

influence in order the their decisions to be completely just and based only on the laws and facts of the cases.

When going to trial over serious, life changing issues, a litigant must be assured of the right to be treated fairly. When a judge sits in the position to over-turn the decision of another judge who is a close relative sitting on a panel of judges, the litigant clearly is going to question the impartiality and fairness of the final court decision. Preventing close family members from serving on the same court is a small price to pay to avoid the appearance of a loss of credibility of our court system.

This bill passed unanimously out of the Senate yesterday. I encourage my colleagues to support this bill and help uphold the just character and composition of one of our most revered institutions. I want to thank Chairman COBLE for allowing the expeditious consideration of this measure and urge my colleagues to support its passage.

Subtitle A—Exchange of Criminal History Records for Noncriminal Justice Purposes

SEC. 211. SHORT TITLE.

This subtitle may be cited as the “National Crime Prevention and Privacy Compact Act of 1998”.

SEC. 212. FINDINGS.

Congress finds that—

(1) both the Federal Bureau of Investigation and State criminal history record repositories maintain fingerprint-based criminal history records;

(2) these criminal history records are shared and exchanged for criminal justice purposes through a Federal-State program known as the Interstate Identification Index System;

(3) although these records are also exchanged for legally authorized, noncriminal justice uses, such as governmental licensing and employment background checks, the purposes for and procedures by which they are exchanged vary widely from State to State;

(4) an interstate and Federal-State compact is necessary to facilitate authorized interstate criminal history record exchanges for noncriminal justice purposes on a uniform basis, while permitting each State to effectuate its own dissemination policy within its own borders; and

(5) such a compact will allow Federal and State records to be provided expeditiously to governmental and nongovernmental agencies that use such records in accordance with pertinent Federal and State law, while simultaneously enhancing the accuracy of the records and safeguarding the information contained therein from unauthorized disclosure or use.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. MCCOLLUM) and the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. JACKSON-LEE) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Florida (Mr. MCCOLLUM).

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. MCCOLLUM. Madam Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days to revise and extend their remarks on the bill under consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Florida?

There was no objection.

Mr. MCCOLLUM. Madam Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Efficient access to criminal history data and criminal justice information has become a necessity, not only for law enforcement agencies, but for school districts, volunteer organizations, child protection services, and a host of professions who want to conduct background checks to avoid hiring convicted offenders who pose a danger to the community. Information is absolutely crucial to successful law enforcement and neighborhood safety.

The Federal Government has invested billions of dollars in Federal information and identification systems, but the States are still lagging far behind in their ability to use these initiatives. There is a wide disparity between the criminal identification systems that are available, and the ability of State and local law enforcement to connect on any broad scale with these systems, which are operated by the FBI.

The types of information and identification technology initiatives to which I am referring are not fancy luxuries that would simply be convenient to have. They are necessary for law enforcement to compete in our information age.

Television programs that show police bringing up the record and photograph of a convicted offender at the touch of a button simply do not depict the reality of today's criminal justice system. Many States are still a long way from becoming computerized. They are unable to exchange compatible data in a timely manner, or on a widespread geographic basis. Some States still use card catalog systems. While Congress has invested significant resources in Federal information and identification systems, the benefits of these Federal initiatives are not being realized because the States do not have the technology to use them. It is the purpose of this bill to allow States to make use of Federal programs and to improve how we use information to solve crimes in this information age.

S. 2022, the Crime Identification Technology Act of 1998, authorizes $250 million a year for 5 years for flexible discretionary grants to States to upgrade criminal history records systems; promote integration of local, State and national criminal justice information and communications systems; and assist crime laboratories to reduce the backlog of forensic analysis requests that currently exist throughout the country. Grants may be given to States to be used in conjunction with local units of government, State and local courts, and other States.

It is also the intention of the bill to consolidate currently existing grant programs which provide technology assistance to the States. While the full funding of this proposal would require some new expenditures, the consolidation of current programs would generally provide for existing funding to go toward this act in the future.

Lastly, let me briefly mention that this bill also contains two other important provisions. Title II of the bill is called the National Criminal History Access and Child Protection Act, which provides for a compact between the States and the Federal Government to facilitate the exchange of criminal history records. The compact is somewhat administrative in nature and requires no authorization for funding. It would establish the "rules of the road" for interstate exchange of criminal history records, including records for background checks for child care workers. The compact provides for State-to-State and Federal-to-State sharing of records, while permitting each State to protect its own dissemination and privacy policies within its own borders.

The last provision in this bill is called the Volunteers for Children Act, which would amend the National Child Protection Act of 1993, often called the Oprah Act, to allow child care, elder care and volunteer organizations to request access to FBI criminal fingerprint background checks in the absence of specific State laws or procedures allowing such access. The House passed this provision in H.R. 3494, the Child Protection and Sexual Predator Punishment Act, which is pending in the other body.

Now, I know there are some volunteer organizations that find criminal fingerprint background checks to be a costly procedure, and many States are unable to deliver these checks on a timely basis. This bill in no way requires these organizations to conduct fingerprint checks, nor does it preclude them from using other resources such as State criminal history data to conduct background checks. The bill simply provides organizations with the option of requesting the checks if there is no law in place precluding them.

Passage of this bill should not be construed to create a new duty on the part of volunteer organizations. Accordingly, the failure to conduct such background checks should not be considered as evidence of negligence in civil litigation. It is simply not the intent of this bill to open up volunteer organizations to such liability.

Madam Speaker, as my colleagues can see, there is a pretty extensive bill here, but it will make some important changes to current law to allow for the better use of criminal history information. Let me say additionally that the administration strongly supports the proposal. Information is absolutely crucial to successful law enforcement, and I am convinced this bill will be a great assistance to the criminal justice community, and I urge my colleagues to support it.

Madam Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Madam Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I rise in support of this legislation, S. 2022, which was introduced by Senator DEWINE in the Senate and passed that body by unanimous consent.

The Crime Identification Technology Act of 1998 directs the Attorney General to make grants to permit State and local governments to update their technological capabilities so that they more readily respond to the problem of crime. The bill authorizes $250 million in such grants per year over 5 years for these purposes. In order to be eligible for these grants, the State must show that it is able to contribute information required by the Instacheck system mandated by the Brady bill.

As a former member of the Houston City Council, I can assure my colleagues that these grants will be of great use by local and State authorities. It is extremely useful to be able to partake of the national technology to assist in crime fighting.

The bill also contains titles providing for a compact between the States and Federal Government to facilitate the exchange of criminal history records and also allow child care, elder care and volunteer organizations to request access to FBI fingerprint background checks. I can assure my colleagues as well, in cities that spend a lot of time with after-school programs or volunteer parks programs or recreational programs using volunteers, this is going to be of great assistance in protecting our children. Obviously, we do not suggest that our volunteers are filled with pedophiles, but how much more comfortable we will be with opening up our parks and libraries and other facilities where we have after-school programs or summer programs and using volunteers when our city governments and other volunteer associations can be assured that these people are not dangerous to our children.

This is a good, bipartisan bill. It takes advantage of the opportunities that the Federal Government have to enhance crime fighting techniques, and it is a collaborative effort between our local and Federal governments. This is a good bipartisan bill, and I urge its adoption.

Madam Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. MCCOLLUM. Madam Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Florida (Mr. FOLEY), who has been so instrumental in this bill.

Mr. FOLEY. Madam Speaker, I rise to strongly support this legislation and to thank specifically our subcommittee chairman, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. MCCOLLUM), for his extremely hard work on this issue. This bill is vitally important to America's families and its children, and I will strongly suggest that this measure here will make America safer.

This bill contains much-needed help to States across America to improve their anticrime technology. It also contains the Volunteers for Children Act, a bill of mine that this body approved unanimously many months ago, which the other body unanimously added to this important legislation.

The Volunteers for Children provisions will give volunteer groups access, if they want that access, to fingerprint-based FBI background checks. Let me reiterate the gentleman from Florida's comments a moment ago. It does not require any group to seek these background checks, nor does it incur liability if they choose not to.

This access is supported by every group concerned about using the best tools possible to protect their young charges. Organizations like the Boys and Girls Clubs have been asking for this access because fingerprint checks are virtually the only way they can know whether a person who shows up in a community to volunteer around children has, in fact, a criminal background in another State.

As a report last year by the General Accounting Office put it, "National fingerprint-based background checks may be the only effective way to readily identify the potentially worst abusers of children; that is, the pedophiles who change their names and move from State to State to continue their sexually perverse patterns of behavior."

Two of the biggest problems with using fingerprint-based FBI checks has been that they have taken too long and cost too much to use them more than occasionally. But the FBI has been developing a computerized system that will all but eliminate both those concerns once States have comparable technology. That is the crux of this overall bill before us today: helping States acquire that technology.

Madam Speaker, it is critical that we give States the help we can in upgrading their crime-fighting technology. And it is critical that we allow volunteer groups, schools and others who work with young children access to the most effective resources they need to ensure that they are not inadvertently hiring criminals to work around young children.

As Robbie Callaway, the senior vice president for the Boys and Girls Clubs of America and a strong supporter of this legislation, put it, "Our clubs and most youth-serving organizations want every possible legal tool to guarantee the safety of the children we serve."

We are all dedicated to doing what we can to protect children from harm, and this bill will significantly advance those efforts.

Again, I thank the gentleman from Florida (Mr. MCCOLLUM) for bringing this measure to the floor. I thank my local constituent, Jody Gorran, for bringing this to my attention. I want to specifically thank Erica Bryant from the staff of the gentleman from Florida (Mr. MCCOLLUM) for her very, very hard work and dedication to this issue, and of course to my staffer, Liz Nicolson, who has really worked with me to see this to success on the floor tonight, because it really does suggest that this is about protecting our children.

Is it fool-proof? No. Will it do everything? No, of course it will not. But it gives those organizations one more tool in their arsenal to protect our children.

I want to thank the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. JACKSON-LEE) for her help on this bill and the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children for weighing in on this issue when it was most timely during committee hearings that the chairman agreed to hear on this bill, and again I thank my colleagues for not only supporting the portion that I am here today to speak on, but the entire bill, because it will be an effective tool for law enforcement in this country.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Madam Speaker, this is a great bill, and I hope we can make sure it passes, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. MCCOLLUM. Madam Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Florida (Mr. MCCOLLUM) that the House suspend the rules and pass the Senate bill, S. 2202, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill, as amended, was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.
