the physical security of the Library buildings and grounds.

ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS

The conferees have agreed to a provision in the House bill authorizing the Architect of the Capitol to make a grant of $1,000,000 to the National Trust for Historic Preservation, to be placed in a restricted account and to be matched by donations to the Association for the Preservation of Historic Congressional Cemetery. Earnings of the account, to the extent that the grant is matched by private donations, will be available to the Association for care and maintenance of Congressional Cemetery, excluding costs of nonroutine restoration or capital projects.

The conferees have included language authorizing up to $2,500,000 for improvements to the National Audio Visual Conservation Center in Culpepper, Virginia. The conferees note that when the acquisition of the National Audio Visual Conservation Center was authorized, the Library announced a goal of funding improvements to the facility on a three-to-one private/public match over the life of the improvement project. The conferees direct the Library to develop a funding strategy, similar to that utilized for the National Digital Library, which will achieve its stated goal.

GOVERNMENT PRINTING OFFICE

OFFICE OF SUPERINTENDENT OF DOCUMENTS

SALARIES AND EXPENSES

Appropriates $29,264,000 for salaries and expenses, Office of the Superintendent of Documents as proposed by the House instead of $29,600,000 as proposed by the Senate.

GOVERNMENT PRINTING OFFICE REVOLVING FUND

The conferees agree to a 3,383 workyear limitation at the Government Printing Office instead of 3,416 as proposed by the House and 3,350 as proposed by the Senate. The conferees agree with language in the House report regarding the coordination of the implementation of a commercial off-the-shelf financial management system with the Legislative Branch Financial Managers Council and further direct that the Public Printer implement the recommendations of the recent management audit conducted by Booz-Allen and Hamilton, Inc., as appropriate, and submit an annual report. The first report is due with the submission of the fiscal year 2000 appropriation request.

The conferees agree with language in the Senate report regarding a total plan for capital upgrades and obtaining approvals of the plan by the appropriate committees.

As part of ongoing concern over the efforts of Legislative branch agencies to be Year 2000 compliant, the conferees direct the Government Printing Office to complete all assessments of its mission-critical systems, all planning for the time and resources necessary to complete critical renovation, validation and implementation activities, and take all actions necessary to make the agency Year 2000 compliant during fiscal year 1999. The conferees are particularly concerned that certain key elements of the agency's Year 2000 preparation may not be installed until May of 1999 or later, leaving the agency with little time to test mission-critical applications associated with these elements. The conferees direct GPO management to take whatever steps are necessary to prevent any major Year 2000 failures resulting from the agency's inability or unwillingness to cooperate fully in this vital endeavor.

GENERAL ACCOUNTING OFFICE

SALARIES AND EXPENSES

Appropriates $354,268,000 for salaries and expenses, General Accounting Office instead of $354,238,000 as proposed by the House and $363,298,000 as proposed by the Senate. With respect to differences between the House and Senate bills, the conferees have agreed to the following budget changes from FY1998:

1. Attrition savings	-$3,091,000
2. Other compensation	+250,000
3. Price level increases	+976,500
4. Program changes	+6,610,000

The $6,610,000 provided for program changes allows for not to exceed 50 full time equivalent (FTE) employees. The conferees expect that a minimum of one-third of the program funding increase will be used by GAO to support information technology (IT) work, particularly in support of issues related to the Year 2000 computing crisis. Any funds in excess of the amount required for additional FTE's should be allocated to program contract support. The conferees direct the Comptroller General to include in the agency's FY2000 budget presentation an accounting of how this increase has been used, including how many additional FTE's have been added and how much of the program increase has been used to acquire mission-related contract services.

ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISION

The conferees have included an administrative provision that transfers unexpended balances from funds transferred by the Department of Health and Human Services to the Comptroller General for a study. The study has been completed and the funds are no longer necessary for their intended purpose.

TITLE III—GENERAL PROVISIONS

In Title III, General Provisions, section numbers have been changed to conform to the conference agreement. The conferees have agreed to include section 305, a sense of Congress provision relating to purchase of American-made products. The conferees have included authority for "buyout" incentive programs for the Architect of the Capitol and for the Government Printing Office. The conferees have amended the language of the House bill that contains these provisions. The amended language requires the Architect of the Capitol and the Government Printing Office to make payments to the Civil Service Retirement and Disability Fund equal to 15% of the annual gross salary of each employee electing voluntary separation, a provision comparable to other Federal buyout authority. In addition, each agency is required to submit a plan for utilizing this authority and to make periodic progress reports.

The Architect of the Capitol presented justification for this authority, explaining it will facilitate reengineering and reinvesting in the agency to meet both mission requirements and fiduciary responsibility. The conferees direct that before the Architect offers each buyout/earlyout program, the Architect inform the House of Representatives Committees on House Oversight and Appropriations and the Senate Committees on Rules and Administration and Appropriations of the areas to be affected by the buyout/earlyout program and the planned for result. Following each buyout/earlyout program that proceeds, but no later than July 1 of each year, the Architect must report on the annual results and compare them with the planned for results. An estimate for resulting savings due to the reengineered functions must accompany each final buyout/earlyout report.

The conferees have included a provision in the House bill that directs the Architect of the Capitol to develop and implement an energy savings strategy and a provision in the Senate bill that amends section 316 of Public Law 101-302. The conferees have included language amending the American Folklife Preservation Act to permanently authorize the Center, to restructure the Board of Trustees, to eliminate payment to Board members (excepting reimbursement for travel and subsistence while on Board business), and to eliminate the long-vacant Deputy Director position. The conference agreement amends the provision in the Senate bill regarding payments made by the Government Printing Office to the Employees' Compensation Fund. The amended language will only apply prospectively and removes the requirement for any future reimbursements by the Government Printing Office under section 8147(c) of title 5, United States Code.

TITLE IV—TRADE DEFICIT REVIEW COMMISSION

The conferees have deleted a provision in the Senate bill regarding a trade deficit review commission.

IT IS A CLEAR CHOICE

(Mr. BALLENGER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. BALLENGER. Mr. Speaker, Congress has a little less than 1 month to conduct the people's business. I think Congress should focus on the issue of tax cuts.

Republicans believe that Americans are overtaxed. Democrats believe that Americans are not overtaxed, and some of them actually believe that Americans are not taxed enough. Republicans talk about tax cuts for all Americans, and Democrats speak in terms of targeted tax cuts, which is a great way of saying that the middle class, the backbone of America, will not be getting a tax cut.

Now, let us make a distinction between Democrats and so-called new Democrats. Democrats will raise your taxes. New Democrats will talk about cutting your taxes, but they will end up raising them once they get into office.

Mr. Speaker, the choice is clear. If you believe taxes are fundamentally a freedom issue, then Republicans are on your side. If you think the government knows best, then the Democrats are your friend. It is a clear choice.

SPECIAL ORDERS

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. PETRI). Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 7, 1997, and under a previous order of the House, the following Members will be recognized for 5 minutes each:

DEFUNDING AN ELECTED BODY IS A BLOW TO DEMOCRACY ITSELF

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentlewoman from the District of Columbia (Ms. NORTON) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Ms. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, a serious step was taken last week when the House defunded an elected body that had only a token amount in the D.C. appropriation, a 100th of 1 percent amount in a $6.8 billion consensus budget that had been approved by the control board and the elected officials.

This may be because the group involved, Advisory Neighborhood Commissions, are perhaps not routinely found in other jurisdictions, and there is little understanding of the vital role they play in our urban environment.

Many members seem to think that ANC's, as we call our Advisory Neighborhood Commissions, are like civic organizations in their own home towns.

In one important way, they are. The ANC commissioners are volunteers and are never paid. But, unlike traditional civic organizations, ANC's perform official government duties.

For example, they must be notified 30 days before any neighborhood action is taken. They must hold hearings and receive comments. Then they must transmit their comments to the agency involved, and then the mayor and the city council must give great weight to the comments of the ANC's. These are unusual officials. Aside from their official duties, they perform tasks that have become indispensable to maintaining the quality of life in the District of Columbia.

Let me give just a few examples. ANC commissioners cleaned streets and alleys when the city was unable to deliver services during the fiscal crisis. Commissioners notified the city of declining properties when city inspectors were unable to inspect deteriorating housing. An ANC used the notification process to require developers to include infrastructure improvements, like sidewalks, when building new housing.

Upon receiving notification for liquor license renewal, an ANC was able to force a store owner to stem public intoxication. An ANC uses its funds to operate a youth center, placing teens in jobs with neighborhood vendors.

Our ANC's have taken a 50 percent cut since the fiscal crisis began in 1994. Thus, giving them just a small amount of that back helps our neighborhoods in indescribable ways.

Ironically, these neighborhood institutions were placed in the home rule charter by the House of Representatives itself. Now, they are being defunded by the House. The Senate has not defunded them.

The House chose not to leave to chance grass roots participation in local government when it approved the charter of the District of Columbia, believing that a cadre of front-line elected officials could be the veins and arteries leading out into the neighborhoods to other parts of the government and to the mayor and the city council.

The truth is that the 37 commissions, consisting of 299 commissioners, have the most thankless job in the District. This volunteer job has so few rewards that many single-member districts are without candidates. It is a real labor of love. It is difficult enough without eviscerating ANC by depriving commissioners of the basics, such as phones and faxes.

Defunding an elected body is a blow to democracy itself. The ANC contribution to the city is an important example of the link between democratic grass roots participation and the quality of life. This contribution deserves to be applauded, not defunded.

In the District, we get much more out of the ANC's than we put in. I ask that their funding be returned.

CONFERENCE REPORT ON H.R. 3616

Mr. SPENCE submitted the following conference report and statement on the bill (H.R. 3616) to authorize appropriations for fiscal year 1999 for military activities of the Department of Defense, for military construction, and for defense activities of the Department of Energy, to prescribe personnel strengths for such fiscal year for the Armed Forces, and for other purposes:

CONFERENCE REPORT (H. REPT. 105-736)

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 3616) to authorize appropriations for fiscal year 1999 for military activities of the Department of Defense, for military construction, and for defense activities of the Department of Energy, to prescribe personnel strengths for such fiscal year for the Armed Forces, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate and agree to the same with an amendment as follows:

In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment, insert the following:

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE; FINDINGS.

(a) SHORT TITLE.—This Act may be cited as the "Strom Thurmond National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1999".

(b) FINDINGS.—Congress makes the following findings:

(1) Senator Strom Thurmond of South Carolina first became a member of the Committee on Armed Services of the United States Senate on January 19, 1959. Senator Thurmond's continuous service on that committee covers more than 75 percent of the period of the existence of the committee, which was established immediately after World War II, and more than 20 percent of the period of the existence of military and naval affairs committees of Congress, the original bodies of which were formed in 1816.

(2) Senator Thurmond came to Congress and the committee as a distinguished veteran of service, including combat service, in the Armed Forces of the United States.

(3) Senator Thurmond was commissioned as a reserve second lieutenant of infantry in 1924. He served with great distinction with the First Army in the European Theater of Operations during World War II, landing in Normandy in a glider with the 82nd Airborne Division on D-Day. He was transferred to the Pacific Theater of Operations at the end of the war in Europe and was serving in the Philippines when Japan surrendered.

(4) Having reverted to Reserve status at the end of World War II, Senator Thurmond was promoted to brigadier general in the United States Army Reserve in 1954. He served as President of the Reserve Officers Association beginning that same year and ending in 1955. Senator Thurmond was promoted to major general in the United States Army Reserve in 1959. He transferred to the Retired Reserve on January 1, 1965, after 36 years of commissioned service.

(5) The distinguished character of Senator Thurmond's military service has been recognized by awards of numerous decorations that include the Legion of Merit, the Bronze Star medal with "V" device, the Army Commendation Medal, the Belgian Cross of the Order of the Crown, and the French Croix de Guerre.

(6) Senator Thurmond has served as chairman of the Committee on Armed Services of the United States Senate since 1995 and served as the ranking minority member of the committee from 1993 to 1995. Senator Thurmond concludes his service as chairman at the end of the One Hundred Fifth Congress, but is to continue to serve the committee as a member in successive Congresses.

(7) This Act is the fortieth annual authorization bill for the Department of Defense for which Senator Thurmond has taken a major responsibility as a member of the Committee on Armed Services of the Senate.

(8) Senator Thurmond, as an Army officer and a legislator, has made matchless contributions to the national security of the United States that, in duration and in quality, are unique.

(9) It is altogether fitting and proper that this Act, the last annual authorization Act for the national defense that Senator Thurmond manages in and for the United States Senate as chairman of the Committee on Armed Services, be named in his honor, as provided in subsection (a).

(2) A payment referred to in paragraph (1) is a payment of $10,000,000, in constant fiscal year 1996 dollars, into the Foreign Military Sales Trust Account for purposes of Canada.

(c) CONDITION ON AUTHORITY FOR SUBSEQUENT FISCAL YEARS.—A payment may be made under subsection (b) for a fiscal year after fiscal year 1999 only if the Secretary of Defense submits to Congress with the budget for such fiscal year under section 1105 of title 31, United States Code, evidence that the cumulative amount expended by the Government of Canada for environmental cleanup activities in Canada during any fiscal years before such fiscal year in which a payment under that subsection was authorized was an amount equal to or greater than the aggregate amount of the payments under that subsection during such fiscal years.

(d) SOURCE OF FUNDS.—(1) The payment under subsection (b) for fiscal year 1998 shall be made from amounts appropriated pursuant to section 301(5) of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1998 (Public Law 105-85; 111 Stat. 1669).

SEC. 328. SENSE OF CONGRESS REGARDING OIL SPILL PREVENTION TRAINING FOR PERSONNEL ON BOARD NAVY VESSELS.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress makes the following findings:

(1) There have been six significant oil spills in Puget Sound, Washington, in 1998, five at Puget Sound Naval Shipyard (including three from the U.S.S. Kitty Hawk, one from the U.S.S. Carl Vinson, and one from the U.S.S. Sacramento) and one at Naval Station Everett from the U.S.S. Paul F. Foster.

(2) Navy personnel on board vessels, and not shipyard employees, were primarily responsible for a majority of these oil spills at Puget Sound Naval Shipyard.

(3) Oil spills have the potential to damage the local environment, killing microscopic organisms, contributing to air pollution, harming plants and marine animals, and increasing overall pollution levels in Puget Sound.

(b) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that the Secretary of the Navy should take immediate action to significantly reduce the risk of vessel oil spills, including the minimization of fuel oil transfers, the assurance of proper training and qualifications of all Naval personnel in occupations that may contribute to or minimize the risk of shipboard oil spills, and the improvement of liaison with local authorities concerning oil spill prevention and response activities.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress makes the following findings:

(1) Organ and tissue transplantation is one of the most remarkable medical success stories in the history of medicine.

(3) The Department of Defense has made significant progress in increasing the awareness of the importance of organ and tissue donations among members of the Armed Forces.

(4) The inclusion of organ and tissue donor elections in the Defense Enrollment Eligibility Reporting System (DEERS) central database represents a major step in ensuring that organ and tissue donor elections are a matter of record and are accessible in a timely manner.

(b) RESPONSIBILITIES REGARDING ORGAN AND TISSUE DONATION.—(1) Chapter 55 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by adding after section 1108, as added by section 721(a)(1), the following new section:

“(b) RESPONSIBILITIES OF THE SECRETARIES OF THE MILITARY DEPARTMENTS.—(1) The Secretaries of the military departments shall ensure that—

“(1) appropriate information about organ and tissue donation is provided—

“(A) to each officer candidate during initial training; and “(B) to each recruit—

“(i) after completion by the recruit of basic training; and

“(ii) before arrival of the recruit at the first duty assignment of the recruit;

“(2) members of the armed forces are given recurring, specific opportunities to elect to be organ or tissue donors during service in the armed forces and upon retirement; and

“(c) RESPONSIBILITIES OF THE SURGEONS GENERAL OF THE MILITARY DEPARTMENTS.—The Surgeons General of the military departments shall ensure that—

“(1) appropriate training is provided to enlisted and officer medical personnel to facilitate the effective operation of organ and tissue donation activities under garrison conditions and, to the extent possible, under operational conditions; and

“(2) medical logistical activities can, to the extent possible without jeopardizing operational requirements, support an effective organ and tissue donation program.”.

(2) The table of sections at the beginning of such chapter is amended by adding after the item relating to section 1108, as added by section 721(a)(2), the following new item:

“1109. Organ and tissue donor program.”.

(2) The justifications for implementing an enrollment-based capitation methodology without first conducting a demonstration project for implementation of such methodology.

(3) The impact that implementation of an enrollment based capitation methodology would have on the provision of space-available care at military medical treatment facilities, particularly in the case of care for—

(A) military retirees entitled who are entitled to hospital insurance benefits under part A of title XVIII of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395c et seq.); and

(B) covered beneficiaries under chapter 55 of title 10, United States Code, who reside outside the catchment area of a military medical treatment facility.

(4) The impact that implementation of an enrollment-based capitation methodology would have with respect to the pharmacy benefits provided at military medical treatment facilities, given that the enrollment-based capitation methodology would fund military medical treatment facilities based on the number of members at such facilities enrolled in TRICARE Prime, but all covered beneficiaries may fill prescriptions at military medical treatment facility pharmacies.

(5) An explanation of how additional funding will be provided for a military medical treatment facility if an enrollment-based capitation methodology is implemented to ensure that space-available care and pharmacy coverage can be provided to covered beneficiaries who are not enrolled at the military medical treatment facility, and the amount of funding that will be available.

(6) An explanation of how implementation of an enrollment-based capitation methodology would impact the provision of uniform benefits under TRICARE Prime, and how the Secretary would ensure, if such methodology were implemented, that the provision of health care under TRICARE Prime would not be bifurcated between the provision of such care at military medical treatment facilities and the provision of such care from civilian providers.

SEC. 745. JOINT DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE AND DEPARTMENT OF VETERANS AFFAIRS REPORTS RELATING TO INTERDEPARTMENTAL COOPERATION IN THE DELIVERY OF MEDICAL CARE.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress makes the following findings:

(1) The military health care system of the Department of Defense and the Veterans Health Administration of the Department of Veterans Affairs are national institutions that collectively manage more than 1,500 hospitals, clinics, and health care facilities worldwide to provide services to more than 11,000,000 beneficiaries.

(2) In the post-Cold War era, these institutions are in a profound transition that involves challenging opportunities.

(3) During the period from 1988 to 1998, the number of military medical personnel has declined by 15 percent and the number of military hospitals has been reduced by one-third.

(4) During the two years since 1996, the Department of Veterans Affairs has revitalized its structure by decentralizing authority into 22 Veterans Integrated Service Networks.

(5) In the face of increasing costs of medical care, increased demands for health care services, and increasing budgetary constraints, the Department of Defense and the Department of Veterans Affairs have embarked on a variety of dynamic and innovative cooperative programs ranging from shared services to joint venture operations of medical facilities.

(6) In 1984, there was a combined total of 102 Department of Veterans Affairs and Department of Defense facilities with sharing agreements. By 1997, that number had grown to 420. During the six years from fiscal year 1992 through fiscal year 1997, shared services increased from slightly over 3,000 services to more than 6,000 services, ranging from major medical and surgical services, laundry, blood, and laboratory services to unusual specialty care services.

(7) The Department of Defense and the Department of Veterans Affairs are conducting four health care joint ventures in New Mexico, Nevada, Texas, and Oklahoma, and are planning to conduct four more such ventures in Alaska, Florida, Hawaii, and California.

(b) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that—

(1) the Department of Defense and the Department of Veterans Affairs should be commended for the cooperation between the two departments in the delivery of medical care, of which the cooperation involved in the establishment and operation of the Department of Defense and the Department of Veterans Affairs Executive Council is a praiseworthy example;

(2) the Department of Defense and the Department of Veterans Affairs are encouraged to continue to explore new opportunities to enhance the availability and delivery of medical care to beneficiaries by further enhancing the cooperative efforts of the departments; and

(3) enhanced cooperation between the Department of Defense and the Department of Veterans Affairs is encouraged regarding—

(A) the general areas of access to quality medical care, identification and elimination of impediments to enhanced cooperation, and joint research and program development; and

(B) the specific areas in which there is significant potential to achieve progress in cooperation in a short term, including computerization of patient records systems, participation of the Department of Veterans Affairs in the TRICARE program, pharmaceutical programs, and joint physical examinations.

(c) JOINT SURVEY OF POPULATIONS SERVED.—

(1) The Secretary of Defense and the Secretary of Veterans Affairs shall jointly conduct a survey of their respective medical care beneficiary populations to identify, by category of beneficiary (defined as the Secretaries consider appropriate), the expectations of, requirements for, and behavior patterns of the beneficiaries with respect to medical care. The two Secretaries shall develop the protocol for the survey jointly, but shall obtain the services of an entity independent of the Department of Defense and the Department of Veterans Affairs to carry out the survey.

(2) The survey shall include the following:

(A) Demographic characteristics, economic characteristics, and geographic location of beneficiary populations with regard to catchment or service areas.

(B) The types and frequency of care required by veterans, retirees, and dependents within catchment or service areas of Department of Defense and Department of Veterans Affairs medical facilities and outside those areas.

(C) The numbers of, characteristics of, and types of medical care needed by the veterans, retirees, and dependents who, though eligible for medical care in Department of Defense or Department of Veterans Affairs treatment facilities or through other federally funded medical programs, choose not to seek medical care from those facilities or under those programs, and the reasons for that choice.

(D) The obstacles or disincentives for seeking medical care from such facilities or under such programs that are perceived by veterans, retirees, and dependents.

(E) Any other matters that the Secretary of Defense and the Secretary of Veterans Affairs consider appropriate for the survey.

(3) The Secretary of Defense or the Secretary of Veterans Affairs may waive the survey requirements under this subsection with respect to information that can be better obtained from a source other than the survey.

(4) The Secretary of Defense and the Secretary of Veterans Affairs shall submit a report on the results of the survey to the appropriate committees of Congress. The report shall contain the matters described in paragraph (2) and any proposals for legislation that the Secretaries recommend for enhancing Department of Defense and Department of Veterans Affairs cooperative efforts with respect to the delivery of medical care.

(d) REVIEW OF LAW AND POLICIES.—(1) The Secretary of Defense and the Secretary of Veterans Affairs shall jointly conduct a review to identify impediments to cooperation between the Department of Defense and the Department of Veterans Affairs regarding the delivery of medical care. The matters reviewed shall include the following:

(A) All laws, policies, and regulations, and any attitudes of beneficiaries of the health care systems of the two departments, that have the effect of preventing the establishment, or limiting the effectiveness, of cooperative health care programs of the departments.

(B) The requirements and practices involved in the credentialing and licensure of health care providers.

(C) The perceptions of beneficiaries in a variety of categories (defined as the Secretaries consider appropriate) regarding the various Federal health care systems available for their use.

(D) The types and frequency of medical services furnished by the Department of Defense and the Department of Veterans Affairs through cooperative arrangements to each category of beneficiary (including active-duty members, retirees, dependents, veterans in the health-care eligibility categories referred to as Category A and Category C, and persons authorized to receive medical care under section 1713 of title 38, United States Code) of the other department.

(E) The extent to which health care facilities of the Department of Defense and Department of Veterans Affairs have sufficient capacity, or could jointly or individually create sufficient capacity, to provide services to beneficiaries of the other department without diminution of access or services to their primary beneficiaries.

(F) The extent to which the recruitment of scarce medical specialists and allied health personnel by the Department of Defense and the Department of Veterans Affairs could be enhanced through cooperative arrangements for providing health care services.

(G) The obstacles and disincentives to providing health care services through cooperative arrangements between the Department of Defense and the Department of Veterans Affairs.

(2) The Secretaries shall jointly submit a report on the results of the review to the appropriate committees of Congress. The report shall include any proposals for legislation that the Secretaries recommend for eliminating or reducing impediments to interdepartmental cooperation that are identified during the review.

(e) PARTICIPATION IN TRICARE.—(1) The Secretary of Defense shall review the TRICARE program to identify opportunities for increased participation by the Department of Veterans Affairs in that program. The ongoing collaboration between Department of Defense officials and Department of Veterans Affairs officials regarding increased participation shall be included among the matters reviewed.

(2) The Secretary of Defense and the Secretary of Veterans Affairs shall jointly submit to the appropriate committees of Congress a semiannual report on the status of the review under this subsection and on efforts to increase the participation of the Department of Veterans Affairs in the TRICARE program. No report is required under this paragraph after the submission of a semiannual report in which the Secretaries declare that the Department of Veterans Affairs is participating in the TRICARE program to the extent that can reasonably be expected to be attained.

(f) PHARMACEUTICAL BENEFITS AND PROGRAMS.—(1) The Department of Defense-Department of Veterans Affairs Federal Pharmacy Executive Steering Committee shall—

(A) undertake a comprehensive examination of existing pharmaceutical benefits and programs for beneficiaries of Department of Defense medical care programs, including matters relating to the purchasing, distribution, and dispensing of pharmaceuticals and the management of mail order pharmaceuticals programs; and

In conducting such research, the Secretary shall consider not only the current state of the domestic market for finance and accounting services, but also the potential effects that the entry of the Department of Defense as a large, long-term consumer of such services might have on that market.

Subtitle C—Joint Warfighting Experimentation

SEC. 921. FINDINGS CONCERNING JOINT WARFIGHTING EXPERIMENTATION.

Congress makes the following findings:

(1) The assessments of the Quadrennial Defense Review and the National Defense Panel provide a compelling argument—

(A) that the security environment in the early 21st century will include fundamentally different military challenges than the security environment in the late 20th century; and

(B) reinforce the premise of the Goldwater-Nichols Department of Defense Reorganization Act of 1986 that future warfare will require more effective joint operational concepts.

(2) Joint experimentation is necessary for—

(A) integrating advances in technology with changes in organizational structure and joint operational concepts; and

(B) determining the interdependent aspects of joint warfare that are key for transforming the conduct of military operations to meet future challenges successfully.

(3) It is essential that an energetic and innovative organization be established in the Department of Defense with the authority (subject to the authority and guidance of the Secretary of Defense and Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff) to design and implement a process of joint experimentation to investigate and test technologies and alternative forces and concepts in field environments under realistic conditions against the full range of future challenges to assist in developing and validating new joint warfighting concepts and transforming the Armed Forces to meet the threats to national security anticipated for the early 21st century.

SEC. 922. SENSE OF CONGRESS CONCERNING JOINT WARFIGHTING EXPERIMENTATION.

(a) DESIGNATION OF COMMANDER TO HAVE JOINT WARFIGHTING EXPERIMENTATION MISSION.—It is the sense of Congress that the initiative of the Secretary of Defense to designate the commander of a combatant command to have the mission of joint warfighting experimentation is a key step in exploiting the potential of advanced technologies, new organizational structures, and new joint operational concepts to transform the conduct of military operations by the Armed Forces.

(b) RESOURCES AND AUTHORITY OF COMMANDER.—It is, further, the sense of Congress that the commander of the combatant command referred to in subsection (a) should be provided with appropriate and sufficient resources for joint warfighting experimentation and with the appropriate authority to execute the commander's assigned responsibilities and that such authority should include the following:

(1) Planning, preparing, and conducting the program of joint warfighting experimentation, which program should include analyses, simulations, wargames, experiments, advanced concept technology demonstrations, joint exercises conducted in virtual and field environments, and, as a particularly critical aspect, assessments of "red team" vulnerability.

(2) Developing scenarios and measures of effectiveness to meet the operational challenges expected to be encountered in the early 21st century and assessing the effectiveness of current and new organizational structures, operational concepts, and technologies in addressing those challenges.

(3) Integrating and testing in joint experimentation the systems and concepts that result from warfighting experimentation conducted by the Armed Forces and the Defense Agencies.

(4) Coordinating with each of the Armed Forces and Defense Agencies regarding the development and acquisition of equipment (including surrogate or real technologies, platforms, and systems), supplies, and services necessary for joint experimentation.

(5) Providing the Secretary of Defense and the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff with recommendations, based on the conduct of joint warfighting experimentation, for—

- (A) improving interoperability;
- (B) reducing unnecessary redundancy;
- (C) synchronizing technology fielding;
- (D) developing joint operational concepts;
- (E) prioritizing the most promising joint capabilities for future experimentation; and
- (F) prioritizing joint requirements and acquisition programs.

(6) Making recommendations to the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff on mission needs statements and operational requirements documents.

(c) CONGRESSIONAL REVIEW.—It is, further, the sense of Congress that Congress—

(1) should review the adequacy of the process of transformation to meet future challenges to the national security; and

(2) if progress is determined inadequate, should consider legislation to—

(A) establish an appropriate organization to conduct the mission described in subsection (a); and

(B) provide to the commander given the responsibility for that mission appropriate and sufficient resources for joint warfighting experimentation and the appropriate authority to execute that commander's assigned responsibilities for that mission, including the authorities specified in subsection (b).

SEC. 923. REPORTS ON JOINT WARFIGHTING EXPERIMENTATION.

(a) INITIAL REPORT.—(1) The commander of the combatant command assigned by the Secretary of Defense to have the mission for joint warfighting experimentation shall submit to the Secretary an initial report on the implementation of joint experimentation. Not later than April 1, 1999, the Secretary shall submit that report, together with any comments that the Secretary considers appropriate and any comments that the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff considers appropriate, to the Committee on Armed Services of the Senate and the Committee on National Security of the House of Representatives.

(2) The report of the commander under paragraph (1) shall include the commander's assessment of the following:

(A) The authority and responsibilities of the commander as described in section 922(b).

(B) The organization of the commander's combatant command, and of its staff, for carrying out the joint warfighting experimentation mission.

(C) The process established for tasking forces to participate in experimentation and the commander's specific authority over those forces, including forces designated as joint experimentation forces.

(D) The resources provided for initial implementation of joint warfighting experimentation, the process for providing those resources to the commander, the categories of the funding, and the authority of the commander for budget execution.

(E) The process established for the development and acquisition of the materiel, supplies, services, and equipment necessary for the conduct of joint warfighting experimentation.

(F) The process established for designing, preparing, and conducting joint experiments.

(G) The role assigned the commander for—

(i) integrating and testing in joint warfighting experimentation the systems that emerge from warfighting experimentation by the Armed Forces or the Defense Agencies;

(ii) assessing the effectiveness of organizational structures, operational concepts, and technologies; and

(iii) assisting the Secretary of Defense and Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff to prioritize requirements or acquisition programs.

(b) ANNUAL REPORT.—(1) Chapter 23 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"§485. Joint warfighting experimentation

"(a) ANNUAL REPORT.—The commander of the combatant command assigned by the Secretary of Defense to have the mission for joint warfighting experimentation shall submit to the Secretary an annual report on the conduct of joint experimentation activities for the fiscal year ending in the year of the report. "(C) the conduct of experiments;

"(D) the adequacy of resources; or

"(E) changes in authority of the commander to develop or acquire materiel, supplies, services, or equipment directly for the conduct of joint warfighting experimentation."

(2) The table of sections at the beginning of such chapter is amended by adding at the end the following new item:

"485. Joint warfighting experimentation."

(c) FIRST ANNUAL REPORT.—The first report under section 485 of title 10, United States Code, as added by subsection (b), shall be made with respect to fiscal year 1999. In the case of the report under that section for fiscal year 1999, the reference in subsection (b)(1) of that section to the most recent report under that section shall be treated as referring to the report under subsection (a) of this section.

(a) REDUCTION OF DEFENSE ACQUISITION AND SUPPORT WORKFORCE.—The Secretary of Defense shall accomplish reductions in defense acquisition and support personnel positions during fiscal year 1999 so that the total number of such personnel as of October 1, 1999, is less than the total number of such personnel as of October 1, 1998, by at least the applicable number determined under subsection (b).

(b) REQUIRED REDUCTION.—(1) The applicable number for purposes of subsection (a) is 25,000. However, the Secretary of Defense may specify a lower number, which may not be less than 12,500, as the applicable number for purposes of subsection (a) if the Secretary determines, and certifies to Congress not later than May 1, 1999, that an applicable number greater than the number specified by the Secretary would be inconsistent with the cost-effective management of the defense acquisition system to obtain best value equipment and with ensuring military readiness.

(2) The Secretary shall include with such a certification a report setting forth a detailed explanation of each of the matters certified. The report shall include—

(A) a detailed explanation of all matters incorporated in the Secretary's determination;

(1) The contributions of the people of the United States and other nations have, in large measure, resulted in the suspension of fighting and alleviated the suffering of the people of Bosnia and Herzegovina since December 1995.

(2) The United States has expended approximately $9,500,000,000 between 1992 and mid-1998 just in support of the United States military operations in Bosnia to achieve those results.

(3) Efforts to restore the economy and political structure in Bosnia and Herzegovina have achieved some success in accordance with the Dayton Accords.

(4) On March 3, 1998, the President certified to Congress (A) that the continued presence of United States forces in Bosnia and Herzegovina after June 30, 1998, was required in order to meet the national security interests of the United States, and (B) that United States Armed Forces will not serve as, or be used as, civil police in Bosnia and Herzegovina.

(5) With that certification, the President submitted to Congress a report stating that the goal of the military presence in Bosnia and Herzegovina is to establish the conditions under which implementation of the Dayton Accords can continue without the support of a major NATO-led military force and setting forth the criteria for determining when that goal has been accomplished.

(6) Since the administration has not specified how long achievement of that goal is expected to take, the mission of United States ground combat forces in Bosnia and Herzegovina is essentially of indefinite duration.

(7) The NATO operations plan for the Stabilization Force (Operations Plan 10407, which went into effect on June 20, 1998, after approval by allied foreign ministers) incorporates all of the benchmarks set forth in the report referred to in paragraph (5) and states that the Stabilization Force will develop detailed criteria for assessing progress in achieving those benchmarks in close coordination with key international organizations participating in civilian implementation of the Dayton Accords.

(8) The military representatives of NATO member nations have been tasked by the North Atlantic Council to provide estimates of the time likely to be required for implementation of the Dayton Accords.

(9) NATO has decided to conduct formal reviews when appropriate (but at intervals of not more than six months) to assess the security situation and the progress being made in the implementation of the civil aspects of the Dayton Accords. Those reviews will enable the Alliance to make decisions as to reductions in the size or the Stabilization Force, leading to its eventual full withdrawal.

(10) NATO has approved the creation of a multinational specialized unit of gendarmes or paramilitary police composed of European security forces to help promote public security in Bosnia and Herzegovina as a part of the post-June 1998 mission for the Stabilization Force.

(11) The limit established for spending by the United States for the defense discretionary budget category for fiscal year 1998 in the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985 does not take into account the continued deployment of United States forces in Bosnia and Herzegovina after June 30, 1998, leading to the request by the President for emergency supplemental appropriations for the Bosnia and Herzegovina mission through September 30, 1998.

(12) Amounts for Department of Defense operations in Bosnia and Herzegovina during fiscal year 1999 were not included in the budget of the President for fiscal year 1999, as submitted to Congress on February 2, 1998.

(13) The President requested $1,858,600,000 in emergency appropriations in his March 4, 1998, amendment to the fiscal year 1999 budget to cover the shortfall in funding in fiscal year 1999 for the costs of extending the mission in Bosnia.

SEC. 1202. SENSE OF CONGRESS.

(a) SENSE OF CONGRESS CONCERNING UNITED STATES FORCES AND ACCOMPLISHMENT OF TASKS IN BOSNIA AND HERZEGOVINA.—It is the sense of Congress that—

(1) United States ground combat forces should not remain in Bosnia and Herzegovina indefinitely in view of the worldwide commitments of the Armed Forces of the United States;

(2) the President should work with NATO allies and the other nations whose military forces are participating in the NATO-led Stabilization Force to withdraw United States ground combat forces from Bosnia and Herzegovina within a reasonable period of time, consistent with the safety of those forces and the accomplishment of the Stabilization Force's military tasks;

(3) a NATO-led force without the participation of United States ground combat forces in Bosnia and Herzegovina might be suitable for a follow-on force for Bosnia and Herzegovina if the European Security and Defense Identity is not sufficiently developed or is otherwise considered inappropriate for such a mission; and

(4) the United States may decide to provide appropriate support to a Western European Union-led or NATO-led follow-on force for Bosnia and Herzegovina, including command and control, intelligence, logistics, and, if necessary, a ready reserve force in the region.

(b) SENSE OF CONGRESS CONCERNING PRESIDENTIAL ACTIONS.—It is the sense of Congress that the President—

(1) should inform the European NATO allies of the expression of the sense of Congress in subsection (a) and should strongly urge them to undertake preparations for establishing a Western European Union-led or a NATO-led force as a follow-on force to the Stabilization Force if needed to maintain peace and stability in Bosnia and Herzegovina; and

(2) should consult closely with the congressional leadership and the congressional defense committees with respect to the progress being made toward achieving a sustainable peace in Bosnia and Herzegovina and the progress being made toward a reduction and ultimate withdrawal of United States ground combat forces from Bosnia and Herzegovina.

(c) SENSE OF CONGRESS CONCERNING DEFENSE BUDGET.—It is the sense of Congress that—

(1) the President should include in the budget for the Department of Defense that the President submits to Congress under section 1105(a) of title 31, United States Code, for each fiscal year sufficient amounts to pay for any proposed continuation of the participation of United States forces in NATO operations in Bosnia and Herzegovina during that fiscal year; and

(2) amounts included in the budget for the purpose stated in paragraph (1) should be over and above the defense discretionary estimates as identified in the Bipartisan Budget Agreement of May 16, 1997 and the fiscal year 1998 concurrent budget resolution and not be transferred from amounts in the budget of any other agency of the executive branch, but instead should be an overall increase in the budget for the Department of Defense and the discretionary spending limits in the Balanced Budget Act of 1997.

SEC. 1203. PRESIDENTIAL REPORTS.

(a) REQUIRED REPORTS.—The President shall ensure that the semiannual reports required by section 7(b) of the general provisions of chapter 1 of the 1998 Supplemental Appropriations and Rescissions Act (Public Law 105-174; 112 Stat. 64) are submitted to Congress in a timely manner as long as United States ground combat forces continue to participate in the Stabilization Force (SFOR). In addition, whenever the President submits to Congress a request for funds for continued operations of United States forces in Bosnia and Herzegovina, the President shall submit a supplemental report providing information to update Congress on developments since the last semiannual report.

(b) REQUIRED INFORMATION.—In addition to the information required by the section referred to in subsection (a) to be included in a report under that section, each report under that section or under subsection (a) shall include the following:

(1) The expected duration of the deployment of United States ground combat forces in Bosnia and Herzegovina in support of implementation of the benchmarks set forth in the President's report of March 3, 1998 (referred to in section 1201(5)) for achieving a sustainable peace process.

(2) The percentage of those benchmarks that have been completed as of the date of the report, the percentage that are expected to be completed within the next reporting period, and the expected time for completion of the remaining tasks.

extent, if any, to which members of the Armed Forces of the United States are participating (or are to participate) in the force.

(4) The military and nonmilitary missions that the President has directed for United States forces in Bosnia and Herzegovina, including a specific discussion of—

(A) the mission of those forces, if any, in connection with the pursuit and apprehension of war criminals;

(B) the mission of those forces, if any, in connection with civilian police functions;

(C) the mission of those forces, if any, in connection with the resettlement of refugees; and

(D) the missions undertaken by those forces, if any, in support of international and local civilian authorities.

(5) An assessment of the risk for the United States forces in Bosnia and Herzegovina, including, for each mission identified pursuant to paragraph (4), the assessment of the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff regarding the nature and level of risk of the mission for the safety and well-being of United States military personnel.

(6) An assessment of the cost to the United States, by fiscal year, of carrying out the missions identified pursuant to paragraph (4) and a detailed projection of any additional funding that will be required by the Department of Defense to meet mission requirements for those operations for the remainder of the fiscal year.

(7) A joint assessment by the Secretary of Defense and the Secretary of State of the status of planning for—

(A) the assumption of all remaining military missions inside Bosnia and Herzegovina by European military and paramilitary forces; and

(B) the establishment and support of a forward-based United States rapid response force outside of Bosnia and Herzegovina that would be capable of deploying rapidly to defeat military threats to a European follow-on force inside Bosnia and Herzegovina and of providing whatever logistical, intelligence, and air support is needed to ensure that a European follow-on force is fully capable of accomplishing its missions under the Dayton Accords.

SEC. 1204. SECRETARY OF DEFENSE REPORTS ON OPERATIONS IN BOSNIA AND HERZEGOVINA.

(a) REPORT ON EFFECTS ON CAPABILITIES OF UNITED STATES MILITARY FORCES.—Not later than December 15, 1998, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to the congressional defense committees a report on the effects of military operations in Bosnia and Herzegovina and the Balkans region on the capabilities of United States military forces. The report shall, in particular, describe the effects of those operations on the capability of United States military forces to conduct successfully two nearly simultaneous major theater wars as specified in current Defense Planning Guidance and in accordance with the deployment timelines called for in the war plans of the commanders of the unified combatant commands.

manders of the unified combatant commands. Such information shall include information on the effects of those operations on anticipated deployment plans for major theater wars in Southwest Asia or on the Korean peninsula, including the following:

(1) Deficiencies or delays in deployment of strategic lift, logistics support and infrastructure, ammunition (including precision guided munitions), support forces, intelligence assets, follow-on forces used for planned counteroffensives, and similar forces.

(2) Additional planned reserve component mobilization, including specific units to be ordered to active duty and required dates for activation of presidential call-up authority.

(6) An assessment, undertaken in consultation with the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and the commanders of the unified combatant commands, of the level of increased risk to successful conduct of the major theater wars and the maintenance of security and stability in Bosnia and Herzegovina and the Balkans region, by the requirement to redeploy forces from Bosnia and the Balkans in the event of a major theater war.

SEC. 1212. SUBMISSION OF REPORT ON OBJECTIVES OF A CONTINGENCY OPERATION WITH REQUESTS FOR FUNDING FOR THE OPERATION.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress makes the following findings:

(1) On May 3, 1994, the President issued Presidential Decision Directive 25 declaring that American participation in United Nations and other peace operations would depend in part on whether the role of United States forces is tied to clear objectives and an endpoint for United States participation can be identified.

(2) Between that date and mid-1998, the President and other executive branch officials have obligated or requested appropriations of approximately $9,400,000,000 for military-related operations throughout Bosnia and Herzegovina without providing to Congress, in conjunction with the budget submission for any fiscal year, a strategic plan for such operations under the criteria set forth in that Presidential Decision Directive.

(3) Between November 27, 1995, and mid-1998 the President has established three deadlines, since elapsed, for the termination of United States military-related operations throughout Bosnia and Herzegovina.

(4) On December 17, 1997, the President announced that United States ground combat forces would remain in Bosnia and Herzegovina for an unknown period of time.

(5) Approximately 47,880 United States military personnel (excluding personnel serving in units assigned to the Republic of Korea) have participated in 14 international contingency operations between fiscal years 1991 and 1998.

(6) The 1998 posture statements of the Navy and Air Force included declarations that the pace of military operations over fiscal year 1997 adversely affected the readiness of non-deployed forces, personnel retention rates, and spare parts inventories of the Navy and Air Force.

(b) INFORMATION TO BE REPORTED WITH FUNDING REQUESTS.—Section 113 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by adding after subsection (l), as added by section 915, the following new subsection:

The report shall include a discussion of the following:

“(1) What clear and distinct objectives guide the activities of United States forces in the operation.

“(2) What the President has identified on the basis of those objectives as the date, or the set of conditions, that defines the endpoint of the operation.”.

Section 1302 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1998 (Public Law 105-85; 111 Stat. 1948) is amended—

(1) in subsections (a), (b), and (c)(2), by striking out “during fiscal year 1998” and inserting in lieu thereof “during the strategic delivery systems retirement limitation period”;

(2) in subsection (c)(1), by striking out “during fiscal year 1998”;

“(g) STRATEGIC DELIVERY SYSTEMS RETIREMENT LIMITATION PERIOD.—For purposes of this section, the term “strategic delivery systems retirement limitation period” means the period of fiscal years 1998 and 1999.”.

SEC. 1502. TRANSMISSION OF EXECUTIVE BRANCH REPORTS PROVIDING CONGRESS WITH CLASSIFIED SUMMARIES OF ARMS CONTROL DEVELOPMENTS.

(a) REPORTING REQUIREMENT.—The Director of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency (or the Secretary of State, if the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency becomes an element of the Department of State) shall transmit to the Committee on National Security of the House of Representatives on a periodic basis reports containing classified summaries of arms control developments.

(b) CONTENTS OF REPORTS.—The reports required by subsection (a) shall include information reflecting the activities of forums established to consider issues relating to treaty implementation and treaty compliance.

SEC. 1503. REPORT ON ADEQUACY OF EMERGENCY COMMUNICATIONS CAPABILITIES BETWEEN UNITED STATES AND RUSSIA.

Not later than three months after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to the Committee on Armed Services of the Senate and the Committee on National Security of the House of Representatives a report on the status and adequacy of current direct communications capabilities between the governments of the United States and Russia. The report shall identify each existing direct communications link between those governments and each such link that is designed to be used, or is available to be used, in an emergency situation. The Secretary shall describe in the report any shortcomings with the existing communications capabilities and shall include such proposals as the Secretary considers appropriate to improve those capabilities. In considering improvements to propose, the Secretary shall assess the feasibility and desirability of establishing a direct communications link between the commanders of appropriate United States unified and specified commands, including the United States Space Command and the United States Strategic Command, and their Russian counterparts.

SEC. 1504. RUSSIAN NONSTRATEGIC NUCLEAR WEAPONS.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress makes the following findings:

(1) The 7,000 to 12,000 or more nonstrategic (or “tactical”) nuclear weapons estimated by the United States Strategic Command to be in the Russian arsenal may present the greatest threat of sale or theft of a nuclear warhead in the world today.

(2) As the number of deployed strategic warheads in the Russian and United States arsenals declines to just a few thousand under the START accords, Russia's vast superiority in tactical nuclear warheads—many of which have yields equivalent to strategic nuclear weapons—could become strategically destabilizing.

(3) While the United States has unilaterally reduced its inventory of tactical nuclear weapons by nearly 90 percent since the end of the Cold War, Russia is behind schedule in implementing the steep tactical nuclear arms reductions pledged by former Soviet President Gorbachev in 1991 and Russian President Yeltsin in 1992, perpetuating the dangers from Russia's tactical nuclear stockpile.

(b) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that the President should call on Russia to expedite reduction of its tactical nuclear arsenal in accordance with the promises made in 1991 and 1992.

(c) REPORT.—Not later than March 15, 1999, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to Congress a report on the nonstrategic nuclear weapons of Russia. The report shall include—

(1) estimates regarding the current numbers, types, yields, viability, and locations of those weapons;

(2) an assessment of the strategic implications of Russia's nonstrategic arsenal, including the potential use of those weapons in a strategic role or the use of their components in strategic nuclear systems and the potential of Russian superiority in tactical nuclear weapons to destabilize the overall nuclear balance as strategic nuclear weapons are sharply reduced under the START accords;

(3) an assessment of the extent of the current threat of theft, sale, or unauthorized use of the warheads of those weapons, including an analysis of Russian command and control as it concerns the use of tactical nuclear weapons;

(4) a summary of past, current, and planned efforts to work cooperatively with Russia to account for, secure, and reduce Russia's stockpile of tactical nuclear weapons and associated fissile material;

(5) a summary of how the United States would prevent, or plans to cope militarily with, scenarios in which a deterioration in relations with Moscow causes Russia to redeploy tactical nuclear weapons or in which Russia threatens to employ, or actually employs, tactical nuclear weapons in a local or regional conflict involving the United States or allies of the United States; and

(6) an assessment of the steps that could be taken by the United States to enhance military preparedness in order (A) to deter any potential attempt by Russia to possibly exploit its advantage in tactical nuclear weapons through coercive "nuclear diplomacy" or on the battlefield, or (B) to counter Russia if Russia should make such an attempt to exploit its advantage in tactical nuclear weapons.

(d) VIEWS.—The Secretary of Defense shall include in the report under subsection (c) the views of the Director of Central Intelligence and of the commander of the United States Strategic Command.

Subtitle B—Satellite Export Controls

SEC. 1511. SENSE OF CONGRESS.

It is the sense of Congress that—

(2) United States foreign policy and the policies of the United States regarding commercial relations with other countries should affirm the importance of observing and adhering to the Missile Technology Control Regime (MTCR);

(3) the United States should encourage universal observance of the Guidelines to the Missile Technology Control Regime;

(4) the exportation or transfer of advanced communication satellites and related technologies from United States sources to foreign recipients should not increase the risks to the national security of the United States;

(5) due to the military sensitivity of the technologies involved, it is in the national security interests of the United States that United States satellites and related items be subject to the same export controls that apply under United States law and practices to munitions;

(6) the United States should not issue any blanket waiver of the suspensions contained in section 902 of the Foreign Relations Authorization Act, Fiscal Years 1990 and 1991 (Public Law 101-246), regarding the export of satellites of United States origin intended for launch from a launch vehicle owned by the People's Republic of China;

(7) the United States should pursue policies that protect and enhance the United States space launch industry; and

(8) the United States should not export to the People's Republic of China missile equipment or technology that would improve the missile or space launch capabilities of the People's Republic of China.

SEC. 1512. CERTIFICATION OF EXPORTS OF MISSILE EQUIPMENT OR TECHNOLOGY TO CHINA.

The President shall certify to the Congress at least 15 days in advance of any export to the People's Republic of China of missile equipment or technology (as defined in section 74 of the Arms Export Control Act (22 U.S.C. 2797c)) that—

(1) a detailed description of the plans of the Department of State to implement the requirements of this section, including any organizational changes that are required and any Executive orders or regulations that may be required;

(2) an identification and explanation of any steps that should be taken to improve the license review process for exports of the satellites and related items described in subsection (a), including measures to shorten the timelines for license application reviews, and any measures relating to the transparency of the license review process and dispute resolution procedures;

JOINT EXPLANATORY STATEMENT OF THE COMMITTEE OF CONFERENCE

The managers on the part of the House and the Senate at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 3616) to authorize appropriations for fiscal year 1999 for military activities of the Department of Defense, for military construction, and for defense programs of the Department of Energy, to prescribe personnel strengths for such fiscal year for the Armed Forces, and for other purposes, submit the following joint statement to the House and the Senate in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon by the managers and recommended in the accompanying conference report:

The Senate amendment struck out all of the House bill after the enacting clause and inserted a substitute text.

The House recedes from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate with an amendment which is a substitute for the House bill and the Senate amendment. The differences between the House bill, the Senate amendment, and the substitute agreed to in conference are noted below, except for clerical corrections, conforming changes made necessary by agreements reached by the conferees, and minor drafting and clarifying changes.

SUMMARY STATEMENT OF CONFERENCE ACTION

The conferees recommend authorizations for the Department of Defense for procurement, research and development, test and evaluation, operation and maintenance, working capital funds, military construction and family housing, weapons programs of the Department of Energy, and the civil defense that have budget authority implications of $270.5 billion.

SUMMARY TABLE OF AUTHORIZATIONS

The defense authorization act provides authorizations for appropriations but does not generally provide budget authority. Budget authority is provided in appropriations acts.

In order to relate the conference recommendations to the Budget Resolution, matter in addition to the dollar authorizations contained in this bill must be taken into account. A number of programs in the defense function are authorized permanently or, in certain instances, authorized in other annual legislation. In addition, this authorization bill would establish personnel levels and include a number of legislative provisions affecting military compensation.

The following table summarizes authorizations included in the bill for fiscal year 1999 and, in addition, summarizes the implications of the conference action for the budget totals for national defense (budget function 050).

Multiple launch rocket system rockets

The budget request included $16.5 million for the procurement of multiple launch rocket system (MLRS) rockets.

The House bill would authorize the budget request.

The Senate amendment would authorize a decrease of $16.5 million, which would eliminate the procurement of extended range rockets due to excessively high component cost issues.

The conferees agree to authorize a decrease of $16.5 million and eliminate procurement of MLRS rockets in fiscal year 1999.

Multiple launch rocket system launcher

The budget request included $85.4 million for multiple launch rocket system (MLRS) launchers.

The House bill would authorize a total increase of $40.0 million, as follows:

(1) a decrease of $10.0 million for engineering services; and

(2) an increase of $50.0 million to procure additional MLRS launchers for Army National Guard (ARNG) units.

The Senate amendment would authorize the budget request.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $45.0 million to continue modernization of ARNG MLRS battalions, of which $21.0 million is to be used for ASIOE for two MLRS battalions and $24.0 million to procure new launchers. The conferees have learned that the Army has recently announced a change in MLRS force structure which will reduce the size of current MLRS battalions from 27 launchers per battalion to 18 launchers. When fully implemented, this action will make available sufficient MLRS launchers to complete the fielding of the remaining 11 Corps artillery battalion in the ARNG. The conferees note, however, that the "cascading" of these MLRS launchers to the ARNG will require associated support items of equipment (ASIOE) for which there is no funding currently available and that seven MLRS battalions of ARNG heavy divisions remain unfunded.

M830A1 120mm tank ammunition

The budget request included no funds for procurement of M830A1 120mm tank ammunition.

The House bill would authorize an increase of $10.0 million to procure M830A1 rounds.

The Senate bill would authorize an increase of $15.0 million to procure 4,500 M830A1 rounds to replace a like number of war reserve M830A1's which are being converted to the XM908 obstacle demolition configuration.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $15.0 million to procure 4,500 M830A1 rounds.

The conferees are aware that the Army has a requirement for more obstacle demolition rounds. The conferees believe that the Army should undertake a thorough review of its requirement for these rounds and include them in its budget request for fiscal year 2000.

Overview

The budget request for fiscal year 1999 contained an authorization of $3,198.8 million for Other Procurement, Army in the Department of Defense. The House bill would authorize $3,136.9 million. The Senate amendment would authorize $3,556.9 million. The conferees recommended an authorization of $3,344.9 million. Unless noted explicitly in the statement of managers, all changes are made without prejudice.

Other generators

The budget request included $9.6 million for the procurement and installation of various generators.

The House bill and the Senate amendment would authorize the budget request.

The conferees agree to authorize a decrease of $1.2 million for the generator installation that was requested one fiscal year before the requirement.

The conferees note that the generator that was requested for procurement and installation in fiscal year 1999 will not be received for installation until fiscal year 2000.

AN/WSN-7 inertial navigation system and WQN-2 doppler sonar velocity log

The budget request included $21.8 million for procurement of AN/WSN-7 ring laser inertial navigation systems. The budget request included no funds for procurement of WQN-2 doppler sonar velocity log.

The House bill would authorize an increase of $12.0 million for the procurement and installation of additional AN/WSN-7 navigation sets, an increase of $6.0 million for procurement and installation of WQN-2, and an increase of $2.5 million to test and evaluate a second version for possible future production competition for WQN-2.

The Senate amendment would authorize an increase of $12.0 million for the procurement and installation of additional AN/WSN-7 navigation sets.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $12.0 million to the budget request for the procurement and installation of additional AN/WSN-7 navigation sets and an increase of $6.0 million for procurement and installation of WQN-2.

Pollution control equipment

The budget request included $28.0 million for Navy shore based operations to comply with hazardous waste management and disposal requirements, and $149.7 million for Navy shipboard operations to comply with certain oily waste and gray water discharge standards and provide for the conversion of chlorofluorocarbon refrigerants.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $15.0 million to accelerate the introduction of A-RCI to the operating fleet.

Cooperative engagement capability

The budget request included $47.3 million for procurement and installation of four cooperative engagement capability (CEC) systems and $131.6 million in PE 63658N for CEC demonstration and validation. Within the amount requested in PE 63658N, $38.8 million was included for identification and resolution of interoperability problems in the E-2C aircraft.

The House bill would authorize an increase of $35.0 million for procurement and installation of five additional CEC systems to meet training and operational requirements. The House bill would also authorize an increase of $20.0 million to correct deficiencies discovered during the initial operational test and evaluation of the system, and support follow-on testing in preparation for the interoperability test that would involve two carrier battle groups. It would also authorize an increase of $6.0 million for continued development of the CEC test and evaluation system and linking that system to the military test and training ranges infrastructure.

The Senate amendment would authorize the budget request.

During congressional review of the fiscal year 1999 budget request, the Navy advised the defense authorization committees of interoperability problems between the Advanced Combat Direction System Block 1 (the new combat direction system for large deck ships such as aircraft carriers) and the AEGIS Baseline 6 software (which includes the CEC). These problems occurred during operational test and evaluation of the ACDS Block 1 system, and resulted in the Commander, Operational Test and Evaluation Force, declaring that the ACDS Block 1 system was not operationally suitable or effective for deployment with the fleet and that interoperability problems were exacerbated by the CEC. Fleet reports have also indicated similar interoperability problems. In addition, ongoing developmental testing of the AEGIS Baseline 6 Phase I software during early 1998 indicated that the software was immature.

The conferees view these and previously identified relay aircraft interoperability problems and their effect on the fleet, the CEC, ship self defense, and Navy theater ballistic missile defense programs with great concern. The conferees recognize that the problems may result in part from efforts to accelerate the CEC program by shortcutting a systematic process for software development, verification, and validation. To resolve these problems, the conferees have been advised that the Navy is developing a program that will focus on interoperability issues to support carrier battle group deployments and for the longer-term, a force level process to coordinate requirements, development, investments, and installation of new system capabilities in the fleet. Key to the process will be: (1) development of a single common combat direction system equipment and computing architecture that will be able to adapt to technology changes more efficiently; and (2) establishment of an enhanced shore based testing capability that will allow force level interoperability testing ashore, before deployment of new system capabilities to the fleet.

The conferees believe that the Navy has not yet fully assessed the magnitude of the CEC/combat direction system interoperability problem and its effect on other development programs or on the fleet. Additional system development may be required as the Navy assesses and defines the overall magnitude of the system interoperability and software maturity problems. Clear and unambiguous system integration responsibilities and accountability for management of the program to resolve the problems are required.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $26.0 million in PE 63658N for research and development and an increase of $35.0 million in Other Procurement, Navy for procurement of CEC systems.

The conferees understand that the Navy may need to realign fiscal year 1999 CEC funding to implement a program to resolve the interoperability problems. Should the Navy's assessment of the program requirements indicate that realignment is necessary, the conferees encourage the Secretary of Defense to submit a reprogramming request promptly to the congressional defense committees.

Given the seriousness of the interoperability problems and the potential effects on numerous other important Navy and Defense programs, the conferees direct the Secretary of the Navy to report to the congressional defense committees at least quarterly on CEC/combat direction system interoperability problems and planned solutions.

Integration and test facility command and control initiative

The budget request included no funds for upgrading capabilities at the Navy's east coast in-service engineering Space Warfare System Center (SWSC).

The Senate amendment would authorize an increase of $4.0 million for engineering design; hardware and software procurement; and installation, testing, and documentation of the additional technical networking infrastructure for continued development of the SWSC's Integrated Products Center. Of this amount, $2.0 million would be for procurement and $2.0 million would be for operation and maintenance.

The House bill would authorize the budget request.

The House recedes.

The Senate amendment would authorize the budget request.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $10.0 million.

Aircraft launch and recovery equipment

The budget request included $39.7 million for aircraft launch and recovery equipment.

The House bill and the Senate amendment would authorize the budget request. The conferees note that pricing and quantity changes totaling a net decrease of $2.2 million were made after submission of the budget request.

The conferees agree to authorize a decrease of $2.2 million related to revised pricing and reductions in quantity of aircraft launch and recovery equipment.

Engagement systems support

The budget request included $307,000 for computer programs and documentation for changes to ship engagement systems not supported elsewhere in the budget request.

The Senate amendment would authorize the budget request.

The conferees agree to authorize a decrease of $5.0 million due to lack of justification for a budget increase.

NULKA assembly qualification

The budget request included $21.5 million for procurement and installation of the NULKA antiship missile decoy program.

The House bill would authorize the budget request.

The Senate amendment would authorize an increase of $1.0 million to outfit and qualify a NULKA assembly facility in the United States.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $1.0 million to outfit and qualify a NULKA assembly facility in the United States.

Beamhit laser marksmanship training system (LMTS)

The budget request included $2.2 million for training support equipment, but included no funds for the beamhit LMTS.

The House bill would authorize an increase of $5.0 million for the beamhit LMTS and encourages the Secretary of Defense to examine its utility for use throughout the Department.

The Senate amendment would authorize the budget request.

The Senate recedes.

Overview

The budget request for fiscal year 1999 contained an authorization of $745.9 million for Marine Corps Procurement, Navy in the Department of Defense. The House bill would authorize $691.9 million. The Senate amendment would authorize $908.6 million. The conferees recommended an authorization of $881.9 million. The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $33.5 million to accelerate procurement of replacement HMMWVs.

Power equipment assorted

The budget request included $5.1 million to procure Marine Corps power generation equipment.

The House bill would authorize the budget request.

The Senate amendment would authorize an increase of $9.5 million to procure 1,311 generators necessary to support mobile command, control, and communications power requirements.

Section 905 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1998 transferred the program management responsibilities of the Defense Airborne Reconnaissance Office (DARO) to the military services, while retaining Office of the Secretary of Defense (OSD)-level oversight responsibilities for determining airborne reconnaissance architecture and systems interface requirements.

The table reflects both transfers and adjustments made by the conferees.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $3.5 million for the EP-3, $1.5 million for flat panel displays, and $2.0 million for spares support.

The budget request included $139.2 million for various modifications for DARP aircraft in Aircraft Procurement, Air Force (APAF).

The House bill would authorize the budget request.

The Senate amendment would authorize an increase of $68.0 million in the DARP, including: $56.0 million for two re-engineings, and $12.0 million to transfer the theater airborne warning system (TAWs) medium-wave infrared (MIRA) technology from the Cobra Ball program to Rivet Joint program. The Senate report (S. Rept. 105-189) would require successful completion of Cobra Ball integration testing and submission of a report on the test results to the congressional defense committees before obligation of the additional funds.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $30.0 million for DARP, including: $28.0 million to re-engine one RC-135 aircraft, and $2.0 million to complete the TAWs and to upgrade the MIRA sensors. In addition, the conferees understand that $3.3 million authorized in the General Defense Intelligence Program in fiscal year 1998 for the development of a Cobra Ball radar ranging system remains unobligated. The conferees recommend that the unobligated $3.3 million authorized for fiscal year 1998 also be used to complete the TAWs development and upgrade the MIRA sensors on the Cobra Ball aircraft.

The conferees do not agree to a transfer of this technology to the Rivet Joint fleet until the Cobra Ball integration is complete and test results clearly show that this transfer will provide a viable augmentation to the Defense Support Program (DSP). Further, the conferees endorse the requirement in the Senate report that the Department submit a report on the test results to the congressional defense committees before obligating the extra TAWs funding authorized in this bill.

RC-135 COMBAT SENT

The budget request included $12.7 million in Other Procurement, Air Force for RC-135 ground support equipment.

The House bill would authorize an increase of $3.8 million for the RC-135 Combat Sent ground support system improvements.

The Senate amendment would authorize the budget request.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $3.8 million.

U-2 PROCUREMENT

The budget request included $152.1 million in DARP modifications in APAF.

The House bill would authorize a decrease of $10.3 million for U-2 procurement, transferring these funds to the Advanced Synthetic Aperture Radar System Improvement program (AIP).

The Senate amendment would authorize an increase of $17 million for U-2 procurement to continue the reliability and maintainability (R&M) conversion of 11 Senior Glass systems for the U-2.

The conferees agree to the AIP transfer and to authorize an increase of $7.5 million for R&M conversion of Senior Glass systems for the U-2 in the research and development program Manned Reconnaissance Systems (PE 35207F).

OTHER

The budget request included funding for the common imagery ground/surface system (CIGSS) and airborne reconnaissance ground SIGINT system (ARGSS) programs in DARO procurement lines. The conference agree to transfer this funding to the appropriate service or defense agency accounts.

E-8 modifications

The budget request included $44.2 million for E-8 modifications.

The House bill would authorize a decrease of $11.8 million.

The Senate amendment would authorize the budget request.

The conferees agree to authorize the budget request.

Passenger safety modifications

The budget request included $252.6 million in various Air Force aircraft modification budget lines to support making communications, navigation, and safety improvements to improve safety of passenger and cargo carrying aircraft.

The House bill would authorize an increase of $50.0 million for passenger safety modifications in specific aircraft modification budget lines for enhanced ground proximity warning systems (EGPWS) and traffic collision avoidance system (TCAS) requirements, as follows:

Passenger Safety Modification Additions (Dollars in millions)
Aircraft	EGPWS	TCAS	Total
VC-25	5.8		5.8
C-21	15.7	6.5	22.2
C-130	3.5		3.5
C-9		3.4	3.4
C-141		4.2	4.2
KC-10		10.9	10.9
Total	25.0	25.0	50.0

The Senate amendment would authorize the budget request.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $50.0 million to procure additional aircraft safety modifications.

Pacer Coin

The budget request included $2.4 million for aircraft spares and repair parts for the transfer of mission equipment from retiring Pacer Coin aircraft to the non-dedicated, follow-on C-130 reconnaissance aircraft.

The House bill would authorize a decrease of $2.4 million for transfer of mission equipment for Pacer Coin aircraft since the program is being terminated and a fiscal year 1998 Department of Defense reprogramming request stated that all funds necessary for the C-130 follow-on program were addressed in the reprogramming request.

The Senate amendment would authorize the budget request.

The conferees agree to authorize a decrease of $2.4 million for transfer of mission equipment for Pacer Coin aircraft.

Common support equipment

The budget request included $152.1 million for common support equipment.

The House bill would authorize a decrease of $4.2 million.

The Senate amendment would authorize the budget request.

The conferees agree to authorize the budget request.

A-10 post production support

The budget request included $11.4 million for A-10 post production support.

The House bill would authorize a decrease of $1.9 million.

The Senate amendment would authorize the budget request.

The conferees agree to authorize the budget request.

B-2A

The budget request included $189.9 million for post production support for the B-2A bomber fleet.

The House bill would authorize an increase of $86.0 million to enhance the B-2's operational effectiveness.

The Senate amendment would authorize the budget request.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $86.0 million.

The conferees note that the increase would fund low observability maintainability and situational awareness upgrades key to maximizing the effectiveness of the small number of B-2 bombers in the fleet. The conferees also believe that the funding increase would provide the opportunity to coordinate efficiently these efforts with radar cross section improvements.

Miscellaneous production charges

The budget request included $221.5 million for miscellaneous production charges, including $10.1 million for High Speed Anti-Radiation Missile targeting pod modifications.

The House bill would authorize a decrease of $10.1 million, recognizing that $6.1 million was requested for the same purpose in the "Other aircraft modifications" account.

The Senate amendment would authorize the budget request.

The conferees agree to a decrease of $10.9 million in miscellaneous production charges.

Overview

The budget request for fiscal year 1999 contained an authorization of $384.2 million for Ammunition Procurement, Air Force in the Department of Defense. The House bill would authorize $383.6 million. The Senate amendment would authorize $383.2 million. The conferees recommended an authorization of $383.2 million. Unless noted explicitly in the statement of managers, all changes are made without prejudice.

Advanced Medium Range Air-to-Air Missile

The budget request included $114.6 million for the procurement of 180 Advanced Medium Range Air-to-Air Missiles.

The House bill would authorize a decrease of $4.6 million.

The Senate amendment would authorize a decrease of $21.0 million because of cost savings associated with the merger of the system's two prime contractors.

The conferees agree to authorize a decrease of $20.9 million.

Minuteman III guidance replacement program

The budget request included $90.6 million for Minuteman III modifications.

The House bill would authorize an increase of $23.0 million for the Minuteman III guidance replacement program (GRP).

The Senate amendment would authorize an increase of $46.0 million for GRP.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $23.0 million above the budget request for GRP. Additionally, the conferees are aware that $8.8 million in funds authorized in fiscal year 1998 for GRP are excess to fiscal year 1998 requirements. Therefore, the conferees direct that such fiscal year 1998 funds be obligated in support of GRP during fiscal year 1999.

AGM-65H Maverick

The budget request included no funds for the AGM-65H missile.

The House bill would authorize an increase of $3.0 million to ensure that the Air Force can accomplish a smooth transition to a service life extension program for these weapons.

The Senate amendment would authorize the budget request.

The Senate recedes.

Defense Support Program

The budget request included $89.9 million for procurement of Defense Support System (DSP) satellites.

The House bill and the Senate amendment would authorize the budget request.

The Senate amendment approved the budget request.

The conferees agree to authorize a decrease of $7.0 million to the budget request.

The conferees note that excess prior year funds exist in the DSP program.

Overview

The budget request for fiscal year 1999 contained an authorization of $6,974.4 million for Other Procurement, Air Force in the Department of Defense. The House bill would authorize $7,046.4 million. The Senate amendment would authorize $6,774.6 million. The conferees recommended an authorization of $6,950.4 million. Unless noted explicitly in the statement of managers, all changes are made without prejudice.

The budget request included $89.2 million for the 60K loader.

The House bill would authorize a decrease of $2.9 million.

The Senate amendment would authorize the budget request.

The conferees agree to authorize the budget request.

Combat training ranges

The budget request included $13.2 million for combat training ranges, but included no funds for the rangeless air combat training system (RACTS). This system is also known as the Kadena Interim Training System (KITS) and was delivered to Kadena Air Base, Japan, in August 1997.

For future fixed and deployable training support, the Department of Defense's plan is to shift to the Joint Tactical Combat Training System (JTCTS), a system that will support air, surface, and subsurface training requirements. However, the House report (H. Rept. 105-532) noted that no funds were included in the budget to meet near-term training requirements that had been identified by United States Air Forces Europe (USAFE).

The House bill would authorize an increase of $5.0 million for RACTS to meet these requirements.

The Senate amendment would authorize the budget request.

The Senate recedes.

Automated telecommunications program

The budget request included $14.9 million for automated telecommunications equipment.

The House bill would authorize a decrease of $4.0 million.

The Senate amendment would authorize the budget request.

The conferees agree to authorize the budget request.

Air Force satellite control network

The budget request included $26.0 million in Air Force other procurement for the Air Force Satellite Control Network (AFSCN) program.

The House bill and the Senate amendment would authorize the budget request.

The conferees agree to authorize a decrease of $1.4 million from the budget request.

The conferees note that excess prior year funds exist in the AFSCN program. The conferees direct that these funds be used to satisfy fiscal year 1999 AFSCN requirements.

Communication electronics modifications

The budget request included $57.7 million for communication electronics modifications.

The House bill would authorize a decrease of $5.8 million.

The Senate amendment would authorize the budget request.

The conferees agree to authorize the budget request.

Overview

The budget request for fiscal year 1999 contained an authorization of $2,041.7 million for Defense-wide Procurement in the Department of Defense. The House bill would authorize $1,962.9 million. The Senate amendment would authorize $2,023.5 million. The conferees recommended an authorization of $1,954.8 million. Unless noted explicitly in the statement of managers, all changes are made without prejudice.

Automated document conversion system

The budget request included no funds for automated document conversion system (ADCS).

The House bill would authorize an increase of $32.0 million for the procurement of ADCS hardware and software.

The Senate amendment would authorize the budget request.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $25.0 million for the procurement of ADCS hardware and software.

SOF intelligence systems

The budget request included $19.1 million for special operations forces intelligence systems.

The House bill would authorize the budget request.

The Senate amendment would authorize an increase of $5.0 million for procurement and installation of Silent Shield real-time situational awareness systems on special operations aircraft.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $2.5 million for Silent Shield system procurement.

Contamination avoidance

The budget request included $96.2 million for contamination avoidance.

The House bill would authorize a decrease of $6.9 million. This decrease would eliminate funding for National Guard Rapid Assessment and Initial Detection equipment.

The Senate amendment would authorize the budget request.

The conferees agree to authorize the budget request.

Overview

The budget request for fiscal year 1999 contained no authorization for National Guard and Reserve Procurement in the Department of Defense. The House bill would authorize $300.0 million. The Senate amendment would authorize $60.0 million. The conferees recommended an authorization of $60.0 million. Unless noted explicitly in the statement of managers, all changes are made without prejudice.

National Guard and Reserve Equipment

The budget request included $1.36 billion for National Guard and Reserve equipment, as follows:

	Millions
Aircraft, Army	110.2
Missiles, Army	35.3
Weapons and Tracked Combat Vehicles, Army	12.3
Ammunition, Army	182.3
Other Procurement, Army	502.9

Aircraft, USAF	293.3
Ammunition, USAF	30.4
Other Procurement, USAF	85.0
NG&RE, Other Procurement	9.3
Department of Defense Total	1,363.6

This request reflects a net increase of almost $400.0 million above the funding requested for the reserve component modernization in the fiscal year 1998 budget request. The conferees believe that the increased funding requested by the services for reserve component modernization reflects a recognition of the critical role that these forces provide in Department of Defense operations. The conferees agree that reserve component modernization, as an integral component of overall DOD modernization, should rely on a collaborative budget development process within the Department and not on annual congressional supplemental funding, which would have to come at the expense of other programs funded in the budget request. However, the conferees recognize that there are still significant modernization shortfalls in both the active and reserve components and remain concerned about the readiness implications of declining modernization funding requests.

Accordingly, the conferees agree to authorize increases to support reserve component modernization, as follows:

	Millions
UH-60 Blackhawk	$66.4
Family of Medium Tactical Vehicles	42.5
Medium Truck Extended Service Program	20.0
Multiple Launch Rocket System Launchers	45.0
R2000 Engine Flush System	5.0

C-130 (1 WC-130J, 1 EC-130J, 2 C-130J)	276.4
C-130J Simulator	30.0
Total increase	685.3

Additionally, the conferees agree to authorize an increase of $60.0 million for National Guard and Reserve miscellaneous equipment, as follows:

	Millions
Army Reserve
Miscellaneous	$10.0
Navy Reserve
Miscellaneous	10.0
Marine Corps Reserve
Miscellaneous	10.0
Air Force Reserve
Miscellaneous	10.0
Army National Guard
Miscellaneous	10.0
Air National Guard
Miscellaneous	10.0

The conferees direct that the miscellaneous funding be allocated exclusively by the chiefs of the reserve components, in consultation with service chiefs, and give priority consideration to the following items: 2.5-ton and 5-ton truck extended service program; night vision equipment; high mobility multipurpose wheeled vehicles; CH-47 crash-worthy internal fuel cells; heavy expanded mobility tactical truck bridge transportation kits; M915 truck extended service program upgrade kits; rock crush, screen; AVLB 60-70 ton upgrades; high mobility multipurpose wheeled vehicle contact maintenance trucks; 5 kilowatt tactically quiet generator; M915A3 long haul tractor; F/A-18A+ ECP; CH-53e HNVS "B kits"; electronic calibration facility (AN/TSM-198); electronic test measurement and diagnostic equipment facility; D-7 bulldozer; reconfigurable mission simulator; meteorological measuring sets (AN/TMQ41); PATS (F-16); F-16 ALR-56M RWR; F-16 SADL ADP/color; A-10 SADL group A; airborne firefighting equipment; mobile backscatter truck inspection system; the advanced radar warning receiver; and the D-7 product improvement program.

Overview

The budget request for fiscal year 1999 contained an authorization of $855.1 million for Chemical Agent and Munitions Destruction, Army. The House bill would authorize no funding for Chemical Agent and Munitions Destruction, Army, but would transfer the authorization of $834.0 million for Chemical Agent and Munitions Destruction, Defense. The Senate amendment would authorize no funding for Chemical Agent and Munitions Destruction, Army but would transfer the authorization of $777.2 million for Chemical Agent and Munitions Destruction, Defense. The conferees agree to authorize $803.0 million for Chemical Agent and Munitions Destruction, Defense. Unless noted explicitly in the conference agreement, all changes are made without prejudice.

LEGISLATIVE PROVISIONS ADOPTED

Subtitle A—Authorization of Appropriations
Authorization of appropriations (secs. 101–109)

The House bill contained provisions (secs. 101–109) that would authorize the recommended fiscal year 1999 funding levels for the Army, Navy and Marine Corps, Air Force, Defense-Wide Activities, Reserve Components, Defense Inspector General, Chemical Demilitarization Program, Defense Health Program, and the Defense Export Loan Guarantee Program.

The Senate amendment contained similar provisions.

The conference agreement includes these provisions.

Chemical demilitarization program (sec. 107)

The budget request for the Army included $855.1 million for the chemical agents and munitions destruction program.

The House bill recommended no funding for Chemical Agents and Munitions Destruction, Army, but contained a provision (sec. 107) that would authorize $834.0 million for the Department of Defense for the destruction of lethal chemical agents in accordance with Section 1412 of the Department of Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1986 (Public Law 99–145, 50 U.S.C. 1521) and for chemical warfare materiel of the United States not covered by Section 1412 of such Act, a $21.1 million reduction to the budget request.

The Senate amendment recommended no funding for Chemical Agents and Munitions Destruction, Army, but contained a similar provision (sec. 107) that would authorize $780.1 million for destruction of the lethal chemical agents and munitions stockpile pursuant to Section 1412 of the Department of Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1986 and U.S. chemical warfare materiel not covered by Section 1412 of the Act, a $78.5 million reduction to the budget request. Additionally, the Senate recommended that an additional $3.0 million be made available to accelerate the development and fielding of the Army's mobile munitions assessment system. Additionally, the Senate would recommend the transfer of the chemical demilitarization program to the Defense Threat Reduction Agency.

The conferees agree to a provision that would authorize $803.0 million for the Department of Defense chemical agents and munitions destruction program, to include: $124.7 million for procurement; $172.8 for research and development; $508.6 million for operation and maintenance; and a reduction of $3.0 million for revised economic assumptions. Of the amount authorized for research and development, the conferees recommend that an additional $5.0 million be made available to accelerate the development and fielding of the Army's mobile munitions assessment system and an additional $6.0 million be made available to demonstrate alternatives to the baseline incineration process for the destruction of assembled chemical munitions and to proceed from a demonstration to the development of a pilot-scale facility.

The conferees understand that additional funds above the amount recommended in this Act may be necessary to demonstrate viable alternative technologies, and encourage the Department of Defense to review funds available in the chemical agents and munitions demilitarization program from prior year authorization and appropriations, as well as funds available to the Department that have been identified as sources in the most recent omnibus reprogramming (FY98–16PA) forwarded to the Congress for approval, as possible sources for such additional funds necessary for activities related for the demonstration of alternative technologies to the destruction of assembled chemical munitions.

Section 1412(f) of the Department of Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1986 requires that funds for the destruction of the U.S. stockpile of lethal chemical agents and munitions, including funds for military construction projects necessary to carry out the demilitarization program, shall be set forth in the budget of the Department of Defense as a separate program and shall not be included in the budget accounts for any military department. In the statement of managers accompanying the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1994 (H. Rept. 103–357), the conferees cited this section in transferring the funds contained in the fiscal year 1994 Army budget requests for the chemical demilitarization program to a separate DOD account. Section 1412(e) of Public Law 99–145 further requires that the management organization for the chemical munitions destruction program shall be established within the Department of the Army.

The conferees agree that the defense chemical demilitarization program should continue to be managed as a major defense acquisition program with the Office of the Secretary of Defense providing policy and program oversight, the Secretary of the Army as executive agent for the management and execution of the program, and the project manager for the program for the assembled chemical weapons assessment (ACWA) of alternative technologies reporting to the Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition and Technology (until completion of the demonstration phase of the ACWA program).

Subtitle B—Army Programs

Multiyear procurement authority for Longbow Hellfire missile program (sec. 111)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 111) that would authorize the Secretary of the Army to enter into a multiyear procurement contract for the Longbow Hellfire missile.

The Senate amendment contained a similar provision (sec. 111).

The Senate recedes.

The conferees agree to authorize the Secretary of the Army to enter into a multiyear contract for the Longbow Hellfire missile.

Condition for award of second-source procurement contract for the family of medium tactical vehicles (sec. 112)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 112) that would require certain conditions to be met before the Secretary of the Army could enter into a contract with more than one manufacturer for the procurement of the family of medium tactical vehicles (FMTV). The Senate supports Army efforts to qualify a second source for FMTV trucks, if the established conditions are met, and would support acceleration of this effort if the Army determines that this action could be accomplished within programmed resource limitations.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment. Based on critical shortfalls of modernized trucks within the Army, the conferees direct the Secretary of the Army to ensure that sufficient funding is programmed for any FMTV prime contractor to maintain minimum economic production levels necessary to sustain steady production and meet FMTV fielding requirements. The conferees note existing funding levels, constrained by modernization budget limitations, will result in a break in production, increased costs, and delays in the modernization process.

Armored system modernization (sec. 113)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 113) that would require the Secretary of the Army to submit to the congressional defense committees a report on Army armored system modernization programs.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would authorize $14.3 million for the M1A1D applique integration program and $6.0 million for an M1A2 risk reduction program. Of the amount authorized for the M1A1D applique integration program, not more than $11.4 million may be obligated before the end of the 30-day period beginning on the date on which the Secretary of the Army submits the armored system modernization report.

Congress supports the development and fielding of the M1A1D and authorizes $20.3 million to complete development and testing, and to initiate fielding. The conferees are concerned, however, about the risk inherent in the conversion of the M1A2 to the Force XXI Battle Command Brigade and Below (FBCB2) software and directs that $6.0 million of the $20.3 million be used to develop an M1A2 risk reduction effort. The conferees recognize the Army's goal is to field only the M1A1D and M1A2SEP variants, but want to ensure risk is addressed.

The conferees are also concerned that armor system modernization plans, including the proposal to close the tank plant in Lima, Ohio, do not adequately address future operational requirements for armor systems, modernization and upgrade requirements, and industrial base implications associated with plans to bridge the gap between production of existing armor systems and future combat platforms. The conferees direct the Secretary of the Army to provide a report on armor system modernization programs to the congressional defense committees no later than January 31, 1999.

Reactive armor tiles (sec. 114)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 114) that would require the Secretary of Defense, with input from the Army and Marine Corps, to conduct a detailed assessment of requirements for reactive armor tiles and provide a cost-benefit analysis of the procurement and installation of tiles on selected armor vehicles. The provision would preclude any expenditure of funds for armor tiles until 30 days after the date on which the Secretary of Defense submits the results of this study to the Congress.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with a technical amendment.

Extension of authority to carry out Armament Retooling and Manufacturing Support Initiative (sec. 115)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 116) that would extend the Armament Retooling and Manufacturing Support Initiative through fiscal year 1999.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes.

SUBTITLE C—NAVY PROGRAMS

CVN–77 nuclear aircraft carrier program (sec. 121)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 121) that would authorize $124.5 million for the advance procurement and construction of components, including nuclear components, for the CVN–77 aircraft carrier program.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes.

Increase in amount authorized to be excluded from cost limitation for Seawolf submarine program (sec. 122)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 122) that would amend section 123(a) of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1998 by striking the amount of $272.4 million and replacing it with the amount of $557.6 million as the amount excluded from the Seawolf submarine program cost limitation.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with a technical amendment.

Multiyear procurement authority for the Department of the Navy (sec. 123)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 121) that would authorize the Secretary of the Navy to enter into multiyear contracts for the AV-8B, E-2C, and T-45 aircraft, and to enter into a multiyear procurement contract to procure the Marine Corps Medium Tactical Vehicle Replacement.

The Senate amendment contained separate provisions (secs. 124-123) that would authorize the same multiyear procurements.

The Senate recedes.

Annual General Accounting Office review of F/A-18E/F program (sec. 124)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 1034) that would require an annual General Accounting Office review of the F/A-18E/F program.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with a technical amendment.

Subtitle D—Air Force Programs

F-22 aircraft program (sec. 131)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 133) that would limit obligation of advance procurement funds for the six Lot II F-22 aircraft. The provision would make funds available after the completion of 10 percent of the F-22 flight test program, or alternatively, 30 days after the Secretary of Defense submits a certification that:

(1) of the number of flight test hours completed, if less than 10 percent;

(2) that a lesser amount of flight testing would be sufficient for making a production decision, and the basis for that determination; and

(3) that it would be financially advantageous to proceed to Lot II production rather than delay production until completion of 10 percent of the flight testing.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would remove the 30 day delay period from the provision. The provision would allow the Department to obligate advance procurement funds as soon as the certification is submitted to the congressional defense committees.

C-130J aircraft program (sec. 132)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 134) that would require a report from the Secretary of Defense on the C-130J aircraft program.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes.

Subtitle E—Other Matters

Chemical stockpile emergency preparedness program (sec. 141)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 1080) that would direct the Director of the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) to carry out a program with state and local governments to assist them in developing capabilities to respond to public health or safety emergencies that may arise from the destruction of lethal chemical agents and munitions in the U.S. stockpile.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would require the Director of FEMA, in accordance with a Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) with the Department of the Army, to carry out an emergency preparedness program with state and local governments. The provision would also direct that funds, appropriated in the defense account for this portion of the chemical stockpile emergency preparedness program, be made available to FEMA to implement its responsibilities pursuant to the requirements of this provision. Lastly, the provision would require the Secretary of Defense to include, in the Department's annual report on the defense chemical agents and munitions destruction program, information on actions taken and grants provided to assist state and local governments to develop their off-post emergency preparedness plans for responding to chemical accidents or incidents at the eight chemical stockpile storage installations.

Alternative technologies for destruction of assembled chemical weapons (sec. 142)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 141) that would authorize $12.6 million for identification and demonstration of alternative technologies to the baseline incineration process for destruction of assembled chemical munitions in the U.S. stockpile, and would direct the transfer of management oversight responsibility for the program from the Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition and Technology (USD, A&T) to the Secretary of the Army.

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 117) that would provide authority for the program manager for the Assembled Chemical Weapons Assessment (ACWA) to demonstrate alternative technologies to the baseline incineration process and to undertake post-demonstration activities necessary to implement any such alternative technology, if it is proven successful, and, would authorize $18.0 million for demonstration of alternative technologies and planning and preparation to proceed from demonstration to pilot-scale testing. Additionally, the provision would require the Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition and Technology to provide for two evaluations of the cost and schedule of an alternative technology to baseline incineration to be submitted to the Under Secretary by September 30, 1999. Lastly, the provision would maintain the current program manager for the Assembled Chemical Weapons Assessment, who would continue to manage the development and testing (including demonstration and pilot-scale testing) of alternative technologies for the destruction of lethal assembled chemical weapons, and would continue to operate independently from the program manager for the baseline chemical demilitarization program.

The House recedes with an amendment that would require the current program manager for the Assembled Chemical Weapons Assessment to continue to manage the development, testing, demonstration and pilot-scale testing of alternative technologies for the destruction of assembled chemical munitions and to act independently of the program manager for the Department of Defense baseline incineration program. In addition, the ACWA program manager shall report to the Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition and Technology.

The provision would also authorize the ACWA program manager to carry out post-demonstration activities to ensure that an alternative technology can be implemented immediately following the successful demonstration of an alternative technology, and the submission to Congress of a report on the demonstration and a decision by the Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition and Technology to proceed with a pilot-scale facility.

In order to ensure that an alternative technology may be demonstrated immediately, the conferees provide authority for the program manager to take certain actions during fiscal years 1998 and 1999 related to the establishment, preparation, development and identification of activities related to awarding a contract for a potential successful alternative technology for assembled chemical munitions not later than December 30, 1999.

The conferees also direct the Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition and Technology to provide to Congress an independent, nongovernmental evaluation of the cost and schedule for any potential alternative technology resulting from the ACWA demonstration activities.

Lastly, if the Secretary of Defense decides to proceed with a pilot program, the conferees direct that a report be submitted to the congressional defense committees on the Department's plan to conduct the pilot program, including information on the cost and the schedule for the alternative technology pilot program for destruction of assembled chemical munitions.

As noted elsewhere in the statement of managers on the chemical agent and munitions destruction program (sec. 107), the conferees understand that additional funds may be necessary above the amounts recommended in this Act, as well as for fiscal year 1998, to demonstrate viable alternative technologies. The conferees encourage the Department of Defense to review funds available in the chemical agents and munitions demilitarization program from prior year authorizations and appropriations, as well as funds available to the Department which have been identified as sources in the most recent omnibus reprogramming (FY98-16PA) forwarded to the Congress for approval, as possible sources for any additional funds necessary for activities related to the demonstration of alternative technologies for the destruction of assembled chemical munitions.

LEGISLATIVE PROVISIONS NOT ADOPTED

M1A2 system enhancement program step one

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The House recedes.

Annual reporting of costs associated with travel of members of the chemical demilitarization citizenship advisory commission

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 115) that would amend section 1412(g)(2) of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1986 (Public Law 102-484) to require that information on the travel costs of members of the chemical demilitarization citizenship advisory commission be included in the annual report to Congress on the chemical and munitions destruction program.

(3) development of an improved radar for the JSTARS.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The Senate recesses.

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 132) that would prevent the Secretary of Defense from obligating or expending funds for reengining Department of Defense aircraft derived from Boeing 707 aircraft until an overdue report was submitted. The report was due in March 1998 and was not received until July 13, 1998.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The Senate recesses.

The House bill would also authorize an increase of $2.0 million in PE 63508N to continue the development of power node control centers for advanced electrical distribution system fault detection, switching, reconfiguration, and control of shipboard electrical systems.

The House bill would authorize the budget request.

The House recedes.

Marine Corps advanced technology demonstration

The budget request included $41.9 million for the Marine Corps advanced technology demonstration activities associated with the Commandant's warfighting laboratory.

The House bill would authorize the budget request.

The Senate amendment would authorize an increase of $10.0 million dollars for acceleration of warfighting experimentation activities, including $5.0 million for the second phase continued evaluation of the broad-area unmanned retail and re-supply operation (BURRO). The Senate amendment would also authorize an increase of $1.0 million for evaluation of the K-band training/test instrumentation system.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $11.0 million in PE 63640M, including $10.0 million for acceleration of warfighting experimentation, to include $5.0 million of this amount for the evaluation of the BURRO concept, and $1.0 million for evaluation of the K-band training/test instrumentation system.

The conferees note that the Senate report (S. Rept. 105-189) would direct the Secretary of the Navy to provide a report on the long-term plan for developing a "red team" countermeasures efforts activity to keep pace with the warfighting experiment efforts. The Secretary was directed to provide the report to the congressional defense committees by May 15, 1999. Pending submission of the report, obligation of funds for the warfighting laboratory effort would have been limited to no more than 85 percent of the funds available.

The conferees acknowledge the ongoing work on the "red team" effort and that the Marine Corps and Navy will be able to submit the required report on schedule. However, the Marine Corps has indicated that limiting obligations of funds until the report is submitted may cause the Department to forego some efforts that are important pieces of the Urban Warrior exercise.

The conferees agree that the Secretary should submit the report as directed in the Senate report. However, the conferees further agree that the limitation on obligation is not needed to ensure timely submission of the report and could be counterproductive to this important experimentation effort.

Freeze dried blood

The budget request included $18.7 million in PE 63706N for medical development.

The House bill would authorize the budget request.

The Senate amendment would authorize an increase of $1.0 million for freeze dried blood research.

The Senate amendment would authorize an increase of $1.0 million to PE 603782N for the advanced lightweight influence sweep system (ALISS) which is focused on developing high temperature superconducting magnets and acoustic transducers to sweep influence mines targeted against specific classes of Navy ships.

The House bill would authorize the budget request.

The conferees agree to authorize $1.0 million for ALISS.

Aviation survivability

The budget request included $8.2 million in PE 63216N for aviation survivability equipment.

The House bill would authorize an increase of $6.0 million as follows:

(1) $3.0 million for ejection seats; and

Studies and experiments for combat systems engineering

The budget request included $8.6 million for studies and experiments for advanced combat systems engineering that, potentially, could be leveraged into new ship class computer architectures.

The Senate amendment would authorize a decrease of $2.0 million in PE 63382N for studies and experiments not directly connected to correcting warfighting deficiencies in 21st century platforms.

The House bill would authorize the budget request.

The conferees agree to authorize a decrease of $2.0 million in PE 63382N.

Remote minehunting system

The budget request included $73.5 million in PE 63502N for surface and shallow water mine countermeasures demonstration and validation, including $11.0 million for the remote minehunting system (RMS). The budget request also included $32.9 million for procurement of minesweeping system replacement equipment.

The House bill would authorize an increase of $7.0 million in PE 63502N to continue accelerated development and fielding of the RMS. The House bill would approve the procurement budget request.

The Senate amendment would authorize a transfer of $15.9 million included in the budget request for procurement to PE 63502N for RMS research and development. This shift would enable the Navy to develop the modular V4 design to accommodate advanced sensors for RMS.

The conferees agree to authorize a decrease of $15.9 million for the procurement of RMS and an increase of $7.0 million in PE 63502N for RMS.

Future aircraft carrier transition technology

The budget request included a total of $190.1 million for future aircraft carrier research and development (R&D) and feasibility studies including $149.5 million in PE 63512N and $40.6 million in PE 63564N. The budget request also included $38.5 million in PE 64567N for CVN-77 contract design.

The House bill and the Senate amendment would authorize the budget request. The House bill contained a provision (sec. 212) that would authorize $50.0 million of those funds for CVN-77 technologies that would be applicable to both CVN-77 and CV(X). The Senate amendment contained a similar provision (sec. 212) that would direct that the $50.0 million be applied exclusively to CVN-77 technologies.

The conferees strongly endorse the need to develop new technologies that will reduce life cycle costs and improve operational effectiveness of future aircraft carriers. The Chief of Naval Operations has advised the conferees that the most pressing need for the CV(X) is the initial development of a next generation propulsion plant of sufficient flexibility to support future technology insertion and performance improvements, while reducing propulsion plant life cycle costs.

The conferees note a recent Navy decision to alter the design for the first CV(X). The conferees understand that the Navy's new plan to transition to the next generation aircraft carrier will be an evolutionary development in which carrier design changes will be incremental over several of the first generation of CV(X) carriers.

Unfortunately, the congressional defense committees were provided with conflicting information regarding the Navy's purported change in plans regarding CV(X) and the Navy's intentions for near-term and Future Years Defense Program funding. These mixed communications are only now being sorted out. In the meantime, this conflicting information has caused some of the congressional defense committees to propose significant reductions to the budget request for fiscal year 1999 CV(X) R&D funding.

The conferees agree to authorize a reduction of $80.0 million in PE 63512N without prejudice due to the ongoing refinement of the Navy's planning for CV(X). The conferees would be very receptive to a Navy request for additional authorization of CV(X) funding for fiscal year 1999 once the Navy makes available the restructured CV(X) plan and supporting documentation. The conferees strongly encourage the Secretary of Defense to submit such a request once the restructured CV(X) plan is completed.

The conference agreements include a provision on CVN-77 R&D funding (sec. 212) which is addressed elsewhere in this report.

Shipboard systems component development

The budget request included $27.7 million for surface ship non-propulsion system component development.

The House bill would authorize an increase of $1.0 million in PE 63513N for the qualification and testing required to develop a new 150-kilowatt static frequency converter.

The Senate amendment would authorize the budget request.

It has come to the attention of the conferees that fiscal year 1999 test article procurement, installation and implementation programs assume low risk scenarios for research scheduled for fiscal year 1998 and early fiscal year 1999. These low risk scenarios are not supported by available documentation. Therefore, the conferees agree to a decrease of $2.0 million to PE 63513N.

The conferees also agree to authorize an increase of $1.0 million in PE 63513N for the qualification and testing required to develop a new 150-kilowatt static frequency converter.

SSGN study

The budget request did not include funding for analyzing alternatives for converting Tri- dent submarines for use in other than strategic missions.

The Senate amendment would authorize an increase of $1.0 million to PE 63564N for the Secretary of Defense to conduct an analysis of converting some of the Trident SSBNs to SSGN-configuration and would direct the Secretary to provide a report of the analysis to the congressional defense committees no later than March 1, 1999.

The House bill would authorize the budget request.

The House recedes.

Intercooled recuperated gas turbine engine

The budget request included $23.5 million in PE 63573N for continued development of the inter-cooled recuperated (ICR) gas turbine engine. The budget request would also continue testing of the ICR gas turbine engine under Memoranda of Understanding (MOUs) with the United Kingdom and France.

The House bill would authorize the budget request. The House report (H. Rept. 105-532) would direct the Secretary of the Navy to provide an updated report on the resolution of technical, programmatic, and funding issues required to insure a stable development program supported by the fiscal year 2000 budget request. The House report would also require consideration of the ICR engine among the alternatives for the prime power plant for the DD-21 land attack destroyer.

The Senate amendment would authorize an increase of $5.0 million in PE 63573N for continued development and testing of the ICR engine.

The conferees agree to authorize the budget request.

The conferees are aware that negotiations are underway among MOU signatories to restructure the ICR program. This restructuring would bring the engine to a point where it could be an industry candidate for DD-21 vice a fully government qualified engine. The conferees understand that this would involve completing a second 500 hour test and conducting a fifth design review. The 3000 hour test and other efforts would be transitioned to other signatories of the MOUs who intend to evaluate the ICR as the prime mover for the Common New Generation Frigate program.

The conferees believe that this is a reasonable approach to further ICR development and the Navy should consider the ICR engine as a competitor for serving as the prime mover in future Navy ships.

Environmentally safe energetic materials

The budget request included $39.8 million in PE 63609N for conventional munitions demonstration and validation.

The House bill would authorize an increase of $3.0 million in PE 63609N to accelerate the program for the development of propellants and explosives that utilize environmentally compliant energetic materials for undersea, surface, and other weapons systems.

The Senate would authorize the budget request.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $3.0 million in PE 63609N to accelerate the program for the development of propellants and explosives that utilize environmentally compliant energetic materials for undersea, surface, and other weapons systems.

Marine Corps assault vehicles

The budget request included $104.8 million for Marine Corps assault vehicle research and development activities.

The House bill would authorize an increase of $4.0 million for further development of additional propulsion and suspension alternatives for the advanced amphibious assault vehicle (AAAV).

The Senate amendment would authorize the budget request.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $4.0 million for unfunded research and development requirements of the AAV. Marine Corps ground combat/support system

The budget request included $37.1 million for Marine Corps ground combat/support research and development activities.

The budget request included no funds in either the Army or Marine Corps research and development programs for improving howitzer capability by continuing development of trajectory correctable munitions (TCM).

The House bill would authorize an increase of $2.5 million for further development of lightweight 155mm howitzer requirements. The House bill would also authorize an increase of $6.0 million in PE63004A to continue Army development of TCM.

The Senate amendment would authorize an increase of $4.0 million for the Predator missile system to maintain the development and fielding schedule.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $9.5 million for Marine Corps ground combat and support system research and development requirements. Of this amount, $2.5 million is for research and development requirements of the lightweight 155mm howitzer, $2.0 million is to support Predator system development and fielding schedule, and $5.0 million is for development of TCM. The conferees note that the Army has demonstrated a lack of commitment to continue TCM development and believe there could be application for TCM technology within the Marine Corps' concept of operations. The conferees direct the Marine Corps to provide the congressional defense committees a report, no later than 31 January 1999, on a concept of operations for using TCM in Marine Corps operations and on TCM program development plans and procurement forecast.

Aviation depot maintenance

The budget request included $59.4 million in PE 63721N for environmental protection demonstration and validation, including $3.5 million for Naval aviation pollution prevention.

The House bill would authorize an increase of $2.7 million for the development and demonstration of aviation depot maintenance technologies that will significantly reduce maintenance and repair costs and reduce or eliminate hazardous waste and pollution products.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $2.7 million in PE 63721N for the development and demonstration of aviation depot maintenance technologies to reduce overall costs and enhance pollution prevention measures.

Naval surface fire support system integration

The budget request included $21.6 million for a new initiative to develop surface fire support planning and control systems for the 5-inch 62 gun on DDG-51 ships and the 155mm vertical gun for the future DD-21 class of ships.

The Senate amendment would authorize a decrease of $7.7 million to PE 63795N to eliminate the possibility of developing a stand-alone system for DD-21.

The House bill would authorize the budget request.

The conferees agree to authorize a reduction of $1.6 million.

Vertical gun for advanced ships

The budget request included $25.1 million in PE 63795N for a new initiative to develop a prototype vertical gun for land-based testing.

The House bill would authorize a decrease of $20.0 million due to the lack of a thorough analysis of gun system alternatives and sufficient consideration of gun and missile system technical requirements and operational roles.

The Senate amendment contained a similar provision that would authorize a decrease of $10.0 million.

The conferees authorize a decrease of $10.0 million in PE 63795N and direct the Secretary of the Navy to report to the congressional defense committees the results of an analysis of all advanced gun designs, as well as ammunition availability for those designs, prior to the obligation of funds for a prototype advanced gun system.

Nonlethal weapons and technologies of mass protection program

The budget request included $22.6 million for the nonlethal weapons (NLW) and technologies program (PE 63851M).

The House bill would authorize the budget request.

The Senate amendment would authorize an increase to the budget request of $13.3 million for the following activities, including $6.3 million for the development and fielding of near-term, low-technology NLW technologies and $7.0 million for the development of nonlethal tactical denial systems. The Senate amendment would make available $2.0 million for activities of the Human Effects Panel of the Joint Non-Lethal Directorate and $500,000 for complete type classification of non-lethal weapons technology that can be mounted on existing weapons, such as M4 carbines and M16 rifles.

The House recedes.

The conferees remain concerned that the Department of Defense and the military services continue to conduct research and development on NLW activities that benefit all services outside the purview of the established defense NLW program, and without oversight by the executive agent, the Marine Corps. The conferees endorse the position expressed in the Senate report (S. Rept. 105-189) that "all" nonlethal weapons technology research and development be consolidated into a single program element, with management and oversight of the program conducted by the Marine Corps, as executive agent.

Commercial off-the-shelf insertion just prior to critical design review for helicopter improvement

The budget request included $231.1 million in PE 64212N for antisubmarine warfare and other helicopter development. Of this amount, $25.0 million would continue efforts to incorporate commercial off-the-shelf (COTS) technology during the two fiscal quarters prior to a second critical design review.

The House bill would authorize the budget request.

The Senate amendment would authorize a decrease of $1.0 million in PE 64212N to insert COTS technology.

The conferees agree to authorize a decrease of $1.0 million in PE 64212N to insert COTS technology.

Parametric airborne dipping sonar

The budget request included no funding for the parametric airborne dipping sonar (PADS).

The Senate amendment would authorize an increase of $8.0 million in PE 64212N for the continued development of PADS.

The House bill would authorize the budget request.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $8.0 million in PE 64212N for the continued development of PADS.

Common support aircraft

The budget request included $27.1 million in PE 64217N for the Common Support Aircraft (CSA).

The House bill would authorize a decrease of $27.1 million for the CSA program.

The Senate amendment would authorize the budget request.

The conferees agree to authorize a decrease of $27.1 million for the CSA program.

Electronic warfare development

The budget request included $128.6 million in PE 64270N for electronic warfare.

The House bill would authorize the budget request.

The Senate amendment would authorize an increase of $10.0 million for the Integrated Defensive Electronic Countermeasures (IDECM) system.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $9.3 million in PE 64270N to accommodate a restructure of the IDECM program, offset by a decrease of $9.3 million in line 43, Aircraft Procurement Navy.

Laboratories and field activities monitoring efforts

The budget request included $132.5 million for surface combatant combat system engineering in PE 64307N, including $19.2 million was requested for laboratory and field activity unspecified scientific services for monitoring baseline efforts.

The Senate amendment authorized a decrease of $3.0 million to unspecified scientific services.

The House bill would authorize the budget request.

The conferees agree to authorize a decrease of $3.0 million to unspecified scientific services.

DDG-51 composite director room

The budget request in PE 64307N did not include funding for design and test of a composite director room for the DDG-51 class of ships.

The Senate amendment would authorize an increase of $5.0 million in PE 64307N for continuation of a project to design and test a composite director room for the DDG-51 class of ships. The House bill would authorize the budget request.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $2.5 million in PE 64307N for continuation of a project to design and test a composite director room for the DDG-51 class of ships.

Multi-purpose processor

The budget request included $37.2 million for submarine sonar improvement. The multi-purpose processor (MPP) is the result of a small business innovative research (SBIR) initiative developed under the sponsorship of the new nuclear attack submarine (NSSN) program.

The House bill would authorize an increase of $15.0 million to continue the research and development necessary for the introduction of MPP technology in submarine and other naval sonar systems.

The Senate amendment would authorize an increase of $15.0 million in PE 64503N for continuation of the SBIR follow-on for advanced development of MPP transportable software technology, technology insertion, advanced processor software builds, and for providing MPP units and training throughout the fleet and the Navy research and development community.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $15.0 million in PE 64503N for continuation of the SBIR follow-on for advanced development of MPP transportable software technology, technology insertion, advanced processor software builds, and for providing MPP units and training throughout the fleet and the Navy research and development community.

Air control

The budget request included $4.2 million in PE 64450N for air control research.

The House bill would authorize the budget request.

The Senate amendment would authorize an increase of $4.0 million for the expeditionary common automatic recovery system (ECARS). The ECARS is a lightweight, man-portable instrument landing system capable of providing azimuth and glide slope information to manned aircraft and UAVs.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $4.0 million to PE 64504N for ECARS development.

Submarine sonar domes

The budget request included $218.8 million in PE 64558N for the New Design SSN (NDSN) program.

The House bill would authorize an increase of $7.0 million in PE 64558N to complete fabrication of a full-scale sonar dome using this acoustic sandwich material system for further evaluation and testing.

The Senate amendment would authorize the budget request.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $7.0 million to determine whether an acoustic sandwich material sonar dome system is capable of meeting submarine requirements for sonar domes.

NSSN advanced technology insertion

The budget request included $218.8 million in PE 64558N for the New Attack Submarine (NDSN) program, including $146.4 million for NSSN hull, mechanical, and electrical systems development, and $72.5 million for NSSN combat systems development.

The House bill would authorize an increase of $10.0 million for the development of high priority submarine technologies that are currently unfunded and the insertion of these technologies into the NSSN program. The House bill also encouraged the Navy to reprogram from within available funds the procurement funding (less than $5.0 million) necessary to complete the technology insertion in the appropriate NSSN hulls.

The Senate amendment would authorize the budget request.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $8.0 million in PE 64558N for the development of high priority submarine technologies that are currently unfunded and the insertion of these technologies into the NSSN program.

Non-propulsion electronics system

The budget request included $218.8 million in PE 64558N for New Attack Submarine (NDSN) non-propulsion development.

The Senate amendment would authorize an increase of $12.0 million for integration of 15 non-propulsion electronics system (NPES) subsystems to reduce NSSN life-cycle costs. The House bill would authorize the budget request.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $6.0 million in PE 64558N for integration of 15 non-propulsion electronics system subsystems to reduce NSSN life-cycle costs.

System level shock testing

The budget request included $27.5 million for SSN-21 developments in PE 64561N including $5.0 million for Seawolf submarine shock testing.

The House bill and the Senate amendment would authorize the budget request.

The conferees agree to a decrease of $5.0 million in PE 64561N. The conferees recent indicators that the total cost of a one-half shock factor test would be $47.0 million. The conferees have concluded that the additional information accumulated from conducting a one-half shock factor test would not justify the $47.0 million cost.

DD-21 land attack destroyer

The budget request included $133.6 million in PE 64567N for ship contract design and live fire test and evaluation including $84.9 million was requested for the Navy's DD-21 land attack destroyer program and $8.6 million for the second year of DD-21 live fire test and evaluation.

The House bill would authorize a decrease of $25.0 million in PE 64567N for the DD-21 land attack destroyer.

The Senate amendment would authorize a reduction of $8.6 million, without prejudice, to reflect the re-phasing of the DD-21 program which was not reflected in the DD-21 live fire test and evaluation budget request.

The House recedes.

The conferees agree that the unique competitive teaming structure agreed upon for the first two phases of DD-21 might lead to either the program office relying on analysis from team members to evaluate options or the program office may grow to a size larger than originally intended. The program office has indicated that a smaller office size is possible by using Navy laboratory and field activity personnel to evaluate contractor applications of technology, systems engineering, and innovative designs. The conferees encourage the Navy to resist creating another level of bureaucracy and growing the program office, and instead coordinate evaluation of contractor options using in-place Navy expertise.

Smart propulsor product model

The budget request included $7.0 million for continuation of the development of the smart propulsor product model (SPPM) for future ships.

The Senate amendment would authorize an increase of $4.0 million in PE 64567N for the SPPM.

The House bill would authorize the budget request.

The House recedes.

NULKA antiship missile decoy system electro-magnetic compatibility

The budget request included $2.3 million for continued development and testing of the electro-magnetic compatibility (EMC) upgrade to the NULKA active countermeasures decoy.

The Senate amendment would authorize an increase of $2.0 million in PE 64755N to complete the development and operational testing of the EMC upgrade.

The House bill would authorize the budget request.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $2.0 million in PE 64755N to complete the development and operational testing of the EMC upgrade.

Infrared search and track system

The budget request included $983,000 in PE 64755N to continue engineering and manufacturing development and at sea testing of an infrared search and track (IRST) system.

The House bill would authorize the budget request.

The Senate amendment would authorize an increase of $6.5 million for continued development of the IRST system.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $5.0 million in PE 64755N for continued development of the IRST system.

The conferees agree that horizon search, for which an IRST system would be optimal, is an area of relative weakness for active radar. In the statement of managers accompanying the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1996, the conferees noted that the Navy's cost and operational effectiveness analysis supported the conclusion that IRST has the potential to play a very important role in defending naval ships against sea-skimming anti-ship missiles. The conferees note, however, the Navy's inconsistent support for the IRST program, the reduction of IRST funding in order to support other Navy programs, and the absence of any funds in the Navy's budget projections to complete engineering and manufacturing development of the system and procurement of IRST for the fleet.

The conferees acknowledge that proposals made within the Department of the Navy staff to establish an international cooperative program with the Netherlands and Canada for development of IRST. The conferees believe that such a cooperative program could be one avenue for developing this capability. The conferees direct the Secretary of the Navy to report to the congressional defense committees by March 1, 1999, the Navy's plan and funding requirements for optimizing horizon search for defense of surface ships and the potential for application of IRST technology to other platforms.

Voice instructional devices

The budget request included $4.3 million in PE 64771N for medical development.

The House bill would authorize the budget request.

The Senate amendment would authorize an increase of $1.0 million for voice instructional devices (VID) technology.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $1.0 million for voice instructional devices (VID) technology.

Distributed surveillance system

The budget request included $42.0 million in PE 64784N for advanced deployable system (ADS) engineering and manufacturing development.

The House bill would authorize an increase of $6.7 million to continue the planned introduction of automation and data fusion capability for the ADS demonstration system.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $6.7 million to continue the planned introduction of automation and data fusion capability for the ADS demonstration system.

Battle force tactical training

The budget request included $5.9 million for the surface tactical team trainer (STTT). The STTT is designated to further develop an existing system, the battle force tactical training (BFTT) system, so it will be able to provide joint warfare training. A highly successful small business innovative research (SBIR) project, N96-111, leveraged the capabilities of commercial off-the-shelf operating systems and processors.

The Senate amendment would authorize an increase of $7.0 million in PE 24571N for the purpose of SBIR phase III follow-on work to continue the BFTT operating system conversion.

The House bill would authorize the budget request.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $5.0 million in PE 24571N for the purpose of SBIR phase III follow-on work to continue the BFTT operating system conversion.

High Speed Anti-Radiation Missile Improvement

The budget request included $18.9 million in PE 25601N for High Speed Anti-Radiation Missile Improvement.

The House bill would authorize an increase of $15.0 million for the Advanced Anti-Radiation Guided Missile (AARGM).

The Senate amendment would authorize the budget request.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $10.0 million to accelerate AARGM development.

Marine corps ground combat/supporting arms systems

The budget request included $14.7 million for the Marine Corps ground combat/supporting arms systems.

The House bill would authorize an increase of $8.0 million, including $5.0 million for research and development requirements associated with the Shortstop electronic protection system and an increase of an additional $3.0 million would be for development of an automatic target tracker for the M1 Abrams tank.

The Senate amendment would authorize the budget request.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $3.0 million in PE26623M for development of an automatic target tracking system for the M1 tank.

Airborne reconnaissance systems

The budget request included no funding for the Navy in PE 35206N to develop airborne reconnaissance systems. The budget request included $8.4 million in PE 35206D8Z that the Department of Defense asked to be transferred to the Navy program element. These funds included $4.6 million for development of framing reconnaissance cameras.

The House bill would authorize an increase of $8.0 million in PE 35207D8Z to accelerate the development of electro-optical (EO) framing technology. The House Report (H. Rept. 105-532) noted support of EO framing technology with "on chip forward motion compensation."

The Senate amendment would approve the budget request.

The conferees agree to authorize $16.4 million for PE 35206N, including the transfer of $8.4 million from PR 35206D8Z and an increase of $8.0 million for EO framing technology.

The conferees believe that the Department should select the system and the upgrades for using the EO framing resources that would best meet requirements. The conferees understand that the term "forward motion compensation" is a proprietary term that could unnecessarily limit the choices of the Department for improving the optical capability of sensors deployed in tactical aircraft and other platforms.

Overview

The budget request for fiscal year 1999 contained an authorization of $13,598.1 million for Air Force, Research and Development in the Department of Defense. The House bill would authorize $13,577.2 million. The Senate amendment would authorize $13,635.0 million. The conferees recommended an authorization of $13,918.7 million. Unless noted explicitly in the statement of managers, all changes are made without prejudice.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $7.5 million in PE 63401F for SOTV. The conferees support the solar powered orbital transfer vehicle program, which combines thermionic technology for electricity production and thermal propulsion which can be used to move spacecraft to higher orbits or new orbits.

Low cost launch technology development

The budget request included no funds for low cost launch technology development.

The Senate amendment would authorize the following increases for low cost launch technology: (1) an increase of $5.0 million for the Scorpius concept in PE 63173C; (2) an increase of $5.0 million for the Excalibur concept in PE 63173C; and (3) an increase of $5.0 million in PE 63401F for the Air Force to utilize in support of low cost launch technology development.

The House bill would authorize the budget request for low cost technology development.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $10.0 million in PE 63401F and no funds in PE 63173C for low cost launch technology development. The conferees direct the Secretary of the Air Force to utilize these funds in support of the Scorpius and Excalibur concepts in a manner that is most effective. The conferees also believe that the Air Force should begin to program sustaining funds to support these technology efforts in the outyears.

Space maneuver vehicle

The budget request did not include funds for space maneuver vehicle or common aero vehicle technology development.

The House bill would authorize an increase of $15.0 million in PE 63401F to support development of space maneuver vehicle and common aero vehicle technology development.

The Senate amendment would authorize an increase of $10.0 million in PE 65864F for space maneuver vehicle technology development.

The conferees agree to authorize no increase in fiscal year 1999 funds, but note that $10.0 million is available in fiscal year 1998 funds appropriated for the Military Spaceplane. The conferees agree to authorize the use of these fiscal year 1998 funds for space maneuver vehicle or common aero vehicle technology development.

The conferees direct the Air Force to work with the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) on developing responsive, reusable space access systems such as the space maneuver vehicle, which could serve as a reusable upper stage for a variety of space test missions.

Space control technology development

The budget request did not include funds for a new space control technology initiative.

The Senate amendment would authorize an increase of $30.0 million for space control technology development.

The House bill would authorize the budget request for a new space control technology initiative.

The conferees have reviewed the Department of Defense's February 1998 report on the Kinetic Energy Anti-Satellite (KE-ASAT) program. The report states that "DOD is currently examining potential space control related research, development, and acquisition options to support the President's policy, satisfy military requirements within available resources, and address the architecture." In the cover letter to this report, the Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition and Technology states that "I anticipate that these efforts will culminate in a comprehensive plan in time for the FY 2000 President's budget."

The conferees support the development of such a plan but are concerned that insufficient resources are available to support a comprehensive evaluation of various technical options. Therefore, the conferees agree to authorize an increase of $15.0 in PE 63438F to support a range of space control technology activities and to develop the "comprehensive plan" cited in DOD's report. The Assistant Secretary of Defense for Command, Control, Communications, and Intelligence (Space and Information Superiority) shall be responsible for developing this plan. The conferees direct the Secretary of Defense to submit a report to the congressional defense committees by February 15, 1999, that describes the Secretary's plan for executing the space control technology funds specified above. The report should also describe the Secretary's plan for continuing these efforts in fiscal year 2000 and beyond.

The conferees note that $37.5 million is available in fiscal year 1998 funds appropriated for the KE-ASAT program. The conferees direct the Secretary to obligate promptly these funds. If the Secretary concludes that a portion of these fiscal year 1998 funds should be applied to other space control development activities, the conferees direct the Secretary to include any such recommendation in the comprehensive space control technology development plan specified above. The conferees will consider any such recommendation and any related reprogramming that the Secretary may choose to submit to Congress.

Variable stability in-flight simulator test aircraft

The budget request included no funding for the Variable Stability In-Flight Simulator Test Aircraft (VISTA).

The House bill would authorize the budget request.

The Senate amendment would authorize an increase of $7.3 million in PE 64237F for the VISTA.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $7.3 million in PE 64237F for the VISTA.

Electronic warfare development

The budget request included $90.1 million in PE 64270F for electronic warfare development.

The House bill would authorize the budget request.

The Senate amendment would authorize an increase of $20.0 million to accelerate the development of the C-130 Compass Call upgrade to the block 30 configuration.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $20.0 million to accelerate the development of the C-130 Compass Call upgrade to the block 30 configuration.

Evolved expendable launch vehicle program

The budget request included $280.3 million for the Evolved Expendable Launch Vehicle (EELV) program.

The House bill would authorize the budget request.

The Senate amendment would authorize the budget request.

The conferees are aware of excess prior year funding in the EELV program. The conferees agree to authorize a decrease to the budget request of $14.0 million in PE 64853F, and direct that $14.0 million in excess prior years funds be used to satisfy fiscal year 1999 requirements for the EELV program.

The conferees agree to authorize a decrease to the budget request of $14.0 million in PE 64853F, and direct that $14.0 million in excess prior years funds be used to satisfy fiscal year 1999 requirements for the EELV program.

Big Crow program office

The budget request included no funding for the Big Crow Program Office (BCPO). The BCPO operates two flying laboratories to evaluate weapons and communications systems under stressful conditions.

The House bill would authorize the budget request.

The Senate amendment would authorize an increase of $10.0 million to the budget request for the BCPO to underwrite activities in fiscal year 1999.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $8.0 million for BCPO, and support the need for the report on funding policy and management directed in the Senate report (S. Rept. 105-189).

Flight test safety

The budget request included $370.1 million in PE 65807F for test and evaluation support.

The House bill would authorize an increase of $6.0 million for flight test safety enhancements.

The Senate amendment would authorize a decrease of $4.0 million, as discussed elsewhere in this statement of managers.

The conferees agree to authorize a net increase of $2.0 million in PE 65807F, including an increase of $6.0 million for flight test safety enhancements at the Air Force Flight Test Center and a decrease of $4.0 million, as discussed elsewhere in this report.

F-16 Squadrons

The budget request included $125.0 million in PE 27133F for F-16 squadrons.

The House bill would authorize a decrease of $24.6 million.

The House report (H. Rept. 105-532) noted that the budget request reflects an increase of $24.6 million over the level forecast as necessary to support fiscal year 1999 requirements in the fiscal year 1998 budget request.

The Senate amendment would authorize the budget request.

The conferees agree to authorize the budget request.

Advanced medium range air-to-air missile

The budget request included $45.0 million in PE 27163F for advanced medium range air-to-air missile (AMRAAM) research.

The House bill and the Senate amendment would authorize the budget request.

The conferees agree to authorize a decrease of $20.0 million to reflect the delayed EMD effort.

The conferees are aware that there are additional risk reduction activities that will be required before the Air Force begins the engineering and manufacturing development (EMD) effort for the AMRAAM pre-planned product improvement (P3I) program. The conferees support the goals of the P3I program, but believe it prudent to conduct the additional risk reduction activities.

Joint Air-To-Surface Standoff Missile

The budget request included $132.9 million for the Joint Air-to-Surface Standoff Missile (JASSM).

The House bill and the Senate amendment would authorize the budget request.

The budget request included 52 test missiles to support the JASSM test program. Based largely on lower than expected cost estimates, the conferees understand the Air Force now plans to procure 69 test missiles. Even under a revised test plan, eight of these missiles are excess to the testing needs of the program. The conferees agree to authorize a decrease of $3.0 million to eliminate these missiles.

Theater Battle Management C4I

The budget request included $27.3 million for theater battle management C4I.

The House bill would authorize the budget request.

The Senate amendment would authorize an increase of $5.0 million for pre-planned product improvements for the air support operations center (ASOC).

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $5.0 million for pre-planned product improvements for the ASOC.

Joint Surveillance and Target Attack Radar System

The budget request included $123.8 million in PE 27581F for the Joint Surveillance and Target Attack Radar System (JSTARS).

The House bill would authorize a decrease of $5.6 million to eliminate unnecessary studies and research.

The Senate amendment would authorize the budget request.

The conferees note that the budget request includes $40.2 million for the Radar Technology Improvement Program (RTIP). The conferees support the RTIP program, but also understand that the Air Force has identified a funding shortfall of $428.0 million for this program in fiscal year 2000 and beyond. Given the uncertain status of the program, the conferees believe it is prudent to reduce the level of resources applied to RTIP in fiscal year 1999 pending submission of a fully funded budget by the Air Force. Accordingly, the conferees agree to authorize a decrease of $25.0 million, as follows:

(1) $5.6 million to eliminate unnecessary studies and research; and

(2) $19.4 million to slow RTIP until such time as the Air Force clarifies future funding of the JSTARS program.

Seek Eagle

The budget request included $17.6 million in PE 27590F for the Seek Eagle weapons integration flight test program.

The House bill would authorize an increase of $2.0 million to continue testing Longshot, a range-increasing modification for munitions.

The Senate amendment would authorize the budget request.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $2.0 million to continue testing Longshot.

Defense Airborne Reconnaissance Program research and development

The budget request included funds for research and development in the Army, Navy, Air Force, and Defense-Wide accounts for activities of the Defense Airborne Reconnaissance Program (DARP), as shown in the following table.

Account	Budget request	Change from request		Conference agreement
		House bill	Senate amendment
RDT&E, Army	75,636	(26,000)	—	70,048
RDT&E, Navy	342	67,200	(23,400)	66,548
RDT&E, Air Force	—	224,008	—	349,403
RDT&E, Defense-Wide	444,137	(143,333)	(8,000)	35,665
Total	520,115	121,875	(31,400)	521,664

Section 905 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1998 (Public Law 105-85) transferred the management responsibilities of the Defense Airborne Reconnaissance Office (DARO) to the military services, while retaining Office of the Secretary of Defense (OSD)-level oversight responsibilities for determining airborne reconnaissance architecture and systems interface requirements.

The budget request reflected continuation of airborne reconnaissance programs within DARO. However, subsequent to submitting the budget request, the Secretary of Defense decided to:

(1) abolish the DARO;

(2) transfer the OSD-level functions to the Assistant Secretary of Defense for Command, Control, Communications, and Intelligence (ASD C3I); and

(3) transfer program management responsibilities to the military services.

This decision was reflected in a April 14, 1998 letter from the Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition and Technology.

The conferees agree to make these adjustments, in both the procurement and the research and development titles. These transfers are reflected in the tables contained in the conference report. In addition, a more detailed spreadsheet of DARO-related investment programs, summarizing transfers and other adjustments to individual budget lines and program elements, is provided in the classified annex that accompanies this conference report.

The conferees note that, unless otherwise reflected in the statement of managers, the transfers do not reflect a change to the purposes for which the funds were requested in the original budget request.

The conferees are extremely concerned that assignment of acquisition program management and funding to the services not been seen as a signal that stovepipe systems of the past will be acceptable in the future. The conferees stress that these programmatic actions demand a firm leadership role by the Assistant Secretary of Defense (Command, Control, Communications and Intelligence) in establishing policy and exercising oversight to ensure reconnaissance system interoperability for joint operations.

In particular, the tactical control system (TCS), previously assigned to the Unmanned Aerial Vehicle (UAV) Joint Program Office, continues to be assigned to the Navy as the lead service. The conferees note that there is some disagreement within the Department of Defense with respect to whether TCS will serve as the implementation of a single standard tactical UAV and sensor control architecture. The conferees believe that the issue of who operationally controls UAVs and their sensors is an issue separate and distinct from system design technical capabilities. The conferees believe it is imperative that the Joint Requirements Oversight Counsel makes the necessary standards decisions to ensure that operational commanders have full operational flexibility for employment of UAVs.

The budget request included $5.0 million in PE 35204D8Z for the Army's Unmanned Aerial Vehicle (UAV) Systems Integration Laboratory (SIL), and included $3.0 million for continued development of the Multiple UAV Simulation Environment (MUSE).

The House bill would direct the Assistant Secretary of Defense (Command, Control, Communications and Intelligence) to provide the congressional defense and intelligence committees a plan, which includes a funding profile, for the continued operation of the SIL no later than March 31, 1999.

The Senate amendment had no similar provision.

The Senate recedes.

Overview

The budget request for fiscal year 1999 contained an authorization of $9,314.7 million for Defense-Wide, Research and Development in the Department of Defense. The House bill would authorize $9,173.9 million. The Senate amendment would authorize $9,302.8 million. The conferees recommended an authorization of $8,848.8 million. Unless noted explicitly in the statement of managers, all changes are made without prejudice.

University research initiative

The budget request included $216.0 million in PE 61103D for the university research initiative. The request included $10.0 million for the Defense Experimental Program to Stimulate Competitive Research (DEPSCoR).

The House bill would authorize an increase of $15.0 million for the DEPSCoR.

The Senate amendment would authorize the budget request but would fence an additional $10.0 million within the request for the DEPSCoR, a total of $20.0 million.

The House recedes.

Ballistic Missile Defense Organization funding and programmatic guidance

The budget request included approximately $3.6 billion for the Ballistic Missile Defense Organization (BMDO) for research, development, test, and evaluation (RDT&E), and procurement.

The House bill would authorize an increase of $76.8 million for BMDO. In addition, the House bill would authorize an increase of $50.0 million for radar improvements related to Navy Upper Tier under Navy research, development, test, and evaluation (RDT&E).

The Senate amendment would authorize a decrease of $97.7 million for BMDO.

The conferees agree to authorize a decrease of $51.7 million for BMDO.

The conferees recommended funding allocations for BMDO are summarized in the following table. Additional programmatic and funding guidance is also provided below.

Support technology

The conferees continue to support BMDO's wide bandgap electronics material development program. Higher speed and higher temperature operation afforded by wide bandgap electronic materials could enhance the miniaturization and functionality of advanced sensors and processing systems for space-based ballistic missile defense (BMD) sensors and ground-based radar systems. The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $14.0 million in PE 62173C to support this important activity.

The conferees continue to support the Atmospheric Interceptor Technology (AIT) program to develop advanced interceptors with potential applications for a range of theater missile defense (TMD) programs. The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $22.0 million in PE 63173C to continue the AIT program.

The conferees commend BMDO and the Air Force for increasing funding in the fiscal year 1999 budget request for the Space Based Laser (SBL) Readiness Demonstrator (RD) program, but are concerned by the Air Force's failure to move the program beyond initial concept definition studies. The conferees continue to support the development of an SBL-RD that could be ready for launch in the 2006-2008 timeframe and urge the Secretary of Defense to provide the necessary funding and programmatic guidance to put the SBL program on this path. Due to the failure to release a request for proposal (RFP) and the Air Force's apparent lack of interest in aggressively advancing the program, the conferees will evaluate alternative management arrangements for the program. The conferees direct the Secretary of Defense to promptly release the RFP for an SBL-RD that could be launched in the 2006-2008 timeframe. In order to support this objective, the conferees agree to authorize an increase of $94.0 million in PE 63173C.

National Missile Defense

The conferees note the existence of some confusion regarding what, if any, national missile defense (NMD) policy has been established in law or otherwise endorsed by Congress. Although the conferees agreed to a provision on this subject last year, which was enacted in the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1998 (section 231 of Public Law 105-85), this provision did not address NMD deployment policy nor otherwise endorse the administration's policy known as "three-plus-three".

Although the Congress has acceded to recent funding requests for the administration's "three-plus-three" program, it has never formally endorsed the concept. Indeed, the continued lack of programmatic definition associated with the "plus-three" phase has called into question the administration's willingness and ability to deploy an NMD system on the "three-plus-three" schedule, the integrity of the concept itself, and exacerbated the current debate. The NMD program is the only major defense acquisition program that is not being managed to scheduled milestones beyond initial development. This is a departure from usual practice and proven program management principles. The conferees note that the Director of BMDO has testified that NMD is still an "extremely high risk" program. The conferees believe that the lack of program definition in the "plus-three" phase, and the lack of a defined path from this phase into production and deployment, is contributing to this risk and suboptimal decision-making with adverse impact to NMD programmatic and budgets.

At the same time, the conferees note that the bipartisan Commission to Assess the Ballistic Missile Threat to the United States unanimously concluded that "under some plausible scenarios . . . the U.S. might well have little or no warning before operational deployment" of long range ballistic missiles by hostile powers. The conferees believe that the potential mismatch between this warning time and the deployment timeline for a national missile defense poses a conundrum. Current policy is that no ballistic missile threat to the United States currently justifies deployment of a national missile defense. However, when new ballistic missile threats do emerge, it may be too late to respond in a timely manner.

In view of the above, the conferees believe that further program definition in the "plus-three" phase and beyond will mitigate some of the risks identified. Accordingly, the Secretary of Defense is expected to establish appropriate milestones and exit criteria for the NMD program that are consistent with those for other major defense acquisition programs. Further, the Secretary is expected to conduct NMD program milestone and budget reviews to ensure that established exit criteria are being met.

The conferees note that the Secretary of Defense has completed and submitted to Congress the report on sea-based NMD options called for in last year's conference report (H. Rept. 105-340), but that this report was submitted only in classified form. The conferees direct the Secretary to submit an unclassified summary of this report to the congressional defense committees as soon as possible.

Medium Extended Air Defense System

Although the conferees continue to support the need for a TMD system to support maneuver forces, the conferees are troubled by the failure of the Department of Defense to structure a fully-funded development program to satisfy this requirement. Although the conferees would support a coherent and fully-funded Medium Extended Air Defense System (MEADS) program, they are unwilling to support a MEADS program that has no funding programmed beyond fiscal year 1999. The conferees note that the Department of Defense has had ample opportunity to address this shortfall. In light of the Department's unwillingness to provide adequate funding in the outyears, the conferees recommend a reduction of $19.0 million in PE 63869C. Additional funding and programmatic guidance regarding the MEADS program is provided elsewhere in this report.

Theater High Altitude Area Defense (THAAD) system

The conferees continue to support the development, production, and fielding of THAAD as a matter of highest priority. The conferees support the budget request of $497.7 million for THAAD Demonstration and Validation (Dem/Val). In addition, as addressed elsewhere in this report, the conferees agree to authorize an increase of $29.6 million in THAAD Dem/Val funding to support increased competition in the THAAD program, for a total authorization in PE 63861C of $527.4 million.

The conferees are encouraged by the recent cost sharing agreement between the prime contractor and BMDO, and believe that testing should resume at an expeditious pace, without undue delay. However, given recent delays in the THAAD testing program, and the requirement for THAAD to achieve three successful intercept tests prior to entering Engineering and Manufacturing Development (EMD), the conferees agree to authorize a decrease of $323.9 million from PE 64861C for THAAD EMD.

The conferees expect the Secretary of Defense not to overreact to limited, albeit adverse, test results but to re-double efforts to structure a THAAD program that provides for as timely a response as possible to the recent medium range ballistic missile threat developments. The conferees reiterate the views expressed in previous reports that the THAAD missile and the Navy Upper Tier missile should not be viewed as competing systems, but as complementary. The conferees do not support proposals to use the Navy Upper Tier missile as a substitute for THAAD. The conferees note that the Navy endorses continuation of the THAAD program and views continuation of THAAD testing as important to the success of an accelerated Navy Upper Tier program.

Navy Upper Tier (Theater Wide)

The conferees continue to support the Navy Upper Tier program and urge the Secretary of Defense to accelerate this important development effort within an acceptable degree of program risk. To facilitate this acceleration, the conferees also urge the Navy to begin allocating funds from within its budget to complement those already programmed within the BMDO budget.

The conferees are concerned that necessary radar improvements have not kept up with developments in the Navy Upper Tier interceptor missile system. Therefore, the conferees agree to authorize an increase of $50.0 million for radar improvements competition. The conferees direct BMDO and the Navy to accelerate radar upgrades to ensure that this capability becomes available at the earliest possible date. In pursuing this competition, the conferees direct that a prototype solid state radar be available in 2001 in order to take full advantage of the Standard Missile III development testing planned for 2002. In addition, the conferees agree to authorize an increase of $70.0 million for Navy Upper Tier acceleration, for an overall increase of $120.0 million in PE 63868C.

BMD Technical Operations

The conferees support the efforts being performed at the Army Space and Strategic Defense Command's Advanced Research Center (ARC). The ARC continues to be a valuable tool in support of the Army's development of both theater and national missile defense systems. Therefore, the conferees agree to authorize an increase of $5.0 million in PE 63874C for support of the ARC.

The conferees note substantial unexplained growth in BMDO's system architecture and engineering effort and agree to authorize a decrease of $5.0 million in PE 63874C.

International Cooperative Programs

The budget request included $37.9 million for BMDO's Israeli Cooperative Project, which includes funding for the Arrow ballistic missile defense system. The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $12.0 million in PE 63875C to support interoperability design so the Arrow can operate alongside forward deployed U.S. missile defense systems.

At the request of the Director of BMDO, the conferees recommend a zero-balance transfer of $40.0 million from PAC-3 procurement to PAC-3 EMD to properly align funds for the type of work being performed. The conferees note with concern that this realignment is the result of significant delays in the PAC-3 flight test program. The conferees remain convinced that PAC-3 is an essential TMD system and is the only near term defense against threats emerging in the Southwest Asia and elsewhere. Nevertheless, if the PAC-3 test program does not demonstrate significant improvement, the conferees do not rule out the possibility of future funding reductions.

Medical free electron laser

The budget request included $9.7 million in PE 62227D for the medical free electron laser program.

The House bill would authorize an increase of $5.0 million.

The Senate amendment would authorize an increase $7.0 million.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $7.0 million.

Computing systems and communications technology

The budget request included $417.7 million in PE 62301E for computing systems and communications technology.

The House bill would authorize the budget request.

The Senate amendment would authorize a decrease of $30.0 million in the joint infrastructure protection project and a transfer of an additional $10.0 million from that project to PE 33104F for cyber-security research.

The conferees endorse the views in the Senate report (S. Rept. 105-189) with regard to the joint infrastructure protection project and reiterate the requirement for the report specified by the Senate. The conferees are especially concerned about the deficient planning for such a project given the widely recognized need to address vulnerabilities in the U.S. information infrastructure as quickly as possible. However, in recognition of the urgency of this issue, the conferees agree to an undistributed reduction in PE 62301E of $40.0 million to allow Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency (DARPA) flexibility to allocate the reduction consistent with national security priorities.

Chemical-biological defense program

The budget request included $620.3 million for the chemical-biological defense program, including $336.4 million in research and development, test and evaluation and $283.9 million in procurement. The budget request also included $88.0 million for the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency (DARPA) biological warfare (BW) defense program (PE 62383E).

The House bill would authorize the budget request for the chemical-biological defense program and the biological warfare defense program (PE 62383E), but would decrease the budget request of $6.9 million for procurement of contamination avoidance equipment for the use by the Reserve Components to respond to domestic emergencies.

The Senate amendment would recommend the following increases to the budget request for the chemical-biological defense program: $10.0 million to accelerate research and development of small, light-weight, man-portable chemical and biological agent detection sensors; $4.0 million in PE 62384BP for Project SAFEGUARD to continue proof of concept testing to establish sensor performance, initiate packaging and real-time processing, and the conduct of platform studies; and $1.5 million in PE 62383E to demonstrate the use of technologies for the deployment of telemedicine and other capabilities to the warfighters; but would recommend a $12.0 million reduction to the budget request for the DARPA BW program.

Additionally, the Senate amendment would transfer the mission, function and resources for the chemical-biological defense program to the Defense Threat Reduction Agency (DTRA), consistent with the recommendation of the November 1997 Defense Reform Initiative (DRI).

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $15.5 million for chemical-biological defense for acceleration of research and development of small, light-weight, man-portable chemical and biological detectors ($5.0 million in PE 61384BP and $5.0 million in PE 62384BP), $4.0 million in PE 62384 BP for Project SAFEGUARD, and $1.5 million in PE 62384E for the demonstration and deployment of technologies for telemedicine and other capabilities to the warfighters; but would reduce the budget request by $7.0 million for PE 62383E. Additionally, the conferees continue to express strong support for innovative technologies to detect chemical and biological agents, such as aerogels and radio frequency identification sensor tags, and encourage the broad participation of the national laboratories, universities and, where appropriate, industry, in these efforts.

The conferees endorse the concerns expressed in the Senate report (S. Rept. 105-189) regarding the shortcomings and deficiencies in the chemical-biological defense program related to the provision of adequate force structure and equipment to protect military facilities, as well as the deficiencies in doctrine, policy, equipment and training for the defense of critical overseas ports and airfields. The conferees direct the Secretary of Defense to report to the congressional defense committees by December 1, 1998 and annually thereafter, in the Department of Defense Nuclear, Chemical Biological (NCB) Defense Annual Report, on the plans to correct these deficiencies, including the deployment on a long-term basis of Army Biological Integrated Detection Systems (BIDS) companies in high threat commands or regions.

Oversight and management of chemical/biological defense program

The conferees note progress achieved in implementing the provisions of section 1701 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1994 (Public Law 103-160, 52 U.S.C. 1522) in consolidating, coordinating and integrating the chemical-biological defense requirements of the military departments into a single office within the Department of Defense. Under this agreement, the DOD chemical-biological defense program office provides overall policy and budget guidance for the program, the Defense Acquisition Board process provides oversight of the program, and the Department of the Army acts as the executive agent. The conferees also note that the establishment of a Joint Nuclear, Chemical and Biological (NCB) Board to provide management structure for the program ensures that the operational needs of the services are integrated and coordinated, and that unnecessary duplication of effort is eliminated in the preparation of the chem-bio defense Program Objective Memorandum.

The conferees agree that a single office for overall coordination and integration of the DOD chem-bio defense program, as required by Public Law 103-160, be maintained within the Office of the Secretary, and strongly believe that the office must be assigned sufficient staff to exercise its policy and budget guidance roles. In addition, the conferees strongly support continued implementation of the Joint Service Agreement to ensure coordination, integration and management of the program.

With regard to the transfer of the chem-bio defense program to the Defense Threat Reduction Agency (DTRA), the conferees agree that the management role of the DTRA with regard to the chem-bio defense program should be limited to those chem-bio defense activities and projects that represent unique operational mission responsibilities of DTRA. Therefore, the conferees do not agree to transfer overall responsibility for the execution and day-to-day management of the chem-bio defense program to DTRA. However, to ensure consideration of DTRA chem-bio defense and related counterproliferation operational requirements in the DOD chem-bio defense program, the conferees recommend that DTRA become a party to the Joint Service Agreement on NCB defense and be included as a voting member of the Joint NCB Defense Board.

Tactical technology

The budget request included $189.0 million in PE 62702E for tactical technology.

The House bill would authorize a decrease of $37.0 million for applied research in tactical technology.

The Senate amendment would authorize a decrease of $5.0 million for the increased scope of work on the micro unmanned aerial vehicle program.

The conferees agree to authorize a decrease of $32.0 million in PE 62702E.

Integrated command and control technology

The budget request included $34.0 million in PE 62708E for integrated command and control technology.

The House bill would authorize an increase of $6.0 million for continued development of advanced technologies for flat panel displays.

The Senate amendment would authorize an increase of $8.0 million for flat panel display to continue the development of a domestic infrastructure within the context of the flat panel display initiative.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $7.0 million for flat panel displays.

Materials and electronic technologies

The budget request included $244.4 million in PE 62712E for material and electronics technology.

The House bill would authorize the budget request.

The Senate amendment would authorize an increase of $6.0 million for the continued development of the mixed mode electronics multi-technology insertion (MIME) program.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $6.0 million for the MIME program and to authorize a reduction of $8.0 million for sonoelectronics to fund other higher priority projects.

Weapons of mass destruction technologies

The budget request included $203.6 million for weapons of mass destruction technologies (PE 62715BR) of the Defense Special Weapons Agency (DSWA).

The House bill would authorize the budget request.

The Senate amendment would recommend an increase of $15.0 million, including $10.0 million to maintain nuclear core competencies and critical scientific and engineering expertise; $2.0 million to maintain efforts to protect critical civil and commercial advanced electronic technologies and space systems against nuclear and conventional explosions; and $3.0 million to accelerate the pace and development of components and subsystems toward a prototype "deep digger" system.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $13.0 million to the budget request: $10.0 million to maintain nuclear core competencies and critical scientific and engineering expertise in nuclear weapons effects technology and $3.0 million to accelerate the pace and development of components and subsystems toward a prototype "deep digger" system.

The conferees remain concerned about the impact of high altitude nuclear and conventional explosions on critical civil and commercial activities and the potential vulnerability of next generation satellites and high technology upon which U.S. Armed Forces rely. The conferees have supported the efforts of the DSWA to conduct research on the effects of electromagnetic pulse (EMP) and the potential impact on military systems and critical technologies, and to develop technologies that would reduce potential vulnerabilities of the effects of radiation and EMP on advanced electronic technologies and space systems.

The conferees endorse the direction contained in the House Report (H. Rept. 105-532) accompanying its fiscal year 1999, defense authorization bill that the Secretary of Defense, in consultation with the Director of Central Intelligence, report to the congressional defense committees by March 1, 1999 on the potential effects of high- and low-frequency EMP on critical military and civil systems and steps that might be taken to reduce potential vulnerabilities to EMP.

Explosives demilitarization technology

The budget request included $11.6 million for the explosives demilitarization technology program (PE 63104D8Z).

The House bill would authorize an increase of $2.0 million to allow continued aggressive development of environmentally safe procedures to safely dispose of conventional military munitions.

The Senate amendment would authorize an increase of $5.5 million: $4.0 million to complete the demonstration of existing commercially available blast chamber technology; and $1.5 million to design a mobile system utilizing the commercially available blast chamber technology.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $6.0 million to the budget request, including $2.0 million to continue aggressive development of environmentally safe procedures to dispose of conventional military munitions and $4.0 million to complete the demonstration of commercially available blast chamber technology as a viable alternative to open burn/open detonation demilitarization of conventional munitions.

The conferees concur with the concerns expressed in the Senate report (S. Rept. 105-189) regarding the existence of small numbers of conventional munitions at demilitarization sites in the United States which need to be destroyed, where it may not be cost effective or practical to construct a destruction facility. The conferees support the efforts of the Department of Defense to design a mobile system utilizing the commercially available blast chamber technology.

Counterterrorism technical support program

The budget request included $35.8 million for the counterterrorism technical support (CTTS) program (PE 63122D8Z).

The House bill would authorize an increase of $4.0 million increase for the development and demonstration of biometric access control technology, to include the use of authentication software and the principal component method of facial recognition.

The Senate amendment would authorize an increase of $5.0 million for the facial recognition technology program. Additionally, the Senate would recommend the transfer of the counterterrorism technical support program to the Defense Threat Reduction Agency.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $4.0 million for the facial recognition technology program. In addition, the conferees endorse two recommendations contained in the Senate report (S. Rept. 105-185). First, the conferees support efforts by the Department of Defense to maintain collaborative efforts with allies who have demonstrated counter-terrorism capabilities, which can provide the United States with a cost-effective way to remain on the cutting-edge of technology. Second, the conferees support efforts by the Department to continue its examination of retrofit options and to develop design guidelines for new and existing structures, including the use of composite systems.

The conferees recognize the success of the interagency Technical Support Working Group (TSWG) and the Counterterrorism Technical Support program, and direct that oversight and direction of the program remain with the Office of the Assistant Secretary for Special Operations and Low Intensity Conflict.

The conferees understand that the ASD (SO/LIC) is responsible for oversight of the TSWG and the Office of Special Technology (OST). The conferees also understand that there are other entities within the Department of Defense that can contribute to the interagency program to combat terrorism, such as the Defense Special Weapons Agency (DSWA), and encourage the TSWG to continue its coordination activities with these DOD entities, as well as with non-DOD entities, to ensure that the expertise available to the U.S. Government is appropriately applied to national and international efforts to combat terrorism.

The conferees also encourage the continued cooperation between the TSWG and the Physical Security Action Group (PSEAG) to ensure that the CTTS and the physical security equipment programs address technologies that meet force protection needs.

Counterproliferation support program

The budget request included $80.4 million for the counterproliferation support program, $70.6 million in PE 63160BR and $9.8 million in PE 65160BR.

The House bill would recommend that the counterproliferation support program be maintained at the fiscal year 1998 level and would authorize a decrease of $13.0 million.

The Senate amendment would authorize an increase of $4.0 million to PE 65160BR for the Counterproliferation Analysis and Planning System (CAPS) and an increase of $3.0 million to PE 63160BR for the high frequency active auroral research program (HAARP). In addition, the Senate would recommend an increase of $20.5 million increase for the unfunded requirements for the U.S. Special Operations Command (USSOCOM) for training, equipment and activities related to detecting, identifying, rendering safe, destroying or recovering weapons of mass destruction.

The House recedes.

The conferees endorse the concerns expressed in the Senate report (S. Rept. 105-185) and the recommendation that funds authorized for HAARP not be diverted to fund government overhead and Systems Engineering and Technical Assessments (SETA) support, and that the combined overhead/SETA support costs be no more than 10 percent.

Automatic target recognition

The budget request included $5.1 million in PE 63232D for automatic target recognition.

The House bill would authorize an increase of $3.0 million for optical correlation technology research.

The Senate amendment would authorize the budget request.

The conferees agree to authorize the budget request.

The House bill included no funds for SERDP.

The Senate amendment would authorize the budget request.

The conferees agree to authorize the budget request and direct that SERDP be identified under a Department of Defense (DOD) program element to avoid confusion about its unique multi-agency purpose. The conferees recognize the value of SERDP as a tri-agency cooperative program that supports basic and applied research and development of innovative technologies to meet the environmental obligations of the DOD, the Department of Energy, and the Environmental Protection Agency. The conferees expect that maintaining SERDP under a DOD program element will preserve its multi-agency focus.

Advanced electronics technologies

The budget request included $244.7 million in PE 63739E for advanced electronics technologies.

The House bill would authorize the budget request.

The Senate amendment would authorize an increase of $10.0 million for advanced mask writer development in advanced lithography and would authorize a decrease of $4.0 million for new start work in project MT-04.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $10.0 million for advanced lithography development, as described in the Senate report (S. Rept. 105-189), and a decrease of $8.4 million for molecular level printing program acceleration and submarine sensor suite development to fund higher priority projects.

The conferees agree to authorize a decrease of $12.0 million for advanced concept technology demonstrations.

High performance computing modernization program

The budget request included $140.9 million in PE 63755D for high performance computing modernization program.

The House bill would authorize the budget request.

The House recedes.

Command, control and communications systems

The budget request included $200.1 million in PE 63760E for command, control and communications systems.

The House bill would authorize a decrease of $27.5 million for command, control and communications systems.

The Senate amendment would authorize a decrease of $11.0 million in the same program.

The conferees agree to authorize a decrease of $27.5 million.

Sensor and guidance technology

The budget request included $213.2 million in PE 63762E for sensor and guidance technology.

The House bill would authorize a decrease of $13.1 million within the program and an increase of $10.0 million for seismic sensor technology development.

The Senate amendment would authorize the budget request.

The conferees agree to authorize a decrease of $13.1 million for the program. The funding for seismic sensor technology development is addressed elsewhere in this statement of managers.

Land warfare technology

The budget request included $108.5 million in PE 63764E for land warfare technology.

The House bill would authorize a decrease of $11.6 million in the program.

The Senate amendment would authorize a decrease of $4.0 million for a new start project in LNW01.

The conferees agree to a decrease of $17.6 million in the program: a reduction of $11.6 million, as described in the House report (H. Rept. 105-532); and a reduction of $6.0 million for tactical mobile robots acceleration and situation awareness system program growth to fund higher priority programs.

Physical security

The budget request included $31.7 million for the Department of Defense physical security program (PE 63228D8Z).

The House bill would authorize the budget request.

The Senate amendment would authorize a decrease of $6.0 million for activities related to demonstrating commercial off-the-shelf technologies. In addition, the Senate would make available $3.0 million for a study to determine the utility of a software technology developed jointly by industry and the national laboratories, the Analytic System and Software for Evaluating Safeguards and Security (ASSESS), for use by the Department of Defense as an integral component in conducting vulnerability assessments at numerous Department of Defense facilities and installations.

The conferees agree to authorize a decrease of $3.0 million for activities related to demonstrating commercial off-the-shelf technologies in PE 63228D8Z, and that decreases to this program not be made to projects currently underway. Additionally, the conferees would make available $3.0 million for a study on the utility of ASSESS as an integral component of DOD efforts to assess vulnerability assessments at its facilities and installations.

Continuous acquisition and life-cycle support activities initiative

The budget request included $1.9 million in PE 63736D for the continuous acquisition and life-cycle support activities (CALS) initiative.

The House bill would authorize the budget request.

The Senate amendment would authorize an increase of $2.0 million for the integrated data environment program.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $2.0 million for the integrated data environment program.

North Atlantic Treaty Organization research and development

The budget request included $44.4 million for the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) research and development activities in the following accounts: $11.6 million for the Army (PE 63790A); $11.0 million for the Navy (PE 63790N); $11.1 million for the Air Force (PE 63790F); and $10.7 million for the Department of Defense (PE 63790T).

The House bill would authorize a decrease of $5.0 million VECTOR activity in the Navy program (PE 63790N), an international flight demonstration effort utilizing X-31 experimental aircraft.

The Senate amendment would recommend that funds for the NATO research and development activities remain at the fiscal year 1998 funding levels plus inflation, resulting in the following decreases: $2.0 million (Army); $1.1 million (Navy); $0.4 million (Air Force); and $2.3 million (defense-wide).

The conferees agree to authorize the following decreases: $2.0 million (Army); $4.0 million (Navy); $0.4 million (Air Force); and $2.3 million (defense-wide). The omnibus reprogramming (FY98-16PA) currently before the Congress for approval includes as a source of funds $3.0 million from the Navy NATO research and development program for activities related to VECTOR. According to the rationale making the sources available for reprogramming, agreements have not been reached yet between the United States and Sweden, and therefore the funds are available. The conferees recommend that the Department of the Navy utilize those funds for activities in fiscal year 1999.

Humanitarian demining

The budget request included $17.2 million for humanitarian demining research and development activities in PE 63920D8Z.

The House bill would authorize a decrease of $5.0 million.

The Senate amendment would authorize the budget request.

The conferees agree to authorize the budget request.

Joint robotics program-engineering development

The budget request included $11.3 million in PE 64709D for the joint robotics program-engineering development.

The House bill would authorize the budget request.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $6.0 million for accelerated joint robotics technology engineering and management development.

Defense technology analysis

The budget request included $5.0 million in PE 65798S for the defense technology analysis program.

The House bill would authorize the budget request.

The budget request included $46.5 million in PE 65801K for defense technical information services.

The House bill would authorize the budget request.

The Senate amendment would authorize a decrease of $1.0 million for expansion of defense technical information.

The conferees agree to authorize a decrease of $1.0 million for expansion of defense technical information.

Special operations intelligence systems development

The budget request included $1.8 million for special operations forces intelligence systems development.

The House bill would authorize an increase of $5.0 million for research and development requirements associated with the Special Operations intelligence vehicle.

The Senate amendment would authorize the budget request.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $2.5 million for development of the Special Operations intelligence vehicle.

The budget request included $9.9 million in PE 65131D for live fire testing.

The House bill would authorize an increase of $4.0 million to expand threat vulnerability testing to include the threat of radio frequency weapons.

The Senate amendment would authorize the budget request.

The Senate recedes.

ITEMS OF SPECIAL INTEREST

Advanced lightweight grenade launcher

The conferees note ongoing efforts by the Special Operations Command (SOCOM) to develop new lightweight weapon systems necessary to support critical mission requirements by reducing the load that special operations personnel must carry. The conferees support ongoing efforts to develop a new advanced lightweight grenade launcher (ALGL) that will support special operations missions and believe this capability has applicability beyond the Special Operations Command. The conferees encourage the Special Operations Command to assess future warfighting requirements and determine the viability of ALGL concept. If ALGL meets warfighting requirements, the conferees would expect SOCOM to request funding necessary to develop this weapon and meet future warfighting requirements.

Advanced tactical computer science and sensor technology

The budget request included $18.5 million in PE 63772A for advanced tactical computer science and sensor technology.

The House bill would authorize the budget request.

The Senate amendment would authorize an additional $2.5 million for digital intelligence technology development.

The Senate recedes.

The conferees strongly endorse the use of commercial-off-the-shelf (COTS) technology where appropriate to meet the needs of the 21st Century Army. The committee urges the Army to consider spending up to $5.0 million of the discretionary funds in the Army's digitization program to explore alternative COTS technology for command and control applications for dismounted soldiers.

Commercial technologies for maintenance activities

The conferees agree to amend the budget request to change the name of PE 63805S to commercial technologies for maintenance activities.

The conferees support funding for this program established in section 361 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1998. The conferees believe the commercial technologies for maintenance activities program provides a framework for the depot maintenance activities to work together with U.S. manufacturing companies on projects of common interest in which industry will match Department of Defense funding on a two-for-one basis. The conferees believe that in planning the program in the outyears, the Defense Logistics Agency (DLA) should require each of the participating services to match DLA funds for the projects conducted under the program. In managing the program in fiscal year 1999, the DLA should consider imposing such a matching requirement where practicable.

Cyber Security Program

The conferees support the Air Force cybersecurity program, which would allow the Air Force to conduct research and development at federally funded research and development centers that are currently working in collaboration on issues relating to security information assurance. This program would help to facilitate the transition of information assurance technology to the defense community which is vital as the Defense Department increases its reliance on computer networks and information technology.

Defense information superiority, assurance, and interoperability

Joint Vision 2010, the Joint Chiefs of Staff conceptual template for how U.S. Armed Forces will fight future wars, identifies information superiority—the capability of maintaining an uninterrupted flow of information while denying an adversary's ability to do the same—as a key enabler for success in any future conflict.

The conferees believe that communications network interoperability problems experienced by Navy carrier battle groups during operational test and evaluation of the advanced combat direction system and the cooperative engagement capability, as discussed elsewhere in this statement of managers, highlight potentially greater interoperability problems in communications, command, control, computers, intelligence, surveillance, and reconnaissance (C4ISR) systems networking at the joint level. Such problems will adversely affect the ability of U.S. Armed Forces to achieve the information superiority required for success on future battlefields.

The General Accounting Office (GAO) has identified a number of activities within the Department of Defense (DOD) intended to ensure that U.S. Armed Forces are capable of establishing and maintaining information superiority in the future. According to the GAO reports, the DOD has begun to make progress toward establishing a comprehensive C4ISR architecture, but needs to complete its development, establish adequate information assurance measures, and ensure compliance with the architecture by the military departments, unified commands, and agencies. The GAO also observed that the complexity, magnitude, and cost of DOD's information superiority efforts warrant a comprehensive annual overview of the state of the Department's management and oversight of C4ISR acquisitions. The conferees understand that the DOD agreed with the recommendations contained in the GAO reports.

Accordingly, the conferees direct the Secretary of Defense to submit with the DOD budget request for fiscal year 2000 a report to the congressional defense committees on the implementation of the information superiority concept and its attendant key C4ISR systems development and acquisitions. The report should describe a DOD roadmap for C4ISR interoperability. The report should describe identified obstacles to interoperability, architecture development, implementation, and maintenance and the plans, including the planned allocation of resources, to address them.

Joint simulation system

The conferees view the development of the Joint Simulation System (JSIMS) in PE 92740J as an important step in meeting a critical joint readiness requirement. In addition, JSIMS provides a framework for the migration of all training simulations into a common system and the elimination of the existing suite of legacy simulations across the services. These legacy simulations are increasingly outdated and expensive to maintain. JSIMS is also a key enabler for the joint experimentation process recently directed by the Secretary of Defense to be established under the Commander in Chief, U.S. Atlantic Command.

The conferees encourage the Department of Defense to adequately fund this program in fiscal year 2000 and beyond as a means of ensuring that full operating capability follows the fielding of initial operating capability without delay.

Man overboard indicator technology

The budget request included no funds for the development of man overboard indicator technology.

Both the House report (H. Rept. 105-532) and the Senate report (S. Rept. 105-189) encouraged the Navy to investigate the utility of commercially available, water-activated man overboard indicator and the feasibility of integrating such a system for fleet use.

The conferees encourage the Navy to investigate the feasibility of integrating a commercial off-the-shelf man overboard indicator as a means of immediately alerting ship control personnel of a person accidentally falling overboard. Additionally, the conferees encourage the Navy to continue their initiatives to identify a commercial off-the-shelf personnel tracking and physiological monitoring system, and to investigate the possibility and utility of combining man overboard, tracking, and physiological monitoring requirements into one device.

Materials research

The House report (H. Rept. 105-532) expressed concern about the direction of materials research within the Department of Defense and the belief that such research should seek to reduce long-term dependence for critical defense materials upon foreign sources. The report directed the Secretary of Defense to undertake a basic review of the policies and programs regarding defense critical materials and critical materials research and to report the results of this review by February 15, 1999.

The Senate report (S. Rept. 105-189) included no similar direction.

The conferees note the views expressed in the House report and the potential vulnerabilities of the domestic and foreign supplier base for critical defense materials needed in the production of future defense systems. The conferees recognize the decline in funding of applied materials research in the Department, particularly in the support of fundamental materials research by the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency.

In addition to the issues identified in the House report, the conferees direct the Secretary of Defense to assess the requirements for a long-range plan for future materials research that would ensure the availability of emerging high performance materials for future defense needs and to include the results of this assessment in the report submitted to the Congress. As a part of this assessment, the Secretary should consider the state of competition, both within the United States and international markets, for raw materials for high speed applications, such as gallium or other materials.

Military human immunodeficiency virus research

The budget request included $5.7 million in PE 63105A for military human immunodeficiency virus research.

The House bill would authorize the budget request.

The Senate amendment would authorize a decrease of $2.6 million for the program.

The conferees agree to authorize the budget request.

Navy antisubmarine warfare program

The conferees note the 1997 report by the Naval Studies Board of the National Academy of Sciences, Technology for the United States Navy and Marine Corps, 2000–2035. The report concludes that:

(1) antisubmarine warfare (ASW) is one of the Navy's most fundamental core competencies;

(2) ASW must remain a core competency in the face of a submarine threat that will increase in the 21st century to become the dominant threat to the accomplishment of naval missions;

(3) the continuing draw down in naval forces and the current de-emphasis on ASW have seriously eroded the Navy's ASW capabilities;

(4) this erosion of capabilities comes at a time when potential future adversaries are rapidly acquiring advanced quieting techniques and other offensive submarine capabilities;

(5) the lack of consensus on a submarine threat and competing naval warfare priorities, combined with mounting pressure on the overall defense budget, have put the Navy's ASW program at historically low levels;

(6) advances in ASW capability come about only as a result of dedicated, long-term research and development based on at-sea operations, testing, measurements, and experimentation; and

(7) these types of research and development projects and operations are largely absent from current Navy programs and plans.

The conclusions of the Naval Studies Board closely parallel congressional concerns about the erosion of the Navy's ASW capabilities since the end of the Cold War. These concerns led to direction to the Secretary of Defense in the statement of managers that accompanied the conference report on S. 1124 (H. Rept. 104-450), and in the classified annex that accompanied the statement of managers on H.R. 3230 (H. Rept. 104-724). These reports directed the Secretary to assess the current and projected U.S. ASW capability in the light of the developing threat and budget trends, and to identify the short-term and long-term improvements needed to cope with the evolving submarine threat.

The conferees commend the Navy and the Office of the Secretary of Defense for The 1997 Anti-Submarine Warfare Assessment, dated March 1998. The assessment reaffirms that ASW is a top priority mission for the Navy, as well as being a core and enduring naval competency. The assessment of ASW training, modernization, and organization concludes that ASW training proficiency has declined and recommends that responsibility for ASW proficiency be refocused in the fleet. According to the report, the highest priority ASW modernization efforts are funded and the President's budget request for fiscal year 1999 provides adequate equipment to respond to likely threats to the end of the Future Year Defense Program and beyond. The Navy has also created a new staff organization within the Office of the Chief of Naval Operations (N-84), and charged that organization with the responsibility for integration and assessment of the Navy ASW program.

The conferees believe that ASW is a critical enabler for naval operations in the world's littoral regions, and that a stable and focused ASW program under appropriate oversight by the Department of the Navy and the Office of the Secretary of Defense will be critical to achieving the goals of near- and long-term improvements in ASW proficiency and capabilities. To that end, the conferees direct the Navy to update, at least biannually, an ASW Master Plan that reflects the Navy's overall ASW investment strategy and program. The conferees also believe that the Chief of Naval Operations should consider providing staffing and responsibility for N-84 that is on a level commensurate with that of other Navy staff resource sponsors for the functional warfare areas.

Navy land attack missile program

The budget request included $11.3 million in PE 63795N for continued evaluation of a naval version of the Army Tactical Missile System (NTACMS) for naval surface ship and submarine use. No funds were included in the budget request for the Land Attack Standard Missile (LASM), a land attack variant of the Navy Standard Missile.

The House bill would authorize the budget request. The House bill would also direct that the Navy's land attack missile program not proceed to a Milestone I development decision until the analysis of alternatives and other issues appropriate to a major acquisition program milestone decision have been resolved.

The Senate amendment would authorize the budget request. The Senate amendment would also direct the Secretary of the Navy to report, among other things, an analysis of alternatives for an advanced gun system that considers fulfilling some portion of the Navy's fire support requirement with a modified version of the Army's extended range multiple launch rocket system and some portion of the fire support requirement with NTACMS.

The House Report (H. Rept. 105-132) accompanying the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1998 cautioned that a thorough, objective and independent cost and operational effectiveness analysis of competing system alternatives for meeting the operational requirements for a naval land attack missile would be required before the Navy proceeds with any development milestone decision for such a missile system.

The conferees are aware that the Chief of Naval Operations selected LASM as the most cost effective near-term solution to its requirement for a land attack missile system. According to the Navy, selection of LASM was based on an extensive and broadly based land attack analysis that compared LASM and NTACMS on the basis of range, responsiveness, lethality, growth potential, and cost. But, the conferees believe that the assumptions used in the analysis may not accurately reflect the operational realities of the littoral battlefield. In addition, the impact of selecting LASM may result in the cancellation of the NTACMS program. Cancellation of NTACMS would result in a different approach regarding land attack missile support of Marines ashore and submarine employment in the littorals from that described in Navy testimony before Congress. The conferees are reluctant to approve a request for authorizing LASM if it results in cancellation of NTACMS without Navy explanations of the impact of such a decision on support of Marines ashore and other submarine missions in littoral warfare.

The conferees agree to authorize $11.3 million for development, risk reduction, and analytical activities leading to a defense acquisition program milestone decision for the missile system program to satisfy the Navy's land attack missile requirement. The conferees direct the Secretary of Defense to ensure that the analysis of alternatives for a Navy land attack missile system, as discussed in the statements of managers accompanying the National Defense Authorization Act for 1998 (Public Law 105-85) and the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1999 (H. Rept. 105-532 and S. Rept. 105-189), and other issues appropriate to a major acquisition milestone decision are completed and the results reviewed by the Defense Acquisition Board before the Navy proceeds with a development milestone decision for the land attack missile system.

Oceanographic research information

The conferees are aware of recent announcements by the Vice President that the Department of the Navy is declassifying, and will make available for use by the public and private institutions and agencies with ocean research and education programs, previously classified acoustical data from the U.S. Navy's underwater Sound Surveillance System (SOSUS) and data on ocean temperature and salinity levels under the Arctic ice cap. These data can be used, among other things, to track the migrations of large marine mammals, predict natural catastrophes, and support long-term climate change research. The conferees believe that such actions provide the opportunity to leverage the nation's $16.0 billion investment in the SOSUS system by making data from this system available for continuing defense research and for civilian scientific research and education.

The conferees request that the Chairman of the National Oceanographic Research Leadership Council conduct an assessment of: (1) the value of SOSUS data to meet the requirements of appropriate private and public institutions and agencies with ocean research and education programs; (2) the cost of making SOSUS data available for such purposes in comparison to the cost of deploying alternative data-gathering systems; (3) recommended options for making such data available to civilian and defense research and education institutions and agencies; and (4) recommendations on effective ways to foster cooperation among agencies that would benefit from SOSUS data, including the potential for cost-sharing among the agencies and institutions that would participate in the program. In conducting the assessment, the Council should take into account the cooperative research and development agreement that was established between the Navy and the Scientific Environmental Research Foundation in June 1998, to use deactivated SOSUS stations to collect data for scientific and educational purposes. The conferees further request that a report of the results of the assessment be included in the annual report to Congress on the National Oceanographic Partnership Program that is to be submitted by March 1, 1999.

Optical correlation technology for automatic target recognition

The conferees understand that progress in the development of optical correlation technology for automatic target recognition holds promise for the application of this technology to precision munitions, target cueing for surveillance systems, medical diagnosis, and other applications. The conferees agree with the direction contained in the House report (H. Rept. 105-532) that the Under Secretary of Defense (Acquisition and Technology) report to the congressional defense committees with the submission of the fiscal year 2000 budget request, the overall plan and program of the Department of Defense for the development and demonstration of optical correlator technology for automatic target recognition. The conferees urge the Secretary of Defense to consider using discretionary funds to continue development of this program through fiscal year 1999.

Patriot anti-cruise missile defense

The conferees reaffirm their support for fully evaluating the Patriot anti-cruise missile (PACM) concept and direct the Secretary of the Army to complete a rigorous test and evaluation program in fiscal year 1999, using funds previously appropriated for this purpose, to determine the effectiveness of the PACM seeker against the full range of cruise missile threats. Results of this evaluation shall be provided to the congressional defense committees in a report by April 15, 1999. The report shall also include an assessment of options and associated costs for utilizing the PACM seeker in future upgrades to existing Patriot missiles.

Project M

The budget request included $4.9 million in PE 63508N to continue the development and demonstration of advanced vibration control and quieting technology for naval machinery support structures that was developed under the Defense Advanced Research Project Agency's Project M.

The House bill would authorize the budget request. The House bill would also direct the Secretary of the Navy to program funds for fiscal year 2000 to develop a prototype system for surface ships that uses the Project M technology.

The Senate amendment would authorize the budget request.

The conferees agree to authorize the budget request to continue the development and demonstration of the Project M technology in the Navy's submarine large scale vehicle. The conferees also request the Secretary of the Navy to assess the potential benefits that might result from the application of the Project M technology in surface ships and to report the results of that assessment to the congressional defense committees by March 31, 1999.

Software security

The conferees note the potential value of continuing efforts to improve computer security by developing and testing prototype software security mechanisms, and the conferees urge the Secretary of Defense to consider using $500,000 from discretionary funds for this purpose.

LEGISLATIVE PROVISIONS ADOPTEDSubtitle A—Authorization of Appropriations
Authorization of appropriations (secs. 201–202)

The House bill contained provisions (secs. 201–202) that would authorize the recommended fiscal year 1999 funding levels for all research, development, test, and evaluation accounts.

The Senate amendment contained similar provisions.

The conference agreement includes these provisions.

Subtitle B—Program Requirements, Restrictions, and Limitations*Management responsibility for Navy mine countermeasures programs (sec. 211)*

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 211) that would extend until fiscal year 2003 the Office of the Secretary of Defense's responsibilities for certifying that: (1) the Navy has submitted an adequate plan for mine countermeasures programs; (2) the budget and the Future Years Defense Program support the plan; and (3) the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff has determined the Navy's program is sufficient.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes.

Future aircraft carrier transition technologies (sec. 212)

The budget request included $149.5 million for future aircraft carrier research and development in PE 63512N and $40.6 million for CV(X) feasibility studies in PE 63564N. The request also included $38.5 million for CVN-77 contract design in PE 64567N.

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 212) that would authorize the budget request and designate $50.0 million of the $149.5 million authorization for future carrier development to be available for CVN-77 research and development.

The Senate amendment contained a similar provision (sec. 212).

The Senate recedes.

Manufacturing technology program (sec. 213)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 213) that would amend section 2525 of title 10, United States Code, to establish goals for cost sharing in the manufacturing technology program and procedures for waiver of the cost sharing requirements. The provision would also require the Secretary of Defense to include information on the extent of cost sharing by participants in the manufacturing technology program in the five-year plan for the manufacturing technology program.

The Senate amendment contained a similar provision (sec. 216) which would modify cost sharing requirements to allow for different levels of cost sharing where appropriate, provide for establishing the level of cost sharing by competitive bidding, move the authority for waiver of cost sharing requirements to the service secretaries, and require cost share reporting to track investments by non-industry program participants.

The conferees agree to a provision that would require the use of competitive procedures for determination of cost sharing, delegate the authority to waive cost sharing requirements to the Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition and Technology or to service acquisition executives, provide for the establishment of annual goals for cost sharing, and require that the five-year plan for the program include assessments of the effectiveness of the manufacturing technology program and of the extent to which costs of projects are being shared by the participants in the program.

The conferees note the requirement of section 2525(d)(1) of Title 10, United States Code, that competitive procedures shall be used for awarding all grants and entering into all contracts, cooperative agreements, and other transactions under the manufacturing technology program. The conferees note further the policy of Congress, as reflected in section 2374 of Title 10, United States Code, that the Department of Defense, the military departments, the Coast Guard, and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, should not be required by legislation to award a new grant for research, development, test, or evaluation to a non-federal entity; and that any program, project, or technology identified in legislation be awarded through merit-based selection procedures.

Sense of Congress on the defense science and technology program (sec. 214)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 214) that would express the sense of Congress that at least 10 percent of the funds in the research, development, test and evaluation accounts of the services should be spent on science and technology programs. The provision would also express the sense of Congress concerning certain management objectives and would require an interagency study on recommendations for maintaining the technology base supporting the Department of Defense.

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 1076) that would express the sense of Congress that the Secretary of Defense have an objective of increasing science and technology funding by no less than 2 percent over inflation above the amount requested for the prior fiscal year for each year during the period of fiscal years 2000 through 2008. The provision would also express the sense of Congress regarding management goals for the program.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would include the Senate funding objectives and integrate the House and Senate management goals.

Next generation internet (sec. 215)

The budget request included $40.0 million in PE 62110E for the next generation internet program.

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 215) that would authorize $53.0 million for the program and clarify that the amount specified in section 201(4) would be the amount authorized for the program, notwithstanding any other provision of law.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision and would authorize the budget request.

The Senate recedes.

Crusader self-propelled artillery system program (sec. 216)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 211) that would require the Secretary of the Army to revisit both requirements and schedule for the established Crusader program and provide a report to the Congress that addresses:

- (1) assessment of the risk associated with the current Crusader program technology;
- (2) total requirement for Crusader associated with Army After Next force structure revisions;
- (3) potential for reducing system weight by as much as 50 percent;
- (4) potential for propellant and munition alternatives and the impact of maturing this technology on the overall program schedule; and

(5) cost and benefit analysis of delaying procurement of Crusader to avoid affordability issues associated with the current schedule and allow for maturation of weight and propellant technologies.

The provision would limit the expenditure of funds for Crusader development to $223.0 million until 30 days after the date on which the Secretary of the Army submits the results of this report to the Congress.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment.

Airborne Laser Program (sec. 217)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 214) that would: (1) direct the Secretary of Defense to conduct an assessment of the technical obstacles and operational shortcomings expected for the Airborne Laser (ABL) program; (2) direct the Secretary to submit a report to Congress by March 15, 1999 that outlines his findings and recommendations regarding the ABL program; (3) recommend a reduction of $97.0 million for the ABL program; and (4) direct that no more than $150.0 million of the funds remaining available to the ABL program be obligated until 30 days after the Secretary submits the report.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would: (1) direct the Secretary of Defense to conduct an assessment of the technical and operational aspects of the ABL program; (2) direct the Secretary to submit a report to Congress by March 15, 1999 that outlines his findings and recommendations regarding the ABL program; (3) authorize $235.2 million for the ABL program, a reduction of $57.0 million to the budget request; and (4) direct that no more than $185.0 million of the funds authorized for the ABL program be obligated until 30 days after the Secretary submits the report.

The conferees understand and support the Department of Defense's desire to achieve operational boost phase intercept capability as soon as technically possible. In pursuit of this goal, the conferees support continuation of the Airborne Laser program. The conferees note that, although the ABL program has undergone a significant degree of technical review, questions having to do with the technical risk in the program continue to be raised in the Department of Defense and by independent organizations. Although the conferees have not come to any final conclusions regarding these questions, they are concerned that the current ABL development program may not include sufficient near-term risk reduction in the area of beam compensation and may be structured to proceed too rapidly with finalization of an objective design. In particular, the conferees are concerned that the Air Force plans to enter engineering and manufacturing development (EMD) without adequate time to operate, test, and evaluate the program definition and risk reduction (PDRR) configuration. For example, the Air Force plans to order its first EMD aircraft a year before the PDRR aircraft undergoes a full system demonstration against a missile target.

To meet these concerns, the conferees believe that the Secretary of Defense must carefully evaluate the technical risk in the ABL program and determine: (1) whether additional testing and risk reduction is necessary prior to integration of the ABL subsystems into a commercial 747-400F aircraft; and (2) whether the fully integrated PDRR aircraft should be operated for a period of time and thoroughly tested prior to finalizing an objective design. In addition, the Secretary must also evaluate the ABL operational concepts and their relationship to technical risk and uncertainties in the program.

The conferees direct the Secretary of Defense to establish an independent review team to assist him in addressing the issues specified above, and transmit to Congress the review team's findings with the Secretary's report. While this review is underway, and while the Air Force undertakes additional ground testing and data collection, the conferees believe that the Air Force should temporarily slow the pace of activities related to integration of the PDRR aircraft. Therefore, the conferees agree to authorize a reduction of $57.0 million to the budget request for ABL. If the Secretary concludes that additional ground testing or other risk reduction activities beyond those already planned are required during fiscal year 1999, the conferees agree to authorize the Secretary to utilize up to $40.0 million from funds authorized for ABL to conduct those activities.

Enhanced Global Positioning System program (sec. 218)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 215) that would: (1) require the Secretary of Defense to develop an enhanced Global Positioning System (GPS) program as an urgent national security priority; (2) authorize $44.0 million for fiscal year 1999 to begin such development; (3) urge the Secretary of Defense to fund adequately this initiative in the Future Years Defense Program; (4) urge the Secretary of Transportation to provide sufficient funding to support additional civil frequencies and other enhancements for civil users; (5) extend by five years the existing requirement to outfit all major Defense Department platforms with GPS receivers by the year 2000; and (6) require the Secretary to submit a plan for implementing this provision by April 15, 1999.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with a technical amendment.

The conferees strongly support the modernization of the Global Positioning System to meet new military requirements and evolving threats. Such modernization should include those enhancements necessary to sustain the Global Positioning System's unique advantage to friendly forces for the long term. Similarly, the modernization plan should include a suitable array of methods and techniques to deny these same advantages to an adversary when necessary. Although U.S. forces presently may be more dependent than other nation's forces on the Global Positioning System's highly accurate position, velocity, and timing information, these same dependencies will naturally arise among the forces of potential enemies as satellite navigation technologies are further disseminated and integrated into force doctrine, training, and techniques, and as GPS-embedded applications become widely available. While near term needs may suggest that assured access to GPS signals by the United States and its allies will have a higher pay-off than techniques that would deny access to the GPS signal by adversaries, a longer term view suggests that denial of enemy exploitation may offer significant, if not overwhelming, advantage. Furthermore, the conferees recognize that modernization of GPS satellites will take a long time given current purchasing approaches and the long life of individual satellites comprising the operational satellite constellation. A design change that must be implemented in a full constellation to be effective will take 12 or more years to field and will be in place for another 12-13 years. This 25-year time period necessitates balanced investment in both protection and prevention enhancements. Although the conferees appreciate the funding constraints facing the Department of Defense, they do not believe that such constraints justify freezing the GPS design for the next quarter century in a way that does not adequately respond to obvious emerging threats. Consequently, the conferees direct the Secretary of Defense to undertake a GPS modernization program that improves access by friendly forces and denies access by hostile forces. The conferees direct the Secretary to include in the report required by this provision specific details of the actions to protect and deny the GPS signal.

The conferees note that the effort by the Department of Defense to modernize the GPS system has delayed the new GPS satellite design. Given this situation, it is premature for the Department to enter into a multi-year procurement or other significant block satellite buy. At the same time, however, the Department requires additional funds for research and development to define fully the scope of the GPS modernization effort and to begin development of new satellite sub-systems. Therefore, the conferees agree to authorize no funds in Air Force missile procurement for GPS advance procurement, and to authorize an increase of $44.0 million in PE 64480F for GPS modernization.

*Subtitle C—Ballistic Missile Defense
Sense of Congress on national missile defense coverage (sec. 231)*

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 231) that would express the sense of Congress that any deployed national missile defense system should defend all fifty states and that U.S. territories should be protected from ballistic missile attack.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with a clarifying amendment.

Limitation on funding for the Medium Extended Air Defense System (sec. 232)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 232) that would prohibit the Secretary of Defense from obligating or expending funds authorized and appropriated for the Medium Extended Air Defense System (MEADS) until the Secretary certifies to Congress that funding has been designated for MEADS in the Future Years Defense Program (FYDP). The provision would require that if such certification is not received by January 1, 1999, the funds authorized for MEADS would thereafter be authorized only for the purpose of research and development to adapt the Patriot Advanced Capability 3-Configuration 3 (PAC-3) to meet the Army requirement for a mobile theater missile defense system.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would make funds authorized for MEADS available to support alternative programmatic and technical approaches to meeting the requirement for mobile theater missile defense if the Secretary does not certify to Congress that funding has been designated for MEADS in the FYDP.

Limitation on funding for cooperative ballistic missile defense programs (sec. 233)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 233) that would prohibit obligation or expenditure of $5.0 million authorized to be appropriated for the Russian-American Observation Satellites (RAMOS) program until the Secretary of Defense certifies to Congress that the Department of Defense has received detailed information concerning the nature, extent, and military implications of ballistic missile technology transfer from Russian sources to Iran.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes.

Sense of Congress with respect to ballistic missile defense cooperation with Russia (sec. 234)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 231) that would state that the United States should seek to foster a climate of cooperation with Russia on matters related to missile defense, especially in the area of early warning.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with a technical amendment.

The conferees believe that a cooperative approach to ballistic missile defense could lead to a mutually agreeable evolution of the ABM Treaty, i.e., either modification or replacement by a newer understanding or agreement, that would clear the way for the United States and Russia to deploy national missile defenses each believes necessary for its security. If implemented in a cooperative manner, the conferees do not believe that such steps would undermine the original intent of the ABM Treaty, which was to maintain strategic stability and permit significant nuclear arms reductions.

Ballistic missile defense program elements (sec. 235)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 235) that would realign program elements for the Ballistic Missile Defense Organization and require each program element to include funding for the management and support necessary for the activities within that program element.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes.

Restructuring of theater high altitude area defense system acquisition strategy (sec. 236)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 236) that would: (1) require the Secretary of Defense to select an alternative contractor as a potential source for the development and production of the Theater High Altitude Area Defense (THAAD) interceptor missile within a "leader-follower" acquisition strategy; (2) require the Secretary of Defense to establish a cost sharing arrangement with the THAAD prime contractor for flight test failures of that missile beginning with the ninth test flight; (3) require the Secretary of Defense to proceed as expeditiously as possible with the milestone approval process for the engineering and manufacturing development (EMD) phase of the THAAD system for the battle management and command, control, and communications (BM/C3) and ground based radar elements of the system; (4) prohibit the obligation of funds for the THAAD user operational evaluation system (UOES) until there have been two successful tests of the THAAD interceptor missile; and (5) prohibit the Secretary of Defense from approving the commencement of EMD for the THAAD interceptor missile until there have been three successful tests of that missile.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would: (1) require the Secretary of Defense to take appropriate steps to implement technical and price competition for the development and production of the THAAD interceptor missile; (2) authorize $29.6 million to establish this technical and price competition; (3) require the Secretary of Defense to establish a cost sharing arrangement with the THAAD prime contractor for flight test failures of that missile beginning with the ninth flight test; (4) allow the Secretary of Defense to proceed with the milestone approval process for the EMD phase of the THAAD system for the BM/C3 and ground based radar elements of the system; (5) require the Secretary of Defense to prepare a plan that would allow for contingency deployment of THAAD missile interceptors before U.S. military forces are equipped with the objective configuration of those missiles; and (6) prohibit the Secretary of Defense from approving the commencement of EMD for the THAAD interceptor missile until there have been three successful tests of that missile.

The conferees are aware that the Department of Defense is considering establishment of a second source for the THAAD interceptor missile seeker, the portion of the missile deemed to contain the highest technical risk. Based on information received to date, the conferees tentatively support this proposal, but direct the Secretary of Defense to submit a detailed report on this concept to the congressional defense committees by February 15, 1999, including the cost and programmatic implications of this approach.

Subtitle D—Other Matters

Extension of authority to carry out certain prototype projects (sec. 241)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 218) that would extend the authority to carry out certain prototyping projects as specified under section 845 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1994 (Public Law 103-160), through September 30, 2001.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes.

The conferees continue to believe that the section 845 authority should only be used in the exceptional cases where it can be clearly demonstrated that a normal contract or grant will not allow sufficient access to affordable technologies. The conferees are especially concerned that such authority not be used to circumvent the appropriate management controls in the standard acquisition and budgeting process. Any further consideration of extending this authority beyond September 30, 2001 will be based upon a careful review and a conclusion by the congressional defense committees that this authority has been used in a limited and responsible manner. The conferees direct the Secretary of Defense to provide a report to the congressional defense committees, no later than March 1, 1999, on the use of this authority.

North Atlantic Treaty Organization alliance ground surveillance concept definition (sec. 242)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 219) that would make available funds from Army and Air Force research and development of a North Atlantic Treaty Organization Alliance Ground Surveillance (NATO AGS) capability based on the Joint Surveillance/Target Attack Radar System (JSTARS).

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes.

NATO common funded civil budget (sec. 243)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 220) that would authorize the contribution of the United States to the common funded Civil Budget of NATO.

The House amendment contained no similar provision, but would authorize funds included in the budget request for the U.S. contribution to the common funded Civil Budget of NATO.

The House recedes.

Executive agent for cooperative research program of the Department of Defense and the Department of Veterans Affairs (sec. 244)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 222) that would authorize $10.0 million for the Department of Defense/Department of Veterans Affairs (DOD/VA) Cooperative Research Program and clarify the role of the Department of Defense as executive agent of the program.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would delete the reference to funding. The conferees agree to authorize $10.0 million in PE 63738D for the DOD/VA cooperative research program.

Review of pharmacological interventions for reversing brain injury (sec. 245)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 232) that would require the Secretary of Defense to review and report to the Congress on research on pharmacological interventions for reversing brain injury resulting from injuries incurred in combat or exposures to chemical weapons.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes.

The conferees direct that the Secretary of Defense include in the report a discussion of the ability to detect and treat status epilepticus at the scene of the injury, which could have an impact on reducing mortality and morbidity resulting from both head trauma and chemical weapon exposure.

Pilot program for revitalizing the laboratories and test and evaluation centers of the Department of Defense (sec. 246)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 1067) that would provide authority for one laboratory and one test and evaluation center to carry out a pilot program to demonstrate improved cooperative agreements with universities and other private entities.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with a technical amendment.

Chemical warfare defense (sec. 247)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 723) that would authorize the Secretary of the Air Force to conduct research on health-related environmental and ecological effects of exposure to chemical, biological and radiological hazards and to develop more accurate risk assessment tools. In addition, the provision would authorize an increase of $1.8 million in the Defense Health Program to conduct this risk assessment program.

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 1045) that would direct the Secretary of Defense to review, and modify as appropriate, Department of Defense chemical warfare defense policy and doctrine regarding the protection of U.S. forces against exposure to low levels of chemical warfare agents. In addition, the provision would require the Secretary of Defense to report to the congressional defense committees on any modification to chemical warfare policy and doctrine as a result of the review, and establish a plan for a five-year research program to assist the Secretary in developing policy and doctrine on exposure to low-level chemical agents.

The conferees agree to a provision that would direct the Secretary of Defense to review and modify Department of Defense chemical warfare policy and doctrine to ensure that U.S. forces are adequately protected against any exposure to chemical warfare agents, to include exposure to low-levels of chemical agents and other potentially toxic substances in the environment that would endanger the health of exposed personnel. Additional areas to be included in the review are the exposure of U.S. forces to low-grade nuclear and electromagnetic radiation, preventive medications, and diesel, jet, and other hydro-carbon based fuels.

The provision would also require the Secretary of Defense to develop and carry out a plan to establish a research program that would assist the Secretary in developing policy and doctrine, as well as new risk assessment methods and instruments, with respect to the effects of exposure to chemical warfare agents and other toxic substances, in order to ensure that U.S. forces are adequately protected against exposure to chemical warfare agents and toxic substances. The provision also requires that a five-year budget plan be developed.

The Secretary of Defense is required to report to the congressional defense committees not later than May 1, 1999, on the review of DOD policies and doctrine on exposure to chemical warfare agents and toxic substances, and any recommendations to modify current policy and doctrine as a result of the review, any recommended legislative provisions, and the plan to establish the research program.

Landmine alternatives (sec. 248)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 233) that would make $17.2 million available from funds authorized in section 201 of this Act for alternatives to anti-personnel landmines and anti-personnel submunitions used in mixed anti-tank mine systems; would require the Secretary of Defense to contract with scientific organizations to identify existing and new tactics, technologies and concepts that would provide comparable combat capabilities to current anti-personnel landmines and anti-personnel landmines used in mixed systems, and report to Congress on their recommendations; would require the Secretary of Defense to submit a report to the congressional defense committees by April 1, 1999 and April 1, 2000 on the progress achieved in identifying and deploying tactics, technologies and concepts as alternatives to anti-personnel landmines; and would define anti-personnel landmines and mixed munition systems consistent with the definitions contained in the Convention on the Prohibition on the Use, Stockpiling, Production and Transfer of Anti-Personnel Mines and their Destruction (otherwise known as the Ottawa Treaty) for anti-personnel landmine and mixed mine systems.

The House bill contained no similar provision, but would authorize the budget request for Army and defense-wide activities related to research and development of alternatives to anti-personnel landmines.

The conferees agree to a provision that would direct that not more than $19.2 million be made available from amounts authorized in section 201 of this Act for research and development of alternatives to anti-personnel landmines and anti-personnel landmines used in mixed anti-tank mine systems that would be equivalent to the combat capabilities of the current systems. The conferees also direct the Secretary of Defense to submit, with the fiscal year 2000 budget, an explanation of any funds requested to support a research and development program for existing and new technologies and concepts that could provide an equivalent combat capability to anti-personnel submunitions used in mixed mine systems or to mixed mine systems.

Additionally, the conferees direct the Secretary of Defense to submit a report to the congressional defense committees describing progress made in identifying existing and new technologies and concepts as alternatives to anti-personnel submunitions used in mixed mine systems or to mixed mine systems. The conferees direct the Secretary to include in the report the recommendations of two scientific organizations regarding the identification, adaptation, modification, research and development of existing and new technologies and concepts.

LEGISLATIVE PROVISIONS NOT ADOPTED

Limitation on funding for counterproliferation support

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 234) that would prohibit the obligation or expenditure of funds requested in the fiscal year 1999 budget for the counterproliferation support program in PE 63160BR until receipt of an annual report required by Section 234 of the National Defense Authorization Act of 1998 (Public Law 105-340) on the threat posed to the United States and its allies by weapons of mass destruction and cruise and ballistic missiles.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The House recedes.

Unmanned aerial vehicle programs

The budget request included $178.7 million for High Altitude Endurance, Unmanned Aerial Vehicles (HAE UAVs) in the Defense-Wide research and development account (PE 35205D8Z). This included $90.1 million for the Global Hawk program, $40.5 million for the DarkStar program, and $48.1 million for common ground segment development. Within these totals, the budget request included $68.6 million to support contractor participation in test and evaluation of military utility in joint exercises for the Global Hawk and DarkStar programs ($39.2 million and $29.4 million, respectively). The budget request also included $4.3 million for Air Force endurance UAVs in PE 35205F.

The House bill would authorize an increase of $32.5 million in the procurement title to buy three additional Global Hawk UAVs. The House bill would also transfer HAE UAV development funding from Defense-Wide research and development to PE 35205F.

The Senate amendment would authorize a decrease of $8.5 million. The Senate amendment also contained a provision (sec. 213) that would terminate the DarkStar unmanned aerial vehicle program, and transfer $32.5 million to the Global Hawk unmanned aerial vehicle program once phase II testing of the Global Hawk unmanned aerial vehicle is complete.

The conferees note the recent successful test flights of the DarkStar UAV. The Senate recedes on the provision to terminate the DarkStar program.

The conferees are disappointed that these two UAV programs have not been able to adhere to the original schedule. The conferees believe that the delays in the Global Hawk and DarkStar development and test programs will reduce the level of participation in joint exercises in fiscal year 1999 below that level assumed in the budget request. The conferees are also aware that these delays have affected the common ground segment development effort as well.

In view of the above, the conferees believe that the budget request for joint exercise participation and common ground segment development exceeds what can realistically be accomplished in fiscal year 1999. Thus, the conferees agree to authorize a decrease of $25.0 million for these two activities in a manner which will allow equitable testing of both Global Hawk and DarkStar, the specific application of which shall be at the discretion of the Secretary of the Air Force.

The conferees have also learned that, because of business decisions about production facilities unrelated to the Global Hawk program, the contractor is experiencing substantial dislocation in its business plan and the construction facility has been forced to operate in a manner that could adversely impact any future Global Hawk production. Accordingly, the conferees agree to authorize an increase of $25.0 million to mitigate the effects of the business plan dislocation on the Global Hawk construction facility.

In summary, the conferees authorize $183.0 million for endurance UAVs in PE 35205F, including a $25.0 million increase to mitigate adverse impacts to the Global Hawk construction facility, and a $25.0 million decrease to be applied against the joint exercise and/or common ground segment development activities.

In accordance with section 216 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1998 (Public Law 105-85), the conferees reiterate that no additional HAE UAV aircraft are to be procured until the completion of the respective phase II military user assessments (NMA).

Because the conferees believe that the transition to procurement could involve significant air vehicle design changes, the conferees direct the Department of Defense to conduct any follow-on HAE UAV procurement program in adherence with its established acquisition procedures. Further, the conferees direct that no follow-on HAE UAV procurement may commence until the Secretary of the Air Force provides the congressional defense and intelligence committees with the following:

- (1) a formal statement of requirements for the HAE UAVS;
- (2) a certification that either or both of these UAVs satisfy the Air Force's military utility and suitability requirements; and
- (3) completes a formal engineering and manufacturing development program for the selected UAV alternative(s).

Persian Gulf illnesses

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 221) that would authorize an increase of $10.0 million in PE 61105D for research in Persian Gulf illnesses.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes.

The conferees urge the Secretary of Defense to use discretionary funds to increase research for Persian Gulf illnesses in fiscal year 1999.

Low cost launch development program

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 223) that would increase funds for low cost launch technology development.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes. Funding for low cost launch technology development is addressed elsewhere in this report.

TITLE III—OPERATION AND MAINTENANCE

Overview

The budget request for fiscal year 1999 contained an authorization of $94,219.1 million for Operation and Maintenance in the Department of Defense and $900.0 for Working Capital Fund Accounts in fiscal year 1999. The House bill would authorize $92,476.5 million for Operation and Maintenance and $1,746.1 for Working Capital Fund Accounts. The Senate amendment would authorize $93,849.8 million for Operation and Maintenance and $764.1 for Working Capital Fund Accounts. The conferees recommended an authorization of $92,891.5 million for Operation and Maintenance and $1,746.1 for Working Capital Fund Accounts for fiscal year 1999. Unless noted explicitly in the statement of managers, all changes are made without prejudice.

Arms control implementation

The budget request included $275.3 million in the military services and defense accounts to meet specific arms control implementation and compliance obligations. The budget request is formulated on anticipated resource requirements, to include planning assumptions of anticipated dates of entry into force of arms control agreements, numbers of inspections or observations to be performed in the year, data reporting and information exchange requirements.

The House bill would decrease the budget request for the On-Site Inspection Agency for the following: $1.5 million for START II implementation activities; $1.0 million for implementation of the Open Skies Treaty; and $1.0 million for activities related to entry into force of the Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty (CTBT). The House bill would also authorize a decrease of $25.0 million for research and development activities related to implementation of the CTBT. Lastly, the House bill would authorize no funds for reimbursement to the Organization for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons (OPCW) for the costs of inspectors salaries and transportation from the Hague for inspections conducted pursuant to the Chemical Weapons Convention.

The Senate amendment would authorize no funds to reimburse the Organization for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons for inspectors salaries and transportation from The Hague to the U.S. Point of Entry, and for reimbursement of the cost of arms control inspections in foreign countries when those costs are the obligation of the inspected country.

The conferees agree to authorize a decrease of $28.0 million for the following arms control implementation activities: $1.5 million for START II; $1.0 million for Open Skies activities; $1.0 million for CTBT; $9.0 million for reimbursement of other than "usual" in-country inspection costs; and, $0.5 million for anticipated reimbursement of payments for arms control inspection costs borne by the inspected party to a treaty or agreement. The conferees also agree to a decrease of $15.0 million for research and development activities in support of CTBT and U.S. nuclear test detection requirements.

The conferees agree that of the funds authorized for research and development activities in support of CTBT requirements, $20.0 million shall be available for efforts to develop critical seismic technology to detect, verify, and evaluate both natural and weapons-related phenomena important to nuclear test detection.

Navy Environmental Leadership Program

The budget request included $2.4 million for the Navy Environmental Leadership Program (NELP).

The House bill would authorize an increase of $4.0 million for NELP.

The Senate amendment would authorize no funds for NELP.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $2.0 million for NELP.

Defense Threat Reduction Agency (DTRA)

The budget request included $304.7 million for the Defense Threat Reduction Agency (DTRA).

In November 1997, as part of its Defense Reform Initiative (DRI), the Department of Defense recommended the establishment on October 1, 1998 of the Defense Threat Reduction Agency (DTRA), a single agency that would carry out programs to counter proliferation and reduce threats posed by weapons of mass destruction and to provide nuclear weapons stockpile and related support. The agency would consolidate several functions from the Office of the Secretary of Defense (OSD) and the Washington Headquarters Services involved in the oversight and management of associated programs, including the On-Site Inspection Agency (OSIA), the Defense Special Weapons Agency (DSWA), the chemical-biological defense program and the counterproliferation support program. The budget request also recommended elimination of the position of the Assistant to the Secretary of Defense for Nuclear, Chemical and Biological Matters (ATSD(NCB)).

The House bill would authorize a decrease of $500,000 for DTRA.

The Senate amendment would authorize a decrease of $20.0 million for DTRA and would recommend that in addition to transferring the activities of the OSIA and DSWA to the DTRA, the chemical-biological defense program, counterproliferation support program, the unitary and nonstockpile chemical and munitions destruction programs, and programs related to force protection, such as the physical security program (PE 63228D8Z), and the counter-terror technical support program (PE 63122D8Z), also be transferred to DTRA.

The conferees agree to authorize a decrease of $12.0 million for DTRA. The conferees agree that the counterproliferation support program and activities related to force protection, such as the physical security program (PE 63228D8Z) and subelements of the counter-terror technical support program (PE 63122D8Z) related to weapons of mass destruction and force and infrastructure protection, be transferred to DTRA. As noted elsewhere in this report, oversight and direction of the counter-terror technical support program remains with the Assistant Secretary of Defense (Special Operations/Low Intensity Conflict).

The conferees agree that policy and programmatic oversight for the chem-bio defense program and the chemical demilitarization program should remain within the Office of the Secretary of Defense, and that the Department of the Army should remain the executive agent for these programs, pursuant to Section 1701 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1994 (Public Law 103-160) and Section 1412 of the Department of Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1986 (Public Law 99-145). However, the conferees do recognize that there may be activities within both of these programs that represent unique operational responsibilities of DTRA, and encourage DTRA to consult closely with both the Office of the Secretary of Defense and the Department of the Army.

The conferees agree to a separate provision (sec. 1521) dealing with the Defense Technical Security Administration (DTSA). A discussion of the conferees recommendation for the DTSA can be found elsewhere in this report.

The conferees do not agree to transfer the statutory responsibility for nuclear weapons, including support of the Nuclear Weapons Council, to DTRA. Elsewhere in this report the conferees discuss in greater detail the decision not to abolish the Assistant to the Secretary of Defense for Nuclear, Chemical, and Biological Matters.

A part of the proposal to create DTRA is the physical consolidation of the various functions located in the Dulles area of Virginia. The On-Site Inspection Agency (OSIA), one of the DTRA components, is currently located in the Dulles area. The conferees have been informed by the Department of Defense (DOD) that sufficient space does not currently exist at OSIA, or in the Dulles area, to co-locate all of the DTRA elements in one building or in one complex. As a result, DOD must either build or lease substantial additional space to accommodate the new organization. The conferees believe that one of the primary goals of any consolidation should be to have all the elements of the DTRA either in one building or complex or at least within walking distance of each other. Otherwise, the conferees are concerned the consolidation unnecessarily could result in substantial disruption of personnel and substantial increases in time commuting to meetings and other events during the day.

Before any further commitments for office space are made or additional efforts taken to consolidate the component parts of DTRA in the Dulles area, the conferees direct the Secretary of Defense to submit a report no later than May 14, 1999 on the cost and overall effect of this move on the work of the agency. This report should address: the availability of public transportation; plans for transporting employees during the day; relocations costs; commuting impacts; potential savings; an assessment of the advantages and disadvantages of co-locating and co-locating to the Dulles area; issues associated with force protection; an assessment of the alternatives to co-locating including not moving; and the impact on retention and morale of personnel that would move.

Joint Military Intelligence Program

The budget request included $3.8 billion in the Operation and Maintenance, Defense-Wide account for classified and intelligence programs, including funds in the Joint Military Intelligence Program for the National Imagery and Mapping Agency (NIMA), the Joint Reserve Intelligence Program (JRIP), and the Command, Control, Communications, Computers, Intelligence, Surveillance, and Reconnaissance Integrated Architecture Plan (CIAP).

The House bill would authorize a net decrease of $9.0 million for NIMA, an increase of $3.0 million for JRIP, and an increase of $3.0 million for CIAP. The House report (H. Rept. 105-508) accompanying the Intelligence Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1999 (H.R. 3694) directed that no funds authorized or appropriated for NIMA be made available for the joint mapping tool kit (JMTK) module of the global command and control system (GCCS) until the Assistant Secretary of Defense for Command, Control, Communications, and Intelligence (ASD(C3I)) either certifies that the Defense Information Systems Agency (DISA) will procure the module commercially, or reports to the congressional defense and intelligence committees why such commercial procurement would be disadvantageous.

The Senate amendment would authorize the budget request for NIMA, JRIP, and CIAP.

The conferees agree to authorize a decrease of $7.0 million for NIMA sustaining capabilities and an increase of $7.0 million for product outsourcing. The conferees direct that the sustaining capabilities reduction be applied equitably across all NIMA facilities and functions, and that no more than half of the decrease be applied to personnel. The conferees also agree to authorize an increase of $3.0 million for JRIP and an increase of $3.0 million for CIAP.

With regard to the House position on JMTK module procurement, the conferees agree that NIMA and DISA should be acquiring commercially available products unless there is very strong justification to the contrary. Therefore, the conferees direct the ASD (C3I) to provide the congressional defense and intelligence committees by January 29, 1999 a report on his plan for: (1) establishing a process for certifying commercial products that meet GCCS interface protocols and standards; (2) providing all documentation needed for vendors to determine whether their applications software products can achieve such certification; and (3) ensuring that NIMA and DISA are making all reasonable efforts to evaluate commercially available GCCS modules (such as JMKMT) that can achieve such certification before spending Department of Defense funds to develop such modules.

Domestic emergency response program

The budget request included $246.2 million for key Department of Defense programs to counter paramilitary and terrorist threats involving weapons of mass destruction, including $99.1 million for the domestic emergency response preparedness program as follows: $49.9 million for the Department of Defense to prepare and enhance Federal, state and local response capabilities to terrorist incidents involving weapons of mass destruction (WMD), and $49.2 million for the Department of the Army for the Reserve Components' participation in domestic emergency preparedness and response to the terrorist use of weapons of mass destruction.

The House bill would authorize a decrease of $28.5 million for the Reserve Components' participation in WMD domestic preparedness, including $14.6 million for military personnel, $7.0 million for operation and maintenance, and $6.9 million for the procurement of contamination avoidance equipment.

The Senate amendment would authorize the budget request for domestic emergency preparedness for the Department of Defense and the Department of the Army. In addition, the Senate would recommend the transfer of the mission, function and resources for the Defense domestic emergency preparedness program to the Defense Threat Reduction Agency (DTRA).

The conferees agree to authorize the budget request for countering paramilitary and terrorist WMD threats and for the DOD and the Department of the Army for the WMD domestic emergency response program. Authorization of Reserve Components' participation in WMD domestic emergency preparedness and response is discussed in Title V of this report. Additionally, specific adjustments to program elements for countering paramilitary and terrorist WMD threats are discussed elsewhere in the report on the individual projects which are included in the program.

The conferees are aware that a National Coordinator has been appointed by the President, pursuant to the direction contained in the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1997 (Public Law 104-201), whose responsibilities shall include operational oversight of the Federal government's security and counterterrorism efforts, to include domestic emergency preparedness and response to the terrorist use of WMD. The conferees have included a provision in Title XIV of this report that would require the President to increase the effectiveness of the domestic emergency preparedness program and to submit a report to Congress by January 31, 1999 outlining the actions taken to increase the effectiveness of the program. In addition, the conferees direct that the report submitted by the President on January 31, 1999 include information on the efforts to meet the challenge of limiting the damage and manage the consequences of the terrorist use of WMD, as outlined in Presidential Decision Directive (PDD) 62. The conferees understand that the intent of PDD 62 is to create a new and more systematic approach to fighting the threat of the terrorist use of WMD. The report should outline the role and obligations of the National Coordinator in overseeing the relevant policies and programs in the U.S. Government, the responsibility of the National Coordinator to the Congress, implementation of recommendations on budgets for counter-terrorism programs and the coordination and development of guidelines necessary for crisis management. The conferees request that the President's report identify requirements for any additional fiscal year 1999 funds that may be required to implement actions taken to increase the effectiveness of the domestic emergency response program.

The conferees endorse the direction contained in the Senate report (S. Rept. 105-189) requiring the Secretary of Defense to report to the congressional defense committees on the use of the DOD stockpile of vaccines, medical supplies and protective gear in a domestic WMD emergency, and the availability of vaccines, antiserums and antidotes in other Federal entities that could also be used. In addition, the President's report to Congress should discuss the advisability of establishing regional stockpiles of both emergency protective gear and vaccines that could be available for emergency use by Federal, state and local responders in the event of a terrorist event using WMD.

ITEMS OF SPECIAL INTEREST

Fire support software engineering center

The conferees are concerned about the readiness and upgrades of Army command and control and fire direction systems presently maintained by the Fire Support Software Engineering Center (FSSEC) at Fort Sill, Oklahoma. Delays on systems such as the Battery Computer System, the Initial Fire Support Automated System, and the Multiple Launch Rocket System must be avoided. Therefore, the conferees urge the Army to continue full operational funding for the FSSEC.

Lead-based paint soil contamination at Department of Defense facilities

A December 20, 1996, Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) memorandum indicates that the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation and Liability Act (CERCLA) may be applied to compel the cleanup of lead-contaminated soils on federal facilities. The conferees understand that, to date, EPA has only applied this interpretation of CERCLA at DOD sites.

The conferees note that section 120(a)(1) and (2) of the CERCLA provides that federal facilities are to comply with all guidelines, rules, regulations, and criteria "... in the same manner, and to the extent as such guidelines, rules, regulations, and criteria are applicable to other facilities." Although the conferees recognize that there may be quantifiable human health risks that support response actions at certain sites with lead-based paint contamination, there is concern about consistency.

The conferees are concerned about the possibility of disparate enforcement actions related to lead-based paint. The conferees direct that the Secretary of Defense include in the fiscal year 1998 annual report on environmental restoration (10 U.S.C. 2706(a)) a description of the sites, human health risks, costs, and delays, if any, related to the EPA enforcement of response action requirements for lead-based paint at Department of Defense sites.

State certification of underground storage tanks

The conferees note that underground storage tanks owned and operated by the Department of Defense (DOD) are subject to Federal, state, and local statutory and regulatory guidance. The Resource Conservation and Recovery Act (RCRA) (42 U.S.C. 6991-6991h) sets minimum standards for spill, overfill, and corrosion protection mechanisms to be included in standards for upgrading, replacing, and closing new and existing underground storage tanks. Existing underground storage tanks, those installed prior to December 22, 1988, must be upgraded to have spill, overfill, and corrosion protection, otherwise such tanks may be subject to removal, closure in place, or replacement. Generally, state environmental regulatory agencies have adopted the Federal minimum RCRA compliance standards for underground storage tanks.

A recent audit conducted by the DOD Office of Inspector General (IG) determined that there were significant variances between state- and DOD-generated underground storage tank inventories. The DOD IG determined that such divergent results occurred because the DOD managers and state environmental regulators prepared separate underground storage tank inventories that were not reconciled. Consistent with that determination, the DOD IG concluded that operations may be disrupted at some DOD installations after December 22, 1998, if state regulatory agencies do not obtain accurate data with which to assess DOD underground storage tank compliance under RCRA, Subtitle I.

The conferees direct the Secretary of Defense to submit a report, no later than 60 days after the enactment of this Act, to the congressional defense committees on the number of underground storage tanks projected to be noncompliant after December 22, 1998. The report shall identify a plan that would minimize operational disruptions associated with noncompliant tanks.

LEGISLATIVE PROVISIONS ADOPTED

Subtitle A—Authorization of Appropriations Authorization of appropriations (secs. 301-302)

The House bill contained provisions (secs. 301-302) that would authorize the recommended fiscal year 1999 funding levels for all operations and maintenance and working capital fund accounts.

The Senate amendment contained similar provisions.

The conference agreement includes these provisions.

Armed Forces Retirement Home (sec. 303)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 303) that would authorize $70.7 million from the Armed Forces Retirement Trust Fund for the operation of the Armed Forces Retirement Home, including the U.S. Soldiers' and Airmen's Home and the Naval Home.

The Senate amendment contained an identical provision (sec. 303).

The conference agreement includes this provision.

Transfer from the National Defense Stockpile Transaction Fund (sec. 304)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 304) that would authorize the Secretary of Defense, to the extent provided in an appropriation act, to transfer $150.0 million from the National Defense Stockpile Transaction Fund to the operations and maintenance accounts.

The Senate amendment contained an identical provision.

The conference agreement includes this provision.

Subtitle B—Program Requirements, Restrictions, and Limitations

Refurbishment of M1-A1 Tanks (sec. 311)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 305) that would authorize $31.0 million for the refurbishment of up to 70 M1-A1 tanks under the AIM-XXI program.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes.

Operation of prepositioned fleet, National Training Center, Fort Irwin, California (sec. 312)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 306) that would authorize $60.2 million for the operation of the prepositioned fleet of equipment during training operations at the National Training Center, Fort Irwin, California.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes.

Berthing space at Norfolk Naval Shipyard, Virginia (sec. 313)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 307) that would authorize the Navy to obligate $6.0 million for the relocation of the U.S.S. Wisconsin from Norfolk Naval Shipyard to another suitable location to increase available berthing space at the shipyard.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes.

The conferees are aware of the facility capacity constraints at Norfolk Naval Shipyard where the Navy currently maintains some of its inactive reserve vessels. These constraints require the relocation of the U.S.S. Wisconsin to a different location in order to make space available for active vessels in need of repair and maintenance. Because of the requirement for the Navy to berth this deep draft vessel within the Norfolk vicinity so that it can be returned to the shipyard for reactivation, if necessary, the Navy is exploring alternative berthing sites including some within the Elizabeth River. The committee is aware that the redeployment of this vessel to a suitable location in the Norfolk area may require some additional dredging. Therefore, the conferees recommend an increase of $6.0 million for the dredging and other costs associated with the redeployment of the U.S.S. Wisconsin within the Norfolk region.

NATO common-funded military budget (sec. 314)

The budget request for Army operations and maintenance included $227.4 million for support of other nations, which includes support of North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) operations and NATO expansion.

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 314) that would authorize the budget request for Army operations and maintenance for support of other nations.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes.

Subtitle C—Environmental Provisions

Settlement of claims of foreign governments for environmental cleanup of overseas sites formerly used by the Department of Defense (sec. 321)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 326) that would require the President to provide notification to Congress of any negotiations related to the ex-gratia settlement of environmental cleanup claims by other countries.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes.

Authority to pay negotiated settlement for environmental cleanup of formerly used defense sites in Canada (sec. 322)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 321) that would authorize the Secretary of Defense to pay the Government of Canada up to $100.0 million in annual payments over a ten year period.

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 325) that would allow for the payment of $100.0 million reimbursement to Canada, subject to annual authorizations and appropriations process. The Department would be required to submit to Congress evidence of proportionate Canadian investment in environmental cleanup in support of each annual authorization and appropriation request. The provision would make certain findings regarding the basis for the reimbursement, state that the authorization shall not be construed as precedent setting, and that the $100.0 million would be paid in full satisfaction of any and all environmental contamination claims by Canada.

The House recedes with an amendment that would authorize the $10.0 million appropriated in fiscal year 1998 appropriation for the Canadian reimbursement.

Removal of underground storage tanks (sec. 323)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 322) that would enable the Department of Defense (DOD) to use not more than $150,000 of the funds available for environmental restoration of formerly used defense sites to conduct removal of underground storage tanks at the Authorities Allied Industrial Park in Macon, Georgia.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

Senate recedes with an amendment that would give the Secretary of Defense discretion to fund any tank removal at formerly used defense sites. The conferees note that such exercise of discretion would be dependent upon a determination of DOD liability, consistent with current law. The conferees direct the Secretary of Defense to determine whether it would be appropriate to use authorized funds for removal of former DOD underground storage tanks, and then report to the congressional defense committees within 90 days of the enactment of this Act.

Report regarding polychlorinated biphenyls under Department of Defense control overseas (sec. 324)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 321) that would amend Chapter 157 of title 10, United States Code, by adding a new section to permit Department of Defense agencies to transport to the United States for disposal, treatment, or storage of foreign manufactured polychlorinated biphenyls (PCBs) generated by the Department's overseas activities. The provision would ensure that the PCB-containing material transported to the United States is handled in an environmentally responsible manner.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would require the Secretary of Defense to submit a report to the Congress that addresses international and domestic issues related to the transportation and disposition of foreign manufactured PCBs.

Modification of deadline for submittal to Congress of annual reports on environmental activities (sec. 325)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 322) that would amend section 2706 of title 10, United States Code, by substituting the 45 day annual reporting deadline for the current 30 day period.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes.

The conferees are aware that the Department of Defense has considered modification of the annual report on environmental restoration activities. While the Department has been directed to restructure the annual report on environmental compliance by including useful and comprehensible information, the conferees note that the environmental restoration report does not require such changes. The conferees expect that any modifications to the annual environmental reports will be fully coordinated with the Committee on Armed Services of the Senate and the Committee on National Security of the House of Representatives.

Submarine solid waste control (sec. 326)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 323) that would amend the Act to Prevent Pollution from Ships (APPS) (33 U.S.C. 1901, et seq.) by authorizing certain submersible vessels owned or operated by the Navy to discharge non-plastic garbage that has been compacted and weighted to ensure negative buoyancy within special use areas. The APPS implements the Annex V of the International Convention for the Prevention of Pollution on Ships (MARPOL). The Navy has determined that compliance with the special use area requirements of MARPOL Annex V would impair submarine operations and operational capability, or would not be technologically feasible. A comprehensive Navy environmental analysis revealed that the discharge of non-plastic garbage from Navy submarines would not have a significant effect on the marine environment, either within or beyond the limits of MARPOL Annex V special use areas.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with a technical amendment.

The conferees direct the Navy to provide adequate support and justification for future funding requests related to the compliance obligations associated with this new authority.

Arctic Military Environmental Cooperation program (sec. 327)

The budget request included $5.5 million in the defense operations and maintenance to address military environmental matters in the Arctic region under the Arctic Military Environmental Cooperation (AMEC) program, to include environmental restoration activities.

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 327) that would authorize the AMEC program, subject to the legislative prohibitions and limitations of the Cooperative Threat Reduction (CTR) program, to include section 1503 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1997 (Public Law 105-85). The provision would authorize $4.0 million for AMEC, a decrease of $1.5 million, and would preclude the obligation or expenditure of fiscal year 1999 funds until 45 days after the Secretary of Defense submits a plan that specifies the conformance of AMEC projects to existing prohibitions and limitations on the use of CTR funds.

The House bill contained no similar provision. The House report (H. Rept. 105-532) urged the Secretary of Defense to use up to $1.0 million to support the establishment of a Joint United States-Russia Nuclear Materials Commission that would include legislators, agency and ministry leaders, and environmental experts representing the international environmental community.

The House recedes with an amendment that would require congressional notification prior to the obligation of AMEC funds, similar to the requirement that applies to the use of CTR funds, and would also prohibit the use of AMEC funds for environmental restoration. The conferees agree that AMEC should address important military environmental issues related to U.S. national security interests in the Arctic. In order to ensure that AMEC has the requisite focus, the conferees expect the Secretary of Defense to develop a comprehensive program plan, consistent with the legislative prohibitions and limitations of the CTR program. That plan must be in place before funds are obligated for AMEC. The conferees direct the Secretary of Defense to include in the plan a specific program termination date.

The Secretary of Defense recently notified the Congress of an intent to reobligate prior year CTR funds for AMEC to "... focus on threats to the environment. ..." The conferees are concerned about the vagueness of this notice, the possible use of reobligated funds for environmental restoration, and the potential conflict with existing law. The Congress prohibited the use of CTR funds for the provision of assistance to promote environmental restoration (National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1997 (Public Law 105-85)). The new AMEC authority and existing CTR requirements would prohibit the use of CTR or AMEC funds for environmental restoration.

Sense of Congress regarding oil spill prevention training for personnel on board Navy vessels (sec. 328)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 328) that would express a sense of the Senate that the Secretary of the Navy should ensure that personnel on board Navy vessels in Puget Sound, Washington, receive oil spill prevention training.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with a technical amendment.

Subtitle D—Information Technology Issues

Additional information technology responsibilities of chief information officers (sec. 331)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 331) that would assign certain responsibilities to the chief information officers of the military services and the Department of Defense to ensure that information system budget requests are sufficient and that the systems themselves are interoperable.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would ensure that the Chief Information Officer of the Department of Defense (DOD) is responsible for examining all information systems within the Department to ensure that they are interoperable and are not duplicative of other DOD systems.

Defense-wide electronic mall system for supply purchases (sec. 332)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 332) that would require the Defense Logistics Agency to develop a single, defense wide electronic mall system that would be operational by June 1, 1999.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would require the Joint Electronic Commerce Program Office (JECPO) of the Department of Defense to develop a single, defense-wide electronic mall system, which would provide a single, defense-wide electronic point of entry and a single view, access, and ordering capability for all Department of Defense electronic catalogs. The provision would direct that the Defense Logistics Agency would be responsible for maintaining the system under the direction of the JECPO.

Year 2000 Compliance of Department of Defense Information Technology and National Security Systems

The conferees are concerned with the Department of Defense's (DOD) and the intelligence community's information technology and national security systems lack of progress in achieving year 2000 (Y2K) compliance. While debate continues over which steps are necessary to prepare the national security community for 21st century threats, the conferees agree that insufficient attention has been given to preparing this community for the Y2K transition.

Despite the fact that Y2K problems have been known for years, the Department has not met its projected time lines for renovating all necessary systems. In particular, many mission critical systems are still in the renovation phase, with little assurance from DOD that the required testing and integration efforts will be completed in sufficient time to avoid system-wide problems. The Department's reliance upon other public and private sector, including other nations, information technology systems adds to these concerns.

It is difficult to know how other nations will react if their own information technology systems are crippled by Y2K deficiencies and they are left without reliable and complete information. In an age where weapons of mass destruction with global reach are controlled through elaborate information networks, it is of critical importance that steps be taken to minimize any confusion or misunderstandings before they develop into crisis situations. The conferees commend the U.S. Strategic Command for its foresight and efforts in strengthening communications with other nations on Y2K, ensuring responsible management of Y2K problems that may arise.

For these reasons the conferees included three provisions (secs. 333, 334, and 335) to address the Department's and the intelligence communities Y2K issues. As discussed further in this title, these provisions cover such issues as Y2K contingency plans, relations with foreign nations, testing of systems, and adequate funding.

Priority funding to ensure year 2000 compliance of information technology and national security systems (sec. 333)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 334) that would transfer $1.0 billion from other information technology and national security programs to assist in the Department's Y2K compliance efforts. The provision would also require that 75 percent of funds for information technology and national security programs be used for these Y2K efforts.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would prohibit the expenditure of funds on the development or modernization of any information technology system unless that system is Y2K compliant, or is required to be performed by law. The amendment would further protect funds for mission critical systems from any unallocated reductions. Finally, the provision would require the Department to develop contingency plans for these systems in the event that they are not Y2K compliant, and provide the Congress with a report on the Department's efforts to ensure its systems are compliant.

Evaluation of year 2000 compliance as part of training exercises programs (sec. 334)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 335) that would require the Secretary of Defense to provide the congressional defense committees with a report that would outline the Department's plans for incorporating Y2K tests as part of its joint exercises.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would require that Y2K tests be incorporated in at least 25 exercises, and that each mission critical system expected to be used in any major theater war be tested in at least one of these exercises.

Continuity of essential operations at risk of failure because of information technology and national security systems that are not year 2000 compliant (sec. 335)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 1026) that would require the Secretary of Defense and the Director of Central Intelligence to provide a joint report outlining their planned course of action to ensure a continuity of essential operations in the year 2000.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would eliminate the findings.

The conferees believe the report should include the adoption of a comprehensive contingency plan for the entire national security community, as well as individual contingency plans for the separate elements of the community, including the creation of crisis action teams to respond to emergencies arising from the Y2K problem. Furthermore, the report should outline any cooperative agreements between the United States and foreign countries to ensure that the Y2K problems with the strategic systems of those countries do not pose a threat to the United States.

Subtitle E—Defense Infrastructure Support Improvement

Clarification of definition of depot-level maintenance and repair (sec. 341)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 335) that would clarify section 2460 (a) of title 16, United States Code, to include the location at which depot level maintenance is performed.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes.

Reporting and analysis requirements before change of commercial and industrial type functions to private sector performance (sec. 342)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 331) that would amend and clarify certain requirements and notifications that the Department of Defense must meet before it could study a commercial or industrial type function under section 2461 of title 10, United States Code.

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 346) that would express the Sense of the Senate that the Secretary of Defense should take action to initiate public-private competitions pursuant to Office of Management and Budget Circular A-76 for functions of the Department of Defense involving not fewer than 180,000 full time employees over the next six years. The provision would further waive any study requirements for functions involving 50 or fewer employees, and would give the Department increased flexibility to choose the public or private option that provides the best overall value for the taxpayer by expressly authorizing the use of "best value" techniques for public-private competitions for support services.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would not include the requirement contained in the original House provision for the Secretary of Defense to notify the Congress of his determination regarding the cost effectiveness of procuring services or supplies through the private sector, rather than a working capital fund organization, before entering into such a contract. Any analysis performed to determine if supplies or services should be procured from the private sector rather than through a working capital fund organization, should, to the extent practicable, include the impact on the rates of the working capital fund organization. Furthermore, although the provision would allow any employee to raise an objection on the grounds that the required report and certifications were not performed, such an objection would have to be raised within 90 days of the date on which the employee either knew, or should have known, that the function was being studied for potential conversion to the private sector. In addition, the provision would waive the reporting requirement of section 2461 of title 10, United States Code, for functions with 51 or more employees, rather than 21 or more employees as provided in current law.

Notification of determinations of military items as being commercial items for purposes of the exception to requirements regarding core logistics capabilities (sec. 343)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 336) that would define a commercial item for those situations in which the Department is determining if there is a requirement to establish a core depot maintenance capability. This definition would require that before an item can be considered a commercial item, and therefore not require a core depot maintenance capability, at least 90 percent of the total content by component value remains identical to the commercial version. It would further require that purchases and leases to the general public, rather than the government, constitute the majority of transactions of the item before it could be considered commercial.

The Senate had no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would require the Secretary of Defense submit to the Congress a report that outlines any determination regarding core depot maintenance capability and a detailed justification for each item determined for the first time to be a commercial item for the purposes of section 2464 of title 10, United States Code.

Oversight of development and implementation of automated identification technology (sec. 344)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 333) that would require the Smart Card Technology Office within the Defense Human Resources Field Activity of the Department of Defense (DOD) to be responsible for the oversight and coordination of Automated Identification Technology programs within the DOD.

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 345) that would require the Navy to allocate up to $25.0 million for Smart Cards. The Senate amendment also required the Navy to equip at least one carrier battle group, one air wing, and one amphibious readiness group, in each of the Atlantic and Pacific Fleets with Smart Card technology by March 31, 1999, and prohibited the procurement of the Joint Uniformed Services Identification card for the Department of the Navy after March 31, 1999 unless these units were equipped with Smart Cards. The Senate amendment also required the Secretary of the Navy to submit a plan to equip all operational naval units with Smart Cards.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would establish an Automated Identification Technology Office within the Department of Defense with the responsibility for the development and coordination of DOD automated information technology programs including but not limited to Smart Cards. The conferees further agree to delay the date for equipping the Atlantic and Pacific naval units with Smart Cards to June 30, 1999 and to require the Secretary of Defense to submit a plan to the congressional defense committees for the use of Smart Card technology by each military department rather than requiring a plan only for the Navy.

Contractor-operated civil engineering supply stores program (sec. 345)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 338) that would prohibit the incorporation of a civil engineering supply function into a broader base operations function for the purpose of competition or contracting until the Secretary of Defense submits a report to the Congress identifying the reasons for the incorporation, including why the combined competition or contract is the best method by which to achieve savings.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with a technical amendment.

Conditions on expansion of functions performed under prime vendor contracts for depot-level maintenance and repair (sec. 346)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 334) that would require the Secretary of Defense or the secretary of a military department to provide a report to the Congress each time the secretary intends to enter into a prime vendor contract for a hardware system, including one involving depot-level maintenance or logistics management functions. The report would address the competitive procedures that are proposed to be used to award the prime vendor contract, the effect of the contract on the working capital funds, and the costs and benefits associated with the contract which demonstrate that it will result in savings to the Federal Government over the life of the contract. The provision would prohibit the secretary concerned from entering into such a contract until 60 days after submission of the report.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would make the provision applicable to any prime vendor contract that the Department of Defense proposes to enter into that involves the depot-level maintenance of a piece of military equipment or major weapon systems. The Department would have to wait 30 days after submitting to the Congress a report that outlines the competitive procedures to be used as well as an examination of the costs (including costs derived as a result of changes to the working capital fund organizations) and benefits that will result from the contract, before entering into the contract.

Best commercial inventory practices for management of secondary supply items (sec. 347)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 344) that would direct the secretary of each military department to develop and submit to the Congress a schedule for the implementation of the best inventory management practices found in the commercial sector that are consistent with military requirements. The provision would also require the Comptroller General of the Department of Defense to review the extent to which the service secretaries comply with this requirement, and the extent to which best commercial inventory practices are being implemented by the Defense Logistics Agency.

The House bill contained a similar provision.

The House recedes with a technical amendment.

Personnel reductions in Army Materiel Command (sec. 348)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 339) that would require the Comptroller General of the United States to provide to the congressional defense committees a report outlining the readiness impact of proposed personnel reductions within the Army Materiel Command and would delay the implementation of these reductions until the report is provided, or March 31, 1999.

The Senate amendment contained a similar provision but did not delay the implementation of these reductions.

The House recedes.

Inventory management of in-transit items (sec. 349)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 349) that would require the Secretary of Defense to submit a plan to the Congress on those actions the Secretary is taking to ensure effective management and oversight of in-transit secondary inventory.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would require the Secretary of Defense to submit a plan to the Congress that would address the actions the Department is taking to improve the management and oversight of both secondary inventory, as well as major end-items.

Review of Defense Automated Printing Service functions (sec. 350)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 1085) that would require the Secretary of Defense to select an entity outside of the Department of Defense to review the functions of the Defense Automated Printing Service (DAPS).

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would require an experienced private sector entity be consulted during the review of DAPS functions.

Development of plan for establishment of core logistic capabilities for maintenance and repair of C-17 aircraft (sec. 351)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 337) that included findings regarding the need to perform depot-level maintenance of the C-17 aircraft in government depots, and would require the Secretary of the Air Force to submit to the Congress a plan for the establishment of the core logistics capabilities for the C-17 aircraft, consistent with the requirements of section 2464 of title 10, United States Code. The provision would further prohibit the extension of the interim contract for the C-17 Flexible Sustainment Program until after the end of the 60 day period beginning on the date the plan is submitted to Congress.

The Senate amendment had no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would delete the findings.

Separate housing for male and female recruits during recruit basic training (sec. 521)*

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 521) that would amend title 10, United States Code, to require each of the military departments to assign male and female recruits to same-gender units at the platoon, flight, and division levels, and to house male and female recruits in separate barracks or troop housing facilities. It would provide each of the service secretaries the authority to waive the separate barracks requirement initially at specific installations due to a lack of adequate facilities at the installation. However, it would require that no such waiver be in effect after October 1, 2001. This section also would require that if a waiver is granted at a particular installation, the secretary of a military department shall require that male and female recruits be housed on separate floors in military barracks or troop housing facilities at that installation. During the interim period, housing recruits on separate floors is defined to include billeting male and female recruits separately and securely either on separate floors, in separate bays, or on same floors with a fire-safe wall separating the recruits. Further, the separate billeting spaces should include independent sleeping areas, latrines and separate, lockable entrances. To facilitate the Army's ability to make barracks modifications needed for housing by separate floors, the committee recommends an increase of $8.0 million in that department's operations and maintenance account.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would require the secretaries of the military departments to provide separate, safe, and secure housing for male and female recruits with the sleeping areas separated by permanent walls and access limited to separate entrances by April 15, 1999. The Senate recedes with an amendment that would restrict after-hours access to recruit housing areas to drill sergeants and other training personnel who are of the same gender as the recruits housed in that area or to members of the chain of command as long as they are accompanied by a member, who is not a recruit, but is of the same gender, as the recruits housed in that area.

Specifically, the report shall include a statistical summary, by type, of all incidents of sexual misconduct, including sexual harassment and fraternization, involving trainees, cadre members or trainees and cadre members that occurred in the basic training centers of each service. The data provided in the report for each service should be expressed using a common standard of measurement and should include a summary of the disciplinary and administrative actions taken in response to the misconduct. Consistent with the requirement for the sexual harassment report, the report on sexual misconduct in basic training shall be submitted to the Congress no later than April 1, 1999, and shall include data on all cases of sexual misconduct that occurred during the preceding year.

The Commission on Military Training and Gender-Related Issues, established in the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1998, is expected to report to the Congress in April 1999, on its review of the basic training programs of each of the military services. The House conferees intend to fully review all matters pertaining to basic training once the findings and recommendations of the Commission are received and anticipate the likelihood of legislation next year on issues addressed in the Commission's review, including the issue of gender-separate basic training.

Extension of reporting dates for Commission on Military Training and Gender-Related Issues (sec. 524)

The Secretary of Defense may, however, designate billets at the Central Identification Laboratory, Hawaii, as joint duty on the joint duty assignment list if he determines that the billets meet the existing criteria for such designation.

Military funeral honors for veterans (sec. 567)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 558) that would require the secretaries of the military departments to provide, upon request, honor guard details for the funerals of veterans. The provision would specify that the honor guard details be comprised of not less than three persons with the capability to play a recording of Taps, unless a bugler is included in the detail. The honor guard detail would consist of members of the armed forces, members of veterans organizations, or other organizations approved for participation by the Secretary of Defense. The provision would require the Secretary of Defense to establish a system for selection of units of the armed forces or other organizations to provide honor guard details. Before issuing regulations to establish the system, the Secretary of Defense would consult with veterans service organizations to determine the views of those organization regarding methods for providing honor guard details at funerals for veterans, suggestions for organizing the system to provide those details, and estimates of the resources that those organizations could provide for honor guard details. This provision would apply to burials of veterans that occur on, or after, October 1, 1999.

The provision would also require the secretaries of the military departments to provide, upon request, honor guard details for the funerals of veterans comprised of not less than three persons with the capability to play a recording of Taps, unless a bugler is included in the detail, for the funerals of veterans, after December 31, 1999.

The conferees intend that the requirement to provide a three-person burial detail upon request of a veteran to be effective only if the Secretary of Defense and the Secretary of Veterans Affairs do not recommend an acceptable alternative proposal in the required report. If a recommended alternative includes permitting members of veterans service organizations to perform burial honor details, the Secretary of Defense may consider providing equipment and materiel, as appropriate, to support burial honor detail duties.

The conferees agree that men and women have unselfishly answered the call to arms at tremendous personal sacrifice. These men and women who served honorably, whether in war or peace, deserve commemoration for their military service at the time of their death by an appropriate tribute. Burial honors are an important means of reminding Americans of the sacrifices endured to keep the Nation free.

The recommended provision would limit the pilot program to not more than 10,000 persons per year (1,250 per educational source per military service). The provision would require the Secretary of Defense to conduct a comprehensive evaluation of the performance of the participants in the pilot program and report the results to the Congress not later than February 1, 2004.

The recommended provision would also require that, within 120 days of the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense to submit a report to the Congress describing the manner in which the New Parent Support Program is being implemented by each service, the number of military installations receiving support for the program, and the funding for the program by the date of each military service for fiscal years 1994 through 1998 and the amount of funding projected for fiscal year 1999.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The conference agreement includes a provision that would express the sense of the House of Representatives that civilian members of the military chain of command should, in the same manner as commanding officers and others in authority in the armed forces, show in themselves a good example of virtue, honor, and patriotism, and to subordinate themselves to those ideals.

For many years, commanding officers, and others in authority, in the Navy have been required by law to conduct themselves in an exemplary manner. The National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1998 extended such a requirement for exemplary conduct to commanding officers, and others in authority, in the Army and Air Force. This provision results from the House conferees' belief that a similar standard for exemplary conduct should also extend to the civilian leaders designated by title 10, United States Code, as being in the military chain of command.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes.

The conferees intend that the uniform formulary be considered the minimum and not the maximum inventory of drugs that may be available through a military treatment facility. The conferees expect that, if the military treatment facility commander determines that the beneficiary population served by that military treatment facility requires drugs that could be provided in a more cost effective manner to the government through the military treatment facility, the military treatment facility commander must have the flexibility to add such drugs to the formulary in that facility. The conferees instruct the Secretary of Defense that the required pharmacy redesign plan not include any proposal in which pharmacies in military treatment facilities could charge fees or co-pays for active duty personnel, nor for any formulary or equivalent generic drug dispensed to any eligible beneficiary. The conferees do not intend that any proposed pharmacy redesign would include any proposal to permit retail pharmacies to purchase drugs at a government rate.

The conferees intend that service members be notified that their authorized family members have been enrolled in TRICARE Prime and advise them of the procedures to change the enrollment if the automatic enrollment process did not properly enroll their authorized family members. The conferees intend that the Secretary of Defense establish procedures to notify those beneficiaries enrolled in TRICARE Prime of the status of their enrollment upon arrival at a new duty station to ensure that the enrollment is appropriate. The conferees direct the secretaries of the military departments to ensure that unit commanders include TRICARE Prime enrollment as part of all predeployment and permanent change of station inprocessing procedures to ensure that service members are apprised of the enrollment status of their authorized family members and the procedures to modify the enrollment, if necessary. The Secretary of Defense may establish the annual re-enrollment date for those enrolled in TRICARE Prime as he determines to be most efficient. The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would direct the Secretary of Defense to establish an appeals process in cases of denials of claims from a civilian health care provider in TRICARE by any computer based software system and to report to the Committee on Armed Services of the Senate and the National Security Committee of the House of Representatives when the appeals system is implemented.

Reviews relating to accessibility of health care under TRICARE (sec. 715)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 711) that would require the Secretary of Defense to revise the TRICARE policy manual to clarify that rehabilitative services are available to a patient for a head injury when the treating physician certifies that such services would be beneficial and to review the adequacy of the provider network to determine whether the networks include sufficient health care providers and specialists.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would require the Secretary of Defense to review the TRICARE policy manual to determine whether the policies dealing with the availability of rehabilitative services for patients suffering from head injuries are adequate and address the consideration of certification by an attending physician and report to the Committee on Armed Services of the Senate and the National Security Committee of the House of Representatives, not later than April 1, 1999.

The conferees direct the Secretary of Defense to ensure that the TRICARE policy manual is written in such a manner as to be clear and easy to comprehend by health care providers and others who may be involved in decisions concerning the authorized coverage under TRICARE.

Subtitle C—Health-Care Services for Medicare-Eligible Department of Defense Beneficiaries (secs. 721–724)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 729) that would authorize a three-year demonstration project under which not more than 70,000 Medicare-eligible beneficiaries of the Military Health Care System may enroll in the Federal Employees Health Benefits Program (FEHBP). The provision would require the Secretary of Defense and the Director of the Office of Personnel Management to report to the Congress, not later than 39 months after the beginning of the test, on the effectiveness of the demonstration. The Comptroller General would be required to make a similar report within the same time frame as the report of the Secretary of Defense.

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 707) that would authorize the Secretary of Defense to conduct three health care demonstration projects in order to assess the feasibility and advisability of providing health care to certain Medicare-eligible beneficiaries of the Military Health Care System. The demonstrations would begin not later than January 1, 2000 and end not later than December 31, 2003. The recommended provision would authorize: one demonstration project in which Medicare-eligible beneficiaries of the Military Health Care System would participate in the Federal Employees Health Benefits Program; a second demonstration project would create a TRICARE Senior Supplement program in which Medicare-eligible beneficiaries of the Military Health Care System could enroll; and a demonstration that would extend the TRICARE mail order pharmacy benefit to Medicare-eligible beneficiaries of the Military Health Care System.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would limit the FEHBP demonstration to not more than 66,000 participants, require the Secretary of Defense to implement a redesigned pharmacy benefit for Medicare-eligible DOD beneficiaries at two sites, and include the TRICARE Senior Supplement demonstration from the Senate amendment. The demonstrations and the redesigned pharmacy benefit would begin not later than January 1, 2000. The FEHBP demonstration would begin during the FEHBP open season for 2000. Implementation of the pharmacy redesign would begin not later than October 1, 1999. The TRICARE Senior Supplement would begin not later than January 1, 2000. The demonstrations would end not later than December 31, 2002. The Secretary of Defense, and in the case of the FEHBP demonstration, the Director of the Office of Personnel Management, would be required to report to the Congress not later than December 31, 2002 on the costs, effectiveness, and the feasibility of making the programs permanent. The Comptroller General would be required to make similar reports within the same time frame as the reports of the Secretary of Defense. In addition, the Comptroller General would be required to complete a comprehensive comparative analysis of the three projects and report to the Congress not later than March 31, 2003.

The conferees expect that the Secretary of Defense will strongly urge Medicare-eligible beneficiaries to participate in Medicare Part B. The conferees note participation in Medicare Part B is not required for eligibility in the FEHBP demonstration; however, those who do not elect to participate in Medicare Part B and later require Medicare benefits may be required to pay a significant penalty.

The conferees expect that health benefit plans under chapter 89 of title 5, United States Code, that participate in the FEHBP demonstration project will establish separate enrollment codes for self-only and self-and-family elections as an essential element of the requirement to maintain a separate risk pool for covered beneficiaries. Further, the conferees expect the Secretary of Defense and the Director of the Office of Management and Budget to seek the views of health plans that desire to participate in the demonstration about any aspect that the health plan believes would, in any way, prejudice the results of the project. The report required of the Secretary of Defense and the Director of the Office of Personnel Management shall include verbatim, written views by any participating health plan on the conduct of the demonstration project.

The conferees strongly believe that eligible beneficiaries must receive accurate, objective, and timely information from the Department of Defense about the opportunity to enroll in a health benefits plan offered under chapter 89 of title 5, United States Code, as well as the other projects. The conferees direct the Secretary of Defense, after consultation with the Director of the Office of Personnel Management and with the participating health plans, to ensure that an educational program is implemented that will provide each eligible beneficiary with easily understandable information concerning enrollment options, enrollment terms and limitations, and any other information reasonably considered essential to making an informed decision concerning participation in a demonstration project.

As part of the TRICARE Senior Supplement demonstration, the Secretary of Defense shall require participants to pay an enrollment fee that which may not exceed 75 percent of the total subscription charges in a year for self-only or self-and-family fee for service coverage under FEHBP. The conferees expect the Secretary of Defense to use as the basis for determining the enrollment fee the FEHBP plan that is comparable to the TRICARE Extra benefit. The conferees do not expect that the FEHBP plan selected as the base plan will be the most expensive plan, and thus prejudice the demonstration project.

Subtitle D—Other Changes to Existing Laws Regarding Health Care Management Process for waiving informed consent requirement for administration of certain drugs to members of Armed Forces for purposes of a particular military operation (sec. 731)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 713) that would require that an investigational new drug or a drug unapproved for its applied use not be administered to a member of the armed forces unless the member provides prior consent. The recommended provision would permit the Secretary of Defense to request the President waive the requirement for prior consent if the Secretary determines that obtaining consent is not feasible, is contrary to the best interests of the members involved, or is not in the best interests of national security.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with a clarifying amendment.

The conferees note that presidential approval, Congressional reports, and prior written notice to the member do not apply to Federal Drug Administration informed consent exceptions applicable to standard medical practice in the United States, as distinguished from informed consent exceptions that relate specifically to military functions and activities.

Health benefits for abused dependents of members of the armed forces (sec. 732)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 712) that would require the secretary concerned to provide an abused dependent of a former member of a uniformed service with medical and dental care during the period that the abused dependent is receiving transitional compensation under section 1059 of title 10, United States Code.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with a clarifying amendment.

Provision of health care at military entrance processing stations and elsewhere outside medical treatment facilities (sec. 733)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 702) that would extend the coverage of contract physicians by the same malpractice litigation rules as other Department of Defense health care providers. The provision would also extend the authority of the Secretary of Defense to provide reasonable attorney's fees in any litigation in which government attorneys do not provide representation.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would extend the current authority until December 31, 2000, and would require the Secretary of Defense to conduct a test of alternative methods for conducting medical screenings for enlistment qualification and report the findings not later than March 1, 2000.

Professional qualifications of physicians providing military health care (sec. 734)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 726) that would require the secretary of a military department to ensure that each military physician holds an unrestricted medical license. The House bill also contained a provision (sec. 727) that would require the Secretary of Defense to establish a mechanism to ensure that each military physician completes the continuing medical education requirements applicable to their medical specialty.

The Senate amendment contained a single provision (sec. 708) similar to the two provisions in the House bill.

The House recedes with a clarifying amendment.

Subtitle E—Other Matters

Enhanced Department of Defense organ and tissue donor program (sec. 741)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 705) that would require the Secretary of Defense, the secretaries of the military departments, and the Surgeons General to enhance the support for organ and tissue donor elections made by service members.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would require that service members are provided with appropriate information about organ and tissue donation and are afforded the opportunity to elect to be a donor subsequent to completion of initial training, but prior to their first duty assignment.

Authorization to establish a Level One Trauma Training Center (sec. 742)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 724) that would authorize the Secretary of the Army to establish a Level One Trauma Training Center in accordance with the American College of Surgeons standards for trauma centers.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes.

Authority to establish center for study of post-deployment health concerns of members of the armed forces (sec. 743)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 709) that would require the Secretary of Defense to contract with an independent organization to assess the feasibility and advisability of establishing an independent entity to evaluate and monitor inter-agency coordination of issues related to the post-deployment health concerns of members of the armed forces and to report to the Congress on the results of the assessment not later than one year after the enactment of this act.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would authorize the Secretary of Defense to establish a center devoted to a longitudinal study to evaluate information on the health conditions of members of the armed forces upon their return from deployment on military operations in order to rapidly identify trends in illnesses or injuries among such members.

Report on implementation of enrollment-based capitation for funding for military medical treatment facilities (sec. 744)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 725) that would require the Secretary of Defense to report to the Congress, by March 1, 1999, on the potential impact of using an enrollment-based capitation methodology to allocate funds to military medical treatment facilities.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision. The Senate recedes.

Joint Department of Defense and Department of Veterans Affairs reports relating to inter-departmental cooperation in the delivery of medical care (sec. 745)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 706) that would require the Secretary of Defense and the Secretary of Veterans Affairs to conduct a joint survey of their respective beneficiary populations to identify, by category of individual, the expectations of, requirements for, and behavior patterns of those populations regarding medical care. The provision would require this collaborative effort be developed jointly and administered by an independent entity. Additionally, this provision would require the Secretaries of Defense and Veterans Affairs to review all applicable statutes, regulations, policies and beneficiary attitudes that may preclude or limit cooperative health care programs, including the sharing of facilities and other resources, between the Department of Defense and the Department of Veterans Affairs.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would clarify that the joint survey need not include information that is currently available from other sources and that the secretaries report all required information to the Committee on Armed Services of the Senate and the National Security Committee of the House of Representatives.

The conferees intend that the required pharmaceutical review be oriented toward identifying ways to improve cooperative arrangements between the Department of Defense and the Department of Veterans Affairs. The conferees do not support expanding government pricing for drugs to non-government entities.

Report on research and surveillance activities regarding Lyme disease and other tick-borne diseases (sec. 746)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 710) that would authorize $3.0 million within the Defense Health Program to be used for research and surveillance activities related to Lyme disease and other tick-borne diseases.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would require the Secretary of Defense to report to the Committee on Armed Services of the Senate and the National Security Committee of the House of Representatives on the impact of Lyme disease and other tick-borne diseases on military readiness and the efforts within the Department of Defense to prevent, identify, and treat such diseases.

LEGISLATIVE PROVISIONS NOT ADOPTED

Plan for provision of health care for military retirees and their dependents comparable to health care provided under TRICARE Prime

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 702) that would require the Secretary of Defense to submit to the Congress, by March 1, 1999, a plan for ensuring that military retirees, including Medicare-eligible retirees, and their dependents have access to health care benefits comparable to those offered through TRICARE Prime, the managed-care option of the TRICARE program.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The House recedes.

TITLE VIII—ACQUISITION POLICY, ACQUISITION MANAGEMENT, AND RELATED MATTERS

LEGISLATIVE PROVISIONS ADOPTED

Subtitle A—Amendments to General Contracting Authorities, Procedures, and Limitations

Limitation on use of price preference upon achievement of contract goal for small and disadvantaged businesses (sec. 801)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 803) that would condition the use of the 10 percent price preference criteria in section 2323 of title 10, United States Code, on the failure of the Department of Defense (DOD) to achieve the goal in the section during the prior fiscal year.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with a clarifying amendment.

The amendment would clarify that the limitation on the use of the price preference applies only to the DOD and would specify procedures for implementing a suspension of the use of the price preference.

Distribution of assistance under the procurement technical assistance cooperative agreement program (sec. 802)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 804) that would amend section 2413 of title 10, United States Code, and repeal section 2415, United States Code, to recognize the change in the Department of Defense contract administration structure.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would retain section 2415 and amend sections 2413 and 2415 by striking “region” and inserting “district”.

Defense commercial pricing management improvement (sec. 803)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 805) that would require the Federal Acquisition Regulation (FAR) be revised to provide guidelines that would ensure price reasonableness in sole-source commercial item purchases. The FAR would also be revised to clarify issues such as the appropriate use of different types of information for establishing such price reasonableness.

The provision would also require the Secretary of Defense to establish procedures to ensure that, to the maximum extent practicable, sole-source spare parts purchases are negotiated through corporate contracts by single contracting officers or item managers to ensure that the government receives maximum leverage for the size of its purchases and to ensure that catalog discount issues and price reasonableness determinations are not treated in an isolated or piecemeal fashion. Finally, the provision would require the Secretary of Defense to establish a system for tracking price trends in spare parts in order to isolate categories of items that require further management attention. The provision would provide the Secretary of Defense with the discretion to set up such a system in a manner that would ensure minimal burden on the acquisition system and proper management.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would clarify the information to be considered in determining price reasonableness, the role of support organizations in the Department of Defense, and the reporting requirements applicable to the price trend analyses.

The conferees intend that these regulatory changes address the types of abuses uncovered in recent audits conducted by the Department of Defense (DOD) Inspector General on sole source commercial spare parts purchases by the DOD. The conferees do not intend this provision to impede implementation of the general federal government policy stated in the Federal Acquisition Streamlining Act of 1994 and the Federal Acquisition Reform Act of 1996 of relying on the commercial sector to an increasing extent for goods and services.

Modification of senior executives covered by limitation on allowability of compensation for certain contractor personnel (sec. 804)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 813) that would revise the definition of the term “senior executive” for purposes of the limitation on allowability of compensation for certain contractor personnel.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would clarify that the revised definition applies to costs incurred after January 1, 1999, under covered contracts.

Separate determinations of exceptional waivers of truth in negotiation requirements for prime contracts and subcontracts (sec. 805)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 814) that would allow the heads of agencies to waive the requirements under the Truth in Negotiations Act that subcontractors provide certified cost and pricing data in cases where such requirements have been waived for prime contractors due to a determination of exceptional circumstances.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with a clarifying amendment concerning the organizational waiver level.

The conferees agree that the term "exceptional circumstances" requires more than the belief that it may be possible to determine the contract price to be fair and reasonable without the submission of certified cost and pricing data. For example, a waiver may be appropriate in circumstances where it is possible to determine price reasonableness without cost or pricing data and the contracting officer determines that it would not be possible to enter into a contract with a particular contractor in the absence of a waiver. The conferees direct the Department of Defense to work with the appropriate executive branch officials to clarify the situations in which an exceptional circumstance waiver may be granted.

Procurement of conventional ammunition (sec. 806)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 801) that would require that ammunition or ammunition components procured by the Department of Defense (DOD) be acquired from domestic sources pursuant to section 2534 of title 10, United States Code.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would assign to the single manager for conventional ammunition in the DOD the authority to restrict the procurement of conventional ammunition to the national technology and industrial base. The amendment would also require the single manager for conventional ammunition to limit specific procurements, in accordance with section 2304(c)(3) of title 10, United States Code, in cases where it is determined that doing so is necessary to maintain a facility, producer, manufacturer, or other supplier available for furnishing an essential item of ammunition or ammunition component in cases of national emergency or to achieve industrial mobilization.

This provision supersedes existing guidance issued by the DOD as it relates to the procurement of ammunition from domestic sources. The conferees direct the Department of the Army to issue new guidance to replace the DOD guidance superseded by this provision. The conferees intend that the determination specified in the provision be conducted within the Department of the Army using procedures prescribed by the Secretary of the Army.

Para-aramid fibers and yarns (sec. 807)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 801) that would authorize the Secretary of Defense to procure articles containing para-aramid fibers and yarns manufactured in a foreign country that is a party to defense memorandum of understanding, if such country allows U.S. manufacturers of that product to compete for sales to that foreign country.

The House bill contained no similar provisions.

The House recedes with an amendment that would allow the Secretary of Defense to procure articles containing yarns and fibers manufactured in a country with whom the United States has a defense memorandum of understanding upon making a determination described in the provision.

Clarification of responsibility for submission of information on prices previously charged for property or services offered (sec. 808)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 816) that would amend the Truth in Negotiations Act to clarify requirements for contractors to provide appropriate price information required by federal contracting officers to determine price reasonableness.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would require that the Federal Acquisition Regulation (FAR) be amended to provide that compliance with the requirement to submit data shall be a condition for an offer or to be eligible to enter into a contract or subcontract, subject to such exceptions as the Federal Acquisition Regulatory Council determines appropriate. The conferees intend that any exceptions to the requirement to submit price-related information be limited to those situations that are clearly specified in the FAR pursuant to this provision.

Nothing in this section would require any contractor to submit certified cost or pricing data, to comply with the Cost Accounting Standards, or to comply with the contract cost principles, if the contractor is not otherwise required to do so. The conferees do not intend this provision to require any revision to the FAR except to the extent specifically required by subsections (c) and (d).

Amendments and study relating to procurement from firms in industrial base for production of small arms (sec. 809)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 803) that would amend section 2473 of title 10, United States Code, to require the Secretary of Defense to procure all small arms end items, small arms repair parts, modifications to improve small arms, and repair parts consisting of small arms barrels, bolts and receivers from the small arms production industrial base.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would require specified small arms purchases be made only from a firm in the small arms industrial base unless the Secretary determines, with a regard to a particular procurement, that such requirement is not necessary to preserve the small arms industrial base. The requirements under section 2473 would apply to procurement of repair parts for or modifications to improve the M16 series rifle, the MK19 grenade machine gun, the M4 series carbine, the M240 series machine gun, and the M249 squad automatic weapon. The amendment would also require the Secretary of the Army to conduct a study under the auspices of the Army Science Board to examine whether the requirements of section 2473 should be expanded in specified ways and authorizes the Secretary to do so based on the recommendations of the Army Science Board. The conferees expect the completion of the Army Science Board study, including recommendations, no later than 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act.

Subtitle B—Other Matters

Eligibility of involuntarily downgraded employee for membership in an acquisition corps (sec. 811)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 802) that would enable civilian members of the Defense Acquisition Corps who are reduced in grade due to a base closing or downsizing to retain their membership in the Acquisition Corps for the purposes of the Defense Acquisition Workforce Improvement Act.

The Senate amendment contained a similar provision (sec. 809).

The House recedes.

Time for submission of annual report relating to Buy American Act (sec. 812)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 804) that would reduce the time for the submission of the annual report relating to the Buy American Act required in section 827 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1997 (Public Law 104-201) from 90 to 60 days after the end of the fiscal year.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes.

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 802) that would allow the procurement of travel services under one contract for both official and unofficial travel.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes.

Department of Defense purchases through other agencies (sec. 814)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 806) that would require the Secretary of Defense to revise regulations issued pursuant to section 844 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1994 (Public Law 103-160), which cover all purchases of goods and services by the Department of Defense under so-called "multiple award task order and delivery order contracts" entered into or administered by any other agency.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with a clarifying amendment.

Supervision of defense acquisition university structure by Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition and Technology (sec. 815)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 807) that would specify that the responsibility for the establishment of policy and requirements for educational programs of the defense acquisition university be vested in the Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition and Technology.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes.

Pilot programs for testing program manager performance of product support oversight responsibilities for life cycle of acquisition programs (sec. 816)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 810) that would require the Secretary of Defense to designate 10 programs for which the program manager will be made responsible for the life cycle cost issues through the life of the program. The Secretary would be required to report, no later than February 1, 1999, to the congressional defense committees on the 10 programs and to include any policy, regulatory, organizational, or legislative changes that would be required to fully implement this new approach to life cycle cost management.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes.

The conferees direct that the Secretary of Defense include in the report to the Congress on the pilot program candidates a discussion of the appropriate point in the acquisition cycle for life cycle cost management to transition from the program manager to the logistics organizations of the services.

Scope of protection of certain information from disclosure (sec. 817)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 811) that would amend section 2371 of title 10, United States Code, to clarify that certain information submitted by outside parties in cooperative agreements for basic, applied, and advanced research are protected from disclosure under section 552 of title 5, United States Code.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes.

Plan for rapid transition from completion of small business innovative research into defense acquisition programs (sec. 818)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 812) that would require the Secretary of Defense to develop a plan for facilitating a rapid transition for successfully completed research under the Small Business Innovative Research (SBIR) program into defense acquisition programs.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would clarify the elements of the plan and the procedures for preparing and transmitting the plan to the Congress.

Five-year authority for the Secretary of the Navy to exchange certain items (sec. 819)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 217) that would amend section 2681 of title 10, United States Code, to make the temporary authority to permit commercial use of test and evaluation centers permanent.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes.

Inventory exchange authorized for certain fuel delivery contract (sec. 821)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 817) that would require the Secretary of Defense to submit to Congress no later than December 1, 1998 a report recommending alternative means for a small and disadvantaged business that delivers by barge to Defense Energy Supply Point-Anchorage under a contract with the Defense Energy Supply Center to fulfill its contractual obligations and not lose its small and disadvantaged business status when ice conditions in the Cook Inlet threaten the physical delivery of such fuel. The provision would also provide that such small and disadvantaged business could not lose its small and disadvantaged business status through February 1999 if ice conditions in the Cook Inlet prevent deliveries of bulk fuel and the Secretary of Defense determines that effects of such inability to deliver would result in an inequity to the supplier.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would eliminate the requirement for a report from the Secretary of Defense and clarify that the provision would in no case authorize a barrel-for-barrel exchanges totaling more than 15 percent of the total amount of bulk fuel under a contract. The amendment would also clarify that the authority under the section does not affect the requirement that a contractor otherwise fulfill its contractual obligations.

LEGISLATIVE PROVISIONS NOT ADOPTED

Study on increase in micro-purchase threshold

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 805) that would require the Comptroller General to conduct a study to assess the impact of the current micro-purchase program and the advisability of increasing the micro-purchase threshold to $10,000 under section 32 of the Office of Federal Procurement Policy Act.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The House recedes.

The conferees believe that a thorough analysis of any proposal to raise the micro-purchase threshold, including the impact on small business participation in contracting, must be provided to the Congress by the Department of Defense before such a change can be considered.

Repeal of requirement for Director of Acquisition Education, Training, and Career Development to be within the Office of the Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition and Technology

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 808) that would remove the requirement that the Director of Acquisition Education, Training, and Career Development be appointed within the Office of the Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition and Technology.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes.

The conferees believe that the issue of the status of the director of acquisition education, training, and career development should be deferred until the Department of Defense has clarified the future role of the Office of the Under Secretary of Acquisition and Technology in the planning and execution of higher education for acquisition professionals in the Department of Defense.

TITLE IX—DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE ORGANIZATION AND MANAGEMENT

LEGISLATIVE PROVISIONS ADOPTED

Subtitle A—Department of Defense Officers and Organization

Reduction in number of Assistant Secretary of Defense positions (sec. 901)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 901) that would codify the reductions in the number of assistant secretaries of defense announced by the Secretary of Defense as part of the Defense Reform Initiative. Specifically, the recommended provision would reduce the number of assistant secretaries of defense from ten to nine.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes.

Repeal of statutory requirement for position of Assistant Secretary of Defense for Command, Control, Communications and Intelligence (sec. 902)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 902) that would rename the Assistant Secretary of Defense for Command, Control, Communications, and Intelligence (ASD-C3I) to the Assistant Secretary of Defense for Space and Information Superiority, and change the statutorily designated duties associated with this position.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would repeal section 138(b)(3) of title 10, United States Code.

The Secretary of Defense recently announced a number of organizational changes to the Office of the Secretary of Defense pursuant to the Defense Reform Initiative. Among these changes is a significant modification of the office of the ASD-C3I. As a result, the current title no longer describes the full range of responsibilities of this office, nor adequately identifies its functional priorities. The conferees endorse the new title "Assistant Secretary of Defense for Space and Information Superiority".

The conferees continue to support a "single focal point for space" in the Department of Defense, and believe that there are synergies to be gained by linking this function with the Department's information superiority activities. The conferees note that, although there is a significant degree of overlap between "information superiority" and "space", these two functional areas also have many unique aspects that deserve significant focused attention. Therefore, the conferees endorse the Secretary's decision to include the term "space" in the revised title of this important position.

The conferees note that the Assistant Secretary for Space and Information Superiority will be responsible for some of the most critical issues facing the Department of Defense, including space policy, information assurance, information operations, intelligence policy, command, control, communications, surveillance, reconnaissance, the "year 2000" problem, and electromagnetic spectrum issues. The conferees believe that one of the most significant challenges facing the Assistant Secretary will be the integration and mutual leveraging of the various elements that he will supervise.

Independent task force on transformation and Department of Defense organization (sec. 903)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 905) that would require the Secretary of Defense to create a task force of the Defense Science Board for the purpose of determining the appropriate organization of the Department of Defense in light of the ongoing transformation in the conduct of war. The task force would be established not later than November 1, 1998 and the Secretary should transmit the findings of the task force along with recommendations and comments to the Congress by March 1, 1999.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with a clarifying amendment.

Authority to expand the National Defense University (sec. 904)

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes.

Center for Hemispheric Defense Studies (sec. 905)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 909) that would authorize funds available within the Latin American cooperation authority be used for the operation of the Center for Hemispheric Defense Studies.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with a clarifying amendment.

Restructuring of administration of Fisher Houses (sec. 906)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 308) that would authorize appropriations from the Fisher House Trust Funds for use in the operation and maintenance of the Fisher Houses of the Army, Navy, and Air Force.

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 907) that would repeal section 2221 of title 10, United States Code, and direct the secretaries of the military departments to establish a nonappropriated fund in each department as the single source of funding to operate, maintain, and improve the Fisher Houses and Fisher Suites, and to close each Fisher House Trust Fund and transfer the amounts in the Fund to the respective nonappropriated fund.

The House recedes with a clarifying amendment.

Management reform for research, development, test and evaluation activities (sec. 907)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 906) that would require the Department of Defense to conduct a cross-service analysis and a plan for restructuring and revitalization of the Department of Defense laboratories and test and evaluation (T&E) centers. The provision would also require that the Department develop a plan and schedule for establishing a cost-based management information system for identifying and comparing costs among the services' labs and T&E centers.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would require the Department to analyze opportunities to improve efficiency and reduce duplication by designating responsibilities by lead agencies or executive agent, by area or function, or by other streamlining initiatives. The amendment would also strike sections (2)(D) and (2)(E) of the Senate provision. The conferees agree that the Department should explore options for an alternative management structure for T&E. The conferees agree that the lessons learned in personnel demonstration projects and pilot projects should be considered in any plan to restructure or reengineer the laboratories and test centers.

Subtitle B—Department of Defense
Financial Management

Improved accounting for defense contract services (sec. 911)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 906) that would require the Department of Defense to make numerous changes to the way they request funds for advisory and assistance services. The provision would require the Comptroller of the Department of Defense to conduct an assessment of the total non-Federal effort that resulted from the performance of all contracts for such services during the previous, current and following fiscal year. The provision would also prohibit the Department from classifying more than 15 percent of its contractual services in a miscellaneous budget category but would allow the Department to report 30 percent in its fiscal year 2000 budget as miscellaneous. In addition, the provision would codify the definition of advisory and assistance services to include; management and professional support services; studies, analyses, and evaluations; and, engineering and technical services. Finally, the provision would reduce the amount of funding that was budgeted for these services by $500.0 million.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would strike the requirement for the Comptroller of the Department of Defense to conduct an assessment of the total non-Federal effort that resulted from the performance of all contracts for such services during the previous fiscal year, and the total non-Federal effort that will result from the performance of all contracts for such services during the current fiscal year. The amendment would codify the definition of advisory and assistance services to that currently contained in the Department of Defense's directive, and would reduce the cut to these services to $240.0 million.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with a technical amendment.

Limitation on reorganization and consolidation of operating locations of the Defense Finance and Accounting Service (sec. 914)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 1024) that would require the Secretary of Defense to study and define future workload requirements for each of the finance and accounting operating locations (OPLOCs) of the Defense Finance and Accounting Service, and determine whether excess capacity exists. The provision would also require that the study be submitted to the congressional defense authorization committees by December 15, 1998, and that no OPLOCs could be closed until six months after the submission of this study.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would change the date for the submission of the study to the Congress to January 15, 1999 and delay the closing of any OPLOCs until 90 days after the submission of the study.

Annual report on resources allocated to support and mission activities (sec. 915)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 1031) that would require the Secretary of Defense to provide in his annual report to the Congress a description of the personnel and budgetary resources dedicated to support activities as compared to mission-related activities. This provision would also require the same information for the prior five years. The provision would also require a listing of the number of military and civilian personnel assigned to headquarters activities as a percentage of military end-strength for the past 10 years.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would require the headquarters numbers to be provided for the past five years, and would require the Secretary to submit to the Congress the definition of "support" and "mission" activities that the Secretary will use in the development of the report.

Subtitle C—Joint Warfighting
Experimentation

Findings concerning joint warfighting experimentation (sec. 921)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 1201) that would make congressional findings that provide the historical and policy basis for the need to conduct joint warfighting experimentation.

The House recedes with an amendment that would abbreviate the description of the basis for the need to conduct joint warfighting experimentation.

Sense of Congress concerning joint warfighting experimentation (sec. 922)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 1202) that would express a sense of the Congress on the importance of designating a commander with the mission for joint warfighting experimentation, a sense of the Congress that such commander should be provided with adequate resources and authority to effectively conduct such experimentation, and a sense of the Congress that the Congress should review the process of military transformation, as evidenced by the results of such experimentation, and if the process is determined inadequate, to consider legislation that would ensure the effective conduct of joint warfighting experimentation.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would modify the sense of the Congress related to the commander's authority by abbreviating the enumeration of such authorities.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with an amendment.

The amendment would limit the reduction to 25,000 personnel positions in fiscal year 1999 and would authorize the Secretary of Defense to waive up to 12,500 upon a certification by the Secretary that reducing a greater number of such positions would be inconsistent with the cost-effective management of the defense acquisition system to obtain best value equipment and with ensuring military readiness.

The reduction would apply to positions in the defense acquisition and support workforce and limit the reduction of core acquisition workforce positions to a level proportional with other occupational elements in the larger defense acquisition and support workforce.

Limitation on operation and support funds for the Office of the Secretary of Defense (sec. 932)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 902) that would limit the obligation of funds for the Office of the Secretary of Defense to 90 percent of the appropriated level for that office until such time as the Secretary submits the reports that were required by section 904(b) of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1997, and sections 911(b) and 911(c) of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1998.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would make the provision more generic.

LEGISLATIVE PROVISIONS NOT ADOPTED

Revision to defense directive relating to management headquarters and headquarters support activities

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 903) that would require the Department of Defense to implement a revised directive, to be applied uniformly throughout the Department, that accounts for management headquarters personnel by function rather than organization.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The House recedes.

Report on individuals employed in private sector who provide services under contract for the Department of Defense

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 910) that would require the Secretary of Defense to provide an annual report to the Congress that would outline the quantity, costs, and value of services that are provided to the Department of Defense by non-Federal workers.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The House recedes.

The conferees understand that significant cost would be incurred by the Department in establishing a new system to annually track the quantity and value of non-Federal contract services. Therefore, the conferees direct the Department, to the extent practicable, using only existing personnel and contracting systems, to report to the Committee on Armed Services of the Senate and the National Security Committee of the House of Representatives by April 15, 1998, the number of work year equivalents performed by individuals employed by non-Federal entities providing services to the Department, categorized by Federal supply class code, the appropriation from which the contract was funded, and the major organizational element procuring the services.

Reduction in Department of Defense headquarters staff

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 904) that would codify the reductions in the Department of Defense headquarters staff announced by the Secretary of Defense as part of the Defense Reform Initiative. Specifically, the recommended provision would require the Office of the Secretary of Defense to reduce by 33 percent; defense agencies to reduce by 21 percent; Department of Defense field activities to reduce by 36 percent; the Joint Staff to reduce by 29 percent; the headquarters of the combatant commands and associated activities to reduce by seven percent; and other headquarters elements, including the headquarters of the military departments and their major commands and associated activities to reduce by 29 percent. The recommended provision would require the Secretary of Defense to submit, not later than March 1, 1999, a plan to implement the directed personnel reductions.

To redesignate the position of Director of Defense Research and Engineering, abolish the position of Assistant to the Secretary of Defense for Nuclear and Chemical and Biological Defense Programs, and transfer the duties of the latter position to the former position

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 908) that would redesignate the position of Director of Defense Research and Engineering, abolish the position of Assistant to the Secretary of Defense for Nuclear and Chemical and Biological Defense and transfer certain duties to the new organization.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes.

The Nuclear Weapons Council is a statutorily mandated body consisting of Department of Defense and Department of Energy members. The Council has specific responsibilities to ensure the safety and reliability of the Nation's nuclear weapons stockpile. The Assistant to the Secretary of Defense for Nuclear and Chemical and Biological Defense Programs is the primary Department of Defense focal point for nuclear weapons matters, and reports directly to the Secretary of Defense. This position also serves as the executive director of the Nuclear Weapons Council. Unfortunately, this important position has been vacant for many months. The conferees are concerned that, as a result of this position being vacant for an extended period of time, nuclear weapons matters and issues associated with maintaining the U.S. nuclear deterrent are not receiving the attention they deserve. The conferees urge the President to submit to the Senate, for advice and consent, a nomination as soon as possible.

Military aviation accident investigations

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 910) that would require the Secretary of Defense to establish a task force to review the procedures used by the Department of Defense to conduct military aviation accident investigations and to identify mechanisms for improving such investigations. The provision would also require the Secretary of Defense to prescribe uniform regulations that would provide for the release of reports on the accident investigation to the family members of those involved in the accident.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes.

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 1002) that would provide emergency authorization of $1.9 billion to fund U.S. participation in Bosnia peacekeeping operations for fiscal year 1999.

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 1201) that would not authorize additional funding for U.S. participation in Bosnia peacekeeping operations, and would limit the Secretary of Defense from expending funds appropriated to the Department of Defense for fiscal year 1999 in excess of $1.9 billion. The provision would provide for an emergency exception of not more than $100.0 million for the purpose of safeguarding U.S. Forces in the event of hostilities, and would require the Secretary of Defense to submit a report to the Congress by April 1, 1999 on the need for any additional funds required for Bosnia operations in fiscal year 1999.

The conferees agree to a provision that would provide emergency authorization of $1.9 billion to fund operations in Bosnia for fiscal year 1999, but would limit funding to the amounts authorized in this section. The President may waive this limitation after submitting to the Congress a certification that the waiver is based on the national interest and will not adversely affect the readiness of U.S. Military Forces. In conjunction with the certification, the President must submit a request for supplemental appropriations to fund the increased costs and a report. The report submitted with the certification must contain the reasons for the waiver, the specific reasons the additional funds are required, and a discussion of the readiness impact of the continued deployment of the U.S. Military Forces in Bosnia or supporting Bosnia peacekeeping operations.

Partnership for Peace information system management (sec. 1005)

The budget request included $2.0 million for the Partnership for Peace Information Management System (PIMS) (PE 1001017D8Z).

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 1004) that would make $5.0 million available in defense-wide activities for the Partnership for Peace Information Management System (PIMS) in the following amounts: $3.0 million in section 301 and $2.0 million in section 201(4) of this Act.

The House bill contained no similar provision, but would recommend the budget request for operation and maintenance and would recommend an increase of $4.0 million to the budget request for PIMS research and development activities for the development of an international medical program global satellite system. Additionally, the House bill would require that no funds be made available for this activity until the Secretary of Defense submits a report to the congressional defense committees on the impact of the international medical program global satellite system on the Department of Defense (DOD) radio frequency spectrum.

The conferees agree to a provision that would make $5.0 million available in defense-wide activities for PIMS in defense-wide operation and maintenance and research and development activities. In addition, the conferees agree to authorize a $4.0 million increase for PIMS research and development activities for the development of an international medical global satellite system. The conferees agree with the recommendation of the House (H. Rept. 105-532) regarding the requirement of the Secretary of Defense to submit a report on the impact of this system on the DOD frequency spectrum prior to obligation of funds. In addition, the report of the Secretary of Defense should include a plan on how the satellite-based medical telecommunications distribution and delivery network would be integrated into PIMS, the cost of integrating this technology into PIMS, the primary focus and content of the program and the contribution to the overall mission of PIMS, and information on the need for bilateral agreements.

Lastly, the conferees direct that all applicable competitive procedures be used in the award of contracts, grants, and other agreements under this program and that the Department require significant cost-sharing from all non-federal participants.

United States contribution to NATO common-funded budgets in fiscal year 1999 (sec. 1006)

The resolution of ratification to the Protocols to the North Atlantic Treaty of 1949 on Accession of Poland, Hungary, and the Czech Republic (Treaty Document 105-36) agreed to by the Senate on April 30, 1998 included a condition that requires authorization of funds for the U.S. contribution to the common-funded budget of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) beginning in fiscal year 1999 if the amounts exceed the totals expended in fiscal year 1998.

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 1006) that would authorize funds for the U.S. contribution to NATO common-funded budgets and the use of unexpended balances from prior years.

Subtitle C—Counter Drug Activities and Other Assistance for Civilian Law Enforcement

The budget request for drug interdiction and other counter-drug activities of the Department of Defense (DOD) totals $882.8 million. This includes the $727.6 million central transfer account and $155.2 million in the operating budgets of the military services for counter-drug operations.

However, these numbers do not accurately represent the Department's total commitment to the war on drugs. For example, these numbers do not include a proportionate share of the costs of procuring military systems that are used to support the war on drugs. They also do not capture the personnel costs for the thousands of active duty service members who are engaged in counter-narcotics activities over the course of the fiscal year. Furthermore, the budget does not include all maintenance costs for assets used in counter-drug activities, or a proportionate share of base operation support costs for those units performing counter-drug activities. Together, these costs exceed several hundred million dollars each year.

In addition, these numbers do not reflect the value of the equipment and training that the DOD provides to other nations in support of their counter-narcotics activities pursuant to section 506 of the Foreign Assistance Act. This section provides authorization for up to $75.0 million worth of counter-narcotics support to foreign governments each year. The conferees are concerned that this authority, which was intended to be used to enhance U.S. counter-narcotics support to nations in the source zone, is simply used to offset costs which more appropriately belong in the State Department budgets. The conferees are further concerned that the continued provision of non-excess military equipment to foreign governments may have an adverse impact on U.S. military readiness. The conferees direct the Secretary of Defense to provide the congressional defense committees with a list of those items that are provided pursuant to Section 506, together with the Secretary's plans for replacing this equipment.

Finally, the conferees are concerned that in some cases the Department of Defense may be pressured into dedicating scarce resources within its budget recommendation to the President for the counter-narcotics missions that are the primary responsibility of the Department of State or other Federal agencies. This practice could be detrimental to other high priority military missions, including counter-terrorism and counter-proliferation, in today's resource constrained environment. The conferees believe that the Secretary of Defense and the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs are in the best position to understand all of the national security responsibilities of DOD, and to make a balanced recommendation to the President regarding the manner in which the resources of the Armed Forces should be utilized in such a way as to most effectively carry out those responsibilities.

The conferees recommend the following authorization for the Department's counter-narcotics activities:

Drug Interdiction & Counter-drug Activities, Operations and Maintenance
(In thousands of dollars; may not add due to rounding)
Fiscal Year 1999 Drug and Counter-drug Request		$882,831

Goal 3 (DOD Personnel Demand Reduction)	72,936
Goal 4 (Drug Interdiction—TZ/SWB)	406,554
Goal 5 (Supply Reduction)	293,127

South West Border Fence	3,000
National Guard State Plans	29,000
Reductions:
JIATF-SOUTH	17,000
Southern Air Forces Counter-Drug Support	4,000

Drug Interdiction & Counter-drug Activities, Operations and Maintenance—Continued

Mexico GBEGO	4,000
National Guard Cargo/Mail Inspection Project	29,000
Enhanced Transit Zone Interdiction—Caribbean/Eastern Pacific Interdiction Initiative, Caper Focus

Although the Department of Defense continues to serve as the single lead Federal agency for the detection and monitoring of suspected drug-trafficking activities within the transit zones, the Department's budget in this region has declined dramatically since 1993. This decline is a result of presidential guidance in 1993 that directed a gradual shift in emphasis from the transit zone to source zone counter-drug activities. While the Administration's strategic focus moved to South America, illegal drugs continue to flow through the eastern Pacific Ocean and Caribbean Sea to U.S. markets.

The conferees encourage the Department to explore new initiatives to enhance current interdiction capabilities so that if Panamanian facilities are no longer available, a viable interdiction program remains. To assist the Department in this effort, the conferees have included a provision that would provide $14.5 million within the counter-narcotics central transfer account for the increased deployment of the Department's Cyclone Class Patrol Coastal Craft (PCs) to the Caribbean and eastern Pacific, and any maintenance or modifications of these craft (such as forward looking infra-red devices and combat craft recovery systems) necessary to enhance their interdiction capabilities. Such increased deployment will provide Commander-in-Chief, Southern Command (CINCSOUTH) with a more substantial naval presence in his theater of operations with which to increase surface interdiction efforts of suspected narco-traffickers. The conferees include an additional $8.0 million for the Department's Caribbean efforts in order to help pay for increased deployment. The conferees expect the Department to identify the remaining $6.5 million from within its interdiction budget.

The conferees direct the Secretary of Defense to provide the Committee on Armed Services of the Senate and the Committee on National Security of the House of Representatives with a report outlining the extent to which the PCs, operating either with or without a mothership, were effective during fiscal year 1999 in the interdiction and deterrence of maritime drug trafficking. This report should also outline the CINCSOUTH's and the CINCASCOM's recommendation regarding any future deployment of these craft to SOUTHCOM's Area of Responsibility (AOR), and the Secretary of Defense's recommendation as to the appropriate funding mechanism for these future deployments.

Caper Focus

The conferees are disturbed by the recent testimony of General Charles E. Wilhelm, Commander-in-Chief, Southern Command (CINCSOUTH), regarding the Department's inability "to mount effective detection, monitoring and tracking operations in the eastern Pacific, a pipeline which feeds Mexico and ultimately the U.S." As a result of competing demands for maritime patrol aircraft, the Secretary of Defense postponed the final phase of Operation Caper Focus, a promising operation targeting multi-nation cargo vessels in the eastern Pacific. During the initial phases of Operation Caper Focus, Joint Interagency Task Force-East (JIATF-E) assets interdicted 27 metric tons of cocaine and gained valuable intelligence on regional trafficking methods. Despite these preliminary results, the Secretary of Defense has not made available the additional air or maritime assets necessary to execute the operation, nor has the Director of JIATF-E transferred assets from the Caribbean.

The conferees are convinced of the need to take advantage of this opportunity to seize large amounts of cocaine through the continuation of Operation Caper Focus. Therefore, the conferees include a provision that would authorize $10.5 million to support this operation. The conferees urge the Secretary of Defense to seek the views of CINCSOUTH in identifying the capabilities needed to determine how these funds should be applied. Finally, the conferees direct that the Secretary of Defense provide the Committee on Armed Services of the Senate and the Committee on National Security of the House of Representatives a report outlining the recommendations of CINCSOUTH and an implementation plan detailing the Department's expanded operational support to Operation Caper Focus no later than January 15, 1999. The conferees include an additional $6.0 million in order to help pay for this deployment. The conferees expect the Department to provide the remaining $4.5 million from within its interdiction budget.

Gulf States Counter-drug Initiative

The conferees understand the Gulf States Counter-drug Initiative has grown beyond its original counter-drug mission and now performs important work for other high priority missions of the Department of Defense, including counter-terrorism. Therefore, the conferees support the transfer of this activity from the Department's Counter-drug account to the C3I Joint Military Intelligence Program in accordance with its increased mission, and recommend an additional $6.0 million for its counter narcotics activities. The conferees expect that the Department will fund GSCI's operations through the Joint Military Intelligence Program budget in the future. The conferees authorize a further $1.0 million for the Gulf States Counter-drug Initiative Regional Counter-drug Training Academy.

Multi-Jurisdictional Task Force

The budget request included $2.0 million for the Multi-Jurisdictional Counter-drug Task Force. The conferees understand that additional funds are needed to improve the Multi-Jurisdictional Counter-drug Task Force's training program by increasing the number of conventional courses, distance learning projects and state narcotics conventions for law enforcement officers. Therefore, the conferees recommend $3.0 million, an increase of $1.0 million for the Multi-Jurisdictional Counter-drug Task Force.

National Guard State Plans

The budget request included $29.0 million for National Guard Cargo/Mail Inspection Support and $118.6 million for National Guard General Support. The conferees note that beginning in fiscal year 1998, funds for cargo/mail inspection support were transferred from the general support account due to its high priority at the national level. While the conferees continue to endorse this program as a means to deny illegal drugs from entering the United States, the conferees believe that this program should compete with other high priority National Guard counter-narcotics operations. Therefore, the conferees recommend $147.6 million for National Guard General Support, an increase of $29.0 million, and a corresponding decrease of $29.0 million for National Guard Cargo/Mail Inspection Support.

JIATF-SOUTH

The conferees continue to be concerned with the impact that our military withdrawal from Panama will have upon U.S. drug interdiction capabilities. The Panamanian facilities provide a unique location from which to deploy U.S. counter-narcotics assets. The loss of these facilities will have a significant impact upon the U.S. ability to maintain the current level of drug interdiction efforts. Since the United States and the Government of Panama have been unable to reach an agreement regarding the continued deployment of U.S. military personnel to Panama after the remaining facilities are turned over at the end of 1999, the conferees believe it is imprudent to significantly expand and facilitate JIATF-South as recommended in the budget request. Until such an agreement is signed, the conferees believe that JIATF-South should operate with the same resources that it received for fiscal year 1998. Therefore, the conferees recommend a reduction of $17.0 million for this program.

Southern Air Forces Counter-Drug Support

The budget request included $24.4 million for Southern Air Forces (SOUTHAF) Counter-Drug Support, including $19.0 million for the operation and maintenance of ground mobile radars (GMRs) within the U.S. Southern Command area of operations. The conferees recommend $20.4 million for SOUTHAF Counter-Drug Support, a decrease of $4.0 million.

Ground-based end game operations-Mexico

The budget request included $16.0 million for the counter-narcotics training of the Armed Forces of Mexico; a significant increase from previous years. The conferees recommend $12.0 for this program; a decrease of $4.0 million.

Support for counter-drug activities of Peru and Colombia

Section 1033 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1998 (Public Law 105-85) authorized the Secretary of Defense to provide support for the counter-drug activities of the Governments of Peru and Colombia. The conferees wish to clarify that the intent of Congress was to provide non-lethal assistance, including unarmed riverine patrol boats, to establish a riverine interdiction program in Peru and Colombia. The conferees note that other programs exist in which the Government of Peru can acquire the weaponry necessary to arm these vessels.

LEGISLATIVE PROVISIONS ADOPTED

Program authority for Department of Defense support to other agencies for counter-drug activities (sec. 1021)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 1021) that would extend section 1004 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1991 through fiscal year 2000. The provision would also allow the Department of Defense to use counter-drug funds for any major renovation or modification of a Department of Defense facility being used for counter-narcotics purposes. Prior to using this authority for any such projects that will exceed $500,000, the Department must notify the congressional defense committees.

The Senate amendment contained a similar provision.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would extend section 1004 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1991 through fiscal year 2002.

Department of Defense support of National Guard drug interdiction and counter-drug activities (sec. 1022)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 334) that would make certain changes to the National Guard's authority to perform counter-narcotics activities. These changes would include the authorization to make minor purchases using National Guard counter-narcotics funding. This provision would also allow the Guard to provide expanded support to youth outreach programs. Finally, the provision would authorize the use of funds appropriated for counter-narcotics activities to be used for a member of the Guard's annual training as long as these funds were reimbursed with funds that were appropriated for training.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would limit the size of purchases to $5,000 per purchase order unless approval to exceed that amount is provided in advance by the Secretary of Defense. The amendment would further require that counter-narcotics activities not degrade military readiness, or increase the cost of training. The amendment would also require that in the case of unit participation in counter-narcotic activities, the missions will support valid unit training requirements. Finally, the amendment would clarify that the pay and benefits of a member of the Guard who is serving on full time active duty in support of the counter-narcotics activities of the Guard does not receive an amount of pay and benefits during his annual training more than the amount he would be entitled to if he were not performing these counter-narcotics activities.

Patrol Coastal Craft for drug interdiction by Southern Command (sec. 1023)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 331) that would provide $18.5 million within the counter-narcotics central transfer account for the increased deployment of the Department's Patrol Coastal Craft to the Caribbean and eastern Pacific. The Senate amendment also contained a provision (sec. 335) that would express the sense of the Congress that the Secretary of Defense should revise the Global Military Force Policy to treat counter-drug operations as a military operation other than war. Furthermore, the Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 311) that would require the U.S. Special Operations Command to use the resources that are saved within its operating budget as a result of funding the Patrol Coastal Craft within the counter-narcotics budget for training and related operations associated with its counter-proliferation and counter-terrorism missions.

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 1022) that would provide $24.4 million within the counter-narcotics central transfer account for the continued conduct of Operation Caper Focus.

The conferees include a single provision that would (1) express the sense of the Congress that the Secretary of Defense should ensure that the international drug interdiction and counter-drug activities of the Department of Defense are accorded adequate resources within the budget allocation of the Department to execute its counter-narcotics mission; (2) provide $10.5 million within the counter-narcotics central transfer account for the continued conduct of Operation Caper Focus; and (3) provide $14.5 million within the counter-narcotics central transfer account for the increased deployment of the Department's Patrol Coastal Craft to the Caribbean and eastern Pacific. The provision would also require that the $4.5 million that the Special Operations Command saved within its operating budget as a result of funding the Patrol Coastal Craft within the counter-narcotics budget be used for training and related operations associated with its counter-proliferation and counter-terrorism missions.

Subtitle D—Miscellaneous Report Requirements and Repeals

Repeal of unnecessary and obsolete reporting provisions (sec. 1031)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 1021) that would repeal certain obsolete reporting requirements imposed upon the Department of Defense.

The House recedes with an amendment which would retain an annual report on the use of money rentals for leases of non-excess property, and which would completely repeal a provision partially repealed in the Senate amendment.

Subtitle E—Armed Forces Retirement Home Appointment of Director and Deputy Director of the Naval Home (sec. 1041)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 1075) that would disestablish the civilian positions of director and deputy director of the Naval Home and would require that the Secretary of Defense appoint a director and deputy director from among military officers recommended by the military departments.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes.

Revision of inspection requirements relating to Armed Forces Retirement Home (sec. 1042)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 363) that would revise the current procedures for the periodic inspection of the Armed Forces Retirement Homes by the Inspector General of each of the military departments on an alternating basis, and would require that upon completion of these inspections, the report of the inspections shall be provided to the Congress.

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 1057) that would eliminate the requirement for the Department of Defense Inspector General to conduct inspections of the Armed Forces Retirement Homes, as well as review the inspections conducted by the inspectors general of the military departments. The recommended provision would require inspections of the homes every three years. Responsibility to conduct inspections would rotate among the three services on a schedule determined by the Secretary of Defense.

The Senate recedes with a clarifying amendment.

Clarification of land conveyance authority, Armed Forces Retirement Home (sec. 1043)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 1041) that would clarify subsection (a) of section 1053 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1997 (Public Law 104-201), to state clearly that the original purpose of this disposal provision was to authorize only the sale of a specific parcel of land at the Armed Forces Retirement Home, Washington, D.C. through an open bid process at not less than fair market value, with the receipts of the sale to be deposited in the Armed Forces Retirement Homes Trust Fund.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would direct the Armed Forces Retirement Home to proceed with the sale of a specific parcel of land at the Armed Forces Retirement Home, Washington, D.C. to a neighboring non-profit organization or an entity or entities related to such organization at fair market value, as determined by the Armed Forces Retirement Home Board based on an independent appraisal, to a neighboring non-profit organization or an entity or entities related to such organization.

The provision would further require that anyone who is convicted of knowingly participating in the exportation of merchandise in violation of Federal law, be fined or imprisoned for up to five years.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would require the Secretary of Defense to submit to Congress a plan to address the problems with the sale or other disposal of excess and surplus defense materials. The plan would include how the Department will (1) implement all appropriate demilitarization training, (2) improve oversight of demilitarization functions and the maintenance of demilitarization codes, and (3) assign accurate demilitarization codes. The Defense Finance and Accounting Service would continue to include pertinent information with the notification to the service member involved.

The Senate amendment contained a similar provision (sec. 1048), but limited the Department of Defense to a pilot program.

The House recedes with an amendment that would allow the Department to conduct a pilot program for three years and provide an annual report on the status of this program to the congressional defense committees.

Training of special operations forces with friendly foreign forces (sec. 1062)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 1043) that would amend section 2011 of title 10, United States Code, to improve the level of reporting associated with the authority of U.S. special operations forces to train with the forces of foreign nations and require that any such training receive the prior approval of the Secretary of Defense.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would limit the scope of the provision to changes in the regulations for, and the elements of the annual report on, the training of special operations forces with friendly foreign forces.

The conferees emphasize that, while improved interoperability and relations with the friendly foreign forces may be an ancillary benefit, the training of U.S. special operations forces under the authority of this section must clearly be the primary purpose of the training. The conferees also underscore that training with "other security forces" of a friendly foreign country, rather than with such country's armed forces, should be a rare exception. Finally, it is expected that the Secretary will not delegate the approval authority for such training to a level below an assistant secretary of defense and that both the Assistant Secretaries for International Security Affairs and Special Operations and Low Intensity Conflict should participate in the required approval process.

Research grants competitively awarded to service academies (sec. 1063)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 1052) that would permit the service academies to compete for and receive research grants offered by a corporation, fund, foundation, educational institution, or other similar entity that is organized and operated primarily for scientific, literary, or educational purposes that are awarded competitively.

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 1062) that would require the Secretary of Defense to report to the defense authorizing committees the costs to the Department of Defense (DOD) resulting from reallocations of the radio frequency spectrum authorized by DOD. The provision would also require that any entity that purchases any portion of the radio frequency spectrum previously reserved for use by any federal agency, including DOD, and that the Federal agency has relinquished for sale or lease, shall reimburse the Federal agency for the cost incurred by the Federal government to make that portion of the frequency spectrum available. The provision would further require a report in the annual budget request for each Federal department or agency that incurs costs for such frequency relocations. Finally, the provision would exempt from the reimbursement requirement those portions of the Federal radio frequency spectrum identified for reallocation in the first reallocation report submitted to the President and Congress, except for reallocations of that portion of the spectrum located in the 1710-1755 megahertz band.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would require the Secretary of Defense to prescribe uniform regulations establishing procedures by which the military departments shall provide periodic reports on the conduct and progress of investigations to the families of those involved in an aviation accident.

The conferees note the importance of a regular flow of accurate information to the families of those involved in an aviation accident and encourage the Secretary of Defense to include in regulations specific circumstances for providing information to the families. Additionally, the conferees encourage the Secretary of Defense to consider accepting comments from the National Transportation Safety Board in developing regulations pertaining to aviation accident investigations.

The conferees understand the important contribution that the facilities in Panama, including JIATF-South, provide. The conferees are aware of the unfortunate difficulty that the U.S. Government has encountered in its negotiations with the Government of Panama for the continued operation of these facilities as part of a multinational counter-narcotics center. The conferees encourage the Secretary of State to continue these important negotiations.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The House recedes.

The conferees believe that maintaining a strong, robust space launch capability, including modern and well maintained space launch facilities, is essential to preserving a strong military and scientific capability. The conferees believe that the reprogramming of any resources appropriated to ensure that space launch facilities are fully maintained in their best condition, should only be conducted if planned launches, or other programmed activities, are canceled.

Southwest border fence

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 333) that would require the Secretary of Defense to perform an analysis of the effectiveness of the Southwest border fence in reducing the flow of drugs into the United States before further expansion.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes.

The conferees are concerned with the continued transportation of narcotics across the Southwest border and into the United States. Over the past few years, the Department of Defense has explored several initiatives to reduce this flow of illegal drugs. One such initiative was the construction of a border fence along portions of the border. Although the conferees support such initiatives, the conferees believe that a thorough analysis should be performed to determine how the fence might be made more effective before the Department proceeds with any planned expansion. The conferees direct the Secretary of Defense to undertake such an analysis.

In the interim, the conferees recommend $3.0 million to facilitate completion of the Southwest border fence project from within the domestic law enforcement agencies support component of the Department of Defense Counter-Drug Plan.

Under the pilot program, the Secretary would be required to give a greater weight to technical and performance-related factors than to cost and price-related factors. The Secretary of the Navy would also be required to give significant weight to technical qualifications and past performance of the contractor and major subcontractors or team members of the contractor in complying with applicable legal requirements for environmental protection and worker safety.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes.

The conferees acknowledge the recommendations of the 1998 Report of the Interagency Panel on Ship Scrapping. Consistent with those recommendations, the conferees object to any congressionally mandated restrictions or prohibitions related to domestic or overseas scrapping of naval vessels.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The conferees have addressed this issue in a separate section in Title XXXI of this Act.

Sense of the Senate regarding the August 1995 assassination attempt against President Shevardnadze of Georgia

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 1081) that would express the sense of the Senate that the Russian Federation should extradite the alleged perpetrators of the August 5, 1995 assassination attempt on the life of President Shevardnadze to Georgia to stand trial, that the Russian Federation and the Russian Minister of Defense should cooperate and ensure that Russian military bases on Georgian territory are not used to facilitate the escape of perpetrators acting against the Government and committing acts in violation of the national sovereignty of Georgia, and that the U.S. Government should use all available authorities to provide assistance to ensure the safety of the President of Georgia.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes. However, the conferees do agree that the Russian Federation should respect the national sovereignty of Georgia and the Russian Ministry of Defense should cooperate to ensure that its military bases located on Georgian territory are not used to facilitate acts of terrorism and violence, nor used to protect and provide escape to perpetrators of terrorism or violence against the Georgian Government or its people.

The provision also stated that it was adopted as an exercise of the rulemaking process of the Senate and with full recognition of the constitutional right of the Senate to change its rules at any time.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes.

Cooperation between the Department of the Army and the Environmental Protection Agency in meeting the Chemical Weapons Convention requirements

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 1087) that would require the Department of Defense (DOD), in coordination with the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), to submit a report to the congressional defense committees by April 1, 1999. The report would address the mutual responsibilities of DOD and EPA with respect to the Resource Conservation and Recovery Act (RCRA)(42 U.S.C. 6901 et seq.) permit process related to fulfilling U.S. international obligations under the Chemical Weapons Convention (CWC).

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes.

The conferees note that compliance with international obligations to destroy the U.S. chemical weapons stockpile by April 28, 2007, as required under the CWC, is a national priority. Given the international obligation of the United States under the CWC, the President must ensure that DOD and the Army receive all necessary assistance from federal agencies to facilitate the safe and effective destruction of the lethal chemical stockpile.

The EPA is a federal agency with specific oversight responsibility for states with authorized hazardous waste programs under RCRA. The conferees expect EPA to exercise its oversight responsibility in a way that supports the DOD and the Army in the execution of CWC obligations. The conferees, however, have been apprised of EPA assertions that it is not adequately funded to meet its federal RCRA permitting responsibilities associated with CWC commitments. The conferees expect that EPA shall work in concert with federal, state, and local government entities in the successful resolution of issues related to the destruction of the U.S. chemical weapons stockpile, and that the EPA shall properly budget for these efforts.

The conferees are concerned about the possibility that inadequate EPA planning and budgeting could be used as a justification for authorization of the Army funding of EPA obligations. Such a justification would be inappropriate. In addition, there remains a question about the extent to which EPA must participate in the CWC RCRA permit process, particularly in states with authorized hazardous waste programs. The conferees agree that the level of EPA participation must not exceed the requirements related to federal regulatory oversight under RCRA.

The Army received specific authorization to reimburse states for their efforts in permitting chemical demilitarization facilities in the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1986, but there was no provision for EPA reimbursement. There is no statutory authority for the Army to reimburse EPA for federal regulatory oversight activities related to the CWC RCRA permit process.

The conferees direct the Secretary of Defense and the Administrator of the EPA to submit a report to the congressional defense committees by April 1, 1999 that includes the following: (1) a detailed description of the federal, state, and local RCRA permitting responsibilities related to CWC obligations to destroy the U.S. chemical stockpile, with particular focus on the federal regulatory role in states with authorized hazardous waste programs; (2) a description of the state authorized hazardous waste programs in those states with existing or projected chemical weapons destruction sites; (3) the level of technical assistance provided by EPA to its regional offices and to the state and local governments in the overall RCRA permitting process, the legal basis for such assistance, and how such assistance supports the national commitment to destroy U.S. chemical weapons, particularly in states with authorized hazardous waste programs; (4) the legal rationale, if any, for the Army to fund EPA technical assistance for EPA regional offices, and for the state and local governments in the RCRA permitting process associated with chemical weapons destruction, particularly in relation to state authorized hazardous waste programs; (5) the legal rationale, if any, for the Army to fund EPA attendance of meetings with the National Chemical Agent Demilitarization Workgroup, meetings between the Office of Solid Waste and the affected EPA Regional Offices and states, and meetings between the Office of Solid Waste, the Program Manager for Chemical Demilitarization, and DOD; (6) the legal rationale, if any, for DOD or the Army to provide funds to EPA for employment of full time equivalents (FTEs) to assist in the formulation of RCRA permits, the projected geographical location of the FTEs, and the projected function of the FTEs in relation to CWC RCRA permit requirements; (7) a complete explanation of the need, if any, for the Army to fund the EPA role with respect to CWC RCRA permit requirements, a complete description of the overall EPA functions and activities that may require Army funding, an identification of the other instances in which the Army has provided funds to EPA for other RCRA permit oversight activities, and the specific authority for the proposed level of EPA participation in CWC RCRA permit process; and (8) the Army and EPA funding levels within the President's budget projected to support the RCRA permit process related to CWC for fiscal year 1999 and the out years.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would codify the executive order which requires random drug testing of those serving in sensitive positions, and authorize the Secretary of Defense to test any employee of the Department of Defense if there is a reasonable suspicion that the employee uses illegal drugs.

TITLE XII—MATTERS RELATING TO OTHER NATIONS

LEGISLATIVE PROVISIONS ADOPTED

Subtitle A—United States Armed Forces in Bosnia and Herzegovina

United States armed forces in Bosnia and Herzegovina (secs. 1201–1205)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 1202) that would express the views and concerns of Congress regarding the participation of U.S. armed forces in NATO operations in Bosnia and would require the President to report to Congress on the continued participation of U.S. armed forces in NATO operations in Bosnia and the status of progress achieved in implementing the civilian tasks of the Dayton Accords on an annual basis. The provision would also require the Secretary of Defense to report to Congress by December 15, 1998 on the effects of the military operations in Bosnia on the readiness of U.S. armed forces and the ability of U.S. forces to conduct two nearly simultaneous major regional conflicts.

The Senate amendment contained three provisions regarding the continued participation of U.S. ground combat forces in NATO operations in Bosnia. One provision (sec. 1065) would express the sense of Congress that the funds sufficient to cover continued U.S. participation in the NATO operation in Bosnia should be included in the defense budget and in the Future Years Defense Program above the defense topline contained in the Balanced Budget Agreement of 1997, rather than through reprogrammings or rescissions of existing defense activities. Another provision (sec. 1066) would express concerns that U.S. armed forces should not act as civil police in Bosnia and would require the President to submit a report to Congress on the status of establishing a NATO force of gendarmes, to include information on the mission of the force, the composition of the force, and the extent to which, if any, U.S. forces will participate in the force.

Lastly, the Senate amendment included a provision (sec. 1072) that would express the sense of Congress that U.S. ground combat forces should not remain in Bosnia indefinitely, that a NATO-led follow-on force, without participation of U.S. combat forces, would be suitable to continue implementation of the Dayton Agreement if the European Security and Defense Identity is not sufficiently established, that our European allies should take steps to establish a European follow-on force, led either by the Western European Union (WEU) or NATO, and that the President should continue to consult closely with Congress on the progress in implementing the Dayton Agreement and in reducing and ultimately withdrawing U.S. ground combat forces from Bosnia. It would also require the President to report to Congress by September 30, 1998 on the impact on the security situation in Bosnia that would result from a phased reduction of U.S. military forces, and the prospects for establishing a self-sustaining peace and stable government in Bosnia. Finally, it would require the President to submit a report to Congress on the following: the performance objectives, to include the benchmarks reported in the latest semi-annual report submitted under section 7(b)(2) of the 1998 Supplemental Appropriations and Rescissions Act, and schedule for implementing the Dayton Agreement, to include objectives not specifically covered in the Dayton Agreement and support provided by U.S. forces to the military and non-military objectives. Along with the budget request for fiscal year 2000 and each time the President submits a proposal for funding continued operations of U.S. forces in Bosnia, the provision would require the President to submit a report to Congress including information on the mission of U.S. forces, the support provided by U.S. armed forces to military and non-military missions; U.S. armed forces participation in apprehending war criminals and any role in connection with civilian police functions; the role of U.S. armed forces in assisting in the resettlement of refugees and the support of U.S. armed forces in supporting international and local civilian authorities. The report would also include an assessment of the cost to the United States by fiscal year of carrying out the aforementioned missions, and a joint assessment by the Secretary of Defense and the Secretary of State on the status of planning for European military and paramilitary forces to take over the remaining military missions in Bosnia, and for the establishment and support of a forward-based U.S. rapid reaction force outside Bosnia that would be capable of responding rapidly to threats posed in Bosnia, and of providing support to a European follow-on force to ensure that it is fully capable of accomplishing the implementation of the Dayton Agreement.

The conferees agree to three provisions (secs. 1201–1204) that would combine, update, and clarify the provisions contained in the House bill and Senate amendment and to an additional provision (sec. 1205) that would contain definitions for the subtitle containing these provisions.

Subtitle B—Matters Relating to Contingency Operations

Report on involvement of Armed Forces in contingency and ongoing operations (sec. 1211)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 1030) that would require the Secretary of Defense to submit a report to the congressional defense committees outlining: 1) the effects of U.S. involvement in contingency operations on the retention and reenlistment of personnel in the armed forces; 2) the extent to which involvement in these operations has resulted in shortfalls in personnel and equipment; 3) the cost of these operations and the accounts from which the funds to pay these costs were drawn; and 4) the objectives of the operation and the set of conditions that defines the end of each operation.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes.

Submission of report on objectives of a contingency operation with requests for funding for the operation (sec. 1212)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 1031) that would require the Secretary of Defense to include with the initial funding request for any contingency operation involving the deployment of over 500 U.S. military personnel, a report outlining the objectives of the operation, and the conditions or date that defines the end of that operation.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes.

Subtitle C—Matters Relating to NATO and Europe

Limitation on United States share of costs of NATO expansion (sec. 1221)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 1211) that would limit the amount spent by the United States as its share of the total cost of enlarging the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) to 10 percent of the cost of expansion, or a total of $2.0 billion, whichever is less, for fiscal years 1999 through 2011.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would limit the U.S. share of the costs of enlarging NATO to include Poland, Hungary, and the Czech Republic to 25 percent of the commonly-funded costs, or $2.0 billion, whichever is less, for fiscal years 1999 through 2011.

Report on military capabilities of an expanded NATO alliance (sec. 1222)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 1203) that would require the Secretary of Defense to provide a report to Congress by March 15, 1999 on the planned future requirements and military capabilities of an enlarged North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO).

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with an amendment.

The conferees agree that continued U.S. participation in NATO advances U.S. national security interests in the region, as well as around the world. Additionally, the conferees endorse the concerns expressed by the House (H. Rept. 105-532) that information prepared both by the United States and NATO military authorities on the costs of enlarging the Alliance to include Poland, Hungary, and the Czech Republic was contradictory. However, the conferees understand that the differing information offered by the Department of Defense, the Congressional Budget Office, RAND, and NATO, in the varying reports submitted on the costs of enlarging the Alliance, as well as on the capabilities of the prospective new Alliance members and the future Alliance military capabilities and requirements, was the result of the use of different criteria and assumptions.

In an effort to compile all the information contained in the various reports of the DOD and NATO on the military requirements and costs of enlarging the Alliance, the conferees agree to a provision that would require the Secretary of Defense to provide a report to Congress by March 15, 1999 that would include information on the planned future military capabilities of an Alliance that includes Poland, Hungary and the Czech Republic, along with an assessment of the tactical, operational and strategic military requirements raised by their inclusion. The report is to include information on the military capabilities of the forces of Poland, Hungary and the Czech Republic, and their ability to achieve the minimum military requirements established by NATO prior to their anticipated accession to the Alliance in 1999, as well as the improvements to common Alliance military assets and to the national capabilities of current NATO members as a result of including these new prospective members in the Alliance.

In addition, the report is to include information on required improvements to the national military capabilities of prospective new members, and any additional necessary improvements to the common Alliance military assets to carry out both Article V of the Washington Treaty of 1949 and contingency operations.

Lastly, the report should include information on any additional assistance the United States may agree to provide on a bilateral basis to assist Hungary, Poland, and the Czech Republic in meeting additional requirements related to enlarging the Alliance.

Reports on the development of the European security and defense identity (sec. 1223)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 1032) that would require the Secretary of Defense to submit a report to the congressional defense committees by December 15, 1998, and thereafter submit a report on a semiannual basis, on the progress achieved in establishing an European Security and Defense Identity (ESDI) within the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO).

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment.

Several years ago, the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) decided to build a European pillar within NATO that would enable the Western European Union (WEU), with the consent of the Alliance, to assume the political control and strategic direction of NATO assets and capabilities. The establishment of an ESDI within the Alliance is a welcome and extremely important development. With the worldwide commitments of the United States, the successful development of an ESDI is very much in our national interests, since it could enable the WEU to carry out operations without the participation of U.S. Armed Forces.

The conferees agree to a provision that would require the Secretary of Defense to submit an initial report to the congressional defense committees by December 15, 1998 on the plans developed and actions taken to establish an ESDI. Thereafter, the report shall be submitted on a semiannual basis and shall include information on the status of progress made in developing an ESDI. The submission of semiannual reports on the progress in establishing an ESDI would be terminated when the Secretary of Defense reports that an ESDI has been successfully established.

Subtitle D—Other Matters

Limitation on the assignment of United States forces for certain United Nations purposes (sec. 1231)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 1044) that would prohibit the use of Department of Defense funds to assign any member of the armed forces to duty with the United Nations Rapidly Deployable Mission Headquarters.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with an amendment.

The conferees agree that not more than eight members of the U.S. Armed Forces may be assigned to the United Nations Rapidly Deployable Mission Headquarters during fiscal year 1999. Additionally, the conferees agree that no funds available to the Department of Defense during fiscal year 1999 may be used, either as a contribution to the United Nations to establish a United Nations standing international force, or to assign or detail U.S. Armed Forces to a United Nations Stand By Force.

Kyoto Protocol to the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change (sec. 1232)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 1210) that would provide that no provision of the Kyoto Protocol to the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change, or any related regulation, could restrict the procurement, training, or operation and maintenance of the U.S. Armed Forces.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with a technical amendment.

The conferees note that the Kyoto Protocol has not yet been submitted to the Senate, and as such, a full Senate debate on the ratification of the Kyoto Protocol has not taken place. It is not the intention of the conferees, through this provision, to predetermine the outcome of the Senate debate on the advice and consent to ratification of the Kyoto Protocol.

The conferees are aware that the Department of Defense has undertaken a number of activities to achieve greater efficiency in its operations. These include a broad-based effort to improve the energy efficiency of its buildings and facilities and an effort to improve the fuel efficiency of trucks and combat vehicles for the purpose of reducing the fuel logistics burden associated with the deployment of armed forces. The conferees do not intend to prohibit or discourage such efforts, provided that they are undertaken for a purpose other than the implementation of the Kyoto Protocol.

Defense burdensharing (sec. 1233)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 1084) that would amend section 1221 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1998, placing more emphasis on increasing allied burdensharing in the area of military contributions to defense and could take one or more actions: increase financial contributions to the payment of non-personnel costs to the U.S. Government for the stationing of U.S. military personnel in a foreign country, increase annual budgetary outlays for national defense, increase the amount of military assets that a country contributes to multinational military activities worldwide, or increase annual budgetary outlays for foreign assistance by September 30, 1999. The Secretary of Defense would be required to report to Congress by March 1, 1999, on the progress achieved in increasing allied defense burdensharing. The Secretary of Defense would also be required to provide an assessment to Congress by March 1, 1999, of forward deployed U.S. forces permanently stationed outside the United States and the national security interests that support the forward deployment of the forces, as well as the cost associated with stationing these elements outside the United States, and potential alternatives to meet national security interests or alliance requirements.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with a technical amendment.

Transfer of excess UH-1 Huey and AH-1 Cobra helicopters to foreign countries (sec. 1234)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 1215) that would require the Secretary of Defense to make all reasonable efforts to ensure that any excess UH-1 Huey or AH-1 Cobra helicopters that are to be transferred to a foreign country for flight operations are in the same maintenance condition that such a helicopter would require for operational use by U.S. military forces.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would require that any funds that are used for such maintenance be provided from funding sources outside of those available to the Department of Defense.

Transfers of naval vessels to certain foreign countries (sec. 1235)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 1013) that would transfer, on a grant, lease, or sale basis, upon notification to the Congress certain ships to foreign countries.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with a clarifying amendment.

Repeal of the landmine moratorium (sec. 1236)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 1205) that would repeal section 580 of the Foreign Operations Appropriations Act of 1996 (Public Law 104-107) which requires a one-year moratorium on the use of anti-personnel landmines by U.S. armed forces on February 12, 1999.

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 1074) that would provide the President authority to waive, if deemed to be in the national security interests, the one-year moratorium on the use of anti-personnel landmines by U.S. armed forces as required by section 580 of the Foreign Operations Appropriations Act of 1996.

The Senate recedes.

Application of authorities under the International Emergency Economic Powers Act to communist Chinese military companies (sec. 1237)

The Senate amendment contained provisions (secs. 3601-3602) that would apply certain authorities under the International Emergency Economic Powers Act (50 U.S.C. 1701 et seq.) to business entities controlled by the People's Liberation Army of the People's Republic of China, as well as require the Secretary of Defense to compile and continually update a list, to be published in the Federal Register, of the communist Chinese military companies that are operating, directly or indirectly, in the United States.

The House bill contained no similar provisions.

The House recedes with a technical amendment.

TITLE XIII—COOPERATIVE THREAT REDUCTION WITH STATES OF THE FORMER SOVIET UNION
LEGISLATIVE PROVISIONS ADOPTED

Cooperative Threat Reduction (CTR) program (secs. 1301-1309)

The budget request included $442.4 million for the Cooperative Threat Reduction (CTR) program.

The House bill contained provisions (secs. 1301-1311) that would authorize $417.4 million for the CTR program for fiscal year 1999, a $25.0 million decrease to the budget request; allocate fiscal year 1999 funding for various CTR programs and activities; prohibit the use of funds for specific activities; prohibit the use of funds for the construction of a chemical weapons destruction facility in Russia and reallocate a portion of these funds to additional strategic offensive elimination projects in Russia and Ukraine; limit the availability of CTR funds; require that future budget requests for CTR include a descriptive summary and funding breakout of activities; would limit the use of CTR funds until various reports, notifications and certifications are received by Congress; require a report on biological weapons activities in Russia; limit the use of CTR funds for biological proliferation prevention activities in Russia; and limit the use of CTR funds for strategic offensive elimination activities in Russia and Ukraine in excess of the budget request pending the receipt of a report.

The Senate amendment would authorize $440.4 million, a $2.0 million reduction to the budget request, and contained provisions (secs. 1036 and 1041) that would require the Secretary of Defense to report to the congressional defense committees on the need for and the feasibility of programs to further U.S. nonproliferation objectives regarding former Soviet experts in ballistic missiles and weapons of mass destruction; and would authorize the Secretary of Defense to provide assistance necessary to destroy, remove or obtain from a country, weapons of mass destruction or materials, equipment or technology related to the delivery or development of weapons of mass destruction.

The conferees agree to a series of provisions that would authorize $440.4 million for the CTR program, establish sublimits for CTR activities and provide the Secretary of Defense limited authority to exceed established sublimits for fiscal year 1999, pending appropriate Congressional notification.

In addition, the conferees prohibit CTR funds from being used for activities related to peacekeeping activities with Russia, the provision of housing, assistance to promote environmental restoration, to promote job retraining, or for the provision of assistance to Russia or any other state of the former Soviet Union to promote defense conversion. The conferees understand that the provision of housing for decommissioned officers in Russia remains an issue for Russia as it reduces its strategic military forces. Although the conferees reiterate their strong belief that CTR funds should not be used to provide housing, they encourage the appropriate agencies of the U.S. Government with responsibility for this issue to explore the matter of providing additional assistance as appropriate and urge the President to report to the Congress on any recommendations. The conferees will continue to review this issue in the future.

The conferees agree to limit the use of funds for chemical weapons destruction activities in Russia, pending a Presidential certification regarding Russia's chemical weapons program. In addition, the Department of Defense is required to submit as part of the Secretary's annual budget request to Congress a descriptive summary of the funds requested for the CTR program, to include the use of prior years CTR funds.

With regard to biological proliferation prevention activities in Russia, the conferees direct the Secretary of Defense to report to the congressional defense committees by March 1, 1999 on Russia's compliance with international agreements related to biological weapons and to provide an evaluation of the costs and benefits of collaborative research efforts between the United States and Russia. In addition, the conferees agree to limit the use of funds for biological weapons prevention activities in Russia until 15 days after the Secretary of Defense submits a report to the congressional defense committees regarding the use of CTR funds for cooperative research activities at biological research institutes in Russia.

The conferees also agree to require the Secretary of Defense, in consultation with the Secretary of Energy, to provide a report to the congressional defense committees no later than January 1, 1999 on their estimate of the number of individuals in the Former Soviet Union with expertise in weapons of mass destruction and the risks posed by that expertise if transferred to states potentially hostile to the United States. The report would also include a description of the activities conducted by the United States and other nations to assist in the employment of these experts in nonproliferation and non-military related endeavors, and an assessment of such activities that should be reduced, maintained or expanded.

Lastly, the conferees agree to provide the Secretary of Defense authority to use funds authorized for the CTR program to provide a country of the Former Soviet Union with emergency assistance to remove or obtain from that country weapons of mass destruction or materials, equipment or technology related to the development or delivery of weapons of mass destruction. The conferees agree that no funds authorized for strategic offensive elimination activities in Russia or Ukraine shall be used for this activity. Except in certain limited situations, the Secretary of Defense shall not provide such assistance until 15 days after written notification is received by the congressional defense committees.

TITLE XIV—DOMESTIC PREPAREDNESS FOR DEFENSE AGAINST WEAPONS OF MASS DESTRUCTION

LEGISLATIVE PROVISIONS ADOPTED
Defense against weapons of mass destruction (secs. 1401-1405)

The Department of Defense forwarded with its fiscal year 1999 budget request a number of legislative provisions to expand the ability of the Department of Defense to respond to domestic terrorist activity and the potential use by terrorists of weapons of mass destruction on U.S. territory.

The House bill contained a series of provisions (Title XIV) that would express the findings of Congress regarding the threat of terrorist use of weapons of mass destruction and the need to enhance domestic preparedness to respond to such incidents (sec. 1402), would direct the President to increase the effectiveness of the domestic emergency preparedness program and to report by January 31, 1999, the actions taken to develop an integrated program for such response (sec. 1411), would provide for an annual report on the program and recommendations for its improvement (sec. 1412); and would require the assessment of the threat and risk of terrorist employment of weapons of mass destruction against cities and other local areas (sec. 1413). The House bill would also establish an Advisory Commission to Assess Domestic Response Capabilities for Terrorism Involving Weapons of Mass Destruction to provide recommendations to the President and the Congress for improvements in Federal, State, and local domestic emergency preparedness (secs. 1421-1429).

The Senate amendment contained no similar provisions.

The conferees agree that there is a need to improve domestic emergency preparedness to respond to the threat of terrorist use of weapons of mass destruction in the United States. The conferees are also aware that nearly 40 Federal departments and agencies are involved in combating terrorism (including the Departments of Justice, Defense, Energy, Health and Human Services, and the Federal Emergency Management Agency), and are concerned that the efforts of the Federal government to enhance domestic preparedness to respond to an incident involving weapons of mass destruction are hampered by incomplete interagency coordination and by the overlapping jurisdictions and missions of the various Federal departments and agencies. As a consequence, the conferees are concerned that state and local emergency response agencies are often presented with different and/or competing requirements and program priorities from the responsible Federal agencies.

The conferees are also aware of the actions taken by the President in Presidential Decision Directive 62, pursuant to direction contained in section 1441 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1997 (Public Law 104-201), to establish the office of the National Coordinator for Security, Infrastructure Protection and Counter-Terrorism to oversee policies and programs in these areas. However, the conferees are not aware of specific actions that have been taken to insure an integrated, interagency program for improving domestic emergency response to the potential terrorist threat. The conferees are concerned that the Congress is not being kept adequately informed of the activities of the National Coordinator and the status of efforts undertaken to implement the responsibilities of the Office, pursuant to direction contained within section 1442 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1997. The conferees direct the National Coordinator to provide the congressional defense committees with a report by March 1, 1999 on the status of activities and efforts undertaken to coordinate policy and countermeasures against the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction.

The conferees agree to provisions that would require the President (sec. 1411) to increase the effectiveness of the domestic emergency preparedness program at the Federal, State, and local levels by establishing an integrated program built upon the program established under the Defense Against Weapons of Mass Destruction Act of 1996, and to submit a report to Congress by January 31, 1999 that outlines the actions taken in this regard. The conferees also agree to a provision (sec. 1412) that would amend the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1998 (Public Law 105-85) to include an annex to the report on oversight of counterterrorism and antiterrorism activities of the Federal government, submitted by the Director of the Office of Management and Budget, that would include information on the Federal government domestic emergency response program, and any recommendations for improving Federal, state and local domestic emergency response.

Further, the conferees agree to a provision (sec. 1413) that would require the Attorney General, in consultation with the Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation and representatives of other Federal agencies and departments, and state and local agencies, to develop and test methodologies for assessing the threat and risk of terrorist employment of weapons of mass destruction against cities and local areas. Information from such assessments could be used to help determine the training and equipment requirements necessary for an effective domestic emergency response program.

Finally, the conferees agree to a provision (sec. 1421) that would require the Secretary of Defense, in consultation with the Attorney General, the Secretary of Energy, the Secretary of Health and Human Services, and the Director of the Federal Emergency Management Agency to enter into a contract with a federally funded research and development center to establish a panel to assess the capabilities for domestic response to terrorism involving weapons of mass destruction and to report to the President and the Congress recommendations for improvements in Federal, state, and local domestic emergency preparedness for such response. The conferees emphasize the guidance in the provision that the membership of the panel be drawn from private citizens with knowledge and expertise in emergency response matters, and direct that the recommendations of the local emergency response community be sought in the selection of the members of the panel.

Elsewhere in this Act, the conferees have included a provision (sec. 511) that would provide expanded authority for use of the Reserve Components to respond to domestic emergencies involving the use of weapons of mass destruction.

TITLE XV—MATTERS RELATING TO ARMS CONTROL, EXPORT CONTROLS, AND COUNTERPROLIFERATION

LEGISLATIVE PROVISIONS ADOPTED

Subtitle A—Arms Control Matters

One-year extension of limitation on retirement or dismantlement of strategic nuclear delivery systems (sec. 1501)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 1043) that would extend by one year section 1302(e) of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1998 (Public Law 105-85).

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with a technical amendment.

Transmission of executive branch reports providing Congress with classified summaries of arms control developments (sec. 1502)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 1032) that would direct the Director of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency (ACDA), or the Secretary of State (if ACDA is merged into the Department of State), to submit reports to Congress on a periodic basis summarizing the status of negotiations on arms control matters, and developments in the various arms control forums, in which the United States is a participant. These forums include the Joint Compliance and Inspection Commission, the Joint Verification Commission, the Open Skies Consultative Commission, the Standing Consultative Commission, and the Joint Consultative Group.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with a clarifying amendment.

Report on adequacy of emergency communications capabilities between the United States and Russia (sec. 1503)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 1044) that would express the sense of the Congress that a direct line of communications between U.S. and Russian commanders of strategic forces would be a useful confidence building tool, and would require the Secretary of Defense to submit a report to the Committee on Armed Services of the Senate and the House Committee on National Security on the feasibility of initiating discussions between the United States and Russia on such a direct line of communication.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would require the Secretary of Defense to submit a report within three months of enactment of this Act on the status and adequacy of current direct communications capabilities between the governments of the United States and the Russian Federation. The report is to include recommendations for improvements, if necessary, to improve direct communications capabilities. In addition, the report would include an assessment of the feasibility and the desirability of establishing communications links between United States commanders in chief and their Russian counterparts.

Russian nonstrategic nuclear weapons (sec. 1504)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 1070) that would express concerns of the Senate that the Russian nonstrategic nuclear arsenal, estimated to include around 7,000 to 12,000 tactical nuclear weapons, may pose a great threat in the world if they are sold or are stolen, and could become strategically destabilizing. Since the end of the Cold War, the United States has unilaterally reduced its tactical nuclear stockpile by almost ninety percent, and the Senate calls on the Russian Federation to live up to its pledges in 1991 and 1992 to implement steep reductions in its tactical nuclear stockpile. The provision would require the Secretary of Defense to submit a report to the Congress by March 15, 1999 on the current Russian Federation tactical nuclear stockpile, including an assessment of the strategic implications of using tactical nuclear weapons in a strategic role, as well as an assessment of the Russian command and control of its tactical nuclear stockpile and the threat posed by the possible sale, or theft of tactical nuclear weapons, and past, current and planned efforts of the United States to work cooperatively with the Russian Federation to reduce its tactical nuclear stockpile and related fissile material.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would express the concerns of the Congress that the vast Russian Federation tactical nuclear stockpile poses a grave threat to the world, and that the Russian Federation should live up to its pledges in 1991 and 1992 to significantly reduce its tactical nuclear stockpile.

In addition, the conferees direct the Secretary of Defense to submit a report to the Congress by March 15, 1999, including the views of the Director of Central Intelligence and the commander of the United States Strategic Command, on the current Russian Federation tactical nuclear stockpile, assessing the strategic and destabilizing implications of the use of tactical nuclear weapons used in a strategic role. In addition, the report should include an analysis of Russia's command and control of its tactical nuclear stockpile, and the threat posed by the theft, sale or unauthorized use of the warheads of these weapons. Lastly, the report should include a summary of past, current, and planned U.S. efforts to assist Russia in reducing its stockpile, as well as a summary of how the United States would cope militarily if Russia threatens to employ or actually use its tactical nuclear weapons in a regional conflict involving the United States or its allies.

Subtitle B—Satellite Export Controls

Satellite export controls (secs. 1511-1516)

The House bill contained provisions (secs. 1206-1209 and 1212) regarding the export of satellites of U.S. origin and their launch on space launch vehicles owned by the People's Republic of China (PRC). The provisions would prohibit the participation of U.S. persons in the investigations of satellite launch failures; prohibit the export of missile equipment and technology to the PRC; prohibit the export or reexport of satellites, information, equipment and technology to the PRC; and transfer the jurisdiction for licensing the export of satellites and satellite components to the Department of State.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provisions.

The conferees agree to transfer the jurisdiction for the export of satellites to the U.S. Munitions List, administered by the Department of State, effective March 15, 1999, and direct the Secretary of State, in consultation with the Secretary of Defense and the Secretary of Commerce, to report to the Congress by January 1, 1999 on steps necessary to implement the transfer in a manner that will permit timely and orderly processing of applications for export licenses, consistent with current law. The conferees understand that the transfer of these advanced technologies to the jurisdiction of the Department of State may result in the need for additional personnel to assist in the evaluation of license applications. To provide additional resources for this purpose, the conferees agree to a provision that would amend section 45 of the State Department Basic Authorities Act of 1956 to allow the Office of Defense Trade Controls of the Department of State to retain all registration fees, which are to be used for the payment of expenses incurred in acquiring additional personnel to evaluate and process license applications, as well as to improve the monitoring of compliance with the terms of the licenses.

The conferees also agree to a provision that would require the President to certify to Congress in advance of any export to the PRC of missile technology or equipment, as defined in section 74 of the Arms Export Control Act, that the export will not be detrimental to the U.S. space launch industry and that the export will not measurably improve the missile or space launch capabilities of the PRC. The conferees note that this certification is not, and is not intended to be, a prohibition on the export of U.S. satellites to be launched by the PRC, but is intended to ensure that U.S. national security would not be jeopardized by any such export.

In addition to the transfer of jurisdiction to the U.S. Munitions List, the conferees direct the President to implement a series of actions to improve the national security controls on the export licensing of satellites and their related items not later than 45 days after enactment of this Act. These actions include, among other requirements, ensuring the full reimbursement to the Department of Defense for the costs of providing launch monitoring services, to ensure that no unauthorized transfer of technology occurs, by the person or entity receiving such services with respect to a satellite launch in a foreign country. The provision also requires the Secretary of Defense to establish a program to recruit, train and maintain a staff of personnel dedicated to monitoring foreign launches of U.S. satellites. The conferees agree to provide an exception to these increased national security controls to countries that are members of NATO or are major non-NATO allies of the United States.

The President is authorized by section 902 of the Foreign Relations Authorization Act for Fiscal Years 1990 and 1991 to waive certain restrictions regarding the export of satellites to China, but must report to the Congress on the waiver of these restrictions. In addition to the report required by section 902(b), the conferees agree that a detailed justification shall accompany this report setting forth information related to the militarily-sensitive characteristics integrated within or associated with the satellite, an estimate of the number of U.S. personnel necessary in-country to monitor the proposed launch, a description of the U.S. Government's plan to monitor the proposed launch, the estimated cost to the Department of Defense to provide monitors for the launch and the amount to be reimbursed to the Department, and the national security interests for launching the satellite in a foreign country. The conferees direct the President to include information in the report regarding the impact of the export of satellites to the PRC on U.S. employment, including the creation of jobs in the United States or, in the event of a denial of an export license, the loss of jobs in the United States. Additionally, the report is to include information related to the balance of trade between the United States and the PRC and the transition of the PRC from a nonmarket economy to a market economy.

Lastly, the conferees understand that, with transfer of satellites and related items to the U.S. Munitions List, and the enhanced role of the Department of Defense in export control activities, there may be a requirement for additional personnel in the Defense Technology Security Administration (DTSA) (or any successor organization), to assist in the evaluation of license applications, as well as to monitor the foreign launches of U.S. satellites. The conferees expect the Department to include in its report to the congressional defense committees any requirements for additional personnel. Additionally, the conferees believe that the Department may have available through the On-Site Inspection Agency (OSIA) personnel who would be suitable to perform such monitoring tasks, as required by this Act, and direct the Department to report on the possibility of using OSIA personnel in the monitoring of foreign launches, as well as in the evaluation of, and compliance with, license applications.

The conferees emphasize that the agreement to transfer commercial communication satellites and their related items from the Commerce Control List to the Munitions List is not done with the intention of penalizing or harming an important U.S. industry or the competitive posture of the U.S. satellite industry. Rather, it is the intention of the conferees to affirm the importance of U.S. national security interests in considering the export of advanced technology to foreign countries, which might enhance or contribute to their military capabilities.

Subtitle C—Other Export Control Matters
Authority for export control activities of the Department of Defense (sec. 1521)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 904) that would invest in the Under Secretary of Defense for Policy responsibility for the overall supervision of activities of the Department of Defense relating to export controls and require a report on the plans of the Secretary of Defense to implement this provision.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The conferees agree to a provision that would establish a Deputy Under Secretary of Defense for Technology Security Policy, whose principal responsibilities would include the supervision and direction of activities of the Defense Technology Security Administration, or any successor organization charged with similar responsibilities, and other activities of the Department of Defense related to export controls. Because the position does not require Senate confirmation, the conferees express their view that this position be filled by a qualified individual with knowledge of the military implications of technology exports. The Secretary of Defense would be required to report to the congressional defense committees on the plans for implementing this provision, to include any organizational changes to the Department, and a description of the role of the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff in the export control activities of the Department of Defense.

Release of export information by the Department of Commerce to other agencies for the purpose of national security assessment (sec. 1522)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 1213) that would require the Secretary of Commerce to transmit post-export information to the Director of Central Intelligence, the Secretary of Defense, and the Secretary of Energy for the purpose of conducting national security risk assessments within five days of receiving a request for such information. The provision would also allow the Director of Central Intelligence, the Secretary of Defense, and the Secretary of Energy to delegate authority to other officials within their respective departments or agencies to request such information from the Department of Commerce.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would require the Department of Commerce to respond within 10 days of receiving a request for such information in order to conduct national security risk assessments. The amendment would expand the officials authorized to request information that is necessary to conduct national security risk assessments, to include the Secretary of State.

Nuclear export reporting requirement (sec. 1523)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 1216) that would require prior congressional notification of the export or retransfer of special nuclear materials or production facilities, as defined by the Atomic Energy Agency Act of 1954, to any country that is not a member of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development. The notification would be accompanied by a report describing the details of the proposed export, and would be submitted to the Congress at least 30 days prior to the proposed export unless the President determines that an emergency exists which requires its immediate approval.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would require the President to notify Congress upon the granting of a license for the export or re-export of nuclear material, technology or equipment by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission to countries determined by the President to have detonated nuclear explosive devices and that are not members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO).

Execution of objection authority within the Department of Defense (sec. 1524)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 1214) that would amend section 1211 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1998 to provide authority to the Secretary of Defense to delegate objection authority to a Department of Defense official at the Assistant Secretary level with regard to the export or re-export of digital computers with a composite theoretical performance level of more than 2000 millions of theoretical operations per second (MTOPS), or such other composite theoretical performance level that may be subsequently established by the President.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with a technical amendment.

Subtitle D—Counterproliferation Matters

One-year extension of counterproliferation authorities for support of United Nations Special Commission on Iraq (sec. 1531)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 1204) that would extend the authority of the Department of Defense to provide support to the United Nations Special Commission on Iraq (UNSCOM) under the Weapons of Mass Destruction Control Act of 1992 for one year.

The Senate amendment contained a similar provision (sec. 1042).

The Senate recedes with a clarifying amendment.

The conferees support the extension of this authority given efforts by Iraq to preserve a weapons of mass destruction capability and its interference with the work of the Special Commission. The conferees raise concerns that the weapons inspection process has been hampered by Iraq's flagrant violation of its obligations under the United Nations Security Council resolutions and its efforts to seek modifications to the inspections regime through the expulsion of U.S. inspectors and the suspension of the monitoring program.

The conferees endorse concerns expressed in the House report (H. Rept. 105-532) regarding continued provision of support by the Department of Defense for UNSCOM activities. The conferees agree that the United States should more vigorously undertake efforts to negotiate an agreement with the United Nations to reimburse the Department of Defense for expenses incurred in providing support to UNSCOM.

The conferees direct the Secretary of Defense, in consultation with the Secretary of State, to submit a report to the congressional defense committees by December 1, 1998 describing the efforts undertaken by the Department of Defense to seek reimbursement, the specific support activities for which reimbursement would be requested, and the results of discussions with United Nations officials on the request of the United States Government.

Sense of Congress on Nuclear Tests in South Asia (sec. 1532)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 1071) that would express the sense of the Senate with regard to condemning India and Pakistan for testing nuclear devices and calling for cessation of nuclear testing, steps to prevent the transfer of technology that could further exacerbate the arms race in South Asia, U.S. and international mediation to promote peace and stability in South Asia and to resolve the dispute over Kashmir, the reevaluation of U.S. bilateral relations with both nations, and for India and Pakistan to establish active dialogue on differences to minimize the potential for future conflict.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would update and clarify the provision as a sense of Congress.

Report on requirements for response to increased missile threat in Asia-Pacific region (sec. 1533)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 1086) that would require the Secretary of Defense to conduct a study of architecture requirements for the establishment and operation of a theater ballistic missile defense system in the Asia-Pacific region that would have the capability to protect key regional allies of the United States.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with a clarifying amendment.

The conferees understand the phrase "key regional allies of the United States" to include Japan, South Korea, and Taiwan.

DIVISION B—MILITARY CONSTRUCTION AUTHORIZATIONS

OVERVIEW

The budget request for fiscal year 1999 included $7,778,074,000 for military construction and family housing.

The House bill would authorize $8,228,074,000 for military construction and family housing.

The Senate amendment would provide $8,463,940,000 for this purpose.

The conferees recommend authorization of appropriations of $8,443,742,000 for military construction and family housing, including general reductions and termination of prior year projects.

TITLE XXI—ARMY
FISCAL YEAR 1999

Overview

The House bill would authorize $2,010,036,000 for Army military construction and family housing programs for fiscal year 1999.

The Senate amendment would authorize $2,037,965,000 for this purpose.

The conferees recommend authorization of appropriations of $2,098,713,000 for Army military construction and family housing for fiscal year 1999.

The conferees agree to general reductions of $13,639,000 in the authorization of appropriations for the Army military construction and military family housing accounts. The reductions are to be offset by savings from favorable bids, reduced overhead costs, and cancellations due to force structure changes. The general reductions shall not cancel any military construction authorized by title XXI of this Act.

ITEMS OF SPECIAL INTEREST

Improvements of Military Family Housing, Army

The conferees recommend that, within authorized amounts for improvements to military family housing and facilities, the Secretary of the Army execute the following projects: $7,400,000 for Whole Neighborhood

- Modeling medical device labeling revisions
- Forecasting medical device manufacturer compliance responses and costs
- Calculating with a formal model medical device relabeling costs

1.2 Number of Labels Affected per Medical Device

The FDA-mandated labeling statement is required on all device labels, including the principal display panel of the device packaging, the outside package, container, or wrapper, and the immediate device package, container, or wrapper. The statement must also appear on promotional materials. Where applicable, package inserts and Instructions for Use pamphlets must also be revised. While some labeling also includes physician operating manuals, technician or maintenance manuals, or other lengthy labeling, the natural rubber-containing devices generally do not include these items. ERG interpreted the regulation not to require a statement on shipping cartons.

FDA surveyed its medical device reviewers for the affected product categories and solicited information on the number of labels included in product shipments. FDA's reviewers estimated for most product categories that two to three device labels would be affected. Based on these inputs, and to ensure that costs are not underestimated, ERG used an estimate of 3 levels of labeling per device in developing the cost estimates.¹

¹ The three levels of labeling should not be interpreted as three labels per medical device. Based on discussions with medical device manufacturers, ERG determined that most of the natural rubber-containing medical devices are not sold individually but rather in cases consisting of numerous units. ERG assumed that a representative case (third level packaging) has four boxes (second level packaging) each of which contains ten individually wrapped (primary packaging) units of the given medical device. Thus, the number of labels per case is 45 in the cost computations.

1.3 Number of Medical Devices Categories and Models Affected

FDA identified 43 medical device categories that are addressed by the regulation. FDA device reviewers also estimated the percentage of devices in each category that are covered by the regulation. Additionally, an estimated 15 percent of in vitro diagnostic kits (IVDs), which are classified in a number of medical device categories, are covered by the regulation (FDA, Division of Clinical Laboratory Devices, 1998). Table 1-1 lists the device categories, the number of listed devices per category (i.e., the number of devices manufacturers are authorized to offer for sale), and the percentage share of devices within each category that contains natural rubber components that contact humans. The regulated devices include 5 categories of tracheal tubes, 4 of condoms, and 3 of catheters.

Within each of the medical device categories, it was also necessary to estimate the number of device models that are distinctly labeled. Manufacturers separately prepare and print each set of labels and therefore their labeling costs will be a multiple of the number of labels they revise. To address this point, ERG collected sales catalogues for approximately one-half of the medical device categories covered. The catalogues provided sufficient information to support estimates of the number of distinctly labeled models. ERG estimated that on average manufacturers sold 14 models of each of the listed medical devices. In developing these estimates, ERG was cognizant both of the number of different models sold (number of sizes, variety of styles), and of the possibility that numerous similar models will be packaged with the same base set of labeling. Manufacturers often use a production line labeling machine or other method to print a distinguishing model number on different models that are otherwise shipped with identical labeling. Similarly, manufacturers often prepare Instructions for Use and other labels to be applicable for multiple device models. In such cases, a manufacturer that sells ten models of a given device might only be changing one set of labeling. For IVDs, a separate estimate was made that there is typically only 1 model per listed device. ERG's estimates of the number of models affected are displayed in Table 1-2.

LEGISLATIVE PROVISIONS ADOPTED

Subtitle A—National Security Programs
Authorizations*Weapons activities (sec. 3101)*

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 3101) that would authorize $4.5 billion for weapons activities and an offset of $340.9 million to account for available uncosted, unobligated prior year funds.

The Senate bill contained a similar provision (sec. 3101) that would authorize $4.5 billion for weapons activities and an offset of $145.0 million to account for available uncosted, unobligated prior year funds.

The House recedes in part and the Senate recedes in part.

The conferees recommend authorization of $4.5 billion for atomic energy defense weapons activities of the Department of Energy, a reduction of $2.0 million from the requested amount of $4.5 billion. The amount authorized is for the following activities: $2.1 billion for stockpile stewardship, a reduction of $40.0 million; $2.1 billion for stockpile management activities, an increase of $62.1 million; and $250.0 million for program direction, a reduction of $10.5 million. The conferees recommend an undistributed reduction of $13.6 million to stockpile stewardship and stockpile management construction projects. The conferees further recommend an undistributed reduction of $178.9 million to operating and management and program direction funds to be offset by available uncosted, unobligated prior year funds.

Stockpile stewardship programs

The conferees recommend $487.0 million for the Accelerated Strategic Computing Initiative (ASCI) and Stockpile Computing program, a reduction of $30.0 million. The conferees note that even at this reduced level of funding, the ASCI program will experience significant growth over fiscal year 1998 funding levels.

The conferees believe that the Department has not fully justified the rapid growth requested for this program or the pace of acquisition of added computational capacities. The conferees believe that the proposed reduction will have no significant impact on the Department's stockpile stewardship and management programs. The conferees strongly encourage the Department to slow the rate of growth in this program in future fiscal years.

The conferees support the Secretary of Energy's commitment to fund cooperative efforts with the Pittsburgh Supercomputing Center. The conferees note, however, that the utilization rate of existing DOE-owned supercomputers is very low. The conferees direct the Secretary of Energy to report to the congressional defense committees on the justification for such leases, and whether any such leased capabilities can better meet the Department's supercomputing needs in lieu of planned acquisitions proposed within the ASCI program.

Stockpile management programs

Of the funds available for stockpile management, the conferees recommend an increase of $58.5 million for weapons production plants, to be allocated as follows: $25.0 million for the Pantex Plant to support scheduled workload requirements associated with weapons dismantlement activities and for skills retention; $15.5 million for the Kansas City Plant to support advanced manufacturing efforts such as the Advanced Development Program and for skills retention; $13.0 million for the Y-12 Plant to support maintenance of core stockpile management capabilities; and $5.0 million for the Savannah River Site to support infrastructure and maintenance activities.

The Senate report (S. Rpt. 105-189) encouraged the Assistant Secretary for Defense

Programs to create a stockpile stewardship and management council to advise the Assistant Secretary on programmatic and budget issues related to the Department's weapons missions. The conferees address this issue in a separate provision in this title.

Consistent with the Senate report, the conferees direct the Secretary of Energy and Secretary of Defense to prepare a long range plan identifying pit production requirements, including quantities by warhead type, schedules, costs, and siting options. The report should also identify the military requirements and assumptions underlying each option and include options that reflect various potential stockpile levels. The report should be submitted to the Committee on Armed Services of the Senate and the Committee on National Security of the House of Representatives in both unclassified and classified form not later than March 1, 1999.

Technology transfer and education

The conferees recommend $59.0 million for technology transfer and education activities. Of this amount, the conferees recommend $10.0 million for the American Textiles Partnership project.

Program direction

The conferees recommend a $10.5 million reduction to the budget request for program direction. The conferees believe that the reduction can be achieved through continued efficiency savings to be gained from realignment efforts described in the Institute for Defense Analysis report on the Department's management structure for weapons activities.

Construction projects

The conferees recommend a reduction of $30.0 million to stockpile stewardship and stockpile management construction projects, to be allocated as follows: a reduction of $11.0 million from the chemistry and metallurgy research facility renovation project (95-D-102) to reflect continued delays and suspended operations at that facility; a reduction of $5.4 million from the nuclear material storage facility renovation project (97-D-122) to reflect delays in final design and deferral of planned construction activities; and an undistributed reduction of $13.6 million.

The conferees compliment the Director of Los Alamos National Laboratory on the establishment of an external evaluation team to review laboratory construction projects, including laboratory management practices, management tools, organization, and training. The conferees understand that the external team will make recommendations to the Director for systematic improvements to current practices. The conferees endorse this approach.

Tritium production

The conferees do not believe the Department's fiscal year 1999 budget request of $157.0 million for tritium production to be credible. The conferees note that the requirement to deliver new tritium by the year 2005 for the light water reactor and the year 2007 for the accelerator, as identified in the Nuclear Weapons Stockpile Memorandum, has not changed. The conferees believe that the Department's unwillingness to include funding for the acquisition of a new tritium source in its proposed out year funding plan is unacceptable. Further, the conferees note that the fiscal year 1999 budget request does not appear to be sufficient to complete the Department's own dual track tritium strategy. The conferees are very concerned that the Department did not request sufficient funds to continue evaluation of both technologies being considered under the dual track approach. The conferees recommend an increase of $20.0 million for design and research associated with the accelerator production of tritium option.

The conferees direct the Secretary of Energy to submit to the congressional defense committees a plan regarding how all fiscal year 1999 tritium funds will be allocated. The plan shall be submitted not later than 45 days after enactment of this Act.

Inertial confinement fusion

The budget request included $213.8 million for the inertial confinement fusion (ICF) program. The conferees believe that work by the University of Rochester's Laboratory for Laser Energetics with the Omega laser is an essential element of the ICF program. The conferees recommend the requested amount and direct that, within the amount available, the $29.0 million be allocated for the Laboratory for Laser Energetics.

Defense environmental restoration and waste management (sec. 3102)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 3102) that would authorize $5.8 billion for defense environmental restoration and waste management activities (also known as the Environmental Management program), including defense environmental management privatization, and an offset of $94.1 million to account for available uncosted, unobligated prior year funds, for a total reduction of $76.4 million to the budget request.

The Senate amendment contained a similar provision (sec. 3102) that would authorize $5.3 billion for defense environmental restoration and waste management activities, excluding defense environmental management privatization, and an offset of $21.0 million to account for available uncosted, unobligated prior year funds, for a total increase of $36.0 million to the budget request.

The House recedes in part and the Senate recedes in part.

The conferees recommend authorization of $5.4 billion for defense environmental management activities, excluding defense environmental management privatization, an increase of $85.9 million to the budget request. The amount authorized is for the following activities: $1.0 billion for closure projects, an increase of $32.0 million; $1.0 billion for site and project completion, an increase of $20.0 million; $2.7 billion for post-2006 completion, an increase of $71.0 million; $250.0 million for technology development, an increase of $57.0 million; $346.2 million for program direction, the amount of the budget request. The conferees recommend an undistributed reduction of $94.1 million to be offset by available uncosted, unobligated prior year funds.

Post-2006 completion

Of the amounts authorized for post-2006 completion, the conferees recommend an increase of $5.0 million to the National Spent Fuel Program to address regulatory and repository issues associated with Department of Energy owned spent nuclear fuel, an increase of $10.0 million to accelerate research and treatment of high level nuclear wastes at the Idaho National Engineering and Environmental Laboratory, an increase of $18.0 million to drain single shell tanks at the Hanford site, an increase of $30.0 million for augmentation of the Defense Waste Processing Facility operations and modification of in-tank precipitation process equipment at the Savannah River Site to address problems associated with the release of explosive benzene, and an increase of $8.0 million to assist the State of New Mexico with completion of a bypass around Santa Fe to accommodate shipments of materials to the Waste Isolation Pilot Plant. The conferees recommend full funding for the F-canyon and H-canyon materials processing facilities.

Site and project completion

Of the amounts authorized for site and project completion, the conferees recommend an increase of $20.0 million for the heavy water processing project at the Savannah River Site. The conferees understand that this project will result in net revenues to the government over the next five years.

Technology development

The conferees are concerned that the budget request for the Office of Science and Technology is inadequate. Recent departmental testimony to the Committee on Armed Services of the Senate and findings in the "Accelerating Cleanup—Pathways to Closure" report have identified that the Department cannot meet its accelerated closure goals without aggressive application of new technologies. The conferees agree with the Department's assessment of the need for increased use of innovative technology at DOE facilities. The conferees encourage the Department to revise its performance measures for facility managers to include the application of new technology in site cleanup activities.

The conferees encourage DOE to continue cooperative efforts with Federal and State regulators and non-profit organizations to facilitate the rapid deployment of innovative technologies at DOE sites. This effort should include cooperative efforts to assist the implementation of more uniform technology verification and regulatory acceptance criteria to DOE-developed technologies.

The conferees direct the Secretary of Energy to submit a report to Congress on the proposed uses of the $57.0 million increase in this account.

No funds authorized to be appropriated pursuant to this section are available to support, or enter into cooperative efforts in support of, the Russian Nuclear Cities Initiative, or any other foreign assistance program. The conferees continue to support cooperative programs with international partners that facilitate environmental cleanup or waste management activities at Department of Energy sites.

Off-site disposal of low level waste

The conferees are concerned that the Department has only one commercial low-level waste disposal option available. Although this facility has a satisfactory operating record and has proven to be a cost effective option for waste disposal, it remains the Department's sole large-scale commercial disposal option. The conferees encourage the Department to move forward with a national procurement, as announced by the Secretary of Energy, to initiate open competition for the Department's off-site waste disposal contracts.

Other defense activities (sec. 3103)

The budget request included $1.667 billion for Other Defense Activities for the Department of Energy (DOE) for fiscal year 1999, which included an offset to user organizations of $20.0 million.

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 3103) that would authorize a $33.6 million increase to the budget request.

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 3103) that would authorize a $5.0 million increase to the budget request.

The conferees recommend authorization of $1.716 billion for other defense activities, an increase of $27.0 million to the budget request, for the following activities: $679.3 million for nonproliferation and national security activities, of which $503.5 million is for verification and control technology activities; $168.9 million for fissile materials control and disposition; $89.0 million for environment, safety and health activities; $35.0 million for international nuclear safety activities; and $681.5 million for naval reactors. The amount authorized is offset by $20.0 million to account for user organizations, and is further offset by $2.0 million in uncosted and unobligated prior year funds.

Nonproliferation and verification and control technology

The conferees agree to a $3.0 million increase to the budget request for intelligence activities. The conferees also express their continued support for the broad participation of the Department of Energy national laboratories, including the Pacific Northwest Laboratory, Idaho National Laboratory, the Savannah River Site and industry in the research and development of forensic analytical technologies to detect and respond to radiological and nuclear threats and international nuclear smuggling events. Additionally, the conferees direct that the Department ensure that all research and development activities in the area of chemical and biological detection and defense be coordinated with the Department of Defense.

Russian reactor core conversion program

The conferees endorse the recommendation contained in the Senate report (S. Rept. 105-189) that the Department of Energy keep the congressional defense committees informed on the status of the Reactor Shutdown Agreement between the United States and the Russian Federation.

Nuclear smuggling and counterterrorism

The conferees direct the Department of Energy to report to the congressional defense committees not later than 30 days after the date of enactment of this Act on the use of funds made available in the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1998 (Public Law 105-85) to plan and conduct exercises to prepare Federal, state, and local entities to respond to domestic terrorist use of nuclear materials and devices. Additionally, the conferees direct the Department of Energy to report to the congressional defense committees not later than November 1, 1998 on the status of the investigations of the sale of high performance computers to Russia and China, and steps taken by the Department of Energy and other federal agencies and department of the U.S. Government to recover such high performance computers.

Emergency management

The conferees agree to authorize the budget request of $23.7 million for emergency management activities to strengthen and expand the Department's support for domestic crisis and consequence management in combatting weapons of mass destruction terrorism and nuclear smuggling and nuclear material trafficking as well as to provide comprehensive, integrated emergency planning, preparedness, response, and management throughout the Department of Energy. The conferees agree that no funds authorized for the Department are to be used to provide support to state and local authorities for activities unrelated to providing appropriate emergency responses to natural and man-made disasters involving radiological hazards and threats.

Fissile materials control and disposition

The conferees recommend the budget request of $168.9 million for fissile materials control and disposition. The conferees are pleased with the approach being pursued by the Department in the fissile materials disposition program. The conferees authorize full funding for title I design for new materials disposition facilities. The conferees direct the Secretary to continue planning and design of such facilities.

The conferees agree that $25.0 million, as requested in the budget for the fissile materials control and disposition program, for cooperative efforts with the Russian Federation is adequate for this activity. With the exception of achieving agreement on a joint testing program, the conferees believe there has been insufficient progress achieved in negotiating the bilateral agreement with the Russian Federation. The conferees encourage the Department to continue its efforts to achieve an agreement with the Russian Federation on this program. In the interim, the conferees direct the Department to report periodically to the congressional defense committees on the status of efforts to achieve agreement on this program, as well as on the estimated cost and how the Russian Federation proposes to finance the program.

Security investigations

The conferees understand that the costs of conducting security investigations is borne principally by individual departmental program elements. The conferees further understand that the amount requested by the Department in the security investigations account includes funds that are also included in individual Departmental program element budgets and are, therefore, double counted. In order to reflect the true costs of such activities, the conferees decreased the amount authorized by section 3103(a)(1)(C) by $20.0 million to reflect those funds that are included in program element budgets.

Worker and community transition

The conferees recommend a reduction of $5.0 million to the worker and community transition budget request.

Environment, safety and health—defense

The conferees recommend an increase of $15.0 million to the budget request for defense environment, safety and health for health studies.

Naval reactors

The conferees recommend an increase of $16.0 million to the budget request for the Office of Naval Reactors to expedite decommissioning and decontamination activities at surplus prototype plant facilities.

Defense nuclear waste disposal (sec. 3104)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 3104) that would authorize $190.0 million for the Department of Energy fiscal year 1998 defense contribution to the defense nuclear waste fund.

The Senate amendment contained an identical provision (sec. 3104).

The conference agreement includes this provision.

Defense environmental management privatization (sec. 3105)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 3105) that would provide $273.9 million for defense environmental management privatization projects to be allocated as follows: $113.5 million for the tank waste remediation system project, phase I (Richland); $20.0 million for spent nuclear fuel dry storage (Idaho); $87.3 million for advanced mixed waste treatment (Idaho); $19.6 million for remote handled transuranic waste transportation (Carlsbad); and $33.5 million for environmental management/waste management disposal (Oak Ridge). The Senate amendment further authorized the use of $32.0 million in unobligated, uncosted, and undistributed prior year defense environmental management privatization funds.

The House bill contained a similar provision (section 3102) that addressed all defense environmental management funds, including $286.8 million for defense environmental management privatization projects.

The House recedes with an amendment that would provide $286.9 million for defense environmental management privatization projects to be allocated as follows: $100.0 million for the tank waste remediation system project, phase I (Richland); $30.0 million for spent nuclear fuel dry storage (Idaho); $87.3 million for advanced mixed waste treatment (Idaho); $19.6 million for remote handled transuranic waste transportation (Carlsbad); and $50.0 million for environmental management/waste management disposal (Oak Ridge). The conferees agree to offset this amount through the use of $32.0 million in unobligated, uncosted, and undistributed prior year defense environmental management privatization funds. The conferees direct that the offset be achieved through the use of: $15.0 million in fiscal year 1997 unobligated, uncosted balances to reflect the cancellation of the broad spectrum low activity mixed waste treatment privatization project (Oak Ridge); $10.0 million in fiscal year 1997 unobligated, uncosted balances to reflect cancellation of the waste water treatment plant privatization project (Rocky Flats); and $7.0 million in fiscal year 1998 unobligated, uncosted and undistributed balances.

The conferees note that the Senate report endorsed the transfer of responsibility for the Hanford Tank Waste Remediation System (TWRS) project to the Assistant Secretary of Energy for Environmental Management. The conferees address this issue in a separate section of this title.

SUBTITLE B—RECURRING GENERAL PROVISIONS Reprogramming (sec. 3121)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 3121) that would prohibit the reprogramming of funds in excess of 110 percent of the amount authorized for the program, or in excess of $1.0 million above the amount authorized for the program, until the Secretary of Energy submits a report to the congressional defense committees and a period of 30 calendar days has elapsed after the date on which the report is received.

The Senate amendment contained an identical provision (sec. 3121).

The conference agreement includes this provision.

Limits on general plant projects (sec. 3122)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 3122) that would authorize the Secretary of Energy to carry out any construction project authorized under general plant projects if the total estimated cost does not exceed $5.0 million. The provision would require the Secretary to submit a report to the congressional defense committees if the cost of the project is revised to exceed $5.0 million. Such a report would include the reasons for the cost variation.

The Senate amendment contained an identical provision (sec. 3122).

The conference agreement includes this provision.

Limits on construction projects (sec. 3123)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 3123) that would permit any construction project to be initiated and continued only if the estimated cost for the project does not exceed 125 percent of the higher of: (1) the amount authorized for the project or (2) the most recent total estimated cost presented to the Congress as justification for such project. The Secretary of Energy may not exceed such limits until 30 legislative days after the Secretary submits to the congressional defense committees a detailed report setting forth the reasons for the increase. This provision would also specify that the 125 percent limitation would not apply to projects estimated to cost under $5.0 million.

The Senate amendment contained an identical provision (sec. 3123).

The conference agreement includes this provision.

Fund transfer authority (sec. 3124)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 3124) that would permit funds authorized by this Act to be transferred to other agencies of the government for performance of work for which the funds were authorized and appropriated. The provision would permit the merger of such transferred funds with the authorizations of the agency to which they are transferred. The provision would also limit, to not more than five percent of the account, the amount of such funds that may be transferred between authorization accounts in the Department of Energy that were authorized pursuant to this Act.

The Senate amendment contained an identical provision (sec. 3124).

The conference agreement includes this provision.

Authority for conceptual and construction design (sec. 3125)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 3125) that would limit the Secretary of Energy's authority to request construction funding until the Secretary has completed a conceptual design. This limitation would apply to construction projects with a total estimated cost greater than $5.0 million. If the estimated cost to prepare the construction design exceeds $600,000, the provision would require the Secretary to obtain a specific authorization to obligate such funds. If the estimated cost to prepare the conceptual design exceeds $3.0 million, the provision would require the Secretary to request funds for the conceptual design before requesting funds for construction. The provision would further require the Secretary to submit to Congress a report on each conceptual design completed under this provision. The provision would also provide an exception to these requirements in the case of an emergency.

The Senate amendment contained an identical provision (sec. 3125).

The conference agreement includes this provision.

Authority for emergency planning, design, and construction activities (sec. 3126)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 3126) that would permit the Secretary of Energy to perform planning and design with any funds available to the Department of Energy pursuant to this title, including those funds authorized for advance planning and construction design, whenever the Secretary determines that the design must proceed expeditiously to protect the public health and safety, to meet the needs of national defense, or to protect property.

The Senate amendment contained an identical provision (sec. 3126).

The conference agreement includes this provision.

Funds available for all national security programs of the Department of Energy (sec. 3127)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 3127) that would authorize, subject to section 3121 of this Act, amounts appropriated for management and support activities and for general plant projects to be made available for use in connection with all national security programs of the Department of Energy.

The Senate amendment contained an identical provision (sec. 3127).

The conference agreement includes this provision.

Availability of funds (sec. 3128)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 3128) that would authorize amounts appropriated for operating expenses or for plant and capital equipment for the Department of Energy to remain available until expended. Program Direction funds would remain available until the end of fiscal year 2000.

The Senate amendment contained a similar provision (sec. 3128) that would authorize Program Direction funds to remain available until the end of fiscal year 2001.

The House recedes.

Transfers of defense environmental management funds (sec. 3129)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 3129) that would provide the manager of each field office of the Department of Energy with limited authority to transfer up to $5.0 million in fiscal year 1999 defense environmental management funds from one program or project under the jurisdiction of the office to another such program or project, once in a fiscal year. The provision would extend the authority granted by section 3139 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1997 by allowing transfers of funds among programs and projects in the Site and Project Completion, Post-2006 Completion, and Science and Technology accounts.

The Senate amendment contained a similar provision (sec. 3129) that would allow transfers of funds between programs and projects in the Site Closure Project, and Project Completion, and Post-2006 Completion accounts.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would allow transfers of funds between programs and projects in the Site and Project Completion and Post-2006 Completion accounts.

Subtitle C—Program Authorizations, Restrictions, and Limitations

Permanent extension of funding prohibition relating to international cooperative stockpile stewardship (sec. 3131)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 3132) that would amend section 3133(a) of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1998 (P.L. 105-85) to establish a permanent prohibition on expenditures of funds for cooperative stockpile stewardship efforts with any nation except for France or the United Kingdom, or, as specifically authorized with nations of the former Soviet Union.

The Senate amendment contained a similar provision (sec. 3131) that would prohibit use of fiscal year 1999 or prior year funds to conduct such international cooperative stockpile stewardship activities.

The Senate recedes.

Support of ballistic missile defense activities of the Department of Defense (sec. 3132)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 3133) that would require the Secretary of Energy to make available, from funds authorized for Department of Energy atomic energy weapons activities, no less than $60.0 million for missile defense technology development in cooperation with the Ballistic Missile Defense Organization (BMDO) for the purpose of developing, demonstrating, and testing hit-to-kill interceptor vehicles for theater missile defense systems.

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 3132) that would prohibit the use of any funds authorized by title XXXI to support ballistic missile defense research, development, demonstration, testing, and evaluation. The prohibition would include studies and assessments. The provision would also prohibit use of Laboratory Directed Research and Development and laboratory overhead funds for such purposes.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would make available $30.0 million for technology development, concept demonstration, and integrated testing to improve reliability and reduce risk in hit-to-kill interceptors; science and engineering teams to address technical problems identified by the Director of BMDO which are critical to the acquisition of a theater missile defense capability; and other research, development and demonstration activities that support the mission of BMDO. The provision would require that any such activities conform to the joint memorandum of understanding between the Secretaries of Energy and Defense required by section 3131 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1998 (Public Law 105-85). The provision would allow the covered activities to be funded through direct contributions or waiver of a Federal administrative charge, overhead costs, or other indirect costs of the Department of Energy or its contractors.

Nonproliferation activities (sec. 3133)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 3139) that would make $30.0 million available for the Initiatives for Proliferation Prevention (IPP) program and $30.0 million available to implement the initiative known as the "Nuclear Cities Initiative" (NCI) program pursuant to the March 1998 agreement between the United States and the Russian Federation.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would make up to $20.0 million available for the IPP program. Additionally, the provision would require the Secretary of Energy to submit a report to the congressional defense committees on the Nuclear Cities Initiative program and wait a period of 20 legislative days after the date on which the report is received prior to the obligation and expenditure of any funds.

The amendment would also require the report of the Secretary on the NCI program to include among other items, the objectives of the NCI program and the process and method by which the program will be implemented (to include the status of bilateral agreements), a timeline of the program and milestones to be achieved, and the funding requirements through the completion of the program. In addition, the report should include any information on the participation of other federal agencies and departments in the NCI program, as well as the participation of U.S. industry.

Licensing of certain mixed oxide fuel fabrication and irradiation facilities (sec. 3134)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 3133) that would require any person constructing or operating a new or operating an existing facility to fabricate mixed oxide (MOX) fuel for use in a commercial nuclear reactor to be subject to licensing by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC). The provision would also require the occupational safety and health of employees working at such facilities to be subject to regulation by the Department of Labor. The provision would exempt the Department of Energy MOX-related demonstration, testing, and research activities from such licensing requirements.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with a technical amendment.

The conferees do not endorse the wholesale external regulation of Department of Energy defense nuclear facilities and remain skeptical of the potential benefits associated with implementing new regulatory regimes at other new or existing DOE defense nuclear facilities.

Continuation of processing, treatment, and disposition of legacy nuclear materials (sec. 3135)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 3134) that would require the Secretary of Energy to maintain a high state of readiness at the F-canyon and H-canyon facilities at the Savannah River Site.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes.

The conferees note that this action was recommended by the Defense Nuclear Facilities Safety Board and is consistent with direction provided by previous authorization acts.

Authority for Department of Energy federally funded research and development centers to participate in merit-based technology research and development programs (sec. 3136)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 3135) that would amend the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1995 (Public Law 103-337) to grant Department of Energy (DOE) sponsored federally funded research and development centers (FFRDCs) the same ability to compete for contracts as Department of Defense (DOD) sponsored FFRDCs.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would limit the authority to those activities conducted under contract with, or on behalf, of the Department of Defense.

The conferees do not support the concept of DOE FFRDCs competing directly or indirectly with the private sector. In implementing this authority, the conferees expect DOE FFRDCs to comply fully with all DOD and DOE policy guidance and regulations governing FFRDCs. The conferees expect DOE FFRDCs to focus on their core competencies, expertise, or unique facilities.

Activities of Department of Energy facilities (sec. 3137)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 3140) that would establish a uniform Federal administrative charge of three percent on all contract research activities carried out for non-Department of Energy (DOE) entities at DOE contractor operated facilities. The provision would eliminate the Secretary of Energy's current authority to waive the Federal administrative charge, except that the Secretary would be authorized to continue existing waivers, if the Secretary so determines, and would be authorized to waive charges for small businesses, institutions of higher education, non-profit entities, and state and local governments. The provision would authorize the Secretary to enter into a five-year pilot program at selected facilities to develop reduced overhead charges designed to recover all costs generated by external entities who may not utilize the full range of services at a DOE facility for which overhead costs may be charged. The provision would encourage the Secretary to establish a new small business technology partnership program to make DOE expertise and capabilities more accessible to small businesses, and would encourage the Secretary to pursue partnerships and interactions with universities and private businesses.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would allow the Secretary to waive the Federal administrative charge at all DOE facilities. The conferees did not include the small business technology partnership or partnerships and interactions provisions.

The conferees encourage the Secretary to continue the establishment of cooperative partnerships and interactions with universities and private industry at contractor-operated facilities where such interaction will help the Department better carry out its national security missions. The conferees further encourage the Secretary to create small business technology partnership programs at contractor-operated facilities where such interaction will help the Department better carry out its national security missions. The Secretary is encouraged to designate small funding pools at DOE sites to carry out such programs. The Secretary should include annually with the President's budget request a report on the effectiveness and applicability of any such programs to the missions of the Department of Energy.

Hanford overhead and service center costs (sec. 3138)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 3135) that would prohibit the use of certain fiscal year 1999 funds at the Hanford Site until the Secretary of Energy certifies to Congress that the Department does not intend to pay overhead costs of more than 33 percent of total contract overhead costs at that Site. The provision would prohibit the obligation of $12.0 million for reactor decontamination and decommissioning and $18.0 million for drainage of single-shell waste tanks at the Hanford Site until the Secretary completes the certification. The provision would further require that any savings that result from compliance with this section be retained for use at the Hanford Site to ensure full compliance with the Hanford Federal Facility Agreement and Consent Order and the recommendations of the Defense Nuclear Facilities Safety Board. In addition, the provision conveyed the sense of the Congress that overhead costs for contractors performing cleanup work at DOE facilities is out of control, that some increased overhead costs are a result of unnecessary regulation, and that the Department should take action to minimize any such unnecessary regulation.

The Senate amendment contained a related provision (sec. 3148) that would require the General Accounting Office (GAO) to conduct a review of Department of Energy (DOE) overhead costs, including the methods used to calculate direct and indirect overhead costs at DOE cleanup sites and the methods used to allocate and report such overhead costs. The GAO would be required to submit a report to Congress not later than January 31, 1999, to include the findings of the review and any resulting recommendations for standardizing the methods used to allocate and report overhead costs at DOE cleanup sites.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would require the Secretary to establish a target for fiscal year 1999 contract overhead costs at the Hanford Site and utilize any savings that result from lower overhead costs to perform additional cleanup activities at the Site and to comply with the Hanford Tri-party Agreement. The Senate amendment would further require the Defense Contract Audit Agency (DCAA) to conduct an assessment of overhead, service center, and other related costs assessed by the Project Hanford Management Contractor at the Hanford Site. The DCAA assessment would be submitted to Congress not later than March 1, 1999.

Hanford waste tank cleanup program reforms (sec. 3139)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 3136) that would direct the Secretary of Energy to establish an Office of River Protection at the Department of Energy's Hanford Site. The office would be headed by a senior official of the Department of Energy who would be responsible for managing all aspects of Hanford tank farm operations, including the Tank Waste Remediation System project. The provision would create a five-member advisory committee to provide advice to the new office. The provision would require the Secretary to submit within 90 days of the date of enactment of this Act an integrated management plan for all aspects of the tank farm operations, including the roles and responsibilities and reporting relationships of the Office of River Protection. The plan would address whether the office should be physically and administratively separate from the DOE Richland Operations Office. The provision would further require the Secretary, two years after the creation of the office, to report on any progress and management improvements that result from this provision. The Office of River Protection would terminate in five years, unless the Secretary determines that the office should continue.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would require the office to report directly to the Assistant Secretary for Environmental Management, but be physically located at the Hanford Site in Richland, Washington. The amendment also would eliminate the creation of the five-member advisory committee. The conferees believe the existing advisory structure at the site is adequate.

Hanford Health Information Network (sec. 3140)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 3138) that would authorize the Secretary of Energy to utilize $2.5 million within existing Hanford Site funding for the Hanford Health Information Network.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would authorize the use of $1.5 million within existing Hanford Site funding for the Hanford Health Information Network.

Hazardous Materials Management and Emergency Response training program (sec. 3141)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 3155) that would authorize the Hazardous Materials Management and Emergency Response (HAMMER) training facility in Richland, Washington to accept payments in kind in exchange for services.

The Senate amendment contained a similar provision (sec. 3137).

The Senate recedes.

Support for public education in the vicinity of Los Alamos National Laboratory, New Mexico (sec. 3142)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 3136) that would authorize the Department of Energy (DOE) to make a $5.0 million payment to a not-for-profit education foundation in the area around the Los Alamos National Laboratory to enrich educational activities of the local school system. The provision would require the foundation to place DOE contributions in an endowment fund, the corpus of which would remain in trust and the annual revenue used to support the local school system.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with a clarifying amendment.

This provision would extend the authority granted to the Secretary of Energy by section 3167 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1998 (Public Law 105-85). The conferees expect the Secretary of Energy to make no more than five total annual payments to this fund for a total contribution not to exceed $25.0 million. The conferees note that the Secretary was authorized to make the first of such payments in fiscal year 1998. The conferees expect, that upon making the fifth payment or meeting the $25.0 million cap, all DOE assistance to the local school system will end.

Relocation of National Atomic Museum, Albuquerque, New Mexico (sec. 3143)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 3140A) that would require the Secretary of Energy to submit a plan on the design, construction and relocation of the National Atomic Museum located in Albuquerque, New Mexico.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would direct the Secretary of Energy to submit a plan to relocate the museum. This provision does not authorize the Secretary to proceed with a conceptual design of a new National Atomic Museum or to obligate any funds to implement any plan.

Tritium production (sec. 3144)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 3154) that would modify the Atomic Energy Act of 1954 (42 U.S.C. 2077(e)) to prohibit the use of tritium produced in commercial nuclear reactors for nuclear explosive purposes.

The Senate amendment contained a related provision (sec. 3150) that would require the Secretary of Energy to select a tritium production technology after completion of an interagency review regarding the proliferation ramifications of using a commercial light water reactor to produce tritium for nuclear explosive purposes, but not later than December 31, 1998. The provision would direct the Secretary of Energy to make the decision notwithstanding any provision of the Atomic Energy Act of 1954 (42 U.S.C. 2011, et. seq.), but consistent with the laws, regulations and procedures of the Department of Energy.

The conferees agree to include a provision that would prohibit use of any funds available during fiscal year 1999, including prior year funds, to implement any tritium technology decision made pursuant to section 3135 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1998 (Public Law 105-85). This prohibition includes any construction or related activities. Nothing in this provision shall be interpreted to preclude the Secretary of Energy from continuing planned research and design activities on both technology options currently under consideration.

The conferees strongly support the Department of Energy's efforts to restore on a timely basis tritium production to maintain the viability of the U.S. nuclear deterrent. The conferees note that tritium is not a special nuclear material as defined by the Atomic Energy Act of 1954, and thus, unlike plutonium and highly enriched uranium, is not capable of sustaining a nuclear chain reaction. It is, however, a radioactive material that is vital to the performance of U.S. nuclear warheads.

The conferees endorse the United States' long-standing policy requiring the separation of civilian and military uses of nuclear energy. Concerns have been raised that the use of a commercial light water reactor to produce tritium might establish a precedent for other nations to use government-owned civilian reactors to produce materials for nuclear weapons programs. The conferees note that the Interagency Review of Nonproliferation Implications of Alternative Tritium Technologies transmitted to Congress by the Department of Energy in July 1998, as required by the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1998 (Public Law 105-85), concluded that the nonproliferation risks associated with the commercial light water reactor option are "manageable." Implicit in this conclusion, is a recognition that the commercial reactor option could pose nuclear proliferation risks that might harm U.S. national security interests.

The conferees expect the Secretary of Energy to consider whether, or to what extent, the selection of a light water reactor would violate U.S. policy and might encourage other nations to divert nuclear materials from government-owned civilian reactors into nuclear weapons programs. In addition, the conferees expect the Secretary to assess any nuclear proliferation risk that any such outcome could pose for the United States.

The conferees direct the Secretary of Energy to select a tritium technology option consistent with the requirements of section 3135 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1998 (Public Law 105-85). The decision criteria shall include the ability to meet the national defense requirements of the United States, nuclear proliferation implications, and cost.

In addition, the conferees direct the Secretary to submit to the Committee on Armed Services of the Senate and the National Security Committee of the House of Representatives, a comprehensive plan to implement the technology option selected. The plan should be submitted with the President's fiscal year 2000 budget and include a proposed implementation schedule, annual funding requirements for the life of the project, any legislation needed to implement the technology selected, and an assessment of the viability of purchasing tritium, if necessary for national security purposes, on an interim basis.

Subtitle D—Other Matters

Study and plan relating to worker and community transition assistance (sec. 3151)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 3151) that would repeal the requirements of section 3161 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1993 (Public Law 102-484). Section 3161 required the implementation of a worker and community transition program to restructure the Department of Energy (DOE) private contractor workforce at the end of the Cold War. This section would also prohibit the expenditure of funds for the DOE Worker and Community Transition program after September 30, 1999.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would require the Secretary to develop a plan describing how the Office of Worker and Community Transition would be terminated and how the authority of that office would be transferred to Department of Energy program offices. The Secretary shall submit the plan to the Congressional defense committees not later than July 1, 1999. The amendment would also require the General Accounting Office to conduct a study on the effects of DOE workforce restructuring plans from fiscal years 1995 through 1998.

Extension of authority for appointment of certain scientific, engineering, and technical personnel (sec. 3152)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 3144) that would extend for one year the authority granted to the Secretary of Energy by the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1995 (Public Law 103-337) to appoint certain scientific, engineering, and technical personnel in areas of nuclear safety and environmental clean up.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes.

Requirement for plan to modify employment system used by Department of Energy in defense environmental management programs (sec. 3153)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 3152) that would prohibit the use of more than 75 percent of Defense Environmental Restoration and Waste Management program direction funds for fiscal year 1999 until the Secretary of Energy submits a plan for improvement of the Department of Energy federal employment system. The plan would address strategies to recruit and hire individuals for the Environmental Management program who are highly skilled and who have experience as project and construction managers. The plan would further identify any provisions of Federal law that must be altered to allow its implementation.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would require the Secretary to submit the plan to Congress not later than February 1, 1999, and would remove the prohibition on use of program direction funds.

Department of Energy nuclear materials couriers (sec. 3154)

The Senate amendment contained several provisions (secs. 3161–3172) that would allow nuclear materials couriers at the Department of Energy (DOE) to retire with full federal benefits after 20 years of service.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would apply eligibility for early retirement benefits only to those couriers who retire after fiscal year 1998.

Increase in maximum rate of pay for scientific, engineering, and technical personnel responsible for safety at defense nuclear facilities (sec. 3155)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 3142) that would raise the pay level for the excepted service authority provided in the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1995 (Public Law 103–337) from Level IV to III of the Executive Schedule.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with a clarifying amendment.

The conferees expect this enhanced authority to assist the Department of Energy in attracting and retaining senior scientific, engineering, and technical personnel who possess the skills to perform critical nuclear health and safety activities at the Department's defense nuclear facilities. The conferees note that, in recent years, the Level IV pay cap has limited the Department's ability to attract and retain the highest qualified scientific and technical talent.

Extension of authority of Department of Energy to pay voluntary separation incentive payments (sec. 3156)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 3145) that would extend for one year authority granted to the Secretary of Energy by the Treasury, Postal Service, and General Government Appropriations Act, 1997 (Public Law 104–208) to pay voluntary separation incentive payments to certain Federal employees.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes.

The conferees expect this authority to be used to continue reductions in federal staffing levels in an effort to decrease costs and increase program efficiencies. The conferees do not intend this authority to be used for broad, untargeted staff reductions. The conferees expect the Secretary of Energy to utilize this authority, in conjunction with other authorities, to eliminate selectively those job classifications and positions that are no longer needed to carry out the missions of the Department of Energy. The conferees expect the authority to allow the Department to save money over the long term and reorient the DOE federal workforce to focus on the Department's most pressing problems.

Repeal of fiscal year 1998 statement of policy on stockpile stewardship program (sec. 3157)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 3141) that would repeal section 3156 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1998 (Public Law 105–85).

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes.

Section 3156 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1998 addressed findings and current policies regarding the stockpile stewardship program of the Department of Energy. This repeal action does not represent a change in policy and is taken without prejudice. The conferees note that the findings and policy statements expressed in section 3156 are consistent with the activities of the stockpile stewardship program focused on ensuring that the United States possesses a safe, secure, effective, and reliable nuclear stockpile consistent with our national security requirements and treaty commitments. The conferees do not believe that such policy statements need to be set forth in law.

Report on stockpile stewardship criteria (sec. 3158)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 3153) that would require the Secretary of Energy to submit a report to the Committee on Armed Services of Senate and the National Security Committee of the House of Representatives by March 1, 1999, on DOE efforts to develop a clear set of criteria pertaining to the technical performance of science based stockpile stewardship program tools and their relationship to key nuclear weapons technologies. The provision would require the Secretary to identify the performance criteria that, if met, would offer sufficient certainty that the U.S. stockpile is safe and reliable.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would require the report to be submitted not later than March 1, 2000, and be coordinated with the Secretary of Defense.

Panel to assess the reliability, safety, and security of the United States nuclear stockpile (sec. 3159)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 1073) that would establish a six member commission to assess the reliability, safety, and security of the U.S. nuclear deterrent. The commission would review the safety, security, and reliability of the U.S. nuclear deterrent and the annual nuclear warhead certification process carried out by the Department of Energy weapons laboratory directors, the Commander in Chief of the United States Strategic Command, and the Secretary of Defense. Commission members would be appointed as follows: two members each by the Majority Leader of the Senate and Speaker of the House of Representatives and one member each by the Minority Leaders of the Senate and House of Representatives. The chairman of the commission would be designated by the Majority Leader of the Senate. The cost of the commission would be borne equally by the Departments of Energy and Defense. The commission would terminate three years after the date of the appointment of the chairman.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would require the Secretary of Defense, in consultation with the Secretary of Energy, to contract with a Federally Funded Research and Development Center (FFRDC) to establish a panel to assess the reliability, safety, and security of the U.S. nuclear stockpile. The panel would examine the annual nuclear warhead certification documents, the processes and assumptions upon which the certification is based, and the stockpile stewardship and management criteria to be established by the Secretary of Energy pursuant to section 3158 of this Act.

The conferees believe that in order to ensure an independent assessment, no employees of the FFRDC should be appointed as panel members.

International cooperative information exchange (sec. 3160)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 3156) that would express the sense of Congress that the President should instruct the Secretary of Energy to consult with the Secretary of Defense, the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, and other appropriate officials, and submit to the Committee on Armed Services of the Senate and the Committee on National Security of the House of Representatives an assessment of whether the United States should consider favorably the "Advanced Technology Research Project" proposal which recommends establishment of an international project to facilitate the exchange of information on advanced nuclear waste technologies. The assessment should include a discussion of whether the proposal could be funded privately and administered by an international nongovernmental organization. The Secretary would also be required to identify any legislation required to carry out any such a project.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would express the sense of the Congress that the Secretary of Energy, in consultation with the Secretary of Defense, the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, and the Director of the Agency for International Development, should prepare a report on those programs that currently facilitate sharing of information on international nuclear waste problems, and any recommendations to expand or consolidate such activities under a single international cooperative program.

Protection against inadvertent release of restricted data and formerly restricted data (sec. 3161)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 3146) that would amend section 3155 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1996 (Public Law 104–106) by requiring all federal agencies, including the National Archives and Records Administration, to conduct a visual inspection of all records over 25 years old to ascertain that such records contain no information classified as restricted data or formerly restricted data. The provision would require that any records found to contain such classified information be set aside pending completion of a review by the Department of Energy.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would require the Secretary of Energy and the Archivist of the United States, after consultation with members of the National Security Council, and, in consultation with the Secretary of Defense and the heads of appropriate federal agencies, to develop a plan to prevent records containing restricted data or formerly restricted data from being inadvertently released under Executive Order 12958. The plan would include the following elements: (1) actions that will be taken to ensure that only records series that are highly unlikely to contain restricted data or formerly restricted data are released without a page-by-page review; (2) the criteria by which documents will be determined to be highly unlikely to contain restricted data or formerly restricted data; (3) steps to be taken to ensure proper training, evaluation, and supervision of declassification personnel to recognize restricted data and formerly restricted data; (4) the extent to which automated declassification technologies will be used to protect restricted data and formerly restricted data; (5) procedures for periodic Department of Energy review and evaluation of agency compliance with the plan; (6) procedures for resolving disagreements among agencies regarding declassification procedures and decisions; (7) identification of funding, personnel, and other resources required to carry out the plan; and (8) a timetable to implement the plan. Summaries of the periodic review of agency compliance would be provided to the President's National Security Advisor and to the Committee on Armed Services of the Senate and the National Security Committee of the House or Representatives. The amendment would halt the use of bulk declassification of any document covered by this provision until 60 days after the plan is submitted to the Committee on Armed Services of the Senate and the National Security Committee of the House of Representatives, and the Assistant to the President for National Security Affairs.

The conferees support current efforts to reduce the volume of information retained as classified. The conferees are, however, concerned that Executive Order 12958 does not ensure adequate protection of information classified as restricted data or formerly restricted data. This provision is intended to ensure greater review and scrutiny of those federal records that may contain information classified as restricted data or formerly restricted data prior to the bulk declassification and subsequent release of such records. The conferees do not intend this provision to slow down much needed efforts to reduce the amount of classified material maintained in federal archives.

The conferees believe that the President must ensure that each Executive Branch agency with custodial responsibility for the records described in the provision has available sufficient funds to carry out the requirements of this provision.

Sense of Congress regarding treatment of Formerly Utilized Sites Remedial Action Program under a non-defense discretionary budget function (sec. 3162)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 3143) that would express the sense of the Senate that the Office of Management and Budget should transfer funding for the Formerly Utilized Sites Remedial Action Program into a non-defense discretionary portion of the Federal budget in future years.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would modify the provision to be a sense of Congress.

Reports relating to tritium production (sec. 3163)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 3134) that would delay the date by which the Secretary of Energy must select a primary technology for the production of tritium from December 31, 1998 to December 31, 1999. The Secretary would be prohibited from selecting a primary technology until the date that is the later of 30 days following completion of the test at the Watts Bar nuclear plant and the date that the Secretary submits to the congressional defense committees a report on the results of that test. The report would provide information regarding the amount of tritium produced, data on the leakage of tritium from the test, and any other technical findings resulting from the test.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would require the Secretary of Energy to submit a report on the results of the test currently being carried out at the Watts Bar nuclear plant. The report would include data on the performance of the tritium test rods, the performance of the reactor, any leakage of tritium from the test rods, the amount of tritium produced, and any other technical findings resulting from the test. The Secretary would be required to submit to the congressional defense committees a preliminary report on the test program not later than 60 days after the test rods are removed from the Watts Bar reactor.

The amendment would also direct the Secretary of Defense, in consultation with the Secretary of Energy, to establish a task force of the Defense Science Board to examine the risks associated with each tritium production technology, the nuclear weapons proliferation implications of each technology, the ability of each technology to meet the national security requirements of the United States, and any other factors that the Secretaries of Defense and Energy consider appropriate. The Secretaries of Energy and Defense would be required to provide the task force report to the congressional defense committees not later than June 30, 1999.

LEGISLATIVE PROVISIONS NOT ADOPTED

Prohibition on Federal loan guarantees for defense environmental management privatization projects

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 3131) that would prohibit the use of Federal government loan guarantees for Department of Energy defense environmental management privatization projects.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The House recedes.

The conferees remain deeply concerned that the use of Federal loan guarantees are inconsistent with the concept of privatization in Department of Energy (DOE) environmental remediation projects. The conferees note that the Federal Credit Reform Act of 1990 requires that a large portion of the costs of Federal loan guarantees be appropriated in the fiscal year in which the project is initiated. This requirement would draw into question the cost effectiveness and desirability of any DOE privatization project that would rely upon such instruments.

The conferees note, however, that a recent General Accounting Office report on the DOE privatization program recommended a wide variety of contracting and project financing tools be made available to DOE to carry out privatized cleanup projects. Nevertheless, the conferees cannot envision many instances where Federal loan guarantees would prove beneficial to the Federal government.

The conferees intend to scrutinize any proposed use of Federal loan guarantees in DOE privatization projects to ensure that the concept of privatization is not violated. The conferees do not intend to authorize funding in future years for those projects that include a Federal loan guarantee, if utilizing a loan guarantee either removes the consequences of failure for the contractor or increases the cost of the privatization project.

The conferees direct that any use of Federal loan guarantees for privatization projects be made only in those circumstances where the Secretary of Energy certifies that (1) the loan guarantee is necessary for the contractor to obtain a private sector loan, and (2) the percentage of the loan amount covered by the loan guarantee does not harm the incentive for success.

Sense of the Senate regarding memoranda of understanding with the State of Oregon relating to Hanford

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 3147) that would set forth the sense of the Senate that the Department of Energy (DOE) and the State of Washington should seek to implement existing memoranda of understanding regarding cleanup activities at the Hanford Site in ways that permit continued information sharing and participation by the State of Oregon in those decisions at the Site that affect the public health or safety of the citizens of Oregon.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes.

The conferees encourage the State of Washington and the Department of Energy to continue those cooperative efforts with the State of Oregon that speed the pace of cleanup at the site and ensure appropriate participation by all external stakeholders, including the State of Oregon. The conferees note that the State of Oregon has executed memoranda of understanding with the State of Washington and with the Department of Energy. The conferees further note that the State of Oregon holds two seats on the Hanford Site Specific Advisory Board (SSAB), a group of regulators, stakeholders, and tribes that reviews clean up progress at the site and makes recommendations to DOE. The conferees believe that Oregon's participation in the Hanford SSAB and the increased access to information provided via memoranda of understanding with DOE and the State of Washington, provide Oregon with appropriate participation in Hanford cleanup programs.

Sense of Congress on funding requirements for the nonproliferation science and technology activities of the Department of Energy

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 3149) that would express the sense of Congress that the budget for nonproliferation science and technology activities for fiscal years 2000 through fiscal year 2008 should be increased each year over the preceding year by at least one percent above the rate of inflation.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes.

TITLE XXXII—DEFENSE NUCLEAR FACILITIES SAFETY BOARD

LEGISLATIVE PROVISIONS ADOPTED

Defense Nuclear Facilities Safety Board (sec. 3201)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 3201) that would authorize $17.5 million for the Defense Nuclear Facilities Safety Board (DNFSB) for fiscal year 1999.

The Senate amendment contained an identical provision (sec. 3201).

The conference agreement includes this provision.

The conferees anticipate that the report required by section 3202 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1998 (Public Law 105-85) regarding which Department of Energy (DOE) facilities should remain under the jurisdiction of the DNFSB will be submitted on time.

The conferees are concerned that the implementation of an additional external regulation approach could draw scarce resources away from high priority, compliance driven cleanup actions and critical national security activities. The conferees believe no decisions should be made or actions taken until the findings of the DNFSB and the comments of the Secretary of Energy and the Chairman of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission have been provided to the Congress as required by section 3202 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1998 (Public Law 105-85) and the on-going external regulation pilot programs are completed and evaluated.

The House bill had no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would modify the quantity of materials authorized for disposal in order to generate receipts of $105.0 million by the end of fiscal year 1999 and $590.0 million by the end of fiscal year 2005.

The conferees expect that any sales of tungsten ores and concentrates contained in the National Defense Stockpile shall be made at a price that is not less than the market value at the time of the proposed sale (taking into account any specific location and as-is sale adjustments), and that the Department of Defense will fully consider the views of the Market Impact Committee concerning any projected domestic economic effect by the sale of these materials. The conferees also expect that the Market Impact Committee, in developing recommendations for the sale of tungsten ores and concentrates, will consult with representatives of producers, processors, and consumers of these materials.

Use of stockpile funds for certain environmental remediation, restoration, waste management, and compliance activities (sec. 3304)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 3304) that would authorize the use of funds from the National Defense Stockpile Transaction Fund to be used for environmental remediation, restoration, waste management, or compliance activities that are required under a federal law or are undertaken by the Federal Government under an administrative decision or negotiated agreement.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes.

TITLE XXXIV—NAVAL PETROLEUM RESERVES LEGISLATIVE PROVISIONS ADOPTED

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 3404) that would require the Secretary of Energy to dispose of that portion of the Naval Petroleum Reserve Numbered 2 located within the town lots in Ford City, California, by competitive sale or lease consistent with commercial practices, by transfer to another Federal agency or a public or private entity, or by any other means. The provision would further require the Secretary of Energy to transfer to the Secretary of Interior, administrative jurisdiction and control over the remaining lands within Naval Petroleum Reserve Numbered 2 after the Secretary of Energy makes a determination to abandon oil and gas operations.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would permit, rather than require, the disposal of this property.

Disposal of Naval Petroleum Reserve Numbered 3 (sec. 3404)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 3405) that would authorize the disposal of Naval Petroleum Reserve Numbered 3 by sale, lease, transfer, or other means.

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 3408) that would eliminate the requirement for an appropriation before funds resulting from the sale of the Naval Petroleum Reserve Numbered 1 at Elk Hills can be distributed to the State of California in accordance with the Settlement Agreement entered into between the State of California and the Department of Energy.

The Senate amendment had no similar provision.

The House recedes.

TITLE XXXV—PANAMA CANAL COMMISSION

LEGISLATIVE PROVISIONS ADOPTED

Short title; references to Panama Canal Act of 1979 (sec. 3501)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 3501) that would provide a short title to the amendments to the Panama Canal Act of 1979 (22 U.S.C. 3601 et seq.) contained in this Act, and state that, unless otherwise noted, such amendments relate to the Panama Canal Act.

The conference agreement includes this provision, and an increase of $10,000 in the ceiling for the representation and reception expenses of the Administrator of the Panama Canal Commission.

Purchase of vehicles (sec. 3503)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 3503) that would authorize the Panama Canal Commission to purchase vehicles built in the United States.

The Senate amendment contained a similar provision (sec. 3503) that excluded the requirement for the vehicles to be built in the United States.

The House recedes.

The conferees note that the Commission has previously purchased only vehicles built in the United States and encourage the continuation of that practice.

Expenditures only in accordance with treaties (sec. 3504)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 3504) that would ensure amounts authorized for expenditure by the Panama Canal Commission for fiscal year 1999 be spent only in accordance with the terms of the Panama Canal Treaties of 1977 and U.S. laws implementing those treaties.

The Senate amendment contained an identical provision (sec. 3504).

The conference agreement includes this provision.

Donations to the Commission (sec. 3505)

The Senate amendment contained an identical provision (sec. 3508).

The conference agreement includes this provision with a technical amendment.

Liability for vessel accidents (sec. 3509)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 3508) that would provide the Panama Canal Commission with a degree of immunity against claims for damages occurring while vessels transiting the Canal are under the direction of pilots employed by the Commission. The provision is intended to lower the costs of Canal operations by instituting a liability regime that would prevent claims against the Commission for $1.0 million or less in damages.

The Senate amendment contained an identical provision (sec. 3509).

The conference agreement includes a provision that would allow the Panama Canal Commission to prescribe regulations that limit its exposure to liability to those damages that exceed a specified threshold amount, provided that such threshold amount does not exceed $1.0 million, by requiring claimants to look to their insurers for compensation for damages below the threshold amount.

The conferees believe that a regulatory approach will allow greater flexibility for the Commission to implement any changes through procedures and on a timetable that will allow for consideration of maritime industry concerns. The adopted provision would also allow the Commission to set the insurance requirement, and thereby its immunity against claims, at a lower threshold if a level less than $1.0 million is determined, through consultation with interested parties, to be in the best interests of the Panama Canal and world shipping.

In light of expectations that the Panama Canal Authority, the successor agency to the Commission, will implement such a liability-limiting regime after it assumes stewardship of Canal operations, this provision is pursuant to the U.S. treaty commitment to facilitate transition to Panamanian control. The conferees expect that if damages during Canal transits increase significantly under any new liability regime, that the Commission, or its successor Panamanian entity, will consider a revised liability regime that minimizes costs for world commerce as well as for Canal operations.

Panama Canal Board of Contract Appeals (sec. 3510)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 3509) that would authorize the Panama Canal Commission to establish the salaries of members of the Panama Canal Board of Contract Appeals.

The Senate amendment contained a similar provision (sec. 3511).

The House recedes.

Restatement of requirement that Secretary of Defense designee on Panama Canal Commission supervisory board be a current officer of the Department of Defense (sec. 3511)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 3513) that would ensure the Secretary of Defense's designee on the Panama Canal Commission Supervisory Board be an officer of the Department of Defense (DOD), rather than an individual who was a DOD officer at the time of his designation and subsequently left his position in the Department.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with a clarifying amendment.

Technical amendments (sec. 3512)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 3510) that would make certain technical and conforming amendments to the Panama Canal Act of 1979 (22 U.S.C. 3601 et seq.).

Conveyance of NDRF vessel ex-USS Lorain County (sec. 3605)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 3605) that would authorize the Secretary of Transportation to convey, at no cost to the government, a surplus National Defense Reserve Fleet ship, ex-USS Lorain County, to a not-for-profit organization for use as a memorial to Ohio veterans.

The Senate amendment contained a similar provision (sec. 1015).

The Senate recedes.

TITLE XXXVII—INCREASED MONITORING OF PRODUCTS MADE WITH FORCED LABOR

LEGISLATIVE PROVISIONS ADOPTED

Increased monitoring of products made with forced labor (secs. 3701–3703)

The Senate amendment contained provisions (secs. 3701–3704) related to the monitoring of products derived from forced labor.

The House bill contained no similar provisions.

The House recedes with an amendment that would eliminate a provision containing findings, which emphasized products derived from forced labor from the People's Republic of China, strike direct references to indentured labor, including child labor (secs. 3701–3703), and eliminate a specific reference to mining products (sec. 3702).

The conferees note that forced labor includes convict labor, forced labor, and indentured labor, as such terms are used in section 307 of the Tariff Act of 1930 (19 U.S.C. 1301 et seq.). Accordingly, the conferees understand that indentured labor, to include child labor, is a category of labor included in the definition of forced labor as established in the Tariff Act of 1930, which thereby prohibits the importation of products made through the use of indentured or child labor. The conferees further recognize the importance of strong and enforceable laws relating to products derived from child labor, and emphasize that such laws should be enforced to the maximum extent practicable by the U.S. Customs Service.

TITLE XXXVIII—FAIR TRADE IN AUTOMOTIVE PARTS

LEGISLATIVE PROVISIONS ADOPTED

Fair trade in automotive parts (secs. 3801–3805)

The Senate amendment contained provisions (sec. 3801–3805) that would deal with trade in automotive parts. Section 3801 would provide that the title could be cited as the "Fair Trade in Automotive Parts Act of 1998." Section 3802 would define certain terms. Section 3803 would direct the Secretary of Commerce to re-establish an initiative to increase the sale of U.S.-made auto parts to Japanese markets, and prescribe the functions of the Secretary in this regard. Section 3804 would direct the Secretary to establish a special advisory committee from the automotive parts industry. Section 3805 would provide that the authority under the Act shall expire on December 31, 2003.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with technical amendments.

TITLE XXXIX—RADIO FREE ASIA

LEGISLATIVE PROVISIONS ADOPTED

Short title (sec. 3901)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 3901) that would provide that the provisions in this title related to international broadcasting activities to China may be cited as the Radio Free Asia Act of 1998.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes.

Authorization of appropriations for increased funding for Radio Free Asia and Voice of America broadcasting to China (sec. 3902)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 3903) that would authorize $30.0 million for fiscal year 1998 and $22.0 million for fiscal year 1999 for the purpose of funding Radio Free Asia broadcasting to the People's Republic of China and Tibet, $5.0 million for fiscal year 1998 and $3.0 million for fiscal year 1999 for Voice of America broadcasting to China and Tibet, and an additional $10.0 million for fiscal year 1998 and $2.0 million for fiscal year 1999 for radio construction in support of such broadcasting. The provision would reserve $100,000 of the funds authorized for Voice of America broadcasting for broadcasts in the Hmong language.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would delete the authorizations for fiscal year 1998, eliminate the requirement that certain broadcasts be in the Hmong language, and specify that the additional authorizations for fiscal year 1999 are with respect to appropriations for the U.S. Information Agency.

Reporting requirement (sec. 3903)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 3904) that would require the Broadcasting Board of Governors to submit a report on their efforts to increase Radio Free Asia and Voice of America broadcasts to China and Tibet, as well as an analysis of the control by the Government of the People's Republic of China of the media in China, to the Committees on Foreign Relations and Appropriations of the Senate and the Committees on International Relations and Appropriations of the House of Representatives.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with a technical amendment.

LEGISLATIVE PROVISIONS NOT ADOPTED

Findings

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 3902) that would make certain findings with respect to freedom of information in the People's Republic of China.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes.

PROCEEDINGS AND DEBATES OF THE 105th CONGRESS, SECOND SESSION

Vol. 144

WASHINGTON, TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 22, 1998

No. 127

Senate

The Senate met at 9:30 a.m. and was called to order by the President pro tempore [Mr. THURMOND].

PRAYER

The Chaplain, Dr. Lloyd John Ogilvie, offered the following prayer:

Almighty God, help us to see things from Your perspective and envision what can happen through Your power. We need You to help us combat the growing tide of cynicism in our society. Secular humanism is catching. It leads to horizontal thinking. We evaluate things on the basis of what we can do on our own strength. Sometimes our capacity to hope is debilitated by life's frustrations, disappointments over people, and our inability to control life. Cynicism becomes addictive. It begins with negativism, grows in a critical attitude, and becomes a settled personality trait.

Father, help us to be realistic about people and situations, but always expectant of what You can do. Give us Your joy as the only lasting antidote to cynicism. We trust You with our problems, difficult relationships, and disturbing anxieties. We commit the present crisis in our Nation to You and ask for Your wise guidance. Now, with Your help, we want to share contagious joy and not spread the virus of cynicism. In the Name of our Lord and Savior. Amen.

RECOGNITION OF THE MAJORITY LEADER

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The able majority leader, Senator LOTT, is recognized.

Mr. LOTT. Thank you, Mr. President.

SCHEDULE

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, this morning the Senate will immediately resume consideration of S. 1301, the Consumer Bankruptcy Protection Act, with Senator REED being recognized to offer an amendment under a 1-hour time agreement. Following that debate, Senator KENNEDY will be recognized to offer an amendment regarding minimum wage under a 2-hour time agreement.

At 12:30 p.m. the Senate will recess until 2:15 to allow the two party conferences to meet. When the Senate reconvenes at 2:15 there will be 5 minutes for closing remarks on the Kennedy amendment prior to a vote on or in relation to the amendment. Following that vote, there will be up to four additional votes occurring in stacked sequence with minimal debate time between each vote. Those votes, in their respective order, will include the two Feingold amendments regarding attorney's fees and filing fees, the Reed amendment regarding underwriting standards, and the cloture vote on the child custody bill previously scheduled at 4:30.

I am still hopeful that we can come to some agreement on amendments and time so that we can go to the child custody bill without further cloture votes. But failing that, we will go forward with that vote at 4:30.

Further votes could occur into the evening as the Senate attempts to complete action on the bankruptcy bill. If we do not get to final passage tonight, then we expect that to be probably the first vote on Wednesday.

As a reminder to Senators, second-degree amendments to the child custody bill must be filed by 3:30 p.m.

I thank my colleagues for their attention.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The resolution will be placed on the calendar.

Mr. REED. Yes.

Mr. WARNER. Might I inquire as to how long the Senator might wish to speak?

Mr. REED. I assume I will speak anywhere from 10 to 15 minutes.

Mr. WARNER. I wonder if the managers of the bill would simply grant me the opportunity to introduce a bill, which will take less than 2 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I assume that if the Senator introduces a bill we would still have the full time to debate my amendment.

Mr. WARNER. I thank the Chair. I thank my distinguished colleagues.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Rhode Island.

AMENDMENT NO. 3610 TO AMENDMENT NO. 3559

(Purpose: To make amendments with respect to court considerations with respect to dismissal or conversion)

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I have an amendment at the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Rhode Island (Mr. REED) numbered 3610 to amendment No. 3559.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 5, line 10, insert "(i)" after "(A)".

On page 5, line 15, strike "or" and insert "and".

On page 5, between lines 15 and 16, insert the following:

"(ii) when any party in interest moves for dismissal or conversion, whether the party in interest dealt in good faith with the debtor; or"

Mr. REED. Mr. President, my amendment to S. 1301 is designed to encourage responsible lending by the credit card industry just as the underlying motivation of the bill is to require responsible borrowing by the general population of the United States.

Under the present legislation before us, a credit card company, or a creditor, may go into a bankruptcy court and request that the judge move a petition from chapter 7 to chapter 13 if the individual has the ability to pay at least 20 percent and is not acting in bad faith. My amendment will certainly look at the other side of the transaction and require that the creditor also act in good faith.

As I have indicated before, section 707 of this legislation will, for the first time, give the power to creditors to request that a court convert a chapter 7 petition into a chapter 13 case. This is discretionary with the judge. It is not mandatory. But implicit in that, I believe, is already the standard of good faith that the judge will require through his or her analysis of the request of the change from chapter 7 to chapter 13. But I believe it is appropriate—indeed, necessary—to have an explicit standard of good faith on behalf of the creditor, as well as on behalf of the debtor.

The bankruptcy judge, in considering this request, will first have to determine that the individual debtor has the ability to pay at least 20 percent of the claims against the debt, and, in addition, the judge will have to consider whether the debtor filed for chapter 7 in bad faith.

Once again, my amendment would propose a complementary analysis of the creditor, whether that creditor has been offering credit in good faith.

This is not only fair but is something that is necessary to maintain the balance and the appropriateness of this change to a longstanding rule in bankruptcy court which allowed the debtor to go in and file in chapter 7.

Now, we understand the differences between these two provisions of the bankruptcy code. Chapter 7 allows the debtor to discharge all of their debts. Chapter 13 requires them to repay a portion of the debts based upon their ability to repay.

The proponents of this legislation have suggested that by using this means test, by saying that if a debtor can pay at least 20 percent and requiring them, or at least giving the judge the option to put them into a provision of chapter 13 where they must repay a portion, this procedure will reduce the abuse of the bankruptcy system, the abuse that is cited in terms of people coming in with that but still declaring under chapter 7 they cannot pay and having all of their debts discharged.

We know that part of the impetus behind this legislation is the increase in bankruptcy filings throughout the United States. The proponents of this legislation have pointed out that in 1997 alone there were a record 1.3 million bankruptcy filings, and over the past 10 years the bankruptcy filings have increased year after year after year. Unfortunately, these assertions are correct.

In my State of Rhode Island, there has been a 500-percent increase in bankruptcy filings between 1984 and 1996. And so I think everyone is concerned and, indeed, everyone is interested in working out an arrangement which will prevent the abuse of the bankruptcy system, and that is a part of the underlying legislation.

Just focusing alone, however, on the increase in bankruptcy filings misses the full story because it is just one side of the story. On the other side, there has been an explosion in the extension of credit by the credit industry of the United States. Many times their standards for underwriting have diminished substantially. Many times they are issuing credit—in fact, fostering credit upon people at exorbitant interest rates. This, too, must be factored into our analysis of the bankruptcy problem in the United States today. Between 1986 and 1996, total bankruptcy filings did increase by 122 percent, but outstanding revolving consumer credit increased by almost twice as much—238 percent.

So when you look at both sides of the story, the analysis would lead me to believe, very strongly, that this is not solely the problem of individual debtors gaming the system and taking advantage of this system. This is also the problem of the credit card industry, and the credit industry in general, that is fostering and pushing credit on some people who they know are incapable of keeping up with their debts. And so when we look at these changes, we have to look at both sides of the question.

Now, this whole trend in the explosion of credit is reflected graphically in the analysis of household debt and income data. Back in 1974, total household debt was 24 percent of aggregate household income. Today, that same ratio is 104 percent. That is graphic evidence of not only the increased access to credit but the unusually robust and forceful presentation of credit and availability of credit throughout the United States.

We all know this in daily life. You just have to go to your mailbox every day and get a credit card solicitation. You just have to sit in your home from early morning to late at night 7 days a week and answer the telephone and hear a solicitation from a credit card company saying they want to give you credit. It is annoying, it is constant, and it reflects this incredible urge on the part of the industry to push credit as much as they can.

Last year, for example, the credit card companies sent out over 2 billion credit card solicitations. By my calculation, that is roughly 10 for every American man, woman and child. A recent Wall Street Journal article about a California family demonstrated just the ubiquitous and constant effort to get people to sign up for these credit cards. In 1997 alone, this one family was offered almost $5 million in credit through mail solicitations. The wife, who was not working and without independent income, was offered more than $2.5 million in credit. Her husband, who was president of a nonprofit organization, earning a good salary, on the other hand, was offered only $592,000 in credit, suggesting that the industry is not so much interested in how much you make but really how much you potentially might spend. In that regard, the daughter in the household was offered another $1.4 million in credit—in 1 year.

What does this say? This says that the industry is not looking carefully at where it is sending its solicitations. It is not looking at those people who can pay, and, in fact, in many cases it is burdening people already in debt with further debt, and now what they would like to do, when these individuals come before the bankruptcy court, is they would like to say, well, listen, you people who can't discharge your debts fully, you have to pay up. I think, again, that the appropriate balance, if we are to pursue this ability to move from chapter 13 to chapter 7, is to at least look at the good faith of the credit card industry.

In view of these facts, Mr. President, it becomes clear that the increase in bankruptcy filings is not simply a result of more borrowers borrowing more money. It is also a factor of these credit card companies soliciting poorer and poorer credit risks, and doing it quite deliberately, quite knowingly.

Data from the National Bankruptcy Review Commission supports this assertion. Indeed, this data suggests that the proportional incidence of bankruptcy filings has actually decreased slightly in the last 20 years. We have seen the numbers go up, up, up. But if you look at the ratio, if you look at the proportional incidence, given the outstanding credit, there has been a slight decrease. In 1977, there were 0.74 bankruptcies for every million dollars of consumer credit. In 1997, there are 0.73 bankruptcies for every million dollars in consumer credit.

So when you, again, look at the situation, it is not simply a group of Americans who have suddenly decided that they no longer want to honor their obligations, that they want to abandon the tradition of responsible credit behavior that their fathers and mothers had; these statistics suggest that not much has changed except in the absolute numbers, and that has been driven by this constant extension of credit by the companies, in many cases to people who they know are very unlikely to be able to keep up with the debts at the time.

The approach in the underlying bill overlooks, I think, this other side of the equation. They focus solely on the borrower. They take the "blame the debtor" approach. I do not think that is entirely correct. My amendment seeks to address that approach by striking a balance, by allowing—in fact requiring—the judge to look at the good faith of the individual company that is extending this credit. Most, indeed, the vast majority, of reputable creditors day in and day out take pains to ensure that they are doing the proper underwriting, that they are targeting people who have the ability to pay and they are not abusing their ability to market their products. But there are those operators who are not so scrupulous. These unscrupulous operators should not easily have the ability to force an individual from one chapter in the bankruptcy code to another.

At the heart of what my amendment is suggesting is that we explicitly do what I believe is implicit within the existing legislation—that the judge makes a finding that the creditor, in fact, operated in good faith. Under the present language, he or she is required to make a judgment that the debtor has not acted in bad faith in their application for chapter 7. I think that the same approach, complimentary approach should be applied to creditors.

My amendment adds this good-faith standard, and it is not the only place you will find a good-faith standard or its related bad-faith standard within this legislation and within the bankruptcy code. For example, section 202 of the bill protects the debtor's ability to discharge certain debts if in the language of the bill "the debtor makes a good-faith effort to negotiate a reasonable alternative repayment schedule."

The point is clear that throughout this legislation we have imposed good-faith standards at various junctures to give the bankruptcy judge guidance in assessing various petitions for various claims, so that this amendment is consistent with that good-faith theme throughout the legislation.

My legislation does not prescribe specific factors to be considered on the good-faith standard. Instead, it gives the bankruptcy judge the discretion to make that judgment. Again, that is consistent with this legislation and also with the general practice in the bankruptcy code. Judges, bankruptcy judges particularly, are quite familiar with making these analyses of good-faith judgment, either on the part of the creditor or the part of the debtor. In fact, if you look through the bankruptcy code, there are about 79 annotations related to the court's interpretation of "good faith." So it is a constant of the bankruptcy law and it is something that is not a novel injection into this particular legislation. I think, in fact I am convinced, that the judges can handle this analysis of "good faith" very clearly and very well.

But one might ask, what are we talking about in terms of good faith? For example, if a judge had found that there was intimidation in the extension of credit, that is certainly not good faith, and I do not think any creditor should be able to claim this privilege under the bankruptcy code if it can be shown they intimidated the creditor. If they are taking advantage of creditors, if their marketing pattern is to market to vulnerable people in our population—seniors or low-income Americans who may not have the ability to get good counseling on their debts—all these things together which suggest bad faith, or the lack of good faith, if they are consistent, demonstrable, then that judge should not allow the ability for that claimant to demand that debtor be moved from one section of the bankruptcy code to another.

All of these things together, I think, suggest very strongly that we have to look out for the exception, in terms of the creditor population, those unscrupulous creditors. There are examples already in the legislation where we have taken steps to guard against unscrupulous operations in the extension of credit. For example, the committee report comments that in section 202 they use "substantially justified" language to describe or to allow the award of attorney's fees in terms of allegations that a debt was obtained fraudulently. That is an attempt, as the committee report says, because they are "concerned that some unscrupulous creditors have alleged false misrepresentations with no proof of doing so." Indeed, there are protections already in the bill. I think, in this particular section, 707(b), there should be further protection for the good faith standard that would protect that.

I have mentioned also that there is a concern to have some sense of what might be operating out there presently that would fall under this ambit of bad faith, or lack of good faith. There is a practice that is evolving in the industry of offering, particularly to low-income populations, these loan checks, where essentially they will send a check unsolicited to the home and all you have to do is sign it to get the money. But once you do that, you now have a debt with a substantial interest rate in many cases. That is the type of behavior I think a judge reasonably can look at and say, "Is this good faith?"

For all these reasons and many, many more, the standard of good faith should be obvious to the bankruptcy judge. And I believe the way we have designed this overall legislation and this particular amendment is that we give that individual not only the incentive but also the mission to look closely at the company applying for this transfer of the debtor from one chapter to another.

I am pleased to say that this particular amendment has been endorsed by the Consumer Federation of America and that it represents an attempt to balance the standard within this particular legislation. I hope all my colleagues will support this amendment. It seems to me to do several things that are essential.

First of all, it recognizes that the problem we face is not solely, exclusively as a result of the behavior of debtors; that, in fact, it is the result of the behavior of lenders who are lending more and who are doing it without the kind of tight underwriting standards that are necessary. In that context, to give them the opportunity to move a debtor from a chapter 7 to a chapter 13 without looking at their behavior, I think, is inappropriate. It is particularly inappropriate when the judge must consider the behavior of the debtor in filing a chapter 7 petition.

This amendment, I believe, is a very important one. It will restore the balance in this particular section, section 707 of the underlying legislation, and it will, I think, provide not only a way to safeguard against abuse of the bankruptcy system by debtors, but also strike a balance so creditors understand they have the responsibility to act responsibly also.

I urge support of this amendment.

I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I yield myself such time as I might consume.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ROBERTS). The Senator from Iowa is recognized.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, this amendment by the Senator from Rhode Island is very much a modification of an amendment he proposed which would require bankruptcy judges to consider whether a creditor had used sound underwriting practices and standards when considering whether to dismiss or convert a chapter 7 to chapter 13. The modified amendment now requires judges to consider whether a creditor acted in good faith when considering whether to convert or to dismiss that case.

It is my understanding from discussions that have gone on between Senator REED's staff and my staff, and from what Senator REED has said, now, as he has introduced his amendment, that the good faith standard in the modified amendment also includes many of the underwriting considerations in the original amendment. So, accordingly, many of the objections to the original amendment still apply to this modified amendment presented by the Senator from Rhode Island.

At the outset, as with other amendments which relate to lending practices, I urge my colleagues to vote "aye" on a motion I will make to table this amendment because the Banking Committee should have a chance to consider this issue. But, since this amendment affects the means-testing provisions of S. 1301, I would like to describe how this amendment will be difficult to apply in practice, should it be adopted.

Under the bill as written now, judges are directed to consider repayment ability, and given the power to dismiss or convert chapter 7 cases if a debtor could repay some portion of his or her debt. This is the very foundation of this legislation. This is what makes this bill, this year, different than any bankruptcy legislation we have had in the 100-year history—and this is the 100th year that the first national bankruptcy code was passed, on an ongoing basis.

This amendment also requires judges to consider whether a creditor acted in good faith, including a creditor's lending practices. I don't think anyone knows how this amendment will work in the real world. There are questions raised by this amendment but not answered by the amendment:

How would a judge even find out what the creditor's underwriting practices are?

What is "good faith" in the context of section 707(b)?

Procedurally, who would have the burden of producing evidence about underwriting practices in good faith?

And if a creditor had properly extended credit to the debtor whose chapter 7 case is pending, but had recklessly offered credit to other people, is a judge supposed to factor that in as well?

What if there are two pending motions asking for dismissal or conversion—one motion by a creditor who has sloppy underwriting practices or who acted in bad faith, and another motion by a creditor with tight underwriting standards who acted in good faith? In this case, should a judge deny both motions?

Mr. President, what these questions show is that the amendment offered by the Senator from Rhode Island should be rejected because it is not good bankruptcy policy. There are too many unanswered questions and, of course, the underlying question regarding which underwriting practices are sloppy and which underwriting practices are not sloppy needs to be addressed not by the Judiciary Committee, not on the floor of the Senate, but in the laboratory of jurisdiction of that subject where legislation is perfected, and that happens to be the Senate Banking Committee.

There are already penalties for creditors who refuse to act in good faith. We made sure they were in this bill. They are a very important part of making this a well-balanced piece of legislation.

We talk so much about personal responsibility and making it tougher to get into bankruptcy that maybe people viewing this debate have sensed over the last week that all we are going after is the debtor, but that sometimes creditors don't act in good faith. This bill is balanced because it has penalties against creditors. For instance, if a creditor refuses to negotiate in good faith, then that creditor can't object to the discharge of his or her debt. This is already in the bill.

Again, I urge my colleagues to vote "no" on the Reed amendment and eventually get this bill to final passage, because this is a very needed bill. We have 2 weeks to work out some differences between the House and Senate. The other body's bankruptcy bill is considerably different from ours. And I don't say that in a denigrating way; it just is different. The process of negotiating for provisions somewhere between the House and Senate provisions—also we have to consider the White House, because we want a bill that the President can sign—takes 2 weeks to get done, and we need to get this bill passed.

I hope the Senator from Rhode Island is aware that the 20-percent figure was raised to 30 percent in the managers' amendment. I need to clarify that point because that 30-percent figure is also something that the White House was involved in working out as well, because the White House had raised some concerns about our 20-percent figure.

There also was some willingness on the part of the White House to consider some points of view we had about the 30-percent figure, and they even modified their original position, to some extent, to satisfy me.

I think it is odd that the Senator from Rhode Island is critical of lenders extending too much credit. When the credit union bill was on the floor, there was an amendment to strike the Community Reinvestment Act. The Community Reinvestment Act, of course, requires banks to extend credit to low-income people.

I don't think that any of us can argue with the social responsibility of a bank to be fair to all people and all sectors, with the understanding that they have a responsibility to the stockholders of that bank and other people who are saving, but, within the concept of good financial prudence, to lend accordingly to all sectors of a city, all types of people who have the ability to repay.

We had this community reinvestment amendment offered, and we had many Members talk about the need to make sure that credit is widely available to low-income people. What in the heck do you think credit cards are about? They are about giving people who maybe would not have that opportunity elsewhere an opportunity to borrow—again, within the concept of personal responsibility for debt.

Now, through this amendment, we hear that we should, in effect, deny a creditor the ability to collect on a debt if the creditor extended credit to low-income people. On the one hand, a month ago we had a bill before us that we were trying to modify to make it reasonable, and the other side, which was opposed to that, said we are hurting low-income people with that amendment. And now with this amendment they are saying that low-income people are people taken advantage of.

It seems to me that you can't have it both ways. I believe that borrowing and I believe that lending decisions are best made by individual Americans and not second-guessed by bankruptcy judges or political leaders in Washington, DC.

I yield the floor.

Mr. REED addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Rhode Island is recognized.

Mr. REED. Thank you, Mr. President. I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Let me respond to the Senator from Iowa. First of all, he raised interesting arguments about the amendment I did not propose, which would be a more detailed review of the underwriting practices of credit card companies and those that extend credit. For the reasons he illustrated, I did not suggest that amendment, because requiring a bankruptcy judge to look at the myriad of different underwriting standards of companies throughout the United States would not be appropriate.

What is appropriate, I believe, is to require that they look at the good faith of the person who extends the credit and is now requesting that the debtor be transferred from chapter 7 to chapter 13. It seems to me to be perfectly consistent with the notion that the judge would also look at the good faith of the debtor—whether that debtor, in fact, was trying to use chapter 7 as a dodge. That is already in the legislation.

He also raised some very interesting questions about how this will apply in practice, but I think the answer—a compelling answer, in my view—is that this is exactly what a bankruptcy judge is authorized and empowered to do on a daily basis—make judgments about the good faith of the debtor and, I suggest, also the good faith of the creditor. He or she can make these judgments. That is why they are there. They have the facts. This is a standard that is persistent throughout the bankruptcy code.

There are numerous places in which the judge is called upon to make good-faith determinations. It does not require the kind of searching, detailed analysis of all the credit policies of a particular credit card company or a bank that extends credit, but what it requires is a commonsense view of whether or not the individual who has extended the credit has abused their market power or has, in fact, somehow distorted the relationship which we think is appropriate between a borrower and a lender.

The Senator from Iowa also makes reference to the CRA Act in terms of suggesting that my demonstration of the explosion of credit is in some way inconsistent with suggesting that the Community Reinvestment Act play as positive a role.

I do not think we witnessed a 238-percent increase in consumer community lending over the last several years as we have witnessed an explosion of the extension of credit by credit card companies. I do not think that we have seen the kind of robust lending into distressed communities that many in this Chamber would think would be appropriate.

So to make that analogy by pointing out that credit card companies are increasingly lax about their extension of credit is somehow inconsistent with supporting very thorough and very limited lending under the CRA, I do not think carries weight.

What we have is a situation in which the credit card companies—and we know this. Again, you do not have to go ahead and commission a survey to find out and discover this fact; you just have to sit home some Saturday when at 9:30 in the morning the phone rings, and you think it is your cousin or your brother calling up, and it is a credit card company. You politely hang up the phone. At 10:30 you get another call, thinking again it is a family member, and it is another credit card company. You go out to your mailbox at 11 a.m. Guess what? There are two solicitations, a platinum card and a gold card; and at 2 o'clock, thinking it is a member of the staff, it is another credit card company. You know this because you go back to your States, as I do, and you learn this from your constituents.

This industry is really promoting credit. Is it beneficial? Sure it is. Access to credit is something that moves this economy forward. But when this credit extension is not done in a wise way, when in fact there is tangible evidence that there has been, in fact, bad faith—and that is a fairly strong standard to meet—then I think that the judge should be able to say or should be required to say you cannot move a debtor from chapter 7 to chapter 13.

I am also pleased to note that the increase in the standard is to 30 percent of the ability to pay. I think that is an improvement in the legislation, just like I think this would be an improvement in the legislation.

Let me conclude by saying I, frankly, believe that the way this legislation is already structured, with the judge in a position, not required to but having discretion—and the language is “may” move a debtor from chapter 7 to chapter 13—there is implicitly already a good-faith standard that I think any bankruptcy judge worth his or her salt in seeing a company that was abusive, that is filing constant petitions to move someone from chapter 7 to chapter 13, that have a known record for shoddy behavior in the community, I would think that individual would take that into consideration and should take that into consideration.

That is why I do not believe my amendment is a unique or extreme departure from what already should be the standard. I would hope that we could adopt this amendment. I think it will go a long way to ensure that there is a balanced test, that you look at the debtor, you determine whether that individual can pay a certain amount—30 percent—and you look to see if that debtor has been deploying bad faith to apply to chapter 7, but at the same time look over, not at any rigorous searching review of underwriting standards, but look at that very, very obvious standard of good faith, look at that creditor. That is what this amendment is supposed to do.

I yield the floor.

Mr. GRASSLEY addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa is recognized.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I have had a chance now for a second time to hear the explanation of the amendment from the Senator from Rhode Island. I think he is a person who always acts in good faith on his amendments and other legislative activity. He is a very active member of the Aging Committee, which I chair, and I have had a chance to observe him there as being a very serious Senator. So I do not raise any questions with the motives of the Senator because I think he even sees a need for bankruptcy legislation.

But I still have to point out that I think the amendment, even if the intent is good, is just unworkable. I do not know whether we could have an amendment written to accomplish his goals that could be perfected enough to be workable—I should not draw that conclusion; that is a possibility—but I do believe that the language we have before us would fall into that category, because the modified amendment still requires bankruptcy judges to review underwriting standards. That is what the Senator from Rhode Island said earlier on the floor.

So I do not think that we know how this amendment will work. I do not know how you can make even a commonsense determination of whether lending practices are in good faith unless the judge begins to second-guess many credit-granting decisions.

As I have said, if the Senator from Rhode Island believes that there are too many credit card solicitations, then I think I should refer him to a letter that I read into the RECORD last week, which I am going to insert in the RECORD at this point as well, a letter from the junior Senator from North Carolina, Mr. FAIRCLOTH, who chairs the subcommittee of banking where I made an argument, from a procedural standpoint, that this amendment should be considered there, and that he has offered to hold hearings on this subject matter, and maybe even the goal that the Senator from Rhode Island seeks can be accomplished, but, more importantly, accomplished in a studied approach.

So I ask unanimous consent that this letter be printed in the RECORD as justification on a procedure not to add this amendment to this bill but to have the Banking Committee consider this.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

COMMITTEE ON BANKING, HOUSING, AND URBAN AFFAIRS,
Washington, DC, September 16, 1998.

Hon. CHARLES GRASSLEY,
Chairman, Subcommittee on Administrative Oversight and the Courts, Senate Committee on the Judiciary, Washington, DC.

DEAR CHUCK: It is my understanding that a number of amendments relating to credit cards will be offered to S. 1301. Most, if not all, of these amendments will relate to matters in the jurisdiction of the Banking Committee. I Chair the Financial Institutions Subcommittee of the Banking Committee.

I share the concerns that many have regarding multiple credit card solicitations and solicitations to minors. In fact earlier this year, my Subcommittee held a hearing on bankruptcy issues, with representatives of the credit card industry testifying. I have requested and received GAO reports on such practices as high loan to value loans and the sending of “live” loan checks.

As for many of the proposed amendments relating, however, none have been passed by the Committee. In fact, none have been considered by the Committee. Further, none of the proponents of the amendments have requested hearings on any of their legislative proposals.

During consideration of the bankruptcy bill, please know that I would be more than willing to hold a hearing or hearings on any these proposals in my Subcommittee where they rightfully should be considered under regular order.

Sincerely,

LAUCH FAIRCLOTH,
Chairman, Subcommittee on Financial Institutions.

Mr. GRASSLEY. I yield the floor.

Mr. REED addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Rhode Island.

Mr. REED. I do not know if this is the final word, but the Senator is doing a remarkably good job moving this legislation forward. I agree with him, it is quite important because of this increase in the number of bankruptcy filings. There has been a huge growth in my home State of Rhode Island, a 500-percent increase in just a few years. If we are going to do it, let's do it in a fair and balanced way.

I also go back to the underlying legislation that we are trying to amend. It says essentially that a creditor may file a request to move the debtor from chapter 7 to chapter 13, and the judge will make a determination. It is not mandatory. As I read it, even if that judge determines that the debtor has 30 percent, the sufficient amount of money to repay, and that the debtor may have, in fact, been questionable in filing a chapter 7 petition, the judge is still not required to grant the request and move the petitioner from chapter 7 to chapter 13.

So as I said before, I think, implicitly, we already have this good-faith standard, because that is what the judge is going to apply. He or she is going to look at the behavior of both parties and determine if this is appropriate—if the individual should have all his debts discharged or whether there should be some partial repayment.

What I would like to do is make it clear that this good-faith standard does exist, and it does not require this searching analysis of the underwriting practices of any company. It just requires a judge looking at the facts before him or her and making a judgment, as they do every day, as to what is fair, who has acted with clean hands coming to the bar of justice.

I also say, in conclusion, that this amendment has the strong support of the Consumers Union and the Consumers Federation of America. This legislation is designed to ensure there is responsible borrowing, that the American public is responsible, and that they recognize their debts and their obligations.

I believe and I think there is underlying support of the Consumers Union and the Consumer Federation of America, that the credit industry should also be responsible and understand their obligations. This is just a small way of making explicit what I think is already within the law—to recognize that responsibility.

I yield the floor.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I yield 5 minutes to the Senator from Minnesota.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The distinguished Senator from Minnesota is recognized.

Mr. GRAMS. I thank my colleague from Iowa for yielding the floor to me. First, I ask unanimous consent that I be made an original cosponsor of the consumer bankruptcy reform bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GRAMS. Mr. President, as a cosponsor, I rise today in strong support of the Consumer Bankruptcy Reform Bill. The bill contains sorely needed provisions to help curb the dramatic rise of personal bankruptcies in this country.

It is incredible that while most sectors of the economy are experiencing an economic boom—with the notable exception of some of the hardest-working farmers in the country—personal bankruptcy filings have reached record highs. My constituents tell me that declaring bankruptcy has become so routine as to be considered just another personal finance option. No longer is it an avenue of last resort. It has become a matter of convenience, sometimes to avoid the personal responsibilities of living within one's means and repaying one's debts. I believe this shift in attitude is due in large part to a system which readily lends itself to abuse and exploitation.

The passage of the Consumer Bankruptcy Reform bill is critical because it directly confronts the abuses within our bankruptcy system. One of the main features of the bill would allow bankruptcy judges to dismiss or reassign cases if the system is being "abused." Under the bill, one of the factors which shows abuse in a chapter 7 filing is if the debtor has current income sufficient to pay at least 20% of unsecured claims against him. A motion alleging abuse of the system could be filed by the judge, the trustee, or any party in interest.

We must return to the real purpose of bankruptcy laws—to establish uniform rules in facilitating debt collection. Unfortunately today, the laws are increasingly recognized as a tool for escaping debt responsibility. They are becoming a substitute for personal responsibility.

In addition, I am disappointed that some of my colleagues seek to offer a nongermane amendment to the underlying bankruptcy legislation that would increase the minimum wage.

As my colleagues may recall, it was only two years ago that Congress enacted legislation that increased the federal minimum wage in two phases, from $4.25 to $4.75 on October 1, 1996, and from $4.75 to $5.15 on September 1, 1997. Now, as part of the Small Business Regulatory Fairness Act of 1996, this provision represented a 20 percent increase in the federal minimum wage.

Now, I voted for this legislation because it included a number of long overdue tax measures designed to help small businesses grow and create more jobs in our economy. These changes, in my judgement, would be far more helpful to wage earners than would the minimum wage increases.

Two years after enactment of this legislation, I am not convinced that the economic effect of that federal minimum wage increase is fully understood. For this reason, I am particularly concerned that an additional increase in the federal minimum wage at this time could actually have an adverse impact upon our economy.

Mr. President, the proponents of an additional increase in the minimum wage argue that Congress should do more to help Americans increase their take-home pay. I agree. However, I believe this can be done far better through tax cuts and reduced government regulation. By doing so, we will save the private sector billions of dollars which could be used for investment that brings better jobs and higher wages.

Mr. President, basic economics tells us that raising real wages above what the market will bear will cause unemployment. The higher real wages rise above the market rate the greater the level of unemployment and overall downward pressure on all wages. The solution, therefore, is to allow wage rates to adjust to market conditions. Otherwise we will have persistent, widespread unemployment that hurts the low-income workers the hardest.

Raising the cost of doing business by raising the minimum wage is probably going to mean even fewer of those jobs. Some statistics say as many as 600,000 of those jobs will be lost, killing work opportunities for young people and those families who depend on a needed second income.

Besides artificially inflating salaries, hiking the minimum wage ignores the real concerns of many working Americans. Yes, they want better jobs that pay better salaries, but they have told me repeatedly that what matters most is not how much you earn but how much of your own paycheck you are allowed to keep after the greedy Federal Government has deducted its taxes.

Families today are taxed at the highest levels since World War II, with 38 percent of a typical family's budget going to pay taxes on the federal, state, and local level. In nominal dollars, a two-income family is paying more just in taxes today than their paychecks totaled in 1977. That's nearly 50 percent more than they are spending for food, shelter, and clothing combined.

Compared to the proposed minimum wage increase, tax relief and economic growth is a better solution for helping low-income families. It will increase incentives to work, save and invest. It will allow families to maximize their income and improve their standard of living. Tax relief will allow families who today are forced to scrimp just to cover their monthly bills and their tax bills to have more money to spend on their children's education, health care expenses, food and clothing, or insurance.

In 1981, President Reagan initiated massive tax reduction which resulted in an economic miracle we are still benefiting from today. Over eight years, real economic growth averaged 3.2 percent and real median family income grew by $4,000, 20 million new jobs were created, unemployment sank to record lows, all classes of people did better.

According to the National Taxpayers Union, if Congress could roll federal domestic spending back to 1969 levels, a family of four would keep $9,000 a year more of its own money than it does today.

Recent estimates by the CBO show that the government will enjoy a nearly $1.6 trillion budget surplus over the next ten years. This potential surplus is generated by working Americans and should be returned to the taxpayers. Tax relief particularly, lower payroll income tax rates will immediately increase Americans' take-home pay and allow them to keep a little more of their own money.

In sum, Mr. President, the real answer to increasing the take-home pay of American families is not promoting political grandstanding efforts like this which would only destroy jobs, but to support more meaningful tax relief and sustainable economic growth. I urge my colleagues to support the bankruptcy legislation and resist any effort to distort the intent of this most important bill.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I yield 5 minutes to the Senator from Pennsylvania.

Mr. SPECTER. I thank the distinguished Senator from Iowa.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Pennsylvania is recognized.

NONPARTISAN IMPEACHMENT INQUIRY

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I have sought recognition to express the view that Congress should make our inquiry into possible impeachment of President Clinton as bipartisan as possible, nonpartisan, fair, and judicious. There is an abundance of evidence that the American people deplore excessive partisanship in general and oppose any kind of partisanship where we are dealing with a matter which is judicial or quasi-judicial.

I recall an admonition from my father years ago. When in a partnership situation he said, "Arlen, don't make it 50/50; give 60 percent. It will look like 50 percent to your partner. If you give 50 percent, it will look like 40 percent." That bit of advice which my father gave me as to a partnership arrangement, I think, is applicable to relationships or arrangements of many kinds.

I think it is very important that there be a real effort on the part of Republicans, because we Republicans are in control, to not press for every bit of advantage. I believe that the proceedings in the House were off to a good start when there was a vote of 363-33 to release the Starr report, with about two-thirds of the Democrats voting in favor of a release of the report. It seems to me where we have a proceeding like impeachment, which is really judicial, that it ought to be bipartisan or nonpartisan.

With respect to the playing of the tapes of President Clinton, it has been my preference that the approach be somewhat different from that which was undertaken by the House of Representatives. The playing of those tapes, I think, would have been subject to no criticism at all had the House moved ahead with an impeachment inquiry, either in a preliminary stage or after the signing in a more formalistic sense to have impeachment hearings. Then it would have been in the regular course of business in regular order to see the tape of the President so that the Members of the House could make an evaluation of the evidence as to what to do next.

Then where those hearings would be public, with the availability of the President's tape, his deposition before the grand jury would have come into the public domain in a matter of due course, and then as a regular proceeding with the hearings of the House of Representatives so that the House would have obviated the controversy and the concern of whether there was an inappropriate release of the President's tapes. Once the hearings start, even in a preliminary sense, the House Members have an obligation to see what the evidence is.

Similarly, with the release of other evidence, such as the testimony of Ms. Monica Lewinsky yesterday, that testimony is appropriate in regular course, but there is bound to be some concern raised when it is released en masse and not as a part of a regular proceeding by the House of Representatives.

From my days as district attorney of Philadelphia, which was a quasi-judicial position, a district attorney—a public prosecutor—is part advocate and part judge. The expression is made as to the district attorney being a quasi-judicial official. I found it very important in the cases which I tried personally and in the administration of the office to exercise great care to be fair with the defense, both in terms of proceedings generally and in the presentation of evidence at trial.

The juries in a criminal case, like public opinion generally, have a sense as to fairness, and it builds up, I found, the credibility of the prosecutor not to be looking for every slight advantage in the course of either investigation or trial. The impeachment proceedings, it seems to me, are really totally judicial in nature. The articles of impeachment have been analogized to a bill of indictment, but I think they are not really a bill of indictment in a criminal proceeding; or it may be argued that a bill of indictment before a grand jury is judicial in nature.

However, I hope that when we in the Congress vote in this body, when responsibilities come to the Senate, or in the other body, the House of Representatives, that there will be an approach which is bipartisan and nonpartisan. We are proceeding in a matter of the utmost, utmost gravity, the potential for impeachment of the President of the United States, and I think the American people will demand and are entitled to that kind of bipartisanship.

I yield the floor.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I yield the remainder of the time that I have on my side.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I yield the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senator from Massachusetts is recognized to offer a second-degree amendment relative to the minimum wage, on which there shall be 2 hours of debate equally divided.

AMENDMENT NO. 3540

(Purpose: To amend the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 to increase the Federal minimum wage)

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I call up amendment No. 3540.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. KENNEDY) proposes an amendment numbered 3540.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

At the appropriate place, insert the following:

SEC. . FAIR MINIMUM WAGE.

(a) SHORT TITLE.—This section may be cited as the "Fair Minimum Wage Act of 1998".

(b) MINIMUM WAGE INCREASE.—

(1) WAGE.—Paragraph (1) of section 6(a) of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 (29 U.S.C. 206(a)(1)) is amended to read as follows:

"(1) except as otherwise provided in this section, not less than—

"(A) $5.65 an hour during the year beginning on January 1, 1999; and

"(B) $6.15 an hour during the year beginning on January 1, 2000."

(2) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by paragraph (1) takes effect on January 1, 1999.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I understand that there is a time allocation, 1 hour for those who support this amendment, and 1 hour in opposition. Am I correct?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

Mr. KENNEDY. I thank the Chair.

Mr. President, I yield myself 12 minutes.

Mr. President, I will briefly review the bidding about where we are with regard to the minimum wage.

Since the end of World War II, the minimum wage has increased seven different times. President Eisenhower signed a bill for an increase of the minimum wage. President Kennedy did as well, as did President Johnson. President Nixon supported an increase in the minimum wage. President Carter supported an increase in the minimum wage. President Bush supported an increase, and President Clinton has supported it as well.

In the postwar period, if we look at where the economy went in the immediate 20 years after World War II, the economy grew across the board. The percent of increase for those at the lower income level rose just as well as those at the upper level. There was very, very little disparity. If you look at the difference quintiles, from the period of the postwar—1945 really up to about 1970—there was virtual growth together.

During this period of time, we found that Republicans and Democrats alike supported the increase in the minimum wage on a very basic and fundamental principle; that is, if Americans are going to work, they ought to be able to have a livable wage—they should not be in poverty. Men and women who want to work 40 hours a week 52 weeks a year and play by the rules ought to have a livable wage. That concept has been supported by Republicans and Democrats alike.

All we are asking today is whether we are going to continue that basic, fundamental vote of fairness and justice in our country. That is the issue. It is as plain and simple as that.

There are reasonable questions that we have to ask ourselves. The first is, What is going to be the impact on the state of our economy?

We have the greatest economic growth and price stability in the history of the Nation. We have seen untold fortunes made during the period of the last 6 years, but not for those at the lower end of the economic ladder, not for those who are the minimum-wage workers. Their actual purchasing power has been reduced. It is surprising, most Americans think, that everyone has not moved up together. Many have moved up the economic ladder, but not those at the lower part of the economic ladder.

All we are trying to do is to say to those hard-working Americans at a time when we have record unemployment, the lowest inflation that we have had at any time (except one of the seven times where we raised the minimum wage in the postwar period)—the lowest rate of inflation—that, given our economic situation, we can make sure and we can afford for those working Americans a livable wage for themselves and for the members of their family. That is the very simple issue.

It is fair to look at what has happened with the last increases in the minimum wage to see what the impact has been of those increases on the rate of unemployment and the rate of inflation.

We find, as I have demonstrated and put in the RECORD repeatedly, and will not take the time unless challenged on those issues here today, that effectively we have seen virtually no adverse impact in terms of our economy since the last two increases—absolutely none. The economy is stronger, and stronger than ever. We saw in 1997 more than 1,200,000 jobs created in the small business industry.

We have heard from the restaurant association that since the last increase in the minimum wage their employment has grown by 240,000 jobs. They have not been disadvantaged. If you are looking at a growth industry, according to the Labor Department, it is in the restaurant industry.

Mr. President, you can see what I have just stated reflected on this chart. This chart reflects clearly the fact that in constant dollars the minimum wage now is at one of its lower levels. Over the period from the mid 1950s, all the way through the mid-1980s, a 30-year period where we have Republican and Democratic Presidents alike, we have minimum wage and purchasing power that would be even above what this proposal is that is offered today: 50 cents next year, 50 cents the following year. Even if we have those two increases, we will still be below the 30-year average under Republicans and Democrats.

That is all. We are not trying to say we are going to the highest level that we have ever had, even though we have the best economy. All we are saying is let us put them in the realm of the 30-year period for these working families in America.

A great deal is said around here about the importance of work. These are working families trying to provide for their children.

Who are these workers?

These workers are child care workers and attendants. Beatrice Stanford of Wilmington, DE, is a low-wage grandmother who has worked at the YMCA Child Care Center for 4 years, earns $5.75 an hour, and is the sole supporter for her teenage son and daughter and two grandchildren. Beatrice's children have worked from time to time, but she now calls that her biggest mistake. Her daughter fell behind in school because of all the hours she was putting in at work. She needed summer school, but she couldn't afford the $300 for the course. Instead, she had to do a correspondence course that cost $164. She made up the course but lost a year. Beatrice finds it a struggle just to pay the rent. She can't afford a car, so she takes a bus to work and catches a ride to the supermarket.

These are child care workers—the faces of those who are working for the minimum wage. Beatrice Stanford, a grandmother trying to provide for her children and not being able to make ends meet.

Mr. President, there are other workers like Renda DeJohnette who provides home health care in Los Angeles. Child care workers, home health care workers, teachers' aides—these are all the people who make up the minimum wage.

Renda DeJohnette provides home health care. Renda works in a county program to help senior citizens and the disabled to remain in their homes and avoid institutionalization. Renda is a single mother with two teenage children. She earns $5.75 an hour washing clothes, preparing meals, cleaning houses and finds it hard to make ends meet. A low minimum wage increase would allow her to put food on the table and pay all of her bills.

The list goes on.

There is Marcus Reynolds of Lynn, MA. To understand the minimum wage from both sides of the paycheck, for 20 years he earned the minimum wage cleaning offices, making beds in hotels, stocking shelves, and lifting heavy packages in stores.

Often he worked two jobs, sometimes three. He says, "No matter how many jobs I worked, how little time I slept, the minimum wage was not enough to make ends meet. Even when I was basically just working and sleeping, providing for food and rent and transportation was more than a challenge. It was often a struggle." Now he owns a very small sandwich shop. He pays his entry-level workers $6 an hour. He says, "I can't afford to pay them less." He respects them as workers and as people, and as he puts it, "What kind of family value is it to pay someone supporting a family a wage that is below poverty?"

Mr. President, these are the people we are talking about. We are talking about teacher's aides who are working with our children. We are talking about child care helpers. We see the turnover that is taking place in the Head Start Program, and we are all concerned about that because we know the importance of consistency of care in terms of looking after our children.

One of the principal reasons for this turnover is that we are paying the child care assistants in these kinds of settings the minimum wage, and they just cannot make ends meet. We are talking about those health workers who are working with our parents to try to keep them at home, to help and assist them so they are not institutionalized. They are the helpers and assistants in the nursing homes looking after our parents. They are the people who take care of the buildings which house America's corporations, working long, hard hours at night.

When we asked minimum wage workers what the impact was when they saw an increase in the minimum wage last time, the answer that so many of them gave was amazing: "You know, Senator, what the impact is going to be when we raise the minimum wage. We are only going to have to work two jobs instead of three." Only two jobs instead of three. "We might get a chance to see our children more often. We might be able to go to teachers' meetings. We might be able to spend some time with our child helping with some homework."

That is the difference in terms of any kind of increase in the minimum wage. That is what we are talking about. That is what we are talking about at a time when we have the strongest economy in the history of this country and at a time when we have hard-working Americans who are prepared to do the work.

How much time do I have remaining, Mr. President?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The 12 minutes requested by the Senator have expired.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I yield myself 3 more minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is recognized.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, this chart here says it: "The minimum wage is not a livable wage." We are talking about a livable wage here in the United States of America. These are the average figures for a family. The monthly minimum wage budget includes what is necessary for a family of three. Food on the table, $348; housing, $582; transportation, $145; and what remains is $131. That does not include child care, where the national average in terms of one child would be $333 or health care where the average is $49 or clothing where the average is $63, which comes to $445. You have to squeeze three items, $445, into the remaining of $131.

The question is, how many times is a parent going to serve peanut butter to a child in order to save the $10, $15 or $20 so they can look after health care needs? How many times are they not going to pay their utilities in order to be able to look after a child? This is what we are talking about—hard-working Americans who deserve a living wage. This issue is the same as the last 70 years when we have debated it in the Senate. But we have come together in decency and fairness at important times for working Americans.

Finally, Mr. President, just last year we had an increase in our own minimum wage. Members of this body got $3,100. That is $1.50 an hour. That is the increase every Member of this Senate received—$1.50 an hour in 1 year. We are looking at child care workers, health care workers, teacher's aides getting 50 cents next year and 50 cents the following year. If it was fair enough for the Members of the Senate, it ought to be fair enough for those hard-working Americans who are trying to provide for their families. That is the issue—fundamental fairness to working Americans. Hopefully, we will be successful.

I reserve the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Utah is recognized.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I have very much enjoyed listening to my colleague once again on this very important issue, which seems to come back on an annual basis. The ink is barely dry on the announcement for last year's increase in the minimum wage and the Senator from Massachusetts is back asking for another serious, mandatory wage hike.

The distinguished Senator from Massachusetts, and those who support this concept, believes that an increase in the minimum wage is the quick, painless way to help the disadvantaged in our society. They believe that a minimum wage hike is absolutely costless, and they believe that it has no adverse impact whatsoever. I can only wonder, then, why they have not offered an amendment raising the minimum wage to $15 an hour or $20 or $25 or $30, because if it has no impact and it really is going to benefit people, why not do that. In fact, if raising Senators' salaries $1.50 an hour over the last year is right, why not give everybody whatever the amount of money the Senators make—$100,000, $130,000, or whatever it is—to even things up and make everybody equal in our society? I am sure the Senator is not arguing that so I do not mean to raise that type of ridiculous argument.

Frankly, if raising the minimum wage was all it took to raise people out of poverty—or to make life better for the working poor—I would vote for it.

But, I believe the proponents of this amendment and of the underlying concept have greatly oversimplified the issue. And, I believe they know they have oversimplified it.

EMPLOYMENT IMPACT

I will admit to my colleagues that the most elusive aspect of the economic debate on the minimum wage is an estimate of its impact on employment. Study after study has been done to quantify the employment effects of an increase in the wage floor. And, economists have disagreed about the severity of the employment impact.

There is, however, overwhelming consensus that there is indeed an adverse effect on employment. Three-quarters of the 22,000 members of the American Economic Association agree that minimum wage hikes have a disemployment effect that stifles employment opportunities for low-skilled workers.

In 1981, the Minimum Wage Study Commission, which was formed under the Carter administration, concluded that for every 10 percent increase in the minimum wage, the disemployment effect was between 100,000 to 300,000 jobs.

Disemployment means jobs not only eliminated, but also jobs that are never created in the first place. For example, if a retail store planned to hire five additional workers and, as a result of the higher labor costs, only hired two, the disemployment effect is three jobs.

For the sake of argument, let's take the more conservative boundary of this range of impact. The Kennedy-Wellstone amendment proposes a 19.4 percent increase in the minimum wage over two years.

That means that, using the most conservative multiplier, nearly 200,000 entry level jobs would be lost.

Now, Mr. President, let's line up 10 applicants for entry-level jobs. Which two of them are most likely to lose out at this higher minimum wage level? The suburban teenager working to pay the insurance on his car? The spouse working to put a little extra money into the household budget? The senior citizen who is supplementing his retirement income and trying to stay active? Are they the people who would lose out?

Or, would it be the new immigrant still learning a new language? Perhaps the young woman just out of a drug rehabilitation program, or a young man recently paroled from prison. Perhaps those who will miss out are high school drop outs.

Michigan State University economist David Neumark suggests that the employment effects of a higher minimum wage are actually most acute on certain subgroups. In his paper "The Effects of Minimum Wages on Teenage Employment, Enrollment, and Idleness," Neumark finds that higher minimum wages act as an incentive for teenagers to seek employment and that those with more experience and greater skills crowd out those with fewer skills. Those who are displaced find themselves "idle," i.e., neither enrolled in school nor employed.

I certainly do not consider this a positive effect of the minimum wage increase. But, it gets worse.

The probability that a black or Hispanic teenager will be displaced is five times greater than for the general population of teenagers.

But, perhaps the perverse impact of minimum wage increases is summed up best by two of President Clinton's own appointees to the Federal Reserve Board, William Baumol and Alan Blinder: "The primary consequence of the minimum wage law is not an increase in the income of the least skilled workers, but a restriction on their employment opportunities." [Baumol and Blinder, cited in Glassman, Washington Post, 4/9/96]

This is pretty serious stuff. The ones who really get hurt are the ones who need the help the most.

The long and the short of it is simply that you cannot mandate an increase in the price of entry level or unskilled labor—which is exactly what the statutory minimum wage is—without reducing the demand for that labor.

The term "labor costs" is complicated. It includes lots of things: wages, insurance, FICA taxes, unemployment taxes, training, uniforms or other expenses. But, for now, let's just say it's wages and FICA taxes.

Some may be tempted to say that another dollar an hour is no big deal for an employer. Well, let's take a hypothetical employer in my home state of Utah. Let's see how big of a deal it is.

Is it only $1 for the ABC Company in Salt Lake City, UT? "Hey, it's only $1, what's the big deal?" they say. Assume you are a business owner with 25 part-time employees who work 30 hours a week. How much would a minimum wage hike cost you? You fill in the blanks.

First year, 50 cents times 25 employees times 30 hours per week times 52 weeks per year equals $19,500 in the first year.

The second year, $1 times 25 employees times 30 hours per week times 52 weeks per year equals $39,000 in the second year. Add in the additional FICA and other taxes—I'll bet you forgot about those—that is $5,265, just use 9 percent, if you will, to keep it easy.

And the grand total is $63,765. Think about that. This is the average small business. The average small business owner takes home less than $25,000 per year. So where is the money going to come from? Where is the money going to come from?

If you stop and think about it, under the Kennedy-Wellstone amendment, the 2-year increase in labor costs would be more than $63,000. Actually the figure is $63,765. That is 2½ times what a typical small business owner takes home.

The median take-home for small business owners, as I have said, is $25,000. That's based on the National Federation of Independent Businesses, the representative of the small business people in this country, and that is using CPS data.

Exactly what would you do, Mr. President, if you were this small business owner faced with a dollar per hour mandatory increase in your labor costs?

The answer should be obvious. As one small business owner noted:

Unfortunately, many entry-level jobs are being phased out as employment costs grow faster than productivity. In that situation, employers are pressured to replace marginal employees with self-service or automation or to eliminate the service altogether. . . .

I should mention that the small business owner I just cited is former Senator George McGovern.

His eyes were opened once he left the distinguished U.S. Senate and went into a small business himself and found out it is pretty tough to be in business. There are a lot of demands on you. That was Senator George McGovern, who I believe voted for every minimum wage increase the whole time he was in the U.S. Senate. I give him credit for being willing to call it the way it is.

Harriet F. Cane, owner of the Sweet Life restaurant in Marietta, Georgia, after the last minimum wage increase reports that she went from 16 employees to 9. She voiced her frustration in the Wall Street Journal:

Money for minimum wage increases has to come from somewhere. . . . If you pass another increase in the minimum wage, you can tell the teenagers and working mothers I employ why they no longer have jobs. Then try asking for their votes.

And, I also share Senator McGovern's concerns about one other aspect of the minimum wage. He goes on to ask:

When these jobs disappear, where will young people and those with minimal skills get a start in learning the "invisible curriculum" we all learn on the jobs?

Senator McGovern is right. Entry level jobs are only the first run of the ladder. How many of us are today doing the same job we did as teenagers? Quite obviously none of us in Congress. And, I would venture very few outside of Congress.

Ed Rensi started in 1965 in Columbus, Ohio, at 85 cents an hour. Today, he's the president and CEO of McDonald's. [Shlaes, WSJ, 8/15/95] Just think about that.

James Glassman, writing in the Washington Post, quotes this finding by David Macpherson, professor of economics at Florida State University: "A year after having been observed working at the minimum wage of $4.25, the average wage for these workers was $6.08 an hour." [Glassman, Washington Post; 4/9/96] That is a $1.83 increase—43 percent.

Amity Shlaes, writing in the Wall Street Journal, cites a 1992 study in the Industrial Relations and Labor Review that stated that 63 percent of minimum wage workers earn higher wages within 12 months and that the increases average 20 percent. [Shlaes, WSJ, 8/15/95]

So, let me get the proponents' argument straight: Someone who has a minimum wage job is going to be better off with a 19.4 percent increase under the Kennedy-Wellstone amendment—if he or she doesn't lose his job or have his hours reduced—than under current law where there is a greater probability of keeping the job and getting a 20 percent or greater raise in their wages?

I find this logic terribly twisted.

It is a great myth that everyone currently earning the minimum wage gets 'stuck' in a minimum wage job. The fact is that people cycle through these jobs regularly. They get raises; they get more education; they learn a new skill; they prove themselves reliable; they move on and up.

And, I'll say one more thing about jobs at the bottom. I am proud that I worked my way through school. I even worked as a janitor. Some of my colleagues might poo-poo that experience. Well, I am proud of it. Not only was I a darn good janitor, but I met good, decent people doing it as well, and I have to tell you I made 65 cents an hour.

I like to think maybe I have progressed in life and that little bit of training I got as a janitor helped me to appreciate what working is. It helped me to put myself through school. It helped me to have the dignity that comes from working, the discipline that I learned from having to meet hours, meet work schedules, and meet work expectations. All of that was pretty darned important.

One thing I learned was that there is no such thing as a menial job—only people who do not understand the importance of any job performed well. And maybe that's one thing wrong with our society today—but that's a subject for another day.

WINNERS AND LOSERS

First jobs are for learning as well as earning. If we continue to raise the bar for entry, how many adults will we have who have never worked? How many teenagers and young adults who need a chance are not going to get one?

According to the conservative estimate, at least two out of every 10. My colleagues on the other side may not think that is too high a price to pay in order to benefit the other eight. But, considering the evidence that hiking the minimum wage is a lousy way to help the working poor, I can't agree—I cannot agree, to make it even more clear.

It is true that some workers will reap the benefit of the increase. Some workers will get a $40 a week raise. But, by mandating wage increases, two out of 10 entry-level job seekers won't have a job at all—very likely those who need a chance the most.

Senator KENNEDY has gone to great lengths to disassociate this minimum wage increase from organized labor's legislative wish list. He has tried to convince us that this is a women's issue and a children's issue. He has tried to tell us that we should enact this 19.4 percent increase in order to lift the poor and working poor out of poverty.

The distinguished Senator from Massachusetts is attempting to give this perennially bad idea a Cinderella-like transformation. I must point out to my friend and colleague that there is no way this pumpkin is going to turn into a handsome coach.

Let's look at the demographics of who will be helped and who will be hurt by the loss of job opportunities.

There are twice as many minimum wage earners in families earning more than $25,000 per year—that is 51 percent of them—than in families earning less than $12,500 per year. That is 25 percent of them. And, one of five lives in a family earning $50,000 or more. [Deavers; Employment Policy Foundation, 3/5/98 briefing, p. 21]

Nearly 43 percent of all minimum wage earners are teenagers and young adults living at home; 16.5 percent are spouses of other earners; 22.5 percent are not heads of household. Only about 20 percent are heads of household supporting dependents.

In Utah, the distribution is even more lopsided.

Who really benefits from the minimum wage hike in Utah? The average family income of Utah employees who will benefit from President Clinton's proposed minimum wage hike is $37,816. According to the U.S. Census Bureau data, fully 89 percent of Utah employees whose wages will be increased by President Clinton's proposed minimum wage hike either live with their parents or another relative, live alone, or have a working spouse. Just 11 percent of them are sole earners in families with children, and each of these sole earners has access to supplemental income through the earned income tax credit.

As you can see, Mr. President, only 11 percent are single parent with kids or single earner in couple with kids. Stop and think about it.

That is important to look at. Our State is maybe a little bit better than the national average where it is 22 percent. That 11 percent is doubled to 22 percent. But it still means that 78 percent of the people are those who need that entry-level job, that first job, that opportunity of starting on the ladder climbing higher.

Of course, we should be concerned that certain families are struggling with minimum wage incomes. There should be no insinuation that those of us who oppose this amendment do not care about these struggling families.

MINIMUM WAGES CAN'T FIGHT POVERTY

But, we need to understand the limits of a minimum wage increase to reach these families with any tangible benefits.

The minimum wage increase cannot be targeted only to certain workers. We cannot say that Mrs. Jones who is trying to raise two kids on the minimum wage gets the increase, but Mrs. Brown who is working to supplement her husband's earnings does not.

The reality is that those who are not poor are more likely to get raises and those whose skills do not justify the higher wage will be out of jobs.

Study after study has concluded that raising the minimum wage is an ineffective means of helping those who are disadvantaged.

David Neumark of Michigan State and William Wascher of the Federal Reserve Board concluded that:

On balance, we find no compelling evidence supporting the view that minimum wages help in the fight against poverty. Rather, because not only the wage gains but the disemployment effects of minimum wage increases are concentrated among low-income families, the various trade-offs created by minimum wage increases more closely resemble income redistribution among low-income families than income redistribution from high- to low-income families. Given these findings, it is difficult to make a distributional or equity argument for minimum wages. [Neumark & Wascher, "Do Minimum Wages Fight Poverty?" NBER Paper, August 1997].

Peter Brandon, of the Institute for Research on Poverty at the University of Wisconsin has found that "welfare mothers in states that raised their minimum wage remained on public assistance 44 percent longer than their peers in states where the minimum wage remained unchanged." [Brandon, cited in Understanding the Minimum Wage, 1995]

A conference paper prepared by Robert V. Burkhauser (Syracuse University), Kenneth A. Crouch (University of Connecticut), and David C. Wittenburg (The Lewin Group) reports the results of a simulation model on the effects of the 1990-1991 minimum wage increase. After holding the employment variable constant (which was not the actual effect), "only 19.3 percent of the increase in the wage bill caused by that minimum wage increase went to poor families. This is less than the 22 percent of workers whose wages were increased by the minimum wage increase who live in poor families." [Burkhauser, Crouch, Wittenburg, "The Behavioral and Redistributive Consequences of Minimum Wage Hikes: Evidence from the 1990s;" AEI Conference, May 4, 1998, p. 5]

Yes, Mr. President, raising the minimum wage sounds like an easy way to help those who are working but still struggling to find their way out of poverty. It is no wonder that, lacking the facts, the American people would support this.

But, upon examination, using minimum wage increases to alleviate poverty is like trying to shoot a fly off an elephant—and we are not even aiming at the fly but at the entire elephant. The amendment proposed by Senator KENNEDY and Senator WELLSTONE is not directed to workers who are poor, but rather at the entire universe of minimum wage workers. And, even former Secretary of Labor Robert Reich has acknowledged that most minimum wage workers are not poor.

CONCLUSION

The idea that there is no adverse impact from a mandatory increase in the cost of hiring workers is delusional.

But, what is worse, is that this adverse impact is for nothing. And, those very individuals who need entry level jobs the most are the ones most likely to be displaced by the increased competition for those jobs.

This proposal, like the emperor who has no clothes, is specious—it is still specious, and I haven't even touched on inflationary or geographic inequities. I would need another hour to do that.

It is disappointing that some of my colleagues on the other side of the aisle remain so enamored with this discredited dinosaur of a labor policy. Even the Democratic Leadership Council, citing findings of the Progressive Policy Institute, has repudiated minimum wage hikes, correctly claiming that they are counterproductive.

Hiking the minimum wage is not the only way to assist working Americans and those struggling to make ends meet. Let's work on some of those ideas. Personally, I would like to raise people's paychecks by cutting their taxes. That is probably a far better way of doing it than doing it this way. That would increase their paychecks without the risk they might lose their jobs, which is a big risk that will happen with this giant albatross.

I think we can work together on education. We passed the A+ Education bill earlier this year with bipartisan support. Education—or the lack of it—is the single biggest factor in determining an individual's earning capacity.

Let's tackle illiteracy and other root causes of low-skills and low-earnings potential. But, for Heaven's sake, let's recognize the minimum wage as the mirage it really is.

I urge my colleagues to defeat the Kennedy-Wellstone amendment. It deserves to be defeated, and it is time we start approaching these problems in a better way, in a way that really will help people, especially those who are at the lowest level of poverty in this country. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ASHCROFT). Who yields time?

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I yield 7 minutes to the Senator from Rhode Island.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Rhode Island is recognized.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I rise in strong support of Senator KENNEDY's and Senator WELLSTONE's proposal to raise the minimum wage. There, in my view, is a very compelling reason why we must do this and we must do it today. That reason, simply stated, is that if you are a full-time worker, a head of household, a single head of household and a family of three, you will make $10,700 a year. That is $2,900 below the poverty level. Today, the minimum wage law in the United States guarantees to so many people only one thing: that they will still be in poverty. We can do much better than that, and we should do much better than that.

There have been discussions about the employment effects of raising the minimum wage. Studies have been presented; statistics have been presented. Let's look clearly at what has happened in the last two episodes in which we raised the minimum wage.

Back in October of 1996, the minimum wage was increased to $4.75. And what happened to unemployment? It fell; it was in a cyclical pattern, but it fell. Again, in September of 1997, we raised the minimum wage to $5.15, and once again unemployment fell.

This legislation is not a job killer. This legislation does not deny opportunities to work for anyone. What it does is it gives people more money in their paycheck, gives them more opportunities to provide for their families, gives them a bigger share in this country's economy. That is why we need to do it.

There are others who argue, "Well, those are just general statistics." The real problem with the minimum wage increase is it affects some discrete subgroups like teenagers. If you look at the record of teen unemployment, age 16 to 19, once again the same pattern emerges. The minimum wage was raised in October of 1996—it is a cyclical process—and unemployment declined. Again, in September of 1997, with some cyclical variation, a declining curve, unemployment in this category also falls. So the arguments against the minimum wage because it kills employment just do not hold water based upon the most recent experiences.

Then there is the argument that small businesses will invariably and automatically react to an increase by cutting back on their employment. There has been a recent study by two researchers from the Jerome Levy Economic Institute at Bard College. And 90 percent of the small businesses they surveyed indicated that the 1996 minimum wage increase did not change their hiring decisions. Their hiring decisions were based upon the demands in their marketplace for their products, driven by a very strong economy. Moreover, 75 percent of these individuals surveyed said that a further increase to $6 would also not influence their decisions about hiring.

So small business is not reacting to this proposed minimum wage increase by saying, "We are going to cut off employment." What this does is give hard-working Americans a chance to put more money in their paycheck to provide more opportunities for their families.

We have also heard arguments on the floor today that, "Well, the minimum wage is benefiting not just the poorest people, just teenagers who work, but maybe spouses who work and their husbands or wives are employed in more lucrative jobs."

First of all, the reality of the minimum wage is that 74 percent of the wage earners are over 20, so the vast majority are not teenagers. And 40 percent are the family's sole breadwinner. They have people who depend upon them, depend upon them bringing in a living wage. And 63 percent are women; and 50 percent of the minimum wage earners are in the lowest 40 percent of earners in the United States. This does, in fact, provide a very positive impact on the opportunities for low-income Americans.

There is another argument here, too, that I think we have to present. Last Congress, many of us joined together to pass significant welfare reform, in fact, directing people off welfare into the workforce; and it is an irony, at best, moving people from welfare into poverty-level wages—indeed, below poverty-level wages. To make this experiment in welfare reform truly workable, we have to ensure that when people leave welfare they get adequate pay. And the minimum wage increase will help do that.

Also, it seems to me illogical that in every other sphere of economic endeavor raising someone's pay is seen as a good thing, not a bad thing, that most of our activities in the workplace are designed to get increases in pay. In fact, very few people would think, "I'm not going to ask for an increase in pay. It might curtail my opportunities to work." Because the reality, as demonstrated by my colleague, just to survive, to put food on the table, clothe children, to provide minimal care to their families, requires an increase in the minimum wage.

I think there is another argument that has to be stressed. We are coming into some rocky economic times in the United States because of the turmoil throughout the world. Demand for American goods overseas is faltering. How do we keep our economy going? One way to do that is to give the American people more purchasing power. Increasing the minimum wage does that for the very lowest income Americans, those people who go into the Kmart, go into the Wal-Mart, to buy products. In fact, they are typically the types of individual households that, because of the demands on them, are constantly buying products for their children, buying goods and services. This will also help, I think, in a broader economic sense.

So for all these reasons—basic justice and fairness, to keep our economy moving, to recognize that there are so many good reasons to do this—it does not affect employment dramatically but what it does affect is the ability of working families, people who work very hard to provide for their families and maybe provide a little extra. That, to me, is why we are all here.

I strongly support the efforts of Senator KENNEDY, the efforts of Senator WELLSTONE, and their strong commitment to ensure that the benefits of this economy are shared not by just those who are affluent but are shared by the broadest segments of American society, particularly by those who struggle each and every day under circumstances, frankly, that few of us have had to endure, to be good citizens, to work hard, and to get something a little bit more for their families.

I hope, in that spirit, and recognition of those facts, that we strongly support this amendment.

I yield back my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. HATCH addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Utah.

Mr. HATCH. I yield 12 minutes to the distinguished Senator from Wyoming.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Wyoming is recognized.

Mr. ENZI. I thank the President and the Senator from Utah.

I rise today to share my thoughts about another proposed increase in the minimum wage. Having been a small business owner for 27 years, I want to be sure that my concerns regarding the full economic impact that that Federal one-size-fits-all mandate can have on rural States like Wyoming are made known. This complex economic issue demands careful consideration.

I want to say right up front, I favor an increase for all wages. But that increase should be sparked by a strong free market economy, not by a Federal mandate that would be detrimental to small businesses and to the existence of hundreds of minimum-wage-paying jobs in Wyoming that are already few in number.

I travel throughout Wyoming almost every weekend. I regularly hold town meetings and attend ice cream socials as a way of listening to my constituents' concerns. I want to point out, Wyoming residents are thick-skinned individuals and they are not shy about sharing opinions—they show up and they share.

I was not surprised to hear from them that another increase in the minimum wage could close small businesses and eliminate jobs—two things that are already tough to come by in Wyoming.

As a former shoestore owner, I have always felt that the minimum wage represented a starting wage—better referred to as an entry-level wage. I hear people trying to equate it with a "living wage." It is a minimum wage. It is an entry-level wage.

An entry-level wage in Wyoming changes quickly as the individual worker gains experience and improves his or her skills in the workplace. Almost two out of three workers who start at the entry-level wage earn a higher wage within 6 months—more skill, more money. Every job works that way. There are just different entry-level rates—more skill, more money. Kids with no skills have to gain experience in the workplace if they are to understand why hard work is a fundamental step to life's success.

Moreover, college students seeking part-time jobs to help supplement their education are going to find it even more difficult to obtain work when the number of these available jobs is cut.

Are the economic realities that impact these kids being considered by this amendment? I will gladly welcome any explanation based on Wyoming's labor market.

Only 480,000 people live in Wyoming, fewer than any other State in this country. That is not bad; we have plenty of elbowroom. Wyoming still remains a State of high altitude and low multitude dominated by miles and miles of miles and miles. We can still call the wrong number and know who we are talking to. But my State's labor market has produced a set of statistics that worry us. Wyoming ranks 50th in new economic growth, 50th in the creation of new jobs, and 50th in technical industries. That is not a change. We lack the population needed to lure high-turnover jobs. We lack critical mass where there is enough population for businesses to feed on each other.

While other States are celebrating budget surpluses, Wyoming politicians argue over every available penny, knowing that a $200 million shortfall is expected within the next 5 years. To put that in perspective, a 1 cent statewide sales tax only raised $50 million a year for the State. Having served in the State and the legislature for 10 years, I have dealt with this reality firsthand.

Folks need to understand why another increase in the minimum wage impacts States like Wyoming differently than Connecticut or Massachusetts. The Nation's economy may be strong, but my State hasn't shared that fortune. It takes a long time for rural States with sparse populations to benefit from these trends. I am not going to buy into the notion that another minimum wage hike is necessary just because the Nation's economy is doing well. There is more to it than that.

Despite Wyoming's economic portfolio, the absence of intrusive State taxes ensures that family incomes go a long way. It would go even further if I could say the same for Federal taxes—however, we will save that debate for another time. Wyoming residents pay no State income tax, a five-cents-on-the-dollar sales tax, bare-bones “sin” taxes and fuel taxes, and some of the lowest property taxes in the country. In fact, a Wyoming family of four making $50,000 per year pays about $2,500 total in State and local taxes—including sales tax. In Connecticut, that same family of four pays $10,000. That is an incredible difference. Connecticut folks pay four times as much in local and State taxes. Labor Secretary Herman stated in a letter to Chairman JEFFORDS of the Senate Labor Committee describing how another minimum wage increase would make an “enormous difference in the lives of workers and their families” and that it would “mean an additional $2,000 a year

* * * I guess if I had to pay over $10,000 each year just in State income tax, a Federal minimum wage hike might not sound too bad. However, those folks should be screaming for lower taxes—not higher wages! Those East Coast families have to make up to four times as much to cover State and local taxes.

Wyoming's low taxes give the dollar plenty of mileage, despite lower wages. Even where the availability of housing is scarce, it's still affordable. My youngest daughter now attends the University of Wyoming in Laramie where rental property is tough to come by. Still, a person can rent a single-family home there for less than $400 per moth. A one-bedroom apartment in a modest Washington neighborhood often exceeds $1,000 per month. That is a monumental difference. Similar to taxes, East Coast workers need to make up to 2½ times as much to cover housing. I made a few phone calls to some local “fast food” restaurants and I learned that each of them started their employees above the minimum wage. I was quoted wages starting from $5.25 per hour at the Burger King in Falls Church to $6.00 per hour at an Alexandria McDonald's. The labor market and cost of living determine these pay rates, not Federal minimum wage laws. But in Wyoming, where these same factors are much different, the wages are dictated entirely from Washington where folks pay 4 times as much for State and local taxes and 2½ times as much for housing. To no surprise, the Burger King in Casper, the McDonald's in Cheyenne, the Taco Bell in Laramie and the McDonald's in Sheridan all start their employees at this entry-level wage. Remember, those who show some interest don't stay at that entry-level wage long. Remember, those who show some interest don't stay at the entry-wage level. Another mandated, one-size-fits-all minimum wage hike may sound like a good deal for Wyoming's entry-level employees, but it isn't. Each time the minimum wage is increased, these jobs that put money in the pockets of kids—and sometimes senior citizens, too—become extinct.

That is not just Wyoming. This chart shows that although the growth and the overall economy did accelerate, it agrees with the other charts. It accelerated in 1996 and 1997. The job growth at eating and drinking places fell sharply after the wage hikes. In 1995, job growth in the whole economy was 2 percent; eating establishments, 3.9. In 1996, after the wage increase goes into effect, the economy grows by 2.8 percent, and the kids working in restaurants only have a growth of 2.2 percent.

After outpacing overall employment growth each year in the 1990s, job growth at eating and drinking places fell sharply in 1996 and 1997. This chart shows the total employment and the eating and drinking employment. So both of them show the same trends.

Another chart shows what the new job opportunities at eating places were in 1994 and 1995 versus 1996 and 1997. The rate of growth allowed for 532,800 jobs in 1994 and 1995. Then the minimum wage kicked into effect. The growth was only 281,600 jobs; we lost over 250,000 jobs in that market alone. That is a quarter of a million kids who didn't get a job.

Despite Wyoming's sparse population, the number of jobs are even fewer. The complaint I hear from my constituents is not about low paying wages, but the lack of jobs. Folks in my State are tired of seeing their kids leave Wyoming to attend college elsewhere simply because there are not enough part-time and full-time entry-level jobs to help them get a little experience and pay for their education while they go to college. Since the bulk of jobs in Wyoming are provided by small businesses, another increase in the minimum wage will only increase that disparity. Another minimum wage increase would hike all wages. I'm in favor of all wages being increased, but not at the cost of critical jobs. If the entry-level wages have to go up, the workers earning slightly more than the minimum wage would have to earn more too. This isn't just a debate about entry-level wages. Not only would small businesses have to pay its employees a higher wage, but the price of products that the business purchases at wholesale costs and sells at retail prices will undoubtedly have to go up—causing customers to purchase less as a result. Lower sales means less jobs. Downsizing would result. If that fails, the business folds—often quickly by Wyoming's standards. This is basic macroeconomics and a simple explanation on why Federal mandates can hurt the very people they are intended to help. Unfortunately, people don't work at the Federal level. They work at the local level—even for those who work for the Federal Government.

Not only have I heard the argument that our economy won't be hurt by another increase since it is already so strong, but the argument is also portrayed to sound as if another increase is long overdue. Over the past 10 years, the Federal Government has walked all over States like Wyoming by subjecting them to national, one-size-fits-all mandates, all kinds. In 1989, the Congress and President Bush negotiated an agreement that provided for three increases in the minimum wage over a 12 month period. By April 1, 1991, the minimum wage rose from $3.35 per hour since 1981 to $4.25 per hour.

Congress didn't stop there, however. On May 22, 1996, the House passed a tax bill to assist small businesses, entitled the Small Business Job Protection Act of 1996. On May 23, the very next day, the House passed another bill that increased the minimum wage from $4.25 an hour to $5.15 an hour over two years. These two bills were combined into one package and sent to the Senate where it passed. I was still a small business owner in Wyoming at that time, but I was still appalled by the action Congress and this President took under the guise of “small business protection.”

That takes us to today. Now the Senate is talking about another increase in the minimum wage—$1 over the next two years. I am a member of the Senate Labor Committee that has jurisdiction over this matter. The committee has not had one, single hearing discussing the impacts of another minimum wage increase. The committee has not considered any legislation that would increase the minimum wage. Rather than discuss the impacts that the pending legislation would have on States like Wyoming, the committee process was shunned. Instead, we're now debating this issue as a matter of election year theatrics. Politics does not constitute sound policy and this attempt to increase the minimum wage again simply confirms that notion.

I am not interested in playing games with the minimum wage. This is a complex, economic issue that must be carefully considered. If the minimum wage goes up, then so does the poverty level. But wages are already going up because of full employment. A quick downturn in the economy would escalate unemployment. This would be a lose-lose situation. Phony wage hikes drive prices up—so we trick the worker into thinking he or she is getting more—but the bills still can't be paid at the end of the month. Government dabbling in a free economy is phony economics.

Congress has a duty to weed out political schemes from impacting our Nation's market and labor force. States like Wyoming deserve better than that and I'm not going to sit idly by and allow my constituents' concerns to be silenced.

This matter should receive a fair hearing and additional consideration by the respective committees and must not be excluded. This is the last-minute election year pitch; nothing more. I strongly oppose this attempt to pass a minimum wage increase, and I ask my colleagues to do the same.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. WELLSTONE addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I yield 10 minutes to the Senator.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Minnesota is recognized.

Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President, I am pleased to be on the floor with my colleague, Senator KENNEDY, in support of this amendment.

Let me say to my colleagues on the other side—perhaps we can have some discussion and debate about this—that I find it very interesting what is going on here. If I am wrong, I am sure my colleagues will try to prove me wrong. I don't actually think they can prove me wrong. Here is what is going on.

The reason that the vast majority of the people in our country have made it crystal clear that they are for an increase in the minimum wage, that they think to go from $5.15 cents and hour to $6.15 over a 2-year period is imminently reasonable is because they think this is a family-value issue. This occurred the last time we went through this debate and this time as well. Most people in Minnesota and most people in the United States of America believe that it is our responsibility as Senators and as Democrats and Republicans to create a climate whereby they can do their best by their kids, because when they do their best by their kids, they do their best by our country. One of the ways they can do best by their kids is to have a decent job and a decent wage so they can support their families. That is what this debate is all about.

Mr. President, we have these arguments trotted out here. I do not like where they come from. We have the same old song. I understand that for a variety of different reasons some of my colleagues are opposed to raising the minimum wage. I understand this may be a difficult vote. So we have to figure out other arguments to make. I don't think it looks good.

I am going to sort of break from the traditional boundaries of debate and say this: I don't think it looks good.

In this past year we gave ourselves a cost of living raise of $1.50 an hour on top of giving ourselves, several years ago, a $30,000 increase. We in the Senate went from $100,000 to $130,000-plus.

At the time, I had colleagues come up to me and say, "We need to do it. We have two places. We have children. They are in college. It is tough. It is very difficult to make ends meet." So we voted ourselves a $30,000 increase, and then, on top of that, we vote ourselves a $1.50-an-hour cost of living increase. Yet, we say it is just outrageous to increase the minimum wage for people who are working full-time, playing by the rules of the game, 52 weeks a year, 40 hours a week, and are making poverty wages. People who work full-time ought not to be poor in America. They ought to be able to make a decent wage and support their children. $100,000 to $130,000 for us is fine, but to raise the minimum wage $1 over 2 years is not fine.

That is a tough argument to make for people in the country, because most people in the country believe that it is our job to make sure that when people play by the rules of the game and work hard that they earn a decent living. Most people in this country believe that those people ought to have that chance. Thus, the arguments come out.

And so we heard that we are going to lose all these jobs, but that didn't happen. Here are the figures from the Bureau of Labor Statistics. I am not bringing out any particular conservative group or liberal group. I am just going by BLS data. When we went from $4.25 to $4.75 over this first year, 394,000 new jobs were added to the economy. Then when we went from $4.75 to $5.15, 517,000 new jobs were added to the economy.

When I am finished I look forward to my colleagues refuting this; to just explain away the data. Sometimes we don't know what we don't want to know. But these are the facts from the Bureau of Labor Statistics. Where is the evidence that this increase in the minimum wage that helped so many people in our country—10 million-plus people, 140,000 people in Minnesota, helped people do better by themselves and better by their kids—where is the evidence that it led to a decrease in jobs?

In the State of Wyoming, since the Federal minimum wage was increased, unemployment in Wyoming dropped by 8 percent. Where is the evidence that the increases in the minimum wage lead to a sharp drop in the number of jobs in the State of Wyoming? It is just the opposite. According to BLS, 15 percent of the workforce in Wyoming will benefit from our increase—30,000 workers.

So I don't understand this whole argument about how it will lead to a decrease in jobs. For reasons I can't understand, I think it is just sort of "blind ideology" that my colleagues don't want to support this. We are glad to have a big increase for ourselves. Then I say, "OK. What could be the reasons?"

Here are the arguments that are brought out to the floor. One is we will see all of these jobs disappear. But precisely the opposite is happening.

Until I hear to the contrary, I don't quite understand that argument.

My colleague from Wyoming, who I enjoyed hearing, said we didn't have any hearings. The chairman of the Committee on Labor and Human Resources, my good friend, said we would be pleased to have hearings.

So we don't have hearings. Hearings are denied and then that is used as an argument why we shouldn't take action.

Then I hear my good friend from Utah make the argument that these jobs are not just about earnings. They are about learning, and that we should recognize the dignity of work. I agree. But do you want to know something? The best way that we can recognize the dignity of the work is to make sure there is some value to the work and make sure that these men and women who are taking care of our children, taking care of our parents, providing us with food, cleaning buildings, and you name it, are provided with a decent wage.

A lot of people, no matter how hard they work, are poor because wages are too low. To talk to them about the dignity of their work and how this is great for learning just misses the point, if we won't talk about earnings.

I don't know what reality we are dealing with here. We are dealing with the phenomenon of many working poor families in our country with the head of household working full-time, and those families are still poor.

I am hearing colleagues talk about how we are opposed to raising the minimum wage because somehow we think it will undercut the dignity people have. Or we are opposed to raising the minimum wage because we really think this is as much about learning as it is earning. I just do not understand these arguments.

Mr. President, we know that this especially helps women because they are disproportionately among the low-wage workers. We know that this disproportionately helps adults. We dealt with the mythology that this is all about teenagers. Then we get into the argument: But there are a percentage of these workers who are younger people, high school age, college age.

Again, I don't know what reality my colleagues are focused on here. But do you know, they work for compelling reasons as well. In case anybody hasn't noticed, higher education is an expensive proposition.

Many high school students and college students are working—I meet many college students who are working 2 and 3 minimum wage jobs. That is why it takes them 6 or 7 years to graduate. They are not doing it just on some lark. They are doing it because this is key to their being able to finance their education or help their parents finance their education. Or, if they are older—since many of the students are older and going back to school—it is even more critical.

I heard my colleague from Utah refer to a study that showed when you have a higher minimum wage, welfare mothers stay on welfare a longer period of time. That does not make any sense to me. I would love to know what there is to that story. Because, frankly, if you are going to talk about the importance of going from welfare to workfare, presumably one of the key things you want to make sure of is that the jobs are there that pay a decent wage so those mothers and children will be better off. For some reason, States with higher minimum wage—or I guess the argument is supposed to be that by raising the minimum wage we have discouraged these parents from moving from welfare to work? It just makes no sense. I would love to know a little bit more about that finding.

So, my conclusion—and I say this with some indignation—we just have all the sympathy in the world when we have oil companies coming out here asking for special breaks, but we have very little sympathy when it comes to these working poor families.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's 10 minutes have expired. Who yields time? The Senator from Utah is recognized.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President I yield 10 minutes to the distinguished Senator from Vermont.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Vermont is recognized.

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, I have listened to my good friend from Minnesota, and certainly understand his concerns. But I think the picture he gives of the situation is somewhat different than what I perceive. I have faithfully supported minimum wage increases over the years, but there comes a time when we try to push things too fast and we could well destroy the very goals we are trying to reach.

One of my major goals as chairman of the Labor Committee is to get people into the workforce and keep them there. That is why I worked so hard with my colleagues on both sides of the aisle to enact legislation that will improve and streamline our adult education job-training programs. That is why I am working so hard on developing legislation that will improve our postsecondary, adult and vocational education. That is why I have, with my friend from Massachusetts, introduced legislation to help the disabled find jobs and get off the federal rolls while maintaining their health benefits. And that is why, although I have supported past minimum wage increases, I am concerned that if we raise the minimum wage too soon after the last increase, we may cause more harm than good.

Here in Congress, we continually grapple with the issue of how to assist low-skilled workers—particularly workers who have to support a family—without destroying the very jobs they rely on to support themselves and their families. It is hard for people with families and low skills to get by. We have seen and heard a lot of evidence about this. But it is also hard for small businesses to get by. Business failures are commonplace and margins are thin. When we raise the minimum wage, we make it more difficult for these businesses to justify hiring inexperienced, unskilled, and untrained workers.

For the past 60 years, we have relied upon the minimum wage to set a floor beneath wages. Every time we have increased it, we have given businesses five years or so to adjust from the last increase to the next enactment. The only exception was once during the 1970s when the real minimum wage declined even as the nominal wage was increasing. Those of us will remember, this was during a time of incredible inflation.

However, before the last increase even took effect, the senior Senator from Massachusetts had launched a new campaign for another increase in the minimum wage. The net effect of these increases would be a 45 percent rise in the minimum wage over a four and a half-year period. I am concerned that saddling small business with this steep increase over a relatively short period of time will have some negative repercussions both on the business owners as well as workers who count on their minimum wage jobs, and perhaps on those individuals who are seeking their very first job.

Although increases in the minimum wage have been important, they are not the only tool we have used to assist low-income workers who are supporting families. In addition, we have developed targeted government supports for the working poor, such as the Earned Income Tax Credit (EITC).

Over the years, the EITC has been expanded to target and supplement the wages of low income families without threatening any job loss. This year, the EITC will enable a minimum wage worker who is either a single parent or the single wage earning parent of dependent children to receive 3,756 additional dollars, bringing that family's income to $14,468. In addition, the EITC is set up so that these families do not have to wait for a lump-sum tax refund; instead the workers can receive the tax credit in their weekly paychecks.

A recent report released by the Center on Budget and Policies Priorities found that the EITC now moves more than two million children out of poverty. The report concluded that, "the EITC is the most effective safety net program for children in working poor families." I strongly support the EITC because it is making a difference in the lives of working families. I also support the EITC because it provides an incentive to work, the incentive is specifically targeted to help workers from low income families, and it does so without threatening jobs, as a minimum wage increase will.

Further, I am concerned that when we raise the minimum wage we are not targeting low income workers. Statistics show that more than half of the minimum wage workers live in families with yearly incomes over $25,000. In addition, statistics reveal that the majority of minimum wage earners are young, single and childless. I understand that in my home state of Vermont, only a small percentage of minimum wage workers are supporting their families on their wages. The fact that an increase in the minimum wage does not specifically target low income families becomes particularly significant when we consider the dramatic impact that a back-to-back increase will have on small businesses as compared to the actual number of low-income working families who will be helped by the increase.

I believe that we should give the last minimum wage increase some time to be absorbed into the economy before we move to increase it again. I also think that we should continue to focus our efforts on assisting the working poor by working to improve and expand targeted approaches such as the EITC.

Finally, I believe that before we open up the Fair Labor Standards Act to raise the minimum wage, we should take some additional steps to update the FLSA to better assist our working families.

This update is sorely needed because, while the makeup of the American workforce has changed dramatically over the past 60 years, few provisions of the Fair Labor Standards Act have been updated to reflect those changes. The needs of today's workforce are different than the needs of the workforce of the 1930s. Increasingly, employees are requesting that their employers offer more flexible work schedules and compensation packages. Unfortunately, the FLSA and its underlying regulations preclude employers from accommodating such requests. In other words, even though our workers are requesting more flexible working arrangements so that they can juggle work and family obligations—the arrangements that would be most helpful to these workers are actually prohibited under current law. And our attempts to change that were frustrated earlier in this past session.

The Family Friendly Workplace Act would assist these working families by amending the FLSA to allow employees the ability to choose comp. time—the opportunity to choose paid time off instead of cash compensation for overtime work. It would also allow employees to work a flexible biweekly schedule—to schedule their hours over a two-week period so that they can work additional hours during one week in order to take that time off during the second week. These same options have been available to Federal, State, and local employees for some time and they have been extremely popular with these public sector employees.

Why my colleagues on the other side of the aisle refuse to acknowledge this and allow us to bring the FLSA up to the present-day needs of this Nation I do not know.

During the first session of the 105th Congress, we engaged in contentious and partisan debate over the Family Friendly Workplace Act. While we were able to pass the bill out of the Labor Committee, our Democratic colleagues prevented us from moving forward on the floor of the Senate.

To be quite truthful, I still have a hard time fathoming why this issue has been so contentious. After all, we are talking about amending the law so that hourly employees in the private sector will be able to partake in some of the same scheduling options that salaried and public-sector employees currently enjoy. The public support for this bill has been overwhelming, and I am frustrated that we have been unable to move it forward.

The point I am trying to make here today, Mr. President, is that while the minimum wage is important—and obviously it is—another increase at this time will not necessarily benefit our workforce. However, there are things that we can do today that will benefit working families. It is my hope that my colleagues on the other side of the aisle will recognize this point and will begin working with me to help our workers meet the needs of their families by amending the FLSA to allow for more flexible work schedules. I hope my colleagues will lift their prohibition and allow us to consider this very important piece of legislation.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. NICKLES addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma is recognized.

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, I yield myself 8 minutes.

Mr. President, I urge my colleagues to vote in favor—I believe there is going to be a motion to table—I urge my colleagues to vote in favor of the motion to table the Kennedy amendment which will increase the minimum wage by 19 percent. Just 2 years ago we raised it 21 percent.

I heard some of the proponents of the amendment say, "We need to increase minimum wage because if we don't, these people will not be able to make a decent living." Frankly, I concur; if somebody needs to live on $5.15 an hour, that probably is not a very good living. But if you follow that philosophy through, then let's increase the minimum wage to $10 an hour or maybe $20 an hour. It just doesn't make sense.

What are we doing if we increase minimum wage? Right now, the minimum wage is $5.15 an hour. There are 2.2 million people who make that amount. The proposal is to increase it to $6.15 an hour. According to CBO, there are 11.7 million workers who make less than $6.15 an hour. If we do that, we are saying it is against the law for them to work for less than $6.15 an hour—the Federal Government, in its wisdom, has decided that it is against the law for anybody in America to work for less than $6.15 an hour. I think that is a mistake. We are saying it is better for them not to have a job: "If that job doesn't pay $6.15 an hour, we would rather have them be unemployed." The Federal Government makes it against the law.

Do I want them to make $6.15 an hour? You bet. Do I want them to make more than $6.15 an hour? You bet. But I would hate to pass a law saying it is against the law for them to work for less than that. That is exactly what we are doing. Maybe this $6.15 an hour works in Massachusetts, but it may not work in rural Montana or in rural New Mexico.

I am bothered by the fact that we are telling people if whatever job they have—and maybe it is a beginning job; a lot of minimum wage jobs are beginning jobs; maybe they are working part time in a restaurant, maybe they are pumping gas or sacking groceries or something—but basically the Federal Government is saying, "We would rather have you be unemployed; if your job doesn't pay this much, we would rather have you unemployed." Then they are entitled to receive Government payments, welfare benefits, so on.

To me, that just doesn't make sense. To go back on this poverty line and say, "If you don't make this money, it just is not worth it," is hogwash. That is really devaluing the whole process of people starting to climb the economic ladder. We are saying if the job doesn't pay so much, we would rather you be unemployed.

Sometimes that first job, even though it doesn't pay very much, is one of the most important jobs an individual can get, because they learn what it means to get a job, to be at work, to be on time. They learn maybe that that job doesn't pay enough, so they need to get a better job. Maybe they need to improve their skills or maybe they need to continue their education.

To say we would rather have you be unemployed—whom does that really hurt? It hurts low-income people. It hurts minorities disproportionately. It basically leaves a lot of people with idle time who, frankly, would be better off making $5 an hour and having a job and learning some skills so they can get a better job in the future. Instead, we will be raising the ladder and saying, "No, we would rather have you be unemployed."

There they are, a 16-, 17-, 18-year-old person unemployed, maybe getting in trouble, maybe still wanting to have some money or something, so they get involved in doing other things. Sometimes those other things are illegal.

Mr. President, you can't repeal the law of supply and demand. If you raise minimum wage, you are going to cost jobs, you are going to put people out of work, and, yes, the Congressional Budget Office says maybe it is 100,000, maybe it is 500,000.

My daughter worked, and she was going to college. She was working in a restaurant as a waitress making $5 and something, I think—a little less than $6 an hour. At least she did when she started. I don't want the Federal Government to say, "We don't want her to have that job." I don't want to price her out of getting that job. Unfortunately, she drives a car. I want her to help pay for that car. I want her to put gas in that car.

Again, I think learning skills in whatever job level a person is able to start at—the higher the better, that is great. But if it is a minimum wage job, if it is a low-income-type job, if they are able to learn skills from that point, great. Let's not price it out of the ball park. Let's not put those people out on the unemployment lines. Let's not deprive a minority youngster who is 15 years old, or 16 years old, or 17 years old, in Chicago the chance to start climbing the economic ladder.

Raising the minimum wage—I understand maybe the proponents' goal, and I share the goal of trying to raise people's incomes, but I want to do it through a free market, not do it through a Government mandate that is going to put hundreds of thousands of people out of work.

Unfortunately, I think that is the net result of this amendment. If not, let's raise the minimum wage a lot more. I would like for everybody to make $10 an hour. If the economic arguments are valid behind raising this—if we raised it 21 percent 2 years ago, if we are going to raise it another 19 or 20 percent—if there is no negative economic impact, let's make it $10 or $20 an hour. Let's make sure everybody is going to be wealthy. Let's make sure nobody is on the poverty line.

Frankly, that won't work. That just flat won't work. Most importantly, let's not deprive young people of the chance to climb the economic ladder. The hundreds of thousands, millions of these people who are making this level wage are people like my daughter. Let's give them a chance as well to start climbing the economic ladder. Let's not price it out.

Mr. President, I urge my colleagues to vote in favor of the motion to table the Kennedy amendment at the proper time. I compliment my colleague from Utah and also my colleague from Vermont for their statements.

Several Senators addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Utah.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I reserve the remainder of our time.

Mr. DURBIN addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. KENNEDY. I yield 7 minutes to the Senator from Illinois.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Illinois is recognized.

Mr. DURBIN. Thank you, Mr. President. I thank the Senator from Massachusetts for leading this debate, an important debate.

The first job that I ever had where I was paid an hourly wage was the result of two lies. I walked into a delicatessen at age 14 in the home State of the Presiding Officer, in St. Louis, MO, a place called Union Station. I bought a half dozen bagels for my mother. The man leaned over the counter and said, "Are you looking for a job, boy?"

I said, "Yes."

He said, "How old are you?"

And then the first lie came out. I was 14 and I said, "I'm 16."

"OK."

I said, "How much does the job pay?"

Then the second lie came out. He said, "The minimum wage, 60 cents an hour."

With that exchange, we entered into a contract: An underage worker making less than the minimum wage got his first job besides delivering papers. I have had a lot of jobs ever since. I have met a lot of people along the way who have struggled at low-wage jobs and tried to make a living.

And this debate is really about them.

I guess there is a sense of frustration by some on the floor that these people in low-income categories will not be quiet. They keep speaking up and saying, "We can't make it. We're not making it. We need more help. We're trying to keep our families together. We're trying to provide the basics for our kids, and $5.15 an hour just won't do it."

A lot of people would wish that the so-called invisible hand of the market would be all that we rely on, but, fortunately, we do not. Fortunately, since the days of Franklin Delano Roosevelt, we have said this country will have a minimum wage, because we believe there is dignity in work and there is dignity attached to work that pays a decent wage.

Unfortunately, we politicians, who draw regular salaries, have fallen down on the job of keeping up with inflation. Take a look at this chart about what has happened to the real minimum wage while we have gone through all this political gasification on the floor of the House and the Senate.

Starting in 1955, it was the equivalent of $4.50 an hour; it was not that, but in 1997 dollars it would have been $4.50 an hour. We saw the minimum wage, the real wage, the earning power of the minimum wage reach a high of $7.38 and then plummet between 1970 and 1988 to a low of $4.34.

If Senator KENNEDY is not successful with his effort today, you are going to see that line plummet again. What it means is the real earning power of people in low-income jobs will continue to descend; and as it continues to descend, it will be more difficult for them to provide clothing for their kids, any kind of health insurance, to pay rent on a decent place to live, to provide some of the amenities of life that all of us just take for granted.

I have listened to the arguments, and they are so weary and time worn that "if you raise the minimum wage, we will increase unemployment." The spokesmen and spokeswomen for the business community have been giving us that song for as long as this debate has been on the floor of Congress. They cannot seem to divert their eyes away from their hymnal in singing this long enough to look at the facts. And the facts say just the opposite.

Look at what the impact on unemployment has been by our most recent increase in the minimum wage. When it was increased to $4.75, unemployment started going down. When it was increased to $5.15, it went down further. So the argument that raising the minimum wage forces employers to lay people off may happen in an isolated case or two, but in looking at the overall economy, you have to say there is no correlation here. The minimum wage has gone up and unemployment has gone down.

"Oh," they say, "wait a minute. You're not talking about the most vulnerable people. These are the first ones they are going to lay off, that teenager," like myself at age 14 or 16, or whatever, "trying to go to work and make a minimum wage. Surely, they will be the first casualties." The facts do not support that. The facts say just the opposite.

Look at this. Unemployment continues to go down as the minimum wage goes up among teenagers age 16 to 19. They say, "Well, there are special classes of teenagers." We all know the problems with minority teenagers. They are a special class. "Surely, they'll be the first ones to suffer if we raise the minimum wage." Again, not the case. Minimum wage goes up; unemployment goes down.

There is really nothing to these arguments against an increase in the minimum wage. Frankly, we have heard so many of them—people who will not acknowledge that the last time we increased the minimum wage we saw an increase in employment in America.

The Senator from Oklahoma stood up and said, "Be careful. If you raise this minimum wage, we're going to lose jobs." Since September 1996, the last time we raised the minimum wage, 61,000 new jobs have been created in the State of Oklahoma. There are 154,000 Oklahomans who would receive a raise of $1 an hour if this Kennedy amendment passed.

In my home State of Illinois, 179,000 new jobs have been created since we last increased the minimum wage. There are 374,000 Illinois workers and their families who are waiting for that, hoping that we will listen again to the need to raise this basic minimum wage.

Who are the people who will benefit? The teenagers and the minorities? Yes. But if you want to describe who they are, you have to look at the bigger picture. Sixty percent of them are women; 74 percent are adults, 20 years of age or older. Some want to refer to this as a kid wage. Seventy-four percent of the people who would benefit by this amendment are over 20 years of age, 8.9 million workers in the United States.

Work is an ennobling experience. It has been in my life, the lives of my parents and the lives of my children. I am glad that I did it. And I learned a lot in the experience. I always wanted to feel that I was getting paid fairly for hard work. Sure, I would work hard at my job to do a good job, but I would like to think when the paycheck came in I was getting a decent wage.

Fortunately, in my life, there were very few times that I ever struggled to make ends meet with my family. My wife and I weathered those years. But for some people this is a weekly experience—waiting for that paycheck to come in and wondering if they are going to make it.

Who are these people we are talking about? These are the people we entrust our parents to in nursing homes. These are the people who are changing the sheets on their beds, cleaning up after them. These are the people who we entrust our children to in day-care centers and our grandchildren—I might add since I am now in that vaunted category—grandparents worried about grandchildren. These day-care workers are making a minimum wage, and we give them the most precious cargo we can deliver in bringing in our children. These are the people who made the bed in your hotel room, who took the dirty dishes off your table, who took in your cleaning. These are the people who every day get up and go to work. They know that work is ennobling. They are asking for fairness.

I ask for 1 additional minute.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time has expired.

Mr. KENNEDY addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KENNEDY. Two more minutes.

Mr. DURBIN. I say to those who are opposing this minimum wage, that it is a sad day when we have reached the point when the U.S. Congress is so unresponsive to the reality of workers in America, so insensitive to what is really going on among workers in businesses across the United States.

When the record is written about this Congress, and what it has achieved, I am afraid it will be reminiscent of General MacArthur's speech to a joint session of Congress over 40 years ago. He said, "Old soldiers never die, they just fade away."

Well, maybe—maybe—it is time for this Congress to fade away—this Congress, which has been unwilling to address the most basic issues in this country; unwilling to pass campaign finance reform; unwilling to pass a tobacco bill to protect our children who continue to be lured by those companies; unwilling to show initiative to protect Social Security when Americans say that is their No. 1 priority; unwilling to do anything about education, like the crumbling schools initiative of my colleague Senator CAROL MOSELEY-BRAUN; unwilling to address a Patients' Bills of Rights when every American family knows how vulnerable we are when it comes to health insurance and the way doctors and hospitals are treated; and unwilling to address the most basic issue, the most basic issue of fairness, that the people who get up and go to work every day in America deserve a decent living wage.

It will be a tragedy if this turns out to be just another partisan roll call swept aside and ignored because hundreds of thousands in my State and millions across America look to this Congress to be sensitive and to lead. Unfortunately, today, the debate suggests that we will not. And this Congress will fade away with an ignominious record when it comes to the people who are going to work every day and keeping America moving.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. SESSIONS). Who yields time?

Mr. HATCH. I yield 3 minutes to the distinguished Senator from Iowa.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Utah yields 3 minutes to the Senator from Iowa.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I want to talk about the procedure of this minimum wage bill on a very, very important bankruptcy reform bill we have. The substance may be very important, but the procedure is what we want to consider as we ask our colleagues to vote on this amendment.

We are on the first major change in bankruptcy legislation in 20 years—very needed change. So what is the minimum wage bill doing on this bill? This bill was voted out of committee 16-2. The author of this minimum wage amendment was one of those two people who voted against it. Obviously, by putting minimum wage on this, it is a poison pill to defeat this legislation. This is an anchor that is going to take this bill to the bottom of the ocean if this amendment is adopted. We must not let this amendment be adopted if we want a strong bankruptcy bill, any bankruptcy bill, out of this Congress.

We have about 2 weeks left to get this bill worked up, with wide differences between the House bill and the Senate bill. If we adopt this amendment on minimum wage, I am sure the majority leader will take this bill down.

I am asking my colleagues not to vote for this amendment because of the merits or demerits of minimum wage, but because this is a poison pill that will destroy the bankruptcy reform legislation that has so much going for it. When a bill comes out of the Judiciary Committee 16-2, it has a lot of bipartisan support, and you know it will go. This is one way that one opponent of this bankruptcy bill can stop it.

Now, as important as a minimum wage increase might be to help some families in America, this bankruptcy bill is also very important to help lower-income families in America because there is not a single family in America—low-income or high-income—that is not paying part of the costs of bankruptcy; $40 billion costs to the economy every year, $400 for a family of four. So every family that the Senator from Massachusetts is trying to help through an increase in minimum wage, he is hurting by stopping the reform of bankruptcy. We must reform bankruptcy. This is a hidden tax on the poor of America.

By passing this legislation, reducing the tax, we will help the very same families that the Senator from Massachusetts wants to help.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time of the Senator has expired.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I reserve the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, we have how much time?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Seven-teen minutes.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I yield 5 minutes to my friend from Iowa.

Mr. HARKIN. I thank the Senator from Massachusetts for yielding this time.

PRIVILEGE OF THE FLOOR

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent privilege be granted to Yvonne Byrne of my staff for the duration of the debate on this bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, first, let me commend my friend and colleague, Senator KENNEDY, for his long-time commitment and leadership on this issue, among many others, but especially on this issue. So many people are now working in America and earning at least a raise from the minimum wage of what we had a few years ago of $5.15 because of the hard work and effort and leadership of Senator KENNEDY.

As Senator KENNEDY knows, this is an issue of basic fairness about whether those Americans who work hard, who have helped our Nation grow to a period of very significant economic prosperity, should, indeed, receive some of the benefits of this prosperity.

I was in Iowa on Friday. I visited the Tri-State Food Bank in Sioux City, IA. Now, the unemployment rate in Sioux City and the surrounding areas is about 2 percent—literally almost no unemployment. The economy is growing; people are working. It is some of the best times people in that area have ever had from what they tell me and from what all the indicators are. Yet, the director of the Tri-State Food Bank Mr. Ron Swanson informed me that they are getting more demand for food from the food bank than they have ever had before. Now they are concerned about the winter and whether or not they will have the food necessary. I said, with all these people working, why is it that people are coming to the food bank?

Earlier, I visited the food bank in Des Moines and Karen Ford told me the same thing. That in this time of economic prosperity and growth and low unemployment, the demand for the commodities and the food from the food banks is higher than ever.

As I was told in Sioux City on Friday, you have a lot of people who have come off of welfare in the so-called Welfare-to-Work Program. They are making minimum wage, they are feeding their families, clothing their kids, sending their kids to school, paying rent, they are getting food stamps. But their food stamps are running out before the end of the month so they have to go to the food bank to get USDA commodities of rice, USDA canned pears and canned peaches, USDA flour, plus the donations that churches, schools and the businesses in that area donate to the food bank.

Now, these are not people that are shirking. These are not people that are just out on the streets. These are people that go to work every day trying to provide for their families. Yet they have to go to the food bank before the end of the month because the food stamps run out. These are people making the minimum wage—$5.15 an hour.

It is not right in this country when in this time of economic prosperity when millionaires are created every day and we have billionaires like we have never seen before, that people who work and go to work every day can't even get enough food to last until the end of the month.

That is what this is about. That is what this whole debate and this vote is about. For the life of me, I can't understand why anyone would vote against raising the minimum wage just the modest amount that Senator KENNEDY is proposing.

I had my staff calculate up for me what the minimum wage would be if it had increased at the same rate that CEO salaries, chief executive office salaries, had gone up on average since 1960. If the minimum wage had increased at the same rate as CEO average salaries since 1960, the minimum wage today—are you ready for this—would be $41 an hour. Now, that tells you about the spread. That tells you what is happening in our society. Fewer and fewer people making more and more money, getting all the wealth, more and more people shoved to the bottom who make the minimum wage, who get food stamps, and then have to go to the food bank to get food to last them until the end of the month. It is not right. It is not right in this country that those conditions have to exist.

They tell us, well, if you raise the minimum wage there will be unemployment, people will be out of work. How many times do we have to hear this nonsense? We know it is not true. We have the facts, we have the data. It is absolutely not true. For example, in Iowa about 5 years ago, Iowa raised their minimum wage more than the national minimum wage. What we heard at that time from the Republicans in Iowa was, oh my gosh, it will cost us all these jobs, people will leave Iowa. They will go to other States where there is a lower minimum wage.

In 1989, Iowa raised their minimum wage. By 1996, the Iowa minimum wage was forty cents more than the Federal minimum wage. Guess what happened? Nobody left. People worked. Jobs didn't leave. Businesses didn't leave. In fact, we had one of the greatest periods of job growth and business growth in the State of Iowa when we had a higher minimum wage than the Federal minimum wage.

Now the Federal minimum wage has caught up to Iowa. I think that points out the fallacy of the argument that if you raise the minimum wage, businesses are going to go out of business and they will leave. We proved in Iowa that is not so because we had a higher minimum wage than the Federal.

This is the time for us to stand up and be counted for what is fair and right in our society. I thank Senator KENNEDY.

Mr. KENNEDY addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, we have had a good debate and discussion on this issue during the course of the morning. The opposition to an increase in the minimum wage raised a number of issues, which we anticipated and responded to.

First of all, they say that there is going to be an increasing problem in terms of unemployment. We have demonstrated that we have the lowest unemployment since World War II.

They argue that it is going to add to the problems of inflation. We have demonstrated that we have the lowest rates of inflation, and we have demonstrated a very substantial growth in terms of small business interests.

I want to point out, since our friends, Senator HATCH and Senator ENZI, talked about the restaurant industry, that they have been prime opponents of any increase for the hardest working Americans, those at the lowest end of the economic ladder. I point out that in this industry in 1996, the average restaurant CEO grew in income by 8.6 percent. Their average bonus increased 13 percent. Their average value of stock options exploded by over 100 percent. Their average total compensation grew by 6 percent.

These are some of the highest paid CEOs in this country who are making that high salary on the basis of low-wage workers. I might also add that of the 100 top CEOs in the restaurant industry, there is not one single woman—not one single woman.

Mr. President, before we take all of the arguments by my friend from Utah where we have seen since 1996 a growth and an increase of 59,000 jobs—that was after the increase of the minimum wage in 1996 in October, and September 1997—one of the lowest unemployment rates in this country, I have a list of the statements that have been made by my friend from Oklahoma that he gave in the last debate: I don't think that they should do it in my State because they are going to put people out of work.

That was said in 1996. Senator HATCH virtually said the same thing in 1996. The facts demonstrate to the contrary.

Finally, Mr. President, I want to point this out. We have seen here what you can't get away from: that is, the decline in the purchasing power for low-income Americans. That is a fact.

It is lower now than it has been for a period of 30 years.

Republicans signed onto this program. President Eisenhower, President Nixon, President Bush—all Republicans—supported an increase in the minimum wage. Yet we hear from our Republican leadership that we can't possibly do it because it is going to destroy America.

Mr. President, it is important to understand why this issue is so important to the religious community. We have 170 organizations, the principal leaders in the religious community, supporting an increase in the minimum wage because they understand it, whether it is the American Friends, Catholic Charities, the Episcopal Church, the Evangelical Church, the Lutheran Church, the American Council of Churches, U.S. Catholic Bishops, United States Church of Christ—they understand it. It is a moral issue for them—believing in the dignity of the individual. They ought to be able to have a decent living, that they are working in America to provide for their children. That is what the issue is.

You can give us all the charts you want made up by the restaurant industry to distort what is really being debated on the floor of the U.S. Senate.

This is an issue involving women—sixty percent of the recipients are women.

It is an issue involving children—the neediest and the poorest children in this country who are the sons and daughters of those minimum-wage workers.

This is a civil rights issue—it is paying people the entry wage, a livable wage for those individuals who come from different backgrounds and tradition, and also the minorities in our country.

This is basically the moral issue of our time—and when we have been at our best, we have responded to it, Republicans and Democrats alike. It is a fundamental issue that has been stated by my colleagues—Senators WELLSTONE, HARKIN, DURBIN, and others who have spoken on it.

To sum up, it is whether the United States of America, with the most extraordinary economic prosperity in the history of our Nation, is going to say that our fellow citizens who work hard and who have children ought to have a livable wage. That is what the issue is about. The Republican leadership is saying no to those working families.

We hope that we are going to have some support from the other side of the aisle because we believe that there are those who understand the importance of this issue to working families. There is no issue before this U.S. Senate that involves fairness and decency and equity like an increase in the minimum wage. This is it. Now is the time.

I reserve the remainder of my time.

Mr. HATCH addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Utah.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I always enjoy listening to Members of Congress talk about how the minimum wage is going to benefit this society as we raise the minimum wage. Some of us have worked for the minimum wage in our lifetimes. We know what it is like to work for the minimum wage. We also know what it is like to lose your job because you raise the minimum wage too much, and small business people who do not make all that much money have to either reduce employment or get out of it. That is what happens.

The Senator from Minnesota, the Senator from Illinois, and the Senator from Massachusetts I think are looking at the wrong numbers. They should be looking at employment—not unemployment. They should be comparing it to what might have occurred without the mandatory minimum wage increases. There is no question that we have a good economy right now. A rising tide lifts all boats, thank goodness.

I notice that my colleagues are not discussing the plunging youth employment rates following the minimum wage increases in 1978 or 1989. The 1996 legislation that raised the minimum wage included a package of tax cuts. To some extent, of course, that helped mitigate the impact. You would think that by increasing the minimum wage we were going to have an increase in jobs. Really, I don't know any responsible economist who makes that argument. The fact remains, however, that unskilled workers are not helped, they are often hurt, by increases in the minimum wage, particularly in areas where the market wage for entry-level workers is lower.

You are looking at one of the main sponsors of the child care development block grant. I wonder how many children are not being cared for because we keep increasing the minimum wage and freezing people out of child care.

Yes, there are a lot of issues involved here. Wouldn't it be better to cut Americans taxes? We could give everyone more money in their paychecks without jeopardizing jobs and at the same time without hurting small businesses or without triggering price increases for consumers.

I think instead of having minimum wages we ought to have minimum taxes. But where do we get the help from the other side on that? We don't get much of it. If you cut taxes, you actually give people an increase in wages, because they actually take more money home.

Frankly, that is what we ought to be interested in doing to help these people along the way. It would help small business people, where most of the jobs are created. Better than 50 percent of all jobs are created by small business people, who would be the most severely impacted and who are the most severely impacted by increases in the minimum wage, other than those who never get a chance to enter into the workforce as a result of increases in the minimum wage.

Let's be honest about it. This is not the simple little economic interest, as some on the other side have been saying. There is a lot involved here. We ought to be reducing taxes, not increasing minimum wages.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, how much time do I have remaining?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts has 4 minutes.

Mr. KENNEDY. I yield 3 minutes.

Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President, I have not heard my colleague from Utah respond to this. I haven't heard one colleague on the other side of the aisle respond to the data or to the facts. I have heard them try to hide behind the argument that raising the minimum wage was going to lead to a loss of jobs. Since increasing the minimum wage in the prior year, the Bureau of Labor Statistics reported 517,000 new jobs. Sometimes we do not want to know what we do not want to know. I have not heard any refutation of that at all.

So my question is, Why in the world would we not value work and give dignity to work by raising the minimum wage, which is so important to women in the workplace, so important to children, so important to families?

Then my colleague from Utah moves on to another argument concerning child care. In all due respect, that is what is so sad about this debate. If we really wanted to do our best by families and value families, we would be raising the minimum wage, we would be investing in affordable child care—which this Republican-led Senate will not do. We would have universal health care coverage, which this Republican-led Senate will not do. In child care, I hope the tradeoff is not to say that we are not going to be able to provide good child care for children unless we continue to devalue the work of men and women in child care. Many of them barely make minimum wage or barely above it. That is why we have a 40-percent turnover every year. This is not acceptable.

We can raise the minimum wage, which is important for women, important for these working families, important for children, important for young people who are trying to work their way through school. We can invest in the health and skills and intellect and character by investing in affordable child care. We can invest in health care. This Republican-led Senate has done none of these things.

In all due respect, in all due respect, the reason that 75 or 80 percent of the people in the country believe we should raise the minimum wage is because they have some sense of fairness and justice. We raised our salaries by $30,000 just a few years ago. We gave ourselves a cost-of-living increase that amounts to a $1.50 increase per hour, we make $130,000-plus and say we need to make that. And yet, we will not raise the minimum wage from $5.15 to $6.15 over a 2-year period so people who work hard will not be poor in America and their children will not be poor? This is really outrageous.

I hope we get a majority vote.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I believe I have some time?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts has 1 minute 20 seconds.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, just again to underline the excellent point my friend from Iowa made, according to the U.S. Conference of Mayors study, in 1997 requests for emergency food aid increased 86 percent in the cities served—these are cities with Republican and Democratic mayors. Mr. President, 67 percent of the cities cited low-paying jobs as one of the main causes of hunger. Low-paying jobs are the most frequently cited causes of hunger. Nearly half of those relying on emergency food aid do so because their earnings are too low. In 1997, in Jeffersonville, IN, one-fourth of the families receiving emergency shelter were earning less than $6 an hour.

This is about fairness to teachers' aides, to child care workers. It is a basic and fundamental issue with regard to health care workers as well. We are either going to respect our fellow citizens and give them this modest increase in the minimum wage, or we are not going to meet our responsibilities.

Mr. President, has the time expired?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time remaining is 10 seconds.

Mr. HARKIN. If the Senator will yield me the 10 seconds—I have 10 seconds, Mr. President—there is a lot of talk in this town these days about morality and immorality. This has to do with morality. This has to do with what is moral in this society and to stick up for people who are low-income and are going hungry.

RECESS

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Debate on this issue has expired. The hour of 12:30 having arrived, the Senate will be in recess until 2:15 p.m.

Thereupon, at 12:31 p.m., the Senate recessed until 2:15 p.m.; whereupon, the Senate reassembled when called to order by the Presiding Officer (Mr. COATS).

Mr. SARBANES. Mr. President, I rise in strong support of Senator KENNEDY's amendment to raise the Federal minimum wage. I am proud to be an original co-sponsor of the legislation—upon which this amendment is based—to raise the minimum wage 50 cents a year over the next two years bringing it to $6.15 per hour by the year 2000.

For more than half a century, Congress has acted to guarantee minimum standards of decency for working Americans. The object of a Federal minimum wage is to make work pay well enough to keep families out of poverty and off Government assistance. Any individual who works hard and plays by the rules should be assured a living standard for his or her family that can keep them out of poverty.

If nothing is done before the year 2000, the real value of the minimum wage will be just $4.82 in 1997 dollars—about what it was before Congress last acted to increase the minimum wage in 1996. The increase being proposed today would bring the purchasing power of the minimum wage to $5.76. Now, no one asserts that raising the minimum wage will correct every economic injustice, but it will certainly make a significant difference to those on the low end of the economic scale. We have the opportunity to enact what is in my view a modest increase to help curb the erosion of the value of the minimum wage in terms of real dollars, and it is an opportunity which we should not let pass us by.

Currently, full-time minimum wage worker earns just $10,712—$2,600 below the poverty level for a family of three. A dollar increase in the minimum wage would provide a minimum wage worker with an additional $2,080 in income per year, helping to bring that family of three closer to the most basic standard of living. This extra income will help a family pay their bills and quite possibly even allow them to afford something above and beyond the bare essentials.

According to the Department of Labor, 74 percent of workers who will benefit from an increase in the minimum wage are adults, 50 percent work full time, 60 percent are women and 40 percent are the sole breadwinners in their families. Mr. President, these are not the part-time workers and suburban teenagers many opponents of the minimum wage increase would have you believe.

After 30 years of spiralling deficits we are on the verge of balancing the budget for the first time in 30 years - 4 years ahead of schedule. Today, the budget is virtually balanced, unemployment is at a 25-year low, and inflation is at a 30-year low. However, despite this period of economic prosperity, the disparity between the very rich in this country and the very poor continues to grow. According to the Economic Policy Institute, projections for 1997 indicate that the share of the wealth held by the top 1 percent of households grew by almost 2 percent since 1989. Over that same period, the share of the wealth held by families in the middle fifth of the population fell by half a percent. In light of these estimates, consider that the Department of Labor predicts that 57 percent of the gains from an increase in the minimum wage will go to families in the bottom 40 percent of the income scale.

It is both reasonable and responsible for Congress to enact measures which provide a standard that allows decent, hard-working Americans a floor upon which they can stand. We did it back in 1996 when we approved, by a bipartisan vote of 74-24, a 90 cent increase in the minimum wage bringing it to its current level of $5.15 per hour, and it is appropriate to do it here again. With the economy strong, we have a responsibility to reinforce this basic economic floor for millions of American workers to prevent them from sliding further into the basement.

This is, and always has been, an issue of equity and fairness for working men and women in this country and I strongly encourage my colleagues to support this amendment and vote against the motion to table.

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, I rise today in strong support of the Kennedy amendment and as a cosponsor of the minimum wage increase.

I cannot sit idle as I hear of those struggling to live on today's minimum wage. I thought, like many of you, that the minimum wage earner was my daughter or one of her friends: a teenager flipping burgers or taking food orders to earn some extra cash for new clothes or a movie.

That is the misperception though. The sad fact is that 71 percent of those workers who benefited from the last increase were adults over the age of 20. This increase will benefit those that need it most—working families at the bottom. A full-time, year-round minimum wage worker in 1997 earned only $10,712, $2,000 less than the $12,803 needed to raise a family of three out of poverty. Some 40 percent of minimum wage workers are the sole income-earners in their families.

I am immensely troubled with the fact that 58 percent of those struggling with a minimum wage are women. These millions of women, many of them single mothers, would benefit directly from this increase.

These single moms are trying. Trying to raise two kids on a below-poverty income. And how does Congress reward these single parents? By attacking Medicaid that would have paid for her son's asthma medicine. By cutting her child care support that allows her work. By taking away funding for nutrition programs that pay for her kids to eat at school or day care. By eliminating her Head Start Program that gives her kids a chance at starting school ready to learn. By refusing to add one dollar to her hourly wage—a wage that pays for heat, clothing and food.

Aren't these the individuals and families we are trying to keep employed and off of federal support? Instead, this Congress has targeted the low-income family through cut after cut and a resistance to move them above the poverty line.

This amendment does not eliminate jobs, it barely keeps people working, who otherwise would be completely reliant on public support. Today's minimum wage is 18 percent below the 1979 level. Each year we wait means a loss of $2,000 to that single mother. To that low-income family, that would have meant more than seven months of groceries, four months of rent, a full year of health care costs, or nine months of utility bills.

I did not reach my decision to support the minimum wage easily. I have listened carefully to the concerns of small-business owners from across my state, who have highlighted the implications of this increase. I don't want to see prices for the American consumer rise or jobs eliminated. But I don't think an increase to the minimum wage will end employment in small business, either.

Now is the time to adjust that inequality and demonstrate a true commitment to our working families. A slight increase in this wage provides those who work hard and play by the rules an increased opportunity and a chance to succeed. If any of my colleagues oppose the minimum wage, I urge them to try living on $10,712 this year and then reconsider their vote.

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, I rise today to voice my strong support for raising the minimum wage. In 1996, Congress helped millions of working Americans by increasing the minimum wage by 90 cents over two years. Passing that historic measure was a good first step. Now, it is time for us to take another one.

I am proud to be cosponsoring the Fair Minimum Wage Act of 1998, a bill that will help even more Americans take that next step. This much-needed legislation would raise the hourly minimum wage to $6.15 over the next two years. The first part of this bill would take effect on January 1, 1999, and would raise the minimum wage from $5.15 to $5.65 per hour. Then, on January 1, 2000, the minimum wage would be raised to $6.15 per hour.

I support this minimum wage increase for many of the same reasons I supported the last one. In 1995, I said that an increase in the minimum wage would help working Americans improve their standard of living. I said that it would help them move one step closer to self-sufficiency. And I said that it would give them the opportunity to practice self-help.

It has done all these things, and it has helped business and trade at the same time. The results in my state alone tell the story. Since we increased the minimum wage in 1996, employment in Maryland is up and unemployment is down. We've added 54,500 new jobs since September 1996, and the unemployment rate dropped to 4.7%. I'd say that's progress.

I believe we can expand upon the progress we've already made by increasing the minimum wage again. A minimum wage increase would give a raise to more than 129,000 Marylanders and their families. It would enable Marylanders to improve their standard of living. It would move them closer to self-sufficiency. And it would allow them to practice self-help.

An increase in the minimum wage equals an increase in the standard of living for working Americans. This is especially important to me. Since I first came to Congress, my economic mission has always been a pretty simple one: to help those who are in the middle class stay there or do better and to give those who are not in the middle class the chance to get there. I support this bill because it gets at the heart of my mission. I know that to some people, a $1.00 increase in the minimum wage over the course of two years may not seem like much at all. But even a small increase like this one will mean a whole lot to many others.

An increase in the minimum wage will also help many Americans move one step closer to economic self-sufficiency. We all know by now that minimum wage workers aren't just high school kids working part-time jobs after school and on the weekends. In fact, two-thirds of minimum wage earners are adults, and nearly 60% are mothers, many with young kids to support.

We don't have to tell working moms who are struggling to make ends meet what an extra $1.00 an hour means. An extra $1.00 an hour means more groceries in the refrigerator. An extra $1.00 an hour means that the mortgage or the rent gets paid. An extra $1.00 an hour means a full tank of gas in the car. And, most importantly, an extra $1.00 an hour can mean more time to spend with their families. That single dollar goes a long way for those moms.

Finally, an increase in the minimum wage will give people the opportunity to practice self-help. For too long now, Americans, including those working moms, have been working longer and harder only to see their paychecks get smaller and smaller. This cycle has got to stop. Those Americans who are working for minimum wage are not asking for handouts. They're asking for fair pay for hard work.

Right now, even after the previous minimum wage increase, a mother who works full-time—that's 40 hours per week and 52 weeks a year—earns only about $10,700 a year. That is $2,600 below the poverty level for a family of three. I don't think that someone who shows up everyday and works hard should be condemned to a life in poverty. A fair day's work should mean a fair day's pay.

Does that $10,700 salary reward a working mom's hard work? No. Does that salary give her an incentive to stay off welfare? No. Does that salary give her the time to walk her kids to school, help them with their homework, or even read to them at night? Absolutely not. In fact, that $10,700 salary barely allows her to clothe them, put a roof over their heads, or put food on the table. No mom should have to make the choice between paying the heating bill or buying her child new school shoes. Forcing working moms to make choices like that is wrong.

That same mom who works full-time, plays by the rules, and does everything else we ask of her ought to be able to get ahead. I don't think that's asking too much. Hard-working minimum wage workers are just like everyone else—they want to climb up the American economic ladder. Too often, however, that ladder looks too tall to climb. Too often, the rungs on that ladder are too far apart from each other.

Too often they are just a little bit out of reach. As representatives of those workers, we can help them climb that ladder. We can and should give them that little push they need to grasp the next rung. This bill gives them that little boost, and that is why it has my full support.

Ms. MOSELEY-BRAUN. Mr. President, I wish to take a moment to speak about a few of the compelling reasons that the Senate should pass the amendment to increase the minimum wage by $1.00 per hour by the year 2000.

I am a cosponsor of this legislation because I believe that by raising the minimum wage now, we can accomplish a number of critical objectives. We can improve the quality of life for millions of Americans, expand the market for all of the goods and services that the workers of our nation produce, increase the amount of taxable income in the country, reduce expenditures for public assistance, close the ever-increasing gap between working people and wealthy individuals, and—certainly not least—honor the American tradition of rewarding hard work and perseverance.

The current minimum wage is not a living wage for the millions of Americans who try to support themselves and their families on $5.15 an hour. Today, 6.2 million Americans earn the minimum wage. In my state alone, 5.7 percent of the workforce—making up roughly 296,000 people—earns that salary. This means that an Illinoisan, working 40 hours a week, 52 weeks a year, earns only $10,712 per year. That's about $2,600 below the poverty line for a family of three and over $5,700 below the poverty line for a family of four. And make no mistake about it—this is an issue that directly affects families. As much as opponents of this amendment would like us to believe that the minimum wage primarily affects teenagers working at their first jobs, the actual fact is that three-fourths of those earning the minimum wage are adults, many trying to support families. And with respect to the fact that one-fourth of those who will be assisted by this legislation are teenagers, we should bear in mind that many teenage minimum-wage workers contribute the money they earn (or at least a portion of it) to their families' total income.

A $1.00 increase in the minimum wage would provide a full-time worker earning the minimum wage with a little over $2,000 a year in additional income. That money could pay for more than seven months of groceries, more than four months of rent or mortgage bills, over a full year of health care, or more than nine months of utility bills for a family living on the minimum wage. That $2,000 would make a world of difference to such a family.

Moreover, a family that can pay for rent, groceries, or health care is putting money back into the economy. That family is buying goods and services produced by other workers. It is also earning taxable income and reducing the amount government has to spend on public assistance. An increase in the minimum wage helps people to contribute to, rather than burden, the nation's economy. And it wouldn't just be minimum wage workers who would be able to make a greater contribution to the economy. Currently, there are almost six million Americans who earn between $5.16 and $6.14 per hour who would also receive a pay raise if this amendment were to become law. All 12 million Americans who stand to benefit from this legislation—not just the 6.2 million earning the minimum wage—must be taken into account when we consider the fact that adopting this amendment would increase the pool of consumers and increase taxable earnings.

I wish to take this opportunity to dispel a myth that many opponents of increasing the minimum wage have put forward over the years: that paying a living wage means losing jobs. Around the time that we debated raising the minimum wage from $4.25 to $5.15 per hour, a group of respected economists, including three Nobel Prize winners, concluded that such an increase would have positive effects on the labor market, workers, and the economy. In 1996 we went ahead and raised the minimum wage to $5.15 per hour and what happened? Bureau of Labor Statistics data show that employment increased. Four million new jobs have been created since that time. Unemployment has hovered around its lowest rate in a generation. This will not surprise anyone familiar with the scholarly literature on this issue. The Economic Policy Institute studied the effect of the last minimum wage increase on the economy and found that it had no negative impact on jobs or inflation. A recent study by economists at Berkeley and Princeton Universities showed that the type of moderate increases in the minimum wage that we are debating today do not cost jobs. It should be noted that their research included the increase we enacted two years ago.

Some have argued that small businesses would be hurt by Senator KENNEDY's amendment. The reality is that many such businesses will suffer if we do not raise the minimum wage. Small businesses which right now pay a living wage to their employees are at a competitive disadvantage with those that try to cut costs by slashing wages. This creates a race to the bottom with the most profits going to companies paying the lowest wages. Adopting this amendment will ensure that all businesses will be able to afford to pay a decent wage to their workers.

I would like to make a point regarding how this amendment would affect single working women. Twenty percent of those earning the minimum wage are female heads of households. These are women who are taking responsibility for themselves and their children. They are doing precisely what we have told them we expect them to do: get a job and go to work every day. We have told them that AFDC is a thing of the past, that they cannot rely on the government to take care of their families. I am not seeking to re-open the welfare reform debate. But I do want to know how we can send these women that very clear message and then fail to provide a minimum wage that allows them to support their families at a level above the poverty line? The fact that a single mother working full-time cannot bring her family out of poverty represents a clear policy failure on our part. With this legislation, we have the opportunity to take a step towards addressing it.

Right now, our economy is strong. The unemployment rate is low and new jobs are being created in record numbers. This economic strength, however, has not translated into increased wages for many of those on the lower rungs of the economic ladder. In fact, the income disparity between the richest and the poorest is increasing. Consider, for example, what has happened in my state. Over the last 20 years, the income disparity between the richest and poorest Illinoisans has increased by over 46 percent. During that time, the average income of the poorest twenty percent of families in Illinois fell by $1,460 to $10,000. At the same time, the average income of the richest twenty percent increased by over $25,000. An increase in the minimum wage will help close that gap.

I conclude by reminding my colleagues that at the heart of the American Dream lies the belief that hard work is the foundation of success. Fortunately, for most people in this country, that remains a valid notion. But it is not for those who earn the minimum wage. We must guarantee that those attempting to provide for themselves and their families by earning the minimum wage receive a living wage. Here in Washington, we talk a great deal about family values and the American Dream. There's nothing wrong with that as long as we stand up for those ideals ourselves when given the opportunity. This amendment represents just such an opportunity and I strongly urge my colleagues to vote for it.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I rise today to urge my colleagues to support efforts to increase the federal minimum wage by passing the Fair Minimum Wage Act of 1998. This important legislation will provide American laborers with a 50 cent increase to the minimum wage on January 1, 1999, and a second increase on January 1, 2000. This modest increase, which would raise the minimum wage to $6.15 per hour, will help 12 million lower income Americans.

Our country's economy is growing. It's economic vitality and the success of welfare reform have resulted in better news and a better life for working people. Or have they?

The truth is, even though the economy is on an up-swing, wages are stagnant and people are still living in poverty. In fact, over half a million people live in poverty in our own state of Wisconsin.

Despite successes in the welfare to work initiative, last year, a US Conference of Mayors study indicated that eighty-six percent of cities reported an increased demand for emergency food assistance. Thirty-eight percent of those people seeking food at soup kitchens and shelters were employed. This is an increase of fifteen percent since 1994. It is evident that, in many cases, minimum wage workers can not afford to feed themselves or their families.

Mr. President, no hard working American should have to worry about affording groceries, shoes for their kids, or medicines. The people whom the bill will help are not people who spend their money frivolously, these are the families who scrimp and save to provide their children with the necessities of life: shelter, food, clothes and an education.

In a recent study, The State of Working Wisconsin—1998, by the Center on Wisconsin Strategy, we find some troubling news regarding wages. Today, the Wisconsin median hourly wage is still 8.4% below its 1979 level. Since 1979, Wisconsin's median wage declined 50% faster than the 5.3 percent national decline over the same period. These numbers are, sadly, not Wisconsin specific. This is the situation all over the country.

I urge my colleagues to bring some respect and dignity to the federal minimum wage. America's labor force deserves a chance to be successful and we need to give them the tools. I urge them to support the Fair Minimum Wage Act of 1998. Its a vote in support of every full time worker hoping to make ends meet.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, the minimum wage is about fairness. The minimum wage should be a fair wage that rewards people for an honest day's work.

This is the right time to provide fairness by increasing the minimum wage. Our budget is balanced and the economy remains fundamentally strong. We've created new jobs at an historically high pace of 250,000 per month. The inflation rate has averaged just 2.5 percent since 1993—the lowest rate since the Kennedy Administration—and the unemployment rate has fallen from over 7 percent in 1992 to 4.5 percent for the past two months.

However, as the economy rolls along, it is leaving behind working families. The benefits of this strong economy are not being enjoyed by lower wage workers.

In fact, according to a U.S. Conference of Mayors study, 38 percent of people seeking emergency food aid in 1996 held jobs—up from 23 percent in 1994. Low-paying jobs are the most-frequently cited cause of hunger today according to this survey.

People who are willing to work should not have to turn to a soup kitchen in order to feed their families.

There is no better time than now to address the problem of fair wages in this country.

A full time minimum wage worker now earns just $10,712 per year—$2,600 below the poverty level for a family of three. To have the same purchasing power it had in 1968, the minimum wage today would have to be $7.33 an hour instead of $5.15.

Even where the current minimum wage is a little higher in my state—$5.75. The purchasing power of the wage is over $2.00 an hour lower than the purchasing power of the minimum wage in 1968. After adjusting for inflation, today's $5.75 minimum buys 26 percent less than it did in 1968.

Nationwide, 4.8 million families depend on the minimum wage for their sole source of income. Of the workers that would benefit from an increase, 60 percent are women—over 7 million women, and 57 percent are families in the bottom 40 percent of the income scale.

In my state alone, almost 10 percent of the workforce would benefit from an increase in the minimum wage—nearly 1.2 million Californians and their families.

Opponents of a minimum wage increase argue that minimum wage increases result in massive job losses. I believe—and the data prove—they are wrong.

The National Restaurant Association claims a study found that over 146,000 restaurant jobs were lost as a result of the 1996–97 minimum wage increases. In fact, the Bureau of Labor Statistics say that as of April 1998, 187,000 new restaurant jobs were created since the minimum wage increases in 1996.

The retail industry has many minimum wage jobs in California. Since September 1996, 97,000 retail jobs have been added in California.

The job numbers tell the story. We have increased the minimum wage to its current level of $5.15 per hour, yet the number of unemployed Americans has dropped consistently over the past six years. Since 1992, 3 million less Americans are jobless. In fact, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, 16.3 million jobs have been created since January 1993.

Clearly this is an issue of fairness. Everyone in this country deserves an honest, fair wage for a hard day's work. No one who is willing to work should have to take their children to a soup kitchen at night in order to feed them.

Senator KENNEDY's amendment would increase the minimum wage in two increments of 50 cents each—to $5.65 on January 1st, 1999 and to $6.15 on January 1st, 2000. After the first increase, a minimum wage earner would make about $11,700 annually. And after the second increase, a minimum wage worker would earn about $12,700 each year—still $600 below the poverty level.

Unemployment is at historically low levels. Job creation has boomed in the past six years. There is no better time to address this problem. The time for a modest increase in the minimum wage is now.

CONSUMER BANKRUPTCY REFORM ACT OF 1998

The Senate continued with the consideration of the bill.

AMENDMENT NO. 3540

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the hour of 2:15 p.m. having arrived, there will now be 5 minutes for debate, equally divided, prior to a vote relative to the Kennedy amendment.

Mr. KENNEDY addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I yield myself 2 minutes 15 seconds.

At long last, the Senate is about to vote on raising the minimum wage. The Nation has enjoyed extraordinary prosperity in recent years. Unemployment and inflation are at their lowest levels in a generation. Interest rates are low, and the economy is strong and growing. But 12 million hard-working Americans are left out and left behind. They are minimum wage workers, and for them, the current prosperity is someone else's boom. Working 40 hours a week, 52 weeks of the year, minimum wage workers earn just $10,700 a year, $2,900 below the poverty level for a family of three.

A full day's work should mean a fair day's pay. But for these 12 million Americans, it does not. These hard-pressed Americans can barely make ends meet every month. Too often they are forced to choose between paying the light bill or the phone bill or the heating bill. An unexpected illness or family crisis is enough to push them over the edge.

Their plight is shocking and unacceptable. If this country values work as we say we do, we must be willing to pay these workers a decent wage. The wealthiest nation on Earth can afford to do better for these hard-working citizens, and today we have the opportunity to do so. We can raise the minimum wage.

Giving workers another 50 cents an hour may not sound like much, but it can make all the difference for these hard-working Americans. It can help buy groceries or pay the rent or defray the costs of job training courses at the local community college.

The minimum wage is a women's issue. It is a children's issue. It is a civil rights issue. It is a labor issue. It is a family issue. Above all, it is a fairness issue and a dignity issue. Raising the minimum wage is a matter of fundamental fairness and simple justice.

In a few moments, the Senate will have the opportunity to do more than pay lip service to these basic principles. If we believe in these ideals, we will vote to raise the minimum wage. No one who works for a living should have to live in poverty.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. HATCH addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Utah.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, we know that only about 22 percent of the American people who are on minimum wage are people who have households to support. Almost every job on minimum wage is given to somebody who literally needs a job, would not otherwise have that opportunity and probably would have his or her job chances diminished if the minimum wage is increased. We found that to be the case year after year after year.

You cannot mandate increased labor costs without adverse impacts. What are those impacts?

Decreased employment opportunities, particularly for teenagers, and others, who are in the worst condition, with few skills and employment barriers. In large part, these reductions will be fewer jobs created, the elimination of certain services, such as bagging groceries or having them loaded in your car, or having services performed less frequently.

Higher prices for goods and services. The minimum wage is an ineffective antipoverty policy. Why? Because three-quarters of those earning the minimum wage are not heads of households or do not live in poor families—three-quarters of them. Most of these jobs are taken by people who are not from the poorest of the poor. Since the minimum wage increase cannot be targeted only to those who need it, the likelihood is that those with more experience, maturity, or skills will get or retain entry-level jobs and those who need a first-chance job the most are going to lose out.

Also, higher minimum wages stifle entry-level training opportunities. Workers have typically "paid for" their training and introductory work experience by working at entry-level wages. Mandating a higher minimum wage makes entry-level opportunities less available and our workforce less prepared for greater skills and opportunities down the line.

It is a myth that workers get "stuck" at minimum wages. Within a year, the average minimum wage earners get a 20 percent increase or even higher wage increase based on his or her greater skill level and experience.

Higher wages act as an incentive for some youth to leave school to take jobs.

So what is worse is that this adverse impact is for nothing. Those very individuals who need entry-level jobs the most are the ones most likely to be displaced by the increased competition for them. Frankly, hiking the minimum wage is not the only way to assist working Americans and those struggling to make ends meet. Let's work on some of these ideas.

Personally, I would like to raise people's paychecks by cutting their taxes. That would increase their paychecks without the risk that they might lose their jobs. And I think we can work together on education. We passed the A+ education bill. Let's tackle illiteracy, and let's do it this way rather than through this really untried procedure.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair announces all time has been used on the opponents' side, but the Senator from Massachusetts has 18 seconds remaining.

Mr. LOTT addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority leader is recognized.

Mr. LOTT. If the Senator would like to use the remainder of his time, I will use leader time to conclude debate and move to table the amendment.

Mr. KENNEDY. I yield back and ask for the yeas and nays, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. All time is yielded back.

Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I intend to move to table the amendment and ask for the yeas and nays on the motion to table.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority leader has that right and may move to table, if he so wishes, after the statement.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, before I do that, I want to yield myself such time as I may consume out of leader time. I will be very brief.

Mr. President, when I became majority leader 2 and a half years ago, this issue was pending before the Senate and it had caused a lot of problems and some difficulties in trying to decide how to deal with it. After a period of weeks and months, we came to the conclusion that we did need a minimum wage increase at that point, but with a lot of small business tax provisions being included. And they helped to mitigate the effect on small business men and women and the jobs they create in particular.

But we had a minimum wage increase the year before last. We had a minimum wage increase last year. This increase, in my opinion, would be bad for the economy, bad for business, and bad for job creation.

I would like to just cite you two examples to think about. I have a son, first of all, who is a small businessman. And he employs people at the entry level, people who do not have high school educations—unwed mothers, people who are desperate to get a start, to get a job. And he gives them that opportunity. A lot of them go on to wind up being supervisors and owners of their own companies and create jobs. They live the American dream.

But I had occasion to hear comments from one lady—I believe she was from Marietta, GA—named Harriet Cane. She owns a Sweet Life Restaurant, which she describes as a very small dessert and luncheon cafe. It seats 45 people. As a result of the last increase in the minimum wage, she reduced her staff from 16 to 10, by attrition primarily, raised prices modestly, and had to increase her own hours on the job to 16 a day. And here is her exact quote:

I will tell you this, that if the next increase does go through, what will happen to my store. Bottom line: my doors will close. I've talked with my CPA. We've tried to be creative. We've tried to find a way to handle the increase in payroll that it would represent. As a little shop, I have no option. I just want the world and the communities to understand that this is a reality and not just rhetoric.

Also, a very impressive statement was given on that occasion when I heard Harriet Cane by a gentleman from Texas named Jose Cuevas. Jose Cuevas came with no prepared statement, but he spoke from the heart. He and his wife, he said, have lived the American dream. He is a Hispanic restaurant owner in south Texas who is approximately 44 years old. And he and his wife, at the ages of 22 and 20, saved money and worked really hard so they could buy their first store. This is what he had to say:

It became a dream. We now have four locations. We have $2.6 million worth of sales. We have seen a lot of people come through our door, and a lot of good people. They have all left something. They have all gone on to better things. I think of how this minimum wage will affect other people's dreams of owning their own companies, their own restaurants. I was fortunate enough that I and my wife worked side by side with two other employees until we earned a little bit more and could hire extra people. But at $6 or even $5.50 an hour, it will make it almost impossible. Our last raise in the minimum wage cost us $60,000 in labor costs.

In conclusion he said,

So I urge you to continue to fight the battle for us, because I believe it's true and right. America is built on small business owners, just like all of us that go out every day, work hard, and create jobs so that others could live the American dream like we have.

Mr. President, I think this is the wrong action at the wrong time. The people who will be hurt the most are the people that well-intentioned Senators really want to help, because they will wind up not getting an increase in the minimum wage, they will wind up with no job.

I urge the Senate to vote to table this amendment. I now move to table the amendment and ask for the yeas and nays.

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. KENNEDY. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 3602

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, there will now be 10 minutes equally divided on amendment No. 3602 to amendment No. 3559.

The Senate will come to order.

The Senator from Wisconsin is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Thank you, Mr. President.

Have the yeas and nays been ordered on these two amendments, Mr. President?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. They have not been ordered on the pending amendment.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays on both of my amendments.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of ordering the yeas and nays on the next two amendments offered by the Senator from Wisconsin?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Wisconsin.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, the original version of S. 1301 would have made a debtor's attorney responsible for the panel trustee's costs and fees if the attorney lost a 707(b) motion brought by the trustee—not if the filing was made in bad faith, not if the filing was frivolous, but simply if he or she lost the motion.

Fortunately, an amendment was accepted at the Judiciary Committee markup which would make the debtor's attorney liable only if he or she was "not substantially justified" in filing the petition. Even this standard, however, is untenable.

The opponents of the Feingold-Specter amendment argue that debtors attorneys are notoriously bad actors who abuse the bankruptcy system. No credible evidence, however—beyond an unsubstantiated story here and an unsubstantiated story there—has been offered to support the proposition that debtors attorneys are more likely to act in bad faith than any other type of attorney.

Why then would we allow this bill to contain a provision which applies a stricter standard of conduct to consumer debtors' attorneys than to any other type of attorney—a provision which is, as pridefully noted by the opponents of my amendment, designed to punish debtors' attorneys?

I have heard from bankruptcy judges in my home State of Wisconsin and they strongly object to the premise that debtors' attorneys are by any measure less admirable or honest than other types of attorneys. Moreover, they believe that this provision of the bill is fundamentally wrong and endangers debtors' access to the system.

The conduct of consumer debtors' attorneys should meet the standards set for all attorneys in Federal Civil Rule of Procedure 11, which is incorporated in Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedures 9011.

Every other fee-shifting provision in Federal law which holds the attorney liable require affirmative wrongdoing by the attorney. With or without my amendment—indeed, with or without this bill—if a debtor's attorney brings a "frivolous" or "improper" Chapter 7 filing—the court can order sanctions against that attorney.

Let me be clear—under current law, debtors' attorneys can already be fined if they act in bad faith. There is simply no legitimate basis for a different and more punitive standard that only applies to debtors' attorneys in bankruptcy proceedings.

Should not the purpose of this bill be to rid the bankruptcy system of abuse, not to punish a particular type of attorney? The basic premise of this bill—the fundamental tool it uses to weed out abuse—is the 707(b) motion. That is, the motion which is filed by the panel trustee when she feels that the debtor is abusing the system.

To supposedly encourage a trustee to file such a motion, this bill would award her costs and fees only when the debtor's attorney's actions were not substantially justified. Under the Feingold-Specter amendment, the trustee would be rewarded for her efforts whenever she wins a 707(b) motion.

Let me ask you—if you were a panel trustee charged with the duty of protecting the integrity of the bankruptcy system and your primary tool for doing so was the 707(b) motion, would you be more likely to file such a motion when you got paid whenever you won such a motion or only when the debtor's attorney was demonstrated to have been not substantially justified?

Before you answer, let me ask you one more question. What if, before you could get paid—as under the current bill—you, a panel trustee—not the court or an independent third party—also had to incur the additional time and cost of bringing and arguing another motion to prove that the debtor's attorney was not substantially justified?

The answer to these questions is clear. If you were a panel trustee you would have a stronger incentive to bring a 707(b) motion—that is, a stronger incentive to rid the bankruptcy system of abuse—under the Feingold-Specter amendment than you would under the current language of the bill.

So, the Feingold-Specter amendment seeks to maintain the incentive for trustees while preserving a debtor's access to justice and representation. It does so by making the trustee's fees and costs an administrative expense under Section 503(b) if the trustee is successful in her 707(b) motion to convert the case into Chapter 13. If the court dismisses the Chapter 7 filing, the debtor would be required to pay the trustee's cost and fees.

Your vote on the Feingold-Specter amendment comes down to this—if you want to muddle the system with needless additional hearings and to strike a mean-spirited, unfounded blow against debtors attorneys, vote against our amendment; if on the other hand, you want to rid the bankruptcy system of abuse in the most equitable and efficient manner, then vote for our amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time of the Senator has expired.

Who yields time? The Senator from Iowa controls 5 minutes in opposition to the amendment. The Senator from Iowa.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I yield myself such time as I might consume at this point.

The bill that is before us, and it is reported by the Judiciary Committee, penalizes lawyer misconduct. I think these penalties are very fair. They are very narrowly focused. Of course, penalties are very necessary. Many lawyers who specialize in bankruptcy view bankruptcy as an opportunity to make big money for themselves. This profit motive causes bankruptcy lawyers to promote bankruptcy as the only option, even when a financially troubled client might obviously have the ability to repay some debt.

This profit motive creates a real conflict of interest where bankruptcy lawyers push people into bankruptcy who do not belong there, and they do it because they get paid up front. I think that any reasonable person would say that lawyers who file bankruptcy cases which are not substantially justified ought to be required to help defray the costs of their frivolous cases. That is all my bill does. Senator FEINGOLD's amendment would gut this reasonable effort to control the bankruptcy bar, which is seriously out of control.

The Consumer Bankruptcy Reform Act contains reasonable lawyer misconduct penalties which will cause lawyers to think twice before they, willy-nilly, cart somebody into chapter 7 and pocket a nice profit in the process. Some bankruptcy lawyers, in their rush to turn a profit, operate what are known as bankruptcy mills—nothing more than a processing center that happens to be for bankruptcy. There is little or no investigation done as to whether an individual actually needs bankruptcy protection or whether or not a person is able, at least partially, to repay their debts.

Recently, one of these bankruptcy attorneys from Texas was sanctioned by a bankruptcy court. The practices of the bankruptcy mills are so deceptive and so sleazy that last year the Federal Trade Commission went so far as to issue a consumer alert, warning consumers of misleading ads that promise debt consolidation. So I think there is a widespread recognition that bankruptcy lawyers are preying on unsophisticated consumers.

Yesterday I spoke about the bankruptcy lawyer who had written a book. I had this chart up. I spoke about this bankruptcy lawyer who had written this book entitled, "Discharging Marital Obligations in Bankruptcy." This author, a bankruptcy lawyer, actually said that he is going to counsel you on how to avoid your obligations to pay defense costs, alimony, and child support. So it is all about how high-income people can get out of paying child support and alimony.

I think it is outrageous that bankruptcy lawyers are helping deadbeats cheat divorced spouses out of alimony and children out of child support, so that is why we want to vote this amendment down. I think my colleague, Senator KYL, wanted time.

I yield the remainder of my time to Senator KYL.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is currently 1 minute 20 seconds remaining.

Mr. KYL. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Iowa.

The key point here is to simply hold the attorney responsible for the costs of a hearing. That is all we are talking about. It is either going to be the attorney or it is going to be the people who are owed money in a bankruptcy, or even the debtor, to be responsible for the costs of that hearing in the event the attorney has made a wrong filing here, a filing that was not substantially justified. So, if the attorney can establish that what he did was substantially justified in putting his client into chapter 13 bankruptcy as opposed to chapter 7, then he has no responsibility here and would have no liability for the costs of the hearing. But if it turns out that he was not substantially justified in doing that, then this would permit the court to assess the cost of bringing the motion and having the hearing against that lawyer. That is all we are talking about here.

In view of the fact that the National Bankruptcy Commission has been very concerned about these bankruptcy mills, this is a legitimate concern and a way to avoid this kind of mistake from occurring. It puts the responsibility where the responsibility ought to lie. I support the position of the Senator from Iowa in urging opposition to the Feingold amendment.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I move to table the Feingold amendment and ask for the yeas and nays.

AMENDMENT NO. 3565

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, there will now be 5 minutes equally divided on Feingold amendment numbered 3565.

The Senator from Wisconsin.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Ironically, bankruptcy is the only Federal civil proceeding in which a poor person cannot file in forma pauperis.

What this means, in any other Federal civil proceeding you can file a case without paying filing fees if the court determines you are unable to afford the fee; but in bankruptcy, you either pay the filing fee or are denied access to the system. That is right, the bankruptcy system—which is by definition designed to assist those who have fallen on hard times—is unavailable to the poorest of the poor.

This prohibition against debtors filing in forma pauperis is a clear obstacle to their efforts to gain access to justice. The current fee is $175; $175 is roughly the weekly take-home pay of an employee working a 40-hour week at the minimum wage.

I think it is unrealistic and unreasonable to expect an indigent in this case to raise such a fee simply to enter the system.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has 1 minute 30 seconds remaining.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Given the fact that I have such high regard on behalf of the leader of this bill on our side, Senator DURBIN, I yield the remaining time to Senator DURBIN who will further speak in favor of the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Illinois is recognized.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Wisconsin. I rise in support of this amendment. When you have people who are so dirt poor that they can't come up with the $175 filing fee, we usually say in civil actions that we are going to waive the fee in court. For some reason, that waiver is not in the law in bankruptcy. It certainly should be. People wouldn't be coming to the bankruptcy court were they not in dire straits.

I support the Senator from Wisconsin because this has been tried successfully. It does not result in a mad dash to the courthouse by people who otherwise would not file for bankruptcy.

Now, the milk of human kindness curdled a few moments ago on the Senate floor when it came to bankruptcy lawyers, and the poor folks didn't do too well a few minutes ago when it came to minimum wage. Please stop and think about this for a minute. The poorest of the poor, coming to bankruptcy court trying to turn their lives around, want the same kind of treatment people get in all other civil suits. That is not unreasonable.

Mr. GRASSLEY. I yield all the time on this side to the Senator from Alabama.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, this Feingold amendment is directly contrary to the purpose of the bill that Senator GRASSLEY has worked so hard for. It requires no fee for filing under chapter 7, where the debtor wipes out all his debts. However, the amendment does require a fee under chapter 13, where the debtor pays back a portion of his debt. Therefore, it would encourage filings under chapter 7, when we believe more people should file under chapter 13.

This Congress has considered this issue before and rejected it. The National Bankruptcy Commission just completed a long study of bankruptcy and did not call for the elimination of this fee. The United States Supreme Court in 1973 squarely held that it is constitutional. The bankruptcy system should discourage frivolous filings.

Furthermore, this amendment provides no standard for the judge to decide who in bankruptcy ought to pay and who ought not to pay. And, in addition to that, it would clog the courts with multiple hearings regarding who should pay the $160 filing fee. In addition, bankruptcy law currently allows filing fees to be paid in four installments. When a person files bankruptcy, they are able to stop paying all of their debt. Debtors are able to pay the filing fee because all other obligations have been tolled under the automatic stay.

This amendment will result in additional court hearings that distract the bankruptcy court from its primary purpose. This practice will be encourage filings under chapter 7 when filing under chapter 13 would be more appropriate. People who can pay a portion of their debt ought to be accountable for that amount.

I believe that this amendment will cost millions. In fact, based on the number of filings last year, we could be talking about $100 million in costs.

Thank you, Mr. President.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, we yield back our time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. KEMPTHORNE). The question is on agreeing to amendment No. 3565.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the motion was rejected.

Mr. BREAUX. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. FEINGOLD. I ask unanimous consent that the yeas and nays be vitiated on the underlying amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? Without objection, it is so ordered.

The question now occurs on agreeing to amendment No. 3565.

The amendment (No. 3565) was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 3610

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, there will now be 10 minutes for debate, equally divided, on the Reed amendment. The Senator from Rhode Island is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. President, the underlying legislation that we are considering today will allow a creditor to request a bankruptcy judge to move a petition in bankruptcy from chapter 7 to chapter 13. As we all realize, in chapter 7, a debtor may fully discharge his debts, and in chapter 13, there is an obligation to partially pay one's debts.

The focus of this legislation is on the debtor. There are two conditions which the creditor must show: The creditor must show either the individual debtor has at least enough assets to pay 30 percent of the debts or that the debtor has acted in bad faith in applying for chapter 7 liquidation.

I believe this focus exclusively on the debtor misses half of the equation. The other important half of the equation is the behavior of the creditor. My amendment explicitly requires the bankruptcy judge to consider the behavior of the creditor, whether that creditor acted in good faith in the extension of credit.

We all know there has been a significant increase in bankruptcy filings, but what we frequently overlook is the fact that there has been an extraordinary increase in credit extension. In 1986 through 1996, that 10-year period, filings increased by 122 percent, but revolving consumer credit increased 238 percent in that same period. As a result, we have had a situation where much of this credit extension has been done with very poor underwriting standards, a situation in which the companies themselves might very well anticipate that the debtor could not handle the debt.

Those companies that act recklessly and unscrupulously should not have the option to request that a debtor be thrown into chapter 13 from chapter 7. As a result, I believe it is incumbent upon the bankruptcy judge to look explicitly at the issue of the good faith of the creditor.

This is not just a question of the volume of credit that has been extended; this is the proliferation of solicitations. Each year, 2 billion credit solicitations are made in this country, many of them without any concern of the ability of the debtor ultimately to pay. We don't need a test to establish this fact. We just have to sit home on a Saturday and at about 10 o'clock, you get the first call from a credit card company. Then at 10:30, you get the second call. At 11, the mail comes and you get two or three solicitations, and it goes all the way through the evening.

What I want to see, and what the amendment requires, is if there is a consideration to move a debtor from chapter 7 to chapter 13, the judge should be able to apply a good-faith standard when reviewing the activities of the creditor. This establishes balance, this establishes a strong presumption that both sides must be looked at in terms of this rather unique and novel approach to the bankruptcy code. It is well within the expertise of the banking judge to make this determination.

I simply conclude by saying that this amendment has the strong support of the Consumer Federation of America and Consumers Union. This is an opportunity to vote with consumers with regard to this legislation.

I now retain the remainder of my time but also ask at this time for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. GORTON). Is there a sufficient second?

There appears to be a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. HATCH addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Utah.

Mr. HATCH. I oppose the amendment. Under the provision, in any 707(b) case brought by a creditor, the court would consider whether the creditor had used good faith in the extension of credit. This determination necessarily would involve looking at underwriting decisions.

The bankruptcy court shall not be asked to interfere in the complicated process of making credit underwriting decisions. This is particularly true when current underwriting practices are quite successful, with an average of 95 to 97 percent of consumer credit extended today repaid on time.

Mr. President, this amendment permits new uncontrolled and virtually unlimited inquiries into creditor conduct. It encourages complicated and involved discovery and burdensome court proceedings. It introduces unwarranted defenses to strong enforcement of the needs-based provisions of S. 1301, this bill.

The amendment permits a debtor to avoid repaying all his creditors by attacking the good faith of any creditor who brings a motion to enforce the needs-based provisions. And the amendment has no standard for what is good faith. So this is a killer amendment.

Moreover, S. 1301 already contains numerous provisions to make sure creditors are acting appropriately. As I have noted in my previous remarks, this is a well balanced bill that is a combination of months and months of deliberations and cooperation between Senators GRASSLEY and DURBIN and other members of the Senate Judiciary Committee. They, along with other members of the Judiciary Committee, have done a fine job in ensuring that this bill is a fair bill. This balanced and broadly supported legislation not only curbs abuses of the bankruptcy system but also provides unprecedented consumer protections.

Let me begin by saying being a creditor and winding up in bankruptcy court to collect unpaid bills is not a desirable situation for any creditor. Creditors who deal with debtors in bankruptcy, even in the best of circumstances, are likely to recover only pennies on every dollar they are owed.

In any event, S. 1301 already contains nine provisions with rather severe penalties to creditors for improper behavior. We have given due consideration to these concerns.

First, if a creditor brings a motion to dismiss a chapter 7 case and fails, the debtor gets attorney's fees and costs if the creditor was not substantially justified or if the creditor filed the motion in an effort to coerce the debtor.

Second, if a creditor unreasonably refuses a debtor's offer to work out a repayment schedule, the creditor is barred from asserting any claim of nondischargeability or any claim of denial of discharge.

Third, if a creditor willfully violates the automatic stay, the creditor pays the debtor's attorney's fees, actual damages, and punitive damages, if appropriate. We have really gone a long way here.

Fourth, if a creditor fails to comply with the requirements for a reaffirmation agreement, the court can order heavy sanctions and penalties.

Fifth, the legislation will make it much harder for creditors to get determinations of nondischargeability. Only false representations by a debtor that are considered "material" will be actionable. If a creditor makes an unsuccessful claim of nondischargeability or denial of discharge, the creditor is liable for the debtor's attorney's fees, costs, and punitive damages, if the creditor's claim is not substantially justified. The reverse is not true. If the creditor wins the nondischargeability proceeding, the debtor does not have to pay the creditor's attorney's fees. So it isn't reversible.

Sixth, if a creditor willfully violates the postdischarge injunction, the creditor is liable for minimum damages of $5,000 and attorney's fees and costs, with the possibility of treble damages.

Seventh, if a creditor fails to comply with Truth in Lending Act requirements for certain mortgage loans, the creditor's claim will not be recognized or paid in bankruptcy. For instance, if a creditor does not provide for certain disclosures, or fails to meet the requirements of the act, even if it is a technical violation, the creditor's claim will be denied in bankruptcy. In other words, the debt, both principal and interest, will be completely forgiven. These new penalties are in addition to those penalties already present in the Truth in Lending Act itself.

Eighth, if a creditor willfully fails to credit payments to a bankruptcy plan, the creditor is liable for minimum damages of $5,000 and attorney's fees and costs, with the possibility of treble damages.

And ninth, if a creditor's proof of claim is disallowed or reduced by 21 percent or more, the debtor gets attorney's fees and costs, and so forth.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's time has expired.

Mr. HATCH. As you can see—I hope we can vote down this amendment—a lot of hard work has been put into this.

Mr. President, I move to table and ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is time remaining.

Mr. REED. How much time is remaining?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Two minutes 6 seconds.

Mr. REED. Thank you.

I applaud all the consumer protections that the Senator from Utah has listed, but I would like to add one more. I would like to add, along with the Consumers Union and the Consumer Federation of America, the protection of looking at the good-faith operation of a creditor who is demanding that a debtor be placed from chapter 7 into chapter 13.

With respect to the standard, my standard is as equally well defined as the bad-faith standard that exists today within the legislation, because good faith and bad faith are something that the banking judge should be able to determine, and it does not require an elaborate searching through of underwriting policies and looking through documentation and going around the country.

What it does require is that that trier of fact, that bankruptcy judge, determine whether or not the creditor has abused the relationship, either by intimidation or deceit. All these things would rise to the level of a lack of good faith. I suggest very strongly the bankruptcy judge can do that, and should do that in this context.

Mr. President, I yield the remainder of my time to the Senator from Illinois.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Illinois.

Mr. DURBIN. How much time is remaining?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Fifty-two seconds.

Mr. DURBIN. I rise to support this amendment because I think it makes a good bill even better. We are trying to stop the abuses in bankruptcy. We say if you want to file for bankruptcy and you do not have good cause, we are going to throw you out of court. We might penalize you, and we are going to do the same thing to your attorney. So from the debtor side—the person who owes the money—it is a pretty tough standard.

What the Senator from Rhode Island says is, let's have a standard as well for the collection agencies and the creditors who are not treating people fairly. I think we want to eliminate all abuses in the bankruptcy court, not just by the debtors and their attorneys, but by the creditors, too. What the Senator from Rhode Island suggests is fairness and balance. It gives the court the ability to look at strong-arm tactics used by collection agencies and creditors to the detriment of debtors who are trying to get out of debt.

VISIT TO THE SENATE BY MEMBERS OF THE GOVERNMENT OF THE REPUBLIC OF SINGAPORE

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, during this vote, I would like to urge Members of the Senate to go to the back of the Chamber and visit with our special guests we have here—the Prime Minister of the Republic of Singapore, Goh Chok Tong, the Foreign Minister, and their Ambassador to the United States. We welcome them to the United States and to the Senate Chamber.

[Applause.]

CHILD CUSTODY PROTECTION ACT

UNANIMOUS CONSENT REQUEST—S. 1645

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the only amendments in order to S. 1645, the child custody bill, other than the substitute, be the previously filed amendments which are at the desk and limited to the following:

Senator FEINSTEIN: to exempt adult family members of a minor from prosecution;

Senator BOXER: to allow consent of a parent after a minor's abortion;

Senator KENNEDY: to require deference to State authorities;

Senator KENNEDY: to provide an exception for State laws that have been enjoined or held unconstitutional or that State enforcement authorities have declined to enforce;

Senator HARKIN: to provide an exception in the case of rape or incest;

Senator LEAHY: to provide a complete substitute, which makes the offense the use of force or threats of force to transport a minor;

And a relevant amendment by Senator ABRAHAM.

I further ask unanimous consent that there be no other amendments in order, including second degrees; that following the disposition of the above-listed amendments, the bill be read a third time and the Senate proceed to vote on passage of the bill, with no intervening action or debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. TORRICELLI. Reserving the right to object.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I am advised there is an objection, so I, therefore, object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, I rise today to engage my colleague from Michigan, the sponsor of the Child Custody Protection Act, in a colloquy to clarify the legislation's intent with regard to existing State parental notification laws.

The State of Maine has a carefully constructed adult consent requirement. In my state, a minor under 18 may obtain an abortion with the informed consent of either one parent, a guardian or an adult family member. Absent that consent, she may obtain an abortion if she receives counseling from a physician, psychiatrist, ordained member of the clergy, nurse, physician's assistant or qualified counselor. She may also obtain an abortion without parental or adult family member consent by securing a court order.

Will the legislation we are considering today in any way override or supersede Maine State law?

Mr. ABRAHAM. I want to thank my colleague from Maine for this opportunity to answer important questions on the Child Custody Protection Act. The intent of this legislation is to protect state-passed parental involvement laws. Residents of the states have supported and passed parental involvement laws and they deserve to have their will protected. The Child Custody Protection Act would have no effect on Maine's parental consent law as it applies to minors who reside in Maine. It would in no way override or supersede that law with respect to Maine minors, families, or others. The only effect of legislation would be to restrict a non-parent, non-guardian from transporting a minor from another state where the minor resides to Maine in order for the out-of-state minor to obtain an abortion in Maine and avoid the minor's home state parental involvement law.

Ms. COLLINS. Opponents of this bill contend that health care providers in states like Maine that do not have a law requiring parental involvement could still be liable for conspiracy or as accomplices under this legislation. The liability would presumably apply when they perform or participate in performing an abortion on a minor brought into Maine in violation of the proposed statute. Is this analysis correct? Are there any circumstances under which Maine's health care providers performing or participating in the performance of what, under Maine state law, would be legal abortion on a minor, could be held liable under your bill? Would these providers have any new legal responsibilities as a consequence of the enactment of this legislation?

Mr. ABRAHAM. This is an important point to clarify. The violation of this act is not the performance of an abortion. The violation of this act is the transportation of a minor across state lines to obtain an abortion without involving that minor's parent as required by the law of her home state. The abortion provider would only be in violation of this act if the provider actually conspired to transport or assisted in transporting the minor across state lines to obtain an abortion without the parental involvement that the minor's home state required. Providers who had not engaged in any such activities related to the transport of a minor would not incur any criminal liability or face any new legal responsibilities under this legislation.

Mr. DEWINE. Mr. President, I rise today to offer my strong support for the Child Custody Protection Act of 1998, which would make it a crime to transport a child across state lines to circumvent a state law requiring parental involvement or a judicial waiver for a minor to obtain an abortion.

Twenty-two states have laws saying a parent or guardian has to be notified or their consent given if a child is trying to get an abortion. What's happening now—far too often—is that people who aren't parents or guardians are taking the children across state lines, secretly, to get abortions in another state where parental notification isn't required.

It is my hope that this bill will achieve two important goals—to protect the health of children and to protect the rights of parents. In fact, Mr. President, I believe that empowering parents is the single biggest investment we can make in ensuring the health of our children.

Parents have the right and duty to be involved in the moral and medical decisions that affect their children's welfare.

When it comes to parental notification on abortion, the American people have reached a clear consensus. By a huge majority—80 percent—they favor parental notification. And 74 percent favor not just parental notification, but parental consent. This is a clear expression of the national wisdom. This legislation is an effort to make that kind of informed decision possible.

Earlier this year, we worked on another bill, one that is now law. In that bill, the Administration and the Congress mandated that the flight of a parent to another state to avoid paying child support is a Federal crime. I worked with Senator KOHL to champion the Deadbeat Parents Punishment Act in order to protect the interests of America's children. We have to pursue zealously those who would harm our children, either by omission or by commission.

Mr. President, the very same principle is embodied in the Child Custody Protection Act. There are those living among us who would place our children in harm's way by transporting them across state lines to achieve dangerous goals, both physically and emotionally. One such goal is abortion. The right of citizens to pass and enforce laws regarding the rights of parents is completely violated by the ability of others to transport children to another state to obtain an abortion. As a nation, we must use all the resources available to us in order to protect our children, and our families, from this conduct.

That is our purpose here today. I thank Senator ABRAHAM for his strong leadership in bringing this legislation forward.

I am sorry that my colleagues on the other side of the aisle have rejected our unanimous consent agreement. It was a fair agreement that provided unlimited debate on germane amendments to this bill. Unfortunately, the vote that we will take shortly to invoke cloture to end debate on the bill, may really be a vote to kill the bill if it fails. Let's be frank those voting to continue debate are really voting against the health of our children and the rights of parents. I would implore my colleagues on the other side to vote for cloture—for our kids.

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, Mark Twain was right on target with his comment that everybody was talking about the weather but nobody was doing anything about it.

Well, in our time almost everybody is indeed talking about family values but, thank goodness, many voices are being lifted in a concerted effort to do whatever is necessary to reverse a dangerous trend in America.

It's a trend that has been leading America down the slippery slope to self destruction.

The remedy? The preservation and restoration of the moral and spiritual principles and priorities laid down by our Founding Fathers a couple of centuries ago.

Given the time, I could identify hundreds of souls across this land who are hard at work in this massive restoration project—Bill and Elaine Bennett, for example. And in this Senate there are many who speak out with some regularity on the subject.

I am proud of them, and in today's special frame of reference, I am specially proud of the distinguished Senator from Michigan, SPENCE ABRAHAM, and all the cosponsors of S. 1645, The Child Custody Protection Act which is the pending business.

Mr. President, like, I pray, the majority of Americans, I was outraged by news reports that a 13-year old Pennsylvania girl was taken by a non-relative to another state to have an abortion without her parents' knowledge. Not knowing the whereabouts of a child, is surely a parent's worst nightmare. But, Mr. President, how much more frightening would it be for parents, if federal law permitted a stranger to perform an abortion on their child. Abortion is a medical procedure, potentially, which may cause psychological and physical complications. But this frightening scenario happened, and it will continue to happen if Congress does not pass the "Child Custody Protection Act". This pending legislation ensures that state laws requiring parental notification before an abortion can be performed on a minor will not be circumvented by crossing a state line. In other words, the parents in Pennsylvania will have their rights protected, so that, in turn, they can protect their 13-year old daughters from this traumatic experience.

Of course, if we were talking today about a medical procedure, other than abortion, there would be no need to defend a parent's right to be informed. But, this major money-making industry is worrying its pocketbook will be affected if parents are able to discourage their daughters from having an abortion. Abortion advocates are once more pulling out their deceitful tricks and desperately trying to defeat this bill.

Even Senators who disagree on the legality of abortion should feel comfortable with this legislation, because the vast majority of Americans agree that parental notification laws need to be protected. A recent poll conducted by Baseline & Assoc. shows that 78% of Americans strongly believe that it should be unlawful to take a minor across state lines to obtain an abortion without her parents' knowledge.

It comes down to this: Congress has an obligation to protect parental rights. Congress needs to protect states, like Pennsylvania, that have decided that parents have a right to be notified about their daughters' intent to destroy an unborn child—a decision, by the way, that even the Supreme Court has deemed constitutional in Planned Parenthood vs. Casey.

The parents in Pennsylvania are courageous, and they have not minced their words. They state unequivocally that they will not be pushed aside when it comes to being involved with their daughters' well-being. It is up to those of us in Congress to stand by the parents in Pennsylvania and the other states which have passed laws protecting parental authority.

To be precise, twenty-two other states have passed laws similar to Pennsylvania's—North Carolina being one of them. The parents of North Carolina have exercised their rights as voters and have also said that no abortion shall be performed on their daughter without their knowledge.

The question Congress needs to ask itself is this: Whose rights are we going to protect, those of abortionists—or parents? Are we going to tolerate that abortionists, who desire nothing more than to make a pretty penny off of young girls who are in a vulnerable state of mind, have more rights than the parents who love and care for their daughters more than anyone else in the world. Congress needs to be unmistakably clear that the job of deciding what is best for a teenager belongs to parents, not abortionists.

Simply put, America cannot afford to allow parental authority to be undermined. With the breakdown of so many families, it is absolutely critical that nothing further be done to weaken the relationship between parents and their children. While there are numerous contributory factors to society's ills today—the disintegration of the American family is, in my judgement, the primary culprit.

By passing the "Child Custody Protection Act," we are saying that the custody of children both rightfully and fundamentally belongs to responsible parents.

I pray that the Senate will follow the overwhelming decision of the House of Representatives and protect a parent's right to decide what is best for their daughter.

Mr. KOHL. Mr. President, I rise today to urge my colleagues to vote against the cloture motion on S. 1645, the Child Custody Protection Act. I do so as a supporter of the bill and as one who supported cloture on the motion to proceed to S. 1645.

Let me be very clear. I support a family's involvement in a minor's very grave decision to have an abortion. I also support the rights of States to protect minors in their borders by passing constitutional consent measures. In my State of Wisconsin, there is a law that requires minors seeking an abortion to get the permission of a parent, a grandparent, an adult sibling, or a judge in cases where family support is unlikely.

The reports of adults driving unrelated minors across state lines to avoid state consent laws are very disturbing. It is bad enough that a minor would make such a large decision and have such a serious procedure without the support of a family member. It is worse that the procedure might be performed far from home and away from the child's family doctor. It is because of these concerns that I supported S. 1645.

However, S. 1645 as written is very narrow, and currently would cover only those few states that have strict parental consent laws. It would not cover Wisconsin where the law allows other family members to grant the required consent. In voting in Judiciary Committee to send S. 1645 to the floor, I had assumed that we would be able to address this shortcoming, as well as other technical difficulties with the bill.

Unfortunately, the Majority decided to file cloture immediately on the bill before any perfecting amendments could be offered. Under the strict rules of cloture, virtually no amendments to S. 1645 would be in order. Of most concern to me, it would have been out of order to consider an amendment protecting from criminal prosecution a grandparent who drove a minor across state lines for an abortion. I supported such an amendment in Committee and think it is a necessary, wise, and humane addition to this legislation.

I am sorry that final consideration of this important measure will be pushed aside by partisan procedural wrangling. Consent laws may be one aspect of the highly charged abortion debate on which a majority of the Congress and a majority of the American people can agree. Sadly, we won't have a chance to find out as the rush to the campaign shoves consensus and sound policy off the agenda.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I am opposed to S. 1645, the so-called Child Custody Protection Act. This legislation would prohibit and set penalties for transporting an individual under the age of 18 across a state line to obtain an abortion even though the abortion is legal in the state that individual is taken to. It would subject close relatives such as grandmothers, aunts, and siblings to criminal prosecution for an action totally legal where taken. In fact, an amendment that would have excluded grandmothers and other close adult relatives from federal prosecution was defeated in Committee by proponents of this bill. Invoking cloture at this time would preclude this amendment on the Senate floor.

When faced with difficult choices regarding abortion and reproductive health, young women should be encouraged to seek counsel from their parents or other trusted adults. In many cases, even in states without mandatory parental consent laws, young women involve one or both parents. However, if a young woman feels that she cannot involve her parents for whatever reason, such as her fear it would put her in danger of abuse or if the pregnancy is the result of incest, she should not be discouraged from seeking the counsel of a trusted adult. I support adult involvement in this very difficult decision, but we must recognize that in some cases it is not always possible for the adult to be a parent. This bill would make it a federal misdemeanor for a grandmother to take her granddaughter to another state for an abortion even if the mother is dead and the father is in jail for incest.

Without question, we should encourage parents, educators and counselors to help prevent teenage pregnancy within their state and communities. Teenagers need to be informed of the responsibility that comes with sexuality and parenthood. But making it more difficult for young women to turn to a trusted adult, be it an older sister, aunt, or grandmother, is clearly not the way to do this.

This legislation also raises some unusual federalism questions that concern me. Under this bill, state laws would follow the people who live in those states when they travel to other states. The legislation would require the federal government to prosecute people for an activity that is lawful in the states in which the activity takes place (if that activity is not lawful in the state in which they reside). The Federal government does not impose this same restriction on crossing state lines in any other case that I can think of such as to gamble or buy liquor, cigarettes or guns. For the first time since slavery this legislation would make it criminal to go to a state to act in a way that is legal in that state. This is a terrible precedent.

This legislation would impose federal penalties in states that have opted not to implement parental involvement requirements. I believe such decisions should be made by the citizens of each state, not by the residents of a neighboring state.

People who act legally in Michigan should not be prosecuted because acts are illegal in another state and Michigan citizens should not be prosecuted for acts which are legal in the state in which they are performed.

Mr. JOHNSON. Mr. President, I rise today to reiterate my support for S. 1645, the Child Custody Protection Act. I have long supported the right of states to enact and enforce parental notification laws with respect to a minor's access to abortion services, and I believe steps should be taken to prevent individuals from circumventing such laws. However, I voted against cloture on this bill today because such a vote would have had the effect of denying my Senate colleagues on both sides of the aisle an opportunity to offer amendments. While I do not necessarily support all of the amendments which might have been offered, I cannot in good conscience vote to circumvent what should be an open and fair debate on this important issue. The White House has threatened to veto this bill in its current form and I believe a vote for cloture today would have sealed the fate of this bill without consideration of compromise language toward the shared goal of preventing abortions.

Every parent has the right to be involved in their minor's decision to terminate a pregnancy. The Child Custody Protection Act would promote parental participation in what must be the most difficult decision a young girl might face. The federal government can play a role in protecting states' rights in this regard, and should support minor and adult women in alternatives to abortion. I always have supported efforts to promote adoption to ensure that children grow up in a loving environment with a supportive family. I believe the federal government should promote adoption assistance and should encourage moving children from foster care into adoptive homes. I remain hopeful that my colleagues in both political parties and I can work together to create a system that reduces unwanted pregnancies and abortions, encourages adoption, and results in strong families.

Mr. President, I will continue to work with the Senate leadership in an effort to move the Child Custody Protection Act forward so that the rights of parents are protected in the face of this most difficult decision, and that minor and adult women continue to be provided with alternatives to terminating a pregnancy.

NOT VOTING—1

Glenn

The PRESIDING OFFICER. On this vote, the yeas are 54, the nays are 45. Three-fifths of the Senators not having voted in the affirmative, the motion is rejected.

Mr. ABRAHAM. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to speak for up to 5 minutes with respect to the vote which just transpired.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. ABRAHAM. Mr. President, I rise to comment on the vote which has just occurred on the effort to bring cloture on the Child Custody Protection Act. Obviously, as the sponsor of the legislation, I am disappointed we will not be moving forward at this time.

As I think the Presiding Officer is aware, as our fellow Members are aware, we have been trying to work with the interested parties on both sides since the bill came out of committee to try to limit the number of amendments so we might have a piece of legislation that could move through here in a reasonable period of time. Unfortunately, we could not get to that point. Our hope had been to limit, through the unanimous consent offer that was made earlier today, the amendments to those that have been filed that were germane. That was not agreed to.

Unfortunately, as is certainly every Member's prerogative here, there was the desire for people to bring amendments that were wholly unconnected to the child custody protection issue.

Obviously, given the calendar of the Senate as we look forward to the next few weeks, much business remains for us to complete, so the likelihood we will be able to continue with respect to this legislation during this Senate session seems very unlikely.

I certainly remain receptive to any counteroffers from the minority with regard to the possibility of limiting amendments and time. Realistically, that does not seem like it is potentially going to occur this year.

I think this is very important legislation. Across this country, every day families who live in States that have enacted parental consent laws are finding that those laws mean nothing because minor children are being transported across State lines without parental involvement or consent for the purpose of abortions being committed. This is wrong. People in my State, where we have enacted such legislation, have the right to rely on this legislation, to believe that their children will be safe and protected, and that they will participate in the important decisions of their children's lives.

I hope if we can't resolve this issue and bring this bill back to the floor this year that our colleagues will work together with me next year so that we might be able, early in the session, to move ahead. The House passed this legislation overwhelmingly. I believe if it came to a final vote of passage in the Senate it would likewise pass overwhelmingly. I believe it would move legislatively in a direction that is good not only for the young children affected by this legislation, but for our families, as well.

I want to thank the people who voted for cloture today. I want to encourage those who wish to bring amendments that are not germane to this legislation to consider other vehicles to possibly include those amendments so that we might still have a chance this year to move ahead on this legislation and do so in an expeditious timeframe.

If not, I certainly want to send out a welcome to anybody who wants to work with me because I do not intend to end this effort this year. I intend to continue until we pass the legislation. I yield the floor.

The Senate continued with consideration of the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The pending business is the bankruptcy bill.

The Senator from Iowa.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent there be 2½ hours of debate equally divided on the Harkin amendment regarding interest rates. I further ask that all debate time on the amendment be consumed this evening and the amendment then be temporarily set aside.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. HARKIN. I object.

Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. SMITH of Oregon). Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, tomorrow I will be laying down a Sense of the Congress amendment calling on the Federal Reserve to lower interest rates as a preemptive strike against a recession in 1999. This is a very crucial issue coming at this point in time. I am going to take some time to speak about it and lay out why it is necessary for us, I believe, to take this kind of action and to express ourselves.

The amendment I will be offering on behalf of myself and Senators DORGAN, CONRAD, WELLSTONE, KERREY, and BRYAN will urge the Federal Open Market Committee to promptly reduce short-term interest rates as a preemptive strike against a recession in 1999. One week from today, the Federal Open Market Committee will meet to vote on interest rate policy. That is why it is crucial that the Senate send a clear message to the Fed: "Lower interest rates now."

Mr. President, if we want to significantly decrease the number of bankruptcies in this country, one of the best ways to accomplish this important goal is to reduce the risk of people losing their jobs.

With the chance of deflation and a recession rising, we need to lower interest rates.

Over 2 years ago, against the conventional wisdom of the time, I took to the floor of the Senate to speak and to openly put a hold on Chairman Alan Greenspan's renomination to the Federal Reserve Board until we had a debate on U.S. monetary policy.

One of the reasons I did this was to ensure that we had a significant debate on the Fed's focus only on inflation to the exclusion of other factors. I believed then, and I believe now, that it is wrong for the Fed to maintain high real interest rates without any significant signs of inflation threatening our country.

I believed at the time, and I continue to believe, that we should lower interest rates, allow the economy to grow, and to provide a maximum level of employment. Specifically, I said at the time that I thought our economy could grow at least at a rate of 3.5 percent a year for a number of consecutive years, with an expansion of the labor force and improved productivity. I also argued that we could at the same time have an unemployment rate of 4.5 percent a year without triggering a significant level of inflation.

That is what I said 2 years ago. At the time, many economists and economic writers took me to task on this, openly questioning my views. Many of these economists believed in a theory—an economic theory—which called NAIRU, which stands for the "non-accelerating inflationary rate of unemployment." I will get to that and what it means in just a moment.

But a couple of years ago, advocates of NAIRU, believed that if the unemployment rate fell below a certain rate—at that time it was somewhere between 5.5 and 6 percent—if the unemployment rate went below that level, employers would have to significantly raise wages and salaries igniting a 1970s style of inflation. And these economic theorists believed that the Fed should raise interest rates as a preemptive strike against inflation.

In other words, if unemployment ever fell to that level, regardless of anything else, these economic theorists under this theory believed that the Fed should raise interest rates right away to preempt any inflation from occurring.

That is what the Fed has done in the past. They have raised interest rates to a very high level.

But look where we are today. The unemployment rate currently is at 4.5 percent. It has been below 5 percent for nearly a year and a half, and it has been under 6 percent for 4 years. And there is no inflation. Our gross domestic product was 3.8 percent last year and 5.5 percent during the first quarter of this year. During this time, inflation hasn't gone up. In fact, it has gone down.

The rate has decreased to its lowest level since the 1960s during the past 2 years.

To Chairman Greenspan's credit, he has recently distanced himself from the view that there should be a preemptive increase in interest rates, simply because of NAIRU. He has, through his actions at the Fed, allowed our economy to grow and unemployment to fall without raising interest rates.

So unemployment has fallen from 6, to 5.5, to 5, to 4.5 percent. Under NAIRU, this would have triggered automatic increases in interest rates, but under Mr. Greenspan they have not. And I applaud him for that.

Unfortunately, many on the Federal Open Market Committee have continued to push for higher interest rates even as the signs of an economic slowdown in the United States continue. While they have not succeeded in raising interest rates, they represent a major obstacle against lowering interest rates, an action which is becoming increasingly needed.

Real interest rates are at a historical high. Although the Federal Open Market Committee has not directly raised interest rates since March of 1997, real interest rates are rising. In fact, real interest rates are at historically high levels, the highest in 9 years, because inflation has continued to fall while the Federal Reserve has failed to lower the Federal funds rate. The chart that I have here points that out.

This chart shows, for example, the real Federal funds rate. That is the market rate less the CPI percentage. As we can see, it has been, for a short period—from 1996 to 1997—going up, and last year and this year has gone up. Actually, this tick, it would be going up here again over the last few weeks. So we have about 4 percent real Federal funds rate right now. In fact, even Chairman Greenspan noted during his Humphrey-Hawkins testimony on February 24 of this year:

Statistically it is a fact that real interest rates are higher now than they have been on the average of the post-World War II period.

That is a quote from Mr. Greenspan. It is a fact that real interest rates are higher now than they have been on the average of the post-World War II period. I ask why—why are real interest rates so high? There is no inflation; no signs of inflation. In fact, the economy is slowing down a little bit. We see some recessionary signs. Yet we still have these high interest rates. The high interest rate policy that is being imposed by the Federal Reserve, I have always said, is really a stealth tax on hard-working American families, and I believe it is a contributing factor to the near collapse of several economies worldwide.

It is time for the FOMC, the Federal Open Market Committee, to provide a significant and immediate cut in interest rates as a preemptive strike against a recession in 1999. Interest rates have a significant impact on virtually every family in America, on every producer, business and family farmer in this country. I believe lower interest rates have been needed for a long time, but now quick action is truly crucial for our country's well-being.

The economic signs, not only in the U.S. economy but in economies worldwide, demand swift and appropriate action to counteract the problems that lie ahead. I can only say that I believe we have waited too long. Just as inflation can spiral, and spiral out of control, so can deflation spiral out of control. I hope that because the Federal Reserve would not act a little sooner, that we have not reached a point where we are now in a deflationary spiral, and that even more drastic action may have to be taken. But I do believe that significant action has to be taken right now to lower these interest rates.

Don't just take my word for it. Here is a quote from Mr. Jerry Jasnowski, the President of the National Association of Manufacturers, and Earnest Deavenport, the CEO of Eastman Chemical Company. On September 8th they said:

The current volatility in world financial markets and its threat to global growth . . . could lead to recessions throughout the developing world and Eastern Europe, as well as a slowdown in the United States.

Here is what they said on this chart, on September 8:

We recommend a significant loosening of monetary policy. Specifically, the Federal funds and the discount rates should be reduced by 50 basis points as soon as possible."

That is what they said on September 8.

Or we can listen to Mr. John Smith, President of General Motors. On September 15th he said, here it is on this chart here:

The question is whether the Fed will wait until the recession is imported and then act, or act now. GM believes it should act now.

That is the President of General Motors on September 15, just last week.

Or, James Glassman at the American Enterprise Institute, he has written several op-eds in the Washington Post calling on the Fed to lower interest rates. Again he said recently:

The most important step right now is for the Federal Reserve to cut interest rates.

That would pump more money into the system, encouraging businesses to borrow and consumers to spend. It would also temporarily weaken the dollar, thus helping the currencies of countries in dire economic straits.

I could go on all day quoting business leaders, economists, editorial writers and others calling on the Federal Reserve to lower interest rates. From the Business Roundtable to the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, to the Economic Policy Institute and progressive economist Jamie Galbraith at the University of Texas, from the chairman of the Joint Economic Committee, to Robert Samuelson at the Washington Post, and Stephen Roach at the New York Times, the message to the Fed is clear: Lower interest rates now.

The Fed's policy needs to be reversed and interest rates significantly lowered or our growing economy is likely to quickly sink, perhaps into a very serious recession. So, what we need is to lower interest rates as a preemptive strike against these ominous economic signs.

If we do not do this soon, we will see our hopes for higher wages, more jobs, and the end of Federal deficits dashed on the rocks of recession and rising unemployment. We could be driven by deflation rather than fearing inflation. With deflation, people delay major purposes because they know it is going to be cheaper later on. The last time, of course, that we saw significant deflation was in the Great Depression of the 1930s, but it used to happen regularly in the last century.

How bad can it get? From 1929 to 1933, wages fell by 25 percent; wholesale prices fell by 30 percent; farm commodities fell by 51 percent. And with the shrinking economy, unemployment increased from 5.3 percent to 36.3 percent. Prices were cheaper, but with no money coming in, most people could not benefit at all.

Today, the signs of increasing global deflation are widespread. The problems in the U.S. economy are greatly exacerbated by the enormous difficulties in many Asian Pacific nations, Russia, Latin America and Mexico.

As former Assistant Secretary of the Treasury C. Fred Bergsten wrote in the Washington Post on September 20th:

The Asian economic crisis is much deeper, much more pervasive and likely to last much longer than anyone imagined. Economies that had grown 6 to 8 percent annually for two decades are declining by like or greater amounts, a swing of Depression-era magnitude with incalculable political and social consequences. The contagion has already spread far beyond Asia, engulfing Russia and much of Latin America, and could do so even more violently in the days ahead. We now face a truly global crisis, which has already hit the United States hard and will do so with increasing force.

The fall in the Canadian and Australian dollars, two countries largely dependent on agriculture and mining is a demonstration of the worldwide impact of the deflationary trend in commodities.

A far more severe threat is the long-term economic paralysis of the Japanese economy which has turned into a significant recession. Some predict that a bailout of the Japanese banks could cost as much as 20 percent of Japan's entire GDP.

That is much larger than our savings and loan crises back in the 1980s. Some estimate that the bad loans of Japanese banks may be about $1 trillion. It is unfortunately clear that the Japanese government is not moving quickly enough to resolve the difficulties in their financial sector. The Japanese have already seen their wholesale prices decline in 5 of the last 6 years. To further illustrate this point, I would like to quote an article in September 14 Wall Street Journal which I found very troubling.

It says:

News that Japan has fallen into its longest economic contraction in 5 decades has led some economists and government officials to suggest that the country has nudged closer to a vicious spiral of falling prices, falling employment and falling output that would damage its economy even further.

Mr. President, I ask for unanimous consent that this entire article be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

JAPAN'S WEAK GDP SUGGESTS LITTLE HOPE SOON

(By Bill Spindle)

TOKYO.—News that Japan has fallen into its longest economic contraction in five decades has led some economists and government officials to suggest that the country has nudged closer to a vicious spiral of falling prices, falling employment and falling output that would damage its economy even further.

Economic activity fell 0.8% during the April-to-June quarter from the previous quarter, the government said Friday, an annualized decline of 3.3%. And with spending by companies and consumers plummeting, there was almost no sign the situation will improve soon.

"The Japanese economy is walking along the edge of a deflationary spiral," said Taichi Sakaiya, head of the government Economic Planning Agency.

Even before the gross domestic product numbers were released Friday, the benchmark Nikkei stock index plunged more than 5% amid concern over the economy and the gyrating U.S. stock market. At the end of the morning session on Monday, the Nikkei was up 30.12 points to 13947.10. The dollar weakened almost five yen during the Asian trading day as spooked investors brought dollar investments home and cashed them in for yen. The Japanese bond market touched another record high as yields, which move in the opposite direction of prices, plunged to 0.79% on the benchmark long bond.

Japan's report on gross domestic product—the total value of goods and services produced in the economy—was a litany of problems that exceeded even the downbeat expectations of most private economists.

Consumer spending, the largest chunk of Japan's economy, fell an annualized 3.3%. Housing investment, which provided one of the few bright spots in the preceding quarter, plunged by an annualized rate of 4%.

And corporate capital investment posted a second straight decline, falling 20% at an annualized rate. That is a particularly bad omen, since business investment has historically been a key engine that drives employment and thus consumer spending. That "suggests the economy is going to be contracting going forward," said Brian Rose, an economist at Warburg Dillon Read.

While Japan's trade surplus made the biggest contribution to economic growth, even that silver lining was more a sign of economic weakness than strength. The surplus expanded because Japan's imports—which fell 6.8% from the previous quarter—are declining faster in the weak economy than exports, which slipped 0.4%. The only clear plus for the economy was an annualized 1% rise in government expenditures, indicating some of the spending from a fiscal stimulus package may be trickling into the economy.

These most recent data—showing that Japan's economy deteriorated for a third straight quarter, the longest contraction since the government began compiling figures in 1955—comes as the government gropes for effective tools to turn the tide. On Wednesday, the central bank loosened monetary policy by cutting the interbank lending rate to 0.25% from 0.5%. However, private economists and even some government officials said the move would provide little help for an economy where the usual tools of monetary policy have broken down.

The government is also pouring some $100 billion worth of tax cuts and spending into the economy, part of an economic rescue package passed in April. Still, private economists say the stimulus package—the centerpiece of the dominant Liberal Democratic Party's economic strategy—could be swamped by the deterioration in the rest of the economy. Nonetheless, many economists still think the spending and tax-cut package will be enough to at least break the momentum of the contraction temporarily over the next two quarters.

The fallout from the continued economic deterioration could also eventually hit the banking system. Already a swelling number of bankruptcies is creating concern that banks' huge portfolios of bad loans will grow further as more borrowers fail.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, as the second largest economy, Japan's poor economic situation is going to have a very significant effect on our economy and the economies of most other countries.

Again I quote Fred Bergsten, a very respected expert in international economics. He urges that "the United States and European Union should globalize the strategy of cutting their own interest rates. This would encourage capital reflows to the crisis countries, reduce their debt burdens and improve their competitive position by promoting a stronger yen. It would also ensure continued world growth and help prevent further stock market declines."

Mr. Bergsten went on to note the fact that the 30-year bond interest rate is below the Fed funds rate and urged a cut in this rate by a full percentage point.

Chairman Greenspan recently said that the U.S. can't "remain an oasis of prosperity" in "a world that is experiencing greatly increased stress."

Again, this statement does appear to be a significant and positive shift in the views of the Chairman of the Fed.

However, I am concerned that there are members of the Federal Open Market Committee who both refuse to consider the global economy when determining monetary policy and are still worried that low unemployment will automatically trigger inflation.

The financial crisis in Asia, Latin America, Russia and many other areas of the world poses a serious threat to our economy and, to date, the United States has not established the appropriate monetary policy to minimize it. The FOMC, through its control of the federal funds rate, has the ability to take decisive action against the economic problems that face us.

Many economists note that devalued currencies in several countries will not only reduce the rate of inflation but also sharply increase our trade deficit, eliminating many jobs and slowing growth in the process. Worldwide commodity prices are at their lowest level in decades.

With regard to our record trade deficit, on September 18, the Christian Science Monitor reports that "So far this year, the trade deficit in goods and services is running at a record annual rate of $185 billion, 68 percent higher than last year's record deficit of $110 billion. America's deficit with Pacific Rim countries hit $87.8 billion in the first seven months—42 percent above the imbalance for the period in 1997."

The September 7 issue of Insight Magazine, says that "Santa Claus is coming to America, only his goods are making the early trip by sea rather than sleigh—in huge freighters filled to capacity."

What will this mean for the U.S. economy? Most importantly, it means a significant loss of jobs, perhaps as much as 1.1 million. In fact, Wilbur Ross, the senior managing editor of the Rothschild Investment Group, believes that "the loss of American jobs due to decreased domestic production for export will outweigh any short term benefits of lower prices."

Experts on balance-of-trade issues say nearly every major industry will be affected: automotive, steel, electronics, appliances, machinery, textiles and apparel.

Mr. President, lower interest rates would allow people in other countries to buy out goods, and, in turn, reduce the risk of Americans losing their jobs.

Lower interest rates are also needed to help our farmers. Worldwide commodity prices are at their lowest level in decades.

The price of farm commodities are connected to this problem, and we know what is happening to farm commodities in our country. I was just recently in the Midwest, and I can tell you that corn, beans, wheat and all the attendant crops are at their lowest prices in years. They are falling dramatically. Livestock prices are also going down. We are seeing average hog prices this year at their lowest level since 1974 and, again, no indication that they are going to go up.

This is an idea of what is happening to corn prices. We can see how they are dropping in the Midwest. I have shown these charts before in discussing the need for some legislation on agriculture.

Basically, what this chart shows, and all the other charts indicate, is corn, soybeans, wheat, cattle hogs—all the commodities we have in the farm sector—are drastically dropping, and dropping very rapidly.

Wayne Angell, a former Federal Reserve Governor appointed by President Reagan, and one of the last experts in farm economy to sit on the Federal Reserve Board, I might add, said on September 9, "The Federal Reserve should cut interest rates to stem declines in the prices of key commodities."

Angell goes on to say that, "If commodity prices continue to fall unchecked, the U.S. economy risks a fall in the prices of hard assets, such as real estate, with potentially severe risks to the economy."

He said that on September 10.

He is right, we are already seeing this. We are seeing this happen in the Midwest. Already we are seeing a softening of land prices, and perhaps it could lead to a downward spiral. I and many others in this body are working on solutions to fix the problems in the ag sector, like increasing loan rates, providing storage payments to farmers, helping those who have suffered disasters, helping to do something about the Federal Crop Insurance Program. One of the best things the Federal Reserve can do for farmers is lower interest rates.

There are direct effects. For example, a 1-percent reduction in interest rates means the average farmer in Iowa will save $1,400 in interest payments on their land each year. In addition to reductions in land payments, lower interest rates means farmers will be able to receive a much-needed break in the prices they pay for new machinery, fertilizer and seeds. It means that farmers' incomes will increase and the negative effect on the rural economy will be somewhat reduced.

Again, for example, a 1-percent reduction in interest rates means a typical 950-acre grain farm in Iowa will see an increase of about $2,500 in income a year.

But the indirect effects of lower interest rates, as I mentioned, are even more important. We need the engine of the U.S. economy working at full speed to help the world economy to recover. Lowering interest rates will help restore worldwide markets for our agricultural goods. As I have said many times in the past, lower interest rates amount to a badly needed tax break for hard-working families.

Mr. President, the U.S. economy is the only large, healthy economic engine in the world, and if our economy does slow (and our growth increased just 1.6 percent in the last quarter compared to 5.5 percent in the first quarter), it will be exceedingly difficult for the worldwide economy to recover. The chance of a long, deep, worldwide economic recession is, unfortunately, very possible.

There are already increasing signs of a possible recession in the U.S. economy. For example, 30-year Treasury bond rates have sunk to record lows and are now below the short-term Federal funds rate. This is indeed a yellow warning light that the U.S. economy could be headed for a significant decline. Again, this chart shows that. The 30-year Treasury bond rates are now lower than the short-term Federal funds rate. That sends a very powerful signal that we could be headed for a very, very steep decline.

Wholesale prices slid a steep 0.4 percent just in August alone. For the first 8 months of the year, producer prices have fallen at a 1.4 percent annual rate, compared with a 1.2 percent rise for all of 1997.

Nobel laureate Milt Friedman, with whom I do not very often agree on economics, called this a "significant decline." And former Fed Vice Chairman Alan Blinder, says:

If you ask about the prospect of deflation and you restrict your attention to goods, the answer is yes, and in fact we've had some.

So, Mr. President, we are already seeing troubling deflationary signs in our own economy. Action must be taken now.

The fall in the U.S. stock market, another flashing warning signal, will clearly have its own impact on what is referred to as the "wealth effect." To describe the troubling nature of this situation, I would like to quote an article from the September 14 issue of Time magazine. The article pointed out that:

A slumping stock market can certainly add to the drag on a slowing economy, through the so-called wealth effect. In a rising market, economists estimate that for every dollar of increased wealth, consumers spend an additional 4 cents. And, they often stop spending that money when their stock gains erode. If $2 trillion has been lost from investors' pockets over the past couple of months, then at 4 cents on the dollar we could expect an $80 billion drop in annual consumer spending, or about 1% of the total U.S. economy. While that alone is not enough to stop the economy from growing . . . it could combine with the global currency crisis to tip the U.S. into recession later this year or in early 1999.

The article in Time goes on to say that:

. . . a persistent stock market decline can also hurt the economy by making companies more cautious about expansion and hiring. That usually means layoffs or plant closings, which ripple through our economy as laid-off people cut spending.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that this article from Time be printed in the RECORD.

WHAT A DRAG! ASIA, RUSSIA, LATIN AMERICA—TROUBLE ABROAD THREATENS THE U.S. ECONOMY

(S.C. Gwynne Reported by Bernard Baumohl, William Dowell and Aixa M. Pascual/New York, Julie Grace/Milwaukee, Alison Jones/Durham and Adam Zagorin/Washington)

Smack in the American heartland, far from both Wall Street and Asia, the 15,500 workers of Harnischfeger Industries, based in St. Francis, Wis., got slammed from both directions. A proud world beater that builds mining equipment and huge machines that produce 70% of the world's printing paper, Harnischfeger has just seen its sales to Singapore and other troubled Pacific Rim countries drop from $600 million a year to nearly zero. Its stock, riding high at $44 a year ago, was beaten down to $16 in last week's market rout, gutting the 401(k) retirement plans of many of its employees. "What I have in Harnischfeger stock is down by two-thirds," says a glum Dave Trench, 57, a machinery stock attendant at a Harnischfeger subsidiary in Nashua, N.H. "When I look at retirement, I might start to sweat." At least he still has his job—for now. Harnischfeger announced in late August that it soon will begin dismissing 3,100 employees, or a fifth of its work force.

Look at Harnischfeger, and you can see the origins of the stock market's grinding 1,698-point decline, a loss of 8% from the July 17 peak of the Dow Jones industrial average at 9337.97. The company also offers a glimpse of what might come next, as American workers and investors like Dave Trench wonder whether the long boom is over. Should they pull their money out of stocks? Does the market slide foretell a recession? How is any of this bad news possible when the U.S. economy seems so strong, with the lowest unemployment, inflation and interest rates seen in a generation?

Like American business generally, Harnischfeger entered this turmoil strong and lean. Well-managed with a skilled and productive work force, it had prospered from the past decade's explosive growth in global freedom and commerce. But then came the currency crisis that began in Thailand in July 1997 and spread like a contagion through the rest of Asia—and last month to Russia and last week to Latin America, hammering down local currencies and slashing demand for U.S. exports. Cheaper Asian exports began grabbing more and more domestic business away from U.S. companies and sliced into their earnings. That trend finally drove down an overheated stock market, taking back, in the past seven weeks, almost a quarter of the $9 trillion that stocks have pumped into U.S. portfolios during the roaring '90s.

When the Dow plunged 512 points last Monday, investors at first regarded it as an irrational response to the financial and political turmoil in Russia—a vast country that still bristles with 7,000 strategic nuclear warheads but whose economy scarcely rivals that of the Netherlands and accounts for less than 1% of U.S. exports. Investors treated Monday's market action as another of those "dips" in which they had been taught to buy stocks on the cheap. Heck, it wasn't even as big as the one-day dip last Oct. 27, and the market had shrugged that one off six weeks before powering to new highs and greater glory.

With that in mind, bargain hunters on Tuesday sent the Dow rebounding 288 points, in the second-largest single-day point gain in history, President Clinton, for whom rising stocks have covered a multitude of sins these past six years, tracked the Dow anxiously as he traveled to beleaguered Moscow. During a dinner with Russian President Boris Yeltsin, Clinton stopped economic adviser Gene Sperling in the receiving line to tell him, quietly but with palpable relief, that "the market's up" and flashed a thumbs-up sign.

But this time things were different. The Dow fell Wednesday. And the next day. And the next day, losing ground for the seventh trading day out of the previous eight and posting a 411-point, or 5%, setback for the week. Despite the release last week of fresh reports chronicling persistent low unemployment and rising orders for factory goods, anxiety spread from the stock market to the "real" economy of jobs and paychecks. The market drop served as a reminder—one about as subtle as a poke in the eye—that in today's global economy, not even a healthy U.S. can quarantine its factories and offices and markets from the illnesses of countries halfway around the world. It vividly showed Americans how the turmoil in Asia and Latin America is slashing the profits of U.S. corporations, which might be forced to respond with layoffs and cutbacks in spending.

Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan, speaking after the markets closed last Friday, revealed that Fed policymakers are worried that the threat to the U.S. economy from global financial turmoil rivals the danger of wage and price inflation. The Fed is now as likely to cut interest rates, he hinted, as to raise them. "It is just not credible that the U.S. can remain an oasis of prosperity unaffected by a world that is experiencing greatly increased stress," Greenspan said in a speech at the University of California, Berkeley. Then he headed off to join Treasury Secretary Robert Rubin in a meeting where they urged Japan's new Finance Minister to deal with his country's insolvent banks and other financial troubles, which are dragging down not only the huge economy and financial market of Japan but also those of other Asian countries—and now the U.S.

Only 21 months ago, with the Dow at 6500, Greenspan was warning against "irrational exuberance" in the stock market. Several other wise elders expressed hope that last week's correction will have the cleansing effect of strengthening the historic relationship between stock valuations and the earnings of the underlying companies—a notion that had fallen out of favor after years of "momentum investing," in which all that mattered was that someone would buy the hot stock that some greater fool would soon bid up to an even higher price. The price-earnings ratio for the S&P 500 has approached a record 30 this summer, twice its historical norm. Securities analysts, reassessing the impact of the turmoil in Asia and other foreign markets, last week began chopping down their estimates for growth of U.S. corporate profits, to as little as 3% for all of 1998, and zero growth for 1999, a sharp drop from last year's robust 12%.

In a bit of lucky timing, Fidelity Investments, the mutual-fund giant, last week rolled out a promotional and educational campaign starring Peter Lynch, its legendary fund manager. Lynch was troubled, he told TIME, that "in the first half of this year, the S&P 500 was up 15%, but [corporate] profits were down." He also expressed relief that the correction came now, rather than having the market drop to 7500 "after it's gone up to 14000."

There was remarkably little evidence of panic among individual investors last week. One measure of that is the amount of money that flows in and out of equity mutual funds. In August, a month that included several gut-wrenching weeks, there was a net outflow of $5.4 billion, or well under 1% of the total invested in equity funds. Though this was the first such exodus since the recession and stock slump of 1990, the number is still quite modest when compared with the 4% that fled equity funds after the October 1987 correction. Last week investors pulled a net $6.2 billion out of stock funds Monday and Tuesday, but on Wednesday a net $6.5 billion flowed right back as the market bounced, according to Trim Tabs Financial Services. "There has not been any retail panic as far as we can see," says Scott Chaisson, a branch manager for Fidelity in midtown Manhattan. "There seems to be an awareness that there are going to be ups and downs like this."

The real test, though, won't come until later, when new investors face the results of their first sustained market decline. An unprecedented 43% of adult Americans are now invested in stocks, up from only 21% in 1990. (That helps explain why we are hearing less Schadenfreude over the discomfort of Wall Street yuppies than in past corrections.) A striking 57% of all household assets today are allocated to equities. Small wonder: the market has doubled just since 1994. But these investors are about to get account statements showing declines of 20% to 30%. Even if they have been in the black over the past 12 months, not to mention the past few years, it will be a shock to be reminded, for the first time in years, that stocks can go down as well as up.

Investors large and small who had put money overseas in search of diversification, or simply higher returns, were sorely disappointed last week. Day after day, one giant U.S. bank after another came forward, like sheepish A.A. members fallen off the wagon, to confess they had succumbed to the lure of big returns from Russian investments on which—surprise!—the Yeltsin government has defaulted. Citicorp announced that its earnings for the third quarter will be cut by about $200 million in Russian losses. The price tag at Bankers Trust, about $260 million; at brokerage firm Salomon Smith Barney, $360 million in the past two months.

All told, U.S. financial institutions had losses mounting to $8 billion by week's end, and one of the fears that drugged the stock market was that U.S. companies might face even larger losses in Latin America, where they have much more exposure (about a third of U.S. exports) and where currencies came under fresh assault late last week. Brazil saw $11 billion in capital fleeing the country in the past five weeks—not because its economy is weak but because of each investor's fear that other investors might flee any economy slurred with the label "emerging." Money also fled the stocks of financial institutions with lots of business and investment in the merging markets. Citicorp's stock dropped to about half of its recent high, losing $40 billion of market value.

Other companies that took major hits were transportation stocks whose business involves trade and travel: the parent companies of such airlines as American, United and Delta. Companies like Coca-Cola, Procter & Gamble and Gillette, which not long ago were praised for their successful penetration of global markets, last week were punished harshly through stock sell-offs. General Electric, the world's most valuable public corporation and one of the most admired, fell 22%, losing $68 billion of its market value.

The near panic over emerging markets was strongest among some of the hedge funds, the high-risk vehicles that often deliver high returns to wealthy investors. After famed investor George Soros lost $2 billion in Russia, John Meriweather's Long-Term Capital Management announced that it had lost $2.1 billion, or half its asset value, so far this year. "Russia and Asia became the trigger for the correction in the U.S. stock market," says

David Wyss, chief economist at DRI/McGraw-Hill, a consulting firm. "Although there had already been a softening in earnings over the past few quarters, traders needed to be hit with a two-by-four to make them realize you just can't get double-digit increases in earnings every year."

Russia also became the trigger for another concern, at once political and economic: "We were suddenly threatened by an old fear—the Soviet Union and militarism," says John Silvia, chief economist at Scudder Kemper Investments. "If the world is not as peaceful as we expected, then a lot of money in the U.S. that went into consumer spending and capital investment may now have to go back to defense, and that's going to shock the budget here."

As the Dow ended its week at 7640.25, it was approaching one of the standard benchmarks for a bear market: a 20% drop from a previous peak. Many investors, though, have been in a quiet bear market for several months; that's because, during the last stages of the run-up in the Dow and the S&P 500, most of the increase was accounted for by such large companies as Coca-Cola and Microsoft; many smaller stocks were left behind. In the S&P 500, virtually all the gains in share prices in recent months were made by the 50 largest. At the same time, the Russell 2000 index of smaller stocks—traditionally favored by many individual investors—was off 29% from its April high. And as of Monday, the average stock in the New York Stock Exchange was off 38% this year. Even before last week, nearly half of U.S. domestic stock funds were losing money for the year.

Several economists see the current market as an untraditional bear market or, as Harvinder Kalirai, an economist at the consulting group I.D.E.A., sees it, what's happening on Wall Street is "a cyclical bear in a secular bull market. This is a cyclical fluctuation." The longer-term or secular trend in the market, though, "is still high."

Many individual investors also hold that faith. Dennis Lese, 52, an executive with Amoco Corp. in Chicago, says that he is staying in the market but that the six-figure losses he suffered last week have caused him to postpone his planned early retirement. "I was thinking about retiring and living off stocks," he says. "But now I think I'll work a few more years."

Others seemed content to ride it out, in the knowledge that the gains of the past few years will cushion the impact of a down market now. "Anyone with brains knows the thing to do is to sit back and wait," says Stephanie Rubin, 52, an executive with a search firm in Chicago who has about $300,000 in stocks. "If it's down 25% on paper, it doesn't bother me because it's money tied up in an IRA account. I'm not going to touch this money till I'm 65."

Some people who were actively playing the market, however, were singing a different tune. "I was panicking," said Alan Herkowitz, 39, a New York systems analyst and a self-described "short-term trader" who invests "play money" in the market.

One of the biggest worries in a sustained market downturn is that it might depress consumer confidence and spending. Contrary to popular belief, though, bit stock market drops alone rarely herald recessions. According to a study by Peter Temin, an economics professor at M.I.T., falling stock prices directly caused only one minor economic downturn in this century, in 1903.

But a slumping stock market can certainly add to the drag on a slowing economy, through the so-called wealth effect. In a rising market, economists estimate that for every dollar of increased wealth, consumers spend an additional 4 [cents]. And they often stop spending that money when their stock gains erode. If $2 trillion has been lost from investors' pockets over the past seven weeks, then at 4 [cents] on the dollar we could expect an $80 billion drop in annual consumer spending, or about 1% of the total U.S. economy. While that alone is not enough to stop the economy from growing, economists say, it could combine with the global currency crisis to tip the U.S. into recession later this year or in early 1999.

A persistent stock market decline can also hurt the economy by making companies more cautious about expansion and hiring. "If the stock price isn't doing well," says John Lonski, chief economist for Moody's Investors Service, "shareholders will put pressure on management to cut costs to improve returns." That usually means layoffs and plant closings, which "ripple through the economy" as laid-off people cut spending.

Pushing against these negative currents, fortunately, is the persistent, fundamental strength of the U.S. economy. The trend in wages and employment, which wield far more influence over consumer confidence and spending than stock prices, remains strong. As she placed a tortilla warmer in her shopping cart last week at a store in Nashville, Tenn., Sue Allison, 53, a public relations officer for the Tennessee supreme court, observed that "there are a million people out tonight spending $90 on nothing, just as I am. My husband and I won't touch [our retirement stocks] for at least 15 years, so I don't worry about short-term losses." In fact, aside from corporate profits and stock prices, most other leading indicators are pointing briskly upward. Orders from American factories rose 1.2% in July, the strongest performance since November. As investors around the globe sought a safe haven for their capital, long-term interest rates continued their slide to 5.3%, a silver lining for the U.S. in the cloud over emerging markets. Those low rates in turn have boosted the used-housing market, which recorded an all-time high of houses sold in July. Housing values, another important factor in Americans' calculation of their wealth, are rising smartly at about 5% a year. Unemployment stands at 4.5%, nearly a 28-year low, and only 1.8% for those with college degrees. Thanks to rising productivity, real wages have been rising for the first time in nearly three decades without spurring inflation. The U.S. growth rate, while down from its feverish 5.5% in the first quarter, is still expected to register 2%-plus for the rest of the year. The only skunk at this picnic is the Asian, Russian and Latin financial crisis, estimated to have knocked about 2.5 percentage points off second-quarter growth of 1.5%.

If recession comes, economists say, the cause will be the inability of countries such as Brazil, Indonesia, Malaysia, Mexico and Venezuela to buy as many U.S. exports with their devalued currencies—and the hit on U.S. wages and corporate earnings as cheap imports from those countries grab a greater share of the U.S. consumer's wallet.

At Nucor Corp., a $4 billion North Carolina steelmaker, the global tumult has hit home in both ways. Nucor's exports are down, falling globally from an annual rate two years ago of 700,000 tons to the present 30,000 tons, much of which is accounted for by Asian markets. But far more worrisome is the tough competition in the U.S. market from cheap steel made in Japan, Korea and Russia. Currency devaluations in those countries have made their products cheap for American buyers, says chairman Ken Iverson. "The U.S. is the only economy left that's doing well, so they're going to ship it all here." That makes America the consumer of last resort—a lifeline to many foreign economies, but at a heavy cost to many U.S. companies and workers. Again, such disruptions quickly get capitalized into stock prices: Nucor shares have fallen from $61 a year ago to $39 last week.

Another North Carolina company feeling the pain is Beacon Sweets, which makes, among other products, "gummi watches" (gelatin candy in the shape of a watch). Although most of its business is domestic, Beacon had begun to grow in China, Korea, Singapore, the Philippines and Japan. But over the past year, Beacon has seen its export business evaporate. Says Stephen Berkowitz, an executive vice president: "Our business in those countries has absolutely dried up as a result of currency devaluations."

Perhaps the greatest risk to both the U.S. and global economies is that today's hard times could bring a rising tide of global protectionism, including controls not only on trade but also on flows of capital. With the leadership in Russia and Japan virtually paralyzed, and President Clinton distracted by his personal problems there is a danger that the trend toward freer markets could be reversed. This is already happening in places like Malaysia, which last week imposed foreign-exchange controls hurtful to multinational firms in the U.S. and elsewhere—not to mention to Malaysia itself, which will be hard pressed to attract investment. Nor is the U.S. immune. If unemployment begins to rise, blame will quickly attach to the rock-eting U.S. trade deficit—one of the most immediate effects of the crisis in Asia—and will tempt members of Congress to impose new limits on imports. That, more than any other factor, could eventually lead to a significant recession in this country and others. "What we need is leadership," says Hugh Johnson, chief investment strategist at First Albany, a brokerage firm. "Without it, we have a vacuum, and the market always hates that."

For Clinton, much is at stake. The rising market and robust economy have long boosted his approval rating and made both his allies and his adversaries loath to cross him. A significant downturn in the economy, or a longer stock decline than expected, could make Americans feel much less patient with his foibles, and could embolden his enemies. Studies of polling show that a sour economy in 1973-74 contributed significantly to Americans' disgust with President Richard Nixon in the later stages of the Watergate scandal.

For American investors too, much is at stake. One of the worst things they could do is let rising volatility and uncertainty drive them out of stock investments. Returns on stocks have far outdistanced most other investments over time, producing an average annual return, after inflation, of 6.4% from 1927 through 1995, which includes the period when stocks struggled to regain the highs they reached before the 1929 crash and the Great Depression. Investors can also take heart that the stock market usually bounces back far more quickly than it did in the 1930s. In nine of the 11 months where the S&P 500 lost 4% or more since October 1987, returns were positive within two months of the drop. In all cases, including the 1987 crash, the market returned to positive returns within six months. As TIME's Dan Kadlec explains in the following story, most investors should stay with stocks, except when handling money they might need within the next three years.

For all its problems, Harnischfeger offers encouragement to other Americans at this uncertain time. Folks at the Wisconsin company have earned higher wages and have been able to educate their children better because of the profits they have reaped from the unprecedented spread of global commerce and free trade. But the price of that prosperity is a global economy so interlinked that the troubles of America's trading partners very quickly become its troubles too, even when America's domestic economy is showing remarkable resilience, as it is now. Harnischfeger's managers believe they are in for a rough ride for several quarters, but that the company's future, like that of the American economy, is bright over the longer term. Says Francis Corby Jr., the company's executive vice president for finance and administration: "We'll bounce back." They always have.

EXCERPTS

WHEN THE DOW BREAKS

Monday, Aug. 31—

Tuesday, Sept. 1—Financial and political turmoil in Asia and Russia trigger a plunge in the Dow on Monday, but bargain hunters help it recover more than half its loss on Tuesday, setting a record for trading volume.

Wednesday, Sept. 2—Stocks drift down slightly in relatively light trading as exhausted investors await signs of the market's direction.

Thursday, Sept. 3—Worries of an economic slowdown and lagging corporate profits contribute to the Dow's sixth drop in seven days.

Friday, Sept. 4—A burst of bargain hunting late in the day erases most of a sharp decline on Friday, leaving the Dow down 411 for the week.

A LITTLE PERSPECTIVE

A Short-Term Loss—If you had invested $10,000 in the S&P 500 at the market's peak on July 17, it would have been worth $8,206 on Sept. 4, after last week's market drop.

An Even Year—But if you had invested $10,000 12 months ago, on Sept. 1, 1997, it would now be worth $10,827.

A Long-Term Gain—And if you had invested $10,000 on the eve of the big market plunge a decade ago, on Oct. 19, 1987, your investment by now would be worth $34,450.—Source: Datastream

Mr. HARKIN. One argument against lowering interest rates is that our unemployment levels are already low. Some say that our current rate of unemployment at 4.5 percent is too low, companies cannot find workers and will be forced to pay more, hurting their profits, hurting the economy.

Businesses have surprised many economists by creating multiple ways to improve efficiency. Of course, more can and should be done. I believe there is room for additional job growth. Companies have also been effective at finding new employees who were not actively looking for work and were, therefore, not counted as unemployed.

We need economic growth to continue in order to improve wages, to bring still more people into the labor force, to give those working part time the chance to work full time, and to provide opportunity for those on welfare, and for those who have entered the workforce at the bottom rung, to start moving up the ladder.

With only those looking for work counted as unemployed, there are still millions of others not counted as unemployed who could be brought into the workforce. As difficult as it may be to find workers now, this will be viewed as a small problem compared to a serious economic downturn, a recession, and deflation.

Again, if inflation should start to accelerate we can always apply the brakes and whatever inflation may have occurred can be reduced. But to forever limit our growth to a preset limit blocks Americans from the opportunity of reaching their full potential.

If we do move to deflation, if we go into a serious recession at this point, without America's strength, the world's economy could sink to Depression-era levels.

For the sake of our farmers and our small business owners, for hard-working Americans, and the rest of our economy, and for countries around the world, I sincerely hope that Chairman Greenspan and the Federal Open Market Committee do not misjudge the current economic indicators in the U.S. and worldwide economies.

While I am pleased that Chairman Greenspan recently hinted at a possible rate cut, I am afraid the Federal Open Market Committee may have already misjudged the ominous economic signs that are out there. I only hope it is not too late. That is why, Mr. President, the Senate must send a clear signal to the Federal Reserve: Lower interest rates now.

The Fed must show that it has as much concern for the jobs of American workers as it has for the interests of U.S. investors throughout the world. An immediate cut in interest rates will give our economy the boost it needs to maintain its strength during the next year as the fragile nature of many economies throughout the world recovers.

So, Mr. President, that is what we need—for this Senate to send a clear signal that we have looked at the economy, we have listened to our constituents, we have been out in our States; we see it, we feel it, we know it. Things are declining—I can tell you that—in the farm sector and in rural America. We know what is happening worldwide. Now is the time for the Fed to act for a significant cut in interest rates.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. GRASSLEY addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I had asked one of the smartest people in the Senate on this issue, Senator DOMENICI, to debate it. And there is going to be some discussion of this amendment tomorrow before we vote on it. At that time, Senator DOMENICI will speak about it for our side. But I also want to address the issue shortly, but not from the standpoint of the merits of where interest rates ought to be, but just the issue of whether or not it is appropriate to do this on this bankruptcy legislation, as well as the whole issue of whether or not Congress should try to interfere with the issue of the Federal Reserve deciding what the interest rate should be. Because I think it is fair to assume that we want to make sure that interest rates are appropriate. But who should make that decision?

So I offer this advice to my colleagues on this amendment offered by my colleague from our State of Iowa, Senator HARKIN.

While we are all for lower interest rates, I think this amendment should be opposed because of the traditional separation of the Federal Reserve from the political process. What we generally speak of is the independence of the Federal Reserve System. For short, we all speak of the independence of the Fed.

This country has a very long history of protecting the work of the Federal Reserve from political manipulation. Since the 1930s, Congress has gently refrained from passing legislation in an attempt to influence monetary policy. In fact, according to the Congressional Research Service, in the past 25 years, Congress has acted on only five occasions on legislation that affects the Federal Reserve System. Most of these actions have been in the form of non-binding resolutions or report language. So congressional action of a statutory nature has been rare, and when it has been done whenever Congress has spoken on this issue, it seems it has had a very tempered approach. Maybe we ought to say that this sense of the Senate is a tempered approach in the sense that it doesn't change statute, but still it is an attempt by a political body to influence a part of our government that we have always tried to keep immune and separated from politics.

There is a sound reason for keeping the Fed independent of this political process. It is because we in this body, whether we want to admit it or not, tend to think too much for the short-term. We tend to think in terms of the next election rather than the next generation. Too often, it is even more personal than that—what can I do to increase my chances of reelection? These short-term policies, as we too often find out, can lead to long-run disasters.

While increasing the money supply can put more people to work prior to an election, of course, it can lead to crippling inflation in the long run. The Fed appropriately is not subjected to the pressures to do something potentially reckless for the purpose of short-term gain. This policy has served us well for generations and the U.S. economy remains the envy of the world because of it. In fact, in this decade alone, many nations have followed the lead that the United States has practiced for over 60 years. They have done this by bringing more independence to their own central banks. Great Britain, under a new labor Prime Minister, has moved to make the Bank of England more independent. Other European Union nations in their new union have committed to an independent central bank upon the creation of that monetary union which starts January 1, 1999.

Furthermore, every nation that has faced a monetary crisis in recent memory has attempted in the name of reform to keep its central bank from political influences. We saw it in Mexico just 3½ years ago when the peso declined so rapidly in Mexico. They have moved in that direction. We see it today in Japan, Korea, and Thailand. A major reason for each of their economic problems, of course, is the cronyism in bank lending practices and political influence over the banking systems. Maybe another way to say it is too much of an incestuous relationship between their corporations and their government, between their bank and their government, to a point where there was no arm's length transactions; the marketplace did not work appropriately. Nobody had to make a sound business judgment because there was always somebody there to bail them out.

These people now, after the crisis in Southeast Asia, have begun to see the wisdom of a central bank, free of political influence. We should recognize the wisdom of it, as well.

As I said earlier, we are all for low interest rates. The relatively low interest rate environment that we currently enjoy has allowed millions of Americans to purchase a home for the first time. It has kept the cost of doing business for small business and farmers down. It has helped the Federal Government reduce its budget deficit by reducing the costs of the national debt.

Instead of pointing fingers at the Fed, Congress should instead focus on the things that are within its authority that lead to lower interest rates, like balancing the budget and reducing Government borrowing. We have been on this course now for the last 3 or 4 years. So, September 30th of this year for the first time we can tell the people we finished the fiscal year not only with the budget balanced but with paying down, probably 60-billion-some dollars, on the national debt.

During this 30-year period of irresponsible Federal spending in which the national debt has been run up to $5.4 billion, and without the changes made in the last 3 or 4 years, at the end of the Clinton administration the debt could have gone to $6.7 billion—at least that is what we were projecting in the 1994 budget resolution discussions. During this period of time of 30 years the Fed has been a counterbalance to an irresponsible Congress, trying to make sure that inflation was kept down as a result of fiscal policy that would tend to drive interest rates up for the Federal Government because the Federal Government always stands first in line for credit and is always willing to pay more and will pay more than any other borrower would pay or have to pay.

Congress has sole constitutional authority over the fiscal policy of this country, and in many respects fiscal policy has had as big an impact on interest rates as monetary policy. For instance, interest rates will remain relatively high as long as the Federal Government is competing with borrowers for money. That is why I find it interesting that often the same Members who want to direct monetary policy at the Fed tend to vote against sound fiscal policies such as balancing the budget and reducing Government spending.

If a Congress did its job of managing fiscal policy better, maybe we wouldn't have to worry so much about what the policy of the Federal Reserve is. Now we are in a position of balancing the budget, paying down some on the national debt, not having the Federal Government eating up all of the total credit that is needed, the Federal Reserve job will be much, much easier.

In short, I oppose these efforts to subject the decisionmaking of the Federal Reserve to the vagaries of the political process. By most accounts, the Fed has been largely responsible for this period of unprecedented economic growth fueled by both low interest rates and low inflation. So I say that we should stay on course that Congresses for the past 60 years have laid out for us, and that is keeping the Fed free of political influence that has led to economic calamities in so many other parts of the world.

I yield the floor.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I just want to respond a little bit to my colleague from Iowa by again pointing out to Senators that while we do respect the independence of the Fed, as we say, some argue that it is not even appropriate to debate monetary policy or to send signals to the Fed.

I say to my colleague from Iowa, as William Jackson at the Congressional Research Service writes in the report to Congress, Constitutional authority to regulate the value of money, and by implication, to determine monetary policy, rests with Congress, article I, section 8 of the Constitution.

This authority has been largely delegated to the Federal Reserve by the Federal Reserve Act, as amended. Nonetheless, the Fed, as a creature of law, may have its policies dictated as well as its structure changed by Congress. Since the 1930s, Congress has generally declined from doing either. But in the past 25 years, Congress has occasionally legislated more Fed accountability, with an aim towards influencing policy. And Congress has periodically enacted nonbinding language to express its monetary policy preferences to the Fed, with the implication that more structural changes could be forthcoming in the absence of policy response by Fed officials.

Again, I think it is not only our right but our duty as Senators to debate monetary policy and to give our thoughts and guidance and direction to the Fed.

The Federal Reserve, I keep reminding people, is nowhere mentioned in the Constitution of the United States. It is not a separate branch of government. It is not something that is under executive powers enumerated in the Constitution. The Constitution gave Congress the power to coin money and regulate the value thereof. Of course, we don't want to do that. I would hate to see us do that. So we delegate it. We set up the Federal Reserve with the Federal Reserve Act. We amended it many times to do that. And it has worked well.

But it still means that as policymakers we have a right and, I think, an obligation to send guidance and direction to the Fed about what is happening in the economy and what they ought to do. The last time the Senate debated a sense of the Congress calling on the Federal Reserve to lower interest rates was on December 19, 1982. It passed by a vote of 93 to nothing here in the Senate. Ninety-three to nothing the Senate passed a sense-of-the-Senate resolution asking the Fed to lower interest rates.

Again, given all of the recent support for interest rate cuts in the business community by economists, editorial boards, and political leaders on both sides of the aisle, I see no reason why the Senate should not vote unanimously, again, urging the Fed to lower interest rates to stem what I and others—not only myself but a lot of others, from conservative to more liberal economists all over America—are saying: there are ominous signs of a possible recession in the U.S. economy.

As I said, even the Chairman of the Fed himself, Chairman Greenspan, has moved in this direction recently. He said encouraging things about the need to perhaps cut interest rates. But I am fearful that the rest of the Federal Open Market Committee hasn't gotten the word yet.

I think we need to send them the word that what we see as policymakers in our daily lives, what we see in our States, what we see in terms of the issues that we deal with in the Senate, that we see an economy that is going down from a 5.5 percent growth rate last quarter down to 1.6 percent next quarter. We see rapidly falling commodity prices, especially in the farm sector. We see wages beginning to stagnate. We see the 30-year Treasury bonds now lower than the Federal funds rate. There are some very ominous signs out there.

This amendment is designed to simply exercise not only our right but, I believe, our obligation as Senators to debate this situation.

Of course, if Senators don't agree that is what is happening—that indeed there may be a recession out there, that there are some signs of falling commodity prices, for example, and of worldwide recession—I guess people can debate that. Obviously, if Senators feel the other way, they obviously should not vote for a sense-of-the-Congress amendment like this. But I hope that Senators who feel that they shouldn't vote against it because Congress has no right telling the Fed what to do—I would just say look at the history.

I will have more to say tomorrow about the many times Congress has passed some legislation, or sense-of-the-Senate, or sense-of-the-Congress resolution giving guidance and direction to the Fed. I hope that we will exercise not only our right but I believe our obligation to do so.

I yield the floor.

Mr. GRASSLEY addressed the Chair. The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BROWNBACK). The Senator from Iowa.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, my colleague from Iowa has accurately stated what the Constitution says and what we can do. I don't have any dispute with that. The only dispute I would have is whether or not it would be wise for Congress to do that after we have had such a success of building confidence in the economy when there is an absence of congressional manipulation of monetary policy. I fear if there is a perception in the private sector of Congress from time to time making an impact upon monetary policy, that is going to build in protection for people who are investing and, consequently, drive interest rates up. We don't want that to happen.

I yield the floor. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

UNANIMOUS CONSENT REQUEST— S. 2176

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate now proceed to S. 2176, the Vacancy Act.

Mr. BYRD addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from West Virginia.

Mr. BYRD. Reserving the right to object Mr. President, I have advocated the passage of this bill. On a number of occasions I have asked the leader to proceed with this bill as soon as he could do so. And I introduced the legislation several months ago—I believe last year even—that went to the committee chaired by the distinguished Senator from Tennessee, Mr. THOMPSON. I asked the chairman to hold hearings on the bill, which he did. I appeared before the committee and spoke in support of the bill.

And that bill has been reported from the committee with some changes, which I support. So I support this bill 100 percent. But I am constrained to object this evening because of one or two colleagues on my side of the aisle who wish to object. I am sorry to have to do that. But with that explanation, Mr. President, I do object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

FEDERAL VACANCIES REFORM ACT OF 1998—MOTION TO PROCEED

CLOTURE MOTION

Mr. GRASSLEY. With all respect to the Senator from West Virginia—and his explanation I think is very clear—in light of that explanation, I now move to proceed to S. 2176, and I send a cloture motion to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The cloture motion having been presented under rule XXII, the Chair directs the clerk to read the motion.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

CLOTURE MOTION

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I be added as a signatory to the cloture motion.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, for the information of all Senators, this cloture vote will occur on Thursday, at a time to be determined. In the meantime, I ask unanimous consent that the mandatory quorum under rule XXII be waived.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GRASSLEY. I now withdraw the motion, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The motion is withdrawn.

MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I now ask unanimous consent that there be a period for the transaction of morning business with Senators permitted to speak for up to 5 minutes each.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

EFFORTS TO LEGALIZE MARIJUANA

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, yesterday, my colleague Senator GRASSLEY introduced Senate Joint Resolution 56, a bill cosponsored by Senator KYL and me that expresses the sense of Congress in opposing efforts in various States to legalize marijuana and other Schedule I drugs for so-called medical use. I am proud to be a cosponsor of this bill, and I want everyone to understand that current drug laws should not be circumvented by allowing illegal harmful drugs to be introduced freely in our society.

Last week, an identical measure sponsored by Congressman MCCOLLUM passed in the House of Representatives by a vote of 310 to 93.

Mr. President, proponents of legalization argue that marijuana and other drugs are needed by those living with pain and disease. They stress that these drugs improve the quality of life and should not be denied to those suffering. I understand their argument that we need to be compassionate to those that are suffering. My heart goes out to those people living with disease and to the families that care for them. Nevertheless, those arguments are flawed, and we cannot allow this legalization effort to contravene our Federal drug laws.

In 1996, the Judiciary Committee held a hearing and examined the drug legalization initiatives in California and Arizona. We heard testimony from many of those involved in the war on drugs including General Barry R. McCaffrey, Director, Office of National Drug Control Policy, and Mr. Thomas A. Constantine, Administrator, Drug Enforcement Administration. As a result of chairing that hearing, I learned that there is overwhelming evidence showing that marijuana is not a medicine and that its use by those suffering from cancer and other diseases is contradicted by the many side effects of the drug use. The testimony given at that hearing proved to me that the growing legalization movement in our States is harmful to the very people they are proposing to help.

As many of you know, I have not been afraid to speak out and to urge that this administration do more to stem the rising tide against teenage drug abuse in our country. Illegal drug use by teenagers is one of the most serious domestic problems facing our Nation today: in my mind, it may be the most crucial issue for our Nation's ability to craft productive and law-abiding citizens. The worsening problem of drug abuse among our children and teens wreaks havoc on the lives and potential of thousands of young people each year. Legalization movements send a confusing message to the Nation's youth and threaten to increase the already alarming rise in drug use among teenagers. If we do not act decisively, we will pay a heavy price.

For example, the results of the latest National Household Survey on Drug Abuse found that drug use among our children is climbing at an alarming rate. The number of children ages 12 to 17 using illicit drugs has more than doubled since 1992. Between 1996 and 1997 alone, drug use among 12- and 13-year-olds increased almost 75 percent.

The abuse of marijuana, a drug many widely consider a gateway drug to more serious substance abuse, more than doubled among children between 1992 and 1997, increasing 75 percent between 1996 and 1997 alone. Not surprisingly, the rate of minors first trying heroin is at its highest level in 30 years, and the rate of minors trying cocaine and hallucinogens has more than doubled in the 90's.

Although deeply troubling, this disturbing trend should come as no surprise to this administration. I warned this administration as early as 1993 that its failure to take the issue seriously and take strong action to fight drug abuse would prove disastrous to our children. Unfortunately, the evidence is now in and my predictions were all too prophetic to the great detriment of our children and future generations.

Our country's laws prohibiting narcotic and dangerous drug use are not arbitrary. These laws are designed to protect our children and to protect mature adults from harmful chemicals. These laws should be fully enforced because they help prevent drug experimentation and drug addiction.

Promoting the use of marijuana for so-called medical purposes is nothing more than a sham effort to legalize drugs through the back door. If we do not act decisively, we will pay a heavy price.

In the words of General McCaffrey, our Drug Czar, "[addictive drugs were criminalized because they are harmful; they are not harmful because they were criminalized.]" The more a product is available and legitimized, the greater will be its use. If drugs were legalized in the U.S., the cost to the individual and society would grow astronomically.

The Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act is the key law by which legitimate drug products are evaluated and regulated in this country. A central precept of this law is that all drugs be proven safe and effective under their labeled indications. Proponents of medicinal uses of marijuana should not be exempt from this basic public health requirement. Anecdotal reports that marijuana may be beneficial should not cloud the fact that only controlled clinical trials can meet the exacting licensure requirements of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act. If there is, in fact, a medical benefit from marijuana then it is imperative that the necessary scientific studies be conducted to assess and confirm such benefit. To date, proponents of medical uses of marijuana have been unwilling or unable to come through the front door of the FDA with evidence of its safety and efficacy. The pharmacological armamentarium contains many proven drugs to treat pain. It is poor public policy to acquiesce in back door mechanisms that permit unsafe and unproven products like marijuana to reach the bedsides of American patients.

I believe this to be an important resolution and urge my colleagues to join me and Senators GRASSLEY and KYL in sending a clear message to those who advocate the legalization of marijuana and other Schedule I drugs for medical use in our States. I ask for their support when this joint resolution comes to the floor.

INAUGURAL ADDRESS OF HIS EXCELLENCY ANDRES PASTRANA ARANGO, PRESIDENT OF COLOMBIA

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, on August 7, 1998, Andres Pastrana Arango was sworn in as the 60th President of Colombia, 28 years after his father, Misael Pastrana, took the same oath of office. A former journalist, mayor of Bogota, and Senator, president candidate Andres Pastrana swept into office with the largest electoral margin in his country's history.

With the election of President Pastrana I believe that a new opportunity has been created for the United States and Colombia to work closely together to deal with issues of mutual concern to our two countries. I very much hope that both of our governments will take advantage of this opening because it is in the interests of both countries that we do so.

In his inaugural speech of August 7, President Pastrana set forth his agenda for his term of office. Breaking the stranglehold of major narcotrafficking organizations and bringing peace to Colombia are among President Pastrana's highest priorities. During the course of his address, he laid out his plans to end the 34 year old civil war and to counter drug trafficking and the violence and corruption it brings with it. In order to tackle the financial, political and social problems of his country, he also pledged to undertake a complete turnaround in Colombia's Government during his administration.

I believe that President Pastrana has been very quick in shaping the outline of policies and programs that should help to strengthen democratic institutions in Colombia and respect for human rights. His inaugural address gives me hope that the United States working together with the Government of Colombia can make that a reality. I would urge my colleagues to take the opportunity to read for themselves President Pastrana's Inaugural address. I ask unanimous consent that his address be printed in full at the conclusion of my remarks.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection; it is so ordered. (See Exhibit 1.)

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, President Pastrana is visiting the United States this week, and the Committee on Foreign Relations will have the honor of receiving him on September 24. At that time we will have an opportunity to discuss at length President Pastrana's vision for his country. I look forward to the opportunity to do so.

EXHIBIT 1

INAUGURAL SPEECH AS PRESIDENT OF THE REPUBLIC BY MR. ANDRÉS PASTRANA ARANGO

This day is not only mine, but of all of us Colombians. The solemn oath that I have taken today before almighty God and before you is a sacrament of our democracy. It is an oath pronounced throughout our history that, in this case, acquires a greater dimension since it requires that we likewise succeed in the fulfillment of our obligations and not repeat the errors of the past. Proud of our heritage, we are now going to seek the best for our future.

We are not only conferring the presidency upon me today; we are also inaugurating a new era for Colombia on the right path. I make a commitment to myself and to you to govern without privileges nor discriminations, but for all Colombians. Those who hold the highest positions in government shall have the greatest obligations under the law, and those who think that power gives one the right to break the law shall not govern. Put simply, there shall be no room for corruption in my administration and it shall not be tolerated nor forgiven. I want—and I shall accept nothing less—this administration to go down in history as the cleanest of all administrations.

Within the immense margin of our challenges, let us risk facing the big changes that we need. Let us again trust that our cities and our countryside become safe and peaceful. Let us believe that once again our industry and our agriculture will prosper, that our children will receive a good education, that their health will be protected, and that their parents will be safe from the scourge of unemployment.

Fulfilling these expectations implies serious and sustained efforts, a common cause and the uncommon courage to gather new ideas and be willing to never quit nor give up.

For change does not happen in a week, a month, or a year. Perhaps, it will not even be complete at the end of this administration. We are at the dawn of a new era, not yet in its splendor. But change begins today.

We have vast natural resources but, more importantly, great human talent. If we prepare ourselves conscientiously, we should not fear the economy's globalization. On the contrary, we shall welcome it and we shall compete and prosper within it.

I see a Colombia proudly acknowledged in our hemisphere and in the entire world, for navigating through the prodigies of cyberspace and not in the artificial paradises of cocaine. I see a proud Colombia, with enough authority to challenge other nations to control their own drug demand, because we were able to combat our own country's supply and demand.

As President, I shall not surrender even a bit of our sovereignty, but I shall appeal to the entire country to comply with the law and to build the prosperity that shall make Colombia a magnet for investment with its modern economy.

We shall look for prosperity not only in industry and enterprise, but also in agriculture, which has been abused for many years without being paid its due. We are going to invest more in the countryside. Let us not forget that the land is the soul of Colombia and that those who cultivate it are the soul of the land.

Colombians, during my campaign I proposed ten great changes. Each one of them is equally important and they shall all be promoted. We must try again, and trust once again, that we can change and attain a better country. I ask for your help, for, more than the decisions of a President, it is your hands that shall mold the final substance of our efforts.

To the people of Colombia, I owe the privilege of being the leader that shall close the doors of the 20th century and open those of the 21st century, towards the vast horizon of the Third Millennium. I have been given the responsibility of continuing and improving, wherever possible, the accomplishments of other leaders. But more than six million Colombians, and a broad consensus of the country, have chosen me to find the road to this Promised Land that Colombia should be.

A COLOMBIA IN PEACE

A very wise Spanish saying says, "Without peace, there is no bread". Therefore, first of all, I want peace, which means peace and bread. And it is the Promised Land that we yearn for, a Colombia in peace.

But reconciliation requires a government that is able to organize collective leadership for peace. This implies sacrifices, requires renunciation, and demands serious commitments that would be sterile, as long as Cain continues killing Abel.

The President of the Republic assumes the non-renounceable leadership of building peace. Do not expect me to build a bureaucracy for peace. As of now, I invite all Colombians to continue and to work within the "Agenda for Peace" that I am going to lead.

It must be clear for every one that I shall recover for the State the monopoly of force for peace, social justice, and the happiness of the Colombian people. Every minute that we save on war is an investment in life. International cooperation in our peace processes should not be viewed as the inability to build it ourselves, but as a new way of making peace.

The call to peace as a necessary condition for the country's project is evident. But peace demands the transformation of the human energy of animosity, which is characteristic of wars, into vital energy for the reconstruction of a new Colombia.

It is precisely this vital energy that should not permit that violent acts, like those of recent days, occur again; acts that fill me, like their families and all my countrymen, with pain. They do not contribute to the atmosphere of understanding that we, myself personally and my entire administration, are ready to propitiate by putting all of our efforts into it.

The first question is that of identity. What is Colombia and what do we want it to be? Historically, the nation looked for its identity in a homogeneity that was excluding, which despised diversity or nullified it. A country demanded a religion, a language, and even a dominant ethnic group. From dictatorial positions or from republican pacts, these conditions of identity were being imposed for an indefinite time to conform other systems of power. A subsequent evolution, particularly the current one, demonstrates that those that have been excluded in any way, usually demand, with great violence, the acknowledgment of their existence and their right to participate. The point is that the identity of the new Colombia that faces the challenges of the 21st century and is handed over to the new generations must be inclusive of Colombian diversity, not exclusive, as it has been until now for a significant number of Colombians. Keeping the nation united must be the origin and the end of this historic determination in favor of peace.

A MODEL FOR DEVELOPMENT AND SOCIAL JUSTICE

I receive a country with seriously affected economic indicators and with its public finances in ruin. I, therefore, intend to do an inventory of the conditions in which I received them. But we shall also promptly present, in the coming weeks, the great guidelines of the measures to be taken in order to bring Colombia out of the situation in which we found it.

A fundamental part of this recovery program is budget adjustments. Our country cannot continue to carelessly spend beyond its possibilities. If we did so, the already serious unemployment situation that we inherited would be even more overwhelming. And the imbalances everywhere would make the economy unmanageable and would commit the development of the country for a long time. Therefore we shall rigorously dedicate ourselves, from the very first days of this administration, to putting the fiscal house in order.

But we shall not only organize public finances. We also have to reactivate an equitable economic growth. The development plan that the administration must submit to Congress within the first six months, as stated by the Constitution, shall be the opportunity to draft the navigational chart that shall permit us to open the doors of the 21st century to a society with better and more equal growth. In this purpose, the search for peace is not only a common yearning but also an intelligent strategy for economic development. Peace is the most urgent task on our country's agenda and the best social contract that we can make towards the future.

DRUG TRAFFICKING

We must take advantage of the closing of the century to do an inventory of the serious damage caused to society by drug trafficking. Ecologically, there is no doubt that it is the main predator of large areas of Colombian territory, which is valued in the world for the diversity of its environmental treasures.

Not to mention, the increase in corruption, whose effect on institutions has become one of the most fatal aggressors that the Colombian State has confronted in all its history. Or the increase in violence, due to easy money for the attainment of objectives that used to be the fruit of years and years of honest labor. Or the increase in drug use.

If Colombia survives in spite of so many misfortunes, it is only because of the moral fortitude of a people that has known how to face them. But let us not ask it for more miracles.

THE "PEACE FUND" WITH TRI-PARTITE CONTRIBUTIONS

In order to reach this national objective, besides the political initiatives that we are implementing, peace shall be the common thread of the next development plan. It shall be funded by tri-partite contributions from different sources. Firstly, the government itself, which, as a consequence of the austerity program to be undertaken, shall free significant resources to be earmarked for strategic investments for peace. Secondly, contributions from the international community that has demonstrated its interest in collaborating financially to acclimatize peace in Colombia. And thirdly, monies that wealthy Colombians shall contribute, through a "Peace Bond of Compulsory Subscription", whose authorization we shall request from Congress, and through which the valuable demonstrations of so many good-willed Colombians may become concrete.

As I said in my campaign, we shall submit a bill before Congress that shall permit the gradual reduction of the Aggregated Value Tax while simultaneously and forcefully combating current tax evasion. Moreover, once the fiscal adjustment program yields results, we shall propose a reduction of income tax rates for those companies generating new employment.

OUR FOREIGN POLICY

The transparent and categorical mandate that I have received from the Colombian people must also transform our international position in order to carry out a foreign policy with a broad consensus, that is coherent and systematic, that overcomes the exclusivism of any group, region, or party. Our diplomacy shall be efficient, able to work without disadvantages, respectful of commitments and aware of its non-renounceable dignity and its well-earned rights.

I am convinced that the irreversible purpose of globalization demands a more equitable international order. We do not want to be simple spectators but, rather, diligent actors in this new world commitment.

I am aware that our international agenda demands a different way of looking at it. We do not reject responsibility. We assume it. Our foreign policy shall be aimed at strengthening our negotiating power with regards to fundamental issues on the global agenda. We shall reaffirm our commitment to the promotion and defense of human rights and International Humanitarian Law, with acts and effective actions.

As President of the Republic, I shall fully exercise the constitutional duty of leading foreign relations, aware that the leadership of the Head of State in a regime like ours is irreplaceable.

Our foreign policy shall be guided by the protection of Colombia's essential rights. We share the great principles contained in the United Nations Charter and in the instruments of the Inter American system. Colombia's international word is sacred to us. We defend the sanctity of treaties and the good faith in relations among States. We have always supported the pacific and negotiated solution to conflicts. National heritage is the product of law, never of force or of arbitrary imposition. We believe in the force of multilateralism, in the collective action organized to confront problems and to prevent and resolve divergences and conflicts.

Venezuela is the country with which Colombia has made more progress in economic integration. The strong historic and cultural ties that unite us shall permit us to foster understanding in all areas in order to continue making progress in the process of binational integration and in the consolidation of the Andean Community of Nations in order to project it to the entire continent.

The United States, as hemispheric power and because it is the biggest and most advanced economy in the world, is a fundamental country for Colombia's international relations. We also begin a new era of understanding and trust with them, which will permit the diversification of our common agenda so as to continue on the road of true cooperation, more as brothers than as good neighbors.

Regarding Europe and the Pacific Basin countries, we shall continue strengthening our economic and cultural relations, as well as the ties among the various integration blocks that exist today. In this respect, we shall assign particular importance to the European Union, Latin American and Caribbean Summit that will take place next year, as a result of the dialogue between the European Union and the Rio Group.

Colombia embarks today on search of the international community, to re-assume the leadership that belongs to it in the "New World" design.

SOCIAL JUSTICE

This is evident: peace is not possible without social justice. Colombia is a society torn by social distances. It is urgent, therefore, to improve the distribution of national wealth, to make society cohesive and direct it towards peace, through education, health and employment.

The world is changing in giant leaps. Society has discovered that its great source of wealth is no longer mineral but human. To invest in it, as well as in our natural resources, is the change that will make us strong. And this, in turn, compels us to reflect upon the meaning of continued fighting over scarce material resources instead of strengthening our democracy and developing our industry and our trade, based on human resources, education, technology, and science.

Therefore, it is time to break with history and to change our course. Thus, the development model that I propose to you is not dependent upon peace negotiations but, rather, establishes the basis for a transparent, fertile, and lasting peace.

THE ECONOMY AND EMPLOYMENT

The macroeconomic effort shall be aimed at the urgent generation of employment. To generate employment—good employment—is essential if we want to have a real future. Employment is not only the new name for peace but also our first expression of solidarity.

In order to attain the goals of collective improvement, it is necessary to build a strong and solidary economy, which we are lacking today. Correcting the imbalances and channeling the economy towards development and full employment again will initially demand the adoption of severe but essential measures.

Economy and education must go hand in hand to establish the basis for progress. The coming Third Millennium needs new learning. We are going to change education in Colombia so that it may become an open door, where the question will not be how much money the family has but, rather, how much talent the student has. Awakening young people to knowledge is the only way to face the future successfully.

PREFERENTIAL OPTION FOR THE POOR

My administration makes and reaffirms a preferential option for the poor. We do not want a Colombia with excluded persons. The government's task is to foster and consolidate economic growth that will reduce the injustices of poverty and demonstrate, with its results, that it is worthwhile to be just.

For my administration, the poor are a moral commitment, a political commitment, an economic commitment, a cultural commitment, and not just a statistic index. A plan for overcoming poverty convokes, channels, and opens new dimensions for international cooperation and must prevent poverty from being the dangerous ally of those who, with drug trafficking, try to undermine the foundations of the nation and of the international community.

Being solidary in Colombia means helping to create jobs, investing in the creation of jobs, buying at a fair price to create and foster the quality of those jobs. When I think of globalization, I think about its most urgent aspect, which is globalization of solidarity.

RECOVERING VALUES

This is why, together with Gustavo Bell, I would like to invite all of you to recover values. This country must organize itself and become strong against corruption. We cannot continue to tolerate the systematic robbery of goods belonging to the community. It is necessary to end corruption, and the people have taken a first step with their vote. The President and each one of his officials must be a model for others. Their words must be truthful and their example must be clear. There is no greater corruption or lie than good advice followed by bad example.

Let no one be wrong. The government shall persecute the corrupt, shall bring them to light, and shall rescue the institutions from the claws of the corrupt.

THE NEED FOR POLITICAL REFORM

For all these reasons, a thorough political reform must be undertaken. "We cannot pour new wine into old vessels." The recovery of politics for the common good, for social justice, for solidarity, and for development requires the creation of new forms of governing, of controlling, of competing for power, of designing laws, of creating the future.

I thank God for the privilege of having my mother and family here present. I thank Divine Providence for the gift of Nohra's company and leadership and of Santiago, Laura, and Valentina's challenging future.

And I thank the Lord for having given me in Misael Pastrana a living example of values, of loyalty to life, of love of country. He was a patriot who, in light of Colombia's destiny and uncertainties, affirm and warn, "the promised land is at stake". It is necessary for "The New Dawn" brings us optimism, faith, truth, solidarity, and the commitment required to change history because no one will do for us what we must do for ourselves.

Dear friends: A "New Dawn" begins now! Today, it is not only the inauguration of a new President, but also the opening of a new era for the nation. With Gustavo Bell we will make the dream of "The Great Alliance for Change" come true for Colombia.

The glory of a leader consists in attaining peace, striving for the citizens' well-being and happiness. Achieving this shall be the only reward I will aspire to at the end of my mandate. This is no time for hesitation or doubt. This is a moment for decisions and courage. Long and difficult is the road leading to the Colombia we yearn for. Let us begin now! Tomorrow will be another day!

THE VERY BAD DEBT BOXSCORE

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, at the close of business yesterday, Monday, September 21, 1998, the federal debt stood at $5,510,750,292,549.80 (Five trillion, five hundred ten billion, seven hundred fifty million, two hundred ninety-two thousand, five hundred forty-nine dollars and eighty cents).

Five years ago, September 21, 1993, the federal debt stood at $4,392,902,000,000 (Four trillion, three hundred ninety-two billion, nine hundred two million).

Ten years ago, September 21, 1988, the federal debt stood at $2,596,653,000,000 (Two trillion, five hundred ninety-six billion, six hundred fifty-three million).

Fifteen years ago, September 21, 1983, the federal debt stood at $1,354,377,000,000 (One trillion, three hundred fifty-four billion, three hundred seventy-seven million).

Twenty-five years ago, September 21, 1973, the federal debt stood at $459,603,000,000 (Four hundred fifty-nine billion, six hundred three million) which reflects a debt increase of more than $5 trillion—$5,051,147,292,549.80 (Five trillion, fifty-one billion, one hundred forty-seven million, two hundred ninety-two thousand, five hundred forty-nine dollars and eighty cents) during the past 25 years.

SUPPORT WORKING FAMILIES

Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, in a time of unprecedented economic prosperity, we have seen a reduction in inflation and unemployment yet a full-time minimum wage earner makes almost $3,000 below the poverty level—a mere $10,712 per year. No one who works full time should be poor in this country—it's time to raise the minimum wage.

Republicans say that raising the minimum wage will cause job loss and put undue burdens on business owners. But in a recent study conducted by Princeton economists David Card and Alan Krueger, their analysis of New Jersey's minimum wage increase in 1992 showed that employment in fast food restaurants grew at least as quickly as in neighboring Pennsylvania where the minimum wage stayed the same. Also noted in the study was that higher wages actually benefitted employers—turnover expenses were reduced and productivity improved due to better motivated and more stable employees. Mr. President, it's time to raise the minimum wage.

Additionally, data from the Bureau of Labor Statistics shows that since the 1996–97 wage increases took effect, 4 million new jobs have been created and unemployment is at 4.5%—its lowest level in a generation. In fact, a study by the Economic Policy Institute documents that there was no measurable negative effect on jobs. The only measurable effect was on workers—they received the pay increases they deserved. Mr. President, it's time to raise the minimum wage.

Contrary to what has been said by my colleagues on the opposite side of the aisle, workers who will benefit from this increase are not primarily teenagers from high income families. 70% are adults over the age of 20 and forty percent of minimum wage workers are the sole bread winners in their families. As a matter of fact, the average minimum wage earner brings home half of their family's income. Additionally, 60% of minimum wage earners are women. Mr. President, it's time to raise the minimum wage.

In 1979, minimum wage earners needed to work an average of 40 hours per week to stay out of poverty. Today those same workers must work 52 hours. By raising the minimum wage one dollar by the year 2000 we will restore its purchasing power to its mid-1970's level. With unemployment levels 50% to 75% lower and inflation rates 2 to 3 times lower, we can afford to restore that purchasing power. Mr. President, it's time to raise the minimum wage.

It is time to honor the American working people with a fair wage. As President Franklin D. Roosevelt said, "Our nation, so richly endowed with natural resources and with a capable and industrious population, should be able to devise ways and means of insuring to all able-bodied working men and women a fair day's pay for a fair day's work." I call upon my colleagues in the Senate to begin narrowing the gap between rich and poor in this country. We must help bring economic prosperity to the men and women who feed our families, care for our children and elderly parents, and play by the rules. It's time to help working families and it's time to raise the minimum wage.

CAL RIPKEN'S STREAK OF PLAYING 2,632 CONSECUTIVE GAMES

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, Sunday, September 20, 1998 marked the end of an era in sports. Cal Ripken, baseball's Iron Man, took a well-deserved day off. As the Baltimore Sun put it, "The Streak died of natural causes. It was 2,632."

Cal Ripken sat in the dugout Sunday night not because of injury, or illness, or a manager's decision. Cal voluntarily took himself out of the lineup because he felt he was not playing up to his own standards, and would not contribute enough to the team. Cal's quietly monumental decision exemplifies the dignity and class with which he has conducted himself throughout his career.

When Cal Ripken began his streak in 1982, Ronald Reagan was President, I was a Congresswoman, "Dallas" was the most popular TV show, and the movie "ET" was setting box office records. A baby born that year is about to be a junior in high school. Ryan Minor, who played in Cal's place Sunday night, was 8 years old.

I was in the stands September 6, 1995, the night that Cal played game number 2,131. I've watched history being made on the Senate floor, but that night I watched history being made on the glorious green field of Camden Yards. I will never forget the joy we all felt as the banners rolled, the light bulbs flashed, and Cal took his victory lap.

Records are made to be broken, but I can't imagine Cal's record being broken in our lifetime. The next closest player, Albert Belle, would have to play in every game for the next 14 years to equal The Streak.

What Cal has accomplished is simple: Every day for the last 16 years, he got up, got dressed, and went to work. He represents the old-fashioned ethic displayed by millions of Marylanders every day as they work hard, play by the rules, and take care of their families. It's not fancy, it's not flashy, but it is the glue that holds our communities, our society, and our nation together.

So to Cal Ripken, I say hats off, thank you for being you, and thank you for showing all of us how it's supposed to be done."

THE OMNIBUS PATENT ACT OF 1998

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I have been working diligently along with Senators DASCHLE, BINGAMAN, CLELAND, BOXER, HARKIN, and LIEBERMAN to get this measure considered and passed by the Senate. It an important measure to America's future.

Along with all the Democratic cosponsors of the bill, I signed on to offering our patent bill as an amendment to this bankruptcy bill. I helped provide an opportunity for this amendment in the unanimous consent agreement accepted by the Senate on Friday September, 11th. It is long past time for the Senate to consider this patent reform legislation.

Unfortunately, Republican opposition to the bill has prevented Senate consideration for more than a year. This is another example of how secret, anonymous holds on the Republican side are preventing important legislation from being considered by the Senate. I deeply regret that those same Republican objections have now succeeded in preventing our Republican cosponsor, the Chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, from even offering this amendment to the bill in the amendment spot that we had reserved for that purpose. I believe that there is strong support for this measure. I cannot guarantee that all 45 Democratic Senators will vote for it, but I do know that no Democrat has prevented or is now preventing its consideration.

I want to thank Secretary Daley and the Administration for their unflinching support of effective patent reform. Our patent bill would be good for Vermont, good for American innovators of all sizes, and good for America. Unfortunately, the Republican majority or some secret minority of that Republican majority will not allow patent reform to proceed.

OVERVIEW OF THE PATENT BILL

The Patent Bill would reform the U.S. patent system in important ways. It would: reduce legal fees that are paid by inventors and companies; eliminate duplication of research efforts and accelerate research into new areas; increase the value of patents to inventors and companies; and facilitate U.S. inventors and companies' research, development, and commercialization of inventions.

In Vermont, we have a number of independent inventors and small companies. It is, therefore, especially important to me that this bill be one that helps them as well as the larger companies in Vermont like IBM. So I talked to independent inventors and representatives of smaller companies to see what reforms they recommended. I have tried to make sure that their recommendations were incorporated into the Patent Bill as the legislation has advanced through Congress.

LEGISLATIVE HISTORY

The reforms that would be implemented with the passage of this legislation have been subject to careful and deliberate consideration by Congress. In fact, over the past several years, Congress has held eight Congressional hearings with over 80 witnesses testifying about the various proposals incorporated in the Patent Bill.

Republican and Democratic Administrations alike, reaching back to the Johnson Administration, have supported these reforms. Last year, five former Patent Commissioners sent a letter to the President and to the members of the Senate supporting the Patent Bill.

In addition to the thorough consideration that has been given these reforms over the years, the Senate has given close scrutiny this Congress to the bill before us today. The Senate Judiciary Committee held a hearing on this legislation on May 7, 1997. The Committee heard testimony of Senator FRANK LAUTENBERG, Representative HENRY HYDE; Representative HOWARD COBLE; Representative DANA ROHRBACHER; Representative MARCY KAPTUR; the Assistant Secretary of Commerce and Commissioner of Patents and Trademarks; the Executive Director of the American Intellectual Property Law Association; the Vice President of the International Trademark Association; the President and CEO of a small business in Utah; and Bill Parker, President of the Vermont Inventors Association.

After the hearing, Senator HATCH and I worked to address the concerns of independent inventors, small businesses, universities, the Administration, and other Senators. We made several changes to the legislation, which I think significantly improved the Patent Bill. Let me give you some examples of the changes that we made to the legislation: (1) any applicant who does not apply for a patent overseas can elect NOT to have early publication of their patent (2) any applicant who diligently prosecutes a patent application will receive a full 17 years of patent protection; (3) non-profit research laboratories or other nonprofit entities such as universities, research centers, or hospitals can petition the Commissioner of Patents and Trademarks for additional patent protection; and (4) the United States Patent and Trademark Office (PTO) must develop statewide computer networks with remote library sites to enhance access to information in state patent and trademark depository libraries for independent inventors and small businesses in rural states.

On May 22, Senator HATCH and I offered a substitute amendment with these changes. Every member of the Committee, save one, voted in favor of the Hatch/Leahy substitute amendment.

After the markup, the White House Conference on Small Businesses, which consists of over 2000 delegates elected from hundreds of thousands of active small businesses nationwide, made additional suggestions on how to improve the bill. Senator HATCH and I agreed to incorporate their suggested changes into a substitute amendment to the Patent Bill, and I am pleased to report that as a result, the White House Conference on Small Businesses, the National Association of Women Business Owners, the National Venture Capital Association, National Small Business United, and the Small Business Technology Coalition has concluded that, if enacted, this bill would be of great benefit to small businesses.

TITLE BY TITLE ANALYSIS

Unfortunately, because of Republican opposition to this bipartisan bill, the Senate will have no opportunity to consider this legislation to assist U.S. inventors small and large. I find this particularly unfortunate since our Patent Bill was geared toward improving the operational efficiency at the PTO and making government smaller and leaner. I would like to provide a title-by-title overview of the substitute amendment to the Patent Bill that Senator HATCH and I were prepared to offer as an amendment to the bankruptcy bill.

Title I of the amendment: PTO reforms

Title I of the amendment would have made some modest, albeit important, reforms to the PTO. It provides that the PTO shall not be subject to any administratively or statutorily imposed limitation on positions or personnel. This should allow the PTO to hire the necessary number of examiners to review the increasing number of applications received by the office. Title I also creates a Patent Management Advisory Board and a Trademark Management Advisory Board. Of the five members of the Patent Management Advisory Board, not more than three shall be members of the same political party, at least one member shall be an independent inventor, and the members shall include individuals who represent small and large entity patent applicants located in the United States in proportion to the number of applications filed by such members.

Title II of the amendment: Publication of Patent Applications

Title II of the amendment responds to the concerns of independent inventors and small businesses regarding the matter of 18-month publication. These concerns were articulated at the Senate Judiciary Committee hearing by the President of the Vermont Inventors Association, Bill Parker. Mr. Parker suggested giving applicants who only file in the United States a choice whether or not to publish early. He also recommended that we enhance the protections granted to those who choose 18-month publication if we wish to encourage them to take that course.

Title II does both of these things. In particular, it allows any applicant to avoid publication before the granting of the patent simply by making such a request upon filing the application and by certifying that their application has not—and will not—be published abroad. The substitute also provides for the issuance of patents on individual claims in published applications as they are approved, rather than waiting for the disposition of all claims contained in such an application, as now occurs. This allows applicants to gain full patent protection—including reasonable royalties, damages, and attorneys fees when appropriate—for some of their component inventions earlier than they would have under the original draft of the bill.

This new Title II in our substitute amendment will benefit U.S. researchers and manufacturers who will have early English language access to the applications filed with the PTO that are of foreign origin. This bill measures the 18-month publication period from the earliest patent application date anywhere in the world. Since foreign-origin applications typically are filed abroad 12 months before they are filed here, those applications will be published 6 months after they are filed in the U.S.; that is a year earlier than domestic-origin applications. This will level the playing field with foreign countries that already are publishing our applications in their languages within 6 months after our applications are filed abroad.

Title III of the amendment: Patent Term Restoration

In 1995, GATT changed the U.S. patent term from 17 years from issuance to 20 years from filing. On average, this new term does not result in loss of patent term. It is still possible, however, that an individual patentee would have less patent term under the post-GATT term than under the pre-GATT term. To remedy this situation, Title II of the substitute amendment restores patent term lost to "unusual administrative delay" by the PTO and guarantees all diligent applicants a minimum 17-year term.

More specifically, the 1995 law authorizes patent extensions for only 5 years, and authorizes extensions only for PTO delays occurring in three specific situations: interference proceedings, imposition of secrecy orders, and appellate review. Title II of the substitute amendment makes extensions available to compensate for any type of delay by the PTO—extensions up to 10 years in the case of appellate review or unusual administrative delay, and unlimited extensions for delays caused by secrecy orders and interference proceedings.

Title IV of the amendment: Prior Domestic Commercial Use

Title IV of the amendment will provide protection against an infringement suit for anyone who has commercially used an invention for more than a year before another person files for a patent on an invention. In raising this defense, the burden of proof will be on the person claiming the defense, not the patent holder. This provision will protect the unsophisticated entrepreneur from being ruined. Under current law, an independent entrepreneur who has invested perhaps his or her entire life savings to produce and market an invention can be shut down completely by someone else who comes along much later and gets a patent on the same invention. A prior use right will protect independent entrepreneurs from this financial disaster.

Title V of the amendment: Patent Reexamination Reform

Although the goal of the original reexamination provisions—reducing legal bills for patent applicants—was laudable, I was concerned that the legislation protect against harassment by third parties. Title V of the amendment now requires that everyone who requests reexamination of a patent to identify the real party in interest that they represent. It continues to limit the grounds for patent invalidity that can be raised during a reexamination proceeding to earlier patents and publications. Grounds that require evaluation of live testimony cannot be raised. Parties are prohibited from requesting a second reexamination until the first reexamination is completed. Parties cannot raise issues during reexamination that they raised or could have raised in earlier court litigation. Neither can they raise issues in court litigation that they raised or could have raised in an earlier examination. Furthermore, no reexamination proceeding can ever be started unless the Commissioner makes a determination that a substantial new question of patentability is raised. The Commissioner's determination not to start a reexamination is unappealable. In all of these ways, the re-examination provisions in the substitute amendment will provide an alternative to the current costly and time-consuming process of Federal litigation and at the same time, protect patent applicants against undue harassment.

Title VI of the amendment: Miscellaneous Provisions

The final title of the amendment contains several lower-profile, but nonetheless important and needed changes to American patent law. A matter of special interest to me is the section I suggested be added in this Title to enhance access to patent information. I have long thought that electronic access should be more widespread and want to work with the PTO to ensure the effective implementation of statewide electronic accessibility of patent information in rural states and eventually in all areas to make it easier for inventors to study prior art and make further advances. This should be of particular benefit to Vermont, which just recently established a patent and trademark depository library.

Also important is the section that clarifies the authority of the Copyright Office. It is intended to codify the traditional role of the Copyright Office and to confirm the Register's existing areas of jurisdiction. The new subsection 701(b)(1) reflects the Copyright Office's longstanding role as advisor to Congress on matters within its competence. This includes copyright and all matters within the scope of title 17 of the U.S. Code. The new subsection (b)(2) reflects the Copyright Office's longstanding role in advising federal agencies on matters within its competence. For example, the Copyright Office advises the U.S. Trade Representative and the State Department on an ongoing basis on the adequacy of foreign copyright laws, and serves as a technical consultant to those agencies in bilateral, regional and multilateral consultations or negotiations with other countries on copyright-related issues. The new subsection (b)(3) reflects the Copyright Office's longstanding role as a key participant in international meetings of various kinds, including as part of U.S. delegations as authorized by the Executive Branch, serving as substantive experts on matters within the Copyright Office's competence. Recent examples of the Copyright Office acting in the capacity include its central role on the U.S. delegation that negotiated the two new WIPO treaties at the 1996 Diplomatic Conference in Geneva, and its ongoing contributions of technical assistance in the TRIPS Council of the World Trade Organization and the Register's role as a featured speaker at numerous WIPO conferences. The new subsection (b)(4) describes the studies and programs that the Copyright Office has long carried out as the agency responsible for administering the copyright law and other chapters of title 17. Among the most important of these studies historically was a series of comprehensive reports on various issues produced in the 1960's as the foundation of the last general revision of U.S. copyright law, enacted as the 1976 Copyright Act. Most recently the Copyright Office has completed reports on the cable and satellite compulsory licences, legal protection for databases, and the economic and policy implications of term extension. The reference to "programs" includes such projects as the conferences the Copyright Office co-sponsored in 1996-97 on the subject of technology-based intellectual property management, and the International Copyright Institutes that the Copyright Office has conducted for foreign government officials at least annually over the past decade, often in cooperation with WIPO. The new subsection (b)(5) makes clear that the functions and duties set forth in this subsection are illustrative, not exhaustive. The Register of Copyrights would continue to be able to carry out other functions under her general authority under subsection 701(a), or as Congress may direct.

Today's inventors and creators can be much like those of Thomas Jefferson's day—individuals in a shop, garage or home lab. They can also be teams of scientists working in our largest corporations or at our colleges and universities. Our nation's patent laws should be fair to American innovators of all kinds—independent inventors, small businesses, venture capitalists and larger corporations. To maintain America's preeminence in the realm of technology, which dates back to the birth of this republic, we need to modernize our patent system and patent office. Our inventors know this and that is why they support this legislation.

I have received letters of endorsements of S. 507, which I placed into the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD on June 23, July 10 and July 16, from the following coalitions and companies: the White House Conference on Small Businesses, the National Association of Women Business Owners, the Small Business Technology Coalition, National Small Business United, the National Venture Capital Association, the 21st Century Patent Coalition, the Chamber of Commerce of the United States of America; the Pharmaceutical Research and Manufacturers of American (Parma), the American Automobile Manufacturers Association, the Software Publishers Association, the Semiconductor Industry Association, the Business Software Alliance, the American Electronics Association, the Institute of Electrical and Electronics Engineers, Inc., the Biotechnology Industry Organization, the International Trademark Association, IBM, 3M, Intel, Caterpillar, AMP, and Hewlett-Packard.

In addition, I have letters of support of the Patent Bill from the National Association of Manufacturers, TSM/Rockwell International, Obsidian, and Allied Signal.

I am deeply disappointed that the Senate is being prevented from considering this important legislation by Republican recalcitrance. American inventors deserve better and America's future is being short changed.

THE REINSTATEMENT OF THE MEDICARE REHABILITATION ACT OF 1998

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, I rise today in support of the Reinstatement of the Medicare Rehabilitation Act of 1998, introduced by Senators REID and GRASSLEY. I have always been a strong advocate for the senior citizens of our nation and I believe this bill will help provide a safety net for some of our sickest seniors. I was pleased to recently join my colleagues as a cosponsor of this bill for two reasons—it repeals an unnecessary $1,500 cap on Medicare outpatient rehabilitation services and will allow seniors to receive treatment services that are essential to their health.

Every year our elderly are threatened by strokes, multiple injuries, and diseases. Seniors who suffer from strokes and multiple diseases in a given year often have complex health care needs that require costly, comprehensive treatment. One study has estimated that almost 13% of all Medicare beneficiaries or 635,000 seniors who receive rehabilitative services outside of a hospital setting will exceed the $1,500 cap. The treatment that they desperately need would exceed the $1,500 cap and require seniors to pay out of pocket for services or seek treatment in a hospital outpatient department in order for Medicare to cover their treatment.

How could our senior citizens be treated this way? How did this come to be? Well let me tell you, in 1997 Congress passed the Balanced Budget Act. Within that Act we placed a $1,500 cap on outpatient rehabilitation services. Limits on the cap were adopted without adequate committee hearings and a detailed analysis was not conducted by HCFA to determine the likely effects on beneficiaries' ability to obtain medically necessary services.

This was a mistake, but fortunately we can correct it by passing this legislation. The Reinstatement of the Medicare Rehabilitation Act ensures senior citizens the right to receive the medical services they need to recover. Under this bill, senior citizens will no longer be hindered by financial limitations on rehabilitation services and seniors who don't live near a hospital won't be forced to travel there just to have Medicare pay for their treatment services. I don't want an 85-year-old woman who has had a stroke and is trying to regain her ability to speak or eat to have to travel to a hospital 30 minutes away to receive treatment.

I want to let those who depend on Medicare know that we are working to protect their health. While we must continue to work diligently to protect the solvency of Medicare, we can't let seniors who need rehabilitation services fall through the cracks. I salute the sponsors of this bill and urge my colleagues to support this important legislation.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS

The following petitions and memorials were laid before the Senate and were referred or ordered to lie on the table as indicated:

POM-544. A resolution adopted by the Council of the City of Cincinnati, Ohio, relative to proposed legislation on children's gun violence; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

POM-545. A resolution adopted by the Legislature of Guam; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

RESOLUTION No. 303

Whereas, historically the United States has protected its shipping industry through maritime cabotage laws, including Section 27 of the Merchant Marine Act of 1920, commonly known as the Jones Act, the Passenger Vessel Services Act of 1886 and the statutes referring to towage and dredging; and

Whereas, these maritime cabotage laws strictly limit the carriage of passengers and merchandise between the U.S. mainland and the offshore jurisdictions of Guam, Hawaii, Alaska, and Puerto Rico to United States built and flag ships, which are crewed, owned and controlled by United States citizens; and

Whereas, Ninety Percent (90%) of the goods consumed in Guam are imported and virtually all of these goods arrive by sea; and

Whereas, Alaska, Hawaii, and Puerto Rico are similarly dependent on ocean shipping for the operation of their economies; and

Whereas, there are only 122 deep-draft, self-propelled ships of 1,000 gross registered tons and over in the active oceangoing domestic commercial fleet of the United States with an average age of 31 years, of which 89 are tankers. While in the world fleet there are more than 25,000 deep-draft, oceangoing ships with an average age of 18 years. The world fleet includes many kinds of specialist ships not available in the domestic United States fleet yet needed for transportation in the domestic non-contiguous trades and economic development in the offshore jurisdictions of the United States; and

Whereas, due to their geographic isolations, the offshore jurisdictions are uniquely dependent on ocean shipping for surface transportation, unlike the forty-eight contiguous states that have access to alternative forms of interstate surface transportation including rail, road, and inland waterways; and

Whereas, maritime cabotage laws of the United States severely and unfairly limit the access to needed shipping services by artificially restricting the supply of ships, which is translated into higher freight rates and the non-availability of certain kinds of carriage for the offshore jurisdictions; and

Whereas, the U.S. domestic fleet is continuing to decline, only one containership has been built in the United States during the past decade, and just last year, the privately-owned, United States flag, deep-draft fleet decreased by 29 vessels and the fleet carrying capacity decreased by 1,358,000 deadweight tons; and

Whereas, the offshore American jurisdictions need access to efficient, competitive and modern shipping to compete in the global economy, especially as competing countries have ready access to the world's shipping fleet for their transportation requirements; and

Whereas, the highly-competitive Transpacific containership trade offers some of the lowest deep-water ocean freight rate in the world, especially Westbound from the United States West Coast to Asia, while the rates from the U.S. Mainland to Guam are some of the highest. With more than two dozen regularly scheduled lines, there has long been excess capacity available Westbound in the Transpacific container trade to promptly carry all of Guam and Hawaii's cargo requirements at internationally competitive rates; and

Whereas, while there are over 5,000 bulk carriers in the world fleet, there are none in the domestic United States fleet available to carry Alaskan coal to the United States West Coast, Hawaii, and Guam, which impedes the utilization of a potential domestic fuel source; and

Whereas, while there are over 6,000 tankers in the world fleet averaging 16 years of age, there are only 89 in the domestic United States fleet averaging over 30 years. The United States International Trade Commission reports that domestic tanker freight rates are double world rates; and

Whereas, in the trade between Guam and the mainland, over 96 percent of all liner and neo-bulk cargoes are carried by self-propelled oceangoing ships of over 1,000 gross registered tons, and all interstate petroleum cargoes in the Guam trade are carried by deep-draft tanker ships; and

Whereas, an important driver of the high costs of living and doing business in Guam is the artificial domestic shortage of deep-draft oceangoing ships and the higher cost of domestic shipping imposed by maritime cabotage laws; and

Whereas, such costs and non-availability of deep-draft oceangoing ships impose a significant and unfair burden on the residents of Guam, Alaska, Hawaii, and Puerto Rico; and

Whereas, the offshore jurisdictions suffer a far greater negative impact from the restrictions of the maritime cabotage laws of the United States than do the contiguous states; and

Whereas, an exemption from the cabotage laws allowing foreign ships to participate in the non-contiguous trades would foster competition in ocean shipping services, provide substantial economic benefits to the offshore jurisdictions, increase consumer welfare, and make the offshore economies more globally competitive; and

Whereas, the President and Congress have already recognized the unique aspects of the other offshore American jurisdictions when they exempted American Samoa, the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands and the U.S. Virgin Islands from the applicability of the maritime cabotage laws; now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Twenty-Fourth Guam Legislature respectfully requests the Congress of the United States to pass legislation granting an exemption from the maritime cabotage laws of the United States to benefit Guam, Hawaii, Alaska, and Puerto Rico, to allow:

(1) Foreign flag vessels to engage in the interstate sector only of the noncontiguous trades under the supervision of the United States Customs service, and, in Guam, in coordination with the Guam Customs and Quarantine Agency; and

(2) Foreign built United States flag vessels to freely engage in the interstate and intrastate sectors of the non-contiguous trades under a coastwise (non-contiguous) endorsement; and be it further

Resolved, That the Twenty-Fourth Guam Legislature respectfully requests the President of the United States and his Administration to support the Congressional request in this Resolution; and be it further

Resolved, That Guam's Congressional Delegate request Congress to exempt Guam, Hawaii, Alaska, and Puerto Rico from maritime cabotage; and be it further

Resolved, That the Speaker certify to, and the Legislative Secretary attests, the adoption hereof and that copies of the same be thereafter transmitted to the President of the United States; to the President of the United States Senate; to the Speaker of the United States House of Representatives; to the Secretary of the United States Department of Transportation; to the Guam Congressional Delegate; and to the Honorable Carl T.C. Gutierrez, Maga'lahaen Guahan.

Duly and regularly adopted on the 29th day of July, 1998.

POM-546. A resolution adopted by the House of the Legislature of the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

HOUSE RESOLUTION NO. 11-87

Whereas, 48 USCS, Section 1694(a) establishes a federal District Court for the Northern Mariana Islands; and

Whereas, 48 USCS, Section 1694(b) directs that the President of the United States with the advice and consent of the United States Senate shall appoint a Judge for the District Court of the Mariana Islands; and

Whereas, the term of office for the Judge appointed to the District Court of the Northern Mariana Islands is ten years; and

Whereas, it is a tradition and practice of the United States that an appointee to a District Court in a state normally comes from that state; and

Whereas, judges who serve in the Northern Mariana Islands need to be familiar with the unique cultures, customs and traditions of the people of the Northern Mariana Islands; now, therefore be it

Resolved, by the House of Representatives, Eleventh Northern Mariana Commonwealth Legislature, That the House calls upon the Governor of the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands, and the Washington Representative to petition the President and the U.S. Senate so that all future candidates for appointment to the District Court for the Northern Mariana Islands should be nominated from among the qualified people of the Northern Mariana Islands who are familiar with the unique languages, cultures, customs and traditions of the people of the Northern Mariana Islands; and be it further

Resolved, That the Speaker of the House shall certify and the House Clerk shall attest to the adoption of this resolution and thereafter transmit copies to the President of the United States, the President of the U.S. Senate, the Governor of the Northern Mariana Islands, and to the Washington Representative of the Northern Mariana Islands.

Adopted by the House of Representatives on August 26, 1998.

STATEMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Mr. WARNER:

S. 2506. A bill to establish a National Commission on Terrorism; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

NATIONAL COMMISSION ON TERRORISM LEGISLATION

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, terrorism, both domestic and international, will regrettably, continue to be a threat to United States citizens and, indeed, to humanity into the millennium. It is the weapon of choice for those nations, entities, and individuals bent on pursuing myriad aims through the cowardly, cold-blooded sacrifice of innocents.

In his remarks to the opening session of the United Nations General Assembly yesterday, President Clinton focused on the reality of terrorism in the world community. "This is a threat," he said, "to all humankind." At the end of this statement, I include excerpts of the President's speech.

Terrorism is one of the principal threats to global economic and political stability and will continue to be for the foreseeable future. As such, U.S. foreign and economic policies designed to foster peace and prosperity through stability will be weakened.

U.S. policies, citizens and interests continue to be prime targets for international terrorism. The April 1998 Department of State report, "Patterns of Global Terrorism," noted that approximately 33% of all terrorist incidents worldwide were committed against U.S. citizens or property. These attacks were by and large perpetrated outside of the continental United States.

The Congress will soon be considering appropriations to increase the physical security to United States missions abroad. Of the 260 diplomatic posts overseas, only 40 are determined to be safe against terrorist attack.

While it is clear that the safety and stability of the world community continue to be threatened, terrorist activity and the perpetrators of that activity require leaders to reexamine our understanding of terrorism and develop policy to continue to combat the threat.

The motivation to commit acts of terrorism are no longer viewed as those with simply political ends. No longer are these senseless acts of death and destruction purely the domain of those with a political agenda. Increasingly, terrorists are motivated by religious goals, by the pursuit of financial profit, by long-standing racial, ethnic or tribal divisions and animosities, or by a mix of all of the above.

The age of information technology and proliferation of weapons of mass destruction threaten to increase the potential arsenal for terror. In testimony before the Armed Services Committee, witnesses have explained, as you can well imagine, the possible devastation which could be inflicted through skilled use of modern technologies. What have been violent attacks with rudimentary car bombs, may very well soon be attacks of apocalyptic proportions.

A few days ago, Representative FRANK WOLF, an outstanding Member of the House from just across the Potomac and able member of the Commonwealth's delegation, presented to me this legislation to address the challenges of the terrorism threat. His bill has been accepted by the House of Representatives and will be a conference item by the Appropriations Committee. I present this legislation to my colleagues in the Senate for consideration and deliberation.

The legislation assembles 15 distinguished experts in the field of terrorism, including three Congressmen and three Senators. Their goal will be to review and assess United States policies on terrorism, from basic understanding to appropriate response, and recommend changes as warranted. This initiative is not intended as an attack on existing policy, but a means to enhance our understanding of one of the principal threats to stability in the millennium and focus every available resource to eliminate the threat.

I urge my colleagues to review this important legislation.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that excerpts from President Clinton's address to the United Nations be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the excerpts where ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

REMARKS BY THE PRESIDENT TO THE OPENING SESSION OF THE 53RD UNITED NATIONS GENERAL ASSEMBLY

The President. * * * We still are bedeviled by ethnic, racial, religious and tribal hatreds; by the spread of weapons of mass destruction; by the almost frantic effort of too many states to acquire such weapons; and, despite all efforts to contain it, terrorism is not fading away with the end of the 20th century. It is a continuing defiance of Article 3 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, which says, "Everyone has the right to life, liberty and security of person."

* * * Obviously this is a matter of profound concern to us. In the last 15 years our citizens have been targeted over and over again—in Beirut, over Lockerbie, in Saudi Arabia, at home in Oklahoma City by one of our own citizens, and even here in New York in one of our most public buildings, and most recently on August 7th in Nairobi and Dar es Salaam, where Americans who devoted their lives to building bridges between nations, people very much like all of you, died in a campaign of hatred against the United States.

* * * If terrorism is at the top of the American agenda—and should be at the top of the world's agenda—what, then are the concrete steps we can take together to protect our common destiny. What are our common obligations? At least, I believe they are these: to give terrorists no support, no sanctuary, no financial assistance; to bring pressure on states that do; to act together to step up extradition and prosecution; to sign the Global Anti-Terror Conventions; to strengthen the Biological Weapons and Chemical Convention; to enforce the Chemical Weapons Convention; to promote stronger domestic laws and control the manufacture and export of explosives; to raise international standards for airport security, to combat the conditions that spread violence and despair.

S. 2507. A bill to stimulate increased domestic cruise ship opportunities for the American cruising public by temporarily reducing barriers for entry into the domestic cruise ship trade; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

THE UNITED STATES CRUISE SHIP TOURISM ACT
OF 1998

• Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, today I, with Senators THURMOND, BURNS, and HUTCHISON, introduce the United States Cruise Ship Tourism Act of 1998. The purpose of this bill is to stimulate increased domestic cruise vessel opportunities for the American cruising public by temporarily reducing barriers for entry into the domestic cruise ship trade.

The oceangoing cruise ship industry offers the American cruising public with a multitude of itineraries in international trade. However, due to barriers to entry such as the Passenger Vessel Services Act, large cruise ship domestic trade options are limited to one oceangoing cruise ship in Hawaii.

Also, the U.S. port calls of these international itineraries are heavily concentrated in Florida and Alaska due to the proximity of these states to neighboring countries. This means that America's cruising public is denied the opportunity to cruise to many attractive U.S. port destinations, and those ports are denied the economic benefits of those visits, due to these domestic cruise ship trade barriers to entry.

Three separate bills addressing the domestic cruise ship trade have been referred to the Commerce Committee this Congress: S. 668, S. 803, and S. 2290. Each of these bills takes a different approach to removing barriers and stimulating growth in this area. Senator HUTCHISON, the Chairman of the Subcommittee on Surface Transportation and Merchant Marine, held a hearing last year on this subject. I would prefer we take the approach proposed in S. 803, of which I am a cosponsor, but I understand that bill does not address the concerns of some other members. We have been working with representatives of all industries concerned with this legislation for several months in an attempt to reach a consensus on this issue.

While a consensus has not yet been achieved, I believe it is time to take another step forward in the legislative process. My bill would allow the Secretary of Transportation to waive certain current coastwise trade restrictions on a limited basis to stimulate the domestic cruise ship trade. I expect some of my colleagues on the on the Commerce Committee may want to make additional changes to this bill in Committee. I look forward to working these issues out with them in the next week so that we may report this bill to the Senate later this month.

I believe it is important for this Congress to take action on this issue this year. We should maximize the economic growth potential of the domestic cruise ship trade and the cruising opportunities for America's public.●

S. 2509. A bill to provide further protections for the watershed of the Little Sandy River as part of the Bull Run Watershed Management Unit, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

LITTLE SANDY WATERSHED PROTECTION

• Mr. WYDEN. Mr. President, I am today, along with Congressman BLUMENAUER in the U.S. House, introducing legislation to make sure that in the next century the children of Portland can go to their kitchen faucet and take a glass of drinking water that is as safe and pure as any that the pioneers found when they got here.

Why protect the Little Sandy? The answer is as clear as the water in that stream. Essentially, what we are proposing is to finish the job begun two years ago with passage of the Oregon Resources and Conservation Act of 1996, which brought statutory protection to the Bull Run Watershed.

Portland's city fathers acted in 1890 to protect Bull Run, and it is fitting that we continue that effort today. More than one-third of the Little Sandy watershed has already been logged; clearly, this drainage has already been pushed, and pushed hard, in terms of past timber harvest.

The protection our bill would offer will not only affect clean drinking water, but salmon recovery as well. I am hopeful that this legislation will become an important part of our region's approach to restoring steelhead habitat.

Finally, I want to commend the leadership of Mayor Vera Katz, Commissioner Erik Sten, and former Commissioner Mike Lindberg, whose vision for Portland's future laid the foundation for the introduction of this bill.

I first introduced legislation to protect the Little Sandy when I was in the House. In passing the Oregon Resource Conservation Act of 1996, I made a compromise with Senator Hatfield in which we would designate the Bull Run Watershed Management Unit as a protected area that is off limits to commercial timber harvest, and designate the Little Sandy as a study area. I am now asking the Congress to approve the addition of the Little Sandy study area to the Bull Run Management Unit, and to be subject to the management prescriptions which were established under the ORCA governing the Bull Run.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 2509

By Mr. LUGAR (for himself and Mr. HARKIN) (by request):

S. 2511. A bill to authorize the Secretary of Agriculture to pay employees of the Food Safety and Inspection Service working in establishments subject to the Federal Meat Inspection Act and the Poultry Products Inspection Act for overtime and holiday work performed by the employees; to the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry.

FEDERAL MEAT AND POULTRY EMPLOYEES PAY ACT OF 1998

● Mr. LUGAR. Mr. President, today I introduce legislation, by request, to modify the overtime pay for meat inspectors who are veterinarians. Senator HARKIN, the ranking minority member of the Senate Agriculture Committee, has joined as a cosponsor.

This legislation was transmitted to Congress by the U.S. Department of Agriculture earlier this year. As drafted, the bill would provide the Secretary of Agriculture with the authority to pay Food Safety and Inspection Service employees, working in plants subject to federal meat or poultry inspection, for overtime and holiday work at rates determined by the Secretary.

Due to an anomaly in current law, meat inspectors who are veterinarians receive lower pay for overtime hours than they receive for regular hours. These veterinarians are seeking true overtime pay of 1½ times their hourly rate without a cap on the rate.

While the Federal Meat Inspection Act allows the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) to provide overtime pay at rates determined by USDA, the Poultry Products Inspection Act does not provide this authority. The legislation introduced today would allow USDA to pay overtime for veterinarians at rates determined by USDA. Clearly an inequity exists for veterinarians who work overtime.

I am pleased to introduce this legislation at the request of the U.S. Department of Agriculture. I look forward to hearing the views of my colleagues about this legislation and will seek opportunities to move this bill through the legislative process.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to include in the RECORD a copy of the transmittal letter from the Secretary of Agriculture.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE,
OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY,
Washington, DC, March 23, 1998.

Hon. ALBERT GORE, JR.,
President of the Senate,
Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. PRESIDENT: This letter transmits, for the consideration of the Congress, a draft bill "To provide the Secretary of Agriculture with the authority to pay employees of the Food Safety and Inspection Service (FSIS) working in establishments subject to the Federal Meat Inspection Act and the Poultry Products Inspection Act for overtime and holiday work performed by such employees at rates the Secretary deems appropriate" that the Department of Agriculture (USDA) recommends be enacted.

The proposed legislation would provide the Secretary of Agriculture with the discretion to pay employees of FSIS, working in establishments subject to the Federal Meat Inspection Act (FMIA) and the Poultry Products Inspection Act (PPIA), for overtime and holiday work at rates determined by the Secretary.

Under current authorities, the Secretary is authorized to pay employees performing inspection under the FMIA for overtime work at rates the Secretary determines. However, no similar authority exists for employees performing inspection under the PPIA. Further, because current law caps overtime rates for Federal veterinarians working in poultry establishments, those at the higher steps of the Federal pay scale receive an hourly overtime rate less than their hourly rate of basic pay.

The draft bill will eliminate the potential inequity between FSIS veterinarians providing inspection services under the FMIA and the PPIA and will provide the Secretary with the authority to compensate appropriately FSIS veterinarians performing inspections in meat and poultry establishments.

Enactment of the legislation would cost FSIS approximately $300,000 per year to cover situations when the veterinarian is on overtime but the establishment is not. The Department believes that it will be able to absorb these additional costs within current budgetary levels. When an establishment is in an overtime status, it must reimburse USDA for the overtime at rates determined by the Secretary.

Enactment of this proposed legislation would have no significant effect on the quality of the human environment.

The Office of Management and Budget advises that there is no objection to the presentation to Congress of this proposed legislation from the standpoint of the Administration's program.

A similar letter is being sent to the Speaker of the House.

Sincerely,

DAN GLICKMAN, Secretary.

By Mr. COCHRAN:

S. 2508. A bill to amend title XVIII of the Social Security Act to impose conditions on the implementation of the interim payment system for home health services furnished by home health agencies under the Medicare Program and to modify the standards for calculating the per beneficiary payment limits under such payment system, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Finance.

HOMEBOUND ELDERLY RELIEF OPPORTUNITY ACT
OF 1998

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, today I am introducing the "Homebound Elderly Relief Opportunity Act of 1998"

(HERO). This measure addresses a very serious concern: the future of home care within the Medicare system.

For Mississippians, home health has had a two-fold benefit: Home care serves to reduce costly hospitalization stays while enhancing the patient's quality of life through continued stay in the familiar home setting.

Additionally, in a rural state like Mississippi, home health has enabled health care to be delivered to the immobile and elderly who are often miles and hours from the nearest hospital or clinic.

Despite these obvious benefits, home health is very expensive, however. With Medicare and government expenditures, it is not always a question of "What we should afford?" but "What we can afford?"

Congress answered these questions with the Balanced Budget Act of 1997, which has brought fiscal responsibility back to government. BBA 97 dealt with among other issues, Medicare, and in turn home health, probably the fastest growing expenditure within the program. The work of Senator ROTH and the Finance Committee has helped insure some stability in home health expenditures, so that a good thing does not quickly become a bad thing and bankrupt the trust fund. However, instead of saving this vital Medicare benefit, HCFA's application of the Balanced Budget Act to home health—through the use of the Interim Payment System—has threatened its very existence. In so doing, HCFA has ignored both equity and the elderly, particularly in rural America.

The Senate has not completely ignored the home health crisis: Sixty-eight of my colleagues have made statements which appear with their photographs on a recent industry poster proclaiming the ills of HCFA's interim payment system and its threat to the continuation of home health services.

Five of my colleagues—Senators GRASSLEY and BREAU; Senator BOND; Senator COLLINS; and Senator KENNEDY have each introduced bills to adjust or eliminate IPS. Senator BOND has been the Senate champion of saving home health. His Senate Bill 2354, of which I am cosponsor, provides a direct, honest response to the HCFA-created nightmare. His bill would impose a moratorium on IPS from fiscal year 1998 forward until HCFA develops the prospective payment system, the only sure way to solve the home health expenditure issue in a fair manner. However, the Moratorium Bill's cost has been scored by CBO to be in the many many billions. While we must save home health, we cannot do so in a way that jeopardizes all of Medicare. We must find a compromise. That is the purpose of introducing HERO today.

The HERO Bill is an effort to correct the essential problems with the interim payment system and to create a better bridge to the prospective payment system which we all hope will be developed and implemented soon. I believe it provides the best opportunity for success with respect to Government spending, Medicare reimbursement, and protecting beneficiaries.

It establishes budget limits for Medicare home health expenditures for 1999–2002 with the same savings levels currently projected by the Congressional Budget Office under the Balanced Budget Act of 1997 provisions. If expenditure estimates exceed the budget limits, payments to providers will be limited to regional levels on an equitable basis. Finally, it insures access to home care for all qualified Medicare beneficiaries.

Overall, this bill provides one last opportunity in this session for all home health beneficiaries to receive the Medicare benefit to which they are entitled and for the providers of those services to be fairly reimbursed. It corrects the essential flaw in the original payment reform which rewarded the inefficient and punished the efficient providers and failed to account for the variation in the types of patients served by home health agencies. However, this bill operates with budgetary and operational safeguards to insure that the home health benefit stays on its steady course.

Mr. President, Congress must reform IPS immediately before even more reputable home health agencies are forced out of business and more seniors are forced to go without care or leave their homes for more expensive hospital or nursing home care. I urge Senators to support this bill.

SENATE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION 119—RECOGNIZING THE 50TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE AMERICAN RED CROSS BLOOD SERVICES

Mr. FRIST (for himself, Mr. JEFFORDS, Mr. LOTT, Ms. MIKULSKI, Mr. COATS, Mrs. MURRAY, Mr. MCCONNELL, Mr. HARKIN, Ms. COLLINS, Mr. GREGG, and Mr. BINGAMAN) submitted the following concurrent resolution; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary:

S. CON. RES. 119

Whereas the American Red Cross is a non-profit humanitarian organization of 32,000 paid staff, 1,300,000 volunteers, and 4,300,000 blood donors which considers its role in the provision of blood services to be a public trust;

Whereas the American Red Cross Blood Services began by collecting and distributing blood to help save the lives of soldiers on the battlefields of World War II, and has evolved to become a leader in the healthcare industry;

Whereas following World War II the American Red Cross created the first national civilian blood program, opening its first blood center in 1948;

Whereas through the generosity of over 4,300,000 voluntary blood donors the American Red Cross is able to provide half the Nation's blood supply, and every day, in communities throughout this country, many thousands of people receive lifesaving blood in the 3,000 hospitals served by the 38 American Red Cross Blood Regions;

Whereas in May 1991, the American Red Cross announced its ambitious "Transformation" program, a 7-year, $287,000,000 comprehensive modernization of every aspect of the American Red Cross Blood Services blood collection, testing, processing, and distribution systems;

Whereas one of the most massive undertakings of Transformation was the Manufacturing and Computer Standardization (MACS) initiative which integrated 28 different computer systems into a single, national system linking American Red Cross Blood Regions nationwide to the world's largest blood information database for transfusion medicine research, and standardized manufacturing processes;

Whereas under Transformation the more than 50 individual, nonstandardized laboratories operated by local American Red Cross Blood Regions were replaced by 8 state-of-the-art National Testing Laboratories, which effectively implement the latest medical technology to perform the testing of approximately 6,000,000 units of blood annually, serving both American Red Cross blood centers and several non-American Red Cross blood centers as well, and are located in Atlanta, Georgia; Charlotte, North Carolina; Dedham, Massachusetts; Detroit, Michigan; Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; Portland, Oregon; St. Louis, Missouri; and St. Paul, Minnesota;

Whereas the American Red Cross Blood Services has created a Quality Assurance program recognized throughout the world as a leader in assuring quality in the manufacture of blood products;

Whereas the creation of the Charles Drew Biomedical Institute has allowed the American Red Cross to provide training and other educational resources to American Red Cross Blood Services' personnel through "One Touch" which is an interactive, distance learning system that allows instructors to train personnel across the country from the institute's location at American Red Cross Biomedical Headquarters in Rosslyn, Virginia;

Whereas Transformation saw the development of a centrally managed blood inventory system to ensure the consistent availability of blood and blood components in every American Red Cross Blood Services Region throughout the country, and the creation of the new centralized organizational structure within American Red Cross Blood Services;

Whereas the American Red Cross Jerome H. Holland Laboratory in Rockville, Maryland, is the world's premiere blood research facility, consistently contributing to the progress of biomedical science, especially transfusion safety and new blood products, and shares its expertise with a number of countries around the world;

Whereas the American Red Cross manages an almost $30,000,000 investment in research and development, which includes $8,000,000 in Federal research grants, and is committed to working with others in the biotechnology field to ensure that this pioneering research is translated into lifesaving products available for patient use as quickly as possible;

Whereas the American Red Cross is investigating and implementing the newest technologies to ensure blood safety, including Genome Amplification Technology to test for the human immunodeficiency virus (HIV) and for hepatitis C virus (HCV), solvent detergent treated fresh frozen plasma, virus inactivated plasma for transfusion, use of iodine in plasma filtration, and inactivation of viruses in cellular products (such as red blood cells) through a light-activated dye called 491;

Whereas the American Red Cross is in the constant process of modernization and improvement and at the forefront of new product development, and is prepared to enter the 21st century as a cutting-edge organization providing safe, high quality blood and blood products to the hundreds of thousands of patients in need;

Whereas Congress and the American Red Cross join in celebrating the phenomenal success in the reduction of HIV infection through the use of blood and blood products as evidenced by the fact that in 1991 an American's risk of HIV transmission through a blood transfusion was 1 in 220,000 and today the risk is 1 in 676,000, nearly non-existent; and

Whereas Congress and the American Red Cross encourage healthy Americans to donate blood by calling the American Red Cross: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That Congress—

(1) joins with the American Red Cross in celebration of the 50th anniversary of American Red Cross Blood Services and the impact of their efforts on modern medicine; and

(2) looks forward to the tremendous possibilities and potential for discovery and innovation as the American Red Cross Blood Services enters the next 50 years of providing the Nation with a safe blood supply.

• Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I rise today to recognize the 50th anniversary of the American Red Cross Blood Services. The Red Cross Blood Services has been saving lives since its inception during World War II. Today, in a rapidly changing health care environment, with ever increasing challenges, the Red Cross continues to serve patients throughout our country.

The Red Cross is America's first nationwide, volunteer blood collection and distribution system. During World War II, the Red Cross saved soldiers' lives by collecting and distributing blood. This led to the first National Civilian Blood Program, with the opening of the first blood center in 1948. Today, the Red Cross serves over 3,000 hospitals nationwide by supplying almost half of the nation's blood for transfusion. This life-giving service is made possible by volunteers who generously donate nearly six million units of blood each year.

In 1991, the Red Cross began a comprehensive technology and systems review, to ensure the organization entered the next century with state-of-the-art programs, systems, and facilities. This program, entitled, "Transformation," is a $287 million modernization of every aspect of blood collection, processing, and distributing. According to Red Cross President Elizabeth Dole, it is the most ambitious project that the Red Cross has ever undertaken. Transformation's goals included the creation of a new centralized management structure, a new information system, and a program of the highest quality. Without objection, I'd like to submit a copy of Mrs. Dole's remarks at the 50th Anniversary Bicentennial Celebration of the Red Cross, which includes comments on Transformation, for the RECORD.

Transformation successfully consolidated 50 individual, non-standardized labs operated by local Blood Regions into eight state-of-the-art National Testing Laboratories that perform 70 million laboratory tests each year. These new labs serve the Red Cross as well as several non-Red Cross blood centers. As part of this Transformation, the American Red Cross has undertaken a Manufacturing and Computer Standardization initiative. This program has integrated 28 different computer systems into one national system, linking Red Cross Blood Regions across the nation to the world's largest information database for transfusion medical research.

In addition, Transformation has led to standardized manufacturing processes throughout the Red Cross system, thereby promoting a consistent standard of high quality blood services. A centrally managed blood inventory system operated by the Red Cross was designed to facilitate consistent availability of blood in every region of the country. Transformation has also created the Quality Assurance Program and a new Charles Drew Biomedical Institute which provides training and other education to personnel, using state of the art technology which does not require staff and volunteers to travel for training. Instructors can now train personnel in a wide range of fields across the country.

Through the American Red Cross Jerome H. Holland Laboratory, a premiere blood research facility, significant progress has been made in improving transfusion safety, and fostering the development of new blood products. Red Cross has shared the knowledge and expertise gained through studies conducted by Holland Laboratory scientists and physicians with the transfusion services of countries throughout the world. The Red Cross translates research into life-saving products for patients because of its tremendous investment in research and development. Let me just note that the risk of becoming infected with HIV through a blood transfusion has been reduced from one in 220,000 in 1991, to one in 676,000 today—a tremendous improvement in the safety of the blood supply.

I congratulate the 32,000 paid staff and 1.3 million volunteers on their first fifty years of providing blood services, and especially want to recognize Mrs. Elizabeth Dole and her tremendous management team for their vision in the implementation of the Transformation program.

In recognition of their accomplishments, I am submitting the following concurrent resolution, with ten of my colleagues, Mr. JEFFORDS, Mr. LOTT,

Ms. MIKULSKI, Mr. COATS, Mrs. MURRAY, Mr. MCCONNELL, Mr. HARKIN, Ms. COLLINS, Mr. GREGG, and Mr. BINGAMAN, to commemorate the 50th anniversary of the American Red Cross Blood Services. •

SENATE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION 120—TO REDESIGNATE THE UNITED STATES CAPITOL POLICE HEADQUARTERS AS THE "ENEY, CHESTNUT, GIBSON MEMORIAL BUILDING"

Mr. SARBANES (for himself, Ms. MIKULSKI, Mr. ROBB, and Mr. WARNER) submitted the following concurrent resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Rules and Administration:

S. CON. RES. 120

Whereas the United States Capitol Police force has protected the Capitol and upheld the beacon of democracy in America;

Whereas 3 officers of the United States Capitol Police have lost their lives in the line of duty;

Whereas Sgt. Christopher Eney was killed on August 24, 1984, during a training exercise;

Whereas officer Jacob "J.J." Chestnut was killed on July 24, 1998, while guarding his post at the Capitol; and

Whereas Detective John Gibson was killed on July 24, 1998, while protecting the lives of visitors, staff, and the Office of the Majority Whip of the House of Representatives: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That the United States Capitol Police headquarters building located at 119 D Street, Northeast, Washington, D.C., shall be known and designated as the "Eney, Chestnut, Gibson Memorial Building".

• Mr. SARBANES. Mr. President, today I am submitting a concurrent resolution to redesignate the United States Capitol Police Headquarters as the "Eney, Chestnut, Gibson Memorial Building" in honor of the three brave United States Capitol Police Officers who have been killed in the line of duty since the inception of the Capitol Police.

The United States Capitol Police are a very special breed. They have a very special duty and a special trust. They guard our nation's Capitol and keep it safe and secure for the citizens of the world. When Officers Gibson and Chestnut were killed on July 24, 1998, I joined my colleagues on the floor to express my profound shock, and to express my very heartfelt sympathies to their families. I quoted an editorial in Roll Call then and I want to read from it again because I think it sums up the nature of our Capitol Police Force:

Sometimes, given the comparative low level of violence around the Capitol complex and given that Capitol Police Officers are usually seen cheerfully directing traffic or gently herding tourists, it's forgotten that ours—meaning the Capitol Hill Police Force—is a real police force. We who live and work around the Capitol know—but others don't—that our police also fight crime in the neighborhood as well as watch the Capitol. But now all America understands that the Capitol Police do not just stand guard, but also stand ready to be heroes. That knowledge was derived last week at a heartrending cost.

So Mr. President, the purpose of this concurrent resolution is not just to memorialize these three officers, but to honor in perpetuity the bravery, and acknowledge the sacrifice of the men and women who put their lives on the line daily to protect this symbol of democracy. I urge my colleagues to join me in support of this measure.●

The proclamation follows.

GOVERNOR'S PROCLAMATION

Two thousand eighty-six Americans are still missing and unaccounted for from the Vietnam War, including 6 from the State of Wyoming, and their families, friends, and fellow veterans still endure uncertainty concerning their fate.

United States Government intelligence and other evidence confirm that Vietnam could unilaterally account for hundred of missing Americans, including many of the 446 still missing in Laos and the 75 still unaccounted for in Cambodia, by locating and returning identifiable remains and providing archival records to answer other discrepancies.

The President has normalized relations with Vietnam, believing such action would generate increased unilateral account for Americans still missing from the Vietnam War, and such increased results have not yet been provided by the Government of Vietnam.

Now, therefore, be it resolved that the State of Wyoming calls on the President to reinvigorate United States efforts to press Vietnam for unilateral actions to locate and return to our nation remains that would account for hundreds of America's POW/MIA's and records to help obtain answers on many more.

For these significant reasons, I, Jim Geringer, Governor of the State of Wyoming, do hereby proclaim September 18th, 1998, to be "POW/MIA RECOGNITION DAY" in Wyoming, and encourage all citizens to observe this day with appropriate ceremonies.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Great Seal of the State of Wyoming to be affixed this 29th day of July, 1998.

JIM GERINGER,
Governor.

Mr ENZI. Mr. President, I rise today to recognize the action of my State's Governor in proclaiming September 18, 1998, as Wyoming's POW/MIA Recognition Day. Over 2,000 Americans are still missing in Vietnam, Cambodia, and Laos, and over 8,000 on the Korean peninsula. Those heart rending facts make this a most fitting gesture indeed. These men gave everything they had to give in causes whose worthiness can be empirically verified: By comparing the prosperity of South Korea with the evil devastation to its North; By comparing the poverty and tyranny of Vietnam, Laos, and Cambodia with what might have been as evidenced in Thailand, Malaysia, and Singapore. We must never forget the sacrifice of those who have no headstones in our national cemeteries. Hence the importance of efforts such as Governor Geringer's, which remind the Nation of our continuing and unfulfilled responsibility to account for the remains of these men for the sake of their families and our national conscience. I commend

Governor Geringer for his proclamation and I urge the President to intensify his efforts at retrieving the remains of America's missing-in-action. In comparison with their sacrifice, this gesture is humble indeed, but sincere and important nonetheless. Surely a grateful America can perform this small task.●

TRIBUTE TO GOODLOE AND JEAN SUTTON

● Mr. SHELBY. Mr. President I rise today to pay tribute to an Alabama couple who, in their persistent pursuit of justice, successfully raised awareness of illegal activities taking place in Marengo County in some of the highest levels of county government. Goodloe and Jean Sutton, who together head The Democrat-Reporter—Goodloe serves as editor and publisher and Jean as chief reporter—remind us of what the Fourth Estate is all about. Through their thorough and diligent coverage of questionable activities in the Marengo County Sheriff's office, former Sheriff Roger Davis was convicted on federal extortion charges; Sonny Breckenridge, who had been appointed by Sheriff Davis to lead the county's drug enforcement unit, was sentenced to life without parole for conspiring to protect drug dealers. Another deputy was also arrested. All are serving jail time for the deeds the Suttons helped to uncover.

Goodloe and Jean Sutton are to be commended. Not only have they helped to rid the Marengo County Sheriff's office of misdeeds and rampant corruption, but they have helped to restore the public faith in local government. They have also set an exemplary standard for others in the profession of journalism where truth should always be the highest and most important pursuit and consideration.

In addition to my statement, Mr. President, I believe it is fitting to include the following article about the Suttons, entitled "Paper Tigers," that appeared in the September 28, 1998 edition of People Magazine.

I ask that the article be printed in the RECORD.

The article follows.

[From People Magazine, Sept. 28, 1998]

PAPER TIGERS—NEWSHOUNDS GOODLOE AND JEAN SUTTON GET THE GOODS ON A LAWBREAKING SHERIFF

(By Peter Ames Carlin and Grace Lim)

From where they sat in the tiny newsroom of The Democrat-Reporter in rural Linden, Ala., Goodloe and Jean Sutton sensed there was something wrong about Roger Davis. Not only did the sheriff of Alabama's rural Marengo County (pop. 25,000) sell jewelry out of the trunk of his police car but he seemed to enjoy throwing his weight around. "Davis thought being sheriff made him all-powerful," says Jean. "He was impressed with himself."

But the Suttons were not, so when they learned that Davis had skimmed money from the county, they featured the story in their family-owned weekly newspaper. Ignoring threats and boycotts by the sheriff's cronies for more than three years, the couple kept on writing until Davis and two of his deputies had earned jail terms and the modest, six-employee paper had earned Pulitzer Prize consideration and a wall full of journalism trophies. "To take on the sheriff, the most powerful political leader in a rural county, is beyond gutsy," says Alabama Attorney General Bill Pryor, who investigated the crooked sheriff.

Sheriff Davis, now 57, started dipping into the county till in 1991, a year after the retired Alabama state trooper was elected to his $35,000-a-year post. First he used public money to buy his teenage daughter a $3,000 all-terrain vehicle for Christmas, only later returning to the dealer to pay with his own money. Davis funneled county dollars into his account for several years, then extorted more than $20,000 from bail bondsmen who had been operating illegally without the required financial reserves. He wasn't subtle about it. "If he could control you by fear, he'd do it," says Goodloe. "Or if he could do you a favor, he'd expect you to repay him. And he charmed people too."

Operating on a tip in early 1994, Jean Sutton first dug into the county financial records and discovered that $9,000 in public funds delivered to Davis had never made it to the office account. The Suttons ran the story as front-page news, eliciting a denial from the sheriff. "He told people he was a good Christian," says Jean. "When they asked why he didn't sue us for libel, he'd say, 'I prayed over it, and it wasn't the right thing to do.'"

Although Davis (who declined People's request for an interview) dodged those first editorial bullets, battle lines were drawn. Many of his supporters canceled their subscriptions to The Democrat-Reporter, cutting its circulation 20 percent from 7,500 to 6,000, and some local businesses pulled their advertisements. "As far as I know, he did a good job sheriffing while he was in office," says retired store owner Gaines Williamson, who once backed the sheriff. "Everybody knew him. We'd chitchat over a couple of coffee." Some Davis partisans felt so strongly they even phoned the Suttons, threatening to blow up the family van. "Remember," one letter assured them, "your day will come."

For Goodloe, 59, the chance to take down a crooked sheriff was worth the tension. The youngest of three kids born to publisher Robert Sutton, who bought The Democrat-Reporter in 1917, and his wife, Lorie, Goodloe first set type at the family newspaper when he was 12. He met aspiring writer Jean Rodgers, daughter of Will and Mary, while studying journalism at the University of Southern Mississippi, and the couple married after graduating in 1964.

Moving home to Linden, Sutton succeeded his father as editor and publisher of The Democrat-Reporter and installed Jean, now 57, as chief reporter. The couple—who have two sons, Goodloe Jr., 27, who works for the state Republican Party, and William, 14, a high school freshman—gained a reputation as uncompromising journalists. "Goodloe can sell a paper, that's for sure," says cement-company foreman Jerry Stewart. "There's a lot of controversy, which makes for interesting reading."

The Democrat-Reporter became even more interesting in May 1997, when two sheriff's deputies were arrested by federal and state agents for conspiring to protect drug dealers—one, Sonny Breckenridge, who was sentenced to life without parole, had been appointed by Davis to lead the county's drug enforcement unit. Meanwhile, with the Suttons' articles pointing the way, the state and federal authorities began closing in on the sheriff. By August of last year, Davis too was behind bars, caught in a joint state and FBI sting while squeezing a $975 payoff from an illegal bondsman. Two months later, he pleaded guilty to federal extortion charges; he was assessed $30,000 in fines and restitution. "I would like to apologize to my family, my friends and my church and to the people of Marengo County," the sheriff said en route to prison, where he'll serve 27 months. "I'm sorry."

Although their circulation has yet to rebound fully, the Suttons vow to continue in Marengo County whether their future holds trophies or threats. "We're just humble scribes," says Goodloe, who is also running to represent the region in Alabama's House of Representatives. "And we have the best turkey hunting, the best deer hunting and the best-looking women in the country. Why would anybody want to go anywhere else?"

HONORING ILANA G. POSSNER

• Mr. D'AMATO. Mr. President, I rise today to honor Ilana G. Possner, a young woman who has dedicated her life to the betterment of her community through her undying commitment to community service and leadership activities. She is a shining example of an American youth who has made a deep impact on the lives of her fellow citizens.

This young Staten Island resident has not only graced her immediate community with her good deeds, but the New York City area as a whole. She is an active participant at Project Hospitality, a Staten Island shelter that works with the area's homeless, hungry and sick. Each week, Ilana prepares and serves dinner to the homeless population this program services. Yet, her role is not just that of a server; Ilana takes it upon herself to befriend these people in need, readily lending a supportive ear and establishing relationships with them. Ms. Possner also devotes her time to entertaining Staten Island senior citizens through volunteer signing for the hearing impaired. Ilana has performed at fifteen different nursing homes and senior citizen centers throughout the past two years. Aside from these very demanding activities, she is also an active and enthusiastic volunteer worker for the American Cancer Society and the Multiple Sclerosis Society.

Ms. Possner has put her leadership skills to work to help the community, as well. She organizes numerous food and clothing drives for the homeless, which provide people with the basic necessities of life that otherwise would not have been available to them. Moreover, Ilana presides over youth groups which bring together Staten Island youth from different racial, socioeconomic, religious and ethnic backgrounds. Through these groups, she works to promote harmony among the citizens of Staten Island.

Ilana's hard work has brought her great recognition and awards over the past few years. She currently attends St. John's University on an academic scholarship, where she wishes to pursue studies in Communications and Education. Furthermore, she has received the National Service Scholarship and the MCS/Canon New York Knicks Team Up Community Service Scholarship. The New York State Assembly has also commended Ms. Possner for her work and achievement through a citation, as well.

As we all know, today's youth is the future of America. In order to solve the problems America is facing now and in the future, it is imperative that we have leaders dedicated to the American people. Ilana Possner is an excellent example of a person who has put forth her leadership skills and time to the American public. It is through people such as Ilana Possner that the future problems and issues facing Americans will be confronted. Thus, I wish to commend Ilana for her selfless acts that have helped to make her community a better place. •

BISHOP LEE'S SERMON ON "FAITH, FREEDOM, AND VIRTUE"

• Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, on Sunday, September 20, I joined Members of the Virginia Congressional delegation—Senator ROBB, Congressman BLILEY, Congressman SCOTT, and Virginia's Lieutenant Governor Hager, and many other Virginians at "Virginia Day" at the Washington National Cathedral. I was privileged, together with Senator ROBB, to read the scripture lessons.

My family and I have had a long association with this great Cathedral which stands on the highest promontory in the Nation's Capital and serves as living symbol of religious freedom the world over. Over 70 years ago, I was baptized, later confirmed, and then served on the governing chapter of the Cathedral. My uncle, the Reverend Charles T. Warner started his career in the ministry here with Bishop Freeman and then worked with the Cathedral in his capacity as Rector of nearby St. Alban's Parish for 40 years.

The Right Reverend Peter James Lee, the 12th Episcopal Bishop of Virginia, delivered an inspiring sermon. As the Senate, and indeed all Americans, look to the difficult decisions facing us, we should examine Bishop Lee's important reflections on "Faith, Freedom, and Virtue." I ask that it be printed in the RECORD.

The sermon follows:

FAITH, FREEDOM AND VIRTUE

(A sermon preached by the Rt. Rev. Peter James Lee, Bishop of Virginia, on Virginia Day at the Washington National Cathedral, Sunday, September 20, 1998)

It takes less than a minute, except during rush hour, to cross from Washington into Virginia. The Potomac River is not much of a barrier. But over the centuries, the distance between the national capital and the Commonwealth of Virginia has varied dramatically. In the earliest days, there was hardly any distance at all since Virginia was a primary leader of the intellectual and political ferment that led to the birth of the nation. But contemporary with the establishment of the capital on the Potomac, the tension between Virginia and the nation began to increase, until it led to open rebellion in the Civil War. The Potomac became a hostile boundary. Virginia has shaped our nation's history, rebelled against national authority, in this century resisted the movement for racial justice, and yet has contributed so very much to the making of America. Today, Virginia is a beneficiary of many federal dollars, thanks in no small measure to the energy and leadership of our two lay readers today, the distinguished United States Senators from Virginia.

Virginia's ambivalent relationship with the nation, sometimes formative and leading, sometimes hostile and resistant, has been matched on occasion by Washington's dismissal of its historic neighbor across the river.

I experienced that shortsighted Washington view not many years ago. My first assignment as a new priest was on the staff of St. John's Church, Lafayette Square, across from the White House. Twenty years later, as the Bishop of Virginia, I was asked back to St. John's to speak to a dinner of former lay leaders. A distinguished Washington lawyer whom I had known when I was a young priest came up to me, and with generosity and unintended Washington arrogance, said, "Peter, we are very proud of you. You are a bishop somewhere now, aren't you?"

When the Potomac is a great divide, from Virginia—and the rest of the nation—everyone suffers.

In just a few years, Virginia will mark 400 years since the first English settlers brought to these shores their version of the Christian faith. The religious life of Virginia across these centuries has been dominated by a tension between faith and freedom, a tension defined in the decades of the eighteenth century when a few well-educated Virginians were influenced by the European enlightenment and thousands of Virginians were swayed by evangelical revivals across the Commonwealth. In the 1730's, the majority Christian group in Virginia was Episcopalian. By the 1790's, the majority was Baptist. Ever since, Virginia Christian life has been marked by a tension between the spiritual descendants of Thomas Jefferson and the spiritual descendants of the great evangelical revivals of the same era. Thomas Jefferson was derided by his opponents as godless and dangerous. Evangelical preachers were dismissed by the followers of Jefferson as ignorant and prejudiced.

Today, in this well-ordered cathedral that speaks eloquently of rationality and mystery both joined in the service of God, it is difficult for us to grasp the significance of the break between the Jeffersonian and the evangelical traditions. And yet, the failure of Virginia to bridge the gap between the two traditions is one of the great and tragic might-have-beens of history. In England, in about those same years, the late eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries, personal, evangelical piety, stirred by John and Charles Wesley, contributed mightily to the movement for the abolition of slavery. In Virginia at the time, voices against slavery were rare. Thomas Jefferson wrote persuasively about inalienable human rights, but he held on to his slaves. What might have happened in Virginia if the humanist sense of enlightenment had been nourished by a Christian conversion experience that led to a passion against slavery? It didn't happen, or at least it happened among so few that it made little difference in Virginia. What might have been.

Even to this day, two communities exist side-by-side in Virginia—one of independent, Bible-centered congregations with inherited suspicion of cities, universities, and contemporary culture. And the Jeffersonian tradition in Virginia, while admirably zealous for the separation of church and state, often treats religion as so much a private matter that it should have little to say in the public realm. It is an overstatement, but not much of one, to say that one community, the Jeffersonian tradition, holds as an unexamined doctrine that religion is entirely a private matter, while the other tradition of evangelical piety, affirms that America is a Christian nation whose values should be those of the Bible, interpreted in the most conservative light.

Both traditions have held on to one dimension of personal values shaped by Judeo-Christian standards. Virginia has a powerful and priceless tradition of expecting high standards of personal honor among its leaders. When Robert E. Lee was President of Washington College in Lexington, the institution that now bears his name along with Washington's, General Lee was asked by a student for a book of rules. He responded, famously, "We have but one rule: our students are gentlemen and a gentleman does not lie, cheat or steal." That rule, adapted to the happy reality of coeducation, and spread from a 19th Century elite to the whole of the Commonwealth, reflects the heritage of personal honor that is still a cherished value of all Virginians.

Contemporary Virginia needs to offer the rest of the nation an example of joining its twin legacies of faith and freedom, which includes its respect for personal honor and public virtue.

Faith is nurtured in a climate of freedom. We have learned that faith imposed by state authority is corrupting and oppressive. The French philosopher Pascal once wrote that "people never do evil so completely and cheerfully as when they do it from religious conviction." Religious zealots from the great religions of the world who deny the freedom of others betray the highest values of their own creeds. Faith and freedom may be in tension but they need not be in conflict.

We are in danger in America, and even across the world, of dismissing serious commitment to religious faith as irrelevant to public virtue or even dangerous to civic peace. The crisis surrounding the President of the United States is in part the inevitable result of the rupture between personal faith and public life, between faith and freedom, the break between personal honor and political values.

As this most violent century draws to an end, as race and ethnicity and religion continue to divide people and to lead to their slaughter, the world needs people of faith who honor freedom; people committed to freedom who respect the integrity of faith, people who can build societies that value personal honor and public virtue.

The great religions of the world have much to say about our life together. They cannot be relegated simply to the realm of private preference. In the lesson from the Hebrew scriptures today,¹ the prophet Amos condemns those who take shortcuts with the law that forbids commerce on the Sabbath. The behavior condemned by the prophet may be "legally accurate," but those who engage in behavior that oppresses the poor are corrupt. Paul, in his first letter to Timothy,¹ insists that the Christians hold their rulers in their prayers—assuming that the public good requires leaders of personal honor but since they are flawed human beings like the rest of us, they need the support of our prayers. And in the parable of the dishonest steward,¹ Jesus warns that the distinction between private and public virtue is artificial. The one who is dishonest in very little things will also be dishonest in much. The ancient Bible stories are right on target for the issues of today.

This cathedral stands on the highest hill in the District of Columbia. Its towers dominate the Washington skyline, not with the power to oppress, but with the powers to inspire and to call a people to personal integrity and public virtue. That does not mean our leaders must be saints. Many of us know our senators, other leaders, and our bishops well enough to know that sainthood has eluded all of us. We are all flawed, fallible persons, but that does not suggest that our quest for private and public virtue is in vain. We need to reaffirm the integrity of faith, faith in God who empowers each one of us to become the person God intends us to be; the God who lifts us up when we fall, and who redeems our failures with new hope. We need to recover a personal faith that sustains both private honor and public virtue. We need to bridge the gap between the sacred and the secular, not by a diminution of freedom, but with an expansion of faith that respects freedom and the freedom that protects the nurture of faith and the privacy of individuals.

This nation is engaged in a great public conversation about the crisis in the Presidency. President Clinton's moral authority is severely compromised. Whether this crisis ends with resignation, impeachment, or censure and a crippled presidency for the remaining two years of the term, it is important for the well being of the nation to consider what we can learn about ourselves in this crisis. That in no way absolves the President from his responsibility. But have we separated personal, private morality from public life so extensively that this was a crisis waiting to happen? Do we have a system of raising up leaders in public life that encourages and rewards honor, integrity, and personal commitment to our shared values? Or, do we separate faith and freedom, personal honor and public virtue, so extensively that our moral life together is imperiled? Our moral life is now endangered by excessive public intrusion into private life and dishonorable private behavior that erodes public trust. With our traditions, Virginians can make a difference in the national conversation.

Virginia is a Commonwealth where faith and freedom have competed but have flourished; we are a commonwealth that demands of our leaders personal honor and service to public virtue. Let those great traditions come together again in a new and mutually respectfully union so that our people may be strengthened.

In his farewell address in 1796, our first President, George Washington, said, "Of all the dispositions and habits which lead to political prosperity, religion and morality are indispensable supports . . . a volume could not trace all their connections with private and public felicity . . . let us with caution indulge the supposition that morality can be maintained without religion . . . reason and experience both forbid us to expect that national morality can prevail in exclusion of religious principle."

Virginia is the birthplace of English speaking Christian faith in America. Virginia is the birthplace of Thomas Jefferson's statute for religious freedom. We are a community that offers to a nation the union of personal honor serving public virtue, of personal faith in a climate of freedom that restricts intrusive government.

In New Testament Greek, the word "crisis" means a time of judgment, a time of separation, a time of clarification. A crisis in the view of the Bible is often created by the word of God, proclaimed by the prophets, exposing the gap between where people are and where they ought to be. We are living at such a time and that time, the Bible teaches us, can be one of hope and of new beginning. May the traditions of Virginia, of faith and freedom, of private piety and public virtue, of personal honor and public service, come together again in this great nation so that future generations will look back on our day as a time of moral renewal and refreshing new hope, a time when God called this nation to a rebirth of our spiritual strength. ●

TRIBUTE TO JAMES MAITLAND "JIMMY" STEWART

● Mr. SHELBY. Mr. President, I rise today to pay tribute to an award-winning Alabama journalist and author who has written the definitive history of the World War II military career of Hollywood-great Jimmy Stewart. Mr. Smith, who served with Stewart in WWII, wrote "A Retrospective of the World War II Military Career of Hollywood's James M. (Jimmy) Stewart" for the James M. Stewart Museum Foundation, located in Stewart's hometown—Indiana, PA. I believe excerpts from this article are a fitting tribute to both the life and legacy of a true American hero: Jimmy Stewart, as well as to one of Alabama's fine authors: Starr Smith. In compliance with the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD text-length rules, only excerpts of Mr. Smith's article could be placed in the RECORD; however, I encourage my colleagues and the American people to obtain a complete copy of this important article from either the James M. Stewart Museum or the September 1998 edition of The Retired Officers Magazine.

In addition to his many accomplishments, Smith is a travel columnist for the Montgomery Advertiser and is a retired Air Force Reserve colonel. He lives in Montgomery, AL.

Mr. President, the following are excerpts from "A Retrospective of the World War II Military Career of Hollywood's James M. (Jimmy) Stewart" by Starr Smith:

When the melancholy news came of Jimmy Stewart's death I was in Montreal, Canada. I thought it singular that I was out of my own country at the time because my relationship with this remarkable American had taken place on foreign soil—wartime England. Much has been said and written since Stewart's death about his extraordinary life and career as a film actor of the first rank, but little has been said about Stewart's brilliant and brave record as an Army Air Force combat pilot and commander in World War II.

I served with Stewart on a windswept and cold bomber station, called Old Buckingham, near the North Sea between Cambridge and Norwich in England's East Anglia in 1943-1944. Our outfit was the 453rd Bomb Group. The commander, Colonel Ramsay Potts, was a battle-tested B-24 specialist who had been on the historic and pivotal Ploesti mission and earned the Distinguished Service Cross. Stewart, then a major, was the group's operations officer and I was an intelligence officer who handled much of the briefings for the air crews prior to their mission over Nazi Germany. It was in this capacity that I worked with Stewart, night after night, preparing the details of the mission. I have never known a more intelligent, knowledgeable, hardworking, conscientious and dedicated officer.

In my book, "Only the Days Are Long: Reports of a Journalist and World Traveler," I wrote of Stewart: "At night, working with me preparing the mission, Stewart was crisp and business-like; reserved, but he knew his job and was a keen student of daylight precision bombing. (The Americans bombed in daylight, the RAF at night). It was interesting to see Stewart at the bar of the Officer's Club after a tough day and hear his discussion of the mission with the returning pilots. But even then he was always slightly aloof. He was never one of the boys. This is not to say Stewart was unfriendly. Rather, he went about his work with a cool professional detachment—a single purpose approach that did not allow for personal involvement. This, I think, was the reason for this success in the war. He was determined to prove that he was more than an actor, more than a Hollywood star. He was determined to prove that now he could measure up as a man doing a really important job in the military crucible and not just a celluloid hero.

Almost a year before Pearl Harbor, Jimmy Stewart had a deep feeling that his country would soon be at war. Stewart also knew that if war came he wanted to be in uniform and overseas on combat duty.

At the beginning of the new year of 1941, Stewart was at the top of his career as a movie actor and international star. His 1939 picture, "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," has made him a folk hero throughout America and he was destined for an Academy Award for his role as the reporter in "Philadelphia Story" later in the year. His life was blissful, romantic, flawless, and ahead was the golden promise of infinite stardom as one of the premier movie players of all time.

... but with England fighting Hitler since 1939, Edward R. Murrow's bleak broadcasts from London, the Pacific war against the Japanese going badly for the British ... Jimmy Stewart decided to join the fight. But, he faced two major roadblocks: his boss and his country. Louis B. Mayer, the forceful and dictatorial head of MGM used every persuasive tactic at his command—choice roles, contract revisions, free time to help with the war effort as a civilian. The other matter was different.

In September of 1940, the Selective Service Act became law, and men between the ages of 21 and 36 were required to register. Being 32, Stewart registered ... when he was called up for a physical in late 1940, he was turned down: underweight. That could have ended the whole affair. ... perhaps thinking of his father's fierce patriotism and his service in two wars, plus his own fervent love of country, Stewart favored the volunteer route. He appealed the Army's underweight decision, embarked on an eating binge, made the weight requirements and reported for induction on March 22, 1941 at Fort McArthur, California.

Stewart was among the very few officers in American military history to rise from private to full colonel in slightly over four years. Moreover, Stewart was actually on combat duty all the time he was overseas, performing vital, demanding and dangerous jobs: squadron operations officer, squadron commander, group operations officer, wing operations officer, and later at the end—Second Bomb Wing Commander. And, all the while, he was flying combat missions as a B-24 pilot and command pilot.

... Stewart spent all of his service in England assigned to the 2nd Combat Wing. ... in late August of 1945, he returned to New York on the Queen Elizabeth. And on September 29th of that year, Stewart was discharged at Andrews Air Force Base in Washington. He was immediately appointed a full colonel in the Air Force Reserve. In his war years, Stewart had flown 20 combat missions, among them the tough ones: Brunswick, Bremen, Frankfurt, Schweinfurt, and I recall that he was on Berlin twice—once leading the entire 1,000 plane 8th Air Force. His wartime decorations include: Distinguished Flying Cross, with Oak Leaf Cluster; four Air Medals, and the French Croix de Guerre with Palm. He was promoted to Brigadier General in the Air Force Reserve in 1959 and retired in 1968. After Stewart died in July of 1997, Air Power History published a memorial ... (which) contained this little-known fact: "In 1966, during his annual two weeks of active duty, Stewart requested a combat assignment and participated in a bombing strike over Vietnam."

... With all the myriad honors of a celebrated and eclectic career, including the highest in his profession—the Academy Award—it is not too much to believe that Jimmy Stewart reached the blue lawn of his life in those eventful and dangerous years of World War II. A small town boy who grew up with strong family values and a bed-rock foundation in honesty and integrity, intertwined with a fervent patriotism—Stewart served his country with dedication and distinction, and, like F. Scott Fitzgerald, his fellow Princetonian—he lived his life with an unbending determination, subtle style and a certain mystique.●

150TH ANNIVERSARY OF LA SALLE ACADEMY

● Mr. D'AMATO. Mr. President, I am honored to be invited to such a landmark event and I rise to offer my congratulations to the La Salle Academy in celebrating its 150th anniversary of educating New York City's youth. Founded in 1848, the Catholic, college-preparatory school of La Salle Academy currently serves more than 540 young men who represent over 60 nationalities. La Salle Academy seeks to educate young men of New York City from different cultural, racial, and social groups with special outreach programs for those most in need. This enables students to grow intellectually, morally, and physically in a racially diverse setting while encouraging them to contribute to their communities. This fine Academy consistently molds young men into valuable members of society and sends over 90% of its students to pursue higher education. Institutions, such as La Salle, are key assets for introducing our young adults to the many different aspects of our diverse society. Both the graduates and students of La Salle Academy act as model citizens for others to emulate and I praise this institution and other organizations of its kind for its countless contributions to society. We are fortunate to have such a valuable institution reside in New York State. I sincerely hope that La Salle Academy will continue to serve its students and the members of this community in such an important fashion.●

USE OF THE ROTUNDA FOR THE NELSON MANDELA CEREMONY

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of H. Con. Res. 326, which is at the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

EXTENSIONS OF REMARKS

AMERICAN POW'S AND MIA'S

HON. BARBARA CUBIN

OF WYOMING

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, September 22, 1998

Mrs. CUBIN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize American POWs and MIAs. In my home state of Wyoming, there is a deep feeling of respect and gratitude to all the men and women who have defended this country when they were called.

Two thousand eighty-six of these brave Americans are still missing and unaccounted for from the Vietnam War, including six from the state of Wyoming.

Although faced with the terrors and deprivations of war, they answered their nation's call. They bravely served even when some of their countrymen reviled and unfairly criticized their efforts.

These soldiers are Americans. They did their duty. The least we can do for them and their families is insist on nothing less than a full accounting for every one of them.

I urge President Clinton and my colleagues in the Congress to press Vietnam for unilateral actions to locate and return to our nation remains that would account for hundreds of American POW/MIAs and records to help obtain answers on many more.

I am pleased that patriotism is alive and well in America today. Governor Jim Geringer has issued a proclamation designating September 18, 1998, as POW/MIA Recognition Day in the State of Wyoming. These soldiers are not forgotten. Their families are not forgotten. Their priceless contributions to our freedom are not forgotten.

Mr. Speaker, I ask that the text of this proclamation be inserted in the RECORD for every American to read.

GOVERNOR'S PROCLAMATION

TWO THOUSAND EIGHTY-SIX Americans are still missing and unaccounted for from the Vietnam War, including 6 from the State of Wyoming, and their families, friends, and fellow veterans still endure uncertainty concerning their fate.

UNITED STATES Government intelligence and other evidence confirm that Vietnam could unilaterally account for hundreds of missing Americans, including many of the 446 missing in Laos and the 75 still unaccounted for in Cambodia, by locating and returning identifiable remains and providing archival records to answer other discrepancies.

THE President has normalized relations with Vietnam, believing such action would generate increased unilateral account for Americans still missing from the Vietnam War, and such increased results have not yet been provided by the Government of Vietnam.

NOW, therefore, be it resolved that the State of Wyoming calls on the President to reinvigorate United States efforts to press Vietnam for unilateral actions to locate and return to our nation remains that would account for hundreds of America's POW/MIAs and records to help obtain answers on many more.

FOR THESE SIGNIFICANT REASONS, I, JIM GERINGER, Governor of the State of Wyoming, do hereby proclaim September 18th, 1998, to be "POW/MIA Recognition Day" in Wyoming, and encourage all citizens to observe this day with appropriate ceremonies.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Great Seal of the State of Wyoming to be affixed this 29th day of July, 1998

JIM GERINGER,
Governor.

IN HONOR OF ARISTIDES SOSA

HON. ILEANA ROS-LEHTINEN

OF FLORIDA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, September 22, 1998

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to recognize Aristides Sosa of Miami for the recent honor he received from the University of Nebraska. In his name, the institution created the "Aristides Sosa International Citizenship Award". It will be awarded annually to an individual who has demonstrated vision and dedication to the improvement of human relations.

This distinct recognition was presented to Dr. Sosa for his outstanding contribution to the World Affairs Conference and his extraordinary devotion to global education. For 16 years, Dr. Sosa was the director of International Programs and head of the Department of Languages for the University of Nebraska at Kearney where he established several study abroad programs in Europe and Latin America.

In the 1980's, when civil disturbances rocked South Florida, he initiated a variety of community programs to improve the inter-ethnic relations in Miami while he was the Director of the Metro-Dade County Department of Community Affairs.

After a well-deserved retirement this past year, Dr. Sosa has dedicated his time lecturing all over the United States at national and international conferences to offer his vast knowledge and expertise in the field of international relations. For his commitment to multi-cultural education and public service, I ask my colleagues to join me in distinguishing Dr. Aristides Sosa as the driving force and positive image for recipients of the "Aristides Sosa International Citizenship Award".

IN RECOGNITION OF MR. MARVIN R. SMITH, NATIONAL MINORITY ADVOCATE OF THE YEAR

HON. BARBARA LEE

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, September 22, 1998

Ms. LEE. Mr. Speaker, I rise to salute Mr. Marvin R. Smith, who today will receive the National Minority Advocate of the Year Award.

Mr. Speaker, almost 16 years ago, President Ronald Reagan designated the first full week of October 1983 as Minority Enterprise Development (MED) Week. Designated by every President since then, MED Week is an annual national celebration in recognition of the contributions made by minority businesses to the Nation's economy as well as to acknowledge individuals whose efforts have advanced minority business development throughout the country.

Mr. Speaker, MED Week is the largest federal advocacy activity sponsored on behalf of minority businesses. It is jointly sponsored by the U.S. Department of Commerce's Minority Business Development Agency (MBDA) and the Small Business Administration's (SBA) Office of Minority Enterprise Development. Each fall, MED Weeks are held across the country. Observances culminate at a National Conference in Washington, D.C. The week of September 20–26, 1998, was included in this year's presidential proclamation. Each year a theme is chosen by the MED Week Committee to reflect current issues or emphasis. This year's theme is "Creating a Competitive Advantage in a Changing Business environment."

Awards are presented by MBDA and SBA to minority-owned businesses and other individuals chosen from nominations received in the respective regional offices around the country. As nominations are received, they are reviewed and evaluated by panels in the regional offices. Award winners in the various categories from the five regional offices (Atlanta, Chicago, Dallas, New York and San Francisco) are presented to MBDA headquarters and evaluated by a review panel at that level for national recognition.

Mr. Speaker, I feel honored to mention that Marvin R. Smith, who works as Manager of the Supplier Management and Business Affirmative Action Office (SM/BAAO) of the Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory (LLNL) (Livermore, CA) and a resident of the 9th District, has also been selected to receive the award of "National Minority Advocate of the Year." Just days after receiving the "Regional Minority Advocate of the Year Award" in San Francisco on September 10, 1998.

Mr. Smith has served in various managerial positions at LLNL for the past 20 years. The primary objective of the SM/BAAO is to enhance the quality of vendors doing business with LLNL and to simultaneously assist the laboratory in achieving its socioeconomic goals. As a part of this effort the SM/BAAO strives to identify qualified small, disadvantaged and women-owned businesses and to assist in enhancing their capabilities so that they become viable competitors with the larger integrated concerns currently providing supplies and service to the Laboratory, as well as to increase the extent to which they receive Laboratory Awards/Contracts, something we commonly know as procurement dollars.

I am proud to say that, during the past three fiscal years (1995, 1996 and 1997) as a result of Mr. Smith's leadership and efforts LLNL has provided $180.86 million in direct procurement awards to small disadvantaged/minority business enterprises. During that same period of time $43.7 million were awarded to 2nd tier disadvantage/minority subcontracts.

Mr. Smith, who is also a longtime civil rights activist, has held a host of positions on local, state and national committees, commissions and organizations. He has long been involved in leadership positions in a myriad of community activities relating, but not limited, to entrepreneurship, mentoring, youth awareness, community economic development, education, fairness in law enforcement/equity in justice and diversity.

Prior to assuming his position with the laboratory, Mr. Smith was the San Francisco Regional Director for the Fair Housing and Equal Opportunity Compliance Division of the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development. Previous to that he was a police officer for the Richmond (CA) Police Department.

Mr. Smith received a Bachelor of Arts Degree in Political Science from California State university at Hayward; earned a Masters in Public Administration Degree from Golden Gate University in San Francisco; was a Ph.D. candidate in Public Administration at Golden Gate University (ABD) and holds several professional certificates in Management and Public Administration.

Mr. Speaker, today, I join with the organizers, sponsors and most of my Congressional colleagues in expressing my sincere congratulations to Marvin Smith for his commendable efforts and contributions to minority businesses.

Thank you for your commitment and service.

COMMEMORATING THE 15TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE SAN FRANCISCO CONSERVATION CORPS

HON. NANCY PELOSI

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, September 22, 1998

Ms. PELOSI. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize the 15th anniversary of the San Francisco Conservation Corps.

In 1983, the San Francisco Conservation Corps was one of the first urban youth corps ever established to combine job skills training and academic enhancement. Fifteen years later, over 200 million hours of community service have been performed by the San Francisco Conservation Corps and 130 youth corps groups have been created nationwide.

In San Francisco, Corpsmembers who range in age from 12 to 24 years provide a range of public benefit services while engaged in academic enrichment programs. Corps-members perform community outreach in schools, seismic retrofit and lead dust reduction in homes for low-income residents, install play structures for children, preserve and restore native habitats in the Presidio and coordinate neighborhood projects based on needs assessments conducted by high school aged Corpsmembers—to list just a few of their community contributions.

Through the San Francisco Conservation Corps Center's Environment-Community-Outreach Center (ECO), The Learning Center, and the Community Service and Training Center, urban youth learn the importance of teamwork, leadership, community service, and academic achievement. Most importantly, Corpsmembers develop a "can-do" attitude building self confidence.

The ECO Center provides job training, environmental education, and academic programs to adolescents and young adults in the Corps. This specialized training engages participants in technological and multi-media skills and activities necessary to prepare for today's job market.

The Learning Center focuses on challenging Corpsmembers to reach their highest level of educational achievement and aids in successful job placement. As a result, Corpsmembers are encouraged toward a commitment to life-long learning.

The Community Service and Training Center prepares young adults for a career and higher education. It serves to provide participants with confidence, strong work ethics, and responsibility to become effective community leaders.

On Saturday, September 26, 1998, the San Francisco Conservation Corps will host their 15th anniversary celebration. I salute the San Francisco Conservation Corps, its youth, staff and supporters for the important contribution to empowering urban youth to improve their lives while also working to improve San Francisco neighborhood communities.

Congratulations to the Corps on its 15th Anniversary. Our community appreciates and celebrates the Corps' leadership in support of youth, education and training, and community service. I extend special thanks and congratulations to Corpsmembers, Staff, Board Members, Executive Director Ann Cochrane, and Justice J. Anthony Kline on this special occasion.

CELEBRATING 125 YEARS OF THE KENNETT GRANGE NO. 19

HON. JOSEPH R. PITTS

OF PENNSYLVANIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, September 22, 1998

Mr. PITTS. Mr. Speaker, today I rise to honor an organization celebrating its 125th anniversary in my district in Pennsylvania.

The Kennett Grange No. 19 is now celebrating 125 years of continuous service to our area. Founded in the Borough of Kennett Square in 1873, this chapter is presently the third oldest in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, although it was the 19th one organized.

In 1932 when the Kennett School District consolidated, the members purchased the original Greenwood School building in Kennett Township and have been meeting there ever since. Now that is impressive! The dedication of the community to the continuation of this Grange must be commended.

On a local, county, state, and national level, this Grange has made a difference! Your active commitment has not gone unnoticed.

So today, I want to honor the Kennett Grange for the way they encourage family participation and promote community service and education here in Chester County and across the nation.

I and to wish them continued blessing. Here's to another 125 years!

A TRIBUTE TO TOGETHERNESS WITH LOVE CENTER ON THEIR SECOND ANNIVERSARY

HON. NYDIA VELAZQUEZ

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, September 22, 1998

Ms. VELÁZQUEZ. Mr. Speaker, it is with great pride that I rise today to pay a special tribute to Togetherness With Love Center, Inc., an organization in my district which has worked to provide social services to low income families.

In 1993, Together With Love was founded in Brooklyn, New York by Mr. Cyril Joseph. He originally started this organization as a neighborhood alternative to the often overcrowded municipal soup kitchens in the area. Operating out of a tiny basement shop on DeKalb Ave., Mr. Joseph with the help of the Seventh-day Adventist Church and the Jesus Cares Ministries began to distribute food to those in need.

Since its founding, Togetherness With Love has added 24 new staff members and has become a vital part of the community I serve. Most of those who enter its doors on a daily basis receive aid on health and immigrant issues, as well as assistance in employment and housing.

Mr. Speaker, I ask my colleagues in Congress to join me in acknowledging and thanking the men and women of the Togetherness With Love Center for their excellent service and dedication.
