House of Representatives

The House met at 10 a.m. and was called to order by the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. SESSIONS).

DESIGNATION OF THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following communication from the Speaker:

WASHINGTON, DC,
October 7, 1998.

I hereby designate the Honorable PETE SESSIONS to act as Speaker pro tempore on this day.

NEWT GINGRICH,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

PRAYER

The Chaplain, Reverend James David Ford, D.D., offered the following prayer:

May Your blessing, gracious God, dwell in the sacred places of life so that the words of our lips and the deeds of our hands are hallowed by Your good word and Your bountiful favor. As the psalmist has asked: ''Where shall we go from thy spirit and whether shall we flee from thy presence?'' We acknowledge, O God, that Your spirit leads us and guides us from the mountains to the valleys, from the heavens to the deepest oceans. We are thankful that Your presence in our lives, O God, sanctifies the good work that we seek to do, and we are grateful that Your spirit never departs from us. In Your name we pray. Amen.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair has examined the Journal of the last day's proceedings and announces to the House his approval thereof.

Pursuant to clause 1, rule I, the Journal stands approved.

PRESENTATION OF THE FREEDOM WORKS AWARD TO JOE WHITE, FOUNDER OF KIDS ACROSS AMERICA

(Mr. ARMEY asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. ARMEY. Mr. Speaker, I am honored today to have my good friends the gentleman from Kansas (Mr. RYUN) and the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. BLUNT) join me in presenting the Freedom Works Award to Joe White, founder of Kids Across America. I would like to bring to the Houses's attention an exceptional individual who has changed the lives of thousands of kids across this Nation.

Mr. Speaker, Joe White has taken upon himself the responsibility to minister today's generation of young people. He founded Kids Across America as part of his larger family of Christian athletic camps in an effort to reach out to inner city kids and to give all of them a chance to go to summer camp. Today, Kids Across America is able to reach approximately 4000 urban youth each summer.

Here kids can escape the troubles of the inner city and find refuge in the Ozark Mountains of Missouri for eight days. Kids get a chance to play over 25 sports, meet new friends, build relationships with a staff of 400 counselors and hear a message of hope.

Look at these young men here. You can see the smiles on their faces, that their lives will be forever changed.

Imagine a place where it is the in thing to read your bible daily, to pray for your friends, to encourage your opponents, to serve others before yourself. Imagine a place where role models and heroes are everywhere one looks. Imagine a place where peer pressure is a good thing, and violence and profanity and everything dark is left at the gate. There is no need to imagine. It can all be found at Kids Across America.

America is a great Nation, and if we are going to be able to continue to be a great Nation in the future, it will be because of dedicated men like Joe White who has voluntarily taken upon himself the responsibility to make this world a better place.

Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. BLUNT).

Mr. BLUNT. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to be here today as the Majority Leader recognizes Joe White, Joe White from my district in southwest Missouri, Joe White with a doctors degree from Southwest Baptist University, Joe White who has devoted his life to kids.

Mr. Speaker, Joe founded a foundation, the I Am Third Foundation, and I think the three principles of that foundation talk about what Joe's life is about and what these camps that the Majority Leader has talked about focus on. The I Am Third Foundation is God first, family second, and I am third. The individual is third. A life based on faith is part of these camps.

Mr. Speaker, I have heard Joe White from memory quote entire books of the bible, quote the Book of First Timothy and in Paul's letter to Timothy in First Timothy Paul says:

''You are my true child in the faith.''

Joe White becomes a father to children who need a male role model. Joe White becomes an example to kids who often do not have an example. Joe White has scholarshipped thousands of urban youth into a life and a life style for that eight days in southwest Missouri that changes their life from the time they come one year until the time so many of these want to come back and get to come back the second year.

The picture that the Majority Leader has, the smile on his face, I think says it all. Joe White makes a difference in the lives of kids.

Mr. ARMEY. Mr. Speaker, again with your continued indulgence and the graceful generosity of my colleagues on both sides of the aisle, I yield to the gentleman from Kansas (Mr. RYUN).

Mr. RYUN. Mr. Speaker, let me first of all add my congratulations to what Joe White has been able to do with the program in Missouri.

As my colleagues know, I have had the opportunity to see hands on exactly what he does with the urban teenagers, and for them to be in an environment, a Christian environment in which they can have not only their character encouraged, but also feel safe and to be with people that love them, gives them a great opportunity to experience part of what life is all about, and Joe White certainly done a great job and is worthy of this award.

Mr. ARMEY. Mr. Speaker, let me finish with this point. So many times we have said around here that the idea is bigger than the man. Joe White once again has shown us the idea is never bigger than the child.

POINT OF ORDER

Mr. PALLONE. Mr. Speaker, point of order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state his point of order.

Mr. PALLONE. No offense to the Majority Leader, Mr. Speaker, but the procedure the way I understand it is that these are 1 minute speeches that alternate with each side, and I would ask that the Speaker follow that procedure.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman is correct. The Chair will follow that procedure.

IT IS TIME FOR A NEW DIRECTION

(Mr. PALLONE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. PALLONE. Mr. Speaker, as the time runs out on the Congress, it is important to keep in mind that the Republican Congress has been a failed Congress.

The Democrats are putting out a report today called A Failed Republican Congress, Partisanship Instead of Progress, and it details how Republicans have spent a lot of time driving their partisan agenda, but very little to help the American people.

Mr. Speaker, Republicans have failed to act on the critical kitchen table issues that Americans really care about. We have had no managed care reform, no bill to reduce class size and modernize schools, no action to safeguard the surplus for Social Security, no bill to reduce teen smoking, no bill to reform our campaign finance system and no bill to increase the minimum wage for working families.

Republicans have let down the American people. It is time for a new direction. Congress needs to put the public interest ahead of partisan politics. There is still a few days left here. I think we should see some action on HMO reform, on education initiatives and on safeguarding Social Security. So far we are seeing nothing.

IS THE PRESIDENT REALLY LIKE A CEO OF A CORPORATION?

(Mr. PAPPAS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. PAPPAS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to ask a question that has been bothering me for a few weeks now.

In response to the ongoing situation over at the White House, many of his apologists say we should treat the President of the United States as the CEO of the world's largest business. My question is, if he is the CEO, when is our next dividend? When will the CEO allow the shareholders to reap the benefits of excess revenues?

The gentleman from Texas (Mr. ARCHER) outlines the Republican agenda of lower taxes while saving Social Security. Republicans are proud to see the fruits of their insistence on sane fiscally conservative spending policies. The Republican tax relief plan addresses the marriage tax penalty, provides for tax simplification, increases access to health care for small businesses and provides tax relief for farmers. By opposing the Republican plan for tax relief, the President would prove he is still the leading proponent of big government.

Mr. Speaker, I urge this Congress to move tax reform now.

VOTE AGAINST THE LABOR-HHS-EDUCATION APPROPRIATIONS BILL

(Ms. SANCHEZ asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Ms. SANCHEZ. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in opposition to the Labor-HHS-Education appropriations bill. With a veto threat hovering over this measure, I cannot understand why a bipartisan compromise has still not been reached. There are too many provisions that are just unacceptable, not just for Democrats, but for our kids, for our schools and for our families. Rather than hiring more teachers, building more schools, reducing class size, this bill instead shortchanges our schools. It provides $2 billion less, less than the administration requested for education programs. It cuts Goals 2000 in half. It eliminates the Summer Jobs Program. It cuts school to work opportunities.

Mr. Speaker, I could go on and on. Eliminating the Summers Jobs Program will deny the world of work for half a million youth.

My colleagues talked earlier about a camp. Do not send them to camp. Teach them how to be a productive citizen. Does the majority party really want our youth out on the streets instead of learning good work habits?

This bill is just not fair. Until changes are made, I urge my colleagues to vote against the Labor-HHS-Education appropriations bill.

TRUST, TRUTH AND ACCOUNTABILITY

(Mr. BALLENGER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. BALLENGER. Mr. Speaker, let me give a few quotes from our President.

October 1992, and I quote:

I think trust and trustworthiness is an issue in this campaign, and I think I have demonstrated it in my life.

In December of 1992 concerning the Iran-Contra pardons the President-elect said:

I am concerned about any action which sends a signal that if you work for the government you're above the law or not telling the truth to Congress under oath is somehow less serious than not telling the truth to some other body under oath.

October 1995:

The road to tyranny, we must never forget, begins with the destruction of truth.

And June of 1996:

The other thing we have to do is to take seriously the role of this problem, older men who prey on under age women. There are consequences to decisions. One way or another people always wind up being held accountable.

SOMETHING IS WRONG WITH THIS POLICY

(Mr. TRAFICANT asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Speaker, in America we have record trade deficits, record bankruptcies, record debt, consolidations, downsizing, more American jobs keep going overseas, a schizophrenia stock market, all symptoms of a major economic problem in America.

□ 1015

After all this, the experts say American taxpayers must keep sending more money to the International Monetary Fund to prop up foreign countries to avert disaster. Beam me up, Mr. Speaker.

When American dollars end up in the pockets of foreign politicians who then vote against America at the United Nations, something is wrong with this policy, very wrong. I say these foreign countries do not need American taxpayer dollars. They need reform. Think about it.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back what economy we have left.

PRESIDENT THREATENS TO VETO SPENDING BILLS

(Mr. GIBBONS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GIBBONS. Mr. Speaker, I am very and deeply disappointed by reports that the President intends to veto several spending bills over so-called environmental riders. Further reports indicate that this is part of the President's politically motivated effort to force a government shutdown.

This country cannot afford another government shutdown, particularly in these trying economic times.

A decision to simply veto spending bills without good-faith efforts to negotiate policy differences will jeopardize billions of dollars of increases for wildlife, recreation, parks, forests, endangered species, public health, and other important priorities.

Mr. Speaker, the President's rhetoric is unhelpful in resolving honest policy differences and unnecessarily erodes the public trust in the legislative process. Hard working men and women cannot afford another government shutdown, but it appears the President has played partisan politics above people, above the environment, and above the best interest of this Nation.

The President has an open invitation to negotiate, in good faith, areas of legitimate policy disagreement. For the sake of the American people, let us hope he accepts this invitation.

VOTE NO ON THE OMNIBUS PARKS PORK BILL

(Ms. MCKINNEY asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Ms. MCKINNEY. Mr. Speaker, today's Washington Post Editorial calls the Republican Omnibus Parks Bill ''pork.'' The Washington Post did not get it quite right. It is not just a pork bill, it is the pork bill straight from the environmental butchers. People in Georgia are very concerned about the bill's provision for Cumberland Island. This bill will carve up Cumberland Island, so that it can be served on a silver platter to one of America's wealthiest families.

The butchery of Cumberland Island is not just pork, it is old fashioned Republican service with a smile. What else can we expect from the Republican Party. They failed their polluting friends when they wanted to dirty our water and air. Now they are trying to let their other friends buy our national treasures. In contrast to the TV commercial, this work is not the other white meat. This pork bill is Republican green.

Republicans have always believed that America should reward the wealthiest and most privileged among us. And what better way to keep giving to the rich than by robbing the American people of a national treasurer of Cumberland Island.

If this bill makes it out of Congress, I will urge the President to veto it. I ask my colleagues to vote ''no'' on this pork bill.

MANAGED CARE REFORM

(Mr. GREEN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GREEN. Mr. Speaker, I am glad to hear my colleagues trying to define the Democrats, and sometimes they would not know one if they saw one.

But the problem we have this year is that this is a historic Congress. We are getting ready to vote tomorrow on an historic vote on opening an inquiry of impeachment of the President. But this, more than any Congress, has done nothing at all for the American people on the bread and butter issues.

But what I want to talk about this morning is the HMO reform that should have been passed, should have been passed by the Senate, and the quality bill should have been passed by the House.

It is clear that this do-nothing Congress has been by design this year, because they don't want to make the changes that the American people want. The polls show the American people want HMO reform. They want their doctors to be able to help them make medical decisions instead of a gag rule. They want to be able to appeal decisions made by a bureaucrat with an insurance company.

They want some choices in their medical care. They want access to specialty care, and they want emergency care when they need it, not based on somebody deciding, no, you cannot go to your closest emergency room.

That is why this is a do-nothing Congress, and that is why tomorrow, even with this historic vote, we are going to go home without providing any help to the American people for their health care.

PINOCCHIO

(Ms. PITTS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. PITTS. Mr. Speaker, there is a children's story that is instructive in these critical days. It goes something like this: There was once a little boy who lived in a little white house. His name was Pinocchio. Pinocchio was a wooden puppet who came to life and had many unhappy adventures because he was very selfish. Pinocchio had trouble with telling the truth.

Whenever Pinocchio told a lie, his nose grew longer. Once, when he told several lies, his nose became so long he could not even get out of his little white house. I wonder, Mr. Speaker, how long his nose could get with 7 months of not telling the truth.

Like Pinocchio, some people today have a problem with telling the truth.

In the end, Pinocchio became a real boy, and he did the honorable thing; he told the truth. I wish certain people today would learn the same lesson, those in the big White House.

LEGACY OF REPUBLICAN CONTROLLED CONGRESS

(Ms. DELAURO asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. DELAURO. Mr. Speaker, for the past 2 years, the Republican majority has failed to act on the basic issues that face hardworking Americans. This Congress has failed to pass meaningful HMO reform, killed efforts to reduce teen smoking, undermined attempts to reduce school class size, ignored the need to bolster the minimum wage, and suffocated serious campaign finance reform.

Because Republicans control this Congress, the American people are not guaranteed that they can choose their own doctor. They do not have guaranteed access to hospital emergency rooms. And American people cannot hold HMOs accountable for medical decisions.

Because Republicans control this Congress, our children will not have smaller class sizes next year. Because Republicans control this Congress, teenagers will not be safe from big tobacco's nefarious marketing and consistent lying. Because Republicans control this Congress, there will be no increase in the minimum wage for families who work hard and who play by the rules.

Tough luck, America. Republicans are in charge. For 2 years, America's needs have been ignored. That is the legacy of this Republican controlled Congress.

MORE GOOD NEWS: DOLLARS TO THE CLASSROOM REPEALS GOALS 2000

(Mrs. LINDA SMITH of Washington asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mrs. LINDA SMITH of Washington. Mr. Speaker, I rise today with more good news. Yes, it is true. Above the clamor of scandals and the President's threat to shut the government down, this Congress is doing good things. We are taking steps to shrink the power of the Federal Government into the lives and pocketbooks of American families.

We just passed the Dollars to the Classroom Act. This bill can reduce classrooms size all over the Nation if the Senate will just pass it and the President will not veto it.

You see, because President Clinton himself said, and I agree with him, I think we have clear direction and he should not veto this one, he said, ''We cannot ask the American people to spend more on education until we do a better job with the money we have got now.''

As I look around this town, Washington, D.C., and see all these big buildings filled with bureaucracies, I know those folks that many make $70,000 to $100,000 should go home, and we should send that money back to the classrooms.

Our Dollars to the Classroom Act also abolishes Goal 2000. This is an experiment that did not work. We will send that money back to the classrooms to achieve the goals of education excellence. Getting more money in the classroom is truly good news.

RUMORS OF GOVERNMENT SHUTDOWN

(Mr. BOB SCHAFFER of Colorado asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BOB SCHAFFER of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, the Republicans want to move in one direction and the Democrats in another. This year, like every year, on almost every single spending bill, the division is quite clear. Republicans want to cut back on the size of government. Democrats want to expand it.

We have different visions, different ideas about what government should do, what it can do, and how much of the government spending is an outrageous waste of taxpayers' money.

But our differences are no excuse for a government shutdown, and I am very depressed to hear the persistent rumors that many in the White House are urging the President to provoke a confrontation, shut down the government, and divert attention away from the crisis in the White House.

They want to shut down the government and then try to blame it on Republicans. This is an interesting way, indeed, to combat public cynicism toward government.

I urge the President to reject the advice of his more liberal advisors and continue to work with the Republicans toward an honorable compromise on the remaining spending bills. Do not shut down the government, Mr. President.

SAVE SOCIAL SECURITY; ELIMINATE MARRIAGE TAX PENALTY

(Mr. WELLER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. WELLER. Mr. Speaker, I have an important question to ask this morning. Why does the President want to squander the surplus on new government bureaucratic spending? Why does the President want to squander the surplus on State Department spending and defense spending and, of course, a computer fix for government bureaucracies?

This House just a few weeks ago made a commitment to save Social Security and to use the surplus to save Social Security. This House made a commitment to set aside $1.4 trillion, 90 percent of the projected tax revenue surplus, over the next 10 years and use that to save Social Security.

The remaining dime on the dollar we would then use to eliminate the marriage tax penalty, help expand, build new classrooms in schools back in Illinois, help family farmers, help family businesses, help those who want to send their kids off to college.

Mr. Speaker, it is interesting that the President says, if we use $7 billion of the tax revenue surplus next year to eliminate the marriage tax penalty, that is squandering. But then he turns right around and says let us use $14 billion, twice as much, for government spending, bureaucratic spending. Mr. Speaker, you cannot have it both ways. Let us save Social Security. Let us eliminate the marriage tax penalty.

MARCH FOR CUBAN FREEDOM AND DEMOCRACY

(Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. Mr. Speaker, this Saturday, the South Florida community will hold a march through the streets of Miami to reaffirm our commitment with the Cuban people in their struggle for freedom against the last totalitarian dictatorship of our hemisphere, that of Fidel Castro.

This march will join our diverse community as one, under one ideal; that the people of Cuba are not alone in their struggle for freedom. This march will ask the Clinton administration to stop appeasing the Cuban Communist regime and start enforcing the sanction laws that this Congress has imposed on the Castro tyranny that the White House has conveniently refused to apply.

We will also ask the international community to stop its immoral investments in Castro's slave-economy that only serve to strengthen the dictatorship.

It will be a solemn occasion to remember the hundreds of thousands of victims who have fallen prey to the Castro regime over its almost 40 years reign of terror and repression.

The thousands of people who will walk through the streets of Miami this Saturday will send a clear message to the tyrant in Havana: We will not rest until the Cuban people reclaim their freedom and democracy.

HOW THE U.N. AND THE CLINTON ADMINISTRATION IS CREATING A MORE DANGEROUS WORLD FOR ALL

(Mr. PETERSON of Pennsylvania asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. PETERSON of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, the United Nations, led by the United States, is getting pushed around by a rogue nation with an unfeeling dictator, Saddam Hussein.

There is no other way to say it, Mr. Speaker, the United States is sitting idly by while this tyrant, Saddam Hussein, is thumbing his nose at us. As former U.N. Inspector Scott Ritter said before the House Committee on National Security, the reality is that Iraq is winning its bid to retaining its prohibited weapons.

□ 1030

Continuation of sanctions as a sole means of enforcing Security Council resolutions is a self-defeating, weak policy.

The Clinton administration has intervened to prevent surprise inspections in Iraq because it wishes to avoid a new conflict with Baghdad. I cannot stress enough how dangerous this policy is.

The question is, are the United Nations and the Clinton administration gambling with all of our lives? Unfortunately, it appears they are.

TO SAVE THE PARTY, DEMOCRATS MUST VOTE TO IMPEACH

(Mr. BARR of Georgia asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. BARR of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, on the issue of impeachment, I submit to the House an article submitted to the Wall Street Journal by Jerome M. Zeifman, who is a lifelong Democrat and was chief counsel to the House Committee on the Judiciary at the time of the Nixon inquiry.

He writes, ''As a lifelong Democrat and chief counsel of the House Judiciary Committee at the time of the Nixon impeachment inquiry, I believe I have a personal responsibility to speak out about the current impeachment crisis. And I believe my fellow Democrats on today's Judiciary Committee have a moral, ethical and constitutional responsibility to vote to impeach President Clinton. The positions taken by the President and his die-hard Democratic defenders in Congress and the media are indefensible.

''We are living in dangerous times. I believe the President has personally brought his office into scandal and disrepute.

''Having long championed traditional Democratic causes, I simply cannot accept Mr. Clinton's own shameless defense and his supporters' offensive attacks on Congress and its traditional rules. Like most traditional Democrats, like most Americans, I have grave reservations about Mr. Clinton's morality and ethics. In my view there is now more than substantial evidence to consider our President a felon who has committed impeachable offenses.''

NO GOVERNMENT SHUTDOWN

(Mr. THUNE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. THUNE. Mr. Speaker, Republicans in Congress have a message to the President: do not shut the government down.

Republicans have been working with this administration since last spring, last spring, Mr. Speaker, to avoid a government shutdown this year. I think we would agree that it is not in the national interests to shut down the government. How tragic it would be if the President were to force a shutdown for political reasons.

Republicans are willing to reach a compromise with the White House on our remaining differences, just as we did last summer when we balanced the budget and cut taxes at the same time. Although there are still significant differences between the White House and Republicans in Congress on the remaining spending bills, these differences can be resolved without a government shutdown. In almost every case, the administration wants to spend more, Republicans want to spend less.

Let us find common ground and avoid a government shutdown.

CONFERENCE REPORT ON H.R. 3694, INTELLIGENCE AUTHORIZATION ACT FOR FISCAL YEAR 1999

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, pursuant to the unanimous consent agreement of October 6, 1998, I call up the conference report on the bill (H.R. 3694) to authorize appropriations for fiscal year 1999 for intelligence and intelligence-related activities of the United States Government, the Community Management Account, and the Central Intelligence Agency Retirement and Disability System, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SESSIONS). Pursuant to the order of the House of Tuesday, October 6, 1998, the conference report is considered as having been read.

(For conference report and statement, see proceedings of the House of October 5, 1998, at page H9522.)

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Florida (Mr. GOSS) and the gentleman from Washington (Mr. DICKS) each will control 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Florida (Mr. GOSS).

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I know that the gentleman from Washington (Mr. DICKS) is on his way to the Chamber at this time, and I am going to read from a prepared opening statement, which I know the gentleman will have access to, so I am going to proceed with my remarks.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the conference report to accompany H.R. 3694, the Intelligence Reauthorization Act for Fiscal Year 1999.

This has been a busy summer from an intelligence and national security vantage point. Since House passage of H.R. 3694 in early May, we have witnessed nuclear tests in Pakistan and India; terrorist attacks on 2 of our embassies in Africa, and U.S. counterstrikes against terrorist-linked targets; a worsening world financial crisis that has spread from Asia to Russia and threatens now parts of Latin America; the eviction of United Nations weapons inspectors from Iraq; a deepening crisis in Kosovo that could embroil NATO troops before the end of the year, if not the end of this speech; and numerous ballistic missile tests by hostile and potentially hostile countries.

In addition, 2 major studies of our intelligence capabilities and processes were conducted this summer. The Rumsfeld Commission study brought to light the increasing pace of ballistic missile proliferation and the shrinking warning times that we can expect given our current intelligence collection posture. The Jeremiah Report, conducted in the wake of India's nuclear tests, highlighted several gaps in our analytical and reporting processes. Both reports expressed concern that foreign governments are increasingly able to hide their activities from us due, apparently, to their familiarity with our intelligence methods and our capabilities.

The point of recapitulating these developments and reports is to highlight the continuing critical need for good intelligence in the post-Cold War world, in this era that we find ourselves today. This after-Cold War era is an era that has seen a significant downsizing of our armed forces.

What I have not spelled out is the successes the community has had as well. All those bad things that did not happen and do not happen because we do have good intelligence capability, even though we have downsized that as well, and we need to reverse that trend.

Good intelligence enables policymakers in the government to head off crises before they occur. It provides an advantage to our military planners in everything from procurement to deployment and saves the lives of citizens and soldiers, and saving the lives of citizens and soldiers is certainly something we are about.

Mr. Speaker, I am pleased that this conference report incorporates the lessons learned from this busy summer. It provides needed investments in modernization of signals intelligence; revitalization of human intelligence, or espionage, capabilities; strengthening all-source analysis; and enhancement of covert action capabilities. It also includes a significant increase in research and development funding to ensure that we can stay one step ahead of the pack and compensate for foreign denial and deception practices, which, as I said, have gotten ever better.

This conference report provides new protections for ''whistle-blowers,'' intelligence community employees who report on potential problems within their agencies, even though it may involve classified information. I believe we have struck an appropriate balance between the need to preserve employees' rights and the unique retirement within the intelligence arena to safeguard classified information and, of course, national security. We have created a front door for rank and file information-sharing with Congress. This is a good thing.

I know that this legislation is the product of a bipartisan, bicameral effort. I am grateful for the hard work of all of our Members and the entire committee staff. I know that it took many long hours and a few sleepless nights to get this conference report completed.

I will call particular attention to the effort of my friend, the gentleman from Washington (Mr. DICKS), the ranking member of this committee, for his dedication to intelligence and national security matters. I am disappointed to say that this will be his last appearance on the House floor managing an intelligence authorization bill, I am told. The Rules of the House require the rotation of all members of our committee. The gentleman from Washington (Mr. DICKS) has been a hard-charging, ardent supporter of improving U.S. intelligence capabilities, especially those in the advanced technical area. Indeed, his expertise in that area is unrivaled, in my view, on Capitol Hill.

While I cannot say that we have always agreed on the substance of all issues during my 2 years as chairman of the committee, I think it is very fair to say that we have always agreed to sit down and do the extra work necessary to resolve issues in a reasonable manner, and I would add in a very pleasant way.

Mr. Speaker, I say to the gentleman that both the community and the Committee on Intelligence have benefited from his 8 years of service here and I know that we can continue to count on his input, wisdom and judgment on crucial matters in the years to come on which he has so much expertise.

I will also pay tribute to the others members who are rotating off the committee or retiring next year. We have been extremely fortunate to have the distinguished chairman of the Subcommittee on National Security, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. YOUNG) as a senior member of the Committee on Intelligence. Indeed, this has been his second tenure on the committee for a total of 14 years. We have benefited from the gentleman's wisdom and his willingness to find the resources necessary for intelligence in some very lean years for overall defense spending, and I thank him, particularly for his help in the committee this past week when I could not be here and he substituted for me very ably. I know I can count on him too for his advise and assistance.

The committee is further losing 2 valued democratic members to retirement: the gentlewoman from California (Ms. HARMAN), and the gentleman from Colorado (Mr. SKAGGS). We thank them for their service and dedication and wish them luck in their new endeavors, and I personally thank them for the commitment and time that they have given on so many issues on the committee.

Finally I would be remiss if I did not mention the recent departures of professional staff members Mary Engebreth and Susan Ouellette, 2 women who have worked on the committee since 1995. Susan was our expert in the areas of analysis and defense intelligence, and Mary was our resident rocket scientist. We are going to miss Mary, and we are going to miss Susan as well.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to support this conference report.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. DICKS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

First, I want to thank the distinguished chairman and we want to welcome him back, although this has been a difficult time for he and his family. We are certainly glad to hear the positive news about his wife, Mariel.

I want to say that I appreciate his kind remarks. It has been a great pleasure to serve on this committee for eight years, and we have had bipartisan cooperation. I do not think there has ever been a time when we have not come to this floor unified behind the intelligence bill, and I think that is good. This is one area where partisanship should not be a part. It should be only how do we get the best intelligence for the American people.

Mr. Speaker, the goal of any conference committee should be to produce an agreement that improves the bills submitted to it. I believe the conference on the intelligence authorization for fiscal year 1999 achieved that result, and I urge the adoption of the conference report.

I am especially pleased that the conferees were willing to reconsider earlier legislative recommendations which I believe would have negatively impacted the ability to collect reliable and timely intelligence through our national technical means. Make no mistake about it, had these recommendations gone forward, the consequences would have been felt for years, primarily by those whose responsibility it is to ensure that United States military forces operate with maximum efficiency and minimum casualties.

The conferees did not, however, fully resist the temptation to unduly encumber highly complex programs, particularly new ones, with directives which I believe were unwise in terms of constraining the flexibility of those who are supposed to manage these programs. Congressional oversight should be vigorous and constant, but it should be reasonable as well. I am concerned that we are prematurely forcing technical programs into a budgetary straitjacket that will force them to either satisfy fewer requirements, or to become operational much later than necessary. We must never lose sight of the fact that congressionally imposed restraints on the development of intelligence collection programs can have real effects on the Nation's security.

The conference report contains a resolution of a matter on which the House and Senate intelligence committees have worked for some time, the means by which intelligence community employees can bring significant information to the attention of the intelligence committees. In perhaps no other aspect of the relationship between the executive and legislative branches is the Congress as dependent on information from the object of its oversight as it is in the area of intelligence.

We can simply not do our job if the intelligence agencies are not forthcoming with information, the bad as well as the good. We must know that impediments do not exist which would prevent intelligence community employees from bringing important information to the attention of the Intelligence committees.

I want to commend our chairman, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. GOSS) for crafting an alternative means by which to assist and encourage employees who have significant information in bringing it to Congress, and the leadership of the Senate Intelligence Committee for raising an important issue and insisting that it be addressed.

Mr. Speaker, we should be proud of the fact that even in the chairman's absence we had a spirited debate on this subject, but the chairman prevailed, so his deft hand and good work were felt, but were felt properly. The job that the chairman did in crafting this legislation and refining it was exemplary, and I commend him for it.

My service on the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence saw the successful prosecution of the Persian Gulf War and the collapse of the Soviet Union. It also saw greater proliferation of technologies associated with weapons of mass destruction, protracted ethnic conflicts, the possibility of information warfare, and persistent terrorist threats.

I have been continually impressed in my eight years on the committee by the need of our policymakers and military commanders for reliable and timely intelligence. I wish at times they had made better use of the intelligence available to them. To stay ahead in the collection, analysis, processing, and dissemination of actionable intelligence is admitedly costly. The authorization levels in this conference report exceed the President's request by less than one percent. The amount authorized is substantial, but I am concerned it may not be enough. We must insist that intelligence activities be pursued with efficiency, that funds provided be used wisely and well. We would make a mistake, in my judgment, however, if we did not invest enough in intelligence, and thereby risked our Nation's preeminence in this area. I hope in the years to come we will be able to devote more resources to this critical underpinning of our security.

Mr. Speaker, I commend the conference agreement to the House, and recommend its approval. I, too, want to compliment the staff of the committee. I think the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence has been well served by having an outstanding staff. Mike Sheehy has been the director on our side, and I want to thank him and all the members of the Democratic staff for the outstanding work they have done, especially for me over the last four years as the ranking member. I also want to thank the majority staff; they have done an outstanding job.

I think maybe our finest hour was on the question of encryption, an issue which still has not been resolved, but I must say that I felt very proud of the fact that we had a strong majority vote out of our committee. I think we sent a very powerful message about the importance of this technology, and of the challenge that law enforcement and our intelligence agencies have in dealing with it, and why it is so important for this Congress to be very, very careful how we proceed so we do not undermine law enforcement and national security.

Mr. Speaker, I thank the chairman again for his kind remarks.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I think Members and those watching the proceedings can see the caliber of people in the ranking member, as exemplified by what he said and the service he has provided.

People need to know that the way our system works with oversight is that the most sensitive matters are shared with the ranking member, the chairman of this body and the other body, and I cannot imagine a more honorable man, a more efficient, capable professional than the gentleman from Washington (Mr. DICKS). I mean what I say. We are sorely going to miss him up there. I am sure the gentleman's shoes will be properly filled, but it is going to be a tough deal.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to my colleague, the distinguished gentleman from Florida (Mr. MCCOLLUM), who is chairman of our Subcommittee on Human Intelligence, Analysis, and Counterintelligence.

(Mr. MCCOLLUM asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. MCCOLLUM. I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me, Mr. Speaker. I wish to express my appreciation for this bill, for the conference report, for all the work that has been done, and for everybody who has put a lot of time in on it. It authorizes funding for the intelligence and intelligence-related activities for this coming year.

As the chairman of the Subcommittee on Human Intelligence, Analysis, and Counterintelligence, I am pleased to say the report continues the efforts of the gentleman from Florida (Chairman GOSS) and of my subcommittee to put more eyes and ears on the streets around the world to detect, penetrate, and disrupt the movement of drugs to our cities, the planning of terrorists against our citizens, the shipment of nuclear components to rogue states, and the actions of Nations against our interests abroad.

What this country faced during the Cold War was fundamentally a single military threat from the combined forces of the Warsaw Pact. Today, standing on the rubble of the Berlin Wall, we face new transnational threats that in many cases arise in smaller, poorer, and more often obscure capitals and cities in Latin America, the Near East, and Africa.

Drug cartels reach out from the coca fields of southern Colombia and the poppy fields of Burma to poison our cities. Terrorist networks run from rural Afghanistan to Nairobi, Dar es Salaam, the Balkans, and even New York to kill our citizens and threaten our peace.

Decisions taken in Tehran, Baku, T'Blisi, and Ashgabat may affect the exploitation of the vast oil fields of the Caspian Sea, and through that, the world's economy.

It is not enough to know how badly our cities are being poisoned by cocaine and heroin from Latin America and East Asia. It is not enough to know how large a crater was left behind by terrorists in Africa. It is not enough to document how adversely our interests might be affected by the route of a pipeline through central Eurasia.

Rather, we must know the plans and intentions of those behind the transnational threats and the concerns that touch our country, its citizens, and its interests. We must know all of this before it is too late for us to act. We need to know the who, the where, and the how of drug shipments coming to Miami, New York and San Diego; of a truck bomb to be left in the front of an embassy in Africa; of a plan for hostile control of oil from the Caspian sea.

For that we must have the eyes and ears of our case officers, and technology, on the streets where these threats originate. No amount of logic or divination by our analysts back here in Washington can pick up the launch of a drug boat in the Caribbean or the Eastern Pacific, or the fusing of a bomb intended for a U.S. embassy. That must be done by the brave men and women of the intelligence community, on the front lines of this national endeavor. That Mr. Speaker is where they must be if the U.S. is to move away from being reactive to the transnational threats to becoming proactive in our efforts to frustrate and hinder as best we can future catastrophes.

With that, I would like to speak to one particular portion of the bill which has given pause to some of our Members this morning. That concerns a very minor change but a very significant change in the law dealing with wiretaps.

As the terrorist threat has grown, it has become apparent that we have had a problem, as people decide to evade a wiretap that is ordered by a court, and they decide to go to other phones than the stationary phone in the single court order that is presented, where you have just a single phone you are allowed to tap.

We have had a lot of debate about this issue. In this bill there is a provision that I think is very refined that goes to the issue. We have a provision in this bill that simply changes the law to say that a court, when it goes about considering whether to order a wiretap that allows, as it can now do, somebody to be followed and every phone they use to be tapped, rather than simply a stationary phone in the order, and the current law allows that, but instead of requiring the court to find an intent, a specific criminal intent to evade the tap, that instead we may reach the conclusion, the judge may reach the conclusion that the person is evading the tap by the circumstances that are presented, because the intent is very hard to prove a lot of times.

There is no expansion of more phones that can be tapped. In fact, there is a narrowing of that. In fact, in our provision we narrow it so now, if this becomes law, once somebody leaves an area where a phone is, let's say he is on a street corner and walks away from a phone booth and somebody is following him along, figuring out what he is doing, that phone cannot be tapped anymore. We cannot tap a phone to listen in on anybody's conversation except the person who is indeed the person being suspected of whatever it is that we are tapping their phone on.

This is a very minor change. No Member should mistake this as some major addition to the wiretap laws. It is not. I would encourage everybody to vote for this bill. It is a very important bill.

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. DICKS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 7 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from California (Mr. DIXON).

Mr. DIXON. Mr. Speaker, I thank the ranking member for yielding time to me.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of the conference report, H.R. 3694, the Intelligence Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1999. I also want to recognize the hard and long hours of leadership that the gentleman from Florida (Chairman GOSS) has dedicated to producing a bipartisan bill that provides the necessary resources to our Nation's intelligence community.

The gentleman from Florida (Mr. GOSS) was joined in his efforts by the ranking Democratic member, the gentleman from Washington (Mr. NORM DICKS), who is serving his final year on the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence. The committee will certainly miss the gentleman from Washington (Mr. DICKS), his insights, and continued input that he has had into the areas of reconnaissance and other advanced technology problems we have addressed.

I suspect that it will be difficult if not impossible to replace him on the committee. I will miss his presence in the committee's hearing room but I look forward to his continuing leadership on the Subcommittee on National Security of the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. Speaker, the conference report authorizes appropriate levels of funding to support our country's cadre of human intelligence case officers. These individuals toil in anonymity and often times perform the most sensitive and dangerous operations in furtherance of our national security. The duties and responsibilities of human intelligence case officers are multiple, and the training needed to produce an effective case officer is rigorous and intense.

The measure we are presently considering provides badly needed resources to the Directorate of Operations of the Central Intelligence Agency. It is within this directorate that CIA's case officers reside. Additionally, resources are also provided for the Defense Human Intelligence Service, which houses the Department of Defense's case officers.

The resources authorized by this conference report provide for additional training to ensure that case officers possess the necessary skills to meet future intelligence challenges, such as terrorism, proliferation, and narcotics trafficking.

Human intelligence is the one form of information that provides policymakers a look at the plans and intentions of other countries, foreign organizations, and terrorist groups. This bill also provides for the necessary tools that case officers need to carry out operations while providing for their personal security and that of their assets. Technology and its uses can only take us so far, but it is the human intelligence that often provides the critical degree of corroboration.

To ensure that these resources are put to the best possible uses, I will continue to monitor these programs during the next Congress in an effort to be certain that the initiatives designed to enhance our human intelligence capabilities are implemented.

Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to report that this conference report authorizes resources for continuing undergraduate training programs at CIA, NSA, and DIA. This program will be one of the many legacies of the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. LOUIS STOKES), who is retiring after 30 years of service to this Nation.

When the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. STOKES) served as chairman of the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence, he was struck by the lack of minorities in the intelligence community. Even today the fact is that the intelligence community lags behind the Federal labor sector in its representation of minorities and women.

The undergraduate training program identifies and recruits qualified minorities out of high school who have demonstrated abilities in disciplines essential to the effective performance of intelligence missions. These students are provided a scholarship to colleges or universities of their choosing, and in return agree to work for the sponsoring agency for a specified length of time.

Last summer I attended the graduation ceremonies of students in NSA's program. I was impressed by the quality and the caliber of the students, and left with confidence that the future of our intelligence community is in good hands. This report represents a continuing commitment to the undergraduate training program and to the ideals of equality of opportunity. I will continue to review the administration of these important programs in succeeding years to ensure that they are meeting their goals of providing equal employment opportunities to women and minorities.

Mr. Speaker, the threat to our Nation posed by international terrorism was made abundantly clear with the bombing of the embassies in Kenya and Tanzania. The threat to our national security posed by nuclear proliferation was underscored when India and Pakistan detonated nuclear devices.

Finally, the devastation inflicted on our fellow Americans by international narcotics traffickers is visible in every city, village, and township. This conference report authorizes resources to enable the intelligence community to mount operations against these transitional threats. It will not be an easy chore to combat these threats, but this conference report arms the men and women of the intelligence community with the weapons they need to meet these challenges.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, I must pay tribute to the gentleman from Colorado (Mr. SKAGGS) and the gentlewoman from California (Ms. HARMAN) who are both leaving the committee. They have certainly served the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence well.

I too would like to thank the staff on a bipartisan way for their total cooperation, but would like to single out one member who is leaving us and that is Mr. Humphrey, Democratic senior counsel, who is moving on to another Federal Agency. I have had an opportunity to work with him on an issue very, very closely. I appreciate his abilities and admire him for moving out at the appropriate time and look forward to our continued friendship.

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Florida (Mr. YOUNG) my colleague and friend, the subcommittee Cardinal of extraordinary importance to the intelligence effort.

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Florida for yielding me the time.

I want to say first that it has been a real honor to serve as a Member of the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence, this term for 8 years and in the previous term for 6 years, and to be entrusted with some of the most critical secrets relative to our own national security during that period of time.

I am real honored to work with people like the gentleman from Florida (Chairman GOSS), my distinguished colleague who before coming to Congress even had his own outstanding record as a member of our intelligence community, and the gentleman from Washington (Mr. DICKS), our ranking member.

The gentleman from Washington and I have had a chance to work together for a long time as members of the Subcommittee on National Security of the Committee on Appropriations, which I have the privilege to chair.

Mr. Speaker, I want to say that these two Members, and the other members of our committee, have dedicated their lives to the security of the United States of America without any sign of partisanship, without any discussion or controversy, other than sometimes good honest opinions on what might be right or what might be wrong.

As has been pointed out, the staff has been unusual in their dedication to the members of the committee, and to the mission of the committee.

This is a good bill. I wanted to start off by saying that this bill meets the requirements of our intelligence community, but actually it does not. There are a lot more things that we need to be doing that we have not been able to do in this bill because of the financial limitations.

But it does a good job and it is important that the United States of America, as the leading Nation in the world, the leading military Nation in the world, that our Nation have the ability to hear or see what potential threat there might be to us, to our people, and to our national interest. And that is what intelligence is all about.

Whether we are dealing with a military situation such as we dealt with in Iraq with Saddam Hussein, or in Bosnia, or potentially in Kosovo, wherever it might be, Korea is one of the most realistic examples of where good intelligence is necessary, because military operations could happen overnight. And especially in places like the Mideast. We have to be aware of what a potential threat there is out there.

After the Iron Curtain melted and the Berlin Wall came down, many of us felt that we could breathe a sigh of relief. No more threats to our interests, no more threats to our own security. And all of the sudden up from the sands of the deserts of Iraq came Saddam Hussein.

We do not know who might be next to raise the ugly threat of a threat against the United States militarily or one of the growing threats is terrorism. The terrorists operate in the dark of the night with stealth, sneaky tactics. We have to not only be aware of the military, but also aware of the potential threat from terrorism.

Also another major subject is drug interdiction; to detect who the drug movers are that are bringing the devastating drugs into our country that are so devastating. This bill goes a long way towards meeting those requirements.

But I must say there is more that needs to be done, Mr. Speaker. And with the leadership of the gentleman from Florida (Chairman GOSS) and the gentleman from Washington (Mr. DICKS) and the members of the committee, I am satisfied that we will meet those obligations.

I am also proud to say that the Subcommittee on Appropriations that I have the privilege to chair works extremely closely with the Members and the staff of the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence, because we have the funding responsibility. We are obligated to find the money that this legislation authorizes. We have had a tremendous working relationship. We are all working together for what is in the best interest of the United States of America.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the conference report to accompany House bill, H.R. 3694, that authorizes funds for intelligence and intelligence-related activities for Fiscal Year 1999. This conference report, Mr. Speaker, reflects a constant theme: That, in order to protect our nation, we must provide for an Intelligence Community that can be strategic, as well as a tactical; flexible, as well as resolute; and worldwide, as well as specialized.

What do I mean?

Strategic as well as Tactical: Our conference report has paid close attention to the needs of the Department of Defense for tactical intelligence as reflected in the request for the Tactical Intelligence and Related Activities program, or TIARA, and for the Joint Military Intelligence Program, or JMIP. For both these programs, we have invested in needed improvements and capabilities aimed at providing our armed forces with the information that they need to operate effectively in the myriad of situations that they are now asked to address. This includes peacekeeping assignments, as well as direct military confrontation. And whether that action might be with Iraq or in Kosovo, we must work to make sure that the men and women that we are putting in harm's way have the tactical edge. That edge is comprised of raw information and analysis * * * in other words: Intelligence.

But tactical intelligence alone will not win the day. Prior to deployment of our military forces, regardless of the mission, various types of strategic intelligence collection and analysis are required in order to ensure success. This strategic intelligence ranges from human intelligence that protects our forces by warning of upcoming plans and intentions of those who look for opportunities to hurt, sometimes fatally, our troops, to indications and warnings of key, significant activities that give us technical insight into the types of weaponry and forces that our military will confront in the years to come.

Put simply, the military must have both strategic and tactical intelligence to be successful in defending our interests and way of life in this ear of worldwide turmoil. Mr. Speaker, in my capacity as Chairman of the National Security Subcommittee for Appropriations, I have the luxury to look across the broad spectrum of our nation's defense. I can say, without reservation, that intelligence is the first line of defense. Without it, without the investments being made through this conference report, we do nothing less than risk our national security. It is that simple. Let me provide a few examples.

Flexible as well as resolute: This legislation recognizes that changes in technology will require changes that we cannot currently anticipate. These technological advances will determine how we will collect intelligence against the new translational threats and challenges that now confront us. Drug cartels and terrorist networks operate through fiber, on the net, and across continents. Our ''eyes and ears'' must keep up with these complexities if they are to give us warning on a shipment of heroin or a truckload of C4. For these reasons, the Conference Report provides the means for the investments in research and development that should enable our collectors to keep up with our adversaries.

Finally, worldwide as well as specialized: For the Intelligence Community, the Cold War was trench warfare. The enemy's command post—the Kremlin—was fixed and its deployments were static. In contrast, the war against narcotics traffickers, terrorists, and proliferators of weapons of mass destruction, including chemical and biological weapons, is guerrilla warfare. The command post of our current adversary could be in southern Columbia, rural Afghanistan, or in a ship headed south down the Bosphorus. They could be in Baghdad, in the Balkans, or in Port-au-Prince. To detect and counter these new adversaries, we must have the ''eyes and ears'' of our Intelligence Community in the fields, on the streets, in the air, and over the waters where they operate. For these reasons, our Conference Report provides the Community with the means to deploy more officers, and more technology, where they must be to meet these challenges: In the field.

Our conference report, Mr. Speaker, begins to provide the investment that the Intelligence Community needs during fiscal year 1999: to develop its capability to collect tactical, as well as strategic intelligence, to meet and to exploit changes in technology, and to put its ''eyes and ears'' where they are needed.

I am particularly proud of this report—and of the Committee that produced it—because it will be my last as a Member of the House Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence, or HPSCI. Over my 14 years on this Committee, I have been proud to have represented not only the people of this country, but also, in a very special way the Members of this House, in the oversight of the unique, exciting, and sometimes strange mix of espionage, technology, and plain old bureaucracy that is our Intelligence Community. What I would like to end with today is a reassurannce to my colleagues here, and our constituents everywhere, that the Members of this Committee have worked hard to begin to rebuild an Intelligence Community that will have the capability to collect against whatever enemies and adversaries we will face tomorrow, and in the next century.

Like most Americans, I doubted I would ever see a world in which Moscow would not be the focus of our concern and our collection efforts. Though, to be sure, it cannot be altogether ignored. Like most today, I cannot imagine a world now without drug traffickers and terrorists as our major adversaries and targets of collection.

But times change, and threats grow and recede. What we in HPSCI have worked so hard to do is to have an Intelligence Community with the capability to confront and to collect against any adversary that will threaten our country, its interest and most importantly, its citizens.

For that, and for their steadfastness to this cause, I thank those on the Committee staff, and my colleagues on HPSCI. In particular, I thank Chairman GOSS and NORM DICKS, the Ranking Democratic Member, for their vision, as well as for their hard work in achieving these critical goals. I would also extend a special thank you and congratulations to NORM DICKS, who is rotating off the Committee with me, and to Ms. HARMAN and Mr. SKAGGS, both of whom are retiring from Congress. It has been my pleasure to serve with all of you, and I believe that you leave the Committee having served our nation's defense needs very well.

Mr. DICKS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5½ minutes to the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. BISHOP), my colleague and a distinguished member of the committee.

Mr. BISHOP. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of the conference agreement on H.R. 3694, the Intelligence Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1999.

First, let me take this opportunity to congratulate the gentleman from Florida (Chairman GOSS) for his efforts in producing a bipartisan bill that addresses the needs of the United States intelligence community.

Additionally, praise must also be extended to the ranking Democratic member, the gentleman from Washington (Mr. DICKS) for his work in helping to craft this important piece of legislation and for his service to the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence. There is perhaps no Member in this great institution who has dedicated more time and energy to understanding the technology supporting our intelligence community than the gentleman from Washington.

Due to the service limitations placed on members of the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence, he will be leaving the committee in the next Congress. I will personally miss his leadership on technical and tactical issues that confront the committee, and the committee as a whole will miss his innovative ideas and his commitment to maintaining the best intelligence community in the world.

Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Colorado (Mr. SKAGGS) and the gentlewoman from California (Ms. HARMAN) will also be leaving the committee, and I want to take this opportunity to wish them well and to say that these two defenders of democracy, freedom and justice will also be sorely missed. Mr. Speaker, I say, ''Thank you, Mr. SKAGGS and Ms. HARMAN, for your friendship and for your commitment to the men and the women of the national security and intelligence communities.''

Also leaving the committee is Mr. Calvin Humphrey, as was mentioned by the gentleman from California (Mr. DIXON), who was the first minority, African-American, in our nation's history to hold a professional staff position with the intelligence committee. He has provided professional support to the committee for the last 11 years. He served under six chairmen and has served in almost every official senior staff position with the committee.

Mr. Speaker, he has certainly enhanced our national security, and the efficiency of our country's intelligence community has been enhanced by his service. We will certainly miss him very much.

We congratulate him, however, as he assumes a senior level position with a Federal agency. I'm confident he will be successful and continue to contribute to the setterment of our nation.

Mr. Speaker, the conference report before us today authorizes resources to ensure that our intelligence capabilities are sufficient to meet the contingencies of the next millennium. With each passing day, our intelligence community is called upon to respond to more and more contingencies within a restrained budget.

We all recall with horror the cowardly and ruthless attacks on our embassies in Nairobi, Kenya, and Dar es Salaam, Tanzania. A number of representatives of the intelligence community were on the ground in both countries in a short period of time collecting and analyzing information. The efforts of the intelligence community to date have been indispensable to the leads that have been developed and the arrests that have been made in these bombings.

Additionally, it has been widely reported in a number of our Nation's periodicals that planned attacks on other embassies have been interrupted and avoided as a result of the dedication and hard work of intelligence community personnel.

This conference report provides resources for our intelligence community's counterterrorism efforts. Additionally, funding is provided to collect, process, analyze, and disseminate critical intelligence that helps shield our sons and daughters serving in our Nation's armed forces against the deadly force of terrorism.

In short, let me say that I am confident that this conference report will assist in maintaining the intelligence capabilities necessary to provide policymakers with the information they need to make key decisions affecting our national security.

Mr. Speaker, just last week I met with individuals concerned with the fate of Americans still unaccounted for as a result of wars that our Nation has been involved in. Last January, I traveled to Southeast Asia to review our intelligence activities and operations in that region of the world. Specifically, I focused my attention on efforts aimed at achieving a full accounting of Americans still unaccounted for as a result of the Vietnam war.

Again, I want to ensure our Nation's veterans and the families of those soldiers, airmen, sailors and marines still unaccounted for that this conference report contains the necessary resources to permit the intelligence community to continue its efforts to determine the fate of those who have yet to come home.

Mr. Speaker, this conference report provides critical support to all facets of our intelligence community. Resources are authorized to sustain the intelligence community's efforts to assist in providing force protection intelligence to our troops and to assist in the collection and analysis of critical intelligence bearing on such challenging issues as counterterrorism, counternarcotics, and counterproliferation.

I am proud to support this conference agreement and I urge my colleagues to support it as well.

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Delaware (Mr. CASTLE) my friend, former Governor of Delaware, and a member of the committee.

Mr. CASTLE. Mr. Speaker, I also join in support of the conference report for H.R. 3694, the intelligence authorization bill, and give due credit to the gentleman from Washington (Mr. DICKS) and to the gentleman from Florida (Mr. GOSS) who worked so very hard on this to do such a wonderful job.

United States policymakers must have the most comprehensive, responsive and timely strategic perspective on major global changes. To help provide this perspective, we rely on our intelligence agencies to collect, sort, and analyze information from all over the world.

When this bill was originally before the House in May, I expressed concerns about the capability of the intelligence community to tackle specialized financial issues like economic analysis and tracking illicit money laundering. As global financial markets grow and intertwine, timely economic intelligence in tracking the flow of laundered money becomes increasingly important to the United States national security.

Support for economic intelligence was downgraded earlier this decade, but the need for stronger support in this area was driven home by the degree to which the Asian financial crisis caught our government flat-footed. If we are to rely on the United States intelligence community to provide this kind of support, it is essential that we provide them with the resources necessary to do the job.

Also essential to our efforts to fight increasingly sophisticated international organized crime operations and narcotics traffickers is our ability to track the flow of money. With the right tools and support, the intelligence community can provide key insights into these areas to support our law enforcement agencies. And I would add that an ability to follow the money is vital to our efforts to unravel the complex web of Usama Bin Ladin's international terrorist connections.

The members and staff of the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence have followed these issues closely this year, and I am satisfied that this conference report makes some headway in addressing these critical needs.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to support this conference report.

Mr. DICKS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the distinguished gentlewoman from California (Ms. HARMAN), who is also leaving the committee. She has been one of the most outstanding Members I think of the House, both on the Committee on National Security and the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence, and she will be sorely missed in the next Congress. She has done an outstanding job on the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence, she is a quick learner, and I am going to miss her service.

Ms. HARMAN. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Washington (Mr. DICKS) for yielding me this time, and for 26 years of friendship so far. I thank our other colleagues for their very kind remarks about me and my service on the committee.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the conference report to accompany H.R. 3694, the bill authorizing intelligence spending for fiscal year 1999. As we have heard, this is my last intelligence authorization. Before commenting on the bill, I would like to commend the gentleman from Florida (Chairman GOSS) for generating an unusually collaborative and bipartisan environment in which talented colleagues and a superb staff can work productively. It was a special goal of mine to serve on this committee and I have loved it.

As I have often said, intelligence spending is intelligent spending, perhaps now more than ever. The U.S. no longer confronts a single, well-known adversary, but a fluid international environment where weapons of mass destruction can be had on the international market for a price; where crime syndicates organize across national borders; where terrorists, as we sadly experienced this summer, can strike with deadly force.

Mr. Speaker, it is crucial that we be able to anticipate and meet these new challenges.

Despite our efforts to strengthen the nonproliferation regime, the demand for weapons of mass destruction and their means of delivery has not waned, and neither has the supply.

This past year, after information indicated an increase in the in-flow of missile technology and know-how to Iran, Congress directed the administration to impose sanctions on entities involved in these transfers. Congress' action will help curb efforts by Iran to accelerate its missile programs and impede its capability to field missiles that can strike Israel, our NATO ally Turkey, and targets in Central Europe; missiles which could be armed with chemical, biological and nuclear warheads.

We have also seen alarming developments elsewhere in Asia. Recently, North Korea tested its first Taepo Dong 1 missile. We anticipated the launch, monitored it, and now know more about this missile's performance than the North Koreans. This new missile does not yet allow North Korea to deliver a weapon to the United States, or reach significant military targets it could not strike already, but it puts it on that path. The launch also advertised North Korea's capabilities to would-be buyers, a very disturbing development.

Mr. Speaker, these are just two examples of proliferation in already unstable regions of the world. Intelligence resources will be crucial not only in monitoring these developing weapon capabilities but also in shaping policies to stem attempts to proliferate this technology.

Intelligence is also increasingly essential for success on the future battlefield. As a member of both the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence and the Committee on National Security, I have witnessed the incredible advantages that information technology provides to our military forces. I have strongly supported improvements to our eyes and ears in the sky so that commanders will have a complete understanding of the battlefield, and the enemy's locations and intentions. Combined with advances in precision weapon systems, we have vastly improved the capabilities of our Nation's armed forces.

I am aware that some of our colleagues would prefer to reduce the priority of satellite reconnaissance and its support to military operations. My view, however, is that there is no more important mission for our intelligence community than supporting our combatant commanders. Our intelligence capabilities are the crux of our defense modernization efforts, and we cannot shortchange intelligence without significantly weakening our military.

Mr. Speaker, accurate and timely intelligence makes our Nation safer and armed forces more effective. It is an investment we must protect and nurture.

I urge my colleagues to join me in supporting this bill and, on a personal note, Mr. Speaker, to join me in sending bipartisan and heartfelt get well wishes to Mariel Goss, a very important asset to our committee.

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume to thank the gentlewoman for those very kind remarks, and for the other remarks she has made. And I know that the gentlewoman will do well in her next endeavor, and I certainly suspect that we will be talking in the future.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from New York (Mr. BOEHLERT), a distinguished member of our committee who makes a very valuable contribution and we are pleased to have him.

(Mr. BOEHLERT asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BOEHLERT. Mr. Speaker, it is important that our colleagues and the American people understand that intelligence, as distasteful as it sometimes may seem, is critical to the very survival of our Nation and our way of life. This conference report focuses on those programs that provide the best possibility of success for our Nation's first line of defense: its intelligence community.

Specifically, this report puts a great deal of emphasis on the future. We made some very difficult choices to cut funding for some legacy programs so that we could add funding for critical technologies and research and development necessary to ensure future capabilities. The ability of our laboratories and scientists to develop new techniques and ''leap-ahead'' technologies is critical for our intelligence community to stay ahead of the threats that our country faces.

This report is about the wise and prudent funding and oversight of those intelligence collection, analysis and dissemination functions necessary to ensure the security of our Nation, its interests and its citizens around the world, now and into the future. So I urge my colleagues to stand with our chairman and ranking member and support the report.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, I would like to add to the remarks of my colleagues and say farewell to the two distinguished gentlemen, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. YOUNG) and the gentleman from Washington (Mr. DICKS), both of whom are leaving this committee this year. They have been great mentors for me, with respect to many intelligence issues, and they remain great friends.

Also, to the gentleman from Colorado (Mr. SKAGGS) and the gentlewoman from California (Ms. HARMAN), who are leaving not only the committee but the Congress, I join with the other Members in wishing them well in all of their future endeavors and thanking them most sincerely for their very distinguished service not only in this committee but in the Congress of the United States.

Mr. DICKS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Colorado (Mr. SKAGGS), another one of our most distinguished colleagues. He has been one of the hardest working members on the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence. He has made an enormous contribution in this House.

I have had the privilege of serving with him on the Committee on Appropriations. I think of him as kind of the conscience of the House of Representatives, and I am going to very much miss him next year, and I want to wish him the very best in his future endeavors. I know he will be a success wherever he goes.

Mr. SKAGGS. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank very much the gentleman from Washington. I am grateful for those kind remarks, and let me return them to him. His leadership on this committee has been extraordinary, and the Nation is in his debt for the kind of care and attention that he has paid to these many, many profoundly important issues.

I also extend my great thanks and admiration and respect to the gentleman from Florida (Mr. GOSS), who really has conducted this committee in an exemplary fashion.

Mr. Speaker, I arrived at the Capitol this morning for what may be my third or fourth next to the last day of voting in this great body. It is a cherished and awesome responsibility that we all enjoy as Members of this House. But this committee, I think, has a special responsibility that goes beyond that which we all share here.

Yes, we have a vital role in developing every year the spending authorization bill for the next fiscal year. That is what is before the House at the moment, and I urge the adoption of the 1999 bill.

But this committee has an especially critical role as proxy for our many colleagues, in fulfilling our responsibility under that always pertinent maxim from the days of the founding of the Republic, that, ''The price of liberty is eternal vigilance.''

On this committee that means not only vigilance with regard to the threats posed by our enemies and adversaries abroad, and the effort to fashion the capabilities of the intelligence community to meet those threats, but also vigilance internally as well; vigilance against the seductiveness of the intelligence business, the seductiveness of power, the seductiveness of classified information, and the allure that the chief executive can always bring through his principal assists to the table upstairs where we debate these terribly difficult and important issues.

We act in behalf of our colleagues in making sure that the executive branch of government follows the law. And that is just as important a responsibility as the one that we bear with regard to any external threats that this country faces.

In that respect, I hope my colleagues understand how wonderful the bipartisanship on this committee is in its service to the country in this critical area.

It has been a real privilege to get to spend 5½ years working with colleagues on my side and the other side of the aisle in behalf of national security and that eternal vigilance. It has been an enormous privilege to see the kind of dedicated staff work that goes in to support the efforts of this committee, again motivated by an absolutely remarkable level of patriotism and commitment to duty. I want our colleagues and I want the country to have some appreciation of that, because the vast bulk of the work that we do is done in secret and, therefore, cannot be discussed in any detail.

And on that point it is appropriate that on this occasion we recognize as well the dedicated work of the thousands of intelligence officers and workers in the intelligence business of this country, here at home and around the world, who work extraordinarily long hours, in very difficult circumstances, for modest compensation, because they believe in the United States of America. Most of what they do we cannot recognize publicly, but we can offer them, as I do, our thanks.

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume to say that I think we now understand what a loss the gentleman from Colorado (Mr. SKAGGS) is also going to be from the committee, after those thoughtful remarks, which are consistent with all the thoughtful work he has done for our committee all these years, and we appreciate that.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from New Hampshire (Mr. BASS), who is the man who time and again seems to bail us out on the budget matters that keep confronting us.

Mr. BASS. Mr. Speaker, I also rise in support of the conference report and to pay tribute to our distinguished chairman who, under some recently difficult circumstances, has certainly led this committee with great expertise and integrity.

I also want to pay tribute to our two ranking members who will not be coming back with us next year, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. BILL YOUNG) and the gentleman from Washington (Mr. NORM DICKS). I cannot think of two individuals who are more committed to a strong and capable defense and an efficient and effective intelligence capability.

I came to the committee and I watched the gentleman from Washington defend an issue that was particularly near and dear to him, and this individual just would not take no for an answer. And I asked one of our ever respectful staff people, what is the story with this guy? And they said, ''NORM DICKS never has a bad day.''

Over the last 2 years, and after 38 or so hearings, and 30 formal hearings, visits to Bosnia, to North Korea, to China, reports from Central America and from Africa and other places all over the world, I found, much to my surprise, that we live in a world that is far more dangerous than I ever thought it was. Those dangers are more diffuse and more difficult to identify and to contain. Indeed, I feel, as a member of this committee now, like a Dutch boy at the dike as we seek to protect Americans against threats both here and abroad.

This bill moves us forward in the direction of protecting our strategic national defense and economic interests around the world. We may never succeed, but the fact that we have a committee and a Congress that is dedicated to addressing these issues and doing it in such a fashion so that our scarce resources are expended in the most efficient and productive fashion, is very commendable to this Congress.

So I rise in support of this conference committee report and urge its passage.

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, may I ask how much time each side has?

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SESSIONS). The gentleman from Florida (Mr. GOSS) has 9½ minutes remaining, and the gentleman from Washington (Mr. DICKS) has 4½ minutes remaining.

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2½ minutes to the gentleman from Nevada (Mr. GIBBONS), who is a decorated Air Force officer from Nevada who we are proud to have on our committee.

(Mr. GIBBONS asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GIBBONS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the distinguished gentleman for yielding me this time, and I rise today in strong support of the conference report to accompany H.R. 3694, the intelligence authorization bill for fiscal year 1999.

Mr. Speaker, I have the high honor and distinct pleasure of being able to serve on both the House Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence and the House Committee on National Security. This allows me the opportunity to look across the operational military and defense issues, as well as the intelligence functions that not only support but, in fact, participate in the various defense operations.

I can tell my colleagues, Mr. Speaker, that this is a very prudent report. It is a conference report that not only sustains currently required capabilities, this is a report that provides our military forces with the informational resources necessary to build warfighter confidence and perhaps even keep them out of harm's way. It also seeks to provide them with the indications and warning intelligence that allow them the advantage in a conflict.

Let there be no mistake, Mr. Speaker, this is not a more secure world since the end of the Cold War. While it is true that we do not face the imminent threat of nuclear annihilation from behind the Iron Curtain, the events of the past few months regarding ballistic missiles and nuclear weapons development and testing by nations seeking to have arsenals that include weapons of mass destruction, strongly suggest that we may well face that imminent threat once again on a broader scale, and sooner than many think or may even want to believe.

Add to that threats posed by international terrorism, transnational threats such as narcotics trafficking, organized international crime, the rampant proliferation of weapons of mass destruction, and use of chemical and biological weapons by rogue nations. Activities we have witnessed recently tell us that these threats are more pressing and considerably more dangerous than they have ever been. The problems associated with collecting and understanding information about today's risks are in many ways more difficult because formal government boundaries are not limiting the threats to our peace and security.

This conference report begins to provide our intelligence community and military forces the infrastructure necessary to give the U.S. that information dominance to increase our security.

That is the bottom line, the security of the United States. The Constitution of the United States places a responsibility on each of us to act in the best interest of the U.S. and our fellow citizens. We have done that here in this conference report.

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from Ohio (Mr. PORTMAN) who has made a valuable contribution to the particular conference report before us.

Mr. DICKS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 seconds to the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. PORTMAN).

Mr. PORTMAN. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Florida for yielding me the time and for his strong personal support from the outset for the worthy effort to designate the CIA compound in Langley, Virginia ''The George Bush Center for Intelligence.''

Earlier this year with the help of the gentleman from Florida (Mr. GOSS), with the help of the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. SKELTON), the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. HAMILTON), the gentleman from California (Mr. DREIER), the gentleman from Washington (Mr. DICKS) and others we were able to get such legislation passed.

I want to thank the gentleman from Florida (Mr. GOSS) and the gentleman from Washington (Mr. DICKS) as well as Senators DICK SHELBY, BOB KERREY and others in the conference committee for including the Bush legislation in this very important authorization bill today.

It is a very fitting tribute to George Bush, the only President to have served as CIA Director. His tenure from 1976 to 1977 was a difficult time when the agency was under fire from investigative committees up here on the Hill, from the press and from the public. The CIA was demoralized and in need of new leadership and direction. George Bush turned the tide. He was key to developing an executive order to prevent future violations of the agency's mandate and, most important, he provided the steady hand of leadership at a turbulent time and in doing so improved the mission and morale of the CIA.

When he resigned his post, Senator DANIEL INOUYE said, ''Bush was one of the best CIA directors we had. The morale of the intelligence community has been inspired by Bush's leadership.''

Mr. Speaker, as a decorated Navy pilot in World War II, a distinguished

Congressman, U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, Liaison to China, CIA Director, Vice President and President, he has ably served our Nation for over 50 years and inspired many of us. He exemplifies the highest values and principles of public service.

Mr. DICKS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PORTMAN. I yield to the gentleman from Washington.

Mr. DICKS. Mr. Speaker, I just want to commend the gentleman for outstanding leadership on this issue. I am very pleased to have been a cosponsor of his legislation. I think this is one of the best things this Congress has done. I want to commend the gentleman for the great leadership that he has demonstrated. George Bush was a great American and I think this was an outstanding idea. I want to congratulate him on his leadership.

Mr. PORTMAN. I thank the gentleman for his support, too, and for his yielding time.

Mr. Speaker, again I want to thank the Members in this body for helping make this possible, because George Bush does represent the highest values and principles in public service, integrity, honesty, and has set an example really for all of us. This is the appropriate recognition of his remarkable and inspirational service to our Nation.

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Georgia (Mr. BARR).

Mr. BARR of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Florida, the distinguished chairman of the committee, for yielding me this time for me to do something that I do not like to do and, that is, to rise in opposition to this bill.

Comments were made earlier that there was a minor change to the electronic surveillance or wiretapping legislation. The change that is contained in this bill is neither minor nor inconsequential. It represents a fundamental shift in wiretapping procedures in this country.

Back in 1996, Mr. Speaker, we debated extensively provisions almost identical to these that are found in section 604 of this conference report. After extensive debate, this House defeated the expanded powers that were sought by the executive branch.

Essentially, Mr. Speaker, this changes Federal wiretapping laws in a way that allows the government to seek a court order in any case, not limited to foreign intelligence surveillance, in any case that a Federal wiretap order is sought to provide that the wiretap follow the person no matter what phone that person uses. No longer would the standard be if you have grounds to tap and grounds to obtain a court order, you tap a particular person's phone, and if that person moves to another phone, you either have to provide a showing that they are deliberately trying to thwart or you have to then get another court order.

This is a very important civil liberty and privacy right. The government, however, under this legislation if this bill passes would be able to ''issue an order authorizing the interception of all communications made by a particular person regardless of what telephone he may use.'' That is language from the conference report. To argue with a straight face that that is a minor change to our electronic surveillance or wiretap laws is disingenuous. This is a significant change. It needs to be debated fully. I urge that this not be allowed to stand.

I rise in opposition to this conference report, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from Florida (Mr. MCCOLLUM), the author of the provision, but I would also point out before I do that any Members who wish to read the section in question, it is section 604, published yesterday in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of the House on page H9530, and I think it is very clear, and the safeguards that are necessary I think are equally clear.

Mr. MCCOLLUM. Mr. Speaker, I want to point out to the Members that this is truly a minor change in the wiretap laws. It is designed to combat terrorism. Current law does permit multipoint, or roving wiretaps. Current law does permit this. Court approval is still required under this bill. Probable cause of criminal activity is still required for any wiretap.

Current law requires the court to find intent to evade wiretap before allowing the tap of whatever phone is used by the suspect as opposed to a specific phone. But you can have it if that intent is proven. The bill simply changes this. It permits the court-ordered wiretap that follows the criminal terrorist suspect to whatever phone he uses if the court determines his actions show he is trying to evade the tap, not requiring the specific criminal intent which has been very hard to do. The bill also protects innocent people by limiting the tap of any phone to only those times when the criminal or terrorist suspect actually is using that phone.

This is a very minor change. It is a change allowing the court to follow the suspect as it is doing now with the simple showing that there is an evasion effort by the criminal suspect rather than having to prove the technical intent which is almost impossible now to prove. That is all that this does.

I urge a vote for the authorization bill.

Mr. DICKS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3½ minutes to the distinguished gentlewoman from California (Ms. PELOSI) who has been one of our most outstanding members.

Ms. PELOSI. Mr. Speaker, I thank the distinguished ranking member for his kind words and for the time that he has yielded me, and I thank the distinguished chairman for his leadership in bringing this legislation to the floor. It is good to see you here, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Speaker, one of the concerns that I wanted to address in my remarks today is about the issue of whistle blowers. One of the major issues of contention indeed between the House and Senate committees over the past 2 years has been how to address the issue of employees of the executive branch who face reprisals or threats of reprisals for bringing information to the intelligence committees concerning serious violations of law in intelligence activities of the United States.

I myself personally supported the Senate amendment which was very clear about those employees who brought to the attention of Congress issues of gross mismanagement, gross waste of funds, abuse of authority and specific danger to public health and safety. I thought that that amendment should have been passed, but we did not prevail in conference. But our chairman has made a valiant effort to protect those who come forth with information. While I would have liked to have seen the broader language, I am pleased that we have the report language that specifically says that those who come forward with information who have a right to have that information will not have reprisals against them.

While it is not disputed that the Congress is entitled by law to receive prompt reports of any illegal intelligence activities, officials of the executive branch have asserted that the Constitution does not permit Congress to vest in lower-level employees the right to disclose classified information, even to Members of Congress. These officials have asserted that any attempt to do so by Congress would lead them to recommend the President veto such legislation.

The better constitutional view, of course, is that national security is a shared responsibility of the legislative and executive branches and that the Constitution does not deny Congress the power to direct executive activities and gain access to information needed for the performance of legislative duties.

The conferees have made very clear in the findings and the legislative history of the legislation the following:

First, Congress, as a coequal branch of government, has a need to know of allegations of wrongdoing within the intelligence community;

Second, no basis in law exists for requiring prior authorization of disclosures to the intelligence committees of Congress by employees of the executive branch of classified information about wrongdoing within the intelligence community;

Third, the nondisclosure agreements signed by employees of the Central Intelligence Agency stipulate that nothing contained in the agreement prohibits the employee from reporting intelligence activities the employee considers to be unlawful or improper directly to the select committees on intelligence of the Congress; and,

Finally, separate and apart from the process established by the legislation through the inspector general, as proposed by our distinguished chairman, an intelligence community employee should not be subject to reprisals or threats of reprisals for making a report to appropriate members or staff of the intelligence committees about wrongdoing within the intelligence community.

Mr. Speaker, the conferees have thus agreed to legislation that establishes a new and additional procedure for employees of intelligence agencies to bring issues of urgent concern to the attention of Congress through the offices of their inspector general. This procedure provides the employee who uses it the protections of confidentiality now found in the CIA and 1978 inspector general acts and discourages reprisals and threat of reprisals through a new reporting requirement on the heads of intelligence agencies.

I trust, Mr. Speaker, that these findings and admonitions will guide the Director of the CIA and the heads of intelligence agencies in the treatment of intelligence community employees who seek to bring important information to the attention of Congress.

Again I repeat my support for the report language that says even if you do not go this route, no reprisals.

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the distinguished gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. SHUSTER).

(Mr. SHUSTER asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SHUSTER. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of this legislation.

The Fiscal Year 1999 intelligence authorization addresses a wide range of the intelligence community's current and future needs and it remedies areas where Congress has felt that funding was insufficient. Importantly, the conference report strengthens the ability of our intelligence agencies to respond to rogue states such as Iraq, to weapons proliferation by global competitor states such as China and Russia, and to terrorism. Today, anti-American terrorism ranges from the recent embassy bombings in Africa to murders and kidnappings in Latin America. The terrorist of the 1990's can be found in loosely knit groups motivated by anti-American hatreds, in groups such as the Usama bin Laden organization or the Hisballah in Lebanon or in the FARC in Colombia. In all cases, intelligence is called on repeatedly to track the activities of these individuals and groups, to provide threat warning, and to support the capture and prosecution of those responsible for the deaths of U.S. citizens.

I wholeheartedly support the conference report because it also takes steps to strengthen key areas of U.S. intelligence collection and analytic capabilities. The conference report provides for more robust recapitalization and modernization of our signal intelligence capabilities. The conference report allocates increased funding to strengthen Human Intelligence collection. The conference report also provides additional funding to enhance the ability of intelligence analysts to assess the information that has been gathered. The intelligence committees recognize that increased and wiser investment in information age technologies will be necessary to cope with the large volumes of data. Finally, this conference report includes added resources to strengthen the ability of the Intelligence Community to perform force protection duties to protect our forces against terrorism and defense acquisition programs and operational activities against espionage.

As a Member who has long supported efforts to wage and win the war on drugs, I applaud this conference report for what it does to enhance the Intelligence Community's ability to combat major multinational narcotics trafficking organizations. Although the Intelligence Community's share is but a small percentage of the total National Drug Control Strategy budget, intelligence counternarcotics programs have inflicted substantial damage on a number of the world's leading narcotics trafficking organizations in Latin America, and in Southeast and Southwest Asia. The counternarcotics programs supported by this conference report have and will continue to have a devastating impact on some of the world's most sophisticated and dangerous criminal organizations.

The conference report will strengthen intelligence support to policymakers who must address growth in global organized crime involving such entities as the Russian Mafia, the Chinese Triad societies, and the Mexican drug cartels. The major Mexican, Colombian, and Asian narcotics trafficking organizations represent a growing and sophisticated national security threat to the United States. Only the U.S. intelligence community has the people and the technology to support policymaker response to this threat.

The narcotics traffickers have the wealth to purchase the newest available encryption technology to communicate; they employ highly competent bankers, lawyers, and accountants to conceal their financial transactions on a global basis; their transport networks are highly flexible and respond quickly to changes in U.S. interdiction strategy; and the global supply of cocaine and heroin far exceeds demand in the United States and elsewhere. Close coordination between U.S. law enforcement agencies and intelligence is vital to U.S. efforts to reduce the flow of cocaine and heroin into the United States. Among those U.S. and foreign officials who are responsible for fighting drug trafficking, I am always told that their first priority is on obtaining accurate and timely intelligence on drug suppliers, transporters and money launderers. The conference report will provide the needed funds to enable the robust intelligence support that law enforcement needs.

Mr. Speaker, I strongly support this conference report and urge that all Members of the House do the same.

Mr. DICKS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself the balance of my time.

I want to also add my congratulations to Calvin Humphrey who has been one of our most outstanding staff people. I want to congratulate him on the great job he has done for our committee. He has handled some of the most difficult assignments. He had to travel with Congressman Richardson all over the world. Together, they got many American citizens out of tight spots around the world.

The only thing I have ever had a problem with Calvin on is his devotion to the Cleveland Indians even when they kept my Seattle Mariners out of the World Series. That I may not be able to forgive him for, but I will never forget him. We wish him well in his new post.

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I would certainly like to use some of that time also to have my best wishes to Calvin Humphrey's future. Let me tell you that even on the Intelligence Committee, we are sometimes surprised. When I heard that public statement made this morning, I would put it in the category of surprise. It does not diminish in any way my good wishes for your future success which I know are very well assured because of your capabilities. I want to thank you very much not only for getting me out of North Korea but for getting me into North Korea. That was a very valuable experience. And all the other things you have done for our committee.

I also need to say thank you to every member of our committee. Every member brings something to the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence and is given an extraordinary trust on behalf of all Members and all people of this country. It is a remarkable committee. I hope people who have been watching this and other Members can see that we are able to do our business well, in a bipartisan and professional way, because there is good will to do it and there is an understanding of the need to do it and get it done.

Mr. Speaker, I have nothing but pride for all of the Members and the way they work and the staff that so ably supports us.

I have mentioned some staff; I have to mention Mike Chi and the job he does with all of what I will call not his staff but our staff because I do not make a distinction between one party or the other and the staff. John Mills, our chief of staff, has done a remarkable job, I think, of trying to pull together in a harmony all the management needs to discharge our responsibilities ably. Tim Sample has done an extraordinary job managing numbers. I never will entirely understand, but I am told they always add up, and I check the bottom line, and they seem to.

These are important people that are doing important work far from the madding crowd, far out of the visibility of the ''hoo-wah'' of the Beltway and the media. The work is getting done, and it matters because we are talking about national security. I want to thank everybody involved.

As for the whistle-blower provisions, I want to thank everybody for their understanding, the compromise that was worked out, and I assure the gentlewoman from California, if we find that this is not working as well as I hope it will, that we always will be able to revisit it in the future. I believe this will work.

With regard to those concerned about the matter that was brought up by the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. BARR) and the gentleman from Florida (Mr. MCCOLLUM) I have read the safeguards that are in the bill; I think they are adequate. Again, if something egregious comes out of this, obviously we are prepared to resolve it.

Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. OXLEY).

(Mr. OXLEY asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. OXLEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the conference report.

Mr. GOSS. I would also on a personal note thank everybody for a difficult time while I have been away. It just goes to show that everybody is expendable here, and I appreciate being reminded of that. It keeps me humble.

Ms. WATERS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to remind the Members of this body of the unfinished business we have regarding the dark, terrible, still classified secrets of our intelligence agencies. The list of misdeeds by our intelligence agencies is long and much of it still remains shrouded in secrecy, in many cases acting to protect criminals who have died and dictators who are no longer in power. We must end our senseless protection of these terrible acts. Congress has the power to do so, and must not shirk its duty.

I have focused my energies on investigating the allegations of Contra-CIA drug dealing. But, there are many other sordid, terrible tales of U.S. intelligence activities that remain a secret to the American people. Some have been investigated, while the reports remain classified. Others have yet to be investigated. The list includes the CIA's involvement with the brutal Battalion 316 in Honduras, the overthrow of Arbenz in Guatemala and Allende in Chile, the death squads in El Salvador, Duvalier's drug dealing regime and the ton ton macout death squads of Haiti, and of course, the many illegal assassination attempts against Fidel Castro. We must release the information we have about these affairs, investigate the others that remain unexamined and bring those responsible to justice. We cannot exhort other nations to follow the rule of law without ensuring that we likewise follow the rule of law.

My investigation into the allegations of CIA-Contra drug dealing has led me to an undeniable conclusion—that U.S. intelligence and law enforcement agencies knew about drug trafficking in South Central Los Angeles and throughout the U.S.—and they let the dealing go on without taking any actions against it.

Robert Perry and Brian Barger first broke the shocking story of Contra involvement in drug trafficking in 1985, at the height of the Contra war against Nicaragua. As a result of this story's revelations, Senator JOHN KERRY conducted a two year Senate probe into the allegations and published the sub-committee's devastating findings in an 1,166-page report in 1989.

Remarkably, the Committee's findings went virtually unreported when they were released.

Then in August 1996 Gary Webb published his explosive series in the San Jose Mercury News. It resulted in a firestorm of anger and outrage in the Black community and throughout the nation. Here was evidence that, while the nation was being told of a national "war on drugs" by the Reagan Administration, our anti-drug intelligence apparatus was actually aiding the drug lords in getting their deadly product into the U.S.

The resulting grassroots outrage put tremendous pressure on the CIA, the Department of Justice and Congress to investigate the matter and report the truth. The Inspectors General of the CIA and Department of Justice were forced to conduct investigations and publish reports on the allegations. The DOJ's Report and Volume I of the CIA's Report published brief executive summaries that concluded that the allegations made in the Mercury News could not be substantiated. However, both Reports, and in particular the DOJ Report, are filled with evidence that contradicts their own conclusions and confirms all of the basic allegations.

Quite unexpectedly, on April 30, 1998, I obtained a secret 1982 Memorandum of Understanding between the CIA and the Department of Justice, that allowed drug trafficking by CIA assets, agents, and contractors to go unreported to federal law enforcement agencies. I also received correspondence between then Attorney General William French Smith and the head of the CIA, William Casey, that spelled out their intent to protect drug traffickers on the CIA payroll from being reported to federal law enforcement.

Then on July 17, 1998 the New York Times ran this amazing front page CIA admission:

CIA SAYS IT USED NICARAGUAN REBELS ACCUSED OF DRUG TIE

[T]he Central Intelligence Agency continued to work with about two dozen Nicaraguan rebels and their supporters during the 1980s despite allegations that they were trafficking in drugs . . . [T]he agency's decision to keep those paid agents, or to continue dealing with them in some less formal relationship, was made by top [CIA] officials at headquarters in Langley, Va. (emphasis added)

This front page confirmation of CIA involvement with Contra drug traffickers came from a leak of the still classified CIA Volume II internal review, described by sources as full of devastating revelations of CIA involvement with known Contra drug traffickers.

The CIA had always vehemently denied any connection to drug traffickers and the massive global drug trade, despite over ten years of documented reports. But in a shocking reversal, the CIA finally admitted that it was CIA policy to keep Contra drug traffickers on the CIA payroll.

The Committee has yet to release Volume II of the CIA Inspector General's investigation into the CIA-Contra drug network. But this body is moving ahead with reauthorizing the Central Intelligence Agency. I call on Members of the Committee and this body to end our policy of protecting criminal conduct by intelligence assets. Declassify and release these reports so that the many who have suffered can seek justice and we can bring the many still protected criminals to justice.

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time, and I move the previous question on the conference report.

The previous question was ordered.

MOTION TO RECOMMIT OFFERED BY MR. BARR OF GEORGIA

Mr. BARR of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion to recommit with instructions.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SESSIONS). Is the gentleman opposed to the conference report?

Mr. BARR of Georgia. He is, Mr. Speaker.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

Mr. DICKS. Parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will please state his parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. DICKS. It is my understanding that this bill was taken up in the Senate yesterday. If that is true, can there be a motion to recommit?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. One moment. The Chair will examine the official papers.

Mr. DICKS. Mr. Speaker, I have now been informed by staff that the bill was not taken up yesterday, so I withdraw my objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the motion to recommit.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. BARR of Georgia moves to recommit the Intelligence Authorization Conference bill to the Committee on Conference with instructions to the managers on the part of the House to remove section 604.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, the previous question is ordered on the motion to recommit.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion to recommit.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the noes appeared to have it.

Mr. BARR of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Evidently a quorum is not present.

Pursuant to the provisions of clause 5, rule XV, the Chair announces the he will reduce to a minimum of 5 minutes the period of time within a vote by electronic device, if ordered, will be taken on the question of passage.

The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 148, nays 267, not voting 19, as follows:

There was no objection.

ANNOUNCEMENT OF BILLS TO BE CONSIDERED UNDER SUSPENSION OF THE RULES TODAY

Mr. MCINNIS. Madam Speaker, pursuant to House Resolution 575, I announce the following suspensions to be considered today:

H.R. 4712, a bill regarding music licensing and copyright protection; and

S. 1892, a bill to provide that a person closely related to a judge of a court exercising judicial power under article III of the United States Constitution (other than the Supreme Court) may not be appointed as a judge of the same court, and for other purposes.

OMNIBUS NATIONAL PARKS AND PUBLIC LANDS ACT OF 1998

Mr. MCINNIS. Madam Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 573 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. RES. 573

Resolved, That at any time after the adoption of this resolution the Speaker may, pursuant to clause 1(b) of the rule XXIII, declare the House resolved into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for consideration of the bill (H.R. 4570) to provide for certain boundary adjustments and conveyances involving public lands, to establish and improve the management of certain heritage areas, historic areas, National Parks, wild and scenic rivers, and national trails, to protect communities by reducing hazardous fuels levels on public lands, and for other purposes. The first reading of the bill shall be dispensed with. General debate shall be confined to the bill and shall not exceed one hour equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Resources. After general debate the bill shall be considered for amendment under the five-minute rule and shall be considered as read. No amendment to the bill shall be in order except those specified in section 2 of this resolution. Each amendment may be offered only in the order specified, may be offered only by a Member specified or his designee, shall be considered as read, shall be debatable for the time specified equally divided and controlled by the proponent and an opponent, shall not be subject to amendment, and shall not be subject to a demand for division of the question in the House or in the Committee of the Whole. All points of order against the first amendment specified in section 2 are waived. The chairman of the Committee of the Whole may: (1) postpone until a time during further consideration in the Committee of the Whole a request for a recorded vote on any amendment; and (2) reduce to five minutes the minimum time for electronic voting on any postponed question that follows another electronic vote without intervening business, provided that the minimum time for electronic voting on the first in any series of questions shall be 15 minutes. At the conclusion of consideration of the bill for amendment the Committee shall rise and report the bill to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted. The previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit with our without instructions.

SEC. 2. The amendments described in the first section of this resolution are as follows:

(1) the amendments by Representative Hansen of Utah printed in the Congressional Record and numbered 1 pursuant to clause 6 of rule XXIII, which shall be debatable for twenty minutes; and

(2) an amendment by Representative Miller of California if printed in the portion of the Congressional Record designated for that purpose in clause 6 of rule XXIII on October 5, 1998, which shall be debatable for one hour.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mrs. EMERSON). The gentleman from Colorado (Mr. MCINNIS) is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. MCINNIS. Madam Speaker, for purposes of debate only, I yield the customary 30 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. HALL), pending which I yield myself such time as I may consume. Madam Speaker, during the consideration of this resolution, all time yielded is for the purposes of debate only.

Madam Speaker, the proposed rule is for a modified closed rule providing for 1 hour of general debate, equally divided between the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Resources.

The rule provides that no amendment will be in order except, one, the amendment offered by the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN) printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD and numbered 1, which shall be debatable for a period of 20 minutes; and two, the amendment offered by the gentleman from California (Mr. MILLER) if printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD on October 5th, 1998, which shall be debatable for 1 hour.

The rule provides that the two amendments listed above may be offered only in the order specified, may be offered only by a Member specified, or his designee, and shall be considered as read, shall be debatable for the time specified, equally divided and controlled by the proponent and an opponent, and shall not be subject to amendment.

The rule waives all points of order against the amendment offered by the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN).

In addition, the rule allows the chairman of the Committee of the Whole to postpone votes during consideration of the bill, and to reduce votes to 5 minutes on a postponed question if the vote follows a 15-minute vote. Finally, the rule provides one motion to recommit, with or without instructions. This rule was voted out of the Committee on Rules by a voice vote.

Madam Speaker, the underlying legislation, the Omnibus National Parks and Public Lands Act of 1998, addresses a wide variety of important national parks, wild and scenic rivers, heritage areas, national forests, and many other public lands issues and concerns.

This bill includes new protections for national parks and heritage and wilderness areas in 36 States throughout this Nation. There are over 80 proposals from approximately 70 Members of the United States Congress within this underlying legislation. This is critical legislation. This deals with our national parks. It is a good approach to our national park needs.

As I stated earlier, Madam Speaker, this provides much protection and many of the projects that are critical across the country for our national park system.

Madam Speaker, H.R. 4570 is a bipartisan effort. As I mentioned earlier, Madam Speaker, we have a number of different congressional districts who have projects contained within this bill, both Democrat and Republican. This is a bipartisan bill. It is an effort to get a number of very important pieces of legislation passed because, obviously, we are in the final few days of this session.

Madam Speaker, some groups have expressed concern with a few sections included in 4570. Consistent with the bipartisan spirit in which this bill was drafted, compromise language has been worked out for many of these sections, including major changes to the San Rafael section, the NEPA parity provision, Chugach, Cumberland Island, hazardous fuels reduction, the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo, Canyon Ferry Reservoir, Paoli Battlefield, Tuskegee Airmen, and the Emigrant Wilderness provisions. Other controversial sections are also deleted by the manager's amendment.

The gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN), chairman of the Subcommittee on National Parks and Public Lands of the Committee on Resources, has made significant efforts and he has made significant concessions to the groups that have expressed concerns with the provisions of this bill.

Madam Speaker, as I mentioned earlier, this bill includes over 80 proposals from about 70 Members of Congress contained within the legislation. I am one of those 70 Members with provisions in this bill. Title 13 of the Omnibus National Parks and Public Lands Act of 1998 proposes a transfer of the title to the facilities of the Pine River Irrigation Project from the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation to the Pine River Irrigation District.

My piece of this bill is an excellent example of how we, the United States Congress, can govern in a better way, a way that involves communities and local and State government, a way that empowers the people that we represent.

In response to local initiative, and in my opinion demonstrating one of the best examples of the so-called ''New West'' model of cooperation to achieve local control of public resources, a proposal to transfer title to the Pine River Irrigation Project was worked out.

I believe this type of action, shifting Federal control of appropriate projects to local communities, and doing so only after significant commitment by interested government agencies and extensive input from the public impacted by the proposal, will serve as the model for the future efforts of this nature.

Madam Speaker, this bill contains too many other examples of good governance and good public lands policies to discuss in detail. I encourage my colleagues to support the rule and the underlying bill.

Madam Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. HALL of Ohio. Madam Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Madam Speaker, this is a modified closed rule. It allows for the consideration of the National Parks and Public Lands Act of 1998. As my colleague, the gentleman from Colorado (Mr. MCINNIS) has described, this rule provides for 1 hour of general debate, equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Resources.

The rule permits the manager's amendment. The Committee on Resources ranking minority member chose not to offer an amendment. No other floor amendments can be offered. I understand the need for cutting corners at the end of the session in order to move legislation before adjournment, but that is not a good enough excuse for the bill before us today. The bill contains more than 100 provisions affecting specific parks, monuments, landmarks, trails, and heritage areas.

Some of these provisions were originally introduced as freestanding bills, and have partially gone through the normal Congressional process, including hearings and reporting by the Committee on Resources. However, other provisions have not. In fact, some sections have only seen the light of day in the subcommittee amendment which was made available yesterday for the first time. Some of these provisions are very controversial, and would never have survived if they had been subject to an open committee process.

There is no committee report for this bill, there have been no hearings, no Congressional Budget Office cost estimate, no Federal mandate statement, no constitutional authority statement. What is the point of having a committee process if we are going to bypass it on a regular basis?

The bill is strongly opposed by a coalition of conservation and environmental groups. The administration would veto the bill if enacted in its present form. Unfortunately, the rule will not permit Members to offer amendments to improve the bill. Madam Speaker, Members deserve the opportunity to debate and amend the bill. Unfortunately, this does not happen at the committee level, and this rule will not permit it on the House floor.

Madam Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. MCINNIS. Madam Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Madam Speaker, first I should mention that in Ohio we establish the American Discovery Trail, an important aspect of this bill.

Madam Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to my friend, the gentleman from Alaska (Mr. YOUNG), the chairman of the Committee on Resources, who I think is a good leader on this bill and somebody who understands the details of this bill.

(Mr. YOUNG of Alaska asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Madam Speaker, this is a good rule that should be adopted.

First of all, I want to commend my colleague, the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN). He has done an excellent job. In fact, he has done more than I would have done in the realm of trying to become reality in the sense of compromise with all walks, all thoughts, and all understanding. He has done an excellent job.

This is a pro-environment, pro-park, pro-history preservation bill that will improve our national parks, wild and scenic rivers, heritage areas, national forests, and many other public lands. Most of the sections of this bill have gone through individual hearings and followed the legislative process on freestanding bills.

Sixty-seven Members of this Congress from both parties have worked on separate pieces of legislation in this bill. We have worked closely with the Members on the important projects, Members of the Republican side and Democrat side. This bill affects 36 different States, the District of Columbia, and will benefit millions of people.

I will not list all the projects of this bill, the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN) will speak about that in the general debate. Let me say, though, this bill is a delicate balance, a very delicate balance. There will be some Members who believe we have spent too much time on the parks, some who believe we have not spent enough. I think it is a good investment.

There are those who are going to make the usual accusations we are not protecting the environment enough, but this bill creates new opportunities for recreation, for protection of our wildlife, and for improving the quality of life of Americans. This bill deserves the support of every Member of this House.

May I say, Madam Speaker, that for those who may think about voting against this bill or this rule, I would suggest respectfully, because I have worked with each Member who has come to me, it is going to be very difficult in the future to listen to someone sincerely when they do not support their own legislation, or when they suggest that ''I want to have mine, but no one else gets theirs.''

I suggest that those things that are in Ohio, those things that are in Pennsylvania and California, Mississippi, all those other States, those Members had better think very carefully about this great bill.

As far as the administration threatening to veto it, I have never for the life of me understood why we have to listen to the administration with regards to administration saying they are going to veto it. We are supposed to be the governing body for the people. If he wants to veto a parks bill, let the President veto it. I have no objection to that, if he wishes to do so. That is our form of government.

But I have listened day after day to this President threatening vetoes. I am saying, we ought to be ashamed of ourselves if we listen just to the President. Under our Constitution, we are the House of the people. It is our decision. If we want to vote this bill down, fine, but do not vote it down because in fact he threatens a veto. If Members want a king, they can have a king. I suggest the President would make a very poor king.

Mr. HALL of Ohio. Madam Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from California (Mr. MILLER), the former chairman and now the ranking member of the Committee on Resources.

Mr. MILLER of California. Madam Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Madam Speaker, this rule is adequate for this purpose. It does provide for an amendment. Obviously, the problem is that this bill cannot be amended in such a fashion to make it a better bill. We have declined to offer an amendment. We think the bill should be defeated. It should be defeated because it is contrary to the procedures of this House. It is contrary to sound environmental policy. It has many, many bad provisions in it.

It also has some very good provisions in it. Unfortunately, those good provisions are being used as bait. They are being used to try to enable some bad things to happen in this legislation, and to provide camouflage for the underlying provisions in this bill that are very bad policy.

That is why the administration has said it will recommend a veto of this legislation, should it pass. The reason Members ought to listen to this recommendation is so we do not go through this charade and then end up with nothing.

The fact of the matter is there are many, many portions of this bill sponsored by Members on both sides of the aisle that are noncontroversial, that have bipartisan support, and that can be dealt with and passed out of the House almost immediately on unanimous consent. We can deal with those pieces of legislation.

There are others that have had no hearings that we know very little about, or are so controversial that they simply drag the whole package down.

So Members can make a decision. They can vote ''no'' on this. Then we can concentrate on passing legislation that will be without controversy, that will address the needs of many, many Members, or they can continue the charade that somehow this bill is going to pass, when many of the Senators who are responsible for the jurisdiction of this bill have indicated that the Senate will not give consideration to it.

Unfortunately, the Senate has passed some noncontroversial portions of this bill and sent them off to the President. So the constituency for this bill is declining, and the controversy is increasing. That does not sound like a formula for success at the end of the session.

The fact of the matter is we have had all of this year in which many of the provisions of this bill could have been brought before us and then we could have dealt with them. But at the end of the session, this is a veto. It is unacceptable. It is bad policy, and I would urge all Members to vote against it and understand that not only the administration, but all major environmental groups oppose this legislation.

Mr. MCINNIS. Madam Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Madam Speaker, I think we need to lay out very clearly here, especially in light of the criticism from the gentleman from California (Mr. MILLER) about the process that we are following. The gentleman from California is quick to step up to the plate and criticize this bill. But the gentleman from California has not been very quick to step up to the plate and offer a substitute. Offer something better.

It is very easy to stand on this House floor and criticize the Republicans and criticize the Democrats who have worked to put this bill together. But I think that that criticism loses some of its credibility when one who steps up has the opportunity under the rule, has the opportunity under the rule to offer a substitute to put in place of this a better bill, stands up and criticizes us. I think this criticism would be much better received had they had a substitute on that side.

I would add that that is not a Democrat or Republican kind of bill. This is a bipartisan bill. So, we have a few Members on the Democratic side criticizing this thing. But still, out of fairness, the Republican leadership out of fairness insisted that these Democrats who are objecting to this bill have an opportunity, out of fairness, have an opportunity to offer their own proposal.

They declined to do that. Why? Because they do not want any criticism. It is much easier to criticize somebody than offer a substitute or come up with a good alternative. And that is the exact route they are traveling, and in my opinion that route comes to a dead end.

Madam Speaker, this is a good bill, a good rule; it is a fair bill, and a fair rule.

Madam Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. HALL of Ohio. Madam Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. VENTO).

Mr. VENTO. Madam Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. HALL) for yielding me this time.

Madam Speaker, I rise in opposition to the rule. It is only at the end of the session that we will probably ever see rules like this in which there is simply no opportunity for the body to work its will on what constitutes almost 100 different land use and park measures in one bill.

Some of these have been passed and are noncontroversial and have received deliberation of the Committee on Resources and the Subcommittee on National Parks and Public Lands. But many of these provisions, of course, have not been considered or debated on the House floor on their merits. We are forced to swallow whole in this case almost a hundred different modifications to various land use policy.

Of course, it is easy enough to say that there is an alliance here between Members that have some provision in this bill, and that they are basically being force-fed 99 other bills along with the one provision that they want to see enacted into law. But this is not the way to do business in terms of park and public land policy.

If these issues had been vetted, if they had been amended, if they had been debated on their merits, but there is no opportunity here today to in fact amend or to extract these specific provisions from this bill and move on in a deliberate way with the measures that are before us. There is simply no way to do it.

This is sort of a sorry excuse. I think the committee has worked very hard over the last 2 years in having hearings. I know I've sat through my share of such hearings. I am a little surprised that at the end of the session now they bring forth this type of bill, when there is not consensus on it, when all the major conservation and environmental groups are against it and numerous proposals of controversy bad policy and no hearings on the topic.

It is bad policy. It is a bad rule. This is not providing the ability of the body to work its will. This is simply a slam dunk of 100 different land use decisions that frankly repeal long-standing wilderness designations, that provide for roads, provide for other types of activities, and it is being force-fed to the Members as if they have to accept it in order to gain some reasonable changes in terms of public lands and parks bills that they want. The veiled threat and policy is inherent in this approach.

Quite frankly, I think the Congress has rightfully reserved to itself some of the responsibility to work on parks and public lands bills. But this type of action, I think, is the type of action that will, in fact, argue for changing that particular responsibility and conveying this responsibilty to the administration, because I think it is irresponsible to act on a measure of this nature, of this magnitude, in this rule.

Madam Speaker, this is simply a slam-dunk rule that is going to not provide for deliberation or consideration. It is an attempt to push through this body measures that cannot survive on their own merit on an up-or-down vote, and they are shoved into this measure.

Someone talks about it being ''park pork.'' It is more that that. Part of this pork sausage is rancid meat that is into this omnibus park pork sausage. As Bismarck said, those that like laws and sausages should never watch either being made. I would hope we would move away from such an approach. It is not so much sausage, but that we have rancid meat in here that destroys our parks and wilderness system, that are an affront to the American people, and that is why I urge a ''no'' vote on this rule and on this bill.

Mr. MCINNIS. Madam Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Madam Speaker, the gentleman's are very eloquent comments, but where is the meat? The gentleman has an opportunity to offer a substitute. If he thinks this is a rotten bill, he should come up with a better car.

We are not prohibiting. Our rule is very specific. Let me make it clear that this rule allows the opposition to come up with a substitute through the gentleman from California (Mr. MILLER). He is free to do that.

Mr. VENTO. Madam Speaker, would the gentleman yield? I would be happy to respond.

Mr. MCINNIS. Madam Speaker, I would be happy to yield in a moment, if the gentleman would sit around and listen to the debate.

Madam Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. BONILLA).

(Mr. BONILLA asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BONILLA. Madam Speaker, I rise in strong support of the rule and of this legislation that is a result of a lot of hard work between both sides on this committee. The gentleman from Alaska (Chairman YOUNG) and the gentleman from Utah (Chairman HANSEN) have done an outstanding job in moving this legislation forward.

This bill contains, as the chairman alluded to earlier, many stories out in the heartland that will result in positive changes in communities affecting National Parks all over the country. It is a good bipartisan bill, and every Member of Congress that is affected by this bill has a good story to tell about the changes that would result when this legislation passes.

I will just highlight briefly what will happen in my congressional district. There is a piece of land that the owners would like to donate to the Fort Davis National Historic Site. And there are other bills as well that have other local significance, and these changes should not fall prey to partisan politics.

In my part of the country, the bill would permit a simple 16-acre expansion of the Fort Davis historical site. This legislation is necessary because the original legislation limited the historic site to 460 acres.

Fort Davis is located in the heart of west Texas, a wonderful part of the country nestled in an area that is very scenic in its own rough and rugged way. I am proud to represent this area, and I would like to invite my colleagues to visit this area any time they are passing through my State.

That entire area of the State is the most popular tourist attraction in the State of Texas now. The fort was a key post in the defense of west Texas and thus played a major role in this region's history. From 1854 to 1891, troops at the post guarded immigrants, freighters, and stage coaches on the San Antonio-El Paso Road. Fort Davis is the best remaining example in the Southwest of the typical post-Civil War frontier fort. The post has extensive surviving structures and ruins.

The particular parcel of land that would be added is known as Sleeping Lion Mountain. This land overlooks the park's historic landmarks. It is adjacent to the park's southern boundary, and I believe that the inclusion of this tract of land into the site would ensure the visual and historic integrity for this State and national treasure.

The land is slated to be donated to the National Park Service by the Conservation Fund. The land has been purchased by the Conservation Fund. They secured the funds from several private foundations to purchase this land. The purchase of the land was completed in April, and they are simply waiting for us to act. In fact, they have been waiting for a long time for us to act.

Madam Speaker, this park expansion has the blessing of the local community and is supported by the Texas Historical Commission. This is a simple piece of legislation that allows for a minor park expansion. And reflecting on the story that I just told, Madam Speaker, there are countless others around the country that could be told about a positive change in their community and their national parks that could result in something good for the communities that these communities are crying out for.

Madam Speaker, I commend the gentleman from Utah (Chairman HANSEN) and the gentleman from Alaska (Chairman YOUNG), as well as the gentleman from New York (Chairman SOLOMON), my friend who is sitting to my right, and also the gentleman from Colorado (Mr. MCINNIS) who has worked hard on this rule and on this legislation.

Mr. MCINNIS. Madam Speaker, I yield 15 seconds to the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. VENTO), out of fairness, for him to respond.

Mr. VENTO. Madam Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Colorado (Mr. MCINNIS), and I will certainly also get time from the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. HALL). But this rule does not even provide the opportunity for 5 minutes debate for each of the measures in the bill. I mean, that is its sort of stand-on-your-head-type logic, because it says we can offer a substitute, but this rule waives all points of order against the substitute offered by the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN), but does not waive them for the substitute if offered by the gentleman from California (Mr. MILLER). And we did not know what the substitute was going to be, and we were supposed to have the amendment in by Monday. It is an unequal playing field and a bad bill and a bad rule.

Mr. MCINNIS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I think the gentleman from Minnesota has brought up a couple of valid points. I am not sure that the gentleman is aware of the historical perspective up in the Committee on Rules. Waivers were offered, and on top of that, we gave the other side an hour, 1 hour, of debate on the substitute. I am baffled by the fact that there is such strong criticism coming about this bill, yet no one who criticizes has decided to step forward with a better car.

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MCINNIS. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. VENTO. Madam Speaker, I would just point out that I think it is an impossible process when we have nearly a hundred measures in here that are important. The measure that the gentleman from Texas (Mr. BONILLA) mentioned is important, and I do not have any objections to it. But this does not provide 5 minutes of debate, not even a minute of debate for each measure in the bill. I think these measures deserve attention.

Mr. MCINNIS. Madam Speaker, reclaiming my time, I would say to the gentleman, that is exactly the point. It is a very complicated bill. It has lots of different projects in it. We are not going to get everybody in here happy about this all the time. But this is probably, this is clearly the most critical bill dealing in helping our national parks we have had this session.

We cannot put together the perfect model because we have too many players and projects. This is the best we are going to get. And if the gentleman could have done better, he should have introduced it.

Madam Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from New York (Mr. BOEHLERT).

(Mr. BOEHLERT asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BOEHLERT. Madam Speaker, I rise in support of the rule, but in opposition to the bill. It is a perfectly fine rule for a fatally flawed bill.

I had hoped not to be standing here today. I had hoped the Committee on Resources would pull together a noncontroversial bill, one that would be signable, that actually had a chance to become law. That result was encouraged before the bill was even introduced and there was an offer to negotiate.

Indeed, discussions did take place for 4 days last week. But the Committee on Resources opened those negotiations by listing the items that they considered nonnegotiable, and they were some of the worst provisions of the bill. That is not a very promising way to start negotiations.

But we still tried to work out issues concerning forestry, Bureau of Reclamation projects, and the rules governing wilderness areas. Unfortunately, none of these issues was fully resolved. We did reach a compromise on one provision, procedures for a NEPA waiver for certain forests.

In short, the bill and the manager's amendment do not address my concerns or the concerns of so many of my colleagues. If my colleagues have heard otherwise, they have been misled.

So, I urge my colleagues to support the rule, but oppose the bill; a bill that could have been negotiated, a bill that could have been noncontroversial, a bill that could have helped Americans all around the country, but a bill that instead is opposed by every environmental group.

It is opposed by the Taxpayers for Common Sense, it is opposed by the administration, it is a bill that is going nowhere, regardless of what happens here today. The majority of this bill could have been passed on the suspension calendar if the temptation had been resisted to deal with controversial matters that have never been the subject of full and open hearings.

I have no objection to the rule. It is a tribute to my friend and good chairman, the gentleman from New York (Mr. SOLOMON). But I urge defeat of the bill.

Mr. HALL of Ohio. Madam Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from American Samoa (Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA).

(Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

□ 1300

Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA. Madam Speaker, I rise in reluctant opposition to both the rule and to H.R. 4570. I say reluctant because this is likely the last parks bill to be considered by the House in this Congress, and I would have liked it to be bipartisan.

Madam Speaker, this bill contains laudable provisions which should be enacted into law. The bill contains many provisions supported today by both sides of the aisle, and many more provisions, I believe, that could have been negotiated into forms both sides could have supported. Over the past several weeks I have had discussions with several Members concerning their sections of this bill, and I was prepared to work with them and the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN) to craft a bill that could have passed the House today. Such a bill could stand a good chance of being enacted into law.

Madam Speaker, among the provisions which I believe there is bipartisan support for are the expansion of the Fort Davis National Historic Site in Texas, expansion of the Arches National Park in Utah, establishment of the Thomas Cole National Historic Site in New York, the amendments to the boundaries of the Abraham Lincoln Birth Place National Historic Site in Kentucky, the Automobile National Heritage Area in Michigan and Indiana, and the land exchanges involving Yosemite National Park and the Cape Cod National Seashore.

Among the provisions I believe, Madam Speaker, that could have been negotiated to acceptable resolutions are the Cumberland Island National Seashore in Georgia and the San Rafael Swell National Conservation Area in Utah.

With all due respect to my dear friend and colleagues, the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN) and the gentleman from Alaska (Mr. YOUNG), even with the changes contained in today's amendment, there are many provisions which I cannot support in good conscience. Among those are the Guadalupe-Hidalgo Treaty Land, the requirements for congressional approval of national monuments, and changes in environmental laws which go farther than I believe are beneficial to our public resources.

Madam Speaker, these are honest differences on how best to manage our public parks, lands and forests. Based on my subcommittee work with the gentleman from Utah over the past 2 years, I think many of these differences could have worked out. There are others, however, that, given the number of them and basic philosophical differences between the Members, we probably could not have resolved. I believe we should have saved the provisions for which there is strong support by pulling others from this bill. Perhaps this is unacceptable from the majority's perspective, but as we move through these last days of this Congress, I had hoped that we could have focused on moving to enactment as many meritorious bills as possible. With more compromise from the parties involved, we could have done this.

Madam Speaker, as I noted earlier, I would have preferred to be speaking in support of this legislation, but given the substantive differences, I feel compelled to recommend to my colleagues to vote against this rule as well as the bill.

Mr. MCINNIS. Madam Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from New York (Mr. SOLOMON), the chairman of the Committee on Rules.

Mr. SOLOMON. Madam Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time. I was not going to speak on this measure, but I have been sitting here listening patiently to the debate and I just am surprised at the opposition to the rule from the Democrat side.

I am looking at a chart here of all of the individual bills that are incorporated into this. H.R. 3047 passed the House, H.R. 799 on the Union Calendar, and another on the Union Calendar. Here are four more that have passed the House. We can go right down the line here. Most of this legislation has already been acted on by this body, and passed either unanimously or by overwhelming vote. Not even one of these bills was controversial.

I would like to say to the other side that before we took over control of the House 4 years ago, we Republicans were treated quite badly. We had ranking members of full committees that were not given the opportunity to offer a substitute. We have changed the protocol in the Committee on Rules and we never, ever deny the minority party the right to offer their alternative—not through a motion to recommit or not through defeating the previous question, but through a substitute. And they are given ample time.

We offered that to the gentleman from California (Mr. GEORGE MILLER). I specifically said, and Members can go back upstairs and read the record, that if the gentleman from California needed waivers, we would do it. All he needed to do was to print his bill, have it printed in the RECORD so it is there for Members to see in the morning. That is really bending over backwards. We have done everything we can to be fair, and then I see people stand up here opposing the rule. I just do not understand it.

Ronald Reagan taught me the value of compromise years ago, and it was hard to teach me, because as my colleagues saw from yesterday's tribute on the floor, I am very opinionated. But when we do compromise, it feels like we are compromising our principles. But that is what this body is all about. We have to work together. We should be doing that.

I want to assure everybody, all the conservatives in this House, that I have scoured the bill. There is nothing in the bill that intrudes on, that infringes on States' rights or the individual rights of local governments, whether they be towns or villages or cities or counties. This bill does not do that. So from that point of view, it is a good bill.

It is a good bill from some of the environmentalists' point of view. I saw my good friend, the gentleman from New York (Mr. BOEHLERT), who I appreciate is going to vote for the rule, but he is going to oppose the bill. For the Hudson Valley there is very important legislation in the bill that my good friend the gentleman from Utah (Mr. JIM HANSEN), the subcommittee chairman, has provided.

I brought to the floor a bill not too long ago, and it passed the House. During debate I brought in the paintings of Frederick Church and Thomas Cole, which are just outstanding, which pictorialize the entire northeast, the Hudson Valley, the Adirondack and Catskill Mountains. That legislation is in here. And every environmentalist that I know in the mid Hudson Valley supports this legislation. So I just do not know where all the opposition is coming from.

I think Members should vote for the rule and certainly they should support the bill. It is a good bill, and I thank the gentleman for yielding me the time.

Mr. HALL of Ohio. Madam Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume to say that we do not argue with the fact that there are some very good provisions in this bill, but the fact is it is my understanding that over half of the provisions that are in this bill have never been reported from the committee, and there is over two dozen provisions that have never, ever had a hearing.

So the people on the committee and the people on the floor of the House, we do not know what is in this bill and we just want a chance to take a look at it, debate it, and we cannot do it today with this very restrictive rule.

Madam Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. VENTO).

Mr. VENTO. Madam Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time. Listening to the appeal of our distinguished friend and chairman of the Committee on Rules, I would just point out that the history of Mo Udall and, for that matter, the gentleman from California (Mr. GEORGE MILLER), who most recently led this committee and now has passed the torch on to the gentleman from Alaska (Mr. DON YOUNG), was to, in fact, have open rules on most of these issues.

As has been indicated here, with a hundred measures on this bill, no opportunity to amend them, some that have not had hearings, some considerable number, some that are very controversial, if it were only the matter of the Thomas Cole measure, that has passed this House and is awaiting action in the Senate, that were included in this bill as a way to try to optimize the opportunity to enact some of these measures into law, I think most of us would be trying to work to accomplish that. It is a difficult task in this format. But given the way that this has been constructed, and the controversy over many of these issues, I think it is unreasonable to expect us to accept this type of substitute.

I think that in order to achieve that, it is not something we are going to do a slam dunk passage here in the House and score some points. It is not going to accomplish what is being sought. I think it has a tendency to polarize. There just is not enough time, given the rule and where we are at on the floor today, to go through and expect to get hours and hours of debate on this. And, logically, the gentleman did not provide that, given the circumstance we are in this week attempting to end this session.

So I think this is a step backward toward seeing the enactment of the good provisions and mixing them up with the bad and hoping somehow that, by rolling the dice here, that we will get to enact these particular measures. This is not the way to do business. This is not deliberative. This is not fair. I understand the pressure the Committee on Rules and the body is under, but this is not a step forward, it is a step backward.

Mr. MCINNIS. Madam Speaker, I yield 7½ minutes to the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN).

(Mr. HANSEN asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. HANSEN. Madam Speaker, I appreciate the gentleman from Colorado yielding this time to me and the excellent remarks that he has made, and let me just say a few things.

We have heard all this stuff, but let us get down to the facts on this baby and what really happened. People are saying, oh, this is going to be vetoed. We promise it will be vetoed. I want to hearken back to 2 years ago. We stood here with a bill that had more titles in it, more bills in it than we have today, and we heard exactly the same thing: oh, this one will be vetoed.

How many of my colleagues were with me as we stood in the oval office while the President put his John Henry on that and said, this is a great way to do legislation. The President of the United States said that. I do not know if I agree with him that it is a good way to do legislation.

But now we hear these other arguments. It has all these things in it that we have not had hearings on. We have not had time on these things. Well, guess what? Most of these are so minuscule, so infinitesimal that they amount to nothing. The bills in here that have got things of substance in it we have had hearings on. We have had a lot of them on the floor. And when we start looking at some of these others, they are almost infinitesimal.

What is this rule about and this bill about? It is about compromise. The whole thing is compromise. My staff, the staff of the gentleman from Alaska (Mr. DON YOUNG), the staff on the other side has worked with others to try to compromise in some of these areas. I almost feel bad that we have compromised so far on our side. I think we have given away the store in some particular things.

But I would like to talk about some of those things on this term compromise. It probably comes down to only two bills in this whole shooting match that really bothers anybody, and this is probably the biggest one, right here. It is called San Rafael Swell. This happens to be an area that I doubt anybody in this room, other than me and maybe one other, has ever seen, but my colleagues should go look at it. It is one of the most beautiful geological things the Lord ever put on the earth.

But as we look at that particular area, the people in Emery County said someday we have to come to grips with this area. This is where Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid mixed it up with a few people. This is where there were shootouts and there were mines. This is a very interesting area. People who go in there are just enthralled with the history of the area. So they came up with the San Rafael Swell. And the Emery and Carbon County folks, all those good Democrats down there, said this is what we will do. We will work out something with the environmental community that will work. And so they did, and they gave them about everything. Yet every environmentalist I have talked to said we do not like the way they have it.

Look at this. This green area goes into wilderness under this bill. This light green goes into primitive areas that are nonmotorized. So what is the issue? We are giving them everything they asked for but one thing, and that is called Sid's Mountain. Please look at this yellow place right here. That is Sid's mountain. A very interesting place. But 15 years ago Fish and Wildlife and the State of Utah, and fish and wildlife came from all over America, said this is the ideal place to have the desert big horn sheep. We do not have a good herd anywhere. We have some other places, but not anywhere in the west. So they started the desert big horn sheep.

Guess what the problem is? They have to drink water, just like all the rest of us do, and there is no water on that mountain. So they came up with this original idea called guzzlers. For those who do not know what a guzzler is, let me explain it. It is a large thing that works by evaporation. And through the sun coming up and then it getting cold, it evaporates, goes into a trough, and the big horn sheep get their water there.

However, we all realize the 1964 wilderness bill says what? We cannot have a mechanized thing in the wilderness. So we cannot have guzzlers. So they cannot have the sheep. Well, a lot of people want to go in and see them. There are some roads at the bottom of this, and a lot of people want to see these sheep.

But when it gets down to this great big thing that we are all mad about, it comes down to the idea of the San Rafael Swell and the desert big horn sheep.

Now, we have talked to our environmental friends and asked them what they have against the desert big horn sheep. That is the whole issue on this rascal. The desert big horn sheep seems to be the whole thing that may turn this bill one way or the other. And I am stale waiting for a member of the Sierra Club or one of the others to stand up and say this is what we have against the desert big horn sheep.

What it amounts to is the idea of wilderness. They have built their whole thing on wilderness. They should build it on the term restrictive areas. It means the same thing, but one is a romantic word and one is another word.

Let me go through a few others. The Canyon Ferry Reservoir we considered modification. The Tuskegee Historic Site we went on. The water projects with the gentleman from California (Mr. MILLER) we went on. The Nevada Airport, we worked that out. The things with the gentleman from Alaska (Mr. DON YOUNG), we came up with a provision on the Chugach area. The C&O Canal. The list goes on and on of things we have agreed to, to make this an acceptable bill.

I personally would urge the passage of this rule, and I would urge the passage of this bill. This is a good piece of legislation. We have played this game time after time. We will hear the same arguments every time. The fact of the matter is the President signed it the last time, and I would hope he would see the wisdom in signing it this time.

Mr. PAUL. Mr. Chairman, moments ago, HR 4570 was described as a ''delicate balance'' not to be disturbed by votes against either the resolution or the rule. In fact, the primary justification presented for passage of the bill was the ''brilliance'' with which a compromise securing the necessary number of votes was ''engineered.'' Statements such as these are an unfortunate commentary on the state of affairs in the nation's capital insofar as they represent not advancement of sound policy principles but rather a seriously flawed process by which federal government ''favors'' are distributed in a means which assures everyone gets a little something if they vote to give enough other districts a little something too. This is not the procedure by which Congress should be deciding matters of federal land disposition and acquisition. In fact, there appears to be no Constitutional authority for most of what HR 4570 proposes to do.

Particularly frustrating is that in my attempt to return authority to the State of Texas for a water project located in the 14th District, I introduced HR 2161, The Palmetto Bend Title Transfer Project. Return of such authority comports with my Constitutional notion that local control is preferred to unlimited federal authority to dictate from Washington, the means by which a water project in Edna, Texas will be managed. I understand that certain Members of Congress may disagree with the notion of the proper and limited role of the federal government. The point here, however, is that the ''political process'' embracing the so-called ''high virtue of compromise'' means that in order for one to vote for less federal authority one must, at the same time, in this bill, vote for more. Political schizophrenia was never more rampant. One would have to vote to authorize the transfer of 377,000 acres of public land in Utah to the federal government (at taxpayer expense of $50 million for Utah's public schools) in order to return Lake Texana to the State of Texas.Two unrelated issues; two opposite philosophies as to the proper role of the federal government—a policy at odds with itself (unless, of course, compromise is one's ultimate end).

HR 2161 merely facilitates the early payment of the construction costs (discounted, of course, by the amount of interest no longer due as a consequence of early payment) and transfers title of the Palmetto Bend Project to the Texas state authorities. Both the LNRA and TWDB concur that an early buy-out and title transfer is extremely beneficial to the economical and operational well-being of the project as well as the Lake Texana water users. The Texas Legislature and Governor George W. Bush have both formally supported the early payment and title transfer. In fact, even the residents of Highland Lakes in Travis County who initially expressed a concern as to the effects of the title transfer on the Colorado River Basin, came to support the legislation. This bill will save Lake Texana water users as much as one million dollars per year as well as providing an immediate infusion of $43 million dollars to the national treasury. Additionally, all liability associated with this water project are, under my legislation, assumed by the state of Texas thus further relieving the financial burden of the federal government.

Texas has already demonstrated sound management of this resource. Recreational use of the lake has been well-provided under Texas state management to include provision of a marina, pavilion, playground, and boating docks, all funded without federal money. Additionally, a woodland bird sanctuary and wildlife viewing area will also be established upon transfer with the assistance of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department and several environmental organizations.

Members of Congress must not be put in the position of having to support a massive federal land grab to secure for the residents of Texas more local control over their water supply. For these reasons, while I remain committed to the return of Lake Texana to Texas State authorities, I must reluctantly and necessarily oppose HR 4570.

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Chairman, I rise today in opposition to this bill and in particular to Section Nine which seeks to reduce hazardous fuels in our national forests. While I oppose many provisions in this bill, I am particularly concerned with the process by which this legislation has made its way to the floor. Most of the provisions have circumvented Committee consideration and some have never even been considered by the relevant Subcommittee. There is a reason why there is a detailed procedure for the consideration of legislation in the House—a procedure that I strongly support—and I am very dismayed that H.R. 4570 was not developed in this way. As many of my colleagues are aware, I have been very active in reforming management policies in our National Forests. Until his point, the dialogue on this issue between various interested parties within Congress has been very productive. However, the provisions pertaining to hazardous fuels reduction in this bill are a step backwards in improving the management of our National Forests. Section Nine authorizes the Forest Service to combine commercial timber sales with forest stewardship contracting. Further, it establishes an off-budget account that while initially funded by transferring money from the hazardous fuels reduction program, is regenerated through timber receipts from these sales.

As a fiscal conservative, I cannot support the connection of these contracts. Providing offsets for timber purchasers to do stewardship work in connection with a timber sale may have the result of paying timber purchasers to take our natural resources. No Member with any fiscal sense should support such a policy.

While this practice may work in private forestry, it is not something I can support on our federal lands. If private contracting is the most effective and cost-efficient option for performing stewardship contracting, it should be used, but separate to a commercial timber sale. There is no reason that these two services need to be connected in a contract.

In addition, since I already have concerns about existing off-budget accounts maintained by the Forest Service, I cannot support the establishment of another one. Everyone can agree on the fact that the Forest Service has fiscal accountability problems. Allowing them to use more money without Congressional oversight is completely irresponsible.

Since I know that there are many good and important provisions in this bill, I am sorry that I cannot support it. However, my concerns with other provisions are serious enough to warrant my overall opposition. It is my hope that in the future this sort of process for developing legislation will be avoided and real progress can be made.

Mr. CASTLE. Mr. Chairman, I rise today to express my opposition to ten percent of the Omnibus National Parks and Public Lands Act of 1998. This massive 481 page document that rolls almost 100 bills into one package is ninety percent perfect. It makes needed technical corrections to the 1996 Omnibus National Parks Act, makes important adjustments to park boundaries, designates desirable land as heritage and historic areas, and reauthorizes the Historic Preservation Fund. The bill even establishes the transcontinental American Discovery Trail which ends in Cape Henlopen State Park in my State of Delaware. However, ten percent of this bill needs to be separated out and addressed on an individual basis.

That ten percent includes some of the following measures:

Opens areas proposed or being managed as wilderness to possible development, including the Everglades National Park which Congress has spent millions of dollars to restore;

Hands over title and operation of some western water projects to private interests without requiring them to pay full value for the project. This year, the House passed the Salton Sea Reclamation Act with a price tax of almost one-third of the Bureau of Reclamation's annual budget. There is a long list of other reclamation projects seeking funding. Why then would we want to sell existing projects at less than their fair market value? it is not fiscally responsible especially in a year where the President wants to spend the Social Security Surplus on ''emergency'' spending;

Waives environmental review procedures for a proposed road that cuts through one of the richest wetlands on the Pacific Coast of North America, as well as a migratory bird nesting area, and salmon spawning grounds. The value of this road may well outweigh these environmental concerns, but we should not blindly authorize the road easement without stopping to study its full environmental impact and plotting a course that minimizes the environmental harm. That is simply poor management.

Ninety percent of this bill could have been one of the shining stars in the 105th Congress' environmental record. Instead, due to the controversial ten percent it will either die in this chamber, never be considered in the Senate, or be vetoed at the President's desk. We have precious few days left in the legislative session and many of us need to return to our districts and debate serious national issues with political opponents. Let us not be the only institution to pass an unsignable law that has not been thoroughly examined by the committee process, and ten percent of which bypasses or degrades the world-class environmental protections we have established in this country.

Mr. KINGSTON. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of the Omnibus National Parks and Public Lands Act. In particular, I would like to address one portion of the act regarding Cumberland Island National Seashore in my district.

Cumberland Island National Seashore is governed largely by two establishing acts. The first, in 1972, created the seashore. The second, the 1982, established a large wilderness area on the island. Unfortunately, this act was assembled hastily and before the National Park Service's wilderness suitability study was completed. The unfortunate result was that the wilderness designation was placed on top of a number of important historic assets, essentially locking them away and seriously jeopardizing their existence. While the listing of these structures, districts, and sites on the National Register of Historic Places represents the Federal Government's obligation to protect them, their inclusion within the wilderness in 1982 seriously undermines that effort. Not only does it impede public access to these treasures, it presents significant obstacles to their preservation. These concerns were recognized and noted to Congress in writing at the time by both the President and the Department of Interior, but they were not corrected.

Mr. Chairman, Cumberland Island is a beautiful and unique island. The diversity of its resources is one of its greatest strengths. My intention in introducing this legislation is to recognize the value of this diversity and protect it. I believe it is indeed possible—and imperative in this case—to protect both the natural and historic assets. They do not have to be mutually exclusive goals.

This bill takes three basic steps to achieve this balance. First, it removes the wilderness or potential wilderness label from structures listed on the National Register of Historic Places. This provision will lift restrictions on the Park Service as to the steps they can take to preserve them. It also removes the fundamental conflict of mandates on how these structures are to be treated: whether they are to be preserved according to the Historic Preservation Act of allowed to ''revert to their natural state'' consistent with the Wilderness Act.

The bill also seeks to provide public access to these sites. Because they are encased in wilderness, the only way for the public to visit them is by making a 15 to 30 mile round trip hike. Obviously, only very healthy backpackers can ever see and learn from these sites. A two-hundred year old road (which itself has been designated as a national historic asset), known as the ''Main Road'' or ''Grand Avenue'' runs from the south end of the island up to many of these historic sites within the wilderness. Our bill allows this road to be used in some manner which does not have an undue negative impact on the wilderness so that the park's visitors can see, study, and enjoy these sites.

Unfortunately, under the present circumstances, few visitors even realize all that exists on the island, let alone the events that enhance their historic significance. Cumberland's history is as rich as Georgia's. Off its shore, pirates once loomed and British and Spanish warships fought. Soldiers were stationed there in the War of 1812. Revolutionary War hero Nathaniel Greene and his remarkable wife Katie Littlefield Greene farmed and planted there. Their Cumberland Island timber business supplied the wood for ''Old Ironsides.'' Thomas Carnegie built mansions on the Island and once had over 300 servants there. On the north end of the island is a historic settlement called Half Moon Bluff founded by newly emancipated slaves. This was one of the first free Black settlements in America and one of the few which embodies and represents their transition from slavery to freedom and landownership. In all, there are nine Cumberland island sites and districts and many structures on the National Register of Historic Places. Today many of their remnants are gone, and the rest are decaying.

The third component of the legislation authorizes the restoration of the beautiful historic Plum Orchard mansion which has dangerously deteriorated. This house was gifted to the Federal Government on the condition that it be maintained and enjoyed by the public. I am sorry to say that this trust has been betrayed. Without serious and prompt intervention, this structure like some of its surrounding buildings will fall victim to neglect. This not only marginalizes the Historic Preservation Act, it serves as a pitiful warning to other citizens who would like to donate valuable cultural or historic assets to the government.

Mr. Chairman, I strongly urge support of this legislation and point to this provision as a model for the protection of all resources, natural and historic, which fall within our government's trust.

Mr. STARK. Mr. Chairman, I rise today in opposition to the Republican National Parks Bill. As former President Reagan once said, ''here we go again.''

It has become a tradition in Congress since the Republicans gained control of the majority to pass a massive end of session bill dealing with the environment. Because the Committee brings up these bills on short notice and with minimal oversight, they are ripe for anti-environmental provisions that would not pass on their own muster.

This bill is a desperate attempt to pass legislation prior to hitting the campaign trail and to pass through specific favors to special interests. This ''omnibus'' bill contains many environmental provisions that should be voted upon and should become law. These provisions, if brought to the floor independently, would enjoy broad bipartisan approval. My Republican friends have included pet projects and environmental attacks in the context of this larger package. This bill should be rejected as it is written and Members should have the right to vote on individual parts of this package. Whatever positive environmental effects that part of this bill would help to create is undermined by the backdoor attacks on law that protect our public lands and national parks.

I have heard from numerous environmental groups in opposition to this bill. The Sierra Club, the American Lands Alliance, the Wilderness Society, the U.S. Public Interest Research Group, the National Parks and Conservation Association, the League of Conservation Voters, the Defenders of Wildlife, the Environmental Defense Fund, the World Wildlife Fund, the National Trust for Historic Preservation and more than twenty other organizations have gone on record in opposition to H.R. 4570.

What is hidden in the midst of this bill? Let's take a quick look.

H.R. 4570 exempts certain public bodies from agreements and laws designed to manage public lands wisely. Sections 1351–1357 specifically make exceptions for an irrigation district in Southwestern Arizona from compliance with multiple-species conservation and water use plans now being developed by stakeholders in the Lower Colorado River Basin. Section 1009 is a backdoor assault on standard environmental review procedures for tree removal projects where natural events have happened. These carve-outs set terrible precedent and encourage the selective enforcement of environmental laws.

What else is in this bill? Section 208 makes allowances for the development of a commercial airport in the Mojave National Preserve. Even if you are willing to look beyond the environmental and recreational impact this development will have, this provision also exempts the transfer from the Federal Lands Management Policy Act, another horrible precedent. Section 1342 allows for the development of a road through Alaska's Copper River Delta, including a 250-foot easement for logging in this pristine environmental wetlands area.

H.R. 4570 paves the way for the privatization of National Park Lands, the transfer of Everglades National Park Land and weakens the Federal Antiquities Act. None of these ideas could garnish a majority vote in Congress on their own. Extreme members of the Republican Party must seek this cloak and dagger approach to get their pet projects before the body.

H.R. 4570 incorporates the intent of H.R. 2458, which was introduced by Representative HELEN CHENOWETH. This provision would allow the U.S. Forest Service to give away $350 million in ''forest health'' credits over the next 5 years to pay for increased logging and grazing on National Forests under the pretension of wildfire reduction. I guess the logic is clear, it is hard to have a wildfire without any trees.

I have been working with many Members of Congress to monitor and decrease the invasive use of motorized vehicles in our national parks and public lands. The bill before us today declassifies designated wilderness areas throughout the West to specifically allow motorized access. This dreadful provision could not pass if brought up on its own. But buried in the end of year rush to adjournment, and desperately trying to show their constituents that they have actually passed legislation this year, my colleagues on the other side of the aisle are threatening our natural lands and public areas with irreparable harm.

I urge my colleagues to put the public interest ahead of the special interests and vote against this bill.

Mr. FARR of California. Mr. Chairman, I rise today reminded of the first lines in the Tale of Two Cities ''It was the best of times; it was the worst of times.'' I am pleased that one of my bills, the California Coastal Rocks and Islands Wilderness Act of 1998, is included in the Omnibus National Parks and Public Lands Act. Unfortunately, because of the lateness of the legislative calendar, it will be difficult to reconcile the differences between the executive and legislative branches on how we go about protecting our natural resources.

I am glad to have an opportunity to discuss the language that I introduced along with Messrs. GALLEGLY, BILBRAY and several other

California Coastal Members. I especially want to give my thanks to Mr. GALLEGLY for his hard work and efforts to get this legislation on the floor today. Unfortunately, in the hoopla of the moment I can not forget that this bill is destined to be vetoed.

Mr. Chairman, the purpose of the Rocks and Islands Wilderness Act is to recognize the ecological significance of the tens of thousands of small rocks, islands and pinnacles off the California coast, by designating them as part of the National Wilderness Preservation System.

These small islands and rocks provide important resting sites for California sea lions, Steller's sea lions, elephant seals and harbor seals, as well as providing a narrow flight lane in the Pacific Flyway. An estimated 200,000 breeding seabirds of 13 different species use these rocks and islands for feeding, perching, nesting and shelter. Birds that use these areas include three threatened and endangered species; the brown pelican, the least tern and the peregrine falcon.

The Wilderness designation afforded by this act would apply to all rocks, islands and pinnacles off the California coast from the Oregon border to the U.S.-Mexico border, land that is currently under the jurisdiction of the Bureau of Land Management (BLM). This includes nearly all of the federally-owned lands above the mean high tide and within three geographical miles off the coast.

The designation would afford the highest protected status and highlight the ecological importance of all of the small rocks, islands and pinnacles off the California coast, which together comprise approximately 7,000 acres. Adding these areas would also further the Wilderness Act's goal of including unique, ecologically representative areas to the System.

Rocks and islands which are already patented or reserved for marine navigational aids, National Monuments, or state parks will not be affected by the legislation.

Mr. Chairman, this is a good, straight-forward, non-controversial proposal that protects a unique array of California ecosystems. Unfortunately it is coupled here with many questionable ones that threaten our precious parks and public lands. This omnibus bill is unacceptable in its current form, despite containing a number of worthwhile measures. Regrettably then, I must ask my colleagues to reject this bill but to continue to fight for the good measures that it contains. We must work together to protect our natural heritage so that we can leave a truly worthy legacy to our children and to future generations.

Mr. HALL of Ohio. Madam Speaker, I urge a ''no'' vote on the rule.

I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. MCINNIS. Madam Speaker, I urge a ''yes'' vote on the rule.

Madam Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time, and I move the previous question on the resolution.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mrs. EMERSON). The question is on the resolution.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. HALL of Ohio. Madam Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Evidently a quorum is not present.

The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 225, nays 198, not voting 11, as follows:

Mrs. MORELLA and Mr. LEACH changed their vote from ''nay'' to ''yea.''

So the resolution was agreed to.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. UPTON). Pursuant to House Resolution 573 and rule XXIII, the Chair declares the House in the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill, H.R. 4570.

The Chair designates the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. NEY) as chairman of the Committee of the Whole, and requests the gentlewoman from Missouri (Mrs. EMERSON) to assume the chair temporarily.

IN THE COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

Accordingly, the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 4570) to provide for certain boundary adjustments and conveyances involving public lands, to establish and improve the management of certain heritage areas, historic areas, National Parks, wild and scenic rivers, and national trails, to protect communities by reducing hazardous fuels levels on public lands, and for other purposes, with Mrs. EMERSON (Chairman pro tempore) in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the bill is considered as having been read the first time.

Under the rule, the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN) and the gentleman from California (Mr. MILLER) each will control 30 minutes.

Mr. MILLER of California. Madam Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from New York (Mr. BOEHLERT) be allowed to control 10 minutes of the 30 minutes allotted to me.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

Mr. HANSEN. Madam Chairman, I object.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. Objection is heard.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

Mr. BOEHLERT. Parliamentary inquiry, Madam Chairman. May I get a clarification?

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. The gentleman will state his parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. BOEHLERT. The request from the gentleman from California (Mr. MILLER) was that 10 minutes of his time, Mr. MILLER's time, be controlled by this Member.

Is that correct?

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. That is correct, time which Mr. MILLER has yielded to you.

Mr. HANSEN. I withdraw my objection, Madam Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN).

Mr. HANSEN. Madam Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Madam Chairman, it is a great pleasure today that I rise in support of H.R. 4570, the Omnibus National Park and Public Lands Act of 1998. This is an outstanding bill that addresses a variety of important concerns, and national parks, wild and scenic rivers, heritage areas, national forests and other public lands. This bill is the result of a number of resource-related bills, most of which have already gone through individual areas and followed the legislative process. Numerous Members of Congress are to be commended and congratulated for their hard work on the single parts of this bill which together make a landmark piece of legislation. In fact an impressive 67 individual Members of Congress, both Republican and Democrat, introduced legislation that is now part of this bill.

This is a far-reaching bipartisan omnibus bill, accomplishes many goals and addresses a multitude of public lands concerns to ensure that America's cherished parks and public lands, many of them national treasures, are protected, expanded and improved. It also creates new and important historic sites, heritage areas and wilderness areas so the American public can enjoy, benefit and use these extraordinarily natural and historic resources.

Furthermore, the superb natural and significant and historic areas that the omnibus bill protects and creates span the breadth of this great country of ours. In fact, it deals with resource issues and areas in 36 separate States, from wild and scenic rivers of Massachusetts, creating wilderness areas in California; from a national recreation area, to Georgia, to Midway Island, far from the Pacific Ocean and from the Everglades of Florida to Mt. St. Helens in the State of Washington.

Madam Chairman, this is a work of a lot of compromise. We have compromised this thing from a number of areas. During the debate regarding the rule I talked about the most controversial thing, the San Rafael swell bill which was basically just protecting big horn sheep. I cannot imagine why anyone is against big horn sheep, but apparently a lot of folks on this floor are in America, and there is a couple of other minor ones. Other than that, this is almost an agreed-on piece of legislation, and I would hope that the Members would look at this and see what the good things it does for America.

Let us not be legislating by polls and political pundits. Let us legislate on what is right for America and not to be concerned about getting 20 phone calls in the office.

Madam Chairman, it is with great pleasure that I rise today in support of H.R. 4570, the Omnibus National Parks and Public Lands Act of 1998. This is an outstanding bill that addresses a variety of important concerns in National Parks, wild and scenic rivers, heritage areas, National Forests, and other public lands. This bill is the result of a number of resource related bills, most of which have already gone through individual hearings and followed the legislative process. Numerous Members of Congress are to be commended and congratulated for their hard work on the single parts of this bill which, together, make this a landmark piece of legislation. In fact, an impressive sixty-seven individual Members of Congress, both Republican and Democrat, introduced legislation that is now part of this bill.

Madam Chairman, the far-reaching bi-partisan Omnibus Bill accomplishes many goals and addresses a multitude of public lands concerns to assure that America's cherished parks and public lands, many of them national treasures, are protected, expanded, and improved. It also creates new and important historic sites, heritage areas, and wilderness areas so that the American public can enjoy, benefit, and use these extraordinary natural and historic resources.

Furthermore, the superb natural and significant historic areas that the Omnibus Bill protects and creates, span the breadth of this great country of ours. In fact, it deals with resource issues and areas in 36 separate states—from wild and scenic rivers in Massachusetts, to creating wilderness areas in California, from a national recreation area in Georgia to Midway Island, far out in the Pacific Ocean, and from the Everglades of Florida to Mount St. Helens in the state of Washington.

Madam Chairman, allow me to point out in greater detail a few of the many provisions in the bill which will help improve and create more of our outstanding natural, historic, and cultural resources.

This bill expands the boundary of the boyhood home of one of our country's greatest presidents, Abraham Lincoln. It authorizes the inclusion of the Knob Creek Farm into the Lincoln Birthplace National Historic Site. This is the farm where Lincoln spent much of his childhood and still retains its great historic significance.

Likewise, this bill modifies and expands the boundaries of the birthplace of our country's first president, George Washington. It expands the current boundary of the National Monument to include an area known as Ferry Farm located on the banks of the beautiful Rappahannock River. This area is highly prized because of the cultural and natural resources associated with the boyhood home of George Washington and is thought to be the place where George Washington chopped down the well-known cherry tree.

The Omnibus Parks bill enhances the management and public enjoyment of a number of National Heritage Areas including the Delaware and Lehigh National Heritage Corridor in Pennsylvania, the Blackstone River Valley National Heritage Corridor which flows through Massachusetts and Rhode Island, and the Illinois and Michigan National Heritage Corridor. Moreover, it creates a new Heritage Area in Michigan, the Automobile National Heritage Area, so the public can celebrate and enjoy the important resources related to the industrial and cultural heritage of the automotive industry, an industry that, without doubt, has touched every single American in a variety of ways.

This bill provides new opportunities for Americans to visit new historic areas around the country such as the Thomas Cole National Historic Site in the state of New York. Thomas Cole is an extremely important American artist and founded the Hudson River school of art, an important cultural movement with great significance to the beginning of the conservation movement in the United States.

Moreover, it authorizes the addition of the Paoli Battlefield to the Valley Forge National Historic Park. Paoli Battlefield, located in Pennsylvania, is the site of a very important Revolutionary War battle which became a rallying cry for many of the soldiers and citizens alike during the American Revolution.

Other historic sites are established by this bill, as well. For example, in Arizona the Casa

Malpais National Historic Landmark would become an affiliated site of the National Park System. This site is an amazing archaeological pueblo ruin once occupied by the Mongollon culture 700 years ago and includes a number of impressive features such as a Great Kiva complex, stairways, wall fortifications, catacombs, and sacred chambers.

Turning to more recent times, the Omnibus Bill establishes the Lower East Side Tenement National Historic Site in New York City also as an affiliated site of the National Park Service. The Lower East Side Tenement, built in the mid-1860s, is the first tenement in the nation to be preserved as a historic site and represents a unique opportunity for the public to interpret this rich cultural heritage which has contributed to the very fabric of America.

H.R. 4570 authorizes construction of the Gateway Visitor Center at Independence National Historical Park in Philadelphia, home to many of our country's most cherished treasures such as Carpenter's Hall, Independence Hall, and the Liberty Bell. This ensures, that for years to come, visitors will have an enjoyable and educational experience on some of our most revered land in the United States.

H.R. 4570 establishes the Tuskegee Airmen National Historic Site as a unit of the National Park System in the State of Alabama. This site will commemorate and interpret the heroic efforts made by the Tuskegee Airmen during World War II through the development and management of the Tuskegee Airmen National Center. Furthermore, this bill establishes the Little Rock Central High School as a National Historic Site. As many people know, Little Rock Central High School played a prominent role in the struggle for civil rights and served as an example and a catalyst for the integration of public schools across the country. Establishment of this historic site would recognize this great achievement and the evolution of the civil rights movement in the United States.

Madam Chairman, the Omnibus Parks Bill also provides for the expansion of a number of national park units like that of the spectacular Arches National Park in my beautiful home state of Utah. This spectacular park contains one of the largest concentrations of natural stone arches in the world, and numerous geologic features such as spires, pinnacles, pedestals, and balanced rocks. Another park unit expands by authorizing the acquisition of a parcel of property for the Morristown National Historical Park in New Jersey. This property was the strategically located winter headquarters of General George Washington during the winter of 1779–1780. And it expands the Chattahoochee River National Recreation which will increase protection and visitor enjoyment of the river, by adding land-based links between current units of the national recreation area. This addition is a prime example of a public/private initiative to preserve and protect one of our nation's most popular recreation areas.

Importantly, Madam Chairman, this bill would reauthorize the Historic Preservation Fund created by the Historic Preservation Act. This fund is a very significant component for the preservation of the vast array of prehistoric and historic resources across this nation. There are a number of worthwhile programs that are associated with this Fund including two types of grants which support the administrative functions of the State Historic Preservation Office and also support the ''bricks and mortar'' preservation and rehabilitation of important historic properties.

H.R. 4570 establishes the National Discovery Trails System and designates the first such trail as the ''American Discovery Trail''. These trails would be continuous interstate trails located to provide quality outdoor recreation and travel connecting the Nation's metropolitan, urban, rural, and back country regions. The American Discovery Trail would extend 6,000 miles from Delaware across the United States to the coast of California. Provisions are also included in this section that provide needed protection and notification for private property owners. This will ensure both public enjoyment of the trails and protection of the private property owner.

In addition H.R. 4570 establishes the country's newest wild and scenic river system in the state of Massachusetts. It designates four beautiful segments of the Sudbury, Assabet and Concord Rivers to the National Wild and Scenic River System. This will guarantee the protection and conservation of these spectacular rivers, so that the public can continue to enjoy the recreational opportunities these rivers have to offer.

Madam Chairman, this bill resolves a very important issue that has been ongoing in the state of Utah for a number of years. When Utah was granted statehood, the Federal Government designated scattered sections throughout the State as school trust land. These parcels were to be sold or developed, and the revenue was to go into a trust fund for the school children of Utah. Over the years, however, the Federal Government created several National Parks, National Monuments, and Indian Reservations that surrounded hundreds of these school sections, essentially making them undevelopable and nontransferable. Since it became almost impossible for the State to derive any economical use from these lands, the school trust has suffered greatly. This section would trade these lands out of Parks, Monuments and Reservations for economically developable lands elsewhere in the State, greatly benefiting the school children of Utah. Like many others, this provision is supported by the State of Utah, environmental groups, and the Administration.

Madam Chairman, I have just given a more detailed description on only a few of the many, many things that this bill will accomplish. In addition to items I mentioned, H.R. 4570 will establish a hazardous fuels reduction program, settle property rights issues, authorize construction of memorials to great leaders like Mahatma Gandhi and great men of science life Benjamin Bannecker, convey a number of federal reclamation projects to local irrigation districts, establish a cave and karst institute, create wilderness areas, and authorize a number of provisions for the people of Alaska.

Simply put Madam Chairman, this is a very important and comprehensive natural resource bill that represents many single pieces of legislation by nearly 70 individual Members of Congress in both parties over 36 separate states. The Administration is in full support of most of the sections of this bill. Moreover, many of the provisions of this bill have been reported by the Full Committee and many others passed the House or the Senate. H.R. 4570 will greatly benefit our National Park System by expanding units, creating others, and constructing new facilities. We have the opportunity to enhance and strengthen our commitment to historic and cultural preservation and protecting many other natural resources that make this country the most beautiful in the world.

Madam Chairman, I have spent a number of years proudly representing the people of Utah in this House. I have seen many pieces of legislation dealing with national parks and natural resources in my years of service. Very rarely, however, does bi-partisan legislation that does so much, for the benefit of so many people, in so many different states come along. This is one such bill which shows that we here in the Congress are truly committed to ensure that our national parks and natural resources are protected for now and for future generations. I strongly urge my colleagues to support H.R. 4570.

Madam Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. MILLER of California. Madam Chairman, I yield myself 1 minute, and I rise in strong opposition to this legislation. The supporters of this legislation have been promoting it as noncontroversial, bipartisan initiative that is good for the environment. It simply is not true. It is misrepresentation of what is in this legislation. This is a very bad environmental bill with some noncontroversial items in it to try to provide the camouflage so the Members will pass this legislation. But let us make it very clear from the beginning: the administration opposes this legislation, the major environmental groups in this country oppose this legislation, The League of Conservation Voters oppose this legislation, and this legislation ought to be rejected.

Yes, we can do a major parks bill at the end of this session, but we must do it based upon noncontroversial measures with bipartisan support. It is said that this legislation has bipartisan support. Let us also understand that it has strong bipartisan opposition to this matter. Why? Because many of these measures have not gone through committee. They have not received hearings. They have been brought up at the last minute in spite of the fact that we have had an awful lot of time in this Congress to deal with these kinds of items. Because it also contains some very contentious measures that, if brought out here on their own, would simply not pass, and that is why they are put in this legislation to see whether or not, in fact, they can package a bill that would be passed.

We ought to take the packaging off this legislation and understand exactly what it is, and that is that it is a very bad bill for the environment and without support either in the House or in the Senate.

Mr. BOEHLERT. Madam Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. HANSEN. Madam Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from New Mexico (Mr. REDMOND).

Mr. REDMOND. Madam Chairman, I rise today in support of H.R. 4570. As a Member from a State that is home to sweeping vistas, lush forests, and the largest volcanic caldera in North America, I understand the importance of our maintaining our historic national treasures.

H.R. 4570 will address a variety of public lands issues and concerns, including the authorization of the purchase of 900 acres of expansion of the Bandelier National Monument in New Mexico, one of the oldest national monuments in the United States.

This language represents one of the Park Service's highest priorities and will allow them to fulfill a long goal and acquire the Alamo Headwaters, protect the watershed from any upstream contamination.

I want to express my heartfelt, sincere appreciation to the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN) for bringing this bill to the floor. The State of New Mexico and most of the United States, as a whole, stands to benefit tremendously from H.R. 4570, and if it had not been for the wise guidance and careful attention to these issues of the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN), we would not be in this comprehensive conservation legislation today.

(Mr. BOEHLERT asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BOEHLERT. Madam Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Madam Chairman, I rise in strong opposition to this bill, and I must say I have plenty of company. The bill is opposed by every environmental group and by Taxpayers for Common Sense. The League of Conservation Voters will score it. The administration will veto it.

Why all this opposition? Is it just the natural negativity or orneriness of these groups? I am afraid not. They are against the bill because it will set bad public policy. The bill would weaken protection for wilderness areas, and it would remove 74,000 acres from wilderness protection, 74,000 acres that President Bush said merited that protection.

The bill would waive normal environmental review for a controversial road in Alaska, a road that is controversial, not just in Congress, but Alaska itself, where Native communities, among others, oppose it.

The bill would make it hard to get discovery trails approved by setting new bureaucratic hurdles. The bill would create new incentives to cut trees in national forests and would create new special funds within the Forest Service at a time when we are trying to remove such incentives and clean up Forest Service accounting.

The bill would transfer Federal property to the private sector in a way that would weaken environmental protection and deny the Nation's taxpayers the ability to recoup the full value of the Federal investment.

Those are just the most significant bad policies that would be established by this bill. It was totally unnecessary to include these provisions in the bill.

The bulk of this bill consists of noncontroversial projects throughout the entire country. The committee could have brought these projects to the floor individually or collectively under the Suspension Calendar. It chose not to do so. It chose, instead, to hold perfectly good projects hostage so it could attempt to jam through the Congress bad policies that do not have a prayer of passing independently. In fact, some of those bad policies have not even been approved by the Committee on Resources itself.

So I urge my colleagues to vote against this bill, not only to reject the bad policies, policies a wide majority of Members would oppose if they came up individually, but also to reject bad process.

We are faced with a bill that was deliberately constructed to win support for policies that Members oppose. That is not a fair process. We are faced with a bill that did not go through normal committee review. That is not a fair process.

We are faced with a bill that could not be fairly negotiated because its key provisions were labeled nonnegotiable. That is not a fair process. We are faced with a bill on which negotiations had been repeatedly mischaracterized. That is not a fair process.

We are faced with a bill whose primary point is to put one wing of the Republican party at the mercy of another wing of the Republican Party. That is not a fair process.

So, again, I urge my colleagues to vote down this bill even if it contains your own project. That is, unfortunately, the only way to stop these bad policies and bad processes. My colleagues will not be giving up much because the bill is not going anywhere anyway.

Let us vote down this bill in order to protect the environment and to protect the taxpayer, and let us vote down this bill to prove that we will not stand for being held hostage.

Madam Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. MILLER of California. Madam Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from Colorado (Ms. DEGETTE).

Ms. DEGETTE. Madam Chairman, I rise today in opposition to this poorly conceived, hastily prepared anti-environmental legislation. This legislation, as has been noted, has attracted the opposition of the administration, the environmental groups, and even such newspapers as the Washington Post and Los Angeles Times.

Even though I know the gentleman from Utah will be offering an amendment in the nature of a substitute, it still falls far short.

This legislation does not set sound environmental policies. It sets them on the track in the wrong direction at a time when Americans see the environment as a top priority. This legislation turns a blind eye to the demand of our constituents.

For example, in Colorado, a recent statewide poll indicates that an overwhelming number of Coloradans, almost 70 percent across the State, Democrats, Republicans, and Independents, support wilderness designation for over a million acres currently being managed by the Bureau of Land Management.

This astounding level of support is throughout the State, across party lines. But, instead, what this Congress intends to do, instead of listening to voters like that, is to pass a bill that contains provisions such as taxpayers paying for increased clear-cutting and livestock grazing in national forests.

It takes wilderness study area in the San Rafael Swell in Utah and terminates it for 125,000 acres. It creates a new provision for the National Park Service which prohibits the Service from removing inappropriate commercial buildings to protect park values, and on and on.

Are these rollback of environmental protections the legacy we want to leave for future generations? I do not. As somebody who represents a State that is well known for its natural beauty, I will do everything I can to make sure we defeat ill-conceived legislation of this nature.

Mr. BOEHLERT. Madam Chairman, I yield 2½ minutes to the gentleman from Alaska (Mr. YOUNG), chairman of the Committee on Resources.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Madam Chairman, for those that are saying this is a nonenvironmental bill, and also the gentleman from New York (Mr. BOEHLERT) said that all environmental groups are against it, I would like it to say also that, yes, they are, because they have told people, and I have got confirmation of this, that they are just going to show the Congress how strong they are. Because I asked them specifically what was wrong with this bill. They could not give me an answer.

Yes, they brought up the Chugach Road. But remember, Madam Chairman, my colleagues voted on this. It was voted on in this House; and I won, and my colleagues lost. We won that by 250 votes. Think about that a moment. We bring this up as an issue. They did not like the results, so now they are saying this is a bad bill.

This is already law. We should pass it. It will be signed in law, the President will sign it, and that road will be built. But think about all those proposals in this package that said they were not hurt.

By the way, the gentleman from California (Mr. MILLER) is not here, but the bill of the gentleman from California (Mr. MILLER) is in here, and we did not hear anything about his bill, and he wanted it.

The gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. MCHALE) came to me and said this is a good bill. We looked at it, and he wants it. Let us see.

Oh, by the way, the gentleman from Arkansas (Mr. SNYDER), the gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. MALONEY). The gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. MALONEY), that is interesting. The gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. MOAKLEY). Let us go down the line here a ways. There is the gentlewoman from Hawaii (Mrs. MINK). I can go on down. No hearings.

But we reviewed these, and they were good pieces of legislation, and I happen to have the belief that this is a representative form of government. If someone thinks this is right for the district, they have to live with it.

Now to have the environmental communities come out and say that this is bad environmental legislation, this is a disservice. It goes to show us how far the environmental community has gone in the United States. They are zealots. They think nothing of the people that live in those districts, nor the Representatives that represent them.

I am terribly disappointed. In the rule I mentioned that those of us that have legislation in this bill and, in fact, do not vote for this bill, do not come to me next year and say, ''I need this.'' Think about it a moment. My colleagues asked for this. Now they say it is bad because they say there are wrong things in it.

I will say this to the gentleman from New York. I said before he ought to be ashamed, because the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN) worked very hard with him all through this last 2 years trying to reach a solution. The gentleman from Utah has given, and he gave more than I would have ever given. San Rafael I never would have given up, but he did trying to reach the compromise.

Now to have opposition because certain interest groups call my colleagues on the phone and say this is a bad piece of legislation, my, God, when are they going to start thinking for themselves? It is time to start thinking about America and the people and not some interest group that has a bill around this highway. I am ashamed of those people that respond to those.

Mr. BOEHLERT. Madam Chairman, I yield myself 30 seconds to point out to my distinguished colleague, the gentleman from Alaska, that some of those calls I have received are long distance from Alaska from people up there who are vitally concerned for the environment.

Secondly, I would point out that I hope we do have good memories. Thirty-five Republicans voted on that Chugach measure. We had the Black Caucus which initially supported the position of the gentleman from Alaska (Mr. YOUNG), but upon serious reflection have issued a statement that they are opposed to it.

Madam Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GREENWOOD).

Mr. GREENWOOD. Madam Chairman, I rise to oppose the bill, and I do so filled with regret, because the gentleman from Utah is a gentleman. He is a friend.

He called me a couple of weeks ago and asked me if I would help him negotiate this bill, and the reason he called me is that one of the roles that has been assigned to me by the majority leader has been to try to build bridges between Republicans, Republicans who some of us come from the Northeast and have one orientation with regard to the environment, and some of our colleagues from the West and other parts of the country who have different perspectives.

The process that we have tried to establish to do that is to say, if the goal is to make law, then that should be an easy process, because if this President is going to sign a bill, and if the goal is to get him to sign the bill, then we can certainly work out our differences.

We tried that. I gave my staff the assignment to spend an awful lot of time on this measure. It did not work. We could not get the bill anywhere close in these negotiations to where it could be signed into law.

If we had, we would have come out here, and the gentleman from New York and I would have done what we done on other occasions. We would say this is not really what we want. We are uncomfortable with this. We are going to take some criticism from some of our environmental supporters. But it is the right thing to do. It is a compromise. We cannot have it all. But that is not what this process yielded. This process did not yield a bill that looks like it has a prayer to become law.

So the question then becomes what is the point of going through this exercise? Is it simply a test of egos? Is it a test of strength? Is it done for political purposes? That is not why I came to Washington. I came to legislate. Legislating means we compromise, we give up the battle one day to fight it on another day. Maybe we can still do that.

I address my remarks to my friend, the gentleman from Utah. Maybe before this session is over miraculously in the little time that remains, we can do that.

□ 1400

But we are not there yet, and as a matter of honor, I cannot support the gentleman today.

Mr. MILLER of California. Madam Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. DOGGETT).

Mr. DOGGETT. Madam Chairman, as the New York Times has rightly editorialized, ''Since sweeping into Washington in 1995, the Contract-With-America Republicans have tried every legislative trick in the book to undermine the Nation's environmental laws.''

The particular trick that elicited that assessment was the Gingrich scheme to tack on some 50 anti-environmental riders, a scheme to tack them into the appropriations bills that is still holding up appropriations bills in this Congress. It is a practice that was appropriately described as our Republican friends ''mugging the environment.''

Well, today we have something a little different. In this omnibus parks bill, we have another legislative trick. In fact, I guess in eager anticipation of Halloween, we have both trick and treat in this bill. The only problem is that the tricks are all in there for the taxpayer, and the treats are there for those who want to exploit the environment and particularly to exploit publicly-owned resources.

Madam Chairman, this bill is a trick because it takes dozens of anti-environmental bills, stirs them all together in a big old legislative cauldron, including a few Democratic proposals that are good, which are sprinkled in there to give this measure a nice touch, as was just described by the honorable chair of our Committee on Resources. This whole mess of a parks bill, seems to have everything in that cauldron but ''eye of Newt.'' And if one looks real closely, one will see not only the eye, but the hand of Newt, the same hand that was out there trying to mug the environment in the appropriations bills.

What does this bill do? Well, it is appropriately called an omnibus bill because it has near omnibus opposition. It has brought together those deeply concerned with protecting our national resources, with protecting our air and our water, protecting our environment; it has brought them together with groups that are aware that we ought not to waste our taxpayer resources. If the taxpayers have paid for these resources, if these are public resources, they ought not to be quickly given away to those that wish to exploit them. So we find both environmental groups and Taxpayers for Common Sense coming together to oppose in an omnibus way this omnibus, awful bill.

What all does the bill do? What is its theme? In short, where there are national forests, clear-cut them. Where there are pristine wetlands, build on them. Where there is a public reservoir, give it away to someone.

This bill is a Frankenstein's monster of bad ideas. It contains loopholes, exemptions, corporate welfare. The Republicans, with the exception of a few, who have had the courage to stand up here today and oppose it, the Gingrich leadership has sewn all this mess together, and they hope to shock it back to life, just prior to Halloween, here on the House floor. It should be rejected.

Mr. HANSEN. Madam Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Michigan (Mr. DINGELL).

(Mr. DINGELL asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DINGELL. Madam Chairman, without any recriminations towards any of my colleagues, I recognize there are strong feelings on this, but today the House has an opportunity to make significant progress in moving forward to address a number of important issues and opportunities with regard to the national parks and the public lands. This is a good bill.

I want to commend my good friend, the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN), chairman of the subcommittee, for the outstanding job that he has done in going forward on this matter. I also want to commend my old friend, the chairman of the committee, the gentleman from Alaska (Mr. YOUNG) with whom I worked for many years as members of the Subcommittee on Fisheries and Wildlife Conservation on the old Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries. There we passed enormous progress in the area of wildlife conservation and the environment. Those were good bills then, and the gentleman from Utah and the distinguished chairman of the committee have carried forward that tradition.

The gentleman from Utah has been very busy the last few days trying to address the concerns, many of which are legitimate, of Members on this side, and members of the environmental community.

The way legislation is achieved is not simply by saying, no, we are not going to pass this. It is by passing this legislation, working together, continuing the dialogue, and moving forward to achieve the necessary compromises that can put together a bill that will ultimately pass the Senate and go to the White House. Today we have the simple opportunity of moving forward on a piece of legislation, or of saying, no, we are not going to.

The gentleman from Utah has done a superb job, and I want to salute him. I will tell him and tell my colleagues that there is a provision in here which will benefit enormously the people of the 16th District in the State of Michigan and those who work in and are dependent upon the auto industry by creating an auto heritage area, which is very, very important to us in Michigan in terms of remembering our history and in terms of celebrating what we in Michigan, and we who are part of the auto industry, have done to make this a greater country.

I would urge my colleagues to approach it in that light; to recognize that while there may be imperfections in this bill, it is a good bill. It is a bill which is good for the country. It is a bill which makes progress. It is a bill which saves and preserves and protects important areas and values, and it is a bill which keeps in mind the great traditions of this country in terms of protecting its heritage, its traditions, its important areas, and its environment.

I urge my colleagues to support the hand of the distinguished gentleman from Utah, the distinguished gentleman from Alaska, and the others who have worked on this. There may be problems, but they are problems which are resolvable in the spirit of goodwill, and I urge my colleagues to approach it in that way.

Mr. BOEHLERT. Madam Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Delaware (Mr. CASTLE), the former Governor.

Mr. CASTLE. Madam Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding, and I rise in reluctant, but strong, opposition to this legislation.

It is this simple. We are down to the last few days of this session of the Congress, we are going to go out of session in 3 days or so, and in this time we are going to find a lot of legislation which comes forward which has not gone through the entire committee process, sometimes not even the subcommittee process, and it is too bad in this case, because this is a very good piece of legislation, if we just took certain portions of it. Somebody said as much as 90 percent of it is actually very good, and frankly, I would not be opposed to that at all.

But the bottom line is that there is enough in it to bring it down that the Senate will probably not act on it. The White House will probably veto it if it came there. It has not gone through committee, and it has certain flaws in it which I think are fundamental in terms of protecting the environment of this country.

It would remove areas from wilderness protection that should not be removed from wilderness protection; it would set new and weaker guidelines for such wilderness protection; it would waive normal environmental reviews for a road across world-famous salmon streams; it would create new barriers to the creation of discovery trails, something which is very important; and it would create new incentives to cut trees in national forests and transfer Federal property in a manner that endangers the environment and cheats taxpayers.

The time has come to get a good environmental agenda that we can all agree on. Unfortunately, this bill does not quite reach it. I urge opposition to the bill.

Mr. MILLER of California. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from California (Ms. WOOLSEY).

(Ms. WOOLSEY asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. WOOLSEY. Mr. Chairman, I rise today in opposition to H.R. 4570, the omnibus parks bill. I would like to see a park bill. I would like to see one that we can support across party lines and across environmental and nonenvironmental lines, because our parks are absolutely the treasures of our Nation.

These are the lands that we as individuals have to protect and treasure so that our children will have lands that they can appreciate also. And this bill would threaten these treasures, threaten them by putting the Channel Island National Park, the Cumberland Island National Seashore, and the C&O Canal up for sale.

H.R. 4570 would also accelerate timber harvesting on Federal land and provide a $150 million subsidy to the timber industry for logging on what the Republicans call overgrown forestlands.

This bill would also build a road without environmental review through the wetlands of Alaska's Chugach National Forest.

I would like to see an omnibus parks bill, I would like to see one passed this year, but I want to see one that has significant bipartisan input and fair representation. Sixteen Democratic issues or measures out of almost 100 is not fair representation, no matter how one adds it up.

I urge my colleagues to oppose this bill, and I urge the majority on the Committee on Resources to work with the Democrats and with the environmentalists in their caucus so that we can have a bill that we can pass.

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. WELLER).

(Mr. WELLER asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. WELLER. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the omnibus parks bill because it is a good environmental bill, and it is good for Illinois. I particularly want to thank the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN) for including a provision in this legislation, a bipartisan provision that has been sought by the gentleman from Illinois, (Mr. LIPINSKI), my friend, and myself which would extend the Commission of the Illinois and Michigan Canal Heritage Corridor for 5 more years.

The Illinois and Michigan Canal Heritage Corridor was established by legislation sponsored by my political mentor, former Congressman Tom Corcoran, in 1984 and expires in the coming year.

This legislation established the first heritage area in the Nation which was established to protect, interpret and preserve historical and cultural resources and to promote recreational activity. The corridor served as a model for the numerous other heritage areas that have since been created. This particular heritage area stretches from the city of Chicago 100 miles west from the district I represent to LaSalle/Peru.

The I&M Canal is home to numerous prairie reserves, hiking trails and parks. Visitors can see a pioneer settlement in Lockport, a nature center in Joliet, the Aux Sable Aqueduct, or a historic courthouse in my hometown of Morris. If that is not enough, one can visit the first site of the famous Lincoln-Douglas debates in Ottawa.

The I&M Canal tells the story of early canal towns and early American culture. It tells the story of the friendship between the Potawatomi Indians and new settlers. The canal provided farmers access to new markets, and was instrumental in the development of the industrial revolution, and contributed to the development of one of the world's greatest cities, Chicago. This heritage area is so rich with culture, history, and national resources.

Mr. Chairman, I want to point out that this initiative is bipartisan, cosponsored by my friend from Illinois (Mr. LIPINSKI) and myself, and would extend the Illinois and Michigan Canal Heritage Corridor Commission for another 5 years. Otherwise, it will expire in this coming year. It is a national treasure. We must extend it.

I want to ask my colleagues to join everyone in a bipartisan effort to help Illinois.

Again, I want to thank the chairman of the subcommittee for his leadership and friendship and also for including something that is important to Illinois in this important legislation.

Mr. BOEHLERT. Mr. Chairman, how much time is remaining?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York (Mr. BOEHLERT) has 2½ minutes; the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN) has 20 minutes remaining; and the gentleman from California (Mr. MILLER) has 12 minutes remaining.

Mr. BOEHLERT. Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. MILLER of California. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from New York (Mr. HINCHEY).

Mr. HINCHEY. Mr. Chairman, this is a very important bill. In one sense I am opposed to it with some reluctance, because I know that my good friend, the chairman of the subcommittee, the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN), has spent a great deal of time working on this legislation, and I think that he has truly made an effort to accommodate a number of people and their interests and ideas in this legislation.

In many ways the bill contains a number of very good provisions. For that reason I am somewhat reluctant to oppose it. But when one looks at the bill carefully, one finds that overwhelmingly, too many of the provisions are simply unacceptable.

I will just mention a couple. On the issue of the San Rafael, for example, this is a separate bill, and it is treated in this legislation in some unusual ways. It provides some very unorthodox and unusual ways of managing public land. In addition to that, it reduces the acreage of lands that are eligible for wilderness designation, and I think that that is a big mistake. It fails to give Federal agencies the water that they would need to meet their land management goals.

Then they cannot manage the land properly, if we do not allow them to have the water they need in these arid areas to accomplish that objective.

It gives unusual management authority over nationally-owned land to local officials. This, of course, would be establishing a very dangerous and a very wrong precedent. It creates a strong possibility that sensitive areas would be open to vehicle use. These are areas that should be closed to vehicle use in order to protect wildlife and the land itself. People go out on these areas, but they ought not to go out there with vehicles that are going to wreak havoc with the wildlife and ruin the land.

Another provision of the bill deals with the American Discovery Trail. This is a piece of legislation that had broad bipartisan support. It is a top priority of hiking groups, a proposal that would benefit people from coast-to-coast, just as the Appalachian Trail has benefited people up and down the East Coast.

But there is a poison pill in this initiative as well, which would require that all adjacent property owners be notified. This would tie up all or most of the money that is allocated to accomplish the reasonable and good objectives of the bill, and, in short, it would effectively kill the trail. The trail would not come into existence.

The Chugach Road provision, we hear that this has been improved to meet the objections of the Forest Service. But that is not what the Forest Service has told us. We would, under this bill, still be granting an unregulated easement through one of the richest wildlife habitats and migratory bird flyways in the continent.

In the final analysis I think we all have to oppose this legislation, and I have just mentioned a few of the adverse provisions. We have to oppose this on the grounds that this legislation just does not make any sense, and because of that, it is opposed by virtually every environmental group, and the Taxpayers for Common Sense, as well.

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Nevada (Mr. GIBBONS).

(Mr. GIBBONS asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GIBBONS. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of H.R. 4570. Today we have an historic opportunity to enact bipartisan legislation that will not only protect but expand and improve America's cherished national parks and many of its public lands.

Since I have been in Congress, I have had the great fortune and opportunity to work with distinguished men like the chairman of the subcommittee, the gentleman from Utah (Mr. JIM HANSEN) and the chairman of the full committee, the gentleman from Alaska (Mr. DON YOUNG). Their dedication to the environment of America and sound scientific policies that govern our public lands is a tribute to this bill and to the American people who use and enjoy America's national treasures.

This bill will address a wide variety of important national parks, wild and scenic rivers, heritage areas, national forests, and many other public lands issues and concerns. This bill brings benefits to our public lands, including such items as reauthorization of the National Historic Preservation Fund, the Abraham Lincoln Birthplace National Historic Site, George Washington Birthplace National Monument, and the Little Rock Central High School National Historic Site, among others.

This bill reflects the bipartisan goals and directions of this Congress by confirming that the proper management and creation of America's parks and public lands remain a top priority for years to come.

Some in this body will demagogue. Some will come to the well and dispel the importance of this bill. They will say that this destroys our environment, and that it bodes ill will to our national parks and public lands. But I assure the Members, it does not. I would hope each of my colleagues would read this bill, and I would encourage each of them to ask questions on how it will affect our districts, Members' districts, and our constituents.

I, for one, will support this bill, because I know the benefits it brings to my constituents and the benefits it brings to America. I encourage all Members to support the passage of H.R. 4570.

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Utah (Mr. COOK).

Mr. COOK. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of H.R. 4570, but with strong objections. We have jumbled and junked together several bills here, some good, some bad, hoping that the bad bills will be passed by the sheer momentum of the good ones.

I have always considered that a bad way to legislate, but this bill contains a land swap that gives Utah's schoolchildren hundreds of millions of dollars for their education. I voted for that bill earlier this year when it stood alone, and I am voting for this omnibus bill today, only because of that crucial money for Utah's schoolchildren.

This bill contains weak legislation which I believe is devastating to a prized natural resource also in my State, legislation that would fail on its own because it is a bad idea, legislation I have consistently opposed. I am angry and disappointed in the cynical process that ties these two bills together, and I did work, but unsuccessfully, to separate those two bills. What we are doing today is a disservice to the legislative process, but for the sake of Utah's children, I am voting for it.

Mr. MILLER of California. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. VENTO).

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Chairman, I think this bill is a disservice to those that have provisions in the bill that are noncontroversial. I think that this is advanced here, on the eve of the conclusion of this session, on the notion that somehow if we come together in an obmnibus bill, we can get this all done together. I think this is a step backwards for those provisions, as we haven't compromised or agreed to such measure.

It is being held out as a bipartisan bill, but the fact is that there has not been an effective agreement between the leadership of the Committee on Resources, and I think that 2 years ago that was possible in a polarized situation, and we were able to come together in 1996. But as I look here, we have bipartisan opposition to this today, and I think it is much stronger than the support for this bill.

Obviously, some are concerned desperately that they want to pass their legislation that is noncontroversial. I certainly sympathize with the gentleman from Utah, with the school lands problem that he just conveyed to us.

But I think in the end that this process is flawed, that it is going to result in less action by the Senate even with those House bills that are in the Senate today, and certainly the discussion and veto policy from the administration should give great pause. I think if we defeat this bill, we might actually get something done in the end, but this measure is a step backwards today.

As I quoted earlier, Otto von Bismarck said, ''If you like laws and sausages, you should never watch either being made.'' He must have had this bill, H.R. 4570, in mind, Mr. Chairman. The legislation continues the tradition of park pork, and I might say land use pork.

Unfortunately, the legislation is not a mixture of the finest or acceptable products pending before the committee. Instead, it includes some of the worst, with a few rancid proposals that would give the American people and our public lands system more than just a little stomachache. This sets in place precedents that are going to bother us for a long time. It is an affront to the taxpayers of this country in the way that we manage the public lands, give away communication sites, provide for new definitions of logging without laws. It is a return to the thrilling days of the 104th Congress and the antienvironmental message that came from it.

H.R. 4570 is indeed the leftovers from the anti-enviromental last Congress. Under this legislation wilderness lands will be opened to motorized use, logging of our national forests will be accelerated with increased federal subsidies for the logging industry and important federal lands and sites will be sold to private interests. Frustrated by the public outcry and opposition to their proposals in the last Congress, the majority party, in the waning days of this Congress, is seeking to slip through their ill conceived pet projects in this bill and the 50 riders that have been added to the appropriations measures. These proposals should be rejected.

H.R. 4570 is death by a thousand cuts of many of our most important federal land management laws. The legislation establishes exemptions for wilderness that will be carried forward into future actions creating precedent and changes that will be repeated over and over again to the detrement of the environment. It undermines the basic review process for the National Environmental Policy Act in order to accelerate logging.

Perhaps most importantly, this bill calls into question the basic issue of to whom do our national forests and public lands belong. The American public and past Congresses have acted under the core belief that these lands belong to the American people and that with these lands there is a trust responsibility to pass them on to future generations in at least as good a condition as we received them. This legislation turns that belief on its head. Instead the bill turns our national lands over to the highest bidder through timber sales, the transfer of federal reclamation projects to private interests and the sale of federal lands and historic sites.

Mr. Chairman, the American people spoke loud and clear in outrage to the anti-environmental agenda in the 104th Congress. Their views remain as strong today. I urge my colleagues to reject this anti-environmental proposal.

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE,
Washington, DC, October 7, 1998.

Hon. GEORGE MILLER,
Ranking Democratic Member, Committee on Resources, U.S. House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

DEAR GEORGE: Several provisions of H.R. 4570, the Omnibus National Parks and Public Lands Act of 1998, would give away or exchange National Forest System lands without adequate compensation to the public. Moreover, the bill contains at least two very controversial forest management provisions that would inappropriately legislate a road easement over environmentally sensitive Alaskan lands and accelerate timber harvesting through an improper application of alternative arrangements for the environmental review process under the National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA). While the Department of Agriculture (USDA) supports some provisions in the bill, the number of objectionable provisions far outweigh them; therefore, I would join the President's senior advisors in recommending that the President veto this legislation if it were submitted to him in its current form.

Regarding section 1009, East Texas blowdown-NEPA Parity, of Title X, Miscellaneous Provisions, the Administration believes that the procedures it follows for alternative NEPA compliance processes to mitigate true natural resource emergencies are more than adequate. USDA strongly opposes expanding the use of these alternative NEPA processes to non-emergency activities, such as the large majority of timber salvage sales.

Section 1432, Easement for Chugach Alaska Corporation, of Title XIV, Provisions Specific to Alaska, legislates an easement for construction of a road across the Chugach National Forest, Near Cordova, Alaska. I have previously stated that I would recommend a veto of earlier versions of this legislation because they give away much more public land, without compensating taxpayers, than necessary to build the road. In addition, they provide the native corporation the opportunity to construct facilities, such as gas stations and restaurants, in an extraordinarily environmentally sensitive area managed solely for wildlife and fish. The Forest Service and the native corporation agreed in 1982 on the terms and conditions of this road easement, including not allowing commercialization along this easement. Therefore, any legislation concerning this easement is neither appropriate nor necessary.

The Administration also strongly objects to section 105, Wasatch-Cache National Forest and Mount Naomi Wilderness, Utah, of Title I, Boundary Adjustment and Related Conveyances; and sections 231, Authorization of use of National Forest lands for public school purposes, and 251, Conveyance, Camp Owen and related parcels, Kern County California, of Title II, Other Land Conveyances and Management, which would convey Federal and out of the public's ownership either for less than market value or in exchange for lands that are undesirable for the public to own.

Your consideration of these matters is greatly appreciated. I am sending an identical letter to Chairman Don Young.

Sincerely,

DAN GLICKMAN,
Secretary.

THE SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR,
Washington, DC, September 29, 1998.

Hon. DON YOUNG,
Chairman, Committees on Resources, House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: On behalf of the Administration, I am writing to you regarding H.R. 4570, the ''Omnibus National Parks and Public Lands Act of 1998.'' H.R. 4570 is a compilation of many separate bills that are of interest to your Committee.

This bill contains many provisions that have previously been strongly opposed by the Administration. These provisions would cause serious damage to our natural resources by, among other things, removing land from wilderness and other protective status to facilitate road building, motorized access, and airport construction.

Indeed, the Chair of the Council on Environmental Quality and I have previously informed the Committee that we would recommend to the President that he veto several of the provisions of this bill, such as those involving San Rafael Swell (Utah), congressional review of National Monument designations, and National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA) parity—East Texas Blowdown.

Over the course of the 105th Congress, the Administration has expressed its support for many provisions now included in H.R. 4570, and we would fully support their enactment were they presented to the President as free-standing bills. However, we cannot endorse them when combined with other provisions we strongly oppose. For example, the bill includes provisions of H.R. 3830, a bill to ratify an exchange agreement between the Department of the Interior and the State of Utah. As you know, the Administration strongly supports enactment of H.R. 3830. However, I made it clear in my testimony of May 19, 1998, that the Administration's support still would not apply if the bill were combined with other objectionable legislation.

Since this is now the case, I must inform you that the Administration is strongly opposed to the enactment of H.R. 4570 and, if the bill is presented to the President in its current form, we will recommend that he veto this legislation.

Sincerely,

BRUCE BABBITT.

OFFICE OF MANAGEMENT AND BUDGET,
Washington, DC, October 5, 1998.

Re H.R. 4570—Omnibus National Parks and Public Lands Act of 1998.

For the reasons outlined below, the President's senior advisors will recommend that the President veto H.R. 4570 if the bill, either as introduced or in the form of the proposed substitute amendment, is presented to him.

H.R. 4570, an omnibus bill that would affect Federal lands and reclamation projects, includes many provisions that the Administration strongly opposes because they would cause grave harm to the Nation's natural resources. These include provisions that would: Designate insufficient wilderness areas within the San Rafael Swell in Utah; sanction uses within the proposed wilderness area that would undermine wilderness values and management practices; establish confusing and inappropriate layers of management; and limit the Bureau of Land Management's ability to manage livestock.

Undermine the President's authority under the Antiquities Act to act quickly to protect significant natural, historical, and scientific resources on Federal lands; and prohibit, under the Antiquities Act, permanent designations of national monuments in excess of 50,000 acres without further congressional action.

Seek to accelerate timber harvesting on Federal lands through inappropriate application of alternative arrangements for the environmental review process under the National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA), while at the same time requiring the issuance of unnecessary, bureaucratic regulations which can hamper flexibility in addressing emergency situations.

Deny the public future access to lake-front lands around Canyon Ferry Reservoir, Montana, by conveying these properties to non-federal entities.

Permit the sale and lease of valuable structures and lands at Channel Island National Park, California, to private individuals.

Exclude certain lands and roadways from the Cumberland Island Wilderness, Georgia, thus undermining the ongoing collaborative effort between the Federal Government, non-federal public entities, and private individuals to prepare a wilderness management plan for both the Cumberland Island National Seashore and the Cumberland Island Wilderness.

Convey facilities and lands of eight Federal water resources projects throughout the West (e.g. the Sly Park Unit of the Central Valley Project, California) under terms and conditions that: (1) were not developed in an open and public manner; (2) lack sufficient environmental protections; and (3) fail to consider the financial interests of the American taxpayer.

Allow an airport to be constructed near Mojave Preserve, Nevada, without any consideration of the possible harmful environmental impact and effect.

Grant an irrevocable and perpetual easement over environmentally sensitive lands in the Chugach National Forest, Alaska, to the Chugach Alaska Corporation, thereby overriding the provisions of the 1982 Settlement Agreement with the Corporation's predecessor organization.

Notwithstanding the Administration's strong opposition to these and other provisions of the bill, as listed in the Attachment, the Administration has expressed support for some provisions that are now included in H.R. 4570. The Administration would fully support enactment of those particular bills, especially the legislation that would ratify an exchange agreement between the Department of the Interior and the State of Utah, if they are presented individually to the President.

PAY-AS-YOU-GO SCORING

H.R. 4570 would affect direct spending; therefore, it is subject to the pay-as-you-go (PAYGO) requirement of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1990. OMB's PAYGO estimate for this bill is under development.

ATTACHMENT

The following provisions of H.R. 4570, in combination with the aforementioned provisions, would also cause grave harm to the Nation's resources and, thus, are objectionable to the Administration:

Wasatch-Cache National Forest and Mount Naomi Wilderness, Utah; Conveyance to Clark County Department of Aviation, Nevada; Authorization of Use of National Forest Lands for Public School Purposes; Conveyance of Camp Owen and Related parcels, Kern County, California; Protection of Oregon and California Railroad Grant Lands; Addition of the Paoli Battlefield to the Valley Forge National Historical Park, Pennsylvania; Casa Malpais National Historic Landmark, Arizona; Amendment of Land and Water Conservation Fund Act of 1965 regarding Treatment of Receipts at Certain Parks; Amendments to the National Historic Preservation Act (the Administration, however, supports the Senate-passed bill that would reauthorize the National Historic Preservation Fund); and Hazardous Fuels Reduction.

Guadalupe-Hidalgo Treaty Land Claims; Acquisition and Management of Wilcox Ranch, Utah, for Wildlife Habitat; Operation and Maintenance of Existing Dams and Weirs, Emigrant Wilderness, Stanislaus National Forest, California; Exemption for Not-for-Profit Entities from Strict Liability for Recovery of Fire Suppression Costs; Communication Site at San Bernardino National Forest, California; Amendment of the Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act; Carlsbad Irrigation Project, New Mexico; Palmetto Bend Project, Texas; Minidoka Water Reclamation Resources Project, Idaho; Wellton-Mohawk Division, Gila Project, Arizona; Colusa Basin Watershed Integrated Resources Management, California; and Moratorium on Federal Management, Alaska.

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to distinguished gentleman from Tennessee (Mr. DUNCAN), the chairman of the Subcommittee on Aviation of the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure.

Mr. DUNCAN. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of this very bipartisan bill which improves parks and public lands in 36 States, and includes requests from over 70 Members.

I first would like to thank my good friend, the gentleman from Utah (Chairman HANSEN) for his hard work and leadership in crafting this legislation. There is no man in this Congress who is more fair or kinder than the gentleman from Utah (Mr. JIM HANSEN), or more well respected on both sides of the aisle.

I would like to briefly discuss two provisions of this bill which would emphasize why I believe my colleagues should support H.R. 4570. First, this bill includes a provision of legislation I introduced which would allow national parks which cannot collect entrance fees to keep all other fees on site for park improvements.

For instance, the Great Smoky Mountains National Park, which is the most visited national park in the country, keeps roughly $800,000 of all the other fees collected in the park. In comparison, the Grand Canyon National Park, under the Fee Demonstration Program, has been allowed to keep over $10 million a year.

Under this bill, the Great Smokies will be allowed to keep all of the fees collected since it cannot, due to deed restrictions, collect an entrance fee. This would mean roughly $250,000 each year for this most visited national park. This provision is supported by organizations like the Friends of the Smokies and the Sierra Club. This provision has just passed the Senate outline.

The second provision of this bill I want to alert my colleagues to is one which will lead to the designation of the Midway Atoll as a national memorial. H.R. 4570 includes language of a bill I introduced which will require a study of the Midway Atoll in order to designate it as a national memorial. As we know, the Battle of Midway was a pivotal battle in the Pacific during World War II. I believe we should take this important step towards honoring our veterans who fought for our freedom in this battle.

The Midway Study Act is supported by the American Legion, the Veterans of Foreign Wars, the Association of Naval Aviation, the Battle of the Coral Sea Association, the Midway Memorial Foundation. This is good legislation, and this legislation contains very many bipartisan measures which every Member of this body should support.

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Montana (Mr. HILL).

(Mr. HILL asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. HILL. Mr. Chairman, I thank the chairman of the Subcommittee on National Parks and Public Lands for yielding time to me, and also for including a provision that is very important to my home State of Montana. It is a provision that allows for the sale of about 300 acres of land that adjoins Canyon Ferry Reservoir, and to set aside the proceeds of that sale into a trust fund that can be used for conservation purposes, land acquisition and conservation needs in the area of Canyon Ferry Lake.

This measure is supported by our Governor, both Senators, both political parties, almost all local conservation groups and sportsmen groups. It has been the subject of hearings, and it has been reported out by the Subcommittee on National Parks and Public Lands.

Mr. Chairman, this is extremely important to this local area because it would put aside a matter that has been an ongoing dispute between these cabin site lessees and the Federal Government. But even more important is that these proceeds would be put aside for conservation purposes.

This is an important watershed that is an important trout habitat and spawning area. These proceeds could be invested in improving those fisheries. It will improve access to Canyon Ferry Lake. It will be used to improve the campground facilities around the lake, and it will also reduce the the Federal government's debt.

Mr. Chairman, I urge all of my colleagues to support this public lands and parks measure. I thank the chairman for including this provision in the bill.

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentlewoman from New Jersey (Mrs. ROUKEMA).

(Mrs. ROUKEMA asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Mrs. ROUKEMA. Mr. Chairman, I will abbreviate my remarks to say how important this portion of this obmnibus legislation is to northern New Jersey, and specifically the Fifth Congressional District.

The Delaware Watergap National Recreation Area, the crown jewel of our national parks, one of the crown jewels, is located in that district. We have to here, in this bill, reauthorize the Citizens Advisory Commission, which was created 10 years ago with the support of myself and our colleague, the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. JOE MCDADE).

That advisory commission runs out October 31. It must be reauthorized. It is essential so that the people of northern New Jersey and the constituents in my district can have a say in how that park system is being run. Time is running out, it is late. My constituents need this commission, and the obmnibus bill represents our last best hope to do that.

I want to thank the committee for having the farsightedness to deal with this issue.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of H.R. 4570, the Omnibus National Parks and Public Lands Act of 1998. This massive package contains legislation that is critically important to northern New Jersey and the western portion of New Jersey's Fifth Congressional District—that portion of the District that includes the Delaware Water Gap National Recreation Area.

The Delaware Water Gap National Recreation Area is one of the crown jewels of the National Parks Service system. The largest national park east of the Mississippi—the Water Gap is a recreation and tourism centerpiece for the nation. Its economic benefits to the surrounding communities in Sussex and Warren Counties in New Jersey are quite significant.

The Citizens Advisory Commission was created through legislation that I sponsored, along with our Colleague Joe McDade, in 1988. This Commission has operated with virtually no cost to the taxpayers. Yet, this Commission has made an invaluable contribution to the region.

Without the Delaware Water Gap Citizens Advisory Commission, the general public would have virtually no involvement in the development process of the park. The communities in this part of the state would have no direct mechanism through which to affect Park Service policy. Without this legislation, the Commission will cease to exist on October 31 and our communities in northern New Jersey will have lost a valuable tool. This is the 11th hour and time is of the essence.

Mr. Chairman, H.R. 1894 is a non-controversial bill that would reauthorize the Delaware Water Gap National Recreation Citizens Advisory Committee and deserves to be passed. I had hoped that this legislation would be brought up on the Suspension Calendar earlier in the year. For whatever reason, that has not happened.

The time is now late. This session is rushing to a conclusion. We are faced with two unattractive prospects—either watch this valuable commission fade out of existence, or vote for a massive package containing environmentally sensitive provisions I do not support. I would sincerely hope that as we move through this legislative process that further progress could be made on these controversial issues.

But the major portion of the bill is constructive and very valuable to our park systems.

My constituents need this Commission. This omnibus bill represents our last best hope to do that.

Mr. BOEHLERT. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. COBURN).

(Mr. COBURN asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. COBURN. Mr. Chairman, there is not anybody in this House that I respect more than the gentleman from Utah (Chairman HANSEN). There are a ton of good things in this bill, especially for Western States. I support those things. But this bill steps on property rights as much as anything in the 4 years that I have been here.

We cannot continue in Washington to decide that we are going to take private property rights away from people, that we are just going to unilaterally do it. Let me give a couple of examples in this bill. We are going to create an American Discovery Trail across the Nation, probably a pretty good idea, and right now it says it is going to be voluntary, or government land.

What is going to happen next year, when the voluntary land and the government land is there, and one of my farmers is right in the middle, or one of the farmers in Kansas is right in the middle? What is going to happen? We are going to take their land away from them. It is going to go away, for us to complete the trail. Two-thirds of that land is going to come from private property owners.

There is also in this bill an area called the Sudbury, Assabet, and Concord Wild and Scenic Rivers provision. The agreement to have that done was an agreement that there would be no takings associated. There was a piece in the original bill that would protect private properties. That has been excluded from this bill. The Antiquities Act. I know, it is out. The Antiquities Act is out. It is one of the things that in fact precludes the President from taking 1.7 million acres in Utah. And because he objects, we are going to take it out.

The gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN) and the gentleman from Alaska (Mr. YOUNG) both have my respect. I am probably wrong on the issue that overall this bill may be better for us than it is bad for us, but I cannot see that we have such great wisdom that we once again are going to take private property away from those American citizens who worked hard to earn it without their permission.

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. HAYWORTH).

(Mr. HAYWORTH asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. HAYWORTH. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of the legislation, for I too take a back seat to no one in adherence to property rights. And at the same time, I believe everyone in this House should look carefully at this legislation and ultimately support it, not exclusively for recreation, although recreational reasons are at stake here; not exclusively for preservation, although the Casa Malpais area in the Round Valley of Arizona with great archaeological value would be preserved; but the most important reason I believe we should support this legislation is for a reason that might not occur to many in this House. That is education.

We heard the gentleman from Utah, despite his many reservations, rise in support of the schoolchildren of that State. I would rise in strongest support of this legislation for the new Education Land-Grant Act that is included in this bill. Understand, in a bipartisan way we worked together to set up a new provision in U.S. Code to designate certain nonenvironmentally sensitive parcels of federally controlled land to be conveyed to rural school districts for the construction of new academic and athletic facilities.

Mr. Chairman, we have heard a lot in the politically correct double-speak of Washington, D.C. and all the talk about benefitting our children and education. And I will tell my colleagues this, Mr. Chairman, nothing will do more for the rural schoolchildren north, east, west and south, than this particular provision within this omnibus bill. It will revolutionize educational opportunities much as we saw done in a smaller piece of legislation in the Alpine District in the 6th District of Arizona. In these districts that find themselves cash poor but land rich, this is a chance to help them. Let us really help children and education.

Mr. MILLER of California. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that I may be able to yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from New York (Mr. BOEHLERT) and that he be allowed to control that time.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

Mr. BOEHLERT. Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. SOUDER).

Mr. SOUDER. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of this bill and in particular would like to thank the gentleman from Alaska (Chairman YOUNG), the gentleman from Utah (Chairman HANSEN), and the rest of the committee for their leadership for including our National Historic Preservation Act for lighthouses. Senator MURKOWSKI and I began working on this bill last year. He held hearings on the bill last year in the Senate. We worked closely with the nonprofit lighthouse preservation groups and the Coast Guard and the National Park Service and the GSA.

Let me make it clear, I have no lighthouses in my district. So do not try to and come to northeast Indiana to see lighthouses. This bill is for lighthouse lovers across America.

Many of these historic lighthouses have been developed by nonprofit groups and then go up for bidding. There are about 400 that are going to be excess property and we need a procedure so that individual Members of Congress do not have to come down here to try to preserve these things, and so that the nonprofit groups do not have to bid against the very things that they helped set the equity for.

I commend the chairman for moving this. I believe this sets an orderly procedure. And I know that many Members of this body have lighthouses in their district and groups that this would be very important to.

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Kentucky (Mr. LEWIS).

(Mr. LEWIS of Kentucky asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. LEWIS of Kentucky. Mr. Chairman, I rise today in support of H.R. 4570, the Omnibus National Parks and Public Lands Act of 1999. H.R. 4570 is comprehensive, common sense legislation which incorporates a number of resource bills that will ultimately benefit 36 States throughout this great Nation of ours.

Once again, some environmental extremists are determined to torpedo any legislation that proposes to alter the status quo, despite the fact that many compromises have been reached to address their concerns. Since the tactics of fear can be a powerful weapon, I believe a careful review of the legislation will assure my colleagues that H.R. 4570 is no threat to our environmental interest.

It does, however, mark a major step in resolving some important public lands issues and also presents the 105th Congress a great opportunity to help fulfill the dreams and plans of so many Americans who cherish our national parks and our national historic and natural resources.

Many States and communities across this country worked very hard to establish these historic heritage areas, such as Automobile National Heritage Area in Michigan and Indiana, and the Midway Atoll as the national memorial to the Battle of Midway. Still other measures will further protect our great national resources by providing for expansion and improvements to our National Parks.

I am particularly grateful to the gentleman from Utah (Chairman HANSEN) and the members of his subcommittee for supporting legislation which would add a very important property to the Abraham Lincoln Birthplace National Historic Site, Knob Creek Farm of Hodgenville, Kentucky, the boyhood home of Abraham Lincoln.

The preservation of Knob Creek Lincoln Farm, as important as it is, represents only a single part of H.R. 4570. The Omnibus National Parks and Public Lands Act of 1999 allows us to move forward with what I believe are balanced proposals to protect and more effectively manage our National Parks, national forests, scenic rivers, and other public lands. Also, it offers improved access for Americans to enjoy the vast beauty of our national resources and proud history throughout our country.

Mr. Chairman, I urge my colleagues to support this reasonable and comprehensive legislation.

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. KINGSTON).

Mr. KINGSTON. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of H.R. 4570. It represents a wide, bipartisan group of projects of local interest. And it is amazing to me how most of these are very specific to certain areas that the local folks have all supported, and yet when it comes to Washington, experts up here are saying that the locals really do not know what they are doing. We better kill this legislation.

I think that this is a good bill. The part that I have the most interest is Cumberland Island in Georgia. The reason I support that is that we have historic properties on a historic island that was deemed a wilderness area. One of them is a 100-year-old mansion and the other part is a settlement that was founded by freed slaves. Mr. Chairman, we cannot name the number of villages founded by free slaves in the United States of America. There are not any. Yet here is one and it is right in the middle of a wilderness area and the Park Service, under their present plan, will let it fall to pieces because that is what a wilderness mandates. What our provision does is that it frees those properties, the 100-year-old mansion and the freed slaves area, also incidently called The Settlement, and allows them to be saved and protected for future generations because of their very historical significance.

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Utah (Mr. CANNON).

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Chairman, I would like to thank also the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN) who is also the chairman of the subcommittee, for this opportunity to speak and for what I think is a very good bill.

I would like to associate myself with the comments made by the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. KINGSTON) about the rationale, the difficulty of the rationale of Federal people substituting their judgment for that of locals.

I think this is a wonderful bill with a lot of local interest that works very well for local people. In my district, we have several bills that are affected. I do not think anybody in America is unaware of Arches National Park. It is the beautiful sandstone, freestanding arches and other beautiful sandstone formations in southern Utah.

We have in this bill a bill that would expand Arches to include the full geographic area and that would result in a much more beautiful and satisfying experience in the park. So I urge support for this bill on the basis of that.

Also in this bill there is an attempt to make adjustments for some of the technical problems with the Grand Staircase and Escalante National Monument. Members will recall it was well-documented that it was done without consultation with local folks, Congressmen, Senators or county commissioners, and a number of mistakes were made. I think everybody agrees on the changes that need to be made to that and we need to get that passed in this bill.

We also have language that would privatize the small Federal town of Dutch John. This is one of those few remaining Federal towns where bureaucratic restrictions cost a million dollars a year in government expenditures that could be borne privately at a much lower cost. We need to pass this law to privatize Dutch John and relieve the Treasury of that kind of an expense.

Thirdly, let me point out that we have, as the gentleman from Utah (Mr. COOK) has pointed out, a huge trade of school trust lands that has been negotiated and considered. It is a very important trade and it will do wonderful things for the children of Utah and their schools.

Lastly, let me just deal with briefly the San Rafael Swell. This is the area where Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid roamed and was made famous by that movie. It is a harsh and beautiful area that needs to be managed according to what the locals understand and that is appropriate in this bill.

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Chairman, I would inquire how much time I have remaining.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN) has 4½ minutes remaining.

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Chairman, may I inquire who has the right to close?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Utah has the right to close.

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Alabama (Mr. RILEY).

Mr. RILEY. Mr. Chairman, I rise today in strong support of H.R. 4570. Once enacted, H.R. 4570 will go a long way to expand, to protect, and to improve our national park system. This bipartisan effort is a compilation of over 80 bills designed to enhance and protect the environment and our public lands.

Moreover, the omnibus park bill will create a new Heritage Area and historic sites that will help our Nation to celebrate the true American experience. Of particular interest to me is the creation of the Tuskegee Airmen Historic Site in Moton Field, Alabama.

Mr. Chairman, by any standard, the famed Tuskegee Airmen of World War II were and are true American heroes. The Tuskegee Airmen, in my view, should be remembered, honored, and thanked for their courageous, selfless efforts to preserve and protect the freedoms that we enjoy today. I believe that the Tuskegee Airmen National Historic Site will be a fitting and a worthy tribute to these American heroes.

Mr. Chairman, I want to thank the gentleman from Utah (Chairman HANSEN) and the gentleman from Alaska (Chairman YOUNG) for including this historic site in the bill. I believe that the Tuskegee Airmen deserve no less from any of us today, and I urge my colleagues to vote in favor of this bill.

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Nebraska (Mr. BEREUTER).

(Mr. BEREUTER asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BEREUTER. Mr. Chairman, I was involved in a hearing and I happened to see some comments on the television monitor by the distinguished gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. COBURN) and I have to tell my colleagues that despite his good intentions, they are inaccurate.

Because of a huge effort the trails organization made over several years, and as a result of a thorough study, of the 6,000-plus miles in the American Discovery Trail, only 58 miles of the trail cross private property. Most of that is in the hands of a few big electrical utilities.

There are less than 20 private property owners that are affected by this 6,000-plus mile trail. And all of them, every single one of them, have given consent or signed agreements permit access for the trail.

Furthermore, there is an absolute prohibition against imminent domain or even the voluntary sale by owners of the private property for the American Discovery Trail.

□ 1445

Now, I am very unhappy that this legislation is a part of the overall omnibus bill. I was guaranteed by the chairman the gentleman from Alaska (Mr. YOUNG) that the ADT legislation, my bill, would be brought up separately. It has great support in the House, passed in the other body, but I do not want the argument raised in this debate that the ADT presents a private property issue. It absolutely does not. There is no way that the ADT component of this legislation threatens private property rights; therefore I ask Members to disregard those comments by the gentleman from Okahoma (Mr. COBURN).

Mr. MILLER of California. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, many Members have come down to this floor and commented on a number of good projects in this bill, and that is, in fact, accurate. But many Members who have good projects in this bill will be opposing this legislation because they understand that they are being used; that they are being held hostage to get some very bad pieces of legislation enacted into law.

In fact, many of the organizations that are supporting many provisions that are in this bill oppose this bill because they understand that the harm that will be done by this bill is greater than the good that will be done by those provisions, many of which have bipartisan support. They also understand that this legislation, that a good portion of these bills, in fact, have received no hearings.

Some 33 provisions of this legislation have received no hearings, 62 provisions have never been reported from committee, and yet we are told at the end that we have to take these provisions so that we can have a few good pieces, in many cases noncontroversial pieces of legislation, pass. That is not the way this place should work and that is not the way it will work. Why? Because there is another way to do this.

We started negotiations about this legislation, and the gentleman from New York (Mr. BOEHLERT) and the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GREENWOOD) and others started negotiation separate from ours about this. We told them there were things we thought should be put in this bill. They took those things but they refused to take any of the bad pieces out. They kept trying to add more things to it that were better in this bill so they could continue to pull the bad pieces of legislation with it.

It has turned out that that simply will not work. The people understand that and the environmental organizations understand that. That is why they are opposing it. The administration understands that. That is why the administration is opposing it. That is why it has been recommended that the President veto this legislation.

Members have said, well, 2 years ago we did the same thing. No, 2 years ago we did not do the same thing. Two years ago we had this kind of bill and we could not even get it to the floor of the Congress. Then, later, we negotiated it out in real negotiations, between Members of each side and the administration, and we worked basically on a bill that passed overwhelmingly and was noncontroversial with huge bipartisan support. That is the way this legislation should work.

We should not be coming here at the last minute and lumping in water projects, lumping in bad environmental projects, lumping in projects that have had no hearings, that have not gone through the committee process, that we do not know the cost of them, that waive environmental laws, that waive all kinds of planning and process that are necessary to protect the environment.

In fact, many of the local organizations that have supported these projects in many instances did so because they believed that they would continue to have a local voice in how those projects were designed and what the benefits were and what the detriments were so they could have a project they are proud of. Now we have legislation that, in fact, waives many of those provisions for that kind of planning and environmental review of these projects.

That is why this legislation should be rejected. That is why this legislation should be rejected on a bipartisan basis, because it is not about whether or not a few of the provisions in here that are noncontroversial, that are bipartisan in their support, that have support from the administration are good or not, it is the fact that this legislation has numerous, numerous components of it that are offensive to environmental policy, that are offensive to environmental planning, and that are, in many cases, offensive to local communities that oppose them.

Those bills ought to be brought to this floor and they ought to be debated in the light of day. They may still pass on a majority vote, but they ought not to be put in this bill to sink this bill down so that it cannot happen. The best thing we can do for people who want provisions passed is to kill this bill and then get on with the negotiations to negotiate a bill that, in fact, upholds the standards of environmental policy in this country, that will pass the administration's review and will have bipartisan support and then can pass the Senate.

If this bill goes over to the Senate in the number of days left, given the controversy in the bill, we will end up with nothing. We will end up with nothing. So the point is, if we really and truly want our projects, what we should do is understand that we ought to negotiate from a good bill, not trying to add things on to a very bad bill and hoping that that will make it pass.

I ask for the Members to oppose this legislation, to join the administration, to join the taxpayer organizations, and to join the environmental organizations in opposition to this legislation.

Mr. BOEHLERT. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I rise to once again reinforce my opposition to this measure. And it is too bad that it has worked out this way, because it could have been worked out in such a way that this bill would have passed unanimously in the House of Representatives. Ninety percent of the provisions in this bill are good provisions and could pass on the suspension calendar, which is reserved for noncontroversial items. But 10 percent of the bill, 10 percent of the bill, is not good. It is bad public policy. I would suggest to my colleagues that anyone who wants to do good would not prescribe a solution, a potion, 90 percent penicillin laced with 10 percent arsenic.

Let us recap what this bill would do. This bill would remove areas from wilderness protection. It would set new weaker guidelines for wilderness protection. It would waive normal environmental reviews for a road across world famous salmon streams. It would create new barriers to the creation of discovery trails. It would create new incentives to cut trees in national forests. And it would transfer Federal property in a manner that endangers the environment and cheats taxpayers.

Now, this is not just my view. This is not just the view of many of us in this chamber. This is the view of a whole wide range of organizations. Let me point out, first of all, that the opposition is led by the gentleman from California (Mr. MILLER) and this Member from New York, from coast to coast.

But this is region specific, too. For example, the opposition comes from the Alaska Rainforest Campaign and from the Alaska Wilderness League. The opposition comes from the Southern Utah Wilderness Alliance and from the Federation of Western Outdoor Clubs. If that is not enough, these region specific organizations, such national organizations as Friends of the Earth, the Isaac Walton League, the National Environment Trust, the National Trust for Historic Preservation, Physicians for Social Responsibility, and the National Audubon Society all strongly oppose this legislation, and with good reason. It does harm to the environment.

Now, we want a bill that would be signable, a bill that actually has an opportunity to become law. Let me point out that one of the previous speakers, the gentleman from Tennessee (Mr. DUNCAN), rightly enumerated a number of measures in this bill that he supports and, quite frankly, we all support them. They are noncontroversial. They were passed by the Senate, as he so properly suggested. They would be passed in this bill if they were presented to us separate from all the controversial provisions that have been added on.

This is an effort that is unfortunate, but the fact of the matter is we have to stand up here and register our strongest opposition, not just with all the environmental groups, not just with the Taxpayers for Common Sense, but with those who are offended by the process, a process that says a 450 or so page bill can be introduced and 3 weeks later, without the benefit of full committee hearings, without the benefit even of subcommittee hearings on some of the more controversial provisions are presented to the people's House in the closing days of a session for consideration.

That is a process, quite honestly, that offends many of us here, whether we are for or against the individual bill. We want thorough deliberation. We want open and public hearings. We want a chance for the people's House to examine all of the various provisions.

So for all of the above reasons, I rise in strong opposition to this measure and point out that the amendment to be offered by the chairman will not correct those deficiencies.

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself the balance of my time.

Mr. Chairman, let me point out this has probably been one of the most interesting debates I have heard in a long time. It is interesting to note that some people are worried about property rights, and some people are worried about heritage areas, and some people are worried that maybe some in the environmental community did not get everything they wanted in this particular piece of legislation.

I would like to ask my colleagues, can anybody name a bill around here that everybody got what they wanted in it? This is not a 10, but none of us here are a 10. We are lucky if we are a 4, if we look at some of the political polls right now. When we get right down to it, this bill is probably a high 8.

Some people have one little particular area and they say, gee, I do not feel good about that so I am going to vote against the whole package, throw out the whole thing and forget all the goods things in there. That does not make any sense. I have never seen a piece of legislation like that.

We keep hearing the idea of the President vetoing this. We all know it will be vetoed. As I mentioned before, last time around he said the same thing, and I stood in the oval office and he signed the bill. That was 2 years ago.

Now, he did send up some things he was objecting to: The San Rafael Swell. So we made the changes he wanted. So who is talking about San Rafael Swell around here? The antiquities Act. He could not go along with that, even though his administration acknowledged they violated the law when they did the Grand Staircase Escalante. So we took it out. It is not there. He also talked about NEPA parity, but we have worked on that. So where is the obstruction?

The most interesting thing about this debate that I have heard is no one has said, specifically in this one piece, we do not like that. We talk about all these people that are against it. My good friend from New York mentioned a few of them. Tell me what environmental community can we please around this country, anyway? In Utah, if I gave SUWA 5.7 million acres, they would want 8.5. If I gave them 8.5, they would want 15. The same with these other organizations. We cannot please them all. Who believes we can do that in this country? Can we all please our wives, can we please our kids and our colleagues? Nobody can.

So look at this thing. On a scale of 1 to 10, we have a high 8. Put that green card in there and vote a green button and we will be all right and we will get something moved. We will get to the Senate and get some good legislation. This idea we are all going to sit down and have a good Sunday school lesson and we are all going to agree on something is poppycock. Has that ever happened around here in 200 years? Of course not. It never happens.

The only thing I have ever seen we have agreed on is when we gave a gold medal to Queen Beatrice. I think it got 100 percent. And we are not giving any gold medals today. We are trying to move some good legislation.

I think it is interesting that many of these organizations that have the name Utah on them have their headquarters in New York. I thought the gentleman from New York (Mr. BOEHLERT) would enjoy that.

So I urge my colleagues to do everything they can to vote for this bill. Let us get it out, let us get something done for America and get off this nonsense that it needs 100 percent. It will never happen.

The CHAIRMAN. All time for general debate has expired.

Pursuant to the rule, the bill is considered as having been read for amendment under the 5-minute rule.

The text of H.R. 4570 is as follows:

(d) DETERMINATIONS OF FAIR MARKET VALUE.—During the 3-year period beginning on the date of the enactment of this Act, the fair market value of a parcel to be conveyed under subsection (a) shall be based on an appraisal of the fair market value as of a date not later than 6 months after the date of the enactment of this Act. The fair market value of each parcel conveyed after the end of such period shall be based on a subsequent appraisal. An appraisal conducted after such period shall consider the parcel in its unimproved state and shall not reflect any enhancement in value to the parcel based upon the existence or planned construction of infrastructure on or near the parcel.

(e) REVERSIONARY INTEREST.—During the 5-year period beginning 20 years after the date on which the Secretary conveys the first parcel under subsection (a), if the Secretary determines that the Aviation Department is not developing or progressing toward the development of the conveyed lands as an airport facility, the Secretary may exercise a right to reenter the conveyed lands. (C) CONVEYANCE BY STATE TRUST.—All conveyances of a Property and any related parcels under subsection (b)(1)(B) by the State Trust shall be at fair market value as determined by a new appraisal, but in no event may the State Trust convey any Property to a Lessee for an amount less than the value established for the Property by the appraisal conducted pursuant to subsection (c)(2).

Subtitle D—Conveyance of National Forest Lands for Public School Purposes

SEC. 231. AUTHORIZATION OF USE OF NATIONAL FOREST LANDS FOR PUBLIC SCHOOL PURPOSES.

(a) TRANSFERS.—The Secretary of Agriculture may, upon a finding that the transfer of certain National Forest lands for local public school purposes would serve the public interest, authorize the transfer of up to 40 acres of National Forest lands to a local governmental entity for public school purposes. The Secretary may make available only those National Forest lands that have been identified for disposal or exchange or are not otherwise needed for National Forest purposes. The Secretary shall make such transfers using the least amount of land required for the efficient operation of the project involved.

(b) COSTS.—Such transfers may be made at discounted or no-cost. The Secretary shall provide for a no-cost transfer to a local governmental entity for public school purposes if the Secretary determines that the charges for such lands would impose an undue hardship on the local governmental entity.

SEC. 245. UTAH SCHOOLS AND LANDS EXCHANGE.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds the following:

(1) The State of Utah owns approximately 176,600 acres of land, as well as approximately 24,165 acres of mineral interests, administered by the Utah School and Institutional Trust Lands Administration, within the exterior boundaries of the Grand Staircase-Escalante National Monument, established by Presidential proclamation on September 18, 1996, pursuant to section 2 of the Antiquities Act of 1906 (16 U.S.C. 431). The State of Utah also owns approximately 200,000 acres of land, and 76,000 acres of mineral interests, administered by the Utah School and Institutional Trust Lands Administration, within the exterior boundaries of several units of the National Park System and the National Forest System, and within certain Indian reservations in Utah. These lands were granted by Congress to the State of Utah pursuant to the Utah Enabling Act, chap. 138, 28 Stat. 107 (1894), to be held in trust for the benefit of the State's public school system and other public institutions.

(2) Many of the State school trust lands within the monument may contain significant economic quantities of mineral resources, including coal, oil, and gas, tar sands, coalbed methane, titanium, uranium, and other energy and metalliferous minerals. Certain State school trust lands within the Monument, like the Federal lands comprising the Monument, have substantial noneconomic scientific, historic, cultural, scenic, recreational, and natural resources, including ancient Native American archaeological sites and rare plant and animal communities.

(3) Development of surface and mineral resources on State school trust lands within the monument could be incompatible with the preservation of these scientific and historic resources for which the monument was established. Federal acquisition of State school trust lands within the monument would eliminate this potential incompatibility, and would enhance management of the Grand Staircase-Escalante National Monument.

(4) The United States owns lands and interest in lands outside of the monument that can be transferred to the State of Utah in exchange for the monument inholdings without jeopardizing Federal management objectives or needs.

(5) In 1993, Congress passed and the President signed Public Law 103–93, which contained a process for exchanging State of Utah school trust inholdings in the National Park System, the National Forest System, and certain Indian reservations in Utah. Among other things, it identified various Federal lands and interests in land that were available to exchange for these State inholdings.

(6) Although Public Law 103–93 offered the hope of a prompt, orderly exchange of State inholdings for Federal lands elsewhere, implementation of the legislation has been very slow. Completion of this process is realistically estimated to be many years away, at great expense to both the State and the United States in the form of expert witnesses, lawyers, appraisers, and other litigation costs.

(7) The State also owns approximately 2,560 acres of land in or near the Alton coal field which has been declared an area unsuitable for coal mining under the terms of the Surface Mining Control and Reclamation Act. This land is also administered by the Utah School and Institutional Trust Lands Administration, but its use is limited given this declaration.

(8) The large presence of State school trust land inholdings in the monument, national parks, national forests, and Indian reservations make land and resource management in these areas difficult, costly, and controversial for both the State of Utah and the United States.

(9) It is in the public interest to reach agreement on exchange of inholdings, on terms fair to both the State and the United States. Agreement saves much time and delay in meeting the expectations of the State school and institutional trusts, in simplifying management of Federal and Indian lands and resources, and in avoiding expensive, protracted litigation under Public Law 103–93.

(10) The State of Utah and the United States have reached an agreement under which the State would exchange of all its State school trust lands within the monument, and specified inholdings in national parks, forests, and Indian reservations that are subject to Public Law 103–93, for various Federal lands and interests in lands located outside the monument, including Federal lands and interests identified as available for exchange in Public Law 103–93 and additional Federal lands and interests in lands.

(11) The State school trust lands to be conveyed to the Federal Government include properties within units of the National Park System, the National Forest System, and the Grand Staircase-Escalante National Monument. The Federal assets made available for exchange with the State were selected with a great sensitivity to environmental concerns and a belief and expectation by both parties that Federal assets to be conveyed to the State would be unlikely to trigger significant environmental controversy.

(12) The parties agreed at the outset of negotiations to avoid identifying Federal assets for conveyance to the State where any of the following was known to exist or likely to be an issue as a result of foreseeable future uses of the land: significant wildlife resources, endangered species habitat, significant archaeological resources, areas of critical environmental concern, coal resources requiring surface mining to extract the mineral deposits, wilderness study areas, significant recreational areas, or any other lands known to raise significant environmental concerns of any kind.

(13) The parties further agreed that the use of any mineral interests obtained by the State of Utah where the Federal Government retains surface and other interest, will not conflict with established Federal land and environmental management objectives, and shall be fully subject to all environmental regulations applicable to development of non-Federal mineral interest on Federal lands.

(14) Because the inholdings to be acquired by the Federal Government include properties within the boundaries of some of the most renowned conservation land units in the United States, and because a mission of the Utah School and Institutional Trust Lands Administration is to produce economic benefits for Utah's public schools and other beneficiary institutions, the exchange of lands called for in this agreement will resolve many longstanding environmental conflicts and further the interest of the State trust lands, the school children of Utah, and these conservation resources.

(15) Under this Agreement taken as a whole, the State interests to be conveyed to the United States by the State of Utah, and the Federal interests and payments to be conveyed to the State of Utah by the United States, are approximately equal in value.

(16) The purpose of this section is to enact into law and direct prompt implementation of this historic agreement.

(b) RATIFICATION OF AGREED EXCHANGE BETWEEN THE STATE OF UTAH AND THE DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR.—

(1) AGREEMENT.—The State of Utah and the Department of the Interior have agreed to exchange certain Federal lands, Federal mineral interests, and payment of money for lands and mineral interests managed by the Utah School and Institutional Trust Lands Administration, lands and mineral interests of approximately equal value inheld within the Grand Staircase-Escalante National Monument the Goshute and Navajo Indian Reservations, units of the National Park System, the National Forest System, and the Alton coal fields.

(2) RATIFICATION.—All terms, conditions, procedures, covenants, reservations, and other provisions set forth in the document entitled ''Agreement to Exchange Utah School Trust Lands Between the State of Utah and the United States of America'' (in this section referred to as the ''Agreement'') are hereby incorporated in this section, are ratified and confirmed, and set forth the obligations and commitments of the United States, the State of Utah, and Utah School and Institutional Trust Lands Administration, as a matter of Federal law.

(c) LEGAL DESCRIPTIONS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The maps and legal descriptions referred to in the Agreement depict the lands subject to the conveyances.

(2) PUBLIC AVAILABILITY.—The maps and descriptions referred to in the Agreement shall be on file and available for public inspection in the offices of the Secretary of the Interior and the Utah State Director of the Bureau of Land Management.

(3) CONFLICT.—In case of conflict between the maps and the legal descriptions, the legal descriptions shall control.

(d) COSTS.—The United States and the State of Utah shall each bear its own respective costs incurred in the implementation of this section.

(e) REPEAL OF PUBLIC LAW 103–93 AND PUBLIC LAW 104–211.—The provisions of Public Law 103–93 (107 Stat. 995), other than section 7(b)(1), section 7(b)(3), and section 10(b) thereof, are hereby repealed. Public Law 104–211 (110 Stat. 3013) is hereby repealed.

(f) CASH PAYMENT PREVIOUSLY AUTHORIZED.—As previously authorized and made available by section 7(b)(1) and (b)(3) of Public Law 103–93, upon completion of all conveyances described in the Agreement, the United States shall pay $50,000,000 to the State of Utah from funds not otherwise appropriated from the Treasury.

(g) SCHEDULE FOR CONVEYANCES.—All conveyances under sections 2 and 3 of the Agreement shall be completed within 70 days after the enactment of this Act.

(1) September 2, 1998, marked the 53d anniversary of the United States victory over Japan in World War II.

(2) The Battle of Midway proved to be the turning point in the war in the Pacific, as United States Navy forces inflicted such severe losses on the Imperial Japanese Navy during the battle that the Imperial Japanese Navy never again took the offensive against United States or allied forces.

(3) During the Battle of Midway on June 4, 1942, an outnumbered force of the United States Navy, consisting of 29 ships and other units of the Armed Forces under the command of Admiral Nimitz and Admiral Spruance, outmaneuvered and out-fought 350 ships of the Imperial Japanese Navy.

(4) It is in the public interest to study whether Midway Atoll should be established as a national memorial to the Battle of Midway to express the enduring gratitude of the American people for victory in the battle and to inspire future generations of Americans with the heroism and sacrifice of the members of the Armed Forces who achieved that victory.

(5) The historic structures on Midway Atoll should be protected and maintained.

(b) PURPOSE.—The purpose of this section shall be to require a study of the feasibility and suitability of designating the Midway Atoll as a national memorial to the Battle of Midway within the boundaries of the Midway Atoll National Wildlife Refuge. (B) Whether designation as a national memorial would conflict with current management of Midway Atoll as a wildlife refuge and whether, and under what circumstances, the needs and requirements of the wildlife refuge should take precedence over the needs and requirements of a national memorial on Midway Atoll.

(C) Whether, and under what conditions, to permit the use of the facilities on Sand Island for purposes other than a wildlife refuge or a national memorial.

(D) Whether to impose conditions on public access to Midway Atoll if designated as a national memorial.

(d) REPORT.—Upon completion of the study required under paragraph (1), the Secretary shall submit to the Committee on Resources of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources of the Senate a report on the study, which shall include any recommendations for further legislative action. The report shall also include an inventory of all known past and present facilities and structures of historical significance on Midway Atoll and its environs. The report shall include a description of each historic facility and structure and a

SEC. 406. LOWER EAST SIDE TENEMENT NATIONAL HISTORIC SITE, NEW YORK.

SEC. 407. GATEWAY VISITOR CENTER AUTHORIZATION, INDEPENDENCE NATIONAL HISTORICAL PARK.

(A) The National Park Service completed and approved in 1997 a general management plan for Independence National Historical Park that establishes goals and priorities for the park's future.

(B) The general management plan for Independence National Historical Park calls for the revitalization of Independence Mall and recommends as a critical component of the Independence Mall's revitalization the development of a new ''Gateway Visitor Center''.

(C) Such a visitor center would replace the existing park visitor center and would serve as an orientation center for visitors to the park and to city and regional attractions.

(D) Subsequent to the completion of the general management plan, the National Park Service undertook and completed a design project and master plan for Independence Mall which includes the Gateway Visitor Center.

(E) Plans for the Gateway Visitor Center call for it to be developed and managed, in cooperation with the Secretary of the Interior, by a nonprofit organization which represents the various public and civic interests of the greater Philadelphia metropolitan area.

SEC. 408. TUSKEGEE AIRMEN NATIONAL HISTORIC SITE, ALABAMA.

(a) DEFINITIONS.—As used in this section:

(1) HISTORIC SITE.—The term ''historic site'' means the Tuskegee Airmen National Historic Site as established by subsection (d).

(2) SECRETARY.—The term ''Secretary'' means the Secretary of the Interior.

(3) TUSKEGEE AIRMEN.—The term ''Tuskegee Airmen'' means the thousands of men and women who served in America's African-American Air Force units of World War II and shared in the Tuskegee Experience.

(4) TUSKEGEE UNIVERSITY.—The term ''Tuskegee University'' means the institution of higher education by that name located in the State of Alabama and founded by Booker T. Washington in 1881, formerly named Tuskegee Institute.

(b) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds the following:

(1) The struggle of African-Americans for greater roles in North American military conflicts spans the 17th, 18th, 19th, and 20th centuries. Opportunities for African-American participation in the United States military were always very limited and controversial. Quotas, exclusion, and racial discrimination were based on the prevailing attitude in the United States, particularly on the part of the United States military, that African-Americans did not possess the intellectual capacity, aptitude, and skills to be successful fighters.

(2) By the early 1940's these perceptions continued within the United States military. Key leaders within the United States Army Air Corps did not believe that African-Americans possessed the capacity to become successful military pilots. After succumbing to pressure exerted by civil rights groups and the black press, the Army decided to train a small number of African-American pilot cadets under special conditions. Although prejudice and discrimination against African-Americans was a national phenomenon, not just a southern trait, it was more intense in the South where it had hardened into rigidly enforced patterns of segregation. Such was the environment where the military chose to locate the training of the Tuskegee Airmen.

(3) The military selected Tuskegee Institute (now known as Tuskegee University) as a civilian contractor for a variety of reasons. These included the school's existing facilities, engineering and technical instructors, and a climate with ideal flying conditions year round. Tuskegee Institute's strong interest in providing aeronautical training for African-American youths was also an important factor. Students from the school's civilian pilot training program had some of the best test scores when compared to other students from programs across the Southeast.

(4) In 1941 the United States Army Air Corps awarded a contract to Tuskegee Institute to operate a primary flight school at Moton Field. Tuskegee Institute (now known as Tuskegee University) chose an African-American contractor who designed and constructed Moton Field, with the assistance of its faculty and students, as the site for its military pilot training program. The field was named for the school's second president, Robert Russa Moton. Consequently, Tuskegee Institute was one of a very few American institutions (and the only African-American institution) to own, develop, and control facilities for military flight instruction.

(5) Moton Field, also known as the Primary Flying Field or Airport Number 2, was the only primary flight training facility for African-American pilot candidates in the United States Army Air Corps during World War II. The facility symbolizes the entrance of African-American pilots into the United States Army Air Corps, although on the basis of a policy of segregation that was mandated by the military and institutionalized in the South. The facility also symbolizes the singular role of Tuskegee Institute (Tuskegee University) in providing leadership as well as economic and educational resources to make that entry possible.

(6) The Tuskegee Airmen were the first African-American soldiers to complete their training successfully and to enter the United States Army Air Corps. Almost 1,000 aviators were trained as America's first African-American military pilots. In addition, more than 10,000 military and civilian African-American men and women served as flight instructors, officers, bombardiers, navigators, radio technicians, mechanics, air traffic controllers, parachute riggers, electrical and communications specialists, medical professionals, laboratory assistants, cooks, musicians, supply, firefighting, and transportation personnel.

(7) Although military leaders were hesitant to use the Tuskegee Airmen in combat, the Airmen eventually saw considerable action in North Africa and Europe. Acceptance from United States Army Air Corps units came slowly, but their courageous and, in many cases, heroic performance earned them increased combat opportunities and respect.

(8) The successes of the Tuskegee Airmen proved to the American public that African-Americans, when given the opportunity, could become effective military leaders and pilots. This helped pave the way for desegregation of the military, beginning with President Harry S Truman's Executive Order 9981 in 1948. The Tuskegee Airmen's success also helped set the stage for civil rights advocates to continue the struggle to end racial discrimination during the civil rights movement of the 1950's and 1960's.

(9) The story of the Tuskegee Airmen also reflects the struggle of African-Americans to achieve equal rights, not only through legal attacks on the system of segregation, but also through the techniques of nonviolent direct action. The members of the 477th Bombardment Group, who staged a nonviolent demonstration to desegregate the officer's club at Freeman Field, Indiana, helped set the pattern for direct action protests popularized by civil rights activists in later decades.

(c) PURPOSES.—The purposes of this section are the following:

(1) To benefit and inspire present and future generations to understand and appreciate the heroic legacy of the Tuskegee Airmen, through interpretation and education, and the preservation of cultural resources at Moton Field, which was the site of primary flight training.

(2) To commemorate and interpret the impact of the Tuskegee Airmen during World War II; the training process for the Tuskegee Airmen including the roles played by Moton Field, other training facilities, and related sites; the strategic role of Tuskegee Institute (Tuskegee University) in the training; the African-American struggle for greater participation in the United States military and more significant roles in defending their country; the significance of successes of the Tuskegee Airmen in leading to desegregation of the United States military shortly after World War II; and the impacts of Tuskegee Airmen accomplishments on subsequent civil rights advances of the 1950's and 1960's.

(d) ESTABLISHMENT OF THE TUSKEGEE AIRMEN NATIONAL HISTORIC SITE.

(1) IN GENERAL.—There is hereby established as a unit of the National Park System the Tuskegee Airmen National Historic Site, in association with Tuskegee University, in the State of Alabama.

(2) DESCRIPTION.—The total historic site, after the conditions are met for its full development and management, and subsequent to agreements to donate land by Tuskegee University and the city of Tuskegee, shall consist of approximately 90 acres, known as Moton Field, in Macon County, Alabama, as generally depicted on a map entitled ''Alternative C, Living History: Tuskegee Airmen Experience'', dated June 1998. Such map shall be on file and available for public inspection in the appropriate offices of the National Park Service.

(e) PROPERTY ACQUISITION.—The Secretary may acquire by donation, exchange, or purchase with donated or appropriated funds the real property described in subsection (d)(2), except that any property owned by the State of Alabama or any political subdivision thereof or Tuskegee University may be acquired only by donation. It is understood that property donated by Tuskegee University shall be used only for purposes consistent with this Act in commemorating the Tuskegee Airmen. The initial donation of land by Tuskegee University shall consist of approximately 35 acres with the remainder of the acreage to be donated by Tuskegee University after agreement is reached regarding the development and management of the Tuskegee Airmen National Center. The Secretary may also acquire by the same methods personal property associated with, and appropriate for, the interpretation of the historic site.

(f) ADMINISTRATION OF HISTORIC SITE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall administer the historic site in accordance with this section and the laws generally applicable to units of the National Park System, including the Act of August 25, 1916 (39 Stat. 535), and the Act of August 21, 1935 (49 Stat. 666).

(b) FINDINGS.—Congress finds the following:

(1) The history of the American West is one of the most significant chapters of United States history, and the major themes and images of the history of the American West provide a legacy that has done much to shape the contemporary culture, attitudes, and values of the American West and the United States.

(2) The San Rafael Swell region of the State of Utah was one of the country's last frontiers and possesses important historical, cultural, and natural resources that are representative of the central themes associated with the history of the American West, including themes of pre-Columbian and Native American culture, exploration, pioneering, settlement, ranching, outlaws, prospecting and mining, water development and irrigation, railroad building, industrial development, and the utilization and conservation of natural resources.

(3) The San Rafael Swell region contains important historical sites, including sections of the Old Spanish Trail, the Outlaw Trail, the Green River Crossing, and numerous sites associated with cowboy, pioneer, and mining history.

(4) The heritage of the San Rafael Swell region includes the activities of many prominent historical figures of the old American West, such as Chief Walker, John Wesley Powell, Kit Carson, John C. Fremont, John W. Gunnison, Butch Cassidy, John W. Taylor, and the Swasey brothers.

(5) The San Rafael Swell region has a notable history of coal and uranium mining, and a rich cultural heritage of activities associated with mining, such as prospecting, railroad building, immigrant workers, coal camps, labor union movements, and mining disasters.

(6) The San Rafael Swell region is widely recognized for its significant paleontological resources and dinosaur bone quarries, including the Cleveland Lloyd Dinosaur Quarry which was designated as a National Natural Landmark in 1966.

(7) The beautiful rural landscapes, historic and cultural landscapes, and spectacular scenic vistas of the San Rafael Swell region contain significant undeveloped recreational opportunities for people throughout the United States.

(8) Museums and visitor centers have already been constructed in the San Rafael Swell region, including the John Wesley Powell River History Museum, the College of Eastern Utah Prehistoric Museum, the Museum of the San Rafael, the Western Mining and Railroad Museum, the Emery County Pioneer Museum, and the Cleveland Lloyd Dinosaur Quarry, and these museums are available to interpret the themes of the national heritage area established by this title and to coordinate the interpretive and preservation activities of the area.

(9) Despite the efforts of the State of Utah, political subdivisions of the State, volunteer organizations, and private businesses, the cultural, historical, natural, and recreational resources of the San Rafael Swell region have not realized their full potential and may be lost without assistance from the Federal Government.

(10) Many of the historical, cultural, and scientific sites of the San Rafael Swell region are located on lands owned by the Federal Government and are managed by the Bureau of Land Management or the United States Forest Service.

(11) The preservation of the cultural, historical, natural, and recreational resources of the San Rafael Swell region within a regional framework requires cooperation among local property owners and Federal, State, and local government entities.

(12) Partnerships between Federal, State, and local governments, local and regional entities of these governments, and the private sector offer the most effective opportunities for the enhancement and management of the cultural, historical, natural, and recreational resources of the San Rafael Swell region.

(c) PURPOSES.—The purposes of this subtitle are—

(1) to establish the San Rafael Swell National Heritage Area to promote the preservation, conservation, interpretation, and development of the historical, cultural, natural, and recreational resources related to the historical, cultural, and industrial heritage of the San Rafael Swell region of the State of Utah, which includes the counties of Carbon and Emery, and portions of the county of Sanpete;

(b) PROHIBITION OF BUFFER ZONES.—The Congress does not intend that the designation of an area by this title as part of the conservation area or a wilderness or semi-primitive area lead to the creation of protective perimeters or buffer zones around the area. It is the intention of the Congress that any protective perimeter or buffer zone be located wholly within such an area. The fact that nonconforming activities or uses can be seen or heard from land within such an area shall not, of itself, preclude such activities or uses up to the boundary of the area. Nonconforming activities that occur outside of the boundaries of such an area designated by this title shall not be taken into account in assessing unnecessary and undue degradation of such an area.

(2) REASONABLE ACCESS DEFINED.—For the purposes of this subsection, the term ''reasonable access'' means right of entry and includes access by motorized transport when necessarily, customarily, or historically employed on routes in existence as of the date of the enactment of this Act.

(e) LAND ACQUISITION BY EXCHANGE OR PURCHASE.—The Secretary shall offer to acquire from non-governmental entities lands and interests in lands located within or adjacent to the conservation area or a wilderness or semi-primitive area designated under this title. Lands may be acquired under this subsection only by exchange or purchase from willing sellers.

(f) RIGHTS-OF-WAY.—

(1) RIGHT-OF-WAY CLAIMS NOT AFFECTED.—Nothing in this title, including any reference to or depiction on the map entitled ''San Rafael Swell National Heritage/Conservation Area Proposed'', dated June 12, 1998, affects any right-of-way claim that arose under section 2477 of the Revised Statutes (43 U.S.C. 932).

(2) DEPICTIONS NOT DETERMINATIVE.—Any depiction or lack of depiction of a highway, road, right-of-way, or trail on the map entitled ''San Rafael Swell National Heritage/Conservation Area Proposed'', dated June 12, 1998, shall not be considered in any determination under section 2477 of the Revised Statutes (43 U.S.C. 932) of whether or not such highway, road, right-of-way, or trail exists.

SEC. 610. CHATTAHOOCHEE RIVER NATIONAL RECREATION AREA.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds that:

(1) The Chattahoochee River National Recreation Area is a nationally significant resource and the national recreation area has been adversely affected by land use changes occurring within and outside its boundaries.

(2) The population of the metropolitan Atlanta area continues to expand northward, leaving dwindling opportunities to protect the scenic, recreation, natural, and historic values of the 2,000-foot wide corridor adjacent to each bank of the Chattahoochee River and its impoundments in the 48-mile segment known as the area of national concern.

(3) The State of Georgia has enacted the Metropolitan River Protection Act in order to ensure the protection of the corridor located within 2,000 feet of each bank of the Chattahoochee River, or the 100-year flood plain, whichever is greater, and such corridor includes the area of national concern.

(4) Visitor use of the Chattahoochee River National Recreation Area has shifted dramatically since the establishment of the national recreation area from waterborne to water-related and land-based activities.

(5) The State of Georgia and its political subdivisions along the Chattahoochee River have indicated their willingness to join in cooperative efforts with the United States of America to link existing units of the national recreation area with a series of linear corridors to be established within the area of national concern and elsewhere on the river and provided Congress appropriates certain funds in support of such effort, funding from the State, its political subdivisions, private foundations, corporate entities, private individuals, and other sources will be available to fund more than half of the estimated cost of such cooperative effort.

(b) PURPOSES.—The purposes of this section are to—

(1) increase the level of protection of the remaining open spaces within the area of national concern along the Chattahoochee River and to enhance visitor enjoyment of such areas by adding land-based links between existing units of the national recreation area;

(2) assure that the national recreation area is managed to standardize acquisition, planning, design, construction, and operation of the linear corridors; and

(3) authorize the appropriation of Federal funds to cover a portion of the costs of the Federal, State, local, and private cooperative effort to add additional areas to the Chattahoochee River National Recreation Area in order to establish a series of linear corridors linking existing units of the national recreation area and to protect other undeveloped portions of the Chattahoochee River corridor.

(c) AMENDMENTS TO CHATTAHOOCHEE NRA ACT.—The Act of August 15, 1978, entitled ''An Act to authorize the establishment of the Chattahoochee River National Recreation Area in the State of Georgia, and for other purposes'' (Public Law 95–344; 16 U.S.C. 460ii–2(b)) is amended as follows:

(1) Section 101 is amended as follows:

(A) By inserting after ''map entitled 'Boundary Map, Chattahoochee River National Recreation Area', numbered Chat–20,003 and dated September 1984'' the following: ''and on the maps entitled 'Chattahoochee River National Recreation Area, Interim Boundary Map #1, #2, and #3, dated _____''.

(B) By amending the fourth sentence to read as follows: ''After July 1, 1999, the Secretary of the Interior (in this Act referred to as the 'Secretary') may modify the boundaries of the recreation area to include other lands within the river corridor of the Chattahoochee River by submitting a revised map or other boundary description to the Congress. Such revised boundaries shall take effect on the date 6 months after the date of such submission unless, within such 6-month period, the Congress adopts a Joint Resolution disapproving such revised boundaries. Such revised map or other boundary description shall be prepared by the Secretary after consultation with affected landowners and with the State of Georgia and affected political subdivisions.''.

(C) By striking out ''may not exceed approximately 6,800 acres.'' and inserting ''may not exceed 10,000 acres.''.

(2) Section 102(f) is repealed.

(3) Section 103(b) is amended to read as follows:

''(b) COOPERATIVE AGREEMENTS.—The Secretary is authorized to enter into cooperative agreements with the State, its political subdivisions, and other entities to assure standardized acquisition, planning, design, construction, and operation of the national recreation area.''.

(4) Section 105(a) is amended to read as follows:

''(a) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS; ACCEPTANCE OF DONATIONS.—In addition to funding and the donation of lands and interests in lands provided by the State of Georgia, local government authorities, private foundations, corporate entities, and individuals, and funding that may be available pursuant to the settlement of litigation, there is hereby authorized to be appropriated for land acquisition not more than $25,000,000 for fiscal years after fiscal year 1998. The Secretary is authorized to accept the donation of funds and lands or interests in lands to carry out this Act.''.

(5) Section 105(c) (16 U.S.C. 460ii–4(c)) is amended by adding the following at the end thereof: ''The Secretary shall submit a new plan within 3 years after the enactment of this sentence to provide for the protection, enhancement, enjoyment, development, and use of areas added to the national recreation area. During the preparation of the revised plan the Secretary shall seek and encourage the participation of the State of Georgia and its affected political subdivisions, private landowners, interested citizens, public officials, groups, agencies, educational institutions, and others.''.

''(5)(A) National discovery trails, established as provided in section 5, which will be extended, continuous, interstate trails so located as to provide for outstanding outdoor recreation and travel and to connect representative examples of America's trails and communities. National discovery trails should provide for the conservation and enjoyment of significant natural, cultural, and historic resources associated with each trail and should be so located as to represent metropolitan, urban, rural, and backcountry regions of the Nation. Any such trail may be designated on Federal lands and, with the consent of the owner thereof, on any non-Federal lands. The consent of the owner shall be obtained in the form of a written agreement, which shall include such terms and conditions as the parties to the agreement consider advisable, and may include provisions regarding the discontinuation of the trail designation. The Congress does not intend for the establishment of a national discovery trail to lead to the creation of protective perimeters or buffer zones adjacent to a national discovery trail. The fact that there may be activities or uses on lands adjacent to the trail that would not be permitted on the trail shall not preclude such activities or uses on such lands adjacent to the trail to the extent consistent with other applicable law. Nothing in this Act may be construed to impose or permit the imposition of any landowner on the use of any non-Federal lands without the consent of the owner. Neither the designation of a national discovery trail nor any plan related thereto shall affect, or be considered, in the granting or denial of a right-of-way or any conditions relating thereto.

''(B) The appropriate Secretary for each national discovery trail shall administer the trail in cooperation with a competent trailwide volunteer-based organization. Where national discovery trails are congruent with other local, State, national scenic, or national historic trails, the designation of the discovery trail shall not in any way diminish the values and significance for which these trails were established.''.

(B) FEASIBILITY REQUIREMENTS; COOPERATIVE MANAGEMENT REQUIREMENT.—Section 5(b) of such Act (16 U.S.C. 1244(b)) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

''(12) For purposes of this subsection, a trail shall not be considered feasible and desirable for designation as a national discovery trail unless it meets all of the following criteria:

''(A) The trail must link to one or more areas within the boundaries of a metropolitan area (as those boundaries are determined under section 134(c) of title 23, United States Code). It should also join with other trails, tying the National Trails System to significant recreation and resources areas.

''(B) The trail must be supported by at least one competent trailwide volunteer-based organization. Each trail shall have extensive local and trailwide support by the public, by user groups, and by affected State and local governments.

''(C) The trail must be extended and pass through more than one State. At a minimum, it should be a continuous, walkable route. National discovery trails are specifically exempted from the provisions of sections 7(g) of this Act.

''(D) The appropriate Secretary shall obtain written consent from affected landowners prior to entering nonpublic lands for the purposes of conducting any surveys or studies of nonpublic lands for purposes of this Act. Provided, before any designation or establishment of any discovery trail provided by this Act, the appropriate Secretary must ensure written notification to all nonpublic landowners on which a designated trail crosses or abuts nonpublic lands. Furthermore, any nonpublic landowner that has property crossed by or abutting land designated under this Act, if trespassing should occur by travelers on the National Discovery Trail, has the right to request and subsequently require the appropriate Secretary to coordinate with State and local officials to ensure to the maximum extent feasible that no further trespassing should occur on such nonpublic land.''.

After the two routes rejoin in Denver, Colorado, the route continues through Colorado, Utah, Nevada, and California. The trail is generally described in Volume 2 of the National Park Service feasibility study dated June 1995 which shall be on file and available for public inspection in the office of the Director of the National Park Service, Department of the Interior, the District of Columbia. Components of the comprehensive plan include—

''(1) policies, objectives and practices to be observed in the administration and management of the trail, including the identification of all significant natural, historical, and cultural resources to be preserved, model agreements necessary for joint trail administration among and between interested parties, and an identified carrying capacity for critical segments of the trail and procedures for implementation, where appropriate;

''(2) strategies for trail protection to retain the values for which the trail is being established and recognized by the Federal Government;

''(3) general and site-specific trail-related development, including anticipated costs; and

SEC. 803. ASSISTANCE TO THE NATIONAL HISTORIC TRAILS INTERPRETIVE CENTER.

(a) FINDINGS AND PURPOSES.—

(1) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds and declares the following:

(A) The city of Casper, Wyoming, is nationally significant as the only geographic location in the western United States where 4 congressionally recognized historic trails (the Oregon Trail, the Mormon Trail, the California Trail, and the Pony Express Trail), the Bridger Trail, the Bozeman Trail, and many Indian routes converged.

(B) The historic trails that passed through the Casper area are a distinctive part of the national character and possess important historical and cultural values representing themes of migration, settlement, transportation, and commerce that shaped the landscape of the West.

(C) The Bureau of Land Management has not yet established a historic trails interpretive center in Wyoming or in any adjacent State to educate and focus national attention on the history of the mid-19th century immigrant trails that crossed public lands in the Intermountain West.

(D) At the invitation of the Bureau of Land Management, the city of Casper and the National Historic Trails Foundation, Inc. (a nonprofit corporation established under the laws of the State of Wyoming) entered into a memorandum of understanding in 1992, and have since signed an assistance agreement in 1993 and a cooperative agreement in 1997, to create, manage, and sustain a National Historic Trails Interpretive Center to be located in Casper, Wyoming, to professionally interpret the historic trails in the Casper area for the benefit of the public.

(E) The National Historic Trails Interpretive Center authorized by this section is consistent with the purposes and objectives of the National Trails System Act (16 U.S.C. 1241 et seq.), which directs the Secretary of the Interior to protect, interpret, and manage the remnants of historic trails on public lands.

(F) The State of Wyoming effectively joined the partnership to establish the National Historic Trails Interpretive Center through a legislative allocation of supporting funds, and the citizens of the city of Casper have increased local taxes to meet their financial obligations under the assistance agreement and the cooperative agreement referred to in paragraph (4).

(G) The National Historic Trails Foundation, Inc. has secured most of the $5,000,000 of non-Federal funding pledged by State and local governments and private interests pursuant to the cooperative agreement referred to in subparagraph (D).

(H) The Bureau of Land Management has completed the engineering and design phase of the National Historic Trails Interpretive Center, and the National Historic Trails Foundation, Inc. is ready for Federal financial and technical assistance to construct the Center pursuant to the cooperative agreement referred to in subparagraph (D).

(2) PURPOSES.—The purposes of this section are the following:

(A) To recognize the importance of the historic trails that passed through the Casper, Wyoming, area as a distinctive aspect of American heritage worthy of interpretation and preservation.

(B) To assist the city of Casper, Wyoming, and the National Historic Trails Foundation, Inc. in establishing the National Historic Trails Interpretive Center to memorialize and interpret the significant role of those historic trails in the history of the United States.

(C) To highlight and showcase the Bureau of Land Management's stewardship of public lands in Wyoming and the West.

(b) NATIONAL HISTORIC TRAILS INTERPRETIVE CENTER.—

(1) ESTABLISHMENT.—The Secretary of the Interior, acting through the Director of the Bureau of Land Management (in this section referred to as the ''Secretary''), shall establish in Casper, Wyoming, a center for the interpretation of the historic trails in the vicinity of Casper, including the Oregon Trail, the Mormon Trail, the California Trail, and the Pony Express Trail, the Bridger Trail, the Bozeman Trail, and various Indian routes. The center shall be known as the National Historic Trails Interpretive Center (in this section referred to as the ''Center'').

(2) FACILITIES.—The Secretary, subject to the availability of appropriations, shall construct, operate, and maintain facilities for the Center—

(A) on land provided by the city of Casper, Wyoming;

(B) in cooperation with the city of Casper and the National Historic Trails Interpretive Center Foundation, Inc. (a nonprofit corporation established under the laws of the State of Wyoming); and

(C) in accordance with—

(i) the Memorandum of Understanding entered into on March 4, 1993, by the city, the foundation, and the Wyoming State Director of the Bureau of Land Management; and

(ii) the cooperative agreement between the foundation and the Wyoming State Director of the Bureau of Land Management, numbered K910A970020.

(3) DONATIONS.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Secretary may accept, retain, and expend donations of funds, property, or services from individuals, foundations, corporations, or public entities for the purpose of development and operation of the Center.

TITLE IX—HAZARDOUS FUELS REDUCTION

SEC. 901. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the ''Community Protection and Hazardous Fuels Reduction Act of 1998''.

SEC. 902. FINDINGS AND PURPOSE.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds the following:

(1) Management of Federal lands has been characterized by large cyclical variations in fire suppression policies, timber harvesting levels, and the attention paid to commodity and noncommodity values.

(2) Forests on Federal lands are experiencing significant disease epidemics and insect infestations.

(3) The combination of inconsistent management and natural effects has resulted in a hazardous fuels buildup on Federal lands that threatens catastrophic wildfire.

(4) While the long-term effect of catastrophic wildfire on forests and forest systems is a matter of debate, there should be no question that catastrophic wildfire must be prevented in areas of the Federal lands where wildlands abut, or are located in close proximity to, communities, residences, and other private and public facilities on non-Federal lands.

(5) Wildfire resulting from hazardous fuels buildup in such wildland/urban interface areas threatens the destruction of communities, puts human life and property at risk, threatens community water supplies with erosion that follows wildfire, destroys wildlife habitat, and damages ambient air quality.

(6) The Secretary of Agriculture and the Secretary of the Interior must assign a high priority and undertake aggressive management to achieve the elimination of hazardous fuel buildup and reduction of the risk of wildfire to the wildland/urban interface areas on Federal lands. Protection of human life and property, including water supplies and ambient air quality, must be given the highest priority.

(7) The noncommodity resources, including riparian zones and wildlife habitats, in wildland/urban interface areas on Federal lands which must be protected to provide recreational opportunities, clean water, and other amenities to neighboring communities and the public suffer from a backlog of unfunded forest management projects designed to provide such protection.

(8) In a period of fiscal austerity characterized by shrinking budgets and personnel levels, Congress must provide the Secretary of Agriculture and the Secretary of the Interior with innovative tools to accomplish the required reduction in hazardous fuels buildup and undertake other forest management projects in the wildland/urban interface areas on the Federal lands at least cost.

(b) PURPOSE.—The purpose of this title is to provide new authority and innovative tools to the Secretary of Agriculture and the Secretary of the Interior to safeguard communities, lives, and property by reducing or eliminating the threat of catastrophic wildfire, and to undertake needed forest management projects, in wildland/urban interface areas on Federal lands.

Subtitle A—Management of Wildland/Urban Interface Areas

SEC. 911. IDENTIFICATION OF WILDLAND/URBAN INTERFACE AREAS.

On or before September 30 of each year, each District Manager of the Bureau of Land Management and each Forest Supervisor of the Forest Service shall identify those areas on Federal lands within the jurisdiction of the District Manager or Forest Supervisor that the District Manager or Forest Supervisor determines—

(1) meet the definition of wildland/urban interface areas; and

(2) have hazardous fuels buildups and other forest management needs that warrant the use of forest management projects as provided in section 912.

SEC. 912. CONTRACTING TO REDUCE HAZARDOUS FUELS AND UNDERTAKE FOREST MANAGEMENT PROJECTS IN WILDLAND/URBAN INTERFACE AREAS.

(a) CONTRACTING AUTHORITY.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary concerned is authorized to enter into contracts under this section for the sale of forest products in a wildland/urban interface area identified under section 911 for the purpose of reducing hazardous fuels buildups in the area.

(2) INCLUSION OF FOREST MANAGEMENT PROJECTS.—Subject to paragraph (3), the Secretary concerned may require, as a condition of any sale of forest products referred to in paragraph (1), that the purchaser of such products undertake one or more forest management projects in the wildland/urban interface area.

(3) CONDITIONS ON INCLUSION.—The Secretary concerned may include a forest management project as a condition in a contract for the sale of forest products referred to in paragraph (1) only when the Secretary determines that—

(A) the forest management project is consistent with the applicable land management plan; and

(B) the objectives of the forest management project can be accomplished most cost efficiently and effectively when the project is performed as part of the sale contract.

(b) FINANCING AND SUPPLEMENTAL FUNDING.—

(1) FOREST MANAGEMENT CREDITS.—The financing of a forest management project required as a condition of a contract for a sale authorized by subsection (a) shall be accomplished through the inclusion in the contract of a provision for amortization of the cost of the forest management project through the issuance of forest management credits to the purchaser. Such forest management credits shall offset the cost of the required forest management project against the purchaser's payment for forest products.

(2) USE OF APPROPRIATED FUNDS.—The Secretary concerned may use appropriated funds to assist the purchaser to undertake a forest management project required as a condition of a contract authorized by subsection (a) if such funds are provided from the resource function or functions that directly benefit from the performance of the project and are available from the annual appropriation for such function or functions during the fiscal year in which the sale is offered. The amount of assistance to be provided for each forest management project shall be included in the prospectus, and published in the advertisement, for the sale.

(c) DETERMINATION OF FOREST MANAGEMENT CREDITS.—Prior to the advertisement of a sale authorized by subsection (a), the Secretary concerned shall determine the amount of forest management credits to be allocated to each forest management project to be required as a condition of the sale contract. A description of the forest management project, and the amount of the forest management credits allocated to the project, shall be included in the prospectus, and published in the advertisement, for the sale.

(d) TRANSFER OF FOREST MANAGEMENT CREDITS.—The Secretary concerned may permit a purchaser that holds forest management credits earned by the purchaser as part of a sale authorized by subsection (a), but not used in connection with that sale, to transfer the forest management credits to another sale authorized by subsection (a) if—

(1) the subsequent sale is also purchased by that purchaser; and

(2) the sale parcel is located on Federal lands under that Secretary's jurisdiction.

(e) TREATMENT OF FOREST MANAGEMENT CREDITS AS MONEYS RECEIVED.—

(1) BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT LANDS.—In the case of Federal lands described in section 903(1)(A), all amounts earned by or allowed to any purchaser of a sale authorized by subsection (a) in the form of forest management credits shall be considered to be money received for purposes of title II of the Act of August 28, 1937 (50 Stat. 875; 43 U.S.C. 1181f), the first section of the Act of May 24, 1939 (53 Stat. 753; 43 U.S.C. 1181f–1), or other applicable law concerning the distribution of receipts from the sale of forest products on such lands.

(2) FOREST SYSTEM LANDS.—In the case of Federal lands described in section 903(1)(B), all amounts earned by or allowed to any purchaser of a sale authorized by subsection (a) in the form of forest management credits shall be considered to be money received for purposes of the sixth paragraph under the heading ''FOREST SERVICE'' in the Act of May 23, 1908 (35 Stat. 260; 16 U.S.C. 500), and section 13 of the Act of March 1, 1911 (36 Stat. 963; commonly known as the Weeks Act; 16 U.S.C. 500).

(f) COST CONSIDERATIONS.—Because of the strong concern for the safety of human life and property and the protection of water quality, air quality, and wildlife habitat, a sale authorized by subsection (a) shall not be precluded because the costs of the sale may exceed the revenues derived from the sale, nor shall such sales be considered in any calculations concerning the revenue effects of the forest products sales program for the Federal lands or units of the Federal lands.

(g) LIMITATION ON CREDITS.—Each Secretary concerned may utilize the authority in this section for up to $75,000,000 per fiscal year.

SEC. 913. MONITORING REQUIREMENTS.

The Secretary concerned shall monitor the preparation and offering of contracts, and the performance of forest management projects, pursuant to section 912 to determine the effectiveness of such contracts and forest management projects in achieving the purpose of this title.

SEC. 914. REPORTING REQUIREMENTS.

(a) ANNUAL REPORT.—Not later than 90 days after the end of each full fiscal year in which contracts are entered into under section 912, the Secretary concerned shall submit to the congressional committees a report, which shall provide for the Federal lands within the jurisdiction of the Secretary concerned the following:

(1) A list of the wildland/urban interface areas identified on or before September 30 of the previous fiscal year pursuant to section 911.

(2) A summary of all contracts entered into, and all forest management projects performed, pursuant to section 912 during the preceding fiscal year;

(2) If reauthorization is warranted, such recommendations as the Secretary concerned considers appropriate regarding changes in such authority to better achieve the purpose of this title.

SEC. 915. TERMINATION OF AUTHORITY.

(a) TERMINATION DATE.—The authority of the Secretary concerned to offer sales of forest products pursuant to section 912, and to require the purchasers of such products to undertake forest management projects as a condition of such sales, shall terminate at the end of the five-fiscal year beginning on the first October 1st occurring after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(b) EFFECT ON EXISTING SALES.—Any contract for a sale of forest products pursuant to section 912 entered into before the end of the period specified in subsection (a), and still in effect at the end of such period, shall remain in effect after the end of such period pursuant to the terms of the contract.

(c) EFFECT ON EXISTING FOREST MANAGEMENT CREDITS.—If any forest management credits from a sale of forest products pursuant to section 912 are not used before the end of the period specified in subsection (a), and no law providing authority to offer sales pursuant to section 912 after such period is enacted by Congress, such credits may be used after such period in any sale of forest products that is authorized by another law, is purchased by the purchaser of the sale in which the credits were earned, and is conducted by the Secretary concerned who had jurisdiction over the sale in which the credits were earned.

(A) COMMISSION.—The term ''Commission'' means the Guadalupe-Hidalgo Treaty Land Claims Commission established under subsection (b).

(B) TREATY OF GUADALUPE-HIDALGO.—The term ''Treaty of Guadalupe-Hidalgo'' means the Treaty of Peace, Friendship, Limits, and Settlement (Treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo), between the United States and the Republic of Mexico, signed February 2, 1848 (TS 207; 9 Bevans 791).

(C) ELIGIBLE DESCENDANT.—The term ''eligible descendant'' means a descendant of a person who—

(i) was a Mexican citizen before the Treaty of Guadalupe-Hidalgo;

(D) COMMUNITY LAND GRANT.—The term ''community land grant'' means a village, town, settlement, or pueblo consisting of land held in common (accompanied by lesser private allotments) by three or more families under a grant from the King of Spain (or his representative) before the effective date of the Treaty of Cordova, August 24, 1821, or from the authorities of the Republic of Mexico before May 30, 1848, in what became the State of New Mexico, regardless of the original character of the grant.

(E) RECONSTITUTED.—The term ''reconstituted'', with regard to a valid community land grant, means restoration to full status as a municipality with rights properly belonging to a municipality under State law and the right of local self-government.

(2) FINDINGS.—Congress finds the following:

(A) New Mexico has a unique history regarding the acquisition of ownership of land as a result of the substantial number of Spanish and Mexican land grants that were an integral part of the colonization and growth of New Mexico before the United States acquired the area in the Treaty of Guadalupe-Hidalgo.

(B) Various provisions of the Treaty of Guadalupe-Hidalgo have not yet been fully implemented in the spirit of Article VI, section 2, of the Constitution of the United States.

(3) ELEMENTS OF PETITION.—A petition under paragraph (1) shall be made under oath and shall contain the following:

(A) The names and addresses of the eligible descendants who are petitioners.

(B) The fact that the land involved in the petition was a community land grant at the time of the effective date of the Guadalupe-Hidalgo Treaty.

The attendance of witnesses and the production of evidence may be required from any place within the United States at any designated place of hearing within the State of New Mexico.

(B) FAILURE TO OBEY A SUBPOENA.—If a person refuses to obey a subpoena issued under this paragraph, the Commission may apply to a United States district court for an order requiring that person to appear before the Commission to give testimony, produce evidence, or both, relating to the matter under investigation. Any failure to obey the order of the court may be punished by the court as civil contempt.

(C) SERVICE OF SUBPOENAS.—The subpoenas of the Commission shall be served in the manner provided for subpoenas issued by a United States district court under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure for the United States district courts.

(D) SERVICE OF PROCESS.—All process of any court to which application is to be made under subparagraph (B) may be served in the judicial district in which the person required to be served resides or may be found.

(6) DECISION.—On the basis of the facts contained in a petition submitted under paragraph (1), and the hearing held with regard to the petition, the Commission shall determine the validity of the community land grant described in the petition. The decision shall include a recommendation of the Commission regarding whether the community land grant should be reconstituted and its lands restored.

(7) PROTECTION OF NON-FEDERAL PROPERTY.—The decision of the Commission regarding the validity of a petition submitted under paragraph (1) shall not affect the ownership, title, or rights of owners of any non-Federal lands covered by the petition. Any recommendation of the Commission under paragraph (6) regarding whether a community land grant should be reconstituted and its lands restored may not address non-Federal lands. In the case of a valid petition covering lands held in non-Federal ownership, the Commission shall modify the recommendation under paragraph (6) to recommend the substitution of comparable Federal lands in the State of New Mexico for the lands held in non-Federal ownership.

SEC. 1004. OTAY MOUNTAIN WILDERNESS.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds and declares the following:

(1) The public lands within the Otay Mountain region of California are one of the last remaining pristine locations in western San Diego County, California.

(2) This rugged mountain adjacent to the United States-Mexico border is internationally known for its diversity of unique and sensitive plants.

(3) This area plays a critical role in San Diego's multi-species conservation plan, a national model made for maintaining biodiversity.

(4) Due to its proximity to the international border, this area is the focus of important law enforcement and border interdiction efforts necessary to curtail illegal immigration and protect the area's wilderness values.

(5) The illegal immigration traffic, combined with the rugged topography, also presents unique fire management challenges for protecting lives and resources.

(b) DESIGNATION.—In furtherance of the purposes of the Wilderness Act (16 U.S.C. 1131 et seq.), certain public lands in the California Desert District of the Bureau of Land Management, California, comprising approximately 18,500 acres as generally depicted on a map entitled ''Otay Mountain Wilderness'' and dated May 7, 1998, are hereby designated as wilderness and therefore as a component of the National Wilderness Preservation System, which shall be known as the Otay Mountain Wilderness.

(c) MAP AND LEGAL DESCRIPTION.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—As soon as practicable after the date of enactment of this Act, a map and a legal description for the Wilderness Area shall be filed by the Secretary with the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources of the Senate and the Committee on Resources of the House of Representatives. Such map and legal description shall have the same force and effect as if included in this Act, except that the Secretary, as appropriate, may correct clerical and typographical errors in such legal description and map. Such map and legal description for the Wilderness Area shall be on file and available for public inspection in the offices of the Director and California State Director, Bureau of Land Management, Department of the Interior.

(2) UNITED STATES-MEXICO BORDER.—In carrying out this subsection, the Secretary shall ensure that the southern boundary of the Wilderness Area is 100 feet north of the trail depicted on the map referred to in paragraph (1) and is at least 100 feet from the United States-Mexico international border.

(e) WILDERNESS REVIEW.—The Congress hereby finds and directs that all the public lands not designated wilderness within the boundaries of the Southern Otay Mountain Wilderness Study Area (CA–060–029) and the Western Otay Mountain Wilderness Study Area (CA–060–028) managed by the Bureau of Land Management and reported to the Congress in 1991, have been adequately studied for wilderness designation pursuant to section 603 of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976 (43 U.S.C. 1782), and are no longer subject to the requirements contained in section 603(c) of that Act pertaining to the management of wilderness study areas in a manner that does not impair the suitability of such areas for preservation as wilderness.

(f) ADMINISTRATION OF WILDERNESS AREA.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Subject to valid existing rights and to paragraph (2), the Wilderness Area shall be administered by the Secretary in accordance with the provisions of the Wilderness Act (16 U.S.C. 1131 et seq.), except that—

(A) any reference in such provisions to the effective date of the Wilderness Act is deemed to be a reference to the effective date of this Act; and

(B) any reference in such provisions to the Secretary of Agriculture is deemed to be a reference to the Secretary of the Interior.

(2) BORDER ENFORCEMENT, DRUG INTERDICTION, AND WILDLAND FIRE PROTECTION.—Because of the proximity of the Wilderness Area to the United States-Mexico international border, drug interdiction, border operations, and wildland fire management operations are common management actions throughout the area encompassing the Wilderness Area. This section recognizes the need to continue such management actions so long as such management actions are conducted in accordance with the Wilderness Act (16 U.S.C. 1131 et seq.) and are subject to such conditions as the Secretary considers appropriate.

(g) FURTHER ACQUISITIONS.—Any lands within the boundaries of the Wilderness Area that are acquired by the United States after the date of enactment of this Act shall become part of the Wilderness Area and shall be managed in accordance with all the provisions of this section and other laws applicable to such a wilderness.

(h) NO BUFFER ZONES.—The Congress does not intend for the designation of the Wilderness Area by this section to lead to the creation of protective perimeters or buffer zones around the Wilderness Area. The fact that nonwilderness activities or uses can be seen or heard from areas within the Wilderness Area shall not, of itself, preclude such activities or uses up to the boundary of the Wilderness Area.

(i) DEFINITIONS.—As used in this section:

(1) PUBLIC LANDS.—The term ''public lands'' has the same meaning as that term has in section 103(e) of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976.

(2) SECRETARY.—The term ''Secretary'' means the Secretary of the Interior.

(3) WILDERNESS AREA.—The term ''Wilderness Area'' means the Otay Mountain Wilderness designated by subsection (b).

SEC. 1005. ACQUISITION AND MANAGEMENT OF WILCOX RANCH, UTAH, FOR WILDLIFE HABITAT.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds the following:

(1) The lands within the Wilcox Ranch in eastern Utah are prime habitat for wild turkeys, eagles, hawks, bears, cougars, elk, deer, bighorn sheep, and many other important species, and Range Creek within the Wilcox Ranch could become a blue ribbon trout stream.

(2) These lands also contain a great deal of undisturbed cultural and archeological resources, including ancient pottery, arrowheads, and rock homes constructed centuries ago.

(3) These lands, while comprising only approximately 3,800 acres, control access to over 75,000 acres of Federal lands under the jurisdiction of the Bureau of Land Management.

(4) Acquisition of the Wilcox Ranch would benefit the people of the United States by preserving and enhancing important wildlife habitat, ensuring access to lands of the Bureau of Land Management, and protecting priceless archeological and cultural resources.

(5) These lands, if acquired by the United States, can be managed by the Utah Division of Wildlife Resources at no additional expense to the Federal Government.

(b) ACQUISITION OF LANDS.—As soon as practicable, after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of the Interior shall acquire, through purchase, the Wilcox Ranch located in Emery County, in eastern Utah.

(c) FUNDS FOR PURCHASE.—The Secretary of the Interior is authorized to use not more than $5,000,000 from the land and water conservation fund established under section 2 of the Land and Water Conservation Fund Act of 1965 (16 U.S.C. 460l–5) for the purchase of the Wilcox Ranch under subsection (b).

SEC. 1006. ACQUISITION OF MINERAL AND GEOTHERMAL INTERESTS WITHIN MOUNT ST. HELENS NATIONAL VOLCANIC MONUMENT.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds the following:

(1) The Act entitled ''An Act to designate the Mount St. Helens National Volcanic Monument in the State of Washington, and for other purposes'', approved August 26, 1982 (96 Stat. 301; 16 U.S.C. 431 note), required the United States to acquire all land and interests in land in the Mount St. Helens National Volcanic Monument.

(2) The Act directed the Secretary of Agriculture to acquire the surface interests and the mineral and geothermal interests by separate exchanges and expressed the sense of Congress that the exchanges be completed by November 24, 1982, and August 26, 1983, respectively.

(3) The surface interests exchange was consummated timely, but the exchange of all mineral and geothermal interests has not yet been completed a decade and a half after the enactment of the Act.

(b) PURPOSE.—The purpose of this section is to provide for the expeditious completion of the previously mandated Federal acquisition of certain private mineral and geothermal interests within the Mount St. Helens National Volcanic Monument.

(c) ACQUISITION.—Section 3 of the Act entitled ''An Act to designate the Mount St. Helens National Volcanic Monument in the State of Washington, and for other purposes'', approved August 26, 1982 (Public Law 97–243; 96 Stat. 302; 16 U.S.C. 431 note), is amended—

(1) in subsection (a), by striking ''and except that the Secretary may acquire mineral and geothermal interests only by exchange. It is the sense of the Congress that in the case of mineral and geothermal interests such exchanges should be completed within one year after the date of enactment of the Act''; and

(2) by adding at the end the following new subsections:

''(g) EXPEDITIOUS COMPLETION OF EXCHANGES FOR MINERAL AND GEOTHERMAL INTERESTS.—

''(1) DEFINITION OF HOLDER.—In this subsection, the term 'holder' means a company referred to in subsection (c) or its assigns or successors.

''(A) ISSUANCE.—In exchange for all mineral and geothermal interests acquired by the Secretary of the Interior from each holder under paragraph (2), the Secretary of the Interior shall issue to each such holder monetary credits with a value of $2,100,000 that may be used for the payment of—

''(i) not more than 50 percent of the bonus or other payments made by successful bidders in any sales of mineral, oil, gas, or geothermal leases under the Mineral Leasing Act (30 U.S.C. 181 et seq.), the Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act (43 U.S.C. 1331 et seq.), or the Geothermal Steam Act of 1970 (30 U.S.C. 1001 et seq.) in the contiguous 48 States;

''(B) VALUE OF CREDITS.—The total credits of $4,200,000 in value issued under subparagraph (A) are deemed to equal the fair market value of all mineral and geothermal interests to be conveyed by exchange under paragraph (2).

''(4) ACCEPTANCE OF CREDITS.—The Secretary of the Interior shall accept credits issued under paragraph (3)(A) in the same manner as cash for the payments described in such paragraph. The use of the credits shall be subject to the laws (including regulations) governing such payments, to the extent the laws are consistent with this subsection.

''(5) TREATMENT OF CREDITS FOR DISTRIBUTION TO STATES.—All amounts in the form of credits accepted by the Secretary of the Interior under paragraph (4) for the payments described in paragraph (3)(A) shall be considered to be money received for the purpose of section 35 of the Mineral Leasing Act (30 U.S.C. 191) and section 20 of the Geothermal Steam Act of 1970 (30 U.S.C. 1019).

''(6) EXCHANGE ACCOUNT.—

''(A) ESTABLISHMENT.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, not later than 30 days after the completion of the exchange with a holder required by paragraph (2), the Secretary of the Interior shall establish an exchange account for that holder for the monetary credits issued to that holder under paragraph (3). The account for a holder shall be established with the Minerals Management Service of the Department of the Interior and have an initial balance of credits equal to $2,100,000.

''(B) USE OF CREDITS.—The credits in a holder's account shall be available to the holder for the purposes specified in paragraph (3)(A). ''(ii) USE OF TRANSFERRED CREDITS.—Credits transferred or sold under clause (i) may be used in accordance with this subsection only by a person that is qualified to bid on, or that holds, a mineral, oil, or gas lease under the Mineral Leasing Act (30 U.S.C. 181 et seq.), the Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act (43 U.S.C. 1331 et seq.), or the Geothermal Steam Act of 1970 (30 U.S.C. 1001 et seq.).

The transfer or sale of any credit shall not be considered valid until the Secretary of the Interior has received the notification required under this clause.

''(D) TIME LIMIT ON USE OF CREDITS.—On the date that is 5 years after the date on which an account is created under subparagraph (A) for a holder, the Secretary of the Interior shall terminate that holder's account. Any credits that originated in the terminated account and have not been used as of the termination date, including any credits transferred or sold under subparagraph (C), shall become unusable.

''(7) TITLE TO INTERESTS.—On the date of the establishment of an exchange account for a holder under paragraph (6)(A), title to any mineral and geothermal interests that are held by the holder and are to be acquired by the Secretary of the Interior under paragraph (2) shall transfer to the United States.

TITLE XII—DUTCH JOHN FEDERAL PROPERTY DISPOSITION AND ASSISTANCE

SEC. 1201. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the ''Dutch John Federal Property Disposition and Assistance Act of 1998''.

SEC. 1202. FINDINGS AND PURPOSES.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds that—

(1)(A) Dutch John, Utah, was founded by the Secretary of the Interior in 1958 on Bureau of Reclamation land as a community to house personnel, administrative offices, and equipment for project construction and operation of the Flaming Gorge Dam and Reservoir as authorized by the Act of April 11, 1956 (70 Stat. 105, chapter 203; 43 U.S.C. 620 et seq.); and

(B) permanent structures (including houses, administrative offices, equipment storage and maintenance buildings, and other public buildings and facilities) were constructed and continue to be owned and maintained by the Secretary of the Interior;

(2)(A) Bureau of Reclamation land surrounding the Flaming Gorge Reservoir (including the Dutch John community) was included within the boundaries of the Flaming Gorge National Recreation Area in 1968 under Public Law 90–540 (16 U.S.C. 460v et seq.);

(B) Public Law 90–540 assigned responsibility for administration, protection, and development of the Flaming Gorge National Recreation Area to the Secretary of Agriculture and provided that lands and waters needed or used for the Colorado River Storage Project would continue to be administered by the Secretary of the Interior; and

(C) most structures within the Dutch John community (including the schools and public buildings within the community) occupy lands administered by the Secretary of Agriculture;

(3)(A) the Secretary of Agriculture and the Secretary of the Interior are unnecessarily burdened with the cost of continuing to provide basic services and facilities and building maintenance and with the administrative costs of operating the Dutch John community; and

(B) certain structures and lands are no longer essential to management of the Colorado River Storage Project or to management of the Flaming Gorge National Recreation Area;

(4)(A) residents of the community are interested in purchasing the homes they currently rent from the Secretary of the Interior and the land on which the homes are located;

(B) Daggett County, Utah, is interested in reducing the financial burden the County experiences in providing local government support services to a community that produces little direct tax revenue because of Federal ownership; and

(C) a withdrawal of the role of the Federal Government in providing basic direct community services to Dutch John would require local government to provide the services at a substantial cost;

(5)(A) residents of the Dutch John community are interested in self-government of the community; and

(B) with growing demands for additional commercial recreation services for visitors to the Flaming Gorge National Recreation Area and Ashley National Forest, there are opportunities for private economic development, but few private lands are available for the services; and

(6) the privatization and disposal to local government of certain lands in and surrounding Dutch John would be in the public interest.

(b) PURPOSES.—The purposes of this title are—

(1) to privatize certain lands in and surrounding Dutch John, Utah;

(2) to transfer jurisdiction of certain Federal property between the Secretary of Agriculture and the Secretary of the Interior;

(3) to improve the Flaming Gorge National Recreation Area;

(4) to dispose of certain residential units, public buildings, and facilities;

(5) to provide interim financial assistance to local government to defray the cost of providing basic governmental services;

(6) to achieve efficiencies in operation of the Flaming Gorge Dam and Reservoir and the Flaming Gorge National Recreation Area;

(7) to reduce long-term Federal outlays; and

(8) to serve the interests of the residents of Dutch John and Daggett County, Utah, and the general public.

This subtitle may be cited as the ''Glacier Bay National Park Boundary Adjustment Act of 1998''.

SEC. 1402. LAND EXCHANGE AND WILDERNESS DESIGNATION.

(a) IN GENERAL.—(1) Subject to conditions set forth in subsection (c), if the State of Alaska, in a manner consistent with this subtitle, offers to transfer to the United States the lands identified in paragraph (4) in exchange for the lands identified in paragraph (3), selected from the area described in section 1403(b)(1), the Secretary of the Interior (in this subtitle referred to as the ''Secretary'') shall complete such exchange no later than 6 months after the issuance of a license to Gustavus Electric Company by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (in this subtitle referred to as ''FERC''), in accordance with this subtitle. This land exchange shall be subject to the laws applicable to exchanges involving lands managed by the Secretary as part of the National Park System in Alaska and the appropriate process for the exchange of State lands required by State law.

(2) The lands to be conveyed to the United States by the State of Alaska shall be determined by mutual agreement of the Secretary and the State of Alaska. Lands that will be considered for conveyance to the United States pursuant to the process required by State law are lands owned by the State of Alaska in the Long Lake area within Wrangell-St. Elias National Park and Preserve, or other lands owned by the State of Alaska.

(3) If the Secretary and the State of Alaska have not agreed on which lands the State of Alaska will convey by a date not later than 6 months after a license is issued pursuant to this subtitle, the United States shall accept, within 1 year after a license is issued, title to land having a sufficiently equal value to satisfy State and Federal law, subject to clear title and valid existing rights, and absence of environmental contamination, and as provided by the laws applicable to exchanges involving lands managed by the Secretary as part of the National Park System in Alaska and the appropriate process for the exchange of State lands required by State law. Such land shall be accepted by the United States, subject to the other provisions of this subtitle, from among the following State lands in the priority listed:

(4) The lands to be conveyed to the State of Alaska by the United States under paragraph (1) are lands to be designated by the Secretary and the State of Alaska, consistent with sound land management principles, based on those lands determined by FERC with the concurrence of the Secretary and the State of Alaska, in accordance with section 1403(b), to be the minimum amount of land necessary for the construction and operation of a hydroelectric project.

(5) The time periods set forth for the completion of the land exchanges described in this subtitle may be extended as necessary by the Secretary should the processes of State law or Federal law delay completion of an exchange.

(6) For purposes of this subtitle, the term ''land'' means lands, waters, and interests therein.

(b) WILDERNESS.—(1) To ensure that this transaction maintains, within the National Wilderness Preservation System, approximately the same amount of area of designated wilderness as currently exists, the following lands in Alaska shall be designated as wilderness in the priority listed, upon consummation of the land exchange authorized by this subtitle and shall be administered according to the laws governing national wilderness areas in Alaska:

(c) CONDITIONS.—Any exchange of lands under this subtitle may occur only if—

(1) following the submission of a complete license application, FERC has conducted economic and environmental analyses under the Federal Power Act (16 U.S.C. 791–828) (notwithstanding provisions of that Act and the Federal regulations that otherwise exempt this project from economic analyses), the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (42 U.S.C. 4321–4370), and the Fish and Wildlife Coordination Act (16 U.S.C. 661–666), that conclude, with the concurrence of the Secretary of the Interior with respect to subparagraphs (A) and (B), that the construction and operation of a hydroelectric power project on the lands described in section 1403(b)—

(A) will not adversely impact the purposes and values of Glacier Bay National Park and Preserve (as constituted after the consummation of the land exchange authorized by this section);

(B) will comply with the requirements of the National Historic Preservation Act (16 U.S.C. 470–470w); and

(C) can be accomplished in an economically feasible manner;

(2) FERC held at least one public meeting in Gustavus, Alaska, allowing the citizens of Gustavus to express their views on the proposed project;

(3) FERC has determined, with the concurrence of the Secretary and the State of Alaska, the minimum amount of land necessary to construct and operate this hydroelectric power project; and

(4) Gustavus Electric Company has been granted a license by FERC that requires Gustavus Electric Company to submit an acceptable financing plan to FERC before project construction may commence, and the FERC has approved such plan.

SEC. 1403. ROLE OF FERC.

(2) FERC is authorized to accept and consider an application filed by Gustavus Electric Company for the construction and operation of a hydropower plant to be located on lands within the area described in subsection (b), notwithstanding section 3(2) of the Federal Power Act (16 U.S.C. 796(2)). Such application must be submitted within 3 years after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(3) FERC will retain jurisdiction over any hydropower project constructed on this site.

(b) ANALYSES.—(1) The lands referred to in subsection (a) of this section are lands in the State of Alaska described as follows:

(2) Additional lands and acreage will be included as needed in the study area described in paragraph (1) to account for accretion to these lands from natural forces.

(3) With the concurrence of the Secretary and the State of Alaska, the FERC shall determine the minimum amount of lands necessary for construction and operation of such project.

(4) The National Park Service shall participate as a joint lead agency in the development of any environmental document under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 in the licensing of such project. Such environmental document shall consider both the impacts resulting from licensing and any land exchange necessary to authorize such project.

(c) ISSUANCE OF LICENSE.—(1) A condition of the license to construct and operate any portion of the hydroelectric power project shall be FERC's approval, prior to any commencement of construction, of a finance plan submitted by Gustavus Electric Company.

(2) The National Park Service, as the existing supervisor of potential project lands ultimately to be deleted from the Federal reservation in accordance with this subtitle, waives its right to impose mandatory conditions on such project lands pursuant to section 4(e) of the Federal Power Act (16 U.S.C. 797(e)).

(3) FERC shall not license or relicense the project, or amend the project license unless it determines, with the Secretary's concurrence, that the project will not adversely impact the purposes and values of Glacier Bay National Park and Preserve (as constituted after the consummation of the land exchange authorized by this subtitle). Additionally, a condition of the license, or any succeeding license, to construct and operate any portion of the hydroelectric power project shall require the licensee to mitigate any adverse effects of the project on the purposes and values of Glacier Bay National Park and Preserve identified by the Secretary after the initial licensing.

The Secretary shall impose conditions in the permit as needed to protect the purposes and values of Glacier Bay National Park and Preserve.

(b) PARK SYSTEM.—The lands acquired from the State of Alaska under this subtitle shall be added to and administered as part of the National Park System, subject to valid existing rights. Upon completion of the exchange of lands under this subtitle, the Secretary shall adjust, as necessary, the boundaries of the affected National Park System units to include the lands acquired from the State of Alaska; and adjust the boundary of Glacier Bay National Park and Preserve to exclude the lands transferred to the State of Alaska under this subtitle. Any such adjustment to the boundaries of National Park System units shall not be considered in applying any acreage limitations under section 103(b) of Public Law 96–487.

(c) WILDERNESS AREA BOUNDARIES.—The Secretary shall make any necessary modifications or adjustments of boundaries of wilderness areas as a result of the additions and deletions caused by the land exchange referenced in section 1402. SEC. 106. BANDELIER NATIONAL MONUMENT, NEW MEXICO.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds the following:

(1) Bandelier National Monument (in this section referred to as the ''Monument'') was established by Presidential proclamation on February 11, 1916, to preserve the archaeological resources of a ''vanished people, with as much land as may be necessary for the proper protection thereof. . .'' (Presidential Proclamation No. 1322; 39 Stat. 1764).

(2) At various times since the establishment of the Monument, the Congress and the President have adjusted the boundaries and purpose of the Monument to further preservation of archaeological and natural resources within the Monument:

(A) On February 25, 1932, the Otowi Section of the Santa Fe National Forest (some 4,699 acres of land) was transferred to the Monument from the Santa Fe National Forest (Presidential Proclamation No. 1991; 47 Stat. 2503).

(B) On December 9, 1959, 3,600 acres of Frijoles Mesa were transferred to the National Park Service from the Atomic Energy Commission, and such lands were subsequently added to the Monument on January 9, 1961, because of ''pueblo-type archeological ruins germane to those in the monument area'' (Presidential Proclamation No. 3388; 75 Stat. 1014).

(C) On May 27, 1963, Upper Canyon, consisting of 2,882 acres of land previously administered by the Atomic Energy Commission, was added to the Monument to preserve the lands ''unusual scenic character together with geologic and topographic features, the preservation of which would implement the purposes of such monument (Presidential Proclamation No. 3539; 77 Stat. 1006).

(D) In 1976, concerned about upstream land management activities that could result in flooding and erosion in the Monument, Congress enacted Public Law 94–578 (90 Stat. 2732, 2736) to include the headwaters of the Rito de los Frijoles and the Cañada de Cochiti Grant (a total of 7,310 acres) within the boundaries of the Monument.

(E) In 1976, Congress enacted Public Law 94–567 (90 Stat. 2692), which created the Bandelier Wilderness, a 23,267 acres area that covers over 70 percent of the Monument.

(3) The Monument still has potential threats from flooding, erosion, and water quality deterioration because of the mixed ownership of the upper watersheds, along its western border, particularly in Alamo Canyon.

(b) PURPOSE.—The purpose of this section is to modify the boundaries of the Monument to allow for acquisition and enhanced protection of the lands within the Monument's upper watershed.

(c) BOUNDARY MODIFICATION.—Effective on the date of enactment of this Act, the boundaries of the Monument are hereby modified to include approximately 935 acres of land, comprised of the Elk Meadows subdivision, the Gardner parcel, the Clark parcel, and the Baca Land & Cattle Co. lands within the Upper Alamo watershed, as depicted on the National Park Service map entitled ''Proposed Boundary Expansion Map Bandelier National Monument'' dated July 1997. Such map shall be on file and available for public inspection in the offices of the Director of the National Park Service, Department of the Interior.

(d) ACQUISITION AUTHORITY—

(1) ACQUISITION METHODS.—Subject to paragraphs (2), (3), and (4), the Secretary of the Interior may acquire lands and interests therein within the boundaries of the area added to the Monument by this section by donation, purchase with donated or appropriated funds, transfer with another Federal agency, or exchange.

(2) CONSENT OF OWNER REQUIRED.—Lands or interests therein may be acquired under paragraph (1) only with the consent of the owner of the lands.

(3) STATE AND LOCAL LANDS.—Lands or interests therein owned by the State of New Mexico, or a political subdivision thereof, may be acquired under paragraph (1) only by donation or exchange.

(4) ACQUISITION OF LESS THAN FEE INTERESTS IN LAND.—The Secretary may acquire less than fee interests in land only if the Secretary determines that such less than fee acquisition will adequately protect the Monument from flooding, erosion, and degradation of its drainage waters.

(e) ADMINISTRATION.—The Secretary of the Interior, acting through the Director of the National Park Service, shall manage the Monument, including lands added to the Monument by this section, in accordance with this section, the provisions of law generally applicable to units of National Park System, including the Act of August 25, 1916 (16 U.S.C. 1 et seq.; commonly known as the National Park Service Organic Act), and such specific laws as heretofore have been enacted regarding the Monument.

(f) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There is authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry out the purpose of this section.

Subtitle C—Conveyance of National Forest Lands for Public School Purposes

SEC. 231. AUTHORIZATION OF USE OF NATIONAL FOREST LANDS FOR PUBLIC SCHOOL PURPOSES.

(a) TRANSFERS.—The Secretary of Agriculture may, upon a finding that the transfer of certain National Forest lands for local public school purposes would serve the public interest, authorize the transfer of up to 40 acres of National Forest lands to a local governmental entity for public school purposes. The Secretary shall make such transfers using the least amount of land required for the efficient operation of the project involved.

SEC. 245. UTAH SCHOOLS AND LANDS EXCHANGE.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds the following:

(1) The State of Utah owns approximately 176,600 acres of land, as well as approximately 24,165 acres of mineral interests, administered by the Utah School and Institutional Trust Lands Administration, within the exterior boundaries of the Grand Staircase-Escalante National Monument, established by Presidential proclamation on September 18, 1996, pursuant to section 2 of the Antiquities Act of 1906 (16 U.S.C. 431). The State of Utah also owns approximately 200,000 acres of land, and 76,000 acres of mineral interests, administered by the Utah School and Institutional Trust Lands Administration, within the exterior boundaries of several units of the National Park System and the National Forest System, and within certain Indian reservations in Utah. These lands were granted by Congress to the State of Utah pursuant to the Utah Enabling Act, chap. 138, 28 Stat. 107 (1894), to be held in trust for the benefit of the State's public school system and other public institutions.

(2) Many of the State school trust lands within the monument may contain significant economic quantities of mineral resources, including coal, oil, and gas, tar sands, coalbed methane, titanium, uranium, and other energy and metalliferous minerals. Certain State school trust lands within the Monument, like the Federal lands comprising the Monument, have substantial noneconomic scientific, historic, cultural, scenic, recreational, and natural resources, including ancient Native American archaeological sites and rare plant and animal communities.

(3) Development of surface and mineral resources on State school trust lands within the monument could be incompatible with the preservation of these scientific and historic resources for which the monument was established. Federal acquisition of State school trust lands within the monument would eliminate this potential incompatibility, and would enhance management of the Grand Staircase-Escalante National Monument.

(4) The United States owns lands and interest in lands outside of the monument that can be transferred to the State of Utah in exchange for the monument inholdings without jeopardizing Federal management objectives or needs.

(5) In 1993, Congress passed and the President signed Public Law 103–93, which contained a process for exchanging State of Utah school trust inholdings in the National Park System, the National Forest System, and certain Indian reservations in Utah. Among other things, it identified various Federal lands and interests in land that were available to exchange for these State inholdings.

(6) Although Public Law 103–93 offered the hope of a prompt, orderly exchange of State inholdings for Federal lands elsewhere, implementation of the legislation has been very slow. Completion of this process is realistically estimated to be many years away, at great expense to both the State and the United States in the form of expert witnesses, lawyers, appraisers, and other litigation costs.

(7) The State also owns approximately 2,560 acres of land in or near the Alton coal field which has been declared an area unsuitable for coal mining under the terms of the Surface Mining Control and Reclamation Act. This land is also administered by the Utah School and Institutional Trust Lands Administration, but its use is limited given this declaration.

(8) The large presence of State school trust land inholdings in the monument, national parks, national forests, and Indian reservations make land and resource management in these areas difficult, costly, and controversial for both the State of Utah and the United States.

(9) It is in the public interest to reach agreement on exchange of inholdings, on terms fair to both the State and the United States. Agreement saves much time and delay in meeting the expectations of the State school and institutional trusts, in simplifying management of Federal and Indian lands and resources, and in avoiding expensive, protracted litigation under Public Law 103–93.

(10) The State of Utah and the United States have reached an agreement under which the State would exchange of all its State school trust lands within the monument, and specified inholdings in national parks, forests, and Indian reservations that are subject to Public Law 103–93, for various Federal lands and interests in lands located outside the monument, including Federal lands and interests identified as available for exchange in Public Law 103–93 and additional Federal lands and interests in lands.

(11) The State school trust lands to be conveyed to the Federal Government include properties within units of the National Park System, the National Forest System, and the Grand Staircase-Escalante National Monument. The Federal assets made available for exchange with the State were selected with a great sensitivity to environmental concerns and a belief and expectation by both parties that Federal assets to be conveyed to the State would be unlikely to trigger significant environmental controversy.

(12) The parties agreed at the outset of negotiations to avoid identifying Federal assets for conveyance to the State where any of the following was known to exist or likely to be an issue as a result of foreseeable future uses of the land: significant wildlife resources, endangered species habitat, significant archaeological resources, areas of critical environmental concern, coal resources requiring surface mining to extract the mineral deposits, wilderness study areas, significant recreational areas, or any other lands known to raise significant environmental concerns of any kind.

(13) The parties further agreed that the use of any mineral interests obtained by the State of Utah where the Federal Government retains surface and other interest, will not conflict with established Federal land and environmental management objectives, and shall be fully subject to all environmental regulations applicable to development of non-Federal mineral interest on Federal lands.

(14) Because the inholdings to be acquired by the Federal Government include properties within the boundaries of some of the most renowned conservation land units in the United States, and because a mission of the Utah School and Institutional Trust Lands Administration is to produce economic benefits for Utah's public schools and other beneficiary institutions, the exchange of lands called for in this agreement will resolve many longstanding environmental conflicts and further the interest of the State trust lands, the school children of Utah, and these conservation resources.

(15) Under this Agreement taken as a whole, the State interests to be conveyed to the United States by the State of Utah, and the Federal interests and payments to be conveyed to the State of Utah by the United States, are approximately equal in value.

(16) The purpose of this section is to enact into law and direct prompt implementation of this historic agreement.

(b) RATIFICATION OF AGREED EXCHANGE BETWEEN THE STATE OF UTAH AND THE DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR.—

(1) AGREEMENT.—The State of Utah and the Department of the Interior have agreed to exchange certain Federal lands, Federal mineral interests, and payment of money for lands and mineral interests managed by the Utah School and Institutional Trust Lands Administration, lands and mineral interests of approximately equal value inheld within the Grand Staircase-Escalante National Monument the Goshute and Navajo Indian Reservations, units of the National Park System, the National Forest System, and the Alton coal fields.

(2) RATIFICATION.—All terms, conditions, procedures, covenants, reservations, and other provisions set forth in the document entitled ''Agreement to Exchange Utah

School Trust Lands Between the State of Utah and the United States of America'' (in this section referred to as the ''Agreement'') are hereby incorporated in this section, are ratified and confirmed, and set forth the obligations and commitments of the United States, the State of Utah, and Utah School and Institutional Trust Lands Administration, as a matter of Federal law.

(d) COSTS.—The United States and the State of Utah shall each bear its own respective costs incurred in the implementation of this section.

(e) REPEAL OF PUBLIC LAW 103–93 AND PUBLIC LAW 104–211.—The provisions of Public Law 103–93 (107 Stat. 995), other than section 7(b)(1), section 7(b)(3), and section 10(b) thereof, are hereby repealed. Public Law 104–211 (110 Stat. 3013) is hereby repealed.

(f) CASH PAYMENT PREVIOUSLY AUTHORIZED.—As previously authorized and made available by section 7(b)(1) and (b)(3) of Public Law 103–93, upon completion of all conveyances described in the Agreement, the United States shall pay $50,000,000 to the State of Utah from funds not otherwise appropriated from the Treasury.

(g) SCHEDULE FOR CONVEYANCES.—All conveyances under sections 2 and 3 of the Agreement shall be completed within 70 days after the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 401. BATTLE OF MIDWAY NATIONAL MEMORIAL STUDY.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress makes the following findings:

(1) September 2, 1998, marked the 53d anniversary of the United States victory over Japan in World War II.

(2) The Battle of Midway proved to be the turning point in the war in the Pacific, as United States Navy forces inflicted such severe losses on the Imperial Japanese Navy during the battle that the Imperial Japanese Navy never again took the offensive against United States or allied forces.

(3) During the Battle of Midway on June 4, 1942, an outnumbered force of the United States Navy, consisting of 29 ships and other units of the Armed Forces under the command of Admiral Nimitz and Admiral Spruance, outmaneuvered and out-fought 350 ships of the Imperial Japanese Navy.

(4) It is in the public interest to study whether Midway Atoll should be established as a national memorial to the Battle of Midway to express the enduring gratitude of the American people for victory in the battle and to inspire future generations of Americans with the heroism and sacrifice of the members of the Armed Forces who achieved that victory.

(5) The historic structures on Midway Atoll should be protected and maintained.

(b) PURPOSE.—The purpose of this section shall be to require a study of the feasibility and suitability of designating the Midway Atoll as a national memorial to the Battle of Midway within the boundaries of the Midway Atoll National Wildlife Refuge. The study of the Midway Atoll and its environs shall include, but not be limited to, identification of interpretive opportunities for the educational and inspirational benefit of present and future generations, and of the unique and significant circumstances involving the defense of the island by the United States in World War II and the Battle of Midway.

(c) STUDY OF THE ESTABLISHMENT OF MIDWAY ATOLL AS A NATIONAL MEMORIAL TO THE BATTLE OF MIDWAY.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 6 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary of the Interior, acting through the Director of the United States Fish and Wildlife Service, shall carry out a study of the suitability and feasibility of establishing Midway Atoll as a national memorial to the Battle of Midway. The Secretary shall carry out the study in consultation with the Director of the National Park Service, the International Midway Memorial Foundation, Inc. (referred to in this section as the ''Foundation''), the Veterans of Foreign Wars, the Battle of Coral Sea Association, the American Legion, or other appropriate veterans group, respectively, and the Midway Phoenix Corporation.

(2) CONSIDERATIONS.—In studying the establishment of Midway Atoll as a national memorial to the Battle of Midway under paragraph (1), the Secretary shall address the following:

(A) The appropriate Federal agency to manage such a memorial, and whether and under what conditions to lease or otherwise allow the Foundation or another appropriate entity to administer, maintain, and fully utilize for use as a national memorial to the Battle of Midway the lands (including any equipment, facilities, infrastructure, and other improvements) and waters of Midway Atoll if designated as a national memorial.

(B) Whether designation as a national memorial would conflict with current management of Midway Atoll as a wildlife refuge and whether, and under what circumstances, the needs and requirements of the wildlife refuge should take precedence over the needs and requirements of a national memorial on Midway Atoll.

(C) Whether, and under what conditions, to permit the use of the facilities on Sand Island for purposes other than a wildlife refuge or a national memorial.

(D) Whether to impose conditions on public access to Midway Atoll if designated as a national memorial.

(d) REPORT.—Upon completion of the study required under paragraph (1), the Secretary shall submit to the Committee on Resources of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources of the Senate a report on the study, which shall include any recommendations for further legislative action. The report shall also include an inventory of all known past and present facilities and structures of historical significance on Midway Atoll and its environs. The report shall include a description of each historic facility and structure and a discussion of how each will contribute to the designation and interpretation of the proposed national memorial.

(e) CONTINUING DISCUSSIONS.—Nothing in this section shall be construed to delay or prohibit discussions or agreements between the Foundation, the Veterans of Foreign Wars, the Battle of Coral Sea Association, the American Legion, or any other appropriate veterans group, or the Midway Phoenix Corporation and the United States Fish and Wildlife Service or any other Government entity regarding the future role of the Foundation or the Midway Phoenix Corporation on Midway Atoll.

SEC. 406. LOWER EAST SIDE TENEMENT NATIONAL HISTORIC SITE, NEW YORK.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds that—

(1) immigration, and the resulting diversity of cultural influences, is a key factor in defining American identity; the majority of United States citizens trace their ancestry to persons born in nations other than the United States;

(2) the latter part of the 19th century and the early part of the 20th century marked a period in which the volume of immigrants coming to the United States far exceeded that of any time prior to or since that period;

(3) no single identifiable neighborhood in the United States absorbed a comparable number of immigrants than the Lower East Side neighborhood of Manhattan in New York City;

(4) the Lower East Side Tenement at 97 Orchard Street in New York City is an outstanding survivor of the vast number of humble buildings that housed immigrants to New York City during the greatest wave of immigration in American history;

(5) the Lower East Side Tenement is owned and operated as a museum by the Lower East Side Tenement Museum;

(6) the Lower East Side Tenement Museum is dedicated to interpreting immigrant life within a neighborhood long associated with the immigrant experience in the United States, New York's Lower East Side, and its importance to United States history; and

(7) the National Park Service found the Lower East Side Tenement at 97 Orchard Street to be nationally significant; the Secretary of the Interior declared it a National Historic Landmark on April 19, 1994, and the National Park Service through a special resource study found the Lower East Side Tenement suitable and feasible for inclusion in the National Park System.

(b) PURPOSES.—The purposes of this section are—

(1) to ensure the preservation, maintenance, and interpretation of this site and to interpret at the site the themes of immigration, tenement life in the later half of the 19th century and the first half of the 20th century, the housing reform movement, and tenement architecture in the United States;

(2) to ensure continued interpretation of the nationally significant immigrant phenomenon associated with New York City's Lower East Side and its role in the history of immigration to the United States; and

(3) to enhance the interpretation of the Castle Clinton, Ellis Island, and Statue of Liberty National Monuments.

(c) DEFINITIONS.—As used in this section:

(A) The National Park Service completed and approved in 1997 a general management plan for Independence National Historical Park that establishes goals and priorities for the park's future.

(B) The general management plan for Independence National Historical Park calls for the revitalization of Independence Mall and recommends as a critical component of the Independence Mall's revitalization the development of a new ''Gateway Visitor Center''.

(D) Subsequent to the completion of the general management plan, the National Park Service undertook and completed a design project and master plan for Independence Mall which includes the Gateway Visitor Center.

(E) Plans for the Gateway Visitor Center call for it to be developed and managed, in cooperation with the Secretary of the Interior, by a nonprofit organization which represents the various public and civic interests of the greater Philadelphia metropolitan area.

SEC. 408. TUSKEGEE AIRMEN NATIONAL HISTORIC SITE, ALABAMA.

(a) DEFINITIONS.—As used in this section:

(1) HISTORIC SITE.—The term ''historic site'' means the Tuskegee Airmen National Historic Site as established by subsection (d).

(2) SECRETARY.—The term ''Secretary'' means the Secretary of the Interior.

(3) TUSKEGEE AIRMEN.—The term ''Tuskegee Airmen'' means the thousands of men and women who were trained at Tuskegee University's Moton Field to serve in America's African-American Air Force units during World War II and those men and women who participate in the Tuskegee Experience today, who are represented by Tuskegee Airmen, Inc.

(4) TUSKEGEE UNIVERSITY.—The term ''Tuskegee University'' means the institution of higher education by that name located in the State of Alabama and founded by Booker T. Washington in 1881, formerly named Tuskegee Institute.

(b) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds the following:

(1) The struggle of African-Americans for greater roles in North American military conflicts spans the 17th, 18th, 19th, and 20th centuries. Opportunities for African-American participation in the United States military were always very limited and controversial. Quotas, exclusion, and racial discrimination were based on the prevailing attitude in the United States, particularly on the part of the United States military, that African-Americans did not possess the intellectual capacity, aptitude, and skills to be successful fighters.

(2) As late as the 1940's these perceptions continued within the United States military. Key leaders within the United States Army Air Corps did not believe that African-Americans possessed the capacity to become successful military pilots. After succumbing to pressure exerted by civil rights groups and the black press, the Army decided to train a small number of African-American pilot cadets under special conditions. Although prejudice and discrimination against African-Americans was a national phenomenon, not just a southern trait, it was more intense in the South where it had hardened into rigidly enforced patterns of segregation. Such was the environment where the military chose to locate the training of the Tuskegee Airmen.

(3) The military selected Tuskegee Institute (now known as Tuskegee University) as a civilian contractor for a variety of reasons. These included the school's existing facilities, engineering and technical instructors, and a climate with ideal flying conditions year round. Tuskegee Institute's strong interest in providing aeronautical training for African-American youths was also an important factor. Students from the school's civilian pilot training program had some of the best test scores when compared to other students from programs across the Southeast.

(4) In 1941 the United States Army Air Corps awarded a contract to Tuskegee Institute to operate a primary flight school at Moton Field. Tuskegee Institute (now known as Tuskegee University) chose an African-American contractor who designed and constructed Moton Field, with the assistance of its faculty and students, as the site for its military pilot training program. The field was named for the school's second president, Robert Russa Moton. Consequently, Tuskegee Institute was one of a very few American institutions (and the only African-American institution) to own, develop, and control facilities for military flight instruction.

(5) Moton Field, also known as the Primary Flying Field or Airport Number 2, was the only primary flight training facility for African-American pilot candidates in the United States Army Air Corps during World War II. The facility symbolizes the entrance of African-American pilots into the United States Army Air Corps, although on the basis of a policy of segregation that was mandated by the military and institutionalized in the South. The facility also symbolizes the singular role of Tuskegee Institute (Tuskegee University) in providing leadership as well as economic and educational resources to make that entry possible.

(6) The Tuskegee Airmen were the first African-American soldiers to complete their training successfully and to enter the United States Army Air Corps. Almost 1,000 aviators were trained as America's first African-American military pilots. In addition, more than 10,000 military and civilian African-American men and women served as flight instructors, officers, bombardiers, navigators, radio technicians, mechanics, air traffic controllers, parachute riggers, electrical and communications specialists, medical professionals, laboratory assistants, cooks, musicians, supply, firefighting, and transportation personnel.

(7) Although military leaders were hesitant to use the Tuskegee Airmen in combat, the Airmen eventually saw considerable action in North Africa and Europe. Acceptance from United States Army Air Corps units came slowly, but their courageous and, in many cases, heroic performance earned them increased combat opportunities and respect.

(8) The successes of the Tuskegee Airmen proved to the American public that African-Americans, when given the opportunity, could become effective military leaders and pilots. This helped pave the way for desegregation of the military, beginning with President Harry S. Truman's Executive Order 9981 in 1948. The Tuskegee Airmen's success also helped set the stage for civil rights advocates to continue the struggle to end racial discrimination during the civil rights movement of the 1950's and 1960's.

(9) The story of the Tuskegee Airmen also reflects the struggle of African-Americans to achieve equal rights, not only through legal attacks on the system of segregation, but also through the techniques of nonviolent direct action. The members of the 477th Bombardment Group, who staged a nonviolent demonstration to desegregate the officer's club at Freeman Field, Indiana, helped set the pattern for direct action protests popularized by civil rights activists in later decades.

(c) PURPOSES.—The purposes of this section are the following:

(1) To inspire present and future generations to strive for excellence by understanding and appreciating the heroic legacy of the Tuskegee Airmen, through interpretation and education, and the preservation of cultural resources at Moton Field, which was the site of primary flight training.

(2) To commemorate and interpret—

(A) the impact of the Tuskegee Airmen during World War II;

(B) the training process for the Tuskegee Airmen, including the roles played by Moton Field, other training facilities, and related sites;

(C) the African-American struggle for greater participation in the United States Armed Forces and more significant roles in defending their country;

(D) the significance of successes of the Tuskegee Airmen in leading to desegregation of the United States Armed Forces shortly after World War II; and

(E) the impacts of Tuskegee Airmen accomplishments on subsequent civil rights advances of the 1950's and 1960's.

(3) To recognize the strategic role of Tuskegee Institute (now Tuskegee University) in training the airmen and commemorating them at this historic site.

(d) ESTABLISHMENT OF THE TUSKEGEE AIRMEN NATIONAL HISTORIC SITE.—In order to commemorate and interpret, in association with Tuskegee University, the heroic actions of the Tuskegee Airmen during World War II, there is hereby established as a unit of the National Park System the Tuskegee Airmen National Historic Site in the State of Alabama.

(e) DESCRIPTION OF HISTORIC SITE.—

(1) INITIAL PARCEL.—The historic site shall consist of approximately 44 acres, including approximately 35 acres owned by Tuskegee University and approximately 9 acres owned by the City of Tuskegee, known as Moton Field, in Macon County, Alabama, as generally depicted on a map entitled ''Tuskegee Airmen National Historic Site Boundary Map'', numbered NHS–TA–80,000, and dated September 1998. Such map shall be on file and available for public inspection in the appropriate offices of the National Park Service.

(2) SUBSEQUENT EXPANSION.—Upon completion of agreements regarding the development and operation of the Tuskegee Airmen National Center as described in subsection (i), the Secretary is authorized to acquire approximately 46 additional acres owned by Tuskegee University as generally depicted on the map referenced in paragraph (1). Lands acquired by the Secretary pursuant to this paragraph shall be administered by the Secretary as part of the historic site.

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall administer the historic site in accordance with this section and the laws generally applicable to units of the National Park System, including the Act of August 25, 1916 (commonly known as the National Park Service Organic Act; 16 U.S.C. 1 et seq.), and the Act of August 21, 1935 (commonly known as the Historic Sites, Buildings, and Antiquities Act; 16 U.S.C. 461 et seq.).

(2) ROLE OF TUSKEGEE UNIVERSITY.—The Secretary shall consult with Tuskegee University as its principal partner in determining the organizational structure, developing the ongoing interpretive themes, and establishing policies for the wise management, use and development of the historic site. With the agreement of Tuskegee University, the Secretary shall engage appropriate departments, and individual members of the University's staff, faculty, and students in the continuing work of helping to identify, research, explicate, interpret, and format materials for the historic site. Through the President of the University, or with the approval of the President of the University, the Secretary shall seek to engage Tuskegee alumni in the task of providing artifacts and historical information for the historic site.

(3) ROLE OF TUSKEGEE AIRMEN.—The Secretary, in cooperation with Tuskegee University, shall work with the Tuskegee Airmen to facilitate the acquisition of artifacts, memorabilia, and historical research for interpretive exhibits, and to support their efforts to raise funds for the development of visitor facilities and programs at the historic site.

(4) DEVELOPMENT.—Operation and development of the historic site shall reflect Alternative C, Living History: The Tuskegee Airmen Experience, as expressed in the final special resource study entitled ''Moton Field/Tuskegee Airmen Special Resource Study'', dated September 1998. Subsequent development of the historic site shall reflect Alternative D after an agreement is reached with Tuskegee University on the development of the Tuskegee Airmen National Center as described in subsection (i).

(h) COOPERATIVE AGREEMENTS GENERALLY.—The Secretary may enter into cooperative agreements with Tuskegee University, other educational institutions, the Tuskegee Airmen, individuals, private and public organizations, and other Federal agencies in furtherance of the purposes of this section. SEC. 511. SHORT TITLE; FINDINGS; PURPOSES.

(a) SHORT TITLE.—This subtitle may be cited as the ''San Rafael Swell National Heritage Area Act''.

(b) FINDINGS.—Congress finds the following:

(1) The history of the American West is one of the most significant chapters of United States history, and the major themes and images of the history of the American West provide a legacy that has done much to shape the contemporary culture, attitudes, and values of the American West and the United States.

(2) The San Rafael Swell region of the State of Utah was one of the country's last frontiers and possesses important historical, cultural, and natural resources that are representative of the central themes associated with the history of the American West, including themes of pre-Columbian and Native American culture, exploration, pioneering, settlement, ranching, outlaws, prospecting and mining, water development and irrigation, railroad building, industrial development, and the utilization and conservation of natural resources.

(3) The San Rafael Swell region contains important historical sites, including sections of the Old Spanish Trail, the Outlaw Trail, the Green River Crossing, and numerous sites associated with cowboy, pioneer, and mining history.

(4) The heritage of the San Rafael Swell region includes the activities of many prominent historical figures of the old American West, such as Chief Walker, John Wesley Powell, Kit Carson, John C. Fremont, John W. Gunnison, Butch Cassidy, John W. Taylor, and the Swasey brothers.

(5) The San Rafael Swell region has a notable history of coal and uranium mining, and a rich cultural heritage of activities associated with mining, such as prospecting, railroad building, immigrant workers, coal camps, labor union movements, and mining disasters.

(6) The San Rafael Swell region is widely recognized for its significant paleontological resources and dinosaur bone quarries, including the Cleveland Lloyd Dinosaur Quarry which was designated as a National Natural Landmark in 1966.

(7) The beautiful rural landscapes, historic and cultural landscapes, and spectacular scenic vistas of the San Rafael Swell region contain significant undeveloped recreational opportunities for people throughout the United States.

(8) Museums and visitor centers have already been constructed in the San Rafael Swell region, including the John Wesley Powell River History Museum, the College of Eastern Utah Prehistoric Museum, the Museum of the San Rafael, the Western Mining and Railroad Museum, the Emery County Pioneer Museum, and the Cleveland Lloyd Dinosaur Quarry, and these museums are available to interpret the themes of the national heritage area established by this title and to coordinate the interpretive and preservation activities of the area.

(9) Despite the efforts of the State of Utah, political subdivisions of the State, volunteer organizations, and private businesses, the cultural, historical, natural, and recreational resources of the San Rafael Swell region have not realized their full potential and may be lost without assistance from the Federal Government.

(10) Many of the historical, cultural, and scientific sites of the San Rafael Swell region are located on lands owned by the Federal Government and are managed by the Bureau of Land Management or the United States Forest Service.

(11) The preservation of the cultural, historical, natural, and recreational resources of the San Rafael Swell region within a regional framework requires cooperation among local property owners and Federal, State, and local government entities.

(12) Partnerships between Federal, State, and local governments, local and regional entities of these governments, and the private sector offer the most effective opportunities for the enhancement and management of the cultural, historical, natural, and recreational resources of the San Rafael Swell region.

(c) PURPOSES.—The purposes of this subtitle are—

(1) to establish the San Rafael Swell National Heritage Area to promote the preservation, conservation, interpretation, and development of the historical, cultural, natural, and recreational resources related to the historical, cultural, and industrial heritage of the San Rafael Swell region of the State of Utah, which includes the counties of Carbon and Emery, and portions of the county of Sanpete;

(2) to encourage within the national heritage area a broad range of economic and recreational opportunities to enhance the quality of life for present and future generations;

(3) to assist the State of Utah, political subdivisions of the State and their local and regional entities, and nonprofit organizations, or combinations thereof, in preparing and implementing a heritage plan for the national heritage area and in developing policies and programs that will preserve, enhance, and interpret the cultural, historical, natural, recreational, and scenic resources of the heritage area; and

(1) IDENTIFICATION OF LANDS AND INTERESTS BY STATE.—Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Governor of the State of Utah may identify, describe, and notify the Secretary of any school and institutional trust lands the value or economic potential of which may be diminished by establishment of the conservation area under this title, and that the State would like to exchange for other Federal lands or interests in land within the State of Utah.

(2) OFFER BY SECRETARY.—Not later than 1 year after the date of receipt of notification under subsection (a), and after seeking the advice of the Governor of the State of Utah on potential lands for exchange, the Secretary shall transmit to the Governor a list of Federal lands or interests in lands within the State of Utah that the Secretary believes are approximately equivalent in value to the lands described in subsection (a) of this section, and shall offer such lands for exchange to the State for the lands described in subsection (a).

(2) ACCOUNTING FOR REVENUE SHARING.—If the State of Utah shares revenue from the properties to be acquired by the State under this section, the value of such properties shall be the value otherwise established under this section, reduced by a percentage that represents the Federal revenue sharing obligation. The amount of such reduction shall not be considered a property right of the State of Utah.

(c) PUBLIC INTEREST.—The exchange of lands included in the list prepared under subsection (a)(2) shall be construed as satisfying the provisions of section 206(a) of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976 requiring that exchanges of lands be in the public interest.

SEC. 554. WATER RIGHTS.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds the following:

(1) The San Rafael Swell region of Utah is a high desert climate with little annual precipitation and scarce water resources.

(2) In order to preserve the limited amount of water available to wildlife, the State of Utah has granted to the Division of Wildlife Resources an in-stream flow right in the San Rafael River.

(3) This preserved right will guarantee that wetland and riparian habitats within the San Rafael region will be protected for designations such as wilderness, semi-primitive areas, bighorn sheep, and other Federal land needs within the San Rafael Swell region.

(b) NO FEDERAL RESERVATION.—Nothing in this title or any other Act of Congress shall constitute or be construed to constitute either an express or implied Federal reservation of water or water rights for any purpose arising from the designation of areas as part of the conservation area or as a wilderness or semi-primitive area under this title.

(c) ACQUISITION AND EXERCISE OF WATER RIGHTS UNDER UTAH LAW.—The United States may acquire and exercise such water rights as it deems necessary to carry out its responsibilities on any lands designated as part of the conservation area under this title pursuant to the substantive and procedural requirements of the State of Utah. Nothing in this title shall be construed to authorize the use of eminent domain by the United States to acquire water rights for such lands. Within areas designated as part of the conservation area under this title, all rights to water granted under the laws of the State of Utah may be exercised in accordance with the substantive and procedural requirements of the State of Utah.

(b) PROHIBITION OF BUFFER ZONES.—The Congress does not intend that the designation of an area by this title as part of the conservation area or a wilderness or semi-primitive area lead to the creation of protective perimeters or buffer zones around the area. It is the intention of the Congress that any protective perimeter or buffer zone be located wholly within such an area. The fact that nonconforming activities or uses can be seen or heard from land within such an area shall not, of itself, preclude such activities or uses up to the boundary of the area. Nonconforming activities that occur outside of the boundaries of such an area designated by this title shall not be taken into account in assessing unnecessary and undue degradation of such an area.

(c) ADJUSTMENT OF CERTAIN BOUNDARIES ALONG ROADS.—

(1) ADJUSTMENT AUTHORIZED.—The Secretary may adjust a boundary described in paragraph (2) that runs along a road as necessary to ensure that the boundary is set back from the center line of the road, as follows:

(d) ACCESS.—

(1) REASONABLE ACCESS ALLOWED.—Subject to valid existing rights, the holder of any permit authorizing use of an existing improvement, structure, or facility (including those related to water and grazing resources) that is located within the conservation area or a wilderness or semi-primitive area designated under this title, whether located on Federal or non-Federal lands, shall be allowed reasonable access to such improvement, structure, or facility in order that it may be operated, maintained, repaired, or equivalently replaced as necessary.

(2) REASONABLE ACCESS DEFINED.—For the purposes of this subsection, the term ''reasonable access''—

(A) means the right of ingress and egress; and

(B) includes access by motorized transport on routes in existence as of the date of the enactment of this Act, unless the Secretary determines that transport—

(i) is not necessary or customary; or

(ii) was not historically employed.

(e) LAND ACQUISITION BY EXCHANGE OR PURCHASE.—The Secretary shall offer to acquire from non-governmental entities lands and interests in lands located within or adjacent to the conservation area or a wilderness or semi-primitive area designated under this title. Lands may be acquired under this subsection only by exchange or purchase from willing sellers.

(f) RIGHTS-OF-WAY.—Nothing in this title, including any reference to, or depiction or lack of a depiction on, the map entitled ''San Rafael Swell National Heritage/Conservation Area Proposed'', dated June 12, 1998, affects any right-of-way claim that arose under section 2477 of the Revised Statutes (43 U.S.C. 932).

(1) FINDINGS.—Congress finds the following:

(A) The main road at Cumberland Island National Seashore and numerous historic structures on Cumberland Island are included on the National Register of Historic Places.

(B) The continued existence and use of the main road, as well as a spur road that provides access to Plum Orchard mansion at Cumberland Island National Seashore, is necessary for maintenance and access to the natural, cultural, and historical resources of Cumberland Island National Seashore.

(C) The preservation of the main road and the numerous historic structures at Cumberland Island National Seashore is not only lawful, but also mandated under section 4(a)(3) of the Wilderness Act (16 U.S.C. 1133(a)(3)).

(D) The inclusion of these roads and historic structures both on the National Register of Historic Places and in the Cumberland Island Wilderness or potential wilderness area is incompatible and causes competing mandates on the Secretary of the Interior for management.

(2) EXCLUSION OF ROADS FROM WILDERNESS.—The main road on Cumberland Island (as described on the National Register of Historic Places), the spur road that provides access to Plum Orchard mansion, and the area extending 10 feet on each side of the center line of both roads are hereby excluded from the boundaries of the Cumberland Island Wilderness and the potential wilderness area.

(3) EXCLUSION OF STRUCTURES FROM WILDERNESS.—The Secretary of the Interior shall modify the boundaries of the Cumberland Island Wilderness and the potential wilderness area to exclude—

(A) each structure at Cumberland Island National Seashore that is listed on National Register of Historic Places; and

(B) such land surrounding each excluded structure as the Secretary considers necessary to eliminate incompatible and competing management requirements.

(4) EFFECT OF EXCLUSION.—Nothing in this subsection shall be construed to affect the inclusion of the main road or a structure at Cumberland Island National Seashore on the National Register of Historic Places or the authority of the Secretary of the Interior to impose reasonable restrictions, subject to valid existing rights, on the use of the main road or spur road to minimize any adverse impacts on the Cumberland Island Wilderness or the potential wilderness area.

(b) RESTORATION OF PLUM ORCHARD MANSION.—

(1) RESTORATION REQUIRED.—Using funds appropriated pursuant to the authorization of appropriations in paragraph (4), the Secretary of the Interior shall restore Plum Orchard mansion at Cumberland Island National Seashore so that the condition of the restored mansion is at least equal to the condition of the mansion when it was donated to the United States. The Secretary shall endeavor to collect donations of money and in-kind contributions for the purpose of restoring structures within the Plum Orchard historic district.

(2) SUBSEQUENT MAINTENANCE.—The Secretary of the Interior shall endeavor to enter into an agreement with public persons, private persons, or both, to provide for the maintenance of Plum Orchard mansion following its restoration.

(3) RESTORATION PLAN.—Not later than 270 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of the Interior shall submit to Congress a comprehensive plan for the repair, stabilization, restoration, and subsequent maintenance of Plum Orchard mansion to the condition the mansion was in when acquired by the United States.

(4) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There is authorized to be appropriated such sums as are necessary for the restoration and maintenance of Plum Orchard mansion under this subsection.

(c) ARCHAEOLOGICAL AND HISTORIC SITES.—The Secretary of the Interior shall identify, document, and protect archaeological sites located on Federal land within Cumberland Island National Seashore. The Secretary shall prepare and implement a plan to preserve designated national historic sites within the seashore.

SEC. 608. CHATTAHOOCHEE RIVER NATIONAL RECREATION AREA.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds that:

(1) The Chattahoochee River National Recreation Area is a nationally significant resource and the national recreation area has been adversely affected by land use changes occurring within and outside its boundaries.

(2) The population of the metropolitan Atlanta area continues to expand northward, leaving dwindling opportunities to protect the scenic, recreation, natural, and historic values of the 2,000-foot wide corridor adjacent to each bank of the Chattahoochee River and its impoundments in the 48-mile segment known as the area of national concern.

(3) The State of Georgia has enacted the Metropolitan River Protection Act in order to ensure the protection of the corridor located within 2,000 feet of each bank of the Chattahoochee River, or the 100-year flood plain, whichever is greater, and such corridor includes the area of national concern.

(4) Visitor use of the Chattahoochee River National Recreation Area has shifted dramatically since the establishment of the national recreation area from waterborne to water-related and land-based activities.

(5) The State of Georgia and its political subdivisions along the Chattahoochee River have indicated their willingness to join in cooperative efforts with the United States of America to link existing units of the national recreation area with a series of linear corridors to be established within the area of national concern and elsewhere on the river and provided Congress appropriates certain funds in support of such effort, funding from the State, its political subdivisions, private foundations, corporate entities, private individuals, and other sources will be available to fund more than half of the estimated cost of such cooperative effort.

(b) PURPOSES.—The purposes of this section are to—

(1) increase the level of protection of the remaining open spaces within the area of national concern along the Chattahoochee River and to enhance visitor enjoyment of such areas by adding land-based links between existing units of the national recreation area;

(2) assure that the national recreation area is managed to standardize acquisition, planning, design, construction, and operation of the linear corridors; and

(3) authorize the appropriation of Federal funds to cover a portion of the costs of the Federal, State, local, and private cooperative effort to add additional areas to the Chattahoochee River National Recreation Area in order to establish a series of linear corridors linking existing units of the national recreation area and to protect other undeveloped portions of the Chattahoochee River corridor.

(c) AMENDMENTS TO CHATTAHOOCHEE NRA ACT.—The Act of August 15, 1978, entitled ''An Act to authorize the establishment of the Chattahoochee River National Recreation Area in the State of Georgia, and for other purposes'' (Public Law 95–344; 16 U.S.C. 460ii et seq.) is amended as follows:

(1) Section 101 (16 U.S.C. 460ii) is amended as follows:

(B) By amending the fourth sentence to read as follows: ''After July 1, 1999, the Secretary of the Interior (in this Act referred to as the 'Secretary') may modify the boundaries of the recreation area to include other lands within the river corridor of the Chattahoochee River by submitting a revised map or other boundary description to the Congress. Such revised boundaries shall take effect on the date 6 months after the date of such submission unless, within such 6-month period, the Congress adopts a Joint Resolution disapproving such revised boundaries. Such revised map or other boundary description shall be prepared by the Secretary after consultation with affected landowners and with the State of Georgia and affected political subdivisions.''.

(C) By striking out ''may not exceed approximately 6,800 acres.'' and inserting ''may not exceed 10,000 acres.''.

(2) Section 102(f) (16 U.S.C. 460ii–1(f)) is repealed.

(3) Section 103(b) (16 U.S.C. 460ii–2(b)) is amended to read as follows:

''(b) COOPERATIVE AGREEMENTS.—The Secretary is authorized to enter into cooperative agreements with the State, its political subdivisions, and other entities to assure standardized acquisition, planning, design, construction, and operation of the national recreation area.''.

(4) Section 105(a) (16 U.S.C. 460ii–4(a)) is amended to read as follows:

''(a) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS; ACCEPTANCE OF DONATIONS.—In addition to funding and the donation of lands and interests in lands provided by the State of Georgia, local government authorities, private foundations, corporate entities, and individuals, and funding that may be available pursuant to the settlement of litigation, there is hereby authorized to be appropriated for land acquisition not more than $25,000,000 for fiscal years after fiscal year 1998. The Secretary is authorized to accept the donation of funds and lands or interests in lands to carry out this Act.''.

(5) Section 105(c) (16 U.S.C. 460ii–4(c)) is amended by adding the following at the end thereof: ''The Secretary shall submit a new plan within 3 years after the enactment of this sentence to provide for the protection, enhancement, enjoyment, development, and use of areas added to the national recreation area. During the preparation of the revised plan the Secretary shall seek and encourage the participation of the State of Georgia and its affected political subdivisions, private landowners, interested citizens, public officials, groups, agencies, educational institutions, and others.''.

''(5)(A) National discovery trails, established as provided in section 5, which will be extended, continuous, interstate trails so located as to provide for outstanding outdoor recreation and travel and to connect representative examples of America's trails and communities. National discovery trails should provide for the conservation and enjoyment of significant natural, cultural, and historic resources associated with each trail and should be so located as to represent metropolitan, urban, rural, and backcountry regions of the Nation. Any such trail may be designated on Federal lands and, with the consent of the owner thereof, on any non-Federal lands. The consent of the owner shall be obtained in the form of a written agreement, which shall include such terms and conditions as the parties to the agreement consider advisable, and may include provisions regarding the discontinuation of the trail designation. The Congress does not intend for the establishment of a national discovery trail to lead to the creation of protective perimeters or buffer zones adjacent to a national discovery trail. The fact that there may be activities or uses on lands adjacent to the trail that would not be permitted on the trail shall not preclude such activities or uses on such lands adjacent to the trail to the extent consistent with other applicable law. Nothing in this Act may be construed to impose or permit the imposition of any landowner on the use of any non-Federal lands without the consent of the owner. Neither the designation of a national discovery trail nor any plan related thereto shall affect, or be considered, in the granting or denial of a right-of-way or any conditions relating thereto.

''(B) The appropriate Secretary for each national discovery trail shall administer the trail in cooperation with a competent trailwide volunteer-based organization. Where national discovery trails are congruent with other local, State, national scenic, or national historic trails, the designation of the discovery trail shall not in any way diminish the values and significance for which these trails were established.''.

(B) FEASIBILITY REQUIREMENTS; COOPERATIVE MANAGEMENT REQUIREMENT.—Section 5(b) of such Act (16 U.S.C. 1244(b)) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

''(12) For purposes of this subsection, a trail shall not be considered feasible and desirable for designation as a national discovery trail unless it meets all of the following criteria:

''(A) The trail must link to one or more areas within the boundaries of a metropolitan area (as those boundaries are determined under section 134(c) of title 23, United States Code). It should also join with other trails, tying the National Trails System to significant recreation and resources areas.

''(B) The trail must be supported by at least one competent trailwide volunteer-based organization. Each trail shall have extensive local and trailwide support by the public, by user groups, and by affected State and local governments.

''(C) The trail must be extended and pass through more than one State. At a minimum, it should be a continuous, walkable route. National discovery trails are specifically exempted from the provisions of sections 7(g) of this Act.

''(D) The appropriate Secretary shall obtain written consent from affected landowners prior to entering nonpublic lands for the purposes of conducting any surveys or studies of nonpublic lands for purposes of this Act. Provided, before any designation or establishment of any discovery trail provided by this Act, the appropriate Secretary must ensure written notification to all nonpublic landowners on which a designated trail crosses or abuts nonpublic lands. Furthermore, any nonpublic landowner that has property crossed by or abutting land designated under this Act, if trespassing should occur by travelers on the National Discovery Trail, has the right to request and subsequently require the appropriate Secretary to coordinate with State and local officials to ensure to the maximum extent feasible that no further trespassing should occur on such nonpublic land.''.

The Northern Midwest route traverses Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Nebraska, and Colorado, and the Southern Midwest route traverses Indiana, Illinois, Missouri, Kansas, and Colorado. After the two routes rejoin in Denver, Colorado, the route continues through Colorado, Utah, Nevada, and California. The trail is generally described in Volume 2 of the National Park Service feasibility study dated June 1995 which shall be on file and available for public inspection in the office of the Director of the National Park Service, Department of the Interior, the District of Columbia. The American Discovery Trail shall be administered by the Secretary of the Interior in cooperation with at least one competent trailwide volunteer-based organization, affected land managing agencies and State and local governments as appropriate. No lands or interests outside the exterior boundaries of federally administered areas may be acquired by the Federal Government solely for the American Discovery Trail. Components of the comprehensive plan include—

''(1) policies, objectives and practices to be observed in the administration and management of the trail, including the identification of all significant natural, historical, and cultural resources to be preserved, model agreements necessary for joint trail administration among and between interested parties, and an identified carrying capacity for critical segments of the trail and procedures for implementation, where appropriate;

''(2) strategies for trail protection to retain the values for which the trail is being established and recognized by the Federal Government;

''(3) general and site-specific trail-related development, including anticipated costs; and

SEC. 803. ASSISTANCE TO THE NATIONAL HISTORIC TRAILS INTERPRETIVE CENTER.

(a) FINDINGS AND PURPOSES.—

(1) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds and declares the following:

(A) The city of Casper, Wyoming, is nationally significant as the only geographic location in the western United States where 4 congressionally recognized historic trails (the Oregon Trail, the Mormon Trail, the California Trail, and the Pony Express Trail), the Bridger Trail, the Bozeman Trail, and many Indian routes converged.

(B) The historic trails that passed through the Casper area are a distinctive part of the national character and possess important historical and cultural values representing themes of migration, settlement, transportation, and commerce that shaped the landscape of the West.

(C) The Bureau of Land Management has not yet established a historic trails interpretive center in Wyoming or in any adjacent State to educate and focus national attention on the history of the mid-19th century immigrant trails that crossed public lands in the Intermountain West.

(D) At the invitation of the Bureau of Land Management, the city of Casper and the National Historic Trails Foundation, Inc. (a nonprofit corporation established under the laws of the State of Wyoming) entered into a memorandum of understanding in 1992, and have since signed an assistance agreement in 1993 and a cooperative agreement in 1997, to create, manage, and sustain a National Historic Trails Interpretive Center to be located in Casper, Wyoming, to professionally interpret the historic trails in the Casper area for the benefit of the public.

TITLE IX—HAZARDOUS FUELS REDUCTION

SEC. 901. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the ''Community Protection and Hazardous Fuels Reduction Act of 1998''.

SEC. 902. FINDINGS AND PURPOSE.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds the following:

(1) Management of Federal lands has been characterized by large cyclical variations in fire suppression policies, timber harvesting levels, and the attention paid to commodity and noncommodity values.

(2) Forests on Federal lands are experiencing significant disease epidemics and insect infestations.

(3) The combination of inconsistent management and natural effects has resulted in a hazardous fuels buildup on Federal lands that threatens catastrophic wildfire.

(4) While the long-term effect of catastrophic wildfire on forests and forest systems is a matter of debate, there should be no question that catastrophic wildfire must be prevented in areas of the Federal lands where wildlands abut, or are located in close proximity to, communities, residences, and other private and public facilities on non-Federal lands.

(5) Wildfire resulting from hazardous fuels buildup in such wildland/urban interface areas threatens the destruction of communities, puts human life and property at risk, threatens community water supplies with erosion that follows wildfire, destroys wildlife habitat, and damages ambient air quality.

(6) The Secretary of Agriculture and the Secretary of the Interior must assign a high priority and undertake aggressive management to achieve the elimination of hazardous fuel buildup and reduction of the risk of wildfire to the wildland/urban interface areas on Federal lands. Protection of human life and property, including water supplies and ambient air quality, must be given the highest priority.

(7) The noncommodity resources, including riparian zones and wildlife habitats, in wildland/urban interface areas on Federal lands which must be protected to provide recreational opportunities, clean water, and other amenities to neighboring communities and the public suffer from a backlog of unfunded forest management projects designed to provide such protection.

(8) In a period of fiscal austerity characterized by shrinking budgets and personnel levels, Congress must provide the Secretary of Agriculture and the Secretary of the Interior with innovative tools to accomplish the required reduction in hazardous fuels buildup and undertake other forest management projects in the wildland/urban interface areas on the Federal lands at least cost.

(b) PURPOSE.—The purpose of this title is to provide new authority and innovative tools to the Secretary of Agriculture and the Secretary of the Interior to safeguard communities, lives, and property by reducing or eliminating the threat of catastrophic wildfire, and to undertake needed forest management projects, in wildland/urban interface areas on Federal lands.

(1) meet the definition of wildland/urban interface areas; and

(2) have hazardous fuels buildups and other forest management needs that warrant the use of forest management projects as provided in section 912.

SEC. 912. CONTRACTING TO REDUCE HAZARDOUS FUELS AND UNDERTAKE FOREST MANAGEMENT PROJECTS IN WILDLAND/URBAN INTERFACE AREAS.

(a) CONTRACTING AUTHORITY.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary concerned is authorized to enter into contracts under this section for the sale of forest products in a wildland/urban interface area identified under section 911 for the primary purpose of reducing hazardous fuels buildups in the area.

(2) INCLUSION OF FOREST MANAGEMENT PROJECTS.—Subject to paragraph (3) and subsection (e), the Secretary concerned may require, as a condition of any sale of forest products referred to in paragraph (1), that the purchaser of such products undertake one or more forest management projects in the wildland/urban interface area.

(3) CONDITIONS ON INCLUSION.—The Secretary concerned may include a forest management project as a condition in a contract for the sale of forest products referred to in paragraph (1) only when the Secretary determines that—

(A) the forest management project is consistent with the applicable land management plan; and

(b) FINANCING AND SUPPLEMENTAL FUNDING.—

(1) FINANCING THROUGH SALES.—The financing of a forest management project required as a condition of a contract for a sale of forest products authorized by subsection (a) shall be accomplished by including in the contract a provision that offsets the costs incurred by the purchaser in carrying out the required forest management project, by reducing the amount required to be paid to the United States by the purchaser for forest products sold under the contract.

(2) AMOUNT OF REDUCTION OF PAYMENT.—

(3) USE OF APPROPRIATED FUNDS.—The Secretary concerned may use appropriated funds to assist the purchaser to undertake a forest management project required as a condition of a contract authorized by subsection (a) if such funds are provided from the resource function or functions that directly benefit from the performance of the project and are available from the annual appropriation for such function or functions during the fiscal year in which the sale is offered. The amount of assistance to be provided for each forest management project shall be included in the prospectus, and published in the advertisement, for the sale.

(c) DETERMINATION OF FOREST MANAGEMENT OFFSETS.—Prior to the advertisement of a sale authorized by subsection (a) and subject to section 915(b), the Secretary concerned shall determine the offsetting cost (under subsection (b)(1)) of each forest management project to be required as a condition of the sale contract. (ii) require that any such sites be identified by the various Native American Tribes and Pueblos during the development of the Code of Land Grant Claims Procedures for the Commission;

(J) an outline of the rights and responsibilities of community land grantees if a community land grant is reconstituted; and

(K) any other items the Commission deems appropriate and necessary.

(2) REVIEW BY CONGRESSIONAL RESOURCE COMMITTEES.—Prior to beginning the examination of specific community land claims, the Commission shall submit the Code of Land Claims Procedure to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources of the Senate and the Committee on Resources of the House of Representatives. (7) PROTECTION OF NON-FEDERAL PROPERTY.—The decision of the Commission regarding the validity of a petition submitted under paragraph (1) shall not affect the ownership, title or rights of owners of any non-Federal lands covered by the petition. Any recommendation of the Commission under paragraph (6) regarding whether a community land grant should be reconstituted and its lands restored may not address, affect or otherwise involve non-Federal lands. In the case of a valid petition covering lands held in non-Federal ownership, the Commission shall modify the recommendation under the paragraph (6) to recommend the substitution of comparable Federal lands in the State of New Mexico for the lands held in non-Federal ownership.

(g) COMMUNITY LAND GRANT STUDY CENTER.—To assist the Commission in the performance of its activities under subsection (d), the commission shall establish a Community Land Grant Study Center at the Onate Center in Alcalde, New Mexico. The Commission shall be charged with the responsibility of directing the research, study, and investigations necessary for the Commission to perform its duties under this section.

(h) MISCELLANEOUS POWERS OF COMMISSION.—

(1) HEARINGS AND SESSIONS.—The Commission may, for the purpose of carrying out this section, hold hearings, sit and act at times and places, take testimony, and receive evidence as the Commission considers appropriate, and may administer oaths or affirmations to witnesses appearing before it.

(2) POWERS OF MEMBERS AND AGENTS.—Any member or agent of the Commission may, if authorized by the Commission, take any action which the Commission is authorized to take by this subsection.

(3) GIFTS, BEQUESTS, AND DEVISES.—The Commission may accept, use, and dispose of gifts, bequests, or devises of services or property, both real and personal, for the purpose of aiding or facilitating the work of the Commission so long as it is determined that the acceptance of such gifts, bequests or devises do not constitute a conflict of interest.

(4) MAILS.—The Commission may use the United States mails in the same manner and under the same conditions as the other departments and agencies of the United States.

(5) ADMINISTRATIVE SUPPORT SERVICES.—Upon the request of the Commission the Administrator of General Services shall provide to the Commission, on a reimbursable basis, the administrative support services necessary for the Commission to carry out its responsibilities under this section.

(6) IMMUNITY.—The Commission is an agency of the United States for the purpose of part V of title 18, United States Code (relating to immunity of witnesses).

(i) REPORT.—As soon as practicable after reaching its last decision under subsection (f), the Commission shall submit to the President and the Congress a report containing each decision, including the recommendation of the Commission regarding whether certain community land grants should be reconstituted, so that the Congress may act upon the recommendations.

SEC. 1004. OTAY MOUNTAIN WILDERNESS.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds and declares the following:

(1) The public lands within the Otay Mountain region of California are one of the last remaining pristine locations in western San Diego County, California.

(2) This rugged mountain adjacent to the United States-Mexico border is internationally known for its diversity of unique and sensitive plants.

(3) This area plays a critical role in San Diego's multi-species conservation plan, a national model made for maintaining biodiversity.

(4) Due to its proximity to the international border, this area is the focus of important law enforcement and border interdiction efforts necessary to curtail illegal immigration and protect the area's wilderness values.

(5) The illegal immigration traffic, combined with the rugged topography, also presents unique fire management challenges for protecting lives and resources.

(b) DESIGNATION.—In furtherance of the purposes of the Wilderness Act (16 U.S.C. 1131 et seq.), certain public lands in the California Desert District of the Bureau of Land Management, California, comprising approximately 18,500 acres as generally depicted on a map entitled ''Otay Mountain Wilderness'' and dated May 7, 1998, are hereby designated as wilderness and therefore as a component of the National Wilderness Preservation System, which shall be known as the Otay Mountain Wilderness.

(c) MAP AND LEGAL DESCRIPTION.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—As soon as practicable after the date of enactment of this Act, a map and a legal description for the Wilderness Area shall be filed by the Secretary with the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources of the Senate and the Committee on Resources of the House of Representatives. Such map and legal description shall have the same force and effect as if included in this Act, except that the Secretary, as appropriate, may correct clerical and typographical errors in such legal description and map. Such map and legal description for the Wilderness Area shall be on file and available for public inspection in the offices of the Director and California State Director, Bureau of Land Management, Department of the Interior.

(2) UNITED STATES-MEXICO BORDER.—In carrying out this subsection, the Secretary shall ensure that the southern boundary of the Wilderness Area is 100 feet north of the trail depicted on the map referred to in paragraph (1) and is at least 100 feet from the United States-Mexico international border.

(e) WILDERNESS REVIEW.—The Congress hereby finds and directs that all the public lands not designated wilderness within the boundaries of the Southern Otay Mountain Wilderness Study Area (CA–060–029) and the Western Otay Mountain Wilderness Study Area (CA–060–028) managed by the Bureau of Land Management and reported to the Congress in 1991, have been adequately studied for wilderness designation pursuant to section 603 of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976 (43 U.S.C. 1782), and are no longer subject to the requirements contained in section 603(c) of that Act pertaining to the management of wilderness study areas in a manner that does not impair the suitability of such areas for preservation as wilderness.

(f) ADMINISTRATION OF WILDERNESS AREA.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Subject to valid existing rights and to paragraph (2), the Wilderness Area shall be administered by the Secretary in accordance with the provisions of the Wilderness Act (16 U.S.C. 1131 et seq.), except that—

(A) any reference in such provisions to the effective date of the Wilderness Act is deemed to be a reference to the effective date of this Act; and

(B) any reference in such provisions to the Secretary of Agriculture is deemed to be a reference to the Secretary of the Interior.

(2) BORDER ENFORCEMENT, DRUG INTERDICTION, AND WILDLAND FIRE PROTECTION.—Because of the proximity of the Wilderness Area to the United States-Mexico international border, drug interdiction, border operations, and wildland fire management operations are common management actions throughout the area encompassing the Wilderness Area. This section recognizes the need to continue such management actions so long as such management actions are conducted in accordance with the Wilderness Act (16 U.S.C. 1131 et seq.) and are subject to such conditions as the Secretary considers appropriate.

(g) FURTHER ACQUISITIONS.—Any lands within the boundaries of the Wilderness Area that are acquired by the United States after the date of enactment of this Act shall become part of the Wilderness Area and shall be managed in accordance with all the provisions of this section and other laws applicable to such a wilderness.

(h) NO BUFFER ZONES.—The Congress does not intend for the designation of the Wilderness Area by this section to lead to the creation of protective perimeters or buffer zones around the Wilderness Area. The fact that nonwilderness activities or uses can be seen or heard from areas within the Wilderness Area shall not, of itself, preclude such activities or uses up to the boundary of the Wilderness Area.

(i) DEFINITIONS.—As used in this section:

(1) PUBLIC LANDS.—The term ''public lands'' has the same meaning as that term has in section 103(e) of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976.

(2) SECRETARY.—The term ''Secretary'' means the Secretary of the Interior.

(3) WILDERNESS AREA.—The term ''Wilderness Area'' means the Otay Mountain Wilderness designated by subsection (b).

SEC. 1005. ACQUISITION AND MANAGEMENT OF WILCOX RANCH, UTAH, FOR WILDLIFE HABITAT.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds the following:

(1) The lands within the Wilcox Ranch in eastern Utah are prime habitat for wild turkeys, eagles, hawks, bears, cougars, elk, deer, bighorn sheep, and many other important species, and Range Creek within the Wilcox Ranch could become a blue ribbon trout stream.

(2) These lands also contain a great deal of undisturbed cultural and archeological resources, including ancient pottery, arrowheads, and rock homes constructed centuries ago.

(3) These lands, while comprising only approximately 3,800 acres, control access to over 75,000 acres of Federal lands under the jurisdiction of the Bureau of Land Management.

(4) Acquisition of the Wilcox Ranch would benefit the people of the United States by preserving and enhancing important wildlife habitat, ensuring access to lands of the Bureau of Land Management, and protecting priceless archeological and cultural resources.

(5) These lands, if acquired by the United States, can be managed by the Utah Division of Wildlife Resources at no additional expense to the Federal Government.

(b) ACQUISITION OF LANDS.—As soon as practicable, after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of the Interior shall acquire, through purchase, the Wilcox Ranch located in Emery County, in eastern Utah.

(c) FUNDS FOR PURCHASE.—The Secretary of the Interior is authorized to use not more than $5,000,000 from the land and water conservation fund established under section 2 of the Land and Water Conservation Fund Act of 1965 (16 U.S.C. 460l–5) for the purchase of the Wilcox Ranch under subsection (b).

(d) MANAGEMENT OF LANDS.—Upon payment by the State of Utah of one-half of the purchase price of the Wilcox Ranch to the United States, or transfer by the State of Utah of lands of the same such value to the United States, the Secretary of the Interior shall transfer to the State of Utah all right, title, and interest of the United States in and to those Wilcox Ranch lands acquired under subsection (b) for management by the State Division of Wildlife Resources for wildlife habitat and public access.

SEC. 1006. ACQUISITION OF MINERAL AND GEOTHERMAL INTERESTS WITHIN MOUNT ST. HELENS NATIONAL VOLCANIC MONUMENT.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds the following:

(1) The Act entitled ''An Act to designate the Mount St. Helens National Volcanic Monument in the State of Washington, and for other purposes'', approved August 26, 1982 (96 Stat. 301; 16 U.S.C. 431 note), required the United States to acquire all land and interests in land in the Mount St. Helens National Volcanic Monument.

(2) The Act directed the Secretary of Agriculture to acquire the surface interests and the mineral and geothermal interests by separate exchanges and expressed the sense of Congress that the exchanges be completed by November 24, 1982, and August 26, 1983, respectively.

(3) The surface interests exchange was consummated timely, but the exchange of all mineral and geothermal interests has not yet been completed a decade and a half after the enactment of that Act.

(b) PURPOSE.—The purpose of this section is to facilitate and otherwise provide for the expeditious completion of the previously mandated Federal acquisition of private mineral and geothermal interests within the Mount St. Helens National Volcanic Monument.

(c) ACQUISITION.—Section 3 of the Act entitled ''An Act to designate the Mount St. Helens National Volcanic Monument in the State of Washington, and for other purposes'', approved August 26, 1982 (Public Law 97–243; 96 Stat. 302; 16 U.S.C. 431 note), is amended by adding at the end the following new subsections:

''(g) EXCHANGES FOR MINERAL AND GEOTHERMAL INTERESTS HELD BY CERTAIN COMPANIES.—

''(1) DEFINITION OF COMPANY.—In this subsection, the term 'company' means a company referred to in subsection (c) or its assigns or successors.

''(2) EXCHANGE REQUIRED.—Within 60 days after the date of enactment of this subsection, the Secretary of the Interior shall acquire by exchange the mineral and geothermal interests in the Monument of each company.

''(i) not more than 50 percent of the bonus or other payments made by successful bidders in any sales of mineral, oil, gas, or geothermal leases under the Mineral Leasing Act (30 U.S.C. 181 et seq.), the Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act (43 U.S.C. 1331 et seq.), or the Geothermal Steam Act of 1970 (30 U.S.C. 1001 et seq.) in the contiguous 48 States;

''(B) VALUE OF CREDITS.—The total credits of $4,200,000 in value issued under subparagraph (A) are deemed to equal the fair market value of all mineral and geothermal interests to be conveyed by exchange under paragraph (2).

''(4) ACCEPTANCE OF CREDITS.—The Secretary of the Interior shall accept credits issued under paragraph (3)(A) in the same manner as cash for the payments described in such paragraph. The use of the credits shall be subject to the laws (including regulations) governing such payments, to the extent the laws are consistent with this subsection.

''(5) TREATMENT OF CREDITS FOR DISTRIBUTION TO STATES.—All amounts in the form of credits accepted by the Secretary of the Interior under paragraph (4) for the payments described in paragraph (3)(A) shall be considered to be money received for the purpose of section 35 of the Mineral Leasing Act (30 U.S.C. 191) and section 20 of the Geothermal Steam Act of 1970 (30 U.S.C. 1019).

''(6) EXCHANGE ACCOUNT.—

''(A) ESTABLISHMENT.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, not later than 30 days after the completion of the exchange with a company required by paragraph (2), the Secretary of the Interior shall establish an exchange account for that company for the monetary credits issued to that company under paragraph (3). The account for a company shall be established with the Minerals Management Service of the Department of the Interior and have an initial balance of credits equal to $2,100,000.

''(B) USE OF CREDITS.—The credits in a company's account shall be available to the company for the purposes specified in paragraph (3)(A). The Secretary of the Interior shall adjust the balance of credits in the account to reflect credits accepted by the Secretary of the Interior pursuant to paragraph (4).

''(C) TRANSFER OR SALE OF CREDITS.—

''(i) TRANSFER OR SALE AUTHORIZED.—A company may transfer or sell any credits in the company's account to another person.

''(ii) USE OF TRANSFERRED CREDITS.—Credits transferred or sold under clause (i) may be used in accordance with this subsection only by a person that is qualified to bid on, or that holds, a mineral, oil, or gas lease under the Mineral Leasing Act (30 U.S.C. 181 et seq.), the Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act (43 U.S.C. 1331 et seq.), or the Geothermal Steam Act of 1970 (30 U.S.C. 1001 et seq.).

''(iii) NOTIFICATION.—Within 30 days after the transfer or sale of any credits by a company, that company shall notify the Secretary of the Interior of the transfer or sale. The transfer or sale of any credit shall not be considered valid until the Secretary of the Interior has received the notification required under this clause.

''(D) TIME LIMIT ON USE OF CREDITS.—On the date that is 5 years after the date on which an account is created under subparagraph (A) for a company, the Secretary of the Interior shall terminate that company's account. Any credits that originated in the terminated account and have not been used as of the termination date, including any credits transferred or sold under subparagraph (C), shall become unusable.

''(7) TITLE TO INTERESTS.—On the date of the establishment of an exchange account for a company under paragraph (6)(A), title to any mineral and geothermal interests that are held by the company and are to be acquired by the Secretary of the Interior under paragraph (2) shall transfer to the United States.

''(h) OTHER MINERAL AND GEOTHERMAL INTERESTS.—Within 180 days after the date of the enactment of this subsection, the Secretary shall submit to the Committee on Resources of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources of the Senate a report—

''(1) identifying all remaining privately held mineral interests within the boundaries of the Monument referred to in section 1(a); and

''(2) setting forth a plan and a timetable by which the Secretary would propose to complete the acquisition of such interests.''.

TITLE XII—DUTCH JOHN FEDERAL PROPERTY DISPOSITION AND ASSISTANCE

SEC. 1201. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the ''Dutch John Federal Property Disposition and Assistance Act of 1998''.

SEC. 1202. FINDINGS AND PURPOSES.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds that—

(1)(A) Dutch John, Utah, was founded by the Secretary of the Interior in 1958 on Bureau of Reclamation land as a community to house personnel, administrative offices, and equipment for project construction and operation of the Flaming Gorge Dam and Reservoir as authorized by the Act of April 11, 1956 (70 Stat. 105, chapter 203; 43 U.S.C. 620 et seq.); and

(B) permanent structures (including houses, administrative offices, equipment storage and maintenance buildings, and other public buildings and facilities) were constructed and continue to be owned and maintained by the Secretary of the Interior;

(2)(A) Bureau of Reclamation land surrounding the Flaming Gorge Reservoir (including the Dutch John community) was included within the boundaries of the Flaming Gorge National Recreation Area in 1968 under Public Law 90–540 (16 U.S.C. 460v et seq.);

(B) Public Law 90–540 assigned responsibility for administration, protection, and development of the Flaming Gorge National

Recreation Area to the Secretary of Agriculture and provided that lands and waters needed or used for the Colorado River Storage Project would continue to be administered by the Secretary of the Interior; and

(C) most structures within the Dutch John community (including the schools and public buildings within the community) occupy lands administered by the Secretary of Agriculture;

(3)(A) the Secretary of Agriculture and the Secretary of the Interior are unnecessarily burdened with the cost of continuing to provide basic services and facilities and building maintenance and with the administrative costs of operating the Dutch John community; and

(B) certain structures and lands are no longer essential to management of the Colorado River Storage Project or to management of the Flaming Gorge National Recreation Area;

(4)(A) residents of the community are interested in purchasing the homes they currently rent from the Secretary of the Interior and the land on which the homes are located;

(B) Daggett County, Utah, is interested in reducing the financial burden the County experiences in providing local government support services to a community that produces little direct tax revenue because of Federal ownership; and

(C) a withdrawal of the role of the Federal Government in providing basic direct community services to Dutch John would require local government to provide the services at a substantial cost;

(5)(A) residents of the Dutch John community are interested in self-government of the community; and

(B) with growing demands for additional commercial recreation services for visitors to the Flaming Gorge National Recreation Area and Ashley National Forest, there are opportunities for private economic development, but few private lands are available for the services; and

(6) the privatization and disposal to local government of certain lands in and surrounding Dutch John would be in the public interest.

(b) PURPOSES.—The purposes of this title are—

(1) to privatize certain lands in and surrounding Dutch John, Utah;

(2) to transfer jurisdiction of certain Federal property between the Secretary of Agriculture and the Secretary of the Interior;

(3) to improve the Flaming Gorge National Recreation Area;

(4) to dispose of certain residential units, public buildings, and facilities;

(5) to provide interim financial assistance to local government to defray the cost of providing basic governmental services;

(6) to achieve efficiencies in operation of the Flaming Gorge Dam and Reservoir and the Flaming Gorge National Recreation Area;

(7) to reduce long-term Federal outlays; and

(8) to serve the interests of the residents of Dutch John and Daggett County, Utah, and the general public.

(1) the land exchange authorized by section 8126 of Public Law 102–172 should be implemented without further delay;

(2) the Calista Corporation, the Native Regional Corporation organized under the authority of the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act for the Yupik Eskimos of Southwestern Alaska, which includes the majority of the Yukon Delta National Wildlife Refuge—

(A) has responsibilities provided for by the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act to help address social, cultural, economic, health, subsistence, and related issues within the region and among its villages, including the viability of the villages themselves, many of which are remote and isolated; and

(B) has been unable to fully carry out such responsibilities;

(3) the implementation of the exchange referenced in this subsection is essential to helping Calista utilize its assets to carry out those responsibilities and to realize the benefits of the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act;

(4) the parties to the exchange have been unable to reach agreement on the valuation of the lands and interests in lands to be conveyed to the United States under section 8126 of Public Law 102–172; and

(5) in light of the foregoing, it is appropriate and necessary in this unique situation that Congress authorize and direct the implementation of this exchange as set forth in this section in furtherance of the purposes and underlying goals of the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act and the Alaska National Interest Lands Conservation Act.

(b) LAND EXCHANGE IMPLEMENTATION.—Section 8126 of Public Law 102–172 (105 Stat. 1206) is amended to read as follows:

''SEC. 8126. (a)(1) In exchange for lands, partial estates, and land selection rights identified in the document entitled 'The Calista Conveyance and Relinquishment Document', dated October 28, 1991, as amended September 18, 1998 (hereinafter referred to as 'CCRD'), the United States will establish a property account for the Calista Corporation, a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Alaska, in the amount identified in the CCRD, and in accordance with the provisions of this Act.

''(2) The CCRD contains the land descriptions of the lands and interests in lands to be conveyed, the selections to be relinquished, the charges to entitlement, the quantity and class of entitlement to be transferred to the United States, the terms of the Kuskokwim Corporation Conservation Easement, and the amount that is authorized for the property account.

''(3) The covenants, terms, and conditions to be used in any transfers to the United States described in the CCRD shall be binding on the United States and the participating Native corporations and shall be a matter of Federal law.

''(b)(1) The aggregate values of such lands and interests in lands, together with compensation for the considerations set forth in congressional findings concerning the Calista Region and its villages, shall be the sum provided in section IX of the CCRD. The amounts credited to the property account described in this subsection shall not be subject to adjustment for minor changes in acreage resulting from preparation or correction of the land descriptions in the CCRD or the exclusion of any small tracts of land as a result of hazardous material surveys. The Secretary of the Interior shall maintain an accounting of the lands and interests in lands remaining to be conveyed or relinquished by Calista Corporation and the participating village corporations pursuant to this section. The Secretary of the Treasury on October 1, 1998, shall establish a property account on behalf of Calista Corporation.

''(2) The account shall be credited and available for use as provided in paragraph (4), according to the following schedule of percentages of the amount in section IX of the CCRD:

''(A) On October 1, 1999, and on October 1 of each year thereafter through October 1, 2005, the amount equal to 12.69 percent.

''(B) On October 1, 2007, the amount equal to 11.17 percent.

''(3)(A) Unless otherwise authorized by law, the aggregate amount of all credits to the account, pursuant to the schedule set forth in paragraph (2), shall be equal to the amount in section IX of the CCRD.

''(B) All amounts credited to the account shall be from amounts in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated and shall be available for expenditure without further appropriation and without fiscal year limitation.

''(4) The property account may not be used until all conveyances, relinquishments of selections, and adjustments to entitlements described in the CCRD have been made to and accepted by the United States. The Secretary of the Interior shall notify the Secretary of the Treasury when all requirements of the preceding sentence have been met. Immediately thereafter the Secretary of the Treasury shall comply with his duties under this paragraph including the computations of the amount in the account, the amount that may be expended in any particular Federal fiscal year, and the balance of the account after any transaction. The property account may be used in the same manner as any other property account held by any other Alaska Native Corporation.

''(5) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, Calista Corporation on its own behalf or on behalf of the village corporations identified in the CCRD, may assign any or all of the account upon written notification to the Secretary of the Treasury and the Secretary of the Interior.

''(6) The Secretary of the Treasury shall notify the Secretary of the Interior and Calista whenever there is a reduction in the property account, the purpose for such reduction and the remaining balance in the account. The Alaska State Office of the Bureau of Land Management shall be the official repository of such notices.

''(7) For the purpose of the determination of the applicability of section 7(i) of the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act (43 U.S.C. 1606(i)) to revenues generated pursuant to that section, such revenues shall be calculated in accordance with section IX of the CCRD.

''(8) The United States shall not be liable for the redistribution of benefits by the Calista Corporation to the participating Alaska Native village corporations pursuant to this section.

''(9) These transactions are not based on appraised property values and therefore shall not be used as a precedent for establishing property values.

''(10) Prior to the issuance of any conveyance documents or relinquishments and acceptance, the Secretary of the Interior and the participating Native corporations may, by mutual agreement, modify the legal descriptions included in the CCRD to correct clerical errors.

''(11) Property located in the State of Alaska that is purchased by use of the property account shall be considered and treated as conveyances of land selections under the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act (43 U.S.C. 1601 et seq.).

''(12) The conveyance of lands, partial estates and land selection rights and relinquishment or adjustments to entitlement made by the Alaska Native Corporations pursuant to this section and the use of the property account in the Treasury shall be treated as the receipt of land or any interest therein or cash in order to equalize the values of properties exchanged pursuant to section 22(f) of the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act (43 U.S.C. 1621(f)) as provided in the first sentence in section 21(c) of that Act (43 U.S.C. 1620(c)).

''(13) With respect to the content of the CCRD, the Secretary of the Interior, the Calista Regional Corporation, and the participating village corporations agree upon the lands, interests in lands, relinquishments and adjustments to entitlement described therein that may be offered to the United States pursuant to this section. These parties also agree with the amounts to be made available in the property account once all conveyances and relinquishments are completed, and the parties agree with the needs set forth in the congressional findings in section 6(a) of the ANCSA Land Bank Protection Act of 1998. The parties do not necessarily agree on the hortatory statements, descriptions, and attributions of resource values which are included in the CCRD as drafted by Calista. But such disagreements will not affect the implementation of this section.

''(14) Descriptions of resource values provided for surface lands which are not offered in the exchange and will remain privately owned by village corporations form no part of the consideration for the exchange.''.

TITLE XV—OTHER PROVISIONS

SEC. 1501. ADAMS NATIONAL HISTORICAL PARK.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds the following:

(1) In 1946, the Secretary of the Interior, by means of the authority provided to the Secretary under section 2 of the Act of August 21, 1935 (16 U.S.C. 462; commonly known as the Historic Sites, Buildings, and Antiquities Act), established the Adams Mansion National Historic Site in Quincy, Massachusetts.

(4) Section 312 of the National Parks and Recreation Act of 1978 (Public Law 95–625; 92 Stat. 3479) authorized the Secretary to accept the conveyance of the birthplaces in Quincy, Massachusetts, of John Adams, second President of the United States, and John Quincy Adams, sixth President of the United States, and to administer the birthplaces as part of the Adams National Historic Site.

(5) In 1980, Public Law 96–435 (94 Stat. 1861) authorized the Secretary to accept the conveyance of the United First Parish Church in Quincy, Massachusetts, the burial site of John Adams and his wife, Abigail Adams, and John Quincy Adams and his wife, Louisa Adams, and to administer the burial site as part of the Adams National Historic Site.

(6) The actions described in the preceding paragraphs to preserve for the benefit, education, and inspiration of present and future generations of Americans the home, property, birthplaces, and burial site of John Adams, Abigail Adams, John Quincy Adams, and Louisa Adams, have resulted in a multisite unit of the National Park System with no overarching enabling or authorizing legislation.

(7) The sites and resources associated with John Adams and his wife, Abigail Adams, and John Quincy Adams and his wife, Louisa Adams, deserve recognition as a national historical park in the National Park System.

SEC. 1504. DESIGNATION OF CALIFORNIA COASTAL ROCKS AND ISLANDS WILDERNESS AREA TO BE ADMINISTERED BY BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds the following:

(1) The California coastal rocks and islands are a critical component of a unique ecosystem of California.

(2) The California coastal rocks and islands comprise a narrow flight lane in the Pacific Flyway, providing protected nest sites as well as feeding and perching areas for millions of seabirds.

(3) This unique ecosystem is also important for the continued survival of endangered or threatened sea mammals, such as stellar sea lions and elephant seals.

(4) Designation of the California coastal rocks and islands as wilderness would add a significant natural component to the National Wilderness Preservation System.

(b) DESIGNATION AS WILDERNESS.—In furtherance of the purposes of the Wilderness Act (16 U.S.C. 1131 et seq.), all unreserved and unappropriated ocean islands in the State of California (as more fully described in subsection (c)) that, as of the date of the enactment of this Act, are under the jurisdiction of the Bureau of Land Management are hereby designated as wilderness and, therefore, as components of the National Wilderness Preservation System, and shall be known as the California Coastal Rocks and Islands Wilderness.

(c) DESCRIPTION OF COVERED ISLANDS.—The ocean islands covered by subsection (b) are those islands, reefs, rocks, and islets lying within three miles off the Pacific coast of the State of California from Oregon to the Mexican border and above the mean high tides, except those already reserved and appropriated for other uses as listed in the exhibit titled ''Lands Not Affected By Wilderness Designation'' dated February 26, 1997, and on file and available for public review in the California office of the Bureau of Land Management.

(d) MANAGEMENT AUTHORITY.—The California Coastal Rocks and Islands Wilderness shall remain under the jurisdiction of the Bureau of Land Management, and the islands, reefs, rocks, and islets designated as wilderness under subsection (b) are managed, as of the date of the enactment of this Act, under a memorandum of understanding by the California Department of Fish and Game.

(e) MANAGEMENT.—Subject to valid existing rights, the California Coastal Rocks and Islands Wilderness shall be administered by the Secretary of the Interior in accordance with the Wilderness Act, except that, with respect to such wilderness area, any reference in the Wilderness Act to the effective date of the Wilderness Act shall be deemed to be a reference to the date of the enactment of this Act and any reference to the Secretary of Agriculture shall be deemed to be a reference to the Secretary of the Interior.

(f) EFFECT ON OTHER LAWS.—This section shall take precedence over and supersede the temporary reservation made by the Act of February 18, 1931 (Chapter 226; 46 Stat. 1172).

SEC. 1505. SPANISH PEAKS WILDERNESS.

(a) AMENDMENT.—Section 2 of the Colorado Wilderness Act of 1993 (Public Law 103–77) is amended by adding the following new paragraph at the end of subsection (a):

''(20) Certain lands in the San Isabel National Forest which comprise approximately 18,000 acres, as generally depicted on a map entitled 'Proposed Spanish Peaks Wilderness', dated May 1997, and which shall be known as the Spanish Peaks Wilderness.''.

(b) MAP AND DESCRIPTION.—As soon as practicable after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Agriculture shall file a map and a boundary description of the area designated as the Spanish Peaks Wilderness by paragraph (20) of subsection 2(a) of the Colorado Wilderness Act of 1993, as amended by this section, with the Committee on Resources of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources of the Senate. Such map and boundary description shall have the same force and effect as if included in the Colorado Wilderness Act of 1993, except that if the Secretary is authorized to correct clerical and typographical errors in such boundary description and map. Such map and boundary description shall be on file and available for public inspection in the Office of the Chief of the Forest Service, Department of Agriculture.

(c) CONFORMING CHANGE.—Section 10 of the Colorado Wilderness Act of 1993 (Public Law 103–77) is hereby repealed, and section 11 of such Act is renumbered as section 10.

SEC. 1506. ROSIE THE RIVETER NATIONAL PARK SERVICE AFFILIATED SITE.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds the following:

(1) The City of Richmond, California, is located on the northeastern shore of San Francisco Bay and consists of several miles of waterfront which have been used for shipping and industry since the beginning of the 20th century. During the years of World War II, the population of Richmond grew from 220 to over 100,000.

(2) An area of Richmond, California, now known as Marina Park and Marina Green, was the location in the 1940's of the Richmond Kaiser Shipyards, which produced Liberty and Victory ships during World War II.

(3) Thousands of women of all ages and ethnicities moved from across the United States to Richmond, California, in search of high paying jobs and skills never before available to women in the shipyards.

(4) Kaiser Corporation supported women workers by installing child care centers at the shipyards so mothers could work while their children were well cared for nearby.

(5) These women, referred to as ''Rosie the Riveter'' and ''Wendy the Welder'', built hundreds of liberty and victory ships in record time for use by the United States Navy. Their labor played a crucial role in increasing American productivity during the war years and in meeting the demand for naval ships.

(6) In part the Japanese plan to defeat the United States Navy was predicated on victory occurring before United States shipyards could build up its fleet of ships.

(7) The City of Richmond, California, has dedicated the former site of Kaiser Shipyard #2 as Rosie the Riveter Memorial Park and will construct a memorial honoring American women's labor during World War II. The memorial will be representative of one of the Liberty ships built on the site during the war effort.

(8) The City of Richmond, California, is committed to collective interpretative oral histories for the public to learn of the stories of the ''Rosies'' and ''Wendys'' who worked in the shipyards.

(9) The Rosie the Riveter Park is a nationally significant site because there tens of thousands of women entered the work force for the first time, working in heavy industry to support their families and the War effort. This was a turning point for the Richmond, California, area and the nation as a whole, when women joined the workforce and successfully completed jobs for which previously it was believed they were incapable.

(b) STUDY.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of the Interior shall conduct a feasibility study to determine whether—

(A) the Rosie the Riveter Park located in Richmond, California, is suitable for designation as an affiliated site to the National Park Service; and

(B) the Rosie the Riveter Memorial Committee established by the City of Richmond, California, with respect to that park is eligible for technical assistance for interpretative functions relating to the park, including preservation of oral histories from former works at the Richmond Kaiser Shipyards.

(2) REPORTS.—Not later than 6 months after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall complete the study under paragraph (1) and submit a report containing findings, conclusions, and recommendations from the study to the Committee on Resources of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Energy and Environment of the Senate.

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to House resolution 573, the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN) and the gentleman from California (Mr. MILLER) each will control 10 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN).

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume to explain the purpose of the amendment to H.R. 4570.

Many of the additions contained in the amendment are small word changes and technical corrections. With a bill this size, it is reasonable to expect a number of refinements along the way. We have tried to spot and make corrections to all those areas that require corrections, and I think we caught most of them.

Mr. Chairman, the vast majority of the provisions contained in this bill are noncontroversial and bipartisan. However, we have made major concessions to the more controversial measures and included revised language in this amendment. In particular, the provisions for Cumberland Island and the Tuskegee Institute have undergone considerable changes in order to make these more acceptable yet still deal with important concerns.

Likewise, this amendment contains major changes to the conveyance of property at the Canyon Ferry Reservoir in Montana, to the hazardous fuels reduction programs in our national forests, to the forest health-NEPA parity program, and a program for improved operation and maintenance of water impoundments in the Emigrant Wilderness of California. Furthermore, this amendment has made significant and agreeable modifications to the provisions dealing with land claims under the Treaty of Guadelupe-Hidalgo in New Mexico.

Mr. Chairman, we have gone out of our way to craft this amendment to address the majority of the concerns by both the administration and the minority. This included eliminating from this package a number of provisions that were very important to us. For example, the highly controversial Antiquities Act provision that many of the people got up and talked about is not in the bill. That has been entirely deleted from the omnibus bill.

This provision was especially important to me and I still believe it is a good and necessary idea. However, I will strike this provision. Likewise, both the C&O Canal and the Hell's Canyon provisions have been eliminated. These were strongly opposed by the administration and we reluctantly, yet willingly agreed to compromise and strike these provisions in the spirit of compromise.

We have also made noncontroversial additions to the original bill which followed the intent of this landmark legislation which create new historic areas and heritage areas along with expanding national park units. For example, the additions contained in the amendment will create the Kate Mullany Historic Site in New York sponsored by the gentleman from New York (Mr. MCNULTY), establish the Lackawanna Valley Heritage Area in Pennsylvania sponsored by the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. MCDADE), and authorize Route 66 as a National Historic Highway sponsored by the gentlewoman from New Mexico (Mrs. WILSON). This amendment will also expand Bandelier National Monument in New Mexico sponsored by the gentleman from New Mexico (Mr. REDMOND), expand the Weir Farm Historic Site in Connecticut sponsored by the gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. MALONEY), and authorize an expansion of the Chickamauga-Chattanooga National Military Park sponsored by the gentleman from Tennessee (Mr. WAMP).

Mr. Chairman, these new additions easily fall within our goal to further benefit our national parks and public lands. This amendment crafted with bipartisanship goes further to absolutely assure that our national parks, public lands and national resources are cared for and properly managed so that visitors can enjoy and experience these lands for many generations to come.

Lastly, Mr. Chairman, in the spirit of bipartisanship, we have added in the amendment a number of provisions that the minority strongly and earnestly wanted to see as part of this package. These provisions include the Adams National Historical Park sponsored by the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. DELAHUNT) which consolidates the current Adams Historical Sites into a historical park and allows for further acquisitions of a small parcel of property.

The amendment also allows for expansion of the Frederick Law Olmstead National Historic Site sponsored by the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. FRANK). Another provision would designate two new wilderness areas, the Spanish Peaks Wilderness in Colorado sponsored by the gentleman from Colorado (Mr. SKAGGS) and the California Coastal Rocks and Islands Wilderness sponsored by the gentleman from California (Mr. FARR).

One other provision designates the Dante Fascell Biscayne National Park Visitor Center as the official name of the visitors center in Biscayne Bay National Park, sponsored by the gentleman from Florida (Mr. DEUTSCH) and cosponsored by the gentleman from Florida (Mr. HASTINGS) and the gentlewoman from Florida (Mrs. MEEKS) among others.

Lastly, Mr. Chairman, a new provision authorizes a feasibility study of Rosie the Riveter in California, sponsored by the ranking minority member of the House Committee on Resources the gentleman from California (Mr. MILLER).

I strongly urge all my colleagues to support the amendment to H.R. 4570, especially those Members, Republicans and Democrats alike, that have sponsored legislation which is part of this package.

REQUEST FOR MODIFICATION OF AMENDMENT NO. 1 IN THE NATURE OF A SUBSTITUTE OFFERED BY MR. HANSEN

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment I have just offered be modified to strike section 1504.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the modification.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. HANSEN asks unanimous consent to modify his amendment No. 1 in the nature of a substitute as follows: ''Strike section 1504''.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the modification?

Mr. GALLEGLY. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Chairman. I rise reluctantly because I have tremendous respect for my chairman. He has done a yeoman's job. I do not know of anyone that has worked harder to try to reach a consensus on a very difficult piece of legislation, a very important piece of legislation. But I will reluctantly oppose the unanimous consent.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman object?

Mr. GALLEGLY. I do object.

The CHAIRMAN. Objection is heard.

Mr. MILLER of California. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. VENTO).

(Mr. VENTO asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Chairman, I do not object to the gentleman from Utah, the chairman of the subcommittee, trying to improve this product. It needs a lot of improvement. That is for sure. That much, we can agree upon. I think he has made a step forward to improve it. But you remember that sausage I was talking about a little earlier, about part of it having some bad product in it. When you add spices to that sausage, you can add a little more salt to it, for a preservative, I might add, not to rub it in or anything, but in the end it still does not pass the smell test and it still is not edible.

I appreciate the gentleman's effort to negotiate on his own, not with me, not with the gentleman from California (Mr. MILLER), not with the administration, not with our good friend the gentleman from New York (Mr. BOEHLERT), but the end result is that still the gentleman, as I heard our chairman talk about, well, he looked over some of these bills and he decided they were all right. Well, that is just fine. I am glad that he decided that, and maybe you decided that with him. I trust your judgment, but I think frankly that many of these provisions that have not had hearings may be good provisions, they may not. I know that we have worked hard on that subcommittee. I have sat through a lot of hearings myself. I just think that we can do better than bringing this sort of bill with 100 different provisions on the floor and trying to pass it at this late date without the type of agreement. As I said before, I think even with this sugar-coated substitute, these new spices to the sausage and this new salt preservative that you are trying to put in here to cure this, I think we have to go back and start over and look at these provisions, and I think we could do an omnibus bill. But I think at this point in the process, there does not appear to be the willingness to excise from this all of the elements which are a problem.

Frankly many of these provisions have passed and are in the other body and are being sent to the President. I appreciate the fact that all this work that has gone on for the last 2 years deserves positive consideration. But this is not the way to get it done. I think trying to put these things on the floor, and the reason I think that this is being done is that this is a train that is being made to pull a lot of bad policy into law. I think that is what you are trying to do. I think it is the wrong way to do it. It is wrong to put this stuff in the appropriation bills, it is wrong to put it in this omnibus bill and not give it the type of deliberation and discussion that is deserved in this.

This substitute, while I do not oppose it because I think that this bill, as I have said, needs a lot of improvement but a lot more than this substitute is providing today. In the end, I hope that the Members will vote against this and join the environmental groups, the administration, we now have a letter from the Secretary of Agriculture which I believe should be put in the RECORD, the Secretary of the Interior is against it, the administration itself is, the President has stated his intention to veto if it ever were to get that far. I think at this late date it just does a disservice to the Members who want to get projects done to pursue a policy and an attitude on this floor that is going nowhere fast.

Mr. MILLER of California. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from New York (Mr. BOEHLERT).

Mr. BOEHLERT. Mr. Chairman, I have no objection to this amendment which does make some real improvements in the bill. But I would simply point out that the amendment does not fix the fundamental problems with the bill which I have already outlined several times today, and others have done the same.

Let me emphasize that this amendment, despite what Members may have heard or seen reported, does not take care of the objections that the environmentalists and the administration had with this bill. It does not incorporate, as has been suggested, most of what I and other moderates were seeking in negotiations. It does not touch the most troubling parts of this bill.

So while I appreciate and support the amendment by the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN), I would urge my colleagues not to fall into thinking that it makes the bill acceptable. Far from it. I continue to urge my colleagues to oppose this bill.

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BOEHLERT. I yield to the gentleman from Utah.

Mr. HANSEN. Would the gentleman specifically tell me what the environmental community objects to in this bill? I have heard that for 2, 3 hours now.

Mr. BOEHLERT. I will be glad to. I will share once again what I have shared with the gentleman many times before, with members of his staff, a whole list of objections.

Mr. HANSEN. A specific thing, not a generality if I could from the gentleman from New York.

Mr. BOEHLERT. I will be glad to share this with my distinguished chairman.

Mr. MILLER of California. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, the manager's amendment is really immaterial here. As the gentleman from New York (Mr. BOEHLERT) has pointed out, it fails to remove any of the fatal flaws that exist in this legislation. We have been told now several times by the supporters of this bill that they have compromised and they have worked with the administration and others, except the fact of the matter is on those areas where they talked to the administration, where they did not get the answers they wanted, they just stopped talking and, therefore, the administration continues to oppose the legislation.

We have just received a letter from the Department of Agriculture, from the Secretary of Agriculture that continues to be opposed to the Chugach Alaska provisions in this bill because it gives away much more public land than is necessary and it gives it away without compensating the taxpayers. That is why the taxpayer organizations continue to oppose this. And it does it in an environmentally insensitive way. That is why the environmental organizations continue to oppose this. And it goes on and on and on and on.

What they have tried to do now in the 11th hour is add a little bit of frosting to this old piece of legislation to see if they could get one or two more votes to vote for it. The fact of the matter is that this legislation remains unacceptable to a bipartisan coalition in this House, to the major environmental organizations, to many local environmental organizations and citizen organizations. This legislation remains unacceptable to taxpayer organizations in this country and remains unacceptable to the Department of Agriculture, to the Department of Interior and to the administration. That is why it is going to get a veto and that is why it is not going to get taken up in the Senate. That is why we ought to kill it now and then go back to the business of trying to put together legislation that deals with those projects that have bipartisan support, that deals with those projects that are noncontroversial in terms of the environmental insults, and drop from this bill, or drop from this negotiation those items that are far too controversial to allow them to be signed into law before the end of this session. Those items should have been brought out here on the floor of the Congress. They should have been debated openly. We had many, many hours in every week of this session where we went home in the middle of the afternoon, where we did not show up until Tuesday night, where we left on Thursday morning and we could have been debating this legislation. But the effort here has been to try to jam the members of this Congress so the Members of this Congress would try to jam this vote and to somehow agree because they got one small project or one small commission or one small boundary change that somehow they would then enable the real agenda of this legislation to pass, which is huge environmental insults that cannot stand on their own, cannot take the light of day, cannot take the scrutiny of any of the citizens organizations or of the public interest or of the taxpayers.

We ought not to be doing that. Members ought not to take and trade their integrity for some small bill when this bill insults taxpayers, when it is a waste of public moneys, when it insults the environmental policy in this country in the manner in which it does. Members ought not to make that trade. This bill ought to go down and then those Members that have good pieces of legislation that are noncontroversial, that are bipartisan and that have the support of environmental organizations and the administration and taxpayer organizations, that bill ought to be put together and it will pass out of here on unanimous consent. That is how you legislate. That is how you bring environmental progress to this country. You do not do it in the 11th hour at the end of a session where you have had plenty of time and then try to see whether or not you can squeeze every Member to vote against their conscience so that somehow we can have these bills that have been opposed for many, many, many months. Many months, where there has not been discussion about them and bills that they have refused to submit to the committee because the committee probably would not approve them, bills that they have submitted to no hearings because the hearings would be controversial and probably end up with people opposing the legislation from local organizations and elsewhere. Now all of a sudden they decide that all of that has got to be put into one bill and Members are told to take it or leave it. The Members ought to leave it. Then we ought to get back to the business of legislating legislation in the environmental area, in the public lands area that we can be proud of, that we can talk about and we can show the American people that we care about the environmental assets of this country without destroying them in the name of saving a few others in different parts of the country.

I would urge Members on a bipartisan basis, my colleagues here, to oppose this legislation and then let us get on with the people's business.

Mr. Chairman, I yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. VENTO).

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Chairman, I just want to comment. I think it is regrettable. At the end of the session we do not need this type of polarization. I appreciate the gentleman from Utah attempting to mollify some of the provisions in the bill that are troublesome, but frankly it simply does not go far enough. I think my fear is at the end of the session like this that Members want an opportunity to demonstrate that they are against these types of provisions. We went through this catharsis for the last 3½ years, in the last Congress passing laws like logging without laws, riders on various things. I had hoped that this session that we would at least be able to come to compromise as we did toward the end of the last session, and I think that that is possible. But this step is a step in the wrong direction. I fear this will in fact end up polarizing the circumstances. I rise in opposition to this bill again and ask Members to oppose it.

□ 1515

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from California (Mr. POMBO).

Mr. POMBO. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding this time to me, and I come to the floor reluctantly opposed to the bill and reluctantly opposed to the manager's amendment.

I heard the gentleman from California (Mr. MILLER) a minute ago say that the manager's amendment was inconsequential, that it really did not do anything. Well, it does do things. It takes a lot of things out of the bill that I care about, it takes things out that I think made this bill better than it will be after the manager's amendment passes. It also adopts a provision that will be included in this particular bill that is known as the California Coastal Rocks and Islands Wilderness Act of 1998 that I do not think anybody in this place knows or has any clue how many thousands of rocks and islands and reefs and everything else that will be included in that; nobody has any idea what will be included in that. And I oppose including that in this bill.

I also believe that the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN) went way too far in accepting changes to try to make this bill work, and I know he was trying to put a bill together that would work for people, he was trying to put good legislation together that we could pass and that the President would sign. But as far as this Member is concerned, he went way too far. He went way too far in trying to codify and trying to accept the things that these people that are down here complaining about the bill wanted. He did not get a single vote for doing all that. And as far as I am concerned, he ought to strip all that stuff out, and then maybe we will vote on it.

But I appreciate the gentleman having yielded to me.

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Chairman I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, I found this very interesting on this debate on the Hansen amendment as I have not heard anyone talk to the Hansen amendment except myself when we started out, and, as long as we have a few minutes here, I really appreciate my friend from New York giving me the final time in all this debate that we can find out what these people object to, and they have a list of five here. I am having a very difficult time seeing where it is in any part of the bill.

It would remove areas from wilderness protection. I guess they are talking about one of these 90 something bills in the Cumberland where there is a small little road goes through so people can have access. That is as far as we can figure that out. Sets new weaker guidelines for wilderness protection; I assume they are talking about the big horn sheep which I talked about before where here we are trying to establish a herd of desert big horn sheep, and it would not be called wilderness, but it would be preserved. But I guess some people cannot get enough, and the only place I know of in America where we can have a herd of big horn sheep, but we are against those poor sheep. That is fine. Veterinarians cannot go in and take care of them because they have to do it with a helicopter, and we cannot have guzzlers to give them a drink, but that is all right, if we just every little square inch of grounds got to be wilderness. Forget these poor sheep in this thing. This idea of the poor Indians up there in the tribe in Alaska, these American natives, cannot have access to their own property. That is the other one I see. So, if we have an emergency of some kind, let us fly a plane in there in turbulent weather and kill everybody on board, and as a past pilot I can tell you they would not get me to do it, but apparently some have tried. We have had a lot of debts up there, but let us worry about this one little road going across there so these American natives can get out. We do not want that to happen. Keep every square inch in there to take care of it.

Makes no sense to me, and that is all I can see on the omnibus park bill that the environmentalists object to. That is all there seems to be.

But on the flip side of the argument look at all of the good things that are in this bill. I think it was interesting, my friend from California says that Congressman HANSEN went too far. My gosh, there is 435 big egos in this place, and everyone of us goes too far occasionally. I am trying to work out a compromise; that is why it has got so many things in for my friends on the other side of the aisle.

And again, there is no tent around here; we are trying to come up with a compromise piece of legislation that we can be proud of. I do not know. It is easy to stand in the kitchen and talk to the kids and tell them how things go, but standing on this floor is a lot harder, and I would hope people would realize, yes, I did not get everything I wanted, I did not cross every T and dot every I and get everything I personally wanted because my ego is so big I have got to have it all. Let us just say here a good compromise, and drop these egos around here and vote for something good for the American people

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment in the nature of a substitute offered by the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN).

The amendment in the nature of a substitute was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. Under the rule, the Committee rises.

Accordingly, the Committee rose; and the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. HASTERT) having assumed the chair, Mr. NEY, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the bill (H.R. 4570) to provide for certain boundary adjustments and conveyances involving public lands, to establish and improve the management of certain heritage areas, historic areas, National Parks, wild and scenic rivers, and national trails, to protect communities by reducing hazardous fuels levels on public lands, and for other purposes, pursuant to House Resolution 573, he reported the bill back to the House with an amendment adopted by the Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the rule the previous question is ordered.

The question is on the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was read the third time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the passage of the bill.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. MILLER of California. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Evidently a quorum is not present.

The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 123, nays 302, not voting 9, as follows:

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

Mr. GEKAS. Mr. Speaker, earlier today, October 7, 1998, I was unavoidably detained while discussing the conference committee report on bankruptcy reform and missed a recorded vote on H.R. 4570, the Omnibus National Parks and Public Lands Act of 1998. Had I been present, I would have voted ''aye'' on rollcall No. 489, to agree to H.R. 4570.

(2) by inserting after section 5545a the following new section:

''§ 5545b. Pay for firefighters

''(a) This section applies to an employee whose position is classified in the firefighter occupation in conformance with the GS–081 standard published by the Office of Personnel Management, and whose normal work schedule, as in effect throughout the year, consists of regular tours of duty which average at least 106 hours per biweekly pay period.

''(2) For purposes of sections 5595(c), 5941, 8331(3), and 8704(c), and for such other purposes as may be expressly provided for by law or as the Office of Personnel Management may by regulation prescribe, the basic pay of a firefighter subject to this subsection shall include—

''(3) The Office of Personnel Management may prescribe regulations, with respect to firefighters subject to this section, that would permit an agency to reduce or eliminate the variation in the amount of firefighters' biweekly pay caused by work scheduling cycles that result in varying hours in the regular tours of duty from pay period to pay period. Under such regulations, the pay that a firefighter would otherwise receive for regular tours of duty over the work scheduling cycle shall, to the extent practicable, remain unaffected.''.

JOINT EXPLANATORY STATEMENT

The managers on the part of the House and the Senate at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 4104), making appropriations for the Treasury Department, the United States Postal Service, the Executive Office of the President, and certain Independent Agencies, for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1999, and for other purposes, submit the following joint statement to the House and the Senate in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon by the managers and recommended in the accompanying conference report.

The conference agreement on the Treasury and General Government Appropriations Act, 1999, incorporates some of the language and allocations set forth in House Report 105–592 and Senate Report 105–251. The language in these reports should be complied with unless specifically addressed in the accompanying statement of managers.

Senate Amendment: The Senate deleted the entire House bill after the enacting clause and inserted the Senate bill. The conference agreement includes a revised bill.

Throughout the accompanying explanatory statement, the managers refer to the Committee and the Committees on Appropriations. Unless otherwise noted, in both instances the managers are referring to the House Subcommittee on Treasury, Postal Service, and General Government and the Senate Subcommittee on Treasury and General Government.

REPROGRAMMING AND TRANSFER OF FUNDS GUIDELINES

Due to continuing issues associated with agency requests for reprogramming and transfer of funds and use of unobligated balances, the conferees have agreed to reprogramming guidelines included in House

Report 105–592. Those guidelines shall be complied with by all agencies funded by the Treasury and General Government Appropriations Act, 1999:

1. Except under extraordinary and emergency situations, the Committees on Appropriations will not consider requests for a reprogramming or a transfer of funds, or use of unobligated balances, which are submitted after the close of the third quarter of the fiscal year, June 30;

2. Clearly stated and detailed documentation presenting justification for the reprogramming, transfer, or use of unobligated balances shall accompany each request;

3. For agencies, departments, or offices receiving appropriations in excess of $20,000,000, a reprogramming shall be submitted if the amount to be shifted to or from any object class, budget activity, program line item, or program activity involved is in excess of $500,000 or 10 percent, whichever is greater, of the object class, budget activity, program line item, or program activity;

4. For agencies, departments, or offices receiving appropriations less than $20,000,000, a reprogramming shall be submitted if the amount to be shifted to or from any object class, budget activity, program line item, or program activity involved is in excess of $50,000, or 10 percent, whichever is greater, of the object class, budget activity, program line item, or program activity;

5. For any action where the cumulative effect of below threshold reprogramming actions, or past reprogramming and/or transfer actions added to the request, would exceed the dollar threshold mentioned above, a reprogramming shall be submitted;

6. For any action which would result in a major change to the program or item which is different than that presented to and approved by either of the Committees, or the Congress, a reprogramming shall be submitted;

7. For any action where funds earmarked by either of the Committees for a specific activity are proposed to be used for a different activity, a reprogramming shall be submitted; and,

8. For any action where funds earmarked by either of the Committees for a specific activity are in excess of the project or activity requirement, and are proposed to be used for a different activity, a reprogramming shall be submitted.

Additionally, each request shall include a declaration that, as of the date of the request, none of the funds included in the request have been obligated, and none will be obligated, until the Committees on Appropriations have approved the request.

TITLE I—DEPARTMENT OF THE TREASURY

DEPARTMENTAL OFFICES

SALARIES AND EXPENSES

The conference agreement appropriates $123,151,000 for Departmental Offices instead of $122,889,000 as proposed by the House and $120,671,000 as proposed by the Senate. The amount appropriated includes: $3,704,000 for mandatory cost increases; an additional $470,000 for the Office of Tax Policy; an additional $255,000 for the Office of Economic Policy; an additional $499,000 for International Affairs Policies and Programs; an additional $801,000 for Enforcement Policies and Programs; an additional $866,000 for the Office of Foreign Assets Control; an additional $239,000 for Fiscal and Financial Policies and Programs; and an additional $300,000 for Treasury-wide management policies and practices. The conferees are aware that additional funds in the amount of $1,238,000 are required in fiscal year 1999 for Year 2000 compliance. The conference agreement also includes funding to allow the Department to provide no more than $500,000 in contract awards to the National Law Center for Inter-American Free Trade as proposed by the House.

The conferees have agreed to provide an additional $1,200,000 within this account for the Under Secretary of Enforcement to continue the operations of the Office of Professional Responsibility, should he so desire, as proposed by the Senate.

The conference agreement includes language which provides that the Office of Foreign Assets Control shall be funded at no less than $6,560,800 as proposed by the Senate instead of $5,517,000 as proposed by the House. The conferees have included language authorizing the Department to charge both direct and indirect costs to the Office of Foreign Assets Control in the implementation of this floor.

The Senate bill included language in this and a number of other accounts which provides that funds appropriated in this Act may be used for Year 2000 computer conversion costs pending the availability of funding for that purpose in a separate appropriation. The conferees have deleted that language in each instance in which it occurs and have instead included a new general provision (Section 513) to permit the use of funds provided in this Act to initiate or continue projects or activities to the extent necessary to achieve Year 2000 computer conversion until such time as supplemental appropriations are provided for those activities.

The conference agreement deletes language proposed by the House which provides compensation for losses incurred due to the denial of entry into the United States of certain firearms. The conferees have included language in Title VI (Section 646) of the bill to provide for this relief through the use of the Judgement Fund, as proposed by the Senate.

TREASURY LAW ENFORCEMENT VEHICLES

No later than 90 days after enactment of this Act, the Department shall submit to the Committees on Appropriations directives to implement the management of law enforcement vehicle usage in the Department. These directives shall include: development of a Department-wide vehicle management system to ensure adequate oversight of vehicle usage; standards and procedures for full compliance with home-to-work regulations on vehicle use; verifiable determination that vehicle use throughout the Department is in support of law enforcement purposes only; and implementation of a log tracking system by activity and specific use of law enforcement vehicles.

UNDER SECRETARY FOR ENFORCEMENT

The conferees direct the Department of the Treasury to submit, with its fiscal year 2000 budget request, detailed budget justification materials for the Office of the Under Secretary for Enforcement.

OFFICE OF PROFESSIONAL RESPONSIBILITY

SALARIES AND EXPENSES

The conferees agree to provide no separate funding for the Office of Professional Responsibility (OPR) in fiscal year 1999 as proposed by the Senate, but instead have provided adequate funding within the Departmental Offices appropriations for the Under Secretary for Enforcement to continue the work of this office should he so desire. The conferees expect that the Department also will use approximately $350,000 in reprogramming authority, the anticipated share of the unobligated balance of funds at the end of fiscal year 1998, to augment this appropriation.

In fiscal year 1998, the Under Secretary for Enforcement was charged with tasking OPR to conduct a comprehensive review of integrity issues and other matters related to the potential vulnerability of the United States Customs Service to corruption, to include examination of charges of professional misconduct and corruption as well as analysis of the efficacy of departmental and bureau internal affairs systems. The conferees expect that this work will continue, and that it will be in conjunction with related efforts funded through the Customs Integrity Awareness Program.

AUTOMATION ENHANCEMENT

The conferees agree to provide $28,690,000 for Automation Enhancement instead of $31,190,000 as proposed by the House and $28,990,000 as proposed by the Senate. The amount provided shall be transferred as follows:

Customs Service.—$8,000,000 for the Automated Commercial Environment.

Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms.—$3,700,000 for a human resources system re-engineering pilot program.

Departmental Offices.—$16,990,000, of which $5,400,000 is for the International Trade Data System, of which $6,577,000 is for Department-wide human resources re-engineering program management and implementation, of which $3,813,000 is for Departmental Offices productivity enhancement, of which $1,000,000 is for the Treasury Vehicle Management System, and of which $200,000 is for Department-wide implementation of the Treasury Information System Architecture Framework.

The conferees agree that the funds provided shall remain available until September 30, 2000, as proposed by the House rather than remain available until expended as proposed by the Senate.

The conferees are aware that additional funds in the amount of $2,762,000 are required in fiscal year 1999 for Year 2000 compliance.

AUTOMATED COMMERCIAL ENVIRONMENT

The conferees agree to provide $8,000,000 for the Customs Service ACE project, with the proviso that $6,000,000 shall not be available for obligation until the Treasury's Chief Information Officer, through the Treasury Investment Review Board, concurs on the plan and milestone schedule for the deployment of the system. Furthermore, $6,000,000 shall not be obligated until the Commissioner of Customs provides to the Committees on Appropriations an Enterprise Information Systems Architecture (EISA) for Customs that covers all Customs' areas of business—not just trade compliance. For the EISA to be acceptable, it must comply with the Treasury Information Systems Architecture Framework, include measures to enforce compliance, and be approved by the Treasury Investment Review Board.

The conferees are pleased with the efforts made by the Treasury Department to exercise some management responsibility for the ACE project, which represents an enormous information technology investment for the Department and Customs. Clear benefits are already being seen in the quality of analysis applied to investment decisions, and coordination with other information technology projects such as the International Trade Data System (ITDS). The conferees support the continued exercise of strong oversight by the Treasury Department over this project.

FINANCIAL CRIMES ENFORCEMENT NETWORK

The conferees agree to provide $24,000,000 as proposed by the House instead of $23,670,000 as proposed by the Senate. In addition, the conferees agree that the funds shall be available with no earmark for the GATEWAY program, as had been proposed by the Senate.

TREASURY FORFEITURE FUND

The conferees expect that the super surplus for the Treasury Forfeiture Fund will continue to be large in fiscal year 1999, and direct the Department to provide the Committees its plan for intended use of these resources in a timely fashion, as well as in its presentation of the fiscal year 2000 budget request.

The conferees support the use of the super surplus to further advance Treasury Department law enforcement programs, and acknowledge the Department's plan to use its surplus for a variety of activities. The conferees direct the Department to use $11,012,000 as follows: $5,512,000 for the construction of a P–3 hangar in Corpus Christi, Texas, for the United States Customs Service; $4,000,000 for the CEASEFIRE/IBIS program, and $1,500,000 for the Global Transpark Customs Information Project. The conferees also agree that super surplus funds may be used for replacement of law enforcement vehicles, instead of the prohibition proposed by the Senate.

VIOLENT CRIME REDUCTION PROGRAMS

The conferees agree to provide $132,000,000 as proposed by the House and Senate. This amount is to be used as follows:

Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms:
GREAT administration/ training	$3,000,000
GREAT Program Grants	13,000,000

BUREAU OF ALCOHOL, TOBACCO AND FIREARMS

The conferees agree to provide $3,000,000 to ATF for the management of the GREAT program as proposed by the House rather than in the ATF Salaries and Expenses appropriation as proposed by the Senate. The funding proposed by the Senate for laboratory and investigative support is funded under ATF's Salaries and Expenses appropriation.

GANG RESISTANCE EDUCATION AND TRAINING

The conferees agree to provide $13,000,000 to ATF, instead of $10,000,000 as proposed by the House and $13,239,000 as proposed by the Senate for grants to local law enforcement organizations for the Gang Resistance Education and Training (GREAT) program. The GREAT program has been enthusiastically endorsed by communities in Colorado, North Carolina and Wisconsin. The conferees direct that qualified law enforcement and prevention organizations from these areas be funded under GREAT.

The conferees are aware of concerns about the lack of a long-term evaluation of the impact of this program. Therefore, the conferees urge ATF to contract with the National Academy of Sciences, Committee on Law and Justice, to conduct an independent evaluation of the GREAT program.

CUSTOMS SERVICE

The conferees agree to provide $65,472,000, instead of $66,472,000 as proposed by the House and $54,000,000 as proposed by the Senate. Within these funds, the conferees include $54,000,000 for narcotics detection technology, $9,500,000 for passenger processing, $972,000 for canopy construction, and $1,000,000 for additional technologies associated with the child pornography cyber-smuggling initiative. The conferees agree that $2,400,000 of the Customs Salaries and Expenses account should be used for the cyber-smuggling initiative, as proposed by the Senate.

SECRET SERVICE

The conferees agree to provide $22,628,000, instead of $14,528,000 as proposed by the House and $15,403,000 as proposed by the Senate. Within these funds, the conferees include $5,000,000 for counterfeiting investigations, $7,732,000 for campaign protection activities, $6,700,000 for vehicle replacement, and $3,196,000 for forensic and related support of investigations of missing and exploited children. Of the amounts provided for missing and exploited children, the conferees agree to provide $1,196,000 for the continued operations of the Child Exploitation Unit at the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children.

FINANCIAL CRIMES ENFORCEMENT NETWORK

The conferees agree to provide $1,400,000 for FinCEN as proposed by the Senate, instead of no funding as proposed by the House. Within these funds, the conferees include $800,000 for cyberpayment studies; $300,000 for Suspicious Activity Report analysis; $200,000 for training and support for State and local GATEWAY participation; and $100,000 for money laundering regulations.

FEDERAL LAW ENFORCEMENT TRAINING CENTER

The conferees agree to provide no VCRTF funding for FLETC as proposed by the House, instead of $1,158,000 as proposed by the Senate. The affected programs—rural law enforcement training and equipment replacement—are funded in FLETC's Salaries and Expenses appropriation.

INTERAGENCY CRIME AND DRUG ENFORCEMENT

The conferees agree to provide $24,000,000 for ICDE as proposed by the House, instead of $45,000,000 as proposed by the Senate. An additional $51,900,000 is provided in the Interagency Law Enforcement account. The total of $75,900,000 fully funds the President's request.

OFFICE OF NATIONAL DRUG CONTROL POLICY

The conferees agree to provide $2,500,000 for ONDCP, instead of $14,000,000 as proposed by the House and no funding as proposed by the Senate. $1,000,000 of this funding would cover the costs of continuing support for Model State Drug Law Conferences, as proposed by the House. $13,000,000 proposed by the House for continued funding for the technology transfer program run by the Counterdrug Technology Assessment Center will instead be funded in the ONDCP Salaries and Expenses account, as proposed by the Senate.

HIGH INTENSITY DRUG TRAFFICKING AREAS

The conferees agree to provide $1,500,000 in additional funding for the Milwaukee, Wisconsin HIDTA.

FEDERAL LAW ENFORCEMENT TRAINING CENTER

SALARIES AND EXPENSES

The conferees agree to provide $71,923,000 as proposed by the House instead of $66,251,000 as proposed by the Senate, including up to $13,843,000 to be used for materials and support costs. The conferees agree to language proposed by the Senate to permit funding for travel expenses of non-Federal personnel to attend course development meetings and training sponsored by the Center. The conferees also agree to maintain existing statutory language affecting the authority to provide funding for student athletics and student interns, as proposed by the Senate.

GREAT TRAINING

The conferees agree to include new language, as proposed by the Senate, to authorize the Center to provide training for the Gang Resistance Education and Training program to Federal and non-Federal personnel at any facility in partnership with ATF.

FIREARMS TRAINING SYSTEMS

The conferees direct the Federal Law Enforcement Training Center, in consultation with their interested client law enforcement agencies, to examine and evaluate all available firearms training technologies for systems providing the greatest cost effective multi-application benefit for firearms training of law enforcement personnel. The conferees are aware of current technologies, such as the BEAMHIT targeting system and plastic cased ammunition, which appear to offer cost benefits and systems flexibility for multiple training activities and greater sensitivity for environmental protection.

ACQUISITION, CONSTRUCTION, IMPROVEMENTS, AND RELATED EXPENSES

The conferees agree to provide $34,760,000, instead of $28,360,000 as proposed by the House and $15,360,000 as proposed by the Senate. This amount includes $6,400,000 for construction of new facilities at Artesia, New Mexico, required to meet the Center's basic training requirements.

INTERAGENCY LAW ENFORCEMENT

INTERAGENCY CRIME AND DRUG ENFORCEMENT

The conferees agree to provide $51,900,000 for ICDE as proposed by the House. An additional $24,000,000 is provided in the Violent Crime Reduction Programs account. The total of $75,900,000 fully funds the President's request.

FINANCIAL MANAGEMENT SERVICE

SALARIES AND EXPENSES

The conference agreement appropriates $196,490,000 for the Financial Management Service (FMS) as proposed by the Senate instead of $198,510,000 as proposed by the House.

The conferees have agreed with the proposal of the Senate on the funding level for the FMS, which reflects a reduction of $6,000,000 for Year 2000 conversion costs which will be available for FMS from a separate appropriation. The conferees received conflicting information from the Department of the Treasury about what the FMS's needs are for this purpose. Therefore, the conferees have assumed the higher number. The conferees understand and fully appreciate the need for FMS equipment to be Year 2000 compliant and note that the Department does have authority to transfer funding to FMS from other accounts within the Department under Section 114 of this Act should that become necessary.

The conference agreement deletes language proposed by the Senate delaying the availability of $4,500,000 for postage costs until September 30, 1999, and language proposed by the Senate stating that funds shall continue to be provided to the United States Postal Service for postage due.

DEBT COLLECTION IMPROVEMENT ACCOUNT

The conferees have agreed to delete funding for the Debt Collection Improvement Account proposed by the Senate. The House bill contained no similar provision.

FEDERAL FINANCING BANK

The conference agreement provides $3,317,960,000 for the liquidation of debts by the Federal Financing Bank instead of $3,317,690,000 as proposed by the Senate. The House bill contained no similar provision.

BUREAU OF ALCOHOL, TOBACCO AND FIREARMS

SALARIES AND EXPENSES

The conferees agree to provide $541,574,000, instead of $530,624,000 as proposed by the House and $529,489,000 as proposed by the Senate. This includes $2,000,000 for the Violent Crime Coordinators program and $4,500,000 for expansion of the National Tracing Center, as proposed by the Senate. The conferees agree that $2,206,000 of this funding will not be available for obligation until September 30, 1999, as proposed by the House.

The conferees are aware that additional funds in the amount of $5,000,000 are required in fiscal year 1999 for Year 2000 compliance.

The conferees agree to increase the limit for purchase of police-type vehicles to 812, as proposed by the House. The conferees direct the Under Secretary for Enforcement to exercise strong oversight with regard to any additional purchases in keeping with Department-wide efforts (addressed under Departmental Offices, above) to manage the use, allocation and acquisition of law enforcement vehicles. While neither the House nor Senate provided funding for this purpose, the conferees agree to provide $3,700,000 for vehicle replacement as the Administration had requested.

The conferees agree to authorize up to $15,000 for official reception and representation expenses, instead of $20,000 as proposed by the House and $12,500 proposed by the Senate.

The conferees agree to retain the limitation of $1,000,000 in authority to fund the equipping of vessels, vehicles or aircraft available for official use by a State or local law enforcement agency for use in joint law enforcement operations with ATF and for the payment of overtime salaries, travel, fuel and other costs for State and local law enforcement personnel, including sworn officers and support personnel, as proposed by the House. The conferees note that, while this maintains a limitation, unlike the Senate proposal, it allows such funding to be used for law enforcement operations other than drug-related ones, and clarifies that it encompasses support personnel as well as sworn law enforcement officers.

The conferees agree that per diem and/or subsistence allowances may be paid to employees for extensive overtime required when an employee is assigned to a National Response Team during the investigation of a bombing or arson incident, as proposed by the Senate, rather than simply for a major investigative assignment, as proposed by the House.

YOUTH CRIME GUN INTERDICTION INITIATIVE

The conferees strongly support ATF's efforts to stop illegal trafficking of crime weapons to young people and its statistical analysis in ''The Crime Gun Trace Analysis Reports: The Illegal Youth Firearms Markets in 17 Communities'', published in July 1997. However, the conferees believe that the proposed increase in funding must be supported by evidence of a significant reduction in youth crime, gun trafficking and availability. The conferees would like to see additional evidence linking the Youth Crime Gun Interdiction Initiative (YCGII) to a corresponding decrease in gun trafficking among youths and minors. Therefore, the conferees direct ATF to report no later than February 1, 1999, on the performance of YCGII.

The conferees further believe that an investment in experienced trafficking agents to conduct investigations arising out of leads obtained through this regional initiative is likely to have a significant impact on the number of prosecutions for illegal firearms trafficking. As a result, the conferees direct that, of the $27,000,000 to be provided for YCGII efforts, $16,000,000 be used to hire 81 experienced trafficking agents to expand the YCGII efforts in the 27 pilot cities. As part of the expansion, the conferees recommend that not less than $2,400,000 be used for the addition of 12 experienced trafficking agents, including 3 in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, to implement a multifaceted regional enforcement strategy within the Midwest region. The conferees request that ATF give strong consideration to Aurora, CO, Denver, CO, and Omaha, NE, as it determines new locations for YCGII.

CEASEFIRE

The conferees agree to provide $2,000,000 for continued expansion of the CEASEFIRE/IBIS program, and expect that this will be used to meet requests for new equipment and related installation costs. The conferees also direct the Secretary of the Treasury to provide $4,000,000 to ATF from the Treasury Forfeiture Fund to allow ATF to provide CEASEFIRE technology to eligible State and local law enforcement organizations who have requested this equipment.

COLLECTION AND MAINTENANCE OF FEDERAL FIREARMS LICENSEE RECORDS

The conferees agree that there does not appear to be a written policy regarding the collection and maintenance of records on the acquisition and disposition of firearms by Federal firearms licensees for use in criminal or civil enforcement or firearms trace systems, in particular with regard to the length of time such records are kept. Therefore, the conferees direct ATF to develop such a written policy and provide a copy of that written policy to the Committees on Appropriations no later than March 31, 1999. This is in lieu of the direction by the House to provide the House Committee with a report on efforts to improve its practices within 90 days after enactment of this bill.

CONTRABAND CIGARETTES

The conferees direct ATF to continue to fully fund its investigations of diversion and trafficking of contraband cigarettes, particularly on Indian lands. The conferees are pleased to see that recent investigations have borne fruit in a number of arrests in Oklahoma and Kansas. The conferees understand that the current investigation in Oklahoma and Kansas is estimated to cost up to $2,000,000 and that nationwide investigation will cost approximately $8,000,000.

UNITED STATES CUSTOMS SERVICE

SALARIES AND EXPENSES

The conferees agree to provide $1,642,565,000 instead of $1,638,065,000 as proposed by the House and $1,630,273,000 as proposed by the Senate. $9,500,000 is delayed for obligation, instead of the delays proposed by the House and the Senate.

The conferees agree to restrict purchase of vehicles to 550 for replacement only, as proposed by the House, rather than 985, as proposed by the Senate. The conferees direct the Under Secretary for Enforcement to exercise strong oversight over any purchases of new vehicles in keeping with Department-wide efforts (addressed under Departmental Offices, above) to manage the use, allocation and acquisition of law enforcement vehicles. The conferees also agree that $500,000 of the appropriation should be used to fund expansion of services at the Vermont World Trade Office, as proposed by the Senate. The conferees also agree to increase the limitation on representation funding to $40,000, instead of $30,000 as proposed by the House and Senate.

The conferees agree to provide $2,500,000 to remain available until expended for the costs of relocation of the New Orleans Air Branch from Belle Chase, Louisiana, to Hammond, Louisiana.

CUSTOMS INTEGRITY AWARENESS PROGRAM

The conferees agree to provide $6,000,000 to the Customs Service, fully funding the new Customs Integrity Awareness Program (CIAP), as proposed by the House, instead of $4,200,000 as proposed by the Senate. The conferees direct the Secretary of the Treasury to be fully engaged in CIAP, providing necessary oversight and assistance to the Customs Service Office of Internal Affairs in order to achieve program goals.

CHILD PORNOGRAPHY

The conferees strongly support Customs leadership in stopping the vile traffic in child pornography and are pleased with its recent successful takedown of a major international pornography organization. To continue this success, the conferees agree to set aside $2,400,000 of the Customs appropriation to double the staffing and resources for the child pornography cyber-smuggling initiative, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $2,000,000 proposed by the House to be funded through the Violent Crime Reduction Trust Fund. In addition, the conferees agree to include $1,000,000 in the Violent Crime Reduction Trust Fund for technology support for this initiative.

CUSTOMS INSPECTION SERVICES FOR INTERNATIONAL AIR CARGO

The conferees are concerned about the availability of Customs Service personnel to provide inspection services for airports that are seeing increased traffic or project such increases as part of regional development patterns. In many locations Customs has been asked to initiate or expand the level and availability of such services. The conferees understand that decisions to allocate inspection personnel must be based on availability of staff and funding, and should also be a function of the level of current or expected traffic, as well as concerns about enforcing trade laws and countering smuggling threats. At the same time, the conferees recognize that some airports, such as Dulles International Airport, Miami International Airport, and Fort Lauderdale International Airport, are experiencing growth and may have good cases for initiating or increasing cargo traffic operations, which are dependent on the availability of specific Customs inspection services. The conferees therefore urge the Customs Service, as it undertakes to establish a comprehensive model for assessing and allocating its inspection and investigative staff, to work closely with the airport authorities and the trade community to ensure that it will meet requirements for new and expanded service. The aim of such a process should be allocation of staff and resources that is in the best interest of regional economic interests, trade, and the mission of the Customs Service.

OPERATIONS, MAINTENANCE AND PROCUREMENT, AIR AND MARINE INTERDICTION PROGRAMS

The conferees agree to provide $113,688,000, instead of $100,688,000 as proposed by the House and $113,488,000 as proposed by the Senate. No funding for this account would be delayed, as had been proposed by the Senate, and there is no earmark for activities in South Florida and the Caribbean, as had been proposed by the Senate. This number includes an additional $1,000,000 for increased support for operations and upgrades for equipment for the marine enforcement program and $14,200,000 for Black Hawk helicopter program support.

BLACK HAWK HELICOPTERS

The conferees have included $14,200,000 to restore three off line Black Hawk helicopters to an operational readiness condition and provide for increased operation and maintenance requirements for Customs' helicopter component. The conferees understand that this funding will permit Customs to increase Black Hawk flying hours from 18 to 30 hours per month. The conferees direct the Customs Service to maximize the mission operability of all sixteen Black Hawk helicopters assigned to the Air Interdiction Program.

CUSTOMS MARINE PROGRAM

The conferees include an additional $1,000,000 to augment the $5,200,000 requested for the marine program.

CUSTOMS AIR AND MARINE INTERDICTION PROGRAMS

The conferees continue to be impressed with the successes associated with the Customs Air and Marine Interdiction programs and are aware of the growing operational commitments associated with this success. The conferees encourage the Customs Service to examine the benefits of a consolidated air maintenance system and take actions to improve operational coordination of its air assets to meet our national drug enforcement priorities. The conferees, in the interest of maintaining viable and effective air and marine interdiction programs, direct the Customs Service to develop two comprehensive modernization plans for the air interdiction and marine enforcement programs, respectively. These plans shall be submitted with the President's fiscal year 2000 budget and should include the projected lifespans and project a replacement schedule, as well as the current status, of each aircraft or vessel; associated operations and maintenance activities for these craft; and any costs for fleet extension or modernization. These modernization plans should be living documents that the Customs Service continually reevaluates and utilizes in its effort to maximize its operational effectiveness.

SPECIAL OPERATIONS

The conferees agree that the special operations requirements of the Customs Service Air and Marine Interdiction Programs demand special tactical and logistical operations considerations due to the high threat nature of these activities. The conferees direct the Customs Service to review its utilization of these special operations assets with the goal of improving management, coordination, training and utilization of equipment and personnel. The Customs Service should consider all options to achieve the greatest efficiency and productivity for our coastal and border interdiction efforts.

BUREAU OF ENGRAVING AND PRINTING

DOLLAR BILL REDESIGN

To combat international counterfeiting threats to the United States, the Department of the Treasury is continuing to redesign Federal Reserve Notes. By the end of 1999, newly designed $100, $50, and $20 Federal Reserve Notes will be in circulation.

The conferees remain concerned about the cost associated with producing special anti-counterfeiting properties for the estimated 6 billion circulating $1 Federal Reserve Notes. As a result, the conferees do not believe the Bureau of Engraving and Printing should undertake cost prohibitive anti-counterfeiting changes to the $1 note. However, the conferees do believe it is important to update the currency, such as making minor modifications to assist the visually impaired.

Therefore, the conferees direct the Department of the Treasury and the Bureau of Engraving and Printing not to pursue redesign of the $1 Federal Reserve Note to combat international counterfeiting threats, but to only make minor design enhancements to the $1 note for the visually impaired and elderly population, provided it has no effect on the use of $1 Federal Reserve Notes with existing bill accepting machinery.

BUREAU OF THE PUBLIC DEBT

ADMINISTERING THE PUBLIC DEBT

The conference agreement appropriates $172,100,000 for the Bureau of the Public Debt as proposed by the House and the Senate.

The conference agreement also provides that $2,000,000 of the funds provided shall be available until September 30, 2001, for information systems modernization initiatives as proposed by the House instead of $1,000,000 as proposed by the Senate.

The conferees are aware that additional funds in the amount of $1,000,000 are required in fiscal year 1999 for Year 2000 compliance.

INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE

PROCESSING, ASSISTANCE, AND MANAGEMENT

The conference agreement appropriates $3,086,208,000 for Processing, Assistance, and Management instead of $3,025,013,000 as proposed by the House and $3,077,353,000 as proposed by the Senate. The amount provided includes $90,650,000 for mandatory cost increases and $70,279,000 for base realignments from the Tax Law Enforcement account. The conferees have agreed not to transfer funding for the TIMIS personnel/payroll system from the Information Systems appropriation to this account as proposed by the Senate.

The budget request for Processing, Assistance, and Management included $58,325,000 for customer service initiatives. Funding for these initiatives has been included in the Information Systems account as proposed by the House. The Senate had proposed to provide $18,145,000 for customer service initiatives in this account.

The conferees want to express strong support for the Commissioner's proposal for organizational modernization. The recently enacted Internal Revenue Service Restructuring and Reform Act of 1998 will allow the Commissioner to make significant operational improvements through organizational modernization and reorganization. Therefore, the conference agreement also includes $25,000,000 for organizational modernization and restructuring of the Internal Revenue Service, the total amount requested by the Administration for that purpose. However, because the restructuring legislation has only recently been enacted and the Commissioner has not yet been able to provide a detailed plan and cost estimate for the restructuring effort, the conferees have included language in the bill which delays these funds for obligation until September 30, 1999.

The conferees have also provided $2,000,000 for low income taxpayer clinics. These funds will be used to award matching grants to develop, expand, or continue qualifying low income taxpayer clinics as authorized in Section 3601 of the Internal Revenue Service Restructuring and Reform Act of 1998.

The conference agreement includes language proposed by the Senate delaying the availability of $105,000,000 for postage costs until September 30, 1999, and language proposed by the Senate stating that funds shall continue to be provided to the United States Postal Service for postage due.

TAXPAYER EDUCATION

The conferees agree that the Internal Revenue Service needs to be more proactive in educating our citizens. Therefore, the conferees believe that the IRS should consider the feasibility of a taxpayer education initiative which encourages IRS employees to visit schools to talk about the history of our tax system as well as taxpayer rights and responsibilities. Further, the conferees believe that the IRS should provide no less than $750,000 to create an educational program, such as the project currently under development at the University of Florida, covering matters of current interest to those involved in administering, advising, teaching, and studying the technical aspects of Federal taxation. Therefore, the conferees request that the IRS provide an analysis of these proposals, and steps they would take to implement these proposals, to the Committees on Appropriations by March 1, 1999.

TAX LAW ENFORCEMENT

The conference agreement appropriates $3,164,189,000 for Tax Law Enforcement as proposed by the House instead of $3,164,399,000 as proposed by the Senate. The conference agreement does not delay the availability of $175,000,000 of the funds appropriated until September 30, 1999, proposed by the Senate.

The budget request included $2,645,000 for customer service initiatives. Funding for these initiatives has been included in the Information Systems account as proposed by the House. The Senate had proposed to fund $210,000 for customer service initiatives in this account.

TAX STANDARDS FOR TAX-EXEMPT HEALTH CLUBS

The conferees are aware that there has been significant growth in health club and fitness services. Intensified competition has developed a market for for-profit and tax-exempt health clubs. With certain tax-exempt organizations moving away from their core purpose, questions arise as to whether they are engaging in commercial competition with the for-profit sector. The conferees understand that the IRS has developed appropriate standards based on broad community accessibility for determining whether fitness activities are substantially related to the charitable mission of community organizations, such as YMCAs, YWCAs, and JCCs, organizations with a variety of programs based on community needs, including health and fitness for people of all ages, incomes, and abilities. Accordingly, changes in the standards that apply to such organizations are not the conferees' concern. Rather, the conferees direct that the IRS review the standards it applies to fitness activities operated by educational and health-care organizations. The conferees further request that the Department of the Treasury report to Congress by April 1, 1999, on the statutory and regulatory changes that may be needed to assure that the health and fitness activities of these organizations substantially further the purposes for which the organization was granted tax exemption and do not constitute unfair competition with private sector, taxable organizations.

TRANSFER PRICING

The conferees are concerned about the Nation's loss of revenue as a result of foreign corporations employing transfer pricing. Transfer pricing, utilized by State Trading Enterprises, reallocates items of income and deduction among entities under common control. Reallocation of the income and deduction results in minimizing the U.S. tax of foreign corporations' U.S. affiliates. Since the foreign parent corporations do not normally do business in the United States, their income is completely free from U.S. tax.

To ensure the Internal Revenue Service is vigorously administering section 482 of the Internal Revenue Code, which empowers the Secretary of the Treasury to distribute, apportion, and allocate items of gross income and deduction between the parent corporations and their U.S. affiliates, the conferees direct the Internal Revenue Service to review and report to Congress, no later than six months after enactment of this Act, on the following issues: IRS's loss of revenue as a result of transfer pricing; detailed information on IRS's administration of section 482 to distribute, apportion, and allocate items of gross income and deduction; and recommendations on how to improve the collection of revenue from trading enterprises.

INFORMATION SYSTEMS

The conference agreement appropriates $1,265,456,000 for Information Systems instead of $1,224,032,000 as proposed by the House and $1,329,486,000 as proposed by the Senate. The amount provided includes $43,939,000 for mandatory cost increases; however, the conferees have agreed not to transfer funding for the TIMIS personnel/payroll system from this appropriation to the Processing, Assistance, and Management account. In addition, the conference agreement includes an increase of $32,900,000 for operational information systems as proposed by the House and the Senate and $68,700,000 for the modernization program infrastructure as proposed by the Senate instead of $34,350,000 as proposed by the House.

The conferees have agreed to include language in the bill which provides that $103,000,000 of the funds appropriated in this account shall only be available for improvements to customer service. This is the full amount requested by the Administration for customer service initiatives within the Internal Revenue Service.

The conferees are aware that additional funds in the amount of $359,000,000 are required in fiscal year 1999 for Year 2000 compliance. Included in that total is: $8,700,000 for the submissions processing investment program, $4,000,000 for compliance research information systems, $33,300,000 for examination laptop computers, $60,700,000 to complete the rollout of the Integrated Collection System, $4,300,000 for the Inventory Delivery System, and $14,000,000 for the Integrated Personnel System.

The conference agreement deletes language proposed by the Senate which delayed the availability of $68,700,000 of the funds appropriated until September 30, 1999.

INFORMATION TECHNOLOGY INVESTMENTS

The conference agreement appropriates $211,000,000 for Information Technology Investments instead of $210,000,000 as proposed by the House and $137,569,000 as proposed by the Senate. These funds are not available for obligation until September 30, 1999. The conference agreement also provides that the funds shall remain available until September 30, 2002, as proposed by the Senate instead of remaining available until expended as proposed by the House.

The conference agreement includes language proposed by the House which specifies the contents of an expenditure plan that the Internal Revenue Service and the Department of the Treasury are required to submit before the funds appropriated may be obligated.

The conferees are concerned that the IRS' efforts to modernize its information systems could divert its attention from the more pressing matter of assuring that all of its existing systems will be Year 2000 compliant. The conferees expect that IRS will continue to view Year 2000 compliance as its highest priority and direct that the IRS not divert any resources from its Year 2000 efforts to the information systems modernization program.

ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS—INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE

Section 101. The conference agreement includes a provision proposed by the House and the Senate which allows the transfer of 5 percent of any appropriation made available to the IRS to any other IRS appropriation subject to Congressional approval.

Section 102. The conference agreement includes a provision proposed by the House and the Senate which requires the IRS to maintain a training program in taxpayer's rights, dealing courteously with taxpayers, and cross cultural relations.

Section 103. The conference agreement includes a provision proposed by the House and the Senate which requires the IRS to maintain taxpayer services at not less than fiscal year 1995 levels.

Section 104. The conference agreement includes a provision proposed by the House and the Senate which prohibits the expenditure of funds for the collection of taxes unless the conduct of officers and employees of the IRS complies with the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act.

Section 105. The conference agreement includes a provision proposed by the House and the Senate which requires the IRS to institute policies and practices which will safeguard the confidentiality of taxpayer information.

Section 106. The conference agreement includes a provision proposed by the House and the Senate which directs that funds shall be available for improved facilities and increased manpower to provide sufficient and effective 1–800 help line telephone assistance.

Section 107. The conference agreement includes a provision proposed by the Senate which provides that no reorganization of the field office structure of the Internal Revenue Service Criminal Investigation Division will result in a reduction in the number of criminal investigators in Wisconsin and South Dakota from the 1996 level.

The conference agreement deletes a Sense of the Senate provision regarding the use of random selection of returns for examination by the Internal Revenue Service.

UNITED STATES SECRET SERVICE

SALARIES AND EXPENSES

The conferees agree to provide $600,302,000 instead of $594,657,000 as proposed by the House and $584,902,000 as proposed by the Senate. This includes an additional $18,000,000 for the costs of protective travel. The conferees agree that $1,623,000 required for fixed site security will be included in the Acquisition, Construction, Improvement, and Related Expenses account, as proposed by the Senate. The conferees also agree that the limitation for new vehicle purchases shall be 739, as proposed by the House, rather than 705, as proposed by the Senate. The conferees direct the Under Secretary for Enforcement to exercise strong oversight over any purchases of new vehicles in keeping with Department-wide efforts (addressed under Departmental Offices, above) to manage the use, allocation and acquisition of law enforcement vehicles. The conferees agree that $5,000,000 shall not be available for obligation until September 30, 1999.

The conferees are aware that additional funds in the amount of $3,000,000 are required in fiscal year 1999 for Year 2000 compliance.

PROTECTIVE TRAVEL

The conferees continue to be concerned about shortfalls in the United States Secret Service protective travel activity. Therefore the conferees direct the Service to develop an accurate financial plan for predicting protective travel needs, and report regularly to the Committees on Appropriations on their progress. As part of the financial plan the conferees expect the funds for this activity will be apportioned separately. The Service should consult with the Office of Management and Budget about the level of detail required in the financial plan. The conferees agree to provide additional funding of $18,000,000 for protective travel, which is made available for two fiscal years.

ARMORED PRIMARY LIMOUSINES

The conferees understand the need to provide the President of the United States safe and secure ground transportation both locally and around the world. The conferees are, however, concerned with the Secret Service's projected cost to acquire primary limousines for this purpose. As a result, the conferees direct the Secret Service to report to the Committees on Appropriations on the major differences and costs between the proposed project and armored vehicles previously acquired by the Service prior to the obligation of funds for this project.

ACQUISITION, CONSTRUCTION, IMPROVEMENT, AND RELATED EXPENSES

The conferees agree to provide $8,068,000 as proposed by the Senate, instead of $6,445,000 as proposed by the House, which includes $1,623,000 for fixed site security.

GENERAL PROVISIONS—DEPARTMENT OF THE TREASURY

Section 110. The conference agreement includes a provision which requires the Secretary of the Treasury to comply with certain reprogramming guidelines when obligating or expending funds for law enforcement activities from unobligated balances available on September 30, 1999, as proposed by the Senate instead of September 30, 1998, as proposed by the House.

Section 111. The conference agreement includes a provision proposed by the House and the Senate which allows the Department of the Treasury to purchase uniforms, insurance, and motor vehicles without regard to the general purchase price limitation, and enter into contracts with the State Department for health and medical services for Treasury employees in overseas locations.

Section 112. The conference agreement includes a provision proposed by the House and the Senate which requires the expenditure of funds so as not to diminish efforts under section 105 of the Federal Alcohol Administration Act.

Section 113. The conference agreement includes a provision proposed by the House and the Senate which authorizes transfers, up to 2 percent, between law enforcement appropriations under certain circumstances.

Section 114. The conference agreement includes a provision proposed by the House and the Senate which authorizes transfers, up to 2 percent, between the Departmental Offices, Office of Inspector General, Financial Management Service, and Bureau of the Public Debt appropriations under certain circumstances.

Section 115. The conference agreement includes a provision proposed by the Senate which amends 18 U.S.C. 921(a) by broadening the definition of explosives and redefining the term ''antique firearm.''

Section 116. The conference agreement includes a provision regarding the purchase of law enforcement vehicles.

Section 117. The conferees have agreed to the provision contained in Section 117 of the Senate bill regarding the execution of property upon judgements against foreign state violators of international law. The conferees have included additional language giving the President the authority to waive the requirements of this provision in the interest of national security.

ELECTRONIC FILING

The conferees have agreed to delete language requested by the Administration and contained in Section 115 of the House and Senate bills regarding the electronic filing of tax returns since this matter has been addressed in a comprehensive fashion in the Internal Revenue Service Restructuring and Reform Act of 1998. In undertaking any electronic tax administration programs, the conferees expect the Internal Revenue Service to assure the security of all electronic transmissions and provide for the full protection of the privacy of taxpayer data.

CURRENCY PAPER

The House and Senate passed bills each contained a provision (Section 116 of both bills) regarding the acquisition of currency paper by the Bureau of Engraving and Printing. The conferees have agreed to include no language in the bill regarding this issue. The conferees are aware of attempts made by the Bureau of Engraving and Printing (BEP) to address concerns regarding the need to make it easier for all United States paper companies to compete for currency paper contracts. However, the conferees expect the BEP to continue to enhance the process for procuring currency paper to the extent permitted under Federal law. In carrying out its currency paper procurement responsibilities, the conferees expect BEP to secure the best overall value for the government, giving equal consideration to all cost factors. Based on the General Accounting Office's (GAO) inability to reach any concrete conclusions with respect to competition and pricing, the conferees understand this issue is very complicated and, therefore, direct the Department of the Treasury and the Bureau of Engraving and Printing to report to the Committees on Appropriations how they plan to address GAO's recommendations to the Secretary of the Treasury. Further, it is the conferees' understanding that the authorizing committees in both the House and Senate will closely examine the GAO report, hold hearings on this matter, and develop legislation, if necessary, to ensure that the Federal government will have adequate competition and fair pricing.

TITLE II—POSTAL SERVICE

PAYMENTS TO THE POSTAL SERVICE FUND

The conferees agree to provide $71,195,000 as proposed by the House and the Senate. The conferees defer the obligation of these funds until October 1, 1999, as proposed by the Senate.

NON-POSTAL COMMERCIAL ACTIVITIES

The conferees are aware that the Postal Service is initiating a wide range of new commercial activities. These activities include, but are not limited to, volume retail photocopying, packaging services, bankwire services, the sale of office supplies and novelty items, and new e-commerce or Internet related technologies.

The conferees recognize the Postal Service's need to generate new sources of revenue to offset its operating costs. However, many of the Postal Service's new commercial activities may result in unfair competition with a number of private sector enterprises, thus raising significant policy issues about the Postal Service's present and future commercial role.

Therefore, the conferees request the Postal Service submit, within 6 months of enactment of this Act, a report on its ongoing and planned commercial services, including policy justifications, the costs of development and implementation, revenues earned, and revenues lost. As part of the report, the conferees are interested in packaging services (''Pack and Send'') and specifically direct the Postal Service to describe how packaging services will meet ''customer demand'' in all geographic regions, especially rural areas, before such service is initiated. The conferees believe these issues deserve consideration by the authorizing committees.

AVONDALE-GOODYEAR, ARIZONA

The conferees urge the Postal Service, before awarding any contract to purchase or lease property for the Main Post Office in Avondale-Goodyear, Arizona, to do an analysis of the population presently in this area to be used in assisting the Postal Service in making a selection which will be most accessible for the current and future population of the area. The Postal Service shall report to the Committees prior to awarding any contract for sale or lease, but in no event later than October 14, 1998.

GILPIN COUNTY, COLORADO

The conferees urge the Postal Service to seriously consider providing a separate ZIP Code for Gilpin County, Colorado.

TITLE III—EXECUTIVE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT AND FUNDS APPROPRIATED TO THE PRESIDENT

WHITE HOUSE OFFICE

SALARIES AND EXPENSES

The conferees agree to provide $52,344,000 for White House Office Salaries and Expenses, as proposed by the House and the Senate. The conferees provide $10,100,000 for reimbursements to the White House Communications Agency as a specific line item, as proposed by the House.

EXECUTIVE RESIDENCE AT THE WHITE HOUSE

OPERATING EXPENSES

The conferees provide $8,061,000, as proposed by the House instead of $8,691,000, as proposed by the Senate and prohibit the use of these funds for domestic staff overtime. As a separate provision, the conferees include $630,000 for domestic staff overtime and make these funds available upon the Comptroller General notifying the Committees that the Executive Office of the President (EOP) has received, reviewed and commented on the draft report of the General Accounting Office (GAO) with respect to Executive Residence operations and that the GAO is in receipt of the EOP's comments.

OFFICE OF ADMINISTRATION

SALARIES AND EXPENSES

The conferees agree to provide $28,350,000 for the Office of Administration as proposed by the House instead of $29,140,000 as proposed by the Senate.

The conferees are aware that additional funds of $12,200,000 for Year 2000 compliance within the Executive Office of the President are required for fiscal year 1999.

OFFICE OF MANAGEMENT AND BUDGET

SALARIES AND EXPENSES

The conferees agree to provide $60,617,000 for the Office of Management and Budget as proposed by the Senate instead of $59,017,000 as proposed by the House. The conferees agree to delete the earmark and the fence on the use of funds for the Office of Information and Regulatory Affairs, as proposed by the Senate, and include two provisos regarding the review of transcripts of the Committees on Veterans' Affairs and agricultural marketing orders, as proposed by the House. The conferees have included new language to amend Section ____.36 of OMB Circular A–110 to ensure that all data produced under an award will be made available to the public through the procedures established under the Freedom of Information Act.

Including technical modifications, the conferees agree to include bill language requiring OMB to report on government wide paperwork reduction and the implementation of the Congressional Review Act, as proposed by the Senate.

PERFORMANCE OF STATUTORY RESPONSIBILITIES

The conferees have agreed to delete the earmark of $5,229,000 for the Office of Information and Regulatory Affairs (OIRA) and a fence of $1,200,000 for OIRA. The conferees have been assured that OMB will strictly adhere to the statutory requirements included in the bill on Paperwork Reduction and the Congressional Review Act. The conferees will monitor OMB's compliance with these requirements carefully.

FEDERAL EMPLOYEES' PAY COMPARABILITY ACT

The conferees question the validity of the Administration's use of the ''serious economic conditions'' exception in the Federal Employees' Pay Comparability Act (FEPCA) to put forth an alternative pay plan for 1999. Press reports have indicated that members of the Administration may have concerns regarding the pay setting methodology established by FEPCA. In an effort to see that FEPCA is either fully implemented or perfected, the conferees direct the President's Pay Agent to provide the Committees with any pay setting methodology concerns it has with regard to FEPCA by May 1, 1999.

CENTURY DATE CONVERSION

The conferees remain concerned that with little more than a year to go before the new millennium, many critical government information systems are still in jeopardy of not meeting the January 1, 2000, deadline for date conversion. The conferees further believe that the Administration has failed to adequately champion the Y2K issue, not only to its own departments, but has also not provided the critical national leadership and coordination to our local, state and international partners in both the public and private sectors. Information systems experts have reported that the Y2K fix is rooted in management and oversight, not in the lack of technology available to address the problem. Unfortunately, valuable time has been lost waiting for management to embrace the magnitude and consequences of this issue. Only recently, has organizational management finally recognized the potential for shut down of critical information systems associated with entitlement payments, revenue collection, air traffic control, defense systems, telecommunications, mass transit, supply inventories, elevator function, medical equipment, to mention a few. Many agencies at all levels of government still do not have a complete grasp of the problem and are now at the greatest risk for systems failure.

The conferees direct the Administration to focus all of its attention and resources on the management and oversight of the most critical date sensitive information and infrastructure systems, prioritizing systems renovations, repair and replacement to those that can meet the January 1, 2000, deadline. The conferees further direct the Administration to accelerate the development of contingency plans for those critical systems that cannot meet the Y2K deadline, in order to maintain functional systems operations, until patent date conversion repairs can be completed.

The conferees strongly encourage the new Y2K Czar to take a high profile national leadership position, to aggressively promote century date change awareness for both information technology systems and sensitive infrastructure applications. The Y2K Czar should monitor, coordinate and provide oversight over the progress of all government-wide century date change conversion initiatives, with the primary goal of maintaining critical systems operations into the new millennium. Finally, the Y2K Czar should have Administration standing to directly access and take control of any critical agency system that is in jeopardy of not meeting the January 1, 2000, deadline because of ineffective management action.

OMB is directed to include in its quarterly Y2K report submissions an assessment of those critical information systems that will not meet the Y2K deadline and the problems that can be anticipated. In addition, the report should include the status of operational contingency plans for those systems identified as being in jeopardy.

VIOLENT CRIME REDUCTION PROGRAMS

The conferees expect the President's budget submissions for the Department of the Treasury's funding from the Violent Crime Reduction Trust Fund be reflected for the Department as a whole and not separately within each bureau's request.

OFFICE OF NATIONAL DRUG CONTROL POLICY

SALARIES AND EXPENSES

The conferees agree to provide $48,042,000 for the Office of National Drug Control Policy (ONDCP) as proposed by the Senate, instead of $36,442,000 as proposed by the House. This includes $13,000,000 to continue the technology transfer pilot program managed by the Counterdrug Technology Assessment Center (CTAC). It also includes $17,942,000 for ONDCP operations, as proposed by the Senate, $16,000,000 for the basic CTAC program, and $1,100,000 for policy research of which $100,000 is to be used for evaluating the Drug-Free Communities Act, as proposed by the Senate. The conferees agree to modify language governing the authority of ONDCP to accept and use gifts.

The conference agreement separately funds $1,000,000 for Model State Drug Law Conferences through the Violent Crime Reduction Trust Fund.

ONDCP STAFFING

The conferees are concerned about requests by ONDCP to reprogram monies from the Salaries and Expenses account to fund other initiatives. The conferees in the past have fully supported and funded the full time equivalent staffing level requested by ONDCP and are concerned that ONDCP is not filling those vacancies but is instead requesting to use those funds for other purposes. The conferees believe that ONDCP needs to maintain its staffing at the authorized level in order to maximize the agency's effectiveness. The conferees therefore direct ONDCP to review its staffing requirements and report back to the Committees on Appropriations by December 15, 1998, on the steps it is taking to fill the vacancies or, if not, what changes it is making in its staffing plan.

PERFORMANCE MEASURES OF EFFECTIVENESS

The conferees strongly urge ONDCP to work within the Administration to ensure that the Performance Measures of Effectiveness (PMEs) it developed are embraced and employed by all federal agencies for future budgetary and planning work. The conferees direct ONDCP to apply the same standard to its own internal management and organization, and to include such measures with each new budget submission.

RESEARCH AND ANALYSIS INITIATIVES

The conferees recognize that ONDCP has proposed some initiatives for research that, owing to lack of resources, cannot be funded in this appropriation. Nonetheless, the conferees strongly urge ONDCP to continue to press through its interagency leadership to coordinate research in such areas as improving R&D coordination, developing a government-wide intelligence architecture, and mapping out drug trafficking flows.

PROTECTIVE SECURITY ASSESSMENT

The conferees have included a new general provision, Section 643, as proposed by the Senate which directs the U.S. Marshals Service to conduct a threat assessment on the Director of the Office of National Drug Control Policy on a quarterly basis. The level of security is to be provided to ONDCP on a reimbursable basis by the U.S. Marshals Service and will be based on this quarterly threat assessment.

RURAL DRUG CONFERENCES

The conferees are concerned about the spread of drugs and drug-related crimes to rural areas and whether or not rural law enforcement can sufficiently address these new trends. Therefore, the conferees encourage the Director to consider convening a national conference on rural drug crime, to include regional conferences in rural areas, such as Luna County, NM, and similar counties in Colorado, in order to assess the needs of rural law enforcement and the impact that drug-related crimes have on rural communities as they cope with these issues.

The conferees believe that ONDCP can combine its knowledge and experience working with larger communities in this area and translate effective drug fighting practices to rural law enforcement, while taking into consideration their unique needs. Should ONDCP convene this event, the conference is requested to report to the Committees on Appropriations and the Director of ONDCP on its findings.

SHOUT

The conferees have provided $50,000 to continue the work of SHOUT, an outreach organization that works with minors, as defined by 21 CFR 897.14. This early intervention program focuses on shaping the attitudes of minors in order to discourage the use of illegal substances.

COUNTERDRUG TECHNOLOGY ASSESSMENT CENTER

The conferees expect the multiagency research and development programs to be coordinated by the Counterdrug Technology Assessment Center (CTAC) in order to prevent duplication of effort and to assure that, whenever possible, those efforts provide capabilities that transcend the need of any single Federal agency. Prior to obligation of these funds, the conferees expect to be notified by the chief scientist on how these funds will be spent. The conferees also expect to receive periodic reports from the chief scientist on the priority counterdrug enforcement research and development requirements identified by the Center and on the status of projects funded by CTAC.

FEDERAL DRUG CONTROL PROGRAMS

HIGH INTENSITY DRUG TRAFFICKING AREAS PROGRAM

The conferees provide $182,477,000, instead of $162,007,000 as proposed by the House and $183,977,000 as proposed by the Senate. The conferees agree to fund all existing High Intensity Drug Trafficking Areas (HIDTAs) at the fiscal year 1998 level. This funding level shall be based on direct fiscal year 1998 appropriations for HIDTAs contained in the HIDTA and Violent Crime Reduction Trust Fund accounts. The conferees also agree that not less than fifty-one percent of this amount shall be transferred to State and local entities for drug control activities.

Within the amount appropriated, the conferees include $20,477,000 to supplement or expand existing HIDTAs, or provide for the creation of new HIDTAs. The conferees have been informed that unmet needs for funding exist in: the Arizona HIDTA for completion of an intelligence center and unmet programmatic needs for methamphetamine and border initiatives; the New Mexico HIDTA for unmet programmatic needs; the Southwest HIDTA for its wiretapping initiative; the Cascade HIDTA for unmet programmatic needs; the expansion of the Midwest HIDTA to include the State of North Dakota; the Rocky Mountain HIDTA for expansion of its methamphetamine initiative; the Chicago HIDTA for unmet programmatic needs; and the Central Florida HIDTA for unmet programmatic needs. Additionally, the conferees are aware of interest in the designation of new HIDTAs in the New England states, East Texas, Ohio, and Hawaii.

While the conferees are obviously supportive of the HIDTA program, it is critical to the continued support and the health of all HIDTAs and the program in general that decisions about funding be founded on clear, concrete measures of performance. The conferees also believe that ONDCP must have the flexibility to allocate resources to those HIDTAs that will have the greatest impact on our drug problems. In making these decisions, ONDCP must focus on the performance of HIDTAs, existing or proposed, and their significant impact on drug trafficking, use, and associated crime. This means that ONDCP must assess which HIDTAs are the top performers and document the factors it uses to make this determination. At the same time, ONDCP must determine where the impact will be greatest based on the combined effect of HIDTA performance and the nature and severity of drug problems that exist in the areas where HIDTAs currently operate or are proposed—whether measured by use, associated crime, or volume of trafficking in drugs or money. The conferees therefore direct ONDCP to submit its fiscal year 2000 budget for HIDTAs based on applying both ONDCP's own performance measures of effectiveness and the priorities dictated by changing threats.

SPECIAL FORFEITURE FUND

The conferees agree to provide $214,500,000, instead of $215,000,000 as proposed by the House and $200,000,000 as proposed by the Senate. This includes $185,000,000 for the youth media campaign, $20,000,000 for implementation of the Drug-Free Community Act, $5,000,000 for the chronic users study, and $4,500,000 for a transfer to the Agricultural Research Service for anti-drug research and related matters.

YOUTH MEDIA CAMPAIGN

The conferees recommend a funding level of $185,000,000 for the National Media Campaign. In fiscal year 1998, ONDCP proposed a 5-year media campaign at a total cost to the Federal government of $875,000,000. The initial request was based on a $175,000,000 annual funding level for five years of the program. The conferees continue to be fully supportive of this program and believe that this national media campaign, if properly executed, has the potential to produce concrete results. The conferees look forward to working with ONDCP on this effort to produce demonstrable results as the campaign matures.

The conferees have included new language calling for ONDCP to report on its efforts to achieve corporate sponsorship beyond the matching requirement for participation in the media campaign; clarifies the pro bono requirement; and limits the possible use of funding for creative development efforts. The conferees agree that 75% of the funds will become available when ONDCP submits to the Committees the results of Phase I of the campaign and the remainder will become available when ONDCP submits the results of Phase II.

The Committees will closely track this national media campaign, and its contribution to achieving a drug-free America. Therefore, the conferees direct ONDCP to submit quarterly reports on the obligation of funds as well as the specific parameters of the pilot campaign. The conferees anticipate that future funding will be based upon results. ONDCP is directed to report to the Committees on Appropriations by January 15, 1999 on the effectiveness of the national media campaign. In addition, ONDCP is to report to the Committees within 6 months of enactment of this Act on State and local prevention and treatment facilities infrastructure and their capacity to handle the increased demands of communities as a result of the national media campaign. ONDCP is to continue to report on the effectiveness and implementation status of the guidelines set out in the fiscal year 1998 appropriations bill.

The conferees direct the General Accounting Office to conduct a financial audit and review of the financial transactions relating to the media campaign. The conferees request that the scope of the review include how monies have been obligated and the effectiveness of the campaign and report to the Committees on Appropriations. As part of this review, GAO shall determine the definition, acquisition, and utilization of matching contributions sought by ONDCP relating to the media campaign. In addition, the conferees direct GAO to review Phase I, the 12 city test pilot, and report its findings to the Committees. This review is to examine the development of the test market plan for Phase I, determine the viability of extrapolating Phase I results to the national level, and determine the success of Phase I in the 12 city pilot.

CHRONIC USERS STUDY

The Administration's budget estimate includes a request of $10,000,000 to expand a preliminary user study conducted in Cook County, IL. The Cook County study developed a methodology for estimating the number of hardcore drug users in the United States. Accurately identifying this population is important since they consume a massive amount of the drugs available in the United States, create a large proportion of the demand for illegal drug markets, and are responsible for a great deal of criminal activity. The accurate identification of this population will provide communities a base for estimating the type and number of drug treatment and prevention programs required.

The conferees congratulate ONDCP on conducting this study and continue to support this effort. The conferees provide $5,000,000 to expand the study to regional areas. Although this is less than the request, the conferees understand that ONDCP may be able to use this level of funding to complete a study that can serve as an accurate basis for a national estimate of the size and location of chronic user populations. The conferees encourage ONDCP to work with the Department of Health and Human Services to identify additional funding sources, if necessary and available, and encourage ONDCP to promote utilization of the Cook County study that contributes to reductions in the population of hardcore drug users.

UNANTICIPATED NEEDS

The conferees agree to provide $1,000,000 as requested by the Administration for unanticipated needs.

INFORMATION TECHNOLOGY SYSTEMS AND RELATED EXPENSES

The conferees have not included language contained in the Senate bill to provide $3,250,000,000 in contingent emergency funding for Year 2000 computer conversion costs. On September 2, 1998, the President transmitted to Congress a request for this level of funding in fiscal year 1998. The conferees expect that this issue will be resolved as part of a supplemental appropriation.

TITLE IV—INDEPENDENT AGENCIES

FEDERAL ELECTION COMMISSION

SALARIES AND EXPENSES

The conferees agree to provide $36,500,000 as proposed by the House and the Senate. This level of funding will support a base appropriation of $32,580,000, an additional $2,800,000 for enhanced enforcement efforts, as proposed by the House and Senate, and an additional $1,120,000 for other initiatives, as proposed by the House. The conferees fence $1,120,000, pending the submission of a plan for the obligation of these funds and provide that not less than $4,402,500 shall be available for internal automated data processing systems. The conferees strongly recommend that the FEC target the additional $1,120,000 in fenced appropriations to the improvement of enforcement procedures and preventing the unnecessary dismissal of appropriate enforcement actions; the conferees specifically recommend that FEC expedite automated data processing improvements as they relate to enforcement. The conferees assume that full time employment will not exceed 347 FTE in fiscal year 1999.

GENERAL SERVICES ADMINISTRATION

FEDERAL BUILDINGS FUND

LIMITATIONS ON AVAILABILITY OF REVENUE

The conference agreement provides $5,605,018,000 in new obligational authority for the General Services Administration's Federal Buildings Fund instead of $5,624,128,000 as proposed by the House and $5,648,680,000 as proposed by the Senate. In order to provide the resources necessary to carry out that program, the conferees have recommended an appropriation of $450,018,000 into the Fund instead of $479,300,000 as proposed by the House and $508,752,000 as proposed by the Senate.

The conferees have provided $492,190,000 for the construction and acquisition of new projects instead of $527,100,000 as proposed by the House and $538,652,000 as proposed by the Senate. The conferees have included funding for the following projects:

Arkansas: Little Rock, U.S. Courthouse	$3,436,000
California:

The conferees have not provided funds for the Savannah, Georgia, U.S. Courthouse Annex project. The conferees are aware that at a recent meeting to consider the authorization of new courthouse construction projects, the Public Buildings and Economic Development Subcommittee of the House Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure deferred action on this project pending further review. The conferees further understand that that action was taken primarily because of the significant increase in estimated project cost that has occurred since the approval of funds for site acquisition and design, even though the size of the building has been reduced. The conferees share those concerns and, have, therefore, elected to defer funding for the project pending resolution of the issues that have been raised by the authorizing committee.

The conferees recognize the efforts of the General Services Administration and the Judiciary to reduce the cost of courthouse construction and encourage the continuation of these efforts. The conferees are pleased that the Administrative Office of the U.S. Courts' recent draft utilization study answers some questions about the utilization rates of existing and proposed courthouses. The conferees are aware of the Judiciary's needs to have court space available to conduct business and understand their position that a courtroom's existence may result in moving a case to settlement. However, the conferees continue to be concerned that the courts are not fully examining information that is key to the development of a utilization planning model. As a result, the conferees request the Administrative Office of the U.S. Courts to revise the utilization study to include the assumptions used to develop the planning model. Additionally, the conferees direct the General Services Administration to provide the utilization rates of existing and proposed courtrooms with any request for new construction, replacement, or expansion of court space.

The conference agreement includes language proposed by the Senate authorizing the General Services Administration to reacquire the parcel of land on Block 111, East Denver, Denver, Colorado, which was sold at public auction by the Federal government to the present owner of the property.

The conference agreement includes language proposed by the Senate which provides that funds provided in fiscal year 1993 for the Hilo, Hawaii, federal building shall be expended for the planning and design of the Mauna Kea Astronomy Educational Center.

The conference agreement deletes language proposed by the Senate regarding funding for the design of the Department of Transportation headquarters building and landing rights at Denver International Airport.

The conference agreement includes language included in the House reported bill which provides that of the funds provided for non-prospectus construction projects, $2,100,000 shall be available for acquisition, lease, construction, and equipping of flexiplace telecommuting centers.

The conferees have also agreed to include language in the bill permitting the General Services Administration to purchase, at the appropriate price, real estate essential to meet security interests related to the successful completion of the new courthouse in Scranton, Pennsylvania.

The conferees have provided $668,031,000 for repairs and alterations as proposed by the Senate instead of $655,031,000 as proposed by the House. The conference agreement provides that $161,500,000 of the funds shall not be available for obligation until September 30, 1999, instead of $19,000,000 as proposed by the House and $323,800,000 as proposed by the Senate.

The amount provided includes $25,000,000 for the chlorofluorocarbons program and $25,000,000 for the energy program as proposed by the Senate instead of $18,500,000 for each program as proposed by the House.

The conferees have agreed to list in the bill the amounts provided for each of the projects and activities to be undertaken under Repairs and Alterations as proposed by the Senate. Accordingly, there is no need for GSA to submit the plan for program execution called for in the House report.

The conference agreement includes the language contained in the Senate bill regarding the use of funds for security improvements.

The conference agreement includes language proposed by the House which provides that funds provided in Public Law 103–329 for the IRS Service Center in Holtsville, New York, shall remain available until September 30, 1999.

The conferees have provided $1,554,772,000 for building operations as proposed by the House and the Senate. The conference agreement provides that $68,000,000 of the funds provided shall not be available for obligation until September 30, 1999, instead of $223,000,000 as proposed by the House and $31,095,000 as proposed by the Senate.

The conference agreement provides that $475,000 shall be available for the 1999 Women's World Cup soccer event and that $600,000 shall be available for the 1999 World Alpine Ski Championships.

PUBLIC SERVICE RECOGNITION WEEK

The conferees recognize that Public Service Recognition Week, a program of the Public Employees Roundtable, has educated America about the value of the career workforce which carries out the daily operations of government. This program, which has existed for over ten years, plays an important role in educating our nation's youth and providing them with timely information about their government. The conferees urge the General Services Administration to support the mission of the Public Employees Roundtable and provide administrative and logistical assistance equaling $100,000 for carrying out its Public Service Recognition Week activities.

LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA, CIVIC CENTER TRUST

The conferees are aware that the U.S. Courthouse in Los Angeles, California, will be serving as the cornerstone for an economic revitalization of the Civic Center neighborhood, where currently more than 50 public and private projects are in various stages of development. The Los Angeles City Civic Center Trust, established by Project Restore, a nonprofit organization, will facilitate and coordinate this revitalization. The conferees urge the General Services Administration to continue its current work and support the mission of the Los Angeles Civic Center Trust by providing planning, administrative, and logistical support for its activities.

RONALD REAGAN COURTHOUSE—SANTA ANA, CALIFORNIA

The conferees understand that none of the artwork acquired for the Ronald Reagan Courthouse in Santa Ana, California, recognizes President Reagan. The conferees urge the General Services Administration to acquire and display artwork that appropriately commemorates President Reagan. Further, the conferees urge the General Services Administration to work with the Ronald Reagan Presidential Library and Museum to determine the feasibility of maintaining a rotating exhibit at the Ronald Reagan Courthouse.

PRESIDENT HARRY S TRUMAN

The conferees note that there is no major recognition of President Harry S Truman in the Nation's Capital. The conferees request that the General Services Administration review such proposals as may exist and report to the Committees on Appropriations no later than June 1, 1999.

POLICY AND OPERATIONS

The conference agreement appropriates $109,594,000 for Policy and Operations instead of $108,494,000 as proposed by the House and $106,494,000 as proposed by the Senate. The conferees direct that $2,000,000 be provided for the pilot project in digital learning technologies as described in the House report and that $1,000,000 be used to initiate a digital education project.

The conferees have also included language in the bill that provides that $100,000 of the funds appropriated shall be provided to the Property Disposal activity of this account. This amount represents the estimated fair market value of the property to be conveyed to the City of Racine, Wisconsin, as described in section 409 of the bill.

The conferees have modified language proposed by the Senate regarding the Old Post Office at 1100 Pennsylvania Avenue in Washington, D.C., to make the language applicable only for fiscal year 1999 and to require that the comprehensive plan for use of the property also be approved by the Senate Committee on Environment and Public Works and the House Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure.

SURPLUS EQUIPMENT TO SCHOOLS AND EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTIONS

The conferees urge the General Services Administration, in line with its responsibilities for the disposal of excess and surplus Federal personal property, to promote and foster the transfer of excess and surplus computer equipment directly to schools and to appropriate nonprofit, community-based educational organizations. The GSA should communicate with other Federal agencies to heighten their ongoing awareness of the existing opportunities at both the national and local levels to meet the needs of the schools for such equipment.

All Federal agencies are required, to the extent permitted by law and after determining that the equipment is excess to their needs, to give highest preference to schools and nonprofit organizations in the transfer of educationally useful Federal computer equipment. Agencies are required to inventory all computer equipment and identify in their inventories their excess and surplus equipment. Federal agencies are also required to report to GSA the transfer of any personal property, including computer equipment, made to nongovernmental entities such as schools.

The conferees commend GSA and the Office of Science and Technology Policy (OSTP) for the progress that has been made simplifying and improving the Federal Surplus Computer Donation Program. One remaining hurdle for schools interested in participating in the program is the lack of operating systems on many donated computers. The conferees urge GSA and OSTP to work together with operating system providers to develop a partnership with those providers similar to the partnership that has already been formed with van lines to assist in transporting donated computers. The goal of this partnership would be to provide operating systems to schools which receive computers through the donation program.

FEDERAL OFFICE BUILDING IN COLORADO SPRINGS, COLORADO

The Federal building located at 1520 Willamette Ave. in Colorado Springs, Colorado, is owned by GSA and is currently leased to the U.S. Air Force Space Command. It is the conferees' understanding that Space Command is moving ahead with options to vacate the facility. In the event that Space Command does not renew its lease and the facility becomes vacant and is deemed surplus, the conferees urge GSA to strongly consider the U.S. Olympic Committee's (USOC) need for additional space and to give priority to the USOC's request to gain title or acquire the property.

GENERAL PROVISIONS—GENERAL SERVICES ADMINISTRATION

Section 401. The conference agreement includes a provision proposed by the Senate which provides that accounts available to GSA shall be credited with certain funds received from government corporations. The provision was also included in the House reported bill.

Section 402. The conference agreement includes a provision proposed by the Senate which provides that funds available to GSA shall be available for the hire of passenger motor vehicles. The provision was also included in the House reported bill.

Section 403. The conference agreement includes a provision proposed by the Senate which authorizes GSA to transfer funds within the Federal Buildings Fund to meet program requirements. A similar provision was included in the House reported bill.

Section 404. The conference agreement includes a provision proposed by the Senate which prohibits the use of funds to submit a fiscal year 2000 budget request for courthouse construction projects that do not meet design guide criteria, do not reflect the priorities of the Judicial Conference of the United States, and are not accompanied by a standardized courtroom utilization study. A similar provision was included in the House reported bill.

Section 405. The conference agreement includes a provision proposed by the Senate

Section 407. The conference agreement includes a provision proposed by the Senate which permits GSA to pay claims of up to $250,000 arising from construction projects and the acquisition of buildings. The provision was also included in the House reported bill.

Section 408. The conference agreement includes a provision proposed by the Senate providing $5,000,000 for the demolition, cleanup, and conveyance of the property at block 35, and lot 2 of block 36 in Anchorage, Alaska. The House bill contained no similar provision.

Section 409. The conference agreement includes a provision proposed by the Senate authorizing GSA to convey the property which contains the U.S. Army Reserve Center in Racine, Wisconsin, to the City of Racine. The Senate language has been amended by deleting the phrase ''without consideration.'' The House reported bill contained a similar provision.

Section 410. The conference agreement includes language proposed by the Senate directing the General Services Administration to enter into an operating lease to acquire space for the Department of Transportation headquarters. The House bill contained no similar provision.

Section 411. The conference agreement includes a provision proposed by the House regarding the fees charged by GSA for the use of telecommuting centers by Federal agencies. The Senate bill contained no similar provision.

Section 413. The conference agreement includes a provision directing GSA to reincorporate the elements of the original proposed design for the facade of the United States Courthouse project in London, Kentucky, into the revised design of the building. This will ensure that the construction of the new courthouse is compatible with the architectural character of the historic existing U.S. courthouse. The construction of the project should in no way be diminished in order to achieve this goal. This provision was included in the House reported bill.

The conference agreement deletes language contained in section 411 of the Senate bill which appropriates $14,105,000 for costs associated with the security of the Capitol complex. The conferees recognize the importance of Capitol security and have consulted with and deferred to the jurisdiction of the Legislative Branch Appropriations Subcommittee to coordinate those requirements.

ENVIRONMENTAL DISPUTE RESOLUTION FUND

The conference agreement appropriates $4,250,000 for capitalization of the Environmental Dispute Resolution Fund and operation of the United States Institute for Environmental Conflict Resolution as proposed by the House. The Senate did not include funds for this activity.

MERIT SYSTEMS PROTECTION BOARD

The conferees understand that an agreement has been reached between MSPB and its administrative judges regarding the establishment of a special pay classification for the administrative judges. The conferees are encouraged by this progress and urge MSPB to work with the proper House and Senate authorizing committees and the Office of Management and Budget so this agreement can be addressed in the fiscal year 2000 budget submission and through appropriate legislative action.

NATIONAL ARCHIVES AND RECORDS ADMINISTRATION

OPERATING EXPENSES

The conference agreement appropriates $224,614,000 for operating expenses of the National Archives and Records Administration instead of $216,753,000 as proposed by the House and $221,030,000 as proposed by the Senate. The conferees have included language delaying the availability of $7,861,000 of the funds appropriated until September 30, 1999, instead of $4,277,000 as proposed by the Senate.

The conferees are aware that additional funds in the amount of $5,411,000 are required in fiscal year 1999 for Year 2000 compliance.

NATIONAL PERSONNEL RECORDS CENTER

The conferees are aware that in many instances veterans are experiencing significant delays, often as long as six months, when attempting to gain access to records they need to obtain medical assistance or other benefits from the National Personnel Records Center in St. Louis, Missouri. The conferees believe that this is unacceptable. The conferees are also aware that the National Archives and Records Administration (NARA) has initiated a business process re-engineering project at the center to address concerns about the timeliness of responses to veterans' requests. The implementation of this project will take about five years at a total cost of approximately $6,000,000. The goal of the program is to achieve case cycle time of 10 days or less. For fiscal year 1999, the NARA will be conducting a pilot test of the business process re-engineering program to validate the processes and methods that have been recommended. The conferees have been informed by NARA that this pilot test can be funded from within existing resources. The conferees further understand that the Archives plans to begin implementation of this program in fiscal year 2000. The conferees are very supportive of this extremely important effort and expect NARA to request the funds it needs to begin implementation of the program in the fiscal year 2000 budget.

REPAIRS AND RESTORATION

The conference agreement appropriates $11,325,000 for repairs and restoration of Archives facilities as proposed by the Senate instead of $10,450,000 as proposed by the House. The conferees have not included language proposed by the Senate delaying the availability of $2,000,000 of the funds until September 30, 1999.

The conference agreement includes language proposed by the Senate providing $875,000 for a requirements study and design of a facility in Anchorage, Alaska.

NATIONAL HISTORICAL PUBLICATIONS AND RECORDS COMMISSION

GRANTS PROGRAM

The conference agreement appropriates $10,000,000 for the Grants Program of the National Historical Publications and Records Commission instead of $6,000,000 as proposed by the House and $11,000,000 as proposed by the Senate.

The conferees have included language delaying the availability of $4,000,000 of the funds until September 30, 1999, instead of $5,500,000 as proposed by the Senate.

The conferees have agreed to provide $4,000,000 for a grant to the Center for Jewish History instead of $5,000,000 as proposed by the Senate. The conferees note, however, that a single grant of this size is far beyond the scope of activities normally undertaken by the National Historical Publications and Records Commission. For example, the Commission expects to fund, in whole or in part, 103 proposals with the $5,500,000 provided in fiscal year 1998. Therefore, the conferees agree that the funds provided for the Center for Jewish History represent the total to be provided from this account.

UNITED STATES TAX COURT

SALARIES AND EXPENSES

The conference agreement appropriates $32,765,000 for the United States Tax Court as proposed by the Senate instead of $34,490,000 as proposed by the House.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. NEY). Pursuant to the provisions of clause 5 of rule I, the Chair announces that he will postpone further proceedings today on each motion to suspend the rules on which a recorded vote or the yeas and nays are ordered, or on which the vote is objected to under clause 4 of rule XV.

Such rollcall votes, if postponed, will be taken later in the day.

ANTIMICROBIAL REGULATION TECHNICAL CORRECTIONS ACT OF 1998

Mr. BLILEY. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 4679) to amend the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act to clarify the circumstances in which a substance is considered to be a pesticide chemical for purposes of such Act, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 4679

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the ''Antimicrobial Regulation Technical Corrections Act of 1998''.

SEC. 2. DEFINITION OF PESTICIDE CHEMICAL UNDER FEDERAL FOOD, DRUG, AND COSMETIC ACT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 201(q) of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act (21 U.S.C. 321(q)) is amended by striking ''(q)(1)'' and all that follows through the end of subparagraph (1) and inserting the following:

''(q)(1)(A) Except as provided in clause (B), the term 'pesticide chemical' means any substance that is a pesticide within the meaning of the Federal Insecticide, Fungicide, and Rodenticide Act, including all active and inert ingredients of such pesticide. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the term 'pesticide' within such meaning includes ethylene oxide and propylene oxide when such substances are applied on food.

''(B) In the case of the use, with respect to food, of a substance described in clause (A) to prevent, destroy, repel, or mitigate microorganisms (including bacteria, viruses, fungi, protozoa, algae, and slime), the following applies for purposes of clause (A):

''(i) The definition in such clause for the term 'pesticide chemical' does not include the substance if the substance is applied for such use on food, or the substance is included for such use in water that comes into contact with the food, in the preparing, packing, or holding of the food for commercial purposes. The substance is not excluded under this subclause from such definition if the substance is ethylene oxide or propylene oxide, and is applied for such use on food. The substance is not so excluded if the substance is applied for such use on a raw agricultural commodity, or the substance is included for such use in water that comes into contact with the commodity, as follows:

''(I) The substance is applied in the field.

''(II) The substance is applied at a treatment facility where raw agricultural commodities are the only food treated, and the treatment is in a manner that does not change the status of the food as a raw agricultural commodity (including treatment through washing, waxing, fumigating, and packing such commodities in such manner).

''(III) The substance is applied during the transportation of such commodity between the field and such a treatment facility.

''(ii) The definition in such clause for the term 'pesticide chemical' does not include the substance if the substance is a food contact substance as defined in section 409(h)(6), and any of the following circumstances exist: The substance is included for such use in an object that has a food contact surface but is not intended to have an ongoing effect on any portion of the object; the substance is included for such use in an object that has a food contact surface and is intended to have an ongoing effect on a portion of the object but not on the food contact surface; or the substance is included for such use in or is applied for such use on food packaging (without regard to whether the substance is intended to have an ongoing effect on any portion of the packaging). The food contact substance is not excluded under this subclause from such definition if any of the following circumstances exist: The substance is applied for such use on a semipermanent or permanent food contact surface (other than being applied on food packaging); or the substance is included for such use in an object that has a semipermanent or permanent food contact surface (other than being included in food packaging) and the substance is intended to have an ongoing effect on the food contact surface.

With respect to the definition of the term 'pesticide' that is applicable to the Federal Insecticide, Fungicide, and Rodenticide Act, this clause does not exclude any substance from such definition.''.

(b) REGULATIONS.—Section 408(j) of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act (21 U.S.C. 346a(j)) is amended by adding at the end the following paragraph:

''(4) CERTAIN SUBSTANCES.—With respect to a substance that is not included in the definition of the term 'pesticide chemical' under section 201(q)(1) but was so included on the day before the date of the enactment of the Antimicrobial Regulation Technical Corrections Act of 1998, the following applies as of such date of enactment:

''(A) Notwithstanding paragraph (2), any regulation applying to the use of the substance that was in effect on the day before such date, and was on such day deemed in such paragraph to have been issued under this section, shall be considered to have been issued under section 409.

''(B) Notwithstanding paragraph (3), any regulation applying to the use of the substance that was in effect on such day and was issued under this section (including any such regulation issued before the date of the enactment of the Food Quality Protection Act of 1996) is deemed to have been issued under section 409.''.

(c) TECHNICAL AMENDMENT.—Section 201(q)(3) of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act (21 U.S.C. 321(q)(3)) is amended in the matter preceding clause (A) by striking ''paragraphs (1) and (2)'' and inserting ''subparagraphs (1) and (2)''.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BLILEY) and the gentleman from California (Mr. BROWN) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BLILEY).

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. BLILEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks and to insert extraneous material on the bill under consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia?

There was no objection.

Mr. BLILEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 5 minutes.

This bill, the Antimicrobial Regulation Technical Corrections Act of 1998, corrects an unintended problem created by the Food Quality Protection Act of 1996.

When we passed that legislation, we expanded the definition of ''pesticide chemical.'' Unfortunately, that had the effect of transferring to the EPA jurisdiction over a small class of substances known as antimicrobials.

Used in food contact applications, these products play an important role in the safety of our food supply. For example, food and drinks like milk are often packaged in paper containers. To make sure that this paper is free of contamination, we use antimicrobials.

Before 1996, such substances were regulated by the FDA as food additives. That was right then, and it should be today. As a result, the bill before us today will return them once again to the FDA.

This is strictly a technical corrections measure; it does not represent a change in FQPA policy, and it does not weaken any environmental safeguards. Indeed, one of the products blocked from the market by this problem actually won the President's Green Chemistry Award for its environmental benefits.

Mr. Speaker, when we passed FDA reform last year, the conference report acknowledged this problem and urged the FDA and EPA to work with Congress to develop a bill that would correct it. This is that bill. It was developed jointly with EPA and FDA, the affected industries, and the environmental community. I think they all should be commended for their cooperation and effort.

In closing, I would just like to inform my colleagues that the Senate is set to approve this measure tonight or tomorrow. It is being sponsored by Senators DURBIN, KENNEDY, WARNER, MIKULSKI, and HUTCHINSON, among others.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 4679 will enable companies to bring beneficial antimicrobial products to market without further delay. I urge its immediate passage.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. BROWN of California. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, it is my pleasure to support H.R. 4679 to amend the Food Quality Protection Act of 1996. The changes made to the Food Quality Protection Act mistakenly defined ''pesticide chemical'' in the Federal Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act. This definition unintentionally transferred regulatory authority of antimicrobials, which have traditionally been under the FDA to the EPA.

This legislation would not change the Federal Insecticide, Fungicide and Rodenticide Act or remove any use of a substance from regulation as a pesticide under that act. FIFRA would continue to review these substances for registration and maintain the traditional FDA review for food additives.

Antimicrobial food additive petitions have been delayed at the FDA since the enactment of FQPA. This legislation will shift regulatory jurisdiction from review and approval of petitions for specialty chemicals in food contact applications back to the FDA. This amendment would grant the FDA authority to regulate antimicrobial substances that may be used in food, come in contact with food, or be used in food packaging. This will facilitate consideration of petitions for new products.

The Environmental Working Group, the Natural Resources Defense Council, and many other public interest groups have agreed not to oppose the legislation. At their request, language has been included to recognize that FQPA protective provisions have not been eliminated.

These environmental groups and other organizations are right in their concern about food safety. This Congress has failed in the wake of NAFTA and other trade agreements to modernize our food safety laws and protect the public. Food imports, especially fruits and vegetables, have increased dramatically in the last 10 years in this country, especially since the passage of NAFTA, yet our inspection facilities are underfunded and unprepared, which unfortunately seems to be of little concern to this Congress.

Nonetheless, Mr. Speaker, I support this bill and I urge my colleagues to do the same.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentlewoman from North Carolina (Mrs. CLAYTON).

(Mrs. CLAYTON asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Mrs. CLAYTON. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

I am pleased to rise in support of H.R. 4679, and I am appreciative of the leadership who has brought this to the House. I want my colleagues to know this corrects a problem that will impact many workers in our areas. I know it was a mistake, but nevertheless, it would make a correction that does not lessen the quality of inspections of food, gives the same amount of regulation, and allows for this more worthy project to go forward.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. BLILEY. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BLILEY) that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 4679.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

BORDOR SMOG REDUCTION ACT OF 1998

Mr. BLILEY. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and concur in the Senate amendment to the bill (H.R. 8) to amend the Clean Air Act to deny entry into the United States of certain foreign motor vehicles that do not comply with State laws governing motor vehicle emissions, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read as follows:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the ''Border Smog Reduction Act of 1998''.

SEC. 2. AMENDMENT OF CLEAN AIR ACT.

Section 183 of the Clean Air Act (42 U.S.C. 7511b) is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(h) VEHICLES ENTERING OZONE NONATTAINMENT AREAS.—

''(1) AUTHORITY REGARDING OZONE INSPECTION AND MAINTENANCE TESTING.—

''(A) IN GENERAL.—No noncommercial motor vehicle registered in a foreign country and operated by a United States citizen or by an alien who is a permanent resident of the United States, or who holds a visa for the purposes of employment or educational study in the United States, may enter a covered ozone nonattainment area from a foreign country bordering the United States and contiguous to the nonattainment area more than twice in a single calendar-month period, if State law has requirements for the inspection and maintenance of such vehicles under the applicable implementation plan in the nonattainment area.

''(B) APPLICABILITY.—Subparagraph (A) shall not apply if the operator presents documentation at the United States border entry point establishing that the vehicle has complied with such inspection and maintenance requirements as are in effect and are applicable to motor vehicles of the same type and model year.

''(2) SANCTIONS FOR VIOLATIONS.—The President may impose and collect from the operator of any motor vehicle who violates, or attempts to violate, paragraph (1) a civil penalty of not more than $200 for the second violation or attempted violation and $400 for the third and each subsequent violation or attempted violation.

''(3) STATE ELECTION.—The prohibition set forth in paragraph (1) shall not apply in any State that elects to be exempt from the prohibition. Such an election shall take effect upon the President's receipt of written notice from the Governor of the State notifying the President of such election.

''(4) ALTERNATIVE APPROACH.—The prohibition set forth in paragraph (1) shall not apply in a State, and the President may implement an alternative approach, if—

''(A) the Governor of the State submits to the President a written description of an alternative approach to facilitate the compliance, by some or all foreign-registered motor vehicles, with the motor vehicle inspection and maintenance requirements that are—

''(i) related to emissions of air pollutants;

''(ii) in effect under the applicable implementation plan in the covered ozone nonattainment area; and

''(iii) applicable to motor vehicles of the same types and model years as the foreign-registered motor vehicles; and

''(B) the President approves the alternative approach as facilitating compliance with the motor vehicle inspection and maintenance requirements referred to in subparagraph (A).

''(5) DEFINITION OF COVERED OZONE NONATTAINMENT AREA.—In this section, the term 'covered ozone nonattainment area' means a Serious Area, as classified under section 181 as of the date of enactment of this subsection.''.

SEC. 3. GENERAL PROVISIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The amendment made by section 2 takes effect 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act. Nothing in that amendment shall require action that is inconsistent with the obligations of the United States under any international agreement.

(b) INFORMATION.—As soon as practicable after the date of enactment of this Act, the appropriate agency of the United States shall distribute information to publicize the prohibition set forth in the amendment made by section 2.

SEC. 4. STUDY BY GENERAL ACCOUNTING OFFICE.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Comptroller General of the United States shall conduct a study of the impact of the amendment made by section 2.

(b) CONTENTS OF STUDY.—The study under subsection (a) shall compare—

(1) the potential impact of the amendment made by section 2 on air quality in ozone nonattainment areas affected by the amendment; with

(2) the impact on air quality in those areas caused by the increase in the number of vehicles engaged in commerce operating in the United States and registered in, or operated from, Mexico, as a result of the implementation of the North American Free Trade Agreement.

(c) REPORT.—Not later than July 1, 1999, the Comptroller General of the United States shall submit to the Committee on Commerce of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Environment and Public Works of the Senate a report describing the findings of the study under subsection (a).

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BLILEY) and the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. BROWN) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BLILEY).

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. BLILEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks and to insert extraneous material on the bill now under consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia?

There was no objection.

Mr. BLILEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 8, the Border Smog Reduction Act of 1998, and I want to thank the chairman of the Subcommittee on Health and the Environment, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. BILIRAKIS) for his effort in guiding H.R. 8 through the legislative process.

Throughout the entire consideration of this bill, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. BILIRAKIS) worked with his colleagues on both sides of the aisle to ensure that any concerns were resolved in a bipartisan fashion.

I also want to thank and commend the gentleman from California (Mr. BILBRAY), the author of this legislation. Over 2 years ago the gentleman from California identified a very real environmental problem on the border between the United States and Mexico, and attempted to frame an effective solution. He introduced legislation, requested hearings in the Committee on Commerce, and was the driving force behind bringing H.R. 8 to markup.

Indeed, even after the Committee on Commerce and full House approved H.R. 8, the gentleman from California (Mr. BILBRAY) did not let up. He crossed Capitol Hill and personally lobbied members of the other body to ensure that this legislation would see action during the present session.

The gentleman understood very well that it takes a great deal of effort for Congress to consider and improve any bill, and in every stage of the process he was there on the legislative grid iron moving the ball forward. We are now at the one yard line thanks to the gentleman. With approval of H.R. 8 today, the bill will be sent to the President for his signature.

Certain changes have been made in H.R. 8 by the other body. All changes are agreeable to the Committee on Commerce and were the result of bipartisan discussions between the majority and minority on our committee. I know of no opposition to the final version of this legislation.

In brief, by agreeing to H.R. 8, as amended by the Senate, we will establish a program to deny entry into the United States of certain noncommercial foreign registered vehicles at the southern California border crossing. While these vehicles will be allowed to cross into the United States twice each month, they will be denied further entry unless they comply with existing State laws designed to ensure that the vehicles meet applicable emissions standards.

There is also flexibility in the legislation to continue either the sanctions provided in the bill, or to design an alternative system addressing some or all foreign registered vehicles. Any alternative system, however, must be approved by the President.

Again, I want to thank the gentleman from California (Mr. BILBRAY) for all of his hard work. H.R. 8 is a testament to the dedication and determination of the gentleman to make life better for citizens on both sides of the border.

The Border Smog Reduction Act of 1998 will result in both cleaner air and more equitable treatment between domestic and foreign-registered vehicles.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise to express support for H.R. 8, the Border Smog Reduction Act.

In July of this year, the House passed H.R. 8. At the end of September the Senate Committee on Environment and Public Works passed the bill without amendment on a voice vote. Just days after the committee's action in the Senate, however, majority and minority members of the House Committee on Commerce and Senate Committee on Environment and Public Works agreed to revise the bill in order to address concerns about how the bill might apply to States other than California.

□ 1600

This week the Senate passed an amendment and improved H.R. 8, which we consider today. I would like to thank the gentleman from California (Mr. BILBRAY), the gentleman from California (Mr. WAXMAN), the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BLILEY), and the gentleman from Florida (Mr. BILIRAKIS) for making several important improvements to this legislation.

Unlike the version of H.R. 8 passed by the House in July, the Senate-passed bill applies to the California-Mexico border only. The Senate-passed bill retains important language which I offered in committee to study the effects of the North American Free Trade Agreement on air quality in communities along the U.S.-Mexico border.

The provision requires the General Accounting Office to conduct a study comparing the potential effect of this legislation on air quality in ozone nonattainment areas with air quality in these same areas caused by vehicles registered in or operating from Mexico as a result of implementation of NAFTA.

It is difficult to imagine that the increased commercial truck traffic, much of it brought about by NAFTA, is not adding significantly to the nonattainment problems in Southern California.

The environmental devastation brought on by NAFTA is a serious problem on both sides of the border, created by both sides of the border. I hope that this study will provide critical information on the effect this increased traffic under NAFTA is having on air quality in our border areas.

Again, I would like to thank my colleague and chairman, the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BLILEY), the gentleman from California (Mr. BILBRAY), and the gentleman from Florida (Mr. BILIRAKIS), the gentleman from California (Mr. WAXMAN) and the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. STUPAK) for working together to resolve the concerns many of us have this with legislation. H.R. 8 has been significantly improved from the version originally introduced.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to support the bill, and I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. BLILEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Florida (Mr. BILIRAKIS), the chairman of the Subcommittee on Health and Environment.

(Mr. BILIRAKIS asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BILIRAKIS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased that the House is considering H.R. 8, the Border Smog Reduction Act, as amended by the Senate. I also want to express my gratitude to the gentleman from Virginia (Chairman BLILEY), to the ranking member, the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. DINGELL), the ranking member, the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. SHERROD BROWN), and our staff and all the members of the subcommittee particularly for their work on this issue.

As I am sure our friend and colleague, the gentleman from California (Mr. BILBRAY) will attest, today's legislative action did not happen overnight. Instead, today represents a culmination of many hours of work by the gentleman from California (Mr. BILBRAY) and the Subcommittee on Health and Environment to review this legislation to solicit the opinion of Members of Congress, both on and off the committee, and to work with the administration to address any concerns.

The gentleman from California (Mr. BILBRAY) and the city of San Diego hosted a hearing in November of last year attended by 5 members of the subcommittee, wherein we were able to speak with environmental people, with the general public, and we also visited a location on the border and saw firsthand the problems that we are trying to improve and to correct.

We also worked closely with our colleagues in the other body to ensure that the final adjustments to the legislative language of H.R. 8 were acceptable to the House.

Indeed, at every stage of the process of considering this legislation, the majority and minority closely reviewed and agreed upon all changes. The final legislation attempts to address air quality conditions in an evenhanded fashion.

Certain foreign-registered commuter vehicles not meeting State inspections and maintenance requirements will be denied entry into the United States in the California-Mexico border area after being given two opportunities each month to obtain proper State certification. However, public notice of the new prohibitions is required prior to the implementation of the act.

There is also flexibility provided to design an alternative system if the State so desires and the President approves that alternative system.

Taken as a whole, Mr. Speaker, the legislation seeks to obtain the same emission reductions from foreign-registered vehicles as are obtained from vehicles owned and operated solely in the United States.

The United States Environmental Protection Agency considers vehicle inspection and maintenance programs to be one of the most cost-effective measures we can take to clear the air. Thus, H.R. 8 allows us to fill an apparent hole in our Clean Air Act enforcement network.

The bill will help ensure that air quality on both sides of the border can make the progress necessary to obtain compliance with the national ambient air quality standards.

Again, I want to commend the gentleman from California (Mr. BILBRAY) for his hard work and dedication to this issue, and I know that his interest in this legislation stems from a strong desire to improve air quality in border regions, and to achieve an equitable burden-sharing between domestic and foreign mobile sources.

I think that establishing such equity is an important element in maintaining respect for the implementation of our environmental laws. I want to thank the gentleman and the ranking minority member of my subcommittee, again, the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. BROWN), for helping to ensure that this bill becomes law in the present session.

Mr. BLILEY. Mr. Speaker, it is a great pleasure to yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from California (Mr. BILBRAY), the author of this legislation.

(Mr. BILBRAY asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BILBRAY. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong support of H.R. 8, the Border Smog Reduction Act. H.R. 8 is a bipartisan commonsense approach to an environmental problem that has been identified along our Mexican border for all too long. It is common sense in the manner that it completely connects the concept that those who wish to gain economic opportunities must also bear environmental responsibilities. At the heart of this bill is the basic concept that fairness is essential in the enforcement of our environmental regulations within this country and among nations.

I would ask Members to remember that with H.R. 8, we are asking our Federal agencies to now be included in assisting the enforcement of environmental regulations that the Federal Government has mandated on the local communities along our borders.

Mr. Speaker, at this time I would like to make sure that I have identified and thanked my colleagues for the immense amount of help that has been given to this Member in moving along the Smog Reduction Act—by the subcommittee chairman, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. MICHAEL BILIRAKIS), by the full chairman, the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. TOM BLILEY), and specifically staff member, Bob Meyers, who worked hard in making sure that H.R. 8 did become law.

The oversight chairman, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Joe BARTON) actually was one of the original coauthors of this bill in the 104th Congress, and the experience of Texas in this process was actually enhanced by the support of the gentleman from El Paso, Texas (Mr. SYLVESTRE REYES), with his extensive background in border issues.

At the same time, in the other body, Senator CHAFEE and Senator INHOFE have been very, very supportive in getting this bill through the Senate.

I would also at this time like to strongly praise my colleague and ranking member, the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. SHERROD BROWN) for his aid in making this bill possible, and my colleague, the gentleman from California (Mr. HENRY WAXMAN).

Mr. Speaker, this bill is a model, not only for those of us in the House to be able to work in a bipartisan way to address environmental problems, but also a model of the fact that we are no longer going to ignore the environmental challenges along our frontiers. In fact, it is refective of the strategy that we are going to use the economic opportunities of international trade as a vehicle to focus on environmental problems that have been ignored for all too long.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to state quite clearly my appreciation to the entire governmental structure in Washington, for once addressing these problems, faced by those of us who live along the border. I look forward to working together with my colleagues on both sides of the aisle, and working with the Republic of Mexico, and Canada, in making sure that current and future problems, faced such as smog problems along the border are addressed, along with many others. I think this can be a vehicle that we can use as a blueprint here in the House of Representatives and in the Senate and hopefully in our continuing relationships with our neighbors to the north and south.

I ask Members' support for H.R. 8. It is a common-sense approach to addressing an important public health issue, and at the same time assessing what more can be done to make sure that we properly address those remaining issues that have not been addressed comprehensively. Mr. Speaker, I ask for the passage of H.R. 8.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. BLILEY. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. NEY). The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BLILEY) that the House suspend the rules and concur in the Senate amendments to H.R. 8.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the Senate amendments were concurred in.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

CHILD ONLINE PROTECTION ACT

Mr. TAUZIN. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 3783) to amend section 223 of the Communications Act of 1934 to require persons who are engaged in the business of selling or transferring, by means of the World Wide Web, material that is harmful to minors to restrict access to such material by minors, and for other purposes, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 3783

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the ''Child Online Protection Act''.

TITLE I—PROTECTION FROM MATERIAL THAT IS HARMFUL TO MINORS

SEC. 101. CONGRESSIONAL FINDINGS.

The Congress finds that—

(1) while custody, care, and nurture of the child resides first with the parent, the widespread availability of the Internet presents opportunities for minors to access materials through the World Wide Web in a manner that can frustrate parental supervision or control;

(2) the protection of the physical and psychological well-being of minors by shielding them from materials that are harmful to them is a compelling governmental interest;

(3) to date, while the industry has developed innovative ways to help parents and educators restrict material that is harmful to minors through parental control protections and self-regulation, such efforts have not provided a national solution to the problem of minors accessing harmful material on the World Wide Web;

(4) a prohibition on the distribution of material harmful to minors, combined with legitimate defenses, is currently the most effective and least restrictive means by which to satisfy the compelling government interest; and

(5) notwithstanding the existence of protections that limit the distribution over the World Wide Web of material that is harmful to minors, parents, educators, and industry must continue efforts to find ways to protect children from being exposed to harmful material found on the Internet.

SEC. 102. REQUIREMENT TO RESTRICT ACCESS BY MINORS TO MATERIALS COMMERCIALLY DISTRIBUTED BY MEANS OF THE WORLD WIDE WEB THAT ARE HARMFUL TO MINORS.

Part I of title II of the Communications Act of 1934 (47 U.S.C. 201 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

''(c) AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE.—

''(1) DEFENSE.—It is an affirmative defense to prosecution under this section that the defendant, in good faith, has restricted access by minors to material that is harmful to minors—

Mr. TAUZIN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 5 minutes.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 3783, the Child Online Protection Act. Last month the Committee on Commerce overwhelmingly approved this bill. The bill as adopted would simply make it illegal to sell pornography to minors on the World Wide Web unless and until an adult verification system is in place.

Let me make it clear, the bill does not try to control the sale of that material to adults. Neither does it say one cannot sell it to a minor for whom an adult says it is okay. It simply says that insofar as the sale of material to a minor, that the producer of that product cannot do so without the consent of the parents in an adult verification system that actually works.

It directs the FTC to promulgate regulations within a year of the date of the act prohibiting commercial websites and online operators from collecting personally identifying information from children 12 and under, unless certain requirements are met. This is an FTC agreement that has been reached and supported and already adopted on the other side that we have added by amendment to this bill.

Further, the public posting of children's identifying information in chat rooms and other online forums may pose safety concerns, and the bill simply protects against those things happening.

The bill requires four simple things. It requires ample notice to make sure that operators provide clear, prominent, understandable notice on their sites of what information they are collecting from children, how they will use it, and disclosure practice for that information.

Second, it states that operators must obtain parental consent; and third, that operators must prohibit inducements to provide personal information from the children by games and contests; and that operators must disclose the specific types of information collected to a parent, and offer the parent the opportunity to opt out of future use of that information.

For those who are still denying that the legislation is not needed, I ask them to go back to their offices and surf the net for a few minutes. If Members take a few minutes, Members will see that H.R. 3783 really attempts to solve a real, not a perceived, problem.

If Members go to an Internet search engine such as Yahoo, type in ''porn'' or ''sex'', under porn I am told we will receive more than 105,000 matches, and under sex, receive 670,000 matches. Within seconds Members can retrieve information from any one of these hits, and they will display, in many cases, pornographic material.

Some sites will have warnings, 18 or older. Other sites ask for credit cards or information prior to entering, but virtually all the sites contain teasers that display sexual behavior, in an attempt to lure us into that site, us or our children. Imagine, now, a Member's 8-year-old son or daughter is accessing that same information.

The bill that we are considering today makes an honest attempt, without interference with the first amendment, to provide that our sons or daughters will not easily access this information without our consent. It is effective because it focuses on the commercial seller of pornography, and it uses a constitutionally already verified protection phrase, ''harm to children,'' rather than the obscenity phrase that was attempted in the 1996 act and was rejected by the Supreme Court.

In short, H.R. 3783 attempts to address all the issues raised by the Supreme Court. It has a narrow prohibition, tighter definition, and a realization that the applicability of the law may change as technology is involved.

I want to particularly commend the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. OXLEY), the vice chairman of the Subcommittee on Telecommunications, Trade, and Consumer Protection, who is the principal author and who has worked so diligently with all members of the committee to make sure it came out with unanimous consent, and with conditions and language that we think is supportable in any court challenge.

I want to thank the gentleman from Virginia (Chairman BLILEY) for his leadership on this issue. He knows, as we all know, that this is a real problem, and this bill attempts to solve it in a real simple but meaningful way.

Mr. Speaker, I encourage Members to support H.R. 3783, and I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. MARKEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, today we bring to the floor the Child Online Protection Act, the bill that has been introduced by my good friend, the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. OXLEY), the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GREENWOOD), the gentleman from New York (Mr. MANTON), under the leadership of the gentleman from Louisiana (Mr. TAUZIN) and the chairman of the full committee, the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BLILEY).

The legislation that we are bringing to the floor also includes the child privacy protection provisions similar to those of my bill, H.R. 4667, the Electronic Privacy Bill of Rights Act of 1998.

As many know, Senator BRYAN has similar child privacy legislation moving through the Senate, and hopefully we can enact children's privacy legislation before Congress adjourns this year.

I want to thank the gentleman from Virginia (Chairman BLILEY) and the gentleman from Louisiana (Chairman TAUZIN) and the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. OXLEY) and others for agreeing to add this provision here at the end of this session.

The first part of the legislation we consider this afternoon is designed to protect children from Internet fare that is inappropriate for them. Mr. Speaker, there is no question that there is content out on the Internet that is harmful to children and that they ought not to have access to such on-line fare from their computers.

In the previous session of Congress, the Communications Decency Act provision of the Telecommunications Act established a national indecency standard that the Court struck down because it was overly vague and broad, and I agreed with that decision. I opposed the Communications Decency Act out here on the floor.

The standard in the bill before us today is ''harmful to minors,'' much narrower than the Communications Decency Act. Yet like the CDA, the bill would propose a national standard rather than a community-based standard of what harmful to minors means.

The legislation before us raises a number of difficult policy questions such as whether a policy of community-by-community-based standards of harmful to minors is at all possible in a global medium, whether the Internet requires national treatment for what is harmful to minors across the country.

The legislation also tacitly determines that filtering or blocking software cannot do the job of protecting minors, and, therefore, the government needs to step in and regulate access to certain Internet content.

I have long believed that technology can offer a solution to some of the problems that technology itself creates. Software filtering technology and other blocking technology can help to provide parents some tools for shielding children from inappropriate on-line fare.

In addition, I believe that other solutions may also help to mitigate against minors gaining access to Websites that parents want to shield from young children. I commend the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. OXLEY) for going to great lengths to listen to the concerns that many of us have and thank him for the adjustments that he has made in the legislation to meet some of those concerns.

While many of us still have concerns over the scope and the timing of some of these provisions, I hope that as we proceed and further discuss these provisions with our friends in the Senate, we can address how we define the scope of those entities that are providing inappropriate content and properly distinguish them from those entities that are solely conduits for accessing that information; further talk about alternatives such as filtering; and perhaps address the timing of when certain provisions become effective; and adjust the commission in the bill to make its membership more bipartisan and reflective of the bipartisan manner in which this body deals with telecommunications issues generally.

Mr. Speaker, the second part of the bill, as the chairman of the subcommittee has pointed out, addresses the issue of child privacy on the Internet. The issue of privacy in the Information Age, and in particular children's privacy protection, is quite timely as the Nation becomes ever more linked by communications networks such as the Internet.

It is important as we tackle these issues now, before we travel down the information superhighway too far and realize perhaps that we made a wrong turn, that we had a chance to build in protection for kids before this technology took too much control over the lives of kids across our country.

In general, I believe that Congress ought to embrace a three-part comprehensive policy of privacy for children in our country:

Number one, that every parent should have knowledge about information which is being gathered about children in our country. As we know, many of these Websites attach cookies, attach this technology which allows them to gather the information about children without the knowledge of those children or parents. I believe that every family should know when information is being gathered about their children.

Secondly, notice that those companies, that those individuals plan on reusing that information for purposes other than that which was originally intended by the family, by the children.

And thirdly, that the family, that the consumer, that the children, have a right to say no, that they do not want this information to be reused other than that purpose for which the family had, the children using the Internet at that time.

These provisions in this bill are very consistent with those larger principles. The Senate has included language that is nearly identical; not quite, but very close in their bill. It gives us a chance to deal with this children's issue, this privacy issue, and I would hope that the full House today would adopt the bill in its entirety.

I thank the gentleman from Louisiana (Mr. TAUZIN), chairman of the subcommittee, again for his graciousness in helping us to add that provision.

Mr. TAUZIN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MARKEY. I yield to the gentleman from Louisiana.

Mr. TAUZIN. Mr. Speaker, just to make everyone clear on the fact that the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. MARKEY) is the principal author of these on-line privacy provisions, and they come, as he has pointed out, with full recommendation of the FTC and many consumer and family and children's support groups around America. I have a long list.

I also wanted to add that the provisions do include a safe harbor provision which says to the industry that if they can come up with a better provision, they can submit it to the FTC, and that would be the one that would be used. That is a very good type of provision that we like to include in this type of Internet legislation.

Mr. MARKEY. Mr. Speaker, reclaiming my time, I just think it is good electronic ethics for Website operators to know that they have a responsibility to children in our country. They should obtain parental consent. And I thank all who have helped to work on that issue, the gentleman from Louisiana (Mr. TAUZIN) the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BLILEY) the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. OXLEY). On our side, the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. DINGELL) and his staff have worked with us very closely to craft this in a way which we believe does really meet this very great concern that is rising across the country.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. TAUZIN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. OXLEY) the principal author of the main part of this legislation which protects against pornography and children on the Net.

(Mr. OXLEY asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. OXLEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of the Child On-line Protection Act and as an advocate for a child's right to explore the World Wide Web without exposure to graphic pornography.

Currently more than 60,000 Websites featuring sexually explicit and obscene material are available to unsuspecting children. While the Internet can be a positive tool for the education and entertainment of our children, it can also be a window to the dark world of pornography. Minors can readily access obscene material intentionally or unintentionally and be lured into dangerous situations. Children cannot safely learn in a virtual red light district.

Common sense and 40 years of research in the field of child development clearly demonstrate that exposure to sexually explicit material is detrimental to the healthy psychological development of children.

Current law does not prevent adult Websites from providing sexually explicit images to children. Commercial distributors of pornography offer free teaser pages to lure potential customers into viewing more. A child may innocently search for key words like ''dollhouse,'' ''toys'' or ''pet,'' and be led into numerous sexually explicit sites.

That is why COPA enjoys broad bipartisan support today, and I specifically would like to express my appreciation to my original cosponsor, the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GREENWOOD), as well as the gentleman from Virginia (Chairman BLILEY), the gentleman from Louisiana (Chairman TAUZIN) for bringing this bill to the floor today, the ranking member of my subcommittee, the gentleman from New York (Mr. MANTON), the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. MARKEY), who has added the protections also in the privacy side that we applaud, and the gentleman from California (Mr. COX). Their input allowed us to clarify the intent of H.R. 3783 and eliminate any vagueness.

The gentleman from Washington (Mr. WHITE) particularly deserves particular recognition for helping to refine the bill to protect Internet service providers for liability for content which they do not produce.

I also want to express my support for Chairman Bliley's addition of child privacy protection language to the bill and express my sincere thanks to the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. MARKEY) for his good work in this area.

Mr. Chairman, COPA employs the constitutionally tested ''harmful to minors'' standard recognized and upheld in Federal courts for more than 30 years. It only applied to material which is not protected speech for minors under the First Amendment.

COPA requires commercial on-line pornographers to take steps to restrict children's access to adult material on the Web by requiring adult verification, such as an adult access code, PIN number, credit card numbers, or new technologies such as digital signatures when they become available.

COPA does not, and I want make this very clear, does not restrict an adult's ability to access pornographic Websites and does not apply to content with redeeming value or regulate content. The bill merely proposes that Web porn be treated in the same manner as the print media.

Unfortunately, the Web is awash in degrading smut. There are literally thousands of sites dedicated to every manner of perversion and brutality. This is nothing less than an attempt to protect childhood. I urge all Members to join us in supporting this legislation.

Mr. MARKEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from New York (Mr. MANTON) coauthor of the bill.

Mr. MANTON. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. MARKEY) for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong support of this legislation, as amended. I am proud to be a cosponsor of this bill and to urge all of my colleagues to support its passage.

The Internet is one of our society's most valuable educational tools and an exciting entertainment medium for children. It allows them to access information and learn about the world in a way no past generation has experienced. Unfortunately, it can also be a dangerous place for children who either knowingly or unwittingly stumble across pornographic material.

We can all agree that children should not have access to pornography via the Internet, but how to achieve this end while upholding the First Amendment rights of adults is a delicate task. I believe the Child On-line Protection Act will go a long way toward protecting children, but do so in the least restrictive manner, ensuring the rights of adults are not compromised.

Mr. Speaker, this bill addresses a very serious problem. With estimates that close to 28,000 pornography Websites exist today, it is clear that we must act to keep such material from our children.

I would like to thank both the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. OXLEY) and the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GREENWOOD) for all of their hard work in bringing this legislation before us today.

Again, I urge my colleagues to support the Child On-line Protection Act.

Mr. TAUZIN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GREENWOOD).

Mr. GREENWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Louisiana (Mr. TAUZIN) for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, and I also rise to support the Child On-line Protection Act. In the Greenwood house, we have a small room. It is the playroom. And as my two little daughters, Laura and Katy, have grown up, it has been kind of fun to watch the transition of the toys in their playroom.

When we got our computer, we put it in the playroom, figuring that as time goes by and they grow, they will shift from the toys and spend more time with their studies and computers. At any given time, I can walk in the playroom and see one of my daughters on the computer and another playing with her dollhouse or maybe some of her toys inspired by Disney movies.

As the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. OXLEY) said, the terrible problem is that if my daughter sits at the computer and types in a word like ''dollhouse'' or ''toys'' or ''Disney'' even, she could find herself at the direct access to pornographic sites.

The Communications Decency Act was our first effort to try to stop this problem, a problem that every parent in America wants us to address. Of course that was struck down first by a circuit court in my area, Philadelphia, and then by the Supreme Court. So, we looked for a new standard, and we found the standard that meets the Court's guidelines in H.R. 3783.

The principle is very simple. The First Amendment certainly protects the right of people to have any kind of literature in their adult bookstores, but it certainly does not mean that proprietors can open an adult bookstore in a mall and display their merchandise on the windows of their store visible to shoppers, including children, in the store. It is common sense. That is what this legislation does on the Web.

There are adult movie theaters, so-called adult movie theaters, where there are pornographic films, but the purveyors of those films cannot display their videos on the marquee visible to people on the sidewalk.

This legislation, by simply requiring adult access to these sites, is consistent with the First Amendment rights outlined by the Supreme Court and certainly consistent with the will and the wishes of every parent, including this parent, that our children be protected from that material and that it be accessible only by adults with the correct code or Visa card.

Mr. Speaker, I urge support of the legislation.

Mr. MARKEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. FRANK).

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I congratulate my colleague from Massachusetts on the privacy protections here. They are very, very important.

□ 1630

I wish they were coming up as a separate bill, because they are attached to a bill which I believe will be found unconstitutional and which ought not to be passed.

Obviously, it is important to try to protect minors from being exploited and abused and exposed to inappropriate material on the internet. But it is important to do that in a way that does not interfere with the constitutional right of adults to communicate with each other. The operative part of this bill, on page 4, says it is a crime to make any communication for commercial purposes available to any minor. That does not mean that the communication was aimed at the minor: to make it available to a minor. That means an entity is held responsible for anybody who has access to the internet.

Now, here is the problem we have. We have in this country a great deal of free speech. If we are writing or speaking or communicating ideas in a nonelectronic context, we have more freedom in America than in any other country. But we began in the 1930s, because of the limited radio spectrum, a second doctrine on freedom of expression. Freedom of expression does not fully apply, we said, if it is electronically communicated. Well, the courts are no longer maintaining that strict definition, because the basis, the limited spectrum, the notion of the public interest, does not quite control.

We are in danger now of having two separate standards because, clearly, this standard where we would be committing a crime if we made any communication for commercial purposes available to a minor, that was harmful to a minor, that would not obviously even be offered for a newspaper, for a magazine or for a book. And the notion that we should give a lesser standard of constitutional protection for freedom of expression because it is electronically communicated is not only mistaken, but given that we will increasingly communicate with each other electronically, it will erode our freedom.

In the definition of harmful to a minor it says obscenity or another category. This bill specifically says it regulates nonobscene material if the material appeals on the whole to prurient interests. And, again, it does not only deal with material aimed at minors. If we put something on the web that is not obscene, and it has an appeal to prurient interests and is then judged harmful to minors, we can be guilty of a crime. This will further erode the notion of freedom of speech.

So I welcome the privacy protections here, and I understand the importance of trying to protect children, but doing it in a way that says, and let me be very clear that this is what this says, nonobscene material that is constitutionally protected, because the bill explicitly says it is banning obscene material and nonobscene material if it is harmful to minors. If we put that on the web and a minor sees it, we can be criminally liable even if we were not even making any efforts to try to aim it at the minor.

This is far too broad. I believe it will be held unconstitutional. That is why the Justice Department asked us to hold off. I think it would be a grave error to do this today.

Mr. TAUZIN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume just to respond.

First of all, I want to point out that the harmful to minor standard was upheld in 1969 by the Supreme Court itself and that 48 States have such standards in their State laws. Five circuit courts have already examined those and approved those as constitutional, and that is the standard used in this bill.

Secondly, I would point out that the owners and producers of these sites are liable only if they are commercial operators who do not put in filtering devices where parents can say yes or no. If in fact the filtering device is in place, and the parents say it is okay for our children to see this stuff, so be it. It simply requires, if someone is going to go into the commercial business of putting material that is harmful to minors under that Supreme Court standard on the internet, that that material must contain a filtering device so that parents have the ability to say yes or no.

That is the sum and substance of the bill. And, again, I would urge its adoption.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Washington State (Mr. WHITE).

Mr. WHITE. Mr. Speaker, I have four children, they are 14, 12, 9 and 7. They use the internet all the time. And I can tell my colleagues we do have a real problem in terms of their access to pornography that might exist on the internet.

I would also say, however, that a law is not always the best way to solve these problems. And I think we know our laws do not apply in Amsterdam. They sometimes breed a false sense of security. And, even worse, they sometimes lock us into the wrong technology, technology that is obsolete and will not do as good a job as technology that might come along in the future.

So I think it is no secret to my friends on the committee that I would have preferred to wait a year to let the technology community really give us their input on this bill. The committee felt otherwise, and I know many of my colleagues feel otherwise. And, frankly, working together, we have produced a very good bill.

The main improvement that I see in this bill, and one that we should focus on, is we call for a commission made up of 16 members from the technology community and 3 members of government who will report to us in 1 year as to whether this is the best way to solve this problem, or whether there are other technologies out there that we are not aware of that might do a better job of helping us solve this problem.

So with that improvement, I think this bill is a good bill, deserves our support, and I urge my colleagues to vote for it.

Mr. TAUZIN. Mr. Speaker, may I inquire of the time remaining?

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. NEY). The gentleman from Louisiana (Mr. TAUZIN) has 9 minutes remaining; and the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. MARKEY) has 8 minutes remaining.

Mr. MARKEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3½ minutes to the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. SHEILA JACKSON-LEE).

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time and I rise vigorously to support this legislation. And, Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GREENWOOD), the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. OXLEY), the gentleman from New York (Mr. MANTON), the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. MARKEY), the gentleman from Louisiana (Mr. TAUZIN), the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BLILEY), and as well the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. DINGELL).

This legislation did not come through the House Committee on the Judiciary, but I think that we can always consider ways to ensure its constitutionality. My real concern is the children of America. As a chair of the Congressional Children's Caucus, and one who has interacted frequently in my local community as a former city council member, recognizing the vital role that computers play and the internet plays in schools, in churches, in homes, and in libraries, and our children are in all those places, it is for that very reason I do not believe this legislation sets the bar too high to protect our children.

Frankly, it is tragic that we have to even do this, because this is good technology. The internet and the online services are good technology. I know that we were together 1 or 2 years ago in the telecommunications conference where we tried the v-chip, and we know what happened with that, but we are back here trying to do it the right way on the internet, and the internet does have a free flow in reaching our children.

I am particularly gratified for the leadership of the gentleman from Massachusetts on some very vital points as to parents. Parents, listen to this, for information is always gathered about our children. But with the children's privacy provision it is important to realize that parents must have knowledge about the gathering of this material, even if it is a toy company trying to find out what our children like to play with. Then, the notice must be given of the company's or the user's or the gatherer's use of that material. And then, as well, if it is not comporting with what the parents originally thought it was going to be used for, the gathering of that material, the parent, the child, can say no. I think that we are at a point in this country where that is a responsible way to go.

As a member of the Subcommittee on Crime of the Committee on the Judiciary, I can assure my colleagues that solicitation of children over the internet is a growing problem, pornography on the internet is a growing problem, and children's access to the internet is a growing problem in contrast to what they are receiving. So I do not think we can finish this session of Congress without getting a bill out of the House that emphasizes the importance of keeping children away from pornographic issues or pornographic material, obscene materials, on the internet and, likewise, protecting them.

So I would simply extend my thanks for providing us with a framework within which we can work. Let the parents of America recognize that we are giving them a tool reasonably grounded in the constitutional right to privacy and the first amendment, and I know we can work on it additionally.

I see my good friend from Louisiana standing, and there were some points made on this issue dealing with the Constitution. I know we are working very hard, because the computer industry or the internet providers are a powerful group, and I hope that they respect what the FCC has done in working with the gentleman. We are going to be reasonable about the amendment.

Mr. TAUZIN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentlewoman yield?

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. I yield to the gentleman from Louisiana.

Mr. TAUZIN. Mr. Speaker, first, let me commend the gentlewoman for an excellent statement and, indeed, to confirm her statement. We have been very careful about using the language that the courts have already approved on the standard, the one approved by the Supreme Court. We have crafted the bill so that it applies only to commercial sites and not to ordinary speakers.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Speaker, reclaiming my time, I thank the gentleman for the time and for an excellent piece of legislation.

Mr. Speaker, thank you for the opportunity to speak on this bill this morning. The Child Online Protection Act will require operators of commercial adult World Wide Web sites to protect our children from exposure to pornographic materials.

The Internet was designed by innovators, visionaries in the scientific and academic community to expand our horizons, to help us learn about each other and to have simple access to new information, ideas and data. The net has now moved far beyond an educational tool and has become a global phenomenon of communication and commerce. Although the Web can be a fantastic vehicle for enriching our lives, we must also keep unwanted sexual imagery and pornography from invading our children's lives.

I support this bill in that it requires the operators of commercial adult sites to act responsibly in taking steps to restrict children's access to pornographic sites. This bill does not restrict an adults' right to access adult material on the net, it simply requires that users have a verified credit card number or adult personal identification number to access adult materials.

Protecting our children from pornography is a challenge, but as a parent and as Chair of the Congressional Children's Caucus, we must make every effort to do so.

Mr. TAUZIN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. PITTS).

Mr. PITTS. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of the Child Online Protection Act. It is our duty to protect America's children from online pornographers.

Kids in America know computers. They are being raised in an age where information is at their fingertips; at the flip of a switch or at the click of a mouse. While internet access is an incredible enhancer of learning, our kids are also put in danger of exposure to pornographic materials.

The Child Online Protection Act would require operators of commercial adult worldwide web sites to take steps to restrict children's access to pornographic materials. Opponents of this bill will claim that we are attempting to federally sensor the internet. This is simply not true. In fact, the legislation specifically states that it must not be construed to authorize the FCC to regulate in any manner the content of any information provided on the worldwide web. The bill simply requires commercial providers to place materials that are harmful to minors on the other side of adult verification technology.

Let us protect our children, let us make the internet more family friendly by passing the Child Online Protection Act today.

Mr. MARKEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. FRANK).

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, as I read this, I do not believe filtering equipment would be a complete affirmative defense, as I read the line about affirmative defenses. But I then had a question. It says material that is harmful to minors, and I gather in a picture or text that would be describing sex and would appeal to prurient interests.

A question would be if a commercial entity took the Starr report, which was not copyrighted, and put it out on the web as part of their business-making enterprise, would a commercial business that put the Starr report out on the web and did not restrict it with filtering information, would that commercial enterprise be subject to a penalty under this bill?

Mr. OXLEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. OXLEY. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman. The answer is no. Because the harmful to minors, as has been interpreted by the courts, it defines harmful to minors as not covering content which, taken as a whole, has serious literary, artistic, political or scientific value. And I think it is pretty clear this has political content.

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. Reclaiming my time, Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman is talking about the Starr report, I guess maybe he is right. It certainly does not have any literary value or scientific value or artistic value. But from the standpoint of his party, it has political value, so maybe it would get off.

Mr. OXLEY. The gentleman can interpret it however he wants.

Mr. MARKEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. TAUZIN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentlewoman from New Mexico (Mrs. WILSON).

Mrs. WILSON. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this bill, and I appreciate this bill for a number of reasons. In my view it is really the brown paper wrapper approach to the internet, where technology has really exceeded our ability as parents to protect our children from things that we would like to protect them from.

By making commercial sale against the law in the internet without age verification, we are really doing no more than is required by most Circle K's or convenience stores, and I think that that is the right way to approach it.

I also appreciate that this bill includes studies on filtering and other methods, like zoning, that may be able to help parents and help schools without prescribing an answer before we know what the technology is capable of.

□ 1645

I think that that is also a rational approach to solving this problem. I appreciate the amendment that protects personal information of children online. As a parent, I understand the strengths and benefits of the Internet. But it also has the potential to exceed our ability as parents to control the access of our children to things that they may not even know they are accessing.

Let us give ourselves another tool. Let us give ourselves that electronic brown paper wrapper.

Mr. TAUZIN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume. I want to point out that the gentleman from Washington (Mr. WHITE) and I have authored a bill that codifies in law the concept of forbearance of regulating the Internet. The FCC has voluntarily forborne any regulations of the Internet and we think that is proper. The bill we have offered indicates that the FCC should continue in that forbearance but that where and if areas of concern arise, such as this area of harmfulness to minors, that the Congress itself should make the decisions about how and where the Internet should be affected by any such restrictions or regulations. It is for that reason that we think this bill is very much in line with the concept of the White bill that we have earlier offered and which we will try to pursue passage in a future Congress.

The concept again is that the Internet should be as free and open as possible. Otherwise, it cannot be the place where free expression under the first amendment is fully utilized as we all want it to be. But where areas exist, such as in this area of harmfulness to minors or areas where minors' information is being taken from them without parental consent, this is the area where Congress itself should express those areas of concern and come up with solutions. This bill is an honest attempt to do that.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Florida (Mr. STEARNS).

(Mr. STEARNS asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. STEARNS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of H.R. 3783. I believe it is fundamentally important that as the representatives of our Nation, we do everything we can to protect our children from the detrimental effects of pornography reaching their eyes.

This bill as it is is tailored to withstand the legal requirements established by the Supreme Court when it struck down the Communications Decency Act. The bill uses the constitutionally defensible ''harmful to minors'' standard rather than the constitutionally questionable ''decency'' standard. The bill prohibits businesses from selling or transferring through the Internet material that is harmful to minors. Businesses would be in compliance of the law and not liable to prosecution if they adhere to some ''affirmative defenses'' in the conduct of their businesses. An example of an affirmative defense for a company would be requiring the use of a credit card, debit account or some type of ''adult access code.''

This is an integral bill that will be good for the Nation. I urge my colleagues' support.

Mr. BLILEY. Mr. Speaker, as the Commerce Committee has learned during the course of the 105th Congress, the Internet, and consequently, electronic commerce, will only continue to develop if it is safe, secure, and private. H.R. 3783 addresses the ''safety'' of the Internet and provides an effective means to help protect children online.

Pronography is widely available on the Internet. According to Wired Magazine, there are approximately 28,000 adult Web sites promoting pornography and these sites generate close to $925 million in revenues. While adults have a right to view this material, parents, educators, and civic groups agree that exposure to pornography is not appropriate for minors. Forty-eight States agree with this assessment and have adopted ''harmful to minor'' statutes.

Whether these States require porn to be sold behind the counter at a drug store, on blinder racks at a convenient store, or in a shrink wrap at a news stand, each of them recognizes the proper role government can play to help restrict a child's access to inappropriate material. The purpose of H.R. 3783 is to extend those protections in cyberspace by restricting the sale of material harmful to minors over the World Wide Web.

Most opponents of legislation continue to argue that adult verification systems are not fool proof and that industry needs more time to come up with effective solutions. On the one hand, I agree that no solution is perfect, not even requiring the sale of pornography behind the counter at a drug store. On the other hand, delaying for another year does nothing to help the parents and educators today.

We can continue to debate the effectiveness of filtering software, rating systems, and adult domain name zoning, but none of these solutions apply the necessary burden on the appropriate industry, that is, the adult entertainment industry. I applaud the efforts of the software industry to develop filtering software and other technological solutions, but the law should impose duties on the source of the problem, not the victims.

H.R. 3783 does not ''burn the house to roast the pig.'' Adults may still view any materials on the Internet they wish, with minimal inconvenience, and engage in adult conversations in chat rooms, e-mails, and bulletin board services. Thus, H.R. 3783 strikes the appropriate balance between the First Amendment rights of adults and the government's compelling interest to protect children.

The amendment we are considering today also contains privacy protections for kids. These provisions generally prohibit businesses from collecting personal information from a child online without the parent's consent.

Legislation will not solve all the problems. Parents, educators, and industry must continue to play a role to ensure that kids are protected online.

I thank Mr. OXLEY and Mr. GREENWOOD for their leadership and Mr. TAUZIN for helping to move the bill along.

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Speaker, we are attempting to accomplish a laudable goal in this legislation. Parents are clamoring for ways to protect their kids from the onslaught of pornographic material on the Internet, and Congress has a responsibility to assist them in whatever ways it can. However, we have been down this road before, and our most recent attempt was met with a resounding rebuke from the Supreme Court. The Communications Decency Act was declared unconstitutional by a unanimous vote, and I harbor serious concerns that this bill will meet the same fate.

While the notion of regulating materials which are deemed ''harmful to minors'' sounds appealing, it raises many practical concerns. Who decides what materials are ''harmful to minors?'' Should the standard be community-based, or national? If local judgments about the suitability of materials differ around the country, how can a global medium such as the Internet respond to these different views? For example, will the Internet sale of mainstream movies and sound recordings be subject to the most conservative community's view of what is harmful to minors, exposing itself to civil and criminal penalties in the process? If a chill is placed on the sale of these materials, what will be the practical effect on the growth of electronic commerce?

These questions and many more should be addressed before we rush to adopt an easy fix to a complex problem. The Supreme Court is likely to force Congress's hand on these matters, and reiterate its demand for a more thorough evaluation if and when this legislation is enacted.

Mr. PITTS. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of the Child Online Protection Act.

It is our duty to protect America's children from online pornographers.

Kids in America know computers. They are being raised in an age where information is at their fingertips at the flip of a switch and a click of the mouse.

While Internet access is an incredible enhancer of learning, our kids are also put in danger of exposure to pornographic materials.

The Child Online Protection Act would require operators of commercial adult World Wide Web sites to take steps to restrict children's access to pornographic materials.

Opponents of this bill will claim that we are attempting to federally censor the Internet. This is simply not true. The bill simply requires commercial providers to place materials that are ''harmful to minors'' on the other side of adult verification technology.

Let's protect our children and make the Internet more family friendly by passing the Child Online Protection Act today.

Mr. TAUZIN. Mr. Speaker, I again want to thank the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. OXLEY) the principal author of the bill and the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. MARKEY) who has indeed improved it so much with the privacy provisions.

Mr. Speaker, I have no additional requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. NEY). The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Louisiana (Mr. TAUZIN) that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 3783, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill, as amended, was passed.

The title of the bill was amended so as to read: ''A Bill to amend the Communications Act of 1934 to require persons who are engaged in the business of distributing, by means of the World Wide Web, material that is harmful to minors to restrict access to such material by minors, and for other purposes.''.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

ANNOUNCEMENT REGARDING LEGISLATION TO BE CONSIDERED UNDER SUSPENSION OF THE RULES TODAY

Mr. MCINNIS. Mr. Speaker, pursuant to House Resolution 575, I announce the following suspension to be considered today:

S. 505.

WAIVING POINTS OF ORDER AGAINST CONFERENCE REPORT ON H.R. 4104, TREASURY AND GENERAL GOVERNMENT APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 1999

Mr. MCINNIS. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 579 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. RES. 579

Resolved, That upon adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to consider the conference report to accompany the bill (H.R. 4104) making appropriations for the Treasury Department, the United States Postal Service, the Executive Office of the President, and certain Independent Agencies, for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1999, and for other purposes. All points of order against the conference report and against its consideration are waived. The conference report shall be considered as read.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Colorado (Mr. MCINNIS) is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. MCINNIS. Mr. Speaker, for purposes of debate only, I yield the customary 30 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. MOAKLEY), pending which I yield myself such time as I may consume. During consideration of this resolution, all time yielded is for the purpose of debate only.

Mr. Speaker, the proposed rule for the conference report to accompany H.R. 4104, the Treasury, Postal Service, and General Government Appropriations bill for fiscal year 1999 waives all points of order against the conference report and against its consideration. The rule provides that the conference report will be considered as read.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. MOAKLEY. Mr. Speaker, I thank my very dear friend and my colleague from Colorado (Mr. MCINNIS) for yielding me the customary half-hour, and I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to oppose this rule and oppose the conference report. I realize we are nearing the end of our session and I understand that tempers are growing very short, but I am also very disappointed to hear that my Republican colleagues on the Treasury-Postal conference committee have deleted some Democrat-supported provisions, and it appears that they did so without any Democratic participation.

As late as yesterday afternoon, discussions between Democrat and Republican conferees were ongoing and all indications were that the conference report would pass with a bipartisan majority. But this morning without so much as a notice of meeting, my Democratic colleagues learned that these Democratic provisions had been taken out of the bill. Although these provisions were included in the first conference report this morning, they were removed and as a result not one Democrat has signed their name to this conference report.

Mr. Speaker, this conference report gives new meaning to the term ''martial law.'' Some of the provisions that have been removed include the provision of the gentlewoman from Florida (Mrs. MEEK) that Haitian immigrants be given the same protections as the Cuban and Nicaraguan immigrants; the provision of the gentlewoman from New York (Mrs. LOWEY); and the provision requiring standards for Federal child care facilities.

We may also hear that the provision firing the FEC general counsel has been removed. But the assumption is that it may not be dead but may be resurrected not in this bill but in the continuing resolution. In case my colleagues do not remember, this is the reason firing someone for investigating the Christian Coalition and GOPAC, along with a lot of Democratic organizations and candidates.

Mr. Speaker, regardless of which organization supports which party, if the FEC is not free to investigate who it will, when it will, our entire electoral system will suffer.

I urge my colleagues to oppose this rule and oppose this conference report.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. MCINNIS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume. First of all I need to correct the statement made by my good friend the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. MOAKLEY). The statement if I recall correctly from the record here a couple of minutes ago was that there had not been a Democrat who had signed the conference report. In fact Senator BYRD has signed the conference report. I know that this has just come up. I just wanted to bring that to the gentleman's attention. Obviously we are not going to have the perfect bill. We went through this on some other legislation the other night. We had extensive debate on this bill. We have gone out, we have talked with our colleagues, we have worked with our colleagues on both sides of the aisle and determined what needs to happen with this bill so that this Congress can conclude its business for the American people and move on. We came up with several elements. Those are going to be described in some detail by the gentleman from Arizona whom I intend to yield to here in just a couple of minutes. But the point here is this was a compromise. There were Democrats involved in this. Obviously the rule I think today will pass with bipartisan support. I hope it passes with bipartisan support because this bill deserves bipartisan support because it is built on a bipartisan structure.

The other day there were strong objections made by the other side. Frankly we looked at some of those objections and we have refined this bill so that we address in a fair manner those objections. Another point that I think we need to make. We have had some sacrifice on this side of the aisle. My colleague the gentleman from Florida (Mr. DIAZ-BALART) is very, very disappointed. He is very upset about this. I just spent the last 15 minutes trying to calm him down on the Haitian issue. I do not know anybody who has been more ardent in their support or have voiced their expressions on a more regular basis on this House floor in support of these Haitians. But that Haitian provision had to be dropped. That is the only way we could pick up those votes. He is very upset. He keeps standing up for the Haitians. I admire that position. But the fact is we have got to get these votes. We have got to move this bill. Ninety-nine percent of the content of this bill I think satisfies a lot of people. But we are never going to have the perfect bill.

Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. KOLBE).

Mr. KOLBE. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time. I rise in strong support of this rule. The gentleman from Colorado and I were here the other night. The outcome was not a very good one. I hope today that we will have a better outcome to the rule for this conference report.

Let me say a little bit about why I do support this conference report. I guess maybe it sounds a little bit like a Government 101 lecture, and I apologize if it seems that way. I think we have to face some of the realities. The reality is that to get a conference report adopted and to the President for signature, you have to do two things: You have to get it out of the conference, and that means getting a majority of Democrats and Republicans on the conference to sign a conference report. The second thing you have to do is to get it passed in both houses. The only way we can do that is with the bill that we have here this afternoon.

Now, there are provisions in here that are very controversial and some that I strongly supported. Let me just deal with the four issues that are different from where we were the other night when we got only 106 votes for the rule, with only 17 votes from the minority side of the aisle to support a rule that had in it things that they said they strongly, strongly supported. One of those was expanding contraceptive coverage for Federal employees covered by Federal health programs. That expansion of coverage is something that passed here in the House, it passed in the Senate, but they were very, very different provisions and they were very, very controversial. Members will remember the controversy we had when that occurred on the floor of the House. It caused a tremendous weight to be added to this bill. It was very difficult for us to deal with those who oppose this kind of expansion of contraceptive coverage for Federal employees. I happen to believe we should have it. But I also have a responsibility to the 165,000 Federal employees that are covered by this who would be out of work this weekend if we do not have the conference report signed.

The second is the Haiti Refugee Assistance Act. Now, this is also very controversial. There is bipartisan support for this from Republicans and Democrats in Florida and opposition to it from people on both sides of the aisle. It is a provision which clearly does not belong on this bill. It is not even vaguely related to the Treasury-Postal bill. If this is very important, it is an issue which can be addressed again in the ongoing discussions about the omnibus spending bill which will cover those bills that we cannot get passed on the floor, those conference reports that we cannot get adopted. This provision can be addressed in that bill.

The third thing is the day care provision, a whole title that was added by the Senate. Some people are very strongly supportive on this side of the aisle, but there are some jurisdictional problems about this provision. There are issues about day care that those chairmen of those subcommittees of jurisdiction had real questions about, and it was controversial.

And finally there was the FEC provision, the appointment authority for the General Counsel of the FEC, a highly controversial provision that had been added because some people on this side of the aisle believed that the general counsel of the FEC has been patently unfair in the kinds of rulings that he has given, and because there is no provision right now for getting rid of that individual. He is there literally until retirement because they cannot get votes to get rid of this person. So there was a provision to provide for an appointment authority for the general counsel.

Now those four provisions, Mr. Speaker, are the provisions that are being dropped out of this bill. We could not get this bill to the floor without taking those out.

Now I begged, I pleaded, with my colleagues on the other side of the aisle the other night to support that rule. Three of those provisions: those dealing with day care, with the Haiti refugee assistance and with the contraceptive coverage, were strongly supported by most or many and most of the Members on the other side of the aisle. The other issue, on dealing with the FEC, was not, but they made it clear that three out of four was not good enough. It had to be four out of four.

Mr. Speaker, I cannot get the bill to the floor, and we cannot pass this bill with that. As my colleague, my ranking member from the other side, has said time and again, this is a good bill. It provides for good money for law enforcement, to increase the amount of money we have for drug interdiction for our Customs agents, it increases the flying hours for the black hawks. This is good law enforcement provisions in this bill. This is a good bill that covers the IRS reforms that we passed by wide margins in this Congress just a few months ago, to implement those reforms and get us moving forward with an IRS that is more user friendly.

This is legislation that we need, and, Mr. Speaker, we need to pass this bill tonight. So we have dealt with this in a fair way. We have said we will take out all of the provisions that are controversial, and all four of the provisions that are in this bill that were controversial have been taken out.

So what we have now is a bill that does, as it should do, an appropriation bill that deals with appropriations, that funds the agencies it says it is going to fund, that funds the agencies it should fund. And that is what this bill does, and it deserves the strong support, this rule deserves the support of this body, this conference report deserves the support, and I urge my colleagues to vote for it.

Mr. MOAKLEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. OBEY) the ranking minority member on the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I hope that we are not about to spend another couple of fruitless hours. Excuse me, but I have laryngitis, so probably everybody will be happy about that. But the gentleman from Colorado (Mr. MCINNIS) is nodding yes.

Mr. Speaker, I want to put this bill in the context of what is happening to the budget in this end-of-the-session snarl that we always appear to get in.

Last Friday Senator BYRD was told by Senator STEVENS that the process which the majority party would like to follow is as follows: He was told that by Friday the Republican majority would have laid out for all of the bills that were still unsigned, they would lay out what the approximate wishes of the majority party would be on those bills, what the bills would look like if the majority party could write them. They then wanted us to take that paper and come back to them with our honest response about what our differences were that would have to be resolved in order for us to get signed bills, and they were hoping that we would have no more than 10 objections to each bill. We have gotten some information since that time, but we still frankly feel that the basic Johnnie Higgins work has not been done, the basic nitty-gritty work has not been done, in a number of these bills so that we know exactly what it is the majority wants to do. And I think one of the reasons for that is because there is a huge chasm between what the majority wants to do in the Senate and what the majority wants to do in the House. And so we still, even at the staff level, do not have a complete understanding of what it is that the Republican party would like to see on each of the bills in dispute.

What we desperately need, if we are going to finish our work, is a complete understanding of where the majority party wants to go on these bills so that we can then sit down, have a clear understanding of what the differences are and work our way towards resolution of those differences.

So it has been a very frustrating 2 days.

In the midst of that this bill which fell in a heap a week ago because of unilateral judgments on the part of the majority, this bill is now back once again being brought here by unilateral judgments on the part of the majority, and what they have essentially done is to get rid of a number of provisions which had bipartisan support in the House, and now they are going to try to pass the bill with only Republican votes. Well, they can do that if they want, and they may even be able to pass it with only Republican votes, but the fact is that the other remaining issues still remain and this bill will not be finally disposed of until those issues are addressed. The gentleman from Maryland (Mr. HOYER) will in more detail get into the matter of what these amendments are.

But it simply seems to me that yesterday we offered the majority this proposition. We said, ''If you drop one of the items that is causing so much controversy and has no bipartisan support, if you drop the item that we feel would gag the ability of the FEC to enforce the law on elections, we would provide the lion's share of our votes in the caucus, and we could easily pass the bill.'' Instead of continuing to pursue a bipartisan approach, the majority party has decided that they are going to take unilateral action to once again try to ram this bill through.

All this action does is further delay our ability to resolve the differences between us. It is not the kind of negotiating posture that I would expect from a majority party that tells the press every hour on the hour that they want to get out of here by Saturday. If you want to get out of here by Saturday, they ought to start negotiating like they want to get out of here by Saturday rather than negotiating like they think they have got the next 2 or 3 months to be around here, or we will be around here for the next 2 or 3 months.

Mr. MCINNIS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Obviously I take issue with some of the comments made by the previous speaker about the majority going out there and speaking to the press. Frankly, we have not had much time to speak to the media. We have been up there in the conference room trying to work out a compromise.

Now last week that very gentleman stood up here and talked about a provision that was offensive to some Democrats over there. They could deliver those votes if that offensive, as they put it, provision was dropped, and it was. Now today it is a different trail, it is a different direction, it is a different path. As my colleagues know, I do not know which way they are going to travel.

And the comments at the end just are taking a cheap shot at the Republicans. As my colleagues know, it is time to put that partisan stuff aside. We are in the final days, and the only way we are going to resolve this is to quit playing that partisan stuff and come together in a compromise.

In addition to my comments, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. KOLBE) because I would like him to address these comments that are totally out of line in my opinion.

Mr. KOLBE. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the gentleman yielding this time to me, and it will not take me more than 1 minute.

As I listened to the gentleman from Wisconsin and his comments, it is correct that yesterday there was a suggestion of an offer of a deal that might be made, and it was to drop out the one provision that we do not like in there, and keep the other three that we do like.

So, Mr. Speaker, the offer was:

What's mine is mine, what's is yours is also mine.

That is basically it. It is four out of four. We have got four provisions in there, three we really like, one we do not like. We have to be given the fourth one. That is their idea of a compromise. It is like moving the goalposts all the time.

Now we have got a provision here, a bill on the floor, where we have dropped out that one that was so controversial last week and that caused most of the Democrats to vote against it. But that is not enough, there has to be something else. So they always keep moving the markers, and we have to pass a bill, we do have to get out here, and we have to get our job done, and we are going to pass this bill.

Mr. Speaker, it is a good bill. As my colleague from Maryland has said, it is a good bill which provides for good money for law enforcement, and we should pass this bill.

Mr. MOAKLEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentlewoman from Florida (Mrs. MEEK), my dear friend.

Mrs. MEEK of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Massachusetts for yielding this time to me, and I rise today in strong opposition to the rule, and it is a very strong and hurtful opposition to the rule because I am a member of the Subcommittee on Treasury, Postal Service, and General Government, and under the leadership of our chairman we had a very good year. We worked very hard together, and also the Chairman and the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. HOYER) worked very well together. But at the very end it appears that things have come up that caused this bill to be objectionable to me.

The revised conference report shows that once again the House leadership is abandoning the Haitians. The revised conference report continues a policy of discriminating against Haitians. Many of my constituents are worried about the treatment that the Haitians have gotten. It has been unfair, it has shown that some Central Americans and some others like the Nicaraguans have been given one treatment and the Haitians the other. It is not a fair yardstick.

Do we want to deport 40,000 Haitians back to Haiti after this country has allowed them to come in and to have a chance to get green cards and work in this country? In my district Haitians live in the same neighborhood as the Cubans and the Nicaraguans, which this Congress saw fit to give them a chance to get their green cards. Can my colleagues imagine that neighbors living next door to each other, one can receive a green card and another one cannot? We should not have abandoned that in this rule.

Let me give my colleagues just a short bit of history on this matter:

Last fall the Senate added to the Fiscal Year 1998 District of Columbia appropriations a bill giving permanent green cards to all Nicaraguans and Cuban immigrants who were in this country at the end of 1995. This provision helped more than 150,000 people. That provision was added on the Senate floor without any Senate hearings. The House accepted the Senate provision on Cubans and Nicaraguans, but they would not accept any provision on the Haitians. The Senate then realized it had failed to help Haitian immigrants who had fled a terror similar to the terror of the Civil War in Nicaragua, so last November Senator GRAMM and Senator MACK introduced a bill to correct this unintentional omission. This bill moved quickly through the Senate. It is only the House where there seems to be some real strong reason why there has to be this unfairness to Haitians. The Senate Judiciary Committee held a hearing, and then they approved the bill with minor changes. Then it came back to the House, and again the House stood in the schoolhouse door, as George Wallace used to do years ago, and now we need to show in terms of this conference report Haitian children are being devastated by this, they are here in this country.

And I want to say, Mr. Speaker, this rule should go down. There are many other elements, but the Haitian issue is one that I ask my colleagues' consideration to kill this.

Mr. MCINNIS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I might consume.

I listened to the gentlewoman from Florida and tell my colleagues that our colleague, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. DIAZ-BALART), is extremely disappointed as well on the Haitian issue, and that is understandable. But we cannot get the votes in here and give everybody what they want. I mean when we give one group what they want, then another group is mad. We are trying to come up with a compromise so that we can get on with the Nation's business.

□ 1715

The compromise will satisfy the most pressing needs which this bill does. The compromise will satisfy enough votes to secure the votes necessary to pass this bill, which this bill does, and so all of us are going to have to come to the table.

So I appreciate the comments, and I appreciate the comments of my colleague, the gentleman from Florida, (Mr. DIAZ-BALART), who stood up relentlessly for the Haitian issue. But the fact is we have to come to a compromise.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. MOAKLEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to the gentlewoman from New York (Mrs. LOWEY).

Mrs. LOWEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong opposition to this undemocratic rule and this conference report. I appreciate the openness and honesty of the gentleman from Arizona (Chairman KOLBE), and I appreciate the work that the gentleman from Arizona (Chairman KOLBE) and my colleague the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. HOYER) has put into this bill.

It is really a shame that this bill, which in many ways is a good bill, had to end in this way. Frankly, to me, it is amazing, and I hope the American people are watching this, contraceptives may be controversial in this body in the Republican Congress, but not for the majority of women in this country who want to end and prevent unintended pregnancies, who want to reduce abortions in this country. Contraceptives is not controversial for the majority of American women.

I truly am outraged, my colleagues, at the Republican conference for stripping from this conference report my amendment to provide contraceptive coverage to Federal employees. A majority of this House supported this provision twice, not once, but twice. It passed unanimously in the Senate by voice vote. But at every turn, the House leadership has tried it kill it.

If we pass this conference report, the leadership of this Congress is telling American women once again that their basic health care does not matter to this Congress, that it does not matter to the Republican leadership. Killing this basic women's health provision was a back-door way to overturn the will of the majority in Congress.

This truly is an insult to all 224 Members of the House Republicans and Democrats, pro-choice, pro-life who voted for my amendment. It is an insult to every Senator.

The Republican leadership truly should be ashamed of themselves. They have stomped all over democracy today. The women of America, my colleagues, are going to see right through this sham, and those responsible for stripping through this provision I think will regret it.

I only hope that the Members of the Republican conference who are such champions of this issue when it passed the House in July will see through the political games of the leadership and vote with us to bring down this rule and bring down this bill.

I cannot stress enough, my colleagues, how critical this basic women's health provision is to the women of America. It will take us a huge step forward in our efforts to improve women's health, prevent unintended pregnancies, and reduce the number of abortions.

With more than 2 million employees, the Federal Government is the Nation's largest employer. Approximately 1.2 million women of child-bearing age are beneficiaries in the Federal Employees Health Benefits program. Currently over 80 percent of Federal health plans do not cover the full range of FDA approved contraceptives used by women, and 10 percent of FEHB plans offer no coverage of contraceptives at all.

Women pay 68 percent more in out-of-pocket health care costs than men. This provision will have reduced that gender gap in insurance coverage. With this vote, my colleagues, we will see who in this House will stand up with the women of America, who will stand up with right wing extremists that want to regulate every aspect of women's health, and we will see who in this House has respect for the democratic process and the will of the majority.

I urge my colleagues to vote against this rule, vote against this bill, and vote for basic women's health care that was supported by the majority of this House. That is the democratic way, small ''d.''

Mr. MCINNIS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I am a little surprised by the previous comments. Obviously I guess the definition of a border is a line drawn in the sand to see how close you can get to it without going to the other side.

I think that civility, when you talk about the leadership should be ashamed of themselves, that is not necessary. The leadership here on both sides of the aisle have been working very hard, and they are going to have some pretty intense hours here in the next few days to come to some kind of compromise. I do not think we ought to take cheap shots about saying leadership should be ashamed with themselves.

Furthermore, I have been involved in working in the Committee on Rules and so on, and I have not seen any so-called right wing extremists, which again questions on civility, jumping out and making demands.

The fact is, to my colleague, she did not deliver the votes. She voted yes the other day on the rule. I carried the rule. We lost that rule by a majority.

The issue here is not whether there are right wing extremists. I have not discovered them in this body. The issue is not whether or not the leadership ought to be ashamed of themselves.

The fact is, for the majority of this bill, can we satisfy most concerns on the floor? The answer is yes. We cannot satisfy the gentlewoman's. The gentleman from Florida (Mr. DIAZ-BALART) has got a problem for the Haitians. But can we deliver the votes on the compromise on a bill that is mostly good? The answer is yes.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. LOWEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MCINNIS. Mr. Speaker, the gentlewoman has more time on her side than I do on mine. I think the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. MOAKLEY) will yield to her. If not, I would be happy at some point towards the end to yield to the gentlewoman when I know I have time.

Mr. MOAKLEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from the District of Columbia (Ms. NORTON).

Ms. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding to me.

Mr. Speaker, I feel like asking this body to wake me up when this is all over. Wake me up when you finish choosing what kind of contraception female Federal employees ought to use. The good faith of this body, indeed the sacred vote of this body and of the Senate is at stake.

I have just come to the floor to say women are not going to take tampering with their contraceptive health. Look, we agree choice is controversial in this body. But I can tell my colleagues what is not controversial in this body or among the American people, and that is choice of contraceptives.

There is a reason; that is because we have got to have a choice of contraception because some of that does not work on some of us. Some of it will make us sick. Some has long-term effects. Some has short term effects.

So when Members of this body go into conference and try to make the diaphragm the only contraception that is available to women, they are insulting the women, not only of the Federal Government, but of the United states of America at their core.

We are fooling around with women's health when we decide as a body to choose or to limit their choice of contraception. One does not have to be a women to know that one size does not fit all when it comes to contraception.

If we want to preserve women's health, if we want to stop abortion, then the one issue that ought to unite us, pro-life and pro-choice, together is contraception.

I ask this body not to let history record that we decided in this year to instruct women on what contraception they ought to use.

Mr. MCINNIS. Mr. Speaker, may I get a time check?

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SHIMKUS). The gentleman from Colorado (Mr. MCINNIS) has 16½ minutes remaining. The gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. MOAKLEY) has 13½ minutes remaining.

Mr. MCINNIS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself as much as time I might consume.

Mr. Speaker, I understand the previous gentlewoman's comments, but I think the issue here is not at all about women's health. Obviously people on both sides of the aisle in this fine institution care about women's health. There are women on both sides of the aisle. There are men on both sides of the aisle that care.

This is a very important issue. It is a critical issue in any home in this country. So to suggest that perhaps some people do not care about the women's health I think is a little off base. I am trying to focus and bring us back to the direction that we are going.

First of all, we have got a fair rule. Second of all, this rule follows the same structure as other conference committee reports. Third of all, let me talk about compromise.

I spent this afternoon, I visited with my colleague, the gentlewoman from Florida (Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN), and she was adamant, she was adamant about this Haitian issue. But as I said to her and I say to my colleagues, look, we are trying to put together a good bill. We cannot make everybody happy. That is the struggle we are facing.

My colleague over there, the gentleman from Maryland, said we had a good bill, but there were areas he had difficulty with. That was understandable. That was why it did not pass. It was a message to us. We have got to restructure it. We have got to rebuild this car.

This car is not going to sell. Now we have got a car that can. And for people who want to put a modification on the car, they want to add a stereo or they want to put something else on it, that is fine if you can deliver the purchase price for it.

That is our difficulty here. We are not attacking or assailing these issues. We are just saying we are trying to round up the votes.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. MOAKLEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. JACKSON-LEE).

(Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Speaker, we all come to this House with the good intentions of our conscience and what is right for the Nation. I wish I could be convinced by my Republican friends on the other side of the aisle, the gentleman from Colorado and the gentleman from Arizona that seem to be arguing reason and goodwill, and we attempted to do all that we could.

But why do I not share the real facts. This rule now is a punitive rule. This is a ''gotcha'' rule. They fully well know that the reason that there were many of us who voted against this legislation, this rule early on, was the punitive poignant attack on the FEC, general counsel, and others not allowing them to do their jobs.

So what do they do? Yes, they do come back now and remove that provision. But the hard work of the gentlewoman from Florida (Mrs. MEEK), the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. Conyers), and others, impacting 40,000 Haitian refugees who simply want a green card after being here, equalizing their position in this Nation with many other Central Americans, they knew there was a contingent of people who worked and bled to get this done; they took it out.

Then the gentlewoman from New York (Mrs. LOWEY), who worked so very hard in a real compromise to provide contraceptive prescriptive drugs for those individuals in the Federal Government, they took it out.

Then my good colleague, the gentlewoman from New York (Mrs. MALONEY), who said working Federal employees and others need day care, and we can provide it in a fair budgetwise manner, they took it out because they wanted to get in our eye. This is not a compromise. This is a ''gotcha'' legislation or rule.

This is to say we do not care that this rule goes forward. We are going to satisfy those on that side of the aisle. We are not going to be responsive to people who have toiled in this land, 40,000 Haitian refugees are made a pawn. Children who need child care made a pawn, women who need prescriptive drugs are made a pawn. Do not fool me with this calm talk about we tried to compromise. This is a ''gotcha'' game of politics. I will not tolerate it. The American people will not tolerate it either.

Mr. MCINNIS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, some excitement here. If I just heard the words do not fool with this hobnob, or I am not exactly sure of the quote, but that is pretty close to what the gentlewoman from Texas just said.

But the gentlewoman, when she had the Haitian provision in the last rule voted ''no'' on that. She voted ''no'' on that. Now she is saying vote no again. In other words, give me this way, give them this way.

She has got to make some choices. She needs to be consistent in her voting record if she is going to get up and say hobnobbing fools. That is not what is happening here. What is happening here is the Congress is doing the business of the people. This Congress has to wrap this up in the next few days. The way to do it is we get the more level heads here on both sides of the aisle, as it should be, to come up with a compromise.

☐ 1730

That is exactly what has occurred here.

Mr. Speaker, as I said, my colleagues, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. DIAZ-BALART) and the gentlewoman from Florida (Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN), brought up this issue, but their record is consistent. And I listened to the gentlewoman from New York (Mrs. LOWEY), and she as well is consistent in her statements. And I think that is important. We have the consistency here, and we have some level heads that are trying to come up with a compromise. We do not have the perfect bill.

If somebody over there who is objecting to this rule can come up with a perfect bill and deliver the 218 votes and the votes in the Senate and the President's signature, come up with it. So far, we have not discovered it. We would like to do it.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. MOAKLEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2½ minutes to the gentleman from New York (Mr. NADLER).

(Mr. NADLER asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. NADLER. Mr. Speaker, this is a blatantly unfair rule. It is not a compromise, it is not inadequate. It is obnoxious.

We had a debate on this floor, and the House voted that Federal employees covered by this bill should have available to them contraceptive services for birth control. The Senate voted to make available contraceptive services for birth control to female Federal employees. An attempt was made on this floor to say that some forms of birth control are really abortions; that the pill should be outlawed because it is an abortifacient; that the IUD is not good, that is an abortifacient. This House intelligently voted that down by 2-to-1.

The conference report, the conference committee, faced with a House vote that said, we want contraceptive services covered, faced with a Senate bill that said, we want contraceptive services covered, put contraceptive services in the conference report. Then the Committee on Rules saw it and they said, oh, no, we do not care what the House said, we do not care what the Senate said, go back and rewrite the conference report, and they did. And since they could not pick and choose among the contraceptive services because they did not have the votes in the House, people laughed at it.

This conference report before us today says, American women who work for the Federal Government shall not have available to them any contraceptive services paid for by their health plans.

Mr. Speaker, that is obnoxious. It is not a compromise, it is obnoxious.

The antichoice extremist agenda is very clear. Not only do they want to ban abortions by any means necessary, the Supreme Court decision to the country notwithstanding, they want to ban contraception as well. They are not content with denying reproductive health services for women in prison or Federal employees or women in the Armed Forces or women on public assistance. They will not stop there. They want to eliminate contraceptive services as well.

Although this debate is supposed to be about Federal health plans, we can all see the dangerous precedent they are attempting to set. They are actually calling every woman who takes a birth control pill an abortionist. This is absurd, it is offensive, it is obnoxious. We must restore sanity to this discussion of women's health, and we ought to be clear that the American people will not accept efforts to make contraception or, for that matter, abortion illegal.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to reject this rule, send it back to the drafters, reject the rule as we did the last one. Let them come back again and do the will of this House and the will of the American people, and not say to American women, you cannot have contraceptive services.

Mr. MCINNIS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I see that the gentleman is very aggressive in his comments. I would just remind the gentleman that he had that provision right in his lands last week, and he voted against it, so today all of a sudden he shows up, and all of a sudden we are going to get another ''no'' vote when the provision is gone. I mean, which way, which direction?

I think it is time we level this thing off, calm it down, and let us hear from the other side of the issue.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to the gentlewoman from Kentucky (Mrs. NORTHUP).

Mrs. NORTHUP. Mr. Speaker, I think it is important that we inject a little honesty into this conversation.

The fact is, 84 percent of all Federal employees' plans cover oral contraceptives, and nearly 40 percent cover all 5 forms of contraceptives.

But rather than just make that statement, I brought to the floor 50 copies and will provide as many more as needed of a list of all of the plans that serve Federal employees so that my colleagues can see the chart of just how many plans there are, about 600, and how many cover so many, an array, of different forms of contraceptives.

The fact is that Federal employees have the envy of what the whole private sector needs and wants in health insurance. Every single Federal employee has the ability to choose whatever policy they want.

What do we get? A booklet of policies. We get a booklet of high-cost HMOs, low-cost HMOs, fee-for-service, point of service. We have every option of every kind of health plan we want.

What we ought to do is work to give what we have to the private sector, because the truth is that we have many different choices, many different plans, and most of them, most of them provide an array of contraceptive services.

Mr. Speaker, what happens if we mandate that every plan cover every form of contraceptive? We take away the one choice that Federal employees have today that they will not have in the future, and that is affordable health insurance, because when one starts adding mandates, one starts doing what every State legislature has found for years, and that is, one starts adding to the cost of health insurance. And as it goes up, one starts on that slippery slope. Every woman who is 31 years old and is paying for every form of contraceptives for everybody in the workplace who cannot get pregnant says, why should I pay for their contraceptives and they not have to pay for my fertilization? And every 60-year-old woman says, why should I have to pay for all the young women's contraceptives and they not have to pay for my estrogen?

The fact is we can do what State legislators have done. We can add every mandate that everybody wants, every service, every provider, every need, and we will drive the cost of health insurance right through the ceiling.

What we need to do is make sure that every employee in Federal office keep what they have now, the choice of whatever services they believe are important to their health, and then we need to make sure that it is also affordable. That is the best choice and the best gift that Federal employees have. What we need to do is take what we have and not ruin it, but make sure that the private sector have it, too.

Mr. MCINNIS. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. MOAKLEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentlewoman from New York (Mrs. MALONEY).

Mrs. MALONEY of New York. Mr. Speaker, this week's issue of Time Magazine features what it calls a numbers column, and it quotes various expenditures and notable numbers like this one: Next year the Pentagon plans to spend $50 million for Viagra for troops and retirees.

I think it is important to note that we are apparently willing to spend money for the potency of our armed services, but not willing to help prevent unwanted pregnancies by providing the full range of contraceptive services.

But on the other hand, we were willing to help prevent unwanted pregnancies. This language already passed the House and the Senate. But there is a small minority on the conference committee that changed it.

I believe that this language discriminates against women. When we defeated the rule for this conference report last week, it was clear that it could easily pass if only the language on the FEC were removed.

Mr. Speaker, I am glad that we at least accomplished that, but I cannot support this bill, because it does not provide the full range of contraceptive services, thereby discriminating against women.

I urge a ''no'' vote on the rule.

Mr. MCINNIS. Mr. Speaker, could I inquire as to the time remaining?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Colorado (Mr. MCINNIS) has 10 minutes remaining; the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. MOAKLEY) has 8 minutes remaining.

Mr. MCINNIS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I have asked the gentlewoman to return because I think that the comments that she brought up are very pertinent to the subject, and since we seem to have gotten off the rule and onto the subject of contraception, I think we need to close this out, and then we can get back to the rule and the fairness of the rule. So I am asking that the gentlewoman from Kentucky come back.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentlewoman from Kentucky (Mrs. NORTHUP).

Mrs. NORTHUP. Mr. Speaker, I want to start with where this idea I believe originated. There are women today that are in the private work force. They have a choice of one policy. Their employer says, you can have this policy; you have to contribute the monthly payment towards it, and some of those policies, in fact, pay for prescriptions, but do not pay for oral contraceptives.

We need to address that issue. I hope that the gentlewoman from New York (Mrs. LOWEY) will bring it to us. I asked a long time ago why we did not ask for a GAO study that would study both the private and the public workplace to see what sorts of discriminations exist for women in terms of access to health insurance policies that give them what they need.

Before we start fumbling around with the best choice that exists in the United States of America, and that is for Federal employees, before we start driving the price up, what we ought to do is be deliberative and see, first of all, do we have a problem? Do we have a problem in the public workplace; do we have a problem in the private workplace?

But because this came so quick and unstudied, I did ask OMB a second question besides asking for a chart, and that was, is there any Federal employee anywhere in the United States that does not have access to policies that cover oral contraceptives; and the answer is, no, there is not one.

So I think that before we push the price up at a cost, by the way, to many of the employees, because right now, what they may have chosen is the only affordable plan or the most affordable plan that meets their needs. If this plan either decides to drop out of the Federal employees health insurance plan because it cannot tailor something just to our mandate, and then they have to go to a more expensive plan, or if they have to pay more for the plan they currently have, we ought to ask them if that is what they want.

I think the whole problem in health care is that somehow we in the Congress think that we can play God, that we can somehow hand out free health care. Nobody can hand out free health care. It feels good here, but somebody pays the bill. The taxpayers pay the bill, and the Federal employees who have to pay a higher copayment pay the bill.

Please, do for Federal employees what the entire work force is asking us for, affordable health insurance, and do not take away that right that they have today.

Mr. MCINNIS. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. MOAKLEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. DOGGETT).

Mr. DOGGETT. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, the wrong that is proposed here tonight has nothing to do with the price of care in an economic sense. It is not going to raise the cost of health care to anyone. In fact, the Republican Congressional Budget Office has already pointed out that any cost change is negligible. The price is not economics; it is the political price that the Republican conferees were unwilling to pay to say no to the extremists who demand interference in reproductive health care, and yes to this House and to the United States Senate which said, by an overwhelming majority, that it is wrong to discriminate against women across this country and say to them that they can get some prescriptions, but not others.

Mr. Speaker, 80 percent of the health plans available to Federal workers do not provide all forms of contraception, and some women are unable to use certain forms of contraception. While our women Members like the gentlewoman from New York (Mrs. LOWEY) have provided dynamic leadership on this issue, I am here to say that this is an important issue not just to women, but to men, to families all across this country; that the Federal Government ought to be a model employer, ought to set the example, and it ought not to be discriminating against women in saying they cannot get access to something that is so very important to their health care.

I would say that this very debate, the first night the gentlewoman from New York (Mrs. LOWEY) successfully put this amendment on to assure access to health care for women across this country was truly a defining moment.

When Republican men stood on this floor and began to interfere and say, well, an IUD, I think that is abortifacient, the pill, well, maybe it is, they did not seem to have confidence that women understood what they were doing with their own bodies when health care was involved. They needed some Congressman to come in and tell them what kinds of contraception were appropriate and what kinds were not.

□ 1745

This is a radical decision this conference committee has made. It is wrong. We need to reject it, and say that the women of America are intelligent enough to make their own decision on this matter, and do not need any Republican help from the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. NEWT GINGRICH) or anyone else.

Mr. MCINNIS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, obviously the gentleman from Texas paints as pretty a picture as he can get on it. He likes to put roses and flowers into it.

Let us talk about some economic reality here. First of all, I am astounded that in one-half of the gentleman's sentence he says there is no cost to the Federal Government, and in the next half of the sentence he says the cost is only negligible. That sounds like Democratic talk. That is what got us into a deficit: ''Well, it is just negligible, throw a few more bucks in.''

The second point is, remember, it is wrong for Members to stand up here and act like we can offer to the American people and the Federal employees of this government Mayo Clinic coverage. We cannot do it. If we want to do it, we can do like they did in Kentucky. They kept expanding and expanding what they ought to put in their medical plan and their choices.

If we want to talk about choice to the gentleman from Texas, their choices went from 47 plans to two plans. So what the gentleman is proposing up here is, let us go ahead and offer them the moon, which means that first of all and most importantly, most of these companies are not going to be competitive, which gives us the Kentucky example, 47 choices to two choices.

It is very important here that we understand that nothing is free. We do not get something for free. It just does not happen. Every time we give something to somebody free, we are taking it out of somebody else's pocket. It is debit-credit. It happens automatically.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. MOAKLEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. HOYER), the ranking member of the Subcommittee on Treasury, Postal Service, and General Government.

Mr. HOYER. I thank the distinguished gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. MOAKLEY), the ranking member of the Committee on Rules, for yielding time to me, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, I rise, unfortunately, in opposition to this rule. I have been quoted numerous times on this floor as saying that this is a good bill. Let me repeat that statement. This is a good bill.

Let me also repeat, for all my colleagues, that the gentleman from Arizona (Chairman KOLBE) has done a good job in shepherding this bill to this point. The gentleman from Arizona (Mr. KOLBE) in my opinion is one of the fairest, brightest, hardest-working Members of this House. He is a gentleman for whom I have unrestrained respect and affection and with whom I enjoy working.

It is unfortunate that a provision that he supports is dropped from his bill and is causing us so much consternation on this side. There is an irony, I suppose, in that, as well.

Let me now speak to where this bill is. I have said it is a good bill. The good news is, for America and for this House, that 99.999 percent of this bill is agreed upon. We have four provisions, just four, that ultimately the conference could not agree on or could not be agreed upon in this House, because obviously the provisions that were included in the bill that came to the conference committee were agreed upon.

There was one provision, as I pointed out in the last debate on the rule, that was unanimously opposed on our side of the aisle. We perceived it as a partisan issue. That is to say that it was not supported by Members of both parties. That was, of course, the provision that dealt with the FEC, which would have had the effect of immediately firing, as of January 1 or fairly immediately, January 1, 1999, the incumbent counsel. We perceived that to be a payback, an action which would have been taken for the purposes of disciplining somebody who took an adverse action against GOPAC and the Christian Coalition.

I know my colleagues on the other side of the aisle do not believe that was the motivation, and I accept their premise as being honest. But that was our perception of what that item was about, so it was very controversial. That item has now been dropped. We think that is appropriate.

This issue will be discussed. I think the chairman of our committee has a legitimate concern about bringing in new blood to oversee this agency. I will be glad to work with him and talk to him about those issues. The right thing was done with respect to the FEC. We went into conference again to discuss this.

I made it very clear to the gentleman from Arizona (Chairman KOLBE), on behalf of the Democratic side that if the FEC was dropped, I say to my friend, the gentleman from Colorado (Mr. MCINNIS), that at least 180 members of my side of the aisle would vote for the rule and this bill if the FEC were dropped. We could not pledge all 207 because there was some controversy on other substance, but I believe we could have gotten 180, which means that if the gentleman had 40 on his side or 100 or 140, this bill would have passed overwhelmingly.

Unfortunately, however, that was not to be. The chairman, as we left the conference, said the deal is off, we are not going to do a conference, we are going to put this in the omnibus bill. I have talked to the administration about that. I will tell my friends that the administration is going to be very, very hard and adamant on the inclusion of the contraceptive position of either this bill or the omnibus bill and the provision dealing with the Haitians.

The child care provision most of us I think are for on both sides of the aisle. We have a procedural problem that is causing a very substantial problem. I do not think the chairman is against it, and certainly I am for it. The gentleman from Virginia (Mr. WOLF) is for it, and other Members are for it.

With respect to the contraception, this, we believe, is the most egregious action that has been taken as this is reported back. First of all, let me tell my friend, the gentleman from Colorado, forget about what the Democrats say about cost. The Congressional Budget Office, I say to my friend, headed up by the selection of the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. KASICH) and Mr. DOMENICI, two Republicans who head the Committees on the Budget in the Senate and in the House, said that there is no cost; not Democrats, not the gentlewoman from New York (Mrs. LOWEY), but CBO says that, no cost. We were not scored for any cost whatsoever on this provision.

So that I think that is dispositive. CBO has talked to OPM, OPM says there is not going to be any cost, and CBO says there is to be no cost. So that was not the issue. In fact, it should not be the issue, this being a bipartisan-supported bill. In fact, 51 Republicans joined approximately 178 Democrats in voting to sustain this provision, 51 Republicans. What a significant number on the gentleman's side of the aisle, a very bipartisan support for this provision, which we perceive to be in the best interests of the health of America's women, in the best interests of the health of Federal employees, and in the best interests of pursuing a diminishing of abortions in this country. Will it be significant? We do not know. Will it affect that? We think it will.

We hope that Members vote against this rule so that we can go back to conference, as we did before, include back those provisions that we think have bipartisan support, pass this rule, and pass this very good bill that the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. KOLBE) has worked so hard on.

Mr. MCINNIS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I do want to make one point to the fine gentleman from the State of Maryland in regard to the CBO statement or the estimate that there is no cost.

First of all, my point to the gentleman from Texas was that in one statement he said there was no cost, and in the next statement he said it was negligible, so I am not sure what it is. Frankly, I think the gentleman probably observed it a little more closely. The point is, there is a shift in cost. While it is true that the government does not pick up additional costs, the individual will pick up additional costs. I think we just need to clarify that. What the gentleman has said is accurate, but to complete the picture, we need to show that the individual will pick up additional costs.

Mr. Speaker, I, of course, think it is important to get to this good bill. To get to this good bill we have to pass this rule.

Mr. Speaker, I yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. KOLBE).

Mr. MORAN of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KOLBE. I yield to the gentleman from Virginia.

(Mr. MORAN of Virginia asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. MORAN of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the rule.

Mr. Speaker, in the last four years I can't count the number of times I have been here on the House floor voting on bills, amendments, appropriations riders, and every possible vehicle for so-called anti-abortion legislation. The reality is, every member of Congress is anti-abortion. Every member of Congress wants to make abortion less necessary and eventually unnecessary. By improving access to affordable contraception, the Lowey amendment is an excellent way to achieve this goal.

As a founding co-chair of the Congressional Prevention Caucus, I am a strong proponent of using preventive methods to improve the length and quality of human life and also to reduce the skyrocketing costs of health care. On average, women spend 68% more on health care costs than men. Much of these additional costs can be attributed to reproductive health care costs. The use of contraception can help to reduce these costs for women by preventing unplanned pregnancy, an expensive and potentially life threatening condition.

Opponents of this amendment argue that 81% of FEHB plans already cover at least one form of contraception and that women federal employees already have a choice of plans. The one form is generally oral hormonal contraception known as ''the pill.'' Oral contraceptives are one of the five most common forms of contraceptive but it is not always recommended to some women who experience negative side effects or may be at higher risk of breast cancer or stroke. Alternatives should be accessible to women who decide in consultation with their doctor that it is a safer option. Ten percent of plans cover no forms of contraception at all.

Regardless of the percentage of plans that cover this option and don't cover that option, contraception should be considered basic health care for women of reproductive age. As employers, we have a responsibility to choose what kind of health care we want to provide for our employees. We should be providing this basic preventive care and not forcing our employees to choose a plan that may not be the best plan for them because none of the other plans provide contraceptive coverage.

Furthermore, if we are denying federal employees coverage of abortion services in their health plans, as we have since 1995, it would be hypocritical not to make methods to prevent the necessity of abortion as accessible as possible to federal employees. Contraception is a proven method in reducing the number of abortions. A recent study of the use of contraception in the former Soviet republics shows that preventing pregnancy with contraception reduces the number of abortions. In Kazakastan for example, abortion rates have fallen by more than 40% since the change in contraception policy by the government and widespread access to contraception was implemented.

As adversaries of the "abortion issue" continue to disagree over pro-choice, pro-life semantics, we should be working together on policies that we can agree reduce the necessity of abortion. I urge my colleagues to work together where we can on this terribly divisive issue by supporting the Lowey amendment to provide comprehensive contraceptive health care coverage for federal employees.

Mr. KOLBE. Mr. Speaker, I once again thank the gentleman from Colorado (Mr. MCINNIS) for his assistance here with the rule, and all of the members of the Committee on Rules. I want to thank the gentlewoman from New York (Mrs. LOWEY) for the very nice words she said, and the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. HOYER) for the nice words he said about the work that I have done, and the subcommittee Members and the staff.

I reciprocate completely the respect and the strong feelings that I have for both the gentlewoman from New York (Mrs. LOWEY) and the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. HOYER). I am very grateful for their assistance on this bill; assistance to a point, I guess, is where we are at. It does not extend all the way, as the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. HOYER) made clear the other night and again this afternoon.

The fact of the matter is, and let me just review again what we are talking about, the fact of the matter is, we have a conference report, yes. As everybody in this body knows, the process is you pass a bill, the Senate passes a bill, you have to go to conference, and you have a conference report. Each of those is a different bill. Each of those is different than the form it was in in the other body or the form it was when it first passed this House.

So the conference report has to be seen separately. It is not accurate to simply say that this was a controversy, this position was in or some form of it was in the House and some form was in the Senate bill, so therefore, ergo, it has to be included in this bill. That is not the case here.

Mr. Speaker, the fact of the matter is that the gentlewoman from New York (Mrs. LOWEY) well knows, and she spoke passionately, and I do agree with her position that we should extend contraceptive coverage to Federal employees beyond where it is today, but we are not, as some of the speakers talked about here this afternoon, not cutting off contraceptive coverage. We are not denying it.

As the gentlewoman from Kentucky (Mrs. NORTHUP) has pointed out, 84 percent of the plans provide it in some form or another, and 40 percent provide all the forms of contraceptive coverage. We are keeping the current law where it is today. There is no change in the current law, so we are neither expanding it nor moving backwards, we are keeping the law where it is today.

If this was so important, if this provision was so important, is so important to those who have spoken so passionately about it here this afternoon, where were they last Thursday night?

Yes, the gentlewoman from New York (Mrs. LOWEY) was there and she spoke to it, and the gentlewoman from Florida (Mrs. MEEK), because of the Haiti position, and voted for the rule. But where were all these other people that this afternoon have said this is such an important provision? Why were they not there, speaking for the rule at that time?

In fact, one of the people, the gentlewoman from New York (Mrs. MALONEY) who was up here earlier, spoke against the rule last Thursday night. She said we should defeat it. Today she says it is very important to have that contraceptive coverage in there, that expansion of contraceptive coverage. It is important today, but it was not important last Thursday, or it was not as important. It is a moving marker. The field keeps moving. It is whatever there is today that we do not like in here is why we are going to be against this.

I understand that the National Abortion Rights Action League has decided they will score this vote, but last Thursday night, when we had an opportunity to get to the floor with that in it and with the Haiti assistance, they did not score it. They did not think it was that important last Thursday night.

I want to just say, in conclusion, that the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. HOYER) was correct in the way he described the sequence of events that occurred on this bill. When we finished the conference meeting yesterday morning, I did say that it looks to me as though we do not have any deal. I cannot see any way out of this.

Yet today, the dynamics of this conference report have changed. There is now a way to get this through the Senate and the House that I believe is possible, and this is the only way. I know the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. HOYER) believes very strongly that we should not have a government shutdown, that these 163,000 Federal employees that are supported by this bill should go on collecting IRS taxes, should go along with drug enforcement.

☐ 1800

Mr. Speaker, this conference report is important. I urge my colleagues to support the rule and to support the conference.

Mr. MCINNIS. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the resolution.

The previous resolution was ordered.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. MOAKLEY. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Evidently a quorum is not present.

The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 231, nays 194, not voting 9, as follows:

Mrs. CHENOWETH and Mr. RAHALL changed their vote from ''nay'' to ''yea.''

So the resolution was agreed to.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

Mr. KOLBE. Mr. Speaker, pursuant to House Resolution 579, I call up the conference report on the bill (H.R. 4104) making appropriations for the Treasury Department, the United States Postal Service, the Executive Office of the President, and certain independent agencies, for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1999, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SHIMKUS). Pursuant to House Resolution 579, the conference report is considered as having been read.

(For conference report and statement, see prior proceedings of the House of today.)

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Arizona (Mr. KOLBE) and the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. HOYER) each will control 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. KOLBE).

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. KOLBE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks on the bill (H.R. 4104) making appropriations for the Treasury Department, the United States Postal Service, the Executive Office of the President, and certain independent agencies, for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1999, and for other purposes, and that I may include tabular and extraneous material.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Arizona?

There was no objection.

Mr. KOLBE. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, at the outset, let me begin by saying that we have had an extraordinary ordeal to get to where we are today, but as any Member that has ever worked on an appropriations bill, or any bill for that matter, knows, it requires the work of a lot of very good staff people to get us here.

When we considered the bill on the floor, I paid tribute to all the staff on both the majority and the minority side, but this evening, Mr. Speaker, I want to just pay special tribute to two individuals who are going to be leaving the staff of this House of Representatives.

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KOLBE. I yield to the gentleman from Maryland.

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Speaker, I know the gentleman and I have had the discussion, but it is my understanding, and I do not know whether anybody has announced it, that we intend to roll votes until 8 o'clock. Perhaps we should tell Members, if that is the case.

Mr. KOLBE. Reclaiming my time, Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for his point, and I would like to advise all those on the floor and otherwise in our hearing range that the intention and the understanding of both the majority and the minority side is that when we complete the debate on this conference report there will likely be a motion to recommit. But the vote on both the motion to recommit and on final passage of the conference report will not occur until at least 8 o'clock this evening. So there will be approximately an hour and a half before we have any votes.

Now, Mr. Speaker, if I might proceed. As I said, staff is obviously essential to getting any piece of legislation passed, but I want to pay special tribute to two staff people who will be leaving this body after having given it exceptional service.

One is our congressional fellow, Francis Larken, who has worked for the subcommittee for the past year. He will be beginning his job as Assistant to the Special Agent in Charge for the U.S. Secret Service in New York.

Frank has been a tremendous asset to this subcommittee, bringing not only the experience and knowledge that he has coming from the Secret Service and from Treasury law enforcement, but also from local law enforcement. He has been an absolutely essential part of our subcommittee staff, and I am very grateful for the work that he has done.

Mr. Speaker, the other one I want to pay tribute to is an individual who has worked for me now for nearly 8 years on my personal staff, but for the last 2 years has absolutely been essential to this legislation, and that is my good friend and staff person Jason Isaak.

Jason has been with us since he came directly out of college at Baylor University. He began as an intern and has progressively worked up through the office to a legislative assistant, legislative director; He has directed many important pieces of legislation, but none so ably as the work that I have had to do from my office on this subcommittee. He will be leaving this month in order to take a position in Phoenix, Arizona, returns to the State from where he came, and he will be marrying Miss Beth Barr, a former Olympic medalist in swimming.

Mr. Speaker, I have a statement I will put in the RECORD at this point regarding both of these individuals and the exemplary service they have given this Congress and our country.

Mr. Speaker, this week the Treasury Appropriations Subcommittee bids farewell to our Congressional Fellow, Francis J. Larkin, as he begins his assignment as Assistant to the Special Agent in Charge for the U.S. Secret Service in New York. Frank has proven himself to be tremendous asset to the work of this Subcommittee, bringing with him the experience he has gained with the Secret Service, from local law enforcement, as an emergency medical technician, and as a U.S. Navy SEAL. Frank began his fellowship in 1997 with the Senate counterpart of this Subcommittee, and so came to us with a strong background in the technical issues and folkways of the appropriations process.

Working as a member of my subcommittee staff, Frank has brought a unique perspective to bear on many of the turbulent and sometimes arcane issues that we confront in the course of crafting appropriations bills, and in overseeing the agencies and programs in our jurisdiction. In particular, Frank's advice and contribution has been invaluable on matters affecting law enforcement, national security, and the Year 2000 computer issue. Throughout his service here, Franks's consummate professionalism, good nature and level head have helped this Subcommittee and the Congress achieve progress on both short- and long-term policy and budgetary issues.

Specal Agent Larkin has served me, this subcommittee, and the House well: we will miss him as a colleague and as a friend. All of us on the Treasury Appropriations Subcommittee wish Frank and his family all the best as they begin their new lives in the New jersey/New York area.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to take a few moments to recognize someone very special to me who soon will be leaving Capitol Hill to pursue new personal challenges.

Jason Isaak, my legislative director, has been with me for the past seven years. Upon graduating from Baylor University, Jason started as an intern in my office and has progressively worked his way up the ranks to his current position. He has managed many important issues for my office and has been my point person for Defense, Commerce, Justice, State and the Treasury Postal Service and General Government Appropriations.

Jason is leaving Washington to take a position with a consulting firm in Phoenix and on October 24, 1998, will marry Miss Beth Barr, a former Olympic medalist in swimming.

Mr. Speaker, Jason Isaak has made enormous contributions to our legislative process and will be truly missed for his professionalism, insight, and tireless dedication. As I mentioned, for seven years, he has been one of my key lieutenants, and I personally will feel a great loss when he leaves. Jason Isaak is truly a model for those who seek to constructively offer their intellectual skills and motivation to better this governmental process, and to do so with unflagging grace and good humor.

Mr. Speaker, I ask you to join me in wishing Jason Isaak the very best for a brilliant career, one in which I foresee him potentially returning to Congress as a member of this great body.

Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to rise today to talk about the conference report on H.R. 4104. This is a bill and a conference that has had more lives than a cat. It has had the perils of Pauline. It has had every other travail along the way, but here we are and I hope that, finally, tonight we are going to be able to pass this legislation. I want to thank all the members of the subcommittee, those on both sides of the aisle, those who have supported us in various provisions. I know that at times when we get to this legislation, there are times when they cannot be with us on the vote that we need them on final passage. But we would not be here this evening if it were not for the work of the distinguished gentleman from Maryland (Mr. HOYER) and the other members of the minority side and all the members of this side of the aisle as well, I might say, who have helped us get to where we are tonight. The work has paid off. The conference report that is before us I believe is one that can make us all very proud because it is about law enforcement, it is about the operations of the Federal Government, it is about what this appropriations bill should be about.

Six days ago when we brought this rule for this conference report, it failed, because it was saddled with four controversial legislative riders. Well, this evening we bring this back with all four of those provisions stripped. Gone is the provision so vehemently objected to by the minority regarding the appointment of the Federal Election Commission's General Counsel. Gone is the provision expanding contraceptive coverage for Federal employees. Gone is the provision providing for assistance and easier admission for Haitian refugees to the United States. Gone is the provision in the bill dealing with child care in the Federal Government. Everyone with an interest in these provisions is treated the same. In that sense, I believe it is a fair compromise. These provisions are stripped. They are stripped because we simply could not get a conference report to the floor and we could not get it passed if we had these provisions there.

I for one believe that some of these provisions have real merit. Particularly I have been a strong supporter of the gentlewoman from New York (Mrs. LOWEY) and the provisions that she had dealing with contraceptive coverage in the FEHBP. I also happen to believe that the time has come for us to change the way the General Counsel of the Federal Election Commission is appointed and that we should require a term for that person and we should require an affirmative majority vote for that person to be appointed or reappointed. But because politics has taken priority over the practical demands of governing, these items are not going to see the light of day—at least not in this appropriations measure. Quite honestly, it is not just that I am disappointed in this outcome. More than anything, I am fed up frankly with trying to negotiate these controversial legislative riders in an appropriations bill. As we have learned from this last week or from the last month, it is a no-win situation. This bill, which ought to be a relatively easy bill, has been through the wringer. I do not think there is any bill that has been brought to the floor this year that has been a more difficult bill to get to the floor and get passed.

In case my colleagues have forgotten, let me replay a year in the life of the Treasury-Postal subcommittee. Our first rule providing for the consideration of the bill as reported went down in flames on June 24 of this year on a vote of 125–291. The second rule squeaked by, by a vote of 218–201. During House debate on July 16, we had 48 points of order raised against legislative provisions in the bill. Final passage of the bill barely eked out with a vote of 218–203. Believe me, you could actually hear bones practically breaking in this Chamber to get to 218 votes. Last week the rule, the first time we considered the rule for considering the conference report, bombed on a vote of 106–294. Those votes were not because we failed to do our jobs as appropriators, and I say that of every member of this subcommittee, both on the minority and majority side. Far from it. Let me be clear about this. The Department of Treasury likes this bill very, very much and they are anxious to have it signed into law. It is the best bill they have seen in years. The debate on this bill is never about money. It is about legislative riders and only about legislative riders. This bill and the conference report deserves better treatment than to be battered about over legislative matters. It is an outstanding appropriations measure.

I know all the Members are familiar with the legislative riders that have been causing us so much trouble, but let me just tell you about a few other items, items that these Members have been voting against each time they voted against the rule or each time they voted against this bill or the conference report:

We provide $1.95 billion for drug-related activities, including $185 million for the second year of the national media campaign. $20 million for the Drug Free Communities Act, so strongly supported by so many people on both sides of this aisle. $1.8 billion for the Customs Service, including $54 million for new narcotics detections technologies for both sea and land ports of entry. $15.2 million to address the badly needed maintenance needs of the air and marine interdiction programs. I am pleased to say that these funds will be reused to return three Black Hawk helicopters to operational status and to increase the flight hours for the entire Customs Black Hawk fleet from 18 hours per month to 30 hours per month. We have $3.2 million to fight crimes against children through the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children. We have $3.4 million to further combat child pornography and related Internet cyber smuggling. We have $7.9 billion for the Internal Revenue Service, including $211 million for ongoing efforts to revamp the IRS computer systems, $25 million for restructuring the way the IRS does business, $103 million for improved customer relations. And then there is $462 million for 14 new courthouse construction projects in order to accommodate the increasing demands we are placing on our judicial system.

I can count on one hand the number of times that Members have offered appropriations-related amendments to this bill. Of the 14 amendments that were offered to this bill during House consideration, only three of them had anything to do with an appropriations matter. All the rest involved controversial legislative riders that have little or nothing to do with the work of this committee or this subcommittee.

Well, I have an announcement. Not that it should come as any great surprise, but guess what? We are not going to be able to effectively govern if we continue to blur the lines between appropriations and authorization. We cannot run the Customs Service, the IRS, the Secret Service, the Office of National Drug Policy if we continue to hold this bill hostage to extraneous legislative matters.

The conference report before us right now is one of which I am very proud and I believe every Member on both sides of the aisle can be very proud. It is not about controversial legislative riders. It is now about appropriations. It is now about funding these Federal agencies. It is about fiscal responsibility with respect to how we fund the agencies that come under the jurisdiction of this bill. It is about accountability to Congress and to the American people.

Mr. Speaker, it is time for Members to set aside their disagreement over specific legislative matters that deserve more deliberate review and action than being stuck into this appropriations bill. It is time to put aside the politics and do the right thing. Vote for an appropriations bill that is free of these controversial riders and deals with appropriations matters as it should deal. Mr. Speaker, I encourage all of my colleagues to support this conference report.

Mr. Speaker, I include the following extraneous matter for the RECORD:

Mr. KOLBE. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 6 minutes.

(Mr. HOYER asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Speaker, I want to rise and speak on behalf of this bill and say that I am probably going to vote to recommit it. But I will reiterate one more time, this bill is 99.9 percent pure and good. The gentleman from Arizona (Mr. KOLBE) has done an outstanding job. This bill does in fact provide for the needs of the agencies that are within it, it provides funds sufficient for them to carry out their duties in an appropriate way, and it has not included provisions which would undermine their effectiveness. For that I think we owe the chairman of this committee a great deal of thanks because of his conscientious handling of this bill.

Unfortunately as the chairman indicates and as we indicated in the debate on the rule, this bill has gotten caught up in four, what could be called extraneous issues. I would suggest, however, that one of them is not really extraneous to the extent that its provision in the bill is an appropriation matter in that it says none of the funds in this bill shall be spent to purchase policies which do not have full coverage for contraception. To that extent, that is an appropriation provision. The other three provisions essentially are legislation on an appropriation bill. The gentlewoman from New York (Mrs. LOWEY) was able to offer it because it was in order under the rules. And when she offered it, it passed.

I want to go back to that subject, but I want to thank the chairman for his work on this bill. I want to also join him in thanking the chief clerk of the committee Michelle Mrdeza, also Bob Schmidt, Jeff Ashford, Tammy Hughes, and Frank Larkin. I particularly want to join the chairman in his justifiable pride and appreciation at the work that Jason Isaac has done. I always want to make the observation that the public far too often sees us fighting and confronting one another as if we did not try to work constructively together. I want to say that the chairman, joined by Jason Isaac, has been a very positive interlocutor in trying to come to grips with the important issues confronting this bill. Jason, I want to on behalf of not only myself but all the Democrats on the committee, our Democratic staff, thank you for the extraordinarily able contribution you have made to the consideration of this bill over the past few years. It has been a joy to work with you. We respect your ability and your integrity. We wish you the best of luck.

Mr. Speaker, this bill, and I am not going to make all my comments because I will adopt the chairman's comment and include my statement for the RECORD. But in particular this bill provides appropriate resources for the IRS. Why is that important? When we did IRS reform, I made the point that if you were not for IRS reform at budget time and at tax-writing time, all the reform legislation you passed was going to be meaningless. You need to give the IRS the resources to serve the public in a customer-friendly way. You also need good management. I want to congratulate again Secretary Rubin and Larry Summers, the Deputy Secretary, for bringing in a manager, Charles Rossotti. His predecessors have been outstanding people. For the most part they have been tax lawyers. Obviously that was an important skill to have, but really what IRS needed was management skill. Secretary Rubin brought in a manager with Mr. Rossotti from the private sector, an 8,000 person firm, an expert in the field of information management. He is doing an outstanding job. That is the good news.

The second piece of good news is that the gentleman from Arizona and our committee has provided him the resources to make sure that reform in fact occurs. I want to thank the chairman again for that. The bill does fund as well law enforcement. Forty percent of Federal law enforcement is in this bill, whether on the borders, in our cities, in our schools, training kids how to stay out of gangs. This bill is a critical component of fighting crime in America in every community in America. The gentleman from Arizona is committed to that effort. He and I have the privilege of working together with our law enforcement officials in the Treasury Department to make sure they are as effective as we could possibly make them to keep our schools and communities and States and Nation as free of crime as we possibly can; as well to interdict drugs which are eating at the fabric of our society. This bill funds that effort. I congratulate him for it.

Mr. Speaker, before my time concludes, I will include the rest of my remarks in the RECORD, talking about the programs that this bill does well by. Mr. Speaker, we will be discussing what this bill, however, deleted.

When this bill went to conference, there were a number of provisions, four in number, that became contentious. One, the provision about the FEC which the gentleman from Louisiana (Mr. LIVINGSTON) has been a very strong supporter and proponent of, was obviously very controversial and a confrontation between the two parties where one party was all against it and for the most part the other party was for it. I suggested that that provision be dropped because we could not get agreement on that provision, and I am pleased that it has been dropped. The other three provisions, however, were different, Mr. Speaker, and they were different because they had and still to this time, I believe, enjoy bipartisan support.

Not only do they enjoy bipartisan support in the House, but also in the Senate, and that bipartisan support also reflected itself in the conference. It is unfortunate that they were dropped. I will have more to say about them in a few minutes.

But again, this is a good bill once we resolve these four items. I hope it moves forward.

Almost half of the $13.4 billion in discretionary budget authority in this bill is targeted at law enforcement and anti-drug efforts.

Roughly $450 million in provided to the drug czar for a variety of drug-fighting efforts, including $182 million for the very successful high-intensity drug trafficking areas [HIDTAS], and $185 million for the ONDCP's national media campaign.

We provided IRS commissioner Rossoitti with funding that will enable him to continue with the reform and restructuring efforts. IRS is funded at $7.9 billion, $469 million less than the President's request—most of which is attributable to the IRS' Y2K needs, which should be funded in the supplemental being planned by the leadership.

Secretary Rubin and Deputy Secretary Summers should be given credit for rescuing the failing tax modernization program. They provided the needed oversight to allow IRS to make the dramatic improvement in their computer systems area.

This bill also funds many smaller agencies, including the National Archives, OPM, GSA, the FEC, and the Executive Office of the President, including the White House Office, and executive residence.

I am pleased that the chairman and I were able to reach an agreement to modify the fence on $630,000 for spending on overtime expenses at the executive residence. I wish the fence were not there, however, the language will allow the White House to provide the General Accounting Office with its comments and once the GAO notifies the committees of its receipt of the White House comments, the fence is eliminated. I was informed today that GAD has given its report to the White House, and this well be finished soon.

For GSA, I am very pleased that we are able to include over $500 million for needed courthouse construction projects. Chairman Kolbe and I agreed that the courthouses needing funding were the only ones that would be funded in this bill. The courthouses included in this bill is identical to the list of construction projects recommended by the judicial conference as the top priority needs of the courts.

In addition, I am disappointed that this bill does not include much needed funding for the Y2K problems facing the Federal Government.

When this bill came out of the full committee, and funding for Y2K was stripped, I was assured that the leadership understood the urgency of the problem and understood that funding had to be provided.

However, as of October, days after the beginning of the new fiscal year in the 3 months since the funding was stripped from this bill, we still have not dealt with this issue.

I had very much hoped that the bill would contain the contraceptive equity language that passed the House and Senate.

Since it does not, I am offering a motion to recommit this conference report with an instruction to include the House-passed contraceptive language.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. KOLBE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the very distinguished gentleman from Louisiana (Mr. LIVINGSTON), Chairman of the Committee on Appropriations.

(Mr. LIVINGSTON asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. LIVINGSTON. Mr. Speaker, I thank my friend, the very distinguished chairman of the Subcommittee on Treasury, Postal Service, and General Government for yielding this time to me, and I want to congratulate him and the staff and all the Members on both sides for doing such a great job with what I think is a fine bill and a bill which I hope will go to the other body, get passed, be sent down to the President and be signed because there is a lot that is good about this bill. In fact, I appreciate the comments by the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. HOYER) talking about what is good about this bill. It is a good bill.

And I was a little bit taken aback. Yes, there are four provisions which were irritants to many Members. I really appreciate the position of the gentleman when he said that whether it was one of the four that he was against, let us throw that one out and let us keep the other three. Well, that is a neat bargaining position, but that is not going to cut it because there are a lot of people in the House who are opposed to the other three, for one reason or the other, and they were not unanimous. Each of the four had its opposition, each of the four had its segment of people who were vigorously opposed to it, and together they came to the floor last Thursday night and cast their vote against the rule which prevented us from proceeding as we are proceeding tonight.

It was a simple decision, was not political, was not a vendetta, was not intended to single any one group out. If there were four irritants on a very good bill, let us take out the irritants, and pass the very good bill and go on about our business.

We have got three days, three legislative days between now and the end of the 105th Congress. It seems to me that if my colleagues did not get their provision kept in, but they are mad because the others that they liked were not also kept in, that they need to understand what a compromise means.

I simply say that it just makes common sense, take all four out, pass the bill, send it to the Senate, let us go on about our business.

This is a good bill. All of the Members have worked hard. We have had difficulty with the process, but we have not had difficulty with 99 percent of the substance of this bill. Let us stop talking about process, let us stop taking political advantage.

Yes, I have one of these provisions that I strenuously am in favor of. I lost. I lost my position on the FEC. I think that is a terrible mistake, but I am willing to concede it, and I would think my colleagues would be willing to concede it, and that is why I cannot understand why they would support a motion to recommit, rehash the process and undo this very fine bill which the gentleman himself concedes is great legislation.

If it is great legislation, let us stop playing politics, let us move the bill to the other body, and let us get the President to sign it.

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the distinguished gentlewoman from Florida (Mrs. MEEK), a member of the subcommittee.

Mrs. MEEK of Florida. Mr. Speaker, this bill needs to be defeated. It is amazing to me how we can make relative comparisons in this bill. My Chairman, a man I have a lot of respect for, enumerated a lot of things that are in this bill that are good. They are good. But most of the things the Chairman enumerated were things that deal in things or buildings or objects like IRS, Customs, and many other things that he enumerated. But one thing that he left out: he did not deal with human lives and how this bill is going to negatively impact 40,000 Haitians that are in this country.

Why are they in this country? Not because they have the freedom to come here. They left fleeing a government which was unfair to them, a terrorist government, a government that caused them to go hungry, a government that caused them to give up their lives with their bodies washed ashore all along the Atlantic. These are the things this Congress has failed to look at.

Mr. Speaker, I have tried for 4 years to get some relief in this Congress for the Haitians. Certainly in the House we have consistently ignored these people, consistently we have. We were able to the last time to admit the Nicaraguans and 5000 more Cubans. The Cubans already had an opening in this country. We always support people who need help in this Congress.

I went along with the gentlewoman from Florida (Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN) and the gentleman from Florida (Mr. DIAZ-BALART) to help get the Nicaraguans and the Cubans in this country. Then they went along with me with the Haitians. And I want to say, Mr. Speaker, in this rider, it is not caused by all the people on the other side. We know who they are, and they know who they are. The good people on the other side have been swayed by a right-wing extremist group which for some reason cannot stand the idea of Haitians coming into this country and receiving green cards. Yet they can allow 150,000 of a people in this country who did not face similar kinds of terrorist actions as the Haitians.

I cannot understand it, Mr. Speaker. I wish I had the answer as to why this disparity is being made here in this House. The Senate did what they thought was a humane thing to do. They voted to allow them to come in, this 40,000. They did not let everybody in. They thought about the children, they thought about the ones who came from Guantanamo, and they thought about the ones who had sought asylum in this country. There are many other Haitians in this country, over 100,000 others, but at least the Senate stepped forward and said we believe it is righteous, we believe in it.

This House has shown that it believes in disparate treatment for Haitians. That is why this bill should go down, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. KOLBE. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 30 seconds.

Let me just say, Mr. Speaker, that the gentlewoman from Florida makes a very powerful argument for the assistance to the Haitian refugees. I believe that her argument is one that should be considered by this House. But, as she knows, there are people, people who have responsibility for the authorization of immigration legislation that have very strong views on the other side, and we just could not carry it in this bill. If it is as important as it is, and the administration agrees, and the Senate leadership agrees, and the House leadership agrees, it should be included in the omnibus bill.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to the gentlewoman from Connecticut (Mrs. JOHNSON).

Mrs. JOHNSON of Connecticut. Mr. Speaker, on July 16 I felt tremendous pride in this Congress when Republicans and Democrats came together and passed an important family planning provision that would have extended contraceptive coverage to more than a million women enrolled in Federal health plans. The debate was heated, but it was honest and driven by the merits of the issue. Now, three months later, that same provision is no longer in this bill. No one is more disappointed than I.

I am particularly disappointed by the fact that it was the victim of an incredible partisanship. The Democrats simply decided contraceptive coverage was expendable, and I rarely make this kind of claim, but honestly that is the truth. It was expendable, it was less important than a provision that will have no effect for 4 years.

The Haitian solution was less important than the FEC problem that can be fixed in the next 4 years. The child care improvements were less important than the FEC provisions that will not have effect for 4 years. We should have been able to pass that bill on the floor that had those provisions in it. If my colleagues did not like the FEC provisions, and I know they did not and we know there is a pressing need for FEC reform, then we would have had time to work together and address those issues. But since there was no willingness to recognize the three major provisions we agreed on, 3 of 4, there was no choice for people like me but to support the bill before us.

Mr. Speaker, my responsibility is to keep the government open. My responsibility is to fund the United States Treasury Department that I think does very important things for the people of this Nation. I am proud that in this bill is $103 million to improve IRS customer service. This Congress, the House and Senate, spent 2 years thinking through reform of the IRS, changing the law, and I am proud that the committee of the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. KOLBE) and with the cooperation of the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. HOYER) have got the money in this bill so that we can do what we told the people we were going to do and improve customer service at the IRS. Twenty-seven million dollars for restructuring and taxpayer clinics so people can have some timely help in understanding what their responsibilities are and how to pay their taxes in an honorable way on time.

Also in this bill is $3.2 million. It is a small amount of money but so important to the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children. This is also a lot of money for drug interdiction and other drug prevention programs.

This is a good bill. The tragedy is that everybody agrees that the subcommittee did an excellent job on funding this function of government, and we have caused ourselves enormous problems by legislating on an appropriation bill.

We have caused ourselves increasingly serious problems over the years by legislating more and more provisions on appropriations bills. While we know this is illegal under our rules, this time we did have some very serious debates about some of those riders, and some of them included from the Senate side, like the Haitian provisions, did solve very, very important problems for families who are stranded here in America. It just pains me that we were not big enough to move this bill through with those three provisions on it and come back next year to better address FEC problems. the D's could have gotten some solid agreement from us to come back and let us look on the FEC. Let us agree to make a real conscious effort to reform it. That was not done; I regret it. My responsibility was to fund the IRS and the other agencies funded in this bill, and I am proud to support it.

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 15 seconds.

Mr. Speaker, I tell the gentlewoman for whom I have a great deal of respect, the FEC provision is effective January 1, 1999. She firing Mr. Noble as of January 1, 1999, less than 90 days from today.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. OBEY).

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I would simply say to the gentlewoman from Connecticut (Mrs. JOHNSON) that that speech simply will not wash. If you really believe that contraceptive coverage should be provided in this bill, there is only one way to get it: turn the bill down, and bring a bill back which contains it. The majority party was told by people on this side of the aisle that all they had to do to get 200 votes on our side of the aisle for the bill is to drop the amendment on the Federal Elections Commission that threatens to corrupt the entire election process. That is still the best way to cover or to get the contraceptive coverage that she says that she wants.

So they can give all the excuses they want about how it is necessary to fund the IRS. Nobody seriously believes the IRS is not going to be funded. It will be funded no matter what happens to this bill. Quit kidding people.

□ 1900

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from California (Ms. WOOLSEY).

(Ms. WOOLSEY asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. WOOLSEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong opposition to the Treasury-Postal Appropriations conference report because it strips out the contraceptive prescription coverage, strips out language that both the House and the other body passed, Mr. Speaker, language that was passed.

It seems like, in this Congress, the appropriations process immediately signals the beginning of hunting season on a woman's reproductive rights. Figure it out. Unwanted pregnancy and abortion rates drop when women have access to preventative reproductive health care, the health care they need.

I ask Members, look at your female staff, those women who work so hard to serve your districts. Look at them and tell them that you do not care about their reproductive health and their choices. Then look at the millions of Federal employees who, day in and day out, serve the people of this country. Go ahead. Tell them that you want to deny them the rights made accessible to other women but not to them.

Voluntary family planning services give our women and their families new choices and new hope. These services increase child survival and save motherhood. Prohibiting Federal workers from using their health care coverage for prescription contraceptive coverage discriminates against women, women that work for the Federal Government. This is a disgrace. Government workers should not be treated so poorly.

The democratic process deserves more respect. The appropriations process should not signal to women in this Nation that their rights are at risk. Vote against this conference.

Mr. KOLBE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 seconds to the gentlewoman from Connecticut (Mrs. JOHNSON).

Mrs. JOHNSON of Connecticut. Mr. Speaker, I just want to make it clear that I do not consider it partisan to require that the chief counsel of the FEC have bipartisan support, that there be bipartisan confidence in his work.

Almost every board and commission requires a majority vote for anything, and certainly for hiring a major staffer. The only thing that goes into effect January 1 is the change that a majority has to support, has to have confidence in their chief of staff. I consider this a bipartisan improvement.

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman for her comment; but in point of fact, we are all confident that there are not three votes to do anything for Mr. Noble on the Republican side; and, therefore, as of January 1, 1999, less than 90 days, he would be terminated by legislation. I think that is unprecedented.

Mrs. JOHNSON of Connecticut. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOYER. I yield to the gentlewoman from Connecticut.

Mrs. JOHNSON of Connecticut. Mr. Speaker, does the gentleman not think that is incredible? Does the gentleman think that is healthy? Does it give the gentleman any insight into why this organization has been so ineffective in the last couple of years?

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Speaker, reclaiming my time from the gentlewoman, I will tell the gentlewoman, no, I do not think it is incredible because Mr. Noble went after GOPAC, and he went after the Christian Coalition. I will tell the gentlewoman that it is our strong conviction on this side that is why this issue has been raised this year, I will tell my friend.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from California (Mrs. CAPPS).

(Mrs. CAPPS asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Mrs. CAPPS. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of a motion to recommit with great disappointment that the Lowey provision was removed from the bill.

It is outrageous to me that we would prevent Federal employees from access to basic health care which includes contraceptive coverage as was stated. These are our colleagues who work in our offices. These are the women and the families they represent who work in Federal agencies across this country.

Before coming to Congress, I spent 20 years as a school nurse and led a program for pregnant teenagers and teenage mothers. Many of these young parents were married and wanted to stay in school.

This experience convinced me that access to contraceptives is such a key part of our goal to reduce unintended pregnancies and, in turn, reduce the number of abortions in this country.

When we provide women and people with access to contraceptives, we empower them to make their own critical decisions about their own lives and the lives of their families.

Contraception is first and foremost a health issue. Close to half of all the pregnancies in the United States are unintended. Unwanted pregnancies often carry the risk of poor prenatal care and the risk of unwanted and disadvantaged children.

Improved access to contraception is a simple cost-effective way to keep women healthy, to protect their families, and ensure that the children who are brought into this world have the support they need to thrive. Federal employees should be allowed access to a basic part of health coverage and should not be treated as second-class citizens.

Again, I am sorely disappointed that this provision so vital for women's health was stripped by our leadership.

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentlewoman from Denver, Colorado (Ms. DEGETTE).

Ms. DEGETTE. Mr. Speaker, last time I checked, it was 1998. But, frankly, as far as I am concerned today, it might as well be 1918 when Margaret Sanger went to prison for smuggling diaphragms to women.

This is a very sad day for American women. A proposal to provide birth control, birth control, not abortion, a proposal which passed both the House and Senate has now fallen to the demands of the Christian Coalition and the radical right.

Denying access to contraception for Federal employees is just a small step in the systemic efforts by the radical right to eradicate, not just a woman's right to abortion, but a woman's right to birth control, to reproductive health.

First, it is denying insurance coverage for contraception, then it is outlawing FDA approval of contraception, then criminalizing grandparents for taking teens across State lines for abortion. On and on and on are attempts to both reverse Roe versus Wade and then remove a woman's right to reproductive choice.

I think that we need to tell the tens of thousands of Federal employees in this country and their families that this Congress will stop playing God and do what the American people have elected us to do. We have no business in America's bedrooms. We cannot force natural family planning, the method by which my parents had 5 children in 6½ years.

We have got to have sensible birth control which will reduce abortion in this country and will give American women a choice over when they have planned pregnancies.

I urge this body to vote ''yes'' on the motion to recommit, put this important language for our employees and all Federal employees back in the bill. At that point, it is an excellent bill, and we should all support it.

Mr. KOLBE. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 15 seconds.

Mr. Speaker, I would just point out to the gentlewoman from Colorado (Ms. DEGETTE), if this was such an important provision, where was she Thursday night? She was not here to vote for it. She voted against it. She did not think it was important on Thursday when we had the bill up here.

Mr. Speaker, I would ask how much time remains on both sides.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. GUTKNECHT). The gentleman from Arizona (Mr. KOLBE) has 10 minutes remaining. The gentleman from Maryland (Mr. HOYER) has 13 minutes remaining.

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to the gentlewoman from New York (Mrs. LOWEY), who was the sponsor of the provision in question on contraception.

Mrs. LOWEY. Mr. Speaker, I thank the ranking member of the committee for yielding to me. I want to say again to our distinguished chairman, the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. KOLBE), and to the ranking member, the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. HOYER) that I feel very sad tonight that I cannot enthusiastically support this bill.

I know how hard the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. KOLBE) worked on the bill and the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. HOYER) worked on the bill. There are a lot of Federal workers out there who depend upon the provisions of this bill.

I have heard from my colleagues this evening that we had to just remove all of the controversial provisions in the bill because otherwise the bill could not get through. I just want to make it clear to my friends on both sides of the aisle that I strongly disagree with that point of view.

There is a big difference between disagreeing on a provision and taking a provision out of the bill that was voted on democratically, with a small ''d,'' by the majority of this House, by a voice vote in the Senate that was in the conference report.

There is a big difference between taking that provision out, having the leadership of this House making a decision to take that provision out, and to remove other provisions that many of us felt were clearly political and were not supported by both the House and Senate. So I wanted to make that point, number one.

Secondly, as a woman, sometimes you get an opportunity to do something that really helps the majority of women in this country. I want to urge my colleagues and alert my colleagues to a poll, and not that polls means anything in this House, but a poll that is being released tomorrow saying 78 percent of women in this country support contraceptive coverage.

I know my good friend the gentlewoman from Kentucky (Mrs. NORTHUP) has said that any woman can choose a plan that has a contraceptive. We know, and I have 2 daughters and daughters-in-law, that some contraceptives are good for some people; others are good for others.

In fact, I would like to say to my good friend, the gentlewoman from Kentucky, is it not sad that a woman in 1998 should have to choose a plan just because it has the kind of contraceptive that is best for her.

What we are saying is that there are five established methods of contraception. The plan should cover them if, in fact, they cover prescription drugs. That is what the American people want. That is what the women of America want. If some people feel one of those contraceptives is an abortifacient, it is your right. Just do not use it.

I do not agree with everything that is in every plan, but the Budget Office has made it very clear that covering this would be an incidental cost. It does not mean anything.

So I just want to say in closing, we try to operate in a small ''d'' democratic way in this House of Representatives in this Congress of the United States, and I am still proud to be a part of the Congress of the United States.

But I have to tell my colleagues, to find a way to take out a provision that was democratically voted in both the House and the Senate I think is an outrage. I think it is an insult to American women when 80 percent of the plans do not cover all forms of contraception that have been approved.

I have to tell my colleagues, all but one covers sterilization. We have just seen that it is okay for the military to include $50 million for Viagra. This is patently unfair.

I would hope that everybody would vote for the motion to recommit so we can correct the error and put this contraceptive provision back in. That is what the American people want. That is what American women want. I thank again my chair and my ranking member.

Mr. KOLBE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1½ minutes to the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. SMITH).

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I thank my good friend for yielding to me.

Mr. Speaker, I urge a ''no'' vote on the motion to recommit. The language that would be offered, I believe by either the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. HOYER) or by the gentlewoman from New York (Mrs. LOWEY), would force most health care providers in the Federal Employees Health Benefits Program to provide chemicals and devices that result in early abortions.

What is largely unknown and largely misunderstood is the fact that some devices and some chemicals that advertise as contraceptives also have the effect of preventing implantation of a newly created human being.

For example, the copper IUD, when inserted up to 7 days after intercourse, after intercourse, acts in a way that does not prevent fertilization, but it acts in a way to prevent implantation. That is advertised as emergency contraception.

If a conscientious objector who is not basing his or her objection on religious beliefs or plan would like to not provide this, they would not have that opportunity because it is a mandate. That is what we are talking about.

All of these things are permissible under current administrative policy and current law. All of these things are permissible, including early abortions through these chemicals. What is not the case, they are not mandated.

This is all about a mandate saying to a plan, you either tow the line and offer copper IUDs 7 days after intercourse, or you lose your ability to be in this program; and that is where the mandate ought to be rejected. Keep it permissible, not mandatory. Vote ''no'' on the motion.

□ 1915

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentlewoman from New York (Mrs. LOWEY).

Mrs. LOWEY. Mr. Speaker, I just want to respond to my good friend from New Jersey (Mr. SMITH) and to my colleagues. I just want to make it very clear that there are 5 established methods of contraception that have been approved by the FDA, number 1.

Second, 78 percent of the American people believe that we should work hard to reduce unintended pregnancies, to reduce the number of abortions, and most people in this country, men and women, do believe that the way to do that is with family planning, is with contraception.

Now, we can debate on this floor when life begins, but remember, if a plan offers the 5 methods of established contraception, that does not mean everyone has to choose that. Everyone has the opportunity to make a decision based on their religious beliefs, and in fact, we have exempted the 5 religiously-based health plans so that they do not have to offer contraception. I think we have been very fair in drafting this provision. It was passed in a bipartisan way. Let us vote for the motion to recommit and support it.

Mr. KOLBE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to the gentlewoman from Kentucky (Mrs. NORTHUP).

Mrs. NORTHUP. Mr. Speaker, often when I go before groups at home they ask me what sort of training I had or what seemed to help me be a Member of Congress. I tell them that it was growing up in a family of 11 children, because when one grows up in a family of 11 children, one does not always get one's way.

In fact, it often seems like one never gets their way, and one learns that one gives up all the time. One gives up their choice on what television show to watch, one does not get to choose when one goes to the pool, where one goes, what one eats for breakfast. The fact is that when one is one of 11 children, one learns to compromise all the time to get to an end that is very important.

So in the conference committee we had very strong feelings. Most of us compromised. Three of the provisions that were controversial I agreed with. I do not believe that we should add more mandates on our Federal employees' health plans that will have the effect of driving up their costs. But I agree, because it was very important to a group on the Democratic side particularly, but on both sides, that we include that.

The fact is that in the end the minority party decided not to support the rule and not to support the conference committee because one thing was more important than anything, and that is that the general council have bipartisan support to stay in place.

So the rule went down. So now we are back with all of the controversial provisions stripped.

I understand that it is very important to the gentlewoman from New York (Mrs. LOWEY). She has dedicated day after day to this mandate on health insurance. So she is going to stand up and offer a rule to recommit, I understand, for her provision. It sort of ignores, to the gentlewoman from Florida (Mrs. MEEK) and to me, the fact that the Haitian provision was very important, and that in this recommit rule, what we are saying is what I want is more important than anything else, and so I am going to recommit the bill to get the one provision that trumps everything else.

That is the sort of lesson one learns when one is in a family of 11 that one cannot do.

To directly address this, I just want to say that not one Federal employee has contacted me asking me to mandate every form of birth control in every plan. They like what they have. They like their choices, and they have confidence that they can choose the plan that is best for them.

Now, if we want to go back to a state where we have to tell Federal employees, we know what is better, you may not want a higher priced plan, but we know what is better for you and we are going to mandate it. They will come back and tell us that CBO said there is no additional cost, and the truth is, there is no additional cost for the Federal Government.

First of all, CBO has now said that maybe they did not score it correctly. But let me point out that in some ways, Federal employees are like many employees of small businesses. The employer says, I am going to pay this much every month for your policy, and you are going to pay the balance. And so if right now they do not need contraceptive coverage, and maybe what they need is the most affordable plan, something that they can choose, and in fact, we know Federal employees are moving to cheaper plans, that tends to be their criteria, what we are saying is that we do not care that is your criteria, we know better.

Mr. Speaker, I have not had one Federal employee that wants me to change and mandate, add mandates.

So what we are doing is deciding here that maybe something we want them to have is not even something that they want. There are women in the private sector that would love to have options on their insurance, but they do not exist in the Federal system.

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentlewoman from New York (Mrs. LOWEY).

Mrs. LOWEY. Mr. Speaker, I would just like to quickly respond to my colleague from Kentucky.

Number one, the association that represents the Federal employees does support this provision. They are on record.

Second, my colleague accused me of being selfish. I strongly endorse the provision of the gentlewoman from Florida (Mrs. MEEK), and I would hope that it would be in the bill. The reason the contraceptive provision is the motion to recommit is that provision did pass the House and the Senate; it was in the conference, and so it really is quite undemocratic to take it out.

Last, I just want to say that I just have one brother. I have 3 children, and maybe I did not have to share everything with 11, but I have learned that democracy should work in this body, as a Member who has been here for 10 years, and I still think, in closing, it is outrageous that a provision that passed the Senate and the House and the conference should be taken out.

We could have a longer debate about what should and should not be in a health benefit plan, but this has been supported by the association that represents these employees.

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1½ minutes to the gentlewoman from New York (Mrs. MALONEY).

Mrs. MALONEY of New York. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time and I thank him for his leadership on this issue and so many other important issues before this House.

I rise in opposition to this bill, because while it restores some of the necessary powers to the Federal Elections Commission, it takes power away from women. It discriminates against women by denying them access to the full range of contraception services.

We are wasting no time in handing out over $50 million worth of Viagra to service members through the Pentagon this year, but we are denying women access to contraception. It is discriminatory and it is wrong.

Some of my Republican colleagues have accused us of wanting things both ways. Well, they are absolutely right, because restoring power to the Federal Elections Commission as well as giving women proper access to contraception, these are the right things to do.

Mr. Speaker, as we all know, this language, the contraception language has already been approved by the majority in both Houses. It passed this House twice. We should play by the rules. It has been approved by the House, approved by the Senate, and we have a great deal of additional work we need to do. We should not be undoing what this Congress has already passed, and I urge a ''no'' vote against this conference report.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair would advise that the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. HOYER) has 5½ minutes remaining; the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. KOLBE) has 4½ minutes remaining.

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentlewoman from Connecticut (Ms. DELAURO).

Ms. DELAURO. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman.

I rise today opposed to this report and opposed to the way the Republican leadership has run roughshod over the will of the majority of the House, the majority of the Senate, and the American people.

We have discussed this issue many times before. The full House voted twice, the Senate voted once in support of contraceptive coverage for Federal employees. This is basic health care for women, health care that will help to reduce the number of abortions.

But to satisfy their right wing, for political reasons, the Republican leadership is once again extending the arm of government into the doctor's office. They claim to know better than doctors. It has been said many times before, but let me say it once again. This provision will not require plans to cover any form of abortion, including RU486.

We all know that the law forbids Federal health plans from covering any form of abortion. What was intended here was to ensure that women have access to the health care that they need and that they deserve. It enables couples to reduce the need for abortion.

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself the balance of my time.

Mr. Speaker, I rise to speak about the motion that we will make, because there will be no time for debate when the motion to recommit is made.

As has been referenced earlier in this debate, there will be a motion to recommit. I regret that the gentlewoman from Connecticut is not on the floor, because the motion to recommit will be limited to one single issue, and it will be an issue that has enjoyed the majority support of the Members of this House, including approximately 51 Republicans, as well as 178 Democrats. It is a measure that has been supported in a bipartisan fashion, that is overwhelmingly supported in this Nation, and that is to commit to providing for women the family planning options of their choice that they can use most effectively.

Mr. Speaker, I would hope that every Member who voted for the Lowey amendment and who voted in opposition to the Smith amendment to undercut the Lowey amendment would vote for the motion to recommit, which will recommit the bill to conference, with instructions to add back the provision that passed this House.

Now, I want to make it clear that that position was the position shared by the chairman; shared by the ranking member, myself; shared by the chairman of the Senate conference committee; shared by the ranking member of the conference committee; supported by the Senate in a 5-to-2 vote by their conference.

Mr. Speaker, this should not be a controversial issue. I do not mean by that that there are not people who feel strongly in opposition to the suggestion of the full array of contraceptives being available to women. I understand that opposition. But it is to say that there is a clear majority in both Houses for this provision. One cannot say that about any other of these provisions. It is the only provision that fills that bill.

Furthermore, let me perhaps put a caveat to that.

□ 1930

The FEC measure may enjoy the majority support in both Houses, but Republicans only, so there is not bipartisan support for that. We make a distinction on that basis. Yes, we felt strongly about it.

I would hope that Members of this House, realizing that this is a good bill that should pass, and will pass in some form within the next 72 hours, I believe, I hope, and I will work towards that objective, but it is also a bill that could and should carry this provision, supported by the overwhelming majority of the Congress, the Senate, the House, and the conference committee.

Why should it pass? Because it is an important provision, as the gentlewoman from New York (Mrs. LOWEY) and so many others have stated, to provide for full health services for women in America.

I would suggest to my friends that if the men of America felt as strongly about a provision, the chances of us dropping it would be zero. Let me repeat that. If the men of America felt as strongly about a provision, the chances of us dropping it would be zero.

I would hope that when we come to the floor, that we vote for the motion to recommit. I would then hope my chairman would take us into conference immediately, and because I know that the Senator from Colorado, the chairman of the Senate conference, and the ranking member, the gentleman from Wisconsin, support this provision, and I know the chairman supports this provision, and obviously I support this provision, that we report this bill back immediately, and I will agree to a unanimous consent request for a limited debate, 5 minutes a side, and that this bill would then pass.

I want to tell the chairman that I would strongly support the Haitian provision as well. I am not sure that will go. I have talked to the administration, and believe that will be a very significant issue in the omnibus bill. But I would hope that the motion to recommit would be approved by this House, and the will of this House would be carried out in this bill.

Mr. KOLBE. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself the balance of my time.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the motion to recommit, and I urge my colleagues to vote against that, when we come to that vote. I urge them to vote for the passage of the conference report.

Let me say that I support very strongly providing contraceptive coverage for women. My record on these issues has been very clear since I have come to this body, and I have taken more than my fair amount of heat at home from some of my more conservative members of my party on this issue, but I strongly support it because I think it is the right thing to do. I favor expanding the coverage. I believe that women who work for the Federal Government should have more options than they do now.

But I want to make it clear that without this provision that passed the House of Representatives, a very controversial provision, and it was, if Members will recall, a very tough fight when we had it, but it passed the House of Representatives, by eliminating this we are not eliminating contraceptive coverage for any woman who works for the Federal Government.

We are not providing any denial of coverage. We are not putting any limitation on what kinds of contraceptive coverage any Federal health plan can provide. That is a determination that the health plan can make. That is a determination that any person who signs up can make, as to whether they want to be in that plan.

We are retaining the status quo. We are where we are with the law today. Those on this side of the aisle and the minority side of the aisle would argue that it is not enough. I would agree. I think we should have an expansion. I think there should be more coverage.

There are those over here who would want to ban any contraceptive coverage in a Federal health plan. We have neither position. Neither position has been able to work its will here. So we have a law today that allows coverage, but it does not mandate it. Eighty-four percent of the Federal plans do provide for some kind of coverage. Forty percent of them provide for all of the contraceptive coverage. There is virtually no woman working for the Federal Government that does not have access to a plan that has some kind of coverage.

So I would prefer the position that has been articulated by those over there, but we could not get it out. My colleagues on that side of the aisle would not support it last Thursday when we had this vote up. It was not important enough to them then. Tonight it is important to them, so they want us to defeat this and recommit this, but it was not important enough to them last week.

I have a responsibility, as the chairman of this subcommittee, and the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. HOYER) has been there himself, to get this bill to the floor, to get this conference report done, to make sure that 163,000 Federal employees that are supported by this bill continue to work if we somehow do not have an omnibus bill on Friday; that they will continue to work; that they will continue to do the work of collecting the taxes for the Federal government, of doing the work of the IRS of processing tax returns; that they will continue to do the work of Customs, of checking the borders, of interdicting drugs from coming into this country; that they will continue to do the work of the Secret Service, that provides protection for the president and fights against counterfeiters; that they will continue to provide the money for the Drug-Free Communities Act, so that we will be able to continue the work of the drug war through the Media program; that we will continue to be able to do all of these programs.

But Mr. Speaker, if we recommit this bill tonight, it is dead. We do not have contraceptive coverage. We do not have the good things that the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. HOYER) spoke about earlier in this bill. There is no way we can get that out of the conference committee. My colleague knows that. We have talked about it. We cannot get it out, so we simply cannot pass the legislation.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues in the strongest possible terms to reject the motion to recommit. Let us move forward with the bill that is a good bill for the agencies that it funds, a bill that does not have extraneous legislative provisions on it.

Defeat the motion to recommit, pass the conference report tonight, and keep the Treasury-Postal agencies in business.

Ms. MILLENDER-McDONALD. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong opposition to the rule. The Lowey provision within the Treasury-Postal Appropriations bill was passed in both chambers of Congress—twice in the House—and was included in the final conference report. To strip this language now flies in the face of the legislative process.

The vast majority of Federal Employee Health Benefit (FEHB) plans do not cover the full range of prescription contraceptives which prevent unintended pregnancies and 10 percent of the FEHB plans do not even cover any of the five major contraceptives.

The Lowey provision in the Treasury-Postal Appropriations bill simply requires that FEHB plans cover prescription contraception, just as they cover other prescriptions. The FEHB program serves as a model for the nation's private health insurance plans. The FEHB program must cover these basic and essential prescription drugs that can decrease the need and likelihood of abortions in this country. We owe this not only to the millions of women who make more than half this population, but to their families who are trying to be responsible parents.

Eighty-one percent of FEHB plans do not even cover the five leading reversible methods of contraception. Due to various medical conditions, many women do not even have the option of using certain forms of contraception. Women deserve a full and fair choice when it comes to their personal health needs.

Currently, women of reproductive age spend 68% more in out-of-pocket health costs than men. We need to narrow the gender gap in insurance coverage—not widen the disparities between those who have and those who have not, and further expand the chasm that has hurt far too many women and families throughout the country already.

The Lowey provision is a critical, basic necessity that has a ''negligible'' cost according to the Congressional Budget Office. I urge my colleagues to recognize and respect the legislative process.

And we must vote ''no'' because the Republicans have also stripped the language providing Haitian refugees the chance to establish legal permanent residence in the United States. This Haitian language would enable an estimated 40,000 Haitians, including about 11,000 paroled into the United States after the military coup in 1991 by the Bush Administration, to adjust to permanent residence status. These Haitians deserve the asylum that has been provided to their Nicaraguan and Cuban counterparts.

Again, I urge my colleagues to vote ''no'' on this destructive and unjudicious rule.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, this conference report is a shocking disappointment for two reasons: First of all it unjustly strips away well-deserved rights from a small group of Haitians in the United States. The Senate bill included relief for 40,000 Haitians who had arrived in the United States by the end of 1995 by granting them the right to apply for legal permanent residency. These Haitians were paroled in upon the invitation of the attorney general. Due to bipartisan, bicameral support the House receded to the other body.

Now a small minority here in Congress wants to kill this issue. This is totally unacceptable.

Second of all, this conference report deletes the Lowey language which requires that Federal Employees Health Benefits (FEHB) plans cover prescription contraception, just as they cover other kinds of prescriptions. The Lowey Amendment was approved by the full Appropriations Committee, twice by the House, once by the Senate unanimously by voice vote, and was included in the conference report.

The problem is that the vast majority of FEHB plans fail to cover the full range of prescription contraceptives which prevent unintended pregnancy and reduce the need for abortion. In fact, 81% of FEHB plans do not cover all five leading reversible methods of contraception and 10% have no coverage of contraceptives at all. Women of reproductive age spend 68% more in out-of-pocket health costs than men and much of this is due to the cost of contraception—we need to narrow this gender gap in insurance coverage. The federal government needs to provide a model for private health plans by providing this very basic health benefit for women insured by FEHB plans.

I urge my colleagues to reject this conference report.

Mr. KOLBE. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time, and I move the previous question on the conference report.

The previous question was ordered.

MOTION TO RECOMMIT OFFERED BY MR. HOYER

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion to recommit.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. GUTKNECHT). Is the gentleman opposed to the conference report?

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Speaker, in its present form I am.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the motion to recommit.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. HOYER moves to recommit the conference report on the bill H.R. 4104 to the committee of conference with instructions to the managers on the part of the House to insist on section 624 of H.R. 4104 dealing with contraceptive prescription coverage under the Federal Employees Health Benefit Plan.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, the previous question is ordered on the motion to recommit.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion to recommit.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the noes appeared to have it.

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, further proceedings on this motion will be postponed.

There was no objection.

MULTICHANNEL VIDEO COMPETITION AND CONSUMER PROTECTION ACT OF 1998

Mr. TAUZIN. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 2921) to amend the Communications Act of 1934 to require the Federal Communications Commission to conduct an inquiry into the impediments to the development of competition in the market for multichannel video programming distribution, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 2921

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the ''Multichannel Video Competition and Consumer Protection Act of 1998''.

SEC. 2. DIRECT-TO-HOME SATELLITE PIRACY PREVENTION.

Section 705(d)(6) of the Communications Act of 1934 (47 U.S.C. 605(d)(6)) is amended by inserting ''or direct-to-home satellite services (as defined in section 303(v))'' after ''satellite cable programming''.

SEC. 3. TEMPORARY STAY OF SATELLITE ROYALTY FEE INCREASE.

Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Copyright Office shall not before December 31, 1999, implement, enforce, collect, or award copyright royalty fees pursuant to the decision of the Librarian of Congress on October 28, 1997, which established a royalty fee of $0.27 per subscriber per month for the retransmission of distant broadcast signals by satellite carriers, and no obligation or liability for copyright royalty fees shall accrue before December 31, 1999, pursuant to that decision. This section shall not affect implementing, enforcing, collecting, or awarding copyright royalty fees pursuant to the royalty fee structure affected by the decision, as it existed prior to October 28, 1997.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Louisiana (Mr. TAUZIN) and the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. MARKEY) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Louisiana (Mr. TAUZIN).

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. TAUZIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks and to include extraneous material on this legislation.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Louisiana?

There was no objection.

Mr. TAUZIN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 5 minutes.

Mr. Speaker, today I am delighted to bring to the floor for Members' consideration H.R. 2921, the Multichannel Video Competition and Consumer Protection Act of 1998. I want to commend the gentleman from Virginia (Chairman BLILEY) for his leadership in bringing this bill to the floor, and my good friend, the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. MARKEY), the ranking member, for his kind and gracious support and assistance.

I introduced the bill in November of last year to address the inequitable decision of the Copyright Arbitration Rate Panel to increase the copyright fees that are paid by the direct broadcast satellite providers. This decision has resulted in increased rates for every DBS dish consumer in America.

To date, the bill has garnered 157 cosponsors, representing Members from all parts of our Nation. The bill has substantially bipartisan support because it does the right thing, it protects consumers and promotes competition in the video marketplace.

H.R. 2921 delays the impact of copyright fees that are paid by satellite providers and ultimately by consumers for distant network signals and superstations.

The Librarian of Congress made a decision to raise the rates of satellite services to 27 cents per subscriber for superstation and distant network signals. This rate compares to the rate of 9.7 cents per subscriber for superstations, and 2.7 cents for network signals that cable operators pay.

In effect, the satellite carriers, and thus, their consumers, are currently paying almost 270 percent more than cable for superstations, and 900 percent more for network signals. This enormous disparity in the copyright fees paid for the exact same signals has resulted in major rate increases for consumers, and has hurt the direct broadcast satellite industry's ability to compete with cable.

The bill rolls back these copyright rates paid by the DBS service providers to the rate they were prior to the decision of the court or the Librarian of Congress' panel. This rollback will extend from the period beginning January 1, 1998, until December 31, 1999.

Why are we doing this? We have seen the rapid development of the home satellite industry. Today direct broadcast satellite providers are offering consumers hundreds of programming channels in various packages. In part, these DBS companies have helped to keep cable companies from raising their rates, encourage them to improve their services, and to upgrade their networks.

I do not have to tell Members how all three are seriously important to America's consumers. At a time when we need more, not less, competition in the video marketplace, we should not be burdening the DBS industry and its consumers with unnecessary and arbitrary additional costs.

According to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, cable rates have risen three times faster than the rate of inflation since the Telecommunications Act of 1996 was passed. As we approach March 31, 1999, next year, when pursuant to that act cable will be deregulated, it is becoming increasingly clear that Congress has to consider legislation to further promote competition for the cable industry.

I find it far preferable to promote true and meaningful competition for cable, and thus to let competitive marketplaces drive the prices down for consumers, than it is for us to constantly regulate. That is why it is so important to pass this bill. This bill declares a time out on the Librarian's decision until we can determine its impact on consumers and the video marketplace.

This is an appropriate and measured response to the CARP panel's decision, and I hope this Congress will move this bill, give us a chance to make sure that next year we have the opportunity to ensure that more competition is available, more choice is available to America's television consumers, so that in fact better prices, better terms, better services become the wave of the future, rather than increase prices in a situation where customers have no other choice but to choose one service provider.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. MARKEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in wholehearted support of this very important legislation, and I rise first to praise the chairman of our subcommittee, which my long observation of him has led to I think the conclusion, not only by me but by everyone who observes this whole area of telecommunications policy, that he is the leading satellite samurai warrior in Congress. He of all Members has led the battle to ensure that the satellite industry will be able to compete and to provide vigorous competition for the cable industry, the product and the pricing that revolutionizes the way in which we receive video in this country.

Now, I give him credit, but I know that the real inspiration is and always has been his father, who is the original satellite philosopher of Cajun country. He instilled a philosophy of competition into the gentleman from Louisiana which I deeply appreciated, and have been educated to appreciate, since we have about the same number of satellite dishes in my congressional district as we have hydroelectric dams. These are phenomenon that we have to have explained to us from Members in other parts of the country.

Now because of the gentleman from Louisiana, we have been able to introduce a revolution, a revolution not of 8-foot dishes that we need a zoning variance to put in our backyards.

□ 1945

Of course that is possible in Iowa or Louisiana, Oklahoma. But not in Boston. Not three-decker homes with 8-foot dishes hanging off the back. That is not going to work.

But the vision was of 18-inch dishes, dishes that could be put between the petunias out in the backyard, hanging off of the back of the three-decker. But to do that requires programming that is available, HBO, ESPN, and programming that is affordable.

Interestingly, and I am sure it comes as somewhat of a mystery to most Members of Congress and without question to most Americans, it is the Library of Congress that determines the price that people pay for this programming. Now, tell me who is going to get that answer on Jeopardy? I do not think so. I think we could put that question up almost every other week and continue to stump people.

So, because of the leadership of the gentleman from Louisiana, we bring legislation today that helps to make it possible for us to ensure that there is a pricing scheme that reflects the fair market.

Now, the Library of Congress says, ''We determine what the fair market price is.'' And, of course, the response that we make is how can they determine that? The cable marketplace is a monopoly. There is no fair market that exists in the cable universe as it exists today.

Now, we hope to reach the point in time where telephone companies and electric companies and multipoint distribution systems from other sources provide competition. But while we are waiting, we have to be very conscious of the fact that we are still devising the mechanism by which this marketplace is competitive.

The legislation which the gentleman from Louisiana (Mr. TAUZIN) and the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BOUCHER), the distinguished member of both the Committee on Commerce and the Committee on the Judiciary, bringing the wisdom of both committees to this process, helped to construct out here on the floor, I think helps us, at least over the next year, to buy the time we need in order to get an honest and fair resolution of this issue.

It is my hope that in the course of this evening, listening to my colleagues who are so wise on these issues from the hollows of southern Virginia to the bayou country in Louisiana, that we can produce a bill tonight that helps to advance the cause of a truly competitive video marketplace.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. TAUZIN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. MARKEY). I have been called a lot of things, but John Belushi or not, but I appreciate that reference. The fact of the matter, it was my friend from Massachusetts who was there by my side, shoulder to shoulder, battling for the rights of satellite consumers to have the right to programming in this Chamber in 1992 that gave birth to these small dishes. And he did so, as he said, when very few of his consumers relied on satellite reception of television. With so many in Virginia, where the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BOUCHER), my good friend, lives, and those of us in bayou country, and in Colorado, the State of the gentleman that I am about to introduce, have to rely on satellite signals live.

It is really a credit to the gentleman from Massachusetts that he learned how important it was to folks in rural countries like ours to have satellite television reception. I want to tell my colleagues that he learned that by coming to my home in Chackbay with me where my mother fed him a Cajun meal. And I have often threatened, when he was not with me on a bill, to explain to him what he ate that night and coerce him to join me in an effort. But he has always been there by our side on this issue, and I want to commend him and particularly my friend, the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BOUCHER), for his help.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Colorado (Mr. DAN SCHAEFER), another great friend. But I also want to say, Mr. Speaker, how sadly our Committee on Commerce is going to miss not only his friendship, but his service to this country and his incredibly talented and gifted service to the Committee on Commerce. The gentleman from Colorado is not just a close personal friend of all of us on both sides of the aisle, but he has been a great Congressman for his State and country, and we will miss him dearly.

(Mr. DAN SCHAEFER of Colorado asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DAN SCHAEFER of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Louisiana (Mr. TAUZIN) for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong support of H.R. 2921. This is a situation where a lot of talk has been made about cable television rate increases. Last year, the Federal Communications Commission, the FCC, in a report to Congress found that noncable television programmers, i.e., wireless cable and DBS, continue to experience substantial rates of growth.

However, the FCC report found that noncable television programmers, particularly Direct Broadcast Satellite operators, face several obstacles as they compete for television viewers. One of the most substantial obstacles is the Copyright Office-mandated increase in the copyright royalty fees that multichannel video programming operators pay to retransmit broadcast network and superstation signals to their consumers.

In September of 1997, the Copyright Arbitration Rate Panel increased satellite broadcasters' rates, as has already been said, from 6 cents per subscriber per month for broadcast network signals and 14 cents per subscriber per month for superstation signals, to 27 cents per subscriber per month for retransmission of both signals. Meanwhile, the statutory prescribed rate for cable transmission remains at 2.7 cents per subscriber per month for network signals and 9.7 cents per subscriber per month for superstation signals.

Mr. Speaker, I cosponsored this particular piece of legislation and am a strong supporter of it because it will roll back the copyright fees paid by satellite broadcasters to its past level. This will give us time to enact other legislation that will promote competition for the consumers in this country in the multichannel video programming industry and give consumers greater choices.

I thank the gentleman from Louisiana for yielding and for this excellent piece of legislation that has been brought out of our committee.

Mr. MARKEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3½ minutes to the exceptionally distinguished gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BOUCHER).

(Mr. BOUCHER asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BOUCHER. Mr. Speaker, I want to express appreciation to the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. MARKEY) for his leadership on this measure and for yielding this time to me. I also want to thank my friend, the gentleman from Louisiana (Mr. TAUZIN), the chairman of our Subcommittee on Telecommunications, Trade, and Consumer Protection, for his very fine work on this measure. He has contributed substantially to resolving a major problem, and I want to thank him very much for his efforts.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of this legislation which will remove a major hindrance that exists today to the arrival of viable competition in the multichannel video marketplace.

As Members of Congress, we are hearing complaints every day from our constituents about cable television rates, the high level of those rates at the present time, and the fact that cable television rates are going up faster than the price of most of the products and services in the American economy. In fact, in many communities, cable TV rates are even increasing faster than the price of health care services.

Many of us believe that while some measure of rate regulation may be necessary in the interim period in order to address those problems of rates, over the long-term the right answer, and the best approach to addressing the concerns of ever-increasing cable television rates, is to bring competition into that market and make sure that the consumers of multichannel video services have a choice and have viable alternatives. Many of us also see the satellite industry as being the most viable immediate competitor for the cable industry.

Unfortunately, the regulation that was issued last year by the Copyright Office in the Library of Congress places a major barrier in the way of the arrival of that competition because it imposes copyright fees for the delivery of material over satellites that are many times greater than the fees imposed upon cable systems for the delivery of exactly the same programming.

In fact, with regard to network signals, the fees will be nine times greater when imposed upon satellite deliverers of this programming than upon cable systems, and with regard to superstation signals, the difference is three times, three times more for the satellite carrier than for the cable company.

This discrepancy also disproportionately affects the rural consumers of satellite services because most of the satellite dishes are found in rural America today. And as a representative of a rural district, that fact has particular resonance with me.

The amount of this charge per year for every consumer of satellite services is about $20. That is the amount of the increase imposed by the Copyright Office, and so it is not an inconsiderable amount of money.

The legislation before us would impose a freeze on the imposition of these disproportionate and unwise fees until the end of 1999, and that gives us an opportunity here in the Congress to establish a mechanism that will assure that the same fee is imposed upon satellite systems and cable systems and other providers of multichannel video services so that we have fairness, we have balance, and through the copyright fees we do not favor one provider of these services over others.

It is a very wise approach. I commend the gentleman from Louisiana and the gentleman from Massachusetts for bringing the measure forward, and I urge its approval by the House.

Mr. TAUZIN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. BURR) from the Committee on Commerce, and a dear friend.

(Mr. BURR of North Carolina asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BURR of North Carolina. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong support of H.R. 2921. This legislation delays for 18 months CARP's decision to increase royalties paid by satellite carriers on retransmission of network broadcasts. During this period, we will have time to examine the impact that an increase will have on consumer rates and on competition.

While copyright holders certainly deserve compensation for the use of their signal, rate adjustments should not be used to create competitive disadvantages. By passing this bill, we will help ensure fairness for rural viewers who cannot receive over-the-air broadcast and live in areas not served by cable TV.

I would also like to take this opportunity to add that we could help all satellite subscribers by enacting legislation like my SALSA bill, which allows DBS providers to retransmit local TV stations to their local markets. This will provide a long-term solution to problems highlighted by recent court cases.

In closing, Mr. Speaker, let me urge my colleagues to vote for H.R. 2921, and to continue working on the other outstanding issues facing the satellite TV industry.

Mr. TAUZIN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BURR of North Carolina. I yield to the gentleman from Louisiana.

Mr. TAUZIN. Mr. Speaker, I simply wanted to commend the gentleman's statement and to pledge to him my continued efforts to see to it that we do pass local-into-local legislation in the next Congress. That will give the satellite providers a chance to offer local signals in that satellite package. That, in essence, would give much more coverage and competition to rural consumers. I will assist in every way to make that happen.

Mr. BURR of North Carolina. Mr. Speaker, reclaiming my time, like this legislation, that would protect consumers, and I look forward to additionally protecting consumers with the gentleman from Louisiana.

Mr. MARKEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, just, in conclusion, to compliment the gentleman from Louisiana (Mr. TAUZIN). This is a part of an overall strategy that we have to construct if we are, in fact, going to introduce real competition into the video marketplace.

□ 2000

The cable company remains largely a monopoly in 97 percent of our country. The telephone companies, after promising in the 1996 Telecommunications Act that they were going to, by the year 2000, provide a second wire, second video service in almost every community in America, have pulled back from that commitment. I think that in this satellite area, though, we have a real potential to provide an alternative, not just for rural, not just for the most suburban communities in America, but for urban America.

And I think that in exploring this whole question of whether or not a local television station, here in Washington Channel 4, 5, 7, 9, and 50, can be carried by a satellite and beamed right back into the homes in that viewing area holds the key to whether or not we are going to give consumers, cable consumers, disgruntled, unhappy cable consumers across this country, the ability to just disconnect their cable company and, instead, just subscribe to an 18-inch satellite dish service with the local broadcast stations as well.

I have introduced, with the leadership of the gentleman from Louisiana (Mr. TAUZIN) and the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BOUCHER), legislation that we are hoping that we will be able to move in the future that will make that possible. Because I know it is very frustrating to cable consumers across the country to know that if they disconnect their cable and move to satellite today they lose their local broadcast stations. That is frustrating to them because they really do want to disconnect in millions of homes across the country. And working with the gentleman from Louisiana to create a way in which we can get those local stations up on satellite, and to deal with this white area issue, to deal with the issue of who can receive the distant signals, is something that I think is absolutely critical.

I am pledging my continued assistance to the gentleman from Louisiana. I have been his partner now for the past 17 or 18 years on this issue, and I have now become an urban Pioneer.

Mr. TAUZIN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MARKEY. I yield to the gentleman from Louisiana.

Mr. TAUZIN. I think we could be called urban samurais.

Mr. MARKEY. Well, Mr. Speaker, reclaiming my time, I do not know what we would be called there, but I will work with the gentleman to make it possible.

Mr. TAUZIN. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will continue to yield, I just want my colleagues to know that the gentleman makes such an important statement. Competition to cable is not real until the local signals are part of the package.

We all know that the local television signals are the part of the television that is watched the most. They are the programs that people most desire in that package. And when they cannot get those local signals from the satellite distributor, they have to receive, instead, long-distance signals.

Now, the awful truth about what the librarian did was to say to satellite consumers that not only are they to be penalized by not having the local signals, but they are going to have to pay more than the cable subscriber for these long-distance signals, just to hit them one more time. That is so unfair.

Getting this straightened out in this bill is important, but my friend makes such a valid point. This is but one of the many pieces of the puzzle we have to solve in order to make sure that consumers in America have real choices in true packages that contain both the local signals and all the other wonderful cable programming that the cable industry rightfully takes great pride in having provided to America.

I pledge to my friend the same partnership we have enjoyed for many years to put all those pieces together.

Mr. MARKEY. Once again reclaiming my time, Mr. Speaker, I would say in conclusion that I am looking forward to working with the gentleman, as his urban and suburban samurai sidekick, in making it possible for us to bring this revolution to every American in our country.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. TAUZIN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2½ minutes to the gentleman from Florida (Mr. STEARNS), another distinguished member of our subcommittee.

Mr. STEARNS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the distinguished chairman for yielding me this time.

I say to my colleagues that we are here, roughly at 8 o'clock at night, and there are not a lot of people on the House floor, but what we are doing this evening is extremely important, particularly for those Americans not just in the suburbs or in the urban areas, but also in rural parts of the United States, which I represent, who have satellites. And they are out there trying to get their picture and they do not realize that this CARP, this Copyright Arbitration Royalty Panel, increased the royalty charge to the satellite companies so tremendously, so egregiously, that it almost put them out of business. So the people in the rural part of the United States, particularly in central Florida, will be impacted tremendously.

It is fundamentally important that this bill that we are here talking about tonight go forward, and the gentleman from Louisiana (Mr. TAUZIN) is doing a whale of a job to make this point. Because what really we are talking about is government increasing the cost of services and eliminating competition. And if we did not have this bill tonight, and we did not put this 18-month moratorium on, then what would happen is the government would increase this and the share of satellite would go down.

In fact, I have here a graph that in 1997 the satellite industry had about 11 percent of the market and they were paying about 22 percent of the distribution fees. One year later, after CARP, this Copyright Arbitration Royalty Panel, increases the fees tremendously, the satellite share is now at 12 percent. Only increased 1 percent, yet their amount of distribution fees went up to 39 percent.

So I mean there is a clear example of government stepping in, increasing the cost, with the help and approval of the Librarian of Congress, as the gentleman mentioned, and so we are going to knock out all competition for satellite. Simply tripling the royalty fees is unfair. It was no gradual matter. It just came in in a whoosh, tripled these royalty fees, and, in the end, people in the rural part of the United States will not be able to afford satellites because the satellite companies will pass these charges on.

So Congress basically has to ensure that the satellite services have a financial foothold in order to make a lasting competitive challenge. Without this bill, without the efforts of the chairman we would not have that opportunity tonight.

We will return next year, as the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. MARKEY) mentioned, and pass legislation to allow the satellite customer to get local-to-local service so they can have their local channels beamed directly to their homes. But I am hoping tonight that we can move forward and that the Senate, by unanimous consent, will pass this tomorrow. There is no reason not to. There is no controversy involved here. We should get this passed so that the competition in the satellite industry will increase, and I again commend the chairman for his efforts.

Mr. TAUZIN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. MARKEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TAUZIN. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. MARKEY. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman very much for yielding to me.

In the course of the debate I did not properly mention the work that the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. JOHN DINGELL), on our side, and the work also done by the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. TOM BLILEY), on the majority side, to help to formulate this policy, because it has been long in the making. We still have much more work to do, but we could not have done it without their able work, as well as the work of our staffers. We have David Schooler and Andy Levin and Colin Crowell on my staff; and Justin Lilley and Whitney Fox, it is like an all-time all-star team on the gentleman's side, that have worked together to make these policies come to pass.

I just wanted to publicly recognize them for all the excellent work which they have done.

Mr. TAUZIN. Mr. Speaker, reclaiming my time, I thank the gentleman.

Let me indeed indicate that this is but one step. Our staff and our committee, our chairman and our ranking member, are indeed to be commended for taking us down the right path. We have much work to do. I want to pledge to my colleagues as we complete work on this bill that they will hear and see from the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. MARKEY) and I again as we approach the date of March next year when cable is set to be deregulated.

We will be presenting, hopefully, for this House to consider, various options on how to make sure competition is really available for the American consumer, who, in many parts of America, is given one choice when it comes to cable, take it or leave it. That is not a good American choice. In a good American marketplace it means various choices, good prices, better service. That is the kind of marketplace the Committee on Commerce is committed to developing for the television consumers of America, and we will not stop until that is done.

Mr. Speaker, would the Chair indicate how much time we have remaining?

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. GUTKNECHT). The gentleman from Louisiana (Mr. TAUZIN) has 4 minutes remaining; the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. MARKEY) has yielded his time back.

Mr. TAUZIN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from New Mexico (Mrs. WILSON), who is a new member of our committee and doing a great job.

Mrs. WILSON. Mr. Speaker, I rise to support this bill. It is something of an irony that I do, since at my house we do not have cable, we do not have a satellite dish, and we barely have a television. But I like this bill because it seems to delay things until folks can sort out exactly what is fair and what is equitable in order to enhance competition, which is the American way.

I commend my colleague for bringing this forward and the chairman of the committee for bringing it forward to increase competition and to make sure that there is a level playing field for all of those who provide services to our homes.

Mr. TAUZIN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. MARKEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TAUZIN. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. MARKEY. Mr. Speaker, when I was going down the litany of saints who helped to make the satellite policy possible, I did forget Hugh Halpern and I forgot to mention Mike O'Rielly. And I think in order for us to have a complete and definitive list of those who labored in the vineyards for this competition in the video marketplace, that they all be listed at this time, and I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. TAUZIN. Reclaiming my time, Mr. Speaker, the gentleman is indeed gracious in remembering all those who helped us so diligently day and night to make this bill come true, and we deeply appreciate that.

Let me say in conclusion that this bill is but one step. I want to make a point that I think all Members of Congress should be aware of, and that is there is nothing in our policy that in any way denigrates from the great work that cable has done in bringing new programming, in bringing extensive and delightful varieties of programming to America. Indeed, we are very grateful for that.

We are simply saying in this policy that for those who decide to receive that programming on a satellite transmission rather than over a cable, or over the air, as in New Orleans, or in Atlanta in a terrestrial air distribution system, those consumers are entitled to equal treatment. We should not be putting copyright fees that are three times and nine times as high on a consumer simply because they choose to receive that wonderful programming one way or another.

Secondly, we are saying that, in the end, this Congress will be faced with the choice of either reregulating cable, because it does not have a competitor, or we will have successfully provided for Americans the chance to regulate that marketplace by themselves deciding which of the methods of transmission they prefer, whether satellite, terrestrial wireless, or cable, or several cable systems in their community. To me, I hope to all of us, the best solution is to give Americans those choices.

The gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. MARKEY) and our chairman, the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BLILEY), and our ranking member, the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. DINGELL), are all committed to making sure that in the end America decides the right way to have more choices and less regulation in this important marketplace.

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of H.R. 2921.

It is important to note that the bill we are considering today is a short-term fix to a greater problem. The greater problem is how do we encourage more competition to cable television so consumers can get more choices and not be held capitive to ever-increasing rates? The answer to that question is not simple, and it is one the Commerce Committee continues to grapple with. What is clear, however, is that emerging alternatives to cable, like satellite television, should not be put at a competitive disadvantage to incumbent monopolies. That problem is one that we are attempting to fix, in part, today.

Both cable and satellite television operators are required to pay copyrights royalties fees for the right to carry distant broadcast signals at ''superstations.'' Last year, a ruling by the Librarian of Congress required satellite television operators to pay almost three times the amount of money that cable operators pay—for the same programming. Obviously this is unfair, and flies in the face of Congressional policy to make sure that similar telecommunciations services are subject to similar rules and regulations.

This bill would freeze the copyright rates at preexisting levels to that parity continues between these competitors. Of course, the hard question remains: at what level should the rates be set for both cable and satellite television operators when the freeze mandated by this bill expries next December? The answer to that question must be evaluated in the context of several other important issues, such as whether satellite operators should be allowed to transmit local broadcast stations and, if so, whether traditional ''must carry'' rules should apply.

If we are to achieve the goal of the Telecommunications Act to open up all markets to competition, and free consumers from the tether of cable television monopolies in the process, we must address these issues comprehensively and quickly.

I thank Chairman BLILEY and Subcommittee Chairman TAUZIN for their leadership on the rate freeze issue before us today, and look forward to working with them to resolve these larger competitive concerns next year.

Mr. TAUZIN. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Louisiana (Mr. TAUZIN) that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 2921, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill, as amended, was passed.

The title of the bill was amended so as to read: ''A bill to promote the competitive viability of direct-to-home satellite television service.''.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

CORPORAL HAROLD GOMEZ POST OFFICE

Mr. MCHUGH. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 4616) to designate the United States Post Office located at 3813 Main Street in East Chicago, Indiana, as the ''Corporal Harold Gomez Post Office''.

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 4616

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. DESIGNATION.

The United States Post Office located at 3813 Main Street in East Chicago, Indiana, shall be known and designated as the ''Corporal Harold Gomez Post Office''.

SEC. 2. REFERENCES.

Any reference in a law, map, regulation, document, paper, or other record of the United States to the post office referred to in section 1 shall be deemed to be a reference to the ''Corporal Harold Gomez Post Office''.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from New York (Mr. MCHUGH) and the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. DAVIS) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from New York (Mr. MCHUGH).

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. MCHUGH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks on H.R. 4616.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. MCHUGH. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, we have before us, first in this bill and then in another similar proposal that I know will follow, really two distinct stories, two stories of two fine individuals but nevertheless two who share a great deal. They share, it seems to me, the history of contributions and the history of sacrifices and helping to make this country the great place that it is.

This first bill has been introduced by our distinguished colleague from Indiana (Mr. VISCLOSKY), and was introduced on August 23d of this year.

This legislation has the support of each member of the House delegation from the State of Indiana which is pursuant to the Committee on Government Reform and Oversight rules, and it designates the United States Post Office located at 3813 Main Street in East Chicago, Indiana, as the Corporal Harold Gomez Post Office.

Mr. Gomez was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfredo Gomez. He was born in 1946 in East Chicago, Indiana. After graduating from high school, he worked for a summer at Inland Steel Company and then, like many young men and young women of his age, he enlisted in the Marine Corps in 1965. In March of the following year, 1966, he was sent to Vietnam which followed his basic infantry training in San Diego, California.

Corporal Gomez was a fire team leader in a rife company of the Third Marine Division when in 1967 he was killed by a land mine explosion in South Vietnam. A look, however brief, at the numerous awards and medals and recognition that this fine young man received during his military career shows, I think, what an extraordinary individual he was: The Purple Heart, the Combat Action Ribbon, the Presidential Unit Citation, the National Defense Service Medal, the Vietnam Service Medal, the RVN Military Merit Medal and on and on and on. Truly, Mr. Speaker, this effort to memorialize the contributions and the sacrifices of this great individual I think is a very worth one and certainly one that I think embodies the kind of positive effort that we have a history of in this House of naming these very important Federal facilities after such deserving individuals.

I know that the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. DAVIS) and perhaps others would like to make comments as well.

At this time I would with a word of urging of support of fellow Members of this House, Mr. Speaker, reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. DAVIS of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume. I join the gentleman from New York (Mr. MCHUGH) in bringing to the House floor H.R. 4616, legislation naming the United States Post Office located at 3813 Main Street in East Chicago, Indiana, as the Corporal Harold Gomez Post Office Building. Corporal Gomez, as we have already heard, a Vietnam veteran, was a fire team leader in a rifle company of the Third Marine Corps during the Vietnam War. He was the recipient of the Silver Star Medal for his leadership and bravery during his service, earning recognition for his actions during the February 21, 1967 battle in which he died.

Corporal Gomez was the first citizen of northwest Indiana to die in the Vietnam War. I commend the Indiana delegation for seeking to honor such a man, one who would give his life in the service of his country.

Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. VISCLOSKY) the sponsor of this measure who will make some comments.

Mr. VISCLOSKY. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the gentleman yielding and I would first want to thank the chair of the committee for the expeditious, speed-of-light consideration of this legislation that literally was introduced a month and a half ago as well as thanking my colleague from Illinois for ensuring that it was heard before Congress adjourned. I also would be remiss if I did not thank the members of the Indiana delegation who joined me in this effort.

Mr. Speaker, I do rise to urge my colleagues to support this legislation to rename a post office in East Chicago, Indiana in honor of Lance Corporal Harold Gomez. Corporal Gomez was the first resident of East Chicago to die during the Vietnam War and his community would like to honor him in this special way.

Corporal Gomez was born in East Chicago in 1946. After working briefly at Inland Steel Company, he enlisted in the U.S. Marine Corps and was sent to Vietnam in 1966. Corporal Gomez quickly became a fire team leader in a rifle company of the Third Marine Corps in Vietnam. He was awarded the Silver Star Medal posthumously for valiant leadership and bravery during his service, earning particular praise for his actions during the February 21, 1967 battle in which he died. Corporal Gomez's military awards also include the Purple Heart Medal, Combat Action Ribbon, Presidential Unit Citation, National Defense Service Medal, Vietnam Campaign Medal, and the Rifle Sharpshooters Badge.

In Harold Gomez's short life, he touched many lives and was admired by both friends and colleagues. I am deeply honored to offer this legislation to honor a true hero of northwest Indiana and our country. Corporal Gomez distinguished himself in combat and is a source of inspiration to many citizens of East Chicago and the rest of the northwest Indiana community. He is worthy of this honor.

On behalf of northwest Indiana's many veterans, I am proud to support this legislation to name an East Chicago post office in honor of Corporal Harold Gomez.

Mr. DAVIS of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. MCHUGH. Mr. Speaker, with a final urging of support for the gentleman from Indiana in this very worthy measure and thanking the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. DAVIS) and his staff for their efforts and cooperation, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. GUTKNECHT). The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from New York (Mr. MCHUGH) that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 4616.

The question was taken.

Mr. MCHUGH. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 5 of rule I and the Chair's prior announcement, further proceedings on this motion will be postponed.

MERVYN DYMALLY POST OFFICE BUILDING

Mr. MCHUGH. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 2348) to redesignate the Federal building located at 701 South Santa Fe Avenue in Compton, California, and known as the Compton Main Post Office, as the ''Mervyn Dymally Post Office Building''.

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 2348

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. REDESIGNATION.

The Federal building located at 701 South Santa Fe Avenue in Compton, California, and known as the Compton Main Post Office, shall be known and designated as the ''Mervyn Dymally Post Office Building''.

SEC. 2. REFERENCES.

Any reference in a law, map, regulation, document, paper, or other record of the United States to the Federal building referred to in section 1 shall be deemed to be a reference to the ''Mervyn Dymally Post Office Building''.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from New York (Mr. MCHUGH) and the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. DAVIS) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from New York (Mr. MCHUGH).

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. MCHUGH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on this measure.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. MCHUGH. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

As I alluded to in my opening remarks on the previous bill, we indeed have here a very different but equally important story about the expansion and about the growth of this great country and its path to become the longest-lived democracy in the history of the world.

This bill, Mr. Speaker, H.R. 2348, was introduced by our distinguished colleague the gentlewoman from California (Ms. MILLENDER-MCDONALD) on July 31, 1997. There have been 86 Members who cosponsored this legislation which even when you consider that 51 are as required under House committee rules from the State of California, it is an extraordinary number to find on this kind of proposal. I think that fact in and of itself reflects very highly both on the sponsor who has made the great effort to bring together so many in support of this measure but also obviously is a statement on the achievements and the worthiness of the recipient.

This legislation designates the Federal building located at 701 South Santa Fe Avenue in Compton, California, presently known as the Compton Main Post Office, as the Mervyn Dymally Post Office Building. Like so many Americans before him, Mervyn Dymally was born not directly in the United States but rather in Cedros, Trinidad, British West Indies. After he attended government school there and graduating from secondary school in San Fernando, Trinidad, he came to the United States like so many before him to study at the Lincoln University in Jefferson City, Missouri. After completing his education, including earning his doctorate in 1969 from United States International University, he then began a career of distinguished public service. He became a California State Assemblyman from 1963 to 1966, then became a California State Senator from 1967 to 1975, and then Lieutenant Governor of the great State of California from 1975 to 1979.

To those in this body, though, he is probably best remembered as a Member of the 97th Congress where he served for five succeeding terms. He was a member indeed of the then Committee on Post Office and Civil Service. Presently our former colleague resides in Los Angeles.

As I said, Mr. Speaker, this is a story of America. It is a story of what makes this country great. In this nominee and in this gentleman, I think we have an extraordinarily worthy individual, one again that I commend our colleague from California for bringing to our attention and thank her and the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. DAVIS) and the others on the subcommittee for their efforts in bringing this to the floor today.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. DAVIS of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I am proud to join the gentleman from New York (Mr. MCHUGH) in bringing to the House floor H.R. 2348, legislation naming the United States Post Office located at 701 South Santa Fe Avenue in Compton, California, as the Mervyn Dymally Post Office Building.

A Member of Congress from 1980 until his retirement in 1992, Congressman Mervyn Dymally represented the 31st Congressional District with both distinction and honor. During his time in Congress, he served on the House Foreign Affairs Committee, chairing the Subcommittee on International Operations, the Post Office and Civil Service Committee, and the District of Columbia Committee. He also served as Chair of the Congressional Black Caucus. Congressman Dymally sponsored legislation advocating the causes of many human rights groups and devoted particular attention to United States policies toward nations in Africa and the Caribbean. A few days ago, I had the pleasure of meeting his son, who is following in his footsteps as a public servant as a member of a local commission.

Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as she may consume to the sponsor of this legislation, the former mayor of the City of Compton, California, the honorable Congresswoman from California (Ms. MILLENDER-MCDONALD).

Ms. MILLENDER-MCDONALD. Mr. Speaker, first let me thank the great gentleman from Illinois for his kind words and for yielding time to me. I would like to thank the chairman for his sensitivity in the support of the bill and for the kind words that he has given and extended to the recipient.

Mr. Speaker, today I rise to pay tribute to my dear friend, former Congressman Mervyn Malcolm Dymally and redesignate the Post Office located at 701 South Santa Fe Avenue in Compton, California, currently known as the Compton Main Post Office, to the Mervyn Dymally Post Office Building.

Jet Magazine, a prominent African-American publication, once wrote, ''Few black elected officials were more aggressive, uncompromising and daring than representative Mervyn Dymally.''

Mervyn Dymally was elected to the United States House of Representatives in 1981 as the body's first foreign born member. Mervyn came to this country in 1945 from Cedros, Trinidad, British West Indies as a 19-year-old student to attend Lincoln University in Jefferson City, Missouri and to study journalism. After attending Lincoln University, Dymally traveled to California to attend Chapman College in Los Angeles before transferring to California State University, Los Angeles where he graduated in 1954 with a bachelor of arts in education. After graduation, Mervyn taught educationally handicapped children in the Los Angeles Unified School District.

In addition to a bachelor's degree, Dymally also holds a master's in government from California State University, Sacramento and a Ph.D. in human behavior from the United States International University. Mervyn is also a distinguished member of the Kappa Alpha Psi Fraternity and a member of the Phi Kappa Phi National Honor Scholastic Society.

Mervyn's political career began in 1960 when he worked as a field coordinator for then presidential candidate John F. Kennedy.

☐ 2030

Building upon his success in the Kennedy campaign, Dymally was elected to the California State Assembly in 1963 and then to the State Senate in 1967 where he served for 8 years. As a State Senator, Dymally chaired the committees on social welfare and veterans affairs, elections and reapportionment, and a select committee on medical education and health. In 1975, he was elected Lieutenant Governor of the State of California and was the State's first and highest-ranking African American elected official to have been voted statewide in an election.

On January 3, 1981, following a diverse career in education and government, Mervyn Dymally was sworn in as a Member of the 97th Congress, representing California's 31st District, where he served his constituents for six terms.

Congressman Dymally served on the House Committee on Foreign Affairs where he was the Chair of the Subcommittee on International Operations. Dymally also became the only other black to chair the Subcommittee on Africa, succeeding former Detroit Representative Charles Diggs who held the post 20 years earlier than that. In his first year he traveled to 20 African countries. He launched the drive to increase the number of minority business investments on the continent and paid particular attention to the United States policies toward assistance levels to African and the Caribbean nations. In addition to his position on the Foreign Affairs Committee, Mervyn also served on the Post Office and Civil Service Committee and the Committee on the District of Columbia, chairing its Subcommittee on Judiciary and Education. While in Congress, Dymally sponsored legislation advocating several human rights issues. One of his crowning achievements was the passage of legislation authorizing relief, rehabilitation and reconstruction in war-torn Liberia.

When Mervyn retired in 1992, he was praised for leadership in raising the Congress' awareness of the suffering and misery in Africa and his ability to devise new initiatives for remedies.

Since his retirement from Congress Mervyn was quoted as saying, ''In retirement I am busier now than ever.'' Indeed he is. Since leaving Congress, Mr. Speaker, he has traveled extensively to Africa and to the Caribbean. His duties as President of the Grace Home for Waiting Children and Chairman of the Caribbean Action Lobby keep the time on his schedule at a premium.

Former Congressman Dymally is also a distinguished professor at the Central State University in Ohio and is also the President of the Dymally International Group, a consulting and financial advisory firm.

If these activities were not enough to keep him busy, former Congressman Dymally serves as Honorary Counsel to the Republic of Benin, West Africa, and Vice President of the Pacific Century Institute.

At every step in his career Mervyn has made his family proud. He has demonstrated to us what hard work and dedication to one's belief can accomplish. He dedicated his life to serving the people of the State of California and was the pride of his native Trinidad.

In an age of 30-second sound bites, Mervyn rarely held press conferences and often steered clear of glitzy words. He was a diligent and capable advocate for the needs of his constituents and will also be known as an industrious, savvy politician. Designating the post office located in Compton, California, as the Mervyn Dymally Post Office Building is a honor befitting his service to his community and to the State of California.

I would like to thank his wife, Alice, his children, Mark and Lynn Dymally, and his grandchildren, Maya, Christian and Cameron, for sharing him with us. I would also like to thank the members of the California delegation and other members for joining me in cosponsoring this legislation and paying tribute to one of California's political giants and one of the most distinguished statesmen I have ever known and had the privilege of knowing, the gentleman of California, Congressman Mervyn Dymally.

Mr. DAVIS of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

We have no further speakers, and so I commend once again the chairman of this subcommittee for the outstanding work that he and the ranking member, the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. FATTAH), did. It has been a pleasure working with them and other members of the committee throughout this past session, and we look forward to another great time beginning in January.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. MCHUGH. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, let me return the fine and very gracious compliment of the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. DAVIS). I, too, thoroughly enjoyed working with him and with his colleagues on the minority side, but also I think it really speaks well of our colleagues on both sides. It has been a pleasure, and, with the vagaries of democracy aside, I am looking forward perhaps to working with him in the future.

So with that, Mr. Speaker, and a final word of praise to the gentlewoman from California who sponsored this very worthy measure, I would urge our colleagues to support this bill.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from New York (Mr. MCHUGH) that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 2348.

The question was taken.

Ms. MILLENDER-MCDONALD. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. GUTKNECHT). Pursuant to clause 5 of rule I and the Chair's prior announcement, further proceedings on this motion will be postponed.
