WASHINGTON, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 28, 1999

No. 149

House of Representatives

The House met at 10 a.m.

The Reverend Luke E. Torian, First Mount Zion Baptist Church, Dumfries, Virginia, offered the following prayer:

God of our Nation and savior of the world, I thank Thee that Thou has blest our land. I thank Thee for the leaders You have raised up to guide our republic. In a climate of natural disaster and the desire for harmony among the citizenry, I pray that You will grant wisdom, courage, and strength to those of this elected body. Realizing the intent of this House is to honor our tradition, maintain our freedom, and grow our Nation's prosperity, may every Member undertake each task with soundmindedness, enlightenment, and commitment. May this body be highly favored by You and sustained by Your grace and mercy. Amen.

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate by Mr. Lundregan, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed with an amendment in which the concurrence of the House is requested, a bill of the House of the following title:

H.R. 2112. An act to amend title 28, United States Code, to allow a judge to whom a case is transferred to retain jurisdiction over certain multidistrict litigation cases for trial, and to provide for Federal jurisdiction of certain multiparty, multiforum civil actions.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Virginia (Mr. DAVIS) will be recognized for 1 minute and then there will be 15 one-minutes on each side.

WELCOME TO THE REVEREND LUKE E. TORIAN

(Mr. DAVIS of Virginia asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DAVIS of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I am honored to welcome our guest chaplain and my constituent, the Reverend Dr. Luke Torian, to the House of Representatives this morning.

Dr. Torian is the inspirational pastor of the First Mount Zion Baptist Church in Dumfries, Virginia, located in Prince William County in my district.

I have had the great pleasure of hearing this man of God deliver dynamic messages on more than one occasion at his church. He has a Bachelor's Degree from Winston-Salem State University, North Carolina, a Master's from Virginia Union University and a Doctorate from Howard University in Washington, D.C.

In the past 20 years, as a dutiful shepherd in the ministry of his community, his service includes Mount Bethel Baptist Church, Roxboro, North Carolina; Gilfield Baptist Church in Charles City, Virginia, and present location, First Mount Zion Baptist Church in Dumfries, Virginia. He is married to the former Clarice Jones of Charlottesville, Virginia, and they are the proud parents of a 9-year-old daughter, Constance.

No stranger to Capitol Hill, he was a congressional staffer in the mid-1980s. On behalf of the entire House of Representatives, I ask my colleagues to join me in thanking Doctor Luke Torian for starting our legislative day in prayer with an inspirational message.

REPUBLICANS ARE PROTECTING SOCIAL SECURITY

(Mr. GIBBONS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GIBBONS. Mr. Speaker, for 30 years, the liberal Washington big spenders have mortgaged America's future. For 30 years they have raided Social Security to pay for more and bigger government programs. The Washington big spenders have put big government programs ahead of retirement security for hardworking Americans. Thankfully this Republican-led Congress has changed that. We have put the Social Security surplus in a lockbox and we are not spending a dime of it.

I would ask our Democratic leadership colleagues on the other side to once and for all stop the raid on Social Security, stop throwing away taxpayers money on wasteful government programs. This country must move forward with a responsible and balanced fiscal budget.

Republicans are holding a Federal Government spring cleaning today. We are getting rid of the unnecessary and redundant programs, we are peeling back the layers of bureaucracy and we are throwing out the President's request to raise taxes and spend more money on wasteful government programs. To the Democratic leadership, I ask for the sake of America's future that you join with Republicans and stop the raid on Social Security and protect our fiscal household.

REGARDING TRAGEDY IN ARMENIA

(Mr. McNULTY asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. McNULTY. Mr. Speaker, our hearts go out today to the families of Prime Minister Sarkisian, Speaker Demirchian and all of those who lost their lives yesterday in the violent attack in Yerevan. And we join with freedom-loving peoples throughout the world in expressing solidarity with President Kocharian and the Armenian people as they continue to promote democracy in their great country.

Mr. Speaker, if the forces of violence think they are going to reverse what happened in September of 1991, they are sadly mistaken. I was in Armenia on its independence day. I watched in awe as 95 percent of all the people over the age of 18 went out and voted. I watched them stand in line for hours to have that opportunity which had been denied to them for so long. Their spirit is strong. They shall not be deterred. The dream shall never die.

Ketse azat ankakh hayastan. Long live free and independent Armenia.

REPUBLICANS WILL NOT STEAL FROM SOCIAL SECURITY

(Mr. GARY MILLER of California asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GARY MILLER of California. Mr. Speaker, the Democrat leaders' strategy seems to be to obstruct and delay the budget process. According to Monday's Roll Call newspaper article, Democrat Leader GEPHARDT is telling Members not to support appropriations bills even if they are the product of bipartisan negotiations.

Why would the gentleman from Missouri oppose Democrats and Republicans working together to finish the people's business? What benefit is there in this strategy? Who does the gentleman from Missouri represent when he says do not work with Republicans, do not pass appropriations bills, do not get anything done? This is not what the constituents of my district and the American people want. They want us to pass a balanced budget without raiding Social Security.

Mr. GEPHARDT, please abandon the strategy of gridlock and delay and instead join us in finishing a budget that does not steal from Social Security.

MESSAGE ON REPUBLICAN BUDGET BILL

(Mr. MENENDEZ asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. MENENDEZ. Mr. Speaker, on the eve of Halloween, Republicans have many tricks to play on the American people but no treats, and it starts with today's Labor-HHS vote. This bill does not extend the life of Social Security even by one single day. In fact, Republicans, that is why the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. GEPHARDT) does not want to support some of these bills because you have already spent $17 billion of Social Security surplus through your appropriation process.

This bill fails to provide one penny for a Medicare prescription drug benefit, and this bill only does things that ultimately hurt every American family in some real way. Just like your trillion-dollar tax cut would have saddled our children with a huge debt without extending the life of Social Security and Medicare or making investments in education. And the final trick included in this bill is a 1 percent across-the-board cut that deals a blow to those struggling with diabetes when we cut the National Institutes of Health or to the child in my district walking into an overcrowded classroom.

Let us give the American people a real treat by voting against this bill, a bill that does nothing for Social Security, nothing for Medicare and hurts every American family.

IBERO-AMERICAN SUMMIT

(Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. Mr. Speaker, our allies in the hemisphere are raising their voices on behalf of freedom and democracy on the enslaved island of Cuba. The Presidents of El Salvador, Nicaragua, Argentina, Chile, and Costa Rica have announced that they will not be attending the Ibero-American summit to be held this month in Cuba. They do not want to legitimize the subjugation of the Cuban people any longer.

In his announcement, in fact, President Rodriguez of Costa Rica emphasized that "the Ibero-American summit is an act of profound political meaning in which the consolidation of the democracy and political development of our countries should always be promoted together with the full respect of human rights." He referred to his September letter to Castro where he stated that far from becoming better, the situation of human rights and democracy has actually worsened in recent months in Cuba.

May the other democratic leaders invited to the summit also find the courage to acknowledge the truth and support the Cuban people and not their oppressor.

DEMOCRATIC PLAN PROTECTS SOCIAL SECURITY

(Mr. CARDIN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. CARDIN. Mr. Speaker, my constituents are perplexed. At the beginning of this session both Democrats and Republicans talked about how important it was to protect Social Security. Now we have the last appropriation bill being considered today and the Republican record is in. The Republican partisan budget uses gimmicks such as a 13th month and directed scorekeeping to spend Social Security money, even though they would say that they are not. They propose large tax cuts that clearly jeopardize our ability to meet our obligations under Social Security, and at the end of the day they have not extended the life of Social Security even one day.

The President has submitted a plan that Democrats support that would extend the Social Security system by at least 16 years. If we all agree that Social Security is so important, that it is keeping our seniors out of poverty and giving them a decent opportunity within our community, then why are we not working in a bipartisan way to get a realistic budget that will really protect Social Security?

REPUBLICAN PLAN PROTECTS SOCIAL SECURITY

(Mr. PITTS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. PITTS. Mr. Speaker, is there a single American who believes that government waste, fraud and abuse does not really exist? I do not think so. Examples of misuse of the taxpayers' hard-earned money are far too plentiful. Just ask the 26,000 dead people who received food stamps in a single year. Or ask the folks in Russia who got to enjoy Ben & Jerry's ice cream at the expense of the American taxpayer. Or ask the defense contractor who charged the Pentagon $714 for an electric bell that I could have bought at Lowe's hardware for $46. Mr. Speaker, I could go on, but my point is simple. The Republican plan to take one cent, this is one penny, one cent of every dollar of the Federal bureaucracy is not only responsible, it is necessary.

I find these misuses of taxpayer money outrageous. What makes them more outrageous is the Federal Government has been raiding Social Security for 30 years to pay for this kind of thing. One penny, 1 percent. Believe me, there is at least that much fat in every bureaucracy that can be eliminated. It is minimal, it is fair, it is the right direction.

OPPOSE SEVERE REPUBLICAN CUTS TO OUR NATION'S DOMESTIC PROGRAMS

(Ms. SANCHEZ asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Ms. SANCHEZ. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to call attention to the actions of the House. We are engaged in a very serious matter this week as we near a budget reconciliation. The Republican leadership is urging that we make severe cuts to our Nation's domestic programs, and, as my colleagues know, this is just after the last 4 or 5 months when they said there was so much money there they could return $800 billion. But today they are telling us not only can they not do that, but they have got to cut the funding programs of the national government.

Mr. Speaker, as the daughter of a school teacher and a member of the House Committee on Education and the Workforce, I am particularly concerned that education will be severely affected. The majority spending bill would cut the national class size reduction program, after-school care, reading and math programs, Head Start and teacher training programs; but the damage would extend beyond the classroom. It would hit senior citizens, American working families, family caregivers, even the survivors of Hurricane Floyd.

I will oppose the HHS bill today, and I hope the rest of my colleagues will also.

THE REPUBLICAN CONGRESS SAYS STOP THE RAID

(Mr. BALLENGER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BALLENGER. Mr. Speaker, according to the most recent government audit, Federal agencies were unable to account for over 800 billion in Federal assets. My colleagues heard me right, $800 billion. That would have to be a pretty big lost and found for all of that missing stuff, but in reality there is no Federal lost and found; and I am betting all that property is lost for good, Mr. Speaker.

That is a disgrace, and what makes it even worse and even more disgraceful is that $800 billion, that could have been used to strengthen Social Security. While the Federal Government was losing all that property, it was raiding the Social Security Trust Fund to keep growing the size of government without increase in the accountability for how the taxpayers' money was spent.

Mr. Speaker, the Republican Congress is telling the President and the Democrat leadership that it is time to stop the raid, and we are asking them to join us in setting aside one penny of every Federal dollar to strengthen Social Security for the American people. It is our plan, it is fair, and it is responsible, and it is the right thing to do.

FAILURE OF THE WAR ON DRUGS DUE TO WIDE OPEN BORDERS

(Mr. TRAFICANT asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Speaker, everybody in America is confused. After spending billions and billions of dollars on this War on Drugs, they cannot figure out why it has failed. Beam me up, Mr. Speaker. It does not take a rocket scientist to figure this out.

Water runs downhill, and drugs pour across our borders. Our borders are wide open. Heroin and cocaine are stone-cold imports, and heroin and cocaine flood across our borders.

I think it is time to do something about our borders, and our streets and our kids that are strung out, 12-year-olds in New York and Philadelphia on heroin.

I yield back, Mr. Speaker, the stupidity of Congress in dealing with the problem of narcotics.

SOCIAL SECURITY LOCKBOX HELD HOSTAGE

(Mr. HERGER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. HERGER. Mr. Speaker, today is Day 154 of the Social Security lockbox held hostage by Senate Democrats. 154 days ago House Republicans and Democrats joined together to pass a bill I authored, H.R. 1259, the Social Security and Medicare Safe Deposit Box of 1999, by an overwhelming 416 to 12 vote. The House of Representatives has made a commitment to not spend one penny of the Social Security Trust Fund on unrelated programs. Senate Republicans have attempted to bring this lockbox to the Senate floor seven times, and on seven occasions the measure was blocked from even being considered by a straight party-line vote.

Mr. Speaker, American seniors deserve more from Senate Democrats. They deserve a lockbox for their Social Security dollars.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SHAW). The Chair cautions that Members should avoid references to the other body.

WHAT HAVE THE REPUBLICANS DONE?

(Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California. Mr. Speaker, today the Republican-controlled House considers the last of the appropriations bills a month late, no budget, no reconciliation. But what have they done?

They have failed to extend the life of Social Security by even a single day. In fact, they have spent $17 billion out of the Social Security Trust Fund. They have failed to provide for a fix of the Medicare system to cover our elderly citizens. In fact, they failed to even consider a prescription drug benefit for our elderly citizens. Their budget, while failing to do this, hurts American families in every way. Their budget today will cut money from education.

Mr. Speaker, think of the disappointment of parents who thought they were going to be able to send their children to a smaller class size so their children would have a better opportunity at learning to read, at learning to deal with mathematics. No, those parents will not have that opportunity, and yet all of the research tells us that if their children were able to have lower class sizes, they would have a better opportunity to learn.

But the Republicans do not address that, they do not address Social Security, and they harm Medicare.

CONFUSION

(Mr. OSE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. OSE. Mr. Speaker, I have in my hand the budget submitted by the President of the United States in his State of the Union, and on page 366 it details the various outlays, receipts and surplus for the upcoming fiscal year and the ensuing four. However I also have in my hand the President's Social Security plan; and, lo and behold, the President's Social Security plan, delivered to the House with much ado and great fanfare, assumes a $50 billion reduction in discretionary spending for Fiscal Year 2000 as the predicate clause for this savings he is going to use to save Social Security.

Fifty billion dollars. No suggestion of offsets. No suggestions of reality. No input from the Congress. Just a blanket $50 billion reduction in discretionary spending.

I am confused, and apparently the President is, too.

A 1-PERCENT CUT IN THE BUDGET DOES NOT CUT WASTE

(Mr. GREEN of Texas asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GREEN of Texas. Mr. Speaker, the Social Security program is one of our most successful domestic programs ever created. It guarantees retirement security benefits for millions of Americans, and yet what we are seeing now today as the Republican majority's budget process uses 17 billion in Social Security Trust Fund, this budget process did nothing for Social Security, did nothing for Medicare and hurts every family. The bill does not extend Social Security 1 day, 1 day, and it provides not one penny for a prescription benefit for Medicare recipients. The only thing it does do is it hurts every American family, but they did want to provide an irresponsible tax cut that somehow they forgot about the last few days.

A 1-percent cut in the budget does not cut waste. Ninety-nine percent spending for a carrier that the Navy does not want and does not need is still 99 percent waste. What they are doing though is saying: well, we are not going to cut our pork; we are going to cut everybody. But let me tell my colleagues that carrier is still going to be built, and it is still going to be waste.

The budget gimmick of putting off the research for medical with the NIH is atrocious. What they are doing is playing with people's lives that have cancer and diabetes, just to name a few.

HOW REPUBLICANS VOTED IN 1935

(Mr. STEARNS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. STEARNS. Mr. Speaker, how many times have you heard it from that side of the aisle, the Democrats, that Republicans voted against creation of the Social Security program back in 1935? That is flat wrong. If ever a vote has been mischaracterized, this is it. Here are the facts, and many of our colleagues might be surprised to know that 79 percent of the 95 Republicans who voted in the House voted for this important program; and in the Senate, 75 percent of the 20 Republicans who voted cast their vote in support of this legislation. What is even more interesting about this vote is that over a dozen Democrats voted against this measure. Following this line of reasoning, it could be said that Democrats did not support the Social Security Act when this was approved in 1935.

The truth is that both Republicans and Democrats voted to enact this legislation to establish this important program. Let the record speak for itself.

CUT WASTE, NOT PROGRAMS

(Mr. WISE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. WISE. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to oppose this irresponsible Republican brought-to-the-floor budget bill. This bill does not extend the life of Social Security by 1 day. It does nothing to deal with the problem of high prescription drug prices, does not add one penny for Medicare prescription drug benefit. It does, though, hurt West Virginia families in very real ways.

People talk about cutting waste, a 1 percent cut across the board they say will cut waste. Well, let us find the waste and cut that, but let us not go after the very programs that West Virginia families depend upon. For instance, the Head Start mother who is going to find that her child will not be able to go to Head Start. Or what about the family who is concerned about the war on crime and finds out that 110 FBI agents will have to be cut under this? What about the veteran that came up to me at the Black Walnut Festival concerned about veterans health care and finds out the real cuts in veterans health care in this budget bill? And what about the hundreds of students in high poverty areas that are not going to qualify for the educational assistance programs they have been receiving?

Bad bill, Mr. Speaker. Vote it down.

EMPOWER HEALTH CARE CONSUMERS

(Mr. ROYCE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. ROYCE. Mr. Speaker, currently employers and employees can set aside pre-tax money that can be used for out-of-pocket health care expenses and co-payments and deductibles, and these are called flexible spending accounts. There is a problem in the current law, Mr. Speaker, and that is, if our constituents use these accounts and they do not completely use them up at the end of the year, that money reverts to the employer.

I have a bill, H.R. 3034, that would fix this use-it-or-lose-it provision and would allow this to be rolled over from year to year; and basically under my legislation, which I hope the House will pass, $3,000 annually can be put into these accounts. This would help portability. In other words, these accounts can go from job to job as employees change jobs. It would boost consumer choice because one would not be locked into the current health insurance plan. They could use this money at their own discretion. It would help the doctor-patient relationship by empowering consumers to make their own decisions about their own health care needs, and it would help control health insurance costs.

I hope all of my colleagues, Mr. Speaker, will support this legislation.

TREAT OUR SENIORS BETTER

(Mr. WYNN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. WYNN. Mr. Speaker, good morning.

I rise to speak about how we treat those in the twilight of life, our seniors, our parents and our grandparents.

Contrary to what my colleagues may have heard earlier this morning, Democrats have always supported Social Security. On the other hand, Republican leaders have not. They have, in fact, urged that it be abolished, phased out or, Mr. Speaker, let it wither on the vine.

Specifically today, however, they are talking about not spending the Social Security Trust Fund, but unfortunately the CBO has documented that in fact they have spent it to the tune of $17 billion of Social Security Trust Fund money that is being spent by the Republican leadership in this year's budget.

Do not be fooled by the gimmicks and the 13-month year. The fact of the matter is they are spending Social Security.

Additionally, they do not extend the solvency of Social Security. President Clinton and the Democrats have a proposal to extend the solvency of the Social Security trust fund to the year 2050.

Third, they do not do a thing about providing a prescription drug benefit for seniors. We have a proposal to provide prescription drug benefits in the Medicare Program.

Let us treat our seniors better. Let us reject the Republican budget proposals.

TRIBUTE TO VIRGIL COVINGTON, PRINCIPAL, WINBURN MIDDLE SCHOOL

(Mr. FLETCHER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. Speaker, I want to interrupt this demagoguery from the other side to talk about a very important individual back in my district.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today to acknowledge an outstanding educator and leader within Central Kentucky, a man who has dedicated his life not only to improving education, but making sure students strive to do the very best they possibly can. He is a principal who has touched and improved the lives of so many throughout his years of dedicated service to our community.

Recently, the Kentucky Education Commissioner recognized this outstanding principal, Mr. Virgil Covington, as being one of 172 selected to receive the National Educators Award from the Milken Foundation. Next summer, Mr. Covington will join other recipients in California for a week-long conference, but today he receives praises and congratulations from the school system, community, parents and children that he has strived so hard to serve over the years.

It is obvious that he has worked to produce positive change, while making sure that no one is left behind within his middle school.

Today I join my community in recognizing an outstanding principal who has made a significant contribution to the education of our children. I find it most fitting that he receive this prestigious award.

BUDGET DEAL IS A DO-NOTHING BILL

(Mr. LEWIS of Georgia asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. LEWIS of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, the Republican budget deal is a do-nothing bill, nothing for Social Security, nothing for Medicare. It hurts every family. The Republican budget bill does nothing to extend the life of Social Security, even by one single day. It fails to provide one penny for Medicare prescription drug benefits. The only thing it does do is hurt every family, every American family, every family, in a very real way.

When it comes to Social Security and Medicare, the Republican budget deal is not right, it is not fair, it is not just; it is dead wrong.

ELIMINATE GOVERNMENT WASTE TO SAVE SOCIAL SECURITY

(Mr. WELLER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. WELLER. Mr. Speaker, this is what it is all about today. We are making a choice: Government waste, or Social Security. This is what it is all about.

My friends on the other side of the aisle for 30 years raided the Social Security trust fund and ran up massive deficits. We are putting a stop to that practice, because we want to stop the raid on Social Security, and we think it is about time.

Let me ask this question: Is there anyone who honestly believes that there is not 1 percent waste, fraud and abuse in the Federal Government? Folks back home in the south side of Chicago and the south suburbs believe there is a lot more than just 1 percent of the Federal Government budget going to waste.

We think it is time to eliminate it. That is what it is all about today. We are going to vote today to cut government waste in order to protect the Social Security trust fund.

Now, there is an alternative. As you know, the Bill Clinton Democratic budget calls for a $238 billion tax increase as an alternative to cutting government waste.

Let us stop the raid on Social Security. Let us cut government waste. We have that opportunity today.

BUDGET GIMMICKS AT THE EXPENSE OF AMERICA'S HEALTH

(Mr. LEVIN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. Speaker, I say to my colleague from Illinois, if you are interested in government waste, cut out the boondoggles in your bills, including in the districts of your leadership. These bills do nothing for Social Security, they do nothing for Medicare, and they will hurt every family.

They also engage in budgeting by deceit. They say they have not raided Social Security, but they have, by $17 billion. Now they are engaging in deceit by delay.

Here is the headline in the Post: "Hill negotiators," that means Republicans, "agree to delay part of NIH research budget." Here is what NIH says: "These delays would hurt or could seriously hamper research efforts. To accommodate this delay, NIH would have to delay funding of over 8,000 new research grants until the final days of FY 2000, research for cancer, research for heart disease, research on diabetes."

Republican budget gimmicks at the expense of America's health.

JOIN BIPARTISAN EFFORT TO SAVE SOCIAL SECURITY

(Mr. BARTLETT of Maryland asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BARTLETT of Maryland. Mr. Speaker, I think we should all be pleased that President Clinton has finally come around to the Republican view that we should not spend a penny of Social Security on other programs. Since the President had initially wanted to spend billions of Social Security surplus on some of his big government programs, I think this is real progress.

However, I am concerned that instead of helping us cut spending to reach that goal, the President wants to increase excise taxes on working Americans. Mr. Speaker, the American people are taxed enough. It is through their hard work that the budget is now balanced. We have a budget surplus. There is no reason for us to raise taxes one penny on lower and middle income Americans to pay for bigger government. That would be wrong.

So I urge my Democrat colleagues to drop their plan to raise taxes on working Americans and join us in a bipartisan effort to save Social Security.

BUDGET GIMMICKS TO HURT ALL AMERICANS

(Mr. McDERMOTT asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. McDERMOTT. Mr. Speaker, today we see the full budget from the Republicans. We can see the USS Mississippi, that the Navy does not want, sailing into the harbor, and we say we want to cut government waste. The Navy does not want that ship.

What we really have, and the gentleman from Michigan raised it, are gimmicks in this budget that are going to hurt every single American. This does nothing for Medicare, it does nothing for Social Security. What it says to the National Institutes of Health is, we are going to give you more, but we are not going to give you one single penny of that money until next year on the 28th of September.

Now, for the average American, imagine if your boss said I am going to give you a big increase in your pay, but you do not get any of it until next year on the 28th of September. How would you live while you waited for that to happen?

Anybody who is worried about a member of their family who has diabetes, HIV, cancer, Alzheimer's disease, if you are waiting for the National Institutes of Health to come up with a way to help those people, these guys have said, wait for a year. Hold your breath.

This is a bad bill.

REGARDING THE ASSASSINATION OF THE ARMENIAN PRIME MINISTER AND OTHER GOVERNMENT OFFICIALS IN YEREVAN, ARMENIA

(Mr. ROGAN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. ROGAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise with great heaviness in my heart. I ask my colleagues to join me today in paying tribute to Armenian Prime Minister Vazgen Sargissian, Armenian Speaker Karen Demirchian, and the six other Armenian government officials gunned down yesterday in cold blood in the Capital City of Yerevan.

I first met the late prime minister last month when I visited Yerevan. We had a candid and penetrating conversation. He was so cordial that he later asked me to cancel my evening schedule to join him for dinner.

Just three weeks ago we met again here in Washington and he extended the same invitation for his next visit. I deeply regret that will never occur.

Armenia is the oldest Christian nation in the world. Her commitment to freedom and democracy is in no small part due to the efforts of the late prime minister and his fallen colleagues.

This morning the turmoil in Armenia has ended. Armenians will again go on today living in freedom, and dedicated to building a stronger nation for their children. The terrorists are in the hands of law enforcement and the rule of law will prevail.

Mr. Speaker, I ask my colleagues to join me in remembering the service of these eight Armenian patriots and their families on this very sad day.

VOTE NO ON A BAD BUDGET BILL

(Ms. KILPATRICK asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. KILPATRICK. Mr. Speaker, today is the last day for the 13 appropriations bills. Unfortunately, the bill that will be on the floor today did not come to the House floor. The most important bill for America's families came from committee, and not to the floor so that we could debate it.

This budget in its entirety does not extend the life of Social Security for one day. This budget does not offer prescription drug coverage for seniors who need it. This budget hurts American families.

If you have a child and you were thinking that you were going to get them in Head Start, one of the most successful programs we have, the Head Start budget will be cut. You may not be able to have your child there.

If you are a senior and you depend on Meals on Wheels, a very successful program where some seniors have this one hot meal every day, your Meals on Wheels will be cut with this budget.

Nursing homes, who take care of the seniors who have made it possible for all of us to be here today, will be cut.

Bad bill. Vote no.

THOUGHTS AND PRAYERS FOR ARMENIA

(Mr. GANSKE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GANSKE. Mr. Speaker, in August I went on a surgical mission to Armenia. Our surgical mission was treated with great hospitality by our hosts and we were able to join with Armenian doctors and do teaching and help take care of patients. So it was with shock that I saw on TV the shooting that occurred in the Armenian legislature.

I would remind our colleagues that it was in about 1954 that we had a shooting in this very room, and when you have violence in the midst of democracy, it sends a chill down all of our backs.

I pray for the families of those who were slain, and I sincerely hope that peace will return to Armenia and that they will be able to go about the business of democracy and improving their country.

SUPPORT H.R. 762, LUPUS RESEARCH AND CARE AMENDMENTS ACT OF 1999

(Mrs. MEEK of Florida asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Mrs. MEEK of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I ask this House and this Congress to pay attention to this very important plea I am making this morning.

This is Lupus Awareness Month. People all over this country are not quite aware of the danger of this auto-immune disease called lupus. It kills more people than AIDS and several other infectious diseases. It is time we woke up to lupus. It is a killer. It is a killer of young women in their child bearing years. It is acrippler of men as well as women, but more so women.

I am asking support throughout this country for my bill on lupus. It is the Care Act of 1999. Remember, lupus has a significant impact on women in child bearing years, so your wives, daughters and sisters will be affected by this terrible disease. Charles Kurault died of this disease recently. It is a killer, it breaks your back. I want Members to help me with this bill and try to get it scheduled in this Congress. It has been up for 3 years. It is time that lupus is recognized.

SUPPORT LABOR-HHS APPROPRIATIONS BILL

(Mr. DUNCAN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DUNCAN. Mr. Speaker, today we will pass the Labor-HHS appropriations bill, which contains many good things. It also contains a 1 percent across-the-board cut, which I support, because we have to do that unless we want to dip into the Social Security funds for other purposes.

But this bill also contains $1.4 billion for a program that I hope at least some people will begin to question. It is one of the most wasteful programs in the entire Federal Government, and yet, because it theoretically is for children, nobody will question it.

That is the Job Corps program. Today we are spending over $26,000 per year per Job Corps student. We could take each one of those students and give them a $1,000 month allowance, send them to some expensive private school, and still save some.

The GAO says hardly any of those students are ending up in jobs for which they were trained. That program is benefiting only the bureaucrats and the fat cat government contractors. Mr. Speaker, we need to question that program. It is harming children by taking money away from their parents to send instead to bureaucrats and fat cat government contractors.

THE BRONX AND NEW YORK CITY ARE VERY PROUD OF THE NEW YORK YANKEES

(Mr. ENGEL asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. ENGEL. Mr. Speaker, I am going to put on this hat, although it is not the traditional blue and white.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SHAW). I would have to interrupt the gentleman. The House rules prohibit the wearing of hats.

Mr. ENGEL. Mr. Speaker, I will not put on the hat, I will just hold the hat. Even though it is not the traditional blue and white Yankee colors, these are some of the fancy hats they sell on 161st Street in the Bronx outside Yankee Stadium.

I speak then on behalf of myself and my colleague, the gentleman from New York (Mr. SERRANO). We are both from the Bronx. We always joke, the Yankee Stadium is in his district, and some of the parking lots outside of Yankee Stadium are in my district; when the Yankees hit a home run out of the park, the ball lands in my district.

I was born in the Bronx, lived in the Bronx, was raised in the Bronx, grew up within walking distance of Yankee Stadium. Today the Bronx is really proud of the Bronx Bombers, of the New York Yankees, who once again are the world champions in baseball. They are truly the team of the nineties, the dynasty of the nineties.

As we enter the new millenium, the Yankees are the world champions. The Bronx is very, very proud of the Yankees, and indeed, all of New York City is very, very proud of the Yankees. We look forward to a great ticker tape parade up Broadway with the Yankees. We look forward to continued successes in the future.

Go, Yankees. They have made us all proud: Joe Torre, George Steinbrenner and all the Yankees. New York, New York.

THE JOURNAL

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 8 of rule XX, the pending business is the question of agreeing to the Speaker's approval of the Journal of the last day's proceedings.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the Speaker's approval of the Journal.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. McNULTY. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Evidently a quorum is not present.

The Sergeant-at-Arms will notify absent Members.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 370, nays 49, answered “present” 1, not voting 13, as follows:

Mr. DAVIS of Illinois changed his vote from “nay” to “yea.”

So the Journal was approved.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

FURTHER CONTINUING APPROPRIATIONS, FISCAL YEAR 2000

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. Mr. Speaker, pursuant to the order of the House of Wednesday, October 27, 1999, I call up the joint resolution (H. J. Res 73) making further continuing appropriations for the fiscal year 2000, and for other purposes, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the joint resolution.

The text of House Joint Resolution 73 is as follows:

H.J. RES. 73

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That Public Law 106-62 is further amended by striking “October 29, 1999” in section 106(c) and inserting in lieu thereof “November 5, 1999”, and by striking “$189,524,382” in section 119 and inserting in lieu thereof “$288,903,248”. Public Law 106-46 is amended by striking “November 1, 1999” and inserting in lieu thereof “November 5, 1999”.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SHAW). Pursuant to the order of the House of Wednesday, October 27, 1999, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. YOUNG) and the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. OBEY) each will control 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Florida (Mr. YOUNG).

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on H. J. Res. 73, and that I may include tabular and extraneous material.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Florida?

There was no objection.

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, the continuing resolution before us extends current spending levels for a week, until November 5. That is one week from tomorrow.

The current rates, as contained in the original continuing resolution, are continued for the five bills which have not been signed into law. And, of course, for those eight that have been signed into law, the funding levels in those bills are the controlling elements.

There are two technical provisions for two anomalies which need to be adjusted in the continuing resolution, the waiver of the quorum requirement for the Export-Import Bank, and adjusted funding rate for the census.

Mr. Speaker, it is my understanding that this is acceptable to the President, that he is willing to support this and to sign this continuing resolution, and I would hope that we could expedite this matter.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, first of all, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. YOUNG), the distinguished chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, is correct; the President will sign this third continuing resolution.

He should not have to. I would have hoped that we would have been done by now. But we all, I think, understand why.

My problem is that, right after this continuing resolution, we are going to be dealing with about a 3-hour charade. I need to discuss that in the context of this continuing resolution.

After this continuing resolution is disposed of, we will be bringing to the House floor a so-called conference report on the Labor, Health, Education appropriation bill.

The problem is that that conference took place on a bill that never even saw the light of day on the floor of this House. And under the rules of the Congress, we are not supposed to have a conference until both Houses have been able to vote on the bill.

Now, the bill that comes out is an important bill. The problem with that bill is not really, in the end, the funding level. We could resolve our remaining dollar differences in that bill in about 3 hours if we are given the opportunity to do so. But the problem is that the debate on this bill and the bill to follow today will, in my view, symbolize how political debate in this House has been trivialized and used to obscure rather than reveal the truth.

Next year we enter a new century; we enter a new millennium. We were sent here to make certain that we make the big decisions that will preserve the security of our country and strengthen the prosperity of our country for the next decade and for the next generation. Instead, we will be treated to a 3-hour, cheap, phony, manipulated debate about Social Security.

Now, how did this all happen? In January, the President stood right here behind me, and he asked the Congress to pass legislation that would extend the solvency of Social Security for today's generation and tomorrow's. He asked us to strengthen Medicare and provide coverage for prescription drugs under Medicare. He asked us to pass a budget that would help communities to rebuild falling-down schools, reduce class size by providing 100,000 new teachers, equip every school with modern technology. He asked us to protect the environment. He asked us to help him provide more police on our streets.

This bill, the last appropriations bill for the year that will shortly follow, does none of those things. Instead of listening to what the President asked for, instead of trying to resolve those problems, our majority friends, our Republican friends on the other side of the aisle spent the last 8 months trying to pass a tax cut package which gave 70 percent of the benefits to the wealthiest 5 percent of people in this country making above $100,000 a year. That tax package ate up virtually every dollar in sight that could have been used to strengthen Social Security and to strengthen Medicare.

In fact, our Republican friends at one point were willing to cut virtually every program in the Labor, Health, and Education bill by almost 30 percent in order to make that tax package happen.

Now, after it did not sell, and after our friends on the Republican side have seen their numbers drop in the polls, we now have a very troubling situation. They have passed through this House a series of appropriation bills, four appropriation bills, which spend almost $30 billion more than the President asked us to spend.

The chairman of the committee himself said that the defense bill alone was $16 billion above what the President had asked for. But now after that has been done, we now have our Republican friends saying, Oh, guess what, folks? We cannot fund the President's education and health and crime fighting and environmental priorities without spending the Social Security surplus.

There are three problems with that, to be blunt about it. The first is that it is a phony issue. Not one dollar in the President's request or in any bill that we support on this side of the aisle will reduce the balance in the Social Security Trust Fund by one dollar.

Second, it is a joke for our Republican friends to cry crocodile tears about protecting Social Security. This is the party that tried to kill Social Security when it was born. They have tried to turn it over to the insurance companies for 30 years and privatize it. They have been willing to put an unaffordable tax cut ahead of fixing up Social Security and Medicare. And this is a party which is led by their leader, who said that Social Security should be phased out and that in a free society there should be no room for a program like Medicare.

For us to believe that a party with that track record suddenly stands as the only hope for Social Security recipients is to make Jay Leno look bad.

The third problem with the argument is that our Republican friends, despite their assertions to the contrary, have already spent billions of dollars out of the Social Security Trust Fund to pay for other things this year. At one point they had spent up to $27 billion out of that Social Security Trust Fund.

To hide that fact, what did they do? First they simply adopted a budget technique which hid $18 billion so it could not be counted. That still left them with a $9 billion hole. And so, what have they done? In the bill that they are bringing to the floor today, they did not take out all the pork that was put in appropriation bills. They did not take out the famous billion dollar ship that was nailed into the defense bill by the majority leader in the other body.

No, they did not do that. They did not take out any of the hundreds of projects that were put in those bills. Instead, they pretend that they are imposing a harmless 1 percent across-the-board cut in programs.

Well, what does that harmless 1 percent do? Well, for one thing, it cripples the Social Security Administration because it forces them to cut back on the number of people that we use to ferret out fraudulent claims in Social Security and Medicare and people who also try to get legitimate checks cut to the people who legitimately deserve those programs.

They are cutting millions of dollars out of veterans' health care under their proposal. And they are in the process also creating a colossal disruption of medical research. They are virtually shutting down all new grants to scientists in this country who go to the National Institutes of Health to get funding to do research on cancer, heart disease, Alzheimer's, Lou Gehrig's disease, you name it.

What they do is they pretend that they are going to give them a couple of billion dollars more money, but then they say that they cannot spend it for an entire year. And they do it all for budgetary reasons.

Well, I want to say, make no mistake about it, this is not just a budgetary gimmick. There will be people who will die because of that delayed medical research. Anybody who understands how the research programs in this country work understands that.

And all of this is to pretend that they have not spent any of the Social Security surplus. That whole issue is a false issue to begin with. For a generation, this Congress has taken surpluses in the Social Security account, it has put Federal notes in that Social Security account, and it has used that money for other purposes.

And now next year what do we face? Instead of having 100 percent of that money being used for other purposes, as it was for 30 years, what we have instead, under a worst-case scenario, is that 80 percent of that money instead is going to be used to pay down the national debt.

Only the folks running this House could turn that kind of major progress into a political crisis. They ought to be ashamed of themselves for doing that.

The fact is, if they really want to strengthen Social Security, they will quit playing games with it; and what they will do is recognize that the best thing they can do, along with paying down debt, the best thing that they can do is make the kind of investments we need in Generation X for their education and for their job training so we can raise the income that they will earn so they will have decent salaries and can pay more into Social Security in order to extend the strength and the life of that Social Security fund.

That is what we would say if this issue was being dealt with honestly on the floor. But it is let's-pretend time, and so we cannot get to the truth, I guess.

So, Mr. Speaker, what I guess I would say to my majority friends on the Republican side of the aisle is simply this: if they have the votes, pass this turkey, get it on to the President, let him veto it, let us clear the air, and then let us really sit down and do business. If we could get the political bull gravy out of this debate, we could solve all of the remaining dollar problems in about 3 days.

We are not that far apart. The gap in dollars that separate us is not nearly as large as the credibility gap that they have developed in the way that the majority has handled this issue.

There are only four ways to get a budget. The first is, if they really want to protect Social Security, we can go back and we can cut out a lot of the excess spending that they have included in some of the previously passed appropriation bills. If they want to do that, I will work with them on that. If they do not want to do that, I am not going to argue.

Second thing they could do then is simply say, Okay, we are going to take a look at some of the President's revenue sources, such as his proposal to try to discourage the use of tobacco by young people, which would bring some additional revenue into the Treasury. I do not much like that, but I would rather support that than to lie. And that is what is happening now.

The third thing they can do if they want to pass a budget is simply get real and to simply adjust the spending caps which we are operating under to reflect what we are actually spending rather than what we pretend we are spending. I know the gentleman from Florida (Mr. YOUNG) has urged the same solution. I agree with him on that.

They can get my support on any of those three options. The one option I do not want to support is the one that the House continues to pursue at this moment, which is to stay in Let's-pretend land and to hide everything that we are doing through all of these fancy budgetary devices.

This chart shows what they are doing to the National Institutes of Health. The blue graph shows what amount of money was provided by the National Institutes of Health to medical researchers in each month last year as those contracts were signed in an orderly fashion.

Under this bill that they are bringing to the floor today, they are telling the National Institutes of Health that, even though they are going to give them more money, they are not going to let them spend it for an entire year and then; in the last 2 days, they are supposed to put out a huge percentage of their own budget.

That is irresponsible. It is a financial gimmick. It does not serve any purpose but to cover somebody's political tail, and it will hurt our efforts to find cures for every major disease that plagues mankind.

So I would say simply, there are a lot of good people on both sides of the aisle, and sooner or later they have to be unleashed so that we can sit down, work out a rational compromise on these bills, and get this Congress out of town before it does any more damage to its reputation.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

First, I would like to get back to the subject of the continuing resolution. I listened with interest to the debate of my friend from Wisconsin. His debate went to the overall issue of budget items as well as the bill that we are going to consider next. But right now, what we have before us, is the continuing resolution.

I want to tell my friend from Wisconsin when he says we are not that far apart, he is pretty accurate. We are not that far apart on our legislation. We are miles apart on the political rhetoric. And I am afraid that it is going to be more difficult to close that gap between the political rhetoric than it will be to solve the problems of the appropriations bills.

The gentleman suggested that we should consider the President's new tax program that he sent to us. We did. Maybe the gentleman forgot. But the President's package of tax increases was presented to this House just about a week ago, and after great debate, not a Republican voted for that tax package and not an independent voted for that tax package, and not a Democrat voted for that tax package. So the effect, Mr. Speaker, was that the President's plan to increase taxes got zero votes in the House of Representatives.

My friend from Wisconsin said that it is pretend time. Let me tell you how much pretending we are doing here. Yesterday, official figures released show that the Federal Government ran a surplus of $122.7 billion in the last fiscal year, fiscal year 1999, which just ended September 30th. That is the first time the government has recorded back-to-back surpluses since the Eisenhower administration in 1956-1957. The 1999 surplus was almost double the 1998 surplus, which was $69.2 billion. So we are getting there. We are getting to the point. We are not spending Social Security surpluses. And in fiscal year 2000, we will not spend Social Security surpluses. That is not pretend time, that is the fact. I am basing this on official reports that were released yesterday.

I am not going to do this now but I might do this later and show how much various Congresses spent out of the Social Security trust fund in recent years. It is a tremendous amount, as high as $60 billion in the year that the gentleman from Wisconsin chaired the Committee on Appropriations. So a lot of money was spent out of the Social Security trust fund in the past. But in fiscal year 2000, that will not be the case. We are keeping our word. We are not dipping into the Social Security trust fund to finance the day-to-day operation of the government. We are saving that money for the people that it was promised to.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Kentucky (Mr. ROGERS), the distinguished chairman of the Appropriations Subcommittee on Commerce, Justice, State, and Judiciary.

Mr. ROGERS. I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, we heard it for the first time or at least I did publicly from the gentleman from Wisconsin a few minutes ago when he spoke in the well. We have heard it privately from that side of the aisle for a long time now but we heard it publicly here, when the gentleman said, yes, we have spent out of the Social Security surplus for 30 years, when the gentleman's party controlled this Congress. And he said now you folks want to not spend the Social Security moneys for general government purposes, and you ought to be ashamed of yourselves, he said.

Well, Mr. Speaker, I am not ashamed of myself at all. I am extremely proud that our party, for the first time in more than 30 years, is saying to that party no, you cannot spend any more from the Social Security trust fund. That is for our elderly, and you can live on the tax moneys that come into the general treasury, and that is what this party is attempting to do. And so we heard it for the first time here. Get the transcript and read it. Publish it in the newspapers. That party stands for blowing the Social Security trust fund for anything and everything, and they have, as the gentleman said, for 30 years at least. And our party now says no more. The Social Security moneys that hardworking Americans pay into this government system shall be used only for the purposes for which it was paid, and that is to provide for the care of the elderly when they reach that retirement age. And our party has laid down the line, no more raiding Social Security, leave it alone, it is for our elderly. You ought to be ashamed of yourselves for suggesting the continuation of that kind of a policy of using Social Security for every other purpose.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 1 minute. Despite what we have just heard from the past two speakers, the Congressional Budget Office this morning has indicated that you are spending this year $17 billion out of Social Security. What I said on the floor is that you should be ashamed for denying the truth. That is what you ought to be ashamed of.

The second thing I would point out to the gentleman is that whatever money was spent out of Social Security by Democratic Congresses was less than we were asked to spend by President Bush and President Reagan in all 12 years they were in office except for 1 year. In 11 out of the 12 years, we were asked to spend more out of Social Security by President Bush and President Reagan than the Congress agreed to do.

So let us keep the facts straight. If you are going to quote me, quote me right. I am not attacking your actions. I am attacking the hypocrisy that I so often see in this House.

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the very distinguished gentleman from Georgia (Mr. KINGSTON), a member of the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. KINGSTON. I thank the gentleman for yielding time.

Mr. Speaker, first of all let me say why are we here. I would say probably for three real reasons. Number one, in response to the American people in 1997 to get our fiscal house in order, we passed a bipartisan budget agreement. I did not support it. I know the gentleman from Wisconsin and many others did not but over 300 Democrats and Republicans joined with the White House to pass this agreement to give us a road for budget restraint in the next couple of years. That is number one.

Number two, we have said as recently as last week, no new taxes. On a vote of 419-0, Democrats and Republicans rejected President Clinton's proposals to increase taxes. And number three, despite the fact that the President said in his State of the Union address that we should only preserve 62 percent of the Social Security trust fund, we on the Republican side have insisted on 100 percent, and now many of the Democrats have said, let us protect 100 percent of the Social Security trust fund.

So with these three principles colliding, what we are trying to do is balance the budget by reducing spending by about one cent on the dollar. It is not that hard to do. If you look back at the principles, here is what the White House said about the Republican plan: The key goal is to not spend Social Security surplus. That is right from the mouth of Chief of Staff John Podesta at the White House.

This chart, Mr. Speaker, shows that under Democrat control and under Republican control up until this year, we have been spending Social Security surplus. But this year on this chart, we have not. We do not want to back off that commitment. I think it is very important.

And the way to not do that is this simple, shown in this chart. We are going to spend out of a dollar 99 cents and we are going to save one cent. Where can you get some of this money? Look at it in practical examples. The President went to Africa last year. One thousand three hundred Federal employees went with him at a price tag of $42.8 million. Under this proposal, 13 of them would have to stay at home. He went to China, $18.8 million, 800 Federal employees. Under this plan, eight of them would have to stay at home. Ben & Jerry's, the delicious and successful ice cream company, gets a Federal subsidy of $800,000 to sell ice cream overseas. Under this proposal, they would get less, and who knows, maybe they would have to do it the old-fashioned way and pay for it themselves.

Under this proposal we may want to look at the FDA cheese inspection program because the FDA inspects cheese pizza but the USDA, the Department of Agriculture, inspects pepperoni pizza. I do not know, maybe they could get together. That might be an example of cutting out government waste.

Here in Washington, D.C., one of the cronies of the city council was awarded a $6.6 million contract for job placement. One year later after being asked to place 1500 people, 30 people had been placed.

Those are just a couple of examples. That is all we are saying. If we can do that, we can keep from raiding Social Security or increasing taxes.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 1 minute.

Mr. Speaker, let me again repeat the facts to counter the fiction that we have just heard. Despite the fact that our majority party friends have taken $12 billion of education money and slipped it one day over into the next fiscal year so they could hide it in this year, despite the fact that they have taken almost $4 billion at the National Institutes of Health and squeezed that spending just over the line into the next fiscal year, it will still be spent, still come out of Social Security, just next year's Social Security money, despite the fact that they have simply ordered the accountants to not count $13 billion in spending that they do at the Department of Defense, despite all of that, we have a letter from the Congressional Budget Office this morning that indicates that you are still spending $17 billion worth of Social Security this year. Now, get off the baloney, get back to the facts and let us resolve our differences in an honest way.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Missouri (Mr. CLAY), ranking member of the Committee on Education and the Workforce.

Mr. CLAY. I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, if the Republican leadership had done its job instead of playing politics with appropriations for vital government services, I would not be here this morning to speak on this unnecessary continuing resolution and to oppose H.R. 3064, which includes the Labor, HHS and Education Appropriations Act, because if passed it would make drastic cuts in programs that are vitally important to Americans, especially to those most in need of the Federal Government's assistance and protection.

Fortunately, Mr. Speaker, this ill-conceived and sensitive bill faces swift death at the hands of a veto by the President. Many of the important initiatives proposed by the President to improve our schools and to prepare our children for the 21st century have either been eliminated or underfunded. The bill that we will be considering after this guts the Clinton-Clay plan to hire 100,000 new teachers and reduce class sizes in the early grades. Instead, it diverts $1.2 billion to a block grant that requires no real accountability and would permit spending public money to send children to private schools.

Mr. Speaker, last week this body overwhelmingly defeated the Republican majority leader's ill-advised attempt to authorize vouchers for private and public schools. Now the same misguided leadership is attempting a backdoor enactment of the same raid on public funds. The cuts in H.R. 3064 are devastating. The Republicans' bill cuts $26 million from the President's funding request to improve the reading skills of 100,000 students as proposed in the Reading Excellence Act. The Republicans' bill denies $60 million of the President's funding request for Gear Up, thus preventing 131,000 low-income students from receiving mentoring, counseling and tutoring services intended to help them prepare for college.

The bill provides $300 billion less than the President requested for after-school enrichment centers, thereby funding 3,400 fewer centers; and after selling our children and teachers short, the Republicans' bill also reflects the same legislative assault on workers. The bill would undermine worker protection programs by cutting $18 million from the President's request for the Occupational Safety and Health Administration. Funding for the Labor Relations Board is cut by $10 million below the President's request, which will result in total gridlock in resolving labor-management disputes.

Mr. Speaker, I recommend that we defeat the bill that comes after this continuing resolution.

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. PORTER), who is the very distinguished chairman of the Subcommittee on Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education.

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Speaker, I listened carefully to the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. CLAY) and what he had to say about education funding; and, Mr. Speaker, he is way off the mark. This bill does better than the President in his budget, which was a political document in the extreme.

It does better than the President on education funding by over $300 million, and to say that Republicans are not committed to education is simply wrong. Our commitment is just as strong or stronger than that on the other side of the aisle; but we do not believe, and the reason the gentleman referred to accounts that he said were not plussed up as the President suggested, we do not believe that public education ought to be directed by Washington. The very genius of public education in our country is that it is not directed by Washington; it is directed by our school districts and our States, where the primary responsibility lies.

We put a great deal of money into primary and secondary education, and we put a great deal of money, more than the President has suggested in both areas, into college student financial assistance so that young people have a chance to get a higher education. We put in $679 million more than the President in his budget request in special education for handicapped kids. We put $45 million over last year and $15 million over the President's request in the Trio program so that minority young people have a chance to get a higher education. We funded impact aid, a Federal responsibility, for more than the President.

In line item after line item in this bill we do better than the President, and we give more flexibility to the local school districts and States.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3½ minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Texas (Mr. DOGGETT).

Mr. DOGGETT. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding this time to me.

As my colleagues know, this Congress is quickly running out of Federal buildings to name around the country. It has about commemorated everything that could be commemorated, and since these uncontested measures represent the principal legislative product of this Republican do-nothing Congress, it is appropriate that this legislation would be before us today as really only another of these uncontested commemorative resolutions. It commemorates failure. It deserves a name: The Republican Congressional Failure Act of 1999.

As late as September 19, the Speaker, the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. HASTERT), told the country that "by the first of October we will have all of the appropriation bills passed out of the House and the Senate," and here we are, nearing November 1, not October 1, and one of those very important bills has never even been presented to the House for consideration, much less the Senate or the President of the United States for his consideration.

We will have later today that bill finally come before us, and it is clear that the reason for the delay of that bill; now that we have it, is that it has failure written all over it. This legislation funds all of our Federal commitment to public education in this country, funds all of our major health research for all the very dreaded diseases that touch families throughout this country; and yet here we are a month after the conclusion of the fiscal year for which it was supposed to have been approved, and it has never even been debated on the floor of the House.

This is a measure that touches every family, one way or another, throughout the United States. Like the other parts of the Republican legislative agenda, this bill fails to add one single dollar to strengthen Social Security, and it also fails to meet the standard of the rhetoric we have heard about Social Security here this morning. I have a letter that the Congressional Budget Office sent this morning, October 28, to Speaker J. DENNIS HASTERT. The Congressional Budget Office says, and I quote:

Outlays from congressional action on appropriation legislation including the latest action on all 13 appropriation bills would also exceed the discretionary caps (those are the ones put in place to assure a balanced budget) by more than CBO's baseline estimate of the on-budget surplus. After taking that surplus into account, the Congressional Budget Office projects an on-budget deficit of about $17 billion.

That is $17 billion directly out of Social Security Trust Fund monies. To say that they are not using Social Security monies for non-Social Security purposes is flat wrong, and the evidence is here from the Republican Congressional Budget Office to demonstrate it. This bill and the legislative program of which it is a part fails to get prescription drugs to seniors, fails to ferret out waste. It is late, and it is wrong for America. This bill should be rejected, and another stop gap continuing resolution undoubtedly will be presented to this House, because of the same failures that have characterized the first 10 months of this year.

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the very distinguished gentleman from Alabama (Mr. CALLAHAN), chairman of the Subcommittee on Foreign Operations, Export Financing and Related Programs.

(Mr. CALLAHAN asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. CALLAHAN. I thank the gentleman for yielding this time to me.

Mr. Speaker, I love this House. Witness the ceremony yesterday afternoon where we honored former President Ford and Betty Ford and the comments that were made there about the respect this institution has had over past decades.

But are we so naive or so stupid, Mr. Speaker, that we think the American people cannot see what we are doing here? Is there anybody in this body who thinks they are fooling the American people by saying we are going to destroy the Social Security Trust Fund? Of course we are not. The only thing we have to argue is history, and history says for 40 years until 1993 that the majority party during those years was spending much of the Social Security Trust Fund.

And now we are here today with a balanced budget talking about whether we might dip into the Social Security Trust Fund by $10 or $15 billion, which we are not, but the American people are not that naive. The American people are truly appreciative of the fact that during the last 3 years we have balanced the budget. What a wonderful argument it is to develop today, saying we are not going to spend all of the Social Security Trust Fund. Maybe CBO or some other organization might score some of the things we pass here today as a possible invasion of the trust fund, which I do not think it is. But the American people are not easily fooled. The American people know exactly what we are talking about when we have debates such as this which is nothing but demagoguery.

Mr. Speaker, I am just as guilty as any of my colleagues. I stood on this floor the other day and demagogued the President of the United States for taking 1,700 people to Africa and spending $47 million of the taxpayers' money on that trip. We do all of that, but let us not think for 1 minute that the American people are so naive as to think, Mr. Speaker, that anybody in any party would deliberately do anything to the detriment of the Social Security Trust Fund.

We have to look at where we were when we, the majority, took control of this House 5 years ago and where we are today, and it is as simple as that. The chairman of my committee (Mr. YOUNG) has the most compelling chart of all of the charts that have ever been presented on this issue to the House, and it shows what was happening before the Republican party took control of this House, and it is so glaring that the amount of money that we are now saving for the Social Security Trust Fund is a result of what we have done in this body.

So we can have all this fun we want, and we can engage in all this rhetoric, and we can demagogue, and we can stand up and we can say these bad things about each other. The real fact is the American people are no fools. We have balanced the budget, we have saved Social Security, and it is because of the programs that we have implemented in the last 4 years.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from South Carolina (Mr. SPRATT), ranking Democrat on the Committee on the Budget.

(Mr. SPRATT asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SPRATT. Mr. Speaker, a continuing resolution is a confession of failure on the part of Congress. It is a confession by Congress that it has not done its job, so is the appropriation bill that follows this continuing resolution.

We were elected to use our judgment, our experience, to use our discretion to get the best value out of the American taxpayers' money. What do we do with an across-the-board cut? It is nothing less than abdication of the judgment that we were elected to use. It whacks the budget across the board by 1 percent, cutting the good with the bad.

Now that may sound minimal. One percent sounds trivial. But if it is minimal, why not go back through these 13 bills and do it using discretionary judgment, picking out things that have been larded into these bills, Member adds, and we can start with Senator LOTT's helicopter landing ship, just one of many things that cost several hundred million dollars that we can do without. The Navy said so, did not want it, did not ask for it.

One percent is not minimal if someone is one of the people who have been hurt by the cut. As my colleagues know, we have spent the better part of this year, this past year, trying to get veterans health care up to the level that the Committee on Veterans' Affairs itself says we need to fund it at in order to keep our promises made to the men and women who served our country particularly in time of war, and if there are any promises we ought to keep; we ought to keep the promises we made to our veterans.

What does this bill do? We have got the veterans' health care up by 1.5, $1.7 million; it whacks it $200 million. That is health care veterans will not be able to get if this bill were to become law.

We spent last year, the whole past year, trying to get funding for our men and women in uniform, our Armed Services, up to the level where they want to stay in the service and encourage others to join the service because recruitment and retention are off, both badly.

What does this bill do? The appropriations bill that will come after this continuing resolution will whack our men in uniform to the tune of 28,000 men and women on active duty who will have to be involuntarily separated, removed from service. What in the world will that do to morale when we are trying to encourage retention and recruitment?

Kicked out of the service, mindless across-the-board cuts. General Shelton summed up the effects yesterday when he said a 1 percent across-the-board would be devastating to our national defense. But that is what we are proposing here today.

All of this mindless carnage to the budget is being done in the name of holding Social Security surplus harmless, and it is a worthy goal; but I suggest to my colleagues in truth this is not the real goal. The real goal is to send these 13 appropriation bills to the President, have them veto several of them, and then we will be able to say he is responsible for our having to borrow this year from Social Security.

Well, Mr. Speaker, that dog will not hunt.

Do not take my word for it. Listen to what CBO says this morning just off the press in its summary of 12 bills that this Republican majority and this House and the Senate have passed, the last to come, Labor-HHS. It summed them all up, and here is the summary right here on this chart in the simplest possible terms for people to understand.

The appropriations spending cap for this year in July was $580 billion. At that level, CBO said we would have a surplus this year of $14 billion, $14.4 to be exact. So that means if you spend $594 billion, the cap on appropriations, plus the on-budget surplus, you can stay out of Social Security. But CBO says today, looking at all 13 appropriation bills, that they spend altogether $611 billion. Simple arithmetic says, therefore, these bills to date are $17 billion already into the Social Security trust fund, $17 billion already into the Social Security surplus, because these bills to date spend $611 billion as opposed to a spending ceiling of $594 billion if you want to stay out of Social Security.

There it is in simple form. In more complicated form I have a letter here dated October 28, 1999, from Dr. Crippen, who is the Director of CBO, which I would like to insert in the RECORD. It sets it straight. It spells it out. You are already $17.1 billion into Social Security. That is the bottom line, no way around it.

Let us vote down the Labor-HHS bill so we can get down to reality and get down to budgeting, rather than blaming, which is what the people elected us to do.

Mr. Speaker, I include the following for the RECORD:

CONGRESSIONAL BUDGET OFFICE,
U.S. CONGRESS,
Washington, DC, October 28, 1999.

Hon. J. DENNIS HASTERT,
Speaker, U.S. House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. SPEAKER: As you requested in your letter of October 27, the Congressional Budget Office (CBO) has estimated the on-budget deficit for fiscal year 2000, incorporating appropriation action to date.

CBO's estimates are based on appropriation bills that have been signed by the President and, for those that have not yet been enacted into law, on the most recent conference agreements. The enclosed table provides CBO's estimate of how those bills would affect the on-budget surplus for fiscal year 2000. As you requested, the table displays the impact on that estimate of the adjustments made to CBO's figures for Congressional scorekeeping purposes—with the exception of the adjustment made for contingent emergencies.

In response to numerous questions about the on-budget deficit and related matters, CBO has prepared a memorandum entitled Discretionary Spending Caps, Deficits, and the Social Security Surplus, which provides some context for addressing the budgetary issues you have raised. A copy of that memorandum is enclosed.

If you wish further information, we will be pleased to provide it.

Sincerely,

DAN L. CRIPPEN,
Director.

DISCRETIONARY SPENDING CAPS, DEFICITS, AND THE SOCIAL SECURITY TRUST FUNDS October 28, 1999

The current budget debate centers around two distinct objectives. The first is adherence to the statutory caps on discretionary spending specified in the Balanced Budget Act of 1997 (BBA). The BBA extends an accounting framework for discretionary spending and requires across-the-board cuts (sequestration) if the caps are exceeded. The executive branch alone determines whether a sequestration is needed and, if so, executes it.

The second objective is avoiding an on-budget deficit—that is, avoiding the need to borrow from the Social Security trust funds to finance non-Social Security spending. Whether that objective is met depends on the total amount of revenues and spending in the rest of the budget. No enforcement mechanism, such as sequestration, exists to ensure the attainment of that goal.

Those two objectives are related but are not identical, and actions taken to achieve one of them would not necessarily increase the likelihood of achieving the other. In addition, confusion exists about the relationship between on-budget deficits and the Social Security surplus. In response to numerous questions, the Congressional Budget Office (CBO) has prepared this memorandum to provide some context for addressing those issues.

LIMITS OF BUDGET ESTIMATES

It is important to keep in mind that at this stage in the budget process, all of the numbers being presented are estimates of outcomes over the next 12 months. Even without future Congressional action, at this time next year, current estimates of total revenues and outlays will probably have proved to be too high or too low by significant amounts. Fourteen months ago, for example, CBO predicted an on-budget deficit of $37 billion for fiscal year 1999. (The spending and income of the Social Security trust funds and the Postal Service are defined by law as off-budget. All other spending and income of the government are on-budget.) In fact, the on-budget accounts were virtually in balance that year, recording a deficit of only $1 billion.

At present, the primary focus of the budget debate is the outlays that will occur in fiscal year 2000 as a result of discretionary appropriations of budget authority. On that score—estimating the outlays from discretionary budget authority—CBO has an admirable track record. Between 1993 and 1998, its projections of appropriated spending each year differed from actual outlays by an average of just $2 billion, or 0.4 percent (disregarding whether the difference was above or below actual spending).

However, for the remainder of the budget (revenues and mandatory spending), CBO's projections—along with those of the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) and other forecasters—have not been as accurate. With total federal revenues and outlays in the vicinity of $1.8 trillion each year and a national economy of $9 trillion, even small variations from the forecasts for economic variables, tax revenues, or mandatory spending can lead to changes in the surplus or deficit of tens of billions of dollars. For fiscal year 2000, if revenues and outlays differ from CBO's estimates by as little as 1 percent, the on-budget surplus could be $36 billion higher or lower. Thus, the on-budget surplus for 2000 could differ substantially from CBO's baseline projection of $14 billion, even if the two objectives mentioned above are met.

DISCRETIONARY SPENDING CAPS

The caps on discretionary spending are moving targets rather than permanently fixed values. The caps can be adjusted upward to account for funding designated as emergency requirements and for certain other, generally small, items. OMB, which is responsible for determining compliance with the caps, may also make adjustments to reflect changes in budgetary concepts and definitions. As a result of those various types of changes, the caps on discretionary outlays for 2000 have increased from a total of $564.3 billion (as initially set in the Balanced Budget Act) to $575.8 billion (as specified in OMB's Sequestration Update Report, issued on August 25, 1999).

Adherence to the caps is enforced through sequestration, which involves across-the-board cuts in funding for discretionary programs. After this session of Congress ends, OMB will determine whether a sequestration is required on the basis of its estimates of the discretionary caps as adjusted and of the spending that will result from appropriation actions. CBO produces estimates of both the caps and spending, but for the sequestration process, those estimates are purely advisory.

In CBO's view, the President's most recent budget request and House and Senate appropriation action to date all exceed the outlay caps for 2000 by similar amounts. CBO estimates that discretionary outlays from the policies of the President's Mid-Session Review would exceed CBO's July 1 estimate of the caps by $35 billion. The Administration, by contrast, asserts that those policies would adhere to the caps—in part because it estimates lower outlays from the policies and in part because it has proposed a number of offsets (such as tobacco taxes and Medicare savings) that CBO believes cannot be used to offset discretionary spending under the provisions of the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985, as amended.

CBO estimates that Congressional appropriation action, as of October 27, also exceeds its July 1 estimate of the outlay caps—by a total of about $31 billion. But even though estimated outlays exceed the caps, a sequestration may not occur. A significant part of the overage—about $26 billion—results from spending that has been designated as emergency requirements. If the President concurs with the designation, that spending will result in corresponding upward adjustments to the caps.

In addition, OMB's estimates of outlays are lower than CBO's especially for defense spending—and OMB's estimates are the ones that determine the need for a sequestration. Indeed, the budget committees' scoring of the appropriation bills includes scorekeeping adjustments intended to approximate the Administration's outlays estimates. Depending on the funding levels established in the appropriation bills that have not yet been enacted, the combination of emergency designations and lower outlays estimates may be enough for OMB to determine that a sequestration is not required.

ON-BUDGET SURPLUSES OR DEFICITS

The second budget issue that has received much attention lately is whether an on-budget surplus will result in fiscal year 2000. Whether discretionary spending adheres to the statutory caps, as determined by OMB, can affect whether the government ultimately achieves an on-budget surplus, but the first does not guarantee the second. It is possible to exceed the caps and still have an on-budget surplus; conversely, it is possible to adhere to the caps and still have an on-budget deficit. (The sequestration procedures are aimed at holding spending under the caps, not necessarily at avoiding on-budget deficits.)

Two major factors can account for those different outcomes: spending for which the caps are adjusted and estimating errors. Although the caps may be increased for spending designated as emergency requirements, such spending still counts toward determining the on-budget surplus or deficit. Thus, appropriating emergency funds is not a violation of the caps, but it will result in additional outlays that will lessen or eliminate an on-budget surplus.

Estimating errors can have a similar result. If the estimates of outlays used to determine compliance with the caps are too low, spending may appear to fall within the statutory limits when, in reality, it will exceed them. The use of OMB estimates—or scorekeeping adjustments that approximate them—creates such a possibility, particularly because the Administration has routinely underestimate defense spending in recent years.

CBO's current estimates indicate that there is some room to exceed the spending implied by the discretionary caps while still maintaining an on-budget surplus. In its summer update of the baseline, CBO projects an on-budget surplus of $14 billion for 2000, assuming that discretionary outlays would be about $580 billion (CBO's estimate of the discretionary caps at that time). If those projections are accurate, discretionary spending could exceed CBO's estimate of the caps by up to $14 billion without causing an on-budget deficit.

Both the President's budget proposals and Congressional action would result in discretionary spending that, by CBO's estimates, would exceed the caps by more than $14 billion and thus result in an on-budget deficit for 2000. CBO estimates that the President's budget, if enacted in full, would result in an on-budget deficit of $7 billion. That number is considerably lower than the amount by which this budget would exceed the spending caps because of his proposals to offset total outlays with revenue increases and Medicare reductions. However, the President's budget does not include provisions for some of the emergency appropriations that have been enacted. For example, the emergency agriculture package will add approximately $8 billion to outlays. Including that sum, the on-budget deficit for 2000 under the President's proposals would increase to $15 billion even if the offsets were enacted.

Outlays from Congressional action on appropriation legislation, including the latest action on all 13 regular appropriation bills, would also exceed the discretionary caps by more than CBO's baseline estimate of the on-budget surplus. After taking that surplus into account, CBO projects an on-budget deficit of about $17 billion (see Table 1).

THE SOCIAL SECURITY SURPLUS

The current off-budget surplus is much larger than any on-budget surplus projected for the near future. The Social Security trust funds account for virtually all of that off-budget surplus. (The net income or spending of the Postal Service is quite small in comparison.)

Income credited to the Social Security trust funds (from tax revenues and interest on the funds' holdings of Treasury securities) exceeded spending for Social Security benefits and administrative costs by about $125 billion in fiscal year 1999. CBO expects that, under current law, the Social Security surplus will grow to $147 billion in 2000. What happens to that money?

That surplus is invested in Treasury securities and earns interest for the trust funds. The cash that the Treasury receives in return for those securities can be used in two ways. If the revenues and expenses of the rest of the government (other than Social Security) are in balance, the cash generated by the Social Security surplus is used to reduce federal borrowing from the public—that is, to pay down the debt. Alternatively, if the budget of the rest of the government is in deficit, some of the cash generated by the Social Security surplus is used to pay other expenses of the government and to avoid the need to borrow from the public to support that spending. In either case, the balances credited to the Social Security trust funds and the government's legal obligation to pay Social Security benefits are unaffected.

Surpluses, both on-budget and off-budget, nevertheless have significant benefits because they allow the government to reduce debt held by the public. Such debt reduction cuts the government's interest costs, adding further to the surplus or providing more resources to be used for other purposes. In the long run, substantial reductions in federal debt held by the public can add significantly to national saving, thus enhancing economic growth and better equipping the nation to bear the economic and budgetary burdens imposed by the aging of the baby-boom generation.

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I know there is a little confusion here today about which bill we are considering. We are considering actually a continuing resolution, and we are not continuing the several bills that the gentleman who just spoke had referred to, but he made a couple of comments that I think we cannot allow to go unchallenged.

First, he talked about veterans health care. What our colleagues on both sides of the aisle ought to realize is that in the bill that we presented for veterans health care, we increased the President's budget request for veterans health care by $1.7 billion. We increased veterans health care over the President's budget, contrary to what the gentleman in the well had just said.

Then he talked about cuts in salaries. No salaries will be cut by the language in the next bill that we consider, nor this bill, and this bill does not cut anybody's salary. The CR does not cut anything. The next bill does not cut anybody's salaries, except Members of Congress. So I am not sure where all these confusing statistics are coming from.

Then there is one more item that supposedly comes from the Congressional Budget Office. What the Members on the other side, who are referring to Mr. Crippen's papers, failed to go to is the next two lines. The next two lines say "Congressional scorekeeping adjustments, $18.1 billion," which brings us to an on-budget surplus of $1 billion, according to Mr. Crippen, who they are quoting in their debate.

Here is the paper from the Congressional Budget Office. It says using the scorekeeping adjustments, we have saved $18.1 billion.

So, Mr. Speaker, I realize there is some confusion here as to which bill we are considering. We are considering a continuing resolution, and I think everybody supports it, including the President of the United States. We are debating a number of other bills.

We will, after we pass the CR, get to the actual bill, the conference report on the District of Columbia and the Labor-Health and Human Services appropriations bill, but that is not what is the issue before us at this time.

Mr. Speaker, I want to compliment the chart makers on both sides. While we have used a lot of charts today, and I am going to use one in my final presentation that I think is a great chart, we have really improved our ability to present charts, and I compliment both sides for that.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. I yield to the gentleman from California, the chairman of the Subcommittee on Defense of the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Speaker, I very much appreciate the chairman yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I did not intend to speak during this discussion on the bill that is before us, but the comments made by the last speaker are of concern to me as well, for in those comments he presumed in the next bill there may be some across-the-board cut that could affect the bill we have recently had the President sign, the bill funding national defense.

Indeed, it is conceivable that if the House does adopt and there is signed into law an across-the-board provision that affects all accounts, that defense could be affected, and that does concern me a lot. But I must tell you, Mr. Speaker, it concerns me most because of the condition we find our national services in today.

There is little doubt that the bill the President signed is a breath of fresh air in terms of returning to recognizing the priority needed for national defense. But indeed the reason we need to be concerned is because of the actions of past Congresses.

Since I have been in the Congress, we have reduced our annual expenditures for national expense in amounts of almost $150 billion. If indeed we have had a problem funding our personnel, keeping our forces and numbers and strength that is required, it is because of that past history of a lack of support of the former majority of our national defense systems.

I am very concerned about the discussion that is going forward. But, in the meantime, I think the public should understand what this discussion is actually all about as it relates to national defense.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from South Carolina (Mr. SPRATT).

(Mr. SPRATT asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SPRATT. Mr. Speaker, my friend, whom I greatly respect, the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, has just said that I left out a line. There is a line on Dr. Crippen's chart. It comes at the bottom of the page after CBO has scored this budget and says it is $17 billion into Social Security. That line says "if you use Congressional scorekeeping."

Well, CBO, the Congressional Budget Office, is our budget office. We have hired them to do it. Their record for scorekeeping is pretty impeccable. Over the last 10 years they have only been 0.4 percent wrong, plus or minus $2 billion dollars, for the past 15 years in scoring discretionary spending.

What they are saying is, "Do not use their scorekeeping; use our arbitrary scorekeeping. We will borrow this from OMB, and this from CBO, whatever best serves our purposes."

The best, consistent and proper way to score the budget before us is to use CBO. Their track record is good. We have always used them in the past. If you use CBO, you are $17 billion into Social Security.

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I would concede to the gentleman that we are using and cooperating with the President's Office of Management and Budget in this issue of scoring, so I wanted them to know that.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to my distinguished colleague, the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. PETERSON), a member of the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. PETERSON of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me time.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to go back a little bit to an issue raised a little while ago that questioned the Republicans' commitment to the National Institutes of Health that was not answered, and I think it should be.

In 1998, I think, the Republican Conference put an initiative of plussing up the National Institutes of Health that is appropriate for the research that needs to be done in this country, and to question our credibility on supporting NIH I think was uncalled for.

Now, why are we here today debating a continuing resolution? Why? I think we heard the discussion. Because we are trying to get it right. We are trying to pass a budget for the first time without using the Social Security surplus, and that is not easy. It may take a little longer, but the American people are going to be very well served if we break this practice.

Now, I think we heard today from the gentleman from Wisconsin the difference. If we look at the record and read it, if I heard the gentleman correctly, he said, "You know, we could do this rather easily," and I am trying to be accurate in what I heard, "we could do this rather easily because historically we were spending 100 percent, borrowing it, putting the notes in the drawer and spending it. If we would agree to spend 80 percent to pay down debt and use 20 percent to fund government programs, we could get this done real quick."

Mr. Speaker, that is true. That was a very accurate statement. This would be over with. We would be home, Congress would be done, the President would have signed the bills.

We are trying to get it right. It has been difficult to suddenly take $100-some billion out of this process and say we are going to do it without that. That is the argument that is going on, and if we read the RECORD of this morning's discussion on the continuing resolution, there is a very valid argument of why we are having a difficult time, because we have not agreed to take 20 percent, borrow it, spend it. We are trying to have 100 percent of the Social Security trust fund set aside and not spent for general government purposes, and that has made it difficult.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 30 seconds.

Mr. Speaker, let me again correct the gentleman. When I described the 80 percent, I said if you assume worst case scenario, which is the Republican actions on the budget so far, that you would have that 80 percent—20 percent split. So if you want to know why that is so bad, do not ascribe it to me. You are the folks who have already passed bills that have produced that reality, once you start telling the public what the actual facts are, rather than hiding almost $18 billion in spending.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. OLVER).

Mr. OLVER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me time.

Mr. Speaker, here we are, 29 days past the day that started the fiscal year 2000. Only 8 of 13 bills have been passed, so here we are debating another continuing resolution to get us one week deeper into the process, and a week from now we will end up here debating still another continuing resolution.

For weeks now the Republicans have accused Democrats of spending the Social Security surplus on this year's budget. Now, give us a break. The Republicans are in the majority here. Democrats cannot pass a budget at all. We cannot spend a single penny of the budget. The Republican majority has passed appropriations bills, one right after the other, with accounting gimmicks that call for routine items becoming emergencies and putting future expenditures past the end of the fiscal year so it appears in next year's accounts.

The Office of Management and Budget says you have been spending Social Security money, your own Congressional Budget Office says that you have been spending Social Security money, $17 billion by the latest count, but the Republican leaders, one after another, proclaim they are not spending a single dollar of the Social Security surplus.

Well, every propaganda campaign depends on convincing people you are doing exactly the opposite of what you are actually doing, and this is a propaganda campaign. The big lie, repeated again, and again, and again.

It really does not matter, because a year from now, by election time, one year from now, every American will know exactly how much money has been spent from the Social Security surplus, and it will be impossible to hide it or lie about it any longer. But, more importantly, is the fact that in all of this year the Republican majority has deliberately refused to extend the life of the Social Security system by so much as a single day. They have deliberately refused to extend the solvency of the Medicare program by so much as a single day. There is not a whimper of dispute on either of those facts.

They have refused to put the interest saved by paying down America's debt into the Social Security trust fund, which alone would extend Social Security by 15 years, so that people over the age of 30 would be able to know that they have Social Security good for them into at least the year 2050. And they have refused to extend the sol-veny of the Medicare program beyond the 15 years the present law assures.

At the same time, they have refused to expand the Medicare program to provide for a prescription drug benefit for our senior citizens. In fact, they passed earlier this year a disastrous tax bill which would have made it impossible to extend the life of either Social Security or Medicare. Both would have died a slow death by strangulation. Fortunately, the President vetoed that bill.

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Florida (Mr. SHAW), who plays a major role on the issue of Social Security as a senior member of the Committee on Ways and Means.

Mr. SHAW. Mr. Speaker, I thank the chairman for yielding this time to me.

I think everyone on the Committee on Appropriations knows that social security comes under the jurisdiction of the Committee on Ways and Means, and I have been sitting here listening to Member after Member coming down and talking about how the appropriation process is not extending the life of social security for even one day.

Mr. Speaker, this committee has no jurisdiction with regard to social security. If we do not solve the problem of social security, it will become a problem in about 2014, because we will be looking for appropriations to put money into the social security trust fund to pay off the Treasury bills that are in the trust fund to keep the benefits flowing.

That is my greatest concern, and I think this should be America's greatest nightmare at this particular time. But that has absolutely nothing to do with the appropriations process. We have to leave this to another day. We have to work together to solve this problem.

If we start putting cash into the social security trust fund now, through the appropriation process under the law governing the social security trust fund, that money just comes right out the other end and is converted into Treasury bills. It does not in any way affect the solvency of the social security trust fund and as far as what date is it going to have to go out and tap into the taxpayers to get some money to take care of its obligations and the benefits.

I even saw a member of the Committee on Ways and Means on the minority side get up and start talking about how this does not extend the life of social security. Mr. Speaker, the Committee on Appropriations does not have jurisdiction over social security.

Mr. OLVER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SHAW. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. OLVER. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

I fully agree that it is not under the jurisdiction of the Committee on Appropriations to do, but this is passing the buck from one committee to another. This is a year when, in very good economic times, we could have extended the life of social security by a very simple measure, and with reference to passing the buck, all I said was that the Republican majority has steadfastly and deliberately refused to extend the lifetime of social security by so much as a day.

Mr. SHAW. Reclaiming my time, I would like to ask the gentleman two questions. One, exactly what does the gentleman expect the Committee on Appropriations to do to extend the life of social security in a bill this year?

Mr. OLVER. I do not expect the Committee on Appropriations to do anything. I was merely pointing out that it is a responsibility of the majority to solve America's problems.

Mr. SHAW. The gentleman is absolutely correct.

Mr. OLVER. The problem in this instance is that we need to extend social security.

They really cannot pass the buck from one committee to another when it is a matter of all the committees.

Mr. SHAW. If the gentleman would let me explain to him, and if he was listening, he would know that I said the buck stops at the Committee on Ways and Means, not the Committee on Appropriations. It is a Committee on Ways and Means responsibility to do this. We need to do it with a plan that is going to save social security for all times.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2½ minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Florida (Mr. BOYD).

(Mr. BOYD asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BOYD. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the gentleman from Wisconsin yielding time to me.

Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to enter into the fray behind my friend, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. SHAW). I want to say that the rhetoric on social security has reached a new level for the time I have been here, a short 3 years.

The gentleman from Florida is right, nothing that we will do here today or in the next month will change, and I think the American people know and I know every Member of this body knows, nothing will change the fact that every social security recipient will get their paycheck on time, with full benefits, at least until the year 2034.

I want to remind Members, though, that what the Committee on Ways and Means has done over the last 8 months under the leadership of the Republican majority is focus on an $800 billion tax cut, rather than a structural reform for social security. I think many of us feel like we ought to set some money aside so when we address the structural reform, we will have that money to be able to pay for it.

I want to talk to the Members about the cuts, if I might, the across-the-board cuts. I want to tell a very personal story. I got word earlier this week that last Thursday a young lieutenant commander in the Navy who happens to be a cousin of mine, Lieutenant Commander Raymond Worthington, flying off the U.S.S. Eisenhower, lost power on both engines as he began to take off, and the nose turned down into the water and he and his back seat ejected, and obviously were rescued and safe, but the plane was destroyed.

I tell that story because his mother, for the 3 years I have been in Congress, has been hounding me about the age of F-14s and the availability of spare parts, and the shortage of mechanics and people who keep these F-14s running and in good shape.

I want to tell the Members, this across-the-board cut will cut $1 billion out of the operations and maintenance account of the Department of Defense. It will make it harder for Lieutenant Commander Raymond Worthington and his cohorts to get the maintenance and spare parts they need.

I want to tell the Members also what else these across-the-board cuts do. They take approximately $200 million out of veterans' health care, something that we all agree has been underfunded for many, many, many years. That is very wrong, and I would hope that this Congress, this House, would reject those across-the-board cuts.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself the balance of my time.

Mr. Speaker, just two points in closing. With respect to veterans' health care, everyone has said that the original budget request was inadequate. We all agree on that.

On this side of the aisle, during consideration of the Veterans Department budget we asked that $2.4 billion be made available for veterans health. The committee chose to provide $1.7 billion, instead. Now, the action that is coming today on the part of the majority party will cut an additional $200 million out of that $1.7 billion. We do not think they ought to do that.

Secondly, we have heard a lot of people give some lurid examples of waste, fraud and abuse. They said, we can easily get at that if we pass this 1 percent cut. The problem is that the way the 1 percent cut is designed, we cannot get at any of that waste, fraud, and abuse. We also cannot get at any congressional Members' pork projects, any of the earmarks.

One example, in the VA-HUD report on page 95, we will find a list of 444 earmarked items. The problem is that none of those items can be eliminated under this proposal before us today. All we can do is take 1 percent out of them.

I will place all of those items in the RECORD so people can see what I mean. I am not suggesting that some of these projects are not perfectly legitimate. I am saying that it is a fraud when Members come to the floor and bring up these lurid examples, mostly from 5 and 7 years ago, and say, "oh, we should cut this out," when in fact the way they have drafted this provision prevents the administrators from being able to cut out that which they object to.

Mr. Speaker, I would simply say, in the time remaining, I recognize the gentleman from Florida has done everything that he can in order to keep this issue on the merits. I recognize he has done everything he can to try to see that we handled these issues in a responsible way. I think there have been considerable problems above his pay grade that have prevented us from doing that. I know if he were left to his own instincts, we would have a far different product here today. Again, I appreciate the opportunity I have had to work with the gentleman.

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself the balance of my time.

Mr. Speaker, I compliment both sides of the debate for their chartsmanship, because we have produced some nice-looking charts. This one that I am going to refer to today has a lot of writing on it. Members may not be able to see it too well, but I will refer to it.

I wanted to say to my friend, the gentleman from South Carolina, who said that we cannot get our job done, I want the Members of the Congress to know that we are getting our job done. When we pass the next bill today, we will have sent all 13 appropriation bills to the President, along with the two supplementals that the President had asked for. We are doing it without a massive omnibus appropriations bill like we saw last year, and that most all of us pledged not to let happen again.

I want to thank my friend, the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. OBEY). While we have had some fairly strong political differences, and we have had different approaches to our positions, the fact is that we have worked together very well, and we have cooperated with each other in order to get the job done.

Let me tell the Members how the job has been done. If we look at this chart, there are 30 items on this chart that the Committee on Appropriations will have done at the end of this day, 30 items. I challenge any other committee in the House or the Senate to have produced 30 measures to bring before their body for votes.

Let us just take a look at it: the Kosovo emergency supplemental; the Hurricane Mitch supplemental; the conference report on the two supplementals; the Agricultural Appropriations bill; the conference report on the Agriculture bill; the Commerce-Justice-State Appropriations bill; the conference report on Commerce-Justice-State; the Defense Appropriations bill; the conference report on the Defense Appropriations bill; the District of Columbia Appropriations bill No. 1; the conference report on the D.C. bill No. 1; the District of Columbia bill No. 2; the Energy and Water bill; the conference report on Energy and Water;

the Foreign Operations appropriations bill; the conference report on the Foreign Operations Appropriations bill; the Interior Appropriations bill; the conference report on the Interior Appropriations bill; the Legislative Branch Appropriations bill; the conference report on the Legislative Branch Appropriations bill; the Military Construction Appropriations bill; the conference report on the Military Construction Appropriations bill; the Transportation Appropriations bill; the conference report on the Transportation Appropriations bill; the Treasury-Postal Service Appropriations bill; the conference report on that bill; the VA-HUD-Independent Agencies Appropriations bill; the conference report on the VA bill; the steel, oil, and gas loan program issue that came to us from the Senate; and today, then, item No. 30, the conference report on D.C. No. 2 and Labor-HHS.

So the Committee on Appropriations, while we have had political differences, has worked well together to produce these items. They all will have been on the President's desk by the end of this week. The President will probably veto the last five bills. He has signed the first eight, which I think is a major accomplishment. There are five bills that we expect will be vetoed.

We need to have this last bill on the President's desk so that then we can deal with the President's vetos specifically. Once he vetoes the bill, he sends that message back to us and he tells us why he rejects that bill. That gives us somewhere to start in the final negotiations to find how we can rewrite those bills to get them signed by the President.

So contrary to those who say we cannot get our job done, the Committee on Appropriations is and has been getting its job done. I think the appropriators on both sides of the aisle, while maybe not totally supportive of everything in all of these bills, ought to be rather proud of the record they have established here. Again, I thank the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. OBEY) for helping us move these bills.

I want to say a word about our leadership. Our leadership has come in for some criticism because they have involved themselves in appropriations issues on occasion.

Well, that is the role of the leadership. They have a right to do that.

I have to tell our Members that, when I, as speaking from the Committee on Appropriations, presented a problem or had a discussion, I found great support for the strategies that we were suggesting, for the policies that we were suggesting. Our leadership supported us every way they could. Did they have input? Of course they did. That is why we elect leaders, to have something to say about the outcome of the legislative process.

So all in all, despite being miles apart on political rhetoric, we are fairly close together on getting our job done. I am proud of the Members of the Committee on Appropriations on both sides. While I may disagree with some of them, especially on that side, I am very proud of the fact that we have been able to produce 30 separate appropriations issues and passed all of them but one, and we are going to pass that one today.

I would also like to add that, up until today and all the votes that we have had on appropriations bills, we have received 8,702 aye votes to 3,514 no votes. That is almost three to one ayes. So the House, in my opinion, has shown great support for the work product of the Committee on Appropriations. I am very, very proud of that record. I hope that all of the members on the Committee on Appropriations on both sides share that pride, because we are getting our job done.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BE-REUTER). All time for debate has expired.

The joint resolution is considered as having been read for amendment.

Pursuant to the order of the House of Wednesday, October 27, 1999, the previous question is ordered.

The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the joint resolution.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was read the third time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the passage of the joint resolution.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Evidently a quorum is not present.

The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 424, nays 2, not voting 7, as follows:

So the joint resolution was agreed to. The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

CONFERENCE REPORT ON H.R. 3064, DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 2000

Mr. LINDER. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 345 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. RES. 345

Resolved, That upon adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to consider the conference report to accompany the bill (H.R. 3064) making appropriations for the government of the District of Columbia and other activities chargeable in whole or in part against revenues of said District for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2000, and for other purposes. All points of order against the conference report and against its consideration are waived. The conference report shall be considered as read. The conference report shall be debatable for two hours equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Appropriations.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BE-REUTER). The gentleman from Georgia (Mr. LINDER) is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. LINDER. Mr. Speaker, for purposes of debate only, I yield the customary 30 minutes to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. FROST); pending which I yield myself such time as I may consume. During consideration of this resolution, all time yielded is for the purpose of debate only.

Mr. Speaker, House Resolution 345 provides for the consideration of the conference report to accompany H.R. 3064, a bill to provide for fiscal year 2000 District of Columbia appropriations, and for other purposes.

Mr. Speaker, this rule waives all points of order against the conference report and its consideration, and provides that the conference report shall be considered as read. The rule provides for 2 hours of general debate divided equally between the chairman and the ranking minority member of the Committee on Appropriations. House rules provide for one motion to recommit, with or without instructions, as is the right of the minority of the House.

Mr. Speaker, this resolution is intended to move the appropriations process forward and send the message that we are committed to sending all of the 13 appropriations bills to the President. I heard it stated on the House floor earlier this week that only three times in the last 2 decades has the Congress passed all 13 appropriations bills by the fiscal deadline. Like past Congresses, we did not meet the set deadline, but today we are sending the final appropriations bill to the President for his signature.

Keeping America's fiscal house in order does take a little longer than the freewheeling spending days of the past because we must ensure that all funding is spent efficiently and where it is needed most. Notwithstanding the fiscal constraints we now face after decades of fiscal irresponsibility, the bill before us today responsibly funds areas important to every American citizen and also protects the American people from waste, fraud and abuse in Federal agencies.

I want to discuss briefly the contents of the conference report that this rule makes in order. Mr. Speaker, this is a responsible bill that provides funding for important issues across the Nation. It includes funding for the District of Columbia, and substantial funding for education and health programs in the jurisdiction of the Departments of Education, Labor, and Health and Human Services. It also forces Federal workers to weed out waste in all of their agencies to find savings that will protect the Social Security program.

The President has stated clearly that they want to spend more money. Once again, Members on the other side of the aisle have refused to admit what the rest of America strongly believes, that Social Security funds should be spent on Social Security benefits and nothing else. I urge President Clinton to work with Congress to ensure that Social Security is not raided to spend more money on wasteful and inefficient Washington spending plans.

To achieve this, we are including in this bill a plan to direct every Federal agency to reduce spending by less than 1 percent, .97 of 1 percent, by rooting out waste, fraud and abuse. Surely the Federal Government can save one penny out of every dollar, and the American people know that. By cutting waste in the Federal Government, we can stop the raid on Social Security that this government has done for decades.

American citizens every month sit at the kitchen table and find ways to pay their bills and save money for their future. This Congress is simply asking the men and women who run Federal Government agencies to make the same kind of fiscally responsible bud-eting with the money taxed out of our paychecks. This plan puts the power in the hands of each agency because each agency would have the opportunity to identify that percent of waste, fraud, and abuse and eliminate it.

It is up to the agency head to decide where to find the savings, and I am sure even the best government program wastes at least 1 cent on the dollar. For example, the Government Accounting Office audits have found that Federal agencies were unable to account for over $800 billion in government assets, that one out of every $18 spent in the Section 8 program is wasted, and that the government lost over $3.3 billion on students who never paid back their student loans. Another example of waste; approximately 26,000 deceased persons received $8.5 million in food stamps.

We all know that the agency directors and executives know where the waste is, and I am relatively certain they will be able to weed out at least that much in savings with this sensible plan.

The second component of this conference report includes the District of Columbia funding that was included in the first D.C. appropriations bill, appropriating a total of $429.1 million in Federal funding support for the District and sending $6.77 billion in District funds back to the people of Washington.

We maintain a number of important provisions that are designed to turn our Nation's Capital around, including ratification of the tax cut plan that was allotted by the city council and the Mayor of the District of Columbia to provide more opportunity for District residents to save their hard-earned money, reinvest it, to create jobs, and stimulate economic growth.

In addition, part of the city-wide effort to revitalize the District also depends upon efforts to reduce the scourge of drug use and related crime in the District of Columbia. Therefore, we have provided funding for universal drug screening and testing, additional probation and parole officers, and drug treatment services.

I am also very pleased that the bill retains the current law prohibition on Federal funds from being spent on any program to distribute needles for the purpose of illegal drug injection.

Finally, the third component of this conference report includes funding for the final appropriations bill allocating money for the Department of Labor, Education and Human Services. The Labor, Education, HHS allotment includes health and education funding, including funding increases for the Maternal and Child Health Block Grant, the Ryan White AIDS Health Services, and Head Start.

We have also included more funding than the President requested for education in the form of education block grants, safe and drug-free schools,

State grants, and vocational education State grants.

We continue to seek to fund education initiatives in ways to infuse incentives, flexibility, and accountability into a system that has so often felt comfortable with the status quo, and this conference report moves us toward our goal of strengthening our schools and improving learning for all of our children.

In the Health and Human Services portion of the conference report, I am also personally pleased that the National Institutes of Health has received an increase in funding over the President's budget request.

I believe that medical research represents the single most effective weapon in our arsenal against the diseases that affect Americans. The advances our scientists and doctors have made over the course of the last century could not have been predicted by even the most farsighted observers. Our own lives might some day depend on the efforts of scientists and doctors currently laboring in our Nation's Federal laboratories, and I am pleased that this important account has been increased for fiscal year 2000 so that this research can continue and expand.

I urge the President to stop issuing veto threats to our fiscally responsible appropriations bills and join us in preserving Social Security and maintaining our balanced budget.

I hope that this conference report serves as a first step toward a cooperative budget process that will result in a balanced budget and secure a future for America's seniors.

This rule was favorably reported by the Committee on Rules last evening. I urge my colleagues to support the rule today on the floor so that we may proceed with a general debate and consideration of this important conference report.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, this rule marks the end of a sad chapter in a year-long budgetary charade played out by the Republican majority.

This is the last of the 13 appropriations bills to be considered for fiscal year 2000. And what has the Republican majority done with the 2000 budget? Let us take a moment to examine this closely.

They have done nothing to strengthen Social Security. They have done nothing to strengthen Medicare. And they are following budgetary policies that hurt every American family. And to make matters worse, according to the Congressional Budget Office, their budget actually spent $17 billion of the Social Security surplus in spite of the fact that they troop out here every morning claiming they are not touching a penny of it.

Let us not forget for a moment what the Republican majority tried to do earlier this year with the surplus. The Republicans passed a $780 billion tax cut that was wisely rejected by the President and by the American people because it squandered the surplus instead of using it to pay down the national debt and to strengthen Medicare and Social Security.

And so we move on to the latest chapter in this sad story of the budgetary games being played out by the Republican majority.

In this chapter, they are proposing a .97 percent across-the-board cut for all Federal programs in order to make up for the fact that they cannot get their job done. In essence, what they are saying is, stop me before I sin again. Stop me before I raid even more from the Social Security Trust Fund.

So what does this .97 percent mean? Let us listen to General Hugh Shelton, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, in Congressional testimony earlier this week. "This across-the-board cut would strip away the gains that we have made or what we've just done to start readiness moving back in the right direction. In other words, if applied to this program, it would be devastating. If it went into the personnel accounts, it would be disastrous."

According to the Comptrollers Office at the Department of Defense, this mindless across-the-board cut would mean a reduction of anywhere between 27,800 and 50,000 active-duty personnel. At the low end, this would represent a reduction of 9,600 troops for the Army; 7,500 for the Navy; 3,400 for the Marines; and 7,300 for the Air Force.

This is the equivalent of three-fourths of an Army airborne division, one aircraft carrier, two attack submarines, two Burke-class destroyers, 1½ Marine Expeditionary Units, and two Air Force fighter wings. All this at a time when our armed forces are stretched thin across the globe. This, Mr. Speaker, is nonsense.

Last night during the Committee on Rules hearing, the gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. ISTOOK) tried to tell me that these cuts would come from waste, fraud, and abuse and from the classic expensive Pentagon toilet seat. He tried to tell me that because the Pentagon budget signed by the President was $4.5 billion more than the President requested, the nearly $3 billion in cuts mandated by the across-the-board cut in this conference report would not really represent a cut in the Defense Department.

The gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. ISTOOK) said last night that these are not cuts, they are merely adjustments. I beg to differ with his analysis.

Mr. Speaker, as I said earlier this week, the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff said that these so-called adjustments would be devastating to military readiness. Readiness, in my book, does not represent waste, fraud, and abuse.

Let me tell my colleagues what these adjustments in readiness will represent. A cut in $720 million in military personnel, which leaves that account $600 million below the President's request, and the so-called adjustment will also represent a $1.1 billion cut in operations and maintenance, bringing that account down $1.1 billion below the President's request.

Last night the gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. ISTOOK) said that because of the obstinacy of the members of the Clinton cabinet, it would be hard to make any projections about what these adjustments might mean until they "get out of denial."

Well, Mr. Speaker, it is hard for General Shelton and the Joint Chiefs of Staff to be in denial about $2.7 billion worth of cuts in the Defense Department when the bill signed by the President and passed by the majority in the other side contains projects they did not ask for.

That includes $375 million as a down payment on a $1.5 million helicopter carrier to be built in Mississippi, the State of the Senate majority leader, or $320 million for a ship to be built in San Diego, or $15 million for a study of the aurora borealis, things that were added by the Members of the other side of the aisle.

Mr. Speaker, this is mindless budgeting and a clumsy attempt to appear to be living up to the Republican mantra of saving Social Security. The Republicans are not saving Social Security. They are not doing anything about ensuring its solvency, nor are they protecting Medicare. They are trying desperately to save their thin majority in this House. They are looking out for number one and letting the American people down in the process. They are cutting vital defense programs, ignoring Social Security, and denying senior Americans prescription drug coverage.

This is a shameful exercise, Mr. Speaker. I urge every Member of this House, every Member who cares about the honest budgeting and living up to our responsibility as elected representatives, to vote against this farce and to work in the next week to come up with real solutions for the American people.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BE-REUTER). The Chair would remind Members of something that is too often forgotten. Members should not make reference to individual Members of the other body.

Mr. LINDER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 30 seconds to point out that my friend, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. FROST), who spent nearly 2 decades in the majority, spending 100 percent of the Social Security surplus without batting an eye, is now concerned that we are trying to save it.

I further would like to point out that every family in America has learned how to cut 1 percent of their family budget. Surely, even the Pentagon can figure out how to do that.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to my friend, the gentleman from southern California (Mr. CUNNINGHAM), a member of the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. CUNNINGHAM. Mr. Speaker, I think it is the height for someone that spent time in the majority that consistently voted to take money out of Social Security to then come up and rail on Republicans on Social Security. The gentleman that just spoke did that very same thing time and time again.

Secondly, I was in the hearing where General Shelton testified to the President's budget on defense. He said that the President's budget was completely adequate on defense. We added $16 billion to that fact. And now the General says that 1 percent would be hurtful, after we added $16 billion and he testified that $16 billion would be less.

General Shelton is a war hero, but I think he has no political spine in the fact that he is supporting the President and the Democrats in trying to veto every single one of these bills so that they can spend more money.

In that defense bill that he said that the President signed this week, everybody knows that the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. BONIOR), the President, and the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. GEPHARDT) did everything they could to have Democrats stand up and vote against the defense bill so that they could use it as leverage on all of these bills.

I mean, that is wrong, Mr. Speaker. My colleagues ought to be ashamed of themselves, absolutely ashamed.

And then the President signs it and says, well, it is because of the 1.8. The only reason he signed it is because Democrats stood before the President and said they gave their word, 100 percent of the Democrats on the committee in the Senate and the House said that they would support the defense bill. And then the President had to back out.

Do my colleagues know what he told one of those Democrats? And I will not mention their name because it was a personal conversation. He said, Oh, do not tell people that I was going to veto it anyway.

That is sick, Mr. Speaker, absolutely sick and what the Democrats are trying to do.

Secondly, we add education money. One of the gentlemen from the other body from Illinois, in the conference we add over $300 million above the President's request for education, and the gentleman from the other body said, oh, but you are making a cut, right? We said, no. We are increasing education spending from last year and we are adding $350 million above what the President requested. He said, oh, you are cutting. And the gentleman from Illinois kept on. And Senator STEVENS, or the chairman, I am not supposed to mention his name, sorry, the chairman of the committee said, no, that is not true. We are adding money from last year and we are adding money above the President's request. And the gentleman from Illinois said, well, that is not what we originally wanted.

So we are still increasing, but the same old spin that we are cutting.

Now, I am sick and tired of the Democrats using demagoguery to try and veto every one of these bills so that they can spend more money. They sit there and support the President. The gentleman from Missouri (Mr. GEPHARDT) just walked in. They support the President's budget.

Well, Mr. GEPHARDT, that story you told about Mars bars, where your mother wanted you to save the money, you should have listened to your mother. You still have not learned a lesson. You still want to spend and spend and spend and to tax to do that. Shame on you, Mr. GEPHARDT.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will address his remarks to the Chair.

Mr. CUNNINGHAM. Shame on you, Mr. Speaker.

I apologize.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. That is not exactly what the Chair had in mind, but the gentleman understands his point.

Mr. CUNNINGHAM. Mr. Speaker, I understand that.

But the point is that let us get out of this charade of trying to veto all of these bills so that the President has more leverage on all of these bills.

I think it is perfectly fair to say, Mr. President, we are going to give you 13 appropriations bills. Take out your red marker where your priorities are and identify under the balanced budget where those lines are, but do not dip into Social Security and Medicare.

The 1 percent across-the-board, including Members' pay, which I support, is a way to stay under that, but yet Members even reject that. I think that that is false, and I think it is wrong. Get a life.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair would remind Members that they cannot characterize Members of the other body intentions or remarks unless they are factual recitals of the public record in the other body on this pending measure.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. GEPHARDT).

(Mr. GEPHARDT asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

□ 1315

Mr. GEPHARDT. Mr. Speaker, this Republican budget is a bad deal for America's families, and it is really when you think about it the worst of all worlds. It does not extend the life of Social Security by one day. It does not provide one penny for a Medicare prescription drug benefit. And worst of all, it hurts every family in America in some important way.

Today's Congressional Budget Office letter to Speaker HASTERT repudiates the Republican false claim about safeguarding the Social Security surplus. The CBO clearly and directly says the Republican budget has already spent $17 billion of the Social Security surplus on the spending bills. This letter does not use Democratic or Republican numbers to come up with the $17 billion figure, it uses CBO's own non-partisan numbers. It exposes once and for all the clear fact that the Republicans are the raiders of the Social Security surplus they claim to have safely stowed in the lockbox.

And, remember, the use of CBO numbers is something that Republicans felt so strongly about in 1995, they shut down the government over using CBO numbers consistently throughout the budget. They passed a resolution of the House in 1995 saying we would only use CBO numbers. Well, under the CBO numbers consistently applied across this budget, they say that we are spending $17 billion of Social Security surplus.

Democrats are fighting for the real needs of families while the only real priority of the Republican Congress has been to squander the surplus on tax cuts for the wealthy and special interests. Democrats want to strengthen and extend the life of Social Security, and we want to protect and modernize Medicare. Democrats support the President's plan to devote the entire Social Security surplus to debt reduction and extend its solvency to the year 2050, and we have a proposal to add a prescription drug plan for Medicare. Republicans come up empty on both counts. Their budget fails to address the issue of how we can extend the life of Social Security to ensure that current and future retirees can continue to depend on the foundation of retirement security. And they have no answer for seniors who are forced today to choose between health care and prescription drugs and what they can afford.

Some people say this debate is not real, that it is some kind of an inside-the-Beltway ritual, that somehow we enjoy gridlock and we do not want anything to happen. Well, people who say that are dead wrong. Go tell the senior who is going to be waiting for the meals on wheels and it does not come and it is not just the meal, it is the human contact that comes to that senior citizen to allow them to live in their home. This bill cuts thousands of meals on wheels.

Go tell the child who is going to wind up in an overcrowded classroom because this bill does not contain what it should to try to get more teachers and to try to get more classrooms. Go tell the parent who is worried about dealing with their children using drugs that we had to cut the safe and drug-free bill. And ask the cancer patient who benefits from NIH research. I have been there. You have heard me tell the story of my son and what it was like to have that resident come in the room after he was diagnosed with terminal cancer and say, "We got on the computer last night and we found an NIH therapy that might save his life. Don't get your hopes up but we're going to try."

Let me tell you something. When you need that research, you need it. This bill puts the NIH funding off to the last two days of the fiscal year, some kind of a cheap stunt in order to make the numbers come out. It makes no sense. Vote "no" on this budget. Let us sit down as adults with the President and the leaders of this Congress, the appropriators, let us come up with a budget that makes sense for the American people, that saves Social Security and Medicare and does right by America's families.

Mr. LINDER. Mr. Speaker, for the purpose of injecting some sorely needed truth into this discussion, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. ISTOOK).

Mr. ISTOOK. Mr. Speaker, I know we always hear some things that are long on emotion but short on facts or short on logic. One would think that what we were doing is cutting out or eliminating certain programs that the gentleman from Missouri referred to. That is not the case at all. What this bill says is for the discretionary spending of the Federal Government, let us reduce it 1 percent across the board. Not singling out any program for elimination, not singling out any department, not Meals on Wheels, not the military, not anyone but just saying overall in government, can we tighten our belt by 1 percent so that we do not jeopardize the Social Security trust fund any more. Because in the past, hundreds of billions of dollars from the Social Security trust fund were spent by Congress. And it happened even after the Republican majority took over because we were trying to make the change and now we are making it. Most of it, of course, in the prior years.

But the time to use Social Security money for all these other things has stopped, and all you have to do is say to the rest of government, spend 99 cents instead of $1. That is it. And we do not touch Social Security benefits, we do not touch veterans benefits, we do not touch Medicare benefits. It is only the discretionary programs that are touched. Is that asking too much? Is that the end of the world? Of course not. Except to the people who claim what they do not want to do is spend Social Security, but what is their answer? Do they want to spend the same amount but just differently? No. Do they want to spend less so that we do not touch Social Security? No. They want to spend more. The Democrats want to spend more. That is what this is about. We are saying no.

The CBO scoring documents, the Congressional Budget Office has given us in writing what they are not telling. They quote from the CBO and talk about the withdrawals from the government treasury, the withdrawals, the spending side, but they leave out what CBO has said about the deposits. It is in writing and CBO has given it to us based upon the things and the bill upon which we are about to vote, it will not touch Social Security, there will still be a billion dollar surplus without even counting Social Security money. They want to count the withdrawals of the account, they do not want to count the deposits. CBO, when you count the deposits as well as the withdrawals, says you keep the budget balanced and you do it without spending Social Security money. And it is about time that we do that.

I am sick to hear these Cabinet officers stand up in front of the camera and say, oh, there is no way that we can trim back 1 percent. Tell that to the American families that have to do it constantly, adjustments a lot bigger than 1 percent, or businesses or anyone else. Do not tell me that Federal agencies cannot find the way to save one penny on the dollar.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1½ minutes to the gentlewoman from California (Mrs. CAPPS).

Mrs. CAPPS. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong opposition to the rule and to this bill. As a nurse, I have long advocated for Federal support of medical research. Over the past few years, we have substantially increased funding at NIH. This investment pays great dividends. Most importantly, it helps ease the suffering of millions.

My daughter Lisa is currently in a fight with cancer. She knows and I know the importance of the work of NIH, work that is in process right now. The bill before us supposedly provides $17 billion for NIH, an increase of 15 percent over last year. But in a slick accounting gimmick to make it look like they are balancing the budget, House leaders are holding back nearly half of the money until the closing days of this year. This will push $2 billion onto next year's books and allow them to claim they are saving Social Security.

I am amazed and appalled at such irresponsibility. It is no wonder this is being rushed through without adequate debate. This gimmick will actually have the effect of cutting NIH funding. Scientists today will have to slow their work while they wait for funding, seriously hampering saving research, research my daughter and so many others are waiting for, their lives on hold.

I urge my colleagues to vote down this rule and to fully fund the NIH starting today.

Mr. LINDER. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Florida (Mr. GOSS), my colleague on the Committee on Rules.

(Mr. GOSS asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GOSS. I thank the distinguished gentleman from Georgia for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, as we debate this very big bill we will necessarily be focused on big issues, as we have already heard, but I wanted to take a moment out to speak more to the human side, to commend the Committee on Appropriations for not overlooking an issue of very great importance but not of major press focus these days. I am referring to a line item that partially funds the Ricky Ray Hemophilia Relief Act found in this year's appropriations bill.

I think my colleagues will remember last year Congress enacted the Ricky Ray bill, which provides compassionate assistance from the Federal Government for victims of hemophilia associated AIDS. This law responds to that awful tragedy that has impacted the lives of thousands of Americans and continues to do that. This is the first year that we have sought funding for the Ricky Ray program, and I was grateful to see the Committee on Appropriations was receptive to beginning the funding process by allocating $50 million for fiscal year 2000. I certainly understand how difficult the appropriations process has been this year, I think we all do, so I am especially pleased that we are moving forward on this critically important program. I know the hemophilia community wishes we could allocate more money this year, the actual total funding would be $750 million, but I am hopeful that as the process continues the Committee on Appropriations will continue work to see that we set aside more funds.

I have a letter from the National Hemophilia Foundation expressing appreciation, which I would like to insert in the RECORD at the appropriate point. I know many Americans will join me in thanking our colleagues the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. PORTER), the gentleman from Florida (Mr. MILLER), the gentleman from Florida (Mr. YOUNG) for finding a way to start the funding for this program. I do not believe the sky is falling. I think good things are happening. I think this proves it. I urge support for the rule and for this bill.

The letter referred to is as follows:

NATIONAL HEMOPHILIA FOUNDATION,
New York, NY, October 5, 1999.

Hon. C.W. YOUNG,
Chairman,
Committee on Appropriations,
House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

DEAR CHAIRMAN YOUNG: On behalf of the hemophilia community, I wish to express our deepest gratitude for your strong leadership and commitment to providing initial funding for the Ricky Ray Hemophilia Relief Trust Fund in the FY2000 Labor, Health and Human Services Appropriations Bill. Nearly 5,000 persons with hemophilia have died from the complications of HIV/AIDS since HIV contaminated the blood supply during the 1980s. Approximately 2,700 individuals with hemophilia continue to live with HIV. For these individuals and for the families in the hemophilia community who lost their loved ones, the funding included in the FY2000 bill begins to fulfill the promise Congress made when it passed the Ricky Ray Hemophilia Relief Fund Act last year.

As you proceed to conference with the Senate, we ask that you continue to explore avenues to provide increased funding for the Ricky Ray Relief Act and ensure its full implementation as rapidly as possible. The time-limited nature of the Trust Fund and the pressing medical, financial, and personal costs borne by our community give urgency to this request.

Again, we thank you for your outstanding efforts and look forward to working with you to fully fund the Ricky Ray Trust Fund.

Sincerely,

EDWARD JONES,
President.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to the gentlewoman from New York (Ms. SLAUGHTER).

Ms. SLAUGHTER. I thank the gentleman for yielding time. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong opposition to the rule and the underlying bill. This rule provides for the consideration of the third version of the D.C. appropriations bill and the Labor-HHS bill which has never been voted on in the House, and just for good measure an across-the-board cut of 1 percent. This bill does not extend Social Security or Medicare solvency for even a single day. My friends on the other side know full well that the President will veto this bill and we will have to come back. And a veto is well deserved.

Mr. Speaker, if we pass this rule, we are endorsing a most unusual procedure. The annual Labor, Health and Human Services bill appropriates about one-third of the United States budget. It makes vitally important decisions about funding levels for everything from cancer research to teacher training. One would think that the Members of this House would consider it their responsibility to bring such a bill to the floor and to vigorously debate amendments which might make it better. But my friends in the majority are going to shirk that responsibility and opt instead for a single up-or-down vote on a whole grab bag of issues, some lacking even a passing acquaintance with the Labor-HHS bill.

In my district, Rochester, New York, experts at the University of Rochester are conducting internationally recognized research in biotechnology and medical investigation. But in a bill where out of the ordinary is considered routine, this measure will delay any grants from January until September 29, 2000. There will be no research grants for a year. People who are waiting for cures, praying for cures know that this bill will not help them. As a former scientist, I can tell you research cannot be conducted that way. A delay of a year could be a delay for a lifetime. Research delayed is results denied, results which might help save a life or improve the quality of life for our fellow Americans.

Mr. Speaker, I have tremendous admiration for the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. PORTER), the subcommittee chairman. He has been a champion in so many ways and his intelligence, competence and compassion will be irreplaceable when he retires at the end of next year. I really believe that in another place and time he would have brought a much different bill to the floor. But in this time and place the Labor-HHS bill cannot pass on its own. And so the majority relies on procedural shenanigans to slip it through.

The other side will argue it is really just a cut in office supplies and travel budgets and maybe coffee money. Really? Well, how about a $184 million cut in veterans medical care, or $2.7 billion cut in defense, which would mean eliminating jobs for tens of thousands of men and women in uniform? The top military official in the United States has warned that this approach could seriously impair our military readiness, but the majority here will be arguing office supplies and travel budgets.

I do not blame the American people for finding this hard to believe. I find it hard to believe.

Earlier this year this same majority said it had $892 million for a tax cut using up the Social Security money. Now it says it has to cut back on Head Start and child nutrition.

A retroactive cut in bills which have already been signed by the President is a new wrinkle for us, and that has happened for several of the appropriations bills. It is very much like the contractor who builds a house, Mr. Speaker, and then comes back the next morning and breaks the windows.

The rule is objectionable because it condones the highly unconventional process under which we consider this underlying bill, and the bill is objectionable for reasons too numerous to fully address in the time allotted for any of us, but I solemnly urge defeat of both.

Mr. LINDER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from Connecticut (Mrs. JOHNSON).

Mrs. JOHNSON of Connecticut. Mr. Speaker, I would just like to put the debate on this final spending bill in context.

The President brought us what he called a balanced budget proposal. It was balanced, but it increased spending dramatically; and it funded it, and this is why it was balanced, it funded it by raising taxes $160 billion on the American people at a time when taxes are higher than they have ever been with the exception of 1 year during World War II.

Mr. Speaker, we put his budget on the floor, and we did not support it, and most of my colleagues did not support it on the other side of the aisle. Recently the President suggested that we close the gap between what we need to fund next year's services and the money available by raising taxes $20 billion. Well, we brought that proposal to the floor. The Republicans opposed that increase in taxes; and, as I recall, everyone of the Democrats did too.

So, do not just talk. Be part of the action. What we are doing here today is finding a way to adjust our expenditures so that we can do the things the American people need.

Any Secretary, any Cabinet member paid the salaries they are being paid can cut their expenses 1 percent over the year. The gentlewoman from New Mexico (Mrs. WILSON), one of our colleagues, was made head of the agency in Arizona responsible for children's services halfway through the year, and she had to save 4 percent in half a year, and she did it without touching a single children's program.

Mr. Speaker, there is not anyone I represent who does not work in a factory or in a work place that over the last 2 years has not had to be more efficient and cut overhead in order to put their product out there on the market better quality, lower price. It is nothing in the private sector to have to find 1 percent.

Why is this an emergency? Why is it that the gentleman from Missouri could get up here and claim that we are going to cut programs like Meals On Wheels? As my colleagues know, it is really very distressing to see the level of fear they were willing to put out there over 1 percent. Frankly, if my colleagues cannot cut 1 percent out of their own expenditures, if any high-paid executive cannot cut 1 percent out without compromising programs, they are not a person who understands quality improvement, continuous improvement, or all of the other modern management techniques that allow them to reduce administrative costs and improve the delivery of services.

So I am astounded at these horror stories that my colleagues are putting out, but let me also say one other thing. I am proud of what we are doing because in this Congress we have quietly decided to move our own goalposts. A few years ago we balanced the budget with great fanfare. That is terrific. This year we found, because the economy was doing well, we have the opportunity to balance that budget without Social Security funds. First time ever. I mean talk about revolutions.

Balancing the budget was not nearly as hard as balancing it without Social Security funds, and we are going to do it without Social Security funds and without new taxes, and our colleagues should be helping us cut 1 percent, not scaring the American people.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. MENENDEZ).

(Mr. MENENDEZ asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. MENENDEZ. Mr. Speaker, I hear the nervous voices of my Republican colleagues, as they should be nervous, about what they propose today before this House and before the American people.

When I am back home in New Jersey, I spend a lot of my time meeting with working families who are just trying to make ends meet, parents who have to work long hours and need a place to have after-school programs for their kids, senior citizens who are scared that they may have to choose between food and the medicine they need to stay healthy. I have a group in Middlesex County that I am working with to try to serve all of our homebound, bedbound and disabled seniors hot meals. Right now a lot of these people live on cold food or one meal a day. These are real people suffering in my communities and communities across the country.

So when I look at this budget bill, the question I ask is: What does this do for these people? Well, for starters it guts the funding we made to them on hot meals, and it provides nothing to provide these seniors with a prescription drug benefit, but it does not stop there. It denies a million children the chance for a safe after-school program, it cuts funding for over 8,000 desperately needed new teachers, it cuts immunizations for 330,000 poor children, and it does nothing. Mr. Speaker, to extend the life of Social Security, not even by 1 day.

And why does this bill fail in all these respects? Because Republicans need the money to pay for their trillion-dollar tax giveaway, a proposal the American people rejected during the break.

It is all a matter of priorities. This bill does not extend the life of Social Security even by a single day. It fails to provide one penny for a Medicare prescription drug benefit, and the only thing it does, Mr. Speaker, is hurt some American families in some very real way.

To Republicans, the top priorities are tax breaks for their special-interest friends. For we Democrats the top priorities are America's seniors and families. Let us vote with them and against this rule.

Mr. LINDER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

At the risk of sounding remedial, I would like to point out to the gentleman from New Jersey that there is no tax cut in this bill.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from Illinois (Mrs. BIGGERT).

(Mrs. BIGGERT asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Mrs. BIGGERT. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the rule and of the conference report. The report not only includes funding for the District of Columbia, it also includes more money for education, Pell grants for college students, the NIH, Federal impact aid for local communities, the Ryan White AIDS program, and communities services block grants the administration requested.

But I am particularly pleased that the report includes a slightly less than 1 percent cut on new spending including a $1,400 cut to Members of Congress' own pay. Cutting Members' cost-of-living increase tells Federal agencies that they are not alone in holding down costs and says, "If you have to take a cut, Congress will, too." The cut in salary will also bring Members to a level that is more comparable to the Social Security beneficiaries' COLA, further illustrating the Republicans' commitment to preserving Social Security.

I congratulate the Republican leadership for funding key programs in this bill and for keeping its word on protecting Social Security. I urge my colleagues to support the rule and the conference report.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentlewoman from the District of Columbia (Ms. NORTON).

Ms. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding this time to me.

I come to the floor this afternoon in the name of the people of the District of Columbia to protest being used by this rule.

Mr. Speaker, it is one thing to be abused. It is just as bad to be used. It is one thing to be treated like a dog. It is another thing to be treated like a mule. That is what is happening here.

The District of Columbia, the tiniest appropriation, is being used as a mule to carry across the largest appropriation, the Labor-HHS appropriation. This appropriation is the only one that involves a breathing, living city. We should have been the first out of this place. It is the simplest. It is our money, not my colleagues', virtually all of it. It does not belong here. It makes devolution a joke, for me to have to come before my colleagues who have virtually nothing to do with raising the money in this bill to ask for my own money.

Mr. Speaker, it is hung up here extraneous matters that are none of my colleagues' business. It makes the whole idea of devolution as it comes out of their mouths a joke because it involves them in tiny matters that in their jurisdictions would never go anywhere outside their borders.

It makes a lot of hard work go up in smoke. There is the work of the District of Columbia which presented a marvelously balanced budget with tax cuts and a surplus. There is the work of the Senate and House appropriators, and I appreciate that Senator KAY BAILEY HUTCHISON and the gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. ISTOOK) have worked to get a bill that might be signed.

I wondered after the veto of this bill why would there be no negotiations. Talk about irregular order. Nobody sat down and tried to work out our disagreements. Now I know why, because my colleagues needed a bill number. That bill number, the first thing running, happened to be the District of Columbia appropriations containing the money of the people of the District of Columbia raised in the District of Columbia.

Mr. Speaker, my colleagues did not have the nerve and the guts to take their HHS bill to full committee and then to this floor so that it could be debated openly. They tried something so underhanded that it needs to be exposed to the American people.

What has resulted is a double delay. We had to delay while our colleagues negotiated this jerry-built HHS bill. Then we had the delay, of course, while we negotiated our differences in the D.C. bill.

What we have is a potentially significant bill, one not to my liking, and I do not know if it would be signed, that is going over with a bill my colleagues know will not be signed to further delay the people of the District of Columbia getting their own money.

This rule is unworthy of any serious legislative body. It is an unconscionable way to treat the people of the District of Columbia.

Mr. LINDER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Kansas (Mr. TIAHRT), a member of the committee.

Mr. TIAHRT. Mr. Speaker, once again we are stressed between a debate over spending the Social Security surplus. This bill that is the result of this rule will protect the Social Security surplus, but one would not know it from the rhetoric. According to the other side we are actually dipping into the Social Security surplus by $17 billion. But once again we see that the sky is falling and Chicken Little is running about the House of Representatives. They say children will be sitting in crowded schools because of this, seniors will not eat, parents will be helpless to stop their children from doing drugs, medical research will be frozen for a year, and 50,000 troops will be laid off or reduced in force.

Well, none of that is true. Let us just look at defense, for an example. General Shelton came to the House of Representatives, came to the Senate and he said, "Here's the President's budget. We think it's sufficient to provide for our Department of Defense." Then we increased that amount of money in budget authority by $4.5 billion. Now a 1 percent cut would reduce that, but it's still $2 billion over the request that was completely sufficient, $2 billion more, and now, Mr. Speaker, all of a sudden we are going to be laying off 50,000 troops.

How can that be? How can it switch when we are still increasing by $2 billion? Well, I have the letter that says that we are dipping into Social Security surplus by $17 billion that has been referred to by the opponents of this, and it puts some really bogus groundrules to do that. But even if it were true, it says that in order to keep from spending the Social Security surplus, one would have to have a 4.8 percent across-the-board reduction, 4.8 percent. Well, where is their offer to cut the budget by 4.8 percent so we can protect Social Security?

Now, you say this will not extend Social Security even one day. Well, if you do not follow your own rhetoric and arguments, if you do not cut another 4.8 percent, you will shorten the life of Social Security. You will reduce the amount of time that is available for us to pay our seniors the benefits that they have so adeptly earned by working and paying into the system. The charges are not true, so why do they make the charges? To increase spending.

I ask my colleagues to vote for the rule and vote for the bill that follows.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. STENHOLM).

(Mr. STENHOLM asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. STENHOLM. Mr. Speaker, I want to remind myself of the old adage, select your words carefully today, for tomorrow you may eat them. I rise in strong opposition to this rule for a fundamental reason why all of us should be opposing this rule: It brings a $95 billion spending bill to the floor without allowing the House to debate it and to decide where to cut it. That in itself is unprecedented, bringing a bill to the floor as a conference report that has not had committee action, that has not had floor action. That should be sufficient reason for anyone who cares about the process of this House to oppose this rule.

Now, I, too, am sick and tired of demagoguery. I heard an excellent speech from my friend from Alabama (Mr. CALLAHAN) this morning in which he openly and honestly said a lot of things.

My reason for being here today is my opposition to the leadership of this side of the aisle, a leadership that has the gall to stand on this floor and to have a message from their party taking full credit for the balanced budget and the fact that we almost got by without spending Social Security last year, when that same leadership did not vote for the budget of 1990 that laid the foundation, the budget of 1993 that put the walls up on the economy, and only provided 187 votes for the balanced budget agreement in 1997 that has become the mantra of political demagoguery on this floor. How do you have the gall to stand here and to blame anybody? There is enough credit and blame to go around.

I happen to be one of the 46 Democrats that stood and voted with you in 1995 when you said a balanced budget should be required and to use scoring by the nonpartisan Congressional Budget Office based on the most current economic and technical assumptions of the Congressional Budget Office. I agreed with you then, I agree with you today. That is why the Blue Dogs sent a letter to this same CBO asking them to score it, and when they responded to our question of CBO assumptions and methodology and excluding directed scorekeeping, they tell us we are spending $17.1 billion of Social Security, we, the Congress, both sides. But how can people blame the minority when the minority can pass nothing? That is CBO.

All I am saying is it is time for a little honesty. You know, that tax bill that you begged and pleaded with us to support, according to CBO honest scoring, would have spent $120 billion of the same Social Security trust fund we here today are debating.

Come on, it is time to be honest with our rhetoric. "Across the board spending." I heard the gentleman from Oklahoma a moment ago make this talking claim. The measure does not specify the accounts.

Mr. LINDER. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. PORTER), the chairman of the Subcommittee on Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education of the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me time.

Mr. Speaker, we find ourselves at this moment in the middle of a very highly structured and organized disinformation campaign by our colleagues on the other side of the aisle, and yet some of the criticisms that have been leveled I want to admit to.

The gentleman from Texas and earlier the gentlewoman from New York said that it is not right that a bill like the Labor-HHS bill, or any other appropriation bill, comes to the floor without the chance of the House to shape that legislation on the floor. I agree with that. I regret that this bill has not been taken up on the floor. I think it is a failure of process, and I accept the criticism that has been leveled in that regard.

I would say to the gentleman from Texas that the bill was shaped in the subcommittee and in the full Committee of Appropriations and that my colleague from Wisconsin was invited to an informal conference which we had to have in the absence of passing the bill on the floor. He refused to participate and his voice was not heard. But the criticism is a valid one.

Yet there is so much today that is not valid, so much that is disinformation. This bill in total is the same as the President's budget. It is equal to the President's budget in education, it is higher than the President's budget in health and human services, and it is somewhat below the President in labor. But it is equal to the President's budget, overall.

Yes, we differ on how that money ought to be spent, and it is up to the Congress, not the President, to shape legislative policy, and we are doing that.

The minority leader followed by the gentlewoman from California said in effect we are cutting NIH. Let me remind my colleagues from the other side of the aisle that in the last 5 years we have increased NIH 5.7 percent, 6.9 percent, 7.1 percent, and, last year, 15 percent, and in this bill 14 percent. And, very frankly, the President of the United States in his budget this year proposed just a 1.4 percent increase for NIH. Are we supporting biomedical research? Yes, we are. Is anything saying that we are not? The truth is, "no"; it is a lie.

I would end by saying this: Nobody for the last 15 years has attempted to get control over the budget in a way that protects the Social Security reserve, and your side of the aisle has presided over hundreds of billions of dollars of raid on that reserve. Thank God we are trying to correct that right now.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. OBEY).

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, it is absolutely correct that I refused to participate in the conference on the Labor-HHS bill, because it was not a conference. The conference is supposed to come after the House passes a bill.

We were never given an opportunity to debate this bill on the floor and help shape it. Then we went into a conference controlled by the Republican leadership with a specific instruction about what ought to be provided in that bill, and so I simply said to the gentleman, "Look, my friend, when the Republicans have determined what they want in that bill, I will be happy to sit down with you and give you an honest assessment of what else you need to do to get a bill that can be supported on a bipartisan basis." But I will not participate in a sham. And I do not apologize for that. I am proud of it.

Secondly, with respect to NIH, the gentleman from Illinois is a great friend of NIH. There are few better friends in this House than the gentleman from Illinois. But the product today, not through his desire, but because of this silly, phony debate on Social Security, what is happening to NIH is that all but a few hundred million of the $4 billion that we are providing to NIH for new grants will be frozen for an entire year. That will kill people, and that is wrong.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1½ minutes to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. BENTSEN).

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, let me first say to the respected chairman of the subcommittee just for a point of reference, in 1995, my first year in the House, it was the Republican budget, the fiscal 1996 budget, that the President would not adopt that cut the NIH by 5 percent. You all have forgotten about that, but you all did propose that, and thank God you did.

Now, the bill before us today perpetuates a fraud on the Federal budget process and the American people. The Republicans have produced a Federal budget which in reality exceeds the spending caps set in 1997 by more than $30 billion and, according to our own Congressional Budget Office in this letter, spends at least $17 billion against the Social Security surplus, even with the across-the-board cuts, advance funding and gimmicks such as delaying medical research funding and paying the government's bills to private contractors late.

Today we read that the Speaker of the House and the Republican leadership, in their effort to pursue this budgetary fraud for political goals, has cut a deal with the chairman of the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure, promising him that they will make him whole later on. He will get his highways, but medical research, trying to find cure for cancer and AIDS in Houston, Texas, will get the shaft.

No matter how much my Republican friends say it, no matter how much they wish it, the fact remains that, as scored by CBO, their budget exceeds the '97 budget spending caps by $30 billion, and spends $17 billion of the Social Security surplus. This is before the House takes up bills to rewrite the 1997 Balanced Budget Agreement, before the tax credit extensions and the minimum wage tax cuts, which we know will cost billions more.

It is not really whether you cut across the board, it is the fact that you have destroyed the budget process.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. OLVER).

Mr. OLVER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me time.

Mr. Speaker, here we are, 29 days into the new fiscal year, dealing with the largest discretionary budget, other than defense, under most unusual circumstances.

This is the bill that deals with every family in America on education and health and working issues and training and job safety and such, and we are operating under and asked to vote for a rule which completely bypasses regular order.

This is my ninth budget. In not one of those previous 8 years have we dealt with the labor, health and education budget in less than at least one whole day of debate, where it was possible to amend this legislation along the way, either by the minority or the majority, to offer amendments and have them debated and considered along the way.

Not a single amendment can be offered here, not a single one debated. It is totally unamendable under these circumstances. But we are here under that set of rulings, and we should reject the rule for that reason.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentlewoman from the Virgin Islands, Mrs. CHRISTIANSEN.

Mrs. CHRISTENSEN. Mr. Speaker, I thank my colleague for yielding me time.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong opposition to the rule and to this combined DC/Labor-HHS-Education conference report, which in reality is a misnomer, because the majority did not even bother to bring a freestanding Labor-HHS-Education bill to the floor.

While they are continuing to invent new budgetary gimmicks to mask the fact they have already raided the Social Security surplus, our friends in the majority have brought a Labor-HHS bill to the floor which cuts many of the President's priority requests to a completely unacceptable level. In fact, even if the President's request was approved, it would not have been adequate to sustain and meet the current capacity building needs of minority communities. Of the CDC's minority HIV and Health Disparities request, it cuts the administration's request by $39 million, making it less than last year's level. This is unconscionable and must not be allowed to stand. We cannot afford to take a step back, just as we are finally beginning to make a difference.

My colleagues, we must not allow disparate treatment in health care of minorities to continue. I urge my colleagues to vote against this unfair rule and this mean-spirited bill which cuts much needed funding in health care, education and social services to our families and our children.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, the speakers on the other side, several of them have engaged in what I have referred to as triple-speak, not double-speak but triple-speak. They said, oh, well, the President only requested X for defense, and Congress voted more than the President requested for defense. Now they are cutting back across-the-board 1 percent, and the figure is still more than the President requested for defense. Therefore, defense is just hunky-dory.

What the gentlemen on the other side really did was to appropriate more than the President requested for weapons systems, for pet weapons systems for particular Members of Congress, money that was not even requested by the President. Now they want to cut below what the President requested for operations and maintenance and for personnel.

This is not double-speak, this is triple-speak. In fact, the Defense Department, under their 1 percent cut, will now get less than what the President asked for to be able to deploy people around the world, less for operations and maintenance, and will in fact have to reduce the size of the armed forces.

They should not be permitted to get away with this kind of charade. The American people deserve to be spoken to honestly and directly when we are talking about what we are doing with their money.

Mr. Speaker, this is a charade. We will vote "no" against the rule. If the rule is passed, we will vote no against the conference report. If the conference report should be passed, the President will veto it. They do not have the votes to override the veto, they know that, and we will then, finally, be in negotiations with all the parties at the table, unless the other side stubbornly refuses to negotiate with the President.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. LINDER. Mr. Speaker, I gratefully bring an end to this discourse by yielding the balance of my time to my friend, the gentleman from Southern California (Mr. DREIER), the chairman of the Committee on Rules.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BE-REUTER). The gentleman from California (Mr. DREIER) is recognized for 4½ minutes.

(Mr. DREIER asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DREIER. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of this rule. I would like to commend this House, because when we move from this rule to the debate on the conference report and then vote it out, we will have, for the first time in a heck of a long time, passed all 13 appropriations bills without touching social security, and we will have sent them down to the President.

There has been a great deal of rhetoric that we have heard during this debate, but I have to say that we are going to be making history when we proceed with this.

We are trying to make some tough decisions. It is very easy to simply advocate a tax increase when we are advocating more spending. What we are saying is that we are not going to increase the tax burden on working families, we are not going to touch social security, and at the same time, we are going to make sure that we do not increase spending.

It is tough to do that. We are the ones who proposed doing it responsibly. That is why so many of my colleagues on this side have argued eloquently on behalf of a very responsible 1 percent cut.

My friend, the gentleman from Dallas, Texas, has justifiably talked about the fact that we are going to see problems within the Department of Defense. That does not have to happen. It does not have to happen. We will, with this 1 percent cut, have, as has been pointed out, $1.8 billion more than the President's request for national defense, and those priorities can clearly be established within the Pentagon and by the President.

We all acknowledge that there has to be waste, fraud, and abuse in every level of government. We are going to be doing it right here in the United States Congress, as well.

We know that when it comes to education, $34.7 billion was requested by the President. What is it that we had? We had $35.03 for education, and with this 1 percent cut we end up with $88 million more than the President's request for education. So if we look at what it is we are trying to do, we are doing it very, very responsibly. I hope very much that my colleagues will join in helping us make history by giving us a bipartisan vote on both the rule and on the conference report.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I rise to strongly oppose this rule. Although the rule waives all points of order against the conference report, the rule also denies any amendments to this very flawed bill.

This bill cuts $1.2 billion out of the President's education agenda. It guts last year's bipartisan commitment to hire 100,000 teachers to reduce class size in the early grades, block grants the program, and cuts out the additional $200 million requested by the President to hire 8,000 teachers next year, in addition to 29,000 teachers hired this year.

This measure funds 3,400 fewer after school centers serving 950,000 fewer children than requested by the President.

The appropriations bill also cuts $189 million in Title 1 funds below the President's request which help schools hire an additional 5,400 Title 1 teachers to serve 290,000 disadvantaged children.

This legislation also cuts $44 million in requested CDC funding to immunize over 333,000 children against childhood diseases.

This bill denies $94 million requested for educational technology initiatives, including funds to establish computer learning centers in 260 low-income communities, to implement technology plans in 220 school districts; and impose technology instruction in 4,700 middle schools.

When our multi-cultural society is our Nation's strength, this bill wrongfully denies $169 million for Bilingual Education, HEP/CAMP, and Adult Education, denying bilingual education training for 1,800 teachers; high school equivalency and college assistance for 2,400 migrant students; and ESL education for 600,000 adult learners when one-third of recent immigrants do not have a high school diploma or its equivalent.

And this bill also injures our hardworking students by denying $60 million of the $240 million requested for GEAR UP, preventing an estimated 131,000 low-income middle and high school students from receiving the mentoring, counseling, tutoring, outreach, support services, and encouragement they need to raise their expectations and successfully pursue college; cuts out $50 million for new initiatives to educate disadvantaged youth and their families about college opportunities.

This bill cuts $35 million in requested funding to improve pre-service training for 2,500 new teachers and denies funds to recruit 500 new teachers under the Teacher Quality Enhancement Program; and rejects $18 million for Troops to Teachers aimed at meeting the need for 2.2 million additional teachers over the next 10 years.

The Department of Education is a vital entity that provides a great many services to our Nation's education, yet, the bill cuts $16 million out of the Department's administrative budget—forcing a furlough of employees for 10+ days—in a back door attempt to dismantle the Education Department piece by piece. As written, the bills denies $125 million requested by the President to support family care for over 5 million Americans with long-term care needs, cuts $28 million requested by the President to ensure that 1.6 million elderly and disabled receive quality nursing care, and cuts funding available for social services for the elderly and low-income Americans in FY 2000 by $1.1 billion or 46% below the mandatory level.

This bill also strikes a blow to our workforce and eliminates assistance for 241,000 unemployed individuals. It also shortchanges efforts to improve the safety and health of workers and the safety of their benefits, but cutting $69 million out of requested increases for workplace safety enforcement, initiatives to promote equal pay, to address problems of coal dust in mines, and help other countries improve working standards. Worse yet, the measure eliminates $25 million new initiative to provide health coverage for uninsured workers, cuts the Minority AIDS initiative by $15 million below the 1999 level.

This legislation also injures the American farmer and drops $508 million in emergency aid to farmers devastated by Hurricane Floyd in North Carolina and states on the Eastern seaboard with no guarantee that this needed assistance will be provided later.

The 1.4% cut across the board will decidedly hurt key programs. This bill cuts $403 million out of the Department of Education, reducing the conference level to $81 million below the President's program request, cuts $550 million out of the Department of Health and Human Services, and cuts $122 million out of the Department of Labor. An additional $109 million would be cut out of Title 1, eliminating reading and math assistance for approximately 168,000 disadvantaged children, $108 million would be cut out of Pell Grants, underfunding the maximum Pell award, $54 million would be cut from Head Start, and over 10,000 fewer kids would be served, $2 million would be cut from Meals on Wheels, and 1.5 million fewer meals would be served to 11,000 fewer seniors.

By combining the Labor HHS bill with the DC Appropriations Conference Report, we send the message to America's children, workers, and elderly that we do not care about them—that we are willing to cut their services because we were too lazy to amend this bill.

I oppose this rule and the underlying bill.

Mr. LINDER. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the resolution.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the resolution.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Evidently a quorum is not present.

The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 221, nays 206, not voting 7, as follows:

NOT VOTING—7

Gilman	Rodriguez	Waters

Ms. BERKLEY and Mr. BISHOP changed their vote from "yea" to "nay".

So the resolution was agreed to.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

Stated for:

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, during rollcall No. 547 I was unavoidably detained and missed the vote. If I had been present I would have voted "aye."

Stated against:

Mr. RODRIGUEZ. Mr. Speaker, on rollcall No. 547, I was delayed. Had I been present, I would have voted "no."

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. Mr. Speaker, pursuant to House Resolution 345, I call up the conference report on the bill (H.R. 3064) making appropriations for the government of the District of Columbia and other activities chargeable in whole or in part against revenues of said District for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2000, and for other purposes, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BE-REUTER). Pursuant to House Resolution 345, the conference report is considered as having been read.

(For conference report and statement, see proceedings of the House of Wednesday, October 27, 1999, at page H10933.)

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Florida (Mr. YOUNG) and the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. OBEY) each will control 1 hour.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Florida (Mr. YOUNG).

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks on the conference report to accompany H.R. 3064, and that I and the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. PORTER) and the gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. ISTOOK) may include tabular and extraneous material.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Florida?

There was no objection.

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I might consume.

Mr. Speaker, I believe all of the Members understand now that this conference report includes, not only the District of Columbia appropriations bill, that was rewritten and passed after the President vetoed the first one, but it also includes the Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education bill, which is the 13th appropriations bill to be sent to the President's desk. The submission of these 13 bills plus the two supplementals will end this phase of the appropriations process.

The next phase of the process, then, is to receive the vetoes from the President on those bills which the President determines that he does not like, and to work with the White House Office of Management and Budget and the President himself, if he is available, on whatever differences we can to try to get subsequent legislation signed, because all of these appropriations bills must become law.

Much of the debate will be related probably, not to the District of Columbia portion of the bill, but the Labor, HHS portion and to the offset section.

One of the issues that we will hear about, I know, because we heard a lot about it during consideration of the CR and also the rule on this bill, is the across-the-board cut, which is less than 1 percent. I am not a great proponent of across-the-board cuts, but we are doing everything that we possibly can to make sure that we do not spend any of the Social Security money. To do this we made this less than 1 percent across-the-board cut part of our offset package.

Now, there has been and there will be a lot of criticism of this across-the-board cut, but everyone that I know who lives outside the Beltway is convinced that the Government wastes a lot of money, a lot of their money. And I know that the folks back in my district would laugh at me, and anyone else who would try to convince them that our government could not find 1 penny out of every tax dollar from the discretionary accounts; that we could not save one penny out of every dollar. I think we would be laughed out of town if we tried to convince our constituents that this government, that has considerable waste, and we try to weed out the waste the best that we can, but it continues to pop up, we would be laughed out of town if we tried to convince our constituents that this government could not save 1 penny out of every dollar that we appropriate.

Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. PORTER), the distinguished chairman of the Subcommittee on Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education of the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Speaker, I thank my distinguished chairman for yielding me this time.

Before we begin the more partisan portion of this debate, I want to join with my colleague, the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. OBEY), for a tribute to a retiring member of our staff, and I want to congratulate Bob Knisely, who is sitting directly on my right, on his retirement and wish him well.

Bob has served the Subcommittee on Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education, and related agencies, for 28 years. That is an absolutely remarkable achievement, Mr. Speaker. There are only 10 Members of this House who were here when Bob Knisely began his career with the subcommittee. He has served under Chairman Mahon, Chairman Whitten, Chairman Natcher, Chairman OBEY, Chairman Livingston, and now Chairman YOUNG. On the Subcommittee on Labor-HHS and Education, he has served under Chairman Flood, Chairman Natcher, Chairman Smith and now during my tenure.

In the world of appropriations, two words encompass the strongest values of the committee and, when used, Mr. Speaker, represent the highest compliment that one can pay to a staffer at any level. One is "technician". It contains none of the bureaucratic connotations usually associated with the word. Bob Knisely is an outstanding technician, Mr. Speaker. He assures that the legislative and other products of the subcommittee meet his high standards for quality and that they will assure the implementation of our policies. His expertise in the rules of the committee and the House, as well as the technical aspects of putting the bill and report together, is absolutely irreplaceable. His knowledge of the programs under our subcommittee's jurisdiction is, of course, unparalleled, as is his understanding of the history of the subcommittee for more than half of its existence.

The second word, Mr. Speaker, is "professional". There are those who continue in the mistaken belief that a professional staff cannot exist on the Hill; that we must surround ourselves only with individuals who share our political views. This is rubbish, and Bob's career demonstrates the true concept of professionalism. He has served chairmen and members of our subcommittee of both parties equally, providing them with his best advice and technical support.

Bob, our subcommittee and its chairmen have been better and more effective because of your service here. This institution, which we all love, is a better place because of your service. And, hopefully, your career will serve as a model to continue to strengthen it even after you have left. Your shoes will be very, very hard to fill.

I know that I speak for the entire subcommittee and for this entire House in wishing you well in your retirement, and I hope we can call on you occasionally for help. Your work of 28 years and your professionalism are a credit to our subcommittee, to the Congress, and to our country.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 2 minutes.

Mr. Speaker, when I first went on the Subcommittee on Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education as a rookie, Bob Knisely was one of the persons who taught me both about the programs with which we dealt, and about the way the committee worked and how I could be most effective in pursuing the goals that I was concerned about.

To this day, I have no idea whether Bob is a Republican or a Democrat. I do know he is a consummate professional. I do know he is a first-rate human being. I do know he is a spectacular public servant. He is one of those people about whom the public will never hear, but he is one of those people, nonetheless, who has helped every day to make things better for working people, who are supposed to be the primary interest of the Department of Labor.

He has always given us straight, honest information. He is part of a terrific staff that acts as reality checks on all of us practicing politicians. We like to fit the facts into our rhetoric, but Bob Knisely has been one of those people who has always helped us to fit our rhetoric into the facts. We may not have always been comfortable with that, but that, in the end, is what a professional staffer is supposed to do.

I am profoundly grateful for the service that you have provided, Bob, and I am profoundly grateful to the assistance you have given me, and all of us, through the years, and I wish you well in your retirement. Thank you again very much.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 6 minutes to the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. MORAN), who wishes to wish Mr. Knisely well, and to discuss the District of Columbia appropriations conference report.

Mr. MORAN of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, the reason why I rise to speak with regard to Mr. Knisely is that I worked with Mr. Knisely a quarter of a century ago.

Over the last 25 years, I have become older and fatter and grayer and uglier, but Mr. Knisely looks the same. He is just as sharp and keen of mind and quick of wit, and he is just as slim and good looking as he was then.

But putting aside all the superficial things, the substantive thing is, as the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. OBEY) said, he is a consummate professional. I was on the Senate Committee on Appropriations staff during some very difficult times. And I know that the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. OBEY) remembers, and by the way, even then the personality and intellect of the gentleman from Wisconsin made him a larger-than-life presence on the Committee on Appropriations 25 years ago, but if it were not for Bob Knisely, a great many of the issues that we could not find our way out of never would have been resolved in a spirit of bipartisanship.

He is a very professional staffer and a good person and this country owes him a deep debt of gratitude.

Now with regard to the D.C. Appropriations Bill, Mr. Speaker, here we go again. I am not sure if we can remember how many times we have been on the House floor or in conference on just the D.C. appropriations bill. This little bill is about $6 billion, $429 million is all of the Federal funds involved, but certainly this should be the last time that we would have to bring the D.C. appropriations bill to the House floor because we have made great progress since the President's veto of the first D.C. appropriations conference report.

Maybe it took a White House no to get all the parties into a room and discuss it seriously, earnestly. It certainly worked, if that is what it took. The chairman, the gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. ISTOOK), and the chairwoman, Senator HUTCHISON finally kept an open enough mind to find out what needed to be done, and so we reached an acceptable compromise.

It took very few changes, as we had been saying all along, to reach that acceptable compromise. The compromise includes increasing the cap on special education attorney fees, eliminating the restriction on a private organization to be able to use private funds to carry out needle exchange programs, and allowing the District's Corporation Council to review and comment on its voting rights lawsuit without the use of Federal funds.

I have to say if they had accepted these modest changes several months ago, showing proper respect and deference to the District's home rule, we would not be here today. If it had not been for a lot of politicizing and posturing, we could have and should have had this appropriations bill signed into law last July.

For such a small appropriation of Federal funds, we had to have so much political rhetoric, $429 million is all the Federal money involved, and yet we are holding up $6.8 billion of the District's money. Because we changed things with the D.C. Revitalization Act, we treat the District as we would other States. We give them grants and contracts. We do not oversee them any more, or certainly we should not be, yet we are holding the District's budget hostage. They have a tax cut in it. They have a balanced budget and fiscal accountability in it.

They have a terrific Mayor, better management now in so many key areas. They are doing everything that we had hoped that they might do; more importantly, that their citizens demanded that they do. They have a little surplus. They are all in agreement on their own budget, and yet we are holding up their $6.8 billion budget using as leverage this little $425 million of Federal funds, holding it hostage.

It has been held hostage to a series of controversial social riders and restrictions on how the District can spend its own local property tax money and private money that is not even local public money. Those restrictions have not and would not be imposed on the constituents of any other Member of Congress, yet we impose them on the District of Columbia.

But this compromise, as I say, removes several of the most objectionable riders, at least with regard to the needle exchange program, which is always a controversial issue. But free needle exchange operates as a gateway so that the Whitman-Walker private organization could get access to addicts who were in desperate need of drug treatment and counseling. By offering free needles, they got them into the program so that they could identify them and heal them. The District has the worst AIDS epidemic of any other urban areas. They desperately need to be able to do whatever it takes to address effectively that problem.

But since we have taken so much time to do our most important job passing appropriations bills, this little D.C. bill, important really only to the residents of the District of Columbia because it holds hostage over $6 billion of their own money, is now held hostage to a grander political scheme. The Labor, Health, and Human Services Appropriations bill, a bill with $93 billion of Federal money, compared to $429 million in the D.C. bill is attached as an amendment along with a 1% across the board cut and thus ensures its veto.

As a free-standing measure, we would support, in fact the entire subcommittee, Democrats and Republicans alike, would support this D.C. appropriations bill. We have always hailed it from an appropriations standpoint. It has always been a good appropriations bill. It is just these politicized, ideological riders that sunk it.

Now it is going to be crushed by the Labor-HHS bill and by the 1 percent across-the-board cut. That is not right. It is wrong. It should not have happened. And I urge a no vote because it did happen.

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. ISTOOK), the very distinguished chairman of the Subcommittee on Appropriations for the District of Columbia.

Mr. ISTOOK. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the gentleman from Florida (Chairman YOUNG) for the opportunity to present this bill today and for the leadership that he has provided in the appropriations process, and also to the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. PORTER), chairman of the Subcommittee on Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education, on which I also serve and which has been combined in this bill with the D.C. appropriation.

Now, Mr. Speaker, there were a number of people who, frankly, have been proposing, and basically these are people on the other side of the aisle, they have been proposing that we get all the appropriations bills and put them in one big package. Well, we have not done that. But we have a smaller package with two sets of issues, those for the District of Columbia and Labor, Health and Human Services. I guess they do not like that either, but this is just the best way we believe to proceed.

Now, why is that? Now, Mr. Speaker, we have had the D.C. bill on the floor before. We know the Nation's capital has a special relationship with the Federal Government. We have in this bill the funding, the assistance from the Federal Government to help the District of Columbia get some problems squared away, attacking the link between crime and drugs, incentives for the adoption of young people that currently are stuck for years in foster homes, incentives for the downsizing of the government in the District of Columbia. Because the city officials recognize it is bloated, it is too large, it needs to come down to size.

We have the environmental cleanup. We have the incentives for college attendance. We have the approval of the budget of the District of Columbia. And get this, Mr. Speaker, the District of Columbia has a Democrat mayor and a majority Democrat city council, and a key part of their budget is reducing taxes and reducing the size of government, and the Republican members of the city council were major contributors to this effort.

I have not heard anybody in the District of Columbia say, there is just no way they could handle a 1 percent cut in the size of their government. Instead, the Democrats in the District of Columbia and the District of Columbia city government are aggressively trying to reduce the size of their government and at the same time reduce taxes. And, yes, we heard within D.C. some people saying, oh, the tax breaks go to people with the wrong economic status.

But D.C. recognized they needed to have the tax incentives to create jobs and to help their economy and they did not fall into this demagogic trap of trying to say they are giving it to the wrong group of people. No, the Democrats of the District of Columbia did not do that. And so, we have the approval of their tax cuts and their budget. We did not change anything about their proposed budget and their proposed tax cut. We endorse it. But now it is part of this proposal for the Federal Government programs.

We hear people saying, now, when it comes to the Federal Government, though, there is no way we could reduce things by just one penny out of each dollar, not even one penny. I saw the Cabinet officers on TV the other day, Mr. Speaker, and they were saying, oh, there is no way we could do a 1 percent cut. They want to make it sound as drastic as possible instead of finding the administrative savings that businesses have to do when they do cuts, that families have to do when they do cuts.

I remember former Democratic President Jimmy Carter who went on national TV to tell people to adjust their thermostats, wear sweaters if necessary, turn out some of the lights, but let us reduce some costs. But today we are hearing people on the other side of the aisle say, because this has a 1 percent reduction, not in Social Security benefits, not in veterans' benefits, not in Medicare, only in so-called discretionary spending, we cannot handle it. Even though spending will actually be up for so many of those agencies from what it was before, they do not want to take a hard look at the size of government. They do not want to tell these Cabinet officers maybe they should lead by example.

The pay of Members of Congress is being adjusted one percent less under this bill than otherwise. I do not see the President or Cabinet officers trying to lead by example. This is important.

First we have to agree on how much we have to spend. The sad thing, Mr. Speaker, is that my friends on the other side of the aisle when they say, oh, we want to balance the budget and we want to do it without spending Social Security money, but instead of saying that means we might have to make more adjustments, they do not want to make any at all. They want to spend more. They want to get more into Social Security, as happened for decades around here. And it should not have happened, and it is time to fix it. This bill fixes it.

I want to commend the gentleman from Florida (Chairman YOUNG). I want to commend the gentleman from Illinois (Chairman PORTER). I want to commend the people that have worked so hard, the gentleman from Ohio (Chairman KASICH), who will speak in a moment, working on overall things.

I do not think the American people believe that Cabinet officers will not find the way to make their adjustments, as they have the right to do, program transfers, adjustments, reprogramming of funds. They have those tools at their disposal to make sure there are no difficulties caused by simply saying they have got to save one penny out of each dollar.

I urge adoption of the conference report.

Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to present to the House today the conference agreement on H.R. 3064, the District of Columbia, and the Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education Appropriations Act for fiscal year 2000. The conferees met yesterday morning and resolved the remaining matters in disagreement between the House and Senate bills and filed the conference report, House Report 106-419, last evening.

Mr. Speaker, this conference agreement includes the FY 2000 DC Appropriations Act; technical changes to the FY 2000 VA-HUD Appropriations Act; the FY 2000 Labor, Health and Human Services and Education Appropriations Act; and an offset package that protects social security.

Regarding the Labor-HHS Appropriations Act, the chairman of that subcommittee, the distinguished gentleman from Illinois, Mr. PORTER, will be yielded time to explain that part of the conference report. The offset package was developed by the Budget Committee and the distinguished gentleman from Ohio, Mr. KASICH, is here to explain the offsets.

Mr. Speaker, regarding the DC Appropriations Act, the conference agreement reflects the vetoed bill, H.R. 2587, with a few adjustments. The needles language has been adjusted to retain the prohibition on using Federal or local funds, but without the restriction on privately-funded programs. There is also a new provision, section 173 that allows the D.C. Corporation Counsel to review and comment on briefs in private lawsuits and to consult with officials of the District government regarding such lawsuits. All of the other social riders—marijuana, abortion, domestic partners—are the same as they were in the House-passed version of H.R. 3064.

In summary, Mr. Speaker, the conference agreement endorses the budget and tax cuts approved by the District's Democrat mayor and majority Democrat city council, whose Republican members were important contributors to this effort. The conference agreement helps the District in its efforts to reorganize, cut costs, reduce overhead, and improve services. This conference agreement retains the initiatives that were in the initial House bill, such as Federal funding for the largest-ever effort to crack down on the link between drugs and crime, so the DC's streets and neighborhoods will be far safer. The conference agreement includes incentives to move children from foster care to adoption in a safe, loving, and permanent home, and $2.5 million in Federal funds to complete a community pediatric health initiative for high risk children in medically underserved areas of the District. We also retained the $17 million in Federal funds for tuition assistance so that D.C. high school graduates will have the same opportunities that exist for students in the 50 States who attend State-supported institutions of higher education. In addition, language in the initial House bill strengthening the popular charter school movement in the District has been retained. The conference agreement also includes Federal funding to clean up pollution in the Anacostia River and to complete all design and other requirements for the construction of expanded lane capacity for the 14th Street Bridge across the Potomac River.

This conference agreement, as did the first one (House Report 106-299), totals $429 million in Federal funds which is $24 million below the house bill, $18 million above the Senate bill, and $255 million below last year's bill. The reduction of $255 million below last year's bill is due to several non-recurring items funded last year. The total conference amount of $429 million is $24 million below our 302(b) allocations in budget authority and outlays. In District funds, the conference agreement provides $6.8 billion of which $5.4 billion for operating expenses is $7 million below the House level, $29 million above the Senate bill, and $284 million above last year; however, included in this $284 million increase is a "rainy day" reserve fund of $150 million.

The conferees have included language under Defender Services that will allow the use of $1.2 million to pay attorneys for their services to indigents in FY 1999. Because the D.C. Courts underestimated the amount required for this program, language has been included in the conference report allowing FY 2000 funds for court operations and defender services to be used to pay for FY 1999 and FY 1999 attorney services for indigents in the event the regular appropriation is insufficient. This language will allow the appointments and payments to continue without disruption.

Mr. Speaker, it is important to make clear that language in the conference report permitting the courts to use FY 2000 funds to pay excess FY 1999 obligations does not in any way waive any possible applications of the Anti-Deficiency Act to the courts on the grounds that the obligation to make payments to these attorneys exceeded the obligational authority available for making those payments. The courts are not absolved of their responsibility and accountability under the Anti-Deficiency Act.

Title II of the conference agreement commends the District for reducing taxes and ratifies the city's action in that regard. One of the initiatives taken by local officials in agreeing to a consensus budget for fiscal year 2000 is to reduce income and property taxes by $300 million over the next 5 years, including $59 million in fiscal 2000. I want to acknowledge that Republican members of the District's city council, although outnumbered, contributed significantly to the tax reduction enacted by the District government. In fact, one of the two council members who spearheaded the tax cut was a Republican member.

I will include a table showing the amounts recommended in the conference agreement compared with last year's enacted amount, the budget request, and the House and Senate recommendations.

In closing, I want to thank all of our Members for their hard work and their contributions to this bill, especially the Chairman of the Committee, the distinguished gentleman from Florida, BILL YOUNG. He has displayed an amazing degree of patience, good judgment, and resolve in getting us to this point.

Mr. Speaker, I ask for an "aye" vote on the adoption of this conference report.

I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. OBERSTAR).

(Mr. OBERSTAR asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to transportation cuts in this bill.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. GREEN).

(Mr. GREEN of Texas asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GREEN of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong opposition to the latest Republican majority appropriations scheme.

For weeks they tried to craft a Labor/HHS/Education spending bill that would be acceptable to the American people, and for weeks they failed.

Everyone on Capitol Hill spends a lot of time talking about priorities. And to be honest, we all have the same goal—which is to convince the American people that we are really fighting for their priorities.

But the old adage “actions speak louder than words” has never been truer.

While the majority Republicans like to say improving education is one of their top priorities, how are we supposed to react when they use the money that was designated for education funding to offset the spending for their real priorities.

For weeks Democrats have been asking the Republicans to show us their budget plan, and for weeks the Republicans have refused. Today, we finally see why.

Under this bill, every education program will be cut by almost 1 percent. This may not sound like a big deal, and the Republicans will tell us all day that such a small percentage will not have a negative impact. Well what this bill will do is: Blocks nearly 300,000 students from receiving needed math and reading tutoring services under Title I; cuts $200 million from the class-size reduction initiative; and cuts after school care and programs for nearly 1,000,000 children.

The Republicans claim this 1 percent cut will only impact government waste—is that what they think of our Nation's children?

For weeks the Republican leadership has been delaying bringing this bill to the floor.

Today, we learned why.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Maryland (Mr. HOYER).

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Maryland for yielding me the time.

Mr. Speaker, 3 minutes does not give me an opportunity, obviously, to discuss this bill or the fiscal shenanigans that are going on in this bill. But I do want to focus on one facet of this bill, the National Institutes of Health.

We have all heard the phrase “women and children first.” That, essentially, means that we want to give to women and children priority. This phrase has been women, children, and the sick and workers last. This bill has been held hostage to the last. Why? Because the President places a priority on women, children, workers, and the sick.

My distinguished chairman of the subcommittee, the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. PORTER), cares a lot about NIH. I want to tell the chairman, and I am sure he knows this, I am surprised that he would support this bill. Because under this bill, Mr. Speaker, they are proposing to spend this fiscal year that we are in now 1.5 billion less than President Clinton suggested. Hear me, $1.5 billion less.

I will tell my colleagues that people are concerned about this because it will delay such a large part. NIH budget will be a massive managerial challenge but much more importantly will force the delay of research grants and delay of clinical trials.

My friends, the chairman of our committee so critically involved in bone marrow transplants knows how timely action is. We are delaying clinical trials for cancer patients. We are delaying clinical trials for victims of heart disease. We are delaying clinical trials for victims of AIDS. We are delaying clinical trials for children with serious, life-threatening diseases. We are delaying them until September 29 and 30. That is 11 months away.

Who of my colleagues would stand and say to a critically ill child, wait 11 months while we underfund by $1.5 billion what the President asked for NIH funding? We pretend that we are giving NIH $17.9 billion. But we are saying, hey, guess what. Forty-two percent of it they cannot spend. Women, children, sick and workers last.

Why have we done this? To save Social Security? The majority leader of their party says that Social Security ought to be done away with. Let us reject this bill.

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I am now happy to yield 6 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. KASICH), the distinguished chairman of the Committee on the Budget.

Mr. KASICH. Mr. Speaker, I do not want to get off my stride. But let me say that the Republicans, recognizing that the National Institutes of Health really are one of the crown jewels of the Federal Government, have had historic increases in NIH, something that has never been seen before, a 15 percent increase last year, a 14 percent increase this year.

But on to the other subject at hand. And that is, as I have been passing by this floor and past the television sets, listening to the debate, I have begun to observe that it is seemingly impossible for this House not to denigrate just about anything we do. It is remarkable to me as I stop and I watch this debate.

For the first time since man walked on the Moon, we have balanced the budget, when we include all the spending that the Federal Government makes versus all the revenue that has come in. Since the first time we have walked on the Moon, we are in balance. And now, to my own surprise, we are actually going to balance the operating part of the Federal budget without stealing from Social Security.

And do my colleagues know what? As Members of this House, we feel compelled to wipe that off the slate, to ignore an accomplishment that a couple years ago was beyond our imagination, when we have got budgets from downtown that puts spending in the red as far as the eye could see, and now we find ourselves not only balancing the unified budget, but we no longer have to take from Social Security.

Should we not, just for a second, shake one another's hands across the aisle and maybe even send some kudos down Pennsylvania Avenue that, for the first time, we have demonstrated something people thought was impossible in this town and it has resulted in a stronger economy, a major contributing factor?

Now, some of the critics of our approach today say that we are spending into Social Security; and then out of the other side of their mouths they say we are not spending enough.

Well, which is it? We cannot be spending too little and at the same time be spending too much. Pick an argument, choose one of them, and stay with it. They are going to give politics a bad name.

Now, this Republican majority has started a firewall. Is it the greatest firewall? I do not know if it is the best one, but it is a pretty good one.

What we are saying is we are not going to reach into that Social Security surplus and we are going to use the Office of Management and Budget as the traffic cop to add up the numbers, not as the economic estimates, but the traffic cop.

The President shut down the Government over the issue of OMB being the traffic cop. And we have decided to go along. We have decided to say that the President's Office of Management and Budget, as provided under the law and provided for by the United States courts, will be the referee and the arbiter of whether we are into Social Security.

And now we as Republicans, joined by I hope some of my colleagues on the Democratic side, have used the extraordinary tactic of an across-the-board cut to make sure that that traffic cop does not give us a ticket for a violation.

In my tenure in the House of Representatives, in 17 years, we have never, as on a voluntary measure by elected Members of Congress, cut across the board in order to achieve this objective.

□ 1500

Will we stay out of Social Security? I am not sure. It is likely we will stay out of Social Security. But we are fighting on the margins, are we not, on this issue, because we have never achieved this much in any of our tenure.

Now, why do we want to stay out of Social Security? Because we do not want to commit the money to any other program. We want to use it to pay down some debt, which is good for this economy, and we want to preserve those dollars as a leverage to transform Social Security, not just for the seniors but for us and our children, so we can regenerate this system and we do not want to blow this opportunity and reduce our leverage. The Committee on the Budget 5 years ago and working with my friends in the Committee on Appropriations who from time to time we get into fights in the hallway with, we sat down 5 years ago and we plotted a road map. We have made some real progress. Have we made all the progress on that road map that I would like? You have just got to ask the gentleman from Florida (Mr. YOUNG) and he will tell you, "Of course not. The gentleman from Ohio is never happy with any of the level of spending we have. He is always complaining it is too much." But we are moving forward on this road map.

Today rather than spending our time debating about the crumbs, debating about the margins and about obscuring a message to the American people who have become cynical because of the failed promises of politicians, let us for once keep our eye on the ball, hold our heads high, congratulate one another of different philosophies and different parties and different branches of government. And while we can continue to fight on the margin and while we can continue to advance on this road map, let us just celebrate how far we have come and how far we have come in contributing to the benefit of our great country. I hope we will support this bill and today will be a day of celebration, not just a day of argument.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 10 seconds.

Mr. Speaker, despite the fiction we have just heard, we have a letter from the head of the Congressional Budget Office which spells out that the Republican budget so far has eaten into $17 billion of the Social Security surplus. So much for the fiction we just heard.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentlewoman from Connecticut (Ms. DELAURO).

Ms. DELAURO. Mr. Speaker, the public has every right to be cynical about a Republican House leadership whose majority leader said several weeks ago that Social Security was a bad retirement and a rotten trick on the American people. This is from the party who today claims that in fact they want to save and preserve Social Security.

Mr. Speaker, I rise to oppose this irresponsible budget, one that does nothing to extend the life of Social Security, does nothing to add a prescription drug benefit for Medicare, but does a lot of harm and hurt to real families in this country. I oppose this bill because it is chock full of accounting tricks. But the cruelest trick of all is the delay in funding to the National Institutes of Health. This bill would delay $7.5 billion in funding for the National Institutes of Health, amounting to 42 percent of their budget, 60 percent of its research grants.

Let me just say, what is the National Institutes of Health for those who may not know? What is it but our Nation's leading biomedical research effort, to investigate cures and treatments for every disease, for cancer, for diabetes, for arthritis. The list is endless. Why the delay? In order to keep up this budget charade, their absurd claim that they are not spending Social Security, even though the Congressional Budget Office says that they have already dipped into the Social Security surplus to the tune of $17 billion. So to keep up the budget charade, this bill says that no funding could go to the National Institutes of Health, to their researchers, the people who work on these cures and treatments until the last final days of the fiscal year of next year.

What does this mean for medical research? It means delay. It would mean delay in research, delay in hiring, delay in salaries for a year. It is outrageous.

Mr. Speaker, as a cancer survivor, I am offended with a bill that plays games with biomedical research. We make strides every day in cancer research. That is why this is so cruel. Cancer knows no fiscal year. A family struggling with this life-and-death disease cannot wait a year. They need hope now. As a survivor, I know something about the power of hope. I know what it is like to pray for a cure. I know what it is like to put your life in the hands of doctors and of researchers. I would not be alive today if it were not for the advances in medical research. Advances in cancer research saved my life and every day in laboratories around this country men and women are making those life-saving discoveries that will change the lives of people that they have never met, families huddled in a hospital room, praying for a loved one to have the chance at life. Research cures cancer. Research gives hope. Delays in medical research funding plays games with people's lives.

We were sent here to do well by the people that put their trust in us, not to do harm. This bill does harm. Oppose it.

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. PORTER) the distinguished chairman of the Appropriations Subcommittee on Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education.

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time, and I thank the chairman of the Subcommittee on the District of Columbia, a valued member of my subcommittee as well, for allowing us to attach our bill to his bill and bring it through the process.

Let me say that earlier in the debate on the CR and in the debate on the rule, the charge was correctly made that this bill was not heard fully on the floor of the House of Representatives, was not shaped by the Members of the House as it should have been, and that we did not carry out our constitutional responsibility, particularly in view of the fact that spending bills must originate in the House. While the bill was shaped as it should have been in the subcommittee and in the full committee, I accept that criticism, it is fair and right, and I regret that the normal process was not able to be followed.

But let me say that beyond that criticism, much of the rest of what I have heard is not fair criticism, it is simply political talk.

Members that vote on this conference report are going to be voting to protect the Social Security trust fund. To achieve this end has not been easy given the competing spending demands and the small size of the non-trust fund surplus. And this conference report does rely on advance appropriations, delayed obligations and additional offsets provided in the leadership package, primarily a .97 percent across-the-board reduction.

But let me say, Mr. Speaker, that this is the first time that we have attempted to do this and that my colleagues on the other side of the aisle for 17 years did nothing to protect the Social Security trust fund and raided it to the tune of $850 billion in IOUs . . . They never even tried. We are trying to save the trust fund, and all they give us is political criticism. We should get credit for trying to do something that the minority never even attempted when they controlled the House.

This bill, the Labor, Health and Human Services and Education portion of it, is funded at a slightly higher level than the President suggested in his budget. There are cuts in it, yes, because we do not agree on policy matters with the President. There are also increases where the President did not provide adequate funding for programs that we think are higher priorities. Education is level-funded; HHS, we spend more; Labor, we spend slightly less. Overall, the funding is slightly more than the President's. We plus-up the Job Corps more than the President. We think it is a higher priority. We plus-up consolidated health centers higher than the President. We think it is a very important priority. Despite all the rhetoric, we plus-up NIH by the second largest increase in its entire history, 14 percent, and last year it was 15 percent. And yes, all of that money will eventually be paid out, even under our plan. It will be paid out for the research for which it is appropriated. We put more money in for Ryan White AIDS than the President.

We are $320 million above the President total in education funding. Impact Aid is higher than the President. The maximum Pell grant is set at $3,300, which is higher than the President's request. TRIO, higher than the President. Special education, $679 million for disabled children, higher than the President.

Now, do we make some cuts? Do we fail to fund some programs that the President has suggested? Yes. But, ladies and gentlemen of the House, it is our responsibility as the legislative branch to fashion a bill that we think is proper for this country and the President's only role in the legislative process is to veto it if he disagrees. It is our prerogative to write the priorities, not his, and that is exactly what we do.

Mr. Speaker, this is a good conference report. It assures that the Social Security trust fund remains secure. It is the first time it has been attempted ever. The other side never attempted it once. Give us some credit, ladies and gentlemen. We are doing our best to do the work for the American people to protect Social Security, to fund vital programs that work for people, that get positive result in their lives. I think this is a bill every Member of this Chamber ought to support.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from California (Ms. PELOSI).

Ms. PELOSI. Mr. Speaker, this is a very unfortunate day, because this bill that comes before this body today has been traditionally a bill that brings us together. It says that the strength of our country is measured not only in our military might but in the health, education and well-being of the American people. Mr. Natcher always called it the people's bill.

So it is unfortunate that this bill today has become a mockery. It has become a mockery because it is being used by the Republican majority to say that a vote for this bill today is a vote to protect Social Security. Nothing could be further from the truth. In fact, the Republicans are spending tens of billions of dollars of Social Security funds in this whole budget process while misrepresenting that to the American people.

In this bill, we fund the National Institutes of Health. This funding gives hope to the American people. It is a place where we say the NIH has the biblical power to cure. And while everyone's hopes were raised while there was talk of the increased funding in the bill for the NIH, those hopes were quickly dashed when the budget gimmickry of the Republican Party was demonstrated, that $7 billion, 40 percent of the NIH budget, would be delayed, the spending would be delayed until the end of the fiscal year, the last day or two of the fiscal year. That means 40 percent of the funding, 60 percent of the grants.

Every one of us knows people who have written to us about health problems in their families, be it breast cancer, prostate cancer. I have in my own community a woman Meg who has suffered from a disease, a little known one, called EDS. She and thousands of her friends suffer from this disease and the only hope they have is the National Institutes of Health. This is a disorder of the connective system that can lead to premature death, crippling and disfigurement, mostly to women. So they were very hopeful when this bill urged the National Institutes of Health to look into this issue. Biomedical research is the best hope for people with diseases, especially some of these diseases that no one has ever heard of. Our former Speaker Mr. Tip O'Neill, Speaker O'Neill, said all politics is local. But in this bill, all politics is personal. It is as personal as the woman with breast cancer, or the man with prostate cancer, my friend Meg with EDS, or people with AIDS who look to us for hope. And what do they get? Budget gimmickry. It is a very, very sad testimony.

Another area in education, this bill cuts 1 million students from after-school programs. In one place after another from the cradle to the rocking chair, this bill is a disservice to the American people. I urge my colleagues to vote "no."

Mr. ISTOOK. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. BONILLA), another member of the Subcommittee on Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education.

(Mr. BONILLA asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks, and include extraneous material.)

Mr. BONILLA. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding this time to me.

The rhetoric I hear from our friends on the other side of the political aisle today reminds me of Chicken Little, and if we look at their faces, they are telling us over and over again that the sky is falling and we are facing tremendous disaster if we vote for this bill, and I think that the American people are smarter than that by now, to listen to the same message over and over and over again.

Mr. Speaker, I think I heard one of my colleagues say this morning that this bill hurts every family in America. I think that their arguments have to start changing to include a little more substance and reality about what we are doing here today. The truth of the matter is, and these are real numbers, that this bill is the People's bill, and we do so much in spite of the budget restraints we now live under that were not only voted upon by this Congress, but signed into law by the President.

Mr. Speaker, let us not forget that the President signed the law that we, after we gave him the bill that says we have limits now on what we can spend, because it is no different than any family, than any business out there that has to face fiscal constraints year after year for the benefit of the greater good of the organization, the family or the corporation; and we are having to make some tough decisions, but nonetheless have kept as the highest priority funding for health care, like the Community and Migrant Health Care Centers that the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. PORTER) pointed out earlier for the Trio education program that we have increased funding for that that has held so many people in low-income neighborhoods like myself, frankly, when I was a teenager, a program that helped give me that lift to go to college and to graduate from college, and other programs like health professions, nurses and dental hygienists and assistants out there looking for that first break to provide a service for the community.

We give more money to these programs, more money than the President has asked for in the first place.

Mr. Speaker, if we visit with people out in the heartland who are running these medical programs, for example, they are all recognizing the truth in what we are trying to accomplish. I just met about an hour ago with representatives from the March of Dimes from my hometown in San Antonio, and I told them what we tried to do with programs that provide for folic acid for mothers, expectant mothers, so that we can cut back on birth defects in our country and in our State; and they understand what we are trying to do, and they know that we are trying to help families out there in the heartland.

And I am just hoping that as people watch this debate, they will listen to the sincerity of what we are trying to portray here today of our efforts to try to help America in every neighborhood out there whether it involves an education program or a health care program, because I think that if we watch the faces of those who will step up right after me that we will see the face of Chicken Little, and we all remember the story on how misinformed Chicken Little was.

Mr. Speaker, I think that in our colleagues' hearts they know that this misinformation that is being put out there over and over again is no longer selling with the American people.

Stand with us, stand with the President to understand that we have got to cut spending yet provide for these important services for the American people.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2½ minutes to the distinguished gentleman from the District of Columbia (Ms. NORTON).

Ms. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, I thank the distinguished gentleman for yielding this time to me.

This debate opened with the distinguished chairman of the full committee, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. YOUNG), indicating that we would not hear much about the District of Columbia during this debate on the District of Columbia bill. That is what is wrong with this bill. But I am not going to let my colleagues forget what they are doing to the people of the District of Columbia. It is hard to regard what we have before us as a bill at all.

The District of Columbia, of course, had a bill number before us, but that is what we have been degraded to because we are serving other purposes, we are serving other masters. The Labor-HHS appropriation has been slopped together, bypassed committee, bypassing debate on this floor, thrown over the transom on to the backs of the people of the District of Columbia. Makes the D.C. appropriation, our smallest, a beast of burden for the largest appropriation.

What kind of way is this to treat a city pulling itself up by its bootstraps in the full throes of recovery with a new mayor, a reformed City Council meeting the expectations of its own residents, meeting the expectations of the Congress?

Early meetings with the Mayor, a promise to try to get out our appropriation first out? We are the last out, Mr. Speaker. At early hearings, our subcommittee chair worked with us on problems that we ironed out throughout; and yet, Mr. Speaker, the ultimate response was more riders on the D.C. appropriation than in 25 years of home rule.

Today, we see further delay on our bill even after Senate and House appropriations have worked mightily to try to deal with our differences.

This is a minimally signable bill. I can only accept it if I have to.

The worst part of this process today is that it is all for naught, that a veto is assured. It is cynical; it is irregular. If at least the bill would be signed, something might be said for it. Instead the District of Columbia is caught in the middle. We are being stepped on, then walked over.

This body often gets up on the other side of the aisle to rant about its constitutional claim to work in the best interests of the Nation's Capital. By this process today, Mr. Speaker, my colleagues have forfeited any claim by throwing the people of the Nation's Capital to the winds.

Mr. ISTOOK. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from Mississippi (Mr. TAYLOR).

Mr. TAYLOR of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to this measure.

If my colleagues vote for this bill, they are voting to cut the Department of Defense budget by 2.6 billion.

Now, a lot has been said that it is 1 percent. That is 2.6 billion. That is the equivalent of three destroyers or two amphibious assault ships. Mr. Speaker, that is enough money to get the 12,000 soldiers, sailors, airmen, and Marines that we know are on food stamps off of food stamps and buy 175 Black Hawk helicopters, replacing 30 year old Hueys that they are flying around in today.

Almost all of the cuts come at the expense of the Department of Defense, and we are not talking about something that would have been. It is the law right now. Our colleagues are cutting the budget that went into effect this week when the President signed it.

So if my colleagues admit that we have to save some money, then let us set priorities, but do not cut from the one thing that the Nation has to do. The States can do almost everything else, but we have to defend the Nation.

Mr. ISTOOK. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from California (Mr. CUNNINGHAM).

Mr. CUNNINGHAM. Mr. Speaker, let me give my colleagues some facts.

The gentlewoman from Connecticut said that we were cutting NIH because we delayed 40 percent. My colleagues support the President's budget which only increased NIH 2 percent, so even if we delay 40 percent, remaining 60 percent, we fund more than they do under the budget now; and then the remaining 40 percent will also be spent, which is 12 percent more than the President, that his entire plan supports.

So what I would say to my colleagues: listen to the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. KASICH).

I am also a cancer survivor, and I am glad the gentlewoman from Connecticut (Ms. DELAURO) was a cancer survivor, and one of our priorities is to double medical research. The gentleman knows that, and we fight for it, and I believe in it.

It is also our priority to keep our word not to touch Social Security and Medicare, and I will do everything I can to make sure that that happens.

But we increased health care medical research by 15 percent last time, 14 percent this time; and we are going to continue to do that because I feel that is one of the gifts that we can give to this great country.

As far as defense, General Shelton is one of my heroes. I mean he could break me in half with his training and his experience in combat. But I am disappointed in General Shelton. He testified before our committee on defense and said that the President's budget was adequate for defense. That was before we added $16 billion to defense. And then he comes out and says, well, this 1 percent will hurt defense. I do not like reducing defense myself, but at the expense of Social Security and Medicare and our other priorities to save and stay under the balanced budget?

The gentlewoman said from D.C. said this is all for naught. I think it is important for us to lay down a marker and say: What do we really stand for? For health care? For education?

The other day, yesterday in the conference, one of the members from the other body said, Oh, you're cutting education.

Chairman said, No. We are adding $350 million above what the President asked, and we're adding more than we spent next year.

And the gentleman says, Oh, you're cutting education because that's not what we originally wanted to put in there.

That argument is wrong. Join with us and say we are adding money to education and health care.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Illinois (Mr. JACKSON).

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. LAHOOD). Will the gentleman from Illinois remove the ribbon-badge from his lapel?

Mr. JACKSON of Illinois. I apologize for being out of dress code, Mr. Speaker.

(Mr. JACKSON of Illinois asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. JACKSON of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the conference report.

Members on the other side of the aisle falsely claim that this conference report saves Social Security while increasing spending over the President's request for education and certain health care programs. When did Members from the other side of the aisle start to care about Social Security? Just 3 months ago Members from the other side of the aisle were peddling an almost $800 billion tax cut that did not help save Social Security, and today the Congressional Budget Office stated the Congress has already spent $17 billion of the Social Security surplus.

This report, like many of the spending bills before it, does not extend the life of Social Security by even 1 day. It fails to include a prescription drug benefit for Medicare, and it hurts every American family in some way. The Labor-HHS and Education bill should help families in this country get through today and prepare for tomorrow. Unfortunately, this bill is loaded with reckless gimmicks and outrageous offsets. Here are just a few examples of some of them.

This report contains $10 billion in advanced appropriations creating a $19 billion hole for next year requiring a further raid of the Social Security surplus.

This report contains $11 billion in delayed obligations for the Departments of Health and Human Services. These delayed obligations will force the National Institutes for Health to not spend 60 percent of the NIH research grant budget until the last 2 days of Fiscal Year 2000. And the Centers For Disease Control and Prevention, this delayed obligation represents 60 percent of the total amount that the CDC awards for grants and cooperative agreements. This delay will interrupt programs that address infectious diseases, immunizations including children's vaccines, HIV/AIDS surveillance, and prevention activities and chronic diseases.

In the Health Resources and Services Administration this delayed obligation represents 25 percent of its budget, which will interrupt the provision of vital health services for 3 million underserved men, women, and children.

One of the most egregious offsets in this bill is the .97 percent government-wide across-the-board reduction.

This reduction is not about cutting waste, fraud and abuse, as the distinguished Budget chairman came a few moments ago and talked about, in Federal agencies, as Members on the other side of the aisle continue to claim. In fact, there is very little discretion for agency heads to make decisions about these cuts. In the Meals on Wheels program, for example, this reduction will result in 1.1 million fewer meals and 8,400 fewer seniors being served. In the Head Start Program, this reduction will deny Head Start services to approximately 7,000 needy children. In Youth Training programs, this reduction will deny job training, summer employment and education opportunities to almost 6,000 disadvantaged youth.

As a member of the Subcommittee on Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education, I hoped my colleagues and I would have been able to come up with a real bill that would have provided real differences for American families.

I am disappointed in the product we have before us and the process that has gotten us to this point, and I urge my colleagues to oppose this ill-conceived conference report.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, what I would like to do now is to yield several minutes successively so that Members of the North Carolina delegation can discuss their flood problems.

Mr. Speaker, I yield first 1 minute to the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. PRICE).

Mr. PRICE of North Carolina. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to this conference report. There are many grounds for objecting to the accounting gimmicks and the delayed payments in this bill, but the main objection hits very close to home: This bill has eliminated $508 million in emergency assistance for agricultural damage caused by Hurricane Floyd in North Carolina and other states. This assistance was approved unanimously by the Committee on Appropriations as a down payment on the crop and livestock losses that our farmers have suffered. It was accepted by our committee leadership very graciously. It is supported by the administration. Now it has been dropped.

The bill contains lots of emergency spending for other purposes. Why, then, was the $508 million in flood relief stripped from the bill, while another $2 billion was added in emergency funding, including $400 million in refugee assistance?

Assistance for refugees is admirable. I support it. But we have refugees from this storm, thousands of families who have lost their homes and possessions and may lose their farms. We have to help them get on their feet again.

This bill is deceptive in its accounting and uncaring in its elimination of assistance to hurricane and flood victims. I urge my colleagues to vote no.

Mr. Speaker I rise in opposition to this conference report. Despite laudable funding levels for many programs in the Labor/HHS/Education bill, it is fundamentally flawed in ways that require me to vote against it.

This bill pushes $14 billion for ongoing programs into FY 2001, and delays $11 billion in obligations until the end of FY 2000 for the National Institutes of Health, the Head Start program, and other priorities. But cancer doesn't wait; diabetes and Parkinson's Disease don't wait. This is not just an accounting gimmick, although it certainly is that; it also will delay critical research on which thousands of desperately sick people are depending.

The proposed 1 percent across-the-board cut in all discretionary accounts will also have real consequences for real people. According to the Office of Management and Budget, these cuts will deny childhood immunizations for up to 2,900 children, deny food and nutrition services to 71,000 women, infants, and children, and prevent 4,800 children and their families from receiving Head Start services. It is an irresponsible approach to reducing spending, since it does not distinguish between programs which might merit reductions and those which do not.

The most egregious flaw for me is a personal one, since it primarily affects my home state. My colleagues know that North Carolina experienced its worst natural disaster in recorded history when Hurricanes Dennis, Floyd, and Irene pounded the eastern part of our state between late August and mid-October. Thousands of North Carolinians are still suffering from the aftermath of the floodwaters, which are only now receding below flood stage in many areas. Entire towns have been destroyed in some cases. Over 15,000 homes were damaged to the point of being unlivable, and the infrastructure in many areas was severely damaged.

Eastern North Carolina is rural, and depends on a farm economy for sustenance. And unlike homeowners or small business owners, who are eligible for at least some direct assistance through FEMA or low-interest loans through the Small Business Administration, there is no authorized direct assistance program for losses suffered by farmers. The North Carolina delegation never had an opportunity to plead our case for emergency agriculture assistance through the Agriculture Appropriations conference, which would normally have been the proper place for such assistance. And while some of the $1.2 billion in agricultural assistance contained in that bill will benefit farmers in North Carolina and other affected states, substantial unmet needs still remain for our farmers.

As a consequence, I offered an amendment to the Labor/HHS appropriations bill during Appropriations Committee consideration in late September to provide $508 million in emergency assistance for agricultural damages caused by Hurricanes Dennis and Floyd. Since damage estimates at that time were incomplete but clearly substantial, I argued that this funding should be provided as a down payment on the needs that farmers in North Carolina and other affected states would be shown to have. Chairmen YOUNG and PORTER graciously accepted the amendment, and it was approved unanimously by the committee on a voice vote. Likewise, the administration signaled its support for this funding.

It seems highly unlikely that there will be a separate emergency supplemental bill this year to address the needs of states affected by the hurricanes and associated flooding. Our best and likely our only opportunity to provide timely assistance to the victims of this natural disaster is through pending FY 2000 appropriations bills—and Title X of the Labor-HHS bill, which contained this $508 million, was the obvious place to get the job done. The sensible thing would have been to use an updated estimate of emergency needs from North Carolina and the other states to refine the existing emergency provisions in the bill for agriculture and other areas of emergency need.

The omission is made all the more conspicuous and indefensible by the other emergency spending the bill contains. Why was the $508 million in flood relief stripped from the bill while $2 billion in other emergency designations remains, including $1.1 billion for the standard Low Income Home Energy Assistance Program and $427 million for assistance to refugees? Both of these are important programs, but hardly appropriate for emergency funding. Assistance for refugees from other countries is admirable, and I support it—but we have refugees in North Carolina, too—thousands of families who have lost their homes and their possessions. We must help them get on their feet again. How can they interpret the elimination of this emergency assistance as anything but a sign that Congress holds their suffering in contempt and does not care about their real and immediate need?

This bill is dishonest in its accounting and uncaring in its elimination of assistance to Hurricane victims. I urge my colleagues to vote "no."

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. WATT).

(Mr. WATT of North Carolina asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. WATT of North Carolina. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the bill and in support of my colleagues from North Carolina and their statements about the devastation and lack of attention that this bill pays to North Carolina's flood situation.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. ETHERIDGE).

(Mr. ETHERIDGE asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. ETHERIDGE. Mr. Speaker, I thank the ranking member for yielding me time.

Mr. Speaker, I associate my remarks with the previous speaker, my friend from North Carolina, and I join him in saying there are some good things, but this bill is a sham. It is a disgrace to our children and families in North Carolina who have lost everything in the flood of Hurricane Floyd. The Republican leadership found $2 billion for emergency relief in this bill, but cut out the $508 million for our folks who badly need it.

Mr. Speaker, there is an emergency in our State today. I have looked into the faces of the farmers and the families. I was with a family this weekend who had three children who lost everything they own, everything. I have met with farmers who have lost their crops, the widow who lost her husband, and 15,000 families who lost their homes.

The Republican leadership should be ashamed of themselves for playing politics with the lives of these people. In North Carolina, normally the cold winds of winter come from the West. Today they are coming from the North, from Washington. I urge you to do better by our people.

This bill is a sham to our seniors, a sham to our children and a sham to thousands of families in North Carolina who have lost everything in the floods from Hurricane Floyd. The Republican leaders found $2 billion in emergency spending for this bill, but cut $508 million in emergency funds the committee had approved unanimously for Hurricane Floyd relief. Folks, we have an emergency in my state. I've seen the suffering and despair first hand. The farmer who has lost his crops, the widow who has lost her husband, and the fifteen thousand families that lost their homes and every possession they ever owned, can't wait any longer for the help they need to survive.

The Republican Leadership should be ashamed of themselves for playing politics with the lives of these people. Playing pay raise politics on this bill is an act of cowardice not worthy of the U.S. Congress. Winter is coming. In Northern Carolina, the cold air usually comes in from the West. But today, the cold air is coming from the North, a chill pouring in from Washington brought about by the cold-hearted politics being played with the lives of the people of my state. I urge every member, including my Republican colleagues from North Carolina, to cast a vote of conscience against this bill and not to vote for another spending bill until we take care of our own. We must help the people of eastern North Carolina get back on their feet, and we must help them now.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. MCINTYRE).

(Mr. MCINTYRE asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. MCINTYRE. Mr. Speaker, let us talk about this one penny for every dollar. There was an amendment to this bill that would have given $508 million to help farmers who have lost everything. These are hours of desperation, not a time of celebration. This is a time of shame, shame on those who claim this helps American families.

Let us talk about substance and reality, when in fact it takes $423 million of our money to give to foreign refugees, and you will not give one penny to our farmers who have lost their homes, their equipment? They do not have a future.

This is the People's House. We are elected to serve our people first, and may God help us honor that commitment to the American people with every penny of every dollar.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from North Carolina (Mrs. CLAYTON).

(Mrs. CLAYTON asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Mrs. CLAYTON. Mr. Speaker, normally the Labor bill we call the people's bill, a compassionate bill, a bill that cares about people's health, their welfare.

Well, you had an opportunity to do that, to really do that. $508 million would make a difference of humanity for farmers in my district. I tell you, more than 68,000 Americans who live in eastern North Carolina are affected. You are saying no to them when you refuse to take this opportunity. I say that this conference bill had a unique opportunity to live up to its humanity. This is inhumane. It is inhumane to assume that you would turn your back on farmers and those who are destitute at this time.

Mr. ISTOOK. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from New York (Mr. WALSH), the distinguished chairman of the Subcommittee on VA, HUD and Independent Agencies of the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Speaker, I have to rise regarding this issue. The three or four Members from North Carolina who just spoke sent me letters as chairman of my subcommittee thanking me, thanking me for providing for $2.5 billion in disaster assistance to FEMA for North Carolina, while my part of the country, the Northeast, was terribly underfunded for disaster relief because of drought, and they have the temerity to stand here and accuse us of disrespecting the needs of the lives and well-being of the people of North Carolina.

That is an outrage. It is an outrage for them on the one hand to demand that we help them, and I met with them, the entire delegation with their Governor, heard their pleas, heard their concerns, identified and empathized with them, and provided $2.5 billion in our bill on that request alone. For them to stand here and make these allegations against my party, I think it is just wrong, and I had to stand and state the truth.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 seconds to the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. PRICE).

Mr. PRICE of North Carolina. Mr. Speaker, I would like for the gentleman to tell us how much agricultural aid was in that VA-HUD bill? He is talking about FEMA aid. We are very grateful for that. Of course, we are grateful for that.

But in the bill before us, we are talking about emergency aid to farmers who have no other way of getting direct payments for crop and livestock losses.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PRICE of North Carolina. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Speaker, we are talking about $2.5 billion in American taxpayer money going to Eastern North Carolina to help people solve their problems. That is our response.

Mr. PRICE of North Carolina. Mr. Speaker, reclaiming my time, my question is, how much of that would be available for direct aid to farmers for crop loss?

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Speaker, it is direct aid to people.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 10 seconds.

Mr. Speaker, I think what the gentleman is talking about is apples and oranges. I think the gentleman from North Carolina is correct. He is talking about aid that farmers need that they are not getting.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 3½ minutes to the distinguished gentleman from South Carolina (Mr. SPRATT).

(Mr. SPRATT asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SPRATT. Mr. Speaker, my colleague the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. KASICH) was on the floor a minute ago, and he said that we should really be celebrating our success. I agree. We have come a long way from 1992 when the deficit, even with a large surplus in Social Security, was $290 billion and headed up.

We passed three budgets to reverse that course, a budget summit in 1990, the Clinton Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act in '93, and the Balanced Budget Act of 1997, and my side put the votes on the board to pass those bills and we are proud of the accomplishment.

But one of the disciplines we implemented when we passed those bills was to put a ceiling, a cap, on discretionary spending, the stuff that runs the government. The gentleman from Ohio (Mr. KASICH) said we should not be denigrating this accomplishment, but how can you help but denigrate what this budget before us represents? Because what it does is make a mockery of the discretionary spending ceiling.

The discretionary spending ceiling for this year, according to CBO, is $580 billion in July, $579.8. We are $30 billion over that particular limit, $30 billion over that limit. We have exceeded the discretionary spending limits to that extent.

You can do that if is a genuine emergency, but the Census, an emergency? $4.4 billion? Spare parts, POL for the Army, an emergency? Give me a break. We are trashing the rules, the disciplines, that have gotten us to where we are in doing this.

The result was given to us this morning by CBO as soon as they saw what this bill, the Labor-HHS bill, appropriated. They scored the entire 13 bills that make up the discretionary spending budget, and here it is: The cap for this year is $580 billion. If we can attain that cap, CBO told us in July that we would have a surplus of $14 billion, without including Social Security. That gives us a target of $594 billion. As long as we keep the spending within that level, we do not have to dip into Social Security.

But what is the total according to CBO of outlays, total spending under all 13 appropriation bills passed by this House, controlled by the Republicans? $611 billion. The arithmetic is simple. We are $17 billion into Social Security.

Now, if you look at the letter CBO sent me this morning, and we have copies over here we will gladly share with you, that is Table 1. Look at Table 2.

Dr. Crippen goes on to say in Table 2 you do not have a 1 percent problem. If you want to cut across the board to put this budget back in balance and out of Social Security, you have got a 4.8 percent across-the-board problem. And if, because that would be disastrous for defense and veterans, you want to leave out veterans and defense, you have got a 10.8 percent problem.

So all of this talk about 1 percent across the board is just a minimum cut is poppycock. As soon as we recognize that, read CBO's letter, they are our neutral, nonpartisan budget shop. They have served us well. They have scored outlays over the last 6 years from 1993 to 1998 with an error factor of 0.4 percent. As soon as we take their advice and get this back in proper condition, then we can get out of this sham budgeting and into real budgeting and finally close this process. But it is not a 1 percent problem, it is a much bigger problem.

Mr. ISTOOK. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Florida (Mr. YOUNG), the chairman of the full Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I had not intended to get into this give and take on the political argument, but I listened to this rhetoric about the farm emergencies, and let me tell you what the truth is, and here is the paperwork, the documentation that proves it.

Last year this Congress added as an emergency amount of money for the farm emergencies $6 billion, $5.916 billion, to be exact. Then, when the next supplemental request came from the administration, we added to that request for the Hurricane Mitch supplemental $700 million. Most of it was not requested, we added it. Then in the regular fiscal year 2000 agriculture bill, which we passed and the President has signed, we added $8.7 billion to deal with farm emergencies. The President did not request any of this $8.7 billion. We still do not have a request from the President for agricultural losses this hurricane season.

Now, for someone over there to stand and say this Congress has neglected the farmer and the emergencies in the agriculture community is just not right. It is not accurate. It is not truthful. It is purely political rhetoric. The facts are here, and you are welcome to look at them.

Mr. ISTOOK. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentlewoman from Kentucky (Mrs. NORTHUP), a member of the Subcommittee on Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education.

Mrs. NORTHUP. Mr. Speaker, it gives me a real thrill to be here today and to be part of this debate.

When I ran for Congress in 1995, what I told my constituents was that there was a new day in this country, a day of talking about restraint, a day of talking about balancing the budget, a day of talking about Social Security and saving Social Security, and that it was going to require a lot of courage, it was going to require us to look at things differently, but that I felt that I could be part of that debate and part of that solution.

Since I arrived in 1996, the first thing we tackled was balancing the budget. It was a thrill to me when we passed the balanced budget amendments and set ourselves on a course that we were going to restrain spending and balance the budget.

But even then, we did not imagine that we would be able to, as quickly as now, also restrain ourselves from spending Social Security surpluses. Let us give the economy credit, certainly that has been part of it, but we could have gone right on and spent. In fact, what we have heard today is one speaker after the other from the minority side talking about spend more, spend more, spend more, spend it faster, spend it faster, spend it faster.

If we had stepped up every single budget bill we have had before us, every single appropriations bill we have had this year, and spent what they asked us to, we would have gotten way back into the past type of thinking. But because of the restraint of the leadership, the discipline of the subcommittee chairs and the chairmen, we have held to the idea that we have to restrain ourselves, and for the sake of social security.

I am tired of hearing people say social security is safe, that we have put a note in there saying it is an IOU and we are going to owe it, because our children in 2010 are going to have to start paying that back.

We do not have things that we can sell, assets that we can sell to cash it in. It is not in stocks. It is not in things that we can cash in. It would be like me spending my six kids' college funds on new clothes and saying, I am going to put an IOU in there. That is great. When they start to college, what do I have to sell to give them their money back? We are not going to sell our airports, we are not going to still our schools, we are not going to sell our locks and dams.

We have no assets to sell, no assets to sell. The only assets we have are my six children, who are going to go to work and have to start paying for this spending that we did not restrain ourselves from in the past.

So out of great love and admiration for my 77-year-old parents, who are not going to make anymore money than they have in the bank, we are securing Social Security. For those grandchildren and my six children who are going to carry the burden forever, we are restraining our spending so they might have it in their day.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as she may consume to the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. JACKSON-LEE).

(Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Wisconsin for yielding time to me.

Because 950,000 children will have no place to go after school when this bill passes, Mr. Speaker, I rise to oppose this legislation, and ask us to get back to work for the American people.

Mr. Speaker, I rise to strongly oppose this appropriations bill.

The majority has made a mockery of the appropriations process by attaching the Labor HHS appropriations bill to the DC appropriations bill. Because the bill has been presented in this manner, we cannot amend this bill that is flawed in almost every way. This political maneuvering simply breeds more partisanship, and it only sharply divides the House when we should be working together for the American people.

On a program level comparison, the House Labor HHS appropriations bill is almost $4 billion or 4% below the President's Budget request. It is about $5 billion or 6% below the funding level contained in the bill currently under consideration in the Republican-controlled U.S. Senate. Excluding the National Institutes of Health, which received a $1.3 billion increase in the bill, the remaining programs in the bill are in the aggregate cut close to $1 billion below current year levels. There are 45 major programs cut below 1999 or eliminated entirely in the bill that total almost $2 billion in cuts.

This situation is untenable, and the bill in its current form is a sham. It is our responsibility to draft an appropriations bill that works.

This bill denies 42,000 children a "Head Start" in life. Research has shown consistently that Head Start helps low-income children get ready and stay ready for school, improves parenting, and helps parents get on the road to economic and social self sufficiency. There are over 2 million low-income children under the age of 5 who are eligible for Head Start, but the program currently provides services to only 835,000 children, 40% of those who are eligible. The President's request of $5.3 billion would provide a Head Start experience to an additional 42,000 children (including 7,000 children ages 0 to 3) and their families as part of the Administration's commitment to enrolling 1 million children in Head Start by 2002.

The Appropriations recommendation, however, is a full $507 million below the President's request. This cut would have drastic implications in my home State of Texas. The recommendation would result in a $43 million cut for Head Start funding in Texas. This substantial reduction in funding would have severe consequences on the Texas children and would diminish the positive impact that Head Start has had in my State.

The bill repeals last year's bipartisan agreement to dedicate funding solely for Class Size Reduction, jeopardizing the President's goal of helping schools to hire 100,000 new teachers. The Committee bill eliminates a total of $2.2 billion in funding requested for Class Size Reduction, Goals 2000 and the Eisenhower Teacher Training Program. In the State of Texas, this cut would result in a $26 million cut to the Eisenhower Teacher Training Program, a $37 million cut to the Goals 2000 Program, and an almost $114 million cut to the Class Size Reduction Program. Texas cannot sustain such a loss in Federal funding, and I greatly fear for the continued success of these programs.

Not only does the bill cut the President's combined request for the Class Size Reduction, Goals 2000 (state grants) and Eisenhower Teacher Training programs by $396 million, it also cuts the funding level proposed by the House Committee on Education and Workforce for the teacher training/class size block grant program by $200 million or 10%. The Teacher Empowerment Act is a new teacher training/class size block grant program that has passed the House, but not the Senate, and has not been enacted into law. Should the Teacher Empowerment Act fail to become law, assistance to schools would be cut not by $200 million, but by $2.0 billion below the 1999 level for the programs combined into the block grant.

This bill also cuts back on funding for GEAR UP. In 1994, only 49 percent of low-income students attended a postsecondary institution within two years of high school. Of these students, only 19 percent attended a 4-year college, in contrast with 70 percent of high-income students. The GEAR UP program is designed to help these students. By starting disadvantaged middle school students on an academic path, it raises their educational expectations through early college preparation and awareness activities, and gives them the skills and encouragement they need to successfully pursue a college education. In my hometown of Houston, Texas, The University of Houston has forged an alliance with HISD through GEAR UP, and this university has done much to ensure that low-income students have the opportunity to attend a four-year college.

The bill eliminates the GEAR UP program which was funded at $120 million in FY 1999, and for which the President requested $240 million for FY 2000. The bill would deny 572,000 low-income middle and high school students sustained, comprehensive support services including: counseling, tutoring, mentoring, parental involvement, after-school and summer activities, access to rigorous core courses needed for college, information about financial aid, and campus visits.

This appropriations bill also drastically underfunds America's Historically Black Colleges and Universities. Yet, one of our pressing national priorities is to increase the number of underrepresented minority and disadvantaged students who enter and successfully complete higher education. In 1995–1996 black, non-Hispanic students earned less than 8 percent of the Bachelor's degrees conferred. To increase the success rate of African-American and other minority students, HBCUs need additional support to provide stronger academic programs and more comprehensive services to the growing number of African-American and other minority students. In Houston, Texas Southern University has been an exemplary institution and has provided innumerable opportunities for minority students. This bill effectively would undermine the work of this school.

In addition, the lack of diversity at the graduate level is becoming an important national concern. In 1995–1996 black, non-Hispanic students received only 6.4 percent of the Master's and 3.7 percent of the Doctor's degree conferred. As we work to increase the number of minority students who pursue graduate education, we have to provide sufficient support to ensure that HBGLs (graduate institutions) are prepared to serve these students adequately.

This bill provides level funding for both of these programs, which is a cut of $14.8 million below the request for Strengthening HBCUs and HBGLs. The Department would therefore be unable to increase support for the 98 HBCUs and the 18 HBGLs beyond the FY 1999 level, not even for inflation. The result would be a decrease in minority participation at these schools—especially at the graduate school level.

With a booming economy offering job opportunities to people who have never before been in the labor force and with welfare rolls shrinking and with employers scouring the labor market for qualified workers, this bill is cutting job training funds by $700 million dollars below last year. In Texas, this would result in an almost $8 million cut in adult training and a $8.5 million cut in youth training. According to a survey of the U.S. Conference of Mayors, 86% of cities suffer shortages of technology workers, 73% suffer shortages of health workers, and 72% lack enough construction workers to fill available jobs. Yet, this bill would do nothing to provide solutions to these grave problems.

The bill provides an appropriation of $4,572 million for Training and Employment Services for FY 2000. This is a reduction of $928 million, or 17% below the request, and a reduction of $709 million, or 13%, below 1999. Overall, the House mark reduces program participants nearly 432,300, or 20%, below the request, and about 175,000, or 9%, below 1999.

This bill also undermines the bipartisan Workforce Investment Act enacted last year that is intended to provide access to information and services that all Americans need to find and keep a job to meet the workforce challenges of the global economy.

The House bill cuts the dislocated worker program by $140 million below 1999, and $335 million below the request. In Texas, the State would need to cut its funding by almost $18 million. The House mark means that 176,600 fewer dislocated workers will be served compared to the President—and 46,500 fewer than in FY 1999, reversing increases the Congress has provided over the past three years. This means that from the universe of 3.3 million dislocated workers per year, even fewer will not benefit from services that could shorten the time that they are unemployed and hundreds of employers will also be hindered in their capacity to find the skilled workers they need. The bill rejects the President's goal of providing reemployment services and training to dislocated worker who needs and wants them by 2004.

The bill provides a program level of $38.4 billion for the Department of Health and Human Services, which is $686 million (–2%) below the President's 2000 request.

In particular, the bill slashes $212 million from the Administration's request for the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration. This will drastically affect the Center for Mental Health Services which supports state prevention, treatment and rehabilitation efforts. These cuts will potentially deny 20,000 individuals access to essential stabilizing medication. The Committee also cuts $3 million from the President's request for PATH, a program which aids homeless individuals with mental illness. Every night, approximately 200,000 Americans with major mental illness have nowhere to sleep. By denying the President's request, the Committee is denying the opportunity to reach out to an additional 7,800 homeless individuals and provide them with essential mental health services.

Furthermore, our children suffer from mental illnesses. The tragedy in Littleton, Colorado is a somber example of this fact. It is estimated that eleven million American children and adolescents have a diagnosable mental, emotional or behavioral disorder. One in 20 American children will have a severe disorder by the age of 18.

Five to nine percent of our children and youths ages 9 to 17 have a serious emotional disturbance of a magnitude that limits their capacity to function appropriately at home, at school, or in their communities.

Yet, as this bill stands, we cannot help America's children. The Appropriations Committee simply fails to acknowledge that our children are suffering.

The Committee bill is $19 million below the FY 1999 funding level for the Center for Substance Abuse and Prevention. This cut severely threatens the program to provide integrated substance abuse and HIV/AIDS prevention services to African American and Hispanic/Latino youth as well as women and their children. According to the Surgeon General, nearly one half of all new HIV infections are caused either directly (through sharing of injection equipment) or indirectly (sexual transmission from an individual infected through injection equipment, birth, etc.) through substance abuse. Racial and ethnic minorities are disproportionately effected by substance abuse related HIV infection. Since 1981, roughly 61% of all AIDS cases among women have been attributed to injection drug use, or sex with partners who inject drugs. Further, among the highest health care expenditures associated with substance abuse are those associated with HIV/AIDS.

Yet, this bill eliminates $50 million in emergency funds for HIV/AIDS in Minority Communities. Representing an estimated 12% of the total U.S. population, African Americans make up almost 37% of all AIDS cases reported in this country. In 1998, Hispanic represented 13% of the U.S. population (including residents of Puerto Rico), but accounted for 20% of the total number of new U.S. AIDS cases reported that year (9,650 of 48,269 cases). The AIDS incidence rate among Hispanics in 1998 was 28.1 per 100,000 population, almost 4 times the rate for whites (8.2 per 100,000) but lower than the rate for African Americans (66.4 per 100,000).

And it isn't just children, young adults seeking job training or average workers who are ignored by this bill. It is our senior citizens as well. This bill cuts funds requested for the meals on wheels program targeted at the growing number of elderly shut-ins that currently are not getting that assistance. It eliminates a new initiative aimed at protecting our disabled elderly from abuse in nursing homes. It eliminates the family caregiver support program that would help seniors remain in their own homes and out of nursing homes as long as possible.

The bill includes $6.48 billion for the administrative expenses of the Social Security Administration, which is $225 million below the level requested by the President. Funding SSA at this level will result in a deterioration in public services. SSA would be forced to impose immediate and complete hiring freeze, leaving 3,000 positions vacant by the end of the year. This would result in disability applicants waiting almost 5 months, almost twice as long the current processing time, for a decision on their initial claims, and longer waiting times for the millions of individuals who visit district offices. Mr. Speaker, send this bill back to committee so that American families can get a fair deal for their tax dollars, not an insult.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3½ minutes to the distinguished gentleman from New York (Mrs. LOWEY).

Mrs. LOWEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise to oppose this bill, with the greatest respect for the gentleman from Illinois (Chairman PORTER) and the ranking member, the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. OBEY). They both care deeply about the health, education, and opportunities available to Americans.

I especially want to mention my high regard for the gentleman from Illinois (Chairman PORTER), who has said he will retire at the end of this Congress. The gentleman from Illinois has served his constituents, this committee, and the people of this great country with such honor, commitment, and decency, I am proud to call the gentleman my friend.

I have hoped and will continue to hope that we can come together and work on a budget that truly addresses the needs of Americans. Unfortunately, in too many instances, I do not believe this budget does so. We are spending billions in this budget and, unfortunately, in my judgment, many times we are spending it in the wrong places.

In some cases, we delay so long it is almost like not spending the money at all. The delayed obligation to the NIH and CDC troubles me, particularly.

I have a personal reason for caring about this part of the budget. I lost my mother to breast cancer, and not a day goes by when I do not think about her and of the years we missed together. I often wonder how many women like my mother might still be alive today if our country had invested more in cancer research and treatment a generation ago.

I am determined that my daughters and granddaughters will not suffer with cancer as my mom did, and as so many Americans do today. I believe that while government cannot cure cancer, it can put the resources in the hands of those who will. Therefore, I have made funding of biomedical research at the National Institutes of Health and the Public Health Mission of the CDC my top priority on the subcommittee on Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education of the Committee on Appropriations.

I am proud that medical research, particularly with regard to women, has finally become a national priority. Again, I am proud to serve on this subcommittee. This is a bill that is meant to give Americans a hand in the hard work of raising families and caring for loved ones.

We are charged with protecting America's health, education, and employment, and because of that, I must say that it is irresponsible, in my judgment, to bring a bill to the floor with $10 billion in money borrowed from next year, in effect, taking care of this year's political problems at the expense of next year's needs.

It is irresponsible to say that we support education and health care, but delay $11 billion in obligations to Head Start, the NIH, and other agencies until September 29, 2000, and it strains whatever trust Americans still have in us to load this budget with trickery and accounting gimmicks and call it a success.

Mr. Speaker, frankly, when we read the bill, it is easy to see why Americans are cynical about Congress. The budget does nothing to secure the strength of social security, it does not reform Medicare, it hurts millions of hard-working Americans. Assisting those families should be where we start our budget work, not where we scramble to end it.

I believe we can do better, we should do better. Let us vote no, and then let us work together and give this budget the worthy and sincere effort that the American people deserve.

Mr. ISTOOK. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. ARMEY), the majority leader of the House of Representatives.

Mr. ARMEY. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Speaker, I am excited, I am pleased, I am happy, and in fact, Mr. Speaker, I am elated. Can Members imagine what we are doing today? Stop and think about what we are able to do today. This is the most wonderful opportunity for public service any of us could ever have hoped to have had in any time of service here.

Today we stop the raid on social security. We started the year saying we could do that. We started the year saying we should do that. We have those who said it could not be done. They did not think we would be capable of doing it. I have to tell the Members, Mr. Speaker, we have worked hard. Some of our Members have worked themselves into near exhaustion. We have worked hard, and yes, we have had some good fortune, some good news along the way.

We have brought ourselves today to that day that they said we just could not get to. Today we are proving that we can fund the government without raiding social security and without raising taxes.

The President knows this. The President saw it a week ago. The President said, they can do it. I can see they can do it. Because they can do it, we must do it. I want to join them in doing it. He has done so. He has his folks up here working. Let us complete the job. It is within our reach. Let us do it.

Today CBO has certified, and now, I would ask Members to please read the whole CBO letter and get to the bottom line. The bottom line of the CBO letter, not the one he sent the gentleman from South Carolina (Mr. SPRATT) but the one he sent to the appropriators and to the leadership of this Congress, CBO has certified that we have done it. Right now we have done the job of passing the budget without spending social security. It is certified, indeed, to a $1 billion on-budget surplus.

The President knows we can do it and has said, let us get the job done as quickly as possible. We know we can do it. CBO has certified we have done it. Now, what do we hear today from our friends across the aisle? They are no longer saying it could not be done, they are no longer saying it cannot be done. Now they are saying it should not be done. Why should it not be done? Because if we stop the raid, if we fund the government without spending social security, they can no longer do what it is they have been doing, funding the government with social security.

Today we have funded the government without social security. Let us vote yes. Let us be proud, let us be happy, and let us be thankful that we have been able to have this opportunity for service to our parents and our children.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, to return us from the land of fiction to the land of reality, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. STENHOLM).

Mr. STENHOLM. Mr. Speaker, the previous speaker is precisely why I rise again today. It is not a letter to the gentleman from South Carolina (Mr. SPRATT), it is a letter to me from the Congressional Budget Office which we requested on behalf of the Blue Dogs that clearly states when we use CBO scoring as they wish, not as the House leadership instructs them to ask the question, we are spending $17.1 billion of social security trust fund.

That is a fact. That is in my letter. That is a simple thing that we have asked, just to be honest in what you ask and stop this political gobbledegook that we are going through as to who is spending social security trust funds.

I say that my colleague, the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. PORTER), a moment ago expressed a spirit of conciliation which I appreciate in acknowledging the process today. In the same spirit, I acknowledge that some of the rhetoric coming from my side of the aisle is not exactly right, either. I will acknowledge that, and I hope I am not part of it.

But the reason why I oppose this across-the-board cut today is because by CBO's estimates, we will be spending social security trust funds after we have made an across-the-board cut of $3.452 billion in outlays. I do not wish to go into operations and maintenance of the Defense Department, of which we have heard witness after witness, statement after statement, on both sides of the aisle of people who are concerned about defense, saying that we cannot afford a one dollar cut out of $100, or a 1 percent cut.

Everyone that knows something about this knows that it is not that simple. But yet today, for somebody's reasons, so somebody can continue to buy advertisements on television attacking some of my Democratic colleagues saying we in the minority are spending social security trust funds, the CBO, when asked honest questions, and I have no quarrel with the gentleman from Florida (Chairman YOUNG), I commend him for the job that he is doing, and the statements that have been made by the gentleman from New York (Mr. WALSH), a moment ago, all of this.

But if we really wanted to deal with social security, why did not the leadership, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. ARMEY), why did he not insist that the gentleman from Texas (Chairman ARCHER) come from the Committee on Ways and Means and bring a social security bill to the floor of the House this year, instead of spending the first 8 months talking about a tax cut of $1 trillion that would have spent, by CBO's honest accounting, $120 billion of the same social security trust funds that we are here today to preserve and protect?

Please let us get honest. There has been a spirit of conciliation. The gentleman from Ohio (Chairman KASICH) a moment ago acknowledged that even after this, we may still not serve it. I ask those Members to listen to their chairman and be careful of their rhetoric, particularly when they go out and make political statements, because they are going to have to live by these words next year.

Remember, the budget of 2001 begins about February. All of this rhetoric about back-end loading and all of the things, and the little cute games we are getting in order to make sure we say today we are not spending social security, will actually be factual in about 3 months. I ask Members to be careful what they say.

Mr. ISTOOK. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 20 seconds.

Mr. Speaker, we have heard people try to present a partial look, only a partial look at what CBO has said.

A request was sent to them saying, if you do not count the adjustments, is there money coming out of social security? They said, if you do not count it. But if you count the adjustments, then it is in surplus. That is like asking your banker, Mr. Speaker, to send you a bank statement that tells you about your withdrawals but leaves out reference to the deposits. Of course it would show a negative.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Arkansas (Mr. DICKEY).

□ 1600

Mr. DICKEY. Mr. Speaker, I wish that my constituents were here today. When we went home during the break and said we wanted to have tax reductions, we had wanted taxes to come back here, and they said we want to pay off the debt, and my response was time and time and time again we cannot do that up in Washington, because we are going to spend, and we are going to spend, and we are going to spend, and we are going to spend.

They said, no, no, we hear it from the liberals and we hear it from the conservatives that we are going to pay this debt down. Now, we are watching today. I just wish they could be here. We are watching today the people who are the most skilled at learning and talking about spending.

I have heard every excuse there is. We are trying to isolate this and that, and we are trying to bring compassion in, and we are trying to say there is no compassion on the other side. Remember this, compassion is saving the money so that we can spend it later. It is not compassionate to go spend money and spend money and spend money so we can get recognition, so we can get reelected and leaving the poor people out there to live off of borrowed funds and particularly borrowed funds from Social Security.

So we need to be honest. We must be honest. We are not being honest now. We took this bill and said that we were not covering the farm aid. The gentleman from Florida (Chairman YOUNG) said what he said, and then the gentleman from New York (Chairman WALSH) got up and said $2.5 billion specifically is going to North Carolina directly.

Now, this is how it still is. This is why you all are so good, you liberals are so good at doing what you have done for years. You are protecting your territory, and you are doing it quite well, but it is not right.

We have to be responsible. We need to take our compassion and convert it to discipline and to stopping this spending. We are doing it here. We should be joining together to protect the people of America.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. SABO), former chairman of the Committee on the Budget.

(Mr. SABO asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SABO. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. OBEY), the ranking member, for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, before my planned comments, a couple statements of fact. Nothing this Congress will do will add one dime to the Social Security Trust Fund. Nothing that this Congress is doing will change how dime one of the Social Security Trust Fund is invested. Regardless of which assumptions one uses, whether they be CBO, Congressional Budget Office, or those at the Office of Management and Budget, in either case, based on current projections, this Congress will be borrowing money from the Social Security Trust Fund based on today's assumptions.

But, Mr. Speaker, I was going to make just one little observation about how one program works. I am for highway funding. I am for transit funding. I serve on the committee that funds those programs. But I think they should be treated like other programs.

In this bill, those programs receive the 1 percent cut like other programs for the year 2000. But then lo and behold, this same bill gives all the money back as additional funding in the year 2001, saying that all those funds for those programs, which I like, some I have local interest in, is higher priority than anything else in the transportation area, such as operations for the FAA.

If there is any area within our bill that all of us were apprehensive about, it was FAA operations. We had already reduced the President's request. That will be cut by 59 million additional dollars, will not automatically be restored next year.

Programs, whether they be in education, research, housing, farmers, veterans, none of those are automatically restored next year. But because one powerful individual threatens to vote no, those funds get preference. What a way to operate.

Mr. ISTOOK. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Florida (Mr. MILLER), another member of the Subcommittee on Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education.

Mr. MILLER of Florida. Mr. Speaker, today is a day we should feel good, feel positive, feel happy, because there are some great accomplishments that we should be proud that have been announced this week and that we are going to pass on the floor here today.

We are hearing all this sky is falling rhetoric from the other side and this fear and scare tactics, oh, my gosh, what is happening next.

Well, first of all, the Treasury Department announced this week that we had $124 billion surplus in this past fiscal year that just ended a few weeks ago, $124 billion surplus. Now, $1 billion was taken out of Social Security, so we have not quite met our goal. But the fact is we had a huge accomplishment. That is real numbers. That is not OMB numbers. That is not CBO numbers. That is real dollars.

In the past 2 years, according to the Treasury Department, actual debt reduction is $138 billion. Real reduction. We have finally accomplished that.

Now, a lot of our colleagues on the other side think it was the tax increases in 1990 and 1993. In 1995, when President Clinton submitted his budget, he projected $200 billion deficits as far as the eye could see. We said, no, that is not good enough. We want to have at least a balanced budget by 2002. Thank God we made it sooner than that. So we should be glad that we have accomplished this already with real dollars.

The other great accomplishment is going to happen later this afternoon, and that is passing this bill and for the continuation of the fact we are really going to have a real surplus again.

Now, we have the Labor-HHS bill before us now. As a member of that committee, I wish we had a full day to debate it and discuss it. The one disappointment that I have about the bill is that the gentleman from Illinois (Chairman PORTER) is going to be serving his last term as chairman of that subcommittee, because he has been a great chairman. I think both sides of the aisle would agree.

But let us look at some of the real numbers. NIH, we have a $2.3 billion increase. President Clinton asked for a $300 million increase. From 2.3 billion, and the President only asked for $300 million. Now, all right, we are going to take a 1 percent cut out of it. But a $2.3 billion increase. The President said, oh, cancer research is important. We agree. Special Ed has got a $1 billion increase. This is a good bill. Pass it.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 seconds to the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. HOYER).

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. MILLER) may not have been here. This budget spends, in fiscal year 2000, $1.5 billion less than the President of the United States asked for in NIH. That is what their budget does.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, that is correct.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. MURTHA), the distinguished ranking member on the Subcommittee on Defense of the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. MURTHA. Mr. Speaker, I tell my colleagues what worries me about the way we are doing this. I would doubt that the leadership asked the chairman of the Subcommittee on Defense where to cut this bill.

Now, during the entire time that I have been on this committee, we have cut substantial amounts from defense, but we never did an across-the-board cut without knowing what the implications were.

Some people said, well, General Shelton testified this way, General Shelton testified that way. Well, I have said, the gentleman from California (Chairman LEWIS) has said, the gentleman from Florida (Chairman YOUNG) has said, the Defense Department has been short money for the last several years. We have said it over and over again.

When I go to a base, I find 20 percent short across the line. I find them short on real property maintenance. I find them short on O&M. Anybody that goes to any of our military bases will find the same thing.

Secretary Cohen called me the other day. He said, "I want to tell you how much I appreciate what the Members of Congress did to raise the pay and change the whole thing for retirement." He appreciated it. He said the enthusiasm and morale is marvelous.

Now, I do not want to say what I went through in order to make sure this bill was not vetoed. I mean, I have had a few amiable discussions with a lot of people. There was a tremendous pressure to veto this bill. I decided that we could not veto it. We had a good bill. Everybody said this is a good bill.

This is a bill that funds the Defense Department with the allocation we got from leadership, whatever leadership gives us.

If the gentleman from Florida (Mr. YOUNG) gives us less money, we will make the appropriate cuts. If the leadership decides there should be less money, we will make those cuts.

During the Reagan administration, we cut billions of dollars, item by item from his budget. As we went into the gulf war, one of our finest victories, we had apportioned that money so carefully that we were able to win a tremendous victory. But we did not do an across-the-board cut. We did a cut item by item.

According to the figures that I have, the Defense Department, because it cannot cut pay, would have to cut personnel. When I go overseas, I find the members of the Armed Forces saying, I have been overseas four or five times. I went to one Marine unit, and they had been overseas four Christmases in a row because we have cut back so dramatically in the number of people that are available in the armed services.

Now, we can argue whether they should be deployed so often or not, but this way of cutting the budget is absolutely against everything that we have been taught. What we should do is go back to committee and make the decisions based on the amount of money we have available.

When we started this process, we had a bipartisan agreement in all the subcommittees, then the leadership said, Okay, you have got to cut a couple hundred million dollars more. Well, they did not do that with defense. With defense, they took the bill, they gave us a good allotment, and we came up with a bill which everybody is praising, and, yet, it is not enough money.

Any way one cuts it, it is not enough money. They used to come over there and bring all those charts over when we were before the committee. I wonder where they got the money for the charts. But I will tell my colleagues this, cutting out a few charts is not going to make up for the amount of money, the $2.7 billion, we are going to cut out of this. This actually takes us below the O&M that the President requested. So this is not the way to do it.

You take this bill back, and you give it to the gentleman from California (Chairman LEWIS) and myself, and we will come up with a bill. We will come up with a legitimate cut. But the way we are doing it is absolutely wrong.

I would ask the Members to think about the devastating impact that we would have when we just passed a pay raise, we just revised their pension, the morale is high. The Defense Department knows it needs more. There is no question about that. All of us agree with that on the Subcommittee on Defense. Yet, we are sending a signal that we are just cutting across the board.

Even though my colleagues say, well, it is going to be vetoed, well, I could have said the same thing when I argued that our bill was going to be sent right back to them. I think it behooves us to give us the figure and let us work our will on where the bill should be cut.

So I would urge the Members of this body to take this bill back to committee and let us work our will. Tell us how much money that our allocation is, and we will pass that bill out, and it will be a much better bill than an across-the-board cut.

Mr. ISTOOK. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from California (Mr. LEWIS), chairman of the Subcommittee on Defense of the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Speaker, I very much appreciate the comments of my colleague and helpmate on the Subcommittee on Defense. The gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. MURTHA) is a great American, and I appreciate his help and his work.

I would like to spend just a moment addressing a couple other areas relative to this debate before going back to defense. For, as I listened to other people earlier, Mr. Speaker, I could not help but think of that old line that there are darn liars and statisticians. That line very much applies to a lot of the debate that has taken place here today.

Let me speak a moment about the whole ruckus swirling around the Social Security Trust Fund. That is very, very disconcerting to me. But I start by saying that one of the great things that have happened in this year is that the majority in Congress, and I know the Republicans as well as Democrats, are concerned about that trust fund.

But to hear the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. MURTHA), my ranking member, talking about a set of statistics that suggest that one way or the other the bills that are passing here will be signed into law perhaps have already gone into the trust fund by $17 billion, and then another set of statisticians who reflect the administration's view of the way dollars worked, suggest we have not really gone into the trust fund yet.

The point is really not that. It is that there is a new call to set aside the Social Security Trust Fund and to protect it. That, in view of the history of the Congress, the old majority, the business as usual majority, using it constantly to build more and more spending programs around the Federal Government, that is the point that needs to be made and remembered.

One of the items that was discussed earlier today related to education funding within this bill, Labor-HHS, that portion of it, suggesting that one way or another we are of great disservice to Federal education efforts. Indeed, the proposal of the committee was $375 million above the President's request.

A 1 percent across-the-board would bring it down to the President's request. That is $30 billion in total; more money at a Federal level than throughout history for Federal money for education. We all know that most education dollars are raised and spent at the local level and the responsibility of the States and local school districts.

My last point takes me to the comments of the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. MURTHA). I could not agree with him more. We produced an excellent bill this year. An across-the-board cut is not the way to deal with our bill, in my view. And, indeed, to reduce that effort is not helpful to our national defense purposes.

But having said that, the Congress has exercised itself by way of across-the-board cuts before. I remember a discussion with my friend, the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. OBEY), talking about his favorite programs around here in the Labor-HHS bill, this very bill. And I asked him how he could possibly stand aside for an across-the-board cut in Labor-HHS. Really, our discussion came to the point that at the crunch time, when there are Democrats and Republicans, and there are these two bodies, as well as the administration, sometimes that is the only way to get to the final straw.

Well, my colleagues, we are at the final straw at this moment. It is time for us to come together and support this measure and get our work done.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. OLVER).

Mr. OLVER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time. I have only time to focus on one of the reasons for voting against this bill.

My distinguished chairman of the subcommittee, the honorable chairman and good friend, has a couple of times, several times, pointed out that the NIH budget, the National Institutes of Health budget, is up from $15.6 billion by 14 percent, up to $17.9 billion. What he does not point out, and that he has never mentioned, is that $7.5 billion of that, more than 40 percent, is shifted so that it may not be obligated until the 29th or 30th day of September next year.

For him to speak about that would probably cause him to throw up. The number of dollars that are available because of that feature, the number of dollars for medical research in the fiscal year is, in reality, cut by about 15 percent in the year 2000. And that means that medical research on cancer research, on Alzheimer's, on AIDS, as well as genetic causes of disease and biotechnology, all of that has to be slowed down or stopped or put on the back burner.

Mr. ISTOOK. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Colorado (Mr. TANCREDI).

Mr. TANCREDI. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

There have been many honorable men and women who have approached the microphone today to express their concerns about this bill, the two bills, and the 1 percent across-the-board savings. And although the message of the other side is very well organized, it is somewhat crippled by the well-publicized strategy that the minority has been directed to employ by its own leadership, and that strategy is identified in The Washington Post on Monday, January 12, and I quote the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. FRANK). He said, "It took us a little while to figure out how to be the minority. But DICK has it just right," meaning the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. GEPHARDT), the minority leader, "it is not our responsibility to legislate any more, it does not make sense for us to compromise."

That is the direction and that is the strategy. I do not know which to believe. Is it a true concern about education, about defense and the rest, or is it just a need to obstruct, to impede, to delay, to encumber, to foil? Which one should we believe?

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. BONIOR), the distinguished minority whip.

Mr. BONIOR. Mr. Speaker, I thank my colleague for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, this bill does not extend the life of Social Security by one single day. This bill that we have before us fails to provide one penny for Medicare prescription drug benefits. The only thing it does is hurt American families.

Compromise, the gentleman from Colorado said? We would be delighted to sit down to compromise. We cannot get them to the table.

I want to talk about some folks that I represent. A lovely lady in my district, retired, widowed, with children, $600 a month she has coming in. She makes a few dollars baby-sitting. Her prescription drug costs per year are over $2,000. This bill does nothing to help her or millions of other American families who are in a similar situation.

I have another wonderful woman who I know who called the district office complaining about these prescription drug costs the other day because she has cancer and her monthly cancer prescription drug costs are up to the ceiling. And all she wants is a few years to be able to spend with her grandchildren.

What does this bill do? As the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. OLVER) just mentioned, it stretches and it hurts the whole question of digging into cancer research and other medical research for Alzheimer's and Parkinson's disease. This bill does nothing for that lady. It denies her the hope that she would hope to have to spend those extra years with her grandchildren.

And, of course, what does the majority do in this bill and in the budget that we have that could alleviate some of these problems? There is $500 million for a Mississippi shipyard boat that the Navy does not even want. For a boat in Mississippi, $500 million that the Navy does not want. Talk about waste, fraud and abuse, Mr. Speaker. This budget puts pork before people, and it puts special interests before saving Social Security.

And let me also say that what this has been about, this battle here on the floor with respect to Social Security, is that they put together this incredible trillion dollar tax cut bill that they could not sell to the American people, because the American people did not want it. They saw the other needs we had. They did not want to bust the budget. And as a result of putting it together and advocating it, they scared the daylight out of senior citizens all over this country.

Well, their poll numbers went into the toilet, excuse me, with seniors. The seniors saw that that trillion dollar tax cut going to the very wealthiest people in this country was going to stifle any prescription drug care and was going to cut out any benefits to extend Social Security and Medicare. Now they are in a panic. So they come here and they say to us, unbelievably, that we are the culprits here. After their own leaders, year after year after year have advocated phasing out Social Security, letting Medicaid wither on the vine, they have the gall to come here and suggest that they are the saviors.

They have no credibility. They are as bankrupt on this as they are on this bill. And so I say, Mr. Speaker, the American people see through what is going on here. And what we need to do is vote "no" on this bill, and sit down, I say to the gentleman from Colorado (Mr. TANCREDI), and deal with a compromise where the principals are sitting at the table, not coming here and playing these games with the American people that the Republicans are the saviors of Social Security, the party who wants to phase it out, the party that never provided a vote for Social Security when it was adopted in 1935.

Mr. ISTOOK. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. DELAY), the majority whip of the House of Representatives.

Mr. DELAY. Mr. Speaker, it is almost Halloween, and the Democrats are up to their usual tricks in search of the big government treats. Like all our appropriations bills, this conference report funds many very significant programs sufficiently while maintaining a balanced budget. But despite all the good qualities of this legislation, it is being opposed.

Now, I hear a lot of rhetoric about getting down to business from the other side of the aisle. One Member after the other walks up to the podium and accuses the Republicans of partisanship. Well, I have a message for the Democrats. Stopping the raid on the Social Security Trust Fund is not a partisan issue. The Republicans want to ensure that every penny of the Social Security Trust Fund goes to those who paid into the fund.

Today, with this vote, the Democrats will have the opportunity to join us in this battle. But it seems very clear that many Democrats are going to turn their backs on this historic opportunity in voting "no" on this bill. When these individuals vote "no" in the coming minutes, they are telling their constituents in no uncertain terms that they are willing to raid the Social Security Trust Fund to pay for big government programs.

Why will the Democrats vote to raid the Social Security Trust Fund? The answer is very simple. Because above all else Democrats want to increase Federal spending. They have continually said that the taxes that Americans pay to the Federal Government are not enough to fund their programs. Now they are saying that they need to take those tax dollars and the Social Security money to pay for these programs.

Today, the Republicans are saying in one very clear voice that we will keep our hands off the Social Security Trust Fund. The Republicans know how important it is to secure the trust fund, and we have a plan to do it.

Mr. ISTOOK. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from New York (Mr. WALSH), the chairman of the Subcommittee on VA, HUD and Independent Agencies.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Speaker, I thank the distinguished chair of the Subcommittee on the District of Columbia for yielding me this time.

I want to address one point. While this bill may not extend the life of Social Security, and it was not intended to, what it is intended to do for millions is to extend the hope that their retirement promise will be kept. And this is the day that begins.

My subcommittee bill includes the veterans budget, and I would like to respond to that issue directly. First of all, the President proposed no increase in veterans' medical care this year. Flat line. No increase. We propose a $1.7 billion increase in veterans' medical care. So even if this 1 percent across-the-board reduction were embraced by the Congress and the President, we are still $1.5 billion above the President's request, the largest increase ever given to veterans' benefits for medical care.

We have done much more for the veteran on our watch than the opposition has, and I think it is important that we make note of that, a $1.5 billion increase over what the President requested, even with this shaving across the top of all the budgets.

I want to address one other item that was discussed today, this idea of budget gimmicks. When I received the President's request for our VA-HUD bill, I looked and I found in that bill a $4.5 billion advanced appropriation for Section 8 housing.

Now, the President proposes to be concerned about people getting public housing, and I think there is no question that he does. We all do. We are all very concerned. I said to staff, what is this advanced appropriation all about?

I have been on the Committee on Appropriations for 5 years, and I had never seen anything like this before. They said, Mr. Chairman, that is a gimmick. The President has proposed to spend this money not this year but next year in order to fund Section 8 housing.

We rejected that budget gimmick. Ultimately, it was accepted by the Senate and the President, and the House joined in. And as one of the President's secretaries explained to me, if everyone embraces the gimmick, then it is an offset.

So the facts are here that the President introduced this advanced appropriation, this so-called gimmick, into our bill. We rejected it initially. Ultimately, working together in the spirit of compromise with the White House, we accepted it.

Mr. ISTOOK. Mr. Speaker, how much time remains?

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BE-REUTER). The gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. ISTOOK) has 10½ minutes remaining. The gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. OBEY) has 9 minutes remaining.

Mr. ISTOOK. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 3 minutes.

Mr. SPEAKER, I think it is important that we look at the heart of this matter and how we got here. The real issue is are there limits, are there boundaries on this spending of the Federal Government, or do we go back to the old days of the former majority where they just kept spending and borrowing as much as they wanted to?

We have achieved a balanced budget. No matter who wants to take the credit, the fact is it has been done. And there is plenty of credit to share. We have set the standard. It ought to be balanced without spending out the Social Security Trust Fund. Many people agree with that in principle, but when it comes to practice, they do not want to accept the boundaries that it places on spending.

So we had the President's budget that proposes tons of new spending. And he said, well, we will spend it by having more taxes, more fees, and taking a third of this year's Social Security surplus, spending a third of it.

We said to the President, the proper standard is do not spend any of it and do not raise taxes, either. That means there is a limit on spending. And frankly, Mr. Speaker, we have an across-the-board cut to balance out spending, to make it fit within the available money because our friends on the other side of the aisle are not willing to accept limits.

They are still asking for more money. I have heard them identify a lot of new programs they want to put in. They do not want to reduce things. We cannot get specific agreements on reductions rather than across the board because they will not agree that this is all the money that there is available. This is the only method left. We could do it different ways, but this is the only method left if we want to keep the budget balanced and not raise taxes and not raid Social Security. That is why we are in this circumstance.

But the American people understand that, Mr. Speaker. They have dealt with family budgets. They have dealt with business budgets. They know that a 1 percent shave is not the end of the world.

Now, for some people, of course, it is never enough. And I am really appalled hearing some people say, well, this will not extend the life of Social Security. What they want to do will shorten the life of Social Security. They want to raid the Social Security Trust Fund so that when old Mother Hubbard gets to the cupboard it is bare; the money is already spent out.

We want to preserve as much as we can by controlling spending. That is the whole issue. Keep the budget balanced, do not raid Social Security, and accept the fact that there is a finite amount that this Congress can and should spend.

If they would stop their new spending programs, it would be a lot easier. But, in the meantime, nobody is going to be hurt by doing a 1 percent across-the-board. If the American people have to do it, Uncle Sam should do it, too.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2½ minutes to the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. HOYER) so he might explain the motion to recommit that will be coming shortly.

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Speaker, I will be offering a motion to recommit at the conclusion of the consideration of this bill. The motion to recommit is not debatable, so I am explaining it at this time to all Members.

The majority has included in this bill a provision which will strike the comparability adjustment for Members of Congress by 3.4 percent. The fact of the matter is that that provision will have no impact on Social Security and no impact on the deficit and, I point out to all the Members, no impact on Members.

The reason it will have no impact on Members is because the Constitution precludes reducing a Member's compensation during the term of his or her office.

Therefore, we are reliably informed that this provision will not take effect until January 1, 2001. It is, therefore, simply self-flagellation which will not adversely affect us. But we will pretend to the public that it will; and we will, therefore, add to the cynicism of the public as we rhetorically say we are beating our chest and not taking a pay raise, when in fact it will occur on January 1, 2000.

So I would say to my friends on both sides of the aisle, we adopted an adjustment of pay. Why did we do it? Because for 5 out of the 6 years we had not taken an adjustment, which means that the 2.3 percent that we received in 1998, if divided by six, was a four-tenths of a percent adjustment per year.

Certainly, I would hope that none of my constituents, nor any of my colleagues, would think that was an unreasonable adjustment in salaries for the service given.

My colleagues, the 3.4 percent, as all of us know, is 1.4 percent, or about 35 percent, less than Federal employees will receive and less than the military will receive. That is appropriate. We want to take less to ensure that the public knows we are not here for money's sake. But it is fair to keep us even.

I would hope my colleagues realize that the inclusion of this language will have a pretense to the public that we are doing something adverse to ourselves and trying to tighten our own belts. But because it is a pretense and when they find that it does not happen, they will be cynical.

Very frankly, I do not think anybody thinks this is going to happen anyway, which is also adding to the cynicism of the public.

I urge all Members to vote for the motion to recommit.

Mr. ISTOOK. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. PORTER), chairman of the Subcommittee on Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education.

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me the additional time.

Mr. Speaker, let me begin by saying that I want to commend the gentleman from Florida (Mr. YOUNG), the chairman of our committee, for the absolutely marvelous job that he has done in shepherding all 13 appropriations bills through this process. We could not have a better chairman, a man who keeps his cool under fire, who works with all of the Members to try to accommodate greatly different interests often. We thank him for the marvelous job he does in leading all of us.

Let me thank the committee staff Tony McCann, Bob Knisely, Carol Murphy, Susan Firth, Francine Salvador, Nicole Wheeler; and on the minority side, Mark Mioduski and Cheryl Smith. They do a terrific job for all of us.

My personal staff: my AA, Rob Bradner; my LA, Spencer Perlman, who has worked on the bill, and Christina Hamilton on the staff of the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. OBEY) have all done absolutely wonderful work. And Bettylou Taylor for the Senate majority staff, and Ellen Murry for the Senate minority staff and their co-workers have done an absolutely marvelous job.

Let me also thank the members of my subcommittee. They do yeoman's work in hearing months and months of hearings before the subcommittee and it is a very, very tough job for them.

Mr. Speaker, let me close by saying that the other side said to us earlier that they believe we are $17 billion off. This Federal budget is $1,800 billion.

We are talking about less than one percent. Even if we take their figures, and they cite a CBO letter that is based upon CBO revenue estimates, we cannot estimate within 1 percent. We cannot even estimate within 3 percent of what the Federal revenues are going to be for the next year.

Let us celebrate. As the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. KASICH) said earlier, we have done a terrific job in getting this process under control and protecting the Social Security Trust Fund.

Let me say something else. We have learned in the last 5 years to focus on the bottom line. We are doing it on a bipartisan basis. We have learned to protect Social Security. We did not do it before. We are doing it now.

We demand from every Federal spending program results for individuals, the betterment of their lives. The money has to be spent well. We have to see that it gets something positive done in the lives of every single American that it affects.

We have brought the budget into balance. We have brought an end to the raiding of Social Security. I believe that all of us ought to go back home and celebrate the tremendous job that has been done, celebrate the tremendous economy that our constituents have brought to all of us. We have done the people's work in the right way.

Support the conference report.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself the balance of the time.

Mr. Speaker, I am sure that before this debate is done the gentleman from Florida (Mr. YOUNG) will point out that in all the years, going back to the Mesozoic Era, that the Congress borrowed Social Security money. I will stipulate that is true. I will also stipulate that, in every year but one, Congress did less of that than we were asked to do by Republican Presidents.

The problem with this bill today is that it is a giant fudge ball of gimmicks to enable the Republican party to pretend that they are helping Social Security.

What are the gimmicks? First of all, the bill provides $12 billion in aid to schools. That money is supposed to go out this July to the school districts. Instead, it delays it until October 1 so it slips just over the line and is not counted in this fiscal year.

That does not help Social Security. In fact, it does spend next year's Social Security money.

The bill also contains $18 billion for NIH for medical research. Sixty percent of the dollars for those research grants are delayed for a year. New research grants will be cut by 90 percent for a full year under those recommendations. Again, that helps the Republicans pretend that they are not spending Social Security money. But it again spends that same Social Security money next year. That does not do Social Security any good. Just a political gimmick.

The 13-month gimmick that they provide, it is not only a gimmick, it is a public fib. Taxpayers pay $50 million a year in order to staff the Congressional Budget Office that is supposed to tell us how much everything we do is going to cost. And they have told us today, despite denials to the contrary, that the Republican budget right now, even with all these gimmicks, still spends $17 billion out of Social Security money.

So what does the Republican leadership do to try to avoid it? They simply set up a device that says, "Ignore it." They order the scorekeeping agency to simply ignore $13 billion worth of spending in the defense bill. In this bill today, they tell them to ignore $1.6 billion, just ignore it.

They then have another gimmick. They declare $25 billion of so-called emergencies, because if we call it emergencies, that also does not count.

Example: the fuel assistance program. That provide help to low-income elderly so they can pay their heating bills in the wintertime. Last year, the Republican leadership tried to eliminate that program. This year they call it an emergency. I have a little trouble following that one. That is a double reverse even the Green Bay Packers could not duplicate.

Another problem: when we provide all of these phony emergency designations, it really removes all restraints on spending. When we take the Department of Defense bill, which the chairman has already indicated is $16 billion above the President—and he said that, I did not—when we add up all other increases, we have bills that add $30 billion to the President's budget.

So then how do they deal with it? They totally disrupt the NIH funding stream for research grants and they say, "Oh, we are going to give them this harmless little 1 percent across-the-board cut." The problem is they rig it so that we cannot really attack the waste and fraud that they are talking about.

I have a list here from Senator McCain of all of the congressional pork put into the Department of Defense bill. It is 11 feet long. They have got it rigged so that none of these projects can be eliminated, even though the Defense Department did not ask for them. One of them alone is $1.5 billion. Do my colleagues call that responsible to say, no, we are not going to cut this but, oh, yes, we are going to cut cancer research, we are going to cut education? We do not think that is the right way to do it.

And then as was also mentioned, one powerful chairman has gotten all of his programs effectively exempted. They get cut this year but, oh, the money gets put back this year. I love highways, but I do not love them more than I love cancer research, or providing health care to people who do not have it. If you are an American family and you have to cut back in your budget and you had a trip to Bermuda and you bought a new car and you bought milk and you bought groceries and you paid the rent, if you go to cut back in your budget, you do not cut all of that back evenly 1 percent. You say, "Well, probably the trip to Bermuda isn't necessary." You will cut that out. You pick and choose. You make intelligent choices, not the kind of choices in this bill.

This is not a bill at all. This is a magic show, designed to put on a phony debate on Social Security. If you really care about Social Security, if you really care about Medicare, recognize this turkey of a bill does nothing to strengthen Social Security or Medicare. What you ought to do is extend the solvency of Social Security, put a prescription drug benefit into Medicare. I held 16 hearings around my district to listen to seniors who needed help to pay for their drugs. I ran into one woman who paid $600 a day, yes, a day, for prescription drugs. This bill does nothing for her. I ran into another couple, they spent $28,000 a year on prescription drugs.

Your leadership, the same leadership that has said on other occasions that Medicare should not even be here and that Social Security ought to be phased out, you now give this cock and bull story that somehow you become the last-minute defenders of Social Security. Give me a break. Let us play it real. Drop the debates, sit down in a room, figure out what is practical, end this debate. I know the gentleman from Florida (Mr. YOUNG) would like to do that. He knows I want to do it. And I know the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. PORTER) wants to do that, too. We are not able to do it because of a dispute above our pay grade, but this Congress is not going to get out of session until that dispute stops, we play this real for a change and give the American people what they deserve, an honest budget.

Mr. ISTOOK. Mr. Speaker, I yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from Florida (Mr. YOUNG), the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. Mr. Speaker, before closing comments on the bill itself, I wanted to add to the comments that were made about our friend Bob Knisely at the beginning of the debate and say that I certainly agree with those comments. I would also like to say that the Committee on Appropriations staff, we have a tremendous staff, and they work long, hard hours and long days and after we have finished our 12- and 14-hour days as Members, they add another 5 or 6 hours to put on paper or put into the computer decisions that we made during that day. I want to thank Jim Dyer, who is the clerk of the full Committee on Appropriations and Chuck Parkinson and Dale Oak and John Mikel and all the staff of the Committee on Appropriations. They all do a tremendous job, and I think they deserve that recognition.

I want to say, Mr. Speaker, that I envy the gentleman from Wisconsin

(Mr. OBEY). The gentleman from Wisconsin had the privilege to chair this committee for a year and during that time the gentleman had 81 more Democrats than we had Republicans. As Chairman in this year I only have 10 more Republicans than Democrats. That makes it a lot different. In addition, the gentleman from Wisconsin was able to spend $60 billion out of the Social Security trust fund that year. Chairman YOUNG cannot spend anything out of the Social Security trust fund and does not want to.

Despite the fact that we have this small majority, which we hope will increase the next time we organize the next Congress, there are some things that we promised to do. A lot of people do not realize that politicians keep their promises. We promised to do everything we could to balance the budget. We kept that promise. The report yesterday said that we not only have a budget surplus this year but we had one last year. This is record-setting. This is the first time since Eisenhower's administration that we had two back-to-back surpluses. We promised to increase national defense. And if I misspoke and said that we were $16 billion over the President's budget, that was not correct. This budget is $16 billion over last year, the fiscal year 1999 defense budget. So we have increased our investment in national defense, a promise that we made.

We have increased medical research, a promise that we made. Despite the rhetoric today to the contrary, we have increased medical research. We have increased education, over and above the President's request. The only argument that we have with the Democrats and the administration on education is who makes the decision on how it is spent. Does some bureaucrat in Washington make that decision or do our local school boards make the decision? The needs in one district may be different than the needs in another district and those needs should be determined by the people who control and are elected in those school districts to make those decisions.

We stopped spending the Social Security money. The gentleman from Wisconsin's party controlled this Congress for 40 years. What did they do about Social Security? They spent it. The gentleman from Wisconsin just said that this bill does nothing to deal with Medicare or prescription drugs. That is true. Why? This committee does not have jurisdiction over that issue. That is a Ways and Means issue. But I would say again, the gentleman from Wisconsin's party controlled this House for 40 years. What did they do in 40 years to provide for prescription drugs and Medicare? Nothing.

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Speaker, we adopted Medicare.

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. The gentleman has had his hour.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BE-REUTER). The gentleman from Florida controls the time.

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. Mr. Speaker, it has not been easy because of a small majority. And the 1997 budget accord which the gentleman from Wisconsin did not have to deal with, either, because he was Chairman before the 1997 budget agreement has not made it easy. But we made promises, and we have kept those promises, and this bill today will complete the promise of having 13 bills on the President's desk. Then we will go to the final phase of our appropriations process for this year, and then we can all go home and be with our constituents, where we should spend considerable time.

After this bill gets to the White House, then the final phase will be to deal with the President's vetoes, on whichever bill he determines to veto. At that point the gentleman from Wisconsin and I will once again become major players to try to settle those differences and get signable bills. But now let us vote against the motion to recommit and vote for this conference report.

Ms. WOOLSEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in opposition to this conference report.

Let's look at how we got to this shameful place in the budget process.

First, the Republicans tried to cut taxes for the wealthiest Americans by billions of dollars.

When that didn't sell, they decided on across-the-board cuts to programs that affect all families.

I hope my colleagues look at what this bill doesn't do and the consequences it will have on families and children.

First, this bill does not extend the life of Social Security by a single day.

It also fails to provide one penny for a Medicare prescription drug benefit.

Most importantly, this bill fails to take care of our children.

It will leave children unable to participate in the Head Start; title I; before and after-school programs that families need.

What does this bill do? Well, it does take $17 billion from the Social Security surplus.

Robbing the Social Security surplus and not investing in our children—that's not a responsible and fiscally prudent way to run a government.

I urge my colleague to oppose this conference report.

Mr. CROWLEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong opposition to the combined D.C. and Labor, Health and Human Services appropriations conference report.

First Mr. Speaker, linking a Labor HHS conference report to another rider laden conference report is wrong. But even more egregious, is the fact that this House did not consider a Labor HHS bill. Instead, the Republican leadership sent it straight to conference, leaving Democrats with no opportunity to amend the bill.

This is tantamount to denying my constituents representation in Congress! I strongly believe each member should have the opportunity to debate and amend this extremely important appropriations measure.

Instead, we have a Labor HHS bill, which has:

1. A 21 percent across the board spending cut;
2. Guts the class size reduction initiative this Congress funded last year;

3. Denies funding to after-school centers—centers that keep our children off the streets;

4. Cuts title I funds which help disadvantaged students;

5. And, dramatically underfunds bilingual and immigrant education.

What is the impact of an across the board budget cut? It means that Head Start programs will service almost 5,000 fewer children and their families. It means that more than 70,000 fewer women, infants and children will benefit from food assistance and nutrition services. It means that over 117,000 disadvantaged children will have their reading and math assistance programs eliminated! I don't know about my Republican colleagues, but the thought of allowing over 70,000 women, defenseless infants, and children be malnourished so we can give tax cuts to the rich makes me sick.

Mr. Speaker, the real truth is that a Democratic-led Congress created the Social Security Program, and it was signed into law by a Democratic President, despite fierce opposition from Republicans. Now we are expected to believe that Republicans are protecting Social Security? Something they never wanted in the first place.

The Republicans are clearly playing games with the budget—games with the lives of the American people.

Does this Republican leadership care? No. They tout the "tax relief" packages, which only help the top one percent of wage earners in the country. Does the Republican leadership care about Social Security? If so, it is not evident in this bill, which does not extend social security by one day. Instead, this budget would still exceed the discretionary caps set by this leadership, thereby dipping into the social security surplus. The Congressional Budget Office reports that $17 billion in excesses in this year's budget will be taken from the social security surplus. How does this indicate a Republican Party who purports to care about saving social security?

Additionally, Mr. Speaker, this bill provide one penny for prescription drug benefits to our financially strapped seniors. In fact, this bill takes food out of their mouths and services from them. This Labor HHS bill cuts the Meals-On-Wheels Program, resulting in over 1.3 million fewer meals being delivered to the elderly.

What about other cuts in this bill? Schools in my district are bursting at the seams. I now have to go home and tell these schools that the little relief they have received from the class size reduction initiative will be reduced. Schools that are already operating at 119 percent over capacity will lose funds. School districts that are seeing a growth of 30,000 students every five years are losing funds for class size reduction, after-school programs, and title I assistance. Furthermore, this bill does not even address the national crisis that our school infrastructure is in. With walls and ceilings sagging, paint peeling, and antiquated heating systems—in my district they still have coal burners for heat—our Nation's schools need help. But do we have any school modernization fund assistance here? No. Did we have it in the Republican tax package? No.

This bill is a travesty Mr. Speaker, and I urge all Members to vote against it. Don't take food from the mouths of infants, seats from our students, or services to our elderly. Vote against this Labor-HHS conference "agreement."

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Speaker, I want to commend Mr. OBEY and the Democratic members of the Labor-HHS Subcommittee. They worked hard to defend critical health programs from short-sighted Republican proposals like slash-and-burn, across-the-board cuts.

But I am deeply troubled by the inclusion of a rider delaying vital reforms of our national organ allocation system. A 1-year moratorium on the Department's final rule expired last week. A revised final rule has been published. We are ready to reform organ allocations for the better.

So why is there a new rider? How much longer are we going to play political games with transplant patients and their families? Every day of delay hurts patients across the country.

This rider flies in the face of sound science and equity.

First, we have hard data from UNOS itself documenting dramatic 200 to 300 percent transplant and survival disparities between centers across the country. These are precisely the inequities which the final rule would address. But the rider would delay the final rule.

Second, we have the Institute of Medicine recommending "that the final rule be implemented" because broader sharing "will result in more opportunities to transplant sicker patients without adversely affecting less sick patients." But the rider would delay the final rule.

Finally, we have the Institute of Medicine correcting the mistaken objections that local donations and small transplant centers would do poorly under the final rule. IOM says the evidence is that neither would happen. But again, contrary to the evidence, the rider would delay the final rule.

I know the opponents to organ reform will say, "What's the harm of getting more public comment?"

The answer is simple. "Been there, done that."

There is no excuse for delaying the final rule any longer. The Secretary has already bent over backward to achieve a consensus. She has revised the final rule to reflect the concerns of patients, surgeons and transplant centers.

The final rule already embodies years of deliberation, three separate public comment periods and input from public meetings held across the country. It embodies the consensus that organs should be shared more broadly to end unjust racial and geographical disparities in organ allocation.

A delay in the final rule is a vote for the status quo: a status quo of gross racial injustice; a status quo of parochial self-interest which flies in the face of equity and the evidence; a status quo that is slowly killing patients who deserve to live, but are deprived of that right by a system that stacks the odds against them.

If you want to help them, let the final rule go into effect. It's that simple.

Mr. SANDLIN. Mr. Speaker, the Labor-HHS appropriations bill is yet another example of the Republican party's inability to govern. I will vote against this bill because it fails the American people. It is a failure with regard to Medicare and education and other important Democratic priorities. It fails to fund a Medicare prescription drug benefit for seniors, and it fails to provide funds to reduce class size and hire 100,000 new teachers.

Adding insult to injury, Republicans have added a 1-percent across-the-board budget cut to the Labor-HHS bill. This cut will have disastrous effects on programs that are critical to children, seniors, veterans, farmers, and national security. In lieu of an egregious across-the-board cut, I have proposed that the Republican leaders eliminate the Members' pay raise, as well as all Member earmarks. However, the Republican leadership would rather put money in their pockets and pet projects than use it to fund the priorities of the people.

Republicans have also proven, through this across-the-board cut, that they will take care of their own priorities at any cost, even if it means losing up to 48,000 military personnel and cutting much-needed assistance to our farmers by $86 million. Putting money in their pockets must also be more important than fighting the war on drugs and maintaining strong law enforcement. Their budget cut would cut 90 agents from the Drug Enforcement Administration and 247 FBI agents.

Moreover, Democrats are not alone in their concerns about the inevitable cuts in defense. Joint Chiefs of Staff Chairman Henry Shelton has confirmed the disastrous effects of the Republican-proposed budget cut on our military. In testimony before the Senate Armed Services Committee, he stated that the across-the-board budget cut would be "devastating" to the military.

In addition, the Congressional Budget Office, the Republican-appointed budget scorekeepers, announced today that Republicans have already spent $17 billion of the Social Security trust fund. This announcement comes as Republicans take to the floor one after another to praise the importance of Social Security, vowing not to dip into the trust fund. These are crocodile tears from the party that has consistently raided Social Security. They have opposed this program since its inception and have consistently tried to kill it.

The sad truth is that the Republicans' newfound concern for Social Security is merely a political ploy. They weren't concerned last year when they spent one billion dollars of the trust fund, and they weren't concerned during the Reagan administration or the Bush administration, when Republicans consistently proposed spending billions of dollars of the Social Security trust fund.

I urge my colleagues to cast their vote against the Labor-HHS bill. A vote against this product of poor Republican governance, budget gimmicks, and cynical political maneuvering, is a vote for bolstering our national security, educating our children, caring for our seniors, respecting our veterans, and helping our farmers.

Mr. HALL of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to let my colleagues know what the proposed 1-percent across-the-board cuts will mean for hungry and poor people in the United States.

One percent may not sound like very much, and I might agree with our colleagues who argue that there is one percent of fat in the overall federal budget that can be cut. But those cuts should be made with care—not with this meat-cleaver approach.

Many federal programs—and virtually every one that benefits low-income Americans—already have faced cuts year after year. For example, the food stamp program—which was slashed in order to pay for welfare reform—would be cut by $210 million. The fund that helps churches and charities operate their soup kitchens and food banks is another example. This fund already is running on empty because of the growing need working poor families have for help with their grocery bills. All around the nations, food banks and soup kitchens are turning people away—and yet this bill would cut their funding by nearly $1 million a year.

Nor do one percent of the people who receive meals-on-wheels, WIC assistance, food stamps, or help from soup kitchens and food banks deserve to be dropped from these programs. If this bill becomes law, here is what will happen: 1.3 million fewer meals would be delivered through the nation's Meals on Wheels programs; 71,000 fewer women and their young children would get assistance from the WIC nutrition program; 4,800 fewer poor children would be enrolled in Head Start—a program that enjoys bi-partisan support and has proven to be an effective way to ensure children succeed; and 2,900 fewer poor children would receive childhood immunizations.

Mr. Speaker, while our nation is enjoying the best of times a generation of Americans has known, too many Americans still face the worst of times. This country should not ever balance its budget on the backs of the poor—and especially not at the time when there are responsible ways to meet our commitment to all American citizens.

Cutting spending across-the-board is the wrong way to meet our responsibilities. It will hurt people who are doing all they can to be self-sufficient. It will hurt children who swell the ranks of impoverished Americans. I urge my colleagues to reject this proposal.

Mr. DAVIS of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, we are here today in a spirit of compromise. My compliments to Chairman ISTOOK for his patience and the statesmanlike approach he has taken in bringing this conference committee Report to the floor.

The last D.C. budget was vetoed by the President on September 28. The city, and I emphasize that this is a city we are talking about—not an agency or department—is operating under a continuing resolution. This is not acceptable.

The Nation's Capital is caught in the middle, and many urban needs here are being adversely affected. It is my sincere hope that the flexible approach taken by the House conferees will encourage the administration to sign the bill containing the D.C. budget. This may be the city's last clear chance to get the resources and reforms it needs.

While much progress has been made in the District, there are still enormous problems which must be addressed. A substantial number of functions remain in receivership, including foster care and offender supervision. The enhanced resources for foster care in this budget, to take just one example, are desperately needed by many children.

Our local courts are funded in this budget. They too very much need the added resources this bill provides.

Very soon I expect the House will pass the legislation I sponsored to enhance college access opportunities for D.C. students. The money to fund that program is in this budget.

There is additional money in this budget for public education. There are 146 public schools in this city, and now 29 charter schools. The money to help the children in those schools is in this budget.

This budget contains the largest tax cut in the city's history, which is central to our goal of retaining and attracting economic development.

There is money in this budget to clean up the Anacostia River, open more drug treatment programs, and study widening of the 14th Street Bridge.

What the city needs is a stronger tax base and more taxpayers. This bill takes us another step in that direction.

This D.C. budget is the one the President's strongest supporters in Congress have always insisted he would sign. Let's hope so.

In the 5 years I've had the honor to serve as chairman of the District's authorizing subcommittee, it's been my philosophy that you cannot have a healthy region without a healthy city. Working in a bipartisan manner, building consensus, I'm proud of the way we have helped to turn this city around. I urge this House and then the White House to let us continue.

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in opposition to the conference report on fiscal year 2000 appropriations bill for the District of Columbia and the Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education. The conference report before us is a sham budget which I cannot support.

The bill before us today perpetuates a fraud on the federal budget process and the American people. The Republican leadership has produced a budget that exceeds the budget caps we established in the Balanced Budget Act of 1997 by $30 billion, according to the Congressional Budget Office. This Republican-majority budget would also spend at least $17 billion of the Social Security Trust fund, something the Republicans are claiming they do not want to do. This bill includes many budget gimmicks, such as advance funding, delaying medical research funding until September 29, 2000, and delaying paying private contractors who provide services to the Federal Government. Today, we also learned that the Republican leadership has cut a deal with the House Transportation Committee chairman by promising to restore any transportation funds lost from the across-the-board cuts included in this bill. He will get his highways, but medical researchers trying to find a cure for cancer or AIDS in Houston, Texas will get the shaft.

I am especially concerned that this bill includes a budget gimmick that will backload $7.5 billion or 40 percent of the National Institutes of Health's (NIH's) medical research Fiscal Year 2000 budget until September 29, 2000. What this means is that new and renewing research grants to universities and teaching hospitals will be delayed by nine months to a year. This $7.5 billion delay for NIH's funding would affect up to 60 percent or 40,000 research grants. For researchers at Texas Medical Center in my district which receives about $300 million in NIH grants annually, the spigot will be turned off for nine months and people will be laid off. This delay is unworkable and would adversely impact the cutting-edge medical research done at those teaching hospitals. With this budget gimmick, those projects like the Human Genome Project, and the recently announced ovarian cancer research project at Baylor College of Medicine could be put on hold until their annual funding is paid on the last day of the next fiscal year. All this in the name of politics.

I am also concerned about some of the funding levels included in this bill. For instance, this conference report would cut title I funding for 5,400 teachers who provide reading and math assistance for 290,000 disadvantaged children and would cut $1.1 billion or 46 percent from the title XX social services block grant programs. The title XX program provides federal funding for a variety of social services, including family planning, adoption services, and foster care. Without this funding, states will be forced to reduce the number of families which they serve. Finally, this conference report also eliminates $508 million in emergency aid to farmers related to Hurricane Floyd.

I am also troubled by the process which brought this bill before us. The fiscal year 2000 Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education appropriations bill has never been considered by the House of Representatives. Yet, today we are considering a conference report on this bill. This highly unusual procedure has bypassed the House of Representatives and not provided sufficient time for the Members to participate in this process.

No matter how much my Republican friends say it, no matter how much they wish it, the fact remains, as scored by the CBO, that their own budget exceeds the 1997 spending caps by $30 billion, and spends $17 billion of the Social Security surplus. And this is before the House takes up the bills to rewrite the 1997 Balanced Budget Act, tax credit extensions and minimum wage tax cuts which will cost billions more. It's not really about whether you can cut 1 percent across-the-board, or pound your chest about how we are cutting our pay, it's about the fact that you have already busted the budget and do not have guts or the integrity to stand before the American people and tell them so and why.

For these reasons, I urge my colleagues to oppose this bill.

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in opposition to the Labor-HHS-Education appropriations funding plan. The fact that the Republican leadership has sought to avoid a separate vote on the measure reveals a fundamental weakness in this legislation. Proponents will talk about increases in funding for Pell grants, for special education, and for the National Institutes of Health. Of course we can all agree that these are important programs. However, there are several other programs which are being under funded or completely cut out. This bill is like a pea and shall game, but without the pea. The GOP leadership has been shuffling dollars and shifting funds from the Labor-HHS-Education allotment to other appropriations bills to make them passable. Now that there is so little money left that passage of the Labor-HHS-Education bill is impossible, they declare billions of dollars for regular programs as emergency spending. They have even shifted spending irresponsibly into next year, inventing a 13-month year for 2000 and compounding problems, creating an impossible equation for fiscal year 2001. No matter how slick the GOP leadership is, we can not be fooled into thinking that there will be a winner in this game of gimmicks and phony arithmetic.

The American public time and again has rated education as a top priority . . . above tax cuts, above foreign affairs, above Pentagon spending, even above gun control and protecting social security. While I am not discrediting the need for Congress to address all of those issues, it is important that we listen to what constituents are saying. Republican rhetoric makes a strong commitment to education. However, this is a classic case of robbing Peter to pay Paul. In order to showcase the funding increase for Pell grants and special education, this budget severely short-changes other essential education programs. To site just a few: GEAR UP, technology training for teachers, bilingual education, adult education, and Head Start. To add insult to injury, this legislation would gut last year's bipartisan commitment to hire 100,000 new teachers and reduce class sizes, abandoning the program and substituting an under-funded, undefined block grant. Education is a continuous journey, and the GOP scheme of hitting a few highlights along the way is short-changing and short-sighted; a shallow and insincere approach to ensuring that all students have the support they need to succeed.

Congress must do more to restore and increase funding for important human needs programs. This bill is emblematic of how budget distortions and faulty priorities often have grave consequences for some of our most vulnerable citizens. The most glaring example of this is static funding for social service block grants (SSBG). Over the last 20 years, SSBG has been one of the primary sources of social service funding for states, providing the flexibility to afford vital services for children, youth, seniors, families, and persons with disabilities. Now, in a healthy productive, economic time, Congress should not intensify social-economic disparities, but rather maintain commitments to ensure that all Americans have an opportunity to contribute to and share in America's prosperity.

As a great man, fellow Minnesotan, and congressional mentor Hubert H. Humphrey said, "The moral test of government is how it treats those who are in the dawn of life, the children; those in the twilight of life, the aged; and those who are in the shadows of life, the sick, the needy and the handicapped". It is apparent to me that this legislation reflects, through distorted priorities, political posturing and questionable accounting methods, serious shortcomings on the part of the majority leadership who are failing this moral test. I urge all of my colleagues to vote no on this GOP appropriations fiasco which plays games with funding for vital and necessary programs.

Mr. MCGOVERN. I rise today in strong opposition to the District of Columbia/Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education conference report. This bill is bad policy and I am appalled that the Republican majority is bringing this bill to the floor today. As a strong supporter of education, health and public welfare programs, I cannot support this report and I will vote against it.

The Republican leadership once again is bringing the Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education appropriations bill to a vote without giving Members of Congress the opportunity to improve the underlying bill. Last year, the ineptitude of the Republican leadership resulted in an omnibus appropriations bill. The Republican leadership, under the fear of opening this bill up to amendments, attached the Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education appropriations bill to the D.C. appropriations bill. The majority's job is to pass spending bills to keep this country running. The Republican majority is failing by sending bills like this to the floor and I am distressed and saddened that the Republican leadership is resorting to these gimmicks to pass such important legislation.

First let me address the underlying bill. While the latest version of the D.C. appropriations bill is slightly improved from the bill sent to the President—a bill I voted against—it is still far from perfect. The bill still maintains the language that prohibits the District from using any funds for abortions or to implement the District's Domestic Partners Act. I would have voted against this conference report even if the Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education bill had not been attached to the report.

This bill is a perfect example of how far out of touch the Republicans are with the people in Massachusetts and around the country. While we are working to improve the programs Americans want and need, the Republicans are playing games with the health and education of America's families. Instead of working to improve the quality of life for Americans, the Republican leadership is sacrificing sound policy for partisan politics.

The spending priorities in this bill are not consistent with what Americans want or need. For example, this bill cuts $1.1 billion in social services for elderly and low-income Americans, ignores our children by refusing to fund $44 million to immunize over 333,000 children against childhood diseases, and punishes our farmers for natural disasters outside of their control by striking $508 million in emergency aid to farmers devastated by Hurricane Floyd.

As my colleagues are well aware, I am a strong supporter of federal funding for public education and families and students finance a college education. That's why I support continuing the bipartisan-initiated Class Size Reduction Program to put more qualified teachers in our schools. This bill guts that program and uses the deception of block grants to hide that fact.

I support programs to help our elementary and secondary teachers strengthen their professional and subject matter skills, but this bill freezes funding for these programs. This bill underfunds technology training for our teachers and schools. It eliminates funding for education reform and the establishment of high standards for our children in reading, math, and science.

At the same time, this bill perpetuates another deception on the American people. It proposes increases in Pell grants, special education, TRIO programs, and modest increases or funding freezes for most other programs, while at the same time requiring a .97 percent across-the-board-cut in all federal programs. This cut will wipe out most of the modest increases in K-through-12 education programs. For example, the Bilingual and Immigrant Education Program is designated to receive $387 million, or $7 million more than fiscal year 1999. But after the across-the-board cut, this program will be reduced by $3.75 million, for an annual increase of only $3.2 million.

Even more deceptive is the fact that for many of our critical education programs, the funds noted in the bill are not available for fiscal year 2000. Instead, they are forward funded for fiscal year 2001. This translates into deep reductions in public education programs for next year and increases the budget problems the Congress will confront in fiscal year 2001.

For example, for special education programs, a program the Republican leadership praise themselves for providing more funding than the President's request, the current fiscal year 1999 level of funding is $5.08 billion. The Republicans say they are providing $6.0 billion for special education, or $587 million more than the administration's request. The reality, however, is quite harsh. Only $2.3 billion is available for special education in fiscal year 2000, which means an actual decrease of $2.78 billion from fiscal year 1999 funding. The remaining $3.7 billion is advanced funding for fiscal year 2001, and cannot be used in the coming year.

And after a year that has seen the safety and security of our schools rise to such public prominence, the Republican appropriators perpetrate a horrible deception on our families and school children. The conference report purports to provide $460 million is targeted for state grants for the Safe and Drug-Free Schools Program, in theory $19 million more than the President's request. Of this total, however, only $115 million of these funds will be available in fiscal year 2000—the remaining $345 million only becomes available one year later in fiscal year 2001. This will require deep, deep cuts in this program at the local school district level. The administration, in its balanced budget proposal, had proposed $441 million for state grants, all of it available in fiscal year 2000 funds.

As we can see, the programs are both underfunded and funded in backhanded ways. The Republicans are doing this in the false pretense that the Social Security fund will not be raided. Unfortunately, the Republican majority is playing games by using advanced appropriations, delayed funding and emergency declarations for non-emergency programs. They are playing partisan games because they know that they are raiding the Social Security trust fund. We are witnessing the deception of the American public instead of working in a bipartisan way to improve the health, education and public welfare of America's families. Let's look at the ways the Republicans are playing games in this budget process today.

First, the Republican leadership concocted the bright idea of changing the payment structure for the earned income tax credit (EITC). The EITC is a tax credit for low-income working families with children. This credit helps reduce the regressive burden of the payroll tax on wages and it prevents minimum-wage workers with children from sinking far below the poverty level. However, the Republican leadership decided to change the payment structure, causing an $8.7 billion tax increase on low-income working families. By examining this cut, it's evident that the Republican leadership is out of touch with America. For example, the 1.9 million low-income working families in Texas, the home of both the majority leader and the majority whip, would have lost almost $1 billion in tax credits. Fortunately, this provision was dropped somewhere along the way.

Now the Republican leadership has unveiled its new spending bill, which includes a 97 percent across-the-board spending cut as well as other misguided funding priorities. This provision would cut all programs funded by the Federal Government except for Medicare, Medicaid, Social Security, and the cost-of-living increase and salaries of Federal workers. Here is a list, compiled by the Office of Management and Budget, of what this cut would mean for various programs:

Head Start—A 0.97-percent cut would cause Head Start to provide services to approximately 4,800 fewer children and their families than otherwise would be served.

WIC—Approximately 71,000 fewer women, infants, and children would benefit from the food assistance and nutrition services offered by the Special Supplemental Nutrition Program for Women, Infants, and Children (WIC).

Meals on Wheels—A 0.97-percent cut would result in over 1.3 million fewer Meals on Wheels being delivered to the elderly than would otherwise be provided.

Title I, Education for the Disadvantaged—$76 million would be cut from title I, eliminating reading and math assistance for 117,000 disadvantaged children.

Reading Excellence—$2.5 million would be cut out of the Reading Excellence Program, eliminating literacy services to approximately 9,700 children.

Childhood Immunizations—$4.7 million would be cut from childhood immunizations, preventing roughly 2,900 additional children from receiving the full complement of child immunizations.

Superfund—$13 million would be cut from Superfund, eliminating funding for an additional two new, federally-led Superfund clean-ups, jeopardizing public health for those living near affected sites.

FBI—Staff would be cut by approximately 247 full-time employees, including 106 FBI agents and 141 analysts, computer specialists, engineers, and other support staff.

INS—Staff would be cut by approximately 116 Border Patrol agents and 154 support staff (if taken from the enforcement account).

Defense Department—A 0.97-percent across-the-board cut would equate to a $2.7 billion cut to Defense—with $2.6 billion coming from the Defense appropriations bill and $0.1 billion coming from the military construction appropriations bill. The indiscriminate nature of the cut would mean certain accounts that fund military pay and readiness, appropriated at or below the Administration's request, would suffer. For example, the cut would require the military services to make cuts in recruiting and engage in a loss of up to about 48,000 military personnel.

Mr. Speaker, this bill is bad policy drafted on politics and not policy. I reject this bill, I strongly urge my colleagues to vote against this bill and I welcome President Clinton's impending veto.

Mr. KIND. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong opposition to H.R. 3064, the combination District of Columbia appropriations and the Labor, Health and Human Services, Education appropriations bill. This bill makes a mockery of the legislative process and is paid for with numerous budgetary gimmicks.

The majority is bypassing the normal legislative process and is asking us to vote on the final version of the Labor/HHS bill. What happened to the amendment process? For every other appropriations bill Members of Congress had the opportunity to present amendments to the Rules Committee and have the amendments debated on the House floor. Why are we skipping this step on one of the most important bills to be discussed each year?

The Labor/HHS bill funds crucial domestic programs including: Title I, for disadvantaged students; Meals on Wheels; National Institutes of Health; Pell grants; and workers health and safety programs. The American people deserve a full debate on this bill.

Not only are we denied a full debate, but also we are asked to accept a bill that is paid for with numerous budget tricks. For example, there are some strange emergency designations. The 25-year-old Low-Income Home Energy Assistance Program (LIHEAP) is now considered emergency spending. Did the Republicans forget that winter is coming? My constituents in western Wisconsin know that winter is coming. We saw our first snow fall back on October 1.

In addition, this bill delays $11 billion in obligations to NIH, Head Start, and other agencies until September 29, 2000. We are giving these important programs desperately needed money, but telling them they cannot spend it until the end of the fiscal year. Further, there is $10 billion in new fiscal year 2001 appropriations, avoiding the problem for this year but creating a deeper hole for next year's budget.

Finally, I want to talk about the 1-percent across-the-board cut in discretionary spending. This is a fiscally irresponsible way to budget. By advocating an across-the-board cut, the majority is abdicating its responsibility to make the tough choices. Though a 1-percent cut may sound fair, it penalizes efficient government and wasteful government equally. What is fair about cutting nutrition programs for seniors, health care for veterans, and education programs for children, just because Members of Congress cannot help themselves when it comes to parochial projects? We should be cutting wasteful pork-barrel spending such as a $1.5 billion ship to be built in Senator TRENT LOTT's home state that the Department of Defense did not ask for and does not even want. Let's cut the true waste and pork first before we cut crucial services to people in need.

Some Members today have said that surely we can cut one cent of every dollar out of the budget, just as many families do every day across the country. But, would a family cut spending on a medical operation for their child the same as they would cut spending on a new pair of roller skates? Of course not. Would a senior cut prescription drug purchases and the expense of buying a new T.V. equally? Of course not. The point is, as with family budget decisions, federal budget decisions should be a question of priorities. This 1-percent cut abdicates our responsibility to allocate our limited resources to our most important priorities as a nation.

The American people deserve a full and open debate on this important legislation. They deserve more than smoke and mirrors; they deserve a responsible budget. I urge my colleagues to oppose this bill.

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in opposition to the District of Columbia/Labor-HHS-Education conference report. This is a terrible way to approve the federal government's budget and for that reason alone I would urge my colleagues to vote against it.

However, there are other reasons to oppose this legislation. The District of Columbia conference report, while still including provisions I support, does not include the kind of reform and oversight I believe is necessary to provide accountability for taxpayer-funded programs in the nation's capital.

In addition, the Labor-HHS legislation include a 1-percent across-the-board cut of all 13 appropriations bills, indiscriminately cutting defense, veterans, education, and other programs. If this effort were to achieve the goal of not touching the Social Security Trust Fund while balancing our federal budget, it would be worth consideration. However, the Congressional Budget Office—which for years the majority in this House has used as the agency with the most accurate budget numbers—estimates it will still result in dipping into the Social Security Trust Fund. The Republican majority is deluding itself by using the administration's more optimistic estimates in spending, something that would have been unthinkable in past years. By CBO's standard, this bill will cut into the Social Security Trust Fund, something I cannot support.

I urge those on the appropriations committee to keep working on a solution that will balance our federal budget, fund our nation's priorities while not dipping into the Social Security Trust Fund. I urge my colleagues to join me in opposing this bill in its current form.

Mr. PACKARD. Mr. Speaker, today we will vote for 1-percent across-the-board savings in the budget by targeting waste, fraud, and abuse in the federal bureaucracy—not from critical services like Social Security, Medicare, or Medicaid. I strongly urge my colleagues to support this sensible proposal.

This proposal does not compromise vital programs. Even with a 1-percent across-the-board saving, our defense spending level remains at $265.1 billion, $1.8 billion more than the President's request. For education, our funding level is $34.8 billion contrasted to the President's proposal of $34.7 billion. This budget also contains $3.25 billion to continue our fight against crime versus the President's proposal of $2.85 billion.

Mr. Speaker, this 1-percent across-the-board saving proposal makes sense. It forces federal agencies to closely examine their spending and make wise decisions on where tax dollars are most needed. Congress remains committed to holding the line on protecting the Social Security Trust Fund despite pressure by President Clinton to raid the fund to pay for more government spending. Again, I urge my colleagues to support the 1-percent across-the-board saving proposal.

Ms. DEGETTE. Mr. Speaker, I rise to oppose this appropriations bill. It fails to live up to our commitments on some of the most vital federal programs and plays budgetary games with others.

Last week, this House debated two education bills. Throughout the debate, one of the most common things heard, by Members on both sides of the aisle, is how terribly important education is. How improving education in this country is one of the most important issues today. And now we stand here with a bill in front of us that makes unsustainable cuts in some of the most vital educational programs there are. This is unthinkable.

Hidden in this bill is a provision that would delay critical medical research for a year. Under the spending plan for the National Institutes of Health, $7.5 billion in funding is essentially locked up until next September 29th, the end of fiscal year 2000. This Republican Congress is prioritizing its budgetary gimmicks—gimmicks that don't even save Social Security—over research that could result in lifesaving breakthroughs for millions of Americans suffering from hundreds of diseases.

We cannot ask seven year old Mackenzie Mahr, who testified in front of the Commerce Committee just 2 weeks ago about her diabetes, to wait that much longer for a cure for her disease. Nor can we ask her father, a lieutenant with the Capitol Police, to watch his daughter give herself over 700 shots next year, so that this budget fits arbitrary boundaries.

The NIH has said the result of this ploy could postpone all new grant awards for a year. We cannot ask the 16 million diabetics who are waiting for a cure, to risk kidney failure, amputations, and blindness because these research grants cannot be released until the very end of the fiscal year for these budgetary gimmicks.

We are at a critical point in diabetes research. 271 Members of Congress joined Congressman NETHERCUTT and me to urge the NIH to fully fund the $827 million by the Diabetes Research Working Group Report, a comprehensive research plan to help us attack diabetes head on. They understand that diabetes is the sixth leading cause of death due to disease in the United States, the third leading cause in some minority groups. They also understand that the extraordinary research opportunities identified in this report are the critical first steps towards a cure for diabetes.

The DRWG recommendations are encouraging and will profoundly impact people with diabetes. A primary goal of the report is to understand the causes of diabetes and how we can prevent or delay the onset of the disease. Additionally, the plan sets forth efforts to effectively manage diabetes to delay, or hopefully avoid altogether the complications of the disease. The DRWG applies recent discoveries in areas like genetics and immunology to diabetes research. If the plan is carried out, a cure is within reach.

Do not allow these research opportunities to be delayed, or worse, not funded at all, in the interest of a budgetary shell game.

It is the job of Congress to make tough choices and prioritize what is truly important. Numbers should never be placed above research that will save lives.

Mr. STARK. Mr. Speaker, the circumstances under which we are considering this bill are rotten: Because other appropriators have raided Labor/HHS for money to pad their proposals, this D.C./Labor HHS bill contains a variety of budget gimmicks that shift billions in spending into fiscal year 2001. Such gimmicks will negatively impact many worthy programs, including delays in critical biomedical research projects funded by the National Institutes of Health.

But these forward funding gimmicks are not even the bill's biggest flaw. The Labor/HHS proposal deserves to fail because it harms programs that are critical to the well-being of Americans across the country. Simply stated, it's a rotten bill.

Look at what we're being asked to approve: A 1-percent across-the-board cut in every program in the federal budget. Such crude, desperate budgetary tactics will result in decreasing vital federal funding for new community police officers, after-school services to children, worker protection programs funded by the Department of Labor, and childhood immunization programs. All of these and many more programs will be damaged.

For seniors, the impact will be particularly severe. This bill cuts funding for nursing home survey and certification programs—reversing the increases of last year. It proposes to cut the operating budget for the Health Care Financing Administration, which needs far more then it is slated to receive to do an effective job in administering Medicare and Medicaid.

If we continue to slash HCFA's administrative budget—which today stands at only 2 percent of the entire agency's budget—then we will have only ourselves to blame when HHS comes back next year to report that they are months behind in implementing initiatives that we directed them to accomplish.

It is particularly sad and ironic that House appropriators are proposing to reduce spending for nursing home surveys. Have they not heard about the many General Accounting Office reports that detail appalling conditions in our long-term care facilities? In California, which I represent, GAO found that one in three nursing homes between 1995 and 1998 were cited by state surveyors for having serious or potentially life threatening care problems.

The year-old federal/state initiative spearheaded by the HCFA to stem nursing home abuse has just begun to yield important findings. These findings didn't appear magically. They came about because last year, we voted to approve increased funding for additional state inspectors, who are now visiting more facilities more often—and on an unscheduled basis. This stepped-up scrutiny is showing where the worst quality flaws are in nursing homes generally, and which individual homes are actually harming people.

The bill before us proposes to reverse these gains—and to put frail nursing home residents at serious risk again. As one frustrated HCFA official said to me: 'You can't possibly give states money one year to hire more inspectors, and then take it away the next year and expect to make any progress.'

It is equally wrongheaded to bleed funds from the government's primary health care fraud-fighting initiative, the Medicare Integrity Program. Congress crafted this program in 1996 so that it would be funded from mandatory spending accounts, precisely so that it would not be subject to the appropriations process. The whole notion was to try to create a secure, stable source of funding. This bill effectively proposes to unravel the Medicare Integrity Program, which the Congressional Budget Office has credited with producing an actual drop in Medicare spending of 2.5 percent last year.

There is another huge problem with this bill—and that is that it delays HHS regulations that would reform our current organ allocation system to better serve the neediest—regardless of where they live. At present, our locally based systems mean that patients with terminal diseases in some parts of the country have a good chance of getting an organ transplant, while equally—and sometimes more—needy and deserving people in other states, where allocation systems are poorly developed, have no chance at all.

The Institute of Medicine has issued a report that criticizes our current unfair system of organ allocation, and which recommends policy that is very similar to what the Secretary's regulations would do. I urge my colleagues to listen to these medical experts, to patients and to transplant advocates, and to support reform of our current skewed system.

For all of these reasons, I urge my colleagues to vote "no" on the Labor/HHS bill.

Ms. LEE. Mr. Speaker, I rise to object strenuously to this appropriations conference report.

We have had almost one year to craft these appropriations bills. Yet now the Republicans are talking about across-the-board cuts that would decimate those who we deeply care about—our families, our children, our senior citizens. It does not protect Social Security or Medicare. This bill does not extend Social Security by a single day. It does not provide for our senior citizens' need for a minimum Medicare prescription drug benefit. It does not support effort to strengthen community policing.

This bill attacks our national cry to improve our educational program and hurts our children by reducing efforts for immunizations, reading instruction, math and reading teachers and after school centers, and small class sizes.

In a time when the Republicans wanted a $790 billion tax cut, which of course the American people said no to, we see now an effort to wreak havoc in the daily lives of those we care about.

I urge my colleagues to reject this bill.

Mrs. MALONEY of New York. Mr. Speaker, a 1-percent across-the-board cut is one of the most half-baked wacky ways to balance a budget this country has ever seen.

One leg of the federal government that needs no budget trimming is the Decennial Census. And I thought the House leadership knew that—because just a few weeks ago, we were told that the Census budget is so crucial that it is "an emergency." And now, we're being told that the Census budget should be cut. Well, is the Census an emergency or should it be cut?

This cut to the Census Bureau's budget will lead to a less accurate census.

Can the Republican leadership tell me where there is waste, fraud or abuse in the Census Bureau? Because, the GAO cannot. The GAO released a report only last month that said there was no waste in the budget for the 2000 Census!

Mr. Speaker, the Census, has had its budget called an emergency one week and had its budget cut the next. This is wacky.

Ms. ROYBAL-ALLARD. Mr. Speaker, Democrats will continue to fight for critical priorities in the Labor, HHS, and Education appropriations bill so that the bill will address the education and health needs of all America's children.

The bill as currently drafted fails in this regard:

For example, it cuts $60 million of the President's request for the GEAR UP Program, leaving over 100,000 disadvantaged high school students without mentoring, counseling, and tutoring services critical to helping them reach their fullest potential.

It cuts $50 million from the President's proposal to educate disadvantaged youth and their families about college opportunities.

And at a time when we need to increase resources to attack the HIV/AIDS crisis particularly in our communities of color, where African-Americans represent 43 percent and Latinos 20 percent of new HIV/AIDS cases—the bill cuts $39 million from this critical program.

This is a sad commentary on the Republican vision for our country's future, and it is the wrong choice for America.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, the previous question is ordered on the conference report.

There was no objection.

MOTION TO RECOMMIT OFFERED BY MR. HOYER

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion to recommit.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is the gentleman opposed to the conference report?

Mr. HOYER. Yes, the gentleman is.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the motion to recommit.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. HOYER moves to recommit the conference report on the bill H.R. 3064 to the committee of conference with instructions to the managers on the part of the House to disagree to section 1001(e) of Division C (relating to pay for Members of Congress) in the conference substitute.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, the previous question is ordered on the motion to recommit.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion to recommit.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the noes appeared to have it.

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Evidently a quorum is not present.

The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 11, nays 417, not voting 5, as follows:

So the conference report was agreed to.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Speaker, on Thursday, October 21, 1999, because of a family matter that I had to attend to in Houston, I was unable to cast my votes.

Mr. Speaker, if I had been here, I would have cast my vote in favor of roll call vote No. 522. I would have voted in favor of roll call vote No. 523. I would have voted against roll call vote No. 524. I would have voted in favor of roll call vote No. 525. I would have voted in favor of roll call vote 526. I would have voted against roll call vote 527. I would have voted against roll call vote 528. I would have voted against roll call vote 529. I would have voted in favor of roll call vote 530. I would have voted in favor of roll call vote 531. I would have voted against roll call vote 532.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Speaker, on October 26, I was in my District on official business.

I would have voted in favor of roll call vote 539, House Concurrent Resolution 102. I would have voted in favor of roll call vote 540, House Concurrent Resolution 188. I would have voted in favor of roll call vote 541, H.R. 1175.

LEGISLATIVE PROGRAM

(Mr. BONIOR asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BONIOR. Mr. Speaker, I rise for the purpose of inquiring of the distinguished majority leader or the gentleman from New York (Mr. LAZIO) regarding the schedule for the rest of the day, the balance of the week, and next week.

Mr. LAZIO. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BONIOR. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. LAZIO. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

I would like to announce, Mr. Speaker, that the House has completed its business for the week. There will be no legislative business in the House tomorrow.

I want to express on behalf of the majority leader, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. ARMEY), his appreciation to the Committee on Appropriations, which has been doing an outstanding job.

I would also like to announce that the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. YOUNG), has allowed the committee Members to have tomorrow off, so we are very appreciative of that.

The House will meet next on Monday, November 1, at 12:30 p.m., for morning hour debates, and at 2 p.m., for legislative business.

We will consider a number of bills under suspension of the rules, a list of which will be distributed to Members' offices tomorrow.

On Monday we do not expect recorded votes until 6 p.m.

On Tuesday, November 2, and the balance of the week, the House will take up the following measures, all of which will be subject to rules: S. 900, the Financial Services Modernization Act conference report; H.R. 3081, the Wage and Employment Growth Act, and H.R. 2389, the County Schools Funding Revitalization Act of 1999.

Mr. Speaker, we also expect a conference report on the Satellite Home Viewer Act to be ready by next week.

Mr. BONIOR. If my colleague would indulge me for a second, what day do we expect to have the minimum wage bill up on the floor?

Mr. LAZIO. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will yield further, I would say to the gentleman that we are trying to get through some other work, and that we continue to try and reach a bipartisan accord on the minimum wage bill. I do not expect that we will have it up in the early part of next week, but probably in the latter part of next week.

Mr. BONIOR. Would the gentleman repeat that, please?

Mr. LAZIO. I would say to the gentleman from Michigan, we are trying hard to reach a bipartisan accord on the minimum wage and tax package. I expect that there will be other legislation that will be on the floor early in the week, probably suspensions on Monday and Tuesday. After that, there will be other bills that are subject to rules. We will have those votes later in the week.

It is more likely than not that we will have the minimum wage bill up later in the week, next week.

Mr. BONIOR. Mr. Speaker, does the gentleman know what kind of rule we can anticipate on the wage bill?

Mr. LAZIO. I would say to the gentleman that I think that the Committee on Rules is going to be considering that. I am sure they will come up with a fair rule in order for us to consider that, but there has been no decision yet on the substance of the rule.

Mr. BONIOR. Can the gentleman from California (Mr. DREIER) enlighten us perhaps on what he might have in mind in terms of the rule on the wage bill?

Mr. DREIER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LAZIO. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. DREIER. Mr. Speaker, I thank my friend for yielding to me.

We are going to have an extraordinarily fair and balanced rule that will allow this House to, as has always been the case under this majority, work its will. We will look forward to the debate. We will welcome the gentleman's input on any recommendations to the rule.

Mr. BONIOR. I thank my colleague. I will rest well this weekend with his assurances.

Let me ask my friend from New York, the Vieques resolution, when does he expect that up on suspensions and what day, if it is under suspension?

Mr. LAZIO. If the gentleman will continue to yield, I would say to the gentleman that we are trying to negotiate through and accommodate the minority's concerns on this piece of legislation. We will have a hearing and markup in committee. It will go through regular order, as expected.

We are trying to accommodate the concerns that have been raised by the minority before we see it on the floor.

Mr. BONIOR. Am I to gather from the gentleman's answer that this will be under regular order and not under the Suspension Calendar?

Mr. LAZIO. I would say to the gentleman, I think the plan is to go through the committee process and to have regular hearings, have a markup, and have it on the floor, but not next week. It is not likely to be up on the floor for next week.

Mr. BONIOR. Let me ask the gentleman one other question. Tuesday is Election Day, as my colleague knows, across the country. Will votes occur after a certain time on Tuesday?

Mr. LAZIO. We are trying to ensure that the votes will be held until the afternoon to allow those Members who have the opportunity, that live in the close proximity and have the ability to have a flight to get back after votes on Monday evening, to do that.

So I would say Members should anticipate not having any votes in the morning of Tuesday nor in the early afternoon, but rather in the mid or later afternoon would be the earliest we would have votes. Members should stay in contact, I think, with their respective cloakrooms. We will perhaps be giving more updates on Tuesday.

Mr. BONIOR. Finally, if the gentleman from New York can tell me when he expects to have the conferees named on the Patients' Bill of Rights?

Mr. LAZIO. I would say to the gentleman that we are expecting that would be completed for next week.

Mr. BONIOR. The gentleman expects to name conferees next week?

Mr. LAZIO. Yes, sir.

Mr. BONIOR. How about Friday, next Friday? Do we anticipate votes next Friday?

Mr. LAZIO. Right now I would say to the gentleman that it appears that Members should count on being here for Friday votes. We expect the House to be in session for votes on Friday.

As the gentleman knows, the CR expires on Friday. It would be wonderful if we had an accommodation and agreement that would allow us to conclude our business by Friday, but right now, Members should anticipate being here on Friday.

Mr. BONIOR. I thank my colleague.

ADJOURNMENT TO MONDAY, NOVEMBER 1, 1999

Mr. BLUNT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that when the House adjourns today, it adjourn to meet at 12:30 p.m. on Monday next for morning hour debates.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. PEASE). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri? There was no objection.

DISPENSING WITH CALENDAR WEDNESDAY BUSINESS ON WEDNESDAY NEXT

Mr. BLUNT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that business in order under the Calendar Wednesday rule be dispensed with on Wednesday next.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri? There was no objection.

REMOVAL OF NAME OF MEMBER AS COSPONSOR OF H.R. 3140

Mr. BLUNT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that my name be removed from the cosponsorship of H.R. 3140.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

ANNOUNCEMENT REGARDING SUB- MISSION OF AMENDMENTS ON H.R. 2389, COUNTY SCHOOLS FUNDING REVITALIZATION ACT OF 1999

(Mr. DREIER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DREIER. Mr. Speaker, this afternoon a Dear Colleague letter was sent to all Members informing them that the Committee on Rules is planning to meet the week of November 1 to grant a rule for consideration of H.R. 2389, the County Schools Funding Revitalization Act of 1999.

The Committee on Rules may grant a rule which would require that amendments be preprinted in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD. In this case, amendments must be preprinted prior to their consideration on the floor. Amendments should be drafted to an amendment in the nature of a substitute offered by the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. GOODLATTE) which will be printed in today's CONGRESSIONAL RECORD and numbered 1.

It is the intention of the Committee on Rules to make in order the amendment offered by the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. GOODLATTE) as base text for the purpose of further amendment. Members should use the Office of Legislative Counsel to assure that their amendments are properly drafted, and should check with the Office of the Parliamentarian to be certain that their amendments comply with the rules of the House.

APPOINTMENT OF CONFEREES ON H.R. 1180, TICKET TO WORK AND WORK INCENTIVES IMPROVE- MENT ACT OF 1999

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas? The Chair hears none and, without objection, appoints the following conferees: Messrs. ARCHER, BLILEY, ARMEY, RANGEL, and DINGELL.

There was no objection.

SPECIAL ORDERS

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. PEASE). Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 6, 1999, and under a previous order of the House, the following Members will be recognized for 5 minutes each.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. GOSS) is recognized for 5 minutes.

(Mr. GOSS addressed the House. His remarks will appear hereafter in the Extensions of Remarks.)

U.S.-INDIA RELATIONS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. PALLONE) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. PALLONE. Mr. Speaker, I wanted to take this time to talk about some important developments in the relationship between the United States and India.

In the past few weeks, the headlines from South Asia have been dominated by the news from India's neighbor Pakistan, where a military coup has deposed the nation's civilian prime minister. This was obviously an important and very disturbing development, one which has been condemned by me and many of my colleagues here in Congress. Unfortunately, there is often a tendency to lump India and Pakistan together, to see all developments in South Asia as a function of the conflicts between India and Pakistan.

In fact, Mr. Speaker, what we now see in South Asia are two nations moving in very different directions. While Pakistan is mired in military coups and economic collapse, India sticks to the path of democracy and economic reform. We must consider India, and take it seriously on its own terms, as the world's largest democracy, the second most populous nation, an important regional player in Asia in its own right, a huge and growing market for American trade and investment, a potential partner on security issues and the fight against terrorism, and as a country with the great potential for cooperation in such areas as environmental protection, energy efficiency, and infrastructure development.

Mr. Speaker, this week we have seen some indications that U.S. policy is beginning to accommodate some of the important distinctions between these two countries. Last year, after India and Pakistan conducted nuclear tests, a wide range of economic sanctions were imposed on both countries.

About a year ago, Congress and the President acted to waive these sanctions for 1 year. This week, under the renewed waiver authority, President Clinton has waived the economic sanctions on India, but kept most of the sanctions against Pakistan in response to the coup.

Under the President's determination, Pakistan would be ineligible for loans from the Export-Import Bank and unable to participate in the International Military Education and Training, IMET, program. It also means that the U.S.-backed Overseas Private Investment Corporation, OPIC, and the Trade Development Agency would not be able to operate in Pakistan.

A White House National Security Council spokesman stated that the different treatment of the two countries reflects the reality that things have changed for the worst in Pakistan, and that there can be no business as usual in Pakistan until an elected government is restored. I hope that our government will stick with that policy.

More important, Mr. Speaker, I would urge the administration not to use the prospect of reopening military assistance to Pakistan as an inducement to the military coup leaders. This is particularly timely in light of recent reports of serious border attacks against India by Pakistani troops in Kashmir.

Secretary of State Albright has called on the Pakistani side to withdraw from the line of control in Kashmir. Given the evidence that the hardliners now in charge of Pakistan were in large part responsible for launching the aggression against India last spring, maintaining the ban on military assistance to Pakistan makes very good sense.

Following the recent nationwide elections in India, a new governing coalition led by Prime Minister Atal Behari Vajpayee of the BJP has been sworn in. While Mr. Vajpayee and his party were in power prior to last month's voting, the recent elections have given him a stronger majority, allowing for greater political stability.

The new government has wasted no time in demonstrating its commitment to move forward on a bold economic agenda. The government will review the existing foreign direct investment regime to bring in greater transparency, cut delays in project implementation, and create a policy to insure an investment inflow of at least 10 billion U.S. dollars.

In the energy and power sector, the central government will work closely with the State governments on privatization and regulatory overhauls. The government will work to dismantle the administrative price regime. Improvement and expansion of transportation and telecom infrastructure is another major priority.

In the energy sector in particular, the potential for U.S.-India cooperation is great. During his trip to India, Energy Secretary Bill Richardson and Indian External Affairs Minister Jaswant Singh signed a joint declaration on energy cooperation, which calls for cooperation in conventional energy projects, renewable energy, and clean coal technology. Secretary Richardson has also reported progress with his India counterparts in discussions on the Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty.

Mr. Speaker, in conclusion, I hope that we will see continued progress in these and other areas, and that the upcoming planned visit to South Asia by President Clinton will further advance the process of establishing a U.S.-India relationship based on shared goals, mutual respect, and appreciation for each other's vital interests.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. DIAZ-BALART) is recognized for 5 minutes.

(Mr. DIAZ-BALART addressed the House. His remarks will appear hereafter in the Extension of Remarks.)

ORDER OF BUSINESS

Mr. FILNER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take my special order at this time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

FOLLOW THE WILL OF THE PEOPLE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from California (Mr. FILNER) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. FILNER. Mr. Speaker, tonight I am asking the Speaker of the House and the leadership of the Republican Party to respect the will of the American people, respect the demands of the American people, respect the vote of this House of Representatives, and quickly appoint conferees on H.R. 2723, the Patients' Bill of Rights.

This country cannot wait any longer for the vital health protections included in its important legislation. We cannot afford to have only those opposed to those protections at the table negotiating. To do so would guarantee that these hard-fought protections would just be negotiated away.

It would be criminal not to include Members from the majority who listened to the pleas from their constituents. It would signal the intent of the leadership of this House to ignore the protections that we fought so hard to include in the bipartisan patient protection plan.

So I ask the Speaker, I ask the House leaders not to prejudice the conference from the beginning. The Patients' Bill of Rights included life-saving protections that must be embraced and not thrown out. The people have spoken, and we must listen.

They said they wanted their HMOs to be accountable for decisions that HMO bureaucrats forced, and we listened. They said they wanted an effective appeals process so that decisions could be challenged and lives saved, and this House listened.

They pointed to States like Texas that have had both strong appeals process and accountability. The result of these protections is that few plans and no employers have been sued. This House listened. We took note, and we took action.

The people said that they wanted to continue with their cancer doctors and obstetricians during the course of treatment or pregnancy, and this House listened. They said they wanted to be able to take their children to the closest emergency room when an emergency struck, and this House listened.

They said they wanted their doctors to be able to talk freely with them about their treatment and the medications they needed without feeling gagged by their health plan, and this House listened.

Mr. Speaker, this House of Representatives listened to the American people. Please do not turn a deaf ear to those pleas. This life and death issue is too important to play politics with.

I urge that a conference that includes supporters of Patients' Bill of Rights from the majority party be held. They listened, Mr. Speaker. Will you listen? I yield back so that the Speaker and the majority will listen to the American people.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. STRICKLAND) is recognized for 5 minutes.

(Mr. STRICKLAND addressed the house. His remarks will appear hereafter in the Extensions of Remarks.)

WTO/ENVIRONMENT

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. BROWN) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, next month, the world's power brokers are going to meet in Seattle so they can kick off a new round of trade talks for the World Trade Organization. Although one will not learn much about the WTO summit from television news casters or read about it on the front pages of newspapers, there are few events this year that will be more important to workers in Ohio and around the world.

While the WTO corporate supporters and allies in Washington see the Seattle negotiations as a fresh opportunity to completely deregulate the international economy, the truth is that their agenda has systematically gutted our worker, consumer, and environmental protections that we have fought for in this body, and deliberately usurped the rights of individual nations to make their own laws, especially when those laws protect the environment and especially when those laws protect workers.

Mr. Speaker, a report "Whose Trade Organization," written by Public Citizen's Global Trade Watch dramatically demonstrates why the WTO requires fundamental change before the bureaucrats in Seattle take us down another road of trade negotiations.

When Congress approved the World Trade Organization and other agreements, like NAFTA, we essentially ceded our authority to independently advance health and safety standards that protect America's families. Let me say that again. Thanks to the WTO and to NAFTA and other trade agreements, we are losing our ability to protect the health and the well-being of the men and women that voted us into office.

That is because we have to ensure that we are not violating some bureaucrat's view of what constitutes a trade barrier or what constitutes a legitimate health concern.

None of the lawyers, Mr. Speaker, from the U.S. Trade Representative's office or the Commerce Department or their supporters on Wall Street has been elected to office. Yet these are the very people that will represent us in Seattle, the people that will weaken our ability to erect meaningful worker and environmental standards.

Their fascination with a healthy bottom line is how we wind up with trade agreements that give more rights to corporations and their stockholders than they do to individual citizens and to our elected governments. That is how we wind up giving unelected bureaucrats the authority to determine whether or not our consumers have to eat foods that have been treated with carcinogenic pesticides or whether or not we have to drink water that tastes vaguely like paint thinner.

That is what is happening right now in California. The governor has banned the gasoline additive MTBE because it is leaking into the drinking water. The Canadian corporation that makes it is using NAFTA to sue the United States for nearly $1 billion because they think this constitutes a trade barrier. Think about that. A foreign corporation is asking our taxpayers to give it $1 billion because the people in California do not like the taste of paint thinner in their drinking water and think it is good public health to ban this gasoline additive.

This case is just one of the dozens that are included in this book I mentioned which meticulously documents how every single health safety or environmental law reviewed by the WTO has been declared an illegal trade barrier that must be eliminated under the threat of sanctions.

In addition to these cases, Public Citizen documents that much of the WTO's damage is done merely by threatening the use of its powerful dispute system, a fact evidenced by the increasing number of countries that are preemptively eliminating their environmental or health laws just to avoid the steep political and fiscal costs involved in defending a law from a WTO challenge.

Mr. Speaker, if we want to preserve American jobs, if we want to continue protecting our environment, we need to make sure that negotiators in Seattle, U.S. taxpayer financed negotiators in Seattle, respect the principles that let us stand here during this debate tonight.

Rather than letting unelected officials from the Trade Rep's office or their friends on Wall Street tell us what is good for America, we need to make sure they hear what our constituents want.

Every weekend that I go home to Ohio, they tell me they do not want to eat contaminated strawberries; they tell me they do not want to drink unsafe water. They do not want to lose their jobs because the WTO does not care whether some foreign workers, no older, sometimes, than the age of 13 or 14, or that work 18 hours a day for what amounts to less than a dollar an hour, that WTO does not care whether workers like that are taking American jobs and being exploited in developing countries.

Mr. Speaker, it is vital that we in Congress, that the American people, realize what is at stake when the world's largest assembly of millionaires meets in Seattle this year. We have to keep fighting to make labor standards, environmental standards, and human rights as important to our trade bureaucrats as intellectual property rights.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from California (Mr. HORN) is recognized for 5 minutes.

(Mr. HORN addressed the House. His remarks will appear hereafter in the Extensions of Remarks.)

ILLEGAL IMMIGRANTS AND THE EEOC

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. FOLEY) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. FOLEY. Mr. Speaker, first I want to commend this House on a vote of 218 to 211. We put ourselves in a position of saving Social Security. We have said to all agencies that we can and do expect them to find ways to make savings so that we can sacrifice today to save Social Security for tomorrow for this generation and for future generations.

I commend my colleagues to stay tuned as the gentleman from Texas (Mr. SESSIONS) will deliver a special order. We will go more into detail on the very significant plans we have voted on today and I believe we can achieve.

I would also like to remark on a comment made by the Vice President last night in the debate with Senator Bradley.

□ 1800

The debate was centered on bureaucracy, and the Vice President basically said that we should not allow a faceless, nameless bureaucrat to stand in the way of health care of Americans, basically saying we do not need a bureaucracy in order to deliver health care.

Well, I say to the President and the Vice President today that maybe we should use that same strategy when we talk about education. Because I think we have created a lot of bureaucracies, and the gentleman from Texas is going to talk about some of the ways we believe we can save the American taxpayers some money.

But I want to discuss another situation today, an outrageous situation. In fact, my district office sent up the clippings from the newspaper. And Diane, who works for me in Port St. Lucie, puts "today's outrage" on things she thinks bears specific note on where we might have gone astray.

This week the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission announced they are planning to extend anti-discrimination rights to working illegal immigrants. This policy would include remedies such as potential back pay, punitive damages, and even reinstatement to their jobs? I am sorry, I must not understand the term illegal immigrant. Perhaps the EEOC can start providing free towing for car thieves or free checking for bank robbers.

It just baffles my mind. I clearly do not want things to happen to any worker, no matter how they are in this country, but if the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission is really concerned with equal employment opportunity, as their title would indicate, they should be ensuring that legal residents and citizens have fair and equal access to earn a living. This does not include protecting illegal immigrants who are working illegally for an employer who hired them illegally.

This is all illegal. We are talking about the rule of law. We must make a concerted effort to track down employers who are hiring illegal immigrants and charge them not with worker discrimination, but with hiring illegal workers. Working illegal immigrants take jobs away from Americans. They hurt the U.S. work force and they damage the economy.

This is just another misguided attempt by this administration to—well, I will be quite honest, I have no idea what they are trying to do. I hope my colleagues will join me in sending a message to the administration that coddling illegal aliens is not what our policies are all about.

I cannot underscore this enough. None of us should sit willingly by while workers' rights are being abused, but we also have to recognize first and foremost that there are laws on the books that have to do with hiring illegal aliens, hiring illegal workers, and we should enforce this policy. But this policy, announced by the EEOC today, just once again extends the reach of government into an area where they should be concentrating and working clearly to track down illegals and return them to their native countries.

Mr. Speaker, I will be submitting a bill, in fact, it is here at the desk, and I will be submitting it to the committee for consideration, because I believe we should tell strongly the EEOC, yes, protect workers rights; yes, stand for equal employment for all Americans; yes, make certain that employers are treating workers fairly, but, in a case like this, where they are not permitted to work based on their status, we should not provide protection under the law for those who choose to work or those who choose to hire illegal immigrants.

THE APPROPRIATIONS PROCESS

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. PEASE). Under a previous order of the House, the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. JACKSON-LEE) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I was not going to speak to the topic, but I do want to tell the gentleman from Florida that as a member of the Subcommittee on Immigration and Claims of the Committee on the Judiciary, I will look intently at his issue, and I appreciate his bringing this to the attention of the House.

I would hope that the different extremes of thought, the fact that people should not be discriminated against but the fact that we should have a workplace that respects American workers and recognizes that we do discourage illegal immigration and encourage employers to hire both legal immigrants and those who are American citizens, that we can find a way to respond to the gentleman's concerns, and I thank him for bringing this to our attention.

Mr. Speaker, many of the American public who have watched us over this past time frame of dealing with the appropriations process may have wondered what all of the bickering was about. In fact, they may have wondered why the bickering, with the most prosperous peacetime over a period of time that we have seen in a number of years. Consistent prosperity. It seems ludicrous to many who would study the issues of economics that we find ourselves at a point where we are denying services to the American public under the precept of an across-the-board cut at a time when there is great prosperity.

So the problem, I think, is that we are either misrepresenting to the American public, playing our own private games, or failing to recognize our responsibility to work in a bipartisan manner to address the needs of this country.

It is important to note that just a couple of months ago the Republican majority was offering a $792 billion tax cut. What was that based upon, particularly when we now are debating the idea of an across-the-board cut? And as I continue in my discussion, I think my colleagues will see the people who are negatively impacted by such a cut.

Well, the $792 billion tax cut was based upon presumptions and good news and the hope that something would happen, and that was that if the peacetime economy was to continue, there was some thought that the prosperity of this country would allow monies to be recouped on the $792 billion tax cut. This is the same tax cut that most Americans said they did not want; the same tax cut that probably would give little benefit to working and middle class Americans; the same tax cut that would not have benefitted the EITC, the earned income tax credit, recipients, those working poor who would benefit from their lump sum tax benefit, who in the last days were in the middle of a chopping block while we were talking about a $792 billion tax cut.

So my call on my fellow colleagues is that as we have now voted on the last appropriations bill, of which it is quite obvious that the President will veto, when we have the opportunity to come back again, or if we go into major negotiations, might we put in front of all of the distinct and disparate political philosophies the fact that the American people have asked us to frugally, yet responsibly, and with compassion, deal with all of their needs.

I would hope when we come back to the table again that we would not deny 950,000 children the right to participate in after-school programs. Today, I had the privilege of conducting a hearing entitled "An Ounce of Previous Recollection Is Worth a Pound of Cure". It was a reaffirmation or a hearing regarding the testimony of advocates and participants in programs that children use after school. It was the children themselves, it was the participants in Boy Scouts and Campfire Girls, it was the YMCA, which indicated they are in 22,000 communities around this Nation.

If my colleagues could have heard those young people, 14 years old and 16 years old, tell their own personal stories. A 14-year-old Girl Scout, who is already a mother, says she belonged to a gang and that if she had not been steered away, through this program which receives complementary Federal funds to expand its program into lower income neighborhoods, she would not have been sitting in that hearing room today. She got off drugs, or the enticement of drugs, she got away from gangs and began to understand how to behave as a girl, and she said she is now a better parent.

These programs, Mr. Speaker, are just one example of why the appropriations process is wrong, why this bill was wrong, and why we should go back to the drawing board and do the right thing for the American people.

CONTROVERSY OVER USE OF PRESIDENTIAL EXECUTIVE ORDERS AND PROCLAMATIONS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Washington (Mr. METCALF) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. METCALF. Mr. Speaker, a steady increase in controversy over executive orders and presidential proclamations has arisen since Franklin Roosevelt's administration. Nevertheless, I am truly concerned about the comments of the President's Chief of Staff, John Podesta, as quoted in the current issue of U.S. News and World Report.

To quote Podesta: "Frustrated with the balky Republican Congress, President Clinton plans a series of executive orders and changes to the Federal Rules that he can sign into law without first getting the okay from GOP naysayers. There's a pretty wide sweep of things we're looking to do, and we're going to be very aggressive in pursuing it."

These statements are deeply disturbing and should be to all Americans. An unelected political bureaucrat is boasting to the American people about his plan to sidestep the Constitution. Sadly, Congress should not be surprised that this President's frustrated staff is looking to bypass Congress and implement their agenda. We have seen this before.

When the President issued his Executive Order on striker replacements, he attempted to do what had been denied him by the regular legislative process. In addition, when the President issued his proclamation establishing a national monument in Utah, he again tried to do what he had been unable to achieve through Congress.

Mr. Speaker, the founders expected national policy to be the result of open and full debate, hammered out by the legislative and executive branches. They believed in careful deliberation conducted in a representative assembly, subject to all the checks and balances that characterize our constitutional system. Having broken with England in 1776, they rejected government by monarchy and one-man rule. Nowhere in the Constitution is the President specifically given authority to issue these directives. The founders specifically placed all legislative powers in the Congress.

In the legislative veto decision in 1983, INS vs. Chadha, the Supreme Court insisted that congressional power be exercised "in accordance with a single, finely wrought and exhaustively considered, procedure." The Court said that the records of the Philadelphia Convention and the states ratification debates provide "unmistakable expression of a determination that legislation by the national Congress be a step-by-step, deliberate and deliberative process."

If Congress is required to follow this rigorous process, how absurd it is to argue that the President can accomplish the same result by unilaterally issuing an Executive Order or presidential proclamation. The President's controversial use of presidential directives skirt the constitutional process, offend the values announced by the court in the legislative veto case, and do serious damage to our commitment to representative government and the rule of law.

It is time to clarify the scope of executive authority vested in the presidency by Article II of the Constitution. Through its ability to authorize programs and appropriate funds, Congress can define and limit presidential powers. As Members, we must participate in our fundamental duty of overseeing executive policies, passing judgment on them, and behaving as the legislative branch should.

Mr. Speaker, the road to tyranny does not begin by egregious usurpations, but by those which appear logical and meant to gain public support. We must not be lulled into complacency by these, because with absolute certainty, the ones that come later will be aimed directly at our fundamental liberties and representative self-government.

Remember, eternal vigilance is still the price of liberty.

NAVY'S HANDLING OF VESSEL REPAIRS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Guam (Mr. UNDERWOOD) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I rise to bring up an issue which I brought up earlier last week and which I continue to fight, and that is that the U.S. Navy has done it again.

The day before yesterday I was informed that yet another U.S. naval vessel, the USNS Kiluea, is going to be sent to a South Korean shipyard for scheduled maintenance. The USNS Kiluea is one of several U.S. flagged Navy vessels that transport ammunition to our surface fleet, and recently the USNS was stationed with U.S. forces operating in and around the peacekeeping mission in East Timor.

Several weeks ago, the Navy and the Military Sealift Command issued a Far East request for proposal seeking bids for ship repair work on the USNS Kiluea.

To the surprise of no one, the bid that won was a foreign shipyard because it can dramatically underbid U.S. shipyards. And so once again, Mr. Speaker, the U.S. Navy and MSC is spending U.S. tax dollars to repair American naval vessels with foreign workers in a foreign land.

Incredibly, it seems that the U.S. military is bent on spending precious tax dollars in Japan, Korea, or Singapore to keep their shipyards operating and their workers employed but will not lift a hand for U.S. workers. That is the outrageous facts. Many of these vessels are entitled U.S. Navy ships.

Indeed, at the rate that the Navy is sending these jobs overseas, if Congress is not too careful and does not pay attention to this process, these Navy ships are going to have to be redesignated as Republic of Korea Navy ships.

Check this out. The Military Sealift Command, in violation of an amendment to Title 10, which I introduced, requires that U.S. naval vessels homeported in the United States must do their repair work, their normal repair work, not emergency work, in U.S. shipyards.

My amendment included Guam under this, and Guam is part of the United States and the workers are U.S. citizens. And what my amendment asked was that the Navy put those ships that are under their control and are homeported, and many of these ships operate right out of Guam, they steam right by a U.S. shipyard operated by Americans, staffed by Americans, and they bid out the work, and these very ships go right past those workers up to a shipyard in South Korea.

This is more than about dollars and cents. This is about jobs. The fact is that foreign shipyards can always beat U.S. shipyards in terms of price, for several reasons.

First, foreign shipyards are in most cases subsidized. Second, foreign shipyards do not pay their workers decent wages. Third, foreign shipyards do not have to comply with health and safety work laws and environments. Finally, some shipyards are in foreign countries that have had their currencies devalued compared to the dollar. For all these reasons, foreign shipyards are cheaper than American. But they are certainly not any better.

What we are up against is the Navy's insistence that, through a series of ways of redefining where these ships are home-ported, they have been able to escape the full application and the spirit and intent of Title 10, which is to take ships that are home-ported in American ports, make sure that their work is done in American shipyards, their regular work.

What the Navy has done through the MSC is redefine these so that they can compete these out and give the work to foreign shipyards.

Our readiness continues to suffer on this. The internal Navy waiver process continues to be issued unabated. I am calling upon many of my colleagues here in the House, and some have already signed letters, but I am calling through a "dear colleague" letter to protest this effort directly to Secretary of Defense Bill Cohen.

This practice is wrong, it is harmful to the national security of the Nation, and it certainly hurts American workers.

REVISIONS FOR ALLOCATION FOR HOUSE COMMITTEE ON APPROPRIATIONS, PURSUANT TO HOUSE REPORT 106-373, TO REFLECT ADDITIONAL NEW BUDGET AUTHORITY AND LESS IN OUTLAYS FOR EMERGENCIES

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. KASICH) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. KASICH. Mr. Speaker, pursuant to Sec. 314 of the Congressional Budget Act, I hereby submit for printing in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD revisions to the allocation for the House Committee on Appropriations pursuant to House Report 106-373 to reflect $0 in additional new budget authority and $3,000,000 in additional outlays for emergencies. This will increase the allocation to the House Committee on Appropriations to $564,472,000,000 in budget authority and $597,574,000,000 in outlays for fiscal year 2000. This will increase the aggregate total to $1,454,921,000,000 in budget authority and $1,434,711,000,000 in outlays for fiscal year 2000.

As reported to the House, H.R. 2466, the conference report accompanying the bill making appropriations for the Departments of Interior and Related Agencies for fiscal year 2000, includes $158,000,000 in budget authority and $42,000,000 in outlays for emergencies. An earlier statement indicated incorrectly that H.R. 2466 only allocated $39,000,000 in additional outlays for emergencies.

These adjustments shall apply while the legislation is under consideration and shall take effect upon final enactment of the legislation. Questions may be directed to Art Sauer or Jim Bates at x6-7270.

REVISIONS FOR ALLOCATION FOR HOUSE COMMITTEE ON APPROPRIATIONS, PURSUANT TO HOUSE REPORT 106-373, TO REFLECT ADDITIONAL NEW BUDGET AUTHORITY AND LESS IN OUTLAYS FOR EMERGENCIES

Mr. Speaker, pursuant to Sec. 314 of the Congressional Budget Act, I hereby submit for printing in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD revisions to the allocation for the House Committee on Appropriations pursuant to House Report 106-373 to reflect $38,000,000 in additional new budget authority and $293,000,000 less in outlays for emergencies. This will change the allocation to the House Committee on Appropriations to $564,510,000,000 in budget authority and $597,281,000,000 in outlays for fiscal year 2000. This will increase the aggregate total to $1,454,959,000,000 in budget authority and $1,434,418,000,000 in outlays for fiscal year 2000.

As reported to the House, Division B of H.R. 3064, the conference report accompanying the bill making fiscal year 2000 appropriations for the District of Columbia, makes appropriations for the Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education and Related Agencies for fiscal year 2000. Division B includes $2,348,000,000 in budget authority and $1,298,000,000 in outlays for emergencies. These are $38,000,000 more in budget authority and $293,000,000 less in outlays than the revisions to the allocation for the House Committee on Appropriations made for consideration of H.R. 3037, the bill previously reported to the House making appropriations for the Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education and Related Agencies for fiscal year 2000.

These adjustments shall apply while the legislation is under consideration and shall take effect upon final enactment of the legislation. Questions may be directed to Art Sauer or Jim Bates at x6-7270.

FINANCIAL MODERNIZATION CONFERENCE REPORT

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Ohio (Ms. KAPTUR) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Ms. KAPTUR. Mr. Speaker, soon the House will have an opportunity to consider S. 900, what is entitled the Financial Modernization Conference Report.

This complicated and controversial legislation seeks to overhaul banking laws that have been in existence in our country since the Great Depression. These laws were dedicated to safety and soundness in the banking system of the United States.

The laws that have been on the books for this entire century since the Great Depression have separated the activities of bankers, of the insurance industry, and of the securities and stock brokerage industries. Essentially, what this legislation attempts to do is to allow them to intermarry and to do business together.

Now, I recently did a survey in my district, and I asked our constituents the following question: How would you describe your personal views of bank practices? Two-thirds stated that they disliked the changes that have been occurring in the banking system. They say the fees are not consistent with the services provided, services are declining, and most of our banks are no longer locally owned.

If we think to the system that has been in place in this country that has permitted us to grow and to increase equity for America's families, the epitome of this system was the community bank. And in fact, the community banker became an active member of the local chamber of commerce in every neighborhood, in every city; and banking became equated with stability.

What we have seen happen in the banking system of our country, and it has been happening slowly, slowly, slowly, we have watched communities like my own, Toledo, OH, become a branch economy of an institution located someplace else. And when that happened, community contributions to Boy Scouts by those institutions went down, to children's softball teams and so forth. The community contributions, the philanthropy of that institution and the personal identification of the president of the institution with the community as a whole diminished.

In addition to that, we have seen the idea of safety and soundness changed fundamentally to where now most of these institutions have turned into high-flying debt pushers trying to get consumers to take on more credit than they can afford.

In fact, last week when I got home from Congress and I opened my mail, I got so mad I ripped this letter up. Because this came from an institution that does business in Ohio, and what did it have? It had one of these $5 checks attached that says that, if you cash this and sign up for our program, we will send you $5.

But what was I to sign up for? Here is a banking institution pushing more credit on the commercial side to me, a depositor in that institution. They want me to sign up for Shopper's Advantage, over 250,000 brand items; Traveler's Advantage, again credit to travel; concierge's service; Saver's Club discount book. In other words, they are pushing debt, pushing debt through the banking system at our consumers.

Now, this is a fundamental change in the way that our country used to operate in the field of banking and credit. In some ways, these lending institutions, if we can call them that, are not so much interested in building communities as in milking communities and in taking money that should be placed in those depositors' accounts so that they can end up owning a piece of the rock rather than assuming these greater and greater debt burdens that are characterizing family accounts across this country.

Here is a recent chart on the rising level of consumer debt in our country. The average family cannot survive more than 3 months without getting their paycheck in the mail because of the debts that they owe. Yet these institutions that are supposed to be dedicated to safety and soundness are into pushing more credit, not in the interest of community building, but in the interest only of profits of those institutions.

We have seen megafinancial conglomerates and mergers across our country, and this bill will only add new hurdles to the already difficult task for consumers obtaining basic financial services without incurring outlandish and arbitrary fees.

Further, consumers will be forced to speak with more 1-800 recordings. How many of us have got lost in those when we try to get an answer out of a banking institution in this country and very pricey automatic teller machines rather than dealing with human beings? This is happening across our country.

Mr. Speaker, the fundamental precept of any banking laws in this country should be safety and soundness, not high-flying credit pushers.

I rise today to outline my concerns with this conference report. I believe America's Fiscal Fitness is in jeopardy as we enter the next millennium. Are we really prepared for the challenges that lie ahead?

I am concerned about the growing trend toward mergers and acquisitions throughout America's banking industry. These massive consolidations, most recently seen with the merger of Nations Bank and Bank of America, will likely result in fewer financial service options and fewer alternatives for consumers when it comes to shopping for life insurance, checking accounts, and investments transactions.

The mega-financial conglomerates created by this bill will only add new hurdles to the already difficult task of obtaining basic financial services without incurring outlandish and arbitrary fees. Further, consumers will be forced to speak with 1-800 number recordings and sent to pricey automatic teller machines rather than dealing with human beings.

Consumer spending makes up two-thirds of our economy, but increases accounted for an astounding 85 percent of the growth in the gross domestic product last year. And it's fueled by unsustainable efforts by most families.

Consumer debt, from credit cards to home mortgages, now total about 85 percent of personal income—with installment loans accounting for $1.4 trillion. The 55 to 60 million households that carry a credit card balance from month-to-month have an average balance of $7,000 and pay more than $1,000 per year in interest and fees.

As consumer debt has increased net family worth has declined. Federal Reserve reports that the median net worth of all U.S. families, in constant 1995 dollars has dropped from $57,000 in 1989 to $55,600 in 1995.

A report released by the Consumer Federation of America found that half of U.S. households do not have $1,000 in assets available for an emergency. Should the economy take a dramatic downturn, these families are not prepared.

As a percentage of the gross domestic product, consumer debt has increased from 13.74 percent in 1990 to 15.41 percent this year. One family in six below $25,000 in annual income spends more than 40 percent of its income on debt service.

American families have kept their heads above water by working more hours—middle-income couples with children are putting in an average of 6 full-time weeks more each year than a decade ago.

The burden of today's consumer debt coupled with an increase in interest rates, a new wave of downsizing, or a cutback in overtime hours would force families to curtail spending and push many into bankruptcy.

Today, over 12 million American families can't afford bank accounts. And for those who do have accounts, the average annual cost of maintaining a regular checking account has risen to more than $217 in 1999—according to U.S. Public Interest Research Group. Meanwhile, in 1998 banks recorded nearly $62 million in profits, an eighth straight record year.

The Financial Modernization Conference bill does little to discourage the growth of bigger, higher fee banks, leading to less consumer choice and higher fees for all Americans. There are also privacy concerns that are not addressed in this bill.

The bill allows for sharing between megabank affiliates. Which can only lead to more of the solicitations like this one that I received over the weekend from Key Bank.

The bill does not allow a customer to "opt-out" if a financial institution wishes to distribute the customer's information to affiliates within the financial holding company. Is it too much to ask for a customer to have the right to "opt-out" and inform his or her financial institution that it may not distribute his or her personal, private financial information to financial institutions?

Mr. Speaker, I am aware of the tremendous work on the part of the Banking Committee Members and staff and appreciate their work on this important issue. I remain, however, concerned that the bill falls short from meeting consumer protection needs and reducing bank fees.

DOMESTIC VIOLENCE AWARENESS MONTH

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Maryland (Mrs. MORELLA) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mrs. MORELLA. Mr. Speaker, October is Breast Cancer Awareness Month, but it is also Domestic Violence Awareness Month. This is the issue I want to briefly address.

It was 35 years ago when Congress passed the landmark Violence Against Women Act, and it has changed the way that we as a Nation address the crimes of domestic violence and sexual assault.

Today, there are more investigations and prosecutions and stiffer penalties, including life sentences for those who cross State lines to commit domestic violence. Millions of dollars in Federal funds have been provided to States to help them reshape the way police officers respond to domestic violence.

For example, the COPS program, that is the Community Oriented Policing Services, helps local police departments apply the principles of community policing methods to domestic violence. There is increased funding for shelter and a national domestic violence hotline, which receives an estimated 11,000 calls per month. America's dirty little secret is a secret no longer.

But the 1994 Violence Against Women Act, or VAWA I, as we called it, could not and did not cover every issue with violence against women. With the response to the domestic violence outreach programs including hotlines and shelters, we have seen an increase in the number of victims who come forward and seek help.

This increase necessitates further action on our part. The programs under the Violence Against Women Act just begin our fight against domestic violence, and the programs funded under that act lead the way.

This epidemic crosses all racial and socio-economic barriers. The National Domestic Violence hotline reports that 90 percent of the callers were female and 57 percent were white. Every State and every district has some domestic violence, unfortunately, with victims in cities and on farms across the country.

In my State of Maryland, reports have shown an estimated 26,000 cases of domestic violence crimes in 1997. This number is said to reflect only about 10 percent of the actual attacks. And last year the Crime in Maryland Uniform Report stated that 72 individuals died from domestic violence attacks. That is approximately one person every 5 days who dies as a result of domestic violence in one small State, Maryland, alone.

The Maryland Network Against Domestic Violence has demonstrated how VAWA funds have made a critical difference in the lives of victims and their children in the State of Maryland.

For instance, in areas of prosecution, nine jurisdictions in Maryland use VAWA funds to increase staffing and to designate domestic violence units. Others offer legal assistance through court advocates who accompany victims to trial and who assist with private legal fees to establish protective orders.

Also funded is the Pro-prosecution Project. It trains law enforcement officers, court commissioners, and State's attorneys on pro-arrest policies when violent situations cannot be overcome inside the home.

It also funds parole and probation advocates who act as liaisons between the department agents and victims. This program has had tremendous success in shortening the length of time between a violation and a violation hearing.

Four local police departments are using funds to implement programs that focus on both prevention and intervention and with regard to victims services. One jurisdiction uses the VAWA money to support their local hotline. Others use this area to fund a program that addresses victims who also have a mental illness or addiction.

In Maryland, VAWA funds are also used for the Maryland Coalition Against Sexual Assault and 10 local coalitions that bring together educators, program providers, law enforcement, prosecutors, judges, health care professionals, clergy and community groups, all of that coalition that should be working together.

Maryland, which currently has 21 programs and 19 shelters, has used a multilevel approach that includes local, grassroots projects to meet the immediate needs of individuals and families, as well as statewide initiatives that provide education, training, and advocacy that addresses institutional and systemic issues.

I use Maryland as one of the examples, but this is the case throughout our 50 states and indicates that VAWA works. That is the Violence Against Women Act. I want to point out that nationally nearly one in every three adult women will experience a physical assault by a partner or a significant other and almost half the women who are taken to a hospital emergency room are treated for injuries inflicted by a partner or spouse.

The Violence Against Women Act needs to be reauthorized and a new version adding more, Violence Against Women Act II, also needs to be passed.

These statistics, including the reports from shelters all over the country that they are overwhelmed with victims seeking safety and counseling, reinforce the need to expand domestic violence programs. Many of these expansions are addressed within the Violence Against Women Act II—HR 357.

Among the issues that VAWA I did not tackle, for example, were domestic violence and child custody, issues that have traditionally been handled by state and local courts but are issues that demand a national response.

What is domestic violence and what happens to children raised in homes where domestic violence occurs?

Domestic violence or battering is a means of establishing control over another person through fear and intimidation. Generally, battering is physical, but it also includes emotional, economic, and sexual abuse, and the kind of isolation experienced by hostages and prisoners of war.

Domestic violence is a brutal crime, mostly, but not always, committed by men against women. The shocking reality is that an estimated 3 to 4 million American women are assaulted each year by their husbands or partners, and every year 3.3 million children witness these attacks.

There are many theories about batterers and why they resort to violence. These include career and economic stress, violence on TV and in movies, poor socialization, and sexism in our society. Whatever the cause, battering continues because too many people look the other way. Our judicial system has been guilty of ignorance about domestic violence and negligence. For many victims of domestic violence the courts are their adversaries, not their allies.

SOCIAL SECURITY

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentlewoman from California (Ms. LEE) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Ms. LEE. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong support of ensuring the solvency of the Social Security program. Today, there are 44.4 million Americans who receive Social Security benefits. Over 4 million of these individuals reside in the State of California. Americans all over our Nation depend on this retirement benefit as a source of major income. This program is the principal source of retirement income for two-thirds of our elderly. For about one-third of all seniors over the age of 65, it represents 90 percent of their income. In fact, Social Security benefits lifted approximately 15 million senior citizens out of poverty last year.

Now, Social Security is not just a retirement program for our seniors. It provides badly needed survivor benefits, also. One out of every five Social Security beneficiaries receives survivor or disability benefits. This program also provides for disability benefits to our Nation's workers. For three out of four workers, Social Security represents their only form of disability coverage.

The Republican budget does absolutely nothing to extend the life of the Social Security program. Democrats want to strengthen the Social Security program and actually extend its life. The President's plan extends the life of Social Security for 15 years. Republicans do not propose extending the life of the program by a single day. Instead, they are actually raiding the Social Security trust fund to the tune of $13 billion. The President's plan, however, would apply the interest savings gained by paying down the debt to saving Social Security. While the so-called lockbox proposed by Republicans would have used any such interest savings to finance a huge tax cut for the wealthy, the Democrats propose to devote the entire interest savings to ensuring the life of the Social Security program.

The President's plan solves two major problems also simultaneously. This plan will directly invest Social Security surpluses into paying off our public debt as well as extending the program's solvency. This proposal will reduce the debt by $3.1 trillion over the next 15 years, thereby creating badly needed resources for our children and our families, such as education, health care and housing. By investing a decade of Social Security surpluses to debt reduction, we will cut the debt by $2.1 trillion, cutting interest payments to $56 billion. The President's plan proposes to devote the entire interest savings to extending the life of Social Security. The Social Security program is expected to have difficulty paying timely benefits starting in the year 2034. According to preliminary estimates by the Social Security program's Office of the Actuary, the President's proposal would extend solvency until 2050. This is an extra 16 years added to the life of the program. This Congress has an obligation to strengthen the Social Security program, because working people have earned and deserve Social Security. It is the most sacred and fundamental measure for the survival of all Americans.

The American people deserve the truth. The Republicans are not saving Social Security nor protecting the program so that our children and grandchildren can benefit from this retirement program. Social Security will not be around for our children if we allow the Republicans to continue to spend as they do.

Let us support the President's proposal to ensure that Social Security survives for our seniors today as well as for our future generations. Our children and our grandchildren deserve no less.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. MINGE) is recognized for 5 minutes.

(Mr. MINGE addressed the House. His remarks will appear hereafter in the Extensions of Remarks.)

THE TRUTH ABOUT SOCIAL SECURITY

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 6, 1999, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. SESSIONS) is recognized for 60 minutes as the designee of the majority leader.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. Speaker, tonight we are through with legislative business for the week. It has been a very energetic week for the House of Representatives. We have discussed and debated a lot of issues. As we see just a few minutes ago, the charade continues about the discussion and the debate about where this country is on Social Security. What I would like to do is for the next hour or so to take some time to explain to the American public what the truth is about Social Security, where we are, what this Congress is doing, because I believe that there is a more responsible answer that we should give to the American public. We should not scare the American public, but most of all that the truth should not be held hostage. We should not have to hear politician after politician come and to spout out what I think are their wishes for doom and gloom of this Social Security system when in fact a lot of focus has been placed upon it and the American public have written their Congressmen and Members of Congress have gotten engaged in this issue.

And so I would like to use this remaining time of this hour to talk directly with the American public, to provide them information not only about how Social Security is doing but the difference between the gross and the net, the gross being the top side that they hear about and the net being the bottom. I am joined, Mr. Speaker, tonight by several of my Republican colleagues who are going to engage in this debate with me. It has been a marvelous week here in Washington. We believe we are at the point now where we can look the American public right in the eye and tell them the truth about where we are in Washington, whether we are going to spend Social Security, that we are going to balance the budget and that we can make a deal because responsible people in Washington, D.C. can make responsible decisions.

Tonight, I would first like to call on the gentleman from New Hampshire (Mr. BASS), a member of the Budget, Transportation and Intelligence committees. I would like to have the gentleman from New Hampshire join in with me in this debate.

Mr. BASS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Texas, my friend and colleague. I, too, join him in expressing the fact that I am proud of this Congress for what we have done today and what we have done for the last 10 months of this year.

As a member of the Committee on the Budget, we began the year seriously wondering whether or not we were going to have the integrity and the fiscal discipline to put aside the money that we need to put aside to save Social Security. I recall early on in the year going through hearings which within the Committee on the Budget we debated how we would go about doing it, understanding that in the previous year we had committed 90 percent of our surplus to saving Social Security and the President had called for putting aside 100 percent of the surplus for Social Security. Then in his State of the Union address, he had said, well, let us put 60 percent of the surplus aside for Social Security and to this day he says that we should try to put as much as we can aside for Social Security. Make no mistake about it. The Committee on the Budget made a commitment along with the leadership to put 100 percent of the receipts from the Social Security taxes plus all the interest which is accruing to the Social Security system aside, and that is a number that is in excess of $120 billion. Indeed, that goes to paying down the debt.

Now, my good friend from California who spoke a minute or two ago paid tribute to the President's plan to devote, quote, the entire interest savings to Social Security and thereby extend its life. Let us just examine exactly what that means. The fact of the matter is that what the President has proposed is to set as much, maybe 60 percent, maybe 90 percent, whatever he does not spend on new spending programs aside for Social Security which will indeed pay down the public debt.

But then what he proposes to do is to take the interest that would have been paid had you not paid down the debt, call it imputed interest, and create a whole new series of IOUs to the Social Security system, thereby making it look like it will last 15 more years. But the reality of it is, it is a shell game, a first-class shell game.

What the Republicans are proposing to do is to exercise fiscal discipline and at the same time to set aside in a lockbox the Social Security surplus. Indeed, doing this will not prolong the life of Social Security one more day, that is true. There are other issues that we need to deal with with Social Security. But the one thing we have to understand in the beginning is that we are not going to take the hard-earned money that is paid in payroll taxes by working Americans and use that money for other spending programs.

Now, we passed I think a really momentous appropriations bill today. It was a combination of the Labor, Education, Health and Human Services bill, the D.C. appropriations bill and a 1 percent across-the-board reduction in discretionary spending accounts. In my 5 years in Congress, this is the first time I have seen this occur. It is not an easy vote but let us examine the 1 percent cut for a second. One percent, one penny on every dollar. We hear the President talking about how he cannot cut this program and he cannot cut this program, there is not another dime. I understand the Interior Secretary the other day said, and I cannot quote because I do not have the quote in front of me, that there was not one single dime of waste in the Interior Department. I think other speakers after me will perhaps give him some suggestions about where money might be saved.

But what we are doing is what the American people asked us to do when they elected us, which is to trim government, to save Social Security, to cut taxes for working Americans, and to balance the budget. Before I entered Congress, the idea of balancing the budget was fodder for laughs at cocktail parties. In fact, the theory was being developed that deficit budgets were good for the United States economy. Of course those lines have now been long forgotten. Now that we face the first real honest cash surplus since I got my driver's license at the age of 16 in 1968, we have a President who wants to put a little bit away but he has a whole lot of new ideas for spending money and we have a Congress that is committed first to setting aside the money for Social Security, secondly paying down the debt, thirdly providing tax relief for working Americans, the people who are pulling the wagon in this country year after year. It is not going to be that difficult to do.

I urge the President and the minority to work for working Americans in this country and move this appropriation forward so that we can finish the business of appropriations, avoid a government shutdown and move on to next year.

I want to thank the gentleman from Texas for bringing up this very important subject tonight, because I really believe that it is critical that Americans understand exactly what our priorities are.

Mr. SESSIONS. I thank the gentleman from New Hampshire. I am also joined tonight, Mr. Speaker, by one of the brightest members of the House of Representatives. He is a young man who is in my class, he is from South Dakota, his name is JOHN THUNE.

The gentleman from South Dakota and I recognize that what we are talking about is saving one penny, one penny, and it is very important. I would appreciate it if you would take a few minutes with us and talk to us.

Mr. THUNE. That is exactly right. I thank the gentleman from Texas for yielding and also for the leadership that he has taken on this issue in helping us communicate with the American people with our colleagues here exactly what it is that we are trying to accomplish.

As I was listening to the debate today on the floor, I could not help but be struck with the thought that the other side must have a severe case of schizophrenia, because our friends on the other side of the aisle were saying on one hand that we are spending Social Security, which we are not, and at the same time they were saying that we were not spending enough. And so you had two different messages coming out in the course of the debate that we had today. The reason that we are not spending Social Security is because we made a conscious decision, a deliberate decision as a matter of principle that the people who work hard in this country and pay the FICA tax, the payroll tax, ought to have some assurance that those dollars are going to go into their retirement security. And so we made that conscious decision a very long time ago. And in order to be able to do that, to ensure that we were not raising Social Security as we have been doing, as the Congress has been doing for a good number of years, we had to come up with a way in which to make sure that all the important priorities of this Federal Government get funded. And so we decided that the best way to do that would be to accomplish the savings through a 1 percent across-the-board reduction, or a 1 percent across-the-board savings, if you will, by giving the agencies of the Federal Government a mandate and a mission to find 1 percent, 1 percent in waste, fraud and abuse within their respective agencies in order that we could keep our commitment to the seniors of this country, to the young people of this country who day in and day out roll up their sleeves, go to work, work very, very hard to pay the taxes, knowing that someday, hoping that they will be able then to collect that and to provide a secure retirement for themselves and for their family.

I think that in listening again to the debate today, I think the other side is profoundly confused about what it is they want to do because again they were attacking us for saying, again which we are not, that we were going to dip into Social Security and yet at the same time lambasting a 1 percent across-the-board savings in all the Federal budget as gutting all these programs; that somehow this is going to take away from the families of this country, and the only conclusion I could draw from listening to that was that either they think we are spending too much or they think we are not spending enough. And I am not sure which it is, but I think their side was very confused in this debate today, and I think for our side, Mr. Speaker, the issue is very, very simple.

It is really a matter of whether or not we are going to ensure and insist upon the commitment that we made that Social Security taxes go into the Social Security Trust Fund and are used, are reserved, there for the retirement security of the American working public; and until that time happens, we continue to pay down the Federal debt, which is another priority that we have made for a long time.

Now just out of there is a chart here, and I am not a big one for using charts, but in the event that anyone out there is confused by what has been happening here in Washington the last few years, this illustrates very clearly the raid, if you will, on the Social Security Trust Fund, the amount of money that has been spent out of that fund over the course of the last 15 years or so. It totals almost $638 billion as a whole lot of money that has come out of the Social Security Trust Fund and has been used by the Federal Government to pay for the costs of other Federal programs.

We said categorically that has to stop. As a matter of principle, it is wrong for this country, this government, to collect money from people which they expect to go into a retirement fund that will be there when they retire and then have those dollars used to fund other areas of the Federal budget.

And I guess my big problem with the whole notion of the way that the Federal Government operates is there is a good amount of call it waste, fraud, and abuse in the Federal Government, and I certainly believe, and I think the American people believe, I think anybody in my State of South Dakota would certainly concur, that anyone looking at the Federal budget closely could say, I think we can find 1 percent. I think on a dollar of Federal spending we can find one penny in savings. One penny is all we are saying to the Federal Government.

It is, tighten up a little bit. Let us just see if we can find one penny in savings out of the entire Federal budget, the discretionary side of it. If all we do, if we can just save one penny, it will allow us to honor our commitment to the seniors of this country and to again the people who work hard every day to pay the payroll tax, and we do not have to do this any more.

I think the best part and what I like about this graph the most is what happens in 1999 when it goes down to zero, and that is what we were able to do today with the votes that we took. We made a commitment. We have passed 13 separate appropriations bills. We have passed them in a way that does not violate our commitment to the American people, that enables us to honor that commitment to protect Social Security and still keeps the government running.

Now all you heard today from the other side again was it is going to cut this or this or this and the usual suspects that are always mentioned. But the reality is whether it is defense, whether it is education, whether it is law enforcement, we spend in this budget, what we passed today and what we have already sent down to the President, more on those priorities than what the President had proposed in the first place even after we trim one cent out of every dollar.

Now we all talked about this the other day. There certainly are ways that we can find a penny in savings, whether it is in the area of foreign travel that has been mentioned, some of the trips.

I mean, the President may have to reduce the number of people who travel with him, 1,700 to Africa, 800 on another trip; and it is only, as my colleagues know, a small percentage of savings really that we are talking about. And you look at some of the things that the Federal dollars have been spent for, the 26,000 people who are deceased who received $8.5 million in food stamps, according to the Committee on the Budget. Those who have collected SSI payments illegally, and there is a convicted murderer who received more than $75,000 in SSI disability payments during his 14 years on death row; and of course the one I like the best, Mr. Speaker, is the million dollars that we had to spend for the outhouse at Glacier National Park. The people who have to walk 6½ miles, up 7,000 feet to use an outhouse that was bought and paid for by the Federal Government.

Surely when it comes down to our sense of priorities, we ought to say to the American people that a million dollars for an outhouse versus a million dollars into a Social Security Trust Fund that will protect and safeguard the retirement security of Americans, it ought to be an easy choice for us.

And I think what happened today, unfortunately for those on the other side, is we took away in many respects their ability to spend, and we have said as a matter of principle Social Security should be protected, it should be safeguarded; and that hurts deeply, Mr. Speaker, for those who over the past 15 years have found it to be the Social Security Trust Fund and the Social Security surplus to be their sort of spending balloon.

Well, today we popped that balloon, and the American people are going to be better served as a result of that, and we have gone a long ways toward protecting and safeguarding the Social Security retirement dollars that the people in this country worked very, very hard for, worked very, very hard to pay; and I am very happy to report to the people in my State of South Dakota and to all the American public, all the taxpayers out there, that this was an important historic day here in Washington because we popped the spending balloon, the Social Security Trust Fund that has been raided for the last 15 years and said categorically it has got to stop here.

That is a principle with which I think the American people will agree, and I am proud that we were able to come up with the votes today in order to do that, and I would say to my friend from Texas and my friend from New Hampshire who have been leaders in this effort in the effort to bring Federal spending under control, to eliminate wasteful spending, to make sure that the American taxpayers are getting the very best return on their investment, that I appreciate the leadership that you all have taken for the opportunity to participate with you this evening in this discussion and again to reiterate to the American people that we want to make absolutely certain that the dollars that you pay from Mr. FICA actually are going into the Social Security Trust Fund.

This was indeed a historic day here in Washington and a day which I think again that the American people will be very much benefited from.

So with that, Mr. Speaker, I would yield back to my friend from Texas (Mr. SESSIONS) and indicate to him again that I appreciate his strong leadership on this subject.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. PEASE). Members are reminded that they are to direct their remarks to the Chair and not to those who may be viewing the proceedings of the House.

Mr. SESSIONS. I thank the speaker for the comments from the gentleman from South Dakota, his enunciation of what a great day and a great week this has been in Washington, D.C., a day when we can look the American public right in the eye and we can say that not only do we have a balanced budget, but the straight face comes when we say: and we did not spend your Social Security, your retirement future, in order to take claim for this balanced budget.

And it is a proud day for me. I came to Congress in 1996. I ran on a pledge that I felt like we not only should, could, but must, balance the budget, and that if we did not balance the budget that I promised that I would not accept a paycheck if we did not balance the budget.

So we balanced the budget, we stick to what we said we would do, but now with a straight face we can say:

And, America, we are no longer taking from your retirement future.

What is interesting, as we approach this time, is that we have heard the gentleman from South Dakota (Mr. THUNE) talk about ideas which we have as Republicans about how the President, and this administration and our colleagues on the other side of the aisle can view this as an opportunity and a challenge, a challenge not only for America, but we have taken on the challenge ourselves as Members of Congress.

We have stated that we will as management of the country, we will accept a 1 percent reduction this next year in our paychecks. We had a vote on it this evening. Most Members voted for it. Of course it passed. But this 1 percent reduction in our paychecks, that would go to something as important as not only securing America's future with saving Social Security, but by making sure we do it immediately and keep the trend that we just started for the first time of not spending Social Security dollars in 39 years.

So, it is a historic day, it is an opportunity; but I know that you have many things on your plate that you would like to talk about that are great opportunities, good ideas for this administration and the American public to hear from us about great ideas to find this 1 percent in savings that we are going to challenge the government to do.

Mr. BASS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Texas for yielding, and he certainly is right. The concept that you cannot find one penny in every dollar in a fiscal year is ludicrous. I would suggest that every State in the Nation on occasion is forced to find far more than 1 cent on every dollar because, unlike the Federal Government, they have to balance their budgets every single year.

I would also point out that you will hear discussion amongst the minority and the majority about whether or not we, as Republicans with our plan, are using Social Security surpluses or not. You realize that this argument has gotten down now to the point where we are having a fight between OMB and CBO, whether their predictions are right, whether we use OMB numbers or CBO numbers.

Well, when you are talking about the difference between the President's proposal to put 60 percent of the surplus aside versus the Republican's successful effort at putting 100 percent of the Social Security surplus aside, I really do not think that the key issue is whether or not the numbers come from CBO or OMB, and I am not even going to tell you what they stand for, Mr. Speaker, because I do not really think it makes a big difference.

Let me also point out for those who say that a 1 percent cut will result in unacceptable reductions in spending in critical programs, let me point out that even after the 1 percent cut, across-the-board cut, the Republican plan spends $265.1 billion on defense versus the President's proposal for $263 billion. $265, $263; we spent more. On education we spend $34.8 billion versus the President's proposed $34.7. On education, Mr. Speaker, on education. After the 1 percent cut, the Republican appropriations spends $34.8 billion, the President's $34.7 on education. And on crime fighting the GOP spends $3.25 billion versus the President's $2.8 billion.

Now what about this 1 percent across-the-board cut that we cannot find a single dollar? Well, I have here a document put out by Citizens Against Government Waste entitled "Prime Cuts 1999," and I would suggest that every Cabinet member and everybody in the administration take an opportunity to read this book because there are plenty of suggestions which total well in excess, well in excess, of 1 percent.

Some of the more interesting proposals that I have seen come across my desk in the last couple of days are, and let me give you a couple of examples. Perhaps we could eliminate a subsidy of $850,000 to a well-known ice cream company in a State adjacent to mine which they received from the Federal Government to distribute their product in Russia, as if it is not cold enough in Russia for them to produce their own ice cream or that this particular company cannot find the resources to develop its own advertising campaign.

Or how about delays, administrative delays, in the disposing of more than 41,000 HUD properties that are costing taxpayers in this country a million dollars a day? Or how about a government audit that recently found that Federal agencies were simply unable to account for $800 billion, $800 billion in government assets? And I can go on and on, page after page, and I think that the American people find it pretty ludicrous to believe, Mr. Speaker, that no Federal agency can cut 1 percent from their budget.

So again, I think this is a reasonable proposal, and I am proud that this body has taken it upon itself to pass it and send it down to the White House.

Mr. SESSIONS. This one percent that the gentleman is talking about equals about $3.5 billion, and what we are talking about is $3.5 billion that it will take to where we ask the Government if they will find the 1 percent savings; once again, 1 cent out of a dollar. It would be in what we call discretionary funds. It would not come from Social Security, would not come from Medicare, would not come from Medicaid, but directly from the things that we know of, Mr. Speaker, government programs.

□ 1900

This 1 percent that we are after, one penny, has a very auspicious background and history, because what we are talking about in Washington now is not hundreds of billions, which is our past history from when Republicans took control of this Congress, but rather now down to $3.5 billion.

What I would like to do is go through what is 30 years of Congressional overspending, 30 years worth of Democrat control, going back to when we first put a man on the Moon back in 1969. That is when it started.

This chart here represents deficits that the government has overspent. In other words, the money that was coming in was overspent. We spent more money than what the Treasury brought in. Back in 1994, when Ross Perot and other people who stood up and talked about it, whether they be Independents in this country or whether they be Republicans, they talked about that at some point this was going to become so large that we could never turn it around; that the critical mass would be so large, and we needed to place an emphasis on doing something about this, that is when I signed the Contract with America.

The Contract with America directly addressed what we were talking about. It said if Republicans were given an opportunity, we would quit what was ahead in our future of having $300 billion deficits, of spending 100 percent of every Social Security dollar, that we would stop that and within 7 years balance the budget, and the American public heard us and they believed us.

So we got elected, and we came into control of the House and the Senate at that time. And what has happened? Our track record is nothing less than marvelous. We have gone from $300 billion a year deficits, to now we have celebrated, as you see here on this chart, we have gone to surpluses. We went to surpluses because we cut taxes and we were able to say no to spending. We were able to have some fiscal responsibility, some restraint, the opportunity to make wise and prudent decisions on behalf of ourself and the American public.

Mr. BASS. If the gentleman will yield, would you be willing to point to the place at which on that chart the control of Congress changed from the minority to the majority, the Republicans? Where is it on that chart?

Mr. SESSIONS. I would be pleased to show the gentleman. As a matter of fact, that is the deciding point that you will see that is right here. That is where the lowest point, the highest deficits took place, right here. Since that time the Congress, year after year after year, has had a debate, a discussion, that has been very lively, and I will tell you it has gotten hot and very heated here on this floor. And repeatedly people stood up and said we are trying to do things that we are being asked by people at home to do. We are trying to do things that pass the smell test, to where we can look at the American public and say we have something in mind. And what in mind we had was that we should not put further debt upon ourself or our children and their future generations.

This proves then we now have a surplus. What we had to do is get to the point where we could wean ourself away from Social Security. We have discussed it, the American people have discussed it, the President has discussed it.

What happened that we received information on about 2 weeks ago was that for the first time in 39 years we have found out that not one penny of Social Security went to fund the government. For the first time in 39 years.

So I would like to go from this chart of spending to this chart of the history of the Social Security raid. As you see here, back in 1983 it really began. We began on a yearly basis of taking 80, 90 billion dollars, and taking what was the surplus in Social Security, what was given because people had to give the government their money, with the understanding that government had some fiduciary responsibility to take care of this. In fact, what has happened is all this money has gone into what was called a Social Security trust fund.

Well, I would submit to you that this trust fund is smoke and mirrors, because in fact all of the money has been spent, it is all gone, and the American public knows this, $638 billion. So the 27 years worth of Social Security that I have paid in and the 27 years worth of Social Security that my wife has paid in, and gosh knows how many years that my parents worked, probably 50 years, they are now counting on a system that essentially is counting on us today to pay for their retirement, rather than putting the money in where it is supposed to be, allowing it to grow with interest, not spending it today, but doing what is prudent and wise, and that is waiting for a rainy day.

This is what we have ended. Now, after 39 years, Republicans have had the guts to stand up and say we are not only going to balance the budget, we are going to make sure that your future retirement is not spent in the process. That is exactly what we have done this week again.

Mr. BASS. If the gentleman will yield for a second, when I entered Congress in 1995 the administration submitted its first budget for the 104th Congress, and that budget had projected deficits for the 5-year period in excess, in excess, of $150 to $225 billion per year, not including, not including, the Social Security surplus.

So if you recall the table on the history of the Social Security fund and you notice how the purple goes up and up and up and suddenly drops down, had we not been able to cut a minimum of $300 billion out of projected spending over the last 4 years, that purple, that line would have skyrocketed, because, remember, the total amount of money since 1983 that has been spent on other programs and not gone into Social Security is about $638 billion.

Well, the surplus this year alone is in excess of $120 billion. So what we were really dealing with here was a problem where we were on the brink of a calamity in Social Security. It has stopped.

It is not going to be easy to fight this battle, but we are ahead at the present time because I think most Americans agree with the fact that we have made this commitment not to let this money get spent on other Federal programs.

Mr. SESSIONS. I thank the gentleman. I have a new board up here which really says exactly the good news that we have just received two weeks ago. What that says is that the Congressional Budget Office certifies that the Republican budget stopped the 39-year raid on Social Security and that the projected on budget surplus under Congressional scoring is $1 billion.

Mr. Speaker, what we are trying to do is say that everybody gets credit for this. We want the American public not to have their Social Security spent. And what has been the response back has been, oh, my gosh, it has almost been an accusation. "The Republicans' key goal is not to spend the Social Security surplus. Those mean Republicans, they do not want to spend the Social Security surplus."

Thank you, Mr. Podesta. You are right. You have got it. Give us credit. Give us credit for that which we are doing. And you have done that.

But, Mr. Speaker, there is more. And the more to that is this: It is what we must do now is to make wise and prudent decisions about how we are going to repeat this task that we have started. We want to repeat it so that we make sure that on a going-forward basis, that we understand on an up-front basis that we are not ever, ever, never, going to spend the Social Security surplus to fund this government. It is the retirement of millions of Americans who gave that money, gave the money to the government with the understanding that they would have a secure Social Security retirement system in place and available to them.

So here is what we are doing in Washington right now. We are trying to devise a budget and finalize that budget and have the President sign that budget with some very important components.

First of all, it will be a balanced budget. Second of all, it will mean that we want to lock away, not use, Social Security. After passing 13 bills, which we have done today, we recognize that we are now down to about $3.5 billion over what we would have wanted. But after these months of work it is hard to add up where it will all be. Now that we see what the final answer is, we realize we are $3.5 billion over. But a bill to spend Social Security we were advised two weeks ago by Majority Leader DICK ARMEY would not be allowed to be on the floor of the House of Representatives. So recognizing that, it was important for Republicans to put forth a plan that we made sure would deal correctly and fairly and honestly with the American public, and that is where we came up with what is known as the 1 percent savings solution.

What we are trying to do is we are trying to say that in the future, next year, we are going to ask out of every dollar that is given to this administration for discretionary funds, that out of every dollar that would be given to the administration, that we would like them to find a savings of one penny. This is exactly what Americans do at home. This is exactly what Americans do when they sit around their table and they talk about their budget every month.

To assume that government would be immune from the same type of problem that Americans run into, because it is all Americans together that could have this problem, to assume that we could not forthrightly come up with an answer, that we could not honestly look government right in the eye and say, "What will you do to participate?" I consider it a challenge.

If I worked in the administration, I would say, "I think this is a great opportunity for us to look inward." If I were a government employee working for this administration, or a career employee, I wonder how many of them, how many times these employees have come up with great ideas about how to make their government programs or their job to work more effectively or more efficiently, and I wonder how many times they floated ideas up the chain of command that would say how can we save money? Where is a good idea? What can we do to help out?

Well, today this Republican Congress is challenging those millions of government workers, we are challenging the administrators, we are challenging the cabinet officers, and, yes, we are challenging this administration and our President. For, you see, we believe that saving Social Security and not spending one penny is the most important thing that we can do for our people this year.

So, we are challenging government. We are challenging its employees. We are challenging this administration. Please go look inwardly. Look at your own budgets. Look at what you are going to do starting with this new budget that starts in about 3 or 4 days. Go find those things where you can save one penny out of a dollar. Put those things in place, implement them, and then we will make sure that we are not stealing from the retirement for our future.

This is what this gets down to. This is what it is all about. And the gentleman from New Hampshire I am sure has lots of more ideas about how we can challenge this government to provide them information.

Mr. BASS. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the gentleman from Texas for yielding to me.

I will conclude my observations about where we stand today by making an observation about the debate that occurred recently in my home State of New Hampshire between the two candidates running for the nomination for president on the Democratic side. They were both trying to outliberal each other.

It was interesting to me to see how, when Mr. GORE accused Mr. Bradley of having a health care plan that would use up the entire surplus, the entire surplus, he was also talking about it using up the entire social security surplus, too.

Vice President GORE expressed sadness that Mr. Bradley, Senator Bradley's health care proposal would not leave money for him to propose other new spending initiatives.

So Mr. Speaker, I think this debate that we are having this year is a healthy debate. The differences between the Republicans and the Democrats are clear, concise, and understandable.

I know that they are committed to their ideals, but when we came to power in Congress in 1995, we set, as our goals, goals that would not necessarily be satisfying every interest group at home, goals that would not be spending more money without any accountability. The goals that we established were the goals that may not get newspaper headlines, but what they were were the goals of achieving a balanced budget, which we have done; the goals of attempting to take the trust funds off-budget, which we have done with the Highway Trust Fund and we have done with social security, we hope, and at least from my perspective to do with the aviation trust fund; and we paid down in excess of $50 billion in debt in the last fiscal year.

I know that with the $120 billion plus that we are taking off-budget, we also will pay down that amount in public debt. We will, as Republicans, put this Federal Government on an even fiscal keel as we move into the 21st century. Although they are not traditionally the platforms that garner tremendous public support, we have the interests of this Nation in the 21st century at heart. I know and believe that the American people support what we have tried to do over the last 4 years, and will support us in years to come.

I want to thank my friend, the gentleman from Texas, for having taken this time to discuss this issue which is so important not only to working families and to seniors, but for those that believe that this country should be as strong in the 21st century for my children and my children's children as it has been for my father and my mother and my grandparents.

I thank the gentleman for giving me the opportunity to participate in this dialogue.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from New Hampshire, who is a very proud part of the things that we are doing in Washington.

As I go to close here tonight, I want to summarize that this has been an invigorating week, 2 weeks that we have had in Washington, where we have learned officially that for the first time in 39 years, the budget of the United States did not use social security by which to fund government operations, and that in fact it has been a good thing not only for taxpayers and people on social security, but it has reinvigorated us here in Washington to recognize that this should not be a battle between Republicans and Democrats, but what it has done is opened up a new door, a new opportunity, a new challenge for Members of Congress to recognize that if we work together, that not only can we continue to ensure that we do not spend social security, but that we do those things that are good for the fiscal soundness of our country.

I would like to end today with a challenge, not only to my Republican colleagues but also to my friends on the other side, to come join me in what we call the Results Caucus. It is a bipartisan group of Members who work together to make sure that we can find and weed out those areas of government spending, those areas of government spending that fall under waste, fraud, and abuse.

I would like to read to not only my colleagues on the Democrat side but also have the opportunity for those who are listening tonight to hear what the Results Caucus is. Here is my basic philosophy:

The Federal Government has many good intentions. Intent is not the issue, effectiveness is the issue. Washington spends billions of dollars every day trying to help in people's lives, but no one knows whether or not these programs actually work.

Americans work hard for their income. They pay a lot, in fact, too much, in taxes. I say it is immoral for the national government to spend one dollar, one tax dollar, on a program that does not work and does not help achieve its stated objective. If a program is not working, then it should be reformed or cut, with the savings returned directly to the taxpayer.

That is what the Results Caucus is all about. We are trying to work to find these savings. I think that this opportunity that we have had to speak tonight is not only invigorating to Republicans, but it is an opportunity, a fair way to give this administration and all Federal workers an understanding and a challenge that we need them to work carefully as a challenge to reduce, for every dollar that they will be given to spend, to reduce by 1 cent.

The Results Caucus has a wonderful saying. It is this, that every single dollar that this government needs it should get, but not a penny more.

I thank the Speaker for staying late this evening. I want to thank the Speaker and my colleagues who have been part of what we have done tonight.

PRIVACY AND H.R. 10

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 6, 1999, the gentleman from Washington (Mr. INSLEE) is recognized for 60 minutes as the designee of the minority leader.

Mr. INSLEE. Mr. Speaker, tonight we are going to have an opportunity to talk about privacy and H.R. 10, the financial institution reform bill.

Before we do that, I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. MINGE), who will address social security from perhaps a little different perspective.

Mr. MINGE. I would like to thank the gentleman from Washington for yielding to me, Mr. Speaker.

I was very interested in the discussion that preceded this, the comments that were made, especially in closing, about the Results Caucus. I have worked on a bipartisan basis over the last 4 years with my colleague, the gentleman from California (Mr. ROYCE) in what is called the Porkbuster Caucus. We have tried to focus on waste, fraud, and abuse, especially on pork barrel projects that have been found in appropriations bills and other bills.

It is fortunate, I think, that several of the Committee on Appropriations subcommittees have made a real attempt to eliminate earmarked projects and pork barrel projects, especially the Subcommittee on Transportation, but that does not mean that we have come to the millennium. We still have these pork barrel projects. We still have earmarks that cannot be justified.

Unfortunately, in the bill that was passed today we had some of those projects. No lesser legislative leader than the majority leader in the Senate has projects that he has brought home to his State of Mississippi which cost this country hundreds of millions of dollars, and unfortunately, also cost money from the programs that are affected by the cuts that were in the legislation today.

I would like to focus for just a few minutes about this discussion on social security. As I listened to the preceding discussion, I thought of the phrase from Shakespeare, "The lady doth protest too much, methinks."

It appeared that there was so much protestation that there was nothing that would be borrowed from the social security trust fund for current expenditures in the fiscal year 2000 that I thought it worth probing that presentation for a few moments.

The first thing that I think is interesting to note is that the Congressional Budget Office itself, in a letter dated today, one copy of which was addressed to me but another copy of which was addressed to the gentleman from Illinois (Speaker HASTERT), stated that, "With the passage of today's legislation, we will be borrowing $17 billion from the social security trust fund surplus for fiscal year 2000 in order to cover expenses." That is $17 billion.

Now, Members may say, how could we have the presentation for 40 minutes claiming that we were not borrowing anything, and then have a letter like this from the Congressional Budget Office?

Well, probably, the most important things to remember are that, number one, there were emergency spending measures in some of the appropriations bills. There has been an attempt to disregard those. There has been so-called directed scoring in some of the appropriations bills. There has been an attempt to disregard that. Finally, there has been an attempt to push certain expenditures into the subsequent fiscal year for projects and activities that are undertaken in the current fiscal year.

If we had an accrual basis accounting system here, this kind of a trick would not work. Really, what it is important to recognize is that we have a return to smoke and mirrors.

I think most Americans remember that in the 1980s and early 1990s we had this ongoing battle between the White House and Congress as to how the money was being spent. There was this duplicitous effort to try to justify certain budgets that were being presented by claiming that these budgets were going to balance at the end of the year, or in 2 or 3 years we were going to eliminate the deficit.

But what happened is we were not using realistic numbers. So finally, an element of real discipline was introduced into the congressional budget process by requiring that Congress use the Congressional Budget Office as its sole source of its budget numbers, rather than picking and choosing favorable numbers from the Congressional Budget Office, or CBO, and then favorable budget numbers from the Office of Management and Budget, or OMB, and then favorable budget numbers from other sources.

So this particular quotation is important to recognize, because what it is saying is if you use consistent budget numbers from the impartial Congressional Budget Office, you end up with a $17 billion deficit. If you use numbers from the Office of Management and Budget when they are favorable and the Congressional Budget Office when it is favorable, then you can sort of jerry-rig this situation, and you can avoid most of that $17 billion, and then you use other gimmicks, and you can try to eliminate the $17 billion.

So the protestation here that there is not a penny being touched is misleading. It is duplicitous. What we need to be forthright about is to just recognize that if we rely on the Congressional Budget Office, we are borrowing $17 billion.

What should we do about it? Today I and three of my colleagues introduced legislation after the final vote on this most recent bill to assure the people of the country that if in fact we are borrowing $17 billion or $1 billion or $25 billion, whatever the number might be, if we are borrowing that from social security, in fiscal year 2000 we repay that $17 billion or whatever the figure is from the first available surplus in fiscal year 2001. That is our bill, stripped to its essence.

I challenge my colleagues on the Republican side to join me in passing this bill promptly, because it is an enforcement device. It is there to put some discipline into this budget process, and to say that we are making this commitment to the American people with respect to the next fiscal year, that we will restore that money before we use it for tax cuts, before we use it for other spending programs, before we use it for any other purpose.

I had hoped that we would have bipartisan support for this bill when I introduced it, but apparently it was too stiff a medicine for the folks on the other side. I thought it a simple bipartisan enforcement approach that ought to be welcomed by everyone.

So in the days ahead, I will be talking to my colleagues on both sides of the aisle and urging that we get together so that at least this little nasty problem that continues to haunt us is addressed.

Mr. INSLEE. Mr. Speaker, this evening I would like to address the House concerning, I think, a very important emerging issue, emerging because of tremendous consolidation in our financial services industry and emerging because of people's rightful concern about their personal privacy.

This personal privacy issue is one I think that has exploded on us because we have found, unfortunately, that there are various businesses that are consciously violating Americans rights of personal privacy. Let me give my colleagues just a little small example, because I am going to talk about financial services industries in an abstract, but I just want to tell my colleagues a little story, a little story about personal privacy and what happens when it is not respected.

I was talking to this Member who was telling me that he just had heart surgery, and because of that heart surgery, he was on a blood thinner drug called Coumadin, which is fine, and it saved his life, and he is doing quite well.

But about 30 days after he started on this regimen of Coumadin, lo and behold, he gets a solicitation in the mail from this company to buy some product about how to monitor his Coumadin. Someone somewhere, some business, for some profit motive had violated his personal rights of privacy by telling some strange company he had never heard of that one of our fellows was a good target to try to sell some product.

If companies can violate the privacy rights of Members of Congress, imagine what is going on to our constituents. Unfortunately, a lot of bad things are happening to our constituents when it comes to personal privacy rights.

Now, what brought us here tonight is the emerging consideration next week by the Chamber of H.R. 10, the Financial Modernization Act. For those who are not familiar with this, the Financial Modernization Act will, for the first time in the American economy, give free reign to banks to affiliate with hundreds of other types of financial institutions, insurance companies, brokerage houses, securities businesses. As we know, for many, many years, they have been prohibited from doing so.

Many Members, myself included, believe that there are a lot of benefits to be had by allowing some consolidation in the industry. But we are very, very concerned, Mr. Speaker, that if that bill passes in the form that has been reported out of the conference committee, that what will be left out almost lock, stock, and barrel is the protection of consumers' privacy when banks essentially merge with insurance companies and merge with security houses and merge with stockbrokers.

Let me tell my colleagues why we are concerned. There is a very significant infection going on when it comes to personal privacy in this country. I would like to alert to the House some of the things that have been going on, some we read about in the newspapers, some we learn about just talking to our constituents.

I just want to read a story, a first paragraph from the Los Angeles Times this September, "A San Fernando Valley bank sold a convicted felon 90 percent of the credit card numbers he allegedly used to run up $45.7 million in mostly bogus charges against consumers worldwide, according to interviews and court documents filed Friday. Charter Pacific Bank, which has made millions by processing credit card transactions for adult entertainment firms, provided Kenneth H. Thaves of Malibu more than 3.7 million card numbers compiled from its merchants accounts, according to a report filed in U.S. District Court in Los Angeles."

Here we had, according to the Los Angeles Times, an instance where a bank violated its Members' rights of privacy and sold thousands of their credit card numbers to somebody who then, in a fraudulent scheme, ran up credit card charge numbers.

But this was not an isolated act. We go to Minnesota where, just recently, a lawsuit was settled between the Attorney General of the State of Minnesota and U.S. Bankcorp where U.S. Bankcorp agreed, according to news accounts, to give $3 million to the States and charities because they apparently supplied telemarketing firm Member Works, Inc. of Stanford, Connecticut with its customers' names, Social Security numbers, marital status, occupation, account balances, homeownership status, and credit limits against the privacy rights of its own customers.

Imagine how one would feel or anyone in this Chamber would feel if we were told that, against our wishes, in fact, a bank had given our credit card numbers or our account information, in fact, to some third party, and they end up telemarketing a product to us.

All of us, it seems to me, have some reasonable expectation that the amount of money in our bank accounts is not going to be spread to the world, that who we write checks to is not going to be told to telemarketing agencies. That is a reasonable American expectation of privacy. But, unfortunately, that is not being honored, not by all banks.

Many banks, in fact, are honoring people's privacy. There are thousands of banks that are being responsible, corporate citizens that are honoring our privacy rights. But we are having some that are not.

Mr. Speaker, it comes down to a very personal basis when I learn about some things that have happened in my own State of Washington. I just want to read a couple personal accounts of complaints registered by the Washington State Attorney General's office about some real life stories that happen in my State.

Here is a woman from Royal City, Washington, a nice small town in eastern Washington. She says, after receiving a phone call from a telemarketing agency and telling them that she was not interested in their product, an experience many of us have two or three times a night now, unfortunately, she says, "In May, I was billed $59.95 on a my U.S. Visa credit card. Because I do not use the card, I was shocked. I phoned the Field & Stream Club, but they refused to cancel the membership. They were unable, however, to find a record of a request for a membership. How could they bill my credit card when I did not give them my number or authorize a purchase?"

"I called U.S. Bank to file a complaint and cancel the credit card. The bank representative admitted that the bank had given out my unlisted phone number and banking information. She said it was a credit card 'enhancement' program. I am extremely angry that my bank, I have been a customer for 25 years, sold my private information. I have been scammed by both the U.S. Bankcorp and the Field & Stream Club."

Her anger I think was properly placed, because Americans ought to have the statutory right to block their banks from giving away their account information to telemarketers who can turn around and call us at 7 o'clock at night and try to sell us a product, frankly, that we do not want. This ought to be an American right. We have got a freedom of speech in this country. We have got freedom of religion. We ought to have freedom from interference in our private information in our bank accounts.

But she is not alone. A lady from Kent, Washington, saying she got a charge on her Visa bill statement. She says, "I do not know how they could have gotten my Social Security number or even my address. This telemarketing thing seems to be a big rip-off and probably targeted senior citizens. I am 83 years old but still checking on all my billings. Thank goodness I never signed up or ordered anything from these people. And how did they get my Visa card number?"

A letter from a man in Port Angeles, Washington, "It all started when we received our normal Visa, but with an entry in the amount of $59.95 from Encore Travel Club. I did not authorize this company for this service, nor could I understand how they received my Visa account number."

Well, the reason the gentleman could not understand it is he would have the assumption that his bank would not give away his private financial information. But, unfortunately, the law does not protect the man from Port Angeles, the lady from Kent, or the lady from Royal City. It does not protect Americans adequately.

Mr. Speaker, the bad news is that, if H.R. 10, the financial modernization bill, passes, we have this chance of going backwards on privacy, not forwards. I would like to share with the House why that is. We have the distinct chance of going backwards on privacy, because this bill, while it has, at least at first blush, some attempt to protect privacy rights of citizens, it has at least some language that would say that banks will not be able to sell or give away private financial information to what are called third parties. That means companies that are not associated in some way with the bank, which is by and large a good thing.

There are two huge loopholes one can drive a bank truck through in this particular draft of the conference report. I want to address the House on what those two giant loopholes are.

Loophole number one, which is too big to call a loophole, we really ought to call it a canyon or something, is that these privacy protections give consumers exactly zero right to tell their banks not to give away their private information to anything that is considered an "affiliate" of the bank. Now, this is a little technical for some folks, but let me try to explain what this means.

This means that, while the bill might prevent a bank from giving this information to a telemarketer if the customer said not to, it would simply allow the bank to affiliate with the telemarketing company or with an insurance company or with a stock brokerage company or with a securities firm.

This bill, as presently allowed, presently drafted would allow any bank, against the wishes, against the specific statement of a customer who told the bank do not give away my credit card, do not give away my account information, it would allow the bank to give it to its affiliated insurance company. Against the wishes of us, it would allow the insurance company to make a call at 7 o'clock at night to try to sell them a good insurance product.

It would allow the computers, which are tremendous, I think computers are one of the best things that ever happened, but, unfortunately, in this case, it would allow banks to do computer profiling of us as Americans. That means that they can set up a computer profile with their associated stock brokering company that says, any time one has got $10,000 in cash, John Q. Citizen, when the computer sees he has got $10,000 in cash, spit that name over to our stock company and allow the stock brokerage company to call John Q. Citizen and try to sell them a stock because they happen to have $10,000 on hand.

It allows the computers to profile us on our purchasing habits. If we happen to go to sports stores and buy sporting goods products, it allows our bank against our wishes to violate our privacy, to have that computer profile us and give information to an affiliated company that might have some sporting goods activity associated with it.

It basically says that we are going to prevent the sin of violating privacy to a third party, but allow the sin of violating privacy to an affiliate. Why is this important? It may not be so important right now where today the law prevents banks from affiliating with other companies. But next week, if this became law, it will bring down the shields and allow the banks to affiliate with hundreds or thousands of other financial services enterprises. My colleagues and I both know that those market-driven folks will be most eager, anxious, looking forward to the opportunity to get into our bank accounts and use the information in our private bank accounts against us to try to sell us products.

So, Mr. Speaker, if this were to pass, I do not think it is a fear, I think it is a fact that we will see an increase in telemarketing activity, using information in our own lives, in essence, against us.

It did not have to be this way, Mr. Speaker. This bill can be drafted in such a way that could prevent these marketing activities, that could allow these affiliates to offer us the services we want. We can draft the bill very easily to say, as long as the consumer wants these services, it would allow the affiliated companies to provide them.

But I stand here to say that Americans ought to have the right to say no to bank telemarketing activity with their affiliates, that Americans ought to have the simple right to write a letter or e-mail or fax or, when one signs up with one's account, check the box that says do not give away my private information.

I do not think that's too much to ask. This is a huge bill, Mr. Speaker, as we are all aware. This is one of the more significant bills we will have during this Congress, and I am convinced there is a lot of good that can happen as a result of it.

I think that many financial institutions have been very candid and sincere with us; that they can help provide Americans with some good services as a result of these consolidations. But, unfortunately, while we do that, we should not, at the same time, allow the sin of violating our privacy to continue. We have to make sure that we stop that.

So what we need to do, if in fact this bill comes to the floor, and I am told there is still some dispute in the conference committee about this language because it is so controversial, and should be, but if it comes to the floor we should send the conferees back to work. We should send the conferees back to work and tell them to come back when they give Americans protection against privacy right violations of bank affiliates. And that is something the House could do and should do.

I want to talk about a second giant loophole in the bill. We have not seen the specific language as yet. We are told the conferees are still thrashing this out. And I hope if any of them are possibly listening to this they will continue to thrash to come up with some better language, because there is a loophole in section 2. I am looking for the section now, which is on page 3. Basically, this exception to the prohibition would allow banks to even give information to a third party as long as it was essentially associated with anything called a "joint agreement." A joint agreement.

Well, I guess a joint agreement could be the two presidents of the company shaking hands and saying, "We are going to start to computer profile our customers and we are going to telemarket the heck out of them, and we are both going to do pretty well on this deal." That is a "joint agreement." But that joint agreement is closer to kind of a joint conspiracy to violate somebody's privacy. And that is another loophole that has to be closed if we are going to go forward with H.R. 10. It is a simple thing to do, it will allow banks to pursue their duties, and we ought to do it.

I want to come back to a point perhaps I made a little earlier, and that is that it is very important not to paint all banks with the same brush with the kind of things I have been talking about tonight. There are many banks, and I have talked to many banks in my community, community banks who are very socially responsible. I have talked to a lot of bankers, particularly small town bankers, who have built banks on the trust of their communities, who have told me they are angry at some of their bigger brethren, frankly, for violating people's privacy, for exposing them to the ridicule of Congress and the American public on this subject.

Because those bankers understand very clearly that banks really are built on trust and that they do damage to their relationship with their customers if they violate that sense of trust. I think we are going to see more, in fact I know there is one bank in the next week or two in the State of Washington that is going to announce policies that are essentially what we are proposing. We are proposing that Americans have the right to advise their banks to provide them banking services but not to allow the use of those banking services for marketing purposes against them by some other affiliate or third party. That should not be too much to ask.

So, Mr. Speaker, in closing, I would like to say that we are on the cusp of a new dawn when it comes to financial services. We are at the eleventh hour, this is last chance we are going to have to ensure Americans their privacy. And while this bill, H.R. 10, may have sort of corralled one horse, the one horse that is involved in raiding our privacy, it has left 5 to 500 out of the corral. Because while it has helped on third-party privacy protection, it is going to create a whole new host of financial organizations. And they are going to be given the opportunity to violate our rights of privacy, to telemarket us at 7 o'clock at night.

Mr. Speaker, I am here to stand for any American in the next decade that gets a call at the dinner hour when they are trying to sell them a product using their checking account, their credit card, their Social Security number or other information. And I hope they do not call me at 6 o'clock to complain, because I am here tonight trying to get the U.S. Congress to prohibit that practice.

FURTHER MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A further message from the Senate by Mr. Lundregan, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed without amendment a joint resolution of the House of the following title:

H.J. Res. 73. Joint Resolution making further continuing appropriations for the fiscal year 2000, and for other purposes.

SECURITY ISSUES RELATING TO RUSSIA

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. FLETCHER). Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 6, 1999, the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. WELDON) is recognized for 60 minutes.

Mr. WELDON of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, as I have done frequently in the past, I want to just talk this evening about a situation that occurred in a hearing this week relative to our relations with Russia.

The last time I addressed this body it was to focus on a new direction in our relations with Russia, a new set of eight principles that the factions of the state Duma had agreed with, allowing us to continue to provide investment and economic opportunity in Russia but to set some new guidelines. That bill, which I dropped approximately one month ago, had 25 Democrat and 25 Republican sponsors when I introduced it. We have now gotten additional support and, in fact, we are hoping to continue to grow the kind of movement in the Congress that says that in spite of Russia's economic problems, we must still be engaged but be engaged in a different way.

I rise tonight, however, Mr. Speaker, to discuss a security issue relative to Russia based on a set of hearings that I have conducted on my subcommittee over the past 5 years. Two years ago, Mr. Speaker, I had the highest ranking GRU defector ever from the former Soviet Union, Stanislav Lunev come before our Committee on Armed Services, and in a hearing that was open to the public, but in which hearing we had to hide his identity because he is in a witness protection program in this country, he testified about his role as a GRU agent and what his responsibilities were.

During that testimony, besides giving us an insight into the mindset of Soviet intelligence, he talked about what he thought may in fact continue to be some problems with our relationship with Russia today. One of the more troubling things that Lunev spoke of was when he was assigned to the Washington embassy of the former Soviet Union, under the cover of being a Tass correspondent, one of his primary responsibilities was to identify and locate potential sites for the drops and the location of sensitive Soviet military equipment and hardware that could be accessed in time of a conflict in the United States.

Now, we had no separate way of corroborating the testimony of Mr. Lunev at that time, yet these comments were made on the public record and were obviously of great concern to us. Well, this past summer something new happened, Mr. Speaker, and that was that the Cambridge scholar Christopher Andrew, who has written over 10 books, very scholarly books on intelligence operations around the world, and who has specialized in the intelligence of the former Soviet Union and the current practices of the current intelligence operations inside of Russia, Christopher Andrew was able to get access to a series of files that have been given to the British Government.

For 6 years he worked on the files in a way that allowed him to produce a book last month which was the basis of the hearing that I chaired. I want to go through that because the testimony of Christopher Andrew reinforces what Stanislav Lunev had said in our committee hearing 2 years prior. Some very troubling information came out of that, and there is, I think, reason for us to move quickly.

I have written to Secretary Albright and hope tonight to dwell upon why I think it is important for the administration to act on the findings of Christopher Andrew in his book.

It seems as though, Mr. Speaker, that the head archivist for the KGB files in Moscow for a period of over 20 decades by the name of Mitrokhin did not like the kind of activities the KGB was involved in in the Soviet era.

During his tenure as the chief archivist, there was a decision made in Moscow to relocate the central files of the KGB from downtown Moscow to one of the Ring Road sites. Since Mitrokhin was in charge of the archives, his job was to monitor these archives and always keep them under his control. In fact, he oversaw the move of the files had to be checked out of the Moscow site and then checked in at the new site, both of which were done by Mitrokhin and people who worked for him.

Now, he had been recognized during his career as an outstanding public servant in the Soviet Union. In fact in the book, there is a photograph of the documentation awarded to him signed by the chief of the KGB praising him for the outstanding work he did on behalf of the Soviet Union.

But because Mitrokhin privately did not like many of the practices of the KGB, especially those individual attacks on people and the attacks on ethnic groups, he secretly during his career of over 2 decades on a daily basis copied down in his own handwriting as many of the KGB files as he could. Each day during his tenure as the head archivist of the KGB, he would then place these handwritten notes inside of his clothing, would sneak them out of the KGB headquarters, and on a daily basis put them under the flooring of his dacha. He did this for a number of years, assembling a huge file of handwritten notes that basically were copied from the KGB archives.

In 1992, after the reforms took place in Russia, Mitrokhin emigrated through one the three Baltic states. He initially went to an American embassy and told them who he was and the kind of information he had. For some reason, he was not able to link up with the American Government to allow him to emigrate to the West. He then went to the British Embassy, and the Brits offered him complete asylum for himself and his family.

In fact, since 1992, he has been living along with his family under a secret identity in Great Britain. He brought the files with him, the handwritten notes that he had copied from the KGB archives.

Obviously, there was a huge wealth of information about actions that went on within the Soviet Union by their intelligence services. The Brits, when they got this cache of information, realized they had something that was invaluable because it gave the West the first complete insight into what kinds of actions and activities the KGB was involved in, what kinds of things against America and the West.

There were some other startling pieces of information in those files. The British Government, in getting these files, wanted them to be thoroughly examined, reviewed, and translated by someone that they had confidence in. And because of Christopher Andrew's reputation as a Cambridge scholar and Russian intelligence expert, they brought him in and gave him complete access to the Mitrokhin files.

For 6 years, Mr. Speaker, Mitrokhin on a regular daily basis met with Andrew and he and Christopher Andrew developed this publication which was released on the market in September of this year, just one month ago, entitled "The KGB Files: The Sword and the Shield, the Mitrokhin Archives and the Secret History of the KGB."

There is extensive documentation of what Mitrokhin found and the files that he was able to remove in his own handwritten notes. But, Mr. Speaker, I do not have time tonight to go into all the details the way the KGB manipulated the response in America to the J.F.K. assassination, the way the KGB attempted to manipulate the perceptions of the FBI here in our country. But all that is here in the book.

But there is one set of facts that I do want to focus on this evening because they involve the security of American people throughout this Nation.

Mr. Speaker, I am not satisfied with the response to date of what is contained in the files. In the files, Mr. Speaker, Mitrokhin spoke of the KGB during the Cold War era prelocating military hardware and equipment throughout Europe and throughout North America. These caches of weapons included transmitter technology, included in some cases detonating devices, in some cases included classified information about that country and its operations, and perhaps even included material that would be necessary for producing a weapon of mass destruction or perhaps even a weapon of mass destruction itself.

When Mitrokhin copied down the notes in this area, he could not copy down, because of time limitations and his own interest, every detailed location of every site in both Europe and North America because there were extensive amounts of sites all over the world, but he did document a few. But he also referenced locations throughout North America, many of which were in the United States where the KGB deliberately stored military materiel under the Earth in selected spots that were booby-trapped. These booby-trapped spots evidently are still in place today.

Now, when Mitrokhin in the archives gave this information to Christopher Andrew, who published this in his book, this reinforces, Mr. Speaker, what Stanislav Lunev told us 2 years ago, that the Soviet Union and the KGB had taken great efforts to preposition military hardware inside of our country's borders buried at specific locations that could be accessed by Soviet operatives if and when the time came for conflict with the Soviet Union.

These sites were also located throughout Europe and the European countries. In fact, in the Mitrokhin archives it was noted that many, if not most, of these sites were booby-trapped with bombs that would go off if someone attempted to dig up the cache of weapon materiel.

Mr. Speaker, at least two countries that I am aware of, in getting information from the Mitrokhin files, were able to get the exact locations of the sites that Mitrokhin copied down from the KGB files, Switzerland and Brussels. In each case, the governments of those two countries went to the exact sites identified in the KGB files as outlined in this book.

The exact locations marked off by landmarks above ground led the governments and the agents of both of these countries to sites where they dug down. In each case, the sites were booby-trapped.

In fact, following the Swiss excavation of the one site, the Swiss Government put out a warning to its citizens that if they were to encounter a similar site, they should not go near it because the bombing device that was used to protect the site of the Soviet weaponry was strong enough to kill a human being.

The Swiss Government and the Belgium Government dug up these sites, and exactly where the Mitrokhin files said they would be, they found the military hardware that the Soviet Union had placed there without those countries having any idea of what the Soviets had done.

Now, someone would consider that to be an act of provocation for a foreign government to specifically locate materiel that could be used for war on the territory of another country during time of peace. In fact, in the book, Mr. Speaker, there are photographs of the site in Switzerland where the digging was done, where the cache of weapons was located, and there are photographs of what the Swiss recovered from that site.

Mr. Speaker, I include for the RECORD a press release dated September 15, 1999.

[From the Agence France—Presse, Sept. 15, 1999]

KGB CACHES DISCOVERED IN BELGIUM

BRUSSELS, Sept. 15 (AFP)—Three secret depots used by the Soviet intelligence service, the KGB, have been discovered in Belgium, national papers reported Wednesday.

The caches were found in forests in the centre of the country, and contained radio sets dating from the late 1960s, according to Jos Colpin, spokesman for the Brussels prosecutor's office.

The location of the hiding-places was revealed in documents passed over to Britain in 1992 by the former KGB archivist Vasily Mitrokhin.

Those documents form the basis of a new book—the Mitrokhin Archives, by British academic Christopher Andrew, to be published shortly.

This press release is from Agence France-Presse, and the headline is "KGB Caches Discovered in Belgium." One month ago, Mr. Speaker. And this is what I read from Brussels. September 15 is the date. "Three secret depots used by the Soviet intelligence service, the KGB, have been discovered in Belgium, national papers reported Wednesday. The caches were found in forests in the center of the country and contained radio sets dating from the late 1960s, according to Jos Colpin, spokesman for the Brussels prosecutor's office. The location of the hiding places was revealed in documents passed over to Britain in 1992 by the former KGB archivist Vasily Mitrokhin. Those documents form the basis of a new book, 'The Mitrokhin Archives,' by British academic Christopher Andrew, to be published shortly."

Well, that book has since been published.

So now, Mr. Speaker, we not only have the testimony of Lunev 2 years ago that, in fact, his job as an agent in the Soviet Embassy here in Washington was to locate sites in America where weapons caches could be prelocated, now we have confirmed information that several of these sites have been located based on the Mitrokhin files in both Switzerland and Belgium.

The question then arises, what about the sites in the United States?

Now, after talking to Christopher Andrew at length and after talking to the highest ranking KGB defector ever from the Soviet Union, Oleg Gordievski, who I had flown over here this past Wednesday to also testify before my committee, we now have information that in the Mitrokhin files are references to a number of sites throughout the U.S. where similar caches of weapons and technology were stored by the Soviet Union underground in specifically marked locations.

In talking to Christopher Andrew personally and in the hearing, we questioned him at length about whether or not the specific sites were noted as they were noted in the case of the Swiss and the Belgium sightings of the KGB materials. Christopher Andrew said that, to the best of his ability, he went through the Mitrokhin files, the notes, and he could not find specific locations in America of the kind that were provided for Switzerland and Belgium.

Now, I also called in the FBI, Mr. Speaker, last week before Christopher Andrew came in; and I talked to Louis Freeh and asked him to send over some agents, which he did. On Wednesday of last week, I met with three FBI agents who focus on Russia; and I asked them if they were aware of the Mitrokhin files, and they said they were. They agreed it was a massive source of unbelievable data that allowed to us see the kind of activities that the KGB had been involved in.

I asked the FBI if they knew whether or not their ability to have access to the Mitrokhin files provided by the British intelligence service allowed the FBI to see specific locations, and they told me that it did not. They knew of the general locations. They knew that there were locations supposedly in Minnesota, someplace near Brainerd, Minnesota; in Montana; in New York, presumably by the harbor there; near a pipeline in Texas; near harbor installations in California, as well as a number of general sites throughout America.

Neither the FBI nor Christopher Andrew were able to give me specific locations where we could direct our military or the FBI to go in and conduct an expedition to actually dig up the equipment much in the way that the Swiss and the Belgians did.

Our military, Mr. Speaker, in a press conference that was held at the Pentagon last month, was also asked a question by a media reporter after the book came out, if our military had been advised or if they knew that there were caches of weapons and materials that had been stored in the United States without our knowledge as documented by the Mitrokhin files.

The military officer who was conducting the press conference said the military was aware of the book, aware of the Mitrokhin archives, but were not aware of any specific sites identified.

Mr. Speaker, at the hearing that occurred this past Wednesday, where I had Christopher Andrew himself and where I had Oleg Gordievski himself, the highest ranking KGB defector from Russia ever who in fact was the KGB London chief who ran that office there, and who worked in the KGB for decades, both of them unequivocally, emphatically said there is no doubt, no doubt whatsoever in their minds that the Soviets stored military equipment and hardware throughout the United States at installations that their agents dug up, placed this equipment underground, that this equipment was probably booby-trapped and it included not just telemetry equipment, not just radio equipment but probably included material that could be used for weapons, detonation equipment or perhaps even material involving weapons of mass destruction.

So now, Mr. Speaker, we have three people. We have Stanislav Lunev who 2 years ago said his job as an agent in Washington was to locate sites, in fact he said they were out in the Shenandoah Valley and in suburban Washington that he specifically went to to point out to his superiors back in Moscow, locations where the Soviets could drop materials, military materials, materials that could be accessed by Soviet agents. This past Wednesday, we have two other individuals, Gordievski, the KGB defector, and Christopher Andrew who has worked for 6 years with Mitrokhin on the archives, who have both unequivocally stated that there is no doubt in their minds that there is equipment today throughout the U.S. stored in sites that only the KGB knows the exact locations of.

Mr. Speaker, I am concerned, because this means that throughout this country, perhaps in forested areas as we saw occur in Belgium, perhaps in remote towns and villages or perhaps outside of major cities, there are perhaps scores of locations that have been secretly listed in the KGB archives that Mitrokhin did not copy down the exact locations of because he could not copy down every location of every site. That was not his main purpose. He wanted to show examples. The examples he picked were in Europe. But there is no doubt in the minds of the London chief of the KGB and Christopher Andrew who worked with Mitrokhin that in the KGB files back in Moscow are the specific identifying locations of every site in the U.S., in every State where these materials were deposited during the Cold War.

That would lead one to the obvious question that we would think would have already been asked, and that is what I asked of the FBI: Have we as a Nation since we found out this information asked Russia to give us the identity of the sites? Mr. Speaker, I can tell you in my conversation with the three FBI agents that I met with, their answer was that our government has not yet asked the Russian government to give us the exact locations of these sites. To further confirm that, when the Pentagon press conference was held last month on the same issue when it came up at a press conference, the Pentagon officer that was responding was asked the same question, have we asked the Russians for the specific sites of the U.S. locations. The answer was the same answer that I got from this FBI last week: "No, we have not asked that question."

Mr. Speaker, on the record this past Wednesday, Christopher Andrew told me on the record that our government has known about the sites in the U.S. for a minimum of 3 years, that he is aware of, where FBI and U.S. intelligence had access to the Mitrokhin files. His best guess is that the British intelligence probably gave these archives to the FBI when they got them back in 1992 and in 1993. And if that is the case, it means our government has known that this information existed for 6 or 7 years.

Mr. Speaker, what this tells us is for the past 6 or 7 years, no one from this administration has felt it important enough to ask the Russian government to give us the sites where these materials were stored by the Soviet Union during the Cold War which are still in place and which are probably in fact booby-trapped as the sites in Switzerland and Belgium were booby-trapped.

Now, Mr. Speaker, to me that is an outrage. It is an outrage and a dereliction of duties on the part of this administration. If we know as I now know that we know that the Mitrokhin archive records show that there are specific locations in America that we do not have the exact identity of, then it behooves this administration to make this a formal request of the Russian government. What amazes me, Mr. Speaker, is over the past 6 and 7 years, we have given the Russian government on average a billion dollars a year through direct programs. We have replenished the IMF with billions of dollars to help Russia's economy, even though much of it was ripped off by the corruption in Russia, largely centered around Boris Yeltsin. And we have also given money to the World Bank which has been used in Russia. We have leverage. I think it behooves Russia without leverage in this age of new cooperation to give us the specific information from the previous Communist-controlled KGB about where these materials were stored. We do not have that information today, Mr. Speaker.

At this point in time, Mr. Speaker, I would like to submit a letter for the RECORD signed by myself and the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. OBERSTAR).

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Washington, DC, October 22, 1999.

Hon. MADELEINE ALBRIGHT,

Secretary of State,

Washington, DC.

DEAR SECRETARY ALBRIGHT: This week, the House Military Research and Development Subcommittee will hear testimony from author Christopher Andrew ("The Sword and the Shield: The Mitrokhin Archive and the Secret History of the KGB" and "KGB: The Inside Story") on KGB operations during the Soviet era and contemporary Russian threat perceptions.

In his most recent book, Andrew documents the extent to which Soviet leaders were convinced of an imminent nuclear war—as late as the 1980s. He also describes in great detail the lengths to which they were willing to go to prevail in the event of such a conflict. Among the more chilling revelations is the documented pre-deployment of arms and high explosives in Europe and the United States. These plans were documented by KGB archivist and defector Vasili Mitrokhin—who shared the most extensive collection of classified KGB notes ever with the British Intelligence Service, the United States and author Christopher Andrew.

While the disclosure of the KGB's weapons pre-deployment plan has led to the unearthing of weapons caches in Switzerland and Belgium, we understand that the United States still has not located Russian weapons sites here. According to officials at the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI), the United States only has information on the general vicinity of pre-deployed Russian weapons caches—such as the one reported to be located near Brainerd, Minnesota.

The Mitrokhin files were made available to the West in 1992, and European weapons sites were identified and removed last year. We are concerned that the United States still lacks the critical information necessary to remove these known dangers to its citizens. More troubling, these recent findings appear to confirm the testimony of former Russian military intelligence officer Stanislav Lunev, who last year told the House Military Research and Development Subcommittee of GRU operations involving the pre-deployment of atomic demolition units (often referred to as "nuclear suitcases") in the United States.

We are writing to inquire whether the United States government has ever asked the Russian government to provide detailed site information on pre-deployed weapons. If not, why not? Do we plan to request that information of the Russian government now? If the United States has requested that information of the Russians, please inform us when those inquiries were made, and what information was provided.

As we struggle to forge a new relationship with Russia, the existence of these weapons sites only serves to aggravate remaining tensions between our countries. We believe it is absolutely essential that the United States aggressively pursue the Russian government to identify all pre-deployed weapons sites in the United States, and that we eliminate such remnants of the Cold War. We ask your cooperation to ensure that happens, and look forward to hearing from you on the status of that effort.

Sincerely,

JAMES OBERSTAR,
Member of Congress.
CURT WELDON,
Member of Congress.

Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Minnesota is a colleague of ours, a very capable Member, a member of the other party who lives and represents the district including Brainerd, Minnesota. I went to the gentleman from Minnesota when I had interviewed Christopher Andrew and when I told him I had Christopher Andrew and Oleg Gordievski coming to Washington to testify in open hearing. The gentleman from Minnesota came over to that hearing because obviously he is concerned for the safety of his constituents. He expressed the same degree of frustration that the administration had not yet asked the question as I did. So he and I penned this letter which is now a part of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD for all Americans to see which he and I signed jointly on October 22 and sent to Secretary of State Madeleine Albright. In the letter, we outline that the Mitrokhin files which our intelligence and the British intelligence have said are the most significant information we have ever gotten from the former Soviet intelligence service and the fact that we have had access to these intelligence files for at least 3 and probably as much as 7 years, and yet we have been told by both the military and by the FBI that we have not asked the Russian government to provide detailed information on these predeployed weapons and military technology. And we asked the Secretary of State in the letter, if our information is wrong, if the FBI is mistaken, if the military is mistaken, then, Madam Secretary, tell us that we have asked the Russians, tell us when we asked the Russians and tell us what the response was so that we can reassure our constituents that we have located and dug up every site where the Soviets prelocated this military hardware and equipment. And if we have not requested that information from the Russians, which I am assuming we have not, then the question is, why have we not and when are we going to question the Russians to get their intelligence service, now known as the SBR, no longer the KGB, to give us the exact locations of the storage of these materials.

Mr. Speaker, I am not here to alarm the American people. I do not think that the Russians would be foolish enough, even the KGB, to store portable weapons of mass destruction in America underground, although I was with General Alexander Lebed 2½ years ago in May in his office in Moscow when he outlined to me that one of his responsibilities when he worked for Yeltsin as security adviser was to locate 132 suitcase-sized nuclear weapons that the Soviet Union had built, and using all the influence of his office, he was only able to locate 48 of those devices. Each of these small atomic demolition munitions, carrying a capacity of one to 10 kilotons. That is about the size of the bombing of Hiroshima, 10 kilotons, so it would produce a massive, massive explosion. After Lebed told us the story, and there were five Members of Congress with me from both parties, I came back to Washington and I asked the CIA if we had any information to know whether or not Lebed would in fact know this information that he had told us about trying to identify these small nuclear devices and whether or not we knew if they were safe. The CIA told me we did not have any way of knowing whether or not Lebed was being factual with us.

A TV producer for "60 Minutes" got ahold of our trip report when it was filed 2 months after we had been in Moscow and met with Lebed. The producer asked me if I was willing to do an interview on camera, which I agreed to. They traveled to Moscow and interviewed General Lebed, who by the way is now the governor of Krasnoyarsk, one of the largest republics in Russia. Those interviews aired in the lead story on national TV 2 months ago last September, and in that story Lebed reaffirmed what he told me and our delegation, that there were in fact loose nuclear suitcases, small atomic demolition munitions that he could not locate when he was Boris Yeltsin's top security adviser. The Russian government ridiculed Lebed when that came out publicly and they called him a traitor and said they had never produced such devices.

The worst part is, Mr. Speaker, when a press briefer over at the Pentagon following the criticism by the Russian government of Lebed, when that press briefer was asked to comment on the revelation by Lebed about the small nuclear suitcases, our government official at the Pentagon said, we have no reason to doubt the Russian government, thereby agreeing with the Russian government that they never produced these devices.

I then brought over a Russian friend of mine, Dr. Alexi Yablakov, who is one of the leading academic scientists in Russia, and in October of that year I had him testify before my committee. In a public hearing in Washington, he stated, not only was he aware of these devices but he had scientist friends who worked on these devices, some of which were being produced for the KGB. That is in the public record. So we had another individual from Russia, Alexi Yablakov, confirming what Lebed said about the production of small nuclear weapons that are portable and can be carried around. Again, the Russian government criticized Yablakov and said he was a fool and did not know what he was talking about.

Wanting to get to the bottom of the story, I traveled to Moscow in December of that year and I had a meeting with the defense minister of all of Russia, Defense Minister Sergeyev. He knows that I have been working on some proactive, positive efforts to help the Russian military, help them develop housing for their troops, helping them develop solutions for a terrible problem they have with their nuclear waste. After discussing the positive things that we are doing with the Russian military, I asked Defense Minister Sergeyev point-blank across the table, Defense Minister, will you please tell me, what is the truth about these small atomic demolition devices that Lebed has said existed that he could not locate and that Yablakov has verified were produced. The defense minister for Russia said to me in that meeting, yes, Russia produced such devices during the Cold War. And he further went on to say, and so did you in the States. He said, we are aware that you destroyed your small atomic demolition munitions years ago because we had witnessed such destruction. He went on to say, "Congressman WELDON, I assure you that by the year 2000, we will have dismantled all of our small atomic demolition munitions." That was 2 years ago come this December, Mr. Speaker. Whether or not they have all been destroyed, we have no idea. Whether or not Lebed was accurate in saying that some of them could in fact be up for sale to rogue nations or terrorists, we do not know. Whether or not Lunev was correct in saying his job as a Tass correspondent was to locate sites to put materials, we have to assume. But we now have two additional witnesses. We now have the highest ranking KGB defector in the history of the KGB, Oleg Gordievski, and we now have Christopher Andrew who has had access to the Mitrokhin files of the KGB's own archives telling us, there is no doubt, 100 percent certainty that the Soviet Union located military hardware and equipment inside the territory of our country at a number of locations which may have included, may, a nuclear device.

Now, we have no evidence to verify that such a device was located, but in the written and stated public testimony of both of these individuals on Wednesday, they both said there was a possibility that such devices could have been stored in an underground facility or an underground pit that would have been dug up by Soviet operators during the Cold War.

Now, Mr. Speaker, again I am not trying to arouse a sense of uneasiness. I am just saying that we just do not know, we just do not know what types of devices were stored in our country underground at specific locations by Russian agents, Soviet agents, KGB agents. But we do know the storage was completed, we do know that there are sites all over this country where these materials are today still under ground probably in locations that are booby trapped if people were to approach them not knowing what they were encountering, and to the best of my knowledge at this moment our government has not asked the question of the Russian government about where these sites are.

Now one would ask the logical question: Why would our government not want to ask the Russian government? After all, they have said publicly that the files are the best information we have ever gotten.

Our intelligence service has said publicly that this is the best hard information we have ever gotten from the KGB. We have independently confirmed by Oleg Gordievsky, the highest-ranking KGB defector ever who was the London chief of the KGB desk for the Soviet Union.

So we have confirmation. There is no reason to doubt that what Mitrokhin found in the archives is true and that all over America today, perhaps in mountainous areas, perhaps in national parks, perhaps in remote and isolated areas that only the Soviet KGB knows, are stored Russian military equipment, technology and hardware, and the door is left open that perhaps there are weapons stored at some of these sites, weapons that could kill or harm significant numbers of American people.

Mr. Speaker, I am outraged that we have not asked the question. I bring this special order tonight before our colleagues and the American people because I want answers. I want to know what this administration is going to do to hold Russia accountable, to obtain the information from the SVR-KGB archives about the specific sites that have been identified that we know are in the KGB archives that we need to see and be able to respond to.

Mr. Speaker, I thank the staff for sticking around for this special order, I urge our colleagues to contact and interact with their constituents, and I urge Americans all over this country to interact with Members of Congress to demand of both a Member of Congress and the White House that we get answers about the Mitrokhin files, about this particular information relative to weapon storage and military material storage and to also begin to ask questions about much of the other material that is contained in the Mitrokhin archives.

This is only the first edition. Christopher Andrew expects a second edition to be out sometime in the Year 2000 which will go into more detail. We cannot wait for the second edition because we are then going to be able to see some people in America who during the Cold War the KGB thought were really acting on their behalf as opposed to America's behalf. They are going to be named in the next edition, and perhaps America will have a better insight into what really happened in this city during the Cold War period when the Soviet KGB was relying on key Americans to help them weaken our country and perhaps prepare for the ultimate, which would have been a direct military confrontation with our Nation.

Mr. Speaker, I bring this information to the attention of our colleagues in the spirit of wanting to work in a positive relationship with Russia, one that I consistently say must be based on strength, consistency and candor. In my opinion this administration has none of those three attributes, which is why we do not today have the information relative to this because I am convinced this administration does not want to raise this information because they think it would further embarrass Boris Yeltsin, and that has been the basis of our relationship for 8 years. President Clinton, Boris Yeltsin, AL GORE, Victor Chernomyrdin until he was removed from office, anything that surfaced that would embarrass either of those two Russian leaders we pretend it did not happen, whether it was the theft of IMF, whether it was the abuse of one of our Navy officers like Lieutenant Jack Daly, whether it was arms control violations, which I have said at numerous times on the floor of this House, or whether it was instability in Russia, that we did not want to call the attention of the people of this country for fear that it would embarrass Yeltsin in his homeland because that is the mainstay of our relationship, and I am convinced that that perhaps is the reason why we have failed to ask the question of the Russians about these devices, because this administration perhaps fears that when we start to dig up all over America locations of equipment that we know have been there for 3 or perhaps 7 years, there are going to be a lot of people in this country who are going to start to ask some very difficult questions of their elected leaders.

PROCEEDINGS AND DEBATES OF THE 106th CONGRESS, FIRST SESSION

Vol. 145

WASHINGTON, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 28, 1999

No. 149

Senate

The Senate met at 9:30 a.m. and was called to order by the President pro tempore [Mr. THURMOND].

PRAYER

The Chaplain, Dr. Lloyd John Ogilvie, offered the following prayer:

Jehovah-Shalom, You have promised us peace that passes all understanding. That is the quality of the peace that we need for today. It is beyond our understanding that You can produce serenity in our souls when there is so much that is unfinished and unresolved and unforgiven in us: in our relationships, in our work, and in our society. Sometimes we even deny ourselves the calm confidence of Your peace because we are so aware of what denies Your peace in us. Take from us the strain and stress as our anxious hearts confess our need for You. Grant us Your incomprehensible but indispensable, palpable peace so we can be peacemakers. Give the Senators a fresh infusion of Your peace so that they may deal with the disagreements and discord of the legislative process. Help them to overcome problems and endure the pressures of these days. In the name of the Prince of Peace. Amen.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The Honorable MIKE CRAPO, a Senator from the State of Idaho, led the Pledge of Allegiance as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

RECOGNITION OF THE ACTING MAJORITY LEADER

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The able Senator from Idaho is recognized.

SCHEDULE

Mr. CRAPO. Mr. President, the Senate will be in a period of morning business until 10:30 a.m. Following morning business, the Senate will resume consideration of the pending Ashcroft amendment to H.R. 434, the African trade bill. As a reminder, there will be a cloture vote on the substitute amendment 1 hour after convening tomorrow. It is still hoped that an agreement can be reached to allow the Senate to complete action on this trade bill by the end of the week. The Senate may also consider any legislative or executive items cleared for action.

I thank my colleagues for their attention.

MORNING BUSINESS

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Illinois is recognized.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, I seek recognition in morning business, and I make an inquiry of the Chair as to how much time has been allocated in morning business.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator has 10 minutes.

Mr. DURBIN. I thank the Chair.

FINISHING THE SENATE'S BUSINESS

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, many people who are watching the business of Capitol Hill are curious as to the current state of affairs. We are obviously past our deadline of October 1 for a new fiscal year. We were supposed to have passed all of the appropriations or spending bills by that time. Very few Congresses ever achieve that, and this Congress did not. But most Congresses reach a point in the late days of October where we at least know the end game, we know how it is going to end, and we are merely putting paperwork together.

Well, we are not quite there yet. In fact, we are in a situation where there is great doubt about how this session will come to an end, and it is a great irony that we would be questioning how it will end in light of all the circumstances that we face. This is an extraordinarily good time for America in terms of the state of our economy, its growth, the creation of jobs, keeping inflation under control, and giving businesses opportunities to start and expand. All of these things are good signs. In fact, we are generating enough money now in terms of revenues to the Federal Government that we have gone beyond the era of deficits and have now started talking about the era of surpluses.

It was a little over 2 years ago that we were fixated in this Chamber on passing a constitutional amendment to balance the budget. There were some Members of the Senate who had literally given up hope that the Senate could meet its own responsibility, and they insisted that a constitutional amendment be passed to give the Federal courts the authority to enforce the law and stop Congress from spending. That is how desperate many of these Members of the Senate were in terms of the deficit situation.

Well, things have changed dramatically; 2½ years later we now seem to be at an impasse over a surplus, not over a deficit. That amendment did not pass. It lost by one vote. I voted against it and would do it again. Now we are talking about surpluses and what to do with them.

The interesting thing about this debate, though, is we are not focusing on individual appropriations bills but really keep returning to a subject that has been around since 1935, because it was in 1935 that Franklin Roosevelt showed the vision and the political courage to create Social Security. In creating the Social Security system, he really said that we were going to do something dramatic to make sure our parents and grandparents could live in dignity when they reached retirement age. Some people, primarily from the other side of the aisle, called it socialism. They said, no, we aren't going to go along with "New Deal" politics creating these massive government programs. This same Republican voice was heard time and again for decades over the creation of Social Security; that it was a bad idea; it was socialism; it was too much government.

Yet the program endured. Thank goodness it did because it changed the lives of Americans for the better and gave us hope that in our senior years, in our years of retirement, we could be independent and live in dignity. Look at what we have today—so many healthy, vibrant seniors leading great lives, knowing they have a safety net called Social Security in which they have invested through all of their work experience. It is not enough to lead a luxurious life by far, but it certainly gives people that safety net, and they are glad they have it.

We are debating about what to do with Social Security as we end this session. It is a principal source of retirement income for two-thirds of the elderly. Listen to these statistics: In 1959, 40 years ago, the poverty rate for senior citizens was 35 percent, one out of three. In 1998, it was 10.5 percent, the lowest on record. Last year, Social Security benefits lifted roughly 15 million senior citizens out of poverty.

That is what it means. It means people who would not be able to make it, at least barely make it, if they are relying on Social Security. It is more than just a retirement program because one out of five people who receive benefits under Social Security are either disabled, mentally or physically, or they are the survivors of those who paid into the system.

We on the Democratic side have for years advocated the protection of Social Security. In that debate I mentioned earlier about a balanced budget amendment, we offered an amendment on our side and said we did not want the budget to be balanced by using the Social Security trust fund. Well, we offered that amendment and only two Republican Senators voted for it. When we tried to protect the Social Security trust fund from being raided as part of that constitutional amendment, only two Republican Senators would join us and we were not successful.

Now we have this whole question about whether or not we are currently spending the Social Security trust fund. There have been ads run by political parties saying this fund should be held sacred and it should not be touched. Yet when we look at the record, the Congressional Budget Office tells us, as of a month ago the Republican appropriations bills already use $18 billion of the Social Security surplus. This estimate assumed appropriations bills already enacted or those in accordance with the then-current status in the House of Representatives. Since September 29, the use of the Social Security surplus has grown.

I think that is a challenge to some of the advertising being put on television by the other side of the aisle. The facts do not back them up. Republicans have talked about protecting Social Security, but, frankly, they have not. They have used $18 billion of the Social Security trust fund so far.

They do not want to talk about a program which a few months ago was their pride and joy, the so-called Republican tax cut; a $792 billion tax cut, the vast bulk of which went to the wealthiest people in this country. That tax cut idea went over like a lead balloon. People across America said: Why in the world do you want to talk about a tax cut when we have a national debt we should be concerned about, when we have the future of Social Security we should be concerned about, when we have Medicare we are concerned about? Why do you want to talk about a tax cut primarily for wealthy people?

If you remember the Republicans went out in August and said we are going to take our case to the people. They came back after the August recess and said: We are going to close the books on this case. The people aren't interested. We will talk about it next year.

The American people were interested enough to take a look at and reject this Republican tax cut, and it is a good thing they did for the sake of Social Security. Estimates suggest that some $83 billion would have had to come out of the Social Security trust fund to pay for the Republican tax cut package for wealthy people. That was not going to fly. The American people let the Republican leadership know that and they dropped their tax cut plan from their agenda and came back and said instead we are dedicated to protecting Social Security.

Let me tell you, the President has the right idea when it comes to the solvency of the Social Security trust fund. He wants to make sure we lock away that trust fund so it cannot be raided and so we can say to future generations: Social Security is not only solvent to the year 2032 or 2034, but beyond. I think he is on the right track.

The President's Social Security lockbox ensures another generation can receive benefits from this important program. It locks away interest savings for Social Security. It transfers interest savings to the Social Security trust fund. It extends the solvency of the Social Security system to the year 2050.

One other point that bears mentioning, we must address the needs of the future of Medicare. Time and again, the debate on this floor has ignored the Medicare Program. Medicare is the health insurance program for seniors and disabled that, frankly, needs attention at this moment more than any other program. It will be insolvent by the year 2015. Yet precious little is said or done in the debates on Capitol Hill to address the needs of the Medicare system.

The Medicare trust fund will go bankrupt in 2015. To make matters worse, the strains in the system will continue to increase as the baby boom generation retires, with the number of Medicare-eligible seniors expected to double to almost 80 million within a few decades. We have proposed, on the Democrat side, to lock away part of our surplus that we see coming in the years ahead to extend the life of Medicare for an additional 12 years. Not only would this extend the solvency of the system and the program, it would eliminate the need for future excessive cuts in medical care. Medicare is the critical other half of the equation that the Republicans continue to ignore.

Democrats are determined to make sure that, as Speaker Gingrich once said, Medicare does not "wither on the vine." We want to make sure this system continues and survives.

I see my colleague from Massachusetts, Senator KENNEDY, on the floor. I will yield to him in morning business and close by saying, as we come to the end of this congressional session, families across America have the right and responsibility to hold this Congress accountable; to ask us the hard questions. What have we done under our stewardship to make life better in America during the course of this year?

Did we pass campaign finance reform to clean up the mess in our campaign election system? I am afraid the answer is no, we did not. It broke down on partisan lines. Even though we had 55 Republican and Democratic Senators who were determined to pass it, 45 Republican Senators opposed it and it died.

Did we pass Senator KENNEDY's minimum wage increase so we go from $5.15 an hour to a more livable wage for the 350,000 people in Illinois who get up every morning and go to work for $5.15 an hour? The answer, sadly, is no, we did not pass an increase in the minimum wage.

What did we do for the people who are concerned about their managed care, their health insurance, when they want their doctors to make the decisions and not the insurance company bureaucrats; when they don't want to turn over a life-or-death decision to somebody at the end of a telephone line who may have a high school diploma and no knowledge of medicine? Did we do something to stand up for patients? Sadly, the answer is no. The special interests, the insurance industry, prevailed in this Chamber. They killed the good legislation we were trying to pass. Sadly, that means the American people have lost out.

What have we done for education, to reduce class size? When I visit a classroom in Wheaton, IL, with 16 kids in the first grade and the teacher says: Senator, this Federal program works. I can give special attention to these kids. If they are falling behind I can help them. If they are gifted, I can give them something extra to do. Keep the class size initiative on track.

What have we done? We are in a bitter fight now as to whether we will even continue that program.

Sadly, as you look at all the issues, whether it is sensible gun control in light of the violence in schools such as Columbine, or whether you look at minimum wage or campaign finance reform or the Patients' Bill of Rights, this Congress is going to go home empty-handed. We have failed the American people. They should hold the leadership in this Congress accountable for coming here, drawing their paychecks, punching the clock for their pensions, and going home without addressing issues that American families care about.

So I hope in the closing days of this session we can salvage something for the time we have spent in Washington. I hope as we start the next session, the next round, the Republican leadership will finally listen to the people across America who want us to act in their interests, not for the special interests. Time and time again, families have lost and special interests have won and that is not what this Senate should be about.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the time until 10 a.m. is under the control of the Senator from Illinois.

Mr. DURBIN. I yield all remaining time to the Senator from Massachusetts.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts is recognized.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I thank my friend and colleague from Illinois. I must say, he has summarized the situation as we are drawing to the end of this part of the Congress very well. There is still some time for this do nothing Congress to mend its ways—if there were a disposition to make some progress, there is still some time to do so.

But I think it is important, as we come to the end of this session, to take stock of what has been achieved and has not been achieved. My friend from Illinois has done an excellent job summarizing those issues. I would like to provide some additional comments on some of the matters he raised.

First of all, as the Senator from Illinois and others have pointed out in these last days, we are still failing to meet our responsibilities to those 11 million Americans who earn the minimum wage. In many instances these are the hardest-working laborers in our economy, but they are on the bottom rung of the economic ladder—and this, during the most extraordinary prosperity in the history of this country. There has been an incredible accumulation of wealth that has taken place over the period of the last 5, 6, 7 years. As a direct result of the leadership of President Clinton and the Democratic Members of Congress, and despite the opposition of nearly every single Republican Member, we are in the midst of the greatest economic growth in the history of the country. We have even found the will to raise our own salaries some $4,600 a year. But the Republicans are now holding a minimum wage increase hostage to $35 billion in new tax breaks for the wealthiest Americans.

All we are asking is that we have at least the opportunity to bring this matter before the Senate and permit a vote on it. It does not take too much time—Members know this issue. But under the parliamentary situation that we find ourselves in now, the leadership—the Republican leadership—is denying us the opportunity to do so. This is the seventh time that technique has been used this year. Do we think the purpose of it is to open and broaden debate and discussion on matters before the American people? No, it is to narrow and close down the opportunity for debate and discussion.

So, when we look where we are as a country, from 1965 up to the year 2000, this line reflects what the purchasing power of the minimum wage would be with constant dollars of 1998. Here we find back in 1965 all the way up to the early 1980s, we actually found Republicans and Democrats alike working together to make sure that working Americans could earn a livable wage.

Then there was a period during the Reagan administration, starting in 1980 and going right through 1988, when we had a great deal of resistance in getting any increase. We had one increase in the minimum wage and another spike again in 1995.

But if we do not take action by the year 2001, the purchasing power of the minimum wage will be at an all-time low. And still we are denied an opportunity to bring this matter before the Senate.

Eighty-five percent of the American people favor increasing the minimum wage, and the opposition refuses to even debate it. The two old arguments they have used against increasing the minimum wage are that it will cause a loss of jobs and that it will add to inflation. Those tired old arguments have long since been discredited.

We know that when there has been an actual increase, again, in October 1996 and October 1997, the employment levels have continued to go up. There is absolutely no case that can be made that this will lose jobs.

Our proposal is modest, a one dollar increase in two installments—50 cents next January, and 50 cents the following year—to provide a lifeline to so many who are working so hard in our country. We know who the workers earning the minimum wage are. They are assistant schoolteachers who work in our children's classrooms. They are assistants in nursing homes caring for our family members.

This is a women's issue because the overwhelming majority of individuals who work at minimum wage are women.

This is a children's issue because eighty-five percent of the women who are receiving minimum wage have children.

It is a civil rights issue because many of those involved in making the minimum wage are men and women of color.

Most of all, it is a fairness issue. How can we justify raising our own salaries

$4,600 a year and refuse to provide a $1 increase over 2 years for men and women who go out every single day, 40 hours a week, 52 weeks a year?

This is absolutely unfair. Americans understand fairness, they understand work, they understand fair play, and the Republican leadership is denying the American workers fair play on this issue.

I want to mention another important issue which we hope to address in the final days of the Senate, and that is the issue of the Patients' Bill of Rights, a very simple piece of legislation that says doctors—not accountants—ought to be making decisions in matters affecting the health of our families.

The protections contained in the Norwood-Dingell managed care reform bill which passed in the House of Representatives three weeks ago by an overwhelming bipartisan majority of 275-151, have been recommended by the broad-based and nonpartisan Presidents' Commission. They are included in the model standards of the National Association of Insurance Commissioners. These protections are already available under Medicare. They are used as voluntary standards by the managed care companies' own trade associations. They are the rights that ethical insurance companies honor as a matter of course, and that every family believes it has purchased when it pays its premiums.

These protections listed on this chart are the ones we tried to guarantee to the consumers of America. That essentially is the Democratic proposal we debated in the Senate. These circles indicate what the Senate finally did on these protections. My colleagues can see they are zero in most of the cases, and small coloring in other cases, which means they took a partial fix on some of these protections. And my colleagues can see what the bipartisan Republican and Democratic proposal did in the House of Representatives.

We are prepared to bring that House bill before the Senate and debate it for a few hours, pass it, and provide protections for the American people. We do not need a conference. The President will sign it. Why don't we move ahead on this? This has bipartisan support. This has already been debated and it had the overwhelming support of 68 Republican Members in the House of Representatives.

Why are we not protecting the American people? Why are we being denied the opportunity to provide protections? If there is some question as to whether we really are providing protections, look at what is happening across the country every single day. Every single day the Congress delays the Patients' Bill of Rights means more patients are suffering.

Each day that Congress delays means that more patients will suffer and die. According to a survey by the University of California at Berkeley, every day we delay means that 35,000 patients will find their access to needed care delayed. Thirty-one thousand will be forced to change doctors. Eighteen thousand will be forced to forego medications ordered by their doctor. Fifty-nine thousand will endure unnecessary pain and suffering as the result of adverse actions by their health plan. And 11,000 will suffer permanent disability.

The health professionals who deal with managed care companies every day know that prompt action is critical. According to a survey of physicians by the Harvard University School of Public Health, every week at least 18,000 patients' medical condition worsens because they are denied an overnight stay in a hospital. At least twenty-three thousand patients are harmed every week because of the denial of specialty care. Each week, at least seventy-nine thousand patients are harmed because of denial of needed prescription drugs. The list goes on and on.

Mr. DURBIN. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. KENNEDY. I yield for a question.

Mr. DURBIN. I would like the Senator from Massachusetts to help those following the debate to understand who lines up on the different sides of this debate.

The Senator has been here through many of these legislative battles. He knows there are forces at work that want to pass a bipartisan Patients' Bill of Rights to help families, and there are forces against. Will the Senator, for the record, tell us how those forces line up?

Mr. KENNEDY. That is an excellent question. As the Senator from Illinois understands, these protections did not just come out of thin air. They were recommended. Recommended by whom? Virtually every medical society in the country supports our program. During this debate, we challenged the other side to produce one medical society that supported their program. We still have not heard it.

Every medical society supports our program. Every nursing society supports our program. Every consumer group supports our program. Every patient organization supports our program. Every one of the consumer groups that have been trying to protect children understands the importance of getting specialists for children; not just a pediatrician, but a pediatrician oncologist to deal with cancer in children and specialists in these areas. We guarantee these. This Republican program does not.

We have the legislative power of this body to pass something which the President will sign to provide the patient protections we are talking about. All the majority leader has to do is call up that legislation. Just call it up. Let us debate it, and let us act.

Mr. DURBIN. Will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. KENNEDY. I yield for a question.

Mr. DURBIN. If every medical organization—doctors, nurses, specialists—has come down in favor of this bipartisan approach, who is on the other side of this? What is the force that is stopping us from passing this legislation?

Mr. KENNEDY. The Senator again has asked the important question. It is the insurance industry. You have on the one hand, as suggested by the two questions the Senator asked, all of the health professionals, all of the men and women who have devoted their lives to taking care of patients in this country, the doctors, the nurses, all of the various professional societies, all the consumer groups, all the children's organizations that care about this, all the elderly groups. And on the other side you have the insurance industry that is opposed to it. The basic reason for that is that it cuts into their bottom line—even though they have guaranteed the kinds of protections we are talking about.

What we are trying to do is make sure the patients are going to get the kind of coverage and the kind of attention for which they had signed up. What happens in so many of these instances is the HMO, the policyholder, just will not give what their patients are guaranteed in these areas. And with all the other complexities in terms of denying the patients the opportunity to sue the HMO, we are denied an opportunity for remedy as well.

There is rarely a public policy question that is as important as this one. We know what can be done. We have good legislation, that is almost at the door of the Senate, that could be called up. I am sure the Senator from Illinois would agree with me, and we could get that done today. Certainly we could do that, and the minimum wage as well.

I see my time has just about expired, but I want to try to go through, briefly, some of these other areas where we have failed to take action. These are the kind of issues about which people talk to us. This is the kind of issue about which families are concerned—the minimum wage, a Patients' Bill of Rights. When I was in Methuen this past Monday, I must have had four different senior citizens come up to me and say: What's happening on that prescription drug proposal that the President is supporting—that so many of us are supporting? Try to get that up and get a debate, get that reported out of the Finance Committee and reported out here on the Senate floor. Please do something about prescription drugs.

But we aren't able to get anything done on that. We aren't able to get anything done on the Patients' Bill of Rights. We have a Republican leader who said that "House-Senate conferences on other legislation have a higher priority" than consideration of the Patients' Bill of Rights. So this thing is just being kicked on over to next year. That may be satisfactory to some of the insurance companies. That may be satisfactory to some of the Republican leadership. But it is not satisfactory to the families in this country.

In the final few moments, I want to once again mention the areas of education which we would have hopefully had some opportunity to address with greater time.

In recent years, too many in Congress have paid lip-service to education—and then failed to act to meet the most basic needs of the Nation's schools. This Congress faces a major test in the coming days, as we seek to guarantee that education receives the funds it deserves for the coming fiscal year. If we want a better and stronger America tomorrow, we must invest more in education today.

Mr. DURBIN. Will the Senator from Massachusetts yield for a question?

Mr. KENNEDY. Yes.

Mr. DURBIN. The debate then on the President's proposal for 100,000 teachers to reduce classroom size, so that teachers can give more attention to the students, really is kind of a parallel to the 100,000 COPS Program.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. GRAMS). The Senator's time has expired.

Mr. DURBIN. I ask unanimous consent that we be allowed to continue for 3 minutes and it not be charged against the Republican side.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DURBIN. If I might, then, say to the Senator from Massachusetts, the President's program for 100,000 cops has given the money directly to the police departments and the communities to put more cops on the beat. We have seen the crime rate coming down in America, partially because of this. Now we have the same debate about the money going directly to the schools so they can reduce class size. And there is resistance, again, from the Republican side of the aisle.

Have we not learned any lesson from the 100,000 cops, that if the money goes directly to the problem, we can get results?

Mr. KENNEDY. The Senator has given an excellent example about programs that have been successful. And we know these programs are working, as the Senator has pointed out.

Communities do not understand why, just a year ago, we joined hands to help them reduce class size—yet we are on the verge of abandoning our commitment now.

Research has documented what parents and teachers have always known—smaller classes improve student achievement. In small classes, students receive more individual attention and instruction. Students with learning disabilities have those disabilities identified earlier, and their needs can be met without placing them in costly special education. In small classes, teachers are better able to maintain discipline. Parents and teachers can work together more effectively to support children's education.

Project STAR studied 7,000 students in 80 schools in Tennessee. Students in small classes performed better than students in large classes in each grade from kindergarten through third grade.

Follow-up studies show that students from small classes enrolled in more college-bound courses, had higher grade-point averages, had fewer discipline problems, and were less likely to drop out of school.

Because of the Class Size Reduction Act, 1.7 million children are benefiting from smaller classes this year. 29,000 teachers have been hired. 1,247 are teaching in the first grade, reducing class sizes from 23 to 17. 6,670 are teaching in the second grade, reducing class size from 23 to 18. 6,960 are teaching in the third grade, reducing class size from 24 to 18. 2,900 are in other grades, K-12, 290 special education teachers have been hired.

The program is well under way. Abandoning our commitment to help communities reduce class sizes would break a specific promise made by Congress only 1 year ago. It would also be a violation of our responsibility to support a strong Federal-State-local partnership in education. Congress cannot abdicate this responsibility.

We must also ensure that teachers get the training they need to come to school ready to teach. Teacher Quality Enhancement Grants are an important step in addressing the critical national need for high-quality teachers. It received strong bipartisan support in the reauthorization of the Higher Education Act, and Congress should fund it at the full authorization level of $300 million for next year.

Children need and deserve a good education in order to succeed in life. But they cannot obtain that education if school roofs are falling down around them, if sewage is backing up because of faulty plumbing—asbestos in flaking off the walls and ceilings—schools lack computers and modern technology—and if classrooms are overcrowded.

We need to invest more to help States and communities rebuild crumbling schools, modernize decrepit buildings, and expand facilities to accommodate reduced class sizes. Sending children to dilapidated, overcrowded schools sends an unacceptable message to these children. It tells them they don't matter. No CEO would tolerate a leaky ceiling in the board room, and no teacher should have to tolerate it in the classroom. We need to do all we can to ensure that children are learning in safe, modern school buildings.

Nearly one third of all public schools are more than 50 years old. Fourteen million children in a third of the Nation's schools are learning in substandard buildings. The problem of ailing school buildings is not the problem of the inner city alone. It exists in almost every community, urban, rural, or suburban.

In addition to modernizing and renovating dilapidated schools, communities need to build new schools in order to keep pace with rising enrollments and to reduce class sizes. Elementary and secondary school enrollment has reached an all-time high again this year of 53 million students, and will continue to grow.

The Department of Education estimates that 2,400 new public schools will be needed by 2003, just to accommodate rising enrollments. The General Accounting Office estimates that it will cost communities $112 billion to repair and modernize the Nation's schools. Congress should lend a helping hand, and do all we can to help schools and communities across the country meet this challenge.

Finally, in June with the support of over 250 groups representing the disability community, health care providers, and the business community, the Senate passed landmark legislation 99-0 to open the workplace doors for disabled people in communities across this country. Last week, the House of Representatives passed this legislation by a vote of 412-9. Once this measure is enacted into law, large numbers of people with disabilities will have the opportunity to fulfill their hopes and dreams of living independent and productive lives.

But despite the overwhelming bipartisan support for the Work Incentives Improvement Act, the House of Representatives has yet to appoint conferees to move enactment of this bill forward.

A decade ago, when we enacted the Americans with Disabilities Act, we promised our disabled fellow citizens a new and better life, in which disability would no longer end the American dream. Too often, for too many Americans, that promise has been unfulfilled. The Work Incentives Improvement Act will dramatically strengthen the fulfillment of that promise.

We know that millions of disabled men and women in this country want to work and are able to work. But the Republican Leadership in the House continues to deny these citizens the opportunity to work by refusing to appoint conferees and move this bill forward. Every day this legislation is delayed is another day the nation is denied the talents and the contributions of disabled Americans.

Current laws are an anachronism. Modern medicine and modern technology are making it easier than ever before for disabled persons to have productive lives and careers. Yet current laws are often a greater obstacle to that goal than the disability itself. It's ridiculous that we punish disable persons who dare to take a job by penalizing them financially, by taking away their health insurance lifeline, and by placing these unfair obstacles in their path.

Eliminating these barriers to work will help disabled Americans to achieve self-sufficiency. We are a better and stronger and fairer country when we open the door of opportunity to all Americans, and enable them to be equal partners in the American dream. For millions of Americans with disabilities, this bill is a declaration of independence that can make the American dream come true.

For far too long, disabled Americans have been left out and left behind. It is time for Congress to stop stalling this legislation, and take the long overdue action to correct the injustices they are unfairly suffering.

The issues I have discussed today—a fair wage, health care, education, employment for the disabled, freedom from hate crimes—touch the lives of every American. If this Congress wants to make a difference for our constituents—to improve their lives and to ease their burdens—these are major issues we must address.

I thank the Chair and thank the Senator from Maine for her indulgence.

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative assistant proceeded to call the roll.

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, I yield myself as much time as I may consume from the time reserved for Senator THOMAS.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

PRACTICES OF SWEEPSTAKES COMPANIES

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, earlier this year the Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations, which I chair, undertook an extensive investigation of the practices of sweepstakes companies. We held hearings in March and later in the year to examine the increasingly deceptive and aggressive marketing techniques used by many of the sweepstakes companies in this country.

At these hearings, I was told repeatedly by these companies that they did not target the elderly, they did not use deceptive techniques to try to induce people to buy products they didn't really need or want, and that they were constantly reviewing their promotional language to make sure it was fair. They pledged to further improve their efforts to make sure their mailings were not deceptive.

Recently, my constituents have sent me a number of examples of deceptive sweepstakes mailings. I tell my colleagues, they are just as deceptive as ever. I have seen absolutely no voluntary improvement by the sweepstakes industry, despite the extensive attention given to their deceptive practices.

Let me share with the Senate some of the recent examples my constituents have sent me. This example is from Charles M. Sias of Bangor, ME. Mr. Sias happens to be the head of the local AARP chapter, and he recently arranged for me to talk to a group of senior citizens in the Bangor area about sweepstakes. We developed a list of tips for them to be able to identify deceptive mailings. It is particularly ironic that Mr. Sias is himself receiving mailings that are clearly deceptive. He is very aware of what to look out for, so he is not going to be deceived by the language of these mailings. But, unfortunately, that is not the case with many other consumers who are inundated with mailings of this sort.

Take a look at this mailing. It says, in very large print: The judges have decided: Charles M. Sias of Bangor is our $833,337 winner. And then: We will update our official winners list so that it reads—again, it lists Mr. Sias' name. Urgent: Mail back your prize number within 5 days. In the corner: This is your exclusive prize claim number—giving the appearance that Mr. Sias has already won.

This particular mailing comes from a division of Time, Inc., known as Guaranteed & Bonded. It is very similar to the kinds of deceptive mailings we have seen during the past year.

A representative of Time, Inc., testified at our hearings. She testified that this kind of mailing is fair but assured us they were continuing to evaluate the copy in their mailings and they were trying to improve it so there would be no question.

This is a recent solicitation, and it is just as deceptive as previous ones. I think it is very disappointing to once again see the use of very large, bold headlines declaring that one of my constituents is the winner of more than $833,000 when obviously his chances of winning are less than his chances of being struck by lightning.

Let me give another example provided to me by one of my constituents. In some ways, this letter from Publishers Clearing House, another one of the major sweepstakes companies, is even more insidious. It was personally addressed to the woman who sent it to me. It says: These are the certified cash winner documents we alerted you to watch for.

The use of the words "certified cash winner" creates the image that my constituent has won a great deal of money. But this goes beyond the other mailing. The $100,000 figure appears to have been personally crossed out. On the side, it says it is now $200,000 my constituent is going to win, and it appears a woman named Dorothy, whom we know to be an employee of Publishers Clearing House, has written a personal note to my constituent, to this woman who lives in Portland, ME, and has written: "$200,000—see enclosed urgent notification for details,"—once again, creating the impression that my constituent is going to win not $100,000 but now $200,000. It is her lucky day.

Again, if we look at the small print, we find that, in fact, the vast majority of people responding to this solicitation will receive just $1. It is extremely misleading.

To add to the deception, Publishers Clearinghouse includes what appears to be a check of some sort. They call it a claim voucher. It is made out to my constituent. I have blocked out her name to protect her privacy. It appears to be personally signed in blue ink by the treasurer and by Dorothy Addeo, and it says: Cash value up to $100,000—although we know from Dorothy's helpful little note that it actually may be $200,000.

My point is that this is clearly intended to deceive the people who are receiving these solicitations. The intent is to part people from their money, to get them to buy merchandise they don't really need or want, in the mistaken belief that somehow making a purchase will either guarantee they will be a winner or at least increase the odds of their winning that great prize, those hundreds of thousands of dollars.

There is another harm that is done beyond the financial waste of senior citizens and others wasting their money buying products they don't really need or want. That is the injury that is done to a senior citizen's dignity when they realize they have been duped by these highly deceptive mailings.

I recently received a letter from one of my constituents which I will share with my colleagues. It shows how tragic some of the results are of these sweepstakes. We found seniors who have wasted $10,000, $20,000, $60,000 on sweepstakes, thinking it would help them win the grand prize. In some cases, they have squandered their Social Security checks and even borrowed money. As I said, there is also the injury to a person's dignity once they realize they have been fooled.

This letter captures that part of the problem. My constituent writes to Reader's Digest in this case:

Several days ago my father received your "announcement" that he had been nominated to fill "your newest position" on the "exclusive Winners Advisory Board." With its official looking certificates and "personal" Internal Selection Record you had him convinced that he was indeed being asked to serve in some official, though honorary capacity. When he realized that this was another sweepstakes gimmick, and that he was no more special to you than the thousands of others who received this same "special" announcement, he was devastated.

My father shared your "announcement" with me because he was proud that he was being recognized by a company he has supported for many, many years. What a cruel game you have played with a man who has truly been a good customer. What a cruel game you play with every person who received this same, or similar letter, and who, like my father, are vulnerable because they believe the best about people.

I think my constituent has described the problem very eloquently. These kinds of deceptive mailings prey on people who believe what they read, who want to trust that they are not being misled.

Mr. President, on August 2, the Senate unanimously approved legislation that I, Senator LEVIN, Senator COCHRAN, Senator EDWARDS, and many others have worked on, which would curtail these kinds of deceptive sweepstakes mailings.

I want to thank the Chairman of the House Subcommittee on the Postal Service, Congressman JOHN MCHUGH, for his excellent work in securing approval by the House of a strong measure to prevent these types of deceptive sweepstakes mailings. In addition, Congressman FRANK LOBIONDO, who introduced a strong sweepstakes disclosure measure in the House, has made a valuable contribution to the effort to curb deceptive mailings. Congressman JAMES ROGAN and Congressman BILL MCCOLLUM have also introduced legislation to address this problem, and have given their strong support to the effort to reform the current practices. I also appreciate the support and assistance given by Congressman CHAKA FATTAH and Congressman HENRY WAXMAN, who have provided both excellent ideas and leadership during House consideration of legislation to address the problem of deceptive sweepstakes.

The Senate bill was passed, as I said, unanimously, and it is now pending in the House Government Reform Committee. It has been unanimously approved by the Postal Subcommittee of the House Government Reform Committee, and it is my fervent hope that before we adjourn this year we can clear this important legislation and see it signed into law. It is time to put an end to these deceptive and unfair mailings that prey on the hopes and dreams of our senior citizens.

Mr. President, I yield the floor, and seeing no one seeking recognition, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative assistant proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

IN HONOR OF SENATOR JOHN CHAFEE

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I have had earlier comments about our good friend, John Chafee, but a line I was trying to say was, more than a balanced budget, what we need in this body is balanced Senators. I don't know anybody better than John. He was the best.

I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD the wonderful column by Mary McGrory entitled, "The Gentleman From Rhode Island."

There being no objection, the column was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Washington Post, Oct. 28, 1999]

THE GENTLEMAN FROM RHODE ISLAND

Sen. John Chafee of Rhode Island was a hero on the battlefields of two wars: He fought in World War II and in Korea. He was also a hero on the battlefield of the Senate, fighting valiantly, often for lost causes, working behind enemy lines, defying his party on matters of great import. He was an aristocrat who brought to the Senate a sense of noblesse oblige that is otherwise unknown today. In an institution that calls every male a gentleman, Chafee really was one.

He was of a size difficult for his colleagues to manage. A wrestler in college and a former Marine, he hated violence. He was a high-minded patrician of colonial lineage who came to be idolized by his heavily Democratic and ethnically diverse constituents. He served for 23 years in a body that today is renowned for its pettiness and narrow-mindedness and never to the end lost his zest for coalitions and compromises. He was a most clubbable man, jovial and kind. For many in his caucus, vision consists of imagining bringing Bill Clinton to his knees. Chafee doggedly pursued his goals: clean air, clean water, a nation free of guns, a world where nuclear weapons were under control and people negotiated their differences.

He worried about foster children who at 18 lose government subsidies; he worried about the ABM treaty. The combination of practical and cosmic concerns and a nature that seemed devoid of malice made him an object of wonder. People who eulogized him on the Senate floor, including those who never voted his way, spoke of him with love and tears.

New Hampshire Sen. Robert Smith, now an independent, remembered that in 1991, when the Republican leadership was trying to dump Chafee as conference chairman, Smith, a newcomer, decided against his fellow New Englander. When he told Chafee that he was going to vote for Thad Cochran (Miss.), all Chafee said was "Oh, dear." He lost by one vote.

Sen. Daniel P. Moynihan (D), who served with Chafee on Environment and Public Works, remembers Chafee saying to him the next day, "There is no place for us liberals on our side any more." He was smiling as he said it.

"Liberal" is now a toxic word. "Moderate" is as far as anyone goes to describe someone who is out of step with Trent Lott. Republicans show no mercy to people who, like Chafee, sat down at committee tables and without the slightest nod to partisan sensibilities said, "Let's get at it."

Time was when Chafee's Wednesday group, a weekly lunch for the like-minded, had a dozen members and some influence. At their most recent meeting, last Wednesday, there were just five, counting Chafee. He was gaunt and feeble after August back surgery. He had weeks ago announced his decision to retire from the Senate, but he was using every last minute to make a difference. Susan Collins, a freshman Republican from Maine who, like several others, regarded Chafee as "my best friend in the Senate," told of Chafee's fervent remarks about foster children set loose at 18 and his hope that she could help in helping them.

Chafee, a gentleman of the old school, doubtless deplored what went on in the Oval Office. But he was one of five Republicans who voted against removing Clinton from office. He was one of four Republicans who voted for the Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty.

Chafee took no part in the pre-debate polemics on the test ban. He and Sen. Richard Lugar (Ind.), a pivotal Republican figure in all arms control efforts, were conspicuously absent. He told me a week before the treaty suffered meltdown on the floor that he was concentrating on the ABM treaty. As usual, he was looking down the road to the day when Senate hawks would tear up the treaty on the Senate floor and remove the last obstacle to building a missile defense system, their ultimate pie in the sky.

Republicans had been sniping at ABM, calling it "null and void" because the Soviet Union, with whom it was negotiated, no longer exists. Clinton will decide next June about going forward with a project about which the only certainty is its astronomical cost. The Russians say they will tolerate no change.

In this Senate the notion of unilateral withdrawal is a live option. So is a return to a full-throttle arms race and the Cold War. Chafee did not press colleagues on the test ban. He said he understood and shared their reservations about verification and our stockpile but on balance thought the country and the world would be better off if we ratified the treaty.

Those looking for consolation—Chafee always did in a dark hour—can find a little in the prospect that his death has greatly improved his son Lincoln's chances of succeeding him. Rhode Island is a small state that sent a great man to the Senate, and sympathy for his family is unbounded. Chafee, a pragmatist, would be pleased.

IN HONOR OF SENATOR JOHN CHAFEE

Mr. ROCKEFELLER. Mr. President, I come to the floor, after many of my colleagues have already said magnificent things, to say a word about a man I revered, worked with, and cherished both in personal and professional terms. That is, of course, John Chafee. There are so many reasons I respected and, in a sense, really loved John Chafee, and do to this minute and always will.

Many of them had to do with what it was that he didn't say and what it was that he didn't find a need to do. There was an interesting article in the Washington Post this morning by Mary McGrory that made me think back to the time I was in the Peace Corps. I served with a man who has since died by the name of Marty Grobli. We were working on the Philippines program together. He was an enormous hero of the Battle of the Bulge in World War II. He had done works of heroism which I never learned about because whenever as a young person in my early twenties I tried to ask him, because I wanted to learn about it, he said he didn't want to talk about it. I think that is the way of many who have been through searing emotional and physical experiences of danger, of patriotism, of great personal risk—they simply keep it to themselves. There isn't a need to tell others. War is not pleasant. War is destructive; war is carried out in the interests of the Nation or of many nations against one or several others.

John Chafee never felt a need. In fact, in all the years I knew him, I never heard him talk about serving in two wars, World War II and the Korean war, or the fact he was a marine. If one looked at John Chafee, particularly in the latter years, one wouldn't necessarily—unless you looked at that chiseled face—say this was a marine in the sense that one thinks about it in classical terms. He was not into looking tough, acting tough, or being tough—he just was tough. But he was tough on behalf of people he loved, whom he represented in Rhode Island, those he didn't directly represent, although he did as a Senator in the form of children and women and the inheritance of whatever quality of environment we will inherit in our country.

He was a steward of all of those things. He was ferocious in the way he fought for them. He never pushed himself forward. It always seemed, watching him on the Finance Committee when he was in a hearing conducting questioning, he was searching for truth, not either to show knowledge, of which he had a deep, deep repository, or to show special seniority. It was always that he was interested in what the witness was saying, reflecting on what the witness was saying, being courteous to the witness, tough on the witness where the witness might be withholding information or not fully disclosing some of the other arguments that might have been brought through that witness' answers.

I loved him for those qualities. I had no idea, I think as no one did, that this was going to be his fate. I didn't look forward to the fact he was going to retire, but since he announced he was going to retire I looked forward to the fact he would go back to Rhode Island, his beloved Northeast, to prowling his State, to be with the people who stood by him in all the years.

As the Senator from South Carolina knows, John Chafee was also a Governor. I was a Governor, and I think Governors bring to this body a particular ability and desire to want to reach a compromise to find a solution. The Presiding Officer was a Governor. And Governors often can't allow themselves to tarry because of an ideology. They can't tarry on simply a petulant feeling about this situation or that person because they are the only person in that State, be they man or woman, who can resolve the situation. Therefore, they have to seek a compromise. They have to seek a solution. I love that quality in a Senator. It is a quality John Chafee had in just an unparalleled amount.

So he never got to go back home. I feel very sad about that. I wanted to think about John Chafee at home, enjoying the fact he was looking back on all of his years of national service and public service and enjoying his grandchildren, his children, Ginny, his beloved State of Rhode Island, and all of the Northeast. He was a remarkable person.

I quote another thing Mary McGrory said which I liked so much:

In an institution that calls every man a gentleman, he really was one.

That kind of puts us in our places. But it also very much says something accurate about John Chafee. I have heard him talk to people sharply. But it was always on substance. It was always on issues. It was always on what it was between himself and a resolution to a policy problem that he cared about.

In the leader's chair sits the Senator from Iowa, Mr. GRASSLEY. He and I will remember, because we were both there, it was only last week—which is the heartbreaking part of it—that Senator John Chafee, as the senior member of the Finance Committee, was conducting a hearing on independent living. That is the problem caused when children are brought up, often abused by their parents or by others, through a foster care system, and then all of a sudden at the age of 18 they are declared independent.

Our colleague, the Presiding Officer, the Senator from Ohio, is also very interested in this problem. John Chafee was quizzing the young people who were there, who had come through the system—many, many foster parents, some of whom had worked, some of whom had not—but they had been, at the age of 18, declared independent. They were just cast out. They lost their health insurance. They didn't know how to open a bank account, not necessarily even how to operate a washing machine, and they said that to us in very clear and compelling ways.

I thought it was in situations such as that—I think my friend from Iowa will agree with me—that John Chafee was at his best. He was in his 70s. Yet he focused so much of what he did heavily on children who were in their fourth and fifth year, or in their teens. It was a burden and a passion that never relented.

The Senator from Iowa, Mr. GRASSLEY, and I are working very hard with our staff and the Finance Committee staff to try to complete that independent living bill, not simply—because that would embarrass him—as a way of honoring John Chafee, but, frankly, because John Chafee would be on us to do it. Knowing he is not here to do it himself, we intend to do that and we will do that. We hope it will pass this body and the other body and be signed by the President.

John Chafee's health is something I have to comment on because I always thought of him, and do think of him, as so strong. I wondered, as many of us did in the last several months, what was it that caused him to seem to become so fragile so quickly? But because I knew John Chafee and had known John Chafee, I always believed it would pass because John Chafee always came back. He was always there. He was frail because he had back surgery, but that was not going to lead to something else. It was simply something he was going to get over and come back and take his place over there, behind where the flowers are placed on his desk, and resume his work.

That is what John Chafee did. He did not retire when he was in his late 60s. He certainly was financially independent enough to do so, but he didn't retire because he wanted to work. He loved public policy. He loved helping children and families. He loved health care.

I can remember during the Clinton health care debates, it was classic John Chafee because we would go on Sunday television shows and he and I would have a wonderful conversation—before. We had different views on the legislation. We would have a very warm conversation before and then he would, during the course of the interview, proceed to shred me mercilessly, in good Marine fashion; you know, using good facts and good examples. Then, as soon as it was over, he would go back and we would be amiable.

I commented to him on that several times, and he just would sort of brush it off. He was doing his work. He was doing the work he was here to do.

When we think of children in this country getting health insurance, let us remember John Chafee because it was John Chafee who drove that. It was called the Children's Health Insurance Program—CHIPs. And Laurie Rubiner, his staff person, drove that. They were driving this independent living bill. There were so many things he did for people of all sorts.

I haven't even mentioned, except very briefly at the beginning, the environment.

John Chafee was also a very independent person. I do not say this as a Democrat; I say this as a Senator. I liked so much the fact that he was so ferociously independent of his own party when he chose to be; of his own party when they applied pressure on him; from his constituents, presumably, when they applied pressure on him. He always did what he thought was right. In the longer day of life, if you are who you are and you stay who you are, people will come in your direction. If you bend to other people's wills and people have a sense of that, then there will never be a need for them to come in your direction because they will sense, if they outwait you, they will prevail.

You could not do that with John Chafee, whether it was because he was this incredible person from Rhode Island and Northeast, this son of early America; whether it was because he was a marine; whether it was because of his own particular and unique nature—he never backed away from anything.

John Chafee was a great figure of the Senate. I am not in the position at this point to rate great figures in the Senate over eras. But I certainly start with the idea that John Chafee was and is one of those. I think he was an inspiration. He inspired me. I felt better when I saw him, when I was in his presence. I felt more motivated. I felt better about everything because he just did that to you, whether he was on his cane, as he was in the last month or so, or whether he was vigorous, as he was always before that. He enriched the lives of so many. He seemed to care very little about his own comforts, but, on the other hand, he was so devoted to his family.

In closing, I want to think about Ginny; I want to think about his children; I want to think about his grandchildren; I want to think about his staff, people who must be absolutely devastated now, all of them, each of the categories of people close to him, whom I have mentioned. I want them to know they were related to, married to, children of, grandchildren of, and working for, a really very great American.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Vermont.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, on Monday, as so many others in this body, I was shocked to hear the news of the passing of my dear friend and our colleague, Senator John Chafee.

I spoke out at that time of the feelings that both my wife Marcelle and I have for John and for Ginny and for their family. I would like to expand on that just a little bit further on the floor of the Senate.

When I spoke first, it was off the floor. But John and I spent so much time in this body that I felt it would be only appropriate to say something here because I feel that it was an incredible privilege to have served with him. I know his presence is going to be missed greatly by everyone.

It still seems strange to stand on the Senate floor and see his desk with a black shroud on it and the flowers there—something that in my 25 years I have seen several times for colleagues. You always hope you will not see it because when you see it you know—whichever side of the aisle it is on—that you will miss a Member of this very special family. There are only 100 who are privileged to serve, at any one time, in this body representing a quarter of a billion people. We have respect for each other, affection for many.

I think in this case, when you hear what has been said by Senators on both sides of the aisle, you know the great affection and respect there is for John Chafee. And it is only natural. He was a truly extraordinary man. He dedicated his life to serving his State of Rhode Island and his country. He did so with a commitment that yielded many benefits to all Americans, way beyond Rhode Island or New England.

He had a distinguished military career. He never questioned when duty called, even when it was at his own personal expense. He left Yale University as an undergraduate to serve in World War II. He returned to active duty in Korea shortly after receiving a law degree from Harvard. His contribution to Rhode Island and our country continued as Governor of his State, as Secretary of the Navy, and as a Senator.

The list of positions he held indicates a man of rare qualities. But what he did in those positions is what places John amongst the finest Americans to have served in the Senate. He was passionate about issues, but he had the unique ability to search for compromise among otherwise divided colleagues. He never seemed to lose sight of the fact that the Senate was working toward a common good, not an individual one.

From taking the office of Governor in 1962, in a largely Democratic State, to his four terms in the Senate, John Chafee showed the country he was willing to look past party lines and see what was at the heart of the issue at hand.

He made so many significant, visible and invisible, contributions to the Senate in the 24 years he served in this body. I was privileged to serve with him in each of those years. He was a tireless advocate of the environment, becoming the chairman of the Environment and Public Works Committee in 1994. He was a staunch supporter and advocate of many of the most important environmental protection laws that have been passed, including the Clean Air Act of 1990. He was always one of the strongest voices behind the protection of our wetlands, as well as the need to stop global warming from further progression.

I remember our latest legislative effort together on the so-called takings legislation, when John and I took to the Senate floor defending the rights of States and local officials to make their own decisions about their communities. I am sure many in the Senate probably grew tired as the two of us reminisced about New England character and the landscape we love so much. At times during that debate I thought the Chambers of Commerce of Rhode Island and Vermont should probably have hired us for all the things we were saying, but we made our point.

In health care, John was an advocate of compromise. His efforts to strengthen Medicare and Medicaid were actually seen as trying to appease Republicans and Democrats alike. What he was trying to do was to bring us together, because in every bend of the road, John was an advocate of serving his country to the very best of his ability. And he was successful in that every day of his life.

I think of arms control issues in the 1980s. John Chafee, John Heinz, Dale Bumpers—I remember working with them. We were sometimes referred to as the "Gang of Four" as we worked to bring reason to the nuclear arms race, even though we spanned the political spectrum among us. But as a veteran, as a decorated veteran, as a respected veteran, as a respected former Secretary of the Navy, John was not only an inspirational strategist in the "Gang of Four" but also an important resource of knowledge about the needs of an operationally effective nuclear triad.

So all of us have lost a beloved friend, one who will be missed dearly in the Senate. But the country should know the country suffered a great loss. Here was a man whose outlook and morals were of the highest standard. That should be something Senators in the present and the future should emulate. He was an anchor of civility for the Senate.

It is interesting that both he and my distinguished predecessor, as the senior Senator from Vermont, Bob Stafford, served as chairmen of the Environment Committee—both bringing those New England characteristics of civility in working for the better good.

Marcelle's and my thoughts and prayers are with Ginny and the rest of the Chafee family; and also with John Chafee's staff, who are among the finest people here—his extended family.

He will be missed. It was a privilege for the 99 remaining Senators to have served with him. And I think all 99 know that.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, I want to join with my colleagues in paying tribute to Senator John Chafee. With his passing this week, the Senate lost a wise and courageous voice. Anyone who spent any time in the Senate could see that Senator Chafee's reputation for honesty and individual conviction were well-deserved.

I want to offer his family my deepest sympathy and my deepest appreciation for sharing him with us for so long. He served as a role model of what a Senator should be.

The more I think about Senator Chafee—the more I realize the qualities that are rare today, were common in the gentleman from Rhode Island. Rare qualities like courage, independence, and a desire to always do what is right.

He often fought alone for what he believed was right. He worked for legislative compromise, but never compromised his own principles.

I was proud to join with him on many important initiatives, and his mark can be found on many of the landmark environmental protection laws enacted in the last twenty years. He was a thoughtful environmentalist—protecting the health and welfare of people, wildlife, and the environment as a whole, while at the same time balancing the needs of the economy. He recognized the fact that the West had a different relationship with its natural resources than the East. His work on clean air, clean water, oil pollution, and endangered species has benefited the entire nation. The people and the environment in my state, 3,000 miles away from Rhode Island, are far better off today, because a man named John Chafee served 23 years in this body.

Senator Chafee was also a consistent and articulate supporter of trade. And on issues like China MFN, he and I worked for the same goals.

Senator Chafee was a champion of women's health care long before it was politically correct. Long before anyone had ever heard of "soccer moms," he stood alone many times to fight for women's health, and he never backed down.

Senator Chafee was also a strong advocate of a woman's right to choose. He was a voice of reason in an increasingly emotional debate. He protected a woman's right to determine her own fate and to make her own health care decisions. He worked to improve access to reproductive health care services and to improve security at women's health clinics. I always took a great deal of comfort knowing he was at the table fighting for women.

Perhaps his greatest commitment was to children, all children. He worked to expand Medicaid to provide health care for millions of low income children. He fought to protect Medicaid. I know there are millions of children who are now healthy adults because of the work of Senator Chafee. One of my most vivid memories of Senator Chafee was fighting on the floor in June 1997 to expand health care security for the 10 million uninsured children. He refused to give up his goal, and he refused to pass an empty promise. His work created the successful, bipartisan Children's Health Insurance Program (CHIP) which ultimately will provide health security for five million children. Think of the kind of impact he will have on the quality of life for these five million children.

Mr. President, I believe one of my roles in the Senate is to speak for those that have no voice—children, working families, the environment, battered women, and the elderly. Those are the same causes John Chafee served and served so selflessly. I only hope I can measure up to the standard he set.

When someone like John Chafee—someone with rare personal qualities and a legacy found in the millions of people his policies helped—when someone like that leaves this world, it makes the rest of us reflect on his contribution. Mr. President, this Senate is the poorer for his passing.

Mr. ASHCROFT. Mr. President, today I join my Senate colleagues, the people of Rhode Island, and the citizens of this great nation in bidding a sad farewell to our friend and countryman John Chafee.

From the shores of Guadalcanal to his hometown of Providence, RI, to the floor of the United States Senate, John Chafee was a true patriot. In everything he did, he put the best interests of the United States first.

And even when I disagreed with him, I knew that our disagreements were legitimate disagreements about what each of us felt was the best interests of this great country.

Descendant of two Governors and a Senator, John liked to joke that the one member of his family who ran for office as a Democrat—Harvard professor Zechariah Chafee—lost handily. John, knowing the family history, signed up as a Republican and never looked back.

John was a remarkable man coming from a remarkable family. His legacy gave him a lot to live up to, and he not only met but exceeded all expectations.

John's record of successes began at an early age. In high school, he was the runner up in the 135 pound class in the state wrestling championships. And let me tell you, nobody wrestles like those 135 pounders! Not only was it an impressive achievement, but it was good training for a future career as a Senator.

Later, at Yale, he was captain of the undefeated Yale freshman wrestling team. We will never know if he would have repeated that achievement the following year, because he left Yale in his sophomore year to enlist in the Marines—he didn't have to do that, but because he was an American Patriot, he did.

In the Marines, he served at the Battle of Guadalcanal. John was in the first wave of Americans to join in the bloody and important battle there. This country will always owe a great debt to him and the other Marines who served so bravely there.

After the Marines, John sought to move on with his life. He went to Harvard Law School, got married, and began the practice of law in the state he loved so dear. But duty called once again, and he returned to the Marines, to lead a rifle company in our struggle in Korea, and the nation's debt to him became even greater.

After his service in Korea, John returned to Rhode Island and embarked upon a political career. While John had ups and downs in his time, he certainly had more ups than downs. And more importantly, he knew how to handle those downs.

One of the downs came in 1968, when he lost the governorship in a surprising upset. Richard Nixon, recognizing the talent in John, tapped him to be Secretary of the Navy. There he was faced with a difficult decision concerning the chief officers of the Pueblo, a Navy ship that had been taken by the North Koreans. John decided not to court martial the captain and chief intelligence officer of the ship, deeming that they had suffered enough during their internment in a Korean prisoner of war camp. It was a difficult decision, but John Chafee has a great wisdom in difficult matters and the nation once again benefited from John's leadership.

In 1976, he was elected to the United States Senate, the institution to which he would devote the rest of his days. Both John Chafee and I won elections to the Senate in 1994, he for his fourth term and I for my first. Despite the disparity in seniority, we became friends, exchanging greetings on his birthday, which was just last Friday. He always appreciated my greetings, and sent the kindest thank you notes in response.

In my time here, I had the pleasure to work with him on a great number of issues, but two in particular stand out.

The first is ISTEA, the all-important transportation legislation we passed here few years ago. I worked closely with John to secure desperately-needed transportation projects in my home State of Missouri. John was always willing to work with me and my staff, and the citizens of Missouri must be added to the list of those who owe him a debt of gratitude.

The other issue that stands out in my mind when I think of John is his effort to reform the Superfund program. John was always concerned about the environment; back in 1969, the New York

Post reported that John would stop his campaign motorcade and get out of his car to pick up a piece of litter. John always understood that we were all responsible for improving the environment, and his efforts to improve Superfund were based on that belief in individual action. As chairman of the Environment and Public Works Committee, he was in a position to act on his love for the environment, and his work in reforming Superfund is one of his most important achievements.

John leaves behind a loving wife, Ginny, 5 children, and 12 grandchildren. My prayers are for them at this time. They will miss him, as will we all.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I rise today to remember my friend and colleague, Senator John Chafee.

We were both elected to this great body in 1976. But, John was not your average freshman Senator. Whereas I had never held office before, John came to the Senate with a service record to his State and his country that was already exemplary.

He was a war hero, having fought with the Marines on Guadalcanal. He was a Rhode Island state legislator, Governor, and Secretary of the Navy.

But here, he was not content to rely upon past achievements, no matter how great those achievements were. He fought diligently for a cleaner environment, better health care, and a fair and fiscally sound Medicare and Medicaid system. Most recently, we worked together on the "Caring for Children Act," a bill which would have responsibly taken our nation's child care policy into the next century, providing parents with more options and expanding the ability of states to meet the needs of low-income working parents.

It was my pleasure to serve with John Chafee on the Finance Committee and the Select Committee on Intelligence. His leadership and understanding on these issues will be greatly missed.

I secretly admired John in another way as well. I understand that he could play a mean game of squash, which is a game I never learned.

Of all of John's titles—Governor, Secretary, Senator—I know that his favorites were "Dad" and "Grandpa." I offer my deep condolences to John's wife, Virginia, and to their children and grandchildren. I know that spending more time with them and in his beloved Rhode Island following his retirement next fall was something that he looked forward to. The tragedy of his sudden death is all the worse because he was cheated out of this well-earned retirement.

John Chafee was a gentleman, a statesman, and a true public servant. There is no higher accolade that I can pay him.

Elaine and I send our deepest sympathies to his wonderful family and to all Rhode Islanders on this great loss.

CLASS SIZE REDUCTION

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, we are nearing the end of the budget process, and there were inferences made on the floor yesterday that the class size initiative should not be part of the final budget agreement because—it has been claimed—the President doesn't have the authority to insist that we hire more teachers to reduce class size.

Mr. President, I have come to the floor today to clarify the President's important—and authorized role—in fighting for smaller classes. I have also come to the floor to remind my colleagues that this year we have smaller class sizes—where discipline has been restored and kids can learn the basics—because last year Congress made a bipartisan agreement—and a bipartisan commitment—to hire 100,000 new teachers in order to reduce size in first, second, and third grades.

Today, as the budget process winds down, I want to make sure that our agreement is not pushed aside.

Let me remind my colleagues that the President does have the authority in the Constitution to register his opinion on whether or not the budget is acceptable. In fact, the President doesn't just have the authority, but he has the responsibility under Article I, Section 7 to return bills with his objections that he does not approve of. And I'm glad the President has that authority and that he will use it if this Congress doesn't guarantee class size reductions. And 38 Senators signed a letter saying we would stand behind his threatened veto because we agree class size reduction is critical.

Mr. President, in trying to reduce the number of students in each classroom, I have followed the process. In March, I was told it wasn't the right time. In the subcommittee, I was told we weren't allowed to offer amendments. In full committee, I was told it was too controversial. Then, when I got the floor, I was told I'd have to wait until the Elementary and Secondary Education Act was written. If we have to wait until then, we won't be able to tell kids they will have small classes next year, and we can't tell teachers they will have their jobs next year.

Mr. President, I have followed the process, and I have waited. But I am tired of waiting as I sense that this Congress is trying to undo our bipartisan commitment. What am I supposed to tell students, "Congress has to write the ESEA and until then, you have to learn your ABCs in a class with 35 students." To me, that is not acceptable. I'm not going to tell them that. If this Congress feels so strong that guaranteeing smaller classes is not important, you can give them your excuses.

This is about money in the budget that Congress approved last year, and it is about us keeping our commitment to improving education by reducing class size.

The class size reduction effort has been a success in its first year. Today, we have kids learning in classrooms that are less crowded—learning to read, learning to write, and learning the basics with fewer discipline problems. They are working with a trained professional. Research shows they are going to have higher graduation rates, higher grade point averages and a higher likelihood of pursuing higher education.

They are going to be successful because of the work this Congress did one year ago. And the President has a right to insist on it. We as Democrats have a right to insist on it, and—as a Senator in this body—I am here to insist on it.

Now is the time to keep our commitment. Now is when the decisions are being made. Now is when we have to stand up for smaller classes. If we have to wait until after all budget deals have been cut, until after all the money has been spent, we will have failed those teachers, we will have failed those parents, but most importantly, we will have failed those children.

Mr. President, it is a national priority to reduce class size so kids can learn the basics and so discipline can be restored in the classroom. It is a promise we made last year and we need to put the money behind it, wherever it is appropriate.

A few weeks ago, I met with a teacher in Tacoma, WA, named Kris Paynter. Last year, there were 30 kids in her first grade class. This year there are 13 because of this program. That makes a huge difference for those kids. I saw a disciplined classroom where kids could learn the basics. Next year, we don't know how many kids will be in Ms. Paynter's class. And we can't even guarantee those 29,000 teachers hired last year will keep their jobs.

Mr. President, putting all of these process questions aside, what really matters at the end of the day is that kids have smaller classes. The teachers and parents in this country care that we do it. Period.

The millions of children who are now in smaller classes aren't wondering "has this been authorized?" or "is this in the budget?" or "does the President have the constitutional authority to reduce class sizes?" What really matters is that we fulfill our promise to parents, teachers, and students that we made last year in a bipartisan process.

Mr. President, I hate to say it, but at every turn, this Congress has put special interests ahead of the interests of real families. This is the last opportunity we will have to do something significant for kids. We didn't address the loopholes that still allow kids and criminals to get their hands on guns. We didn't make schools safer after the Columbine tragedy. We didn't provide health insurance to more kids. This is the last chance we have in this Congress to do something for our kids, fix a problem we know exists. And I am here to say that we cannot let this chance pass.

We need to keep our commitment to reducing class size. We need to be able to tell those teachers they will have jobs next year, and we need to be able to tell those kids they will have small classes next year. Let's stand behind our commitment.

THE HAGEL PROPOSAL ON CAMPAIGN FINANCE REFORM

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I come to the floor to briefly comment on a significant development in the fight for campaign finance reform. This morning, a bipartisan group of Senators, led by the Senator from Nebraska, Mr. HAGEL, announced a new campaign finance reform proposal. Let me say that I and the Senator from Arizona, Mr. MCCAIN, warmly welcome the heightened participation of this new group of Senators, which includes the Senator from Louisiana, Ms. LANDRIEU, who has been, from the day she came to the Senate, a strong supporter of campaign finance reform. I also note that it includes five Republican Senators who have previously never voted for a campaign finance reform measure that includes limits on soft money.

As I predicted last week on the floor, the wall of protection for the current system of unlimited soft money contributions to the political parties is rapidly crumbling. While I am pleased by this development, I am not surprised. The soft money system is indefensible. I think we saw that during our abbreviated debate last week. Opponents of reform didn't defend soft money; they tried to divert our attention from it. They actually questioned whether there is anything corrupting about unlimited contributions from corporate and union treasuries to the political parties.

As the chairman of the Global Board of Directors of Deloitte Touche Tohmatsu wrote in the New York Times when he heard about these comments on the floor:

You could almost here the laughter coming from boardrooms and executive suites all over the country when Senate opponents of campaign finance reform expressed dismay that anyone could think big political contributions are corrupting elections and government.

I think the new initiative, led by the Senator from Nebraska, recognizes the opponents of reform have now retreated to an untenable position. They are defending the indefensible. To say there is nothing wrong with unlimited contributions to the political parties, that this is somehow the "American way," is to live in a fantasy world the American people simply will not accept.

The public knows soft money is wrong. The public knows soft money is corrupting. And the business community knows it, too, as the Global Chairman of Deloitte Touche Tohmatsu so well expressed.

While the Hagel proposal does not ban soft money completely, which I believe is an essential element of an acceptable campaign finance reform bill, it does limit it significantly. So what you have here is a whole new group of Republican Senators, as well as some Democrats who are obviously saying it is not unconstitutional to limit soft money. In fact, they are obviously seeing the abuse of $300,000 or $500,000 contributions and they want to do something about it. So I am looking forward to working with Senator HAGEL and the others to reach common ground.

When campaign finance reform left the floor last week, we had a total of 55 Senators who had voted in favor of reform. Now, with this new initiative, there are five more Senators who apparently are prepared to vote to change this system. I think that is very significant, as I am sure my colleagues know, because what is 55 plus 5? It is 60. If we can bring all of these Senators together on a package they can all accept, we can break the filibuster. What we need now is real hard work, bipartisan work. We need to bridge our differences. If we can do that, we can defeat the defenders of this corrupt system and give the people a cleaner and fairer campaign finance system for the new century.

I yield the floor.

Lott (for ASHCROFT) amendment No. 2340 (to amendment No. 2334), to establish a Chief Agricultural Negotiator in the Office of the United States Trade Representative.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, I rise to discuss the trade bill which is before us, and to register some disappointment with the path the leader has chosen to pursue because at this point the leader has indicated that he is not going to permit amendments to this trade bill. He has brought the bill to the floor, but he has what we call around here "filled the tree."

I am certain people who are listening to this out across the country must wonder what this language we use around here means. Very simply, it means the Republican leader has constructed this bill and amendments to the bill that preclude other Senators from offering amendments to this legislation. I regret that. I think it is a mistake.

One of the reasons we are bogged down around here is because the leader keeps doing this and keeps bringing up bills and keeps filling the tree. He keeps filing cloture and doesn't let the Senate legislate. I understand from time to time that may be necessary to move business in the Senate. But I think it has now happened so frequently that it is actually stopping business in the Senate. I believe that is a mistake.

Hopefully, this will change and we will be given an opportunity to offer amendments. I have several amendments that I believe should be considered by the body on this legislation. They are directly relevant to trade. In fact, I can't think of amendments any more relevant than the amendments I would like to offer.

The first amendment I would like considered is one to give direction to our trade negotiators as they go into the WTO Round in Seattle next month. We are just weeks away from our negotiators going into talks with all of the other countries that are involved in these discussions. We have not taken the opportunity to give direction to our trade negotiators on the policies they ought to pursue in these talks.

I believe it is very important that we set out what the goals should be. What should we ask our negotiators to have as their negotiating priorities?

I also would like to offer an amendment that would give trade adjustment assistance to farmers because right now they are left out. If they are adversely affected by a trade agreement that we reach, tough luck. They are left out. They are not helped. They ought to be included. Certainly, there ought to be restrictions as to how it would apply. But trade adjustment assistance ought to be provided for farmers. That is an amendment that I would like to offer to this bill. Right now I am precluded from doing so because, as I indicated, the Republican leader is denying other Senators the opportunity to present amendments.

I am willing to live by the will of this body. I am willing to offer an amendment and have votes taken. If I win, I win. If I lose, I lose. But I would at least like to have the opportunity to see where the will of the Senate lies on these questions. What are the negotiating instructions we give to our delegation to the WTO talks? Should farmers be included in trade adjustment assistance just as every other worker in this country is eligible? I believe the answer to those questions is a firm yes.

Let me first indicate that the reason I believe it is so critically important that we give instructions to our negotiators with respect to agriculture and what they do in terms of pursuing an agricultural policy in the WTO talks is because we are getting skunked in these discussions. We have been getting skunked and skunked repeatedly in these international trade talks.

Not so long ago I was visiting with the chief negotiator for the Europeans who told me: Senator, we believe we are in a trade war with the United States on agriculture. We believe at some point there will be a cease-fire in this conflict and we want to occupy the high ground. The high ground is world market share. Our European friends have engaged in a strategy and a plan to dominate world market share in agriculture. They have succeeded brilliantly. They have gone from being the largest importing region in the world to being one of the largest exporting regions in 20 years. They have done it the old-fashioned way: They have done it by buying these markets. They have spent, and spent profusely, in order to win this world agricultural trade battle.

Over the last 3 years, they have averaged $44 billion a year in support for producers versus our $6 billion. They have been outspending America 7 to 1 in terms of support for producers over the last 3 years. That is part of their strategy. That is part of their plan. They want to go out and buy these markets. The way they have done it is very interesting. They have developed a structure of agricultural support that pays their producers more within European boundaries to produce the same crops we produce, and then they take the surplus production that results and sell it for fire sale prices on the international market, driving prices down for them, driving down prices for us, driving down prices for everyone. That is also part of their strategy as they increase their market share—again, with the notion they are going to be in a position when a cease-fire is declared in this trade conflict to extract concessions. Oh, how well that strategy and plan has been working.

Their level of support is much higher than ours—3 times as high in some measures, 7 times as high under total support measurement, 60 times as high looking at world agricultural trade subsidy—and we are being outgunned. How do we win a fight when we are being outgunned on world agricultural export subsidy by 60 to 1? That is what the latest figures reveal. Europe accounts for almost 84 percent of all world agricultural trade subsidy; 84 percent. The United States, 1.4 percent. They are providing 60 times as much to go out and buy these markets as we are doing. Not surprisingly, they are winning.

Their trade negotiator said: Senator, we have a higher level of support than you do. In the last trade talks, instead of closing the gap, they were able to get equal percentage reductions from these unequal levels of support. Again, that is part of their strategy and plan. They don't want to see this gap closed. They don't want to see the United States go up and theirs go down. They don't want to see any movement in this relationship where they are now dominant. Instead, they want to secure equal percentage reductions from these unequal levels.

If they are able to do that, they will push us closer and closer to the brink of losing tens of thousands of farm families all across this country. That is why I believe it is critically important we offer negotiating objectives for agriculture to our delegation that will begin with the WTO Round in November.

If I were able to offer the amendment, I would offer the following negotiating objectives. The amendment I have crafted, and it is cosponsored by Senator GRASSLEY of Iowa, lays out seven principal negotiating objectives for agriculture:

No. 1, we should insist on the immediate elimination of all export subsidy programs worldwide. Export subsidies only depress world market prices. I think this is something we could agree on in the Senate. It is not in our interests to have world agricultural export subsidies. It is certainly not in our interests when the Europeans are outspending the United States in this regard 60 to 1.

No. 2, we should insist that the European Union and others adopt domestic farm policies that force their producers to face world prices at the margin so they do not produce more than is needed for their domestic markets. Every economist I have spoken to has told me that is something that makes sense to them, that every country ought to face world market prices at the margin. It is one thing for countries to adopt domestic food security policies to ensure they can feed themselves; it is entirely another matter to subsidize excess production and then dump this surplus on the world market, depressing prices for everyone else.

No. 3, we should insist that the State trading enterprises, such as the Canadian Wheat Board, are disciplined so their actions are transparent and they do not provide de facto export subsidies.

No. 4, we should insist on the use of sound science when it comes to sanitary and phytosanitary restrictions. Too often these are used as hidden protectionist trade barriers. On genetically modified organisms—which is a very hot issue in Europe—we should insist that foreign markets be open to our products, but we should also recognize we can't force consumers to buy what they don't want. We have to give consumers the ability to make an informed choice on whether they want to buy these products without letting inflammatory labels be used as hidden trade barriers.

No. 5, we should insist that our trading partners immediately reduce their tariffs on our agricultural exports to levels that are no higher than ours and then further reduce these barriers.

No. 6, we should seek cooperative agricultural policies to avoid price-depressing surpluses or food shortages.

No. 7, we should strengthen dispute settlement and enforce existing commitments. We honor our commitments. All too often, other countries that are party to these agreements fail to follow what they have pledged to do.

I think these are seven commonsense negotiating objectives we ought to lay out for our delegation to the WTO talks. I hope at some point we are able to offer that amendment.

I have indicated I want to offer an amendment allowing our farmers to qualify for trade adjustment assistance. The amendment I want to offer—and again, this is cosponsored by Senator GRASSLEY—makes farmers eligible for trade adjustment assistance similar to what is provided to other workers in other industries who suffer as a result of unfair imports. When imports cause layoffs in manufacturing industries, workers are eligible for trade adjustment assistance. But when imports cause the same kind of problem to farmers, they are not eligible because the test is job loss.

Of course, farmers don't work for a paycheck, they get their living by selling the commodities they produce. When they are faced with a circumstance in which they are unfairly impacted by trade imports, they lose their income but not their job. So when it comes to trade adjustment assistance, they are out of luck. They don't qualify for trade adjustment assistance. Farmers lose their income, and there is nothing to help them. In fact, this may be something we do to them ourselves. We may negotiate away certain sectors of our industry as we did in the so-called Canadian Free Trade Agreement. Yet we come back and do absolutely nothing for the sector of our economy that was traded away—in this case, farmers.

We have a case in my State where certain loopholes were negotiated in the Canadian Free Trade Agreement that allow Canadians to flood our market with Canadian durum. We can't send a bushel north, and yet there is nothing to help our farmers who were basically sold out in that negotiation. There is not one thing to be done to help them. We have lost hundreds of millions of dollars a year, and nothing is being done to provide assistance to those farmers. The least we could do is provide trade adjustments as we do for every other industry.

That is why I believe we must act on an amendment such as the one Senator GRASSLEY and I have crafted. Trade adjustment assistance for farmers can not only provide badly needed cash assistance to a devastated agricultural economy; it can reignite support for trade among many family farmers.

The Conrad-Grassley amendment would assist farmers who lost income because of unfair imports. Farmers would get a payment to compensate them for some, but not all, of the income they lose if increased imports affect commodity prices. The maximum any farmer would receive in any one year is $10,000, and the maximum cost of this amendment would be $100 million a year.

Under our amendment, the Secretary of Agriculture would decide whether the price of a commodity has dropped more than 20 percent and whether imports contributed importantly to this price drop. The "imports contributed importantly" standard is the same standard the Department of Labor uses to determine whether workers are eligible for trade adjustment assistance when they lose their jobs.

In order to be eligible for benefits under this program, farmers would have to demonstrate their net farm income has declined from the previous years. This was a criticism leveled at the amendment in the Finance Committee, and we have added this provision to try to respond to that criticism.

Farmers would also need to meet with the USDA's Extension Service to plan how to adjust to the import competition. This adjustment could take the form of improving the efficiency of the operation or switching to different crops.

Training and employment benefits available to workers under trade adjustment assistance would also be available to farmers as an option. In most years, the program would have a very modest cost because very few commodities, if any, would be eligible. But in a year comparable to last year, when hog prices collapsed and wheat prices tumbled, the program would offer modest support to compensate farmers for the harmful effect of imports.

These are two amendments that I believe are totally relevant to the bill before us. One of these amendments I offered in the Finance Committee to this very bill. Now this legislation is on the floor and we are precluded from offering an amendment here. Again, I hope the leader will relent. I hope he will open it up so those of us who have serious amendments, amendments that deserve consideration, can at least get an up-or-down vote.

The second amendment I discussed, dealing with WTO negotiating objectives, I also think is directly relevant. Frankly, we are not going to have another chance to give instructions to our delegation before they go to the WTO Round. Before they commence these trade talks, we ought to have an opportunity to give negotiating guidelines to our negotiators. That is part of our responsibility, part of our role. If we do not have a chance here, we are not going to have a chance.

Finally, I have a third amendment on agricultural sanctions that I would hope could be considered.

I very much hope before this is done we will have a chance to offer amendments, amendments that are serious, that are relevant to trade, so our colleagues may pass judgment on them, so we may consider and vote on them.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma.

NO NEW WAVE OF ISOLATIONISM

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, I am going to speak in a moment on the trade bill, but first I want to repudiate, or at least take issue with, some of the comments that have been made by the President and those of his National Security Adviser, Sandy Berger, when he made comments about the Senate becoming the new isolationists.

I looked at his speech he made before the Council on Foreign Relations just a couple of days ago. He blasted the Senate, blasted Republicans, or that was the implication. I will quote:

It's tempting to say the isolationist right in Congress has no foreign policy, that it is driven only by partisanship. But that understates it. I believe there is a coherence to its convictions, a vision of America's role in the world. Let me tell you what I think they are in simple terms; First: any treaty others embrace, we won't join. The new isolationists are convinced that treaties—pretty much all treaties—are a threat to our sovereignty and continued superiority.

I could go on, but I am very offended by that statement. I am very offended the National Security Adviser of this President would make such a statement about Members of this Senate. He is factually incorrect. He is making statements that send bad signals throughout the world that are unfounded, and he should be ashamed, and he should apologize for this speech he made before the Council on Foreign Relations.

He implies this new isolationism is against all treaties, and he is implying maybe Republicans don't like treaties. Let me just take issue with that.

In 1988, we passed the Intermediate Nuclear Forces Treaty. It passed by an overwhelming margin. We passed the START treaty, Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty, START I in 1992, START II in 1996, by overwhelming majorities.

We worked and had a bipartisan arms control group that monitored arms control. I might mention, that started under President Reagan and President Bush. It has been discontinued, to my knowledge, under President Clinton, and maybe that is to his loss. One of the reasons that group was put together was that another arms control treaty, the SALT II treaty, the Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty proposed by President Carter, was defeated.

I am amazed, when people said the Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty was the first treaty defeated in the Senate, they don't count SALT II. SALT II was defeated. We didn't have an up-or-down vote, but President Carter had the treaty withdrawn. He could count votes and he didn't have 67 votes. It was not going to be ratified, so he withdrew the treaty. And he was correct in doing so. That treaty had fatal flaws.

So subsequent administrations, President Reagan and President Bush, said let's have a bipartisan arms control group in the Senate that will help monitor, discuss, give advice and consent. So we had good dialog on treaties as they evolved, and this Senate was quite successful in ratifying those treaties. I mentioned the fact we ratified INF, START I, START II, Conventional Forces in Europe—we did that in the 1990s—the Chemical Weapons Convention.

I might mention, I did not support the Chemical Weapons Convention, but it still passed by an overwhelming majority. I have my reasons. I don't think it is verifiable. I think somebody can build chemical weapons in a closet and no one will ever know. But my point is, that happened just a year or so ago.

This Senate also passed NATO expansion. We passed it overwhelmingly.

So, again, for the President's National Security Adviser to say we are isolationist I think is absolutely wrong. To say we oppose all treaties is absolutely wrong.

I might go ahead and mention that if the President submits the Kyoto treaty, the Global Climate Change Protocol negotiated in Kyoto, Japan, it will be defeated. This Senate passed a resolution prior to their signing that treaty with 90-some votes saying we will not ratify something that leaves out major players worldwide, players such as China, Mexico and India, who did not sign the Kyoto Protocol, didn't sign the treaty—that we would not sign it. It has several other fatal flaws. The President went ahead and signed it anyway. If the President submits that treaty for ratification, it will go down in defeat.

Is it our fault the President went ahead and submitted the Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty? Didn't he read the Constitution? The Constitution says it takes two-thirds to ratify a treaty. He never had two-thirds. He didn't even have a majority. Was that the Republican Members' fault when we had Members of the Senate, day after day, saying "We want a vote on the treaty"? The President said, "We want a vote on the treaty." We had ranking members, the ranking minority Member of the Senate and several others saying, "We want to vote on the treaty." So we did what we often do around here; we entered into a unanimous consent agreement that could have been objected to by any Senator and scheduled a vote.

Then people wanted to get out of the vote because, oops, we counted and we don't have 67 votes. There were not even 50 votes. All it would have taken was a unanimous consent to defer the vote and that attempt was not made. Senator LOTT tried to offer the President an escape route, but he wouldn't take it. The President didn't even call Senator LOTT until an hour, maybe 2 hours, before the vote. That is the President's fault.

Let's go back to treaties. Is this Senate willing to ratify and consider treaties?

What about the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty? That is a treaty we have ratified, but we also know it has not been enforced. We know Russia has been selling nuclear weapons and materials to Iran, and this administration has done almost nil about it. The fact is the last Congress passed legislation to increase penalties for firms that, through Russia, are selling to Iran. The President did not want to sign it. He eventually signed it.

He has been lax in the enforcement of the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty with respect to Iran. The administration has been looking the other way with China, who has been selling arms, missiles, and equipment to Pakistan. China signed that treaty. Russia signed the treaty. Iraq signed the treaty. And the administration turns its back on Iraq. North Korea signed the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty, and they have not complied with it. They have not come close to complying. As a matter of fact, we have uncovered evidence that they are pretty active in their nuclear program.

The Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty says there will be onsite visits. North Korea said: No, there will be no onsite visits; we are turning off the cameras. The administration said: We are going to reward your noncompliance and build you a couple of nuclear powerplants and we will give you millions of dollars of oil every year if you promise not to do this anymore.

What was North Korea's response? Thank you very much; we will take your money, your powerplants and, incidentally, we will lob missiles over South Korea, over Japan, and maybe hit the west coast of the United States, certainly Alaska.

The administration has rewarded noncompliance of the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty by North Korea. They have done the same thing with Iraq. My colleagues might remember we had a war. We had a war in Iraq in 1991—actually, in 1990, we had a significant buildup. In 1991, we had a war.

At the conclusion of that war, we said: Before we are going to allow Iraq to sell oil, we are going to have international arms control inspectors to make sure they are not building nuclear weapons and that they were not in violation of the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty—to make sure they are not building chemical weapons, not building biological weapons; so we are going to have an arms control group monitor Iraq to make sure they are not building weapons of mass destruction. Unless they complied with that, we were not going to let them sell oil. That was in 1991. That was after we won the war with Iraq.

Guess what has happened since then. Since this President has been elected, gradually over time, we have allowed Iraq to sell more oil year by year. We have zero inspectors in Iraq today. Zero. So they are able to build their nuclear weapons, chemicals weapons, and biological weapons. We do not have anybody on the ground. We may have satellites flying around, but they cannot pick that up. They can be built in small rooms.

This administration's record on proliferation is poor. Their record on enforcing the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty is pathetic. Again, to have this administration lecturing Members of the Senate and saying we are new isolationists is totally unfounded.

They rewarded Iraq for their non-compliance. They did not comply with the regime imposed on them by the United States and, frankly, the entire world—the United Nations. They did not comply with it.

What did we do? We rewarded them and said: You can sell all the oil you want. And the administration ratified that by a unanimous vote in the Security Council 3 weeks ago which said to Iraq: You can sell all the oil you want and, incidentally, you do not have to have any arms control inspectors whatsoever in Iraq; none, zero.

Great. That is a great policy.

Speaking of nonproliferation, the whole idea of nonproliferation is we do not want a lot of nuclear weapons primarily, but we also do not want chemical and biological weapons spreading around the world. We do not want them expanding.

Maybe the administration better give us some answers, including the Vice President of the United States, when we have evidence turned in by the intelligence agencies—actually, it was done by a Chinese agent—that shows us they have copied or they have multitudes of information on our nuclear weapons, including our missile designs, our latest warheads, and a whole variety of things. We found out about that.

When did the President find out about it? His National Security Adviser found out about it in the fall of 1995. Sandy Berger, who is Assistant National Security Adviser, at least was briefed about it by the Department of Energy in April of 1996. According to Mr. Berger's statement, he did not brief the President until July of 1997. Mr. Berger, why didn't you brief the President?

Somehow, I do not believe that. He should resign. If the National Security Adviser finds out that China has access to our latest technology or designs on nuclear weapons in April of 1996 and does not brief the President until July of 1997, he should be replaced. These are weapons that threaten the security of the United States. These are weapons that threaten the security of the world. And he did not find time to brief the President of the United States? I do not believe that.

When did the President find out they had stolen these weapons or they have the designs for these weapons? What is our National Security Adviser there for? To make partisan speeches in New York calling Republicans new isolationists? He does not find time to brief the President, but he has time to sit in on campaign meetings throughout the year and at the same time we have Chinese arms merchants coming to the White House writing big checks? This thing smells. It is despicable. Yet he has time to make partisan speeches that are totally, completely unfounded.

I have gone over a few treaties, and I have mentioned several the Senate has ratified when Republicans have been in control and when the Democrats have been in control. We had bipartisan ratification for every treaty I mentioned.

I mentioned the Kyoto treaty earlier. It has bipartisan opposition, and if the President submits it, it will not be ratified.

I mentioned the Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty about which the President is so upset. It was not ratified because it is a treaty in perpetuity. It is a treaty that says 100 years from now or 40 years from now, no matter what China does, no matter what Russia does or what Iraq does or any other country, if we find out they have an aggressive nuclear program, we still cannot test because we will abide by the treaty in spite of the fact that other countries may not.

The Senate, by a majority vote, said it is not going to ratify a treaty that has zero test limits. Every President in the past has said if we have a treaty, it should be temporary, a moratorium, and not a permanent ban; it should allow for some small amount of testing. Frankly, we think some countries which have signed it are already cheating, but we cannot detect it because it is not verifiable.

Many think this is not a treaty on which we should bind the United States for the next 40 years. Mr. President, you have to submit a better treaty. You have to consult with Congress. You have to get some advice and consent. You cannot rail and make partisan statements that you want a vote and you get a vote, but then you say: Wait, I didn't know. I thought we were guaranteed to win. That is not in the Constitution. Congress fulfilled its constitutional duty. Maybe the President should read the Constitution. It takes two-thirds of the Senate to ratify a treaty. It is not our fault he did not have the votes. He did not even come close to having the votes.

What about this new military isolationism about which Mr. Berger is talking, implying the Republicans do not want to get involved in a foreign war? Maybe he is alluding to this Senator.

In January of 1991, we voted in the Senate whether to authorize the use of military power in Iraq. And we did. We passed it by a vote of 52 to 47. We had some bipartisan support. Vice President GORE supported that resolution.

Most Democrats opposed it, including the majority leader, including some very respected Senators whom I know and think the world of: Senator Nunn, Senator Boren, for example. They were saying let's give sanctions a little more of a chance before we initiate the war. I respected that. I didn't agree with it, but I respected it. I did not question them or call them isolationists. I did not question their patriotism. But yet when some of us had some reservations or opposition to the bombing campaign in Kosovo, we are now called isolationists. I disagree with that.

In the Rambouillet accords, the Secretary of State, Madeleine Albright, basically said: Mr. Milosevic, you need to sign this treaty we have put together or we're going to bomb you. I have made several speeches on the floor that have those transcripts. Those were statements that she made: We're going to bomb if you don't sign.

I was opposed to that. I stated at the time I thought it might make matters worse. And, frankly, it did.

If you are concerned about the humanitarian loss, things were a lot worse after the bombing was initiated. After we pulled out the observers, the monitors, things really got bad. Thousands of people lost their lives. Is it unpatriotic to question that action? Does it make you an isolationist because you don't think we have used all the diplomatic tools at our disposal before we start trying to bomb somebody into submission?

This administration has bombed four countries in the last 13 months. They have bombed in Serbia; they have bombed in Sudan; they bombed in Afghanistan; they bombed in Iraq—most all of which have not been effective. In Serbia, particularly Kosovo, for a long time it made matters a much worse.

I don't question people's integrity or their patriotism or whether they are new isolationists. I question that policy. The same thing in Bosnia. I thought we should have given the Bosnians a chance to defend themselves. This administration did not. There was a difference of opinion. I met with Bosnian leaders who came in and said: We don't want your troops to be stationed in Bosnia. We want to have arms so we can defend ourselves. I happen to agree with that policy and also said: If we go this route, we are going to be stuck in Bosnia forever. We are. I visited the camps in Bosnia. We are going to have U.S. soldiers there for a long time. Now we are going to have United States soldiers occupying Kosovo, probably for decades, at a cost of billions of dollars.

So my point is, this administration seems quick to bomb, and if you question their rhetoric or if you question the issue, well, maybe you are a new isolationist. I just disagree with that.

I don't like name calling and there seems to be a lot of it lately. I am personally offended. Somebody made the implication that, well, somebody was a racist because we didn't confirm a judicial nomination. I am very offended by that comment. I am upset about that comment and the implication from the President and from a couple Members of this body. That does not add to the debate. That is not right. It is inaccurate.

In that particular case, the judge was opposed by the National Sheriffs Organization and opposed by the State chief of police. For that reason, I voted no. It did not have anything to do with his race.

I just think name calling—whether you are calling somebody a new isolationist or whether you are saying somebody has racial motives—is very offensive.

Let me just touch on a couple other issues. Mr. Berger alludes to the fact that we are isolationists. We have a trade bill before the Senate today, the African trade bill. We are trying to pass that. We are trying to include the Caribbean Basin Initiative. We are trying to pass that as well.

There are some Members on the Democrat side who are opposing that. They have a right to do it. My guess is, an overwhelming majority of the Senate will vote to pass this. And I do not question the integrity of one of my colleagues who is opposing it. He has the right to do that. They are entitled to their opinion. They are entitled to offer their amendments. They are entitled to have discussion and debate on the issue.

But if you look at trade over the last 10 or 15 years, this Congress passed NAFTA by a bipartisan vote. We passed GATT. NAFTA, we passed in 1993; GATT, the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, in 1994.

This Senate is more than willing to pass fast track. The President did not call for fast track to be reauthorized because he was running for reelection in 1996. Some of the leaders of organized labor did not want it, so he didn't call for it to be done in 1996. He waited until after his reelection and then he sent it to us.

He was the first President, going all the way back to President Ford, I believe, who didn't have fast-track authority. After he was reelected, he said: Hey, Congress, pass this. The Senate wanted to pass it, but the House couldn't. A lot of House Democrats said: You didn't want to take a tough vote before the election, so we do not need to do it now either. He could hardly get any votes from Democrats in the House to pass fast track. So he is the first President in decades who has not had that authority. It is not the Republicans' fault. That is not new isolationism.

Is the President catering to protectionist forces within his own party and within the organized labor agenda? He could not get it through the House; but it was not the House Republicans, it was the House Democrats that presented the problem. And those are just the facts.

Another issue at hand is the World Trade Organization. There is going to be a meeting of the WTO in Seattle. Most Republicans support the idea of reducing trade barriers throughout the world. There are negotiations with the People's Republic of China in the WTO. They were so close, and the President would not say yes. A Chinese delegate came to the United States and made a lot of trade concessions. Frankly, it was a pretty good deal. My compliments to the President's Trade Representative, Charlene Barshefsky, who negotiated a good deal. And then the President would not say yes.

Why? Because maybe a few people in organized labor did not want him to say yes. Regardless, he did not say yes. So now he has called, I guess, the Chinese Premier and said: Well, we really want to do WTO. He had them here a few months ago, and he said no. Whose fault is that? Who is the new isolationist? Most of us realize we need to develop and encourage growing markets with China.

So I mention a few of those things to just repudiate, in the strongest words I possibly can, Sandy Berger's comments talking about the new isolationist fever that is running through Congress. Maybe there are some people running for President who have that philosophy. They don't represent the Republican Party. As a matter of fact, the primary person espousing that belief left the Republican Party.

In the Senate, I serve on the Finance Committee with Senator ROTH and Senator MOYNIHAN, and others on that committee, who have jurisdiction over trade issues, who have jurisdiction over tax issues. There is not an isolationist trend coming out of that committee or from the Senate.

If the President wants to get treaties ratified, he needs to consult with the Senate. He could have found out from the Senate he had some flaws in the Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty and did not have the votes. He could have found that out before asking for the vote and saved himself some embarrassment. Hopefully, he will come to that realization with the Kyoto Treaty.

We had a resolution in the Senate with, I believe, 94 votes that said Kyoto was fatally flawed, don't bring it to the Senate in this form or it will not be ratified. So maybe he is taking that as a hint he doesn't have the necessary 67 votes.

I hope the President and his National Security Adviser will move away from this rhetoric of "new isolationism" because, frankly, they are fomenting something that is not there. It is very much to the disadvantage of our country, our reputation worldwide, and it does not do them service because it is not true.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. HOLLINGS addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. AL-LARD). The Senator from South Carolina.

THE BUDGET

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, if there is one difficulty we have in this trade debate, it is credibility. If you believe the distinguished leaders, the President, the majority, minority leader, the distinguished chairman of our Finance Committee, you are bound to vote for this particular agreement with respect to the Caribbean Basin Initiative and the sub-Sahara. Then if you believe this Senator, who is in a dreadful minority at this point, you couldn't possibly vote for it.

Trying to bolster my credibility, because I have spoken throughout the year with respect to the budget, the deficit and whether or not there is a surplus, I ask unanimous consent to print in the RECORD this morning's column entitled "Hill Negotiators Agree to Delay Part of NIH Research Budget."

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Washington Post, Oct. 28, 1999]

HILL NEGOTIATORS AGREE TO DELAY PART OF NIH RESEARCH BUDGET

(By Eric Pianin)

House and Senate negotiators yesterday agreed to delay a big chunk of the research budget to the National Institutes of Health, as they struggled to find new ways to hold down costs and stay within tight spending limits.

With concerns rising over their plan to cut programs across the board, Republican leaders are once again turning to creative accounting tactics to make sure their spending bills are lean enough to avoid tapping into Social Security payroll taxes.

The last of the 13 spending bills to be considered by Congress, a giant $313 billion measure funding labor, health and human service programs, would provide the NIH with $17.9 billion for fiscal 2000, a 15 percent increase that exceeds the administration request by $2 billion.

But the bill, which will be considered by the full Congress today, would require the NIH to wait until the final days of the fiscal year in September to use $7.5 billion of that money. The tactic is aimed at limiting the actual amount of money that the government will spend at NIH in the current fiscal year; the plan would essentially roll over $2 billion of spending to next year.

The Clinton administration warned that the move would seriously hamper research efforts and impose significant administrative burdens on NIH, and congressional Democrats complained that it was yet another step eroding GOP credibility on budget matters.

But Senate Appropriations Committee Chairman Ted Stevens (R-Alaska) said Congress was justified in its use of accounting "devices" to cope with emergencies and pressing budget priorities that exceeded what Congress had previously set aside to spend this year.

The various devices are crucial to the GOP's campaign to pass all 13 spending bills for the fiscal year that began Oct. 1 without appearing to dip into surplus revenue generated by Social Security taxes. GOP leaders last night put the finishing touches on an unwieldy package that includes both the labor-health-education bill, the District of Columbia spending bill and proposal for a roughly 1 percent across-the-board spending cut.

Democrats maintain the "mindless" across-the-board cuts would "devastate" some agencies, hurt programs for mothers and children, and trigger large layoffs in the armed services. But House Majority Whip Tom DeLay (R-Tex.) said accusations the cuts would hurt defense were "nothing but hogwash." He said the criticism was coming from "the same officials who have sat by idly as the president has hollowed out the armed forces."

President Clinton has vowed to veto the huge package, as he has three other bills, and there is no way the two sides can reach agreement before a midnight Friday deadline. With neither side willing to provoke a government shutdown, the administration and Congress will agree on a third, short-term continuing resolution to keep all the agencies afloat while they continue negotiations.

While the Republicans and the White House are relatively close in negotiating overall spending levels, there are serious differences over how to spend money to reduce class sizes, hire additional police officers and meet a financial obligation to the United Nations as well as disputes over environmental provisions in the bills.

Meanwhile, figures out yesterday showed that the federal government ran a surplus of $122.7 billion in fiscal 1999 (which ended Sept. 30), the first time the government has recorded back-to-back surpluses since the Eisenhower administration in 1956-57.

The 1999 surplus was almost double the 1998 surplus of $69.2 billion, which was the first since 1969. While the 1999 surplus was the largest in the nation's history in strict dollar terms, it was the biggest since 1951 when measured as a percentage of the economy, a gauge that tends to factor out the effects of inflation.

All of the surplus came from the excess payroll taxes being collected to provide for Social Security benefits in the next century. Contrary to an earlier estimate by the Congressional Budget Office, the non-Social Security side of the federal government ran a deficit of $1 billion, money that was made up from the Social Security surplus.

The drafting of the labor-health-education spending measure dominated the action behind the scenes on Capitol Hill yesterday. The House has been unable to pass its own version, so House and Senate negotiators worked out a final compromise in conference.

The $313 billion compromise exceeds last year's spending by $11.3 billion and includes more money for education, Pell Grants for college students, NIH, federal impact aid for local communities, the Ryan White AIDS research program and community services block grants than the administration had requested.

While the bill provides $1.2 billion for class size reduction, the Republicans insist local school districts be given the option for using the money for other purposes while the White House would mandate the money for hiring additional teachers.

Republicans also were claiming $877 million in savings by using a computer database of newly hired workers to track down people who defaulted on student loans. The nonpartisan CBO said the idea would only save $130 million, but Republicans are using a more generous estimate used by Clinton's White House budget office.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Right in the middle is the headline: The Government has recorded its first back-to-back surpluses since 1956-57. Within the text, reaffirming that:

Meanwhile, figures out yesterday showed that the federal government ran a surplus of $122.7 billion in fiscal 1999 (which ended Sept. 30), the first time the government has recorded back-to-back surpluses since the Eisenhower administration in 1956-57.

That is totally false. Mark Twain said it best: The truth is such a precious thing, it should be used very sparingly. That has been the credo around the Government in Washington, particularly with respect to our fiscal condition.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to print in the RECORD table 6 on page 20 of the U.S. Treasury Report, issued yesterday.

There being no objection, the table was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Mr. HOLLINGS. What I want to refer to is the line that says "Total federal securities." That is the borrowing. You issued the securities to cover your backside. You have to do that by Friday, tomorrow, at midnight. I take it we will close down the Government unless we pass another continuing resolution. The U.S. Treasury report shows that at the beginning of this year we had a national debt of $5,478,704,000,000.

Historical Tables, Budget of the US Government FY 1998: Beginning in 1962 CBO's 2000 Economic and Budget Outlook.

Mr. HOLLINGS. I will show we agree that at the beginning of the year we have exactly that figure, 5 trillion 478 billion 7-some-odd-million dollars. Now, referring to U.S. Treasury Report table, you will find, under the column Close of This Month, the figure $5,606,486,000,000. So the table itself, according to the figures issued yesterday, showed the Federal Government ran a surplus. Absolutely false. This reporter ought to do his work. This crowd never has asked for or kept up with or checked the facts. Eric Planin—all he has to do is not spread rumors or get into the political message. Both Democrats and Republicans are all running this year and next and saying surplus, surplus. Look what we have done.

It is false. The actual figures show that from the beginning of the fiscal year until now we had to borrow $127,800,000,000.

That is increasing the national debt. That is the deficit, $127 billion. I checked this with the Congressional Budget Office. They haven't done their interpolation of the various records. I had been reporting, as you will find on the table inserted, a $103 billion deficit for this fiscal year, as of the CBO June 30 figure. I said: Wait a minute, it is way more than what we thought, if it is 127 rather than 103. They said there were some unaccounted balances carried forward, some $16 billion. So it might be, instead of 103, 112. Conscientiously, we are trying to give the truth to the American people.

We have those figures in this particular table. We can enlarge it for the viewing Senators here. That is exactly what I have said. We have a $5,487,700,000,000 debt. Now it has gone up. Instead of $5,582,000,000,000, it has gone to $5,606,000,000,000. So you can see, when we got to the end of the fiscal year, not the projections, not the guesses, or whatever else—we had a deficit of $127.8 billion. That is going up, up and away, because if you look at the previous year, we did better. Well, we didn't do better in 1997, the previous year, but I should say the deficits have been coming down. And they had projected, for example, next year, a $82 billion deficit coming down from the 127.8 billion. I should say 103 billion, as is shown on this particular chart.

Now, if instead of $103 billion deficit, it is going to $127.8 billion, you can see at a glance it is going to be another $100 billion deficit next year. Looking at the facts, you can find the editorial in the Washington Post to show we have already spent 30 billion of the Social Security monies. We are all running around in a circle saying, "I don't want to touch it. No, I will not touch it." They have already touched it to the tune of 30 billion bucks, this Congress, the House and Senate, Republicans and Democrats, all of us.

We have to get the truth out. Even then, to create a surplus, they are using these particular figures—we are discussing in another conference ongoing right at the minute—the airport trust fund. We have all kinds of dangers with respect to the airports. It is getting unsafe to fly. We need better radar. We need more runways. We need more airports. We need better controls, better control towers, everything else of that kind. We are being taxed for it. We all fly, and we pay the taxes as airline travelers. But $11 billion has been spent on any and everything other than airports. It shows that it is going up, under the budget, to $23 billion in 2004. We have the money, but we don't spend it on the airports or the highways. Reporters across this country have been writing these editorials to the effect that it doesn't make any difference whether we borrowed from it or not; these are just IOUs.

I don't want to be around here in the year 2012 when we don't bring in enough to cover our costs and we are going to have to raise taxes in order to make payments. That crowd in New York working the market, they could care less. They think in quarterly amounts, in the quarter of each year. If you don't do it by the third quarter, out you go. That is the CEO/Wall Street mentality. Ours should be the long-range. You have in the desk drawer right now $1.859 trillion in IOUs not only in Medicare but in military retirement, civilian retirement, and you don't want to talk Social Security. I don't want to touch the military retirement fund or borrow from the unemployment compensation fund, the highways, and the airports.

So we just bring that up for a moment of truth in the Senate. I want to show you this because there is another headline story in the paper about a one percent cut across the board, or 1.5 percent. They are looking for a way to cut $5 billion. Now we have the House, the Senate, the leadership, the White House, and we are trying to get out of here in the next 10 days—if we can only agree on how we are going to find $5 billion—either cut $5 billion in spending, or raise $5 billion in taxes, or do whatever we have to do to find a cut across the board. That is $5 billion.

Here is what happens. Right now the estimated interest cost is $356 billion. I don't have an updated figure on that. I know since we have had two interest rate increases by Mr. Greenspan this year, it is going to be more than that $356 billion. But going back to when we last balanced the budget, we had a surplus under President Johnson. They don't have to go back to Eisenhower when they kept a different set of books. Under President Johnson, when we were here and we had a surplus, the interest cost on the national debt was only $16 billion. Here, the interest cost on the national debt is $356 billion. If we just held the line and paid for what we got, we would have had, and would have this morning, not $5 billion, we would have $340 billion to increase the airports, to increase Medicare, to save Social Security, to increase defense. We could have a tax cut and we could pay down the debt if we had the $340 billion.

The headline ought to read: Last year we increased taxes. Why? We increased the interest costs because we increased the debt. When you increase the debt some $127 billion, you increase your interest costs, which are running right now at a billion dollars a day. You have to pay it. Worse than the regular taxes, such as sales taxes, for which you can get a school, or gasoline tax, for which you can get a highway—we get absolutely nothing for it.

Last year, this Government increased taxes, and they are determined to increase taxes today, this year, in the next two weeks—all the time talking about surpluses and about cutting spending, and all the time talking about cutting taxes.

Now, Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Florida is recognized.

Mr. MACK. Mr. President, I rise in strong support of the very important trade package that the Senate is currently considering. At a time when our global marketplace is expanding faster than ever, we need to ensure that the poorest countries around the world are not left behind.

This comprehensive package uses trade to promote economic self-sufficiency, at the same time allowing for broader access to American goods and services to these markets. While many believe the economic and financial answer for these underdeveloped countries may lie in direct financial assistance, I believe the answer is found by facilitating direct private investment.

I want to share with colleagues the plight of one of these countries which I experienced firsthand this past weekend. I spent 2 days in Haiti meeting with political, business, and humanitarian groups.

By far, the most dramatic portion of my trip was witnessing the extreme poverty and despair that grips that Nation. I saw the face of an economy suffering from 17-percent inflation and unemployment of between 60 and 80 percent.

Let me tell the story of one little boy I met. Only through a humanitarian organization and through the support of private donations is this 9-year-old boy able to obtain an education. As a tool to economic and democratic stabilization, aid is simply not enough. Many children just aren't able to stay in school. They are required to work in order to contribute to their families' survival.

Again, I make the point that for a good number of the people in Haiti, their per capita income is around $50 a year. A straight calculation of the per capita income is about $500. But if you look at the makeup of that distribution, you can see easily that there are literally millions of people in Haiti who live with a per capita income of around $50.

If these children are to have a future, revitalization and expansion of economic opportunities are needed to reach the goal of economic self-sufficiency. By creating a framework for using trade and investment as a development tool, the United States will be fostering reform at the economic base of these countries, taking direct aim at lowering unemployment and high inflation rates.

This legislation creates this framework by extending enhanced trade benefits to the countries of the Caribbean Basin. Since the passage of the North American Free Trade Agreement, U.S. imports from Caribbean countries have been at a distinct disadvantage. The measure would build on the existing Caribbean Basin Initiative program, often referred to as CBI, by providing additional trade benefits to Caribbean countries similar to that which Mexico and Canada currently enjoy.

Since its inception, CBI has had a significant positive economic impact on both the United States and the Caribbean countries, helping to promote regional security and stability of our Caribbean neighbors. Opening this market even further, particularly following the recent devastation inflicted by hurricanes, will help to stimulate job growth by increasing exports and expanding market access to these countries for U.S. businesses.

Another important component of this trade package establishes U.S. support for economic self-reliance in sub-Saharan Africa. The United States stands to benefit a great deal from a strong and prosperous Africa. By fostering growth-oriented economic policies, we will help support broader access to African markets for American goods and services. Sub-Saharan Africa makes up a market of more than 700 million people and is potentially one of the largest markets in the world. As economic reforms and market-opening measures spur growth in Africa, it will create new and bigger markets for U.S. exporters.

A particularly sensitive, albeit important, provision included in both the African Growth and Opportunity Act and the Caribbean Basin Trade Enhancement Act deals with textiles. The textile and apparel industries have historically provided the first step toward industrialization in many countries. This is because production is fairly simple, can be done on a small scale, and often uses locally abundant raw material.

In seeking to address the concerns raised by the U.S. textile industry, this legislation has sought compromise by restricting preferential treatment to apparel produced by U.S. fabric and yarns.

Additionally, this legislation provides strong protections against illegal transshipment of goods through Africa or eligible CBI countries. We need to ensure that these countries do not become stop-over points for products from countries not eligible for preferential treatment under the legislation.

International trade has been an important part of the growth we have enjoyed in the United States. Since 1994, international trade has created more than 11 million American jobs, and accounts for 30 percent of our Nation's gross domestic product. Imports have helped to hold down inflation, lower the cost of production, provide greater choice to consumers, and have given incentives to raise productivity.

As emerging markets seek to grow, it is important that the United States take the lead in offering these countries incentives to continue their economic reforms. By doing so, we will be providing the citizens of these emerging countries with more jobs, more opportunities and genuine hope. I believe a strong trade relationship is the best form of "foreign assistance" we can offer another country.

I thank the chair, and I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Delaware.

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, I want to address some of the statements made about the process unfolding, allegations that the majority leader has tied up the process.

The truth is, we have strong bipartisan support for this legislation. The majority leader has tried to protect the 80 or 90 Senators who support the bill to make sure we focus on the merits of the bill and not on extraneous issues that are calculated to block progress.

My friend and Finance Committee colleague, Senator CONRAD, indicated, for example, he wants to raise some amendments on agriculture negotiating objectives and trade adjustment assistance, and these amendments are relevant and should be debated. They could be, if our friends on both sides reach agreement to work together to table nontrade amendments. That is what we should be about.

Let's work together on this and begin to focus on our efforts on the bill. Let's not concede the debate to the opponents because of their procedural tactics. Let's focus on getting this bill acted upon, which is good for America as well as the CBI.

Time is running out. I think it is critically important that we bring about a process where we can move forward on this most critical piece of legislation. What concerns me is it is time sensitive.

For example, GSP has already expired. That not only works against the interests of the Third World developing countries we are trying to help, but it works against the best interests of American companies that depend on this source of supply for their material.

Yesterday, the distinguished ranking minority leader of the Senate Finance Committee made a very eloquent statement about the importance of trade adjustment to the workers who are dependent upon it. Let me emphasize, these are American workers—about 200,000.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, 200,000 this year, up from 150,000 last year. This is not a diminishing program. As trade grows, this number grows.

Mr. ROTH. I ask the distinguished Senator what will happen if we do not act on this legislation with respect to these American workers?

Mr. MOYNIHAN. We will have broken our word to them, that by accepting open trade policies in the aftermath of which there would be dislocations, the economy at large and the society would make arrangements for them to transfer to other work with other skills. There is no reason to think that won't happen, but without assistance it won't, and we will have broken our word which we gave 37 years ago. President after President after President has reaffirmed this, as the Senator has in this bill.

Mr. ROTH. Let me say to my distinguished friend, many years ago when the legendary Russell Long was chairman of our committee, the TAA was about to expire and no one was trying to save it. The chairman was about to rap the gavel to move on to other things. I said: Just a minute, sir. We have a commitment.

That is exactly what the Senator is claiming now. I am proud and pleased to say the legislation was continued.

It is a matter of significant concern to thousands of American workers and their families who are depending upon it. The purpose of this program, of course, is to enable these workers to be trained for new jobs, for new opportunities. We have an economy where there are, indeed, many jobs available. It behooves all to work to expedite action on this important piece of legislation.

The other point I want to underscore and emphasize, and it has been addressed eloquently by the distinguished Senator from New York, who brings so much historical background into this picture, if we don't act on this legislation, it is a denial of liberal trade policies of the past how many years—35 years?

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Sir, I go back to Cordell Hull and the Reciprocal Trade Agreements Act of 1934 which put in place the present system. As the Senator knows—I know our friend from South Carolina doesn't agree—the Smoot-Hawley tariff was a catastrophe. We have not had a tariff bill on the Senate floor since.

We now are in a difficult situation with every President, Republican or Democrat, reaffirming. A legitimate point is made that President Clinton didn't send up a request for fast-track authority in 1995; it has been delayed and we haven't gotten it. If we haven't gotten the CBI, which President Reagan promised, if we haven't gotten the African agreements, we haven't gotten trade adjustment assistance, what do we take to Seattle for the conference of the World Trade Organization?

We go as if we had thought there never should have been such an organization and didn't want it around. Why is it meeting in the United States?

Ten years ago one would not have imagined this moment.

Mr. ROTH. That is absolutely correct.

The distinguished Senator raises a most important point, going back to the need for action being taken now. The meeting of the WTO to be held in Seattle is an extraordinarily important event. It can bring about some very significant progress for this changing world where we are increasingly involved in a global economy.

It is incomprehensible that on this legislation, which has broad bipartisan support on both sides of the aisle, and has the support of the President of the United States, no action will be taken, thus giving the wrong signal to our friends, allies, and trading partners around the world as to our seriousness about moving ahead on trade policy. It looks as if we cannot take action.

Regarding fast track—and I appreciate the support Senator MOYNIHAN has given in committee—we have certainly tried to push fast track. We believed it was critically important this President, as every other President, have that authority. Unfortunately, it never happened.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. The floor not being exactly teeming with Senators wishing to join, Mr. President, this is the point: We are at a critical moment; where is the Senate?

In the absence of the Senate, let me offer some statistics about the centrality of trade. The crash of 1929 is part of American myth, tradition, history. One does not know much about American history if one does not know about that. In the aftermath, in 1930—the crash of 1929 came in October—our GDP dropped 9 percent. That is a pretty hefty drop, but stock markets go up and then they go down. When they are up, there are bargains made by selling; when they are down, there are bargains made by buying. It tends to be cyclical and does not necessarily change that much in the real world. I say again, in 1930, GDP dropped 9 percent; in 1931, it dropped another 6.4 percent. Again, that is a drop, but it is leveling off.

It was before we understood the business cycle very well, before just-in-time delivery, before countercyclical financing. The American world had never heard of John Maynard Keynes. There was learning going on, but it hadn't gotten to us. The Federal Reserve Board responded to the crash by tightening credit. They would never do that today, and they know why; they will show why in numbers.

Then came the impact of Smoot-Hawley in 1932 and the gross domestic product dropped another staggering

13.3 percent. That is when it really hit. At the same time the British had created the idea of free trade by long argumentation, good argument—reeling from Smoot-Hawley, went onto Empire Preference. They drew in and they would deal with Canada and India and New Zealand but not with Europe, not with Germany. Recall it was the Economist magazine, which I understand now has a larger circulation in the United States than it does in Britain but comparably the same readership, was founded to advocate free trade as an economic principle that worked. It did work. Great theorists such as Albert Imlah demonstrated that in the aftermath.

The Japanese, having the market here closed to them, they went to a Greater Far Eastern Coprosperity Sphere, which is a long way of saying a Japanese empire; and they invaded Manchuria, which is another way of saying China, and they began that process which ended in Hiroshima.

In 1933, the same 1933 the year after GDP here dropped 13.3 percent, unemployment was so high and social stability so weakened that a frightened German middle class elected Adolph Hitler to be Chancellor. He was chosen in the Reichstag. The rest is history.

I joined the Navy in 1943, at age 17, and a lot of other people around here did. Maybe not enough people around here did. They don't remember.

Mr. ROTH. I was one of them, I might say.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. You joined on, yes, sir. It was our generation.

Mr. ROTH. That is right.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. That is what we were there for, to fight wars that needn't have happened had the world been wiser. Not just about trade, of course not, but don't underestimate trade. We are not just talking about profits.

Mr. ROTH. Could I ask a question of the distinguished professor? We are enjoying, today, one of the greatest periods of prosperity, 8, 9 years or so, this country has undergone. Unemployment is lower than anyone would ever have predicted a few years ago. The future of this country is bright. It was only about 10 years ago everybody was predicting the United States was going down the drain and Japan was becoming No. 1. But the contrary has happened. In this period of time, we have enjoyed the liberal trade practices that began many, many years ago—what was the year?

Mr. MOYNIHAN. In 1934.

Mr. ROTH. In 1934. How can you explain the prosperity of this country, which has the most open markets of any, if not put it on the basis that a liberal trade policy does work? Unfortunately, there are some industries and some workers who do suffer. That is the reason we have TAA, to help them make the adjustment.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Right.

Mr. ROTH. But overall, our country has never had a longer period of growth and prosperity than we are enjoying and have enjoyed. It has been enjoyed under two Presidents.

Isn't it ironic we are here debating whether or not we should extend these policies that have worked so well to a few countries that are in need of some support and help? It will not only work in their interests, but again it will work in our interest, as I think the Senator pointed out, starting with the growers of cotton, people who make the fabrics, the apparel, the wholesalers, the retailers, and the consumers. It seems to me it is almost unbelievable anyone would argue to the contrary, that we should not continue on this path of a liberal trade policy.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. Chairman, we have now reached the point where you and I are alone on the Senate floor as one of the epic decisions of this decade is about to be made. One asks Senators who might be listening: Where are you?

But the answer to your question, sir, is our learning has truly expanded. We know more about this. I mentioned 1933. In that year, John Maynard Keynes published a book in the United States called "Essays In Persuasion." It appeared the previous year in Britain. He already had a pretty good record. He wrote that great essay, "The Economic Consequences of the Peace"—of Versailles. He was on the British delegation as an adviser, and he said: It is going to be awful. Germany is not going to get over this.

That is a very famous essay—and it is sort of a joke. Winston Churchill became Chancellor of the Exchequer around 1926 and went back, took Britain back on the gold standard. He wrote an essay called "The Economic Consequences Of Mr. Churchill," which he thought were pretty grim. And they were.

But, in 1933, in this book, "Essays In Persuasion," he had an introduction. It is really essays over the years. He said: The economic problem is just a giant muddle. He said: We will figure it out. We will get through it. He said: I estimate by about the year 2030, we will have it pretty well under control and we can go on to other issues in life.

The Senator mentioned the existing expansion, the period of expansion. In February of the coming year, that will be in about 4 months, we will completed a period of sustained growth of 107 months, the longest in history—unless we start killing it, which is what we seem intent on doing. Of course there are dislocations brought about by trade. Joseph Schumpeter—had it not been for the Great Depression it is generally thought Schumpeter would be regarded as the greatest economist of the 20th century. He is an Austrian, ended up a professor at Harvard. In his book "Capitalism, Socialism & Democracy," he speaks a phrase now in wide use, of the "creative destruction of capitalism." Sure, there comes a time when shipping the cotton to mills in New England no longer makes sense. They want to have mills in South Carolina. "Bring the mills to the cotton," as the phrase was. It did make sense. The next thing you know you had empty mills all up and down the river in Lowell, MA, and, I might say, in Gloversville, NY, and such like.

Yes, but did that put an end to life in Massachusetts? No. The next thing you know, Route 128 is creating enormous economic growth spurred on by computer companies. That destruction is creative because it brings better uses of resources into play. You get more than you had. Trying to keep just what you had is a formula for ruin—well, not for ruin, but for stagnation. I speak with some temerity. I was once our Ambassador to India, and I saw it happen. Tariffs you could not get through, government purchasing. The Soviet Union—

Mr. ROTH. That is correct.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. The Soviet Union, sir, what was that? Oh, yes, that was the place that was going to take over the world.

I remember a meeting in Bucharest of world trade advocates at the time. It was an international conference about the developing world. The Soviet delegate absolutely swept the conference with an announcement that, as of this moment, as a gesture of solidarity with our friends in Africa, in Latin America, in Southeast Asia, the Soviet Union is abolishing all tariffs of imports from those countries.

The conference went wild, but no one stopped to think: But, wait a minute, the Soviet Union doesn't have tariffs. Everything is bought by the government and put through collective enterprises, all of which were in ruins and eventually collapsed. This was 20 years before the whole system imploded.

We are talking for democracy, talking for vitality, talking for expansion, talking for a tradition. As Jerry Ford said yesterday in the Rotunda, he came to Congress as a social moderate, a fiscal conservative, and a determined internationalist. He was right. Can it be we have forgotten all that?

I say, again, before I yield the floor, at a critical moment in our economic history—a critical moment—we are hours away from ruinous indecision. There are three Senators on the floor. It happens we are all friends, perhaps have gotten to be more friends because we have been on the floor together for 2 days now. It is hard to understand.

Mr. ROTH. Can I make one further observation and get the Senator's reaction to it? The irony of what is before us is, if we enact this legislation, it will help the very industries about which we are concerned.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Sure.

Mr. ROTH. It is, as we have said before, a win-win situation.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. It gives them a different mix of costs and profits, and that turns out to make them viable again.

Mr. ROTH. I point out it is projected by the industry itself that adoption of this legislation will create in the next

5 years approximately 121,000 jobs, that it will result in markets exceeding roughly $8.8 billion. The purpose of this legislation is not only to enable the textile industry, for example, to compete better at home but also to be in a better position to compete abroad in other markets. If we do nothing, as has happened in the past, we see, for example, the Chinese exports increasing.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Right.

Mr. ROTH. What we are trying to do is make us more competitive in the industry so that it not only helps the economy but, most important, creates jobs within the industry.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, the chairman is doing this for the American worker. If you think otherwise, think back to opposite policies and what they brought the American worker in the 1930s. Don't think we cannot make those mistakes again. We knew enough not to do it then. We did not know exactly why. But 1,000 economists wrote President Hoover, who was a sensitive and an intelligent man. Nothing quite like that happened before; nowadays we get 1,000 a day. They said: Don't sign that tariff bill, Smoot-Hawley. Don't sign it, they said. Well, he did. It cost him the Presidency, but that is the least of it. I thank the Chair, and I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. FITZGERALD). The Senator from Delaware.

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, yesterday, I began making some comments in answer to critics of the proposed legislation, and I want to take a few minutes to continue to answer those negative comments.

One of the questions that has been asked is: Won't this legislation result in the further erosion of America's manufacturing sector?

None of my colleagues who have risen in opposition to this bill have addressed its specifics. The reason is that, unlike the House-passed Africa bill, the Finance Committee measures are drafted in a way that ensures a benefit to the American industry as well as our African, Caribbean, and Central American trading partners.

I made passing reference just now to the specifics and how it would impact on the industry and the American worker. What my colleagues who oppose the bill have done is raise several general arguments against trade that I thought might still be helpful to address.

One of the arguments that falls in that category is the argument that trade has led to an irreversible decline in U.S. manufacturing, and that any trade measure, even this one, would simply worsen that decline. Let me take that head on.

America is not losing its manufacturing sector. By any measure, it is doing a lot better than some of my distinguished colleagues seem to think. There is no question that manufacturing has declined as a percentage of the U.S. economy. Manufacturing, as a portion of GDP, has declined steadily since 1960, from 27 percent of GDP to 17 percent of GDP by 1996. But does that mean the United States is losing in the international arena? The answer is no.

According to the International Trade Commission, all industrial countries have faced a similar percentage decrease in manufacturing as a share of GDP from about 28 percent in 1970 to about 18 percent in 1994.

Does the decline in manufacturing as a percentage of GDP mean that American industry is in decline and output is falling?

Again, the answer is no. In fact, America's industrial output expanded 62 percent for the period from 1977 through 1996. Let me repeat. The fact is, America's industrial output expanded 62 percent from 1977 through 1996, a period that critics of our trade policy think of as the worst stages of our industrial decline.

American manufacturing added a net figure of 4.4 million new jobs during that same period, or an increase of 31 percent in employment in the manufacturing sector.

These are very important statistics, I believe. It bears out what the distinguished Senator from New York was just pointing out.

Are we being beaten in this measure of international competition? Again, the answer is no. According to a most recent edition of the Economist, which I think is one of the best periodicals available today, American industrial production is up by 35 percent over 1990.

During that same period, Japanese industrial growth fell by 5 percent. What a contrast. Ours grew by 35 percent; Japan's fell by 5 percent. This was the world where our country was going to be down and Japan was going to take over.

Industrial output in Germany has remained a sluggish 4 percent over the same 10 years, while French and British industrial production grew by only 8 and 9 percent, respectively.

Is there employment available for those workers who have lost their jobs due to an increase in productivity? As Senator MOYNIHAN and I were commenting earlier, the answer is yes. We have never seen such low unemployment as this country is enjoying today.

The American economy currently enjoys the lowest unemployment in history and rising wages across the board, even for the unskilled who have dropped out of school rather than finishing their education.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Would my friend allow me to make a comment in the form of a question?

Mr. ROTH. Please proceed.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. In terms of how we are progressing and what we are learning, the Senator mentioned we have the lowest unemployment rates in 30 years, and for the longest time we also have had the lowest inflation rates.

Mr. ROTH. That is correct.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Twenty years ago, statistics proved that was not possible.

There were something called the "Phillips Curve" that said: There is a trade-off; the lower your unemployment rate goes, the higher your inflation rate goes. And everyone said, oh, God, we can't get the unemployment rate down too much because that will spark inflation.

If I can just be reminiscent and tell war stories in this crowded Chamber, where I see we are back to three Members—well, the distinguished Senator from Illinois is presiding; and it is an honor to have him in the Chair—in 1963, the Council of Economic Advisers, then chaired by Dr. Walter Heller of the Kennedy administration, was putting together the economic report. This report was created by the Employment Act of 1946 which gave us the institutionalized, countercyclical economic notions.

They said: We should have a goal; we should set as a goal for the country an unemployment rate of 4 percent. Now, it won't be easy, but we should be bold.

In the Labor Department we were sort of distressed because we had dreams of unemployment below 4 percent. So we got them to change the text and make it an interim goal of 4 percent—again, a dream.

Sir, we now are routinely close to 4 percent, have been for almost a year. Thirty years ago, it was something you could not imagine. In a rousing economic report—if there is such a thing—you could say, let's do things that are unimaginable. Now we do not even notice when they are reported every month. It is working. Why put it in jeopardy?

Mr. ROTH. I could not agree more with what the Senator just said. I think this is one of the brightest periods in history with respect to our country. I think there is enough credit for everyone to claim.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Sure.

Mr. ROTH. But I think the—

Mr. MOYNIHAN. But, sir, would you allow me? If we let this calamitous event take place of bringing down this trade bill there will be plenty of blame to go around, too.

Mr. ROTH. I agree with you.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. To go around and around and around.

Mr. ROTH. As you and I have pointed out, a majority of the Senators on both sides of the aisle are supportive of this legislation.

I do wish some of those who are supportive would come down and give their reasons why it is so important that we move ahead with this legislation. It would be a shame if we lost this opportunity to take a step forward. Because, if I might say so, we are not only losing the opportunity to act on this legislation, which in and of itself is so important, but it helps give what I think is the mistaken message to the world that we are no longer interested in liberal trade policy, particularly in view of the fact that we will be going, hopefully, out to Seattle in a few weeks to take the next step forward in broadening and liberalizing markets, making them more accessible to everyone, which, of course, is particularly in our interest because the United States has the lowest tariffs, the most open markets. It is important that we move ahead and begin to negotiate access to other markets.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. May I inquire, will you say that again and again and again? The United States has the lowest tariffs of any major economy in the world.

Mr. ROTH. That is correct.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. The only outcome of having negotiating power and a negotiating round is to reduce the tariffs of other people.

Mr. ROTH. Absolutely.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. And it is in our interest to do it.

We have heard talk about the subsidies of the European Union, and so forth. You do not get anywhere with subsidies.

Mr. ROTH. That is right.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. You get elected 1 year, and so forth. But the economy doesn't.

Mr. Chairman, thank God, you are where you are. But where, sir, are the others?

I see our distinguished friend is in the Chamber. We have reached a critical mass. There are five Senators in the Chamber—six. Yes, six. Perhaps the word is getting around that something of great consequence is going to happen today—or not.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. ROTH. Thank you, I say to Senator MOYNIHAN.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Ms. LANDRIEU addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Louisiana.

Ms. LANDRIEU. I thank the Chair.

I come to the floor today to add my voice in support of this very important piece of legislation in the hope that, as we continue to talk about the great strengths and characteristics that make this a good bill and the importance of continuing this open trade, we can build enough support to pass it, to get over whatever procedural hurdles are present.

I thank the Senator from New York and the Senator from Delaware for their bipartisan leadership. With all due respect to the opponents, let me make a few points about this African Growth and Opportunity Act.

When the United States can do something that extends opportunity to countries that need our assistance while at the same time benefiting American workers and industry, I believe we should take that step. We can, by voting for this bill, elevate the commercial exchange between Africa, the Caribbean, and Central America—hopefully, if that piece can be added—and the United States. That is what this bill attempts to do.

My State, Louisiana, is smart and blessed to have positioned itself at the mouth of the Mississippi River. It is how our State began. It is how the city of New Orleans and communities began hundreds of years ago and developed into a State.

It is impossible to overstate the river's importance to the economy of our Nation, but the Mississippi River is more than just a way to move goods within the United States. It is also the primary artery for north-south trade among the United States, Canada, and developing countries to the south. And therein lies so much potential for them and for us. At this time, much of America's trade flows in an east-to-west direction, between Europe and the east coast or Asia and the west coast. We have all benefited, some to a greater degree than others, and there have most certainly been changes, but we have all benefited from that flow. While Louisiana benefits and participates, it does not make use of Louisiana's national geographic advantage.

We will continue to benefit in an even greater way by increasing the north-south flow. For this reason, when the United States has the opportunity to increase trade on the north-south axis, I can be confident we will increase those benefits to our State and the Nation.

Although it has come under some criticism, the best example for Louisiana is NAFTA. By promoting trade among Mexico, the United States, and Canada, NAFTA moves goods along a north-south corridor that naturally produces growth for our State. The results have been quite dramatic.

In 5 years since NAFTA was enacted, Louisiana's trade with our partners has increased 134 percent. Louisiana's exports to Mexico alone were up 34 percent last year. This trade increase supports over 10,000 jobs in my State and is growing every month. Thus, from the standpoint of enlightened self-interest, the majority of people in Louisiana support the expansion of trade between our other southern trading partners in Latin America, the Caribbean, and, yes, Africa.

This bill is also about the United States paying more attention, serious attention, to a continent we have in many ways ignored. Such an effort is too long in coming. Until now, United States policy in Africa has really operated in two modes: benign neglect and cold war gamesmanship.

Our Government poured aid into Africa when it was an active battleground in the ideological struggle of the cold war. We made many mistakes in our efforts to be helpful. We supported governments that paid only lip service to democratic principles and cared little about the infrastructure necessary for a modern market economy. Much of our aid was wasted—I am sure some of it went to very good use—and the series of wars and human tragedies have left the American people somewhat jaded about the prospects for real reform in Africa.

Our neglect of this continent, with some exceptions, obviously, is starkly pointed out by our trade and investment statistics. Only 1 percent of all United States foreign direct investment goes to Africa. Of that 1 percent, half of it is in the petroleum sector, which obviously we, in Louisiana, know something about. The majority was concentrated in only five countries. That leaves 43 other nations in Africa with virtually no contact with the American system of free enterprise.

I believe the American people understand this is a continent we cannot afford to leave behind and we cannot afford to develop a society in this world of haves and have-nots. The stresses that such disparities produce inherently rip at the fabric of our society, cause upheaval, and ultimately can, as we have seen on occasion after occasion, decade after decade, century after century, turn to severe violence and war.

The disparity between the United States and nations such as Tanzania or Malawi makes the difference between the rich and poor within our own country seem laughable. Yet we wonder where rogue nations come from. We wonder what prompts them to act in violent and, in our idea, irresponsible ways. When people in our country are not vested in the development of our society, when they believe they have nothing at stake in the community, crime and violence result. The international community is no different.

Would the Sudan be a rogue state if it had a serious trade relationship with the United States and Europe? I do not believe so. Unfortunately, much of Africa finds itself ignored and divested from the world community. Again, the figures paint a stark picture. For 20 years, the gap between the level of economic development in Africa and the rest of the world has not closed; it has widened. Declining commodity prices cost Africa $50 billion in export earnings. This is twice as much as they received in foreign aid between 1986 and 1990. Fifty percent of all Africans live below the poverty line; 40 percent live on less than $1 a day. And debt service claims over 80 percent of Africa's foreign exchange earnings.

It is no wonder that, given this bleak picture, trade relations with Africa need a jump start, not only for Africa's benefit but for our benefit, for South America, for the Caribbean, and for every State in the Union, particularly those that have the infrastructure to offer for north-south trade.

The African Growth and Opportunity Act would open up American markets to apparel and other goods produced in Africa, but with the right percentages and the right mechanisms and methods for much of those goods and services to also have value added here, which would preserve jobs.

As the amazing growth of East Asia has demonstrated, apparel is a natural entry point into manufacturing and a natural source for more robust trading relations with the United States and Africa.

The Senate version of this bill ensures the benefits of this relationship will not be one-sided but will be mutual, as only apparel utilizing American-produced textiles will receive the GSP benefits. Thus, a steady two-way traffic can develop between the United States and Africa. Such a system of mutually beneficial trade can only enhance prospects of further American investment and interest in the African market, creating jobs both there and here.

For my home State of Louisiana, this is a very good deal. My friend and colleague in the House of Representatives, BILL JEFFERSON, has been one of the principal advocates for this legislation because he understands the mutual benefit for our State and many States in this Nation and this continent. Furthermore, as home to one of the most significant ports in the world, trade in either direction translates into high-wage jobs for citizens of Louisiana.

With regard to the criticisms of some of my colleagues relating to the dangers of labor standards and environmental degradation, I take these critiques and critics very seriously. I, for one, most certainly don't want to be a part of any trade relationship that does not promote good and progressive environmental policies and labor policies. The only long-term answer to both of these problems is economic growth. No country will address labor relations when 50 percent of its people live in poverty. No country can protect its environment when people are struggling to be kept alive. Poaching, deforestation, slash-and-burn agriculture, these are all the results of too little trade, too little investment, and too little exchange with more developed countries.

This is not to say we should abandon American standards and principle—to the contrary—but, rather, we should look at what has happened in Southeast Asia. As those economies have grown, so have wages and so has concern for the environment. Engagement is required because the status quo is even less likely to produce the kind of environmental goals we want to achieve and to address the rights of workers everywhere.

I am saddened to know that despite the importance of the African Growth and Opportunities Act, it is unlikely to receive a vote on final passage. The vast majority of this Senate, I believe, want this bill enacted. I understand that we are late in the year and procedural difficulties could absorb the little time we have remaining. However, I must say that when it comes to the question of world leadership, the Senate should make time for these kinds of discussions. The Senate floor has seen many items debated that have not enjoyed the broad-based support this legislation does. So I remain hopeful our differences can be worked out because this and other trade bills and provisions are so important to help us maintain the upward mobility we are experiencing in America, the tremendous growth of opportunities in jobs and wage improvements that can only help if these agreements are done in the right way in countries around the world and particularly throughout the Southern Hemisphere.

I just want to end briefly with a statement about the Caribbean Basin Initiative portion of this bill. I had the opportunity to visit Central America in the wake of the hurricane in Honduras and Nicaragua. They were devastated, set back over a decade or two, according to some analysts who spoke about the devastation that hurricane wrought. It was a terrible time for it to hit, just when they were coming into a democracy and when the economies were expanding. When I visited—as many Republicans and Democrats did—with the Presidents of these nations, yes, they asked for us to help repair their highways, and they asked for our military to engage, particularly our Reserves, which we were proud to send down to help them dig out and rebuild. The one thing they asked for more than anything was the Caribbean Basin Trade Initiative so that they could work themselves up, so that they could help produce new jobs, not only in the Caribbean, not only in South America and Central America, but here in the United States of America.

So let us learn from the past. Let us look confidently toward the future. Let us not cower back because the rules may be different and because globalization is upon us. Let us be brave and go forward, recognizing that global trade brings wealth and opportunity, and not only more to our Nation, but it is the only thing that is going to help close the tremendous gap of wealth in this world, which, if we don't close, will produce nothing but unrest, violence, and war in the future.

So for all those reasons—primarily for economic development but also for world peace—let us be about the business of trade. That is what today is about.

I yield the floor.

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative assistant proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, the critics of an open and forward-looking trade policy would prefer to avoid a debate about the actual facts regarding the United States economy. Let me give you some examples.

According to the International Trade Commission, from 1970 to 1997, the percentage of U.S. GDP involved in international trade more than doubled—from 11 percent of GDP to 25 percent of GDP. If the opponents of this bill were right in their criticism of U.S. trade policy, the United States should be facing a precipitous economic decline. In fact, the United States' GDP roughly quadrupled over the same time period from $2 trillion to $8.2 trillion.

If the opponents of this bill were correct in their criticisms of our trade policy, we should have seen a dramatic rise in unemployment along with the predicted decline in output. In fact, from 1970 to 1997, the American economy produced a net increase of 33.5 million jobs.

To put that in context, the American economy produced more than three times the number of new jobs than the entire G-7 industrial countries combined. Rather than facing the double-digit unemployment that Germany faces, U.S. unemployment stood near 4 percent.

The opponents of this bill often finger our trade policy as the culprit in a decline in real wages from 1978 to 1997, because trade as a percentage of our economy doubled while real wages fell. In fact, while wages fell, the overall benefits of the entire package of compensation and benefits offered to workers actually increased by 2 percent.

That is not to deny that there is a growing gap between the pay of our highest paid workers and our lowest. There is little doubt that this gap has grown.

But, we owe it our to ask three basic questions? First, is the gap, in and of itself, a problem if everyone is better off? Second, is the gap attributable to trade as the critics complain? Third, is slowing the pace of trade liberalization, or, worse yet, the imposition of actual restraints on trade, the right policy to remedy the inequality in wages?

As to the first point, the growing gap in wages is not necessarily a problem if everyone is better off at the end of the day. As noted above, while wages fell at the low end, the overall package of benefits increased over the past two decades. Furthermore, real wages are once again on the rise, including at the low end.

But, even if wages were, in fact, stagnant, trade would help. Trade makes a broader range of higher quality goods and services available to all wage earners in the economy. In other words, trade helps ensure that even the lowest paid sectors of the economy can get higher value for their dollars than would be the case without the competition trade brings.

As for the second question, whether trade is the culprit in wages in equality, the answer is that trade has some impact, but not as much as the disparity in income between different levels of education.

Education also gives you the tools to remain flexible as the conditions of your current employment changes or as employment changes generally. That is why the economy pays a premium to those who made the sacrifices it takes to succeed in getting a high school education, a college education, and post-graduate education as well.

Our economy rewards academic achievement. There is no doubt about that. But, should we change that? Should we eliminate any incentive to achieve a higher education as a way of eliminating the wage gap? Few people would suggest that that is an appropriate response.

But, that really focuses our attention on the third question—whether slowing the process of trade liberalization or imposing trade restraints is the right answer to address the wage gap. The answer is no!

Imposing restraints on trade would, at best, be an indirect, inefficient, costly, fourth-best option. If the disparity in wages relates to academic achievement, trade restraints will not address the problem, much less solve it.

Indeed, if the problem is one of encouraging improvements in our educational system and encouraging our youth to remain in school, imposing restraints on trade is simply self-defeating. Trade restraints will do nothing to improve educational standards or improve school attendance or achievement. It will simply impose higher costs on consumers.

And, on whose shoulders will those higher costs fall? Those higher costs will fall disproportionately on the lowest economic sectors in our society. In other words, the burden of trade restraints will fall on precisely on those groups that the critics of trade purport to want to help because of what they perceive as an inequitable gap in wages.

Why is that so? The reason is that trade restraints like tariffs and quotas are hugely regressive. Our highest tariffs fall on staples such as food and clothing.

That is an inconvenient fact that the critics of trade would prefer not to publicize. What that means is that those workers that now receive relatively lower wages would pay the cost for any increase in trade restraints, which would exacerbate the inequality between the high and low end of the pay scale, rather than reduce it.

If we actually want to do something about wage inequality, we should avoid using the gap in wages from the high end to the low end as an excuse to provide protection for certain industries in this country and impose higher costs on consumers. Rather, we should be concentrating on improving our primary, secondary, and post-secondary education.

That is but one of the appropriate responses to the rising wage gap. But I understand the arguments that you can't take a former textile worker and retrain him to be a computer programmer.

That is why we should also pursue policies that will increase the amount of capital flowing within and into the United States.

This helps those at the bottom in two ways. If the amount of capital increases relative to labor, it will demand more labor to fully employ itself and appreciate in value.

It also raises the productivity of those at the bottom, making them more valuable, and they will be rewarded for such productivity accordingly. This can summed up succinctly by one question—which high-school level worker gets paid the most to dig a hole, the one who uses a spoon, a shovel, or an excavator? The answer is obvious, and the difference between the three is not education, but the capital that they employ to produce.

Ultimately, all economic growth is the result of risk-taking on new ideas that increase our productivity—thereby increasing our standard of living. When we lower the government barriers to risking capital, like we did in the Taxpayer Relief of 1997, which included a large cut in the capital gains tax, the creation of the Roth IRA, and cuts in the estate tax, capital becomes more abundant, fueling the real wage increases, stock market increases, and economic growth we have seen in recent years.

The stability of the dollar in the past two decades, as opposed to the turmoil of the 1970's, has also greatly contributed to capital formation, not only because the tax on capital is unindexed for inflation, but also because currency instability increases the risk associated with all economic activity.

When we lower these barriers and risks, those with capital will risk it on those without capital, but who possess a surplus of time, energy, talent, or ideas.

These ideas, anything from a better mousetrap to the personal computer, allow us to produce more out of less—raising living standards of all sectors of the wage base.

These are the most direct responses to the rising wage gap, and also the most efficient, least costly, and potentially successful answer to wage and income inequality. Calling for an end to trade liberalization will not help. Nor will opposing this bill.

I yield the floor, and I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BUNNING). The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative assistant proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, it is a little difficult to have coherence with respect to this debate. I had hoped we would avoid getting back to Smoot-Hawley and even Hitler. I know Pat Buchanan—one of the enthusiasts for competitive trade—and I think he is right on trade. Unfortunately, he has suggested in his recent book we ought to be more considerate of Hitler. A notion that is pure nonsense.

On this issue, the Senator from New York cited Smoot-Hawley, the Depression, and Hitler. If you listen to the gentleman and are not fully aware of all the facts, one would think this is a bill to avoid a depression and avoid "Hitlerism" or some other possibility.

With respect to Smoot-Hawley, we had a good debate some 15 or more years ago. I will never forget it. The late Senator from Pennsylvania, John Heinz, and myself had to correct that record. We got the Don Bedell Associates study of Smoot-Hawley.

The crash occurred in October of 1929. That is when we all went broke. That could easily happen with what is going on right now, if some of the signs we are reading on the horizon come to bear. Not being an alarmist and being a realist, let's look at Smoot-Hawley.

First, it occurred some 8 months after the October 29 crash, in June of 1930. It did not cause the crash, Hitler, the Depression, or any of the other disasters of the thirties. On the contrary, it did not affect trade to any extent. The tariffs in question affected only one-third of our trade; two-thirds were unaffected—causing no impact whatsoever with respect to trade.

Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, continuing with respect to the amount of trade affected, it was just at a third or a little less. Trade itself was somewhere around 1.5 percent. There was some argument about it being 3 percent of the GNP. Now it is 25 percent.

I am trying to give a comparison so you get a feel of the exact impact upon the economy.

The tariffs in question affected only $231 million worth of products in the second half of 1930—less than 1 percent of the world trade. So it did not have any real effect on world trade.

In 1930 to 1932, duty-free imports into the United States dropped at virtually the same percentage as dutiable imports.

So what you do is you look at the effect of Smoot-Hawley, and look how unaffected free trade really was mostly due to the worldwide depression. But namely, talking about cause and effect, we are both discussing the effect, but not the cause; because the cause was not Smoot-Hawley.

When taken into account, Smoot-Hawley only affected a fraction of the trade. Only 33 percent of the $1.5 billion of U.S. imports was in the dutiable category. The entire impact of Smoot-Hawley has to be focused on the $1.5 billion number which was barely 1.5 percent of our GNP.

I have a better authority than any, I think, with respect to Smoot-Hawley. Paul Krugman, in "The Age of Diminished Expectations,"—I finally found his quote—and I am quoting from page 64:

Although protectionism is usually a bad thing, it is worth pointing out that it isn't as bad as all that. Protectionism does not cost our economy jobs any more than the trade deficit does: U.S. employment is essentially determined by supply, not demand. The claim that protectionism caused the depression is nonsense; the claim that future protectionism will lead to a repeat performance is equally nonsensical.

Mr. President, there you are. Any time they get in trouble and they do not have the facts with them, then they go off and try to get you into a miasma of history and how we have had bad times, and now we have good times—the best of times—and how we are going to create all of these jobs. The group that says it is going to create jobs is the same group mentioned in 1993 in Capital City's Media Women's Daily, where the article from November 16 states:

That was the battle cry Monday by directors of the American Textile Manufacturers Institute, who in a last-ditch effort to solidify congressional support for NAFTA, pledged not to move any jobs to Mexico in the pact as passed. The ATMI Board, made up of firms representing every facet of the textile industry, voted in favor of the resolution which said their companies would not move jobs, plants, or facilities from the United States to Mexico as a result of the North American Free Trade Agreement.

What are the facts? Dan River is about to build an integrated apparel fabrics manufacturing plant in Mexico. Tarrant Apparel purchased a denim mill in Puebla, Mexico; DuPont and Alpek are going to build a plant in Altamira, Mexico and form a joint venture with Teijin; Guilford and Cone Mills are to create a Mexican industrial park known as "textile city"; Burlington Industries is going to build a new Mexican plant to produce wool products.

I hear about the 127,000 jobs that the industry says it is going to create. I heard that NAFTA was going to create 200,000 jobs.

I know categorically from the Department of Labor that we have lost 420,000 textile jobs since NAFTA was introduced. We have lost exactly 31,700 jobs in South Carolina alone. You only have to turn to the articles by Kurt Salmon Associates—and I quote from August of this year:

More textile mills are funneling plants and investment into Mexico to be closer to the cut-and-sew apparel factories that have already migrated south of the border, according to a new analysis. A flood of low-priced fabric and fiber imports from Asia has pressured domestic manufacturers to respond by seeking ways to cut their own costs.

The Kurt Salmon Associates report continues:

Since NAFTA's passage in 1994, Georgia has lost 28,000, plus two textile—30,000 apparel and textile jobs.

So we have lost 31,700 jobs. They have lost 30,000. That makes, as you go over through the other States and the other communities, some 420,000 in just textile jobs alone.

Rather than a balance of trade that they are talking about—a win-win situation, that the industry is for this, everybody is for it. We heard that cry before, too. It was going to create a positive balance of trade. We were at $5 billion at the time we passed NAFTA, a $5 billion-plus balance of trade. Now we have a negative $17 billion balance of trade with Mexico.

So the proof of the pudding is in the eating. As I said before, there is no education in the second kick of a mule. This NAFTA proposition that they are trying to spread to the CBI and the sub-Sahara at the same time, it reminds me of an insurance policy contest that they had for a company down in South Carolina years back. The winning slogan for the particular company was: The Capital Life will surely pay, if the small print on the back don't take it away.

Here we extend this to the CBI and then to the sub-Sahara; or to the sub-Sahara and then to CBI—either way. I think it is really going to the CBI; and it is going to be kept there and then taken away from the sub-Sahara. They are not going to invest all the way over into Africa when they all just pell-mell are going down there hand over fist to come into the Caribbean production.

I was just referring to Mr. Farley and Fruit of the Loom and how they have already eliminated 17,000 jobs in the Presiding Officer's State of Kentucky. They eliminated another 7,000 jobs in Louisiana. They have moved to the Cayman Islands. So they are foreign companies. It is getting to be where we have to sort of sober up and understand what the real facts are.

Trade, reciprocity—that is exactly what he called it—reciprocal trade policy of Cordell Hull back in the 1930s. We had reciprocity. We had a modicum of it even in NAFTA, even though it didn't work. But we had the side agreements on the environment. We had the side agreements for labor. We had reciprocity. We go down the list, and we find out now we are going to do away with all of the particular tariffs with respect to the United States for the CBI, sub-Sahara.

Let's see what the CBI—Dominican Republic has a 43-percent tariff; El Salvador—some of these include VAT, a value added tax—El Salvador, 37.5 percent; Honduras, 35 percent—this is all on textiles—Guatemala, 40 percent; Costa Rica, 39 percent; Haiti, 29 percent; Jamaica, 40 percent; Nicaragua, 35 percent; Trinidad and Tobago, 40 percent—the United States is already giving it the store. We have already lowered ours to 10 percent. There is a 5-year phaseout. We have had a 10-year phaseout of the Multifiber Arrangement. Now we are going into the fifth or sixth year, so we only have another 5 years. And the real impacts, the heavy reductions on the good traded articles—we do trade some in textiles—is going right on out of the window. So, yes, you have some fabric boys calling us and saying: Wait a minute, Senator, we are for this bill. That is short-sighted. It is just like all the apparel jobs—about gone.

What is happening, as Kurt Salmon Associates says, they want to locate the fabric plants near where the sewing is and where the apparel is. It is just an economy of production, an increase in productivity. So they are moving down there more and more. So the fabric boys are calling on the phone. Give them another 5 years, I can tell you here and now; they will be gone.

I know this: Any good businessman in textiles looking at this situation says, with 5 years—wait a minute—to put in this new machinery, this new spindle or otherwise—says: I can't get my money back in 5 years. It is going to take me 9 to 10 years to get my money back. I just don't buy it. I don't get productivity. And then the politicians will run around on the floor of the National Government hollering: They have to be more productive; they have to be more productive. And who has cut off the productivity? We have.

What about tariffs in Africa? Central African Republic, 30 percent; Cameroon, 30 percent; Chad, 30 percent; Congo, 30 percent; Ethiopia, 80 percent; Gabon, 30 percent; Ghana, 25 percent; Kenya, 80 percent; Mauritius, 88 percent; Nigeria, 55 percent; Tanzania, 40 percent; Zimbabwe, 200 percent. There they are.

What is really going to happen, from practical experience, is transshipments. Let me say a word about the transshipment problem. I will never forget. It was 1984; this Senator got 500 additional customs agents into the Treasury-Post Office appropriations bill, and they didn't hire them. We kept on pleading, and by the end of the 1980s, we finally got President Bush, and he put on some extra ones. But we haven't gotten any extra ones since that time.

We go to the customs agents, and they say yes, it is still at least 5 billion in transshipments, but they say: Senator, you want us to stop T-shirts or drugs? And you look them in the face and say: Well, of course you have to stop the drugs. They say: That is all we have got.

Now they are talking all over the Halls in both Chambers of a 1½ percent cut. And now we have just been educated by CBO that 1½ won't work, it will take at least 5.8 percent. And then if you don't, if you are going to exclude, say, defense and others, emergency ones, it is going to take an 11.8-percent across-the-board cut. So they are debating over on the House side right now is this so-called cut bill. But what they are debating is a cut in customs agents and a cut in enforcement.

Our African friends, I know they changed their vote with respect to human rights in the United Nations some 4 years ago or 5 years ago. We had passed a resolution in the general assembly, and we will set up the hearings. We never have had the hearings.

Our Chinese friends went down into Africa. They have made all kinds of friends there over the years. I will never forget over 25 years ago when I was in Zaire, it was the Chinese building the railroad from the hinterland out to the coast, down the Congo. They have had all kinds of contacts down there with Nelson Mandela and many others. They will get their plants and transshipments, and they will be coming through Africa. And our folks will be working still at customs looking for drugs coming up from Colombia and South America and little inspecting will done concerning transshipments in the area of African trade.

In reality, you are really fattening the competition in the Pacific rim all under the auspices and the gist of free trade. Let's say we are going to allow our textile boys to compete with the Pacific rim industries. That is why I put in that book.

Do we have the book of all the fabric manufacturers? I don't want to put the entire book in, but we included just those entities that had invested already down in Mexico—referring, of course, to Davidson's Textile Blue Book. You can see here the fabric resource list. We will include all of these pages—not the book, but pages 345 through—well, just the fabric—well, we can include the yarns, too, natural fibers; they have yarn forward on 807, 809.

That is too much to include in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD. Just on the fabrics, not just the yarns forward, would be 11 pages.

As I related on yesterday, all you need do is go from southern California into Tijuana, and you can see that you think you are going into Mexico, but it looks as if you are going into Seoul, Korea. There is nothing but Korean plants all over it. I have been there. I have traveled to other parts of Mexico. I think we ought to say a word, though, with respect to the wonderful economy we have. Do we have that article?

I was talking earlier about the economy and the devastating effect this would have on the economic strength, the security, of the United States upon a three-legged stool: One leg of values as a nation is unquestioned; the second leg, that of military and the only superpower left; the third leg of the economics has been fractured. They used the 17-percent figure, but the most recent figure I had of workforce and manufacturing had gone from 26 percent 10 years ago down to 13 percent. What happens is, since we are not saving here, I had the article where we are actually consuming more than our increase in productivity. If you can find that in here—I am not sure that is the same article I was looking at. It was three weeks ago in Newsweek where they pointed that out. Last week, Mort Zuckerman, in U.S. News and World Report, talked about the two levels of society and the split we have there.

We see signs on the horizon now of trouble. We are not pessimists, and we are not necessarily optimists; we are realists. As I pointed out earlier, the deficit at the end of last month for the fiscal year 1999 was $127 billion. It is not a surplus—not as they reported in a Washington Post story that was added earlier today to the RECORD—that said for the first time since the Eisenhower days we had back-to-back surpluses. That is absolutely false. It is a $127 billion deficit, according to Treasury figures. They could be interpolated by the CBO about funds carried forward. And it says there might be about $16 billion.

When my distinguished friend from New Mexico put this balanced budget law through in 1997, I said: If the budget is balanced under your act, I will jump off the Capitol dome. We knew it would not be. We know now it isn't. When you are still spending $100 billion more than you take in and you are increasing your deficit from last year, as we are going to do already this year, we just go pell-mell down the road. Your interest debt increases, your interest cost increases, and so your spending increases. And they want to give all kinds of tax cuts and spending.

I know I am on pretty solid ground. So when the President said—I wish I had that article of yesterday from the Washington Post. It was on page 3 or 4. I want to give some credibility to what I am saying. It is difficult when you are the only one saying there is a deficit. The newspapers say surplus, the President says surplus, the majority leader says surplus, the minority leader says surplus, the Democrats say surplus, the Republicans say surplus; and you come along and say there is a deficit. You have to have support for what you are doing. So I put in this sheet of paper earlier with respect to the Treasury figures. I am glad to put it in again, if I can find a copy of it. I will ask the staff to get a copy of that sheet from the Treasury Department we were inserting into the RECORD so we can see exactly—I am not just saying it is a deficit, it is the Treasury Department saying it is a deficit. So we will find that.

Right here in this morning's paper it says we are not spending more money than we are taking in. It is as usual. As Tennessee Ernie said, "another day older and deeper in debt."

Can we get Thursday's Washington Post, which is easily had, and the sheet of paper from the Treasury Department? I know they made a copy. Here it is. "Hill Negotiators Agree to Delay Part of NIH Research Budget." The subheadline is "The government has recorded its first back-to-back surpluses since 1956-57."

Mr. President, this says:

Meanwhile, figures out yesterday showed that the federal government ran a surplus of $122.7 billion in fiscal 1999 . . . the first time the government has recorded back-to-back surpluses since the Eisenhower administration in 1956-57.

Absolutely false. There isn't any question about it.

I will retain this floor. I know others like to talk about different subjects, but I have had a difficult time this morning trying to get a word in edgewise about this particular trade bill.

If we find the Treasury sheet that was issued yesterday, it is a whole report—I didn't want to put the entire report in the RECORD, but if we can find that sheet, we will include it. It is page 20.

I have my hand on another copy right here. This is page 20 of the Department of the Treasury report, table 6: "Means of financing the deficit or disposition of surplus by the U.S. Government, September 1999, and other periods."

Then you will see the account balances column, current fiscal year of total Federal securities. In other words, how much did we have to borrow? We have the figure here at the beginning of the year; it is $5,478,704,000,000. Then you look at the close of the fiscal year, and it is $5,606,486,000,000—a deficit, not a surplus, of $127.8 billion. That is as of yesterday. But if you read the headline in the paper, they have "back-to-back surpluses," and we have another deficit in excess of over $100 billion.

I ask unanimous consent to have this printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

HILL NEGOTIATORS AGREE TO DELAY PART OF NIH RESEARCH BUDGET

(By Eric Pianin)

House and Senate negotiators yesterday agreed to delay a big chunk of the research budget of the National Institutes of Health, as they struggled to find new ways to hold down costs and stay within tight spending limits.

With concerns rising over their plan to cut programs across the board, Republicans leaders are once again turning to creative accounting tactics to make sure their spending bills are lean enough to avoid tapping into Social Security payroll taxes.

The last of the 13 spending bills to be considered by Congress, a giant $313 billion measure funding labor, health and human service programs, would provide the NIH with $17.9 billion for fiscal 2000, a 15 percent increase that exceeds the administration request by $2 billion.

But the bill, which will be considered by the full Congress today, would require the NIH to wait until the final days of the fiscal year in September to use $7.5 billion of that money. The tactic is aimed at limiting the actual amount of money that the government will spend at NIH in the current fiscal year; the plan would essentially roll over $2 billion of spending to next year.

The Clinton administration warned that the move would seriously hamper research efforts and impose significant administrative burdens on NIH, and congressional Democrats complained that it was yet another step eroding GOP credibility on budget matters.

But Senate Appropriations Committee Chairman Ted Stevens (R-Alaska) said Congress was justified in its use of accounting "devices" to cope with emergencies and pressing budget priorities that exceeded what Congress had previously set aside to spend this year.

The various devices are crucial to the GOP's campaign to pass all 13 spending bills for the fiscal year that began Oct. 1 without appearing to dip into surplus revenue generated by Social Security taxes. GOP leaders last night put the finishing touches on an unwieldy package that includes both the labor-health-education bill, the District of Columbia spending bill and proposal for a roughly 1 percent across-the-board spending cut.

Democrats maintain the "mindless" across-the-board cuts would "devastate" some agencies, hurt programs for mothers and children, and trigger large layoffs in the armed services. But House Majority Whip Tom DeLay (R-Tex.) said accusations the cuts would hurt defense were "nothing but hogwash." He said the criticism was coming from "the same officials who have sat by idly as the president has hollowed out the armed forces."

President Clinton has vowed to veto the huge package, as he has three other bills, and there is no way the two sides can reach agreement before a midnight Friday deadline. With neither side willing to provoke a government shutdown, the administration and Congress will agree on a third, short-term continuing resolution to keep all the agencies afloat while they continue negotiations.

While the Republicans and the White House are relatively close in negotiating overall spending levels, there are serious differences over how to spend money to reduce class sizes, hire additional police officers and meet a financial obligation to the United Nations, as well as disputes over environmental provisions in the bills.

Meanwhile, figures out yesterday showed that the federal government ran a surplus of $122.7 billion in fiscal 1999 (which ended Sept. 30), the first time the government has recorded back-to-back surpluses since the Eisenhower administration in 1956-57.

The 1999 surplus was almost double the 1998 surplus of $69.2 billion, which was the first since 1969. While the 1999 surplus was the largest in the nation's history in strict dollar terms, it was the biggest since 1951 when measured as a percentage of the economy, a gauge that tends to factor out the effects of inflation.

All of the surplus came from the excess payroll taxes being collected to provide for Social Security benefits in the next century. Contrary to an earlier estimate by the Congressional Budget Office, the non-Social Security side of the federal government ran a deficit of $1 billion, money that was made up from the Social Security surplus.

The drafting of the labor-health-education spending measure dominated the action behind the scenes on Capitol Hill yesterday. The House has been unable to pass its own version, so House and Senate negotiators worked out a final compromise in conference.

The $313 billion compromise exceeds last year's spending by $11.3 billion and includes more money for education, Pell Grants for college students, NIH, federal impact aid for local communities, the Ryan White AIDS research program and community services block grants than the administration had requested.

While the bill provides $1.2 billion for class size reduction, the Republicans insist local school districts be given the option for using the money for other purposes while the White House would mandate the money for hiring additional teachers.

Republicans also were claiming $877 million in savings by using a computer database of newly hired workers to track down people who defaulted on student loans. The non-partisan CBC said the idea would only save $130 million, but Republicans are using a more generous estimate used by Clinton's White House budget office.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, having gotten the record made, the point is that it is not as easy as my distinguished colleagues from New York and Delaware, the leaders on this particular measure, have painted it. When you see that you are running deficits now of $127 billion, when you see that the trade deficit is widening, when you see that, according to an article, we were consuming faster than we were producing, then you can see trouble on the horizon.

I refer to this morning's Financial Times, page 4: "Widening Trade Gap Raises Fear For Dollar."

I ask unanimous consent that this article be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

WIDENING TRADE GAP RAISES FEARS FOR DOLLAR

(By Christopher Swann)

Fears of a slide in the US dollar have haunted global currency markets for several months now. The dollar was granted a reprieve last week following better than expected August trade figures. But many observers believe it is only a matter of time before the dollar succumbs to mounting trade imbalances.

As the US current account deficit has increased, concerns have intensified that international appetite for dollar assets will soon be exhausted, leaving the US unable to fund its trade shortfall with the rest of the globe and precipitating a sharp drop in the currency. That could imperil the US economy's run of rapid non-inflationary growth.

However, some economists point out that the high level of long-term foreign direct investment should spend the dollar from the threat posed by the current account deficit, expected to reach $320bn in 1999.

Optimists argue that the growing importance of foreign direct investment, as US companies become the target of foreign takeovers, means much of the capital now flowing into the US may be relatively slow to leave.

Foreign direct investment (FDI), into the US is booming, with BP's take-over of Amoco, Daimler's take-over of Chrysler and Vodafone's takeover of AirTouch the most high profile examples.

New inflows of FDI reached $60.5bn in 1998, a record sum which covered about a third of the US current account deficit. And this year, net FDI has already eclipsed last year's figure, with $83.5bn pouring into the US in the second quarter alone. In the fourth quarter of 1998 and the second quarter of 1999, net FDI flows were stronger than shorter-term portfolio inflows and indeed exceeded the entire current account deficit. The long-term nature of these flows reduces the prospect of a sudden balance of payments crisis, says Ian Morris, US economist for HSBC in New York.

"If a current account problem develops there is a breathing space for the authorities to correct the imbalances rather than have financial markets force it on them in an abrupt and possibly catastrophic manner," he argues.

The big question for the dollar is whether this surge in foreign direct investment can be maintained.

Paul Meggyesi, senior currency strategist at Deutsche Bank in London, thinks it can. The deep-seated structural advantages enjoyed by the US in areas such as technology and labour market regulation, he argues, should ensure that FDI continues at a healthy rate.

"This is particularly true in the technology field, with the US accounting for 74 of the top 100 information technology companies, compared to only 5 per cent in Europe. It would not be surprising if European companies try to close the gap by taking over or merging with US businesses," he says.

But the bare facts are alarming. The current account deficit, expanding at about 50 per cent a year over the past two years, is now at its highest level since at least the end of the civil war as a proportion of GDP. And the family silver can only be sold once. Few believe that the US economy can rely indefinitely on the sale of assets to cover the current account shortfall.

Mr. Morris calculates that funding the expected $375bn deficit in 1999 from FDI alone would mean selling the equivalent of Intel, the third largest company in the Standard and Poors 500 index.

And if present trends continue until 2001, assets equal in value to Microsoft, the largest company in the US, would have to be sold to cover the deficit.

In reality, over the medium term FDI is unlikely to be anywhere near 100 percent of the current account shortfall, leaving much to come from more fickle portfolio flows. "While the high proportion of long-term capital flows provides some comfort for the dollar, it is likely to prove inadequate," argues Avinash Persaud, head of global research at State Street.

When US shares offered an unrivalled 20 percent annual returns it seemed the US would have no trouble attracting sufficient portfolio inflows. With US share prices falling and returns picking up in the economies of Japan, the euro-zone and the UK, competition for international capital is becoming more intense.

"The safe haven portfolio flows which entered the US during the global crisis at the end of 1998 now have other alternative homes. It will prove much more difficult for the US to finance its deficit in 1999 than it was in 1998," says Mr. Persaud.

Most agree that this will cause the dollar to grind lower, removing one of the main ingredients in the US's high rate of non-inflationary growth. Higher interest rates and weaker stocks may well be the consequence.

Some analysts believe that the dollar's 16 percent fall against the yen since this year's peak in May merely marks the start of a period of general weakness in the US currency.

But the dollar has so far proved relatively resilient against other currencies and may well keep the market on tenterhooks for some time yet.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, there it says:

A slide on the U.S. dollar has haunted global currency markets for several months now.

It says:

The dollar was granted a reprieve last week following better-than-expected August trade figures. But many observers believe it is only a matter of time before the dollar succumbs to mounting trade imbalances.

It is going up over $300 billion.

As the U.S. current account deficit has increased, concerns have testified that international appetite for dollar assets will soon be exhausted, leaving the U.S. unable to fund its trade shortfall with the rest of the globe and precipitating a sharp drop in the currency. That could imperil the U.S. economy's run of rapid inflationary growth.

It goes on to say how we have had foreign direct investment with, of course, the BP takeover of Amoco, Daimler-Mercedes takeover of Chrysler, and Vodafone's takeover of AirTouch.

It says:

The big question for the dollar is whether this surge in foreign, direct investment can be maintained.

But the bare facts are alarming. The current account deficit, expanding at over 50 percent a year over the past two years, is now at its highest level since at least the end of the Civil War as a proportion of GDP. And the family silver can only be sold once. Few believe that the U.S. economy can rely indefinitely on the sale of assets to cover the current account shortfall.

Some analysts believe that the dollar's 16 percent fall against the yen since this year's peak in May merely marks the start of a period of general weakness in the U.S. currency.

What are we doing about this? We are taking away the productivity. It is not an increase in jobs. It isn't any increase at all. They are running and spending it fast in the fabric plants. But forget about the people working by the sweat of their brow in the apparel industry—such as the mother trying to keep food on the table and get her children through college.

We will pass all kinds of protections for high tech companies. We even repealed the State tort laws for something that can't happen until the first of next year. They want to do away with the immigration laws for high tech companies—the estate taxes, the capital gains tax, and everything else of that kind. They have all kinds of benefits. I even saw an article about creating a subsidy for boat manufacturers, so we can get more pleasure yachts.

We have to increase the productivity. We are losing the industrial backbone of the United States of America.

What we are hearing is that this Senator and others do not understand that the high-tech community is the engine of this wonderful globalization, the engine of this economic giant, the United States of America. Not so at all.

There is a book called "In Praise of Hard Industries" by Eamonn Fingleton. We don't put the book, of course, in the RECORD.

But surely the United States has scored some real successes in high-tech manufacturing in the 1990s? Yes—but far fewer than even most experts realize. Perhaps the strongest remaining American high-tech manufacturer is Boeing. But even Boeing is doing less well than it used to. Quite apart from facing increasing competition from the European Airbus consortium, Boeing has been under considerable pressure from foreign governments to transfer jobs abroad, and it has duly done so. As William Greider has pointed out in his book One World, Ready or Not, 30 percent of the components used in Boeing's 777 jet are made abroad. By comparison in the 1960s, Boeing imported only 2 percent of its components. Thus, Boeing, like other erstwhile world-beating American manufacturers, is rapidly becoming a "virtual corporation" ever more dependent on suppliers in Japan and elsewhere abroad for its most advanced manufacturing needs.

I divert for a minute to say that was the trouble we had in the gulf war. We had to get panel displays from Japan in order to get the weapons in order to fight that war. We weren't making them anymore. Every time I put a "buy America" provision into the defense bill—I serve on the Defense Appropriations Subcommittee—I get no, you are a fruitcake. That is what Mike Kelly calls those who are trying to protect trade.

Now I hear this morning that I am going to start a depression and everything else of that kind. You can't talk sense on this particular subject. But the proof of the pudding is in the eating.

Let me quote again.

Meanwhile, despite all the talk of a renaissance in the American semiconductor industry, there is actually only one truly strong American semiconductor manufacturer left: Intel. Moreover, Intel's success says little if anything about its manufacturing prowess. In fact, the company's twenty-four-fold growth in the fifteen years to 1997 has been driven not by any fundamental efficiency edge in production engineering but rather by the company's near-monopolistic franchise in producing microprocessors for the dominant "Wintel" standard in personal computers.

In any case, Intel is just one company—and judged by the all-important criterion of jobs, not a particularly large one. At last count it employed sixty-seven thousand people worldwide—little more than one-sixth of IBM's peak workforce in the mid-1980s before its domination of the computer industry collapsed under pressure from the rising Wintel standard. Moreover, Intel is not as advanced as it appears. In fact, its Wintel chips are based on an aging technology known as CISC (complex instruction set computing). In the last decade, CISC has been superseded by a technology called RISC (reduced instruction set computing). RISC chips, which are noted for their use in such high-performance computers as Sun Microsystems' network servers, are made mainly in Japan.

Intel apart, there are few other semiconductor manufacturers left in the United States. This may seem surprising in view of the fact that, according to such prophets of America's purported industrial renaissance as Jerry Jasinowski, the United States has now recovered strong leadership in semiconductors. He has reported that American semiconductor makers boosted their global market share from 40 percent in 1988 to 44 percent in 1993, and this supposedly has put the United States back in the "top spot" in the industry. After the big decline in America's share in the first half of the 1980s, all this seems like convincing evidence of a comeback. But the truth is that his 44 percent figure is bogus. It is based on highly misleading statistical procedures that categorize most chips outsourced by American companies from factories in East Asia and elsewhere as "American"! The only justification for this bizarre statistical treatment is that most such chips are made to American designs and bear American brand names. But that hardly means they are made in America. Even Dataquest, an information-industry consulting firm that is the ultimate source of data on world semiconductor production, compiles its statistics on this basis.

Given the prevalence of such misleading statistics, how do we gauge the true state of American competitiveness? Again, there is no substitute for international trade figures. These indicate that the United States ran a deficit of more than $3 billion with Japan alone in semiconductors in 1997. Given Japan's higher wage levels, therefore, it is clear that the idea that the United States has recovered world leadership in semiconductors is just another myth.

Mr. President, I want to yield in a minute so other colleagues can address the Senate. But I will come back because what you have is a situation where that sandwich board they put up with all of these industries, they are all for the American worker. No; they are all for money, profit. That is all that those companies are for.

Let me quote page 32.

Since American labor is not represented in American boardrooms, the real losers from technological globalism have no say in the matter. Moreover, workers' interests count for so little these days that American corporate executives openly proclaim their commitment to utopian globalism without the slightest fear of embarrassment. The pattern was memorably exemplified a few years ago by a Colgate-Palmolive executive who told the New York Times: "The United States does not have an automatic call on our resources. There is no mindset that puts this country first." A similarly outspoken disregard for the interests of American labor was apparent in a remark by NCR's president, Gilbert Williamson, some years ago when he said: "I was asked the other day about the United States' competitiveness, and I replied that I don't think about it at all. We at NCR think of ourselves as a globally competitive company that happens to be incorporated in the United States."

That is the situation with Farley and Fruit of the Loom, exactly what was brought in issue fortuitously by Time magazine when they put in the article "The Fruit of Its Labor—The Politics of Underwear." Fruit of the Loom eliminated 17,000 jobs in Kentucky, 7,000 in Louisiana, moved to the Cayman Islands and I should put them on one of those sandwich boards. Whoopee, they are for this bill so that they can make more money.

Who is looking at the welfare of the American worker? Who is looking at the industrial strength of the United States? Who is looking at the economic progress and security of the United States of America?

One could not be for this particular bill if one knew how it has been drawn up. It does not even compare with NAFTA. We cannot put an amendment up because the tree is filled. They put in what you might call fast track, no amendments, and then they give their friends the fruit of the tree. Senator WELLSTONE, the Democrat, comes in with an agricultural amendment that is not to be allowed. But take the Senator from Missouri. When he comes with a particular amendment on agriculture, the leader comes down and finds that is relevant. We stop the whole process and pluck the amendment from the tree and put in your friend's amendment and they call that "procedure" in the world's most deliberative body. It is the most undemocratic procedure, unparliamentary kind of procedure that could possibly be contemplated. They ought to be embarrassed handling a measure this way.

However, there is no embarrassment with this group. They know they can pass this bill easily because they can breeze through the committee and everybody on the floor saying mollify, unite. It used to be the ILGWU working the floor. I have been in it too long; I understand the competition.

As a southern Governor, I don't blame the foreigners for saying we give this benefit and give that benefit. That is exactly what we did in South Carolina. The Senator from Delaware says they can get new jobs by learning new skills. We do that in South Carolina. We have brought in Hoffman-LaRouche and BMW. They told me the only reason they have come is because of the technical training system I instituted 30 years ago. I know about skills, training, getting new jobs and new industry. But we have had a net loss, in the last 4 years since NAFTA, of 12,000 jobs in South Carolina.

In the campaign last year in the Governor's race, they were talking about new jobs. I said: Add and subtract. You are not announcing those that are leaving and going down to Mexico. We had United Technologies, the textile plants and others take off down to Mexico. We saw it starting then and it is mushrooming now.

We are being derided on the floor talking about Smoot-Hawley and putting up the bankers' sandwich board and saying: This is for the good of America.

We are going to have to discuss this a little bit longer.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. VOINOVICH). The Senator from Iowa.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, this morning Senator CONRAD offered an amendment which I cosponsor. I ask my colleagues to consider voting for this amendment that will make the Trade Adjustment Assistance Program available for farmers as well as industrial workers.

This program, trade assistance, is being reauthorized in this legislation. This amendment would expand it just a little bit.

President Clinton, about a month ago in an address spoke about one-third of the jobs that have been created during his administration have come as a result of opening foreign trade and all the economic activity that takes place because of foreign trade.

If we can have millions of jobs created during this administration because we have had a 50-year history of breaking down trade barriers between countries, we have to conclude that the liberalization of trade is good for American workers and good for our economy.

Free trade has produced many winners in our economy. This has been true since 1947 when the United States and just 22 other countries created the regime for liberalized trade we have been under since 1947 called the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.

Since 1987, we have had eight series—sometimes they are called rounds—of multilateral trade negotiations to break down these barriers. These multilateral trade negotiations have liberalized trade in many sectors. Tens of thousands of tariffs have been scrapped. Many nontariff trade barriers have been eliminated. Others have been sharply reduced.

The result of 50 years of trade liberalization has meant the creation of enormous wealth and prosperity and, as I have said, millions of new jobs, one-third of the new jobs created just in this decade. But whenever you have a free market economy, probably even when you have a regimented economy, as the socialist countries have had, there is always some adjustment in the economy. There are some winners and some losers; that is true in our economy, and it is true in the foreign trade part of our economy.

For this reason, more than 35 years ago President Kennedy and the 87th Congress thought it was only fair to transfer some of the net gain from free trade to injured workers or firms or industries or even entire communities. The first U.S. Trade Adjustment Assistance Program was designed by President Kennedy and authorized by the Trade Expansion Act of 1962 to help workers dislocated as a result of a Federal policy to reduce barriers to foreign trade.

It is very important for the purposes of our amendment and also the spirit of the Trade Adjustment Assistance Act to hear what President Kennedy, its author, had to say about its intent and scope:

I am recommending as an essential part of the new trade program that companies, farmers, and workers who suffer damage from increased foreign import competition be assisted in their efforts to adjust to that competition. When considerations of national policy make it desirable to avoid higher tariffs, those injured by that competition should not be required to bear the brunt of the impact. Rather, the burden of economic adjustment should be borne in part by the Federal Government.

What President Kennedy said was so important, and I emphasize, once again, a small part of it:

Trade adjustment assistance should be available for companies, farmers, and workers.

In spite of President Kennedy's belief that farmers should be able to get relief from trade adjustment assistance, just like others who suffer from trade-related job losses, the reality is, few, if any, individual family farmers are ever able to qualify for this program. Hence the amendment by Senator CONRAD and myself that is offered today to address this inequity.

Senator CONRAD and I think it is only fair that not only farmers be included but fishermen be added to this group as well. They are workers, they help put food on our tables, and they have the same problems under the current program as farmers.

Our program will create a limited new trade adjustment assistance for farmers program. It will provide cash assistance to farmers and fishermen when the price of a commodity falls sharply as a result of imports and causes a farm's net income to drop. The formula ensures farmers will recover a portion, but not all, of the income lost due to import competition.

This is not an open-ended program. Assistance is capped at $10,000 per farmer and a total of $100 million per year, and, of course, as must be under the Budget Act, this Trade Adjustment Assistance Program is paid for. In order to qualify for this limited Trade Adjustment Assistance Program, farmers will have to consult with the USDA's Extension Service to develop a plan for adjusting to the import competition.

In about 5 weeks, the United States will launch a new round of global trade talks with 133 other WTO—World Trade Organization—member countries. That is an extension of the organization that started out with 22 countries in 1947 for this regime of liberalizing trade. In 5 weeks, these talks start.

Farmers have always been among the strongest supporters of free trade because so much of what they produce is sold in overseas markets. In fact, there is an absolute necessity of selling overseas because, even in normal production, we produce a third more than can be domestically consumed. Profitability and farming must come by selling the surplus overseas.

The income our farm families earn in these foreign markets sustains our economy and contributes greatly to our national well-being. Farm support for free trade cannot and should not be taken for granted by the rest of the people in this country who benefit from free trade.

We are in the worst farm crisis since the Depression of the thirties. Low commodity prices are not caused exclusively by import competition, and I do not mean to imply that. In fact, it is just the opposite. It is caused because a lot of our markets overseas have been hurt by the financial crisis that started 2 1/2 years ago in the Far East. But, of course, in our complex economy, even in our complex agricultural economy, trade might be a contributing factor to these historically low prices.

Through trade adjustment assistance, we look after Americans who are harmed by import competition but not farmers. Through trade adjustment assistance, we have looked after communities harmed by import competition but not farm communities. Between 1979 and 1996, 12 trade adjustment assistance centers in the United States assisted about 6,130 firms with petitions for trade adjustment assistance. During this same 17-year period, these centers assisted only 200 food growers and processors, 200 firms in 17 years that were nonindustrial. But these firms were not individual family farms. I am concerned that if we lose farm support for free trade, it will be very hard, and perhaps impossible, to win congressional approval for new trade deals when these negotiations conclude among these 133 countries.

Fairness, equity, common sense, and, most importantly, the original intent of President Kennedy's program, all tell us that farmers and fishermen should and must be a part of the Trade Adjustment Assistance Program.

So as Senator CONRAD did this morning, I strongly urge my colleagues to support this important amendment.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts.

ACROSS-THE-BOARD SPENDING CUTS: IRRESPONSIBLE BUDGETING

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, we are almost a month into the new fiscal year and Congress still has not passed an appropriations bill for the Departments of Education, Labor, and Health and Human Services. The work of these Departments touches the lives of nearly every American, yet the Republican leadership has been unable to work out an acceptable budget for them which will enable them to carry out their responsibilities fully and effectively.

The majority has used an extraordinary array of gimmicks, such as bogus emergency spending designations, and an unprecedented level of advance fundings. But even those budgetary slights of hand were insufficient to do the job.

They considered reneging on Congress' commitment to provide TANF moneys to the States but backed off under pressure from the Republican Governors.

They proposed increasing taxes on the working poor by changing the reimbursement rules for the Earned Income Tax Credit. Even the leading Republican Presidential candidate denounced that as "balancing the budget on the backs of the poor." Again, the Republican leadership was forced to retreat from an outrageous proposal. The fact that these cuts were even considered shows how out of control the budget process is.

In desperation, the Republicans have now proposed that we indiscriminately cut all Government programs by 1 percent across the board. In other words, they would treat essential health and education programs no differently than special interest pork barrel projects. They ignore the reality that some of the programs are far more important than others. This type of mindless cut is an admission of total budgetary failure.

They pretend such a cut will not have any impact on the programs, but they are terribly wrong. The human cost of such an across-the-board cut would be very high. It would hurt many of our most vulnerable people:

Some 5,000 fewer preschoolers in Head Start;

2,800 fewer children in the child care programs;

74,000 fewer babies receiving nutritional supplements;

2,775,000 fewer meals brought to the elderly and disabled;

120,000 fewer disadvantaged students helped;

6,000 fewer job opportunities for youth;

10,000 fewer work-study grants for college students;

10,000 fewer children helped to read;

3,000 fewer children immunized;

20,000 fewer homes for low-income families.

Each one of these is an unacceptable price to pay for the Republicans' inability to produce a fair and fiscally sound budget.

That was with a 1% cut. Now CBO has made available to us a letter that was sent to the Honorable JOHN SPRATT, who is the ranking Democratic member of the Committee on the Budget in the House, with copies also to Mr. KASICH and Mr. DOMENICI.

The conclusion of these letters is that the 0.97% cut that will be included in the conference report, which perhaps we will consider later, is going to be insufficient, according to the latest calculations of CBO, to avoid tapping social security funds this fiscal year. Their estimate is, it would have to be not 0.97 percent but a total of 5.8 percent. If you were to eliminate defense, military construction, veterans programs, it would be in excess of 11 percent cut.

So here on this chart are the cuts with 1 percent. And the CBO says, if you are going to do the job and follow the pathway that is being recommended by the Republican leadership, it will have to be a 5.8 percent cut.

So you can multiply all of the cuts to programs needed by our most vulnerable citizens by 5.8, which yields a much more devastating impact. Those are the circumstances we are in.

The fact is that the President and the ranking Democrats on the various committees say: Why don't you go back and cut out the pork you put in and cut out the excesses you have added, and send us something that is responsible? Then we can have true negotiations.

But that isn't the way the Republican leadership is moving. They are just favoring across-the-board cuts, which will cut valuable, helpful programs that are indispensable to needy people, for infants and for children, for education, and for health—the same amount as the pork programs that have been added by the Republicans.

These consequences are all the more deplorable because they are unnecessary. President Clinton and the Democrats here in Congress have proposed fiscally responsible measures to keep our hands entirely off Social Security money even while we make the critical investments needed to strengthen our Nation in the coming year.

But the Republicans repeatedly said "no." "No" to a cigarette tax that would prevent teen smoking while paying for children's health initiatives; "no" to making oil companies pay royalties they owe the Federal Government; "no" to reducing corporate welfare; "no" even to military officers when they ask to defer or delay programs the Republicans want in their districts.

By consistently declining opportunities to reduce a balanced budget, Republicans are on a course to raid Social Security, regardless of this proposed 1 percent cut.

Why have Republicans proposed this latest gimmick? To avoid using this year's Social Security surplus to pay for this year's Government spending, they tell us. But what Republicans don't say is that the gimmicks they have already voted for guarantee that the Social Security money will be used in the budget this year. That is what the latest CBO report that has been given to the leaders today has indicated.

I have but one simple question for anyone who would disagree: Where will the money come from to pay for the census, which Republicans have suddenly declared to be an emergency? This money must be paid to contractors and staff this budget year, yet it cannot be found anywhere except in the Social Security trust fund.

By simply calling a $4 billion entirely foreseeable program an "emergency," Republicans cannot escape the fact that they will certainly spend Social Security surpluses this year, regardless of whether there is an across-the-board cut. The census gimmick is but one of many instances in which Social Security funds have already been spent by Republicans this budget year. When all the smoke and mirrors produced by the Republicans are removed, we can see that the true goal of their 1-percent cut is not to preserve Social Security surpluses but to gut Government spending on core education, health, and criminal justice programs. Republicans in this Congress are returning to the time of Speaker Gingrich when they proposed abolishing the Department of Education, only now they are dismantling it piece by piece.

Today's Republicans have proposed a $288 million cut for the Department of Education—continuing their longstanding assault on our children's futures. Let's not forget that when Republicans first assumed the control of Congress in 1995, their top agenda item was to rescind $1.7 billion in education funding that had already been enacted into law by the Democratic Congress. Then, in the first full funding cycle subject to Republican control, their appropriators in the House socked the Department of Education with a $3.9 billion proposed cut—almost 20 percent. They tried again in the budget year 1997 when Senate appropriators sought a $3.1 billion cut to the President's request for education programs.

Democrats in the Congress, together with President Clinton, successfully resisted each one of these Republican cuts in education.

So since 1997, Republicans have sought more modest education cuts of $200 million or more below the President. Today's proposed $288 million cut is consistent with the Republicans' longstanding goal of decreasing support for education. It is wrong. It is shortsighted. It is not what the American people want or deserve.

Of course, Senator NICKLES and Representative DELAY want us to believe their 1-percent cut won't hurt a bit. It might not hurt the oil companies they want to protect from paying full royalties to the Government this year, but it will hurt the real people I described when I listed some effects of their proposed cut. The cut might not affect the tobacco companies, now that the Republicans have rejected President Clinton's plan to raise cigarette taxes, but it will hurt those who rely on the programs Republicans want to cut.

In conclusion, I want to just point out—on this other chart—what the current situation is with regard to the Head Start Program.

Today, we have, for the Early Head Start Program, only 1 in 100 eligible children who are actually enrolled. This is what the Carnegie Commission and virtually all recent studies show is probably the wisest investment of funds of any other Government program because these are the earliest years of confidence building among children. And as all of the research has demonstrated, the earliest intervention in these years, in the first, second, third, and fourth years of life, has enormous consequences in the child's cognitive development and future education. Only 1 in 100 eligible children are presently enrolled in Early Head Start. In the Head Start Program, which has been tried and tested, evaluated and strengthened and improved, only 2 in 5 eligible children are enrolled now; 3 out of 5 are financially eligible, and cannot enroll in the program.

The Child Care Development Block Grant program only assists 1 in 10 eligible children. Education for the disabled, only 1 in 4 eligible children are assisted. This is the current situation. It is against that background we are going to see tens of millions, hundreds of millions of dollars in reduction in those programs because the Republican leadership, over the course of the year, have added a lot of boondoggle programs of their own in these other appropriations.

I indicated what those reductions would be if they were going to be 1 percent. Now we know it is going to be 5.8 percent, according to the CBO.

The proposed cut is wrong. It is an abdication of their duty to state what they believe the nation's priorities should be. It is irresponsible. I hope our colleagues would vote in the negative on this.

Mr. REID. Will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. KENNEDY. I am glad to yield.

Mr. REID. I ask my friend from Massachusetts, is he aware, in addition to this latest scheme—that is what I call it—this across-the-board cut, in this one-a-week program the Republicans have come up with, they also wanted to do a number of other things, such as extend the year a month? Are you familiar with that?

Mr. KENNEDY. I am.

Mr. REID. That didn't sell very well. Are you aware it was determined even by the very conservative Wall Street Journal they had two sets of books they were trying to keep in an effort to hide the spending of Social Security moneys? Is the Senator aware of that?

Mr. KENNEDY. I remember the discussion on the floor, an article by Mr. Rogers, I think. It was an excellent article and a very accurate one. It was included in the RECORD. I hope our colleagues will read that.

Mr. REID. In addition to having two sets of books, in addition to extending the year another month, as my friend from Illinois has said—that is great, because in doing that, we will never have a Y2K problem; we just keep adding months to the year—are you aware also that the earned-income tax credit, the program Ronald Reagan said was the best antiwelfare program in the history of this country, they tried, as one of their schemes, to take that money away from the working poor in America so they could balance their so-called budget? Is the Senator aware of that?

Mr. KENNEDY. I was aware of it. The particular need for that program is to provide help and assistance for low-income working families who have children. This is basically the children. That program benefits the children of working poor, to try to give some assurance they will at least have some measure of quality of life. That was the program targeted by the Republican leadership in the House of Representatives to be undermined, that program and the resources in that program, in order to offset the other benefits they had given to their special projects.

Mr. REID. As part of their scheme-of-the-week program to have this blue smoke and mirrors, is the Senator also aware—I know he answered this question, as he so aptly pointed out—that now they want an across-the-board cut, saying they want to eliminate waste and fraud, but that across-the-board cuts are indiscriminate; it doesn't go to any one pocket; it cuts programs across the board? Is the Senator aware of that?

Mr. KENNEDY. The Senator is absolutely correct. It does not, for example, even give the military, give the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and the commanders, the range of options they could have in order to meet their responsibility. We are up to 270-odd billion dollars in terms of defense appropriations; 1 percent is $2.7 billion. As a member of the Armed Services Committee, we heard from the Joint Chiefs that it would be a devastating cut in terms of personnel and in terms of readiness. They don't give the flexibility to any of the administrators to be able to do it. They are just mandating the requirement right across the board. That is the most inefficient way of doing it.

Mr. REID. I ask the Senator, is he aware that instead of their scheme of the week, they have now done two schemes this week? So maybe next week they will use one of the old ones. Is the Senator aware that one of the latest schemes is to withhold money from the National Institutes of Health for 11 months of the fiscal year so all the money comes in the 12th month? It helps their bookkeeping. Is the Senator aware of this scheme they are floating around here?

Mr. KENNEDY. Well, I had heard that, that they were going to hold some $7.8 billion. Maybe they could, with $1 billion, hold for some period of time. NIH might be able to deal with that. They are talking about $7.8 billion, effectively undermining the most significant and important basic research that is taking place any place in the world at a time of extraordinary possibility and breakthroughs in terms of health, in order to fund a number of military pieces of equipment that were never requested by the military and other special projects that were never requested by the administration. They don't want to cut those out, but they want to tamper with the greatest research center in the world, which is the NIH, doing so much on so many of these diseases that affect every family in America, whether it is cancer, whether it is on the issues of Alzheimer's, whether Parkinson's disease, you name it, lupus, whatever it is, osteoporosis that affect our senior citizens. They are tampering with those funds. I have seen a lot of shenanigans in the budgeting of the Federal budget, but I would certainly agree with the Senator that tampering with the NIH funds in the way this is done would have a dramatic adverse impact in our whole basic research programs at the NIH and would cause enormous harm. I welcome the Senator's observation, because, if there weren't other problems in this report, that in and of itself would justify the rejection of it.

Mr. REID. If the Senator is going to yield the floor, I would like to claim the floor.

Mr. DORGAN. I would like to ask the Senator a question.

Mr. REID. I wanted to ask the Senator from North Dakota a question, but please proceed. I have the floor, and I yield to the Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. HOLLINGS. If the Senator will yield, we have been going back and forth. So please be short, if you can. We want to have that comity continue.

Mr. REID. I ask my friend from South Carolina, are we in a hurry around here?

Mr. HOLLINGS. It is the comity and not the time. Please talk until tomorrow, when we vote.

Mr. REID. The Senator from Massachusetts still has the floor then.

Mr. KENNEDY. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada.

Mr. REID. I have the floor. We will speak very shortly so the Senator from Illinois can be recognized.

Mr. DORGAN. The Senator from Illinois should be recognized. If I could ask forbearance, I wanted to ask the Senator from Massachusetts a question. Since he doesn't have the floor, let me at least propound the question.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. President, I would like to have unanimous consent to speak for a couple of minutes on our departed colleague, John Chafee, after which I have to preside. I will just take a couple minutes.

Mr. REID. I say to the Chair, I am happy to yield my time for 2 minutes to the Senator from Illinois. I will reclaim the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the Senator from Illinois is recognized.

IN HONOR OF SENATOR JOHN CHAFEE

Mr. FITZGERALD. I take this opportunity to express my great sense of personal loss on the passing of our colleague from the great State of Rhode Island, John Chafee.

I have only been in the Senate for under a year now. I got to know Senator Chafee while I was running for the Senate about a year ago. Even in that short period of time, I came to have great admiration and respect for Senator Chafee. I can only imagine the great sense of grief my colleagues and others who have known him several decades feel at his passing.

Of all the people I have known in my lifetime, I have to say that Senator Chafee had more of an aura of goodness, kindness, gentleness, and of fineness than just about anybody I had ever encountered in my life.

In many ways, he was a quintessential New Englander. He was modest; he was often taciturn. He did not complain about the health problems he had in the last few months. In fact, he didn't wish to talk about that. He was very hard-working. Others have spoken about his distinguished career in the Senate, as Governor of Rhode Island, and as our Secretary of the Navy. But for all of us who knew him personally, he was a great and fine gentleman. He embodied the best of his State, of his region, of our country, and certainly of this institution.

I just wanted to say now how much I appreciated John Chafee for the warm welcome he gave me as a freshman Senator. I regret that I did not have the chance to thank him while he was still with us. We used to share the elevator rides after we voted. We were on the fifth floor of the Dirksen Building, and we would be riding up to that top floor together after practically every rollcall vote in the Senate. I got to know Senator Chafee quite well in the last few months. He was always very kind and interested in me as a freshman. He was always offering to help. When I took a trip earlier this year to give a speech in Rhode Island, he wanted to know beforehand exactly where I was going and my itinerary in his State, and he quizzed me about it afterward.

He was a Theodore Roosevelt Republican who was concerned about the preservation of our environment, enhancing it for future generations, and he did a marvelous job as chairman of the Environment Committee.

I express my condolences to his wife Virginia, his five children, and most especially to his staff. Senator Chafee's office is right next door to my office in the Dirksen Building. I know that he had a very loyal staff who loved him dearly. Many of his legislative assistants had been with him for 10 years or more, which bespeaks the sense of loyalty and affection they had for him. I know they have suffered a great loss, and we extend our condolences to them. John Chafee will be missed by me and by all of us in the Senate and by the great State of Rhode Island and by our country.

I yield the floor.

SENATE AGENDA

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. FITZGERALD). Under the previous order, the Senator from Nevada is recognized.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I extend my appreciation to the Chair. I yield now to the minority leader, with the agreement that I will have the floor when he completes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The minority leader is recognized.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I thank my colleague, the assistant Democratic leader, for his willingness to allow me the opportunity to talk a little bit more about why we are here.

We are stalled for one reason: The majority leader has again, for the seventh time now, filled the tree, precluding 45 Democrats from offering amendments. That is why we are here. And on two other occasions this year, the majority leader preemptively filed cloture on measures immediately after calling them up—and then proceeded to other business in order to prevent amendments or debate. So nine times so far this year, the majority leader has said, well, we are going to decide which amendments are offered, we are going to decide which amendments are passed, we are going to decide what kind of role you as Senators ought to have, and we will tell you that you are not going to be able to offer amendments. We are going to decide, in other words, whether to gag you and to lock you out of the legislative process to which you were elected as a representative of the people.

It began on March 8, 1999, on the so-called Education Flexibility Act. The bill was offered, the majority leader was recognized, and the tree was filled, locking out every single Democrat from their right to offer amendments to the Education Flexibility Act.

He chose to do it again on April 22 on the Social Security lockbox. He said: We are going to have an up-or-down vote, and it is going to be our lockbox or none at all. We said: What about Medicare? What about locking up the Medicare trust fund? They said: No, you can't offer that amendment; we are going to fill the tree and preclude you from offering amendments on the Social Security lockbox. And, again, the issue was shelved.

On April 27, 1999, the Y2K Act, an extremely complex and very difficult issue, the majority leader came to the floor and filled the tree, precluded Democratic amendments, and said it is take it or leave it.

April 30, again he apparently tries to make the point that Social Security lockbox is important to Republicans—as long as Democrats don't have the opportunity to offer an amendment. Again, we said: We would like to offer an amendment on Medicare. Again, our Republican colleagues said: It is our bill or no bill. At that point, it went from becoming the Republican lockbox to, as our colleague from Maryland, Senator MIKULSKI, said this morning, the Republican "squawk box."

On June 15, 1999, the "squawk box" was debated again. Again, the majority leader offered the bill, filled the tree, precluded Democratic amendments, and the lockbox was shelved.

On July 16, Republicans used the "squawk box" approach again, claiming to be interested in getting the bill passed, precluding Democratic amendments on Medicare.

On June 16, in a similar situation, they did it again. They called up a House bill, the Social Security and Medicare Safe Deposit Act, filed cloture, and went off the bill to other business. And then, on September 21, the most recent effort by the majority leader and the majority to lock out Democratic amendments, they brought up the bankruptcy reform bill, filed cloture, and moved on to another bill, precluding Democratic amendments.

I only recite the litany of occasions when the majority leader filled the tree in order to make clear how objectionable this coercive tactic really is. For those who are not familiar with parliamentary jargon, "filling the tree" is a procedure that the leader can use to offer multiple amendments and thereby fill all of the available amendment slots that a bill has under the Senate rules, precluding any Senator from offering an amendment. That is what filling the tree is all about. Together with the practice of preemptively filing cloture, which has the same effect, it has been done now on nine separate occasions. The sad thing about it being done on this bill is that it plays right into the hands of the opponents of the legislation.

The opponents are very grateful to Senator LOTT and the majority for filling the tree because it certainly makes it easy. It turns the issue away from whether or not one supports CBI to whether or not one supports a Senator's right to be a full participant in this Senate Chamber on this or any other bill. It ceases to become substantive and becomes a matter of individual Senator's rights.

Well, because I want this bill passed so badly and because I know it is one of the highest priorities for the administration, because I think this legislation has languished too long, because I think there is a real chance we can get this legislation passed and signed into law, going into conference with our House colleagues, I made an offer yesterday that was unprecedented since I have been leader. I said to the majority leader that if he would agree to allow us to offer on other legislation some of the amendments contemplated on this legislation, I would be prepared to work with him to table amendments on this bill. That is remarkable. It wasn't without a great deal of concern for protecting Senators' rights that I offered this latest proposal.

I draw a distinction between protecting a Senator's right to offer an amendment and supporting whatever amendment a Senator chooses to offer. I might not support an amendment on this particular bill, as important as some of these issues might be, but I will fight to protect every Senator's right to offer it. But there is a very important caveat here, and I think it needs to be emphasized. I insisted that we must have the opportunity to at least offer these amendments on another bill.

We have to have an opportunity, for example, to offer minimum wage on the bankruptcy bill when it comes up. The majority leader again said no. The problem, as we have said on so many occasions, is that there are those on the majority side who want this Senate to be a second House of Representatives. They want this body to act and to proceed as if it were the House of Representatives. That is the problem.

The amazing irony is that our Republican colleagues never dreamed of asking for this kind of procedural constraint, this kind of enslaved approach to legislation, when they were in the minority. They had no trouble offering extraneous amendments that were not necessarily relevant to a particular bill when they were in the minority. Of course not. The amazing thing is Democrats did not insist on a procedural constraint of the magnitude our Republican colleagues are now demanding.

Why? Because we had the confidence when a bill came to the floor that we would have a good debate, we would take all comers, we would table amendments that we didn't support, and we would offer second-degree amendments that we thought would be approved. We used all of the tools available to us. And this Senate acted like a Senate.

This Senate isn't acting like a Senate today. This is a sham. This is a terrible excuse for this body. This should not happen. We should not have to come pleading for the right to do what we were elected to do. And it happens over and over—almost once a month this year.

I am telling you, we are losing some of the institutional tradition here. We are seeing the erosion of an extraordinarily important body and the rights incorporated within that body. Who today could, without smiling, argue that this is the most deliberative body? Who could say with a straight face, yes, this is still the world's most deliberative body? I daresay no one could say that. There is nothing deliberative about the Senate today. They want to make this a legislative assembly line. You take something up, you vote it up or down, and you move it along.

I am surprised we don't have a conveyor belt somewhere on the lower part of the floor where we just kind of say yes and no, yes and no, as bills on the conveyor belt come through—no debate, no deliberation; let's move them out.

This isn't what our Founding Fathers expected of us. They expected more. They put the rights in the hands of Senators to say: No, let's slow down on the legislation; or, I want to be able to offer an amendment. And I don't care whether it is a farm bill to a peace treaty. We want to have the opportunity to deliberate in the most deliberative body. Rubber stamping doesn't work around here. We have only had a handful of amendable vehicles—just a handful.

The response from the majority leader to my offer suggests that there may never be another amendable vehicle in this session of Congress—with no amendments on this bill, no amendments on any other bill. That is what the Republicans want. The results of doing business this way is remarkable.

We talk about a legislative landfill. I am telling you, I have never seen a legislative landfill of the magnitude we have today. We keep throwing bills into the legislative landfill, and that landfill keeps getting larger.

This has been the biggest legislative graveyard I have seen since coming to Congress. Republicans get elected to prove government doesn't work, and they prove it every day. When they are in control, they prove that government doesn't work because they don't want it to work. They don't want minimum wage. They don't want a Patients' Bill of Rights. They don't want good gun legislation. They don't want a Medicare prescription drug bill. They don't want legislation that moves this country forward. They don't want it. They don't want to admit it. They ought to admit it.

We are not going to be a part of this. We are going to stick up for our rights. We are going to amend legislation when it comes to the floor. We are going to go back into that legislative landfill and one by one we are going to recycle, because I am telling you that is what this Senate and this country needs. We are going to recycle the Patients' Bill of Rights until it is done right. We are going to recycle minimum wage. We are going to recycle the gun legislation. We are going to recycle farm legislation. We are going to recycle every single bill the Republicans insist on burying, and we are going to keep coming back because that is what we were elected to do. That is what we are going to do. That is what we believe in doing.

I have to say I am disappointed. I am about as patient a person as I think I can be, but I lose my patience, and I get angry and frustrated at the level of duplicity and the extraordinary encumbrances that the majority demands of this body each and every day we legislate. This is wrong.

I am not proud to be in the Senate when I can't legislate as a Senator. I am not proud when we tear away the pillars of the Senate institution. I am not proud when I can't go to the public and say, yes, I am one of the 100 Members of the greatest deliberative body in the world. I am not proud about that. For however long I am here, I would like to be proud of the fact that, as a Senator, I lived up to the traditions and the practices and the extraordinary honor that comes with being a Senator. But that isn't happening today.

I left the House of Representatives 12 years ago for a good reason. I thought I could do more here. I thought I could play a bigger role here. I thought the Senate was where a Senator could really legislate. It was true in 1987. It was true in 1992. It was true all the way up until recently when slowly but most assuredly date by date, bill by bill, in filling the tree and using other devices, this majority leader said no. No. We are going to be a House of Representatives. Forget regular order. Regular order says you can offer amendments. We are not going to have regular order in the Senate. We are going to have narrow order, or no order at all, as the case may be.

What order is there when Senators can't offer amendments and we are stymied for 2 days? Do you realize how many bills we could have finished, or how many amendments we could have finished in just the last couple of days? We probably could go to final passage with the number of Senators who support this legislation by the end of the week. But here we are stymied once again.

We haven't passed the Social Security lockbox. That is part of the legislative landfill because we have filled the tree.

We haven't been able to pass anything where the majority leader has filled the tree until he has torn the tree down. That is the case here as well.

We will never let this legislation pass if we can't offer an amendment, not because we don't support it—I strongly support it—but because I also even more strongly support the right of every single Senator to be partners in the legislative process.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. DASCHLE. I would be happy to yield to the Senator from California.

Mrs. BOXER. I thank my leader for his comments and his spirit because it is the spirit we need in this country, which is the can-do spirit. We can take care of the people's business, even if it is difficult for my friend. I know it is because I know the kind of goodness he has in his heart. This isn't his favorite moment to come down to the floor and have to express his feelings of dismay and his anger, frankly. My friend listed bills that are in the landfill, the graveyard. I want to ask the Senator about three other issues that I think are in danger of joining in that Republican graveyard: The 100,000 teachers, the 100,000 police, and decent, qualified judges who have been waiting for years to get a vote.

I wonder if my leader would comment on those three areas, as well.

Mr. DASCHLE. The Senator from California puts her finger right on the issues I omitted, and rightfully so. One year ago, we all had a bipartisan agreement and celebrated the fact we were going to reduce class size. How ironic it is now, after all the celebration, that in just 12 months Republicans have had a change of heart. Now, apparently, class size is no longer an issue. Now, apparently, it is OK to have kids in classrooms with 35, 40, 50 children. It doesn't matter. The Senator is right about that.

The Senator is also right about judges. I don't know how anyone can look Judge Paez in the eye and say he got a fair deal. I don't know how Members tell anybody who has had to wait for more than 3 years that this system is fair. I don't know how Members tell the Hispanic community we are being equally as fair with them as we are with all non-Hispanic judges when that simply is not true. If one is in a minority, that person has a bigger contest in getting confirmed. That is a fact. I won't deal with all the perceptions that creates, but it is wrong. Hispanic or non-Hispanic, African American or non-African American, woman or man, it is wrong not to have a vote on the Senate floor.

What are they afraid of? What are they afraid of? What is wrong with a vote? There is something wrong in our system when somebody has the right to tell somebody who is willing to commit him or herself to public service that we are going to make that person wait 3½ years just to get a vote. We are not going to tell them what is wrong. We are not going to say if there is something wrong in their background. We are not going to debate whether they have qualifications or not. We are going to make them wait, and hopefully they will go away. Hopefully, they will go away.

What does that say? What does that say about the intentions of people on the other side? Go away. Don't make any noise.

That is wrong. That is worse than a legislative landfill.

Mr. KENNEDY. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. DASCHLE. I am happy to yield to the Senator.

Mr. KENNEDY. I commend the Senator for his very eloquent and accurate assessment of what has happened to this institution. I have been here for some period of time, and I say this is absolutely a unique set of circumstances. The leader has, I think, accurately described the current system.

I think it is important, as our friend from California pointed out, what it means in terms of people's lives. We can talk about the tree and blocking amendments, but let's take one bill, the Patients' Bill of Rights.

This chart lists in white all the provisions that were in the Senate bill, which our Democratic leader managed so well, and which was submitted in the Senate. All of these provisions represent the best judgment of a bipartisan commission set up by the President. They unanimously made these recommendations. They had to be unanimous in order to make the recommendations. They didn't make the recommendation to put them in law, but they said: This is what is necessary to protect the people. Or by the insurance commissioners, that are neither Democrat or Republican organizations; or, in other instances, in Medicare.

This side of the chart represents what happened in the House of Representatives with a bipartisan group of House Members, 68 Republicans and the Democrats. These full dots indicate the House of Representatives has effectively agreed with the legislation advanced by the minority leader.

I ask, since this was a bipartisan program and the leader had the overwhelming support of the Democrats, whether the Senator would not welcome the opportunity this afternoon to go ahead and pass what was passed in the House of Representatives so we would not have the kind of circumstance we have every single day we are delayed: 35,000 Americans delayed or denied specialty care; 31,000 forced to change doctors; 18,000 forced to change medicine indications; 59,000 Americans with added pain and suffering; 41,000 with a worsening condition; and 11,000 with permanent disability.

That happens every single day.

As I gather from what the leader has said, the kind of legislative trapeze that has been set up by the majority leader denies this minority the opportunity to take action that can make a difference in the lives of the families of America. I think it is worthwhile, as we talk and listen carefully to the Senator's concerns, to know the result of the inaction. Real families are being hurt in America. They don't have to be hurt. Republicans and Democrats alike got together to provide some protection, but this leadership in this body is denying the American people the ability to receive the kind of protections they should.

Mr. DASCHLE. The Senator from Massachusetts is absolutely right. He gave a perfect illustration of how they are being hurt on health care. I think he is also right that it is important to try to put this in terms the American people understand. This has to do with more than just procedure. We are talking procedure, and sometimes I may get too engrossed in my own procedural frustration to try to ensure that we talk about this in ways the American people fully understand.

If anyone out there today has been ripped off by an insurance company or has been denied care by a hospital or doctor because they are being told by the insurance company they cannot do it, those people are affected by what is happening this afternoon on the floor, one of the thousands of people who have been adversely affected by our inability to have a good debate. Anyone out there who has a child in a classroom with 35 or 40 kids is affected by what is going on right now.

If anyone out there has been affected by some crime in the neighborhood because we haven't fully funded the COPS Program, then, by golly, those Americans are affected dramatically by what has happened right now. If anyone is out there working at lousy minimum wage and can't make ends meet, they are affected by what is happening right now because the other side doesn't want a minimum wage increase—not this year, not ever. If they did, they would have supported it a long time ago. If anyone out there wonders why this is all going on, turn the pages of the calendar back 2 weeks and find out it was their side that defeated campaign finance reform and we are affected by what is happening right now. Don't let anybody out there, I don't care what issue, think this is not relevant.

The assistant Democratic leader probably made the best illustration. I think our people are in greater danger today than they have ever been before to the exposure of greater nuclear proliferation because of what the Senate did 3 weeks ago. You are affected by it. You are affected by it.

This is more than procedure. This is what is going on here and how affected we are by it. This has everything to do with why we got elected in the first place, because we wanted to come down and fight for these issues. It is more than whether we can offer an amendment, it is whether we pass the amendment. It is whether we do something good for this country, for whatever limited time we are here. That is what this is about.

We came to fight. We came to fight for the things in which we believe: A better minimum wage, more teachers, a good health care system, an end to nuclear proliferation, a safer neighborhood, a better minimum wage—things about which people today can only dream. That is what we came to fight for. There are opportunities for debates about things; there ought to be.

We have to decide what kind of body this is going to be. Those who wish for the rules of the House ought to go to the House. To understand the 200-year tradition of the Senate, pull open this drawer. I see some wonderful names, names in some cases that have been there for generations. These people, the people in my drawer, fought for the same things I am fighting for right now. These people fought for health care, these people fought for better working conditions for families, these people fought for a safer neighborhood, these people fought for the arms control agreements of their day. They fought. They were not handcuffed. They were not gagged. They were not confined to a legislative straitjacket. They fought valiantly, and today we sing their praises as the legislative leaders and giants of old.

We want to fight. We want to be part of this process. We want to be able to pass this institution onto the next generation of Senators and say: Welcome to the greatest deliberative body in the world.

Mr. DURBIN. Will the Senator from South Dakota yield?

Mr. DASCHLE. I am happy to yield.

Mr. DURBIN. I want to make sure those who are following this debate understand what we are talking about. When we use terms such as "fill the tree," which we are talking about, we are basically talking about a gag rule here which says Members of the Senate can't offer amendments.

Some critics say: We know what you mean; the old Senate filibuster. You want to go on forever offering amendment after amendment after amendment so you can never get anything done around here.

Can the leader on the Democratic side tell us, have we offered to the Republican side to limit the debate on the amendments, to limit the number of amendments, to require they be published in the RECORD so we know the parameters of the debate and so we know it will come to an end at a certain time, we know there will be an up-or-down vote? Has that been part of the bargaining?

Mr. DASCHLE. The Senator from Illinois has raised an important question. On the issue of bankruptcy, the answer is absolutely yes.

My initial position on bankruptcy was, we ought to have the opportunity to offer amendments, relevant or non-relevant. We ought to use regular order—I should say that. We ought to use the regular order of the Senate in taking up a bill. That is what my suggestion was.

The majority leader said: No, we cannot do that.

So I said: What about offering at least five amendments that may not be directly related to bankruptcy but are important to Democrats?

He said: No, we can't do that.

I said: What about offering three amendments that are important to Democrats that may not be directly related to bankruptcy, requiring that all Senators file all relevant amendments prior to a certain time?

I am told now the majority leader cannot do that.

So, inch by inch, step by step, the majority wants to rob you and rob every single Member on this side of the aisle of your right to be a full partner in the Senate.

We all want to be able to move legislation. I will agree with some, disagree with others. Ultimately, if the Senator from Illinois is right and we are able to close the gap on bankruptcy with some good amendments, I will be supportive of that legislation. I expect to be. But I also expect you will have a right to offer an amendment.

Mr. DURBIN. Will the Senator from South Dakota yield?

Mr. DASCHLE. I will yield for a question.

Mr. DURBIN. Will the Senator agree with our former friend, late departed Mike Synar, Congressman from Oklahoma, who is quoted as saying: If you don't want to fight fires, don't become a fireman, and if you don't want to come to Congress and vote on tough amendments, don't run for the House or Senate.

Mr. DASCHLE. The Senator from Illinois recalls and I recall our wonderful colleague very well. No one was sharper, more energetic, brighter, better liked in our caucus in the House than Mike Synar. He said that and a lot of other truthful things. He was right.

It makes me wonder what people are afraid of. What in the world are Senators afraid of, bringing up and debating an amendment? We used to do that all the time. I can recall so many occasions when we had to come down to the floor and table an amendment that might have had immediate popularity but was not good for the country. We did that. We tabled amendments. We second-degreed them.

Again, I am getting into "beltway speak" here, but the bottom line is, we respected Senators' rights to fight for the things they cared about, to fight for the things for which the people sent them to fight.

The Senator from Illinois has done that on an array of issues. Every Senator on this floor has come with a certain agenda and a belief they could make a difference. But how do you make a difference if you do not have a voice? How do you make a difference when you do not have an opportunity to legislate? How do you make a difference when you are really shoved back into the mentality and the constraints of the House of Representatives when you are a Senator? That is not what the people of our States and this country sent us to do.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Will the distinguished leader yield?

Mr. DASCHLE. I am happy to yield to the Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, the stand the distinguished leader takes is one of a fundamental nature. It is one of principle and not politics, and I am in the best position to comment upon it, for the simple reason, the distinguished Senator from South Dakota favors the Finance Committee bill. He would favor throttling me and getting rid of me and having a quick vote. But he understands, better than any, there is more to the Senate than a gymnasium for political gymnastics whereby, on parliamentary positions, you can just cut everybody off.

I cannot see Senator Mansfield for a second going along with this nonsense. I could not see for a second Senator Dirksen even suggesting it. There has always been an unwritten rule of comity and understanding and friendship and the strength of feeling. Sometimes, when Senators have that feeling, it is respected by the other 99 Senators.

Here, the Senator from South Dakota, our minority leader, has been very eloquent on the position taken as a matter of principle. His politics are otherwise. He could go along with Senator LOTT and say: The dickens with it, fill up the tree, tomorrow we'll vote, we'll have cloture, and this bill will be over with, and everything else of that kind.

But the opposite is the case. He has taken a stand for the Senate majority and minority. It is a Senate stand. I commend him for taking it.

Mr. DASCHLE. I thank the Senator from South Carolina.

I know the assistant Democratic leader has been very patient, waiting to speak. For that reason, I yield the floor.

Mr. REID. Before the leader leaves, on behalf of the Democrats in the Senate and the people of the United States of America, we congratulate and applaud his statement. The Senate stands for what our Constitution was set up to do. We are not the House of Representatives. We are not elected every 2 years. We are to be a deliberative body, and the leader spoke so well in that regard. I, as I said for all Democrats and for the country, respect and appreciate his position.

I would like to ask a question of my friend from North Dakota. I say to my friend from North Dakota, does he remember—I see at least five Senators, here coincidentally on the floor, all of whom agreed to oppose the rush by the Republicans to have a constitutional amendment to balance the budget. We opposed that, the five of us on the floor today: The Senator from California, Mrs. BOXER; the Senator from Massachusetts, Mr. KENNEDY; the Senator from South Carolina, Mr. HOLLINGS; this Senator; and the leader walking out to his office.

Do you recall we all opposed the constitutional amendment to balance the budget that was presented by the Republican majority? Do you recall our opposing that?

Mr. DORGAN. In response to the Senator from Nevada, when we had the debate in the Senate on the constitutional amendment to balance the budget, one of the questions we raised was about writing into the Constitution of the United States a practice of using Social Security trust funds for the purpose of balancing the budget; in other words, taking trust funds that were designated for Social Security, which came from the taxpayers' paychecks and put into a trust fund, and using them as other revenue, just as if it was any other dollar of tax revenue. We raised the question: Do you think it is appropriate to weld into the U.S. Constitution a practice as dishonest as that? These are trust funds, after all.

Mr. REID. What was their answer to that question?

Mr. DORGAN. Their answer was: We insist on doing it this way; we demand we change the U.S. Constitution by requiring that Social Security trust funds be counted as any other form of revenue for the purposes of computing our budget balance. We demand it, they said.

One of the meetings was in this Cloakroom, another back there, another on the floor. We said: But that is not an honest way of budgeting. If you did that in private business—if you have a company and you want to show how much profit you made last year, and in showing how much profit, you want to bring your employees' pension moneys into the bottom line and say that is the profit, if you do that, you are going to get 10 years of hard time in some prison.

We said: It is not appropriate to use Social Security trust funds and certainly not appropriate to lock it into the Constitution.

They said: We have to use them; it is the only way we can balance the budget. They said, back in the Cloakroom, to Senator CONRAD and myself: We will make a deal with you. We want to write into the Constitution that we can use the Social Security trust funds to balance the budget, just as other revenues, just take them out of the trust funds and use them as other revenues, and we will stop doing it in the year 2012.

Mr. REID. Does the Senator remember that was put in writing by one of the Republican Senators?

Mr. DORGAN. The year 2012 was not put in writing. We said that doesn't make any sense.

They have two stages of denial. First, we are not using Social Security, they said. Second, if we are, we will stop by 2012.

Then they said: If you don't buy 2012, we will actually put in this constitutional amendment that we will stop using the Social Security trust funds in 2008. And that is what they put in writing. I still have that deep in the bowels of my desk somewhere with their handwriting: We propose we stop using Social Security trust funds by 2008, but we insist on the right to do it until then. In fact, we want to put it in the Constitution of the United States.

Mr. REID. Does the Senator recall that the Senators on the floor offered our own constitutional amendment to balance the budget that said we want to balance the budget the hard way, the honest way, and we do not want to use Social Security surpluses? We offered that amendment and the Republicans, all but two of them, voted against it; is that right?

Mr. DORGAN. The Senator is correct on that. We offered that amendment, in fact, on a couple of different occasions. They wanted nothing to do with it.

The reason this is an important issue, if I can respond to the Senator from Nevada, is because we have the majority party running television ads across the country at the moment.

Mr. REID. I wanted to give a lead in to my friend from North Dakota. North Dakota is a State sparsely populated, somewhat similar to Nevada. The State of North Dakota has a single congressional district; is that right?

Mr. DORGAN. That is correct.

Mr. REID. Republicans have been running ads, I have been told, in that congressional district, which is that whole State, saying Democrats are bad because we are using Social Security surpluses to balance the budget. Are they running ads like that? And if they are, will the Senator from North Dakota comment on what is going on?

Mr. DORGAN. In our State and others, the majority party is running ads, and the ads are fundamentally dishonest. In political dialog, you have a right to say what you want to say even if it is fundamentally untrue. The ads in North Dakota by the Republican Party are saying the Democrats are stealing, taking Social Security trust funds, they are spending trust funds. In fact, just the opposite is the case. It is the majority party that is taking the trust funds. They demanded they be taken back in the debate on the constitutional amendment. In fact, they demanded the opportunities to take them and put it in the Constitution.

They are doing it and denying they are doing it and charging others. It is akin to the big bully on the schoolyard playground who blames somebody else: No, ma, those aren't my cigarettes; I was holding them for two other guys who were fighting. It is that approach.

Let me read a letter to the Senator from Nevada from the head of the Congressional Budget Office.

Mr. REID. Dated today?

Mr. DORGAN. Dated today.

Mr. REID. Will the Senator explain for those within the sound of his voice what "CBO" is?

Mr. DORGAN. The Congressional Budget Office is an office that has historically been a nonpartisan office. It is supposed to be the scorekeeper. This would be the referee keeping score on numbers and budgets. What happened previously—this is very interesting—is the majority party wrote to the Congressional Budget Office, and they said—

Mr. REID. The Republicans wrote; is that right?

Mr. DORGAN. That is right. They said they wanted to have certain directed scoring adjustments. Let me give an example of what is a directed scoring adjustment. They were writing to the Congressional Budget Office to get comfort for what they were doing. Directed scoring adjustment is, if I went to an accountant and said: All right, I want you to certify for me what my checkbook balance is, but I direct you not to count the last 10 checks I have written in determining the balance. That is a directed adjustment.

Or I say: I want you to tell me whether there are any hills on the Earth, and for that purpose, will you assume that the Earth is flat. That is a directed assumption.

The Republicans used these directed assumptions and said to CBO: Using these directed assumptions, tell us, are we in good shape?

CBO: Yes, using those assumptions, you are in fine shape. Not using Social Security money, you are in good shape.

This is what Mr. Crippin, the head of CBO, says in response to Congressman Spratt who wrote to him:

As you requested, these estimates reflect the Congressional Budget Office's assumptions and methodology and exclude these directed scoring adjustments.

That is the little funny money put in—

Mr. REID. The last 10 checks; they can count everything.

Mr. DORGAN. Right. This is an honest look. There are no games here; they haven't jimmied up the estimates on the baseline based on a request by anybody. Here is the honest look, and what they say is: Having done your 13 appropriations bills, Republicans in Congress, you have now spent $17 billion of the Social Security trust funds this year, and you will require a nearly 6-percent, across-the-board reduction in all spending—all spending—veterans' health care, senior citizens, the WIC Program for infants and low-income women, the Head Start Program—you will require a nearly 6-percent, across-the-board cut in all spending in order to avoid your continued use or misspending of the Social Security surplus.

This is today's letter. I want to make this point: Those who are spending the money to put the dishonest ads on television this afternoon in my State ought to be ashamed of themselves. They ought to be ashamed. They know it is dishonest. This proves it is dishonest. But money in today's politics is speech. If money is speech, there are a lot of speechless people in this country, and that is regrettable. But the folks with the money can put a television ad on and say down is up, black is white, grass is purple—whatever they want to say, and they can, as they have done, ask somebody with directed scoring adjustments, tell me my bank balance if you don't count the last 10 checks; or tell me the Earth is flat if I insist the Earth is flat in the assumption.

They create a dishonest brand of politics in this country. Shame on those who do it.

Mr. REID. I say to my friend from North Dakota, what you are saying is the majority party, the Republicans who run this place—they have the majority, they are passing these appropriations bills—and the CBO has said they have already used—they, the majority party who gets bills passed here—they have used Social Security surplus moneys this year and they are running ads in the State of North Dakota and around the country saying Democrats are using Social Security money? The Senator has been very discreet in his description. To me, where I come from, that is a falsehood; that is a lie; that is dishonest. Am I misinterpreting what you have said?

Mr. DORGAN. No; the Senator has stated it exactly as I said. Let me mention one additional point that relates to something about which the Democratic leader spoke.

One could say: Well, if you know this to be true—we know it to be true by the Congressional Budget Office today—why don't you do something about it? Why don't you bring an amendment to the floor of the Senate?

The point is, we can't bring an amendment to the floor of the Senate. The Senate is tied up, deliberately. We have what is called a legislative tree that has been created that would prevent those on our side from offering amendments.

If I might just take one additional minute. I grew up in a town of 300 people. We had an elderly widow in my town, kind of a disagreeable elderly widow. She had a huge crab apple tree in her front yard. And she was disagreeable enough to demand, although she had so many crab apples—she could have fed the whole town; they dropped on the ground—she demanded that children never pick her crab apples. So, of course, we had to wait until after dark to pick her crab apples. But she was only disagreeable with those she did not want to pick crab apples. Her friends, she would usher them in, and they would pick her crab apples.

I was thinking about the majority leader today and the tree. It is kind of like that disagreeable elderly woman in my hometown. He says: I want to create a tree here and decide—standing right over there on the floor—who can come in and pick the fruit from this tree. By the way, that doesn't include anybody from the Democratic side of the aisle—nobody. No one on that side of the aisle is going to pick any of my fruit.

Why? It is partisan. Everybody says: Well, this is all partisan with you. It is not partisan with us. It is partisan with those who want to run the Senate in a manner that says our friends are going to have full opportunity to bring their ideas to the floor of the Senate—and, after all, that is the only currency in this kind of institution: An idea, a good idea. The majority leader will say: The way I want to run the Senate is my friends have an opportunity to bring their ideas to the floor of the Senate; and we are going to have votes; but you in the minority will not, and may not, have that opportunity.

That is why we cannot allow that to continue. It is unforgivable to allow that to continue.

Mr. REID. I direct a question to my friend from California.

You have heard the dialog, the discussion, the colloquy between the Senator from North Dakota and the Senator from Nevada. I would like the Senator to comment on something that was killed here a couple weeks ago, and that is campaign finance reform. Why is it needed? I would like the Senator to comment on that. Especially in light of all these false ads that have been running all over this country, why do we need campaign finance reform in our country, which the Republicans have killed?

Mrs. BOXER. I think one of the reasons people are disillusioned today and do not participate in the greatest democracy in the world is that they believe their voice does not count. They believe money talks. And listening to the debate we had on this floor, with the Senator from Kentucky on their side of the aisle leading that fight, I am sure they have concluded they are right. The Senator equates money with speech. It was, to me, one of the saddest debates I have ever heard around here.

People do not vote, they do not participate, because they believe they do not count. Ordinary people, average people, they can't make the $1,000 contribution, or the $5,000, or the $10,000, or the $20,000 contribution, or, frankly, the $100,000 and $200,000 contributions of soft money that come into play here.

I think it was a very sad situation when the Republicans, defying a majority of this Senate—and we had a majority vote for campaign finance reform—took that piece of legislation and threw it into the graveyard, along with all the other things our Democratic leader and our assistant Democratic leader have talked about—all the important things: The HMO reforms, the teachers, the policemen, the Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty, and a number of other issues that they have thrown into that graveyard, the last one being campaign finance reform.

Mr. REID. We have been so impeded in progress around here.

Does the Senator also recognize we have done nothing with important environmental issues facing this country?

Mrs. BOXER. Yes. I have been waiting 3 days to see us get into a debate on the things that matter to people—things such as the minimum wage and environmental protection.

Mr. REID. The minority leader has mentioned, and the Senator from California has just mentioned, minimum wage. Does the Senator from California understand that over 60 percent of the people who draw minimum wage are women, and of those 60 percent, for 40 percent of them that is the only money they get for their families? So, in short, would the Senator agree that the people who need minimum wage are not teenagers at McDonald's flipping hamburgers?

Mrs. BOXER. Absolutely. My friend is right. We held a number of press conferences before the last increase of the minimum wage—which now seems like history, it was so long ago—where we brought that point out that 60 percent of the people on minimum wage are adult women who are supporting their families. They work very hard. If they work full time at a minimum wage job, I say to my friend, they are way below the poverty line. They are earning about $11,000 a year. For a family of three or four, they can barely make it. They can't feed their kids, pay their rent, or buy many clothes at all.

So the bottom line is, my friend is right. When we talk about minimum wage, we should get behind what that means. What that means is, if we do not raise it, people in this country will be hungry, children in this country will be hungry. We already have many children living in poverty. That is the largest group of our citizenry living in poverty.

I want to ask my friend to comment on something here, if he would do me that favor. I am so proud of his leadership and that of Senator DASCHLE today in framing the issues.

When I heard the Senator from North Dakota go back and forth with my friend from Nevada on the Social Security issue, I was very glad they raised this issue on the floor. Because of the fact that we have a social safety net for seniors in this country, we have seen that the people in poverty no longer are the senior citizens. We should all be proud of that. But I want to read just a few lines from an editorial that ran in the San Diego Union Tribune. It was written by a man named Lionel Van Deerlin who, for many years, was in Congress.

Mr. REID. From California.

Mrs. BOXER. Correct, from the San Diego area. He is now a senior citizen himself and quite sharp, as you can tell from this.

I am going to read probably just 2 minutes' worth of his words, and I would love my friend to comment. It is called "Trusting the GOP to 'save' Social Security."

For anyone who just fell off the turnip truck, Republicans in Congress have a new rallying cry—"We won't let them raid Social Security!"...

[Tom] DeLay [who is the Republican whip in the House] asks us to believe that the Social Security trust fund is under assault by Democrats, and we must trust his party [the Republican Party] to protect it.

I'd sooner entrust a lettuce leaf to a rabbit. Credibility surely matters. In probing the violence at Grandmother's house in the woods, whom do we believe, Little Red Riding Hood or the wolf?

Here is one of those demonstrable facts of history:

And he goes on:

Had it been left to the Republicans in Congress, we'd never have had Social Security in the first place. Nor Medicare.

He says:

GOP House and Senate members invariably lined up in opposition to these social programs.

Mr. REID. Would the Senator pause from finishing her statement?

Mrs. BOXER. Yes.

Mr. REID. I carry with me in my wallet, because I think it is hard for people to comprehend this is true—here it is. Just to show Lionel Van Deerlin is not too old to remember what really happened, I have here what I carry in my wallet: GOP leaders on Medicare and Social Security.

Let me read to the Senator what some of the leaders have to say.

House Majority Leader DICK ARMEY, with whom we both served when we were in the House, said:

Medicare has no place in a free world. Social Security is a rotten trick. I think we're going to have to bite the bullet on Social Security and phase it out over time.

I could read a statement from former leader Bob Dole, from House Speaker Gingrich.

The point is, Lionel Van Deerlin is right on target because Republicans did not vote for Social Security to begin with. And they still hate it.

Mrs. BOXER. I am glad you carry that around because if you were to listen to these ads on TV, you would think the Republicans thought of the idea of Social Security and Medicare, when, in fact, they fought it every inch of the way.

Just a few years ago, in 1994, DICK ARMEY, in addition said if he were here, he wouldn't have voted for Social Security.

So this is what Lionel Van Deerlin writes.

GOP House and Senate members invariably lined up in opposition to these social programs.

As Casey Stengel would advise, you could look it up.

He writes further on:

Yet when President Roosevelt's original Social Security bill neared passage the following year, every Republican present voted to "recommit" the measure. To send it back to committee, that is, to kill it.

He goes on:

Today's GOP generation offers little more to warm one's hands on. House Majority Leader Dick ArmeY, a one-time economics professor, has openly urged the phasing out of Social Security. And no less a prophet than ex-Speaker Newt Gingrich tipped his hand upon taking the gavel in 1995.

"Let it wither on the vine," was his chilling suggestion for dealing with a system vital to the support of nearly 45 million Americans.

He continues:

I offer the foregoing compendium from public records, not to belittle or embarrass decent, often likable leaders of past and present. They did not climb the ladder with subnormal IQs, nor by ignoring ordinary folk in their respective states and districts . . . no matter how earnestly ArmeY, DeLay, [and the Republicans] ask us to trust them in regard to Social Security, I offer this advice: Don't.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD the editorial from which I just quoted.

There being no objection, the editorial was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the San Diego Union Tribune, Oct. 27, 1999]

TRUSTING THE GOP TO 'SAVE' SOCIAL SECURITY

(By Lionel Van Deerlin)

For anyone who just fell off the turnip truck, Republicans in Congress have a new rallying cry—"We won't let them raid Social Security!"

Those of us past 65 are expected to feel relieved. Final budget negotiations are under way between Congress and the White House. Listen to those Sunday talk shows and you'd believe a profligate president is poised to riddle the retirement system that has served America since before those guys were born.

A bone of contention concerns the willingness of either side to rely on a portion of the Social Security trust fund in balancing the Treasury's books. Though this has happened often in the past, it's a crutch that should not seem necessary in light of record surpluses.

But resolving the question hardly seems worth another government shutdown. Nor, I'd add, letting one side escape nearly seven decades of some pretty telling history.

My understanding of actuarial tables and most financial matters is no sharper than average. I sometimes lose my way in a maze of bookkeeping totals. But the years have not impaired my memory. And when someone like Republican Whip Tom DeLay, the ex-termites mogul from Texas, impersonates Horatio at the Bridge. I cringe in wonderment.

DeLay asks us to believe the Social Security trust fund is under assault by Democrats, and we must trust his party to protect it.

I'd sooner entrust a lettuce leaf to a rabbit. Credibility surely matters. In probing the violence at Grandmother's house in the woods, whom do we believe, Little Red Riding Hood or the wolf?

Here is one of those demonstrable facts of history: Had it been left to the Republicans in Congress, we'd never have had Social Security in the first place. Nor Medicare. GOP House and Senate members invariably lined up in opposition to these social programs.

As Casey Stengel would advise, you could look it up.

Midterm elections in the Depression year 1934 had reduced GOP ranks in the House to fewer than 90 members. Yet when President Roosevelt's original Social Security bill neared passage the following year, every Republican present voted to "recommit" the measure. To send it back to committee, that is, to kill it.

It was much the same with Medicare nearly 30 years later. In July, 1962, only five Republican senators supported President Kennedy's plea for this historic expansion of Social Security—which then failed on a 52-48 vote. The eventual enactment of Medicare had to wait three years more.

Almost always, top GOP leaders were slow to embrace or to improve the sort of social insurance system long in place among other industrial nations. Sen. Barry Goldwater, the GOP's 1964 presidential candidate, may have doomed his chances in the New Hampshire primary by saying:

"I would like to suggest that Social Security should be made voluntary—that if a person can provide better for himself, let him do it."

And Ronald Reagan? The conservative magazine Human Events in November, 1966, quotes the future president saying "Social Security ought to be voluntary . . . so those who can make better provision for themselves are allowed to do so."

Ten years later Reagan was telling The New York Times: "Don't exchange freedom for the soup kitchen of compulsory insurance."

The soup kitchen? It goes without saying that noting in the law prevents any recipient from making better provision for him or herself, as most do. But without the total involvement of all wage earners, Social Security would quickly slip into a massive welfare system for the improvident and unlucky. And higher taxes for the rest.

Today's GOP generation offers little more to warm one's hands on. House Majority Leader Dick ArmeY, a one-time economics professor, has openly urged phasing out Social Security. And no less a prophet than ex-Speaker Newt Gingrich tipped his hand upon taking the gavel in 1995.

"Let it wither on the vine," was his chilling suggestion for dealing with a system vital to the support of nearly 45 million Americans.

I offer the foregoing compendium from public records not to belittle nor to embarrass decent, often likable leaders of past and present. They did not climb the ladder with subnormal IQs, nor by ignoring ordinary folk in their respective states and districts.

Dr. Kevorkian, too, seems an intelligent and genial fellow. It's never unreasonable to seek a second opinion.

Meanwhile, no matter how earnestly ArmeY, DeLay, et al. ask us to trust them in regard to Social Security, I offer this advice: Don't.

Mr. REID. I say to the Senator from California, we came to the House together in 1982. I had never seen you before until the day we had our orientation. We have served together in the House of Representatives and the Senate. You and I have been involved in some very tough campaigns over the years. I have always been so proud of the Senator from California, because it doesn't matter if you are speaking to the League of Women Voters or to a high school class, whoever you are speaking to, you say the same thing in response to the same question.

You have had tough, hard campaigns, but you have never deviated from what you believe in. It has caused you some heartache and heartburn because they have been tough decisions. That is why I am so upset and feel so oppressed, put upon, and don't know what to do about these ads running all over the country.

You can have tough campaigns. A person can run against BARBARA BOXER. A person can speak out against BARBARA BOXER on an issue because they disagree with how you feel on that issue. That is what government is all about. That is what governing is all about. But not to come up with, we love Social Security and the Democrats are trying to destroy it. That, I am sorry to say, is not fair. It is not right. It is dishonest. It is wrong. This is what a totalitarian government is all about. If you tell a lie long enough, people might believe it.

I hope the American people will not believe the lie being perpetrated around this country by the Republicans saying Democrats are trying to destroy Social Security. We founded Social Security. Just as Congressman Van Deerlin said, we did it on the votes of Democrats. We have saved Social Security. We are the ones who stopped it from being placed in the constitutional amendment to balance the budget, where they would raid the funds more. What is happening around the country is distasteful. It is wrong. It is dishonest. It is repugnant. Somebody should speak out against it. That is why you are here today.

Mrs. BOXER. I am so proud of the Senator's leadership today on this issue and so many others. I think these ads are going to backlash. In the end, the truth will come out. The American people are fair people. The American people are going to judge us, and they are going to judge us harshly on what we say and what we do. But they want the truth.

I do believe that with this kind of writing by Congressman Van Deerlin, who left the Congress a long time ago but still carries a tremendous amount of respect, his being, in his own conscience, unable to let this go and writing such strong words with a sense of humor—and editorials are popping up all over the country—I think the Republican Party is going to find a backlash across this Nation. I believe in my heart people will understand what they are doing.

It is fair to attack a candidate, a Senator, a Presidential candidate, a President on an issue. It is fair to do that. It is not fair to make up a story, make up a scenario because you have taken a poll and you know you are on the wrong side.

As I said today, the Republicans say they created a lockbox for Social Security. They forgot to tell us, they have the key. They already opened up that lockbox to give $18 billion to the programs they want. It is similar to the crab apple analogy before. They are taking out those apples, $18 billion, and then they hold the key.

The bottom line is, to say we are not protecting Social Security doesn't pass the smell test or the laugh test or the test of time or the test of history.

I am, again, proud of my friend for taking the floor.

Mr. REID. In closing our dialog, I have confidence in the sense the Senator has, that this will all come out. I hope the Senator is right. My concern is—based upon what Senator DASCHLE a few minutes ago, when he said they have put in the landfill, the graveyard, campaign finance reform—money can sure confuse a lot of things. When they are spending millions and millions of dollars on these false and misleading ads, I hope we can right the ship. We need to speak out. I again tell the Senator from California how much respect I have for her for standing up, always, for what she thinks is right.

Mrs. BOXER. We will fight for the truth.

Mr. REED. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. REID. I am happy to yield to the Senator from Rhode Island.

Mr. REED. I wonder if the Senator from Nevada shares my same frustration that the Republicans are distorting the record of Social Security and their efforts to protect it. Like you, I lived through the days of the Republican revolution back in 1995, when they literally were talking about dismantling the Social Security system. Their current track seems to be entirely bogus. But at the same time they are distorting Social Security, they are also turning their backs on the need in our country for some important legislation.

Many of them have been mentioned, but there is one, I think, that warrants particular emphasis. That is hate crimes legislation. After the tragic death of Matthew Shepard in Wyoming, of James Byrd in Texas, the tragedy at Columbine, and arsons at synagogues in Sacramento, it is high time we took a very simple step to provide the full ambit of our civil rights protection for those crimes that are hate oriented, that have been based upon gender or disability or sexual orientation. Yet that, too, is in, as our leader said, the landfill of legislation that has become this Congress to date.

I wonder if the Senator shares my frustration about that?

Mr. REID. Mr. President, the Senator from Rhode Island has mentioned three of the most dramatic and most publicized incidents, but they are happening every day in America, tragic events where someone is being hurt, maimed, killed, because they are a Jew, because their skin is a different color—it may be black; it may be brown. The fact is, somebody may have a different lifestyle with which someone doesn't agree. People every day are being hurt in America.

There may be people who disagree with what we want to do with this hate crimes legislation. But in the light of the Senate, couldn't we have a debate on it? I know the Senator from Rhode Island would agree on a very short time limit. I think we could do all we have to do in 2 or 3 hours, debate this issue and have an up-or-down vote on it. Doesn't the Senator think the American people deserve a debate and a vote on this issue?

Mr. REED. I do, indeed, agree with the Senator. What also strikes me as particularly ironic is, when one of these incidents occurs, across the spectrum of political thought, across the spectrum of this body, there is unanimous condemnation. There is a lot of moralizing, a lot of talk about isn't this horrible. Yet we have it within our power, as the Senator suggests, to bring this legislation to the floor, to have a debate, to constructively engage, to compromise, not on principles but on details, so we can fulfill our legislative responsibilities.

Yet what frustrates me, and I believe also the Senator from Nevada, is the fact that none of this is taking place, that all of this is being shoved off to the sideline so that we are not able to do our jobs. And while we are being frustrated, I should say that, as the Senator pointed out so accurately, these hate crimes go on day in and day out. Some are very publicized, some are not getting attention. It is frustrating and it is wrong. All we are asking for a very simple remedy. Let's make the protections of the hate crimes bill within the ambit of our civil rights laws. Let us be able to give our enforcement authorities the power to deal with crimes that are based upon disability, gender, or sexual orientation. If we do that, then I think we will advance the cause of justice in this society.

(Mr. GORTON assumed the chair.)

Mr. REID. Mr. President, we are talking statistics and we are talking about names of people whom we don't know, such as Matthew Byrd, the young man in Wyoming. But the fact is, every day in America, someone's husband, son, daughter, or wife is being hurt—a real person—and we in the Senate and this Congress have the power to make their lives a little better, to make sure that an example is set when somebody commits a despicable act, and that it will become a crime that should be—in the greatest country in the world, you should not be able to oppress people because of race, color, creed, religion, or their lifestyle. Does the Senator agree?

Mr. REED. Absolutely. One thing that resonates throughout this entire dialog this afternoon is the fact that our inaction costs individual Americans; it costs them better health care, it costs them better education, it costs them the right to have a Federal judiciary that is fully staffed by competent and committed judges, and it costs many literally their lives because our indifference to hate crimes can do nothing to stop them. In fact, one could suggest they create an environment that does not discourage them and therefore might encourage them. But, in any case, our inaction means that Americans are bearing the costs, and these costs can be avoided simply by bringing to the floor legislation and by moving with respect to this legislation in a prompt and purposeful way. I thank the Senator.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I am about to yield the floor because I know the Senator from South Carolina has had time to have a breather and the Senator is now rejuvenated and ready to go on for a while longer.

Mr. HOLLINGS. I think now is the time that a record should be made that this isn't a question of consuming time in the sense the majority leader wants to move in an expeditious fashion to the legislation. He doesn't want to hear it, and he doesn't want anybody else to discuss these items. Let's look at the facts.

This bill was called on Friday and we had a motion to proceed since everybody was leaving town. I wanted to discuss it and wanted to have someone to talk to. I objected to the motion to proceed. I guess it was a week ago Thursday night when they discussed and voted on other matters on Friday. It was set again for Monday's discussion, but then we lost our wonderful colleague, Senator Chafee. In respect to him, we didn't debate anything. Instead we all expressed our sympathy and deep sense of individual loss of such a wonderful colleague, who was so considerate and so moderate in the sense of listening to both sides, and willing to discuss issues. On Tuesday, we made opening statements again—Senator MOYNIHAN and Senator ROTH and myself. I had to leave, but it was thoroughly discussed all day Tuesday. On Wednesday, I was prepared, having returned early in the morning. I had to testify before a council meeting back in my own hometown on Tuesday evening. But I was back here early.

Mr. REID. That was because your house burned down.

Mr. HOLLINGS. That is exactly right. What happens is, on Wednesday morning, we didn't have the side agreements about NAFTA. We were being told this was good because of NAFTA and that NAFTA worked—at least NAFTA had side agreements on environment, labor, reciprocity, and otherwise. Even though I was gone, my staff worked on the legislation.

When I took the floor on Wednesday morning, I was not recognized to have the floor. I said I just wanted to discuss these amendments but the Senate was conducting a quorum call. The leadership waited for an hour and a half for the leader to come and did not allow any discussion. I had gotten up twice and they would not even give me consent to talk about the amendments, which is really what I had to mind.

Then the leader comes in and he so-called filled up the tree, but really he put it on the fast track. Namely, I could not, or you could not, or anybody on this side of the aisle could not offer an amendment. Now, on the other side of the aisle, the Senator from Illinois can get his amendment in at the committee hearing. He can get his amendment in when the leader puts down the managers' amendment. He can get that taken care of there. Or you can do as Senator ASHCROFT of Missouri did. He got the leader to call down the last amendment, come to the floor and put up his agricultural amendment and, in the same breath, say the amendment of the Senator from Minnesota is irrelevant. That is how gauche, arrogant, and unsenatorial this thing is. I never heard of such a thing. They just lock you out and say, as has been pointed out, we filled up the tree, and only Members on that side of the aisle can enjoy the fruits of the tree.

Here we are. So don't have the majority leader come back and have the audacity to say these are important matters; you all want to filibuster. He is the one. I told him, up or down, I would take five minutes to a side on amendments and we will have a roll call. He doesn't want to have this subject up.

We ought to have Members on that side have at least the courage to get up and say, wait a minute, these are important subjects. I would think somebody on the other side of the aisle would like to talk about the minimum wage. They say 83 percent of the people of America favor it. We know what the situation is. Yet they won't even broach the subject. They don't want the subject to come up. All we are hearing when the leader comes is this is a tough job and these are the things we have to do, and I would be glad to take two or three amendments. I said, wait a minute. I would be glad to offer two amendments right now, with five minutes to a side, and have a vote, or have 20 minutes to a half hour of discussion and then vote, and we will be through with it.

Instead of doing that, it is a closeout of discussing important subjects for the American people. From Friday of last week until tonight, Thursday night, the majority was absolutely opposed to you getting the floor whatsoever to discuss it. All of these subjects—Social Security, education measures, the Patients' Bill of Rights, health matters—the majority said was irrelevant. We are going to try and complete our spending bills and try our dead level best to do it without using Social Security. This comes at the very same time that even their own Congressional Budget Office says Congress has already spent $18 billion of Social Security monies.

Mr. REID. Let me say this to the Senator from South Carolina before I give up the floor. We have talked today about a couple of very important items, separate and apart from this underlying legislation, to show what we have been unable to accomplish because they have put stuff in the graveyard, the dump yard. The Senator from South Carolina has spoken out more vividly and clearly than anybody else in this body about the need for campaign finance reform, and I have supported the Senator from South Carolina with the constitutional amendment. That is the only way I think we can solve the problem once and for all. Does the Senator agree?

Mr. HOLLINGS. Yes, sir. I have tried my best. I would like to bring it up. I am a realist. Let's bring up Shays-Meehan, which passed by a strong bipartisan vote over on the House side. You would think it could be voted upon, but it has not even been further discussed. We could have 30 seconds to a side and vote. They won't let you vote.

Mr. REID. I also say to my friend, we have had a lot of talk today about Social Security. I want the RECORD to be spread with the fact that the Senator from South Carolina has been one of the leaders who has been there every step of the way on making sure that we do not use Social Security surpluses to balance the budget.

The Senator from South Carolina and I attended meetings at the Sheraton Hotel when there were just a few of us. The Senator will remember that we were fighting this onslaught to have a constitutional amendment to balance the budget. The Senator recalls the grief and the editorials written about us because we said it is wrong to use Social Security surpluses.

Does the Senator remember that?

Mr. HOLLINGS. I remember it very vividly. The truth is that I finally said: Let's cut out the charade. Let's go to Social Security itself. So, I asked the Administrator of Social Security: You folks write the bill so that rather than using Social Security monies for IOUs and the debt, we put it up in a lockbox. I want to make sure it is a truly, honest-to-goodness lockbox.

So he wrote the measure, and I introduced it back in January. It went to the Budget Committee, on which I serve. I asked for a hearing but couldn't get one. They do not want to hear about a true lockbox.

Mr. REID. The Senator from South Carolina could be the ranking member, and in the majority he would be chairman of that committee.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Yes. I was the chairman under President Carter.

Mr. REID. It is not as if the Senator from South Carolina is a junior member of the Budget Committee. He is a senior member of the Democratic Party, and he can't even have a hearing on the bill in the Budget Committee.

Mr. HOLLINGS. I worked on the bill with Senator Muskie; we wrote the law. I have been on the Budget Committee ever since it was created. I think Senator DOMENICI and I are the only two Members who have been on the committee since its inception.

Mr. REID. Finally, I say to my friend from South Carolina that the debate here is not over. The Senator from South Carolina is not the reason this bill isn't going forward. The reason this bill is not going forward is that they will not allow the Senator from South Carolina to offer an amendment. I don't know, but I assume the Senator might want to offer an amendment on minimum wage, or he might want to offer the Shays-Meehan bill. He would agree to 5 minutes to each side to speak on each one of those. We have had 7 days. If we had those with 20 minutes out of 6 days to speak, that isn't much time, is it?

Mr. HOLLINGS. Not at all. That is what we ought to emphasize. It isn't a matter of time and holding the process up or any of those kind of things. It is that these important subjects will not be touched upon politically because all that is being done is geared toward the next election, the polls, and everything else of that kind. The majority doesn't want to make unpopular votes. So you are protected with this arrogant kind of thing of filling up the tree, instituting fast track, and blocking amendments except those checked through the Majority Leader's office. And I hope this is publicized. I hope they have a conscience and will quit this nonsense so we can save time, discuss the subjects, vote up or down, and move on like an orderly body.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Illinois.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. President, I would like to take a moment or two to respond to some of the charges that have been leveled on the floor.

After listening to the colloquy that has gone on for some time, the only thing I think is accurate out of it is that I would agree that my friend from South Carolina has fought for years to ban Congress from plundering the Social Security trust fund. He has been a leader in that fight. But the one thing I would point out is that the whole other side of the aisle has been voting time and time again this year against doing just that—locking up the Social Security trust fund so it can't be spent on other programs.

Ever since the Social Security program was created, all the money that has been poured into it that is over and above that necessary to pay current Social Security benefits has been taken out and spent on other programs. That is not right. I and my friend from South Carolina agree with that.

I know Senator HOLLINGS, as he has said before—if somebody in the private sector were to reach into an employee's pension fund and take that money out and spend it for some other purpose than the employee's pension, they would go to jail under laws that we in Congress have passed.

My understanding is as well that a few years back Congress made it illegal for anybody in State or local governments to raid one of their pension funds.

It is important that Congress move forward now to once and for all ban the plundering of the Social Security trust fund so we are setting aside money and are in a better financial position come the year 2015 to pay the Social Security benefits of the baby boomers as they retire.

I have to say that if, indeed, my friends on the other side of the aisle are in favor of banning Congress and the Government in Washington from spending Social Security trust funds on other programs, why has it been that they have voted against cloture on our Social Security lockbox proposal time and time again this year?

It is for that reason I disagree with my friend from California, who said she thought the criticism was unfair in some of those television ads she was talking about. I don't think it is unfair. How can you vote against a Social Security lockbox but then say you really want to protect Social Security? I think it is a very fair point that Republicans have been making. It is a fair criticism of the other side of the aisle.

Furthermore, I point out that the other side of the aisle has proposed one new spending bill after the other, and we have no surplus other than the Social Security trust fund. If we want to have more money for spending, where are we going to get that money? The only place to take it, unless you are proposing a tax increase, is to take it out of the Social Security trust fund.

Isn't it intellectually dishonest to stand here and say we support protecting Social Security but at the same time get up and propose a whole bunch of new spending bills that there is absolutely no way to pay for without either a tax increase or another raid on Social Security? To my friends on the other side of the aisle, I have to say I think the criticism has been fair.

The Senator from South Carolina has said, as my friends from California and Nevada have said, that Republicans have put some of your proposals in what you call the "legislative graveyard." But don't forget those times this summer and before this summer when, time and time again, my Democratic friends put the Social Security lockbox program in the graveyard, from which it still has not emerged. It has only been with repeated pressure that this side of the aisle, on the administration and on the appropriators, has largely been able to set aside the money that is in surplus in Social Security so it will not be spent on other programs.

I am hopeful that someday I can work with Senator HOLLINGS to get the strongest possible protection for those Social Security trust funds. Right now, when we are talking about a lockbox, we are really just talking about using that money to pay down the Government debt—the debt that is now in the hands of people who own Government bonds. We are really still not at the point where we can talk about creating a real trust fund that has real money in it that is available to pay benefits. I think someday we need to make that trust fund a real trust fund.

But the problem with that is, in order to cross that line, we have to have the great national debate as to where we are going to invest that money because if we are going to make the Social Security trust fund a real fund—I favor doing that—we are going to have to cross a threshold on this issue of what we want that real money to be invested in.

Until we have had that debate and reached consensus on that issue, it is appropriate that we take that $3.5 trillion in debt we now owe to people who own Government bonds in this country and all around the world and use the Social Security excess to pay down that debt. That is absolutely the best use of the money. It is far superior to taking it and frittering it away on other programs and leaving our external debt at such high levels.

I, again, compliment my friend from South Carolina. He has been the one person I have found in this Senate who agrees with me on this issue that it is wrong for Washington to be telling the American people we have a budget surplus when, in fact, the national debt is still going up. It will go up almost $100 billion.

The biggest adjustment I have had coming to Washington, as a first-year freshman coming from a private sector background in banking, is getting used to the Washington math. When I looked at the first budget proposal that said we will have trillions of dollars' worth of surpluses between now and 2015, and I looked at the back of the budget and it had a schedule of the national debt which is going up every year, I asked, how can the national debt be rising if we are running surpluses? Obviously, that doesn't make any sense. That is an accounting trick. If anybody in the private sector used that kind of accounting, they would be in jail. They would have ankle bracelets on. That is a disgrace. It is misleading.

I thought the President's address, when he told the country we were going to pay off the national debt by 2015, was very reckless. It was reckless of him to so mislead people. He was talking about one of only two components of our national debt. There are two components of the national debt: debt we owe to people who own government bonds and debt we owe to pension and trust funds, such as the Social Security trust fund and the Federal employees pension fund.

We have a President who has a well-deserved reputation for choosing his words carefully. I looked at his statement and couldn't find anything he said that was inaccurate. He said we were going to pay down the debt owed to the public by 2015. What he did not tell the American people, and what Congress has not told the American people, is that the other portion of the national debt, that portion owed to government pension and trust funds, is going to quadruple between now and 2015.

Senator HOLLINGS has used the analogy of a family who has a Visa and a MasterCard. In our own families, we would not go home and uncork the champagne when paying down the Visa by putting more debt on the MasterCard. Such dubious refinancing is no cause for celebration. Yet all over Washington they are uncorking the champagne because they are paying down one portion of the national debt; they are not telling anybody the other portion is continuing to skyrocket.

I yield for a question.

Mr. REID. The Senator talked about the lockbox bill before the Senate. Does the Senator agree it would be appropriate that the Democrats, the minority, should be able to offer one amendment on your lockbox proposal?

Mr. FITZGERALD. I have no problem with offering an amendment. I am happy to vote on it.

Mr. REID. I say to my friend from Illinois, I appreciate his candor. I appreciate the Senator indicating he doesn't think there is anything wrong with it. Either do we. That is what this is about.

The majority, the Republicans, have a lockbox proposal; and we do, too. What we think should happen is the Republicans offer their proposal, we offer ours, we have a debate. That is what this body is all about.

I have followed the short career in the Senate of the Senator from Illinois. I have acknowledged and appreciated some tough votes the Senator has cast against the majority in opposition to most of the people on the Senator's side of the aisle. I think that is good.

The Social Security debate is one where we should be honest with one another. There are ads running around America sponsored by the Republican Congressional Campaign Committee and the RNC, Republican National Committee, that say with this Congress, this year, the Democrats are spending Social Security money.

We have done our best to make the point that is simply not true, and I believe there are people of good will, of which I think the Senator from Illinois has the ability to be one of those, to speak out against those ads. They add nothing to the political process. They only take away from it.

That is the point we have been talking about today. The ads are disingenuous. They are wrong.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I want to follow up on that. I said earlier I think the ads are fair in light of the fact that Democrats have voted against the lockbox several times this year.

Certainly the Senator would agree the Senator's party has run ads. I was the recipient of $3 million worth of soft money ads that accused me of wanting to do everything except take away Christmas from the people in this country.

What has mainly come out in this colloquy on your side of the aisle is that the Senator has stated a good case why it is better to be in the majority than in the minority.

Mr. REID. My friend from Illinois learns quickly. The fact is, that is not how this body has run in the past. For over 200 years, this body has been able to survive in comity. We recognize the minority has rights. There was a time not long ago when the Democrats had a veto-proof majority in the body but the Republicans were not treated badly.

I say to my friend from Illinois, Democrats have voted against no lockbox provision. We have voted to sustain our rights to be able to offer an amendment to the Senator's lockbox proposal so there could be a debate. If, in fact, the Senator thinks those ads are running because we voted against lockbox, I respectfully submit the Senator needs to study the issue more.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I say to my friend from Nevada, I wonder if there are any Senate rules that have changed from the time the Democrats were in the majority and now when the Republicans are in the majority that the Senator could identify that he thinks have unfairly cut off the rights of the minority. Have any rules changed?

Mr. REID. That is the whole point. The rules have not changed.

The fact is, however, the majority is not treating this body in the senatorial tradition. The rules have held that we in the Senate have the right to offer amendments. This body is being treated like a House of Representatives where a bill comes upon the floor, there is a rule offered, and that is it. The so-called tree is filled up, we can offer no amendments, and we are locked out of offering amendments.

That is what the Senator from South Carolina has been saying. All we want is to offer amendments. Shouldn't the Senate of the United States be able to have a debate on minimum wage?

Mr. FITZGERALD. I think we have already, to some extent. We have had one or two votes that I can recall earlier this year. But the question is, How many times will Members keep bringing up the same issues?

Mr. REID. I have the greatest respect for my friend's intellect. We have had just one vote this year on minimum wage. We didn't have one last year. Or the year before.

We want to have a debate. We want to have an amendment offered where we raise minimum wage. We have not had the opportunity to do that. If the majority doesn't agree, fine. The Senator from South Carolina said he would agree to a 10-minute time limit on minimum wage. I am not sure I can agree to 10 minutes, but I certainly agree to 2 hours.

I say to my friend from Illinois, picking that one issue, doesn't the Senator think it would be appropriate this body debate minimum wage?

Mr. FITZGERALD. Absolutely, and I am sure we will at some point. I do know we had some votes, whether they were procedural or actually substantive, on minimum wage because I talked to Senator KENNEDY about it. He was very pleased with my vote earlier this year on that. We have had some votes that touched on that area.

I was not in the Senate before this year, so I can't comment on how it was run when the other side was in the majority. My impressions from speaking to some of my senior colleagues on this side of the aisle is that they felt it was always very difficult for them to be in the minority. I think they probably often felt the frustrations that the Senator is feeling now.

With that, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Illinois.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, for the last several hours on the floor of the Senate, we have discussed basically the business of the Senate over the last year. A lot of us focused on Social Security. It is a curious thing that this program, which once was so controversial, has now become so universally lauded and acceptable that both political parties are determined to be portrayed as the guardians of Social Security.

Coming from the Democratic side of the aisle, the party of Franklin Roosevelt, I think our party has good claim to the authorship of the original program of Social Security and the fact it has been sustained, now, for some 62 years primarily because of Democratic support.

Having said that, though, I will concede over the years what started off as Republican opposition to Social Security has mellowed to some extent, and they now embrace it where once they called it socialism and big government and the New Deal and Franklin Roosevelt run amok. They now have come to a different conclusion since millions of Americans and their families rely on Social Security to live independent and decent lives after their retirement. The debate now seems to focus on, what are we going to do with the excess money collected—for instance, in payroll taxes for Social Security? Should the Government be allowed to borrow that money and the money then be used for some other purpose and paid back to Social Security with interest? Or should the money be held sacred and apart, untouchable? That seems to be where the debate is.

The television ads, which have been the source of a lot of debate on the floor, relate to an effort by the Republican Party, soon to be answered by the Democrats, to blame us for somehow spending the Social Security trust fund.

It is an interesting claim to make for several reasons. First, we are the minority party. We do not pass bills here; the Republicans pass the spending bills. So to blame us for a spending bill which reaches into the Social Security trust fund just defies arithmetic and common sense. If there has been a bill passed, a spending bill, it has been initiated by the Republican leadership. It has come forward and been sent to the President primarily with Republican votes. For them to suggest one of these bills went over the line and reached into the Social Security trust fund and blame the Democrats for it is really a stretch.

But I will tell you what we can point to, and it is not in the area of spending bills. It was a project by the Republican Party just a few months ago initiating an idea of a massive tax cut. The party, the Republican Party, which had bemoaned deficits for years, to the point of calling for a constitutional amendment to balance the budget, now, when they heard of the possibility of a surplus at the Federal level, answered by suggesting we should have a tax cut of some $792 billion given primarily, if not exclusively, to the wealthiest people in America. They thought this was going to be a big winner. It was an echo of Senator Robert Dole's Presidential campaign where, when he could not get traction against President Clinton, he came up with the Dole tax cut.

It did not work for Senator Dole then. It certainly did not work for the Republican Party a few months ago. They took this idea back to the States, and people universally said: What are you talking about? Why would you, after years and years of deficits, be giving a $792 billion tax cut primarily to wealthy people? If you are going to do anything, take the money and pay down our national debt which costs us $1 billion a day in interest. If we have a surplus, make sure Social Security is sound and solid for decades to come. Put the money into Medicare, make certain it is there for generations to come, for our parents and grandparents who will need it.

In fact, those who analyzed the Republican tax cut said, incidentally, of the $792 billion, at least $83 billion of that has to come out of the Social Security trust fund.

So the Republican Party that is pointing its finger at Democrats and saying we are raiding the Social Security trust fund had a tax cut package primarily for the wealthy which dipped its hand into the Social Security trust fund for $83 billion. That is a fact.

Now let's take a look at the spending bills, the Republican spending bills, keeping in mind the Republicans control both the House and Senate and Appropriations Committees and have now broken from the tradition of Congress which used to call for bipartisan meetings of the Appropriations Committees. They are very partisan now. I am a member of the Appropriations Committee here in the Senate, and I was in the House. For years, we worked on a bipartisan basis in an effort to try to pass bills. I am sad to say, now, many times we are not even called for meetings. The Republicans author these bills and put them together, bring them to the floor, and basically the Democrats are not part of that process.

What do we make of the claim by the Republicans that the Democrats are reaching into the Social Security trust fund? The most recent thing we have to point to is a letter from the Congressional Budget Office. This is one of the two offices we turn to for answers to questions such as: If we initiate a certain program, how much will it cost us? How much will this program cost us each month? Will it add to the deficit or to the surplus? All of the basic questions that need to be answered to be responsible in budgeting.

The Congressional Budget Office has today sent a letter—yesterday, I believe—to Congressman John Spratt, the ranking Democrat on the House Budget Committee. Congressman Spratt, a friend of mine and former colleague, asked the Congressional Budget Office whether or not the spending bills already passed by the Republicans and sent to the President, reached into the Social Security trust fund. The Congressional Budget Office, which enjoys a reputation primarily for being non-partisan, replied that the Republicans have already spent $17 billion of the Social Security trust fund.

They then asked the Congressional Budget Office, in the same letter, What about the proposed 1-percent across-the-board reductions in spending which the Republicans now propose as a way to solve all our problems and go home? It was the conclusion of the Congressional Budget Office that, if the Republicans really wanted to keep their hands off Social Security and not reach in the trust fund, certainly 1 percent across-the-board was not going to do it; they had to find some $17 billion to be made up that they have already reached into the trust fund for. They said it would take another 4.8-percent cut across the board for that to happen, meaning 5.8 percent would have to be cut from all budgets of the Federal Government to avoid touching the Social Security trust fund, just with appropriations bills already enacted by the Republican majority in the House and the Senate—5.8 percent.

Then they went on to say—and this is important considering the realities of politics in Washington—if you take off the table the defense budget, saying our national security cannot stand the 5.8-percent cut, military construction—part of the same argument, and veterans programs, which both parties hold dear, everything else will have to be cut 11.8 percent.

Here we are, deep into the next fiscal year. We do not have our appropriations in order. In order to balance the books and not touch Social Security, the Republicans would have to cut almost 12 percent across the board in budgets for things such as education; Head Start; Women, Infants and Children; Meals on Wheels—things on which senior citizens rely.

What a curious state of affairs that only a few weeks ago Republicans told us we were so awash in money, we could give out a $792 billion tax cut to the wealthiest people in this country and now have come back to tell us we are in such dire straits that they, frankly, have to be cutting education by 10 or 11 percent in order to balance the books. That, to me, shows the basic emptiness of this argument that has been made against the Democrats and so many others.

The sad reality is that we come to the end of the session and find ourselves bereft of accomplishment. Having been sent to Washington to respond to the needs of America's families, we have dropped the ball. I have said repeatedly, if you held a gun to the head of any Senator in this body and said I am going to shoot you unless you tell me what you have done to help average American families lead a better life and have more opportunity, I would have to say: Fire away. I can't point to a thing.

What did we do on minimum wage? Nothing, absolutely nothing; turning our backs on the millions of people who go to work every day in this country stuck at a minimum wage of $5.15 an hour. The Republicans will not even allow us to debate the issue. The greedy big-business interests that will not give working families a decent living wage have prevailed over those who get up and go to work every single morning—primarily women, many minorities—working at minimum wage, showing they believe in the work ethic, and hoping this body and the House of Representatives will be sensitive to their need for more resources for their families.

The Patients' Bill of Rights: How many times have I been across Illinois and met families, sat down with them, and doctors, and nurses? They have told me horror story after horror story of trying to provide quality medical care for people in need only to be turned down by insurance companies; Doctors on telephones debating with insurance company clerks about surgeries and hospital admissions and different medications that the doctor thinks are necessary, and losing the debate every single time.

We want to stop these faceless bureaucrats in the insurance companies making life-or-death decisions without any medical training. We want families across this country to be able to sit down across the table from a doctor when someone is seriously ill and be treated in an honest, competent, professional way.

We lost that fight on the floor of the Senate. No, let me take that back. We did not lose that fight; America's families lost that fight here. Do you know to whom we lost it? Another special interest group. The health insurance lobby prevailed big time in this bill, and America's families lost big time, and that is another failure of this year we have spent here on Capitol Hill.

Campaign finance reform: This is truly a bipartisan issue. Senator JOHN MCCAIN, a Republican candidate for President from the State of Arizona, and Senator RUSS FEINGOLD, who sits behind me, a Democrat from the State of Wisconsin, came forward with a bipartisan way to clean up this mess of campaign financing that has everybody across America so cynical about our process.

The President supports it. In fact, a majority of Senators support it. Fifty-five voted in favor of it. That is not good enough for the Senate; we need 60 votes. We could not dislodge some 45 Republicans who are bound and determined to keep this miserable system in place. This is another failure of this Congress.

Sensible gun control: How many times, walking into the Cloakroom right behind the Senate floor, have I been startled to hear a news flash on CNN that in another high school in America, there is more violence, kids being shot, teachers being shot, the grief of parents, and the visits by the President and the Vice President, news magazines and shows on television just focusing for days and weeks on violence in schools.

People across Illinois and across America say: Senator, what are you doing to make this a safer place to live, to protect our kids?

We work up all kinds of speeches in this Chamber, but what do we do? We have one bill, a sensible gun control bill, which says if you want to buy a gun at a gun show, we have a right to ask whether or not you have a criminal record or a history of violent mental illness. That bill passed the Senate with the vote of Vice President GORE breaking a tie. It went over to the House and disappeared. Sensible gun control. Nothing is going to happen this year. The Republican majority in the House and the Senate do not want to act on that issue.

I pray to God there is never another school tragedy in America, but if there is, each of us will be held accountable as to whether we did everything we could to keep guns out of the hands of kids and those who would misuse them, criminals and those with serious background problems.

This Senate passed a bill, barely; the House Republicans killed it. The National Rifle Association, another special interest group, won and America's families and schoolkids lost again.

100,000 teachers: This is a program the President has proposed for one simple reason. He believes, and I agree with him as a parent who has raised three kids, that if you can have fewer kids in a classroom, you have a better chance of paying attention to their needs.

I went to Wheaton High School and met with a teacher who had 15 kids in her class. She was part of the President's program. She said: Thank you; I can help the kids who are falling behind and the gifted kids; it really works better when I have a smaller class size.

What parent would not agree? I remember how tranquil life was with one child in our house and how hectic it became when the second and third arrived. Imagine a classroom of 20, 30 kids. The President said: Reduce the size of that class and I bet you have more kids who can read, learn basic math, and have a better chance for their education.

The Republicans want to kill it. They do not agree. Last year, they voted for it; this year, they want to kill it. This is a partisan battle. The losers are the families across America who expect us to do something in Washington to make education better for our kids and give them a chance.

Cops on the Beat Program: I see my friend, Senator LEAHY, from the Judiciary Committee. I am proud to serve with him. He was one of the leaders on the President's program to send 100,000 police to local communities and reduce crime.

Do my colleagues know what happened when we sent policemen out to the cities of Chicago, and Cairo, IL, and across America? The crime rate came down. The people who wanted to commit a crime looked around and saw there were a few more cops and squad cars and decided not to do it. Thank goodness. It meant fewer victims and less crime perpetrated on the people in this country.

The Republicans fought us tooth and nail. They do not want to continue this program despite its proven success. They have put partisanship ahead of reality. The reality is we all want to be safe in our neighborhoods. We want our kids safe in school. The President has a program that works, and they want to kill it, stop the 100,000 COPS Program. That is so shortsighted.

The Medicare prescription drug program: Here is one where seniors across America tell us—Senator DODD from Connecticut, Senator LEAHY, and others—that this is a very real concern, paying that bill every single month for these prescription drugs that Medicare does not cover. The President has a plan to move us forward. The Republicans say: Oh, here comes a brand new program.

They have a self-financing mechanism, as they should, to make certain we do not cause any more problems to the fiscal picture in the Medicare program. The fact that we cannot move forward on this Presidential suggestion of a Medicare prescription drug program is going to be a serious problem for seniors across America.

So we come to the end of this session with an empty basket, with nothing to show to families across America. Oh, we have drawn our paychecks, we punched our time cards for our pensions, and we are headed home looking forward to the holidays, and we have nothing to show for it.

My basic question to the Republican leadership is, Why are you here? Why do you want to be called leaders if you do not want to lead? Why do you ask to serve in the Senate, which was formerly known as the greatest deliberative body in the world, if you do not even want to deliberate these questions? Why are you afraid to debate these questions? If your position is so sound and solid, for goodness' sake, stand up and defend it. Let me argue my best point of view, you do the same, and let's have a rollcall vote up or down, yes or no. Let it be printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD to be seen by the United States and the world.

That is why we are here. That is why we ran for these offices—not for a title but to do something for America's families. We have not done it this year. We have not done anything substantive to help these families lead a better life.

We have lost opportunities, and I hope we do not continue to lose opportunities. We have given in to special interests time and time again. We have forgotten the interest of America's families.

I sincerely hope Senator DASCHLE, who took this floor earlier, prevails; that he can convince Senator LOTT, the Republican leader, to finally let Senators roll up their sleeves and get down to work. Goodness' sake, in the last 2 weeks, let's do something substantial.

Let's have courage to vote on the issues. To stop debate and put a gag rule on Senators so we cannot offer amendments on all the issues I mentioned, frankly, is a travesty. It is a travesty not only on those who serve here, but on the history of this great institution of which I am proud to be a part. I sincerely hope Senator DASCHLE can prevail, and we can have the debate which the American families deserve.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I be allowed to speak as in morning business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

RETIREMENT OF LONG-TIME SENATE EMPLOYEE, KATHY KEUP

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, on Friday, October 29—tomorrow—the Senate will say a fond farewell to one of its longest serving employees, someone who has been with me almost 19 years, Kathy Keup.

Kathy Keup began her Senate service almost 34 years ago. She is one of the longest serving employees in the Senate. She began her service November 1, 1965. On that date, Kathy Keup joined the staff of her home State Senator, Ed Muskie of Maine. After nearly 6 years of service with Senator Muskie, Kathy Keup served on the staffs of Senator Warren Magnuson of Washington and Senator John Culver of Iowa. She also served for several years in the 1970s on the Democratic Senatorial Campaign Committee.

Some of our colleagues who have been here a few years will recall, back in those days, it was not uncommon for Senate staff, both Republican and Democratic, to serve for temporary stints on their caucus' campaign committees. As a historical note, the campaign offices were actually located in this building. That practice is long since over, but 25, 30 years ago, that was not an uncommon practice.

As I mentioned at the outset, for the past 18 years and 9 months, it has been my very good fortune to have Kathy Keup as a member of my staff. In fact, she joined my office just a few days after I was sworn in as a new Member of this very body. I can say without any hesitation that each and every day of her time in my office has been marked by a consistent, thorough, and outstanding commitment on her part to serving not only me and the people I represent in Connecticut, but the public at large across this country.

As a fellow New Englander, perhaps the highest compliment we can bestow on any individual is to say they are a true Yankee, and Kathy is a true Yankee, in all the wonderful meanings of that word. She epitomizes the very best values of our region of the country. She is very diligent and hard-working, and respectful of others, no matter their station in life. She is modest and discreet, a person of few words. Indeed, in an era and in a city where the dubious quality of self-promotion is rarely in short supply, Kathy Keup serves as a living reminder of the timeless virtue of letting one's work speak for itself.

She also possesses the virtues of loyalty and dedication. The Senators and others for whom she has worked over the years could always take comfort in knowing she would be at her desk each morning at 7 o'clock, as she has been with me for almost 19 years, come rain, shine, snow, or whatever the weather.

She earned the trust of those around her, not by what she said but by what she did, reliably and superbly, day in and day out, for these past 34 years.

Each of us who is privileged to serve as a Member of the Senate knows well the importance of having loyal and talented men and women who work with us in this wonderful institution. These public servants may not have their names on election certificates or in the newspapers, but they are vitally important to the ability of the Senate to function on behalf of the American people. In a very real sense, they make the wheels of this democracy turn every single day. And in so doing, they make real the timeless promise of our representative government.

Kathy Keup has dedicated her working life—her entire working life—to the Senate. By her efforts over more than a third of a century, she has made an invaluable contribution to this institution and to the country as a whole. She epitomizes what a Senate staff person should be. She has rendered truly exemplary service to this individual Senator, to our former colleagues whom I mentioned already, to the Senate, and to our Nation.

Come next Monday morning, I will call the office, I suppose out of habit, at around 7 or 7:15. And that voice will not be there, as it has been for almost 19 years. Kathy will return to a place she calls home—her beloved Maine. I know I speak for all who have worked with her over these past 34 years, in saying thank you for all she has done to make this a better place. And on their behalf, let me say that I wish her in her retirement a life full of new challenges, good health, and many other rewards she so richly deserves for her long and distinguished career in public service.

We thank you, Kathy, for a job well done.

Mr. ROTH addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. SMITH of Oregon). The Senator from Delaware.

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, some of my esteemed colleagues argued this past week that we are losing jobs in manufacturing, particularly in textiles and apparel, because we have set the American standard of living too high through the minimum wage, Social Security, Medicare, workplace safety rules, environmental standards, and social policies such as parental leave. That is the sort of broad assertion we have heard about every trade bill or trade vote that has come to the floor in the past years.

They argue that any trade liberalization will lead to a reduction in our own labor and environmental standards, rather than encouraging an increase in the labor and environmental standards among the beneficiary countries. That attack on this legislation is wrong for three reasons.

First, there is no evidence that trade has weakened our labor and environmental standards—quite the contrary. During the period from 1970 to the present day, while trade as a percentage of American GDP more than doubled from 11 to 25 percent, our labor and environmental laws were strengthened. What we have witnessed has been the exact opposite of what the trade critics would have predicted. Our labor laws continue to provide strong protection to workers, and the reach of our workplace safety laws has continued to expand.

The last 30 years witnessed the passage of landmark environmental legislation, enormous set-asides of wilderness areas, and significant improvements in air and water quality. We have seen sufficient progress on endangered species so that the President recently removed the bald eagle from the list of endangered species. Who would have thought of a more potent symbol of the progress we have made in the last 30 years. Have we done enough? No. There is still more we can do to encourage conservation and environmental protection. Based on the last 30 years of evidence, there is no reason to forgo the benefits of trade based on the errant assumption that trade will somehow undermine the basic fabric of our environmental law or encourage a race to the bottom.

What has been true in the United States has also proved true elsewhere. The truth is that economic growth and a rising standard of living is a necessary predicate for higher labor and environmental standards, and trade is essential to both goals. What the most recent studies have shown is that air and water quality improve as per capita income increases. The growth in pollution declines as incomes rise. There should be no doubt, then, that poverty is the enemy of both labor and environmental standards and that both benefit from economic growth to which trade contributes.

Third, there are sound reasons why higher labor and environmental standards will not lead to a race to the bottom, even in a world of expanding trade. Pollution control costs, even in the dirtiest of industries, account for less than 1 or 2 percent of total production costs. In other words, even in the dirtiest of industries, the cost of compliance with our environmental standards is not sufficient to persuade companies to invest in other countries simply to take advantage of lax environmental laws.

Trade critics who argue that trade will devastate the environment tend to overlook that firms generally invest in the developing world's pollution havens to gain market access, not to take advantage of the lower environmental standards. In other words, the companies generally invest because their exports face tariffs averaging between 10 and 30 percent, a cost disadvantage they can only overcome through investing on the other side of that tariff wall.

Given those facts, we would be better off beating down high tariffs in the developing countries in order to allow the export of goods from clean factories in the United States, rather than encouraging trade restraints that lead to investment in pollution havens.

Equally important, our companies tend to take their existing technology and production techniques with them, even when they do invest in pollution havens abroad, in order to get around the high tariff walls. They do not do this out of altruism. They do it because it makes good, cost-effective, economic sense.

Our companies have found ways of producing in the United States that both allow them to comply with our environmental standards and remain globally competitive. We should be encouraging the export of those techniques of manufacturing wherever we can. But what those facts most assuredly do not mean is that trade has somehow led to a race to the bottom. In fact, trade appears to lead to a rising standard of living in environmental as well as economic terms.

My colleagues say we can no longer compete in textiles and apparel because our producers compete with many countries in the world with far lower standards of living. They explicitly or implicitly argue that we must impose trade restraints in order to protect these industries and the associated jobs.

Let me be blunt: There is no protection in protectionism. For every job we save through trade restraints, we lose many more in other sectors of the economy. As we have learned this past summer during the debate over quota legislation, saving one job in the steel industry by imposing trade restraints puts 40 jobs in the consuming and exporting industries at risk. Those who oppose this legislation do not favor the win-win outcome that the Finance Committee bill would create and the textile industry itself supports.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Will the distinguished chairman yield for a question?

Mr. ROTH. I am happy to yield.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. The Senator spoke of those who oppose this legislation. I believe we voted to move to this legislation by a vote of 90-8?

Mr. ROTH. That is correct.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. I believe this measure came out of the Finance Committee, under the Senator's leadership, unanimous, both parties?

Mr. ROTH. The Senator is correct.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Would the Senator think I was out of range if I suggested there are 75 votes for this legislation as it is?

Mr. ROTH. I think that is a fair statement.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Well, then doesn't the Senator think we should find a way around our self-imposed restraints and vote?

Mr. ROTH. I couldn't agree with my colleague more. I wish we could proceed. I think this legislation is critically important. I think we have, as the Senator says, a vast majority on both sides of the aisle. As we have already said on many occasions, it has the strong support of the President.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Who is meeting this morning with the President of Nigeria who is here to talk about that.

Mr. ROTH. I understand a number of the ambassadors from the countries in Africa that would be impacted with this legislation have been calling and telling people of the importance they attach to it. It would be a major setback, inexcusable for this legislation not to proceed.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Exactly, sir.

Mr. ROTH. As I said, there is no protection in protectionism. For every job we save through trade restraints, we lose many more in other sectors of the economy.

Those who oppose this legislation do not favor the win-win outcome that the Finance Committee's bill would create and the textile industry itself supports.

Some of my colleagues would seem, instead, to prefer the "lose-lose-lose" option of imposing a regressive form of taxation on the poorest in our society, lowering employment in the textile and apparel sector, and lowering employment throughout the economy.

I want to reemphasize what I have been saying. It is not the chairman and it is not the ranking member of the Finance Committee that is telling you that the Senate bill would lead to higher sales and higher employment in the textile industry. No, it is the textile industry itself that is telling us the Senate bill would increase textile shipments by $8.8 billion over 5 years and increase textile-related employment by 121,000 jobs over the same period.

That is a win-win outcome we should support. I urge my colleagues to support the amendment to the legislation.

With that, I yield the floor.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, it goes without saying that I wholly agree with the remarks and statements of our revered chairman. May I say, there is still hope. It is not over yet.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I obtain the floor in order to thank my distinguished colleague from Illinois, Senator FITZGERALD. He is a banker, a financier. He is far more experienced in financial affairs than I, and he is on the other side of the aisle. His arrival now makes it bipartisan and I am very grateful to him. We had a bipartisan move with Senator Heinz and myself in passing section 13.301 of the Budget Act, which says you could not use Social Security—either the Congress or the President—in reporting a budget. That was approved by 98 Senators in a bipartisan fashion.

Yet the budgeters continue to ignore it. So I have been looking, since we lost Senator Heinz on that side of the aisle, for some assistance. We had otherwise the leadership of Senator Armstrong and Senator Boschwitz. We were in the extreme in 1989, for supporting a value-added tax, a 5-percent value-added tax, allocated to reducing the deficit and the national debt so we would not spend Social Security. In fact, we had eight votes in the Senate Budget Committee. We recommended again another VAT. We tried to pass other laws. But with respect to the distinguished Senator's statement that the Democrats have voted against Social Security several times, let me clarify that observation of his to the extent that we, right now, are in that same situation. Here now, the tree is filled up. You have veritably fast track; namely, you have a bill out from the committee with a substitute or leader's amendment or maybe they want to call it the amendment of the committee itself. But whatever they call it, it is the committee bill and you cannot amend it.

When the tree is filled up that way on cloture, it will be difficult to get cloture because no one is allowed to offer amendments. We need someone to understand this and allow us to begin deliberating. Now, that is what we have. If this persists through tomorrow, I am hopeful, but I don't know because I am a minority of a minority of a minority here, that we can move forward. But it could very well occur that we may not get cloture tomorrow morning at 9:30, if that is when they call the vote. They said they didn't think there are any votes tonight, other than a continuing resolution, which we can voice vote. We may, but I doubt if we could get that vote.

So the reason you don't vote cloture is because you want to try to get some amendments considered to discuss these issues. That was the situation each time they brought up that Social Security. I know better than any because I put in my amendment at the very beginning of the year, drawn, if you please, by the Social Security Administrator himself. We introduced it. It was referred under the rules, of course, of the Budget Committee. I have been on that Budget Committee since they started it as a Budget Committee in 1974, some 25 years. So I have been there. I have been chairman of the Budget Committee. I thought I could get a hearing. They don't want to talk about a true lockbox or taking it off budget. They will vote for a sense of the Senate. Then they will vote for the law and then totally ignore the law. And if you can put in my amendment in, as we have it propounded now in the Budget Committee, I can tell you here and now we really will have lockbox, and you won't be able to touch it.

We won't have to debate whether or not we are. Everyone could see and understand it. That situation happened several times, and the majority was going to call it the lockbox. One proposal was made by the majority leader that allowed three amendments. We would bring it up, have three amendments considered with time agreements, and then vote.

When they found out about my one amendment that was for a true lockbox that is in the Budget Committee, which they won't even give you a hearing on, they would not agree. We had to go ahead and vote against cloture. The distinguished Senator from Illinois calls that a vote against Social Security. Not at all. That is a vote, really, for Social Security.

Tomorrow, when a substantial number vote, let's say, assuming against cloture, someone could say they voted against the trade bill. Not at all. They are for the trade bill. The distinguished minority leader has made that clear. The Senator from South Dakota is for this bill, but he is trying to protect the rights of Senators on both sides of the aisle to offer amendments. The Senator from Illinois was mistaken to characterize that as a vote against Social Security several times, saying, "Why did you vote against it if you are sincere?" We are sincere all right, to try to preserve Social Security.

I was one of them and I will go immediately now to the observation made by my distinguished ranking member on the Finance Committee about 90 votes to proceed. I was one of those 90. That doesn't mean you can pass the bill without even considering any amendments. When I voted to proceed, I voted to do just that—proceed to debate the amendments, vote upon them, and get to a final enactment thereof. I have several things that we want to bring up. I see other Members present.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I have watched with some interest in recent days the Senator from South Carolina holding forth on the floor of the Senate on trade issues. This isn't the first time. He has often come to the floor of the Senate to engage in interesting and robust debates about international trade.

I also noticed that the bill that is before us, the House bill dealing with African trade, the African Growth and Opportunity Act, if you read it, reads like a lot of trade deals we have dealt with. It is kind of a NAFTA for Africa approach with trade adjustment assistance, CBI, and other things added to it.

As I was thinking about all of this, I realized that nothing really changes very much. I guess it has been 4, 5, 6 or 7 years I have been here on the floor of the Senate talking about trade issues to no avail. The debate never changes.

Those who come to the floor proposing a new trade initiative will speak only about their new trade initiative. They will refuse to speak at all, or refuse to address the residue and the problems resulting from the trade bills we have recently passed, NAFTA being one, United States-Canada being another, and GATT being a third. You never hear anybody willing to tackle the problems.

I had a chart with me. It is lost in a pile of charts somewhere. But I wish I could show it. It shows the trade deficits. After several decades of ballooning Federal budget deficits and after getting those deficits under control, now we have another deficit. It is the trade deficit. The annual trade deficit on a chart is just spiking almost straight up. It is a devastating consequence of bad trade policy and a range of other things, but especially bad trade policy. Yes, the collapse of economies, or the difficulties of economies in Asia contribute to it, and there are some other things that contribute to it, but by and large this has been an abiding trade deficit that has been growing for a long period of time, and a chart would show a very significant spike in this deficit.

It is serious. Our current account balance deficit as a result of this trade deficit is going up and up, and it is unsustainable. We can't continue to do this. Yet there is no discussion on the floor by those who bring trade legislation to the floor to say, well, let's talk about what is happening; let's talk about our current experience with our trade practices.

It is not the case that I believe we should put a wall around our country, or we should restrict trade, or we ought to decide to in some way diminish trade. That is not the case at all. I believe, however, that after about 50 years of post-Second World War experience in trade, we ought to understand what is going on. For the first 25 years after the Second World War, our trade policy was exclusively foreign policy. They called it trade policy, but it wasn't trade policy; it was foreign policy. We used trade as a foreign policy instrument with which to help a range of other countries around the world.

That was fine. We could beat any country virtually on any set of circumstances and any competition with one hand tied behind our back. We were bigger, tougher, stronger, and more able to compete. And we could essentially create all kinds of approaches that would be helpful to other countries in foreign policy, call it trade policy, and still win and still prevail.

But the second 25 years after the Second World War, things were different, especially recently. Our trading partners have become shrewd, tough, economic competitors. This is not any longer, and should not be, about foreign policy. It ought to be about trade policy, about what makes sense for our country's interests and how to engage in policies with other countries that are mutually beneficial, yes, to them and also to us.

As I listened to the Senator from South Carolina, I was thinking about something I told the Senate some many years ago. I had a young son who ordered an ant farm from a magazine. He is 12 now. I guess he was probably 5 years old. He saw this advertisement for an ant farm. It was a thing you ordered by mail. It was a container. It would hold sand. They sent you the container and the sand. They put the sand in the container. Then they sent you the ants separately. They said in the order to put the ants in the container. They said you should put that little vial of ants in the refrigerator for a while to slow them down a bit.

So my son got all of this in the mail. He put these ants in the refrigerator and slowed them down a bit. He poured them into his ant farm and then put the top on. For, I don't know, a month or two, we watched these ants in the ant farm. There must have been 100 or 200 ants in this little ant farm. You could watch them every day. They would go from one end of this little partition to the other hauling all of this sand back and forth, and back and forth, and nothing ever changed. I looked at those ants. I thought, I wonder what they are thinking, if they think; they just keep hauling this sand back and forth, and nothing ever changes.

I thought the Senate is similar to that, especially on trade policy. You could put a blindfold on and earmuffs on, and for 7 years nothing would change—at least it hasn't in the 7 years I have been in the Senate. Back and forth, back and forth, never a change.

Does anybody here have a debate about the provisions in NAFTA that lead to the terribly unfair trade in durum wheat? Did anybody ever hear of that? I have never heard of that. I have been down here and talked about it a lot. In fact, most people probably don't know much about durum wheat at all.

Probably many of the expert staffers working on trade have no interest in and no knowledge of durum. They have no knowledge of durum. They certainly have no knowledge of semolina flour. If they eat pasta, they are eating semolina flour and durum wheat. Eighty percent of the durum wheat in America is produced in North Dakota. Anyone working on trade issues in the Senate and eating spaghetti or lasagna might well be eating something that came from a North Dakota durum field.

After this country negotiated a trade agreement with Canada, we had a trade negotiator who reached an agreement with Canada and put it in writing to Members of Congress. He said in writing—Clayton Yeutter, our trade ambassador—there will not be an increase in the flow of grain back and forth across the border as a result of this agreement. That was a guarantee in writing to Members of Congress. It wasn't worth the paper on which it was written. It wasn't worth anything. The fact is, the trade agreement was enacted by Congress after it was negotiated. It was sent here and voted on by Congress and prevailed. I did not support it.

Immediately, we had an avalanche of Canadian durum coming across our border. That durum undercut our farmers' prices, took a couple hundred million dollars out of the pockets of our farmers in a year, and has happened time and time again. This past year was the largest amount of durum, over 20 million bushels in the first 7 months of this year; for 6 months, up over 80 percent.

People say it doesn't matter; that is technical; that is detail. That is fine for someone wearing a suit and tie, but try farming, raising durum, and having the price collapse and see what it does to your income and wonder whether it is important. Wonder whether you understood it and wonder whether you had a responsibility when you talk of trade the next time or talk of the trade problems you caused for the hard-working people in our country. Wonder about the trade problems you caused them by the previous trade agreements.

The same agreement, NAFTA, which has opened the floodgates for the grain coming in that has terribly hurt the family farmers, was advertised to Members, as the Senator from South Carolina knows, as being a trade agreement that would create several hundred thousand new jobs in our country. It didn't turn out quite that way. When NAFTA was negotiated with Canada, Mexico, and the United States, we had a trade surplus with Mexico and a small trade deficit with Canada—not so small but a trade deficit with Canada. So this Congress passes NAFTA, approves NAFTA. The trade surplus with Mexico has now been changed from a surplus to a $16 billion annual deficit just in the first 8 months of this year alone. The trade deficit with Canada has more than doubled.

In a study by the Economic Policy Institute, Rob Scott says NAFTA has resulted in a net loss of over 440,000 jobs in this country.

But the NAFTA supporters advertised that "a lot of new jobs will be created." The fact is, a lot of jobs were destroyed.

"It will be good for our country." In fact, big trade balances that were positive were turned to very large trade balances that are negative for our country. Yet the same folks continue to peddle the same merchandise on the floor of Senate.

Just make this trade agreement and somehow it will be better. My response is to say if we are going to talk about trade, I am perfectly willing to listen and be reasonable about all of these things. I want to help Africa. I want to help the Caribbean nations. I want to reach out and do all those things. But,

I want it to be fair. I want our producers to have fair competition. I am willing to retain these, but I refuse to have people come to the Senate and say: Here is our agenda and we demand you respond to that. And we don't intend at all to address the problems we have created in the previous trade agreements. To us, they are irrelevant. We don't intend to address them. They don't matter. They don't exist, and we don't intend to talk about them.

The remedies that normally would have been available to fight the unfair trade have been traded away in previous trade agreements. Those who have lost their jobs and farms find little solace in those who say: "We have a new agreement now and we don't intend to talk about the old problems."

It seems to me we ought to talk about some of the problems that exist in previous trade agreements and fix them. The quickest way for President Clinton and, for that matter, the committee chairman and the two managers of this bill, to have a thoughtful discussion about new trade initiatives is to agree to have a thoughtful discussion about the problems created by the old trade policies and begin to fix them. If we are not willing to fix some of the mistakes in previous trade agreements, we are not going to get consensus to move to new issues. I told the President the best way for him to get fast-track authority from the Congress is to show a willingness to fix the problems that have existed in NAFTA, the U.S.-Canada Free Trade Agreement and GATT.

When a ship pulls up at a dock in California loaded with grain that is dumped in this country—clearly illegally—and there is no remedy to address it, our farmers say, how can grain be shipped from a European port to a dock in California and be sold for half the price of the grain that is being sold here, even after transportation is paid? How can that be? The answer is it is unfair trade and there is no remedy to deal with it and you can't stop it.

That is why producers in this country are saying to those who are pushing new trade agreements, help fix some of the trade problems we have. When that is done, we will listen. We will work with you. We will address some of these additional trade issues. It is not acceptable to simply ignore the misery, the suffering, and the difficulty that so many producers in this country experience because of unfair trade policies. It is not fair to ignore them. We must get our priorities straight.

I find it fascinating that some who have been so concerned about deficits during the years I have been in Congress are those who are the least concerned about trade deficits. Japan, $50 or $60 billion a year, every year. Want to buy a T-bone steak in Tokyo? Does anybody in this Chamber know what kind of a tariff will be imposed on a T-bone steak coming from the United States and sold in a Tokyo restaurant? Does anybody know the answer to that? I bet not. After a trade agreement with Tokyo in order to get more U.S. beef into Tokyo, we have a 50-percent tariff on all U.S. beef going into Tokyo which diminishes but snaps back if the quantity increases. Today there is a 40.5-percent tariff on every pound of American beef going into Tokyo.

That is considered a failure in any set of circumstances in any trade negotiation. But our trade negotiators, when they reached that deal, thought they won the Olympics. They were feasting and rejoicing, breaking their arms patting each other on the back. It was a big deal.

It is a failure. A 40.5-percent tariff in foreign markets for our beef is a failure. After all of this posturing and genuflecting and trade talks, the average tariff confronting our products going overseas from the agricultural sector is nearly 50 percent.

We will have some discussions in Seattle in December with our trade negotiators. We have been talking with our trade negotiators and we hope very much for once we could win. Will Rogers once said, the United States of America has never lost a war and never won a conference. He surely must have been talking about our trade negotiators.

We must start standing up for the interests of American producers and American workers not in a way that prohibits competition. We can compete; our farmers can compete. They are willing to do that. But they sure are not willing to compete when the ground rules are not fair.

We end a negotiation with Europe on the issue of grain. Let me go back to grain because I represent a farm State. We didn't even cut European grain export subsidies that are multiples of ours. We say that is fair competition. I don't think so. In my hometown, that is not fair competition. It is the best they could get. The result is a trade agreement that is unfair, a trade agreement that hurts our producers.

Senator ROTH from Delaware is managing this bill. He is a Senator for whom I have a great deal of respect. I have worked with him. I like him. We are friends. He comes to the floor and I am sure he believes strongly in this bill.

Senator MOYNIHAN, legislative giant and great thinker, comes to the floor. He believes strongly in this bill. The Senator from South Carolina believes differently. I believe differently in these issues.

The way to deal with them is to have amendments offered and have votes. One would think an elementary lesson in politics is that politics is a process of making choices. You make choices by voting. But we have this vineyard I described earlier that has been planted by the majority leader with a whole series of vines now. He has decided he is the gatekeeper of the vineyard. These are his vines. He will decide who comes through the gate and picks the fruit.

His friends will be able to do that. "My friends will get in, they will offer their amendments, but I will not allow any other amendment because that's a nuisance."

That is not the way to legislate. That is not an appropriate way to do business in the Senate. It is an appropriate way to do business in the House. The majority leader served there. I served there. We understand that. In the House, you have a Rules Committee, you have a 1-minute rule, you have a 5-minute rule, and everything happens by the clock. That is the way the House works.

When the framers of the Constitution created this Senate, they created a different body. I guess they cannot jettison the habits—they die hard—the habits of those who served in the House and who now want to control the Senate in the same manner. But the Senator from South Carolina, for example, has every right, in my judgment, to come to this floor, when this bill is before the Senate, to offer amendments and say to the Members of the Senate, both Republicans and Democrats: Here are my ideas. Here is the merit I ascribe to my ideas. Here is how I feel about them. Here is my passion. Let's have a vote about it up or down, yes or no. I am not afraid of that.

What we can do, it seems to me, is have a system in this Senate where we allow full, free, and open debate. Unfortunately, that does not always happen. So we have this legislative tree.

Earlier we had a filibuster on the motion to proceed. But we had cloture the motion to proceed. We will move on. Now we have this legislative tree which is totally unacceptable. At some point, I hope we can do this in a different manner. The best way for this Senate to act is for people with ideas to come together.

This week I worked with Senator BROWNBACK on a bill we introduced dealing with wireless telephones. I have been working with Senator CRAIG on a WTO trade caucus. I have been working with a range of others on the Republican side on legislation dealing with telecommunications. That is the best way to legislate: to find good ideas and work together to get them done. But that is not the way the Senate is working these days. In many ways that is regrettable because the public is not well served by this kind of parliamentary tactic we find ourselves in now.

I yield the floor and will listen to the Senator from South Carolina.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BENNETT). The Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I thank my distinguished colleague, the Senator from North Dakota, Mr. DORGAN. He knows this particular subject intimately. He is an expert in the field. He is right on target on the broad observation that it is very unfortunate we cannot debate trade—just generally speaking.

I am going to make a few comments in just a little while with respect to the overall idea that the software industry, computerization and otherwise, is the engine, this is the engine that has gotten America this wonderful boom of its economy. It has for the stock market, but not necessarily for the strength of the economy. We will have to get into that.

There are a few loose ends. Just recently, for example, the distinguished Senator from New York, as I understood it, questioned the matter of jobs and the statistics used. So I have the statistics from the Bureau of Labor Statistics, dated October 15, at 12:05. We have lost 17,700 textile jobs and 13,500 apparel jobs, for a total of textile and apparel jobs lost in South Carolina of 31,200, and a national loss of 424,000. That is the authority for the statistics, the facts I have been using.

Further, I have heard the debate. I want to be sure that it does not slip my memory. The distinguished Senator from Delaware came up a moment ago, the chairman of our committee, and said: "Really, the reason for the loss of jobs is high tariffs. That is why they go to get the protection of high tariffs."

I will try to get to see him later. Maybe he is joining me in my position because we certainly then do not want reduce the tariffs. I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD the text of the tariffs in the Caribbean and the text of the tariffs in Africa.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

TEXTILE TARIFFS IN THE CARIBBEAN (AS HIGH AS)

Dominican Republic: 43% (Includes 8% VAT).
El Salvador: 37.5% (Includes 12% VAT).
Honduras: 35% (Includes 10% VAT).
Guatemala: 40% (Includes 10% VAT).
Costa Rica: 39% (Includes 13% VAT).
Haiti: 29%.
Jamaica: 40% (Includes 15% general consumption tax).
Nicaragua: 35% (Includes 15% VAT).
Trinidad & Tobago: 40% (Includes 15% VAT).

TEXTILE TARIFFS IN AFRICA

Southern Africa Customs Union (South Africa, Botswana, Lesotho, Namibia and Swaziland): 74% (Includes 14% VAT for South Africa).

Central African Republic: 30%.
Cameroon: 30%.
Chad: 30%.
Congo: 30%.
Ethiopia: 80%.
Gabon: 30%.
Ghana: 25%.
Kenya: 80% (Includes 18% VAT).
Mauritius: 88%.
Nigeria: 55% (includes 5% VAT).
Tanzania: 40%.
Zimbabwe: 200%.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, we have made that point. With NAFTA, we at least eliminated the tariffs. We had the side agreements on labor and environment, we had reciprocities, and we cut down on the tariffs. But here we have no reciprocity. There is no tariff elimination. According to the argument propounded by the distinguished chairman of the Finance Committee, since Zimbabwe has a 200-percent tariff, all of the textile industry should move there immediately, under his reasoning.

The truth is, with the elimination of the tariffs, the opposite is true. With the elimination of the tariffs the investment has gone south. That sucking sound, as Ross Perot talked about, I can hear it. They can't hear it but I have heard it, 31,200 textile and apparel jobs in my State since NAFTA. I continue to hear the sound. I want to emphasize that.

Further, the statement was made by the distinguished Senator from Iowa that we had a 50-year history of removing barriers. Ha. Not at all. Not at all. We have had a 50-year history of removing our barriers, using foreign trade as foreign aid. But take textiles alone—we have the book. This is "Foreign Regulations Affecting U.S. Textile and Apparel Exports"; from 1994.

Maybe it is on account of me because I used to use this book. Over at Commerce they are not putting it out, but you can get the individual countries and make up an even bigger book—because it has gone up. It has not gone down. They said "50 years of liberal trade policies eliminating or reducing tariffs." The war was over in 1945. To 1995 would be 50 years; to 1994, 49 years. That is 49 years of not reducing foreign textile tariffs and not reducing all the other tariffs and nontariff barriers.

You cannot get in and do business, still, in Japan. If you want to sell textiles or do anything about textiles in Korea, you have to get a vote of the industry. Everybody knows Korea have used the Japanese system of controlled capitalism, and it works. That was the American system under Alexander Hamilton. We point out time and again to the Brits, once we won our freedom in the earliest days—David Ricardo, the doctrine of comparative advantage; Adam Smith, open markets, let's go right now. The Brits corresponded with Hamilton saying: You fledgling colony, now that you have won your freedom, let's trade back to the mother country with what you produce best and we will trade back with you what we produce best.

Hamilton said in a book "Reports On Manufacturers"—bug off. He said: We are not going to remain your colony.

The second bill that passed this Congress, from which I stand here this evening, on July 4, 1789—the first bill being, of course, the Seal of the United States—the second bill on the 4th of July, 1789, a tariff bill of 50 percent on 60 articles. We started and built this economic giant with controlled capitalism, with protectionism. It is emulated—and I do not blame them, it has worked—in Japan.

It is not about being fair. These American politicians whine: You have to be fair, be fair.

Come on. You have to be realistic. Trade is trade—a fair price for a sound article. It is not a giveaway. Japan is working. Its system is working.

All these articles have been written. That is why I want everybody to read Eamonn Fingleton's "Hard Industry." I cannot put the whole book in the RECORD, but I will make reference to it in a minute.

Japan, with 125 million citizens and the United States with 260 million citizens, still outproduces us. They are outproducing us. They have a stronger economy. They have a better savings rate. There may be one or two banks bankrupt, but a lot of them did not go bankrupt. They readjusted. They continued to take over market share.

This past year, they have taken over, again, more of the American automobile industry than the American manufacturers. It is working. If I were there, I would run it the same way. I would not run away saying they are being unfair. We are being downright stupid.

The Senator from North Dakota pointed out the observation of Will Rogers: We win every war but lose every conference because we run around like we are fat, rich, and happy. That is exactly what we heard from the Senator from Delaware, that we have this booming economy. Not so. We have a $300 billion deficit in the balance of trade and we increased the debt again at the end of the fiscal year. We spent $127 billion more than we took in and one important economic indicator—the consumer confidence index—is falling. Chairman Greenspan is raising interest rates, and our nation has lost textile jobs to the extent that two-thirds of the clothing I am looking at is represented in imports. I am fighting today to maintain the one-third.

This industry is very productive and very competitive but cannot remain so if this bill passes. Within a 5-year period, we are going to have enough problems with respect to the phasing out of the Multifiber Arrangement. So we have to batten down the hatches now and stop putting in these giveaway programs to the Caribbean and to the sub-Saharan on the basis of helping the Caribbean and the sub-Saharan people.

I wanted to put in the book of foreign firms located in Mexico in the fabric field. They said it was too many pages. The reason I wanted to do that, of course, is the fabric field abandoned the apparel industry. Now that industry is locating jobs out of the U.S. and that sucking sound of jobs you hear I am trying to prevent from becoming a roar.

Maybe they are listening because I received a letter from ATMI. I had not seen this letter. It is dated October 1, 1999. There are two dates. September 28, 1999:

Dear Members of Congress: On behalf of the American Textile Manufacturers Institute, I would like to share our views regarding the Caribbean Basin [Initiative] and the Africa Growth and Opportunity Act that was approved by the Senate Finance Committee . . . and to express, for the record, our position on any trade package that might include the measures.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the letter be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

MILLIKEN & COMPANY,
September 28, 1999.

Re CBI, Africa trade legislation.

DEAR MEMBERS OF CONGRESS: On behalf of the American Textile Manufacturers Institute (ATMI), I would like to share our views regarding the Caribbean Basin trade bill (S. 1389) and the Africa Growth and Opportunity Act (S. 1387) as approved by the Senate Finance Committee, and to express, for the record, our position on any trade package that might include these measures.

On CBI, ATMI supports the yarn-forward, 807A/809 approach embodied in S. 1389. This approach, which has also been proposed by the Administration, would extend duty-free, quota-free treatment to apparel from the region only if it is made of U.S. yarn and U.S. fabric, and U.S. thread of fabric shipped to the region in roll form. It would ensure that benefits accrue to all sectors U.S. apparel manufacturers, the CBI countries, U.S. importers and retailers, and U.S. textile and fiber producers while harming none of them. No other CBI proposal strikes such a balance. And, in the current political climate, no other CBI proposal stands a better chance of being enacted.

ATMI cannot, however, support Senate passage of the African Growth and Opportunity Act (S. 1387) in any form as a stand-alone bill or as part of a trade package because of the dangers posed by a conference with the House. While S. 1387 includes critical U.S. yarn and fiber requirements, the House-passed Africa bill (H.R. 434) will promote massive illegal transshipments of Asian and apparel products through the 48 nations of Sub-Saharan Africa to gain duty-free, quota-free access to the U.S. market. The result will be that billions of dollars of illegal Asian, particularly Chinese transshipments will enter the U.S. at zero duty, resulting in job losses for thousands of workers, many of whom are African-American, in the U.S. textile, apparel and fiber industries. The House Africa bill is so fatally flawed that any compromise other than the bill approved by the Senate Finance Committee would be extremely harmful to our industry.

Therefore, without firm assurance that the Senate Finance Committee's Africa bill will be maintained in conference without change, we remain opposed to any package containing the Africa bill, even if it were also to include the Finance Committee's yarn-forward, 807A/809 CBI bill. For as beneficial as an 807A/809 CBI bill would be for all the sectors in the textile complex from fiber all the way through retail, it would not overcome the price of a bad Africa bill. Simply put, the Sub-Saharan Africa bill is a poison pill it is so badly flawed and would exact such a heavy toll on the U.S. textile industry at we must oppose it, even at the expense of a balanced and viable CBI bill.

Accordingly, ATM encourages you to oppose any trade legislation containing a Sub-Saharan Africa trade bill and support passage of the Finance Committee's CBI bill (yarn-forward, 807A/809) apart from the Africa bill.

Sincerely,

DOUG ELLIS,
President.

Re Update on trade and legislative issues.

To Chief Executive Officers of ATMI Member Companies.

DEAR MEMBERS: ATMI's Board of Directors discussed a number of key trade and legislative issues at its fall meeting last month. I want to take this opportunity to inform you of those discussions and to review ATMI's positions on these issues.

One of the key issues discussed at the meeting was the pending Caribbean enhancement legislation, often referred to as the CBI (Caribbean Basin Initiative) bill. Presentations by John Reilly of Nathan Associates and Fernando Silva of Kurt Salmon Associates indicated that the U.S. textile industry will benefit most from a bill that requires Caribbean apparel to use U.S. fabrics made of U.S. yarns in order to gain quota-free and duty-free access to the U.S. market. That approach is contained in the Senate Finance Committee's bill (S. 1389), but not in the bill reported by the House Ways and Means Committee. The Senate bill also requires that if the U.S. fabric is cut in the Caribbean the apparel must be assembled with U.S.-formed thread.

The Senate is likely to vote on this bill within the next three weeks, and it will probably be considered together with the Sub-Saharan Africa free trade bill.

The Sub-Saharan bill was also discussed by the Board and, as noted below, the Board's previous decision to oppose Sub-Saharan legislation was reiterated. Even though the Senate Finance Committee version of the Sub-Saharan bill requires U.S. yarns and fabrics, as with the Caribbean bill, the House-passed Sub-Saharan bill would be so damaging to the U.S. textile industry that ATMI's Board remains committed to opposing Sub-Saharan legislation. The risk of a compromise between the House and Senate versions that would still be damaging to the U.S. industry has made this position necessary.

After extensive discussion, the Board voted to reaffirm its support for the Senate CBI bill and opposition to the Sub-Saharan Africa bill as follows: "The Board of Directors reaffirms its current position on CBI parity and the Sub-Saharan Africa Bill and unconditionally opposes the CBI bill approved by the House ways and Means Committee".

Other trade/legislative issues discussed were reform of the trade rules governing imports from the Northern Mariana Islands, China's attempt to join the World Trade Organization (WTO), and the new round of WTO trade negotiations. Following is a summary of ATMI's positions on each, which were not changed by the Board:

The Board resolution on China's accession to the WTO approved by the Board on March 11, 1999 is as follows:

The ATMI Board holds as a pre-condition for its support for China's accession to the WTO the following:

A. The reduction or elimination of tariff and non-tariff barriers to its textile and apparel market that will result in effective market access to all WTO exporting countries.

B. China must also adhere to equitable conditions of competition regarding: 1. Worker's rights; 2. Environmental preservation; 3. Dumping, countervailing duties (subsidies); and, 4. Transparency.

C. China must go through the full ten-year integration schedule out of the quota system as every other WTO member country.

WTO Negotiations—The U.S. should seek the following as part of a new round of WTO negotiations that will be kicked off at the WTO meeting in Seattle in December:

No cuts of U.S. Textile/apparel tariffs;

Access to key textile/apparel markets, which those countries committed to provide in the previous round of WTO/GATT negotiations;

Maintain U.S. laws against foreign unfair trade practices (dumping subsidies) without any weakening;

No acceleration of the phaseout of textile/apparel quotas.

Northern Marianas—ATMI supports bills (H.R. 1621 and S. 922) that will close a loophole and prevent apparel made in the Northern Marianas from being labeled "Made in the U.S.A." and from entering the U.S. duty-free and quota-free. For more information and to contact your representatives and senators on this, please see the excellent internet site www.takepride.org.

I hope this provides you with a useful update of key trade/legislative issues. I urge each of you to continue to contact your congressional representatives in the House and Senate to support our position.

Please call me, Carlos Moore or Doug Bulcao of our staff if you have any questions or information about these issues.

Sincerely,

DOUG ELLIS,
President.

Mr. HOLLINGS. I do not want to mislead or misquote. They say they are for the CBI part of the bill. I quote from the letter in the third paragraph:

ATMI cannot, however, support Senate passage of the African Growth and Opportunity Act in any form as a stand-alone bill or as part of a trade package because of the dangers posed by a conference with the House. While S. 1387 includes critical U.S. yarn and fiber requirements, the House-passed Africa bill will promote massive illegal transshipments of Asian and apparel products through the 48 nations of sub-Saharan Africa to gain duty-free, quota-free access to the U.S. market. The result will be that billions of dollars of illegal Asian particularly Chinese transshipments will enter the U.S. at zero duty resulting in job losses for thousands of workers, many of whom are African American, in the U.S. textile apparel and fiber industries.

The House Africa bill is so fatally flawed that any compromise, other than the bill approved by the Senate Finance Committee, would be extremely harmful to our industry. Therefore, without firm assurance that the Senate Finance Committee's African bill will be maintained in conference without change, we remain opposed to any package containing the African bill even if they were to also include the Finance Committee's yarn forward 807A/809 CBI bill.

That would have saved me days in this debate because we are using the same authority. I wish we could have the sandwich board back up. They were saying the ATMI, representing all of the textile industry, will support my position.

Let's say they oppose half of my position; namely, the CBI. I at least have support from my own ATMI for the position I have taken. I am beginning to feel a little strength this afternoon where we are picking up a little speed. Maybe I can get the Senator from Florida to support me. I am going to try my best because I want everyone to understand just exactly what was being talked about by the distinguished Senator from North Dakota with respect to the overall trade.

We are finding out with respect to agriculture, where I think it would almost be an embarrassment to ask for another subsidy for agriculture—I support agriculture. Everybody knows it. But we have to be up front and lay it on the line.

We have magnificent agriculture, not on account of market forces but on account of Government forces. They are saying market forces, free market. They always give me that when I bring up my textile bill, and they have, what? The land itself.

We had our friend—Sen. Dale Bumpers—the Senator from Arkansas, talk about the leases ranchers can get for grazing lands to get their wool.

I understand the distinguished ABC announcer who lives in New Mexico has a mohair subsidy. I know the telephone is subsidized with the co-ops. Electricity is subsidized.

These producers have been getting price supports. They get export promotion, trade promotion, and everything else like that. If it rains they get help. If it dries up, they get a drought, they get help.

With durum wheat and these so-called free trade market forces, we have had an amendment introduced on this particular bill for trade adjustment assistance.

So you can see the article by Mort Zuckerman of October 18 in U.S. News & World Report states:

We are becoming two nations. The prosperous are rapidly getting more prosperous and the poor are slowly getting poorer. George W. Bush did well to rebuke his party when House Republicans maneuvered to balance the budget by proposing to delay the earned income tax credit for the working poor—paying it in monthly installments rather than an annual lump sum. "I don't think they ought to balance the budget on the backs of the poor," Bush said. Instead, it is time for aspiring leaders to ponder how the two nations might more closely become one.

The American economy is growing dramatically. But this prosperity is being distributed very unevenly. The America that is doing well is doing very well indeed. But most benefits have gone to those who work in industries where the main product is information. The losers have been the producers of tangible goods and personal services—even teachers and health care providers. The high-tech information economy has been growing at approximately 10 times the rate of the older industrial economy. It has enjoyed substantial job growth, the highest productivity gains (about 30 percent a year), and bigger profits. It can therefore afford bigger wage gains (about four times that of the older economy). And this wage gap is likely to widen for years to come.

The rich get richer. The concentration of wealth is even more dramatic. New York University economist Edward Wolff points out that the top 20 percent of Americans account for more than 100 percent of the total growth in wealth from 1983 to 1997 while the bottom 80 percent lost 7 percent. Another study found that the top 1 percent saw their after-tax income jump 115 percent in the past 22 years. The top fifth have seen an after-tax increase of 43 percent during the same period while the bottom fifth of all Americans—including many working mothers—have seen their after-tax incomes fall 9 percent. The result is that 4 out of 5 households—some 217 million people—will take home a thinner slice of the economic pie than they did 22 years ago.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that article be printed in its entirety in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the U.S. News & World Report, Oct. 18, 1999]

A NATION DIVIDED

(By Mortimer B. Zuckerman)

WHAT TO DO ABOUT THE EVER WIDENING GULF BETWEEN RICH AND POOR?

We are becoming two nations. The prosperous are rapidly getting more prosperous and the poor are slowly getting poorer. George W. Bush did well to rebuke his party when House Republicans maneuvered to balance the budget by proposing to delay the earned income tax credit for the working poor—paying it in monthly installments rather than an annual lump sum. "I don't think they ought to balance the budget on the backs of the poor," Bush said. Instead, it is time for aspiring leaders to ponder how the two nations might more closely become one.

The American economy is growing dramatically. But this prosperity is being distributed very unevenly. The America that is doing well is doing very well indeed. But most benefits have gone to those who work in industries where the main product is information. The losers have been the producers of tangible goods and personal services—even teachers and health care providers. The high-tech information economy has been growing at approximately 10 times the rate of the older industrial economy. It has enjoyed substantial job growth, the highest productivity gains (about 30 percent a year), and bigger profits. It can therefore afford bigger wage gains (about four times that of the older economy). And this wage gap is likely to widen for years to come.

The rich get richer. The concentration of wealth is even more dramatic. New York University economist Edward Wolff points out that the top 20 percent of Americans account for more than 100 percent of the total growth in wealth from 1983 to 1997 while the bottom 80 percent lost 7 percent. Another study found that the top 1 percent saw their after-tax income jump 115 percent in the past 22 years. The top fifth have seen an after-tax increase of 43 percent during the same period while the bottom fifth of all Americans—including many working mothers—have seen their after-tax incomes fall 9 percent. The result is that 4 out of 5 households—some 217 million people—will take home a thinner slice of the economic pie than they did 22 years ago.

There are those who point out that these income figures do not fully reflect the improvement in the standard of living and say that attention should be paid to what Americans own, what they buy, and how they live. A fair point. Two economists, W. Michael Cox and Richard Alm, have revealed that each person in the average household today has 814 square feet of living space compared with 478 square feet in 1970; that 62 percent of all households own two or more vehicles compared with 29 percent back then; that the number of gas ranges has increased sixfold, air travel four times, and the median household wealth—i.e., the family right in the middle—has jumped dramatically. Even given such improvements in life quality, our public policy must not exacerbate the disproportionate concentrations of wealth.

Fortunately, Americans are pragmatists. They know that what you earn depends on what you learn, especially in a digital economy; so 83 percent of our children now complete four years of high school, compared with 55 percent in 1970. This is good news. But vast numbers of people feel marginalized in an information-based economy. For too many, work no longer provides the kinds of wages and promotions that allow them to achieve economic success or security. Wage increases do not substantially increase their real income, so they have to work longer hours, get a higher-paying shift, or find another job. These are the people who are particularly concerned about the benefits they stand to gain from Medicare and Social Security. If they do manage to put together a successful strategy to survive, they should not be hit with sudden shocks—like the denial of the lump-sum tax credit.

Bush may have discomfited his Republican colleagues, but his words served to remind that they are out of touch with the realities of life for so many Americans. He later softened his criticism, but it is time, nevertheless, for a more generous leadership from the House Republicans. They should not berate Bush. Indeed, they may well find themselves in his debt should his appeal to the center of American politics provide them the coattails they will need when voters head to the polls in just over a year.

Mr. HOLLINGS. I emphasize:

The top fifth have seen an after-tax increase of 43 percent during the same period, while the bottom fifth of all Americans—including many working mothers—have seen their after-tax incomes fall 9 percent.

Fall 9 percent? Disappear. That is the issue in the bill before us. That is why the Senator from South Carolina takes the floor, because they are going to disappear. You have seen exactly what causes that disappearance. It is so-called free trade, free trade—the CBI. We are all for liberal free trade.

We can sit around, as politicians, and we can wonderfully agree, in a bipartisan fashion, on this high standard of living. Before you can open up X manufacturing, you have to have clean air, clean water, minimum wage, Medicare, Medicaid, safe working place, safe machinery, plant closing notice, parental leave—all of these ramifications of the high standard of living that Republicans support, that Democrats support. But then when you open it up, without protection of your economic strength—your industrial backbone—you begin to hollow it out, and see free trade, free trade, you can go, for 58 cents an hour, down to—someone used the figure 82 cents an hour—to Mexico with none of those requirements.

I went down to Mexico. I crossed into Tijuana. And the mayor saw me. He said: Senator, I want you to meet with 12 people. I said: Well, yes. I am down here, and you have been nice enough to come out. I will be glad to.

I was looking at all the different industries, of course, and talking to the industrialists themselves, not politicians. But the mayor was very courteous, so I met with them in a little grouping. And in a short word, what happened was—this is about 4 years ago—they had a heavy rain at the end of the year and the beginning of the new year. And it flooded and washed down these little hovels.

There are 100,000 people out in this valley of hard dirt. For a place to live, they take five garage doors and put them together. There are no streets. There are no power lines. There is a little electric wire, but that isn't sufficient other than to hold a light. It cannot run the TV. They have a battery to operate the TV. It is a terrible, miserable existence. But they are proud people, and they work, and they try to get their children to school.

So when the rain fell, they all got bogged down—they missed a day of work. So they went to the plant the next day, trying to hold on to their garage door housing, and they found out, under the work rules in Mexico, they were going to be docked another 3 days. So they lost 4 days' pay. That sort of got them a little discouraged with this plant that had moved down from California making these plastic coat hangers.

A month passed in February. These workers did not have any protection whatsoever on the inside with the manufacturing—as we talk about with safe machinery and a safe working place—and something broke and flew into a worker's eye, which he lost. Then the workers became more concerned.

But on May 1, they had a favorite supervisor. She was expecting. She went to the front office and said: I'm sorry, I'm not doing well. I'm sick. I'm going to have to go home. They said: No, you're not. You stay in here and work or else you are not going to have a job. So she stayed, worked, and miscarried.

Then the employees said: We are going up to California, and we are going to get a union. You know what they did? They went up there and got a lawyer in Los Angeles and found out that they had a union.

These maquiladora owners are clever enough. When they move down, they fill out the papers, saying that they have a union. And the papers are there but the workers never see a shop steward. They never saw a union man, or anybody else around the plant; never met them. No one was ever there. But they swap monies amongst themselves to try to make it look official.

Mexican law says if you have a union and try to organize one, you lose your job. And the 12 I was talking to with the mayor were fired. They could not make a living anymore, could not get a job.

You wonder why illegal immigration is so high—I would have bugged out of that country, too. I would have sneaked into the United States or some other country. I can tell you now, to feed my family.

That is the kind of work conditions that we try to prevent here in the U.S., which still persist in Mexico. These are the kind of side agreements that we had to try to prevent within NAFTA. So we did that, and we don't have that at all with respect to the different companies down there, let's say, in El Salvador. I won't get into every one of them.

A Korean-owned maquila with 900-plus workers, Caribbean Apparel, S.A., American Free Trade Zone, Santa Ana, El Salvador: death threats, workers illegally fired and intimidated, pregnancy tests, forced overtime, locked bathrooms, starvation wages, workers paid 15 cents for every $16.96 pair of Kathie Lee pants they sold, cursing and screaming at the workers to go faster, denial of access to health care, workers fired and blacklisted if they tried to defend their rights. Caribbean Apparel is inaccessible to public inspection. The American Free Trade Zone is surrounded by walls topped with razor wire. Armed guards are posted at the entrance. Forced overtime, 11-hour shifts, 6 days a week, mandatory pregnancy tests, and on and on.

I have to get this in the RECORD this evening because I have been very considerate of my colleagues. Many wanted to talk about our late colleague, the Senator from Rhode Island, obviously. I will always yield for that and for other particular points they want to make.

You have another Kathie Lee (Wal-Mart) sweatshop in Guatemala, San Lucas, Santiago, Guatemala: forced overtime, 11- to 14½-hour shifts, 6 days a week, 7:30 to 6:30 p.m., sometimes they work until 10:00 p.m. The workers are at the factory between 66 and 80 hours a week. Refusal to work overtime is punished with an 8-day suspension without pay. The second or third time this offense occurs, the worker is fired. Below subsistence wages, for 44 regular hours the pay is $28.57 or 65 cents an hour. This does not meet subsistence needs. Armed security guards control access to the toilets and check the amount of time the women spend in the bathroom, hurrying them up if they think they are spending too much time. Public access to the plant is prohibited by heavily armed guards.

You can go right on down this list. I will tell you right now, if you try to organize a union, they will shoot you.

Point: You are going to hear how this is going to be so good—as the Senator from Delaware said, a win-win situation. You are going to hear another Senator now say this is the way we want to go.

Can't we stop, look, and listen and get these dreadful labor situations cleaned up before we go? Is that what we want to put the stamp of approval on, this kind of heinous conduct down there in the Caribbean? This isn't with everybody sitting on the beaches with the suntan oil waiting for the President to call us back in session this fall, maybe, if we don't pass this bill. All kind of threats made, how important the bill is.

In September, Giovanni Fuentes, a union organizer assisting the workers at Caribbean Apparel, received a death threat from the company. He was told he and his friends should leave the work or they would be killed. He was told he was dealing with the Mafia, and in El Salvador it costs less than $15 to have someone killed.

Whoopee, let's pass the CBI bill. We want to make sure we get that kind of production. The cheap shirt they put on the floor and said, look at what we are doing, the retailers are for this bill. Sure they are because they will kill you if you don't produce for next to nothing down there in the CBI.

It is a broader problem. Let us go right to what I have heard all year long about software, software. Software is the engine that is really running this wonderful economy here in the United States of America. Of course, we have had the pleasure of meeting Microsoft's Bill Gates. I happen to be one of his admirers. I particularly admire the recent initiative with his foundation, that they gave $1 billion to our friend, Bill Gray, United Negro College Fund, to make sure every black in America could receive a college education. Gates is making maybe $2 billion. He can afford it. But that is the finest thing this Senator has heard all year of 1999.

Somehow, somewhere it is an economic situation that we face in the State of South Carolina, Georgia, the southern part of our country, where we have had, for a long time, a lack of any kind of educational facilities for the minorities. When I first came to public office, I went out and saw that little American Freedom School for the blacks. It was one big building. They had four classrooms in one room, a pot belly stove in the middle, and one teacher.

Somehow, somewhere they have been getting jobs. Do you know what? They have textile jobs: 37 percent minority employed; over 50 percent are women.

They wouldn't allow minorities to work in a textile plant when I first came to public office. I can tell you that they do now. That is why the head of the Black Caucus, the distinguished Congressman JAMES CLYBURN of South Carolina, why he is opposed to this bill. Don't give me no sandwich board of Amoco, Exxon, Citicorp, and all the money boys, for Lord's sake. Ask somebody, as they used to say with the Packard automobile, ask the man who owns one. Ask the Congressman who has worked in the vineyards, trained in the public, headed up our human affairs councils, now head of the Black Caucus in the House of Representatives of the United States of America. He is absolutely opposed to this because he is just getting jobs for his constituents. And he knows now we are going to export jobs. That is the biggest export we have. Export, export, export.

Well, back to Bill Gates. I am referring, of course, to "In Praise of Hard Industries," by Eamonn Fingleton: Mr. Gates himself exemplifies in high degree the sort of mind that succeeds in the software industry. He reportedly can recall the telephone extension numbers and car license plate numbers of countless Microsoft employees. According to the authors James Wallace and Jim Erickson, even as a child he displayed amazing memory skills. In particular, he won a local parish contest by memorizing and reciting the entire Sermon on the Mount. The passage is the equivalent of nearly four standard newspaper columns of type.

Among the hundreds who participated in the contest over the years, Gates, who was then only 11, was the only challenger who ever succeeded in reciting the entire passage without stumbling or missing a line.

Now, you have to respect that. That is a fellow who deserves a billion a year or whatever it is he is making. I can't keep up with it. I do know he has done extremely well. I visited in Redmond, WA. He has the most magnificent, I don't mean ornate, I mean commonsensical approach to his employees.

I understood from Time magazine, at the close of the year, they had 22,000 employees with stock options, 22,000 millionaires. So they are all well paid, and we respect that and we don't oppose that. We don't expect this bill is going to affect that one way or the other, but it is going to affect the $8.37-an-hour textile and apparel worker in the State of South Carolina, I can tell you that; or the average is even better, about $10 an hour now. They have health care. We are all talking about those who don't have health care. A young lady can work and she can get health care so when her child is sick, they can get to a doctor. When she can save a little every month and get a health insurance policy and send the kids to college, that is a good job.

I have lost 31,200 of them; I can tell you now. The Senator from Delaware says, well, we ought to realize the trend is global competition, better jobs. Let's think on those 31,200 because I know we have had a net loss of manufacturing jobs since NAFTA. Yes, we have BMW and Hoffman-LaRoche and all these industries that are the envy of everybody. I have GE, General Electric. My trouble is, I used to have five General Electrics. I only have one left. They have all left to go to Brazil or Malaysia or elsewhere.

I can tell you now that it isn't easy to hold on to these industries. What has happened to my industry—and the reason I want to emphasize this about software is to disabuse the political minds in the National Congress that it is not the engine on the one hand, and on the other hand, they are headed the same way of textiles.

Mr. President, 1998 ratios of imports to consumption. Aircraft engines, we import 70 percent. You see, the Airbus—market forces, market forces, market forces. Well, the European, very sensibly—not saying it is unfair and just whining about fairness. Come on. That comes from silly pollsters who never ran for office. The Europeans realize that, wait a minute, out of the defense industry came the magnificent research in aerospace. Out of our space program came the magnificent research in aerospace. So we gave that to the Boeing, Lockheed, McDonnell Douglas, and all the rest of them.

We gave them Export-Import Bank financing. It was a predominant industry at one time. The engines are being made by GE, Pratt and Whitney, and the rest. But now we find out that we are importing the majority of the engines. I have seen where USAir, which I travel back to South Carolina on, bought Airbus. There is no such thing as "buy American." I remember when they used to demonstrate when they didn't "buy American." We can go down the list: Tape recorders and video tape players, 100 percent; radio transmission and reception apparatus, 58 percent; television apparatus, 68.5 percent. You can go down to electrical capacitors and resistors, 69.5 percent, and that is where I lost my GE plant. That means we have about 30 percent being produced here. It gets unproductive to produce here, uneconomical. Watches, 100 percent. Look at the watch on your hand; it came from elsewhere, I can tell you that. Footwear, 84.2 percent. Look at the shoes. If they stop working overseas, we have to go barefoot. This is the list.

Now, what about this wonderful engine with this magnificent economy that they brag about? I have stopped them bragging with some of the columns in the financial news, and otherwise.

In his search for world-beating software talent, [Mr. Gates] has included six Japanese universities among the top twenty-five universities worldwide where he likes to concentrate Microsoft's recruiting efforts. Gates should know about Japanese software talent given that one of his closest friends and confidants in his early days was the Japanese software engineer Kazuhiko Nishi. Before they had a falling-out in the mid-1980s, Gates described Nishi as "my best guy ever."

This says:

Thus, for a software entrepreneur in a low-wage country, the capital cost per job can be as little as $10,000, a reduction of more than 90 percent from the mainframe era. This figure is well within the reach of software subcontracting companies in low-wage countries—and far less than is needed to get started in even the least sophisticated areas of manufacture.

So we know none better than Mr. Gates himself. They have the mentality. We don't have all the Gateses in the world, because Kazuhiko Nishi will probably near equal him, according to Gates himself. What does it cost? It costs $100,000 to create a textile job when you have high-tech machinery now in these plants. They have been spending $2 billion a year. I use that quote on page 18 of this particular volume, which is authoritative. Spinning is a good example, as recounted in the Wall Street Journal. "The capital required in the state-of-the-art spinning mill these days can amount to as much as $300,000 per job."

In contrast, this requires only 10,000 in so-called software. The minds ought to flex in the Senate body because what has happened is they are blindly looking at the stock market. Maybe some of them are making a bunch of money. They don't want to see further; all they know is they are making a fortune. But they are not looking at the jobs. I have tried my best to get the figures with respect to the balance of trade in software. I am convinced we have a deficit in the balance of trade. But according to the Department of Commerce figures, the U.S. receipt in software is $3.2 billion and the payments are $.05 billion, for a net balance of $2.7 billion in software trade.

But I looked further and I found out licensing is considered exports. So as they license them in India, for example, and other places to do this computerization—like my light bill in South Carolina is made up in India out of a firm from Columbia, SC. They send it in overnight. When they close down, all that work is done for them, so when they come to work in the office in the morning, it is all a done deal and they pay, let's say, $10,000 a job over there; whereas, it costs at least $100,000 in the American software industry.

We should dwell on this particular volume, Mr. President, and take a hard look at computer software because it goes right down and shows not only the Japanese are coming in, but the Chinese also. I had in here some sections that are easily referred to about the Japanese because they have really got the balance of trade. I read that earlier today. Let me say this.

Chinese programmers can develop software for, say, a clinic in the United States without knowing anything other than the end-user's basic requirements. Perhaps the most surprising—and for American software workers, the most ominous—aspect of IBM's Chinese affiliate is that it is pioneering a new work shift system linking several low-wage countries. When the Chinese programmers finish each evening, they pass their work on to Latvia and Belarus, where other IBM engineers continue working on the modules during the Chinese night. No wonder Bloomberg News commented: "The tilt in software design towards more basic, interchangeable products is good news for countries like China with armies of talented programmers." Given that IBM has laid off thousands of programmers in the United States and other Western countries in the last five years, the message could hardly be clearer: the software industry's spread into the Third World has already begun—and a challenge to the West's software job base is imminent.

So China is coming in. The truth of the matter is, we are going to be losing this particular industry. And we ought to have a full debate when you start losing your hand tools and machine tools. When you start losing your steel industry, when you start losing the textile industry—found to be the second most important to our national security—when you start losing finally your software industry, then this crowd will sober up and begin to debate a trade bill in the proper fashion.

This is not in the interest of the worker. It is not in the interest of the economy. It is not in the interest of the security of the United States. It is a terrible, fatal blow, final and fatal blow to the textile industry. I know from hard experience. I have been in the work of creating jobs. I know about education and technical training. I know about the best of the best coming in. And I know about the best of the best leaving.

In spite of all the jobs we have attracted to South Carolina, in the last 4 years, there has been a loss of 12,000 jobs. Don't give them the Washington solution of retraining and new skills. We had the Oneida plant. It made just T-shirts. It closed at the beginning of last year. We got it some 35 years ago making these T-shirts. They had 487 employees. The age average was 47 years. They are closed now. But where did the jobs go? They have gone to Mexico. They did not create the jobs for the Oneida workers. They lost the jobs for the Oneida workers.

Now Washington is overly smart here, telling the workers that this is the trend—global competition, engine of the economy, and all that kind of nonsense. Retrain—let's try that on for size.

Let's assume tomorrow morning we have to retrain and have new skills for computer operators. I know the distinguished Chair is an outstanding business leader. He knows business. He knows that business is not going to hire the 47-year-old computer operator. They are going to hire the 21-year old computer operator. Business in competition can't afford to take on the retirement costs of a 47-year-old or the health care costs of a 47-year-old. They are going to take on that 21-year old.

So Andrews, SC, is a ghost town. We have some other industries I helped bring there. But I can tell you, those 487 are not coming back, as the distinguished Chair of the Finance Committee says, by just retraining and new skills.

This is happening with the automobile industry, with the automobile parts industry, with the aircraft industry, Boeing, and now, according to the recent statistics, with the software industry.

This Congress and this Government has a real problem up here. It is not a problem of getting these folks, me included, reelected. It is a real problem that only we can handle, that only we can take care of. Everyone else has their government on their side. When is our Government going to get on our side?

Yes. The Secretary of Labor is not calling over here. It is unfortunate. Do you know who is calling over here? The Secretary of State. The Secretary of State has a European Desk. She has a Japanese Desk. She has a Chinese Desk. She has a Cuban Desk. When are they going to get an American Desk? She is not going to have one. That isn't her responsibility. But she is talking free trade, free trade, so that the striped-pants diplomats can run around and give away even more.

You know how wonderful, fat, rich, and happy we were after World War II. We are going broke. I can prove it. You watch it. You will see it here. It will happen—not totally broke, obviously. The economy is simmering down. Don't worry about it. We are losing that hard industry, hard-core industry in the middle class. That is the strength of the democracy, according to G.K. Chesterton. That is why we have succeeded as a fledgling democracy—the strong middle class. And instead, we are getting rid of it. As Zuckerman says, we are going into two groups of people—the haves and the have-nots. One important industry to our national security is about to bite the dust with this piece of legislation.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oregon.

Mr. WYDEN. Thank you, Mr. President.

PRESCRIPTION DRUG COSTS

Mr. WYDEN. Mr. President, this is the eighth time in recent days I have come to the floor to talk about the issue of prescription drugs because, frankly, I think this is a priority for this session of the Congress and one we can tackle in a bipartisan way.

Senator OLYMPIA SNOWE and I have teamed up on a bipartisan bill. We were able to get 54 votes on the floor of the Senate for a concrete funding plan for our approach.

What I have been doing, as folks can see in the poster right next to me, is urging seniors to send in copies of their prescription drug bills. The poster is very clear. We would like seniors to send copies of their prescription drug bills directly to each of us in the Senate so we can emphasize how important it is that this be tackled in a bipartisan way.

Senator SNOWE and I have heard again and again that this is an issue that just has to be put off until after the 2000 election. The Republicans and Democrats are going to just bicker about it and sort of have an ongoing finger-pointing exercise and nothing will get done.

I happen to think there are a lot of Members of the Senate who want to tackle this issue and want to tackle it in this session of Congress.

Since I have come to the floor of the Senate and brought this poster urging seniors to send their prescription drug bills in, I have heard from a number of our colleagues in the Senate. They have said we need bipartisan action. A number of them have asked for copies of the bipartisan Snowe-Wyden bill. They want to know more about it.

I am going to continue tonight to read from some of these letters, particularly from folks I am hearing from in Oregon. But I want to take a few minutes tonight to talk about some important issues relating to this question of prescription drug coverage for senior citizens and particularly ask about this issue of whether we can afford, as a nation, to cover prescription medicine.

Mr. President and colleagues, I believe America cannot afford to not cover prescription drugs. The reason that is the case is that drugs in the 21st century are going to be preventive. They are going to allow for patients to be treated on an outpatient basis and it will make part A of Medicare, the hospitalization part of Medicare, less expensive.

I mentioned a drug the other night, an important anticoagulant that helps to prevent strokes. It is a drug that would cost perhaps $1,000 a year to assist seniors. If we can prevent those strokes through the anticoagulant drugs, we can save $100,000 that might be incurred as a result of expenses associated with a disability.

There is one bipartisan bill before the Senate dealing with this prescription drug issue. It is the Snowe-Wyden legislation. My view is we can't afford to continue to pass up the opportunity to address these health care issues in a preventive way rather than incurring the extraordinary expenses for more institutional care.

I will mention a few of the drugs that will be particularly important to older people. One is Neupogen, which helps cancer patients and others with compromised immune systems boost their white blood cell counts and avoid hospital stays. Another is Glucophage, which is now being used to help those at risk for diabetes from getting that disease which causes so many other serious health problems.

My mom has had diabetes for a long time. I have seen the costs of these medicines. To think there is an opportunity with a particular drug to cover these seniors with their prescription drug bills seems to me to be an option as a nation we cannot afford to pass up.

Another drug is Vasotec, which treats high blood pressure and helps to stave off strokes and heart disease and other major problems.

These are all important medications. They do cost money, but the bottom line is we can use these medicines. When seniors receive these medicines, they are in a position to stave off much more serious and much more expensive problems. It is sensible, in my view, to make sure seniors who need these medications—that are preventive in nature—can get them. Under the bipartisan Snowe-Wyden bill, that would be done.

As far as I am concerned, in my reading of history, there is pretty much nothing that can get accomplished in the Senate that is truly important that isn't bipartisan. Our proposal gives each senior a chance at affordable prescription medicine. It ought to be recognizable to Members of Congress because a version of this model is what ensures good health for the families of Members of this body and the Congress.

Since my days with the Gray Panthers—I have been working on this prescription drug issue for many years now—I have seen how many seniors have to walk an economic tightrope, balancing their food against their fuel costs and their fuel costs against their medical bills. We have now more than 20 percent of the Nation's older people paying more than $1,000 per year for prescription drugs. The typical senior is using 18 prescriptions a year.

One constituent from Medford, OR, wrote that from a modest income he spent more than $1,230 so far this year on prescription medicines.

The typical senior is taking 18 different prescriptions. I hope, as a result of this effort to collect these drug bills from seniors, we can actually get some relief for people in this country who are facing such serious and urgent health care needs.

Some have said we ought to wait until after the next election, we ought to wait for comprehensive Medicare reform. I know the Presiding Officer believes strongly in this. There are a lot of Members who want to see broader, more comprehensive Medicare reform. Under the Snowe-Wyden prescription drug proposal, we are using the kind of principles that make sense for Medicare in the 21st century. It is choice-oriented. It gives a lot of options to older people. We use marketplace forces to contain costs.

It has worked for Members of Congress and their families. I think it can work for my constituents at home in Oregon. I think it can work for the older people of this country. I am hopeful in the days ahead we can make the case for why it is important the Senate Act in this session.

The question of prescription drugs and will Congress tackle it now—all of the political prognosticators have said this is an issue the Congress is going to punt on. They have said this is an issue that is going to have to be put off. I don't see how, when seniors are sending copies of their prescription drug bills, a Member of this body, a Member of this Congress, can say we ought to put this issue off when there is a model that 54 Members of the Senate have voted for, that has strong bipartisan support, that uses marketplace forces as a model. Let's not say this is something that ought to be put off.

I think we know what needs to be done. I think we can do it in a cost-effective fashion. Our bill doesn't involve price controls. Some seem to think that is the way to go. What troubles me about plans to deal with prescription drug costs that involve price controls, we will have massive cost-shifting. If we have Medicare acting as the buyer for all the medicine, it may be possible for the Government to negotiate a discount. I have always said that might be possible. What troubles me about that approach is we will have the cost passed on to someone else who might be 26 or 27—maybe a divorced mom who has a couple of kids—working as hard as they can, and all of a sudden they find out their prescription drug bill shoots up because Congress adopted an approach in this area that doesn't use marketplace forces.

Under the bipartisan Snowe-Wyden plan, the only bipartisan prescription drug bill now before the Senate, we reject those cost controls. We don't advocate a one-size-fits-all Federal approach. We use marketplace forces, the kind of forces that help deliver decent and affordable care to Members of this body and our families.

I want to read briefly from a couple of the other letters I have received from Oregon. I will keep coming back to the floor of the Senate again and again until we get bipartisan action on this prescription drug issue. I think the question of prescription drugs is the kind of issue that can leave a legacy for this session. It is the kind of important question that will help folks and help families at a time when a lot have fallen between the cracks. We know the economy is strong. We know a lot of people are doing well. If they happen to be in the stock market, most of the time they are doing very well. But there are a lot of folks who don't have the stocks in the technology companies, a lot of folks are on modest incomes. A lot of the seniors I have worked with since my days with the Gray Panthers are telling me and telling other Members of the Senate they just can't afford their prescriptions. That is what this is about. They can't afford their prescriptions.

There is a right way and a wrong way to deal with that issue. The wrong way, in my view, is to have a price control regime and produce cost-shifting with intervention by Government. I don't think that will work. I think a lot of people will end up getting hurt by that approach. I think there would be a lot of unintended consequences.

The right kind of approach, the one advocated in the bipartisan Snowe-Wyden prescription drug bill, uses marketplace forces. It gives seniors the kind of bargaining power that health maintenance organizations would have. Those big organizations, the health maintenance organizations, can go out and negotiate deep discounts. They use their bargaining power in the marketplace to get discounts. What happens is seniors get shellacked twice. They get hit once because Medicare doesn't cover prescription drugs.

Medicare started out as half a loaf back in 1965. It did not cover prescriptions and eyeglasses and hearing aids and a variety of needs older people have. But as a result of the escalating costs of health care, a lot of seniors are paying more proportionately out of pocket today than when Medicare began in 1965.

So seniors are not able to afford their prescriptions, and that senior purchaser, a low-income elderly widow, in effect has to subsidize the big purchasers, the health maintenance organizations that can negotiate discounts.

There is a right way and a wrong way to deal with the issue of affordable medication. The wrong way is to create a one-size-fits-all Federal regime and put the Government in the business of trying to orchestrate this entire program. The other is to use a model that we know works. Under our proposal—we call it SPICE, the Senior Prescription Insurance Coverage Equity Act—Senator SNOWE and I, we reject this Government model. We use an approach that has private sector options and choices and gives seniors bargaining power.

We hope more older people will send us copies of their prescription drug bills. This poster really says it all to seniors and their families:

Send us copies of your prescription drug bills.

Send them to your Senator. Write to: Your Senator, U.S. Senate, Washington, D.C.

I am going to wrap up tonight—because I know several of our colleagues would like to discuss matters important to them—with just a couple of other letters.

From the Oregon coast in the last few days, I received a particularly poignant letter. It is from an individual with an income of about $1,000 per month. She has to take prescription medicine, a number of prescriptions. Over the last few months, out of her $1,000-a-month income, she has had to spend almost $700. That is just over the last few months, from somebody who is on a very modest income.

Picture any one of us, or our relatives, trying to get by on an income of $1,000 a month and having to spend a significant portion of it, around $700 just in recent days, on prescriptions. We know they would not be able to do it. But that is the reality of what seniors on the Oregon coast are facing. That is the reality of what seniors all over this country are facing. That is what the bipartisan Snowe-Wyden prescription drug bill seeks to deal with. We want that person to get some real relief. We think it is time for the Senate to act on a bipartisan basis.

One other letter I received from the Willamette Valley, not far from my hometown, I thought was also particularly poignant. This was from a senior who sent me, really, all of his prescriptions. Just as we said in our poster, send us copies of your prescription drug bills, I think a lot of the seniors are doing it in a pretty detailed fashion. This is just an example of what I received from one older person in the Willamette Valley. She reports, on a very modest income, she is spending $236 a month on her prescription drugs. As she reports, that is without the over-the-counter medication she also has to take. She is 78 years old. She is concerned about whether or not the Senate is going to act. She is pretty skeptical, just the way a lot of other seniors are in our country. What we need to show is this Senate is willing to tackle these issues and do it on a bipartisan basis.

The time for finger pointing and scapegoating on this issue is over. We cannot wait for another year, another full year, for action on this matter. We ought to move now. There is one bipartisan bill before the Senate, one which I believe can bring Democrats and Republicans together. I am going to keep coming back to the floor of the Senate to talk about the SPICE Program, the Senior Prescription Insurance Coverage Equity Act. It is voluntary in nature. Nobody is required to change anything. No senior, no family, would be required to change anything in their buying practices should they choose to continue doing exactly what they are doing. But for millions of older people, the SPICE Program, the Senior Prescription Insurance Coverage Equity Act, will be a bargain. It will be a winner because it will give seniors the kind of bargaining power the big health maintenance organizations have had.

It is not right, in my view, to give those buyers significant power in the marketplace and just say seniors and families do not matter. In effect, that is what we are doing. We are telling them: You go on out and do your best, walk into a pharmacy, and even though you are subsidizing the big buyers, this Senate will not do anything about it.

I believe it is time for bipartisan action on this. I believe it is time to create an approach to cover prescription drugs under Medicare that uses the forces of the marketplace, that is bipartisan, and that helps hold costs down. I believe a lot of seniors cannot afford their prescriptions. There is a right way and a wrong way to deal with it. The bipartisan Snowe-Wyden legislation is what we think is the appropriate way to go. We are going to continue to come to this floor and talk about the need for action on it.

As this poster says, what will help is if seniors send in copies of their prescription drug bills. We urge seniors to send them to us and send them to their Senator here in the U.S. Senate, Washington, DC 20510, because that will help Members of the Senate to see how urgent is this need.

The need was great years ago, but it is getting even greater. Too many older people every week are having to make a choice between their food costs and their fuel costs and their fuel costs and their medical bills. Let us show we can deliver on this important issue. There is a bipartisan bill now before the Senate. We hope seniors, as this poster says, will be in touch with us to let us know their feelings on this important matter.

I intend to keep coming back to the floor of the Senate until we get action on this issue.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. SESSIONS). The majority leader.

MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent there now be a period for the transaction of morning business with Senators permitted to speak for up to 10 minutes each.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

NURSING RELIEF FOR DISADVANTAGED AREAS ACT OF 1999

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, on October 22, the Senate passed by unanimous consent the Nursing Relief for Disadvantaged Areas Act of 1999. The Senate agreed, also by unanimous consent, to an amendment of mine added to that legislation. My amendment made a technical clarification to the L visa program. Unfortunately, an "Interpretation of Technical Amendment" at the end of my remarks on my amendment was inadvertently left out of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD. I ask unanimous consent it be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

INTERPRETATION OF TECHNICAL AMENDMENT

"Collective" and "collectively" refer to a relationship between the accounting and management consulting firms or the elected members (partners, shareholders, members, employees) of the various accounting and management consulting firms, inclusive of both accounting service firms and management consulting service firms or the elected members (partners, shareholders, members, employees) thereof.

An entity shall be considered to be "marketing its services under the same internationally recognized name directly or indirectly under an agreement" if it engages in a trade or business and markets its trade or business under the same internationally recognized name and one of the following direct or indirect relationships apply to the entity:

- (a) It has an agreement with the worldwide coordinating organization, or
- (b) It is a parent, branch, subsidiary or affiliate relationship to an entity which has an agreement with a qualifying worldwide coordinating organization, or
- (c) It is majority owned by members of such entity with an agreement and/or the members of its parent, subsidiary or affiliate entities, or
- (d) It is indirectly party to one or more agreements connecting it to the worldwide coordinating organization, as shown by facts and circumstances.

This provision is intended to provide the basis of continued L visa program eligibility for those worldwide coordinating organizations which may in the future divide or spin-off parallel business units which may independently plan to associate with a non-collective worldwide coordinating organization.

CLOTURE VOTE ON H.R. 434

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I regret that because of a long-standing commitment, I will not be here for tomorrow's vote on cloture on H.R. 434, The Sub-Saharan Africa Free Trade Act. If I could be here, I would vote against cloture.

I strongly oppose the majority leader's decision to fill the amendment tree to prevent us from offering amendments on some of the most important issues facing working families in this country, especially the minimum wage.

Federal Reserve Board Chairman Alan Greenspan has said numerous times that increased trade has raised the standards of living and the quality of life for almost all countries involved in trade, and especially the quality of life in our own country. Chairman Greenspan believes that the number one benefit of trade is not simply jobs, but enhanced standards of living.

I can think of no more important enhancement to the standard of living of America's hardest pressed working families than to increase the minimum wage. Surely, it is appropriate to send the message on this legislation that increased trade must definitely mean a better quality of life for the working poor.

I had hoped to offer an amendment to raise the minimum wage to this bill, but the majority leader's actions prevent me from doing that. This trade bill has been offered to enhance the standards of living for workers in Africa and the Caribbean. I am certainly in favor of that, but there are honest disagreements as to whether the proposal before us effectively does so. But, while we express our concern for workers in these nations, we cannot forget about the workers in our own country.

I commend President Clinton for making trade with Africa a priority for his administration. His leadership is the driving force behind this entire debate. As the Senate debates trade with Sub-Saharan Africa and the Caribbean region, we must ensure that we take the right approach to building these vital partnerships. Clearly, we must strengthen our economic ties with these nations, but I am not convinced the proposal before us is the best way to do so.

Unfortunately, the majority leader's actions have also prevented anyone on this side of the aisle from offering germane amendments that will help us to build lasting partnerships between African and American businesses, provide strong protections for workers rights, and preserve the environment. We clearly had an opportunity to enact a bill that would make trade with Africa and the Caribbean Basin countries a win-win for all of the nations involved, but the majority leader's actions have made that impossible.

Any bill on Africa that comes before the Senate should address both trade and the other important issues facing Africa today. It must deal with the AIDS crisis. It must offer substantial debt relief. And it must restore foreign aid. Yet the proposal currently before the Senate is silent on these fundamental issues facing Africa. I am pleased that Senator FEINGOLD, Senator DURBIN, and other Senators are prepared to offer amendments that address all of these concerns, and I strongly support them.

I am also very concerned about the impact of the pending bill on our textile and apparel industries, which are often hardest hit by imports. These industries remain a critical source of employment for many American workers. In Massachusetts, many textile and apparel employees live in the Merrimack Valley and in Southeastern Massachusetts. They work hard, and they have made a lasting impact on our state's history and culture.

I believe even the proponents of this bill will admit that the short-term effect of the legislation will be an acceleration of job loss in the apparel sector. And while this bill includes a reauthorization of the Trade Adjustment Assistance Program, which I strongly support, nothing in this bill will create a single job for these displaced workers to have.

While Massachusetts continues to be a leader in exports, many small companies and workers are suffering as a result of the trade deficits caused by the economic crises in Asia and South America. In response to the needs of companies hurt by imports, the Trade Adjustment Assistance Program in general, and the New England Trade Adjustment Assistance Center in particular, exist as valuable resources. They offer vital assistance to firms and workers suffering from competition by imports. The Trade Adjustment Assistance Program is an effective initiative that has been shown to provide a return on investment of up to 348 percent.

The American people, I believe, will hold this Congress responsible for refusing to address so many issues which are critical to our families and our communities. The majority has once again turned a deaf ear to the pleas of the American people for action, and I regret this latest missed opportunity.

DRYLAND DEGRADATION AND ITS IMPACT ON TRADE RELATIONS

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, as the Senate considers the Africa Growth and Opportunity Act, I would like to draw my colleagues' attention to an important article from the President of the Corporate Council on Africa, Dr. Mima S. Nedelcovych, concerning Africa's problem of severe dryland degradation (known as "desertification") as it affects our trade relations.

The Corporate Council on Africa, CCA, includes 180 members with substantial business interests in Africa, including such industry giants as General Electric, Ford Motor Company, IBM, Citibank, ConAgra, Cargill, AGCO, 3M, Pfizer, Land O'Lakes, Chevron, Texaco, Bristol-Myers Squibb, Eli Lilly, Raytheon and Rhone-Poulenc USA. Recently Dr. Nedelcovych, who also serves as Vice President for International Business Development for F.C. Schaffer & Associates, published a short article entitled "Africa's Creeping Desert, A Problem for the U.S. Too," in the CCA's Perspectives on Africa (Fall 1999).

In it, Dr. Nedelcovych outlines clearly the extent to which the degradation of Africa's agricultural land is undermining one of the continent's most crucial natural resources, impeding economic growth, and slowing the hoped-for shift from aid to trade. Cocoa, coffee, cotton, cola nuts and spices grown in Africa end up in a myriad of everyday processed products on American store shelves, but land on which they are produced is increasingly threatened by a combination of bad management practices, drought and poverty.

As a boost to U.S. trade relations with Africa, Dr. Nedelcovych makes a strong case for full U.S. participation in the 1994 United Nations Convention to Combat Desertification, not just because it seeks to help Africa's agricultural sector grow and achieve food self-sufficiency, but because it will also open greater opportunities for U.S. sales to Africa, including seeds, agricultural machinery, irrigation equipment as well as a wide range of automobiles, pharmaceuticals, electronic equipment and other goods to more prosperous African consumers.

Dr. Nedelcovych ends with an urgent plea for the Senate to ratify this important agreement without delay. With a world population now over 6 billion and fertile farmland shrinking at an alarming rate worldwide, I heartily support Senate action on the Convention to Combat Desertification.

I ask unanimous consent that Dr. Nedelcovych's article be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

PERSPECTIVES ON AFRICA

A QUARTERLY JOURNAL OF DIALOGUE AND OPINION

AFRICA'S CREEPING DESERT—A PROBLEM FOR THE U.S. TOO

(By Dr. Mima S. Nedelcovych, President, Corporate Council on Africa)

We Americans are well known for our ingenuity and problem-solving abilities. All too often, however, we also are noted for our inability to see crises in advance and deal with problems when they are still easily manageable.

One such issue is the world's desertification problem. In Africa, more than two-thirds of the land is dry land, and approximately 70 percent of the population lives on that land. They also grow crops such as cocoa, coffee, cotton, cola nuts and spices on that land. Moreover, rare and endangered animals—a key to tourism in African countries—currently struggle to survive on that land. Without effective land management policies in developing nations, the need for foreign aid will rise at a time when available funds are shrinking.

The United Nations Convention to Combat Desertification has been designed to deal with this problem in a cost-effective way. The Convention does not call for the creation of a major new center of bureaucracy at the UN, nor does it create a mandated contribution by the United States. The onus is placed on developing nations needing assistance to devise a comprehensive national plan to effectively deal with desertification. However, if the United States Senate doesn't ratify this convention, the U.S. will be on the outside of this process, which will directly endanger U.S. interests.

The U.S. private sector has five concerns with how the problem of desertification is handled. First, no issue is more important than that of land use. The national plans called for in the Convention will govern all land use—not just agricultural land. Oil drilling, mining and manufacturing operations, all will be affected by this convention. If the United States fails to ratify this Convention, we will have no voice in the development and implementation of national land use plans.

Second, the United States sells hundreds of millions of dollars in irrigation and related equipment to Africa each year, as well as seeds and agricultural equipment. Companies and experts in nations that ratify the Convention will be placed on a roster of service providers. While America currently has a competitive advantage, that advantage will soon disappear if U.S. firms and experts are not on the convention-generated list. Our firms will then face the prospect of losing contracts to countries such as Spain, Portugal, Italy and Greece, who will provide technology based on what we have developed earlier.

Third, U.S. firms purchase millions of dollars of agricultural goods each year from developing nations. Products such as coffee, cocoa, cotton, cola nuts and spices are grown on dry or sub-humid lands facing the impact of desertification. Many consumers products we now use would cost more if the problem of desertification is not dealt with successfully. A morning cup of coffee surely would be more expensive—so would the chocolates given on Valentine's Day. The prices for items ranging from cooking oils or soft drinks also would rise.

Fourth, it is much cheaper to work with African nations to implement effective land management plans than to send millions to implement disjointed anti-desertification efforts and hundreds of millions more to provide humanitarian assistance to combat the effects of droughts and other natural catastrophes caused by desertification after they occur. Individual taxpayers and corporations certainly would appreciate a more cost-effective approach to this problem.

Finally, developing nations—particularly African nations—see this Convention as their major international initiative. The Convention was developed with the assistance of the United States Government. To date, all but Australia and the United States have ratified this Convention. U.S. failure to ratify this Convention will leave the United States Government, U.S. corporations and American experts out of the anti-desertification process. Moreover, it will poison our relations with African and other developing nations who believe non-ratification is a lack of support of their efforts to both deal with their problem and join global markets.

It is critical that the U.S. business community let the U.S. Senate know the importance we place on the ratification of the Convention to Combat Desertification. Potentially billions of dollars—and more importantly, millions of lives—depend on what the Senate does about this issue in the next few weeks.

PROPOSED DELAY IN FUNDING FOR THE NATIONAL INSTITUTES OF HEALTH

Mr. SARBANES. Mr. President, I rise today to express my serious concern that House and Senate negotiators have agreed to delay for one year almost all of the proposed increase in the National Institutes of Health (NIH) budget for FY 2000. I strongly disagree with this approach to balancing the budget. Fully funding biomedical research at the NIH should be one of our highest priorities, and I intend to oppose proposals that would delay funding for the NIH or fail to provide sufficient funding to ensure continued advancement in the field of biomedical research.

The proposed delay in NIH's authority to use $7.5 billion of its FY 2000 funding will mean that no new grants could be made until the end of the fiscal year. Thus, a one-year freeze will be put on all new biomedical research. Moreover, some on-going grants will have to be short-funded. For those suffering from life-threatening diseases, a one-year delay could be devastating. We cannot imperil continued progress in an area as important as biomedical research.

As our Nation searches for ways to improve health care for all its citizens, the need to ensure stability and vitality in biomedical research programs is increasingly imperative. Biomedical research has fundamentally changed our approach to treating disease and illness and has revolutionized the practice of medicine. Through the NIH, the Federal government has been the single largest contributor to the recent advances made in biomedical research, and NIH research has played a major role in the key medical breakthroughs of our time.

Biomedical research at the NIH has also contributed significantly to the growth of this Nation's biotechnology, medical device, and pharmaceutical industries. Many of the new drugs and medical devices currently in use were developed based on biomedical research supported by the NIH. NIH research has paved the way for the development of pharmaceutical, biotechnology, and medical device industries that have created millions of high wage jobs.

The promise of continued breakthroughs in the eradication of disease and the overall improvement in public health are contingent upon our commitment to supporting our scientists and researchers with adequate tools and resources. However, today, only one of three approved research proposals can be funded.

We must maintain our commitment to achieving full funding for biomedical research by FY 2002. Last year, we provided NIH with a downpayment on the resources it will need to take full advantage of the overwhelming opportunities for scientific advancement currently available in the field of biomedical research. This year, again we started on the right track by including another fifteen percent increase in the NIH budget. However, the proposed one percent overall budget cut will have a dramatic impact on the grant-making capacity of the NIH. As a result of this cut, 500 to 550 fewer grants will be awarded by the NIH next year.

This most recent proposal to require that the NIH delay spending approximately $2 billion of its FY 2000 funding until FY 2001, essentially revokes the entire increase for next year and goes back on our promise to substantially increase NIH funding by 2002. This additional funding cut will disrupt and delay research fundamental to saving lives and improving public health. It will also critically undermine our progress toward securing a strong and stable funding stream needed to ensure continued advances in biomedical research.

The proposed delay in NIH funding for FY 2000 is unconscionable. I will oppose it, and I urge the President to veto any conference report that includes this proposal.

AGJOBS ACT OF 1999

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, I'm pleased to have joined Senators GORDON SMITH, BOB GRAHAM, MAX CLELAND, and several other colleagues this week in introducing S. 1814. This bill is a new, improved version of the Agricultural Job Opportunity, Benefits, and Security Act—or, as we call it, the "AgJOBS" bill.

We are facing a growing crisis—for both farm workers and growers.

We want and need a stable, predictable, legal work force in American agriculture.

Willing American workers deserve a system that puts them first in line for available jobs with fair, market wages. We want all workers to receive decent treatment and equal protection under the law.

Consumers deserve a safe, stable, domestic food supply.

American citizens and taxpayers deserve secure borders and a government that works.

Yet Americans are being threatened on all these counts, because of a growing labor shortage in agriculture, while the only program currently in place to respond, the H-2A Guest Worker Program, is profoundly broken.

Last year, the Senate adopted meaningful H-2A reform, on a bipartisan vote of 68-31. Unfortunately, that bipartisan floor amendment did not survive the last round of negotiations over the omnibus appropriations bill last year.

This year, the problem is only growing worse. Therefore, we are introducing a new, improved bill. The name of the bill says it all—"AgJOBS".

Mr. President, our farm workers need this reform bill.

There is no debate about whether many—or most—farm workers are aliens.

They are. And they will be, for the foreseeable future. The question is whether they will be here legally or illegally.

Immigrants not legally authorized to work in this country know they must work in hiding.

They cannot even claim basic legal rights and protections. They are vulnerable to predation and exploitation. They sometimes have been stuffed inhumanly into dangerously enclosed truck trailers and car trunks, in order to be transported, hidden from the view of the law.

In fact, they have been known to pay "coyotes"—labor smugglers—$1,000 and more to be smuggled into this country.

In contrast, legal workers have legal protections.

They can assert wage, safety, and other legal protections. They can bargain openly and join unions. H-2A workers, in fact, are even guaranteed housing and transportation.

Clearly, the status quo is broken.

Domestic American workers simply are not being found to fill agricultural jobs.

Our own General Accounting Office has estimated that 600,000 farm workers—37 percent of the total 1.6 million agricultural work force—are not legally authorized to work in this country.

That estimate is low; it's based on self-disclosure by illegal workers to government interviewers.

Some actually have suggested that there is no labor shortage, because there are plenty of illegal workers. This is not an acceptable answer.

Congress has shown its commitment over the past few years to improve the security of our borders, both in the 1996 immigration law and in subsequent appropriations.

Between computerized checking by the Social Security Administration and audits and raids by the Immigration and Naturalization Service, more and more employers are discovering they have undocumented employees; and more and more workers here illegally are being discovered and evicted from their jobs.

Outside of H-2A, employers have no reliable assurance that their employees are legal.

It's worse than a Catch-22—the law actually punishes the employer who could be called "too diligent" in inquiring into the identification documents of prospective workers.

The H-2A status quo is slow, bureaucratic, and inflexible. It does nothing to recognize the uncertainties farmers face, from changes in the weather to global market demands.

The H-2A status quo is complicated and legalistic. DOL's compliance manual alone is 325 pages.

The current H-2A process is so hard to use, it will place only 34,000 legal guest workers this year—2 percent of the total agricultural work force.

Finally, the grower can't even count on his or her government to do its job.

The GAO has found that, in more than 40 percent of the cases in which employers filed H-2A applications at least 60 days before the date of need, the DOL missed statutory deadlines in processing them.

The solution we need is the AgJOBS Act of 1999.

Our new, improved AgJOBS bill includes three main parts:

First, it would create a national AgJOBS registry.

This new program would match willing workers anywhere in the U.S. with available farm work. Workers would be free to work where they want and for whom they want.

Domestic American workers would be given first preference in job referrals. Once no domestic worker is available for a job, an "adjusting" worker could receive a referral. If no domestic or adjusting worker is available, an employer could then use the H-2A program.

This is essentially the same job registry as in last year's bill, expanded to accommodate the new category of adjusting workers.

Second, it includes much-needed reforms to the H-2A program.

Currently, red tape, regulation, and bureaucracy has rendered the H-2A program almost completely ineffective.

Our reformed H-2A program would expedite the process and more closely reflect market reality. Current red tape, delays, and paperwork would be reduced or eliminated. Growers would be assured of the timely availability of workers.

Employers still would be required to provide transportation in out of the U.S., as under the current H-2A program. Employers must provide either a housing allowance or actual housing to H-2A workers. After 3 years, actual housing would be required, unless the governor of a state certified a housing shortage. This is a more stringent housing requirement than last year's bill.

The premium wage guaranteed to H-2A workers—called the Adverse Economic Wage Rate or "AEWR"—would be based more accurately on prevailing wage paid to similar workers in that area. This is similar to current law, but other jobs, those not closely related, would be excluded from the calculation of the AEWR. This simply would ensure that the AEWR more closely reflected prevailing wages for that particular type of work. In the case of low-wage jobs, a premium would be added to the wage. This would still mean H-2A wages higher than virtually all non-H-2A farm worker wages. In other words, current H-2A workers would still have significant wage protection, and virtually all new H-2A workers would get a raise.

Third, the bill creates a one-time-only new Category called "Adjusting" Workers.

Experienced farm workers who are already in the U.S. would be allowed to stay if:

—They have worked at least 150 days in agriculture in the 12 months before the October 27 introduction of this bill;

—They agree to work at least 180 days a year, only in agriculture, for at least 5 of the next 7 years; during this 5-7 year adjustment period, they would be in a temporary, non-immigrant status;

—They return to their home country at least 2 months a year (during the 5-7 year adjustment period). Those with U.S.-born children—i.e., children who were already U.S. citizens—could stay year-round, but must agree to work in agriculture 240 days/year.

"Adjusting" workers would be earning the right to keep their jobs or move to other agricultural jobs. Eventually, they could earn the right to a so-called "green card"—in other words, permanent residency.

For one moment, I want to mention, and then dispose of, the "A-Word":

This bill is not about amnesty, for several reasons. I have always been opposed to amnesty for illegal immigrants. If this were an amnesty bill, I'd be against it.

This bill is about workers who are already here, for employers who need them and value their services, earning a right to stay.

Amnesty is a gift; this bill is about earning a right. Amnesty means one is home free; this bill is about stabilizing the agricultural work force and conditions residency on a 5-7 year agreement to continue in farm work.

The level of documentation required to prove a worker already has been working in the U.S. is much stricter than for any past amnesty law.

In closing, Mr. President, this is win-win legislation.

It will elevate and protect the rights, working conditions, and safety of workers. It will help workers—first domestic American workers, then other workers already here, then foreign guest workers—find the jobs they want and need.

It will assure growers of a stable, legal supply of workers, within a program that recognizes market realities. The adjusted-worker provisions also will give growers one-time assistance in adjusting to the new labor market realities of the 21st Century.

It will assure all Americans of a safe, consistent, affordable food supply.

The nation needs the Smith-Graham-Craig-Cleland AgJOBS bill. I invite the rest of my colleagues to join us as cosponsors; and I urge the Senate and the House to act promptly to enact this legislation into law.

THE HUNGER RELIEF ACT OF 1999

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, yesterday Senators SPECTER, LEAHY, JEFFORDS, and I introduced The Hunger Relief Act of 1999, S. 1805. Our goals in this legislation are to promote self-sufficiency and the transition from welfare to work, and to eradicate childhood hunger by increasing the availability of food stamps to low-income working families. Republicans and Democrats share these goals, and it deserves broad bipartisan support.

I ask unanimous consent that the full text of the bill and the statement of organizations supporting the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the materials were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

STATEMENT OF ORGANIZATIONS SUPPORTING THE HUNGER RELIEF ACT OF 1999

Our broad coalition of anti-hunger, immigrant, religious, labor, children's, elderly, and allied groups urges passage of the Kennedy-Specter Hunger Relief Act of 1999. This crucial legislation would help to address a serious problem plaguing millions of children and adults—widespread hunger and food insecurity.

The bill would target Food Stamp Program improvements to ensure more adequate nutrition assistance for at-risk groups, especially needy legal immigrants and low-income households with children, including working families and families with children with high shelter costs. It also would provide greater resources through The Emergency Food Assistance Program (TEFAP) for those families, children, and elderly turning to food pantries and other emergency feeding sites.

Recent studies confirm that, despite a strong overall economy, hunger and food insecurity are prevalent in communities across the country. While participation in the Food Stamp Program declined by more than seven million persons over the past three years, many working parents still struggle to feed their families. A July 1999 GAO study concludes, "children's participation in the Food Stamp Program has dropped more sharply than the number of children living in poverty, indicating a growing gap between need and assistance." USDA has determined that 6.1 million adults and 3.3 million children lived in households which experienced hunger during 1998, and hunger rates are highest in households with children led by single women and minorities. An Urban Institute study of former welfare recipients finds that 33% have to skip or cut meals due to lack of food.

The toll hunger takes on individuals, families, and communities is serious. Children who lack adequate daily nutrition score lower on tests, miss school more often, have more disciplinary difficulties, and face increased health risks. Hunger diminishes adults' health and ability to concentrate as well. And hunger diminishes all of us as a society when we allow hunger in the midst of such affluence. Hunger has a cure and our nation must take steps to implement that cure.

This legislation takes several important steps in alleviating hunger. First, it builds on the bipartisan down payment the 1998 Agricultural Research Act made in restorations of benefits for needy legal immigrants. The Hunger Relief Act restores food stamp eligibility to all otherwise eligible legal immigrants. Among these are taxpayers working in low-income jobs, parents of young children, and elderly persons.

Second, the bill updates food stamp rules. Most low-income parents need a car to get to work, but families who own a vehicle worth more than $4,650 may be disqualified from receiving food stamps. This limit has risen only $150 since 1977, and is less than the amount that most states deem appropriate for allowing working parents to own a reliable car and still qualify for the Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TANF) Program. The Hunger Relief Act allows states the option of using the same rules to count the value of a vehicle under both TANF and Food Stamp Programs.

Third, the bill helps low-income families with children with high shelter costs. In order to allow food stamp allotments to more accurately reflect actual household need, the Food Stamp Program takes into account a household's shelter expenses when determining the household's food stamp allotment. The program does this by allowing households to deduct shelter costs from their income. Current food stamp rules, however, cap the amount of shelter costs ($275 now, $300 starting in FY 2001) that non-elderly, non-disabled households may deduct, leaving many families with children forced to choose between heating and eating. The Hunger Relief Act raises the food stamp shelter deduction cap to $320 per month over four years and then indexes it to inflation.

Fourth, the Hunger Relief Act bolsters TEFAP, which since 1983 has leveraged private and volunteer resources in communities across the country to meet short-term nutrition needs of families in crisis and provided an outlet for excess government-owned commodities. As many as one in ten Americans a year turn to the emergency feeding network. Last December the U.S. Conference of Mayors reported that requests for emergency food assistance had increased by an average of 14%, with 78% of the cities registering increases. According to a report released by America's Second Harvest in 1998, 39% of those who sought emergency food were employed, with half of those employed full-time. The private charitable sector cannot meet present needs alone. The Hunger Relief Act authorizes additional appropriations of $100 million over five years for commodity purchases and food distribution costs, approximately 10% more than present spending.

The Hunger Relief Act would make important progress in addressing hunger in America. Please add your voice to those leaders supporting the initiative.

RACISM AGAINST AMERICAN INDIANS

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. President, I am compelled to raise a recent, shocking example of racism in South Dakota.

An Indian woman residing on the Rosebud Sioux Reservation in South Dakota came across an "advertisement" in the local newspaper that bore the heading "State of South Dakota, Game Fish and Parks Department". She sent me a copy of the ad along with her letter.

The "ad," which resembles a run-of-the-mill hunting and fishing season announcement, was located in the editorial section of the newspaper. The "ad" went on to outline the rules for "Indian Hunting Season" in the State of South Dakota, including a limit on the number of Indians a "hunter" was allowed to kill and the approved methods for killing them.

I cannot express to you the anger and deep disappointment I felt when I read this ad because for those who think anti-Indian sentiment and feelings is a "relic of the past," I urge them to read this product of a twisted and hateful mind.

At the turn of the millennium in the greatest nation on Earth, there are pockets of hate that continue to thrive. After my tenure in Congress, I know full well the limits of government. I know we can pass no law forcing people to respect each other or forcing them to be tolerant. But this ad goes beyond mere hurtful words and actually advocates murder, and I condemn it in the strongest possible terms.

As chairman of the Committee on Indian Affairs, an enrolled member of the Northern Cheyenne Tribe of Montana, and as an American, I am embarrassed and outraged at the same time. This is shameful.

Indian children are most affected by this kind of bile. They hear these hate-filled expressions in school, in public places like shopping malls and grocery stores, and they start to believe they are worthless, and they eventually stop trying to become or achieve anything. Many commit suicide. This is ongoing.

In a few days, the Nation will honor the contributions of generations of Native Americans by dedicating the month of November, 1999, as "American Indian Heritage Month".

Native people have fought and died for this country in every war from the Revolutionary War to WWII to Vietnam to the ongoing missions around the world.

Yet, as this ad shows, Indians are still targeted by these expressions of hate.

I condemn this and every instance of discrimination and hatred against any American—red, black, white or yellow—and call on my colleagues to do the same.

I ask unanimous consent to have a copy of the newspaper ad printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Sicangu Sun Times, Oct. 15, 1999]

CAUTION: RACIST MATERIAL

State of South Dakota

Game, Fish and Parks Department, Pierre, SD, (605) 224-0000

PROCLAMATION

RE: Indian Hunting Season hunting fees: Free to first 7,683 hunters/$1.00 thereon.

Dear South Dakota Hunters: The 1999 Big Game hunting season in the State of South Dakota has been canceled due to shortages of Deer, Turkey, Elk and Antelope. However, this does not mean there will be no hunting. In the place of the big game animals this year we will have open season on the Sioux Reservations. This will entail the hunting of Americans Worthless Siouanis Pyutus, commonly known as "Worthless Red Bastards," "Dog Eaters," "Gut Eaters," "Prairie Niggers" and "F--- Indians." This year from 1999-2000 will be an open season, as the f--- Indians must be thinned out every two to three years.

It will be unlawful to: Hunt in a party of more than 150 persons. Use more than 35 bloodthirsty, rabid hunting dogs. Shoot in a public tavern (Bullet may ricochet and hit civilized white people). Shoot an Indian sleeping on the sidewalk.

Trapping regulations: Traps may not be set within 15 feet of a liquor store. Traps may not be baited with Muscatel, Lysol, rubbing alcohol or food stamps. All traps must have at least 120 lb. spring strength and have a jaw spread of at least 5 3/4".

Other rules and regulations: Shooting length-wise in a welfare line is prohibited. It will be unlawful to possess a road-kill Indian, however, special road-kill permits shall be issued to people with semi-tractor trailers and one-ton pickup trucks. With such a permit you may bait the highway with Muscatel, Lysol, rubbing alcohol or food stamps.

How to know when an Indian is in your area: Disposable diapers litter the street. Large lines in front of the welfare office and for free cheese. Trails of empty wine bottles leading from the city parks to all city alleys. Empty books of food stamps thrown all over. Car-loads of Indian children waiting outside liquor stores.

Remember Limit is ten (10) per day. Possession of limit: Forty (40). Good Hunting!

Editor's Note: The flyer above is similar to one found in other states. In the last couple of years, they began cropping up in South Dakota and Nebraska. Varying versions can also be found on the Internet. Such sentiments have helped fuel tension between Indians and whites in the last year, say Indian leaders. State government officials have denied that the flyers originated in any of their departments.

DRUG COURT REAUTHORIZATION AND IMPROVEMENT ACT OF 1999

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, Congress created drug courts 5 years ago in the 1994 crime law as a cost-effective, innovative way to deal with nonviolent offenders in need of drug treatment.

Though authorization for this program was repealed just two years later, we wisely continued to fund this program. I am pleased to join with Senator SPECTER today to cosponsor the "Drug Court Reauthorization and Improvement Act of 1999."

In just 5 years, drug courts have taken off. There are 412 drug courts currently operating in all 50 States plus the District of Columbia, Guam, Puerto Rico, and two Federal districts. An additional 280 courts are being planned.

Let me tell you why I am such an advocate for these courts. Drug courts are as much about fighting crime as they are about reducing dependence on illegal drugs.

Our Nation has about 3.2 million offenders on probation today. They stay on probation for about 2 years. Throughout those 2 years, they are subject to little, if any, supervision.

For example, almost 300,000 of these probationers had absolutely no contact with their probation officer in the past month—not in person, not over the phone, not even through the mail—none!

Drug Courts fill this "supervision gap" with regular drug testing, with the offender actually coming before a judge twice a week, and actually seeing a probation officer or treatment professional three times a week.

Nearly 100,000 people have entered drug court programs and the results have been impressive. About 70 percent of the drug court program participants have either stayed in the program or completed it successfully. That is more than twice the retention rate of most traditional treatment programs.

The other 30 percent of the participants went to jail. And I think that should be heralded as a success of the drug court program as well. Without drug courts, this 30 percent would have been unsupervised, not monitored, and unless they happened to be unlucky enough to use drugs or commit a crime near a police officer, they would still be on the streets abusing drugs and committing crimes. Drug courts provide the oversight to make sure that does not happen.

The Specter-Biden reauthorization bill calls for fully funding drug courts at the level the Attorney General and I called for in the 1994 crime law—$200 million. Drug courts are effective and cost effective. Let's spend our money wisely and invest in what works.

There are a number of jurisdictions that want to open or expand their drug courts but are unable to do so because of lack of treatment capacity. We always talk about devolving power to State and local government. Let's put our money where our mouth is and give these jurisdictions the funds they need. The Specter-Biden reauthorization act includes $75 million a year to expand local treatment capacity so that no community that wants to start or expand a drug court is precluded from doing so due to lack of treatment slots.

Make no mistake, participating in the drug court program is not a walk in the park. If you use drugs while in the program, you go to jail. Period.

Rather than just churning people through the revolving door of the criminal justice system, drug courts help these folks to get their acts together so they won't be back. When they graduate from drug court programs they are clean and sober and more prepared to participate in society. In order to graduate, they are required to finish high school or obtain a GED, hold down a job, and keep up with financial obligations including drug court fees and child support payments. They are also required to have a sponsor who will keep them on track.

This program works. And that is not just my opinion. Columbia University's National Center on Addiction and Substance Abuse found that these courts are effective at taking offenders with little previous treatment history and keeping them in treatment; that they provide closer supervision than other community programs to which the offenders could be assigned; that they reduce crime; and that they are cost-effective.

According to the Department of Justice, drug courts save at least $5,000 per offender each year in prison costs alone. That says nothing of the cost savings associated with future crime prevention. Just as important, scarce prison beds are freed up for violent criminals.

I have saved what may be the most important statistic for last. Two-thirds of drug court participants are parents of young children. After getting sober through the coerced treatment mandated by the court, many of these individuals are able to be real parents again. More than 500 drug-free babies have been born to female drug court participants, a sizable victory for society and the budget alike.

Let me close by saying I hope the Senate takes up this legislation as soon as possible so we can reauthorize this important, effective program.

PAYNE STEWART TRIBUTE

Mr. ASHCROFT. Mr. President, Monday was a tragic day for golf fans across the country, and especially for folks in my home town of Springfield, MO—the town where pro golfer Payne Stewart was born and raised. Today, we mourn the loss of Payne, who lost his life Monday in a plane crash. I rise to express my sympathy to Payne's family and loved ones, and to the families of the other individuals who lost their lives Monday: Robert Fraley, Van Ardan, Michael King, and Stephanie Bellegarrigue.

I would also like to take a moment to remember Payne Stewart, a man whose personality, talents, and faith are an inspiration to us.

From his early years, Payne distinguished himself as not only a golfer, but as an all-around athlete. One of my staff members from Springfield remembers tagging along as a six year-old little sister with her father, her brother, Payne, and his father on a road trip to Kansas City, where the boys competed in the state's annual Pass, Punt, and Kick contest. She also recalls the countless hours her brother was gone during the summers, playing golf—often times with Payne.

In high school, Payne excelled as an athlete in football, basketball, and of course, golf, at Greenwood High School, where he graduated in 1975. Payne then attended Southern Methodist University, where he won the Southwestern Conference Golf Championship and was named an All-American.

Payne turned professional in 1981 and embarked upon what would be a highly successful career.

Payne's flare for style and individualism soon made him one of the most recognizable golfers on the PGA tour, with his now-trademark knickers, long colorful socks, and coordinating hat.

But Payne's attire on the golf course was not the only thing that distinguished him among his colleagues. Overall, Payne won 11 PGA Tour titles, including three major championships: the PGA in 1989, the U.S. Open in 1991, and the U.S. Open again in June of this year. He was on five Ryder Cup teams and won three consecutive Skins Games. He was inducted into the Missouri Sports Hall of Fame earlier this year.

In what is now known as his final U.S. Open appearance, Stewart finished his last U.S. Open round by sinking the longest winning putt ever to win the most heralded American tournament. While Stewart always will be remembered for this clutch putt to win the 1999 U.S. Open, what he did one month later during the Ryder Cup competition speaks to his character. After a miraculous final day comeback by the American team, Stewart's opponent, Colin Montgomerie, faced a ten foot putt to win the individual match on the final hole. Although the American team already had assured itself a victory, a tie with Europe's top player would have been a tremendous individual feat for Stewart. Instead of making Montgomerie attempt the putt, Stewart told his opponent to "pick it up," conceding the putt and ensuring his own defeat. Stewart's justification for his action was that Montgomerie had been heckled all day by the American fans and he did not want to put his opponent through that if he missed.

Payne Stewart, who became a world-famous golfer, continued to be a hometown boy from the Ozarks after his success. Although Orlando had become his official home, Payne still liked to come back home to Springfield to spend time with family and friends. Those close to him say that when he came home, Payne didn't act like a celebrity, but rather more like "everyday people."

There are many words that have been used to describe Payne Stewart. Fun-loving and generous. Highly competitive. Yet Payne was also very much of a family man.

Payne was always close to his father, Bill. The father and son tandem shared the unique distinction of winning dual amateur championships, the Missouri Amateur and the Missouri Senior Amateur in 1979. After his father had died of cancer in 1985, Payne donated his entire $108,000 in winnings from the 1987 Bay Hill Classic to a Florida hospital. Mr. President, I, too, had a father who had a major impact on my life, and I was touched by the reflections I heard Payne share about his father.

Payne was also recently described by the Springfield News-Leader as the "consummate family man who was as thrilled with picking up daughter Chelsea [13] and son Aaron [10] from school, or shuttling them back and forth to ball games, activities, etc., as he was picking up a first-place check." Friends say that Payne believed that family time with his children and his wife Tracey was the most important thing in his life, even if it meant canceling a tournament appearance.

In the last year or so, Payne Stewart characterized himself as an increasingly religious man. He said that watching his children grow up further strengthened his faith. Payne also attributed his success to his faith. In fact, he publicly credited this faith with giving him the strength to sink the winning 15-foot putt at this year's U.S. Open this June. A close friend, reflecting Monday on Payne's death, said, "Later on, coming to know the Lord, he was attributing his success, his talents and his blessing—he attributed it all and gave glory to Jesus Christ."

Mr. President, while it is painful to see someone in the prime of his career have his life cut short by tragedy, it is also encouraging to remember someone whose life has inspired us—through both his talents as a golf champion and through his commitment to faith and family. Today we remember Payne Stewart—a local hero from the Ozarks—a champion and a competitor, and we convey our thoughts and prayers to his family and loved ones during this time of grief. I also want to express condolences to the families and friends of those who perished with Payne, Robert Fraley, Van Ardan, Michael King, and Stephanie Bellegarrigue.

NEW YORK YANKEES WINNING THE WORLD SERIES

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, I rise today to honor the New York Yankees on the occasion of their victory in Major League Baseball's World Series last night. In front of 56,752 fans, the Yankees defeated the Atlanta Braves 4-1 and clinched a series sweep in this best of seven series. Fittingly, "The Team of the Millennium" has staked its claim as the best franchise in the 1990's.

As the season began, few seers in the sports world could have foretold the indelible mark this team would leave behind. The adversity these young men faced would have folded a team of lesser character. Their stalwart manager Joe Torre began the year in a hospital room rather than in the dugout as he battled prostate cancer. Teammates Paul O'Neill, Luis Sojo, and Scott Brosius all lost their fathers during the past season. In addition, the Yankee family was struck by the passing of baseball legends, Joe DiMaggio and Jim "Catfish" Hunter. Yet this team endured and reached its goal, giving New York an unfathomable 25th World Championship.

For the past two seasons—and three of the last four—we have seen the Yankees go to the World Series. They emerged victorious after the minimum of four straight wins on both occasions. Starting pitchers David Cone, Orlando Hernandez, and Roger Clemens held the Braves to a meager six hits and two runs in 21½ innings. Reliever Mariano Rivera had saves in Games One and Two and won Game Three on his way to becoming the Series Most Valuable Player. Offensively, the team had Derek Jeter and Chuck Knoblauch getting on base, and Chad Curtis came off the bench to hit two home runs in Game Three, with the second coming in the bottom of the 10th, sealing the victory for the Bronx Bombers.

All in all, this team put forth admirable effort coupled with unmatched talent. This victory is a truly epochal moment that brings joy to the hearts of Yankee fans everywhere. An editorial appearing in today's New York Times puts it best, "We are all fans now." In closing I would like to offer a possible slogan for next year's team: Thrice would be nice.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the editorial be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the New York Times, Oct. 29, 1999]

THE YANKEES WIN

Maturity in sports has many looks, but right now it looks like the New York Yankees, who won their 25th World Series last night against the Atlanta Braves. Clearly, the Yankees were able to dominate the Braves, whom they swept, but just as clearly they were able to dominate themselves and their own fortunes. Patience is a word that has been much used around the Yankees dugout this season, and what it means is a privileged manner of looking at baseball. What this team seems to see is not a game where one event cascades into another as the innings slip by, the past steadily commanding the present. To this team baseball looks like a game of constant renewal, with each pitch, each batter, each defensive out.

Baseball is, if anything, too rich in the grand themes, especially during a World Series. You expect television to turn grandeur into grandiosity, and it does. But a kind of triumphalism thrives at Yankee Stadium too, where the World Series pregame soundtrack included the theme from "Star Wars" and the "1812 Overture." But that mood is meant for the fans, not the players. There is a difference between destiny and opportunity, and the 1999 Yankees know it. They will take opportunity every time, and in this Series, take it they have.

It is easy, in the high-wattage glare of a Series game, to lose sight of the fact that baseball, even at Yankee Stadium, can still have a pleasantly smalltown feel to it. Kofi Annan, mayor of the world if not the city, throws out the first pitch in New York, which bounces halfway to the plate. Marching bands from South Jersey assemble on the warning track—the outfield grass remaining inviolate—and play "Gimme Some Lovin'" and "Louie, Louie." The notes of all the instruments, except the base drums, gust away into the evening, just as they would at a local homecoming game. Hand-lettered signs rise in the stands—"Dripping Springs, Texas, Loves the Yankees"—and the stadium sparkles with camera flashes going off, snapshots of a vortex where a batter steps up to the plate.

The fans roar with emphatic, if imprecise, knowledge. They call balls and strikes from a mile away. The air is barbed with advice, with schoolyard taunts, and then with the exultation of the moment. The emotion so latent in the players, so overt in the fans, gives way at the final out, and at last, in the rejoicing, there is no distinction between players and fans. We are all fans now.

PRESIDENT'S VETO OF THE FOREIGN OPERATIONS APPROPRIATIONS BILL

Mr. ASHCROFT. Mr. President, a lack of leadership from the administration is responsible for the present difficulty in reaching an agreement on the foreign operations appropriations bill. The President says he vetoed the bill over low levels of foreign assistance in general and a lack of funding for the Wye Accord specifically. The Administration did not exert the leadership needed to secure the Wye funding, however, and did not work with Congress to find a way to provide this critical assistance to Israel, Jordan, and the Palestinians without raiding the Social Security surplus. I am a strong supporter of funding the Wye Accord if the money can be found without using Social Security surplus funds. The President should make Wye funding the priority it should be and find the money somewhere in the budget.

The lack of leadership from the administration in providing for our allies and interests in the Middle East already has had real costs, however. The President's veto of the foreign operation appropriations bill on October 18, 1999 sends a disturbing signal that our foreign policy is being held hostage to the domestic budget politics of the administration. While the President's veto was the wrong step for U.S. foreign policy around the world, the administration's rejection of the bill is particularly troubling for U.S. policy in the Middle East and strategic allies such as Israel.

The foreign operations bill passed by Congress contains $960 million in economic assistance and $1.9 billion in military assistance for Israel. The foreign operations bill also contains over $2 billion in assistance to Egypt and $225 million in aid to Jordan, both important countries in the peace process. The provision of such assistance to Israel is critically important at this juncture of the peace process, and it troubles me that the administration did not lay the groundwork for an acceptable foreign assistance package. The government of Prime Minister Ehud Barak has stated its intention to complete final status negotiations within one year. Many difficult issues must be resolved for a final settlement to be reached. Jerusalem, refugees, and water rights are just several of the monumental issues that will be topic of negotiations between Israel and the Palestinians.

It is my hope that the administration will support Israel more forcefully during these negotiations, including a clear statement of U.S. policy that Jerusalem is and should remain Israel's undivided capital. As final status negotiations proceed, the United States should defend Israel against diplomatic ambushes in international fora such as the United Nations. An unequivocal U.S. position in support of Israel in the coming months will be essential to achieve a sustainable peace settlement.

Also at stake is a potential peace settlement with Syria. I trust that Prime Minister Barak will not make territorial concessions in the Golan Heights that will jeopardize Israel's security. As a former military chief of staff, Prime Minister Barak is well aware of the security implications associated with relinquishing territory in the Golan. Any Israeli withdrawal from the Golan Heights should be met with the most reliable assurances from Syria that its hostility toward Israel and support for terrorism will cease. For the peace to be sustainable, however, and Israel-Syrian settlement will have to be based on more than words. Israel will have to be able to defend itself, and continued provision of annual U.S. military assistance is an integral part of that process.

With all that is at stake right now in the peace process, it is difficult for me to understand why the administration has not worked closely with Congress to ensure that vital assistance is provided to Israel in a timely fashion. Mr. President, it is my hope that the administration will demonstrate better leadership in supporting Israel as the peace process enters this critical year.

HIGH SPEED RAIL INVESTMENT ACT

Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, let me begin by congratulating Senator LAUTENBERG for developing this important piece of legislation that recognizes the importance of rail in our overall transportation system as we approach the 21st century.

I am proud to be an original cosponsor of the High Speed Rail Investment Act, which will provide Amtrak with much needed resources to pay for high speed rail corridors across the country. This legislation is crucial for the country, and for my home State of Massachusetts, and I am hopeful we can move it quickly through Congress.

This bill will give Amtrak the authority to sell $10 billion in bonds over the next 10 years to finance high speed rail. Instead of interest payments, the Federal Government would provide tax credits to bondholders. Amtrak would repay the principal on the bonds after 10 years, however, the payments would come primarily from required state matching funds. I know many states will gladly participate in this matching program, as their Governors and State legislatures are eager to promote high speed rail. Amtrak would be authorized to invest this money solely for upgrading existing lines to high speed rail, constructing new high speed rail lines, purchasing high speed rail equipment, eliminating or improving grade crossings, and for capital upgrades to existing high speed rail corridors.

Let there be no mistake, this country needs to develop a comprehensive national transportation policy for the 21st century. So far, Congress has failed to address this vital issue. What we have is an ad hoc, disjointed policy that focuses on roads and air to the detriment of rail. We need to look at all of these modes of transportation to alleviate congestion and delays on the ground and in the sky and to move people across this country efficiently. Failing to do this will hamper economic growth and harm the environment.

Despite rail's proven safety, efficiency and reliability in Europe and Japan, and also in the Northeast corridor here in the United States, passenger rail is severely underfunded. We need to include rail into the transportation mix. We need more transportation choices and this bill helps to provide them.

In the Northeast corridor, Amtrak is well on its way to implementing high speed rail service. The high speed Acela service should start running in January. This will be extremely helpful in my home State of Massachusetts, where airport and highway congestion often reach frustrating levels. The more miles that are traveled on Amtrak, the fewer trips taken on crowded highways and skyways.

But new service in the Northeast corridor is only the beginning. We need to establish rail as a primary mode of transportation along with air and highways. This bill will help us achieve that goal across the country and I am proud to be an original cosponsor of such an important piece of legislation.

NATIONAL CHILDHOOD LEAD POISONING PREVENTION WEEK

Mr. TORRICELLI. Mr. President, I rise today in observance of "National Childhood Lead Poisoning Prevention Week" to highlight the problem of childhood lead poisoning and the deficiencies within the current system of detection and prevention.

Lead poisoning is the number one environmental health hazard to our children, despite a ban on the manufacture of lead paint and efforts to remove lead from gasoline and dietary sources. It is estimated that 800,000 children today suffer from elevated lead levels. Lead poisoning attacks a child's nervous system, impairing physical, mental, and behavioral development. Extreme exposure can cause seizures, brain damage, comas, and even death. And, inadequate diet and exposure to environmental hazards such as old housing make the threat greatest for those who possess the fewest resources to confront it—our nation's poor children.

This is why in 1992 Congress required states to test every Medicaid recipient under age two for lead poisoning. Mandatory screening would enable the highest-risk children to be tested and treated before lead poisoning impairs their development. However, many Medicaid providers are not conducting the required screening. A recent GAO study found that two-thirds of the children on Medicaid have never been screened for lead. In New Jersey, only 39% of children covered by Medicaid are tested.

A report issued this past summer from the Alliance to End Childhood Lead Poisoning and the National Center for Lead-Safe Housing provides new information regarding the extent of this problem. This report, a state-by-state analysis of follow-up care provided to lead-poisoned children, found that only 29 states have standards for how to care for lead-poisoned children. The report also found that only 35 states have developed specific strategies for investigating lead hazards in poisoned children's homes. And, 22 states reported that they lack the necessary funding to make a home safe for a lead-poisoned child.

This report presents compelling evidence in support of legislation, S.1120, the Children's Lead SAFE Act of 1999, introduced by Senator REED and myself to strengthen lead screening policy. This legislation would ensure that every federal program which serves at risk kids is involved in the lead screening process. Our bill would require WIC and Head Start centers to determine if a child has been tested and ensure testing for those children who have not. As 75% of at-risk children are enrolled in federal health care programs, this would ensure that no child is overlooked.

Secondly, the Children's Lead SAFE Act of 1999 would guarantee that Medicaid contracts explicitly require health care providers to adhere to federal rules for screening and treatment. Currently, many states are having Medicaid services provided by health maintenance organizations (HMO's). These HMO's, however, either are not conducting the required lead screening tests or are only conducting one of two required tests. This legislation would effectively stop this corner cutting. Our bill would also ensure that states and federal agencies have the resources and incentives to complete mandatory screening by requiring Medicaid to reimburse WIC and Head Start for screening costs. We must create a bonus program that rewards states who screen more than 65% of their Medicaid population.

But additional testing is only a first step. Our legislation would also focus on prevention by reducing the sources of poisoning and provide for follow-up care for those children identified as at-risk. This includes expanding Medicaid coverage to include treatment for lead poisoning and for environmental investigations to determine its sources.

I am extremely pleased to tell my colleagues that in response to the efforts of the Senator from Rhode Island and myself, the Department of Health and Human Services has initiated some important steps to address the problem. Their efforts include ensuring that state Medicaid agencies comply with existing Medicaid policies requiring lead screening and requiring states to report the number of children under age six screened for lead poisoning. These measures will help us to better understand the problem and how to respond to it.

However, enhancing screening and identifying children exposed to lead is only the first step. Identification must be followed with treatment and abatement, including controlling the source of lead poisoning. For example, my own state of New Jersey has made great efforts in the area of abatement. Specifically, New Jersey requires the renovation and maintenance of older housing as well as mandating landlords to periodically test for lead. New Jersey has also initiated statewide programs to educate families on how to find and eliminate lead sources from their homes.

Similarly, on the federal level, the Department of Housing and Urban Development provides grants to states and local governments to reduce lead hazards in housing. Yet, for every application, there are nine that go unfunded. This year, the House tried to cut funding for this program by $10 million. Although conferees ultimately restored funding equal to the President's request, this attempt demonstrates the need to provide greater awareness of the need for lead prevention efforts.

As the Alliance report suggests, there is more every state must do and there is clearly more the federal government can do to protect lead-poisoned children. I encourage my colleagues to examine the Alliance report and learn about what can be done in your states to improve lead poisoning treatment and prevention efforts. Finally, I would encourage Senator ROTH and Senator JEFFORDS to begin hearings not only on our legislation but also on this issue. In 1992, Congress made a commitment to improving our children's health by reducing the prevalence of childhood lead poisoning and improving treatment. I urge my colleagues to join Senator REED and myself in fulfilling this commitment.

MESSAGES FROM THE HOUSE

At 1:48 p.m., a message from the House of Representatives, delivered by Ms. Niland, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House has passed the following bill and joint resolution, in which it requests the concurrence of the Senate:

H.R. 2260. An act to amend the Controlled Substances Act to promote pain management and palliative care without permitting assisted suicide and euthanasia, and for other purposes.

H.J.Res. 73. Joint resolution making further continuing appropriations for the fiscal year 2000, and for other purposes.

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED

The message also announced that the Speaker has signed the following bills:

STATEMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Mr. HAGEL (for himself, Mr. ABRAHAM, Mr. DEWINE, Mr. GORTON, Mr. KERREY, Ms. LANDRIEU, and Mr. THOMAS):

S. 1816. A bill to amend the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971 to provide meaningful campaign finance reform through requiring better reporting, decreasing the role of soft money, and increasing individual contribution limits, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Rules and Administration.

THE OPEN AND ACCOUNTABLE CAMPAIGN FINANCING ACT OF 2000

• Mr. HAGEL. Mr. President, today I join several of my colleagues in introducing the "Open and Accountable Campaign Financing Act of 2000." This bill increases disclosure requirements on campaign contributions and political broadcast advertisements. It also caps "soft money" contributions to political party committees at $60,000 and adjusts individual contribution limits for inflation. I am pleased that the following Senators have joined me today in offering this bill: SPENCER ABRAHAM (R-MI), MIKE DEWINE (R-OH), SLADE GORTON (R-WA), BOB KERREY (D-NE), MARY LANDRIEU (D-LA) and CRAIG THOMAS (R-WY).

Changing the way federal campaigns are financed is inevitable, the American people will demand it. At some point, the Senate will have a full and open debate on how best to reform our campaign finance system. I was disappointed that floor procedures prevented us from doing so last week, because several of us had intended to offer amendments to the McCain-Feingold legislation.

My colleagues and I introduce this bill today as a bipartisan alternative in what has been a very polarized debate. If we are ever to move forward on this issue, we will need to look at a variety of ways to reform the campaign finance system. This bill is a combination of ideas offered by myself and a number of my colleagues. Several specific provisions in this bill have widespread support by both Republicans and Democrats, and, I believe, can form a base from which consensus can build.

Confidence in our political system is the essence of representative government. This begins with an open and accountable campaign financing system. We need to rise above partisan, ideological and personal rivalries, and find common ground on campaign finance reform.

There are several elements that must be part of any reform of our campaign finance system. One of the most important is increased disclosure for all who participate in the political process. We should not fear an educated and informed body politic. If individuals and organizations are going to participate in the election process, their participation must be revealed to the public.

To provide for fuller disclosure, this bill increases the financial reporting requirements for candidates and political parties. This legislation also takes the rules on broadcast ads that apply to candidates and extends them to all political broadcast ads. Under current federal regulations, when a candidate buys a political ad, the broadcaster is required to place information on the ad in a file that is open to the public. This includes a record of the times the spots are scheduled to air, the overall amount of time purchased and at what rates, and the names of the officers of the organization placing the ad. Under current federal regulations, when an interest group places a political ad with a broadcaster, it does not have to meet all of these requirements. This bill requires that interest-group ads related to any federal candidate or issue go into the broadcaster's public file. There would be no added burden on the broadcaster. The broadcaster would simply use the same form already used for candidate and party ads. Let me make clear one thing the bill does not do. It does not require organizations to identify individual donors or provide membership lists. It preserves a reasonable balance between the public's right to know which groups are attempting to influence an election, and the privacy rights of individual donors.

In addition to disclosure, we need to look at soft money contributions to national party committees. Most constitutional experts say that an outright ban on soft money would be unconstitutional. But this unaccountable, unlimited flood of soft money cascading over America's politics must be stopped. We need to find a middle ground between the extremes of banning soft money and leaving it unrestricted. This bill limits soft money contributions to national party committees to $60,000. This is not a ban on financial support of parties. It is a return to the original intent of the campaign finance reforms of the 1970s, which worked well until they were exploited and abused.

We also need to increase the ability of individuals to participate in the most accountable method of campaign financing. This bill adjusts and indexes contributions to inflation and indexes them for further years. For an individual, contribution limits would increase from $1,000 to $3,000 per candidate, per election. I've heard the argument that raising these limits would give the wealthy too much influence and access. If we cap or eliminate soft money and do not adjust the hard-money limits, we will chase more money into the black hole of third-party ads, where the public cannot view the flow of money. I want to bring more of that money into the sunlight where the American people have access to who is giving money and how much.

We have a great opportunity to restore some of the confidence the American people have lost in their political system. Improving our system that selects America's leaders—who formulate and implement the policies that govern our Nation—is a worthy challenge.●

● Mr. KERREY. Mr. President, today I would like to express my support for "The Open and Accountable Campaign Financing Act of 1999," which would provide this country with much needed campaign finance reform. Our Constitution lays out the requirements for someone running for office. In order to run for the Senate, the Constitution tells us that there are three requirements: you must be at least 30 years old; you must have been a U.S. citizen for nine years; and you must be a resident of the state you wish to represent.

What the Constitution doesn't tell you about is a fourth requirement: you must have an awful lot of money, or at least know how to raise it. The Constitution doesn't tell you this because when the framers drafted the Constitution, they could not have imagined the ridiculously large amounts of time and money one must spend today if he or she wants to be elected to office.

We need to change the law to give power back to working families, restore their faith in the process, and make democracy work. That's why I have been an avid supporter of the McCain-Feingold bill and the Shays-Meehan bill that recently passed the House, and that's why I am now a co-sponsor of Senator HAGEL's bill.

Earlier this month, the Senate debated the McCain-Feingold bill. This year's version was a stripped down version of the McCain-Feingold bills we've debated, and I have supported, in years past. Although I prefer the more comprehensive House passed Shays-Meehan bill, I understood Senators MCCAIN and FEINGOLD's decision to purposefully strip down their bill. They knew the realities of the vote count in the Senate. We didn't have the votes to pass anything more comprehensive, so they introduced a "barebones" bill which essentially did one simple thing: ban soft money.

Unfortunately, the bill was pulled from the floor after a vote showing McCain-Feingold still didn't have the votes to pass. The good news is we picked up one vote; the bad news is we still haven't passed a campaign finance reform bill. We made progress. That is why it is important to not let this issue die on the back burner. That is why I am joining in Senator HAGEL's effort to keep this issue alive.

Currently, soft money is uncapped and unregulated—corporations, unions and wealthy individuals can contribute unlimited amounts of soft money. Senator HAGEL's bill would cap soft money at $60,000. Although I prefer a complete ban, it is clear the Senate is a few votes short of passing this ban. Senator HAGEL's new approach just might be the compromise that can muster enough votes to pass the Senate. Let me be clear—while I prefer much more comprehensive reform of our campaign financing system—I do believe Senator HAGEL's proposal is a step in the right direction. This bill, with its cap on soft money and tightening of disclosure requirements, would be a good beginning.

The American people are frustrated with the millions of dollars they see poured into campaigns. They are frustrated with out tendency to talk instead of act. I am hopeful this bill can help make that happen. In fact I want to applaud my friend, Senator HAGEL for his efforts, and urge our colleagues to support this bill.●

By Mr. KERRY:

S. 1820. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to exclude national service educational awards from the recipient's gross income; to the Committee on Finance.

AMERICORPS SCHOLARSHIP FAIRNESS ACT

Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce legislation on behalf of thousands dedicated volunteers around the country. The legislation I am offering addresses an inequity in the tax code that adversely affects AmeriCorps volunteers. I urge my colleagues to pass it immediately.

Since 1994, in 4,000 communities across the country, AmeriCorps participants have tutored and mentored more than 4 million children, developed after-school programs for over one million young people, and helped build more than 11,000 homes. Their dedication and commitment are a tribute to the American tradition of public service. Currently, at the conclusion of 1,700 hours of service, AmeriCorps members receive an education award of $4,725. The award may be used by former volunteers to pay for tuition expenses or the repayment of student loans.

Under long-established tax law, scholarships and grants are excludable from income. However, because the AmeriCorps awards are considered to represent payment for services rendered, they must be included in taxable income at the end of the year. This tax treatment creates a significant hardship for former volunteers. Because AmeriCorps education awards are sent directly to the loan agency or educational institution, they do not represent income from which a portion may be reserved by the beneficiary for the payment of tax. After serving in AmeriCorps, many former volunteers work part-time to pay for college, and the education award pushes their income above the standard income tax deduction, creating tax liability for an individual with little means to pay for it.

Mr. President, allow me to illustrate. Maleah Thorpe of Sunderland, Massachusetts, is a two-year AmeriCorps participant. Most recently, Maleah served as a volunteer with Massachusetts Campus Compact. The Massachusetts Campus Compact coordinates formal and informal assistance for students, staff, and faculty in the areas of: America Reads and early childhood literacy initiatives, America Counts and math education initiatives, and other Campus and community partnerships. Maleah's service has benefited our community and our country, while at the same time, has provided a rewarding personal experience.

Listen to what Maleah has to say about AmeriCorps:

My experiences with AmeriCorps have been life-changing, introducing me to so many opportunities and a new appreciation of both the diversity and strength of people in our nation. I consider myself fortunate and am thankful that I will have not one, but two educational awards should I need to use them. However, I am at the same time dreading the out-of-pocket expense that will accompany their use * * *. Although I was anxious to use the educational award earned during my first year of service to reduce my undergraduate loan debt, the cost of paying taxes on the amount has prohibited me from doing so.

When I entered AmeriCorps two years ago, I did so for the service. I also anticipated that approximately 75 percent of my undergraduate loan debt would be paid within three years of graduation, something that helped justify the financial cost of living on only the minimal stipend. Instead, I will enter graduate school in the fall, my undergraduate loans will continue to accrue interest and I will likely acquire additional loans to cover some expenses because I can simply not afford to use and pay taxes on my educational awards while I am a student.

I know that I am not alone in this predicament. Many alumni with whom I served are either students or completing additional years of service, solely responsible for educational and living expenses. Many of us do not have additional income to pay taxes on the educational awards nor the ability to ask friends or relatives to assist us.

I have given two years to serve my fellow citizens of the nation and the Commonwealth and would never give up those experiences. However, I should not now be punished for this choice by the burden of additional taxes.

Similar situations arise with other programs. Congress has recognized these inequities and acted to address them. For example, this summer's Taxpayer Refund and Relief Act would have specifically provided that scholarships received through the National Health Service Corps, the Armed Forces Health Professions program, and the National Institutes of Health Undergraduate program are tax exempt. Let's do the same for the thousands of volunteers who, through the AmeriCorps program, give up two years of their lives to make a difference in communities across our nation.

The AmeriCorps Scholarship Fairness Act clarifies that AmeriCorps education awards should receive the same tax treatment as a traditional college scholarship. Under the proposal, amounts received by an individual as part of a national service education award would be eligible for tax-free treatment as a qualified scholarship under section 117 of the tax code, without regard to the fact that the recipient of the scholarship has provided services as a condition for receiving the scholarship. The Joint Tax Committee estimates the cost in lost revenue would be $2 million the first year, $15 million over five years, and $32 million over ten years.

The government should cherish, not punish, volunteerism and public service. I hope my colleagues will join me in enacting this simple but meaningful legislation.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill and three letters from Massachusetts constituents be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 1820

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. EXCLUSION OF NATIONAL SERVICE EDUCATIONAL AWARDS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 117 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (relating to qualified scholarships) is amended by adding at the end the following:

“(e) QUALIFIED NATIONAL SERVICE EDUCATIONAL AWARDS.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—Gross income for any taxable year shall not include any qualified national service educational award.

“(2) QUALIFIED NATIONAL SERVICE EDUCATIONAL AWARD.—For purposes of this subsection—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—The term ‘qualified national service educational award’ means any amount received by an individual in a taxable year as a national service educational award under section 148 of the National and Community Service Act of 1990 (42 U.S.C. 12604) to the extent (except as provided in subparagraph (C)) such amount does not exceed the qualified tuition and related expenses (as defined in subsection (b)(2)) of the individual for such taxable year.

“(B) DETERMINATION OF EXPENSES.—The total amount of the qualified tuition and related expenses (as so defined) which may be taken into account under subparagraph (A) with respect to an individual for the taxable year shall be reduced (after the application of the reduction provided in section 25A(g)(2)) by the amount of such expenses which were taken into account in determining the credit allowed to the taxpayer or any other person under section 25A with respect to such expenses.

“(C) EXCEPTION TO LIMITATION.—The limitation under subparagraph (A) shall not apply to any portion of a national service educational award used by such individual to repay any student loan described in section 148(a)(1) of such Act or to pay any interest expense described in section 148(a)(4) of such Act.”

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by this section shall apply to amounts received in taxable years beginning after December 31, 1999.

AMERICORPS,

Sunderland, MA, July 20, 1999.

Senator JOHN KERRY,
Russell Senate Office Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR KERRY, My name is Maleah Thorpe. I am a two year alumna of AmeriCorps, serving with City Year Rhode Island (1997–98) and most recently as a VISTA with Massachusetts Campus Compact (1998–99) working at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst.

My experiences with AmeriCorps have been life-changing, introducing me to so many opportunities and a new appreciation of both the diversity and strength of people in our nation. These past two years have left an immeasurable impact on my life, changed my perspective on many things, and even altered my future plans; in September I will begin graduate studies at UMass Amherst.

I consider myself fortunate and am thankful that I will have not one, but two, Educational Awards should I need to use them. However, I am at the same time dreading the out-of-pocket expense that will accompany their use. I had a small preview of what is to come last December when I used my Interest Payment option from my first year of AmeriCorps service. For choosing to use this “benefit” of $543, I was required to pay an unexpected $120 in state and (mostly) federal taxes. While this may seem like a small sum, I assure you that it is not to someone living on a VISTA stipend where every penny is accounted for to cover basic living expenses.

Although I was anxious to use the Educational Award earned during my first year of service to reduce my undergraduate loan debt, the cost of paying taxes on the amount has prohibited me from doing so.

When I entered AmeriCorps two years ago, I did so for the service. I also anticipated that approximately 75% of my undergraduate loan debt would be paid within three years of graduation, something that helped justify the financial cost of living on only the minimal stipend. Instead, I will enter graduate school in the fall, my undergraduate loans will continue to accrue interest and I will likely acquire additional loans to cover some expenses because I can simply not afford to use and pay taxes on my Educational Awards while I am a student.

I know that I am not alone in this predicament. Many alumni with whom I served are either students or completing additional years of service, solely responsible for educational and living expenses. Many of us do not have additional income to pay taxes on the Educational Awards nor the ability to ask friends or relatives to assist us.

I have given two years to serve my fellow citizens of the nation and the Commonwealth and would never give up those experiences. However, I should not now be punished for this choice by the burden of additional taxes. As a citizen of the Commonwealth and on behalf of those who have served and will serve in the future, I ask that you work to remove this burden of taxation of the AmeriCorps Educational Awards.

Thank you for your time and efforts.

Sincerely,

MALEAH F. THORPE.

Ware, MA, July 19, 1999.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN: My name is Jamie Rutherford and I am a resident of Ware, Massachusetts. Following graduation from the University of Hartford in 1996, I entered the AmeriCorps National Civilian Community Corps. I served two 10-month terms in the program, 1996–97 in Denver, CO, and 1997–98 in Charleston, SC.

My motivation for joining AmeriCorps included my desire to travel, to learn new skills, to lend myself to the community, and to earn an educational award that I would be able to apply toward my substantial student loans. I greatly enjoyed my experience the first year in Denver, and had very little difficulty deciding to reapply for a second year in South Carolina. Over those two years I took part in fourteen separate projects pertaining to the environment, education, public safety, and unmet human needs. I traveled to nine states and enjoyed experiences ranging from inner city tutoring, to midwestern trailblazing, to even Gulf Coast erosion control.

My experiences in AmeriCorps were wonderful, and have instilled in me a great appreciation for national service. I did, however, face several daunting challenges during my term of service. The most difficult challenges usually involved personal finance. The living stipend provided to us was minimal, and it was often quite difficult to get by on such meager funds. We did receive additional allotments for food and travel, however, and got by as well as possible. Upon completion of my first year in Denver, I applied my first award to my student loan provider here in Massachusetts. The greatest challenge for me came with the taxation of that award during my second term in South Carolina. When I discovered that I owed $350 to the Internal Revenue Service due to the taxation of the award, I was forced to go on a monthly payment plan during that second term. This was very difficult for me considering our minimal living stipend. I could not then and cannot now understand why the award was taxable as such, or why the taxed amount could not at least be subtracted from the $4,725 award initially.

Nearly a year after completing my second term and receiving my second award, I still maintain the $4,725 balance of that award. My current finances greatly necessitate the utilization of the award toward my substantial student loan bills. Nevertheless, I am reluctant to do so due to uncertainty for my future financial viability. I fear that I will not be able to afford another heavy taxation. Though the award seems to be so beneficial, it threatens to actually be somewhat detrimental to me.

My hope and request is that this taxation be abolished. It simply does not seem reasonable that young people devoting themselves to the improvement of our country should be so unjustly penalized. I greatly support AmeriCorps and all the good that it represents. I only wish that this one matter would be reconsidered in order to lift the gray cloud that has fallen over my memories of two wonderful years of national service.

Thank you.

JAMES E. RUTHERFORD.

Jamaica Plain, MA, July 20, 1999.

DEAR SENATOR: My name is Brendan Miller and I am an alumnus of AmeriCorps. I served two years, one with the Northwest Service Academy in Oregon and one with City Year in South Carolina as an AmeriCorps Leader. My AmeriCorps experience changed my life and set me on a path of public service that I now know is my calling.

I currently live in Boston, Massachusetts. As a supporter of AmeriCorps you surely know a benefit of the AmeriCorps experience is the Education Award that is granted at the end of one's service. I used approximately $6,000 of this award in January to pay off my loans from college. Unfortunately, the Ed Award is considered income for tax purposes, so I will be burdened with significantly higher taxes this year. In fact, I chose not to use my whole Award this year in order to split the tax burden between two years. If I had used the entire Award this year, my financial situation would surely have prevented me from meeting this tax without significant hardship.

I am working for the Boston Plan for Excellence in Education, which is a non-profit that is seeking to encourage lasting school reform in the Boston schools. Although I receive great satisfaction from this work, it does not pay that well. Since my AmeriCorps experience, I have committed myself to doing work that I feel is really making a difference, but this also means living on a tighter budget.

I know many of my friends in service have also made similar commitments to a life of service. However, our resolve can be tested by the need to pay our bills. As a graduate of Brown University with a degree in Computer Science, I could be making significantly more money in the for-profit sector, and I am often tempted to break my commitment to a life of service.

As a supporter of AmeriCorps and national service, I know you want to make it easy as possible for America's citizens to serve their country. I ask you to remove the tax on Education Awards to take a giant step forward in this effort.

Please don't hesitate to contact me if you have any additional questions. I look forward to hearing of your leadership on this issue.

Sincerely,

BRENDAN MILLER.

By Mr. REED (for himself and Mr. TORRICELLI):

S. 1821. A bill to authorize the United States to recover from a third party the value of any housing, education, or medical care or treatment furnished or paid for by the United States and provided to any victim of lead poisoning; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

THE LEAD POISONING EXPENSE RECOVERY ACT
OF 1999

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce legislation with my colleague Senator TORRICELLI that would give the federal government clear authority to recover from the manufacturers of lead-based paint, funds spent on the prevention and treatment of childhood lead poisoning.

Our knowledge of lead poisoning dates back to 200 BC, when the Greek physician Galen wrote "lead makes the mind give way." Benjamin Franklin knew about "the mischievous effects of lead" back when he wrote those words in 1786. In the late 19th century, scientific studies and medical reports began detailing the effects of lead on children. And by 1904, the source of those poisonings was identified as white lead paint used in housing. Queensland, Australia, was the first to ban certain applications of lead-based paint in 1922. Austria, Belgium, Bulgaria, Chile, Czechoslovakia, Estonia, France, Latvia, Poland, Romania, Spain, and Sweden followed suit in the mid-1920's. In 1978, more than a half of a century later, lead-based paint was banned in the United States.

Today, nearly one million preschoolers nationwide have excessive levels of lead in their blood; making lead poisoning the leading environmental health disease among children. Even low levels of lead exposure can cause serious injury to the developing brain and nervous system of children, lost IQ points, learning and reading disabilities, hyperactivity, and aggressive or delinquent behavior. At high levels of exposure, lead causes mental retardation, coma, convulsions and even death.

Lead-based paint in housing is the major remaining source of exposure and is responsible for most cases of childhood lead poisoning. Children contract lead poisoning when they come into contact with lead-based paint chips, contaminated soil, or dust generated from deteriorated paint. An estimated three million tons of lead still coats the walls and woodwork of American homes. Approximately half of America's housing stock, roughly 64 million units contain some lead-based paint. Twenty million of which are considered hazardous because they contain paint which is peeling, cracked, or chipped. My home state of Rhode Island has the fifth oldest housing stock in the country, and, as a result, has a lead poisoning rate that is three times the national average.

Sadly, this disease is particularly prevalent in those communities with the fewest resources to address the problem. Poor children are eight times more likely than kids from moderate and upper income families to contract lead poisoning. Yet, while lead poisoning is most prevalent in low-income communities, 20-25 percent of children who are poisoned live in middle- or upper-income homes. They were poisoned by exposure to lead released through renovation or repainting activities.

Taxpayers have already paid billions of dollars to deal with the tragic consequences of childhood lead exposure, including large expenditures for medical care, special education, and lead abatement in housing. However, what has been spent so far is barely a drop in the bucket. In Rhode Island alone, we are looking at a bill of $300 million to clean up just the most dangerous housing units. There are simply not enough grant or loan programs available. Last year, one federal lead abatement program had to turn down nine applicants for every grant it made.

Each year, we fight to make childhood lead poisoning a priority in Congress, in State legislatures, in cities, and in communities, knowing that the real solution is getting rid of the source of a child's exposure. At the same time we are frightfully aware that it could be decades longer, and millions of poisoned children later, until we finally "get the lead out."

The Rhode Island Attorney General recently filed a 10-count lawsuit against the manufacturers of lead paint and the industry's trade association. The lawsuit documents nearly a century-long record of industry culpability. The lead industry aggressively marketed its product as safe, despite knowledge of its harmful effects that were made apparent by continuous warnings from the medical community. To date, an industry that has over $30 billion in assets has yet to make a significant contribution to addressing the problems associated with its product.

Clearly, victims of lead poisoning were never given a chance, not even a warning. Parents were never told that the product they used to beautify their home could prevent their children from achieving their fullest potential. Instead, the industry fought regulations in California, New York, and Maryland that would have banned the use of lead-based paint or required the product to be labeled as poisonous. In 1954, the Board of Health of New York City proposed a sanitary code provision banning the sale of paints containing more than 1 percent lead, and requiring lead paint to be labeled as "poisonous" and not for interior use. The lead industry opposed the proposal as "unnecessary and unjustified" and unduly burdensome. Ultimately, the New York City Board of Health dropped the proposed ban of lead paint in 1955, and adopted a more narrow warning label requirement. This is only one example from an extensive record of industry wrongdoing which I believe the federal government should have the authority to address.

That is why Senator TORRICELLI and I are introducing legislation that will ensure that justice is served. Our legislation provides clear authority for the Federal government to recover the significant resources it has expended to mitigate childhood lead poisoning. This includes dollars spent on medical care and treatment, special education, and funds spent to make homes lead-safe for children. As cities and states stand up and say enough is enough, it is only appropriate for the federal government to join them in the effort to hold the industry responsible. The severity of childhood lead poisoning and the considerable expense borne by taxpayers to clean up the industry's mess demands action now. I urge my Senate colleagues to join me in supporting this legislation so that we can move aggressively towards our goal to end childhood lead poisoning. I ask unanimous consent that the text of this bill be printed in the RECORD.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Lead Poisoning Expense Recovery Act of 1999".

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

Congress finds the following:

(1) Lead poisoning is the number 1 environmental health threat to young children, affecting an estimated 890,000 children.

(2) Most children are poisoned in their homes through exposure to lead particles when lead-based paint deteriorates or is disturbed during home renovation or repainting.

(3) Lead paint remains in almost 75% of the housing stock of the United States.

(4) Lead poisoning may cause serious, long-term harm to children, including reduced intelligence and attention span, behavior problems, learning disabilities, and impaired growth.

(5) Research shows that children with elevated levels of lead in their blood are 7 times more likely to drop out of high school than children without elevated blood-lead levels.

(6) Children from low-income families are 8 times more likely to be poisoned by lead than children from high-income families.

(7) African-American children are 5 times more likely to be poisoned by lead than white children.

SEC. 3. SUITS BY THE UNITED STATES AUTHORIZED.

(a) IN GENERAL.—In any case in which the United States is authorized or required to furnish housing, education, or medical care or treatment to an individual who suffers from or is at risk of lead poisoning (or to pay for the housing, education, or medical care or treatment of such an individual) under circumstances creating liability upon any third party, the United States shall have the right to recover (independent of the rights of the injured or diseased individual) the value of the housing (including the cost of lead hazard evaluation and control), education, or medical care or treatment furnished or paid for by the United States before, on, or after the date of enactment of this Act.

(b) AMOUNTS RECOVERED.—Any amount recovered by the United States under subsection (a) shall be available, subject to authorization and appropriations Acts, to enhance childhood lead poisoning prevention and treatment activities, including lead hazard evaluation and control.

(c) THIRD PARTY DEFINED.—In this section, the term "third party" means any manufacturer of lead or lead compound for use in paint or any trade association that represents such a manufacturer.

(d) STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS.—No action may be brought under this section more than 6 years after the later of—

- (1) the date of enactment of this Act; or
- (2) the date on which the United States incurs the expense.

By Mr. MCCAIN (for himself and Ms. SNOWE):

S. 1822. A bill to amend the Public Health Service Act, the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, and the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to require that group and individual health insurance coverage and group health plans provide coverage for treatment of a minor child's congenital or developmental deformity or disorder due to trauma, infection, tumor, or disease; to the Committee on Finance.

TREATMENT OF CHILDREN'S DEFORMITIES ACT
OF 1999

• Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, today I am introducing legislation with my colleague, Senator SNOWE, to address the growing problem of HMOs denying insurance coverage for reconstructive surgery for children suffering from physical defects and deformities. This legislation would require medical plans to cover the medical procedures to reconstruct a child's appearance if they are born with abnormal structures of the body, including a cleft lip or palate.

Today, approximately seven percent of American children are born with pediatric deformities and congenital defects such as cleft lip, cleft palate, missing limbs including ears, and other facial deformities. Unfortunately, it has become commonplace for insurance companies to label reconstructive procedures to correct these deformities as cosmetic surgery and deny coverage to help these children eradicate or reduce deformities and acquire a normal appearance.

A recent survey of the American Society of Plastic and Reconstructive Surgeons indicated that over half the plastic surgeons questioned have had a pediatric patient in the last two years who has been denied, or experienced tremendous difficulty in obtaining, insurance coverage for reconstructive surgery.

It is disgraceful that many insurance companies claim that medical services to restore to a child some semblance of a normal appearance are superfluous and merely for vanity or cosmetic purposes. My colleagues may be wondering how such a ludicrous and cruel argument can be made when these procedures are clearly reconstructive in nature. Helping a child born without ears or with a cleft so severe it extends to her hairline is not cosmetic surgery.

The medical and developmental complications arise from these conditions are tremendous. Speech impediments, hearing difficulties and dental problems are a few of the physical side effects resulting from a child's physical deformity. In addition, the effect of a child's deformities on their personal development, confidence, and self-esteem and their future aspirations and achievements, is often very far reaching.

A healthy self image is vitally important to develop self esteem and confidence. How people see themselves, and how others see them, helps determine how a person feels about himself and whether he has the strength to cope with difficult challenges, including the taunting of peers and disengagement from school activities. As parents, we want our children to be armed with a healthy self esteem and confidence. The best way to guarantee that happens is to help them develop a strong and healthy self image.

At the same time, I recognize that we live in a society which places a high value on physical beauty and often unfairly uses it to measure a person's worth, ability or potential in society. It is unrealistic not to recognize the unfair obstacles facing children born with deformities if they are not provided access to medical services to help them attain a more normal physical appearance.

Some of my colleagues may know that my daughter, Bridget, whom Cindy and I adopted from Mother Theresa's orphanage in Bangladesh, was born with a severe cleft. We are fortunate to have had the means and opportunities to provide the expert medical care necessary to help Bridget physically and emotionally. However, we, too, encountered numerous obstacles and denials by our insurance providers who did not believe that Bridget's medical treatment was necessary. Fortunately, Cindy and I were able to afford the reconstructive services Bridget needed, despite denials by our health plan. Most hard-working American families are not so fortunate. That is why I am introducing this important bill to assist all American children.

This is not a new mandate that could cause health care premiums to escalate. What I am proposing simply prohibits plans from frivolously ruling that substantial, medically needed reconstructive surgeon for children to obtain a relatively normal appearance is cosmetic and refusing to pay for the procedures. This bill ensures that all children are afforded an opportunity to lead a more normal life and realize their full potential.

Mr. President, I ask that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

The bill follows:

By Mr. DEWINE (for himself, Mrs. MURRAY, Mr. ABRAHAM, and Mr. DODD):

S. 1823. A bill to revise and extend the Safe and Drug-Free Schools and Communities Act of 1994; to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions.

THE SAFE AND DRUG FREE SCHOOL AND COMMUNITIES ACT

Mr. DEWINE. Mr. President, it is no secret that drugs and violence destroy lives and families. They also can destroy entire neighborhoods and communities. More and more, our young people—our children—are being exposed to the evils of drugs and the dangers of violence. That is why I am introducing legislation today, along with my colleagues Senators DODD and MURRAY, that would reauthorize the Safe and Drug Free Schools program.

This program funds a wide range of drug education and prevention activities. Our bill, which was drafted with the assistance of community anti-drug organization representatives, would give states greater flexibility on targeting assistance to schools in need; increase accountability measures to ensure that assistance is targeted to programs that work; and improve coordination of Safe and Drug Free programs with other community-based anti-drug programs.

Mr. President, I have dedicated a great deal of time, both in the House and the Senate, to fighting illegal drug use in this country. Way back in 1990, as a Member of the House of Representatives, I was on the National Commission on Drug Free Schools. From my experience on this Commission, and through my work on drug prevention when I was Lieutenant Governor of Ohio, I learned that school-based prevention efforts must be coordinated and consistent during a child's school years. Programs must not have gaps that leave our children vulnerable to the lure of drugs.

Throughout my efforts, I always have emphasized the importance of a balanced attack against drug use. We must win the fight against people who manufacture and grow drugs, we must put a stop to those who transport illegal drugs into, and through, this country, and we must fight against the dealers who their trade drugs on our streets and yes, even in our schools.

There are many fronts in the important battle against drugs. The Safe and Drug Free Schools program is one area where I think we can improve our efforts. I believe we should continue the Safe and Drug Free Schools Program, but increase the accountability of federally funded programs and focus limited resources on programs that demonstrate an actual reduction in drug use. We must provide parents, schools, and local communities with the resources and flexibility they need to reduce drug use among kids.

Every child deserves to live and go to school in a drug and violence-free community. Our bill helps ensure that our children have this opportunity. Congress first passed the Anti-Drug Abuse Act—the precursor to the Safe and Drug Free Schools and Communities Act—in 1986. This legislation was the product of an aggressive, ambitious, and comprehensive anti-drug effort, which contributed to a 25% overall reduction in adolescent drug use from 1988 to 1992. Unfortunately, over the course of this decade, much of that success was lost. Youth drug use increased dramatically, including an 80% increase in marijuana use by high school seniors, an 80% increase in cocaine use, and a 100% increase in heroin use. We must reverse this trend. We have an obligation to our kids to reverse this trend.

I believe that our children's disturbing acceptance and experimentation of life-destroying drugs is due in large part to the Administration's national anti-drug strategy, which has been neither balanced nor comprehensive. Reinvesting in an improved Safe and Drug Free Schools and Communities program is a critical part of restoring effectiveness in and purpose to our national drug policy. Our legislation would be a major assault against drugs and violence in our schools and communities, by coordinating school-based programs with the broader community anti-drug effort.

Children spend more time at school than at any single place. A quality education starts with a quality educational environment. Congress can show its commitment to this goal by continuing—and improving—our investment in the Safe and Drug Free Schools and Communities Program. Specifically, our bill would increase the accountability within the program and ensure that only effective, researched-based programs receive federal funding. Also, it would provide States and Governors with greater flexibility in targeting their grants to prevent youth violence and drug use. Each state has unique drug prevention challenges and this bill provides the states with the flexibility to target funds to all of their schools, focus on those schools with the greatest drug/violence problems, or a combination of these two groups.

Our bill would increase community participation in the development and implementation of drug and violence prevention programs. Drug abuse and violence among young people is a community problem and requires a community-based solution. That's why when we drafted this bill, we worked closely with the Community Anti-Drug Coalition of America. Thanks to their input, this bill ensures that the entire community is involved in the creation and execution of programs to fight youth drug abuse and violence. It would maintain a viable program for all schools willing to conduct research-based violence and drug abuse prevention programs.

Mr. President, the threat of violence—and the reality of drug abuse—in our schools are all too real. If we get to our kids before the drug dealers do—if we have a policy of zero tolerance on drugs—America's children have a chance. I believe that the Safe and Drug Free Schools program empowers America's families and teachers with the information, training, and resources they need to help our children resist the temptation of drugs.

Over the coming months, we will be reauthorizing the Elementary and Secondary Education Act. The Safe and Drug Free is an important part of that legislation. I look forward to working on this bill and making this country's schools safer and drug free for our kids.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be entered into the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 1823

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Safe and Drug-Free Schools and Communities Reauthorization Act".

SEC. 2. AMENDMENT TO THE ELEMENTARY AND SECONDARY EDUCATION ACT OF 1965.

Title IV of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 7101 et seq.) is amended to read as follows:

"TITLE IV—SAFE AND DRUG-FREE SCHOOLS AND COMMUNITIES

"SEC. 4001. SHORT TITLE.

"This title may be cited as the 'Safe and Drug-Free Schools and Communities Act of 1994'.

"SEC. 4002. FINDINGS.

"Congress makes the following findings:
 "(1) Every student should attend a school in a drug- and violence-free learning environment.

"(2) The widespread illegal use of alcohol and drugs among the Nation's secondary school students, and increasingly by students in elementary schools as well, constitutes a grave threat to such students' physical and mental well-being, and significantly impedes the learning process. For example, data show that students who drink tend to receive lower grades and are more likely to miss school because of illness than students who do not drink.

"(3) Drug and violence prevention programs are essential components of a comprehensive strategy to promote school safety, youth development, positive school outcomes, and to reduce the demand for and illegal use of alcohol, tobacco and drugs throughout the Nation. Schools, local organizations, parents, students, and communities throughout the Nation have a special responsibility to work together to combat the continuing epidemic of violence and illegal drug use and should measure the success of their programs against clearly defined goals and objectives.

"(4) Drug and violence prevention programs are most effective when implemented within a research-based, drug and violence prevention framework of proven effectiveness.

"(5) Research clearly shows that community contexts contribute to substance abuse and violence.

"(6) Substance abuse and violence are intricately related and must be dealt with in a holistic manner.

"(7) Research has documented that parental behavior and environment directly influence a child's inclination to use alcohol, tobacco or drugs.

"SEC. 4003. PURPOSE.

"The purpose of this title is to support programs that prevent violence in and around schools and prevent the illegal use of alcohol, tobacco, and drugs, involve parents, and are coordinated with related Federal, State, school, and community efforts and resources, through the provision of Federal assistance to—

"(1) States for grants to local educational agencies and educational service agencies and consortia of such agencies to establish, operate, and improve local programs of school drug and violence prevention, early intervention, rehabilitation referral, and education in elementary and secondary schools (including intermediate and junior high schools);

"(2) States for grants to, and contracts with, community-based organizations and other public and private nonprofit agencies and organizations for programs of drug and violence prevention including community mobilization, early intervention, rehabilitation referral, and education;

"(3) States for grants to local educational agencies and educational service agencies and consortia for the development and implementation of policies that set clear and appropriate standards regarding the illegal use of alcohol, tobacco and drugs, and for violent behavior.

"(4) States for development, training, technical assistance, and coordination activities;

"(5) public and private nonprofit organizations to provide technical assistance, conduct training, demonstrations, and evaluation, and to provide supplementary services and community mobilization activities for the prevention of drug use and violence among students and youth; and

"(6) institutions of higher education to establish, operate, expand, and improve programs of school drug and violence prevention, education, and rehabilitation referral for students enrolled in colleges and universities.

"SEC. 4004. FUNDING.

"There are authorized to be appropriated—
 "(1) $700,000,000 for fiscal year 2001, and such sums as may be necessary for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years, for State grants under subpart 1 of part A;

"(2) $100,000,000 for fiscal year 2001, and such sums as may be necessary for each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years, for national programs under subpart 2 of part A; and

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, today I join with Senators DEWINE, DODD, and ABRAHAM to introduce a bill to reauthorize the Safe and Drug-Free Schools and Communities Act. This bill sends a strong signal to American schools and communities about the importance of creating a safe learning environment in the wake of recent tragedies in Littleton, Colorado; Springfield, Oregon; Paducah, Kentucky; and Moses Lake, Washington. It serves as a reminder that we haven't forgotten these and many other tragedies, and that the Senate recognizes all communities need funding and tools to effectively reduce violence and drug use.

The hallmark of the bill is a new emphasis on accountability for results in creating safer schools and using research-proven prevention strategies. The bill reauthorizes the Safe and Drug-Free Schools and Communities Act, and authorizes funding of $875 million to local school districts that they can use flexibly to address local needs for the prevention of violence and drug use.

In exchange, schools must invest in strategies that are shown to be effective in reducing drug use, discipline problems, and school violence.

What we've learned from recent school tragedies is that this can happen anywhere in America. No school is immune from problems, so every school community must take steps to prevent them.

We know that local educators know best how to prevent these problems, whether through offering after-school programs, or working with parent groups and law enforcement to reduce gang activity, or getting young people more involved in their community activities. This bill gives communities the tools to make a measurable difference—and recognizes that we won't prevent violence unless we all work together in partnership.

Our legislation is based on more than a year of conversations with local educators in Washington state and around the country. I have worked closely with Senators DODD, DEWINE, ABRAHAM and other Senators from both sides of the aisle to assure that we find areas of agreement early, so that we can make real progress in our discussions as we move forward. The bill emphasizes results and accountability, but gives communities flexibility to get there. Recognizing that no efforts can succeed to make young people safe and drug free—inside or outside of the classroom—without all elements of the community working together. The bill assumes collaboration and communication at all levels and across all barriers.

There are several areas where this bill does not yet reflect a full vision of how we can help schools and communities prevent violence and drug use. We need to continue working on national activities, on school safety planning, on coordination, and on other areas. We need to address the concerns of other Members who have not yet participated in the debate. However, this bill is a good, bipartisan start to the discussion, and represents Senators looking for common goals—something that needs to be brought back into the larger debate on education and our public schools.

I want to thank Senators DODD, DEWINE, and ABRAHAM and Suzanne Day from Senator DODD's office and Paul Palagyi from Senator DEWINE's office for their great work on this so far. I look forward to making continued progress in this discussion.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I rise today with the distinguished senior Senator from Ohio, MIKE DEWINE, to introduce legislation that will help create safe, orderly and drug-free schools for our nation's youth through the reauthorization of the Safe and Drug-Free Schools and Communities Act.

Mr. President, the need for this legislation could not be more clear. Littleton, Colorado; Paduka, Kentucky; Springfield, Oregon; Pearl, Mississippi, and Jonesboro, Arkansas—up until a year or two ago, these towns were likely to appear on a list of nice small towns in America. Today, instead, they have been inscribed on our collective memory for the horrors of what happened at each school—children shooting down other children, families in crisis and communities and a nation shattered by grief.

In the wake of each of these incidents, our nation has struggled to come to terms with the tragedies at these schools. And while many questions will never be answered, we must rededicate ourselves to making our schools safe for learning and to reassuring parents and students that schools are a safe haven. We clearly have a long way to go in this effort.

Statistics suggest that there has been some improvement in many areas in recent years, but clearly violence and drug and alcohol abuse remain all too pervasive in our children's lives.

Nationwide, from 1992-1994, 63 students ages 5 through 19 were murdered at school in 25 different states in communities of all sizes. In my own state of Connecticut alone, there were 1,532 juvenile (ages 10-17) crime arrests made from 1993-1994, illustrating the large number of youth involved in some form of crime.

With regard to substance abuse, by 12th grade, more than three-fourths of students have used alcohol in their lifetime and more than 50% have tried an illicit drug. At any given time, 52% of 12th graders report being current drinkers and 25% report being current illicit drug users. In Connecticut, in 1993, 31% of eighth and tenth grade students reported having used alcohol in the past 30 days. Not only do youth substance abuse and violence harm our children, but they also drain our communities' valuable resources. According to some analyses, the total economic costs related to substance abuse added up to $377 billion in 1995, and the costs of crime directly attributed to drug abuse added up to $59 billion.

These are all alarming statistics, and even more so when the interplay between violence and substance abuse is considered. For instance, there is compelling evidence that aggressive behavior is linked to frequency of marijuana use. Both youth violence and youth substance abuse are pressing matters in need of our attention.

The Safe and Drug-Free Schools and Communities Act is the leading federal program in this area. This program, funded at $566 million for FY1999, currently reaches 97 percent of school districts and provides flexible support for primary prevention activities like conflict resolution, peer mediation, and after school activities, as well as assistance in purchasing security equipment that has become so common in our schools. This program also supports prevention activities aimed at substance abuse among our youth. There have been some who have raised concerns that this program has not adequately accomplished its goals, in that youth violence and substance abuse rates remain high. I agree that those rates are still too high. But the proper response is to strengthen, no diminish, our commitment to assisting local schools in their efforts.

And let me hasten to add that there has, in fact, been progress. For instance, in the area of youth substance abuse, a 1998 national survey of student drug use in grades 8, 10, and 12 demonstrated that alcohol use slightly declined in grades 8 and 10, from prior years. And, after six years of steady increases, drug use among students was found to have declined and student opposition to drug use has increased. The proportion of students who reported use of illicit drugs during the 12 months prior to the survey declined at all three grade levels.

With regard to violence, a 1997 study found that 90 percent of public schools reported no incidents of serious violent crime to the police and less than half (43 percent) reported no crime at all. Over the past five years, school crime generally has decreased, as has the number of students being expelled for bringing a firearm to school. Fewer kids, in fact, brought weapons to school in 1997 than in 1993. The Centers for Disease Control report that between 1991 and 1997, the number of students involved in a physical fight decreased by 14 percent, and the number of kids carrying a weapon to school decreased by 30 percent.

Thus, the SDFSCA has made gains in providing students with safe and drug-free learning environments. The legislation we have introduced today will build on these successes. The program will continue to offer states and local districts significant flexibility. We have also added strong new accountability measures. States will have the option of targeting dollars to areas of greater need, providing them with a higher concentration of resources. State and school districts will work together in the development of a common plan with shared goals and measures of progress. Funded activities will be tied to these plans and will be required to be based on community needs assessments and to follow strategies found to demonstrate success through rigorous study. In addition, districts and schools participating in SDFSCA will be guided by a school safety plan to ensure coordinated, effective programs.

Clearly, this legislation is just the first step. Senator DEWINE and I, along with Senators MURRAY and ABRAHAM, will work with the other members of the Health, Education, Labor and Pensions Committee, other colleagues, and other interested in this important effort to continue to improve this bill as we craft the reauthorization of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act. I am interested in particular in looking more closely at the idea of a National School Safety Center, which I believe could provide districts and schools with invaluable advice and services as they struggle to confront violence in their schools. A related idea is the one proposed by the Administration to authorize Project SERV to assist schools when there is a sudden and serious event at the school. In addition, I think we should work at additional ways to strengthen interagency cooperation, including developing and funding initiatives like the Safe Schools/Healthy Students program that is making such a difference in my state and so many others. Finally, I am very interested in considering ways to support prevention very early on in children's life through character education and training of parents, preschool teachers and other professionals in violence prevention.

Mr. President, I want to thank Senator DEWINE for his leadership, commitment and involvement in this issue, as well as Senator MURRAY with whom we have worked very closely over the past few months. I am very pleased to co-sponsor this bill with such dedicated leaders, and I look forward to working with them and other of our colleagues for its enactment.

By Mr. BREAUX (for himself and Mr. GORTON):

S. 1824. A bill to amend the Communications Act of 1934 to enhance the efficient use of spectrum by non-federal government users; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

PRIVATE WIRELESS SPECTRUM USE ACT

• Mr. BREAUX. Mr. President, I am pleased to join the Senator from Washington, Mr. GORTON, in introducing the Private Wireless Spectrum Use Act. This legislation will help the more than 300,000 U.S. companies, both large and small, that have invested $25 billion in internally owned and operated wireless communications systems. It will provide these companies with critically needed spectrum and will do so through an equitable lease fee system.

The private wireless communications community includes industrial, land transportation, business, educational, and philanthropic organizations that own and operate communications systems for their internal use. The top 10 U.S. industrial companies have more than 6,000 private wireless licenses. Private wireless systems also serve America's small businesses in the utility, contracting, taxi, and livery industries.

These internal-use communications facilities greatly enhance the quality of American life. They also support global competitiveness for American firms. For example, private wireless systems support: the efficient production of goods and services; the safe transportation of passengers and products by land and air; the exploration, production, and distribution of energy; agricultural enhancement and production; the maintenance and development of America's infrastructure; and compliance with various local, State, and Federal operational government statutes.

Current regulatory policy inadequately recognizes the public interest benefits which private wireless licensees provide to the American public. Consequently, allocations of spectrum to these private wireless users have been deficient. Private wireless entities received spectrum in 1974 and 1986 when the FCC allocated channels in the 800 megahertz and 900 megahertz bands. Over time, however, the FCC has significantly reduced the number of channels available to industrial and business entities in those allocations. Private wireless entities now have access to only 299 channels, or 32 percent of the channels of the original allocation.

Spectrum auctions have done a great job of speeding up the licensing of interpersonal communications services and have generated significant revenues for the U.S. Treasury. They have also unfortunately skewed the spectrum allocation process toward subscriber-based services and away from critical radio services such as private wireless which are exempted from auctions. Nearly 200 megahertz of spectrum has been allocated for the provision of commercial telecommunications services, virtually all of which has been assigned by the FCC through competitive bidding.

Competitive bidding is not the proper assignment methodology for private wireless telecommunications users. Private wireless operations are site-specific systems which vary in size based on a user's particular needs, and are seldom mutually exclusive from other private wireless applicants. Auctions, which depend on mutually exclusive applications and use market areas based on population, simply cannot be designed for private wireless systems.

Under this legislation, the FCC would allocate no less than 12 megahertz of new spectrum for private wireless use as a measure to maintain our industrial and business competitiveness in the global arena, as well as to protect the welfare of the employees in the American workplace. Research indicates that private wireless companies are willing to pay a reasonable fee in return for use of spectrum. They recognize that their access to spectrum increases with their willingness to pay fair value for the use of this national asset.

This bill grants the FCC legislative authority to charge efficiency-based spectrum lease fees in this new spectrum allocation. These lease fees should encourage the efficient use of spectrum by the private wireless industry, generate recurring annual revenues as compensation for the use of spectrum, and retain spectrum ownership by the public. Furthermore, the fee should be easy for private frequency advisory committees to calculate and collect.

Mr. President, there may be some who believe this bill does not adequately address all their concerns. I assure all interested parties that I will work with them through the legislative process to address their concerns. I urge my colleagues to join me in supporting this bill and ask that the full text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

The bill follows:

S. 1824

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Private Wireless Spectrum Use Act."

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

The Congress makes the following findings:

(1) Competent management of the electromagnetic radio spectrum includes continued availability of spectrum for private wireless entities because of such entities' unique ability to achieve substantial efficiencies in their use of this important and finite public resource. A private wireless system licensee or entity is able to customize communications systems to meet the individual needs of that licensee or end user while using engineering solutions and other cooperative arrangements to share spectrum with other private system licensees and entities without causing harmful interference or other degradation of quality or reliability to such other licensees or entities. Accordingly, spectrum allocations for the shared use of private wireless systems achieve a high level of spectrum use efficiency and contribute to the economic and social welfare of the United States.

(2) Wireless communication systems dedicated to the internal communication needs of America's industrial, land transportation, energy (including utilities and pipelines), and other business enterprises are critical to the competitiveness of American industry and business in international commerce; increase corporate productivity; enhance the safety and welfare of employees; and improve the delivery of products and services to consumers in the United States and abroad.

(3) During the past decade, the Federal Communications Commission allocation and licensing policies have led to dramatic increases in spectrum available for commercial mobile radio services while the spectrum available for private mobile radio systems has decreased, even though the Commission recognizes the spectrum use efficiencies and other public benefits of such private systems and the substantial increases in the use of such systems.

(4) Spectrum auctions are designed to select among competing applications for spectrum licenses when engineering solutions, negotiation, threshold qualifications, service regulations, and other cooperative means employed by the Commission are not able to prevent mutual exclusivity among such applications. Private wireless systems, on the other hand, avoid mutual exclusivity through cooperative, multiple uses generally achieved by the Commission, the users, or the frequency advisory committees. Accordingly, the requirements of such private wireless systems are accommodated within the spectrum bands allocated for private uses. Since there is no mutual exclusivity among private wireless system applications, there is no need for the Commission to employ a mechanism, such as auctions, to select among applications. Auction valuation principles also do not apply to the private wireless licensing process because the private wireless spectrum is not used on a commercial, interconnected basis. Rather, such private allocations are used for internal communications applications to enhance safety, efficiency and productivity. Nonetheless, there should be some payment associated with the assignment of new private wireless spectrum, and the Commission can and should develop a payment mechanism for this purpose.

SEC. 3. DEFINITIONS.

Section 3 of the Communications Act of 1934 (47 U.S.C. 153) is amended—

(1) by redesignating paragraphs (33) through (52) as paragraph (35) through (54); and

(2) by inserting after paragraph (32) the following:

“(33) PRIVATE WIRELESS SYSTEM.—The term ‘private wireless system’ means an infrastructure of telecommunications equipment and customer premises equipment that is owned by, and operated solely to meet the internal wireless communication needs of, an industrial, business, transportation, education, or energy (including utilities and pipelines) entity, or other licensee.

“(34) PRIVATE WIRELESS PROVIDER.—The term ‘private wireless provider’ means an entity that owns, operates, or manages an infrastructure of telecommunications equipment and customer premises equipment that is—

“(A) used solely for the purpose of meeting the internal communications needs of another entity that is an industrial, business, transportation, education, or energy (including utilities and pipelines) entity, or similar end-user;

“(B) neither a commercial mobile service (as defined in section 332(d)(1)) nor used to provide public safety services (as defined in section 337(f)(1)); and

“(C) not interconnected with the public switched network.”

SEC. 4. ALLOCATION AND ASSIGNMENT OF ADDITIONAL SPECTRUM.

Part I of title III of the Communications Act of 1934 (47 U.S.C. 301) is amended by inserting after section 337 the following:

“SEC. 338. ALLOCATION AND ASSIGNMENT OF SPECTRUM FOR PRIVATE WIRELESS USES.

“(a) RULEMAKING REQUIRED.—Within 120 days after the date of enactment of the Private Wireless Spectrum Use Act, the Commission shall initiate a rulemaking designed to identify and allocate at least 12 megahertz of electromagnetic spectrum located between 150 and 2,000 megahertz for use by private wireless licensees on a shared-use basis. The new spectrum proposed to be reallocated shall be available and appropriate for use by private wireless communications systems and shall accommodate the need for paired allocations and for proximity to existing private wireless spectrum allocations. In accommodating the various private wireless system needs in this rulemaking, the Commission shall reserve at least 50 percent of the reallocated spectrum for the use of private wireless systems. The remaining reallocated spectrum shall be available for use by private wireless providers solely for the purpose described in section 3(34)(A).

“(b) ORDER REQUIRED.—Within 180 days after the Commission initiates the rulemaking required by subsection (a), the Commission, in consultation with its frequency advisory committees, shall—

“(1) issue an order reallocating spectrum in accordance with subsection (a); and

“(2) issue licenses for the reallocated spectrum in a timely manner.”

SEC. 5. REIMBURSEMENT FOR ADDITIONAL SPECTRUM ALLOCATED FOR PRIVATE WIRELESS SYSTEM USE.

Section 309(j) of the Communications Act of 1934 (47 U.S.C. 309 (j)) is amended by inserting after paragraph (14) the following:

“(15) SPECTRUM EFFICIENCY FOR SHARED SPECTRUM.—

“(A) Within 120 days after the date of enactment of the Private Wireless Spectrum Use Act, the Commission shall initiate a rulemaking to devise a schedule of payment to the Treasury by private wireless systems, and by private wireless providers for the purpose described in section 3(34)(A), in return for a license or other ability to use a portion of the spectrum reallocated under section 338. The schedule shall be designed to promote the efficient use of those frequencies.

“(B) Within 180 days after the Commission initiates the rulemaking required by subparagraph (A), the Commission, after consultation with its frequency advisory committees and after opportunity for comment, shall adopt a schedule of payment in accordance with subparagraph (A) and which it determines to be in the public interest.

“(C) In adopting the schedule of payments referred to in subparagraph (A), the Commission—

“(i) may not base a finding of public interest, convenience, and necessity on the expectation of Federal revenues for the use of such schedule of payment; and

“(ii) shall take into account the private nature of the systems, the safety and efficiencies realized by the public as a result of these private uses, the amount of bandwidth and coverage area and geographic location of the license, and the degree of frequency-sharing.”

SEC. 6. SPECTRUM SHARING

Section 309(j)(6) of the Communications Act of 1934 (47 U.S.C. 309(j)(6)) is amended—

(1) by striking “or” at the end of subparagraph (G);

(2) by striking “Act.” in subparagraph (H) and inserting “Act; or”; and

• Mr. GORTON. Mr. President, I am pleased to join my colleague from Louisiana, Senator BREAUX, in introducing a bill to rationalize the federal management of spectrum that is used by entities for their internal wireless communication needs. The legislation does essentially three things. First, it recognizes that auctions are not an appropriate means of allocating spectrum for these private users, and so exempts from auction that spectrum that is used for private wireless applications. Second, it directs the FCC to reallocate an additional 12 megahertz of spectrum to private wireless users, who, over the years, and despite the ef-iciencies they have obtained through shared use, have lost spectrum and currently do not have enough to meet demands in some areas. Third, the legislation authorizes the FCC to collect lease fees for the use of the 12 MHz to be reallocated.

One of the biggest challenges in preparing this bill, Mr. President, has been to define the class of beneficiaries, that is, to identify what is a “private wireless” system. The definition in the measure we are introducing today may not be perfect, and I look forward to working with all interested parties to ensure that the definition covers the appropriate class of users. The intent, however, and one that I believe is captured in the current definition, is that we recognize that there are thousands of corporations, utilities, farmers, and other entities, that use spectrum purely for their internal communication needs, with applications that range from reading utility meters from a distance, to operating sprinkler or irrigation systems, to communicating over hand-held radios in the middle of the woods, a factory floor, or a construction site. This use of the spectrum, Mr. President, is economically vital to our economy, as it enhances the productivity of all of these users and, in many cases, makes their operations possible.

A distinguishing characteristic of private wireless users, and a reason that we are proposing that they be treated differently than other spectrum users, is that the private wireless users’ application of the spectrum is often specifically tailored to the needs of that user, that is, it is a unique application that is not offered by commercial wireless providers.

Currently, private wireless users are licensed on a site-by-site basis by the FCC. Their license applications are coordinated by spectrum managers who attempt to maximize the efficiency of the spectrum and eliminate mutually exclusive applications by requiring that the spectrum be shared by multiple users. In this way, hundreds of different users can and do operate their internal wireless communications systems within a given geographic area. When the users’ needs change, as they frequently do, as companies open new production facilities, begin work at new construction sites, or extend their service area, the spectrum coordinators, (spectrum allowing), will propose a new sharing arrangement and obtain a new site-specific license for the user.

The geographic based auction concept that the FCC is currently proposing for some of the spectrum now being used by private wireless, makes little sense for these private users. Unlike a commercial wireless provider, whose service must be operational within the entirety of a broad geographical license area, an individual private wireless user may require use of the spectrum only at single site within the area proposed to be auctioned. Moreover, private wireless system users are not in the business of providing communications services, and don't want to be—so it is not in their interest to acquire, through auction, exclusive rights to the use of spectrum in a large fixed geographic area, when they will use only a small fraction of it, their site may change, and they lack both the expertise or the desire to rent out what they do not need.

Recognizing that auctions are ill-suited as a means of allocating spectrum to private wireless users, however, is not to say that the public should receive no compensation for the use of this public resource. Unfortunately, the desire to raise revenue from the sale of spectrum appears to have overtaken the need to ensure that spectrum is used efficiently and that current, economically valuable applications, are not disrupted by a rush to sell in order to raise revenue. The proposal in this measure to allow the Federal Communications Commission to collect lease fees for the use of private wireless spectrum is, I believe, a way to reintroducing some rationality into our spectrum management policies, while ensuring a return for the taxpayer.

The legislation we are introducing today, Mr. President, is not a final product. It stakes out, however, a very important claim, and that is the importance of the private wireless spectrum users to the smooth and efficient operation of our economy. I look forward to working with all interested parties to improve, and pass swiftly, this important measure.●

By Mr. ROCKEFELLER:

S. 1825. A bill to empower telephone consumers, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

THE PHONE BILL FAIRNESS ACT

Mr. ROCKEFELLER. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce the Phone Bill Fairness Act. I ask unanimous consent that the full text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 1825

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Phone Bill Fairness Act".

SEC. 2. FINDINGS; PURPOSE.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress makes the following findings:

(1) Customer bills for telecommunications services are unreasonably complicated, and many Americans are unable to understand the nature of services provided to them and the charges for which they are responsible.

(2) One of the purposes of the Telecommunications Act of 1996 (Public Law 104-104) was to unleash competitive and market forces for telecommunications services.

(3) Unless customers can understand their telecommunications bills they cannot take advantage of the newly competitive market for telecommunications services.

(4) Confusing telecommunications bills allow a small minority of providers of telecommunications services to commit fraud more easily. The best defense against telecommunications fraud is a well informed consumer. Consumers cannot be well informed when their telecommunications bills are incomprehensible.

(5) Certain providers of telecommunications services have established new, specific charges on customer bills commonly known as "line-item charges".

(6) These line-item charges have proliferated and are often described with inaccurate and confusing names.

(7) These line-item charges have generated significant confusion among customers regarding the nature and scope of universal service and of the fees associated with universal service.

(8) The National Association of Regulatory Utility Commissioners adopted a resolution in February 1998 supporting action by the Federal Communications Commission to require interstate telecommunications carriers to provide accurate customer notice regarding the implementation and purpose of end-user charges for telecommunications services.

(b) PURPOSE.—It is the purpose of this Act to require the Federal Communications Commission and the Federal Trade Commission to protect and empower consumers of telecommunications services by assuring that telecommunications bills, including line-item charges, issued by telecommunications carriers nationwide are both accurate and comprehensible.

SEC. 3. INVESTIGATION OF TELECOMMUNICATIONS CARRIER BILLING PRACTICES.

(a) INVESTIGATION.—

(1) REQUIREMENT.—The Federal Communications Commission and the Federal Trade Commission shall jointly conduct an investigation of the billing practices of telecommunications carriers.

(2) PURPOSE.—The purpose of the investigation is to determine whether the bills sent by telecommunications carriers to their customers accurately assess and correctly characterize the services received and fees charged for such services, including any fees imposed as line-item charges.

(b) DETERMINATIONS.—In carrying out the investigation under subsection (a), the Federal Communications Commission and the Federal Trade Commission shall determine the following:

(1) The prevalence of incomprehensible or confusing telecommunications bills.

(2) The most frequent causes for confusion on telecommunications bills.

(3) Whether or not any best practices exist, which, if utilized as an industry standard, would reduce confusion and improve comprehension of telecommunications bills.

(4) Whether or not telecommunications bills that impose fees through line-item charges characterize correctly the nature and basis of such fees, including, in particular, whether or not such fees are required by the Federal Government or State governments.

(c) REVIEW OF RECORDS.—

(1) AUTHORITY.—For purposes of the investigation under subsection (a), the Federal Communications Commission and the Federal Trade Commission may obtain from any telecommunications carrier any record of such carrier that is relevant to the investigation, including any record supporting such carrier's basis for setting fee levels or percentages.

(2) USE.—The Federal Communications Commission and the Federal Trade Commission may use records obtained under this subsection only for purposes of the investigation.

(d) DISCIPLINARY ACTIONS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—If the Federal Communications Commission or the Federal Trade Commission determines as a result of the investigation under subsection (a) that the bills sent by a telecommunications carrier to its customers do not accurately assess or correctly characterize any service or fee contained in such bills, the Federal Communications Commission or the Federal Trade Commission, as the case may be, may take such action against such carrier as such Commission is authorized to take under law.

(2) CHARACTERIZATION OF FEES.—If the Federal Communications Commission or the Federal Trade Commission determines as a result of the investigation under subsection (a) that a telecommunications carrier has characterized a fee on bills sent to its customers as mandated or otherwise required by the Federal Government or a State and that such characterization is incorrect, the Federal Communications Commission or the Federal Trade Commission, as the case may be, may require the carrier to discontinue such characterization.

(3) ADDITIONAL ACTIONS.—If the Federal Communications Commission or the Federal Trade Commission determines that such Commission does not have authority under law to take actions under paragraph (1) that would be appropriate in light of a determination described in paragraph (1), the Federal Communications Commission or the Federal Trade Commission, as the case may be, shall notify Congress of the determination under this paragraph in the report under subsection (e).

(e) REPORT.—Not later than one year after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Federal Communications Commission and the Federal Trade Commissions shall jointly submit to Congress a report on the results of the investigation under subsection (a). The report shall include the determination, if any, of either Commission under subsection (d)(3) and any recommendations for further legislative action that such Commissions consider appropriate.

SEC. 4. TREATMENT OF MISLEADING TELECOMMUNICATIONS BILLS AND TELECOMMUNICATIONS RATE PLANS.

By Mr. MURKOWSKI:

S. 1826. A bill to provide grants to the State of Alaska for the purpose of assisting that State in fulfilling its responsibilities under sections 803, 804, and 805 of the Alaska National Interest Lands Conservation Act, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

• Mr. MURKOWSKI. Mr. President, today I rise to introduce legislation regarding the State of Alaska's sovereign right to manage its fish and game resources. It is a sad day that I come to the floor of the United States Senate to inform my colleagues that for the first time since Alaska became a state it no longer has sole authority to manage its fisheries on federal lands.

For everyone of my colleagues their respective states right to manage fish and game is absolute—every state but Alaska manages all its own fish and game. As of October 1, in Alaska, this is not the case, and therefore, action must be taken to try and provide the opportunity for the state to regain this authority back as swiftly as possible.

Some background is in order here.

When Congress passed the Alaska National Interest Lands Conservation Act (ANILCA) in 1980, Title VIII required the State of Alaska to provide a rural subsistence hunting and fishing preference on federal “public lands.” If the State fails to provide the required preference by State statute, the law provided that the federal government would step in to manage the subsistence uses of fish and game resources on federal lands.

The Alaska State Legislature passed such a subsistence preference law in 1978 which was upheld by referendum in 1982. The law was slightly revised in 1986, and remained on the books until it was struck down by the Alaska Supreme Court in 1989 as unconstitutional because of the Alaska Constitution's common use of fish and game clause. It is easy to see how there would be a conflict between a federal law that requires the state to provide a preference for rural Alaskans for fish and game resources and a state constitution that provides for equal access. When the state statutes were struck down, the Secretary of the Interior and the Secretary of Agriculture, for Forest Service lands, took over management of fish and game resources on federal public lands in Alaska.

For the most part the early focus was on game management and little was done to impact Alaska's fisheries. That all changed in 1995 when a decision by the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals in Katie John v. United States extended the law far beyond its original scope to apply not just to “federal lands” but to navigable waters owned by the State of Alaska. Hence State and private lands were impacted too. The theory espoused by the Court was that the “public lands” includes navigable waters in which the United States has reserved water rights. If implemented, the courts decision would mean all fisheries in Alaska could effectively be managed by the federal government. In April of 1996, the Departments of the Interior and Agriculture published an “Advance Notice of Proposed Rule-making” which identified about half of the state as subject to federal authority to regulate fishing activities.

These regulations were so broad they could have affected not only fishing activities, but virtually all activities on state and federal lands that may have an impact on subsistence uses. There is no precedent in any other State in the Union for this kind of overreaching into State management prerogatives. For that reason Congress acted in 1996 to place a moratorium on the federal government from implementing those regulations and assuming control of Alaska's fisheries. This moratorium was provided mainly to allow the State time to make appropriate changes to the constitution and relevant statutes in order to comply with the federal law. The moratorium was extended three times by Congress and just recently expired October 1, 1999.

The Governor, and the majority of the State legislators have worked to try and resolve this issue by adopting an amendment to the State constitution that would allow them to pass State statutes to come into compliance with the federal law and provide a subsistence priority. Unfortunately, the State of Alaska's Constitution is not easily amended and these efforts have fallen short of the necessary votes needed to place the issue before the Alaska voters. In fact, in the most recent special session a majority of the legislators voted to do just this. Unfortunately they were just two votes shy in the State Senate of the 2/3 majority needed to place the necessary amendment before the voters.

With the failure of the legislature to place a constitutional amendment on the ballot prior to October 1, 1999, we now find ourselves in a situation where the federal government has assumed control of subsistence fisheries in Alaska. Therefore, absent a lawsuit or major change to federal law, the only way the State can now regain management of the subsistence fisheries is if the Secretary were to certify that the citizens of Alaska voted on, and approved, a constitutional amendment and the State Legislature had approved appropriate State statutes to conform with ANILCA. Under the most optimistic circumstances, the absolute earliest this could occur would be after the general election in November of 2000—and more likely it would not occur until 2001 or 2002. This just cannot be allowed to continue without some effort to return management to Alaska as soon as possible.

The proposal I am introducing today would minimize the duration of federal control if the State legislature passes a constitutional amendment that would allow them to adopt laws to come into compliance with the federal law. This would continue to make sure the focus of a resolve remains on State action and not in the ill-placed hopes of some action by Congress.

Specifically, the proposal would do the following:

Provide that the State can regain management authority as soon as the Secretary certifies the State legislature has approved a constitutional amendment that would allow the State to comply with ANILCA.

As soon as the Secretary certifies the amendment, any unexpended funds that were provided to the Secretary as a result of the legislature's failure to act by October 1, 1999 are turned over to the State.

In order to continue to retain management the State must place the amendment on the ballot at the earliest date possible under State law.

The Secretary could manage subsistence again if the amendment is not adopted by the voters or if it is adopted but the State fails to adopt the needed state statutes at the end of the first legislative session after passage of the constitutional amendment.

At any time that the Secretary is managing subsistence fisheries in Alaska, he must comply with section 1308 of ANILCA which requires local hire.

Mr. President, I along with most Alaskans, believe that subsistence uses of fish and game should have a priority over other uses in the State. We have provided for such uses in the past, I have hunted and fished under those regulations and I respected and supported them and continue to do so now. I believe the State can again provide for such uses without significant interruption to the sport or commercial fisherman.

I also believe that Alaska's rural residents should play a greater role in the management and enforcement of fish and game laws in Alaska. They understand and live with the resources in rural Alaska. They see and experience the fish and game resources day in and day out. And, they are most directly impacted by the decisions made about use of those resources. They should bear their share of the responsibility for formulating fish and game laws as well as enforcing them.

It is my intention to ensure that at anytime the Secretary is managing any of Alaska's wildlife resources that he maximize the expertise of Alaska's Native people. I also hope the State would provide Alaska's rural residents a greater role as it seeks to resolve the subsistence dilemma once and for all. But until that happens, I cannot stand by and watch the federal government move into the State and assume control of the Alaska fish and game resources for an extended period of time. That is why I am providing for the earliest opportunity for the State to regain management.

I've lived under federal management during Alaska's territorial days and it does not work. In 1959 Alaskan's caught just 25.1 million salmon. Under State management we caught 218 million salmon in 1995.

Federal control would again be a disaster for the resource and those that depend on it.●

By Mr. GRAHAM:

S. 1827. A bill to provide funds to assist high-poverty school districts meet their teaching needs; to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions.

TRANSITION TO TEACHING ACT

Mr. GRAHAM. Mr. President, today I introduce legislation which is entitled "Transition to Teaching. This legislation starts from a personal experience.

Bill Aradine is a first-year teacher. He tells me he is greatly enjoying his experience in the classroom. He has 150 students from the 9th to the 12th grade at North Marion High School near Ocala, FL. Mr. Aradine teaches automobile mechanics. He has sparked an interest in students that may lead many of them to rewarding, lucrative, and challenging careers. I know Mr. Aradine because I did one of my workdays—in fact, my most recent workday—at North Marion High School. It is the story I learned that day at North Marion that brings me to the Senate floor today.

Up to this point, it may not seem that unusual of a story—a beginning teacher facing new challenges—but Mr. Aradine brings something else to his first year at North Marion High School. He brings a previous career of 11 years on-the-job experience. He has years of experience in a local Chevrolet car dealership. He is now starting a second career as a teacher. The students look to him with a different perspective. When he says, you will need to know this if you are going to get the job done, they know he knows what he is talking about. Having just come directly from the industry, he teaches at the cutting edge.

The information he brings to his students is what he was actually doing in the workplace not that long ago. Mr. Aradine is also a bridge. He is a bridge between North Marion High School students and the world of employment. He offers them advice, counsel, and real-life connections to future jobs.

Mr. Aradine learned of the opening at the high school when one of the automobile mechanic's teachers retired. He applied for the job. He was allowed to obtain a temporary teaching certificate based on his prior work experience. He will take four courses over the next 3 years to obtain a permanent teaching certificate. North Marion High School principal, Walter Miller, could not be more pleased with the situation. Mr. Aradine is doing an excellent job with the students. North Marion High School was able to fill a vacancy and ease its teacher shortage.

More and more schools will be turning to teachers who are in their second career. The Washington Post of October 4 of this year remarks on the trend of professionals entering teaching after years of work in a nonacademic job.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that at the end of my remarks, a copy of an article entitled, "Disillusioned Find Renewal in Classroom," be printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(See Exhibit 1.)

Mr. GRAHAM. Every August and September, another school year begins. Thousands of young Americans enter the classroom. Almost every year at this time, I hear from school districts throughout Florida about teacher shortages. What did I hear in 1999? I heard from Miami Dade that they had hired 1,700 new teachers for the 1999 school year but still had 300 vacancies to fill on the first day of classes. Hillsborough County, Tampa, hired 1,493 teachers for the start of the school year. They were still 238 teachers short when the first school bell rang. Orange County, Orlando, needed 1,300 teachers for the new year and still had 50 vacancies a month after school started.

These concerns will only get worse. Forty percent of current schoolteachers are over the age of 50. They are nearing retirement. Who will be the future role models to the next generation of Americans? Who will take their places in the classroom? The importance of having high quality teachers in sufficient numbers is crucial, if we are to look at the challenges facing education in the future.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD an article by Dr. Robert McCabe entitled, "A Twenty-First Century Challenge: Underprepared Americans."

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

A TWENTY FIRST CENTURY CHALLENGE: UNDERPREPARED AMERICANS

(By Robert H. McCabe)

The essential mission for higher education in the new America of the 21st Century will be creating opportunity for new populations. Higher education will be more important than ever before, but the scope of services will be very different and should be dramatically expanded to match the changed environment. In short, the current emphasis on exclusion must shift to inclusion.

In the new America, we will be older, less white, and more diverse. Our workforce will shrink. Information technology will impact everything and everybody. Business will function in a global economy and unskilled jobs will be exported to low wage developing nations. The gap between the skills and competencies of Americans, and those required for an Information Age workforce will continue to widen, threatening the very well being of our nation.

As we enter the 21st Century we face three critical challenges: remaining competitive in a global economy; reversing the growth of a seemingly permanent and disenfranchised underclass; and developing a broad based workforce possessing Information Age skills. Whether or not we successfully meet these challenges will depend on the achievement of our educational system. The public schools, however, face ever greater difficulties. Increasing numbers of diverse children will enter the schools with significant educational and life deficiencies. Despite the school reforms that are sweeping the nation, it is virtually certain that increasing numbers of individuals will reach adulthood unprepared for 21st Century life and employment. Failure to educate these individuals would result in a catastrophic decline in our economy and standard of living. The role of higher education is critical. It must provide leadership in reshaping an educational system that is significantly more successful at all levels. Colleges will experience extraordinary enrollment growth from previously undeserved and underprepared populations. They must assist these Americans in achieving the higher order competencies necessary to succeed in the Information Age. To reach this goal, colleges must partner with public schools to participate in school reform. They must also insure that strengthened and well-supported college remedial education programs are available, primarily in community colleges, to rescue underprepared adults for their own benefit and to the benefit of the nation as a whole.

The following is a review of factors that will redefine the mission of higher education in the new America of the 21st Century.

BUSINESS/INDUSTRY AND WORK

In a global economy, business and industry will get its work done where it is least costly. Manufacturing is already moving from the United States to less developed nations where wages are lower. This trend will continue. Sustaining America's current prosperity will depend on its ability to lead and develop knowledge industries, which are based on a highly skilled and a more productive workforce. Brainpower and technology can multiply individual productivity, thus, compensating for higher wages and helping America to retain global competitiveness.

Experts believe—judging from successful economies already functioning in the new global environment—the countries that remain competitive in the next century are those with the highest overall literacy and educational levels—that is, nations, such as Germany and Japan, that have a strong "bottom third." This should be a compelling wake up call for America because demographic trends indicate that the future U.S. work force will be increasingly composed of groups such as minorities and immigrants, who have disproportionately high rates of illiteracy and educational underachievement (Immerwahr et al. 1991 p. 15).

Beyond the basics, workers need additional skills to meet workforce demands—even if they hold the same job. Regardless of the product or service offered, the competitive workplace of today is a high-skill environment designed around technology and people who are technically competent.

A 1997 National Alliance of Business report, "Job Cuts Out, High Skills In," states: "With the explosion of technology in the workplace, skill level requirements are being ratcheted up by employers. Inventory, sales, marketing, expense analysis, communications, and correspondence are being one faster, better and cheaper, and with greater efficiency in the workplace" (National Alliance of Business, p. 1).

Through turbulent years of reorganization, companies have raised skill requirements in order to hire employees with the competencies they need to be more competitive.

More highly skilled workers have replaced employees with lower or outdated skills. Job elimination and downsizing have declined to their lowest levels in the decade, as companies are prepared for increased productivity and profitability. "We're seeing the payoff after a decade of pain," says Eric Greenberg, director of management studies for the American Management association. "The same forces that were costing jobs in the earlier years, such as restructuring, re-engineering and automation are now creating jobs that demand high skill levels. The people going out the door don't have them, the people coming in do" (National Alliance of Business, 1997, p. 6).

At the same time that necessary skill levels are rising, the skills of American workers are declining—a bleak picture indeed. In 1995, The National Workforce Collaborative estimated that the incidence of low basic workplace skills among U.S. workers ranging from 20 to 40 percent.

Business and Industry estimates that 80 percent of the 21st Century workforce will need some post-secondary education. In addition, they will need higher order information competencies as a base for life long continuing education. Today, fewer than half of Americans have achieved this level of competence and demographic changes indicate that in the future even fewer will be as well prepared.

DEMOGRAPHIC CHANGES

As the millennium approaches, stores analyzing the state of the nation and predicting its future fill the public discourse. Demographers can accurately describe what Newsweek magazine termed the "face of the future" (Morganthau 1997). In the 21st Century, the United States will become more ethnically diverse, more crowded and much older.

The greatest changes will occur in the Hispanic population. Today, Hispanics make up nearly 30 million people and 11 percent of the population. With high birthrates and high legal and illegal immigration, this share will continue to increase. Hispanic Americans average 2.4 to 2.9 children per couple, compared to white Americans average of just under two children per couple (Sivy 1997). In addition, the majority of today's immigrants are Hispanic, a trend that is expected to continue. Within the next seven years, Hispanics will overtake African Americans as the nation's largest minority. By 2005, Hispanics will number more than 36 million people compared to a projected 35.5 million African Americans. (Holmes 1998). By 2050, they are expected to comprise nearly one quarter of the total population, almost 96 million people. (Morganthau 1997). This growth is remarkable considering that in 1970 Hispanic accounted for just nine million citizens or roughly four percent of the national population (Population Reference Bureau 1999).

Virtually all of our growth will be from minorities, principally Hispanics. These groups are disproportionately poor, and thus, disproportionately educationally underprepared. To illustrate, African Americans are 13 percent of the general population and 40 percent of welfare recipients while Hispanics are 11 percent of the population and 22 percent of welfare recipients.

IMMIGRATION

Changing patterns of immigration are rearranging the face of America. Immigrants make up a significant portion of population growth. These new Americans differ in origin from those of earlier years. Between 1820 and 1967, 40 million of America's 44 million immigrants came from European countries. From 1968 to 1994, only three million of the 18 million immigrants came from Europe—a decrease from 90 percent to 17 percent. Today's immigrants come primarily from Latin America and Asia, and most importantly, from underdeveloped nations. Unfortunately, the immigrant population that is a major source of future workers also adds to our underprepared population. In the early 20th Century, most European immigrants were also unskilled. At that time, however, work was predominantly unskilled, and the immigrants provided much needed unskilled manpower. Circumstances are now quite different. Less than 20 percent of today's jobs are unskilled. Few new immigrants arrive on our shores with the job skills that business and industry need, yet these "new workers" represent a key source of potential employees needed to fill the void created by retiring "Baby Boomers".

THE AGING OF AMERICA

In 1900, the average life expectancy was 48. Today it is 76. In addition, America's fertility rate has dropped below the 2.1 children per woman population replacement rate. In 1950, the average age of Americans was 21 while today it is 37. Demographer Samuel Preston reports that the population is rapidly growing older and will continue to do so in the next half century (1996). Between 1995 and 2010, the number of people 65 and older will grow slowly from 33.5 million to 39.4 million, as people born in the 1930s and early 1940s (when fertility was low) grow older. By contrast, between 2010 and 2030, with the "Baby Boomers" aging, the number will soar from 39.4 million to 69.3 million. Meanwhile, the population in the prime working ages of 20 to 59 will remain stationary at about 160 million. In 1900, there were 10 times as many children below 18 as there were adults over 65. By 2030, there will be slightly more people over 65 than under 18.

Most discussion about the aging of Americans has focused on the viability of Social Security and Medicare. The Social Security system uses a pay-as-you-go model whereby payments by current workers are used to pay benefits to retirees. The concept was that when current workers retire, new workers would be available to pay into the system to support their retirement. That is history. In the future, it will simply no longer be the case. When the system began, 17 to 20 workers paid in for each retired worker receiving benefits. By 1960, the ratio had fallen to five workers for each retiree. Today it is 3.4 to one and by 2020 there will only be two workers for each retiree. While this forecasts serious problems, they are not nearly as severe as the problem of a declining percentage of the population in the workforce. Quite simply, to sustain our economy, everyone in their prime work years will need to be in the workforce. They must be highly skilled and extremely productive to support more retirees.

POVERTY

With our high standard of living and prosperity, America continues to have a persistent underclass with more individuals living in poverty than other developed nations. This is an unacceptable, deeply imbedded and seemingly unresolvable American problem. In the 1950s and 1960s, a near national consensus believed that the problem of poverty and equal opportunity for all could and should be resolved. Today, cynicism has replaced optimism. People living in poverty feel there is no way out and that the system is rigged against them. Those supporting the dependent population are frustrated and angry and increasingly blame those who live in poverty for their own poor circumstances.

Politicians applaud the apparent successes of welfare reform efforts intended to quickly remove individuals from the welfare rolls. A closer look, however, reveals that the successes are more a result of a robust economy than successful reform programs. Many have only progressed from poverty to joining the working poor. Persistent poverty appears to be impervious to every attempt at improvement.

From kindergarten to college, poverty correlates more closely with academic deficiency than any other factor. The strong relationship between socio-economic status and educational achievement and the rising skill levels required for employment result in growing numbers from impoverished neighborhoods being undereducated for 21st Century jobs. These underprepared individuals add to the nation's unemployed, are dependent on the society and expand the gap between the haves and have nots—a destructive and dangerous situation.

THE NEW AMERICAN FAMILY

Today, nearly half of all American children experience the breakup of their parents' marriage. Family arrangements are diverse, and increasingly, do not involve a full-time father. In 1963, 77 percent of white children, 65 percent of Hispanic children, and 36 percent of African American children lived in two-parent families. By 1991, only half of the United States' children and teens lived in a traditional nuclear family. Fifth percent of white children live with a divorced mother; while 54 percent of African American children and 33 percent of Hispanic children have mothers who have never married (McCabe and Day 1998, p. 7). More children are born to unmarried women, 33 percent in 1994 compared with 5 percent in 1960 (Preston 1996). Even those children from a two-parent household spend less family time together. About 70 percent of mothers with children at home are working (Edmondson 1997). Children are often shuttled between day care centers, baby sitters, and extended family members.

According to Prather (1995), "There are three problems that impact the learning abilities of young children that are exacerbated by the changing structures of families: Insufficient parenting, poor prenatal care, and inadequate health care." One-fourth of the pregnant women in America, particularly those who live in poverty, receive no prenatal care. Problems in the womb often lead to learning disabilities and other cognitive disorders.

Recent brain development research indicate that "wiring" of neurons occurs after birth, and that experience during infancy and early childhood plays a critical role in defining an individual's capacity to learn. The child's brain and central nervous system develop rapidly during the first three years of life in response to parental attention and stimulation, such as talking, seeing and playing. Absence of these critical early child care experiences, can result in permanent loss of learning capacity. This obviously occurs more frequently in single parent families because there is less time available for the children.

Children who suffer from inadequate economic resources and parental attention are children at risk of school failure. When these students progress into secondary schools, they are often tucked away in a holding pattern in general studies programs, and other programs that set lower expectations and develop less information competency. These students are destined to become underprepared adults.

The decline in the traditional family and the rising percentage of children born into poverty raises the question of whether children of the 21st Century will be sufficiently nurtured and prepared to mature to the productive adults that America needs.

At the heart of the United States' future will be the changing concept of family—a kind of new social demographics. Tomorrow's family will be less traditional and more complex. The 1950s nuclear family with the father as the sole breadwinner will be a distant memory. Instead, family life will be plagued by much of the same problems it suffers from today—divorce, single parenting, and a fractured and harried household.

Taken together—an analysis of demographics and family structure—we have a clear picture of the 21st Century. The United States will be crowded, diverse, older, and Americans will be less well prepared for employment. But what then does all this really mean? How will these changes influence everyday life? How well will we prepare our children for the future? What challenges will they face? How will we care for our elderly, infirm, and needy?

EDUCATING A MAJORITY MINORITY NATION

The demographic realities—particularly the growing diversity—will have the greatest impact on our education system. We know that by 2020 half of the nation's youth will be "minority." But what is most striking about this statistic is the shifting concept of minority. Demographer Hodgkinson explains that educating tomorrow's minority will be more complicated because of who they are. Between 1820 and 1945, the nations that sent us the largest numbers of immigrants were (in rank order): Germany, Italy, Ireland, United Kingdom, Soviet Union, Canada, and Sweden. The nations that send us the most immigrants now and through the year 2000 are (in rank order): Mexico, Philippines, Korea, China/Taiwan, India, Cuba, Dominican Republic, Jamaica, Canada, Vietnam, United Kingdom, and Iran (Hodgkinson 1993).

This shift indicates a clear transformation. The United States has gone from a nation of Europeans with a common European culture to a nation of the world. Students from all over the world will be in the same classrooms—making our schools truly international in composition (Hodgkinson 1993). The change brings with it a set of unique instructional problems. In the past, schools could use the European commonality to socialize immigrant children. Today, children come to classrooms with different diets, different religions, different individual and group loyalties, different music, and different languages.

Tomorrow's students will be problematic for an even more profound reason—their lack of academic skills. Teachers will not only struggle with their diversity but also with their poor language skills and lack of educational attainment. Minorities have traditionally lagged behind academically. Educational policy makers often view them as an afterthought—gearing their decisions to the more successful white majority. As the demographics shift, however, educators will face a nation dominated by struggling students, at the same time more must complete their education with higher order skills.

The statistics illustrate a wide educational gap between minorities and non-minorities. In 1996, 30 percent of Hispanics had less than a ninth grade education, compared with 10 percent of African Americans and only about five percent of whites. Little more than one-half (53 percent) of Hispanics ages 25 or older had completed high school, and less than 10 percent had at least a bachelor's degree. Nearly 85 percent of non-Hispanic adults were high school graduates, and nearly 25 percent were college graduates (del Pinal 1997). The high school dropout rate—the percentage of people, ages 16 to 24, who do not have a high school diploma—reflects a similar disparity. In 1993, 27.5 percent of Hispanic students, 13.6 percent of African American students, and 7.9 percent of white students fell into this category (Coley 1995).

Minority children start two or three steps behind their white counterparts. They start elementary school with fewer social skills and lower language skills than their white counterparts (del Pinal 1997). Their path of underachievement then continues throughout their academic career.

SUMMARY

A series of circumstances are converging to create a 21st Century American dilemma that threatens the nation's economic and societal well being. The global economy is forcing manufacturing and businesses that utilize less skilled labor out of the country. The nation's hope for continued prosperity is to be the leader of the world's knowledge industries. This requires a highly skilled, highly productive workforce. Formidable obstacles must be overcome to reach that goal. With the aging population, the percentage of individuals in their primary work years will decline. It is, therefore, necessary to insure that the maximum number of Americans are well prepared and in the workforce. They will have to be more productive both to offset the competitive low salaries in less developed countries and to support the growing number of elderly. America does not have any one to waste!

Virtually all of our population growth will be from groups that are disproportionately underprepared—immigrants mostly from Third World countries, and minorities, principally Hispanic, who are disproportionately poor. Changes in the American family will also contribute to underpreparation. Changing family and work circumstances result in poor parenting practices that are linked to early children sensory deprivation and learning disabilities. Due to the hardships of growing numbers of single parent families, children's social, physical and educational progress is impeded.

The workforce could be both undersized and disproportionately underskilled. It would be unable to sustain a knowledge based economy and our quality of life.

America must depend on education to avert this pending national crisis. Despite reforms and hoped for improvements in the public schools, more Americans will reach adulthood underprepared. States are now taking school reform seriously and there is evidence of some improvement. The task, however, is monumental. The public schools cannot be expected to solve it alone.

The following graph dramatically demonstrates the scope of the problem. Currently, 85 percent of young Americans graduate from high school, 56 percent enter college and, unfortunately, only 39 percent are prepared for college work. This means that unless there is tremendous improvement, less than 40 percent of young Americans will be prepared for the 80 percent of high skill jobs. Sixty percent will only be prepared for the 20 percent of low skill jobs. It will be the essential and daunting task of public schools and college remedial programs to raise the 39 percent prepared to 80 percent. Substantially more students need to achieve higher skills at the same time large numbers of children will enter the educational system with serious life and educational deficiencies.

The great strength of America is the belief in the value of every individual and the commitment to equal opportunity for all. Higher education can do nothing more important and more difficult than helping the underprepared achieve educational parity. Higher education leadership is essential in meeting this challenge. Colleges must join with public schools in unified efforts to raise the educational achievements of all children. They must also insure the availability of quality remedial education programs, primarily in community colleges. This will assure that the critical final bridge to full participants in our society is available to everyone.

Mr. GRAHAM. Dr. McCabe raises several crucial demographic and societal changes that will affect American education in the coming years. Let me mention two of these issues.

First, the American family structure will change in the coming decades. Half of all children will spend some of their childhood in single-parent homes and are more likely to live in poverty.

Of the children who grow up in a nuclear family, very often both of their parents will work; thus, they will be less able to be involved in the child's school and schoolwork. That is what is happening to American families. That is what will increasingly in the family environment from which American schoolchildren will enter the classroom. But as they exit the classroom, societal expectations for students upon graduation will be greater.

In the middle of this century, 50 years ago, 20 percent of American jobs required a specific skill. At the end of this century, today, 80 percent of jobs need skilled workers. Thus, the American student will need to graduate from school better prepared for the high-tech world than ever before; but single-parent families and dual-income families, in general, will face more challenges in being able to be actively involved in the support of that child's education.

These challenges, and others, will face the American educational system. I rise today to take one step forward in easing the nationwide teacher shortage and offering challenging new opportunities for America's professional working people by introducing the Transition to Teaching Act of 1999.

Senator KENNEDY is to be commended for his work in including similar language in the Elementary and Secondary Education Reauthorization Bill. Representatives JIM DAVIS of Florida and TIM ROEMER of Indiana have taken the lead in the House of Representatives on this issue.

We have a very successful model on which to build the Transition to Teaching program. Since 1994, the Troops to Teachers program has brought more than 3,000 retired military personnel to our classrooms, particularly as math, science, and technology teachers.

Schools in my State of Florida have benefitted by more than 270 individuals who have successfully completed the Troops to Teachers program, and are bringing their life experience to the classroom today.

Troops to Teachers, and now Transition to Teaching, assist in overcoming two of the main obstacles that mid-career professionals face when they want to become a teacher. It is not impossible to do this now, as Mr. Aradine has shown; but this legislation will assist with and simplify the process.

The first issue that is addressed involves teaching colleges within universities. These teaching colleges are often set up for the traditional students in their early twenties, right out of high school, just starting their new lives.

These programs are generally taken over a multiyear period as a full-time college student. This legislation encourages teaching colleges to develop curriculum suitable for an individual who already has many years of experience. These programs are more streamlined, more flexible in school hours, and recognize that the mid-career student brings more life and work experience than does a traditional college student.

By developing such programs, teaching colleges can maintain high standards, but allow a mid-career worker, making the change into teaching to become certified in a more efficient, streamlined manner.

Teaching colleges are also asked to develop programs to maintain contact with and support for these new teachers during at least their first year in the classroom.

Second, Transition to Teaching will assist teachers who come to the profession in mid-career in a very tangible way.

Grants will be awarded, up to $5,000 per participant, to offset the costs of becoming a certified teacher. Why are these grants appropriate? The traditional college student comes directly from a family setting. They typically have limited personal or family financial obligations. In contrast, people like Mr. Aradine have their own families, spouses, children, and they have a house and car payments. They have the kind of financial obligations that would be typical of any mid-career adult. They would need this financial assistance in order to give them that little degree of support and help that will allow them to make this transition to become a certified teacher and move into a second career in the classroom.

Thus, this legislation deals with two of the biggest obstacles to becoming a teacher in mid-career. The certification process is streamlined, and stipends are provided to offset the cost of this additional education.

The success can be highlighted best with a personal story—a personal story, not like Mr. Aradine who is in his first year, but the personal story of a man who is already well into his second career. Ronald Dyches grew up in a military family. His father was a non-commissioned officer. When Mr. Dyches attended college at Sam Houston State, he followed in his family's military footsteps and enrolled in the ROTC.

When he graduated, he became a commissioned officer in the U.S. Army. For more than 21 years, Mr. Dyches served our Nation as an Army intelligence officer, living throughout the United States and Europe. He feels the highlight of his career were the three years he spent on General Norman Schwarzkopf's staff at MacDill Air Force Base in Tampa during the Gulf war. Mr. Dyches retired from the Army in 1995. But you can say his service to the country did not end.

With the help of the Troops to Teachers program, Mr. Dyches began a second career teaching social studies at Bloomingdale High School in Brandon, FL. He has been on the faculty at Bloomingdale since 1995—and this year he is teaching three periods of Honors World History and two periods of an elective class that he created: The History of the Vietnam War.

Mr. Dyches' military experiences are an integral part of his classroom teaching. In addition to developing new elective courses, such as the one on the Vietnam war, Mr. Dyches uses the wealth of knowledge acquired living and working twelve years in Europe with the military to enliven his World History class. With his background, he offers advice and counsel to students including those considering a military career or wishing to attend one of the Nation's service academies.

Mr. Dyches feels that this classroom experience would not have been possible without the Troops to Teachers program. It rekindled his interest in teaching from his college days, and it opened doors to certification that would have been closed to him.

In some sense, Troops to Teachers helps make "perfect marriages."

Bloomington High School needed a social studies teacher. Ron Dyches needed a challenging, rewarding second career. He, the school, and all of Bloomington's students have benefited from this perfect marriage.

Other professionals, other workers, should be allowed to follow in the footsteps of the retired military personnel like Mr. Dyches, who have set such a shining example for us and the students that they serve.

Law enforcement, attorneys, business leaders, scientists, entrepreneurs, technically competent men and women, and others in the private sector should be encouraged to share their wisdom with students.

As I mentioned, under the Transition to Teaching Act, colleges and universities would be awarded grants to design educational programs modeled after Troops to Teachers to train mid-career professionals, and others, to become teachers.

Individuals would be eligible for grants of up to $5,000 to pay for the courses and training they need to become qualified teachers.

In return for the training, the new teachers would agree to teach in low-income schools, determined by the percentage of title I students in the school population, for three years.

This legislation is timely. We are on the cusp of retirement of millions of baby boomers.

By encouraging recent retirees, or mid-career professionals, to become certified through Transition To Teaching and spend a few years in the classroom, we will bring the life skills of experienced professionals to our youngest citizens.

I encourage my colleagues to support this legislation.

Our nation's children deserve our best efforts to provide them with a world class education that they will need in the 21st century.

EXHIBIT 1

DISILLUSIONED FIND RENEWAL IN CLASSROOM—NEW TEACHERS COMING FROM OTHER PROFESSIONS

(By Liz Seymour)

To become a teacher, Mary Ann Richardson left a $113,000-a-year job lobbying Congress as a U.S. deputy assistant secretary in the Labor Department.

Now she's a 46-year-old intern at Falls Church High School, a substitute teacher in history, government and civics without her own classroom or even her own desk. Next year, after she receives her master's degree in education, she will be applying for teaching jobs that pay about $80,000 a year less than what she used to earn.

She grapples with a new identity and the loss of family income that she worked 16 years to get and will never see again. But, she said, "when those kids look up to you or they're having a crisis and you can help . . . I can tell you right now, I have found a purpose."

The teaching profession, shunned for decades by college graduates in search of higher pay and prestige, is attracting a growing number of people who started their careers in another field. Some are downsized corporate executives who've heard about the national teacher shortage and are enticed by the job security. Others, like Richardson, are disenchanting lawyers and lobbyists who found that their high salaries did not make up for job pressures.

They are being lured, too, by an easing of teacher licensing requirements for career-switchers in many states and school districts, a trend that is likely to continue as the national teacher shortage worsens.

About 55 percent of the students currently enrolled in post-undergraduate teaching programs started their careers in another field, according to a study to be released this week by the National Center for Education Information, a Washington-based think tank. The study also found that 27 percent of universities have programs solely for second-career teachers, up from 3 percent in 1984.

Officials in several Washington area school districts said they are seeing more people like Richardson, although they do not keep such figures.

"People used to be driven by the financial rewards of their career," said Kevin North, the director of employment for Fairfax County schools. "People are starting to step back and say, 'Other things are more important to me, and I want something more fulfilling.'"

Second-career teachers are appealing job candidates in several respects, said Linda Darling-Hammond, a professor of education at Stanford University and director of the National Commission on Teaching & America's Future. They are more mature than first-career teachers and often have experience with children through parenting. And because their decision to teach usually requires a substantial pay cut, they tend to have a deeper commitment to public education, she said.

Jerome "Rick" Peck, 55, a first-year science teacher at Loudoun County's Seneca Ridge Middle School, said the biggest attribute he brings to the classroom is "the ability to say to the kids—and to mean it and to know it—'Hey, this is something you're going to need later in life.'"

A certified public accountant with a master's degree in business administration from the Wharton School, Peck was earning a six-figure salary as chief financial officer of a magazine publishing company until it was sold a few years ago. He was financially secure and his decision to teach was "really selfish," Peck insists, because he saw it as something he would enjoy.

Five weeks into the school year, he still feels that way. But the transition hasn't been easy. He is mired in more paperwork than he expected. Many of his students fared poorly on the first test he gave, about the metric system, and some complained that he was lecturing too fast.

"When it comes to teaching, I'm definitely still learning," Peck said.

James R. Fields, 38, a former supervisor at United Parcel Service, is studying for his master's degree in education at George Washington University and substitute teaching at Sligo Middle School in Silver Spring.

Fields was earning $59,000 a year after 14 years at UPS. But when he moved from the Miami area to Montgomery County to get married, the company wouldn't transfer him.

He probably won't earn more than $35,000 a year when he gets a full-time teaching job next year. Fields said he is lucky that his wife, a gynecologist, has a salary that allows him to pursue teaching.

Fields, who is African American, said he hopes to be a strong influence on young black males. But right now, his main goal is to learn the routines of running a classroom. He said it's a challenge sometimes just to get his students to settle down—never mind actually paying attention and comprehending his lessons.

"It's kind of tough as a sub—[the students] think it's a field day," Fields said. "In a sense I see that as a plus; you quickly develop some classroom management skills."

Tom Brannan, 52, quit his $83,000-a-year job as an assistant city manager in Alexandria to enroll in the master's degree program at George Washington. He enjoyed many aspects of his job but not the long hours and frenetic pace. Time with his family was often cut short, he said.

In just a few weeks as a substitute teacher at Fairfax's George Marshall High School, Brannan already has seen rewards. One day, he was assigned on short notice to teach a history class, with little time to prepare a lesson. After sweating out the period, the bell rang and the students filed out. One stopped to ask him: "Are you gonna be back any time soon?"

Career-switchers typically take fewer education courses than students who go into teaching as a first career but often get more field work in schools.

Despite the growing calls from politicians and school officials to streamline the certification process for second-career teachers, they may still face challenges getting hired, said C. Emily Feistritzer, president of the National Center for Education Information.

Some may possess several advanced degrees, which would put them at a higher pay scale than most beginning teachers. Feistritzer said she has spotted another hurdle: Principals are sometimes less inclined to put older adults on their teaching staff because they won't be as easy to supervise as a 22-year-old college graduate.

Amy Harris is 26, younger than many of the other teachers who started in a different profession. She gave up a job at a brokerage firm in Minneapolis to lead 27 fifth-graders at Loudoun's Cool Spring Elementary School. Although she didn't take much of a pay cut to become a teacher, she eventually would have earned far more if she'd stayed in financial services.

She acknowledges that she second-guesses her decision once a month, when she writes a check to pay down $25,000 in debt from graduate school loans. But she is energized by her students. "I really enjoy their wit and their cleverness," she said.

Richardson's journey toward teaching began last year, when her mother was dying. She came to live with Richardson for the last four months of her life, during which mother and daughter had many soul-searching talks about careers, family and, above all, happiness.

"She said, 'Look, you've got about 20 years [of working] left—you need to do what you think is important and what you want to do,'" Richardson recalled.

Richardson, whose husband is an archivist, has put her two children on strict allowances to reduce household expenses since she quit her high-paying Labor Department job.

The worst of it, she said, is being viewed as an inexperienced newcomer at age 46.

"I worry that when I get done with this program, I have to start over and sell myself again," she said. "If I get through this, they should want me!"

Mr. GRAHAM. Mr. President, I send to the desk the legislation and ask for its appropriate reference.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be received and appropriately referred.

By Mr. MOYNIHAN (by request):

S. 1828. A bill to protect and provide resources for the Social Security System, to reserve surpluses to protect, strengthen and modernize the Medicare Program, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Finance.

THE STRENGTHEN SOCIAL SECURITY AND MEDICARE ACT OF 1999

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the following letter of transmittal from the White House be printed in the RECORD, following the text of the bill.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 1828

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Strengthen Social Security and Medicare Act of 1999."

SEC. 2. FINDINGS AND PURPOSE.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds that:

(1) The Social Security system is one of the cornerstones of American national policy and has allowed a generation of Americans to retire with dignity. For 30 percent of all senior citizens, Social Security benefits provide almost 90 percent of their retirement income. For 66 percent of all senior citizens, Social Security benefits provide over half of their retirement income. Poverty rates among the elderly are at the lowest level since the United States began to keep poverty statistics, due in large part to the Social Security system. The Social Security system, together with the additional protections afforded by the Medicare system, have been an outstanding success for past and current retirees and must be preserved for future retirees.

(2) The long-term solvency of the Social Security and Medicare trust funds is not assured. There is an estimated long-range actuarial deficit in the Social Security trust funds. According to the 1999 report of the Board of Trustees of the Social Security trust funds, the accumulated balances in the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund are currently projected to become unable to pay benefits in full on a timely basis starting in 2034. The Medicare system faces more immediate financial shortfalls, with the Hospital Insurance Trust Fund projected to become exhausted in 2015.

(3) In addition to preserving Social Security and Medicare, the Congress and the President have a responsibility to future generations to reduce the Federal debt held by the public. Significant debt reduction will contribute to the economy and improve the Government's ability to fulfill its responsibilities and to face future challenges, including preserving and strengthening Social Security and Medicare.

(4) The Federal Government is now in sound financial condition. The Federal budget is projected to generate significant surpluses. In fiscal years 1998 and 1999, there were unified budget surpluses—the first consecutive surpluses in more than 40 years. Over the next 15 years, the Government projects the on-budget surplus, which excludes Social Security, to total $2.9 trillion. The unified budget surplus (including Social Security) is projected by the Government to total $5.9 trillion over the next 15 years.

(5) The surplus, excluding Social Security, offers an unparalleled opportunity to: preserve Social Security; protect, strengthen, and modernize Medicare; and significantly reduce the Federal debt held by the public, for the future benefit of all Americans.

(b) PURPOSE.—It is the purpose of this Act to protect the Social Security surplus for debt reduction, to extend the solvency of Social Security, and to set aside a reserve to be used to protect, strengthen, and modernize Medicare.

SEC. 3. ADDITIONAL APPROPRIATIONS TO FEDERAL OLD-AGE AND SURVIVORS INSURANCE TRUST FUND AND FEDERAL DISABILITY INSURANCE TRUST FUND.

(a) PURPOSE.—The purpose of this section is to assure that the interest savings on the debt held by the public achieved as a result of Social Security surpluses from 2000 to 2015 are dedicated to Social Security solvency.

(b) ADDITIONAL APPROPRIATION TO TRUST FUNDS.—Section 201 of the Social Security Act is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(n) ADDITIONAL APPROPRIATION TO TRUST FUNDS.

"(1) In addition to the amounts appropriated to the Trust Funds under subsections (a) and (b), there is hereby appropriated to the Trust Funds, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated—

"(A) for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2011, and for each fiscal year thereafter through the fiscal year ending September 30, 2016, an amount equal to the prescribed amount for the fiscal year; and

"(B) for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2017, and for each fiscal year thereafter through the fiscal year ending September 30, 2044, an amount equal to the prescribed amount for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2016.

"(2) The amount appropriated by paragraph (1) in fiscal year shall be transferred in equal monthly installments.

"(3) The amount appropriated by paragraph (1) in each fiscal year shall be allocated between the Trust Funds in the same proportion as the taxes imposed by chapter 21 (other than sections 3101(b) and 3111(b)) of Title 26 with respect to wages (as defined in section 3121 of Title 26) reported to the Secretary of the Treasury or his delegate pursuant to subtitle F of Title 26, and the taxes imposed by chapter 2 (other than section 1401(b)) of Title 26 with respect to self-employment income (as defined in section 1402 of Title 26) reported to the Secretary of the Treasury or his delegate pursuant to subtitle F of Title 26, are allocated between the Trust Funds in the calendar year that begins in the fiscal year.

"(4) For purposes of this subsection, the "prescribed amount" for any fiscal year shall be determined by multiplying:

"(a) the excess of:

"(i) the sum of:

"(I) the face amount of all obligations of the United States held by the Trust Funds on the last day of the fiscal year immediately preceding the fiscal year of determination purchased with amounts appropriated or credited to the Trust Funds other than any amount appropriated under paragraph (1); and

"(II) the sum of the amounts appropriated under paragraph (1) and transferred under paragraph (2) through the last day of the fiscal year immediately preceding the fiscal year of determination, and an amount equal to the interest that would have been earned thereon had those amounts been invested in obligations of the United States issued directly to the Trust Funds under subsections (d) and (f)

"over—

"(ii) the face amount of all obligations of the United States held by the Trust Funds on September 30, 1999,

"times—

"(B) a rate of interest determined by the Secretary of the Treasury, at the beginning of the fiscal year of determination, as follows:

"(i) if there are any marketable interest-bearing obligations of the United States then forming a part of the public debt, a rate of interest determined by taking into consideration the average market yield (computed on the basis of daily closing market bid quotations or prices during the calendar month immediately preceding the determination of the rate of interest) on such obligations; and

"(ii) if there are no marketable interest-bearing obligations of the United States then forming a part of the public debt, a rate of interest determined to be the best approximation of the rate of interest described in clause (i), taking into consideration the average market yield (computed on the basis of daily closing market bid quotations or prices during the calendar month immediately preceding the determination of the rate of interest) on investment grade corporate obligations selected by the Secretary of the Treasury, less an adjustment made by the Secretary of the Treasury to take into account the difference between the yields on corporate obligations comparable to the obligations selected by the Secretary of the Treasury and yields on obligations of comparable maturities issued by risk-free government issuers selected by the Secretary of the Treasury."

SEC. 4. PROTECTION OF SOCIAL SECURITY SURPLUSES.

(a) POINTS OF ORDER TO PROTECT SOCIAL SECURITY SURPLUSES.—Section 312 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974 is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(g) POINTS OF ORDER TO PROTECT SOCIAL SECURITY SURPLUSES.—

"(1) CONCURRENT RESOLUTIONS ON THE BUDGET.—It shall not be in order in the House of Representatives or the Senate to consider any concurrent resolution on the budget, or conference report thereon or amendment thereto, that would set forth an on-budget deficit for any fiscal year.

"(2) SUBSEQUENT LEGISLATION.—It shall not be in order in the House of Representatives or the Senate to consider any bill, joint resolution, amendment, motion, or conference report if—

"(A) the enactment of that bill or resolution as reported;

"(B) the adoption and enactment of that amendment; or

"(C) the enactment of that bill or resolution in the form recommended in that conference report, would cause or increase an on-budget deficit for any fiscal year.

"(3) BUDGET RESOLUTION BASELINE.—(A) For purposes of this section, "set forth an on-budget deficit", with respect to a budget resolution, means the resolution set forth an on-budget deficit for a fiscal year and the baseline budget project of the surplus or deficit for such fiscal year on which such resolution is based projects an on-budget surplus, on-budget balance, or an on-budget deficit that is less than the deficit set forth in the resolution.

"(B) For purposes of this section, "cause or increase an on-budget deficit" with respect to legislation means causes or increases an on-budget deficit relative to the baseline budget project.

"(C) For purposes of this section, the term "baseline budget projection" means the projection described in section 257 of the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985 of current year levels of outlays, receipts, and the surplus or deficit into the budget year and future years, except that—"(i) if outlays for programs subject to discretionary appropriations are subject to discretionary statutory spending limits, such outlays shall be projected at the level of any applicable current adjusted statutory discretionary spending limits;

“(ii) if outlays for programs subject to discretionary appropriations are not subject to discretionary spending limits, such outlays shall be projected as required by section 257 beginning in the first fiscal year following the last fiscal year in which such limits applied; and

“(iii) with respect to direct spending or receipts legislation previously enacted during the current calendar year and after the most recent baseline estimate pursuant to section 257 of the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1995, the net extent (if any) by which all such legislation is more than fully paid for in one of the applicable time periods shall count as a credit for that time period against increases in direct spending or reductions in net revenue.”.

(b) CONTENT OF CONCURRENT RESOLUTION ON THE BUDGET.—Section 301(a) of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974 is amended by redesignating paragraphs (6) and (7) as paragraphs (7) and (8), respectively, and by inserting after paragraph (5) the following new paragraph:

“(6) the receipts, outlays, and surplus or deficit in the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund, combined, established by title II of the Social Security Act;”.

(c) SUPER MAJORITY REQUIREMENT.—

(1) Section 904(c)(1) of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974 is amended by inserting “312(g),” after “310(d)(2),”.

(2) Section 904(d)(2) of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974 is amended by inserting “312(g),” after “310(d)(2),”.

SEC. 5. PROTECTION OF MEDICARE.

(1) Section 301 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974 is amended by adding at the end the following:

“(j) POINT OF ORDER TO PROTECT MEDICARE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—It shall not be in order in the House of Representatives or the Senate to consider any concurrent resolution on the budget (or amendment, motion, or conference report on the resolution) that would decrease the on-budget surplus for the total of the period of fiscal years 2000 through 2009 below the level of the Medicare surplus reserve for those fiscal years as calculated in accordance with section 3(11).

“(2) INAPPLICABILITY.—This subsection shall not apply to legislation that—

“(A) appropriates a portion of the Medicare reserve for new amounts for prescription drug benefits under the Medicare program as part of or subsequent to legislation extending the solvency of the Medicare Hospital Insurance Trust Fund; or

“(B) appropriates new amounts from the general fund to the Medicare Hospital Insurance Trust Fund.”.

(2) Section 311(a) of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974 is amended by adding at the end the following:

“(4) ENFORCEMENT OF THE MEDICARE SURPLUS RESERVE.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—It shall not be in order in the House of Representatives or the Senate to consider any bill, joint resolution, amendment, motion, or conference report that together with associated interest costs would decrease the on-budget surplus for the total of the period of fiscal years 2000 through 2009 below the level of the Medicare surplus reserve for those fiscal years as calculated in accordance with section 3(11).

“(B) INAPPLICABILITY.—This paragraph shall not apply to legislation that—

“(i) appropriates a portion of the Medicare reserve for new amounts for prescription drug benefits under the Medicare program as part of or subsequent to legislation extending the solvency of the Medicare Hospital Insurance Trust Fund; or

THE WHITE HOUSE,
OFFICE OF THE PRESS SECRETARY,
October 26, 1999.

To the Congress of the United States:

I transmit herewith for your immediate consideration a legislative proposal entitled the “Strengthen Social Security and Medicare Act of 1999.”

The Social Security system is one of the cornerstones of American national policy and together with the additional protections afforded by the Medicare system, has helped provide retirement security for millions of Americans over the last 60 years. However, the long-term solvency of the Social Security and Medicare trust funds is not guaranteed. The Social Security trust fund is currently expected to become insolvent starting in 2034 as the number of retired workers doubles. The Medicare system also faces significant financial shortfalls, with the Hospital Insurance Trust Fund projected to become exhausted in 2015. We need to take additional steps to strengthen Social Security and Medicare for future generations of Americans.

In addition to preserving Social Security and Medicare, the Congress and the President have a responsibility to future generations to reduce the debt held by the public. Paying down the debt will produce substantial interest savings, and this legislation proposes to devote these entirely to Social Security after 2010. At the same time, by contributing to the growth of the overall economy debt reduction will improve the Government's ability to fulfill its responsibilities and to face future challenges, including preserving and strengthening Social Security and Medicare.

The enclosed bill would help achieve these goals by devoting the entire Social Security surpluses to debt reduction, extending the solvency of Social Security to 2050, protecting Social Security and Medicare funds in the budget process, reserving one-third of the non-Social Security surplus to strengthen and modernize Medicare, and paying down the debt by 2015. It is clear and straightforward legislation that would strengthen and preserve Social Security and Medicare for our children and grandchildren. The bill would:

Extend the life of Social Security from 2034 to 2050 by reinvesting the interest savings from the debt reduction resulting from Social Security surpluses.

Establish a Medicare surplus reserve equal to one-third of any on-budget surplus for the total of the period of fiscal years 2000 through 2009 to strengthen and modernize Medicare.

Add a further protection for Social Security and Medicare by extending the budget enforcement rules that have provided the foundation for our fiscal discipline, including the discretionary caps and pay-as-you-go budget rules.

I urge the prompt and favorable consideration of this proposal.

WILLIAM J. CLINTON.

SENATE RESOLUTION 208—EXPRESSING THE SENSE OF THE SENATE REGARDING UNITED STATES POLICY TOWARD THE NORTH ATLANTIC TREATY ORGANIZATION AND THE EUROPEAN UNION, IN LIGHT OF THE ALLIANCE'S APRIL 1999 WASHINGTON SUMMIT AND THE EUROPEAN UNION'S JUNE 1999 COLOGNE SUMMIT

Mr. ROTH (for himself, Mr. LUGAR, Mr. BIDEN, Mr. KYL, Mr. HAGEL, Mr. SMITH of Oregon, Mr. LIEBERMAN, and Mr. HELMS) submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations:

S. RES. 208

Whereas NATO is the only military alliance with both real defense capabilities and a transatlantic membership;

Whereas NATO is the only institution that promotes a uniquely transatlantic perspective and approach to issues concerning the security of North America and Europe;

Whereas NATO's military force structure, defense planning, command structures, and force goals must be sufficient for the collective self-defense of its members, capable of projecting power when the security of a NATO member is threatened, and provide a basis for ad hoc coalitions of willing partners among NATO members to defend common values and interests;

Whereas these requirements dictate that European NATO members possess national military capabilities to rapidly deploy forces over long distances, sustain operations for extended periods of time, and operate jointly with the United States in high-intensity conflicts;

Whereas NATO's military operations against the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia (Serbia and Montenegro) in 1999 highlighted (1) the significant shortcomings of European allies in command, control, communication, and intelligence resources; combat aircraft; precision-guided munitions; airlift; deployability; and logistics; and (2) the overall imbalance between United States and European defense capabilities;

Whereas this imbalance in United States and European NATO defense capabilities undercuts the Alliance's goal of equitable transatlantic burden-sharing;

Whereas NATO has undertaken great efforts to facilitate the emergence of a stronger European pillar within NATO through the European Security and Defense Identity, including the identification of NATO's Deputy Supreme Allied Commander as the commander of operations led by the Western European Union (WEU); the creation of a NATO Headquarters for WEU-led operations; and the establishment of close linkages between NATO and the WEU, including planning, exercises, and regular consultations;

Whereas in promulgating NATO's Defense Capabilities Initiative Alliance members committed themselves to improving their respective forces in five areas: (1) effective engagement; (2) deployability and mobility; (3) sustainability and logistics; (4) survivability; and (5) command, control and communications.

Whereas on June 3, 1999, the European Union, in the course of its Cologne Summit, agreed to absorb the functions and structures of the Western European Union, including its command structures and military forces, and established within it the post of High Representative for Common Foreign and Security Policy; and

Whereas the European Union's decisions at its June 3, 1999 Cologne Summit indicate a new determination of its member states to develop a European Security and Defense Identity with strengthened defense capabilities to address regional conflicts and crisis management: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved,

SECTION 1. UNITED STATES POLICY TOWARD NATO.

(a) SENSE OF THE SENATE.—The Senate—

(1) believes NATO should remain the primary institution through which European and North American allies address security issues of transatlantic concern;

(2) believes all NATO members should commit to improving their respective defense capabilities so that NATO can project power decisively with equitable burden-sharing;

(3) endorses NATO's decision to launch the Defense Capabilities Initiative, which is intended to improve the defense capabilities of the European Allies, particularly the deployability, mobility, sustainability, and interoperability of these European forces;

(4) acknowledges the resolve of the European Union to have the capacity for autonomous action so that it can take decisions and approve military action where the Alliance as a whole is not engaged; and

(5) calls upon the member states of NATO and the European Union to promulgate together during their respective meetings, ministerials, and summits in the course of 1999 principles that will strengthen the transatlantic partnership, reinforce unity within NATO, and harmonize their roles in transatlantic affairs.

(b) FURTHER SENSE OF THE SENATE.—It is further the sense of the Senate that—

(1) on matters of trans-Atlantic concern the European Union should make clear that it would undertake an autonomous mission through its European Security and Defense Identity only after the North Atlantic Treaty Organization had been offered the opportunity to undertake that mission but had referred it to the European Union for action;

(2) improved European military capabilities, not new institutions outside of the Alliance, are the key to a vibrant and more influential European Security and Defense Identity within NATO;

(3) failure of the European allies of the United States to achieve the goals established through the Defense Capabilities Initative would weaken support for the Alliance in the United States;

(4) the President, the Secretary of State, and the Secretary of Defense should fully use their offices to encourage the NATO allies of the United States to commit the resources necessary to upgrade their capabilities to rapidly deploy forces over long distances, sustain operations for extended periods of time, and operate jointly with the United States in high-intensity conflicts, thus making them effective partners of the United States in supporting mutual interests;

(5) the European Union must implement its Cologne Summit decisions concerning its Common Foreign and Security Policy in a manner that will ensure that non-WEU NATO allies, including Canada, the Czech Republic, Denmark, Hungary, Iceland, Norway, Poland, Turkey, and the United States, will not be discriminated against, but will be fully involved when the European Union addresses issues affecting their security interests;

(6) the European Union's implementation of the Cologne Summit decisions should not promote a strategic perspective on transatlantic security issues that conflicts with that promoted by the North Atlantic Treaty Organization;

(7) the European Union's implementation of its Cologne Summit decisions should not promote unnecessary duplication of the resources and capabilities provided by NATO; and

(8) the European Union's implementation of its Cologne Summit decisions should not promote a decline in the military resources that European allies contribute to NATO, but should instead promote the complete fulfillment of their respective force commitments to the Alliance.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce, with Senator ROTH, Senator LUGAR and other colleagues, a resolution that attempts to clarify the relationship between the European Union's new European Security and Defense Identity, popularly known by its acronym ESDI, and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Mr. President, as my colleagues will remember, ESDI has been gathering momentum since last December's meeting in St. Malo, France between French President Chirac and British Prime Minister Blair. It is part of the European Union's Common Foreign and Security Policy, which the EU sees as essential to its development as "an ever closer union."

ESDI was discussed in the communique of the April 1999 NATO Washington Summit, and it was elaborated on in the communique of the June 1999 EU Cologne Summit.

Let me say up front that I believe that ESDI—if it is developed in proper coordination with NATO—can serve the national interest of the United States by becoming a valuable vehicle for strengthening the European military contribution to NATO. Put another way, ESDI, if handled correctly, can at long last create more equitable burden-sharing between our European NATO allies and the United States.

NATO must and will remain the pre-eminent organization to defend the territory of the North Atlantic area against all external threats, as envisioned in Article 5 of the North Atlantic Treaty of April 4, 1949 and restated on April 30, 1998 by the United States Senate in its Resolution of Ratification of the enlargement of the Alliance to include Poland, the Czech Republic, and Hungary.

NATO may also, pursuant to Article 4 of the North Atlantic Treaty, on a case-by-case basis, engage in other missions when there is consensus among its members that there is a threat to the security and interests of NATO members. These missions have become known as non-Article 5 missions and were also reaffirmed by the Senate in the April 30, 1998 Resolution of Ratification of NATO enlargement.

ESDI's field of action should be restricted to those non-Article 5 missions in which NATO as an organization does not wish to involve itself. In practice, Mr. President, this would mean that at some future date if the need for military action arose in non-NATO Europe and the United States did not wish to become involved, the European Union could undertake the effort, utilizing, in part, NATO assets.

Mr. President, I believe that such a situation with a rejuvenated European pillar of the alliance could free up forces of this country for possible action elsewhere.

Let me emphasize, however, that in order for ESDI to accomplish both the goals of the European Union and of NATO, it must be clearly designed in a way that gives NATO the "right of first refusal" on non-Article 5 missions. To repeat—if NATO would not wish to become involved, then the European Union would have the option of leading the mission.

In addition, Mr. President, we must be sure that ESDI does not duplicate resources or discriminate against non-EU European NATO members (Norway, Turkey, Iceland, Poland, Czech Republic, and Hungary).

Mr. President, in my opinion the biggest danger is that ESDI could be constructed as an alternative to NATO for non-Article 5 missions. If this would happen, it could lead to an estrangement of the United States from its European allies.

Unfortunately, the June 1999 Cologne EU Summit communique subtly modified the language of the April 1999 Washington NATO Summit communique in the direction of ESDI as an autonomous EU military organ, using NATO assets, without giving NATO this necessary "right of first refusal" for non-Article 5 missions.

The European Union is currently involved in internal negotiations on a further elaboration of ESDI at the December EU Summit in Helsinki. The Sense of the Senate resolution that we are introducing serves as a clear message to our friends in the European Union that while we recognize their aspirations for a European Security and Defense Identity, it must complement NATO, not be in competition with, or duplicative of it.

With that in mind, our Resolution traces the development of ESDI, citing both the Washington NATO Summit and the Cologne EU Summit. It stresses that the Yugoslav air campaign demonstrated the military shortcomings of the European allies and the imbalance with the United States, both of which the allies have pledged to address through the NATO Defense Capabilities Initiative.

The Resolution then expresses several items that are the Sense of the Senate.

NATO should remain the primary institution for security issues of trans-Atlantic concern;

All NATO members should commit to improving their defense capabilities so that the Alliance can project power decisively with equitable burden-sharing;

The Defense Capabilities Initiative adopted at the Washington NATO Summit is specifically endorsed;

The resolve of the EU to have the capacity for autonomous action where the Alliance as a whole is not engaged is acknowledged;

The member states of NATO and the EU should promulgate principles that will strengthen the trans-Atlantic partnership and reinforce unity within NATO.

Then, Mr. President, cutting directly to the heart of preventing ESDI's becoming an alternative to NATO for non-Article 5 missions, the Resolution offers the Further Sense of the Senate that "on matters of trans-Atlantic concern the European Union should make clear that it would undertake an autonomous mission through its European Security and Defense Identity only after the North Atlantic Treaty Organization had been offered the opportunity to undertake that mission but had referred it to the European Union for action."

Further, and directly relevant to the issue of more equitable burden-sharing, the Resolution states the Sense of the Senate that "failure of the European allies of the United States to achieve the goals established through the Defense Capabilities Initiative would weaken support for the Alliance in the United States."

Addressing the issue of non-discrimination by the EU against non-EU NATO members, the Resolution states the Sense of the Senate that "the European Union must implement its Cologne Summit decisions concerning its Common Foreign and Security Policy in a manner that will ensure that non-WEU NATO allies, including Canada, the Czech Republic, Denmark, Hungary, Iceland, Norway, Poland, Turkey, and the United States, will not be discriminated against, but will be fully involved when the European Union addresses issues affecting their security interests."

Finally, the Resolution expresses the Sense of the Senate that the EU's implementation of its Cologne Summit decisions should not promote a strategic perspective on trans-Atlantic security issues that conflicts with that promoted by NATO and should not promote unnecessary duplication of the resources and capabilities provided by NATO.

Mr. President, the North Atlantic Treaty Organization remains the cornerstone of our engagement with Europe. The resolution we have introduced makes clear to our partners that we support the European Union's European Security and Defense Identity as long as it is developed in a manner to strengthen NATO, not weaken it.

I thank the Chair and yield the floor.

At the appropriate place, insert the following new section:

SEC. ____ REPORT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 9 months after the date of enactment of this section, the Comptroller General of the United States shall submit a report to Congress regarding the efficiency and effectiveness of Federal and State coordination of unemployment and retraining activities associated with the following programs and legislation:

(1) trade adjustment assistance (including NAFTA trade adjustment assistance) provided for under title II of the Trade Act of 1974;

(2) the Job Training Partnership Act;

(3) the Workforce Investment Act; and

(4) unemployment insurance.

(b) PERIOD COVERED.—The report shall cover the activities involved in the programs and legislation listed in subsection (a) from January 1, 1994 to December 31, 1999.

(c) DATA AND RECOMMENDATIONS.—The report shall at a minimum include specific data and recommendations regarding—

(1) the compatibility of program requirements related to the employment and retraining of dislocated workers in the United States, with particular emphasis on the trade adjustment assistance programs provided for under title II of the Trade Act of 1974;

(2) the compatibility of application procedures related to the employment and retraining of dislocated workers in the United States;

(3) the capacity of these programs to assist workers negatively impacted by foreign trade and the transfer of production to other countries, measured in terms of employment and wages;

(4) the capacity of these programs to assist secondary workers negatively impacted by foreign trade and the transfer of production to other countries, measured in terms of employment and wages;

(6) the effectiveness of the programs described in subsection (a) in achieving reemployment of United States workers and maintaining wage levels of United States workers who have been dislocated as a result of foreign trade and the transfer of production to other countries.

SANTORUM (AND BYRD)
AMENDMENT NO. 2346

(Ordered to lie on the table.)

Mr. SANTORUM (for himself and Mr. BYRD) submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by them to the bill, H.R. 434, supra; as follows:

At the appropriate place, insert the following new section:

SEC. —. MORATORIUM ON ANTIDUMPING AND COUNTERVAILING DUTY AGREEMENTS.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Senate makes the following findings:

(1) The Senate is deeply concerned that, in connection with the World Trade Organization ("WTO") Ministerial meeting to be held in Seattle, Washington, and the multilateral trade negotiations expected to follow, a few countries are seeking to circumvent the agreed list of negotiating topics and reopen debate over the WTO's antidumping and antisubsidy rules.

(2) Strong antidumping and antisubsidy rules are a cornerstone of the liberal trade policy of the United States and are essential to the health of the manufacturing and farm sectors in the United States.

(3) It has long been and remains the policy of the United States to support its antidumping and antisubsidy laws and to defend those laws in international negotiations.

(4) The WTO antidumping and antisubsidy rules concluded in the Uruguay Round have scarcely been tested since they entered into effect and certainly have not proved defective.

(5) Opening these rules to renegotiation could only lead to weakening them, which would in turn lead to even greater abuse of the world's open markets, particularly that of the United States.

(6) Conversely, avoiding another divisive fight over these rules is the best way to promote progress on the other, far more important, issues facing WTO members.

(7) It is therefore essential that negotiations on these antidumping and antisubsidy matters not be reopened under the auspices of the WTO or otherwise.

(b) SENSE OF THE SENATE.—It is the sense of the Senate that the President should—

(1) not participate in any international negotiation in which antidumping or antisubsidy rules are part of the negotiating agenda;

(2) refrain from submitting for congressional approval agreements that require weakening changes to the current antidumping and countervailing duty laws and enforcement policies of the United States; and

(3) enforce the antidumping and countervailing duty laws vigorously in all pending and future cases.

AMENDMENT NO. 2358

At the appropriate place, insert the following:

SEC. ____ SENSE OF CONGRESS REGARDING COMPREHENSIVE DEBT RELIEF FOR THE WORLD'S POOREST COUNTRIES.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress makes the following findings:

(1) The burden of external debt has become a major impediment to economic growth and poverty reduction in many of the world's poorest countries.

(2) Until recently, the United States Government and other official creditors sought to address this problem by rescheduling loans and in some cases providing limited debt reduction.

(3) Despite such efforts, the cumulative debt of many of the world's poorest countries continued to grow beyond their capacity to repay.

(4) In 1997, the Group of Seven, the World Bank, and the International Monetary Fund adopted the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries Initiative (HIPC), a commitment by the international community that all multilateral and bilateral creditors, acting in a coordinated and concerted fashion, would reduce poor country debt to a sustainable level.

(5) The HIPC Initiative is currently undergoing reforms to address concerns raised about country conditionality, the amount of debt forgiven, and the allocation of savings realized through the debt forgiveness program to ensure that the Initiative accomplishes the goals of economic growth and poverty alleviation in the world's poorest countries.

(6) Recently, the President requested Congress to provide additional resources for bilateral debt forgiveness and additional United States contributions to the HIPC Trust Fund.

(b) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that—

(1) Congress and the President should work together, without undue delay and in concert with the international community, to make comprehensive debt relief available to the world's poorest countries in a manner that promotes economic growth and poverty alleviation;

(2) this program of bilateral and multilateral debt relief should be designed to strengthen and expand the private sector, encourage increased trade and investment, support the development of free markets, and promote broad-scale economic growth in beneficiary countries;

(3) this program of debt relief should also support the adoption of policies to alleviate poverty and to ensure that benefits are shared widely among the population, such as through initiatives to advance education, improve health, combat AIDS, and promote clean water and environmental protection;

(4) these debt relief agreements should be designed and implemented in a transparent manner and with the broad participation of the citizenry of the debtor country and should ensure that country circumstances are adequately taken into account;

(5) no country should receive the benefits of debt relief if that country does not cooperate with the United States on terrorism or narcotics enforcement, is a gross violator of the human rights of its citizens, or is engaged in conflict or spends excessively on its military; and

(6) in order to prevent adverse impact on a key industry in many developing countries, the International Monetary Fund must mobilize its own resources for providing debt relief to eligible countries without allowing gold to reach the open market, or otherwise adversely affecting the market price of gold.

Each certification shall specify the date on which eligibility under this chapter begins.

"(b) NOTICE.—Upon making a determination on a petition, the Secretary shall promptly publish a summary of the determination in the Federal Register together with the Secretary's reasons for making the determination.

"(c) TERMINATION OF CERTIFICATION.—Whenever the Secretary determines, with respect to any certification of eligibility under this chapter, that the decline in price for the agricultural commodity covered by the certification is no longer attributable to the conditions described in section 292, the Secretary shall terminate such certification and promptly cause notice of such termination to be published in the Federal Register together with the Secretary's reasons for making such determination.

"SEC. 294. STUDY BY SECRETARY WHEN INTERNATIONAL TRADE COMMISSION BEGINS INVESTIGATION.

Upon receipt of the notification, the Secretary shall immediately begin a study of—

"(1) the number of agricultural commodity producers producing a like or directly competitive agricultural commodity who have been or are likely to be certified as eligible for adjustment assistance under this chapter, and

"(2) The producer certifies that the producer has not received cash benefits under any provision of this title other than this chapter.

"(3) The producer's net farm income (as determined by the Secretary) for the most recent year is less than the producer's net farm income for the latest year in which no adjustment assistance was received by the producer under this chapter.

"(4) The producer certifies that the producer has met with an Extension Service employee or agent to obtain, at no cost to the producer, information and technical assistance that will assist the producer in adjusting to import competition with respect to the adversely affected agricultural commodity, including—

"(A) information regarding the feasibility and desirability of substituting 1 or more alternative commodities for the adversely affected agricultural commodity; and

"(A) the payment was made without fault on the part of such person, and

"(B) requiring such repayment would be contrary to equity and good conscience.

"(2) RECOVERY OF OVERPAYMENT.—Unless an overpayment is otherwise recovered, or waived under paragraph (1), the Secretary shall recover the overpayment by deductions from any sums payable to such person under this chapter.

AMENDMENT NO. 2360

At the appropriate place, insert the following new section:

SEC. . AGRICULTURE TRADE NEGOTIATING OBJECTIVES AND CONSULTATIONS WITH CONGRESS.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds that—

(1) United States agriculture contributes positively to the United States balance of trade and United States agricultural exports support in excess of 1,000,000 United States jobs;

(2) United States agriculture competes successfully worldwide despite the fact that United States producers are at a competitive disadvantage because of the trade distorting support and subsidy practices of other countries and despite the fact that significant tariff and nontariff barriers exist to United States exports; and

(3) a successful conclusion of the next round of World Trade Organization negotiations is critically important to the United States agricultural sector.

(b) OBJECTIVES.—The agricultural trade negotiating objectives of the United States with respect to the World Trade Organization negotiations include—

(1) immediately eliminating all export subsidies worldwide while maintaining bona fide food aid and preserving United States market development and export credit programs that allow the United States to compete with other foreign export promotion efforts;

(2) leveling the playing field for United States producers of agricultural products by eliminating blue box subsidies and disciplining domestic supports in a way that forces producers to face world prices on all production in excess of domestic food security needs while allowing the preservation of non-trade distorting programs to support family farms and rural communities;

(3) disciplining state trading enterprises by insisting on transparency and banning discriminatory pricing practices that amount to de facto export subsidies so that the enterprises do not (except in cases of bona fide food aid) sell in foreign markets at prices below domestic market prices or prices below the full costs of acquiring and delivering agricultural products to the foreign markets;

(4) insisting that the Sanitary and Phytosanitary Accord agreed to in the Uruguay Round applies to new technologies, including biotechnology, and clarifying that labeling requirements to allow consumers to make choices regarding biotechnology products or other regulatory requirements cannot be used as disguised barriers to trade;

(5) increasing opportunities for United States exports of agricultural products by first reducing tariff and nontariff barriers to trade to the same or lower levels than exist in the United States and then eliminating barriers, such as—

(A) restrictive or trade distorting practices that adversely impact perishable or cyclical products;

(B) restrictive rules in the administration of tariff-rate quotas; and

(C) unjustified sanitary and phytosanitary restrictions or other unjustified technical barriers to agricultural trade;

(6) encouraging government policies that avoid price-depressing surpluses; and

(7) strengthening dispute settlement procedures so that countries cannot maintain unjustified restrictions on United States exports in contravention of their commitments.

(c) CONSULTATION WITH CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEES.—

(1) CONSULTATION BEFORE OFFER MADE.—Before the United States Trade Representative negotiates a trade agreement that would reduce tariffs on agricultural products or require a change in United States agricultural law, the United States Trade Representative shall consult with the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry and the Committee on Finance of the Senate and the Committee on Agriculture and the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives.

(2) CONSULTATION BEFORE AGREEMENT INITIALED.—Not less than 48 hours before initiating an agreement relating to agricultural trade negotiated under the auspices of the World Trade Organization, the United States Trade Representative shall consult closely with the committees referred to in paragraph (1) regarding—

(i) ACCELERATION OF INTRODUCTION OF PRIORITY VACCINES.—It is the sense of Congress that the President and Federal agencies (including the Department of State, the Department of Health and Human Services, and the Department of the Treasury) should work together in vigorous support of the creation and funding of a multi-lateral, international effort, such as a vaccine purchase fund, to accelerate the introduction of vaccines to which the tax credit under section 45D of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (as so added) applies and of other priority vaccines into the poorest countries in the world.

SANTORUM (AND BYRD)
AMENDMENT NO. 2395

(Ordered to lie on the table.)

Mr. SANTORUM (for himself, and Mr. BYRD) submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by them to the bill, H.R. 434, supra; as follows:

At the appropriate place, insert the following new section:

SEC. ____ MORATORIUM ON ANTIDUMPING AND COUNTERVAILING DUTY AGREEMENTS.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Senate makes the following findings:

(1) The Senate is deeply concerned that, in connection with the World Trade Organization ("WTO") Ministerial meeting to be held in Seattle, Washington, and the multilateral trade negotiations expected to follow, a few countries are seeking to circumvent the agreed list of negotiating topics and reopen debate over the WTO's antidumping and antisubsidy rules.

(2) Strong antidumping and antisubsidy rules are a cornerstone of the liberal trade policy of the United States and are essential to the health of the manufacturing and farm sectors in the United States.

(3) It has long been and remains the policy of the United States to support its antidumping and antisubsidy laws and to defend those laws in international negotiations.

(4) The WTO antidumping and antisubsidy rules concluded in the Uruguay Round have scarcely been tested since they entered into effect and certainly have not proved defective.

(5) Opening these rules to renegotiation could only lead to weakening them, which would in turn lead to even greater abuse of the world's open markets, particularly that of the United States.

(6) Conversely, avoiding another divisive fight over these rules is the best way to promote progress on the other, far more important, issues facing WTO members.

(7) It is therefore essential that negotiations on these antidumping and antisubsidy matters not be reopened under the auspices of the WTO or otherwise.

(b) SENSE OF THE SENATE.—It is the sense of the Senate that the President should—

(1) not participate in any international negotiation in which antidumping or antisubsidy rules are part of the negotiating agenda;

(2) refrain from submitting for congressional approval agreements that require changes to the current antidumping and countervailing duty laws and enforcement policies of the United States; and

(3) enforce the antidumping and countervailing duty laws vigorously in all pending and future cases.

(1) REDUCTION OF BARRIERS TO TRADE IN GOODS.—The principal negotiating objective of the United States regarding barriers to trade in goods is to obtain competitive opportunities for United States exports in foreign markets substantially equivalent to the opportunities afforded foreign exports to United States markets, including the reduction or elimination of tariff and nontariff trade barriers, including—

(A) tariff and nontariff disparities remaining from previous rounds of multilateral trade negotiations that have put United States exports at a competitive disadvantage in world markets;

(B) measures identified in the annual report prepared under section 181 of the Trade Act of 1974 (19 U.S.C. 2241); and

(C) tariff elimination for products identified in section 111(b) of the Uruguay Round Agreements Act (19 U.S.C. 3521(b)) and the accompanying Statement of Administrative Action related to that section.

(2) TRADE IN SERVICES.—

(A) The principal negotiating objectives of the United States regarding trade in services are—

(i) to reduce or eliminate barriers to, or other distortions of, international trade in services, including regulatory and other barriers that deny national treatment or unreasonably restrict the establishment and operation of service suppliers in foreign markets; and

(ii) to develop internationally agreed rules, including dispute settlement procedures, that—

(I) are consistent with the commercial policies of the United States, and

(II) will reduce or eliminate such barriers or distortions, and help ensure fair, equitable opportunities for foreign markets.

(B) In pursuing the negotiating objectives described in subparagraph (A), United States negotiators shall take into account legitimate United States domestic objectives, including protection of legitimate health, safety, essential security, environmental, consumer, and employment opportunity interests. The preceding sentence shall not be construed to authorize any modification of United States law.

(3) FOREIGN INVESTMENT.—

(A) The principal negotiating objectives of the United States regarding foreign investment are—

(i) to reduce or eliminate artificial or trade-distorting barriers to foreign investment, to expand the principle of national treatment, and to reduce unreasonable barriers to establishment; and

(I) will help ensure a free flow of foreign investment, and

(II) will reduce or eliminate the trade distortive effects of certain trade-related investment measures.

(B) In pursuing the negotiating objectives described in subparagraph (A), United States negotiators shall take into account legitimate United States domestic objectives, including protection of legitimate health, safety, essential security, environmental, consumer, and employment opportunity interests. The preceding sentence shall not be construed to authorize any modification of United States law.

(A) to further promote adequate and effective protection of intellectual property rights, by—

(i) seeking the enactment and effective enforcement by foreign countries of laws that—

(I) recognize and adequately protect intellectual property, including copyrights, patents, trademarks, semiconductor chip layout designs, and trade secrets, and

(II) provide protection against unfair competition;

(ii) accelerating and ensuring the full implementation of the Agreement on Trade-Related Aspects of Intellectual Property Rights referred to in section 101(d)(15) of the Uruguay Round Agreements Act (19 U.S.C. 3511(d)(15)), and achieving improvements in the standards of that Agreement;

(iii) providing strong protection for new and emerging technologies and new methods of transmitting and distributing products embodying intellectual property;

(iv) preventing or eliminating discrimination with respect to matters affecting the availability, acquisition, scope, maintenance, use, and enforcement of intellectual property rights; and

(v) providing for strong enforcement of intellectual property rights through accessible, expeditious, and effective civil, administrative, and criminal enforcement mechanisms;

(B) to secure fair, equitable, and non-discriminatory market access opportunities for United States persons that rely on intellectual property protection; and

(C) to recognize that the inclusion in the WTO of—

(i) adequate and effective substantive norms and standards for the protection and enforcement of intellectual property rights, and

(ii) dispute settlement provisions and enforcement procedures, is without prejudice to other complementary initiatives undertaken in other international organizations.

(5) AGRICULTURE.—The principal negotiating objectives of the United States with respect to agriculture are, in addition to those set forth in section 1123(b) of the Food Security Act of 1985 (7 U.S.C. 1736r(b)), to achieve, on an expedited basis to the maximum extent feasible, more open and fair conditions of trade in agricultural commodities by—

(A) developing, strengthening, and clarifying rules for agricultural trade, including disciplines on restrictive or trade-distorting import and export practices such as those that would impact perishable or cyclical products;

(B) increasing United States agricultural exports by eliminating barriers to trade (including transparent and nontransparent barriers) and reducing or eliminating the subsidization of agricultural production consistent with the United States policy of agricultural stabilization in cyclical and unpredictable markets;

(C) creating a free and more open world agricultural trading system by resolving questions pertaining to export and other trade-distorting subsidies, market pricing, and market access;

(D) eliminating or reducing substantially other specific constraints to fair trade and more open market access, such as tariffs, quotas, and other nontariff practices; and

(E) developing, strengthening, and clarifying rules that address practices that unfairly decrease United States market access opportunities or distort agricultural markets to the detriment of the United States, including—

(i) unfair or trade-distorting activities of state trading enterprises and other administrative mechanisms, including lack of price transparency;

(ii) unjustified restrictions or commercial requirements affecting new technologies, including biotechnology;

(iii) unjustified sanitary or phytosanitary restrictions;

(iv) other unjustified technical barriers to trade; and

(v) restrictive rules in the administration of tariff-rate quotas.

(6) UNFAIR TRADE PRACTICES.—The principal negotiating objectives of the United States with respect to unfair trade practices are—

(A) to enhance the operation and effectiveness of the relevant Uruguay Round Agreements and any other agreements designed to define, deter, discourage the persistent use of, and otherwise discipline, unfair trade practices having adverse trade effects, including forms of subsidy and dumping not adequately disciplined, such as resource input subsidies, diversionary dumping, dumped or subsidized inputs, third country dumping, circumvention of antidumping or countervailing duty orders, and export targeting practices; and

(B) to obtain the enforcement of WTO rules against—

(i) trade-distorting practices of state trading enterprises, and

(ii) the acts, practices, or policies of any foreign government which, as a practical matter, unreasonably require that—

(I) substantial direct investment in the foreign country be made,

(II) intellectual property be licensed to the foreign country or to any firm of the foreign country, or

(III) other collateral concessions be made, as a condition for the importation of any product or service of the United States into the foreign country or as a condition for carrying on business in the foreign country.

SEC. ____03. TRADE AGREEMENT NEGOTIATING AUTHORITY.

(a) AGREEMENTS REGARDING TARIFF BARRIERS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Whenever the President determines that 1 or more existing duties or other import restrictions of any foreign country or the United States are unduly burdening and restricting the foreign trade of the United States and that the purposes, policies, and objectives of this title will be promoted thereby, the President—

(A) may enter into trade agreements with foreign countries before—

(i) October 1, 2001, or

(ii) October 1, 2005, if the authority provided by this title is extended under subsection (c); and

(i) such modification or continuance of any existing duty,

(ii) such continuance of existing duty-free or excise treatment, or

(iii) such additional duties, as the President determines to be required or appropriate to carry out any such trade agreement.

(2) LIMITATIONS.—No proclamation may be made under paragraph (1) that—

(A) the difference between the reduction without regard to this paragraph and the next lower whole number; or

(B) one-half of 1 percent ad valorem.

(5) OTHER LIMITATIONS.—A rate of duty reduction or increase that may not be proclaimed by reason of paragraph (2) may take effect only if a provision authorizing such reduction or increase is included within an implementing bill provided for under section ____05 and that bill is enacted into law.

(B) NOTICE REQUIRED.—The modification or staged rate reduction authorized under subparagraph (A) with respect to any negotiation initiated after the date of enactment of this Act may be proclaimed only on articles in tariff categories with respect to which the President has provided notice in accordance with section ____04(a).

(Ordered to lie on the table.)

Mr. DEWINE submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to amendment No. 2325 proposed by Mr. ROTH to the bill, H.R. 434, supra; as follows:

At the appropriate place, insert the following new title:

TITLE —DUMPING AND SUBSIDY OFFSET

SEC. 01. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the “Continued Dumping and Subsidy Offset Act of 1999”.

SEC. 02. FINDINGS OF CONGRESS.

Congress makes the following findings:

(1) Consistent with the rights of the United States under the World Trade Organization, injurious dumping is to be condemned and actionable subsidies which cause injury to domestic industries must be effectively neutralized.

(2) United States unfair trade laws have as their purpose the restoration of conditions of fair trade so that jobs and investment that should be in the United States are not lost through the false market signals.

(3) The continued dumping or subsidization of imported products after the issuance of antidumping orders or findings or countervailing duty orders can frustrate the remedial purpose of the laws by preventing market prices from returning to fair levels.

(4) Where dumping or subsidization continues, domestic producers will be reluctant to reinvest or rehire and may be unable to maintain pension and health care benefits that conditions of fair trade would permit. Similarly, small businesses and American farmers and ranchers may be unable to pay down accumulated debt, to obtain working capital, or to otherwise remain viable.

(5) United States trade laws should be strengthened to see that the remedial purpose of those laws is achieved.

At the end insert the following:

DIVISION 2—AGRIBUSINESS MERGER MORATORIUM AND ANTITRUST REVIEW ACT OF 1999

SEC. ____ 1. SHORT TITLE.

This division may be cited as the "Agribusiness Merger Moratorium and Antitrust Review Act of 1999".

SEC. ____ 2. FINDINGS.

Congress finds the following:

(1) Concentration in the agricultural economy including mergers, acquisitions, and other combinations and alliances among suppliers, producers, packers, other food processors, and distributors has been accelerating at a rapid pace in the 1990's.

(2) The trend toward greater concentration in agriculture has important and far-reaching implications not only for family-based farmers, but also for the food we eat, the communities we live in, and the integrity of the natural environment upon which we all depend.

(3) In the past decade and a half, the top 4 largest pork packers have seized control of some 57 percent of the market, up from 36 percent. Over the same period, the top 4 beef packers have expanded their market share from 32 percent to 80 percent, the top 4 flour millers have increased their market share from 40 percent to 62 percent, and the market share of the top 4 soybean crushers has jumped from 54 percent to 80 percent.

(4) Today the top 4 sheep, poultry, wet corn, and dry corn processors now control 73 percent, 55 percent, 74 percent, and 57 percent of the market, respectively.

(5) A handful of firms dominate the processing of every major commodity. Many of them are vertically integrated, which means that they control successive stages of the food chain, from inputs to production to distribution.

(6) Growing concentration of the agricultural sector has restricted choices for farmers trying to sell their products. As the bargaining power of agribusiness firms over farmers increases, agricultural commodity markets are becoming stacked against the farmer.

(7) The farmer's share of every retail dollar has plummeted from around 50 percent in 1952, to less than 25 percent today, while the profit share for farm input, marketing, and processing companies has risen.

(8) While agribusiness conglomerates are posting record earnings, farmers are facing desperate times. The commodity price index is the lowest since 1987. Hog prices are at their lowest since 1972. Cotton and soybean prices are the lowest they have been since the early 1970's.

(9) The benefits of low commodity prices are not being passed on to American consumers. The gap between what shoppers pay for food and what farmers are paid is growing wider. From 1984 to 1998, prices paid to farmers fell 36 percent, while consumer food prices actually increased by 3 percent.

(10) Concentration, low prices, anti-competitive practices, and other manipulations and abuses of the agricultural economy are driving family-based farmers out of business. Farmers are going bankrupt or giving up, and few are taking their places; more farm families are having to rely on other jobs to stay afloat; and the number of farmers leaving the land will continue to increase unless and until these trends are reversed.

(11) The decline of family-based agriculture undermines the economies of rural communities across America; it has pushed Main Street businesses, from equipment suppliers to insurance sales people, out of business or to the brink of insolvency.

(12) Increased concentration in the agribusiness sector has a harmful effect on the environment; corporate hog farming, for example, threatens the integrity of local water supplies and creates noxious odors in neighboring communities. Concentration also can increase the risks to food safety and limit the biodiversity of plants and animals.

(13) The decline of family-based farming poses a direct threat to American families and family values, by subjecting farm families to turmoil and stress.

(14) The decline of family-based farming causes the demise of rural communities, as stores lose customers, churches lose congregations, schools and clinics become under-used, career opportunities for young people dry up, and local inequalities of wealth and income grow wider.

(15) These developments are not the result of inevitable market forces. They are the consequence of policies made in Washington, including farm, antitrust, and trade policies.

(16) To restore competition in the agricultural economy, and to increase the bargaining power and enhance economic prospects for family-based farmers, the trend toward concentration must be reversed.

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

150TH ANNIVERSARY OF PFIZER, INC.

• Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I rise today to congratulate Pfizer, Inc., on its 150th anniversary and to applaud the company for its many innovations in the pharmaceutical industry. The history of Pfizer is one of risk-taking, confident decision-making, and dramatic medical advances. It is the story of a small chemical company founded in Brooklyn, New York, which over 150 years has evolved into one of the world's premier pharmaceutical enterprises.

Cousins Charles Pfizer and Charles Erhart emigrated to the United States from Germany in the mid-1840s. In New York City, the young cousins combined their skills and in 1849 founded a small chemical firm. Charles Pfizer & Company improved the American chemical market by manufacturing specialty chemicals that had not yet been produced in America. During its first 75 years, the company made many important discoveries and marketed popular and effective drug treatments. Union soldiers used Pfizer drugs extensively during the Civil War.

However, Pfizer's real emergence as an industry leader was the result of a daring risk taken by Pfizer executives in the 1940s. In 1928, when Alexander Fleming discovered the germ-killing properties of penicillin, he knew that it could have a profound medical value. Yet, Fleming could not figure out a way to mass-produce the drug. In 1941, following new discoveries relating to this "wonder drug", Pfizer executives put their own stocks at stake and invested millions of dollars in finding a way to mass-produce penicillin. Eventually, they succeeded. The breakthrough came just in time to send penicillin to the front lines of World War II.

From that point forward, Pfizer evolved into an international leader in the pharmaceutical industry, opening facilities around the globe and developing new and effective antibiotics to combat deadly infectious diseases. Pfizer's products, which treat a variety of diseases and disorders, are now available in 150 countries. The company also has thriving consumer health care and animal health care divisions. Pfizer now employs close to 50,000 people in 85 countries, including 4,939 employees in their Groton research facility, which lies in my home state of Connecticut.

The desire to live a healthy life is universal. But for millions of people around the world, access to high quality health care remains out of reach. Pfizer is committed to bringing its medicines to those in need. Through Sharing the Care, a program started in 1993, Pfizer has filled more than 3.0 million prescriptions—valued at over $170 million—for more than one million uninsured patients in the United States. The program was cited by American Benefactor, a leading philanthropy journal, in selecting Pfizer as one of America's 25 most generous companies for 1998.

Pfizer today is renowned as one of the world's most admired corporations for the many contributions it has made to our society. I applaud Pfizer on its 150th anniversary for its continued efforts to making this nation and this world a healthier place. •

RESIGNATION OF WALLY BEYER

• Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, I rise today to recognize the achievements of a true public servant, a fellow North Dakotan, and a man I am proud to call my friend.

Wally Beyer has served this nation as Administrator of the Rural Utilities Service, the former Rural Electric Administration, for 6 years now.

Wally is the 12th administrator of the agency originally created by Franklin Roosevelt; an agency that has developed as we've developed as a nation: from providing basic electric and telecommunications needs for America's rural areas, to making sure rural America takes its rightful place in the new communication age.

Wally has helped steer the RUS toward not only providing the critical continuing need for clean water and waste water facilities, but into new territory of critical distance-learning and medical links for areas that otherwise might not have access to these important services.

Since he was first nominated by President Clinton and confirmed by the Senate in late 1993, Wally's steady hand, professional skill and patience has served our Nation well.

Whether it was to guide the refinancing of electric borrowers through the high interest years of the 1970's and 80's, or to lead the modernization and stream-lining of rules and regulations at the RUA, Wally Beyer managed the agency with a careful balancing of the needs of rural America and the needs of the American taxpayer.

Wally Beyer has served this nation well. As a crew chief for the U.S. Air Force air rescue squadron in the Caribbean in the 50's, as an engineer for the Verendrye Electric Cooperative bringing electricity to north central North Dakota, and as head of the reinvigorated RUS.

Wally plans to return to our native North Dakota, along with his wife Pat. With three married children and three growing grandchildren, he says he will stay active and involved in public service. Washington's loss will be North Dakota's gain as Wally Beyer returns home to the land we both love.

In a recent speech announcing those plans, Wally said, "My season has come. I feel good about it. I've got to get back to North Dakota where the air is sweet. You won't miss me when I'm gone."

Well Wally. Your legacy at the RUS is in tact, and thanks to your hard work is, as you said, "humming along."

But you are wrong to say you won't be missed. Your selfless service to the public good will be missed by many, who will have to continue the restructuring of the electric utility industry without your sure hand.

You will be missed by those electric consumers in 46 States that were well aware that you, as a rural resident, understood their needs.

And you will be missed by those who relied on your friendship and good judgement when seeking to solve the long term problems continuing to plague rural America.

So, as you take your leave, I know my colleagues in the Senate join me in wishing you and your family the very best in what ever path you choose.

You have made a lasting impact and a worthwhile contribution to your country. Wally Beyer, you have made a difference and we are all better for it. Thank you, Mr. Administrator. •

IN RECOGNITION OF CAMIE OGREN

• Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, it is my pleasure today to recognize an outstanding South Carolina athlete, Camie Ogren. In August, Camie brought home gold medals in the tricks event, the jump event and the team overall competition in the 1999 World Disabled Water Ski Championships in Windsor, England. This was her fifth trip to the international competition representing the U.S. Disabled Water Ski Team. In 1998, Camie broke the women's world record for slalom at the National Disabled Championships in Birmingham, Ala., where she also won four gold medals in the leg amputee division.

Skiing has been an important part of Camie's life since her childhood in Windermere, Florida near Orlando, and in the finest athletic spirit, she continued to pursue the sport after bone cancer claimed her right leg more than 10 years ago when she was 15. Two weeks after her leg was amputated, Camie was back in the water and a few months later she competed in her first world championship in Australia where she earned second and third place honors.

She moved to Charleston, S.C. a year and a half ago to work with the Medical University of South Carolina's Anchors Away program. Operated through the Department of Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation, Anchors Away allows people with disabilities and their families access to boats and other recreational activities, mostly on the water. With her expertise, Camie helped Anchors Away form a disabled water ski team that competes in national competitions and has also conducted out-of-town ski clinics in South and North Carolina.

Camie is a remarkable person and athlete whose warmth and dedication to the sport of water-skiing has endeared her to the Charleston community. She serves as a powerful example to persons with disabilities of what they can achieve in the realm of competition. South Carolina is lucky to have Camie Ogren and her limitless energy in advancing her sport and its athletes.●

TRIBUTE TO COLONEL BERNT BALCHEN

● Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, Col. Bernt Balchen, A Norwegian-born pilot, became one of America's great Arctic experts of the 20th Century. A patriotic American, he was also a great friend of the State of Alaska.

Born in Norway on October 23, 1899, Colonel Balchen served in the French Foreign Legion, and both the Finnish and Norwegian Armies in World War I; and became a pilot in the Norwegian Naval Air Corps in 1921.

Throughout the 1920's and 1930's Colonel Balchen participated in numerous trans-Atlantic and Arctic expeditions. During 1928-1930, Balchen was chief pilot on Admiral Byrd's Atlantic expedition and on November 29, 1929, he piloted the first airplane, a Ford trimotor "Floyd Bennett" across the South Pole. Congress conferred United States citizenship of Colonel Balchen in 1931.

When World War II started in 1939, Colonel Balchen began ferrying airplanes to England and Singapore for the British. In 1941, he joined the United States Army Air Corps at the request of General "Hap" Arnold, and was assigned to Greenland to Supervise the Construction of, and later command, our famous airbase known as "Blue West 8". His command is credited with numerous rescue missions saving many pilots whose planes had gone down on the icecap.

In 1943, Balchen became chief of allied transportation command for Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Finland, and the Soviet Union, operating out of a secret base in Scotland. During that period, his command regularly flew across enemy-occupied territory to rescue downed allied airmen and insert commandos and intelligence agents behind enemy lines. He also led highly secret missions into Norway to resupply underground resistance forces for their operations against the German army of occupation.

After the war, Balchen was recalled to active duty with the United States Air Force in 1948 and assigned to command the 10th rescue squadron at Elmendorf Air Force Base, Alaska. The techniques of Arctic Rescue that Colonel Balchen developed during this assignment continue to save the lives of civilian and military personnel to this day. In May 1949, he flew a Douglas C-54 from Fairbanks, Alaska over the North Pole to Oslo, Sweden, becoming the first pilot to fly over both Poles.

Colonel Balchen was transferred to headquarters, United States Air Force in 1951 to participate in developing the Ballistic missile early warning system (BMEWS). Also, he was instrumental in the establishment of Thule Air Force base in Greenland and blazed airborne trails to assist both commercial and military aviation in the Arctic region. After retiring from the Air Force in 1956, Balchen continued to serve on special assignment and as a consultant to the military.

Col. Bernt Balchen died on October 23, 1973, and is buried in Arlington National Cemetery. His lifetime achievements influenced the course of Aviation, arctic, and military history. His legacy to this country and to my State of Alaska is a strong northern defense, an established transpolar aviation system, a better understanding of the world's polar regions, and, of course, the lives of those rescued by Colonel Balchen and the men and women who continue his work with the United States Air Force Rescue Service.●

MAKING FURTHER CONTINUING APPROPRIATIONS FOR THE FISCAL YEAR 2000

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent the Senate now proceed to the consideration of H.J. Res. 73, the continuing resolution, which is at the desk. I further ask consent the joint resolution be read a third time and passed and the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The joint resolution (H.J. Res. 73) was read the third time and passed.

UNANIMOUS CONSENT REQUEST—EXECUTIVE CALENDAR

Mr. LOTT. I ask unanimous consent the Senate immediately proceed to executive session to consider the following nominations on the Executive Calendar:

No. 98, Cheryl Shavers, to be Under Secretary of Commerce for Technology; No. 99, Kelly Carnes, to be Assistant Secretary of Commerce for Technology Policy; No. 133, Lawrence Harrington, to serve on the Inter-American Development Bank; Nos. 244, 245, and 246, three Mississippi River Commissioners; No. 253, Thomas Leary, to be a Federal Trade Commissioner; No. 254, Stephen Van Beek, to be Associate Deputy Secretary of Transportation; No. 255, Michael Frazier, for the position of Assistant Secretary of Transportation; No. 256, Gregory Rohde, to be Assistant Secretary of Commerce for Communications; No. 270, Florence-Marie Cooper, to be a U.S. district judge in the Central District of California; No. 274, Barbara Lynn, to be a U.S. district judge for the Northern District of Texas; No. 277, Gerald Poje, to serve on the Chemical Safety and Hazard Investigation Board; No. 278, Skila Harris, to be on the TVA

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. GRAHAM. Reserving the right to object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Florida.

Mr. GRAHAM. I have a question of the leader. Will the majority leader agree to delete No. 279 from the list of nominations?

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I inquire of the Senator, is that Glenn McCullough of Mississippi, my home State, to be a member of the Tennessee Valley Authority board of directors?

Mr. GRAHAM. Yes.

Mr. LOTT. No, I will not agree to that. I should point out there are some 27 nominations—25 nominations plus 2 more on which I was going to ask for agreement on a time limit and a vote, the nomination of Linda Morgan to be a member of the Surface Transportation Board—her nomination has been held up quite sometime, but I have agreement now to proceed to a recorded vote on that one, and also No. 271, the nomination of Ronald Gould of Washington to be a U.S. judge for the Ninth Circuit. We need to request 1 hour of debate and a recorded vote. There are a total of 27 nominations here, including 2 that will have to have a recorded vote. It is a package. They all go or none go.

Mr. GRAHAM. In light of that, Mr. President, I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, if I can be heard briefly on that. I want to emphasize this is a very large package of 27 nominations. Most of them are people who are supported by Democrats, I guess 23, 24, 25 of those. There are two or three that are Republican positions. One of them is for the Tennessee Valley Authority, which I presume is being objected to for an unrelated reason because, clearly, there is no problem with this nominee.

I will be back early next week with additional nominations that will run this package up to, I presume, between 34 and 40 nominations. All I can do is get them cleared and then offer them to the Democrats. If they object, then that is their problem.

I should also note that included in this group was not one, not two, but three judges, two of them women. One of the women is from California and one of them is from Texas. So for one 6-year appointment—I believe it is a 6-year term—to the Tennessee Valley Authority where there is a need for these two directors, they are willing to hold up 27 nominations, including two women nominated to U.S. district courts.

That is not real smart. I do not quite understand it, and I hope the leadership and the President will speak to those who object in this way because I have heard all kinds of rhetoric today about how it is difficult if you are a woman or minority to get your nomination approved. In fact, I believe the record will show over the last 3 years this Congress and the previous Congress has confirmed a higher percentage of women and minorities than any Congress in history.

I do note it is pretty hard to go back and look at all the nominations and determine exactly how many minorities were approved because there is no record. We do not check whether you are a minority—African American or Hispanic or Asian. You are a person. All we can tell by your name is if you are a man or woman. Based on just the gender statistic, in fact, since I have been majority leader, I believe the record will show we have approved a lot more women than George Mitchell did when he was majority leader.

These accusations that were made today ring hollow. I hate to see the Senate stoop to that level. I met with White House officials today and told them we were going to try to clear these 27 nominations, and we will keep trying to move them all. I do not think it is reasonable to try to hold up one 6-year-term nominee to try to get two lifetime nominees to the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals, a circuit that already has too many activist judges in it, a circuit that is the most liberal in this country, a circuit that is overruled more than any other circuit in the country by the Supreme Court, a circuit basically that is out of control. The nominees for these two positions have given rise to a great deal of controversy, to serious questions about whether they would be activists on the court, and to grave concerns about their records.

I understand the objection, and hopefully we can clear it up early tomorrow or next week. I yield the floor.

Several Senators addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Utah.

IN HONOR OF JOHN CHAFEE

Mr. BENNETT. Mr. President, I was in New York on Monday to hold a hearing of the Y2K Committee when Senator MOYNIHAN, a member of that committee, joined me. I greeted him with the normal good humor that we greet one of our colleagues, but he did not respond in good humor. Instead, he said to me: I have very sad news. I was a little surprised at that and asked him what was so significant as to cause him to be so downcast. He said: John Chafee died. That was very sad news, indeed.

I was stunned, along with my colleague from New York, and had to reflect on how recently I had seen John Chafee, spoken with him, found him in good spirits, if not in good health. Indeed, I thought he was in good health.

On Friday of last week, I was addressing a group of students from the State of Utah answering their questions about the Senate and Senate procedure and Senate life and was interested when I got a question that I often get from people outside of the political arena. It was: Tell us about life as a Senator. And specifically this question was: Tell us about the Senators. Then the questioner said: Tell us who your friends are.

That is always an interesting question. You want to be careful about the answer because you do not want to offend anyone by leaving them out. But I said to that group on Friday: I have many friends in the Senate, but one of my closest friends is John Chafee.

I put those two incidents over the weekend together. On Friday, I am citing the name of John Chafee as one of my closest friends, and on Monday, one of my other friends in this body tells me of John's passing.

I have waited until now to take the floor to pay tribute to John Chafee, partly because of the press of business and partly because I was afraid I could not keep my composure. Those who know me well know my emotions sometimes run very close to the surface. I get dewy-eyed at the dedication of a parking lot. For that reason, an occasion such as this one can be a difficult one. At the same time, however, I want to look at the death of John Chafee from a slightly different perspective.

We mourn his passing. We become emotional at the thought of his loss. But we should recognize in many ways this is a time for rejoicing.

I have had the experience, along with many others, of dealing with aging parents. My father was 95, my mother 96, when they passed away—neither one of them in good health.

My mother dealt with an aging parent in her lifetime, a father who had a stroke and then lingered for a number of years thereafter. Mother used to say to us: If I'm killed in an automobile accident, rejoice. I don't look forward to going through old age.

When people retire, very often they go downhill rapidly. John showed no signs of that, but his health was failing. He had been in the hospital for a back problem. He was not an old man by my standards. Seventy-seven seems increasingly younger as I get closer to it myself. But I think of the possibility of John Chafee running downhill in old age. I think we might rejoice that he was spared that.

John Chafee left at the top of his game, at the top of his form. He was a Senator's Senator. He was involved in everything. We did not vote together very often, but when we did, he was always grateful; and when we did not, he was always understanding. I never had an occasion where John Chafee was disapproving.

We stood together on one issue where we were two of four Republicans—one of the occasions where we crossed the line; John did that more often than I—to join with a group of Democrats. That was the flag amendment. John and I both had great reverence for the flag of the United States, but we felt our reverence for the Constitution outweighed that and that the Constitution should not be amended to deal with a nonexistent problem because flag burning is no longer going on in the United States, except by those who want to goad us into attempting to amend the Constitution. At least that is the way I saw it and that is the way John saw it. He was always friendly and supportive when we had those kinds of problems.

The thing I will remember the most about John Chafee, as a Senator's Senator, was the way he would go after problems and not people, the way he would tackle challenges and not the challengers, the way he would maintain a constant good humor, even in the face of difficulties within his own party or difficulties from across the aisle.

It is a time for rejoicing, rejoicing because we had the privilege of dealing with this man, right up to the end of his life, and then seeing him spared the long good-bye that we are seeing in others—Ronald Reagan, for example. I think if John Chafee were given the choice, he would take the choice the Good Lord has given him rather than lingering on in some crippled fashion. He had a weak heart, weaker than any of us knew. The possibility of that kind of situation was perhaps there, but I am following the advice of my mother, who, looking at the possibility of an old age, said: If I'm taken suddenly, don't mourn. Rejoice.

There is very little I think we can add to the accomplishments of John Chafee's life. We can rejoice that we knew him, served with him, and we were with him right up to the moment where he left, as I say, at the top of his game.

I extend my deepest sympathies and condolences to his family. I have met both his wife and his son. I know what fine people they are. I know how desperately they feel this loss.

ORDERS FOR FRIDAY, OCTOBER 29, 1999

Mr. BENNETT. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that when the Senate completes its business today, it adjourn until the hour of 9:30 a.m. on Friday, October 29. I further ask consent that on Friday, immediately following the prayer, the Journal of proceedings be approved to date, the morning hour be deemed expired, the time for the two leaders be reserved for their use later in the day, and the Senate then begin 30 minutes of debate equally divided between the two leaders on H.R. 434, the African trade bill. I further ask consent that the cloture vote occur at 10 a.m. on Friday.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

PROGRAM

Mr. BENNETT. For the information of all Senators, the Senate will begin debate on the African trade bill at 9:30 a.m. Following 30 minutes of debate, the Senate will proceed to a cloture vote on the Roth substitute amendment to the trade bill. Therefore, the first vote will occur at approximately 10 a.m.

If cloture is not invoked on the trade bill, it is the majority leader's intention to move on to other legislative items. This trade bill has been the pending business for 1 week, as of tomorrow's date. One week is precious time when the end of a congressional session is near. The majority leader will, of course, notify the minority leader as to the next legislative item that he intends to bring up.

The Senate may also begin consideration of the conference report to accompany the D.C./Labor-HHS bill, with the vote anticipated early next week.

ORDER FOR ADJOURNMENT

Mr. BENNETT. If there is no further business to come before the Senate, I now ask unanimous consent that the Senate stand in adjournment under the previous order, following the remarks of the Senator from Florida.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Florida.

COMMENDING SENATOR BENNETT

Mr. GRAHAM. Mr. President, I have a statement to make on legislation which I will introduce this evening. But prior to that, I express my gratitude for the eloquence of the remarks the Senator from Utah has just delivered on behalf of our friend, John Chafee. Many of us have attempted to reach into our souls and express the depth of our affection for this special man. The Senator from Utah has succeeded in that effort. I commend him and thank him for sharing those emotions.

Mr. President, I have a second item before I turn to my remarks for purposes of an introduction.

THE TAX EXTENDER BILL

Mr. GRAHAM. Mr. President, I have exercised the prerogative, which is each Senator's, to place a hold, which means legislation cannot be brought up without at least referring to and discussing it with the Senator who has placed the hold. In this case, I did so on the legislation which is commonly referred to as the tax extender bill. This is legislation which extends the life of a number of current tax provisions. As a member of the Finance Committee, I support this legislation and I will vote for this legislation. I am going to announce publicly that I am withdrawing the hold I had on that legislation. I will give a brief explanation.

First, I am doing so because I think, in the spirit of comity and the effort to get important work accomplished during what I hope will be the relatively few days remaining in this first session of the 106th Congress, it is appropriate to allow the Senate to take up this legislation without further delay insofar as it is the product of my action.

Second, an explanation of why I imposed the hold in the first instance: I supported this legislation. I supported it in large part because it meets what I think is a fundamental test—it is paid for. This legislation contains increases in certain taxes sufficient to cover the cost of the tax relief which will be made available through the extenders. Not to do that would have had the effect of dipping into the surplus. Now that means dipping into the Social Security surplus, since we have already spent the non-Social Security surplus. This bill meets the test of being fiscally prudent.

However, I alert the Senate that there was another bill, which in many ways was a companion of the tax extender legislation, voted out of the Finance Committee almost simultaneously with the tax extender legislation. That is legislation which will provide for increases in the reimbursement level to providers of various health care services under the Medicare program. Again, I support the concept that there is a justifiable case for increasing those reimbursements. We have done so, in this legislation that the Senate will possibly soon be considering, in the amount of approximately $1 billion in fiscal year 2000, $5 billion in fiscal year 2001, and an additional $9 billion over the next 8 years, for a total of $15 billion.

My criticism of that legislation is, unlike the tax extender bill, it is not paid for. Therefore, we will be asked to vote for $15 billion of additional spending, which will have to come directly out of the Social Security surplus. It had been my intention, by holding the tax extender bill, to propose an amendment to the tax extender bill which would have been the additional reimbursement for Medicare providers but with an appropriate offset so that there would be $15 billion either of reduced spending elsewhere or additional taxes to pay for the additional reimbursement for Medicare providers. It had been my thought that by merging these two bills together and using this as an opportunity to provide the offsets for the Medicare reimbursement increases, we would be able to send to the House of Representatives legislation which it might both consider and favorably vote upon.

It now appears that, in fact, we are not going to take up the increased reimbursement to Medicare providers, at least not take it up as separate legislation. Rather, it will be either delayed to some future date or taken up as part of the likely end-of-session major financial compromise.

It appears as if there is no purpose to be gained by holding the tax extender bill for purposes of offering an amendment to a bill which is not going to be taken up anyway. For those somewhat convoluted reasons, but reasons which I hope will be satisfactory to the Members of the body, my colleagues, I am announcing that I am lifting the hold on the tax extender bill. It is my hope that we will soon pass it and that it will serve as a model for other legislation when we decide that it is important enough to extend a tax benefit to a certain class of taxpayers, or important enough to increase spending in the form of additional appropriations to certain citizens of this country, that we will have the fortitude to make the judgment as to how we are going to pay for either those reductions in revenue from one source or increase in appropriations to another.

(The remarks of Mr. GRAHAM pertaining to the introduction of S. 1827 are located in today's RECORD under "Statements on Introduced Bills and Joint Resolutions.")

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Michigan is recognized.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent I be allowed to proceed as in morning business for 4 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. LEVIN. I thank the Chair because I know it is extending beyond the time which the Senate was to be in session, and as always I appreciate his courtesy.

COMMENDATION OF SENATOR GRAHAM

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, before the Senator from Florida leaves the floor, let me commend him for a very visionary statement about education, the need for an additional large number of teachers, and the vast source of knowledge which we can tap if we utilize people who have had a previous occupation and then are willing to go into teaching, which surely is as high a calling as exists, I believe, anywhere in the world. Teachers should be placed way up there on a pedestal, as far as I am concerned, because of the responsibilities they are given and the commitment so many of them have shown.

I want to extend my congratulations to the Senator from Florida for selecting an area where we can really make a contribution through legislation to not only our children but to students at whatever age through the use of these great pools of talent he has identified.

IN HONOR OF SENATOR JOHN CHAFEE

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, every Member of our Senate family was gripped in sadness and grief when we heard of the death of John Chafee.

John Chafee was a giant for many reasons. He was a kind man. He was a truly gentle and a magnificently decent Senator.

Time and time again, as towering Senators of the past, John Chafee, a pragmatist, a moderate, a man of sound judgment and good sense, worked to cool the partisan passions in this body and led his colleagues of both parties toward common ground.

He was one of those Members to whom Senators looked for advice and for leadership on the host of issues in which he was an expert—health issues, environmental issues, transportation, and many issues where he was one of the most knowledgeable and effective leaders of this body.

He brought to this body an experience which was invaluable, as a marine, a war hero in two wars, and in the legislative battles of the Senate. One frequently sensed in John Chafee the kind of quiet self-confidence and steady determination of somebody who had survived real combat.

John Chafee was direct. He was without guile. He did not posture as he ambled about this body. He just talked straight and let his friends and his colleagues know what was on his mind and asked how he might be helpful.

There were no hidden agendas with John Chafee—just a straightforward, good-natured, decent and kind human being who cared deeply about the people of Rhode Island and of this Nation and who shared everything he had with us and with this Nation.

I visited often with John Chafee in his office, going there for advice to try to gather from him some of the wisdom which he had gathered over the years.

I shall miss, as will every Member of this body, his shy smile, his special integrity. He left an indelible mark on our hearts. I don't know whether his name is carved yet in that desk which has the flowers upon it. But he left a very deep mark on all of our hearts, on all of our souls, and on all of our spirits.

We can only hope his family takes comfort in the certain knowledge that John Chafee will be missed by a legion of friends, by all of his colleagues, and we will be sustained by his memory, by his integrity, by his character, and by his good nature.

As long as we serve in the Senate, every one of us who had the honor and privilege of serving with John Chafee will remember him in a very special way.

Again, I thank the Chair.
I yield the floor.

ADJOURNMENT UNTIL 9:30 A.M.
TOMORROW

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senate stands in adjournment until the hour of 9:30 a.m. on Friday, October 29, 1999.

Thereupon, the Senate, at 7:55 p.m., adjourned until Friday, October 29, 1999, at 9:30 a.m.

EXTENSIONS OF REMARKS

INTRODUCTION OF THE STRENGTHEN SOCIAL SECURITY AND MEDICARE ACT OF 1999

HON. RICHARD A. GEPHARDT

OF MISSOURI

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, October 28, 1999

Mr. GEPHARDT. Mr. Speaker, today I am proud to join Representatives RANGEL, MATSUI, POMEROY, BONIOR, FROST, DELAULO and a number of other Democrats in introducing the "Strengthen Social Security and Medicare Act of 1999." This bill represents President Clinton's proposal to protect Social Security by locking up the Social Security surplus so that it will not be available to be spent on other things and to strengthen Social Security by extending the solvency of the Trust Fund to 2050. Of equal importance, we will reserve by law one-third of the projected on-budget surpluses over the next ten years to strengthen Medicare.

This is a simple proposal that takes the first step in the direction of preserving and strengthening Social Security and Medicare so that they will have the financial resources to provide the benefits that America's senior citizens have come to rely on. Democrats created Social Security and Medicare to provide not just a retirement program, but a true safety net for senior citizens, their survivors and the disabled. Social Security is the most successful Federal government program, lifting nearly 15 million seniors out of poverty. It is the cornerstone of the entire retirement system and is the principal source of retirement income for two-thirds of the elderly. The baby-boomers and their children have been promised the support that they see their parents getting today. We have a responsibility to keep those promises.

This bill saves 100 percent of the Social Security surpluses, and ensures that the Social Security surplus will be saved to reduce the debt that was created by the profligate fiscal policies of the 1980's. Beginning in 2011 the interest payments that will not have to be made on that debt will be reinvested in the Social Security Trust Fund through 2044. The Social Security Actuary has analyzed the proposal and found that it will extend the solvency of the Trust Fund until 2050, an additional 16 years beyond current projections.

Medicare also faces a financial squeeze as the baby-boomers retire. This bill creates a special reserve fund equal to one-third of the on-budget—non-Social Security—surplus over the next ten years that can only be used for extending the solvency of Medicare or providing a prescription drug benefit to Medicare beneficiaries.

This is not the final word on either Social Security or Medicare, but it does lay the foundation on which long-term solutions to ensure long-term solvency can be built. In this respect it stands in sharp contrast to the Republican proposals which neither add a single day to the solvency of Social Security nor make any provision for using the surplus to strengthen Medicare.

Finally, the Republican proposals have an escape hatch that would allow Social Security money to be used for anything that the Republicans want to call "reform"; even a plan that could lead to cuts in benefits or the ultimate conversion of Social Security into a privatized plan that gives little protection to average workers and their families. We reject that false promise in favor of keeping the commitments to Americans of all ages that have been the touchstone of Democratic policies for more than 60 years.

IN MEMORY OF MELISSA EMERY LANIER

HON. ROB PORTMAN

OF OHIO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, October 28, 1999

Mr. PORTMAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to the memory of Melissa Emery Lanier, a dear friend, community leader and constituent who passed away yesterday.

Melissa brought extraordinary warmth and grace to everyone and everything she touched. Known for the groups, individuals and causes she helped, she was active in numerous organizations as diverse as the College of Mount St. Joseph, the Caracole AIDS Hospice, the Fine Arts Fund, the Taft Museum, the American Negro Spiritual Festival, Hebrew Union College Academy for Interfaith Studies, the Babies Milk Fund Association, Xavier University, Stepping Stones Center for the Handicapped, the Council on Aging, and the May Festival.

She has been described as inclusive, perceptive, generous, effective, caring and gracious. And she was well known for seeking recognition for everyone but herself.

Melissa Lanier was a Cincinnati native. Her family has deep roots in our city and a strong tradition of community service. This is the legacy she continued.

She attended Bryn Mawr College, and earned her bachelor's and master's degrees from Xavier University in Cincinnati.

She was devoted to her loving family, and is survived by her husband, Addison, a daughter, Melissa Murphy, three sons, Addison II, John, and Mark, and eleven grandchildren. They have suffered a great loss. Indeed, all of us in the Greater Cincinnati area have suffered a loss with Melissa Lanier's passing, just as all of us benefited so from her rich and full life.

TRIBUTE TO PAM WOOLSEY, A WOMAN WITH A POET'S HEART

HON. SCOTT McINNIS

OF COLORADO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, October 28, 1999

Mr. McINNIS. Mr. Speaker, every so often I hear a story of a constituent that touches me and makes me proud to be a Representative of the people. Recently, I heard one such story: the story of Pam Woolsey.

Pam works at Kathryn Senor Elementary School in Glenwood Springs, CO in the cafeteria. She is known for her good food, especially her chicken noodle soup. But it is the lessons that she instills in the kids that is really impressive.

As a poet, Pam is very accomplished. She has authored dozens of poems and short stories. Recently, she entered an international poetry contest and ended up traveling to Washington, DC where she was a nominee for the 1999 Poet of Year. Only a month ago she was honored at the Capitol by the International Society of Poets. For her work she received several plaques, ribbons, and medals as one of 100 semi-finalists in a field of 1,000 entries from around the world. The accolades did not stop there. One of her poems was professionally recorded and published in a book of international poetry.

The more I inquired into this woman's amazing story, the more I hear of her taking the time to inspire children to accomplish more and live their dreams. That hard work and dedication will take you where ever you want to go. She is touching the lives of so many children and making a difference in her community.

It is with this, Mr. Speaker, that I say thank you to this woman on behalf of the people of western Colorado for her dedication to the future of our children. She realized that one person can make a difference and she has. I wish her all the best in attaining the dream of publishing her collection of poems and continued success and happiness in life.

DR. SYDNEY E. SALMON ACCESS TO CANCER CLINICAL TRIALS ACT

HON. MATT SALMON

OF ARIZONA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, October 28, 1999

Mr. SALMON. Mr. Speaker, I rise to pay tribute to Dr. Sydney Salmon, who passed away recently after a three year bout with pancreatic cancer. Dr. Salmon served as the Director of the Arizona Cancer Center at the University of Arizona from its founding in 1976 until last year. During that time, he built the Center into one of the pre-eminent research facilities in the world and emerged as a national figure in cancer clinical research. A noted innovator and academic, Dr. Salmon invented numerous medical techniques that have had a major impact on biology, and he authored nearly 400 scholarly papers.

Matter set in this typeface indicates words inserted or appended, rather than spoken, by a Member of the House on the floor.

Although ailing with cancer, Dr. Salmon set aside time to educate me about a fatal flaw—literally—in our health care system that contributes to cancer's carnage. He informed me that our system discourages patients eligible for cancer clinical trials, the most effective type of care for many with cancer, from enrolling. I learned that if it were not for clinical trials, we wouldn't have the successful treatments that we enjoy today.

Dr. Salmon inspired me to develop the Access to Cancer Clinical Trials Act, which today I rename the "Dr. Sydney E. Salmon Access to Cancer Clinical Trials Act" in his memory. I am both proud and duty bound to honor a great man with this legislation. The act guarantees cancer patients access to any federally approved cancer clinical trial by requiring insurers to pay the routine patient costs—blood work, physician visits, etc.—that would be covered if the patient was in the standard treatment of care. The measure would not require health insurers to pay for the cost of new drugs, securing informed consent, collecting and managing data or complying with research-related paperwork. All of these costs would be paid by the sponsor of the clinical trial.

For many cancer patients, cancer clinical trials are not only the best option, they are the only option. If we increase participation in cancer clinical trials we increase the survival rate and provide hope for those afflicted with this horrible disease.

Unlike the managed care bill that recently passed the House, the Sydney Salmon Clinical Trials Act isn't limited to trials sponsored by government agencies, but also covers FDA trials. Coverage of FDA trials is a critical component of anti-cancer legislation. Two-thirds of trials are FDA-approved trials. Moreover, it is not enough to only cover trials conducted by government agencies when we know that many of the most important advances occur in private trials. The proper policy is to encourage participation in all trials that meet stringent guidelines, not just those sponsored by government agencies. I will urge the House-Senate Conference that ultimately develops the final managed care reform package to include language guaranteeing all cancer patients access to safe and federally approved clinical trials.

Participation in cancer clinical trials is dangerously low. Twenty percent of cancer patients are qualified candidates for clinical trials, yet only 3 percent participate in them. One of the major reasons for this disparity is the uncertainty regarding whether routine patient care costs will be covered by managed care companies.

The decline in enrollment in trials at the Arizona Cancer Center corresponds with the rise of managed care. In 1995, the Center enrolled 398 cancer patients in 169 different clinical trials. In 1998, the numbers dropped to 246 patients enrolled in 158 studies.

Managed care companies might be excused for their policy on cancer clinical trials if studies suggested that the cost of covering routine expenses were prohibitive and would increase the ranks of the uninsured. This is not the case. A Mayo Clinic study revealed that the costs of clinical trials averaged a trivial five percent more than standard therapy.

But not trivial are the costs of not permitting patients to enroll in clinical trials. Research is thwarted, the war on cancer is hindered and patients who have no other hope for treatment needlessly suffer. The advances in treatment that clinical trials develop—virtually all standard therapies evolved from clinical trials—ultimately reduce the cost of providing care by reducing treatment costs. As evidence of the effectiveness of clinical trials, consider that for most childhood cancers the survival rate is nearly 75 percent, in large part because 80 percent of children participate in clinical trials. Insurance companies seem to be suffering from an acute case of myopia when it comes to covering these state-of-the-art treatments.

As a conservative Republican, I've always been opposed to mandates. But the federal government has an obligation to support research and development. Unless Congress acts, and acts decisively, vital research opportunities will be lost. Some 40 major cancer groups support the approach taken in the Dr. Sydney E. Salmon Access to Cancer Clinical Trials Act. Congress should listen to the cancer community and ratify this approach.

LEASING RIGHTS FOR THE NAVAJO NATION

HON. TOM UDALL

OF NEW MEXICO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, October 28, 1999

Mr. UDALL of New Mexico. Mr. Speaker, today I introduce legislation, which is being co-sponsored by my colleagues J.D. HAYWORTH of Arizona and CHRIS CANNON of Utah, that provides for the leasing of oil and gas rights on certain lands held in trust for the Navajo Nation or allotted to a member of the Navajo Nation. This legislation would correct a serious problem facing the Navajo people in Arizona, Utah and New Mexico—the issue of "fractionated lands."

From the late 1800's through the early 1900's, the Federal Government attempted to force Indian people to assimilate by allocating parcels of traditional tribal lands to individual tribal members. This practice resulted in alternating parcels of lands being owned by individual tribal members, the state, the federal government, or other private landowners. Navajo owners were granted an undivided interest of their entire allotment as were their heirs. An undivided interest meant that the heirs received an interest in the entire original allotment rather than a portion of the original land. For example, if four heirs were to receive equal interest to a 160 acre parcel, each heir would receive a 25 percent interest in the entire original allotment—not 40 acres. Over time the number of owners with an interest in an allotment is compounded or fractionated.

This unique system has not served the Navajo people well. After nearly a century, this allotment policy has become a nightmare for the Navajo people. Keeping records straight has become an impossible task. In many cases, owners can no longer be located while some individuals are completely unaware that they are heirs to an interest in a parcel. Many times, title to a parcel is clouded when just one owner dies without a legal will.

Over the years, Congress has tried to deal with fractionated lands and other issues governing Indian land ownership without success. These issues are complex and will not fully resolved overnight. In the mean time, I believe it is appropriate to consider a stop-gap measure aimed at stimulating near-term economic development on fractionated Navajo lands. The bill I am introducing today will facilitate the leasing of Navajo allotted land for oil and gas development by authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to approve oil and gas leases on Navajo allotted lands when less than 100 percent of the owners agree to such lease—a mechanism that is already available to non-Indians in most states.

Mr. Speaker, this is a companion bill to a bill that has already been introduced in the other chamber on July 1, 1999, by Senator BINGAMAN of New Mexico and co-sponsored by Senators HATCH and BENNETT of Utah, and Senator MCCAIN of Arizona.

IN HONOR OF THE WOODBRIDGE-PERTH AMBOY ROTARY CLUB ON ITS 75TH ANNIVERSARY

HON. ROBERT MENENDEZ

OF NEW JERSEY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, October 28, 1999

Mr. MENENDEZ. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize the Woodbridge-Perth Amboy Rotary Club for seventy-five years of dedication and service to the community.

With more than 2,500 local clubs in 174 countries, Rotary International's membership surpasses 1.2 million members, and the organization is world renowned for its efforts in serving the needs of its communities. Made up of men and women with diverse professional backgrounds, the Rotary Club was created so that its members could come together to donate their time and talent to benefit the communities in which they live and work.

The Woodbridge-Perth Amboy Rotary Club joined in this honorable cause in 1923 with the efforts of 17 members. Over the years, this club has distinguished itself through a strong tradition of member participation and active involvement in worthy community activities, focusing on humanitarian efforts and youth issues.

From remodeling homes that provide low-income housing and pledging funds that benefit senior residents, to working with the World Health Organization to eradicate illnesses such as polio in impoverished nations and providing relief for earthquake victims in Europe, members of the Woodbridge-Perth Amboy Rotary Club have remained committed not only to the people of the 13th Congressional District of New Jersey, but have extended their compassion throughout the world.

The Rotarians also have an unwavering commitment to improving their communities by concentrating on youth programs. Since the Club's inception, it has supported programs such as Scouting, elementary school mentoring, high school career day, and children's concerts. Each year, the Woodbridge-Perth Amboy chapter sponsors and hosts an educational and cultural student exchange and encourages students to pursue education by funding student loans.

The Woodbridge-Perth Amboy chapter has been a leader and a model for other Rotary clubs in addressing local and worldwide social concerns. For its members' tireless efforts in living up to the Rotary motto "Service above Self" in the Woodbridge-Perth Amboy communities, I ask my colleagues to join me in honoring the Woodbridge-Perth Amboy Rotary Club on this occasion, its 75th anniversary.

RICKY RAY HEMOPHILIA RELIEF FUND

HON. JAMES A. BARCIA

OF MICHIGAN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, October 28, 1999

Mr. BARCIA. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to bring to the attention of my colleagues an issue that we have let fall through the cracks and as a result have further devastated an innocent group of people. In the 105th Congress this body passed the Ricky Ray Hemophilia Relief Fund Act by an overwhelming margin. The Ricky Ray Hemophilia Relief Fund provides a one time payment of $100,000 as compensation to individuals with blood-clotting disorders, such as hemophilia, who contracted the Human Immunodeficiency Virus (HIV) through contaminated blood products. To date not a single dollar has been allocated to fund the Ricky Ray Hemophilia Relief Fund Act.

Despite assurances from the government that these blood products were safe, nearly 7,500 hemophiliacs were infected during the 1980's. These tainted blood products being given to innocent people have resulted in the destruction of many families. Children grow up without a parent, husbands are left without their wives, and in the case of one of my constituents, a mother loses her son and her husband, and must endure the further pain of watching her daughter suffer from the same horrible disease. Human life is too precious not to recognize this devastating tragedy. One life lost is one life too many.

When other disasters arise, floods, hurricanes, earthquakes, we are quick to offer assistance. This body has been committed to helping people get back on their feet after they have experienced adversity. One hundred thousand dollars do not even begin to address the costs that individuals who must live with this disease face. One hundred thousand dollars do not justly compensate a family who has lost a loved one. But what the Ricky Ray Hemophilia Relief Fund will do is help pay for the astronomical expenses associated with the prescription drugs needed to treat this disease. It will help family members who are left behind pay for funeral expenses. It will help children who are left behind to plan for future education.

Members of the hemophilia community have been neglected by the government. I realize this bill allocates $20 million for the Ricky Ray Hemophilia Relief Fund, but that is not nearly enough to fulfill our promises. I rise today to ask this House for a one time appropriation of $750 million so that we may begin to address the suffering endured by 7,500 members of the hemophilia community. As was so eloquently expressed to me by my constituent, "there is no amount of money that can bring my loved ones back, but perhaps the Ricky Ray Hemophilia Relief Fund Act will bring some closure to this chapter of my life and restore my faith in the belief that the little people do matter."

HONORING EDYTH AND CARL LINDNER ON THE OCCASION OF THE TEN YEAR ANNIVERSARY OF CINCINNATI HILLS CHRISTIAN ACADEMY

HON. ROB PORTMAN

OF OHIO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, October 28, 1999

Mr. PORTMAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor my distinguished constituents, Edyth and Carl Lindner, who will be recognized at a gala dinner and pageant on Saturday, October 30, 1999 for their many contributions to the prestigious Cincinnati Hills Christian Academy (CHCA) located in Mason, Ohio.

CHCA is one of the fastest-growing schools in the country and has earned a reputation for excellent academics, competitive sports and extracurricular activities. In 1997, I had the privilege of presenting the U.S. Department of Education's Blue Ribbon School Award to CHCA Elementary. CHCA's goal is to nurture and support each student toward individual growth. The school embraces students parents and faculty within the care of a Christian community.

Mr. and Mrs. Lindner are among Cincinnati's most prominent and generous citizens, and they have been strong supporters of CHCA since its inception 10 years ago. Their devotion to the school is evidenced by the Edyth B. Lindner Elementary School and the Lindner Fine Arts Center.

In addition to raising a family that now consists of three sons, three daughters-in-law and eleven grandchildren, the Lindners give countless hours to many charitable causes in our community. Through her work on the highly successful fundraiser, the Greater Cincinnati Classic Horse Show, Edyth has assured significant contributions to the Shriners' Burn Institute and has built the endowed scholarship fund at CHCA to one million dollars.

The fact that the Lindner family calls Cincinnati "home" is a true blessing to our entire community. Edyth and Carl Lindner continue to make Cincinnati a better place for our children and we owe them much gratitude. I congratulate them on this well-deserved honor.

IN HONOR OF CLARENCE KAILIN AND THE WISCONSIN VOLUNTEERS OF THE ABRAHAM LINCOLN BRIGADE ON THE DEDICATION OF THEIR MEMORIAL IN JAMES MADISON PARK, MADISON, WISCONSIN

HON. TAMMY BALDWIN

OF WISCONSIN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, October 28, 1999

Ms. BALDWIN. Mr. Speaker, I rise to honor Mr. Clarence Kailin of Madison, and the brave men and women who volunteered to serve in the Abraham Lincoln Brigade during the Spanish Civil War, especially those courageous volunteers from my home state of Wisconsin.

They, along with 45,000 volunteers from over 50 different countries, fought side by side during the early struggle against fascism. Their foresight in recognizing the rising tyranny of fascism was a call to arms that went unheeded by the free world, and resulted in the long and bloody conflict that became World War II.

Mr. Speaker, I want to express my gratitude to these men and women who helped to defend the democratic Spanish Republic from fascist aggression, at a time when the fate of democracy in Europe was being threatened by all sides of the political spectrum.

On October 31st, in James Madison Park, in the state capitol of Wisconsin, a memorial will be dedicated to those sons and daughters of the "Badger State" that joined the Abraham Lincoln Brigade. A volunteer unit comprised of American citizens from all ethnic and religious backgrounds and walks of life, were all equal in their resolve to stem the tide of fascism. Our country's reluctance to aid the Spanish Republican government did not deter these brave people who understood what the consequences were if a legitimately elected government were to fall.

Mr. Speaker, for the first time in our country's long history of isolationism, United States citizens were reacting to threats to liberty and freedom on the international level more passionately than ever before. Mr. Kailin was one of those citizens, had it not been for him and other brave volunteers in the Lincoln Brigade, the tide of fascism would have swept over Europe unchecked. The corps of international volunteers who came together in Spain would be the same volunteers to comprise the victorious armies of the allied forces that triumphed over the fascists dictators Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini.

Mr. Speaker, I ask you and my colleagues to honor these dedicated men and women in the same rightful fashion as my state. The strength of character of Clarence Kailin and others from Wisconsin who volunteered in the Abraham Lincoln Brigade are the qualities which we all can take pride in and celebrate in this Congress.

IN RECOGNITION OF MR. PERCY JULIEN FOR 36 OUTSTANDING YEARS OF SERVICE TO THE OAKLAND UNIFIED SCHOOL DISTRICT

HON. BARBARA LEE

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, October 28, 1999

Ms. LEE. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in honor of Mr. Percy Julien, a resident of the Ninth Congressional District. After 36 years of distinguished service with the Oakland Unified School District, Mr. Julien is retiring.

For the past 11 years, Mr. Julien has served as the Director of the Oakland Unified School District's Office of Adult Education. As Director of Adult Education, he was responsible for over 26,000 students per year and a budget of approximately $10 million. Mr. Julien had jurisdiction over 5 administrative sites and 140 satellite sites throughout the city of Oakland. His agency was responsible for the educational development of persons ranging from young adults to senior citizens. His most recent accomplishment was the creation, development and building of the Oakland Adult Education and Technology Center, which hosted its grand opening in April of this year. This facility includes a state-of-the-art computer center, and houses many other vocational classes which help students prepare for their future.

Throughout his brilliant career, Mr. Julien has served the Oakland Unified School District in many capacities. These roles have included teacher, counselor, work experience coordinator, leader in the career opportunities program, vice principal, principal, and lastly an administrator. In addition, he was the first elementary school counselor in the Oakland Schools.

Mr. Julien has been recognized and received countless awards from organizations across the State of California. These awards include the Oakland Alliance of Black Educators—the Personal Achievement Award; St. Columba's Church—the Ujima Award for Community Service; and the Baha'i—Annual Human Rights Award.

As an active member of his community, Mr. Julien has served on various boards and committees throughout the city including the Mercy Retirement and Care Center Board of Education; State of California Adult Education Master Plan Strategies Committee; and the St. Paschal Baylon's Board of Education.

The City of Oakland and its surrounding environs owe a great deal of appreciation and gratitude to Mr. Julien for his 36 years of committed service to education. It is for this reason that I take great pride and honor in saluting this education hero and thanking him for his many years of commitment to educating Oakland's students.

TRIBUTE TO KATIE BUFFHAM

HON. SCOTT MCINNIS

OF COLORADO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, October 28, 1999

Mr. MCINNIS. Mr. Speaker, it is with great pleasure that I take this time to honor a woman who has given her time in order to make the community of Maybell, Colorado a better place. For 24 years, Katie Buffham has worked tirelessly as the librarian of the Maybell Public Library.

Katie's story begins in Sterling, CO where she was born, in 1916. Not long after that her family loaded up their Model T, a wagon and saddle horse and headed off for Three Springs, CO. Several years later she and her husband decided to raise their family in Maybell, CO. It was there that this story of a woman's dedication to the community takes shape.

In 1975, the Maybell Public Library was moved from the inside of a bank to a trailer where, shortly after, it was scheduled for closure. Katie Buffham, upon hearing this, took on the amazing responsibility of keeping the library up and running. She did exactly that and more. Just 1 month after she took it over there were 72 people visits to the library. For nearly 22 years she worked tirelessly, all the while earning nothing. Her days were spent going from the farm to the library and back taking advantage of every hour.

Today the library is a modular school house which was brought in from another city. It has modern conveniences and a few employees. They have become interactive with other cities and technologically efficient.

For years Katie Buffham has had the dream of making her community a better place. Thankfully, she fulfilled this dream. The area would have suffered greatly without this institution. So, it is with this Mr. Speaker, that I say thank you to Katie Buffham for her dedication and hard work. She is a great American and I wish her all the best in her well deserved retirement.

MOTHER PEARLIE MAE BROWN

HON. STENY H. HOYER

OF MARYLAND

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, October 28, 1999

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize the extraordinary service of Mother Pearlle Mae Brown, a woman of strong devotion and commitment to her community and our Nation. Pearlle Mae Brown is currently the First Lady of the Greater Bible Way Church in Prince Frederick, Maryland, where she is the most active and most cherished member of its congregation. Her talents have her serving as President of the Field Missionary Board, the New Members Club, as advisor to the all Women's Auxiliaries and President of the newly formed Evangelistic Board.

Her tireless energy and determination in bringing the word of God to all have also taken beyond the boundaries of her own community to the National level where she was the President of the Clergy Wives and Widows for 19 years and currently the President of the International Women's Council. She is also the First Lady of the Maryland-Washington Metropolitan Diocese, the Vice Chair of the Board of the Interdenominational Council of Ministers' Wives and Ministers' Widows of Washington, D.C. and Vicinity and is also involved in the numerous other comprehensive programs throughout the region.

While Pearlle Mae Brown takes part in all of these wonderful service organizations, she takes the most pride in being the First Lady of the Greater Bible Way Church in Prince Frederick and the proud wife of First Vice President Bishop Joseph N. Brown, D.D. Together they have four children and five grandchildren who are all an integral part of their life. It is through the strength of her family that she gains the true inspiration to carry on her mission to serve God and her community.

We recognize all of these many achievements on the eve of the 40th Annual Women's Convention being hosted by the Greater Bible Way Church under the direction of Pearlle Mae from November 10th through November 12th in Prince Frederick, Maryland. This convention, which is held in Prince Frederick every ten years, celebrates women's participation in religious affairs and explores the "total man and women—body, spirit, and soul. This year's convention is expected to include around 800 participants from throughout the Nation in addition to people from Trinidad, England, Africa, and Jamaica.

Pearlle Mae's life has been punctuated with zeal and enthusiasm, commitment and servitude, honor and distinction. She is an example for all to follow and the people of communities far and wide have benefitted from her determination, tremendous dedication and hard work. As she embarks on the 40th annual Women's Convention may she have strength in accomplishing her mission and satisfaction in knowing she has touched the lives of thousands.

HONORING MARTHA AND CARL LINDNER III ON THE OCCASION OF THE TEN YEAR ANNIVERSARY OF CINCINNATI HILLS CHRISTIAN ACADEMY

HON. ROB PORTMAN

OF OHIO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, October 28, 1999

Mr. PORTMAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor Martha and Carl Lindner III, friends and constituents who will be recognized at a gala dinner and pageant on Saturday, October 30, 1999 for their leadership as one of the founding families of the prestigious Cincinnati Hills Christian Academy (CHCA) located in Mason, Ohio.

CHCA is one of the fastest-growing schools in the country, and has earned a reputation for excellent academics, competitive sports and extracurricular activities. In 1997, I had the privilege of presenting the U.S. Department of Education's Blue Ribbon School Award to CHCA Elementary. CHCA's goal is to nurture and support each student toward individual growth. The school embraces students, parents and faculty within the care of a Christian community.

Martha and Carl's involvement with CHCA began twelve years ago when they worked to develop a vision for the school, and their deep commitment to CHCA has never wavered.

Carl was instrumental in developing the curriculum, particularly in the area of Biblical Integration. He established the Carl H. Lindner III Chair of Biblical Studies in 1993, which brings a speaker to the school each year for Spiritual Life Emphasis Week. He was a member of the founding Board of Trustees and Education Committee.

Martha has participated in and led Bible studies at CHCA, served on the Visioning Committee, helped develop plans for the tennis complex and been very involved in numerous PTF and classroom activities. In addition to all this, Martha and Carl are enthusiastic supporters of the activities of their four children—all of whom attended CHCA.

Martha and Carl Lindner are committed community leaders, and I congratulate them on this much deserved honor.

TELEMARKETING VICTIMS PROTECTION ACT OF 1999

HON. MATT SALMON

OF ARIZONA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, October 28, 1999

Mr. SALMON. Mr. Speaker, I rise to introduce the Telemarketing Victims Protection Act of 1999. The bill directs the Federal Trade Commission (FTC) to promulgate rules and regulations which require telemarketing firms to notify consumers that they are eligible to be placed on national and state do-not-call lists. If a consumer elects not to be called, the telemarketing firm must report that request to the appropriate state or national authority. Additionally, the legislation prohibits telemarketing firms from blocking the identity of their phone number in order to evade caller ID devices. Furthermore, it requires telemarketing firms to obtain (and reconcile with their own lists) the appropriate do-not-call list. It also amends the time of day telemarketers are allowed to call consumers. Under current law, telemarketers are prohibited from calling consumers before 8 a.m. or after 9 p.m. My bill would amend current law to prohibit pesky telemarketers from disturbing families during dinner hours. And finally, it requires the FTC to study appropriate penalties for telemarketers who repeatedly violate the law. My legislation does not affect organizations already exempt from current law.

As you know, Congress has spent the last decade trying to help consumers cope with an industry that is out of control. Despite Congress' efforts, great advances in technology have enabled bad telemarketers to continue to flourish. According to numerous sources, it is estimated that consumers lose $40 billion a year to fraudulent telemarketers. As telemarketing operations become more sophisticated, so must our laws governing the industry.

In my home state of Arizona, many consumers—especially seniors—fall prey to fraudulent telemarketers. The Federal Bureau of Investigations (FBI) estimates that Arizonans have lost roughly $100 million to fraud during the last five years. And, according to the Arizona Republic and Daniel Drake, Executive Assistant U.S. Attorney, victims from Arizona are lucky if they recover five percent of what they lose. According to FBI Special Agent Jim Whalen, "Arizona continues to be a high target area for illegal telemarketers due to the State's significant number of elderly residents." Agent Whalen recently reported to the Arizona Republic that the average Arizonan loses $20,000 to $100,000, including one man who lost roughly $1.8 million. In another extreme case, the Arizona Republic reported that one family lost $2 million of its inheritance to fraudulent investment scams. And, Mr. Drake reported that the last three cases his agency prosecuted involved scams of $17 million.

Many other states besides Arizona are beginning to recognize the problem. Georgia, Indiana, Maryland, and Pennsylvania (to name a few) have or are considering legislation to set up a do-not-call list. The Direct Marketing Association (DMA) currently maintains a national do-not-call list for the industry. But, too often, fraudulent and pernicious telemarketers target the most vulnerable who are unaware of their right to be placed on these lists. Currently, telemarketing companies are not required to subscribe to the DMA's list and simply putting your name on the list does not guarantee that you won't be called. Besides, most consumers are not even aware of their current rights dealing with professional telemarketers.

Telemarketing fraud seems to be alive and well. That is why I believe that my legislation, particularly the consumer information section, is desperately needed. The FTC has repeatedly reported that the elderly are disproportionately represented among victims of telemarketing fraud. And, a survey by the American Association of Retired Persons (AARP) found that seniors, on the whole, were less familiar with their consumer rights than younger people, and they were less suspecting of deceptive sales practices. For consumers who know their rights and ask to be placed on a do-not-call list, it usually takes three months before their request is honored—if at all.

The issue is neither partisan nor political. Leaders on all sides of the political spectrum have joined in the fight to help protect consumers against telemarketing fraud. In his national radio address of April 17, 1999 President Clinton declared war on telemarketing fraud. He said that "we must fight telemarketing fraud that robs people of their life savings and endangers their well-being. Every single year illegal telemarketing operations bilk the American people out of an estimated $40 billion. More than half of the victims are over 50. That's like a fraud tax aimed directly at senior citizens." And, in a speech declaring the first week of May in Texas as Telemarketing Fraud Prevention Awareness Week, Governor George W. Bush said, "Armed with the right information, elderly Texans can take steps to avoid becoming a victim of telemarketing fraud."

I urge my colleagues to join me in the fight against telemarketing fraud.

HONORING RUTH HARTWICK ON THE OCCASION OF HER RECEIVING THE WALTER P. REUTHER DISTINGUISHED SERVICE AWARD

HON. BART STUPAK

OF MICHIGAN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, October 28, 1999

Mr. STUPAK. Mr. Speaker, let me say from the outset that the woman whose community service I wish to recognize here today, Ruth Hartwick of Boyne City, Michigan, understands as well as anyone I know the right and need for workers to organize into unions.

It is Ruth's commitment to that cause that is earning her the Walter P. Reuther Distinguished Service Award, and I rise to pay tribute to her today.

Ruth has served on the organizing committee for UAW Local Union 1403, and she has put in more than 20 years of service to the United Auto Workers.

Ruth was on the bargaining committee and later served as chairperson. She has held the position to president and steward. She has been active with the retirees and was their financial secretary.

Ruth served on the Pension Committee and helped several people with workers compensation problems. She was active on the Community Services Committee and she served on the Local United Way Board. Her union work and her community involvement have earned her the respect of her peers and associates throughout northwestern Lower Michigan.

There are many volunteers who understand the gift of giving and sharing and helping is truly its own reward. I sometimes think, Mr. Speaker, that my northern Michigan congressional district is richer than most in having so many volunteers, people who step up to meet needs and challenges with services not provided by government agencies or chartered organizations.

Among these, I must acknowledge Ruth Hartwick with special affection. She has helped me in many ways since I first ran for this House seat, and I value her close personal friendship and her dedication to organized labor.

I can't think of anyone more deserving of the Walter P. Reuther Distinguished Service Award.

A TRIBUTE TO THE HONORABLE
THOMAS R. LOCK

HON. JAMES A. BARCIA

OF MICHIGAN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, October 28, 1999

Mr. BARCIA. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to congratulate a good friend, Mr. Tom Lock of my home town of Bay City, Michigan on the occasion of his retirement from the Bay City Commission. In terms of Tom's civic contributions to our community, I can unequivocally state that there are very few individuals who have had such an impact on the quality of life for residents of Bay City. And in terms of friendship, I can say that Tom is much loved in our community because, quite simply, he is a friend that can be counted on at all times.

Tom's entire life has been devoted to public service, even as a student at Bay City Central High School, where in his spare time he managed the Essexville/Hampton Little League team. After graduation in 1961, he joined the United States Navy, and in 1964, he married Ms. Lois Carol Genow. The Locks went on to have a wonderful family, and on July 18th of this year, they celebrated their 35th anniversary.

Tom's distinguished service in the Navy can be seen as a blueprint for his many civic accomplishments. He received numerous citations and awards during the six years he served for our country. Among these are the Good Conduct Award, the National Defense Ribbon, the Certification of Accommodation for service in the Arctic Circle, Certification of Accommodation for work with Cuban Refugees. He was also recognized as Sailor of the Month, Service Force of the Atlantic Fleet.

Following his discharge Tom returned to our home town to begin his many years of public service by becoming involved in several different area schools. For four years he was P.T.A. President at MacGregor Elementary School. He was instrumental in helping Central High School resolve their millage, and later he served on the Bay City Public School Housing and Boundaries Committee. From all of his activities during this period, one can see Tom's deep commitment to the youth of Bay County.

Tom's commitment to the less fortunate among us can be seen in his involvement with social service organizations in the area. He served on the Board of Directors of the Bay Area Social Intervention Services, and on the Bay County Substance Abuse Advisory Committee. Representing Bay County, he served on the Saginaw/Bay Substance Abuse Services Commission.

Tom continued his service to our community through local government. He served on the Bay City Planning Commission from 1985 to 1993, and for several years he was the Chairperson of the Commission. He resigned in 1993 to take a seat on the Bay City Commission. Tom served three terms, and as a symbol of the esteem his colleagues had for him, he was elected President twice.

Tom's service as Fourth Ward Commissioner is noteworthy for his many accomplishments. In short, Tom changed the dynamics of our city through his demonstrated philosophy of individual duty for the greater benefit of the community. Tom was responsible for a great many changes, but time allows me to only list but a few. Using his influence with his colleagues, Tom helped pass a resolution allowing the Bay City staff and elected officials the opportunity of attending a team building training meeting. He sponsored a resolution which allowed the city charter to be placed on the ballot in order that it be revised and modernized. He was heavily involved in the middlegrounds landfill clean-up, and the eastside riverfront clean-up. Privately, he was responsible for a fund-raising effort to modernize the Bay City Fire Department, by purchasing equipment which makes it easier to find individuals during a fire.

As you can see, Mr. Speaker, Tom's contributions to our community are many and are not limited to only one sphere of accomplishment. Tom volunteered for the Navy because he wanted to serve our country. He was involved in our schools because of his concern for our children. Tom was involved in city government because he wanted to make our home, Bay City, a place to be proud of. And, Mr. Speaker, I can say with all confidence that the residents of Bay City are proud and grateful to Tom.

It is my understanding, Mr. Speaker, that in Tom's retirement he intends to spend much time with his wife, Lois, and their three children—Marcie, and her husband Bernie LaBerge and their three children Jessica, Brandon, and Danielle; Cindy-Sue Hernden and her two children Alyssa and Ryan; and Tammi-Rae, and her husband Tom Stein and their child Brittney. It is also my understanding that he will continue his long list of public service by serving on the Board of the Boys and Girls Clubs of Bay County.

Mr. Speaker, I invite you and our colleagues to join me today in honoring Mr. Tom Lock for his many contributions to our community. He truly is an example of exemplary civic duty, and as such, serves as a model to all of those in our country who desire to help others in their communities. Please join me in congratulating Tom, and in wishing him many productive years with his family and his many activities in our community.

TRIBUTE TO AL AND EILEEN FLORES

HON. GARY G. MILLER

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, October 28, 1999

Mr. MILLER of California. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor two exemplary citizens in my district who will celebrate their 40th wedding anniversary on October 31.

Al and Eileen Flores have shared many years and experiences as they traveled around the world and throughout our nation. Since meeting in England in 1958, Mr. and Mrs. Flores have demonstrated their patriotism by their connection to our armed forces, their refreshing commitment to family values as they raised six daughters, and a continuous and active participation in grassroots community organizations. Mr. and Mrs. Flores have fourteen grandchildren, and when asked who his hero is Mr. Flores answers, "My wife Eileen."

Not only do Mr. and Mrs. Flores embody the endless potential available to each American citizen, but also the wondrous result of a happy and fruitful life. Forty years of marriage is an accomplishment worthy of our respect and honor. Al and Eileen Flores, thank you for your example to our community, and happy 40th anniversary.

IN HONOR OF REV. RALPH A.
BODZIONY

HON. DENNIS J. KUCINICH

OF OHIO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, October 28, 1999

Mr. KUCINICH. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor Rev. Ralph A. Bodziony for his contributions to Saint John Cantius of Cleveland, Ohio. Father Ralph has spent thirty years at St. John Cantius and is retiring after forty years of priesthood. His family and friends will honor his years of service with a celebration on November 28, 1999.

In his thirty years of service to St. John Cantius, Father Ralph has gone to great lengths to help the parish grow and revitalize. Years ago, when it was not economically feasible to maintain the parish's old convent, Father Ralph helped turn it into The Malt Talbot Inn, an alcoholic rehabilitation center and halfway house. He also was heavily involved in the old elementary school being used for the Positive Education Program. In 1984, under Father Ralph, the parish held its first Polish Heritage Festival. It proved to be a very popular event and is now an annual celebration for parishioners and friends from all over to come and enjoy themselves.

Father Ralph has also led the church to a major facelift recently. In 1992, a beautiful Gothic altar was installed in the sanctuary; in 1994, the church organ was refurbished; and in 1997, the church was painted in anticipation of the one hundredth anniversary. St. John Cantius has come a long way in its one hundred years and, through projects like these, Father Ralph has been able to revitalize the parish alongside the redevelopment of the Tremont area.

St. John Cantius, through the leadership of pastors such as Father Ralph, has served the community for one hundred years. The parishioners, who value their ethnicity and beliefs, have developed new traditions while passing on their Polish ancestry to each new generation in the parish. Father Ralph's leadership and commitment to the parish has helped contribute to its rich and colorful history.

Mr. Speaker, please join me in honoring the beloved Rev. Ralph Bodziony for his dedication to the church and his extraordinary works in the Tremont area. His life and efforts towards a better community have inspired us all.

HONORING JOAN AND RAY CONN
ON THE OCCASION OF THE TEN YEAR ANNIVERSARY OF CIN-CINNATI HILLS CHRISTIAN ACADEMY

HON. ROB PORTMAN

OF OHIO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, October 28, 1999

Mr. PORTMAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor my constituents, Joan and Ray Conn, who will be recognized at a gala dinner and pageant on Saturday, October 30, 1999 for their leadership as one of the founding families of the prestigious Cincinnati Hills Christian Academy (CHCA) located in Mason, Ohio.

CHCA is one of the fastest-growing schools in the country and has earned a reputation for excellent academics, competitive sports and extracurricular activities. In 1997, I had the privilege of presenting the U.S. Department of Education's Blue Ribbon School Award to CHCA Elementary. CHCA's goal is to nurture and support each student toward individual growth. The school embraces students, parents and faculty within the care of a Christian community.

Joan and Ray Conn worked together on many important initiatives for CHCA, including helping to form the vision for the school and spearheading fund raising efforts. They have three children, all of whom have attended CHCA.

Ray was a member of the founding Board of Trustees and provided strong leadership in the school's early years by drafting CHCA's constitution, serving as chair for the first Education Committee and working on the Advancement Committee.

Joan chaired the school's first silent auction, was enrollment chair for the Advancement Committee and served as a consultant on interior design decisions for all three CHCA buildings. Before the school opened, Joan came up with the idea to hold home parties to spread the word about CHCA and helped to interview prospective faculty. She has been very involved with the tennis program and the Joan Davis Conn Tennis Complex was dedicated last Spring.

Joan and Ray Conn are to be commended for their tireless devotion to the community as a whole and for the important role they played in making the dream of Cincinnati Hills Christian Academy a reality.

THE EMPLOYMENT SECURITY AD-MINISTRATIVE FINANCING ACT
OF 1999

HON. JIM MCCRERY

OF LOUISIANA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, October 28, 1999

Mr. MCCRERY. Mr. Speaker, I rise today, on behalf of myself and Representatives BOEHNER, SHAW, HERGER, BAKER, RAMSTAD, SUNUNU, BACHUS, LATOURETTE, OXLEY, COLLINS, PORTMAN, WATKINS, HAYWORTH, MCINNIS, LEWIS, PRYCE, TRAFICANT, SESSIONS, CHAMBLISS, DICKEY, CUBIN, and HANSEN, to introduce the Employment Security Administrative Financing Act of 1999.

As you know, the employment security system, established as a federal-state partnership more than 60 years ago, is the system employers use to provide unemployment insurance and a public labor exchange for workers. Since its inception, major structural changes to our country's economy have taken place as a result of rapid technological advances and the growth of globalized trade and investment. Adjusting to meet the demands of our changing economy, our nation's labor market has fundamentally changed as well. Therefore, the employment security system should be reformed to meet the demands of the changing labor market and to ensure that states are able to provide the services necessary for employment and re-employment services aimed at matching employers and qualified job-seekers.

Mr. Speaker, a major focus of reform should be to improve the efficiency of the current administrative financing mechanism and to reduce the tax burden imposed on employers. Administration of the employment security system is financed by employers through the Federal Unemployment Tax Act (FUTA) payroll tax. Currently collected by the IRS, FUTA revenue is returned to the states through an annual appropriation allocated by the Department of Labor. Unfortunately, states aren't receiving a proportionate return on the FUTA dollars contributed by their employers. Since 1990, less than 59 cents of every FUTA dollar has been sent back to the states for the purpose of administering their unemployment system, and the percentage is shrinking. Now less than 52 cents is returned. As a result, states are being forced to either make up for the shortfall from their own general funds, impose new payroll taxes, or cut back on services provided to workers.

Mr. Speaker, the Employment Security Administrative Financing Act is designed to address the problems that the current system continues to impose on the states and the FUTA taxpayers, while preserving and strengthening protections for workers. Specifically, the bill would: reduce the tax burden on large and small businesses by repealing the unnecessary, "temporary" 0.2% FUTA surtax imposed in the 1970's; eliminate inefficiencies experienced by employers by transferring responsibility for collection of the FUTA tax to the states; strengthen administration of the system by ensuring that states get a greater return on their employers' FUTA tax dollars and ensure greater accountability for the use of these funds; improve employment services with an emphasis on re-employing dislocated workers; combat fraud and abuse in the present system; and, increase state flexibility to administer their unemployment insurance and employment services programs to serve local needs.

Mr. Speaker, without these reforms, the current system will continue to overtax and overburden employers, shortchange states, and, most importantly, underserve those who need it most—the involuntarily unemployed and those striving to move up the career ladder.

Mr. Speaker, this is an important issue that Congress should consider. I look forward to working with others to bring about these much-needed, common sense reforms to the current system that will bring our employment security system into the 21st Century.

AMERICA NEEDS A PERMANENT
AGRICULTURE TRADE REP-RESENTATIVE

HON. WES WATKINS

OF OKLAHOMA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, October 28, 1999

Mr. WATKINS. Mr. Speaker, today I am proudly introducing legislation to establish a permanent position of Chief Agricultural Negotiator within the Office of the United States Trade Representative (USTR). I do so with my colleagues, the gentleman from Missouri, Mr. HULSHOF, and the gentleman from Idaho, Mr. SIMPSON.

Since 1997, this position has been designated as "Special Trade Ambassador for Agriculture." Our legislation will create a permanent office at USTR to negotiate on behalf of America's farmers, ranchers and other agricultural interests. Unfortunately, the news from rural America is not good. Farm families are tired and frustrated with the level of attention that has been paid to their livelihood by our government. Additionally, global economic recessions have led to decreased exports by our producers, thus leaving them with a negative impression of what international trade has done for them.

American agriculture is at a crossroads and if we continue to ignore it, farm life as we know it will become extinct. The best way for America to sustain our agricultural backbone is by opening and accessing a new global marketplace. That marketplace can best be reached if we have someone in a permanent role, who has an agricultural background, working on behalf of our farmers and ranchers.

Finally, in one month representatives from all of the world's trading partners will attend the World Trade Organization Ministerial in Seattle to designate the parameters for the upcoming round of global trade talks and negotiations. Many people, including a large portion of the Congress, believe agriculture should be the number one priority for our negotiating team. However, as we host the trade world here in the United States, we do not have a permanent, designated negotiator for agricultural interests.

I urge all of my colleagues to lend their support to this legislation by cosponsoring this important and timely legislation.
