Senate

The Senate met at 9:30 a.m. and was called to order by the President pro tempore [Mr. THURMOND.]

PRAYER

Chaplain, Dr. Lloyd John Ogilvie, offered the following prayer:

Gracious Father, giver of every good gift for our growth as Your people, we ask for health and strength only that we may serve You. You alone know what is good for us. Therefore, grant us only what is best for us. We have no other purpose than to spend our days seeking and doing Your will.

We acknowledge our utter dependence on You. All that we have and are we have received from You. You sustain us day by day and moment by moment. We deliberately empty our minds and our hearts of anything that does not glorify You. We release to You any pride, self-serving attitudes, or willfulness that may have been harbored in our hearts. We ask You to take from us anything that makes it difficult not only to love but to like certain people. May our relationships reflect Your initiative, love, and for-

We commit to You the work of this day. Fill this Chamber with Your presence and each Senator with Your power so that whatever is planned or proposed may bring our Nation closer to Your righteousness in every aspect of our society. You are our Lord and Savior. Amen.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The Honorable WAYNE ALLARD, a Senator from the State of Colorado, led the Pledge of Allegiance as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

RECOGNITION OF THE ACTING MAJORITY LEADER

SCHEDULE

Mr. ALLARD. Mr. President, today the Senate will resume consideration of the CBI/African trade bill. Amendments to the bill are expected to be offered during the postcloture debate, and therefore Senators can expect votes throughout the day. It is hoped the Senate can complete action on the African trade bill and the financial services conference report by tomorrow's session. It is also still possible an agreement can be reached regarding the bankruptcy reform bill so the Senate can consider that legislation prior to the impending adjourn-

The amendment is as follows:

At the appropriate place, insert the following new section:

SEC. ___. AGRICULTURE TRADE NEGOTIATING OBJECTIVES AND CONSULTATIONS WITH CONGRESS.

- (a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds that-
- (1) United States agriculture contributes positively to the United States balance of trade and United States agricultural exports support in excess of 1,000,000 United States jobs:
- (2) United States agriculture competes successfully worldwide despite the fact that United States producers are at a competitive disadvantage because of the trade distorting support and subsidy practices of other countries and despite the fact that significant tariff and nontariff barriers exist to United States exports; and
- (3) a successful conclusion of the next round of World Trade Organization negotiations is critically important to the United States agricultural sector.
- (b) OBJECTIVES.—The agricultural trade negotiating objectives of the United States with respect to the World Trade Organization negotiations include—
- (1) immediately eliminating all export subsidies worldwide while maintaining bona fide food aid and preserving United States market development and export credit programs that allow the United States to compete with other foreign export promotion efforts;
- (2) leveling the playing field for United States producers of agricultural products by eliminating blue box subsidies and disciplining domestic supports in a way that forces producers to face world prices on all production in excess of domestic food security needs while allowing the preservation of non-trade distorting programs to support family farms and rural communities:
- (3) disciplining state trading enterprises by insisting on transparency and banning discriminatory pricing practices that amount to de facto export subsidies so that the enterprises do not (except in cases of bona fide food aid) sell in foreign markets at prices below domestic market prices or prices below the full costs of acquiring and delivering agricultural products to the foreign markets:
- (4) insisting that the Sanitary and Phytosanitary Accord agreed to in the Uruguay Round applies to new technologies, including biotechnology, and clarifying that labeling requirements to allow consumers to make choices regarding biotechnology products or other regulatory requirements cannot be used as disguised barriers to trade;
- (5) increasing opportunities for United States exports of agricultural products by first reducing tariff and nontariff barriers to trade to the same or lower levels than exist in the United States and then eliminating barriers, such as—
- (A) restrictive or trade distorting practices that adversely impact perishable or cyclical products;
- (B) restrictive rules in the administration of tariff-rate quotas; and
- (C) unjustified sanitary and phytosanitary restrictions or other unjustified technical barriers to agricultural trade;

- (6) encouraging government policies that avoid price-depressing surpluses; and
- (7) strengthening dispute settlement procedures so that countries cannot maintain unjustified restrictions on United States exports in contravention of their commitments.
- (c) CONSULTATION WITH CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEES.—
- (1) CONSULTATION BEFORE OFFER MADE.—Before the United States Trade Representative negotiates a trade agreement that would reduce tariffs on agricultural products or require a change in United States agricultural law, the United States Trade Representative shall consult with the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry and the Committee on Finance of the Senate and the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives.
- (2) CONSULTATION BEFORE AGREEMENT INITIALED.—Not less than 48 hours before initialing an agreement relating to agricultural trade negotiated under the auspices of the World Trade Organization, the United States Trade Representative shall consult closely with the committees referred to in paragraph (1) regarding—
 - (A) the details of the agreement;
- (B) the potential impact of the agreement on United States agricultural producers; and (C) any changes in United States law necessary to implement the agreement.
- (3) No secret side deals.—Any agreement or other understanding (whether verbal or in writing) that relates to agricultural trade that is not disclosed to the Congress before legislation implementing a trade agreement is introduced in either house of Congress shall not be considered to be part of the agreement approved by Congress and shall have no force and effect under United States law or in any dispute settlement body.
- (d) Sense of the Senate.—It is the sense of the Senate that—
- (1) reaching a successful agreement on agriculture should be the top priority of United States negotiators; and
- (2) if the primary competitors of the United States do not reduce their trade distorting domestic supports and export subsidies in accordance with the negotiating objectives expressed in this section, the United States should increase its support and subsidy levels to level the playing field in order to improve United States farm income and to encourage United States competitors to eliminate export subsidies and domestic supports that are harmful to United States farmers and ranchers.
- Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, the amendment Senator Grassley and I are offering is to set the negotiating objectives for agriculture for our trade negotiators at the next round of trade talks. I don't think anybody in this Chamber appreciates any more than the current occupant of the chair how serious the crisis in agriculture is in our part of the country. We have seen what I call a triple whammy to American agricultural producers: bad prices, bad weather, and bad policy. That triple whammy has threatened literally tens of thousands of farm families.

Certainly, in my State, where we had a special crisis team at USDA analyze the circumstances when the Secretary of Agriculture was coming to North Dakota a year ago, that team said that if something dramatic did not happen in the next 2 years, we would lose 30 percent—and perhaps more—of the farm families in North Dakota. That is how serious the circumstances are.

I will put up a couple of charts to demonstrate the problem we face.

The key determinant to farm income is farm prices. Farm prices, as this chart shows, are at a 53-year low in real terms. This chart depicts wheat and barley prices from 1946 to 1999, and it shows these prices in constant dollars. So we are comparing apples to apples. What one can see is that prices have had a long-term downward trend over this 53-year period, with one major interruption that occurred back in the 1970s. I think we all recall those times, when we saw a tremendous spike in virtually all commodity prices. But over the long term, when we compare on a fair basis, what we see is constantly declining prices, and we see now the lowest prices in 53 years in real terms. That is why we see so many serious concerns in farm country about what the future holds.

This chart represents a little different way of looking at what faces our producers because this looks at not only the prices farmers receive—that is the red line—but also what the farmers are paying for the inputs to produce their crops. This looks at over a 10-year period. One can see that the prices farmers are paying for their inputs have escalated rather dramatically during this 10-year period. That is not true about the prices farmers are receiving. Those prices peaked at the time we were discussing the last farm bill, in 1996.

It was very interesting that, at the time we were told farmers were going to have a remarkable situation—they were faced with what we were told at the time was permanently high farm prices because of export demand—those permanently high prices lasted about 90 days. That was just about the time we were passing the last farm bill. After that, prices collapsed and collapsed on a continuous basis. We have had nothing but one way for prices, and that is down, down, down. That is the reason we have seen a collapse of farm income.

This chart is another way of looking at what is happening. This shows a comparison of the prices farmers receive—the red line—to the cost of their production, which is the green line. This is for wheat. Wheat is the dominant commodity in my State. You can see the cost of production is about $5 a bushel. But ever since the last farm bill passed, we have been well below the cost of production. In fact, now we are down to about $2.50, $2.60, $2.70 a bushel, depending on the day and market conditions at the time-far below the cost of production. This is what is undermining financial security for American producers.

It is not just wheat. If I had put up the chart on corn, or barley, or on virtually any commodity, one would see the same pattern. It is not just in crops; it is also in livestock. Last year, we saw hogs go down to 8 cents a pound. It costs 40 cents a pound to produce a hog. So this combination of high input costs for farmers yet low prices for what they sell has put farmers in a cost/price squeeze. That squeeze is getting tighter and tighter. It is eliminating farm income.

That is why this next round of trade talks is so critically important because, very frankly, we have been playing a losing hand in agriculture. I think anybody who has really studied the matter understands that our chief competitors—the Europeans—are outspending us, outhustling us, and, as a result, they are winning markets all across the world that were once ours.

If we just pierce the veil here and look below the surface, I think what we see is very revealing. This shows what Europe has been doing in terms of agricultural support over the last 3 years; that is the red box. That is what Europe is spending per year, the average for the last 3 years. The blue box is what the United States is spending under the last farm bill. You can see that the disparity is enormous. The Europeans are spending $44 billion a year, on average; the United States, under the terms of the last farm bill, is spending $6 billion a year—a 7-to-1 disparity.

It is very hard to be successful or to have a level playing field when the opponents are outspending you 7-to-1. We would never permit this in a military confrontation. Why we permit it in a trade confrontation eludes me. It is a guaranteed path to disaster. That is precisely what has happened.

If we look at this in a somewhat different way, if we look at it in terms of export subsidy for agricultural commodities, and we look at various regions of the world, we see another in the last year for which we have full figures, 1996, who was doing what with respect to agricultural trade subsidy. There are our European friends again. They are the blue hunk of the pie; 83.5 percent of all world agricultural export subsidy belongs to the Europeans. Here is the U.S. share, at 1.4 percent, this little piece of the pie right here.

I know a lot of my colleagues think we are spending too much on agriculture. I hear it all the time from some of our colleagues from more urban areas.

I say to them that you have to look at what is happening in the rest of the world. You have to look at what our competitors are doing. If you look at what our competitors are doing, it is dramatic and it is clear.

Here are the Europeans. Nearly 84 percent of all world agricultural export subsidy is accounted for by the Europeans. The United States is 1.4 percent.

These aren't KENT CONRAD's figures. These aren't the figures from the Governor of North Dakota. These aren't figures from the agriculture commissioner of North Dakota. These are the statistics from the U.S. Department of Agriculture. They show Europe is outspending us on agricultural export subsidies by 60 to 1. How are you going to win a fight when you are outgunned 60 to 1? This is totally unfair to our farmers. They don't have a level playing field from which to compete. They have a playing field that is totally distorted. We have to change this playing field. We have to level it out. We have to make it possible for our farmers to compete fairly.

We are willing to compete against anybody at any time. But it is not fair to say to our farmers: You go out there and take on the French and German farmers, and while you are at it, take on the French and German Governments as well. That isn't a fair fight.

We shouldn't abandon our farmers to that kind of circumstance. But that is precisely what we have done because in the last farm bill we cut our support to producers in half. Under the previous farm bill, we were spending, on average, $10 billion a year to support our producers in the face of the competition from the Europeans who were spending $50 billion a year during that period.

What did we decide to do? Did we decide to level the playing field? No. We engaged in unilateral disarmament on the pretext that if we cut somehow we would set a good example for the Europeans and they would follow right along.

Guess what. We cut our support in half for agricultural producers under the new farm bill, down to $5 billion a year on average. What did the Europeans do? Did they follow suit? Did they take our "good example"? I put that in quotes, our "good example." No. The Europeans kept right on spending.

Do you know why? Because they have a strategy and they have a plan. Their strategy and plan is to dominate world agricultural trade. They are doing it the old-fashioned way. They are buying these markets.

I have spent a good deal of time talking to the European negotiators. What they have shared with me is as clear as it can be. They have said to me: Senator, we believe we are in a trade war with the United States on agriculture. We believe at some point there will be a cease-fire in this trade war. We believe there will be a cease-fire in place, and we want to occupy the high ground. The high ground in this contest is world market share. That is exactly the strategy and plan of our European friends.

They have said to me: You know, Senator, we have much higher levels of support in our country than you have in yours, and we believe in all of these negotiations instead of leveling the playing field, and instead of closing the gap, that we will be able to secure equal percentage reductions in the level of support on both sides.

If you think about it, they have much higher levels of support in Europe, as I have demonstrated, than we do in this country. They seek to get equal percentage reductions from those unequal bases leaving Europe always on top. That is their strategy. That is their plan. Oh. how well it is working.

In the last trade talks, although the levels of support were dramatically uneven, was there any closing of the gap? Not at all, not any closing of the gap. They didn't come down. We didn't go up. Both of us did not engage in a pattern and practice that would narrow the differences. Instead, what they won those unequal bases maintaining European dominance.

If we let that happen again, shame on us, because we will be consigning our farmers to the dustbin of financial failure. There is no other way this can come out. That is going to be the absolute assured result if we come back with another failed negotiation.

Some people blame our negotiators. I personally do not. I blame us because we have sent unarmed negotiators to the negotiations.

In my previous job, mostly what I did was negotiate. One thing I learned very early on in my previous life was that you don't win in negotiation unless you have leverage. You have to have leverage in order to prevail in a negotiation.

Our negotiators have no leverage. What leverage do they conceivably have when we send them in there and the other side is outgunning us on export subsidies 60 to 1? How are they going to win a negotiation with that sort of fact? How are they going to win when Europe has 84 percent of the world's export subsidy and we have 1.4 percent? How are we possibly going to prevail in that kind of negotiating climate? I say there is very little chance that we are.

That is why I have introduced the FITEA bill, Farm Income and Trade Equity Act, to try to level the playing field, to rearm our negotiators to give us a chance to prevail in these negotiations.

That bill is gaining steam. It has gotten broad support in my own home State of North Dakota. I believe it is going to get even greater support around the country.

Earlier this week, I went to meet in Baltimore with the State presidents of the National Farmers Union. I gave them an outline of the FITEA plan. I hope they will endorse it.

The national rural electric service areas have before them at their regional meetings opportunities to endorse the FITEA plan. It has already been endorsed by eight or nine of the national rural electric service areas.

We have to give our negotiators leverage. But at the same time we have to also give them instructions. We have to tell them what their negotiating objectives are in this next round of trade talks. It is our responsibility. We can't leave it to the President. Certainly, it is his obligation as well. But Congress has a role to play. I believe we ought to take the opportunity to send a clear message to our trade ambassador and her assistants as to what their negotiating objectives are with respect to agriculture.

That is what we have before us in the amendment offered on a bipartisan basis by Senator Grassley of Iowa and myself. Senator Grassley and I serve on both the Agriculture Committee and the Finance Committee. We have a special responsibility. We have taken it seriously. That is why we have come forward with a set of negotiating objectives for our trade ambassador in this next round of trade talks.

This amendment sets out seven principal negotiating objectives for agriculture:

No. 1, we should insist on the immediate elimination of all export subsidy programs worldwide. The elimination of all export subsidies worldwide should be the negotiating objective.

No. 2, we should insist that the European Union and others adopt domestic farm policies that force their producers to face world market prices at the margin so they do not produce more than is needed for their own domestic markets.

It is one thing for a country to adopt domestic policy that supports higher prices to meet domestic demand. It is quite another thing for them to have higher prices domestically and, therefore, develop greater production than they need for the domestic market and then dump that surplus on the world market at fire sale prices depressing prices for everyone.

Objective No. 2 is to insist that the E.U. and others adopt domestic farm policies that force their producers to face world prices at the margin.

No. 3, we should insist that State trading enterprises, such as the Canadian Wheat Board, are disciplined so that their actions are transparent and so they do not provide de facto export subsidies.

Sometimes we fool ourselves with our own rhetoric around here. We talk about free markets. Many are strong supporters of free markets. In agriculture, there are no free markets. We can see, through what the Europeans are doing and spending to buy these markets, that we are not dealing in a free-market circumstance in world agricultural trade.

We are certainly not dealing with it with respect to our neighbors to the north in Canada. There, individual farmers don't market their commodities; they have a wheat board that markets for them. A very significant portion of production goes to the wheat board, and they market on behalf of all of their farmers. Does anyone think that gives them all kinds of opportunities to play games in world markets? Absolutely, because the prices they charge are not transparent. Anyone can learn our prices any minute of any day by going to the Chicago Board of Trade and seeing what commodities are selling for. Try to find out what our friends to the north are selling for. They don't have a transparent market. They are not advertising their prices, except to the major buyers in the world. The few times we have a glimpse of what they are doing, we find they go to buyers before other countries and say: Whatever the United States is selling for, we are selling for 5 cents less a bushel. That is what they are doing in order to take markets that have traditionally been ours. We have to wake up and smell the coffee.

No. 4, we should insist on the use of sound science when it comes to sanitary and phytosanitary restrictions. Too often, these are hidden protectionist trade barriers. On genetically modified organisms, we should insist foreign markets be open to our products, but obviously we can't force consumers to buy what they don't want. We have to give consumers the ability to make an informed choice on whether they want to buy these products without letting inflammatory labels be used as hidden trade barriers.

No. 5, we should insist our trading partners immediately reduce their tariffs on our agricultural exports to levels no higher than ours, and then further reduce these barriers on a cooperative and comprehensive basis.

No. 6, we should seek cooperative agricultural policies to avoid price-depressing surpluses or food shortages. My own long-term view for agriculture is, we desperately need to have among the major producers a common set-aside policy, a common conservation reserve policy, and a common food reserve policy.

No. 7, we should strengthen disputes settlement and enforce existing commitments. The United States honors its international obligations, but all too often our trading partners refuse to live up to their commitments and use the dispute settlement process to delay our efforts to call them to account. That is totally unacceptable, and we need to send that message very clearly.

These are the seven principles we believe we should send as an instruction to our trade ambassador. We should say very clearly that we believe these are the things they need to accomplish in this next round of trade talks. I also think we should say: Don't bring back under any circumstances equal percentage reductions in support from these unequal bases. Don't do that. That way lies permanent inferiority in the position of world agricultural trade. If we want to fritter away our long-term dominance, that is the path for such a result.

I urge my colleagues to give very careful consideration to this amendment. Senator Grassley and I have worked in a bipartisan way in consultation with other colleagues. We believe these are the appropriate negotiating objectives for our trade representatives in the agricultural sector.

Let me end where I began. American agriculture is in crisis. We desperately need a victory in the next round of trade talks, and we need it soon. Our farmers simply cannot survive year after year in a circumstance in which our major competition outspends us 7–1 on domestic support and 60–1 on export subsidies.

I believe our farmers can compete against any producer anywhere in the world but they have to have a level playing field. They have to have a country that is fighting for them when our chief competitors are fighting for their producers at every set of trade talks.

I hope very much our colleagues will support this amendment that lays out clear negotiating objectives for our trade representatives in this next round of trade talks. I believe this amendment is a first step in that process. I urge my colleagues to support it. I welcome cosponsorship, as I know I welcome GRASSLEY would, from other Members who are concerned about these issues.

I yield the floor.

Mr. WELLSTONE. If my colleague will yield for a question, I don't intend to take the floor.

After the Conrad amendment is disposed of, is it the intention of the chairman to have votes?

Mr. ROTH. I am going to ask unanimous consent to set aside this amendment. Senator Grassley desires the opportunity to comment. I think we will stack votes as we did yesterday. It would be in order for another amendment to be raised.

Mr. WELLSTONE. I need to go to a markup.

Mr. ROTH. We will be ready in a minute for another amendment.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, if I could say to my friend from Minnesota, if he has 5 minutes, he can start.

Mr. ROTH. In the meantime, I ask unanimous consent to lay aside this amendment. As I said, Senator GRASSLEY, the cosponsor of this legislation, desires the opportunity to speak.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. CONRAD. I ask unanimous consent that Senator Enzi and Senator Ashcroft be listed as original cosponsors of the Conrad-Grassley amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, if I might comment on the remarks of my friend from North Dakota regarding the Seattle ministerial conference which begins at the end of this month. There is no wide agreement on what the next round of negotiations will address. However, there is no doubt that agriculture will be one of the matters addressed in the next round. There is much disagreement in other areas.

The idea of our setting some negotiating objectives is a good idea, in my view, and I think the chairman agrees.

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, I share that opinion. There is no question but it is appropriate for Congress to help set these objectives.

I say to my distinguished colleague from North Dakota, I agree very much about the need to develop a level playing field. One of my concerns is the fact our markets are the most open markets in the world. That obviously includes agriculture. The purpose of these negotiations should be to lower them in such a way that everyone is on an even playing field. I am very sympathetic to what the Senator is proposing.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. I am sure the chairman will agree, and I cannot doubt that my friend from North Dakota will agree, it would be much better if the President were to go to Seattle with the traditional trade negotiating authority other Presidents have had. This President does not. It is not for the lack of the Finance Committee trying to give it to him. There has been a real breakdown at both ends of the avenue, as it were. The White House has let small political considerations enter into their calculations. We are not unknown to such failings ourselves.

But the fact is, at the end of the 20th century the President of the United States does not have the negotiating authority he has had, in essence, for 65 years—since the Reciprocal Trade Agreements Act of 1934. The more, then, ought we try to speak to the coming negotiations in the manner suggested; the more, then, should we get this legislation passed else the President might decide not to go at all.

Mr. ROTH. I think that would be a very serious setback. Let me comment on fast track. As the Senator said, our committee, of course, has acted on that. I regret the President does not have this authority. I have to say I do not think negotiations can be effective until the President obtains it. Does the Senator agree with that?

Mr. MOYNIHAN. It is an elemental fact in international relations that most countries have a unitary legislative/executive branch, such that if the Prime Minister of Great Britain sends his Foreign Secretary to negotiate, that Foreign Secretary represents a majority in the House of Commons. Any agreement they reach will be ratified.

That is not the case with us. The world discovered this in 1919 when the Treaty of Versailles, negotiated by President Wilson, was not ratified in this Chamber. That sank in over the next 20 years. So we have been giving the President this authority so his representatives can say: If I make an agreement, we will keep the agreement.

Absent that, I do not know what will come. I think I am correct—I take the liberty of asking my able assistant, Dr. Podoff—we have never had a multilateral GATT or WTO negotiation without the President having traditional negotiating authority, have we, to complete the negotiations? No.

This, sir, would be the first time—the first time. That is not an experiment I think we should be running, but perhaps we can make up for it in time. In the meantime, I welcome the thoughts of my friend, our colleague on the Committee on Finance.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, I thank the chairman and ranking member for their consideration. They have been most patient in listening to me today and on the Finance Committee as I have talked about these issues. I appreciate, too, they believe, as I do, it is appropriate for us to lay out negotiating objectives for our trade representatives for this next round. I hope very much our colleagues will support this amendment. I think it is important to send a signal as to what we expect our trade representatives to focus on in the agricultural sector.

Again, I thank our chairman and our ranking member very much for their assistance this morning. I note my cosponsor, Senator Grassley, is held up in committee. He would very much like to speak on this amendment before it is finally considered. So I appreciate the consideration of the chairman and ranking member with respect to providing time for him as well.

I yield the floor.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, today I rise in support of an amendment I am sponsoring with Senator CONRAD to establish trade negotiating objectives for the new round of multilateral trade negotiations the United States will help launch in about four weeks with 133 other WTO member nations in Seattle.

The principles contained in this amendment are important because the upcoming negotiations in agriculture are so vital to our farm economy, and vital to the United States.

The last multilateral trade round, the Uruguay Round, established, for the first time, multilateral rules on market access, export subsidies, and domestic support for agriculture.

But as significant as the Uruguay Round was for agriculture, it was only a first step. Much remains to be done. Agricultural tariffs in industrial countries still average more than 40 percent, compared with tariffs of 5 to 10 percent in manufactured goods.

The average world agricultural tariff is 56 percent. In the United States, it is 3 percent. But tariffs for some agricultural products reach 200 percent or more.

Export subsidies are still far too high, and distort trade in third-country markets.

Producer subsidy equivalents, which measure assistance to producers in terms of the value of transfers to farmers generated by agricultural policy, are also far higher in the European Union than in the United States.

These transfers are paid either by consumers or by taxpayers in the form of market price support, direct payments, or other support.

The Producer subsidy equivalent for all agricultural products in the EU has averaged around 45 percent.

In the United States, the producer subsidy equivalent is only 16 percent.

So-called "Blue Box" spending is also out of control. This is the trade-distorting spending that was authorized in the Uruguay Round.

Currently, the United States has no programs that fall within the Blue Box. But the European Union maintains huge trade-distorting subsidy payments.

We should finally admit that the Blue Box is a mistake, and eliminate it completely.

State trading enterprises allow some countries to undercut United States exports into third markets and restrict imports.

And the principle of sound science is being thwarted with regard to bio-engineered products, to the great detriment of our farm economy.

We need to address all of these issues in the upcoming WTO negotiations.

But we also need to make certain that when we negotiate with our trading partners, that the deal we finally implement is the one that was actually negotiated, and not a different agreement that was changed later through secret understanding or side arrangement.

This is an important principle of international law. It is also a basic principle of equity and fairness.

Only after the WTO Agreement was signed into law did some of us in the Senate learn for the first time that there was more to the Uruguay Round agreement than we originally thought, due to secret side agreements.

This must not happen again.

The amendment I am offering with Senator CONRAD will insure that this practice will end.

The only trade deal that should be enforced is the one the parties actually negotiated.

I strongly urge my colleagues to adopt this amendment, so that we can get this new round of trade negotiations off to the best possible start.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Minnesota.

Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President, am I correct, then, the understanding is before a final vote on this amendment, Senator GRASSLEY will be speaking and right now I will go forward with my amendment? Is that correct?

Mr. President, before I send this amendment to the desk, I want to emphasize one issue that this amendment does not speak to directly but which is very much on my mind. There is an (A) and a (B) part to this issue

The (A) part is the economic convulsion in agriculture that has taken place all across our land, and certainly in our State of Minnesota. I also hasten to add there is no question in my mind that if we do not change the course of policy, we are going to lose a whole generation of producers.

The (B) part of what I want to say before going forward with this amendment is that I have, for at least the last 6 weeks, if not longer, been involved in what I would almost have to describe as a ferocious fight to have the opportunity to bring an amendment to the floor that speaks to at least part of what is going on with this crisis in agriculture. No one amendment is the be-all or end-all. But one amendment would deal with all the mergers that are taking place and the ways in which these conglomerates are driving out family farmers across the land, the whole problem of concentration of power in the food industry, in agriculture.

Other colleagues from agricultural States such as Minnesota have other ideas, but the point is that we want an opportunity to bring an amendment to the floor that speaks to what is going on in agriculture. I thought we would have the opportunity to do that on this trade bill. We have been clotured out. Last week, we were successful in blocking cloture. Now we have been clotured out, with the understanding this will happen on the bankruptcy bill.

I want to express my skepticism on the floor of the Senate today as to whether or not that bankruptcy bill will be brought to the floor and whether or not we will have that opportunity. I want to express some indignation in advance if, in fact, we end up closing out this part of our session and going home without having had any debate, further debate about agriculture, and any effort whatsoever to alleviate the pain and misery in the countryside. I think it should be a top priority for us.

Over the next several days, whatever period we are dealing with, I am going to continue to fight to get this amendment out there. My understanding is we have an agreement that there will be an amendment on agriculture that will be part of the debate we will have when the bankruptcy bill comes to the floor, along with minimum wage, along with East Timor. That is the commitment that has been made. I certainly hope we will see that commitment carried out.

AMENDMENT NO. 2487

(Purpose: To condition trade benefits for Caribbean countries on compliance with internationally recognized labor rights)

Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Only filed amendments may be called up. Does the Senator have a filed amendment?

Mr. WELLSTONE. I am sorry, the amendment has been filed. I do not need to send it to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Which number is the amendment?

Mr. WELLSTONE. Since I did not know it had been filed, I will speak on the amendment.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Is it 2487?

Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President, 2487 is the number.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, might I just slip over and make sure we have the right amendment?

Mr. WELLSTONE. I apologize. I did not know the amendment had been filed.

When I talk about labor rights, my colleague from New York is very familiar with the ILO. This is his fine work. What we are talking about is the right of association, the right to organize and bargain collectively, the prohibition on the use of any form of coerced or compulsory labor, some kind of international minimum wage for the employment of children age 15, and acceptable working conditions.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

At the appropriate place, add the following:

SEC. . ENCOURAGING TRADE AND INVESTMENT MUTUALLY BENEFICIAL TO BOTH THE UNITED STATES AND CARIBBEAN COUNTRIES.

(a) CONDITIONING OF TRADE BENEFITS ON COMPLIANCE WITH INTERNATIONALLY RECOGNIZED LABOR RIGHTS.—None of the benefits provided to beneficiary countries under the CBTEA shall be made available before the Secretary of Labor has made a determination pursuant to paragraph (b) of the following:

(1) The beneficiary country does not engage in significant violations of internationally recognized human rights and the Secretary of State agrees with this determination; and

(2)(A) The beneficiary country is providing for effective enforcement of internationally recognized worker rights throughout the country (including in export processing zones) as determined under paragraph (b), including the core labor standards enumerated in the appropriate treaties of the International Labor Organization, and including—

(i) the right of association;

(ii) the right to organize and bargain collectively;

(iii) a prohibition on the use of any form of coerced or compulsory labor;

(iv) the international minimum age for the employment of children (age 15); and

(v) acceptable conditions of work with respect to minimum wages, hours of work, and occupational safety and health.

(B) The government of the beneficiary country ensures that the Secretary of Labor, the head of the national labor agency of the government of that country, and the head of the Inter-American Regional Organization of Workers (ORIT) each has access to all appropriate records and other information of all business enterprises in the country.

(b) DETERMINATION OF COMPLIANCE WITH INTERNATIONALLY RECOGNIZED WORKER RIGHTS.—

(1) Determination.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of carrying out paragraph (a)(2), the Secretary of Labor, in consultation with the individuals described in clause (B) and pursuant to the procedures described in clause (C), shall determine whether or not each beneficiary country is providing for effective enforcement of internationally recognized worker rights throughout the country (including in export processing zones).

(B) INDIVIDUALS DESCRIBED.—The individuals described in this clause are the head of the national labor agency of the government of the beneficiary country in question and the head of the Inter-American Regional Organization of Workers (ORIT).

(C) PUBLIC COMMENT.—Not later than 90 days before the Secretary of Labor makes a determination that a country is in compliance with the requirements of paragraph (a)(2), the Secretary shall publish notice in the Federal Register and an opportunity for public comment. The Secretary shall take into consideration the comments received in making a determination under such paragraph (a)(2).

(2) CONTINUING COMPLIANCE.—In the case of a country for which the Secretary of Labor has made an initial determination under subparagraph (1) that the country is in compliance with the requirements of paragraph (a)(2), the Secretary, in consultation with the individuals described in subparagraph (1), shall, not less than once every 3 years thereafter, conduct a review and make a determination with respect to that country to ensure continuing compliance with the requirements of paragraph (a)(2). The Secretary shall submit the determination to Congress.

(3) REPORT.—Not later than 6 months after the date of enactment of this Act, and on an annual basis thereafter, the Secretary of Labor shall prepare and submit to Congress a report containing-

(A) a description of each determination made under this paragraph during the preceding year;

(B) a description of the position taken by each of the individuals described in subparagraph (1)(B) with respect to each such determination; and

(C) a report on the public comments received pursuant to subparagraph (1)(C).

(c) ADDITIONAL ENFORCEMENT.—A citizen of the United States shall have a cause of action in the United States district court in the district in which the citizen resides or in any other appropriate district to seek compliance with the standards set forth under this section with respect to any CBTEA beneficiary country, including a cause of action in an appropriate United States district court for other appropriate equitable relief. In addition to any other relief sought in such an action, a citizen may seek the value of any damages caused by the failure of a country or company to comply.

Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President, this amendment would provide for mutually beneficial trade between the United States and Caribbean countries by actually rewarding countries that comply with internationally recognized core labor rights with increased access to U.S. markets for certain textile goods.

That is what this should be about. We ought to reward countries that are willing to comply with internationally recognized core labor rights with increased access to the U.S. market.

This amendment provides for enforceable standards—let me emphasize this. I say to my colleagues, and I know they believe me, I am an internationalist. I very much want to see expanded trade. I very much want to see expanded relations with other countries. The question is the terms of trade, and I am especially focused on the need to have enforceable labor standards.

Under this amendment, before any of the benefits of the CBI trade bill can go into effect, the Secretary of Labor will have to determine a CBI country is providing for enforcement of the core ILO labor rights. That is what this amendment does.

The Secretary will make this determination after consulting with labor people from the region and after consideration of public comments. But the Secretary of Labor will make the determination to make sure the country with which we have trade relations is providing for the enforcement of the ILO core labor rights. I want to make sure these standards are enforceable. U.S. citizens will also have a private right of action in district courts to enforce these provisions.

The alternatives in the CBI Parity bill are unenforceable. That is my dissent from this legislation. The CBI Parity bill merely includes labor rights as an eligibility criterion which can only be enforced by the administration. But the administration already enforces the GSP program and has never, not one time, suspended a CBI country, despite their terrible labor rights records.

Later on, I will provide, from my point of view, too much by way of documentation. That is to say, the number of petitions that have been filed with the USTR under the GSP program. Every single time the petition has been withdrawn. There has been no real response.

If the administration will not use its GSP leverage to improve labor rights in these countries, why would we expect them to use an eligibility criterion? The ILO is not an option because it does not have the enforcement power. I want to make sure there are some enforceable labor standards that will apply to this CBI trade agreement.

Some examples of GSP workers' rights cases accepted for review against major CBI countries are as follows:

Costa Rica, 1993, right of association, right to organize and bargain collectively, acceptable working conditions, petition withdrawn. That is the outcome.

Dominican Republic, 1989–1991, right of association, right to organize and bargain collectively—these are core labor rights—forced labor, child labor, review terminated in 1991 due to introduction of "labor code reform."

El Salvador, 1990–1994, right of association, right to organize and bargain collectively, review terminated.

Guatemala, 1992–1997, right of association, right to organize and bargain collectively, again, review terminated. The list goes on.

What we want to do is parallel to what Senator Feingold has done in his HOPE for Africa bill. That is, we want to apply some enforceable labor standards. We want to reward countries that comply with internationally recognized core labor rights. In this amendment, we call for the Secretary of Labor to determine whether or not a CBI country is providing for the enforcement of ILO core labor rights. Why wouldn't we want to do that in a piece of trade legislation? When will we?

Supporters of CBI parity complain that NAFTA-like benefits will help Caribbean workers. I have heard that argument made over and over. I want to read from a report that came out in October of 1999: "Six years of NAFTA: A review from inside the maquiladoras."

This 1999 report on the Mexican maquiladoras shows wages and conditions have actually deteriorated since passage of NAFTA. This was a joint effort between the Comite Fronterizo de Obreras and the American Friends Service Committee. I will quote from relevant sections of the report, "Six years of NAFTA: A review from inside the maquiladoras":

In Mexican manufacturing, real wages have fallen by more than 20 percent since 1994. It is not only that real wages have remained stagnant overall, failing to keep pace with inflation, but wage levels have also come under attack wherever they are over the threshold considered competitive by the maquiladoras.

One sees over and over, in going through this report, wage levels dropping, basic violations of the people to organize, and failure to enforce child labor standards. When I hear about NAFTA-like benefits, I have to question whether or not this is the future.

I will speak about the CBI countries and what I call the race to the bottom. The CBI countries with the fastest export growth to the United States have also experienced the steepest decline in wages in the region. Over the last 10 years, textile and apparel imports from Honduras exploded by a whopping 2,523 percent. Yet from the 10 years spanning 1985 to 1996, wages of Honduran workers declined by 59 percent.

I will repeat this since we are talking about the benefits for the workers in these countries. I am not making an argument that we should have enforceable labor standards because I only care about workers in our country. I do care about workers in our country, and I do worry that the message we're sending to workers in our country, if we do not have enforceable labor standards in this agreement, is: If you dare to organize and bargain collectively to get a better wage and a better standard of living for yourselves and your families, then these companies will just go to the Caribbean countries.

That is part of the message. Let me tell you why I think it is the message. This is a list of approximate apparel wages around the world. In the United States, the average is $8.42. Do my colleagues know what it is in Colombia? Seventy to 80 cents; Dominican Republic, 69 cents; El Salvador, 59 cents; Guatemala, somewhere between 37 to 50 cents; Haiti, 30 cents; Honduras, 43 cents; Nicaragua, 23 cents.

I am worried that not only is the message to workers in our country: Look, we will just go to these countries where we can pay 23 or 40 cents an hour; you cannot compete with them so you dare not call for better wages and working conditions.

I am also worried the message we're sending to these countries is: Yes, there is going to be economic expansion and there is going to be more trade, but the only way you can get the foreign investment is if you agree to work for less than 50 cents an hour.

Again, I will give some figures. CBI countries with the fastest export growth to the United States have also experienced the sharpest decline in wages in the region. Maybe my colleagues can explain to me why this is the case.

Over the last 10 years, in Honduras: Apparel imports from Honduras exploded 2,523 percent. Yet for the same 10 years, the wages in Honduras declined by 59 percent.

In El Salvador: Apparel exports to the United States have increased 2,512 percent, while wages have decreased 27 percent.

In contrast, Jamaica's export growth has been less impressive, culminating in an actual 17 percent decline over the past year. One explanation is that Jamaica's high rate of unionization has ensured that workers' wages have increased.

So here is the message. May I simply say to my colleagues why enforceable IOL standards are important: The basic right to be able to organize and not wind up in prison: the basic right to be able to bargain collectively and not wind up in prison. It is because if we do not have enforceable labor standards and we do not in this trade legislation right now, and this amendment puts enforceable labor standards into this legislation—then we are saying to workers in our States: You had better not ask for more by way of wages. You had better not be too assertive for yourselves or your families because we'll just go to these CBI countries and we'll pay 50 cents an hour or less.

What it says to the workers in these countries—and I just gave you some aggregate data—is: By the way, we're not going to guarantee your right to organize. We're not going to guarantee any fair labor standards. We're not going to guarantee any IOL standards that will be enforceable. Therefore, the only way you get the investment is if you're willing to work under sweatshop conditions.

As a matter of fact, in the CBI countries, their growth in exports to our country has been unbelievable—dramatic growth—but the wages have declined. The only country where that has not happened is Jamaica, which is a country where there has been unionization. So the message is: You don't get the trade, you don't get the investment, if you dare to unionize.

I say to colleagues, there are many articles, many testimonies, and there is a GAO report which shows that workers' rights have not been respected and are not respected in Central America, Haiti, and the Dominican Republic. I do not think my colleagues are going to argue with me on this. It seems the evidence is irrefutable on that point.

Without this amendment, the CBI Parity bill is going to help defeat unionizing drives in our textile plants and American workers will compete with Caribbean apparel workers who are willing to work for 30 cents an hour—23 cents an hour actually in Nicaragua, 80 cents an hour in Colombia. The United States apparel workers make, on the average, $8.42, which is not a lot of money.

There is a bitter irony: Many of these workers in U.S. textile plants are actually immigrants from these very same countries. A large number of them are poor, they barely make a living wage, they are women, they are minorities. Without this amendment, the CBI parity bill will merely encourage United States corporations to set up sweatshops in the Caribbean. My amendment is an anti-sweatshop amendment.

To summarize, there ought to be enforceable labor standards. There are not any in this trade bill. Without enforceable labor standards, we are not on the side of human rights, we are not on the side of people in the CBI countries wanting to organize and to be able to do well for their families, and we are not on the side of wage earners in our country who are going to lose their jobs to workers in Honduras who work for 40 cents an hour.

We ought to at least have enforceable IOL standards. That is exactly what this amendment speaks to.

I reserve the remainder of my time. Mr. MOYNIHAN addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New York.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. I congratulate the Senator from Minnesota for his remarks and tell him that he finds no difference of view among the managers of this legislation. We have a managers' amendment to address it.

The large issue, sir, that has emerged in the context of the World Trade Organization is the relevance of the international labor conventions negotiated under the auspices of the International Labor Organization, which began here in Washington in 1919. The first were adopted at the Pan-American Union Building. The Offices of the ILO itself were provided by then-Assistant Secretary of the Navy Franklin D. Roosevelt.

The problem is, at the time, these trade treaties—they were trade treaties—were designed to say, just as the Senator has said: If you, country X, have a minimum wage, and country Y does not, country Y will have trade advantages which will end up with employment in the original country. So do it together—improve labor standards together by means of international labor treaties. It is a principle.

We did not, until now, have any transparency. There was no inspection—a new idea, a post-World War II idea—an important key idea. There was no ranking, no reporting. We are getting there. The International Labor Organization, in 1998, issued this wonderful document: "ILO Declaration on Fundamental Principles and Rights at Work." And there they are, the four basic principles. We have a lot to do in this regard, but we have begun.

So I congratulate the Senator. He is going to speak later and longer.

I know the Senator from Montana, under some pressure of time, would like to speak now, as I understand it, on the most agreeable subject of why this is an important bill and why he voted for it in the Finance Committee.

Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President, before yielding to the Senator from Montana—I will be pleased to accommodate him—my understanding is that before we come to a final vote, there will be an opportunity for further discussion of this amendment. There are some additional comments I want to make, especially in response to the very helpful comments of the Senator.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. We understand that. Mr. WELLSTONE. I thank the Senator.

Mr. BAUCUS addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HUTCHINSON). The Senator from Montana.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, like many of my colleagues, I was very disappointed last week when it appeared that we would not have a chance to act on this very important piece of legislation. I was disappointed for several reasons.

First, because there's a lot more at stake here than the four basic elements of this bill: CBI, Africa Trade, TAA and GSP. All four are important, and I will say a few words about each one of them.

But even more important is the signal that we send now. At the end of this month, the United States will host the World Trade Organization ministerial meeting in Seattle. The WTO writes and enforces the rules governing some $6 trillion in international trade. Delegations from over 130 nations will come participate in the meeting. They will launch a new global round of negotiations aimed at expanding trade.

All of those delegations will have a common concern: Does the United States still intend to lead the world on trade? They will look at the way we deal with the trade bill before us as an indication of how they should answer that question.

The signals we have sent them recently are not encouraging.

First, we have failed to pass legislation granting negotiating authority to the U.S. Trade Representative. This undercuts our ability to persuade other nations to offer concessions, since we are not in a position to make credible offers.

Second, the United States has not put forward the kind of visionary, farreaching proposals needed at the onset of trade talks. Rather than leading the way forward, we seem to have adopted another strategy: offend the fewest number of people as possible.

While we send these weak signals, other countries have moved into the breach to advance their own interests. The European Union and Japan mounted campaigns to paint us as foot-draggers on trade. They say that our proposals for trade negotiations are too narrow to allow for any real bargaining. They claim that they want to talk about the full range of trade issues, while we want to pull major portions of the trade system off the table.

We know what they are really up to. They want to undercut the talks and make them drag on for years. That way they can avoid living up to their responsibilities on agriculture. Unfortunately, a number of countries are persuaded by the picture of America's trade policy that Europe and Japan are painting.

This bill is the only opportunity the Senate will have before the Seattle meetings to show where America stands. It is vitally important that we pass this legislation to demonstrate our commitment to free market principles, and to open, fair trading system.

Mr. President, I filed two amendments to the bill, both of them traderelated. Both of them are on issues which are extremely important to Americans. I was very disappointed that we were locked out of discussing them last week.

One of the amendments allowed for tariff cuts on environmental goods as part of a global agreement in the WTO. The measure has the support of both business and environmental groups. This is a rare instance where both sides of the trade-environment debate agree on something. It's a shame that the Senate cannot move forward on something so sensible.

The second amendment concerned agricultural subsidies. American farmers are the most productive in the world. But they're being frozen out of foreign markets by European and Japanese subsidies. I filed an amendment that would fight back by funding our Export Enhancement Program.

This amendment required the Secretary of Agriculture to target at least two billion dollars in Export Enhancement Program funds into the EU's most sensitive markets if they fail to eliminate their export subsidies by 2003. It's time to start fighting fire with fire. This "GATT trigger" should provide leverage in the next round of the WTO in reducing grossly distorted barriers to agricultural trade.

In addition to these amendments, Mr. President, I also filed a resolution in the form of an amendment about another important trade issue: telecommunications. It calls on the Administration to continue to pursue efforts to open the Japanese telecommunications market. This is another example of how Japan must shoulder its responsibilities as a major trading nation. It cannot benefit from access to foreign markets unless its offers access to its home market. It's simply a question of fairness.

Mr. President, I voted against cloture last week because I objected to the way the Majority Leader handled the bill. I was denied the ability to do what the people of Montana sent me here to do: debate and pass legislation. But I support the bill itself. I support each of its elements—the Caribbean Basin Initiative, the Africa Growth and Opportunity Act, and the renewal of both Trade Adjustment Assistance and the Generalized System of Preferences.

CARIBBEAN BASIN PARITY INITIATIVE (CBI)

I have long supported efforts to extend additional tariffs preferences to the Caribbean Basin. But with conditions. The benefits should be conditioned on the beneficiary countries' trade policies, their participation and cooperation in the Free Trade Area of the Americas ("FTAA") initiative, and other factors. This trade bill is substantially similar to the version I supported in the 105th Congress with some reservation.

I see a flaw in this bill, however, and would like to work to repair it. The bill suggests criteria the President can use when deciding whether to grant CBI benefits. It is a long list of about a dozen items. Criteria like Intellectual Property Rights. Investment protections. Counter-narcotics. Each one is important. The bill should make these criteria mandatory.

In particular, I believe that the President should be required to certify that CBI beneficiaries respect worker rights, both as a matter of law and in practice. We can't maintain domestic support for open trade here at home unless our programs take core labor standards into account.

We want to help our Caribbean neighbors compete effectively in the U.S. market. But we don't want them to compete with U.S. firms by denying their own citizens fundamental worker rights.

It only seems reasonable that as we help the economic development of these nations, we also help them enforce the laws already on their books. The majority of these countries already have the power and only need the will to ensure that their citizens see the benefits of enhanced trade—decent wages, decent hours and a decent life.

Overall, I believe that CBI parity is the right thing to do—if it does what it is intended to do. That is lift the people of the hurricane devastated countries out of poverty and ensure them a better way of life.

I also believe that the United States must lead by example. Sensitivity to labor and environment must play a role in our trade decisions and actions around the world.

It's tragic that partisan politics keeps the United States Senate from taking these actions.

AFRICAN GROWTH AND OPPORTUNITY ACT

I have the same concerns about labor in terms of the African Growth and Opportunity portion of the bill. But I supported the Chairman's mark, which included a provision requiring U.S. fabric for apparel products produced in eligible sub-Saharan African countries.

Developing markets is in the best interest of us all. And the trade bill would help Africa move in that direction. But this bill is about more than trade. It is about hope.

It is about bringing the struggling nations of sub-Saharan Africa into our democratic system. It is about establishing stability and a framework wherein the citizens of these nations can enjoy the fruits of prosperity. It is about building a bridge between the United States and Africa that will be a model for all nations.

TRADE ADJUSTMENT ASSISTANCE

The third part of the bill renews the Trade Adjustment Assistance Program. We cannot expect to maintain a domestic consensus on trade if we fail to assist those who are adversely affected. For 37 years, this program helped Americans adjust to the forces of globalization.

I would like to acknowledge Senator MOYNIHAN, who originated this program, in another demonstration of his wisdom and foresight. I have seen the effects of this program in Montana. The renewal of Trade Adjustment Assistance translates to 330 Montana employees impacted and approximately $44 million in gross annual sales preserved.

This legislation is long overdue. TAA authorization expired on June 30. There are families who are displaced in the world economy, and they are living off this transitional benefit—200,000 eligible workers.

While we delay, certified firms anxiously await funding. This is fundamentally unfair—especially for employees of firms fighting import competition that is beyond their control. They cannot afford to wait while TAA is caught up in the annual battle for funding as the "perennial bargaining chip" for other trade proposals. That's just ineffective government. It's time to pass this legislation.

GENERALIZED SYSTEM OF PREFERENCES

Finally, let me say a word about GSP renewal. This is the fourth part of the trade bill. This is also a question of effective government. Over the years, the program has lapsed periodically when renewal legislation was delayed. Like TAA, the latest lapse occurred on June 30. Four months later, we still haven't acted on its renewal.

Who gets hurt? Not just foreign companies. A lot of American firms get hurt. That includes both American importers and exporters. A lot of the American firms produce abroad and then export to the United States. Much of this is internal company trade. That's the reality of today's global economy.

When GSP lapses, these companies are suddenly required to deposit import duties into an account. Customs holds the money until renewal legislation is signed. Eventually the companies get their money back. But they don't know how long renewal legislation will take. So they don't how much they'll have to set aside, or how long the money will be in escrow.

How can we expect businesses to operate efficiently under such conditions? These cycles of GSP lapsing and then being renewed represent government at its worst. We have a responsibility to provide business and consumers with a consistent, predictable set of rules. We need to fix this GSP lapse as quickly as possible.

Mr. President, a lot of effort, a lot of thought, a lot of time has gone into this bill. Much time has also gone into formulating amendments. It was a great disappointment to see this effort unravel over partisan politics. We have a second chance this week. Let's not squander the opportunity. We can and should work together to pass this bill.

We were elected to this body to pass legislation not to bicker. Let's do what the people sent us here to do.

Thank you, Mr. President. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New York is recognized.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, I rise briefly to express the wish that every Member of the Senate will have heard, or will have read, the remarks of the Senator from Montana. There speaks the American voice. I trust it will be heard. Thanks to him, it will prevail.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California is recognized.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, I rise to address the African Growth and Opportunity Act and to discuss two amendments I hope to offer. I would like to begin by thanking the chairman and the ranking member of the committee for their good work on this bill. Anyone who has spent time in Africa knows the poverty and environmental problems inherent on that continent. The Africa Growth and Opportunity Act, I believe, is the most hopeful vehicle for positive change that has come about. It opens the door to trade, investment, economic growth, and a higher quality of life for people of African nations. It will give Africans options and new abilities to build economically, to develop, to improve opportunities for trade worldwide, and to build new businesses on African and Caribbean soil.

Sub-Saharan Africa is a market of some 700 million people. Yet less than 1 percent of our Nation's total trade is currently conducted with nations of this region. Expanding trade with this emerging market will help keep America competitive with Europe and Asia, who are already expanding their markets in the African nations. As the nations of sub-Saharan African reform their economies to spur economic growth, U.S. exporters will have access to new and larger markets for their products. This, in the long run, creates and sustains American jobs.

Just as important, this legislation contains provisions to support and encourage democracy and human rights in sub-Saharan Africa. A country is not eligible for trade and investment benefits if it engages in gross violations of internationally recognized human rights and does not respect basic labor rights, such as the right to organize and bargain, the right of association, and acceptable working conditions.

Now, I recognize that those rights aren't as strong and enforceable as some might want. Nonetheless, they are the basic rights that are inherent in virtually every trade bill.

Finally, as President Clinton noted, deepening our economic ties with these nations will also strengthen our cooperative efforts to address a host of transnational threats, such as environmental degradation, infectious disease, and illicit drug trafficking. I had intended to offer an amendment to address any potential impact this legislation might have on the domestic apparel industry of our Nation. The amendment I would have introduced would have created a tax credit of 30 percent for the first $12,300 in the first year of employment, rising to 50 percent over 5 years for domestic garment and sewn manufacturers who hire a worker who is at or below the poverty line in this country. For an individual, that is $8,240; for a family of four, it is However, both the chairman and the ranking member of the Finance Committee have made it clear they don't believe tax credit amendments should be offered to this legislation, and I respect that. The offset we also had in mind, it turns out, has been utilized. However, the amendment has been scored. I will not offer this domestic textile worker tax credit amendment on this bill, though my intention is to offer it as a separate bill with an offset at a later time.

I think this legislation would provide real incentive for domestic manufacturers to keep jobs in the United States, to hire American workers, and to keep them on the job. Moreover, by targeting the benefits to employees who, before being hired, are living at or below the poverty line, the amendment would also help move families off of welfare and public assistance and provide them good jobs in which they can support themselves and their families.

My second amendment addresses the need for the United States to remain in the forefront of the fight against HIV/AIDS in Africa.

Mr. President, this bill inadvertently threatens to undermine the fight against AIDS in Africa. Approximately 34 million people, if you can believe it, in sub-Saharan Africa—that is the equivalent of the population of the State of California—are or have been infected with AIDS or HIV. And 11.5 million people of those infected have died-11.5 million people. These fatalities comprise 83 percent of the world's total HIV/AIDS-related death. Eightythree percent of the death from AIDS in the world are in the sub-Saharan African countries. So the impact of AIDS in Africa is huge. It continues to be a major threat to the well-being of the entire African Continent. Frankly, it even threatens the well-being of this legislation if it is left unaddressed.

Unfortunately, this legislation carries with it intellectual property rights for the American pharmaceutical companies which prevent the licensing, manufacture, and sale of cheaper generic AIDS drugs. That is a practice known as "compulsory licensing."

Without compulsory licensing, a practice fully consistent with international law, the vast majority of HIV/AIDS patients in Africa could not afford the more expensive drugs from American pharmaceutical companies and, thus, more will suffer and die simply without treatment. AIDS drugs in this country literally cost several hundred dollars a month. They must be taken several times a day regularly, and they often necessitate other drugs to ward off serious side effects of AIDS-reducing drugs.

The amendment I have authored, which is cosponsored by Senator Feingold, on which we have worked with the staff on both sides, and which we believe will be acceptable to both sides, draws on a provision in Senator Feingold's HOPE for Africa bill. It allows the countries of sub-Saharan Africa to pursue compulsory licensing by preventing the U.S. Government from enforcing one specific U.S. intellectual property right that, when implemented, would prevent the license, manufacture, and sale of generic AIDS drugs in Africa.

For those of my colleagues who may be concerned that this amendment may undermine wider intellectual property rights, this amendment acknowledges the World Trade Organization's agreement on trade-related aspects of intellectual property and that that is the presumptive legal standard for intellectual property rights.

The WTO, however, allows countries flexibility in addressing public health concerns, and the compulsory licensing process under this amendment is consistent with the WTO's balancing of intellectual property rights with the moral obligation to meet public health emergencies such as the HIV/AIDS epidemic in Africa.

When 11 million people die of a single disease, it certainly deserves and merits this kind of consideration.

In effect, this amendment will allow the countries of sub-Saharan Africa to continue to determine the availability of HIV/AIDS pharmaceuticals in their countries, and provide their people with more affordable HIV/AIDS drugs.

It is clearly in the national interest of the United States to prevent the further spread of HIV/AIDS in Africa, and I believe that this amendment is an important improvement to this legislation if we are to continue to assist the countries of the region to bring this deadly disease under control.

I am pleased to support the African Growth and Opportunity Act and the Caribbean Basin Initiative because I believe they are both in the national interest of this country.

I thank both the chairman and the ranking member for their support of this amendment.

I yield the floor.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I rise today to express my strong support for the amendment of the Senator from California to the African Growth and Opportunity Act. First, let me thank Senator FEINSTEIN for her leadership on this critical issue. This very provision is incorporated in my own HOPE for Africa bill, S. 1636, and I am especially pleased she is offering that language as an amendment to this bill today.

AGOA's aim is to strengthen economic ties between the United States and the diverse states of sub-Saharan Africa, fostering economic development and mutually beneficial growth. I think that we can all agree that this is a worthy goal. The disagreement is about how we get from here to there.

It is my belief that no U.S.-Africa trade bill will succeed unless it addresses the underlying context for growth and development in Africa. The United States needs to pass legislation that will help set the stage for a real economic partnership.

The Feinstein-Feingold amendment is a good start because it is impossible to address Africa's economic and social development problems without taking serious action to combat the region's HIV/AIDs epidemic.

In 1998, four out of every five HIV/AIDs-related deaths occurred in sub-Saharan Africa. In fact, HIV/AIDS kills over 5.000 Africans each day.

Common decency tells us that this is a humanitarian catastrophe. Basic logic also tells us that it is economically devastating.

AIDS attacks the most productive segment of society—the young adults who would otherwise be the engine in Africa's economy. And it leaves far too many children orphaned, preparing to take their place in society without the guidance and security that their parents would have provided.

And the health-care costs associated with AIDS are astronomical. Life-savings medications can cost $12,000 per year—an impossible burden in countries where average per-capita annual income often barely exceed $1,000.

How can the United States expect to find a strong economic partner in Africa if it ignores these facts?

This amendment does not hide from these realities. It approaches them head-on, by prohibiting U.S. funds from being used to change the intellectual property laws of African states.

That means that taxpayer dollars will not be spent to help pharmaceutical companies undermine the legal efforts of some African states to gain and retain access to lower cost pharmaceuticals.

It is important to be clear—this amendment does not allow African states to "get away with something." It explicitly refers to the legal means by which these countries are entitled to address their public health emergencies.

These legal methods, which are permitted under the agreement on Trade Related Aspects of Intellectual Property, or TRIPS, lower prices for consumers by creating competition in the market for patented goods through a procedure called compulsory licensing. TRIPS is an agreement administered by the World Trade Organization.

Compulsory licensing does not ignore the rights of patent-holders. Pharmaceutical companies holding patents on HIV/AIDS drugs are paid a royalty under these arrangements.

This amendment simply prohibits the United States from spending money to undermine an entirely legal fight for survival that is being waged in Africa today.

It is legal. It is the right thing to do. And ultimately, it is in America's interest, as healthier African people will undoubtedly lead to healthier African economies.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Delaware.

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, I appreciate the remarks of the distinguished Senator from California. She seeks to address a most critical problem, one that is unbelievable, as she pointed out, with 11 million a year dying from this disease.

We have been working. We expect to come together on an amendment that will be acceptable to both sides.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. I thank the chairman very much. I appreciate that.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, Federal Reserve Board Chairman Alan Greenspan has said numerous times that increased trade has raised the standard of living and the quality of life for almost all countries involved in trade, and especially the quality of life in our own country. Chairman Greenspan believes the No. 1 benefit of trade is not simply jobs but an enhanced standard of living. I can think of no more important enhancement to the standard of living of America's hardest pressed working families than to increase the minimum wage. Surely, it is appropriate to send a message on this legislation that increased trade must definitely mean a better quality of life for the working poor.

I had hoped to offer an amendment to this bill to raise the minimum wage. Regrettably, it was perhaps the only vehicle that was going to be left in this year of this particular session. But the majority leader's actions prevented me from doing that. This trade bill has been offered to enhance the standard of living for workers in Africa and the Caribbean. I am certainly in favor of that. But there are honest disagreements as to whether the proposal before us effectively does so.

While we express our concern for the workers in these nations, we cannot forget the workers in our own country. I believe the American people will hold this Congress responsible for refusing to address so many issues which are critical to our families and our communities, and the majority, I believe, has once again turned a deaf ear to the pleas of the American people for action. I regret this latest missed opportunity

I take this opportunity as we are coming into the final days of this congressional year to express what I know has to be the frustration of about 12 million Americans who had hoped this Congress would have raised the minimum wage, or at least had the opportunity to debate this issue and discuss this issue and consider this issue during this past summer, or this past fall, or even prior to the time that we were going to go into recess. But we have been denied the opportunity to do so. Every legislative possibility has been excluded from us doing so up to this time, and even excluded on this piece of legislation.

I join with all of those who share this enormous frustration and a certain amount of disgust at the way this issue is being treated as we are moving into these final days.

We now have seen some modification or adjustment to prior positions of opposition to any increase in the minimum wage which had been expressed by the Republican leadership in the House and also in the Senate. Now, evidently, there is a bidding war in the House of Representatives—hopefully, it won't take place in the Senate, but certainly in the House of Representatives—about not what we can do for the working poor but how many additional tax breaks we can add on to the minimum wage when we consider it in the House of Representatives.

If we extend the minimum wage over a longer period of time, for some 3 years, actually the benefits that special interests would receive by the tax considerations, which in the House position would reach $100 billion over 10 years, which isn't paid for, the only way you could assume they could be paid for would be out of Social Security because it is not paid for—and the bidding war wants to keep adding that until finally, evidently, the financial interests, which are the most opposed to any increase in the minimum wage, would finally say: All right, let's go ahead because the benefits we are going to receive so exceed and outweigh the modest increase in the increase in the minimum wage that it is worthwhile

As we are coming to the end of this session, we are finding that this Senate refuses to address an issue which cries out for fairness and decency as the minimum wage slips further and further back for working families at the lower end of the economic ladder, who are in many instances doing such important work as teachers aides in the classrooms of this country, are doing important work in nursing homes and looking after the elderly people, or working in the great buildings of this country at nighttime in order to clean them so the American economy and efficiency can continue during the course of the day, that we have decided in this body evidently that we are going to leave this session granting ourselves a $4,600 pay increase and denying a one dollar-an-hour pay increase for over 11 million of our fellow citizens who are working at the lower rung of the economic ladder. That is not right. That is not fair. That is wrong.

We ask ourselves: Why should this be the case? Certainly we have not heard those who have resisted us in bringing this matter to the floor make the economic argument that, well, this will mean an increase in the numbers of unemployed Americans. They haven't been willing to make that. They haven't been willing to make that. They haven't be willing to the times, and it was so totally refuted during the last increases in the minimum wage that they evidently are not prepared to come out and debate that issue.

The other argument, that it was going to be an inflator in terms of our general economy, has been refuted completely, as a practical matter. The last time we raised the minimum wage it was demonstrated effectively that there was virtually no increase in the cost of living. We are denied the opportunity of even hearing a well thought out argument for opposing the minimum wage. All we hear is the same, tired, old arguments that have been disproved time in and time out.

What we see as a result is that without the increase in the minimum wage, there is a continued deterioration in the purchasing power of the minimumwage workers. Even without the minimum wage, if we did not consider it until even 2000 or 2001, we would be back to $4.80 an hour, close to the lowest point in the last 40 years of minimum wage, at a time of unprecedented economic prosperity for everyone except those at the lowest rung of the economic ladder.

We will not even debate the issue. If Members want to vote against it, they can do so, but why deny Members the opportunity to debate the issue and take the time on this particular measure? Members cannot make the argument that it will take a lot of time after what we have gone through in the past days where, effectively, from a parliamentary point of view, we were in a stalemate in the Senate without any amendments being even considered on the trade bill for a number of days.

We could have dealt with this issue in a matter of hours. We are certainly prepared to deal with this issue in a relatively short time period—a few hours if necessary. Obviously, the majority, the Republicans, retain their rights in terms of a very modest increase in the minimum wage, 50 cents next year and 50 cents the following year. That is too high for our Republican friends. We can debate that and at least have the Senate work its will. The position taken by the Republican leadership on the other side has been, if we are going to extend it, they will deny us the opportunity to bring the minimum wage up this year. If we bring it up at the end of the session, we will put it, effectively, well into next year and carry it on to the following year, which will extend it perhaps $1.00 over 5 years.

Still, we will carry on the tax goodies which, over a 10-year period in the proposal recommended by the Republican leadership, will be $100 billion in tax breaks for the special interests. That is what is happening. That is what is so unacceptable.

This morning, there was an excellent editorial in the Washington Post, and I ask unanimous consent it be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Washington Post, Nov. 3, 1999]
THE MINIMUM WAGE SQUEEZE

The minimum wage should be increased, and the increase should not become a political football. Unfortunately, there is more than a little risk that it will become a football in the remaining days of the session.

The wage, now $5.15 an hour, was last increased in 1997. The president has proposed taking it up another dollar an hour: 50 cents next Jan. 1 and 50 cents a year thereafter. Republicans and some Democrats would spread the increase over an additional year. That's something reasonable people can disagree about. The wage ought not be allowed to lose ground to inflation, and perhaps in real terms ought to be a set higher than it has been in recent years, though the government powerfully supplements it with the earned-income tax credit, food stamps and other benefits

The wage itself, however, has become almost a secondary issue. Those sponsoring a slower increase also want to use the bill as a vehicle for some of the tax cuts the president vetoed earlier in the year. Ostensibly, these are to make whole the smaller businesses that would have to pay the higher wage. But the data suggest that little of the benefit would go to such employers. These are costly cuts in the estate tax, tax treatment of pension set-asides, etc., that would mainly go to people of very high income. No provision is made to offset the costs, which tend to be understated in that early on they would be relatively low and only later begin to rise.

The president has rightly threatened, mainly on these fiscal grounds, to veto the bill. It may well be that the bill will have to include some tax relief to pass, but the relief should be targeted and paid for. The gate-keepers seek too heavy a toll. The price of a bill to help the working poor ought not be an indiscriminate tax cut for those at the very top of the economic mountain

Mr. KENNEDY. This article reminds everyone how the interests of some of the hardest working Americans are being toyed with by the Republican leadership. They say maybe we will add a little more in terms of tax breaks if we consider the increase in the minimum wage.

This increase is a matter of enormous importance and consequence for the people receiving it. Sixty percent are women; over 75 percent of minimum wage workers heading up families are women. It is an issue in terms of children. It is a family issue. It is an issue relating to men and women of color since one-third of those who receive the minimum wage are men and women of color. It is a civil rights issue, a family issue, a children's issue, a women's issue. It is a fairness issue. Yet we are denied it.

How quickly this institution went ahead with a $4,600-per-year increase for their pay while denying this side the opportunity to vote on 50 cents an hour over each of the next two years for the minimum-wage worker, an increase of $2,000 a year for people working at the lower end of the economic ladder. Yet, $4,600 for the Members of Congress.

It is wrong to play with the life and the well-being of these workers. They are being toyed with by considering how much in additional tax breaks we will provide for special interests. That is what the bidding is that is going on. It is not the Congress or leadership acting in these workers' best interest.

What does $2,000 mean to a minimum-wage family? The two increments, of 50 cents each, mean 7 months' of grocery. That means a lot to a family. It is 5 months of rent. It is 10 months of utilities. It is 18 months of tuition and fees at a 2-year college for a family of four living on the minimum wage.

While many parts of our country have experienced the economic boom, we have found another very important area of need for minimum-wage workers: Housing. In so many areas of this country, the housing costs have gone off the chart and are virtually out of the reach of the minimum-wage workers. The hours a minimum-wage worker would have to work in Boston for a one-room apartment—100 a week. It is absolutely impossible to understand why we are not dealing with this issue.

This chart/table shows what happened when we had the increase in the minimum wage in 1996 and 1997. The unemployment rates continued to go down. This is true in the industry that has expressed the greatest reservation about a minimum-wage increase, the restaurant industry. They have increased their total workers by 400,000 over the period since the last increase in the minimum wage. They are out here day in and day out trying to undermine and lobby against the increase in the minimum wage.

This is not just an issue in which Democrats are interested, although we are interested in and we are committed to it. I daresay if we had a vote on an increase in the minimum wage, the way we have identified it, we would get virtually every member of our party and perhaps a few courageous Republicans as well.

This is what Business Week says about the increase in the minimum wage:

Old myths die hard. Old economic theories die even harder . . . higher minimum wages are supposed to lead to fewer jobs. Not today. In a fast-growth, low-inflation economy, higher minimum wages raise income, not unemployment.

This is from Business Week—not a labor organization, although they would agree—from Business Week, which understands it. They have probably reviewed carefully what happened in the State of Oregon that now has the highest minimum wage with the largest growth rate in terms of reduction of unemployment when they introduced the minimum wage. Why? Because people not working went into the labor market, it created more economic activity, and they paid more in taxes. The whole economy moved along together. We are glad to debate it if people want to dispute that.

What does this mean in people's lives?

Melissa Albis lives in North Adams, MA. She works for the local Burger King for $5.25 an hour. She has five children all under 12. She is struggling to pay her $550-a-month rent and is looking for less expensive housing because she fears she and her children will be evicted if she cannot earn more.

Cathi Zeman, 52 years old, works at the Rite Aid in Canonsburg, PA, a town near Pittsburgh. She earns $5.68 an hour: Base pay of $5.43, plus .25 for being a "key carrier." Her husband has a heart condition and is only able to work sporadically, so she is the primary earner in her family. An increase in minimum wage means a lot to Cathi.

Shirley Briggs is a senior citizen living near Williamstown, MA. Her husband passed away in 1982, and even though she has arthritis, she works for $5.50 an hour to try to make ends meet. Even with supplement income and Social Security, she has trouble paying for medicine. "My income is not enough to live." Minimum wage means a lot to Shirley.

Dianne Mitchell testified in June 1998 that she made $5.90 an hour at a laundry in Brockton, MA. For Dianne, with three daughters and a granddaughter, living on minimum wage is nervewracking. She is "always juggling food and utilities," even having to choose one over the other. An increase in the minimum wage would give women like Dianne peace of mind—they could provide for their families.

Cordelia Bradley testified at a Senate forum last year she was working at a clothing chain store outside of Philadelphia. She and her son lived in a rented room for $300 a month. She hoped to have her own apartment, but at the current minimum wage that goal was out of reach.

Kimberly Frazier, also from Philadelphia, testified she was a full-time child care aide earning $5.20. A child care aide, how many times are we going to hear long speeches about children and looking out for children; children are our future; we need to do more caring for children. Kimberly Frazier is earning $5.20 an hour as a full-time child care aide. With three children, her pay barely covers the bills for rent, food, utilities, and clothes for her children. For Kimberly and her family, a pay increase of $1 an hour could make a real difference.

This is enormously important to individuals. Republicans want to see how little they can do for the workers, and how much, evidently, they can do for the corporations and special interests. You cannot look at the conduct of leadership in these last 4 weeks and not understand that is what is happening. The workers are being nickled and dimed. This is absolutely unacceptable.

We are going to continue. The days are going down, the hours are going down, but we are resolute in our determination, and we are not going to have a bidding war out here on the floor of the Senate on this issue. We are not going to permit the toying with the lives of American workers who are playing by the rules, working 40 hours a week, 52 weeks a year, who want to provide for their children. They should not have to live in poverty in the United States of America. By denying us the opportunity to do something about this, the leadership, Republican leadership, is denying us a chance to deal with that issue, and it is fundamentally and basically wrong.

I will speak just briefly on another matter.

In passing the Norwood-Dingell bill, a large bipartisan majority in the House voted for strong patient protections against abuses by HMOs. Despite an extraordinary lobbying and disinformation campaign by the health insurance industry, the House approved the bill by a solid majority of 275 to 151. Mr. President, 68 Republicans as well as almost every Democrat in the House stood up for patients and stood up against industry pressure.

Now the insurance industry and its friends in the Republican leadership are at it again. Their emerging strategy is, once again, to delay and deny relief that American families need and that the House overwhelmingly approved. Every indication is that the intention of the Republican leadership is to see that this legislation, as it passed the House of Representatives, will not reach the President for his signature.

According to the Los Angeles Times, Senator Lott's response to the passage of the House bill is that the House-Senate conferences on other legislation have a higher priority and resolving the differences on this bill will take some time.

According to the Baltimore Sun, Senator Lott also indicated Congress might not have the time to work out differences or approve a final bill before it adjourns for the year. Senator NICKLES said the conference committee will probably not begin serious work until early next year.

I say: Why don't we consider the House bill—the bill that passed the House overwhelmingly with 68 Republicans—a bipartisan bill with Democrats and Republicans working together? Why don't we pass that in the Senate this afternoon? We could do that. I certainly urge that we go ahead and do that today. Every day we fail to pass the Patients' Bill of Rights, we are permitting insurance company accountants to make medical decisions that doctors and nurses and other trained medical personnel should have the opportunity to make. That is why the Patients' Bill of Rights is so impor-

We believe that medical professionals, trained, dedicated and committed to their patients, should make those decisions, not accountants. This chart shows what we will see as long as we permit accountants to make health care decisions. We are going to see about 35,000 patients every single day will have needed care delayed. Specialty referrals will be denied to 35.000 patients. It may be that a child with cancer will see a pediatrician but doesn't get the necessary referral to see a pediatric oncologist. Mr. President, 31,000 patients are forced to change doctors every day; 18,000 are forced to change medication because the HMOs refused to reimburse the medicine their physician prescribed. The final result is that 59.000 Americans every day experience unnecessary added pain and suffering; 41,000 Americans see their conditions worsen every day that we fail to act.

We still have time to act in the final days of this session. Republicans are beginning to lay the groundwork for a failed conference. Comparing the Senate and House bills, Congressman BILL THOMAS says you don't see many crossbreeds between Chihuahuas and Great Danes walking around. That is quite a quote—we don't see many crossbreeds between Chihuahuas and Great Danes walking around.

I say, let's do what every health care professional organization in the United States has urged us to do, and pass the House bill. I am still waiting for the other side to list one major or minor health organization that supports their proposal: Zero, none, none. Every one of them—every doctors' organization, patients' organization, nursing organization, children's organization, women's health organization, consumer organization—supports our proposal.

To see nothing come out of the conference is my hope. The best outcome is no outcome. But if the strategy of delay and denial ultimately breaks down, the Republican leadership once again has an alternative to try to weaken the House bill as much as possible.

As the Baltimore Sun reported:

The House majority whip suggested the Republican-dominated House conference would not fight vigorously for the House-approved measure in the conference committee. Mr. DeLay said, "Remember who controls the conference: the Speaker of the House."

That ought to give a lot of satisfaction to parents who are concerned about health care for their children. It ought to give a lot of satisfaction to the doctors who are trying to provide the best health care. This is what the House majority whip suggested: Remember who controls the conference: the Speaker of the House—unalterably opposed to the program.

The conference that produces legislation that looks like the Senate Republican bill will break faith with the American people, make a mockery of the overwhelming vote in the House of Representatives, and cause unnecessary suffering for millions of patients. Every day we delay in passing meaningful reforms means more patients will suffer and die.

Finally, I do not think, when we consider minimum wage and consider health, we have addressed these issues in the last few days. These are the matters about which most families are concerned. These are the issues they want addressed. The Republican leadership is considering what they will do on the bankruptcy issue. We have seen great economic prosperity. Do you know who is going bankrupt, by and large? It is the men and women who have lost out in the mergers, the supermergers that have brought extraordinary wealth and accumulation of wealth to individual stockholders. It is families who have had to pay increased costs for prescription drugs. It is women who are not receiving their alimony payments or women who are not getting child care support—there are some 400,000 of them. These are the individuals who are going into bankruptcy. Their needs should be protected.

We have to ask ourselves, if we are going to call bankruptcy up, why aren't we dealing with minimum wage? Why aren't we working on the Patients' Bill of Rights? Why are we not coming to grips with these issues, which are at the center of every working family's hopes and dreams.

In the months since the House passed the Norwood-Dingell bill and the Republican leadership has failed to allow a conference to proceed, 1 million patients have had needed care delayed; 1 million patients have been denied or delayed referral to a specialist; 940,000 patients have been forced to change doctors; more than 535,000 patients have been forced to change medication; Mr. President, 1.8 million patients have experienced added pain and suffering as a result of health plan abuses, and 1.2 million patients have seen their conditions worsen because of health plan abuses.

In the final days of this Congress, we can still take some important steps that will have a direct impact on the well-being of families who are at the lower end of the economic ladder. We can still take important steps that will have a direct impact on families who are faced with health care challenges. We can have a positive impact. We have had the hearings. We have had the debates. We have had the deliberations. All we need is to have the vote the way the House of Representatives had the vote. We can pass what has been a bipartisan bill in the House of Representatives in a matter of a few short hours.

The Republican leadership has waited a month since the House bill was passed to start this conference, effectively pushing action to next February at the earliest. Today is another litmus test of their intention with the appointment of House conferees. We expect those conferees to be stacked against meaningful reform.

We are prepared to participate in a fair conference, and we are willing to enter into a reasonable compromise, but we are sending notice today that we will not tolerate a charade designed only to protect insurance company profits while patients continue to suffer. We will come back to this issue over and over until the American people prevail.

Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Burns). The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I would like to very much thank the chairman and manager of the bill for accepting amendment No. 2408, which I offered and was cosponsored by Senator DURBIN of Illinois, with regard to anticorruption efforts and the desire to do something about the fact that bribery is an important problem worldwide. It poisons the business environment and distorts the normal practices of the marketplace. Bribery undermines democracy and leads to a lower global economy, and when corruption goes unchecked, everybody loses.

To pass the U.S. trade package without addressing corruption simply doesn't make sense, particularly if the package claims to actually promote growth and opportunity in Africa. Of the 16 sub-Saharan African states rated in the Transparency International 1999 Corruption Perception Index, 12 ranked in the bottom half.

The amendment Senator DURBIN and I have offered expresses a sense of Congress that the United States should encourage the accession of sub-Saharan African companies to the OECD Convention combating bribery of foreign officials in international business transactions. The OECD Convention criminalizes bribery of foreign officials to influence or retain business. Some have had said OECD standards are too demanding for the developing economies of Africa. But if we are going to engage in a new economic partnership with Africa, I think we need to leave this double standard behind. Transparency, integrity, and the rule of law are as important in Mali and Botswana as they are right here at home.

Ever since Congress passed the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act of 1977, under the leadership of one of my predecessors, Senator William Proxmire of Wisconsin, we have shared a consensus in this country that economic relations depend upon a foundation of fair play. This amendment incorporates that reality in African trade regulations. This anticorruption amendment also sends an important signal. It tells sub-Saharan states that responsibilities come with benefits in any trade partnership. If this Congress is serious about engaging Africa economically, we have to make these responsibilities crystal clear.

I, again, thank the Chair for accepting this amendment. I also commend Senator Durbin, who has taken the lead—and I joined him—on another amendment having to do with this corruption issue. I am hopeful and optimistic that item will be accepted as well.

We have provided two different important provisions that will move forward with regard to the corruption problem in general and specifically with regard to the African nations.

(Purpose: To establish priorities for providing development assistance)

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, with regard to amendment No. 2409, I urge Members to look at the Statement of Policy in the text of the African Growth and Opportunity Act. In this section the bill asserts congressional support for a series of noble causes, such as supporting the development of civil societies and political freedom in the region, and focusing on countries committed to accountable government and the eradication of poverty.

But then those causes seem to disappear. The implication is that the United States plans to support for these worthy goals—goals that are in our own self-interest—through a series of limited trade benefits.

Nowhere does AGOA mention the role that development assistance plays in pursuing the very ends that it advocates—the eradication of poverty and the development of civil society.

This omission sends an alarming signal. It suggests that the United States may delude itself into thinking that trade alone will stimulate African development.

Trade alone cannot address the crippling effects of the HIV/AIDS epidemic, which has lowered life expectancies by as much as seventeen years in some African countries. Striking at the most productive segment of society—young adults—HIV/AIDS has dealt a brutal blow to African economic development, and has left a generation of orphans in its wake.

And trade alone will not provide sufficient access to education or to reproductive health services for African women—yet both elements are crucial to developing Africa's human resources.

This amendment expresses a sense of Congress that the HIV/AIDS epidemic and chronic food insecurity should be key priorities in U.S. assistance to Africa. It also prioritizes voluntary family planning services, including access to prenatal healthcare; education and vocational training, particularly for women; and programs designed to develop income-generating opportunities, such as micro-credit projects.

This amendment also mandates that the Development Fund for Africa be reestablished for aid authorized specifically for African-related objectives. The DFA allows USAID more flexibility in its Africa program. Perhaps most importantly, it is symbolic of U.S. commitment to African development.

In addition, my amendment requires USAID to submit a report to help the United States to get smarter about how it administers development assistance, and will ensure that our assistance fosters dynamic civil societies across the diverse nations of Africa.

This amendment sends an important signal. Even as the United States considers closer trade relations with sub-Saharan Africa, this country will not abandon its commitment to responsible and well-monitored development assistance.

Mr. President, I understand that a point of order is likely to be raised to this amendment. I understand the consequence of that. But I want to offer the amendment. I call up amendment No. 2409.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

For these reasons, I urge my friend to withdraw this amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's point is well taken and the amendment falls.

Mr. FEINGOLD. In light of the concerns raised by the chairman, I will withdraw the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendment is withdrawn.

Mr. ROTH. On the first matter dealing with the anticorruption, we are in agreement. I congratulate and thank the Senator for his leadership in this matter. Because of his interest, as well as others, we are including a specific anticorruption provision in the managers' amendment.

I thank the distinguished Senator for his cooperation.

Mr. SPECTER. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll. The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The table of contents for title VII of the Tariff Act of 1930 is amended by inserting the following new item after the item relating to section 753:

"Sec. 754. Continued dumping and subsidy offset.".

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply with respect to all antidumping and countervailing duty assessments made on or after October 1, 1996.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, as noted, there are two modifications to the amendment. They are minor modifications. One relates to the court which will have jurisdiction. Instead of the Court of International Trade, it will be the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia. And the second is the striking of language citing antitrust laws, which has been deleted to avoid any possible question as to whether this is a Finance Committee jurisdictional matter and appropriate amendment for this bill.

The essence of this bill is to provide a private right of action to damaged, injured parties when goods are imported into the United States which are dumped in violation of U.S. trade laws and in violation of international trade laws. Many American industries have been decimated as a result of this illegal practice, and the existing remedies are totally insufficient to provide adequate safeguards for the violation of these trade laws.

This bill does not deal with any issue of inappropriate consideration for domestic industries and is really not protectionist, as that term has been traditionally defined. The international trade laws are specific that the goods ought not to be sold in the United States at a lower price than they are sold in the country from which the exports are made and imported into the United States. Our trade laws in the United States preclude dumped goods from coming into this country. International trade laws preclude dumped goods.

This is an approach I have been advocating for more than 17 years now, with my initial bill having been introduced in the 97th Congress, S. 2167, on March 4, 1983. I followed up with similar legislation in the 98th Congress, S. 418 on February 3, 1983; in the 99th Congress, with S. 236; in the 100th Congress, with S. 361; in the 102d Congress, with S. 2508. The thrust has always been the same, that is to provide a private right of action so injured parties could go into Federal court and secure redress on their legal rights because the proceedings through section 201, through the Department of Commerce, through the International Trade Commission, are so long that they are virtually ineffective.

If an injured party goes into the Federal court under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, it is possible to get a temporary restraining order on affidavits within 5 days, then a prompt preliminary hearing and a preliminary injunction and prompt equitable proceedings for a permanent injunction.

The initial legislation, which was introduced back in 1982, called for injunctive relief. The pending amendment provides for a remedy of duties or tariffs equal to the amount of the dumping, the difference between what the product would be sold at in the United States compared to what the product is being sold at in the home country.

I have a list of antidumping duty orders in effect on March 1, 1999. I ask unanimous consent this list be printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD at the conclusion of my statement.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(See Exhibit 1.)

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, on the 5 pages which I am submitting, there are some 290 items which are being subjected to the antidumping orders as of March 1 of this year.

Some illustrative provisions: In Argentina, there is a dumping order on carbon steel; as to Bangladesh, a dumping order on cotton shop towels; Belgium, a dumping order on sugar; Canada, a dumping order on red raspberries; Chile, a dumping order on fresh cut flowers; China, a dumping order on garlic. So the list goes on and on and

When I testified at the hearing before the Finance Committee in favor of this bill, the Senator from North Dakota, Mr. CONRAD, made a comment that this kind of provision might well be applied to wheat and wheat farmers, where they are subjected to dumping from other countries. I suggest to my colleagues who are listening to this on C-SPAN, or to the staffs, that there is hardly a State-there may be no State—which is unaffected by dumping where goods come in from a foreign country and are sold in the United States at a price lower than they are being sold in the foreign country in violation of U.S. trade laws and in violation of international trade laws.

The remedy has been modified to provide for the duties or tariffs, as I have stated, in order to comply with GATT, because a question had arisen as to whether injunctive relief was appropriate under GATT. I frankly believe its. But to avoid any problem, the relief has been modified to duties or tariffs

The difficulty with the proceedings with the existing laws is the tremendous length of time which is taken. For an illustration, there was an anti-dumping order issued as to salmon. It was initiated on July 10, 1997. The order was finally issued on July 30, 1998—time elapsed, 380 days.

A second illustrative case involved garlic from China, initiated on February 28, 1994; the order issued on November 16, 1994—200 days.

A third illustration, magnesium from Ukraine: Initiated April 26, 1994; the order issued May 12, 1995—360 days.

Hot rolled steel from Japan: The initiation of the action was October 27, 1998; the order issued on June 19, 1999. These are only illustrative of the enormous lapse in time.

Contrasted with what can happen in a court of equity, a temporary restraining order can be issued within 5 days on affidavits, prompt proceedings for preliminary injunctions, prompt proceedings for injunctive relief generally.

The difficulty with existing law is that the decisions are made based upon political considerations and foreign relations, and not based upon what is right for American industries who are being undersold by these dumped goods and have suffered a tremendous loss of employment.

My State, Pennsylvania, has been victimized by dumping for the past 2 decades. Two decades ago, the American steel industry employed some 500,000 individuals. Today that number has dwindled to 160,000, notwithstanding the fact that the American steel industry has spent some $50 billion in modernizing.

Under existing laws, the executive branch has the authority to issue suspension agreements. One illustration of that was a suspension agreement issued on July 13 of this year when Secretary Daley announced the United States and Russia had reached agreements to reduce imports of steel. That was immediately followed by strenuous objections by a number of steel companies operating out of my State, Pennsylvania-Bethlehem Steel, LTV, National Steel Corporation, U.S. Steel Group—where they made strenuous objection to these suspension agreements which undermine the effectiveness and credibility of U.S. trade laws and a rule-based international trade system.

I recall, in 1984, a time when the American steel industry was especially hard hit by imports, dumped imports.

The International Trade Commission had issued an order 3-2 in favor of the position of American Steel. The President had the authority to overrule that decision. Senator Heinz and I then made the rounds and talked to International Trade Representative Brock who agreed that the International Trade Commission order in favor of American Steel should be upheld. We talked to Secretary of Commerce Malcolm Baldrige who similarly agreed. We then talked to Secretary of State George Shultz who disagreed, as did Secretary of Defense Weinberger, with Secretary of State Shultz putting it on grounds of U.S. foreign policy and Secretary of Defense Weinberger putting it on grounds of U.S. defense policy.

When these matters are left to the executive branch, the executive branch inevitably does a balancing of what is happening in Russia, what is happening in Argentina, what is happening in Japan, what is happening in Korea.

It is certainly true that when the suspension agreements were entered into by Secretary Daley on July 13, 1999, the Russian economy was in a precarious state, but then so were certain aspects of the economy of western Pennsylvania.

The thrust of taking the matter to the courts is that justice will be done in accordance with existing law, contrasted with what the desirability may be for U.S. foreign policy or for U.S. defense policy.

There is stated from time to time a reluctance to take matters to the court, but my own view, having had substantial practice in the Federal courts as well as the State courts, is that is where justice is done. If there is a case that could be made to show there is a violation of U.S. trade laws and foreign trade laws on dumping, those legal principles will be administered by the courts. Where the wheat industry is being victimized by dumping or the steel industry is being victimized by dumping or the sugar industry is being victimized by dumping or the fresh cut flower industry is being victimized by dumping, justice will be done in the Federal courts.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Delaware.

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, I rise in opposition to my colleague's amendment. I do so do for three reasons. First, there is no evidence that the current antidumping and countervailing duty laws have failed to deliver relief to injured industries. My colleague argues that the amendment is required to address the unfair trade practices facing the steel industry. I would have preferred not to have to revisit the many points that were made in the context of the debate over the steel quota legislation this past summer. This bill is about trade and investment with Africa, the Caribbean, and Central America. I prefer we keep our focus there. That said, since my colleague's amendment has raised those issues before us yet again, I think it is important to remind my colleagues about the points that were made at length in this past summer's debate.

You may recall that, at the time, the steel industry and the steelworkers made the point that they faced a sudden surge of increased imports of steel and were sufficiently threatened that they sought to impose direct quotas on imports of various steel products. They argued that the existing import relief laws were inadequate to the task of addressing that surge. What the debate revealed was quite a different story. In fact, while imports into the United States did surge dramatically in the wake of the Asian financial crisis, they then dropped precipitously in response to the filing of a series of antidumping measures. Imports have continued that downward trend as a result of those unfair trade actions and the suspension agreements negotiated by the Commerce Department that effectively blocked any further imports of hot and cold rolled products from Russia and other countries engaged in below cost sales into the United States market. What lessons should we draw from that experience? One is that the existing laws work exactly as they are intended. They provide an effective and efficient means of obtaining relief from unfairly dumped or subsidized imports. Indeed, as the Wall Street Journal pointed out in an article published in the midst of the steel industry's filing of dumping actions this past year, the mere filing of an unfair trade action under existing laws has a dramatic impact on prices. The article quoted Curtiss Barnette, the chief executive of Bethlehem Steel as acknowledging that trade cases had become a "part of the Bethlehem's "normal business-planning process," and acknowledging that, even where dumping actions failed, "You have won some interim relief and you have said you're going to protect your rights."

Nicholas Tolerico, executive vice president of Thyssen, a Detroit-based steel processing and importing unit of a German steelmaker, made the point even more emphatically. He indicated that, among importers faced with the prospect of an antidumping action. 'the response is just to stop importing." The same holds true for foreign exporters faced with unfair trade complaints even when they eventually win cases. The article quoted the chairman of Ispat International, one of the largest steel manufacturers in the world to the effect that his company had cut exports to the United States from a wirerod mill in Trinidad and Tobago by 40 percent simply due to the risk inherent in trade litigation even though Trinidad's steelmakers eventually won the case. Why is that the case? Some statistics might help here.

The reason that both exporters and importers of steel halt trade the minute a trade case is filed is because of the record compiled by U.S. industry. The Department of Commerce grants relief to the petitioning industry in over 90 percent of the cases filed under the antidumping and countervailing duty laws. Due to the deference that the Court of International Trade is obliged to pay to the Commerce Department's decisions under current law, the Department's decisions are upheld over 90 percent of the time. In other words, if you are an exporter of steel facing an unfair trade action in the United States, there is a 9 in 10 chance that you will face some considerable penalty. Given that steel is a commodity product. and microeconomic theory would dictate that all such products would be priced to the margin, you, as the foreign exporter. are likely to find yourself priced out of the competitive U.S. market with even a slight dumping our countervailing duty added onto the price of your current shipments

Now, let's look at it from an importer's perspective. Let's say you are in the automobile industry in the United States, or one of the other steel consuming industries that employ more than 40 persons in the United States for every person employed in the steel industry here. In fact, let's say you are the plant manager for the Dodge Durango plant in Delaware and you are operating as efficiently as you possibly can to compete with your competition in the hotly contested market for sport utility vehicles. You operate on the basis of "just in time" delivery to ensure that you carry as little inventory as possible. You do that, in part, to reduce the associated costs and, in part, to take advantage of any change in prices for component parts that may help you compete in your market. That, however, can make you more vulnerable to price swings in the market for component parts. Then, suddenly, the steel industry files a series of dumping actions. Do you continue to import steel when you could be faced with a dramatic increase in price if the case succeeds? No. You stop importing from the targeted country or companies in order to reduce your risk.

The net result is that the cases filed before the Commerce Department begin to raise prices as soon as they are filed simply because the market is responding to the fact that the Commerce Department, 9 cases out of 10, is going to impose a significant penalty at the end of the day. Now, would the result be the same if these cases were litigated before the Federal courts, as my colleague's amendment would require? I strongly doubt that. The cases are complex, the facts frequently are in dispute, and the outcome less assured because of the nature of the litigation process.

Those who have spent time litigating in the Federal courts tell me that they do not quote odds on cases to their clients even on sure winners due solely to the risks of litigation. Those with experience litigating before Federal courts tell me that the likely result of a shift of jurisdiction from the administrative agencies to the courts would be a more intrusive review—without the deference the courts currently pay to Commerce Department decisions. The net result would be greater uncertainty as to the result in these cases. which, for the steel industry, would ultimately spell a less reliable outcome than they currently achieve before the administrative agencies.

In short, the dumping and countervailing duty laws appear to be working as designed and the change suggested by my colleague would simply increase the uncertainty of the outcome from the steel industry's perspective. Second, there is no evidence that shifting the burden of investigating foreign unfair trade practices to the courts would in any way enhance the prospect for prompt relief. At hearings earlier this year before the Finance Committee, those who have litigated under the "rocket docket" at the Commerce Department and the International Trade Commission have complained about the fact that they do not get relief as promptly as they like. But, no one suggested that a shift of jurisdiction to the courts would some how improve the situation. Given the record of the courts in handling complex economic litigation in other areas, it is not clear to me that shifting the burden of the initial investigation to the courts, with any allowance at all for the normal process of discovery between private litigants, would provide a benefit to the petitioning industry in these cases.

While both petitioners and respondents complain about their treatment before the administrative agencies, largely due to what they consider to be the arbitrary basis for their decisions, both sides to the litigation seem to agree that the cases themselves are completed as rapidly as possible. That not only helps provide relief to the petitioning industry on as timely a basis as practical, it also has the significant benefit of deciding the issue for the rest of the players in the marketplace. What that really does is reduce the uncertainty in the market that the filing of the case creates. So the plant manager at the Dodge Durango facility in Delaware can rely on decisions in making his own assessment of who to purchase steel from for the coming production run.

Finally, let me say that my colleague's proposal may simply be ahead of its time. What it suggests is something akin to an antitrust remedy—in other words, litigation between private parties that reduces the Government's role in the process. I personally think that there would be real merit to examining that sort of proposal in the Finance Committee in the future. And I would welcome the opportunity to do so rather than forcing a vote on the proposal today. The reason I say that the proposal may be ahead of its time is that an antitrust remedy is relevant when the actions involved are solely those of private parties. That is not the case with most foreign unfair trade practices today. Even dumping is not solely a function of private pricing decisions by foreign producers. As long as governments continue to distort markets, whether through high import tariffs on U.S. steel exports or heavy subsidies to their own domestic producers. prices in the marketplace for products like steel will not equilibrate based solely on private actions.

Thus, for example, dumping is often the result of a country maintaining a closed market in which its companies can maintain a relatively high profit margin, which effectively allows those producers to cross-subsidize their exports to the United States. A private right of action does not reach that conduct. That is conduct that the United States must address at its root—which is the government-induced distortion of the market, rather than the private pricing decisions of the foreign producers.

What that means for the propose shift of the jurisdiction to the Federal courts proposed by my distinguished colleague's amendment is that it is premature. Neither he nor I would suggest that the steel industry's current conditions are shaped solely by private pricing decisions. In fact, the principal problem facing the steel industry is the global overcapacity created by government protection of their home markets and subsidization of their exports to our shores. I therefore, ask my colleague to withdraw his amendment in order that the Finance Committee could take a look at the proposal and explore the ramifications of the farsighted suggestions in greater depth. Failing that, I must oppose the amendment and urge my colleagues to do so as well.

Mr. MOYNIHAN addressed the Chair. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New York.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. I join in the Chairman's request and also in his very proper remarks about the senior Senator from Pennsylvania. I believe it has been since 1982 that the Senator began offering amendments to this effect. The antidumping laws themselves have a much longer history and have been through several major revisions, most recently in the Uruguay Round, which we implemented in the Uruguay Round Agreements Act in 1994.

I think the idea of looking into this, as the Chairman suggests, is a very good one. But for the moment, sir, it is ineluctably the case that the amendment, as drafted, is inconsistent with the World Trade Organization's antidumping agreement in a number of significant ways. It does not say that we are wrong, but that we would be up against the agreed-upon international trading rules.

We have an international meeting of the World Trade Organization at the end of this month in Seattle. I do not think we should arrive there this way, particularly as other countries are seeking to reopen negotiations once again on these issues, arguing that they are an antiquated idea.

So I join in expressing the hope that the amendment might be withdrawn. We can take the idea with us to Seattle as something for other countries to consider when they approach our Government about modifying our existing laws.

Mr. SPECTER addressed the Chair. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Pennsylvania.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, the antidumping procedures are not antiquated at all. I have noted some 290 antidumping orders in effect as of March 1 of 1999 dealing with a wide variety of products: Steel, sugar, towels, raspberries, fresh cut flowers—the list goes on and on.

The grave difficulty is that the enforcement rests with the executive branch, and the executive branch is more concerned with foreign policy matters and defense policy than with any specific U.S. industry.

The trade-off is made, decimating industries and costing thousands of jobs in an unfair way. As of July 12 of this year, there were bankruptcies of five medium-size steel companies, Acme

Steel, Laclede Steel, Gulf States, Qualtech, and Geneva.

When the argument is made that there will be an effect on prices of automobile manufacturers, that is true. But our laws are designed to provide fairness as fairness and justice relate to the steel industry and the auto industry. The auto industry ought not to be able to buy steel from a foreign importer where it is dumped—sold in the United States at a price lower than it is sold in the foreign country.

When the distinguished chairman of the committee makes a reference to wire rod, it ought to be noted that steel wire rods continued at record high levels, more than 14 percent over levels about a year ago in September of 1998. The wire rod industry has sustained serious damage, losses of some $94 million during the first half of 1999. A petition was filed on December 30. 1998, and the President, expected to make his determination by September 27, 1999, to postpone that decision, on September 28, claimed that the matter was still under review. To date, there hasn't been a decision.

Contrast that with what could be obtained in a court of equity, where a decision could be made on affidavits on an ex parte order in 5 days, within a few weeks on a preliminary injunction. It is not true that the Federal courts are unable to handle these serious matters. They do handle complicated antitrust matters all the time and deal with complex economic matters. If a damaged party is in a position to prove the case, they move into court and get a prompt decision in a court of equity, certainly nothing like a year's delay.

The line pipe industry filed a section 201 petition with the ITC claiming that, in 1998, some 331,000 net tons of lime pipe had been imported into U.S. markets at an increase of 49.5 percent over 1997. This petition was filed on June 30, 1999. The ITC issued an affirmative finding on October 28, 1999, but the President is not expected to review the matter until December 17 of this year, long after an equitable court would have been able to take care of it.

The lamb issue is similar. On September 30, 1998, the American sheep industry filed a section 201 petition to stop the flood of imported lamb into the United States. During the 1998 Easter/Passover season, U.S. slaughtered lamb prices were at a 4-year low, some 60 cents a pounds. On March 26, 1999, the ITC unanimously decided in favor of the industry and forwarded its recommendation to the President for decision by late May. In this case, the President did not make a decision to provide relief to the industry until July 7, 1999, which shows the enormous delay in proceedings under the International Trade Commission.

When the suggestion is made about having the matter taken up in Seattle, the grave difficulty is that the international trade agreements leave the ultimate discretion with the executive branch, and that works to the disadvantage of the American company and the American workers. We have provided that there would not be an opportunity for judge shopping, to go into a court in a jurisdiction where the industry was located where most of the damage had been done, by providing that the jurisdiction would be lodged in the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia.

I think it is a matter of fundamental fairness as to whether our trade laws will be enforced, our trade laws consistent with GATT.

We see, again and again, enormous delays, very little effect, and then the executive branch taking over with suspension agreements to protect the Russians instead of seeing to it that there is justice for American industry and for American workers. This goes far beyond the question of steel, which is a major matter in my State. It goes to virtually every product on the books, as illustrated by the some 290 products which are subjected to antidumping orders in effect as of March 1, 1999.

This is an idea I have been pushing since 1982. My own experience in the court system, as a trial lawyer, shows me that when you go to court, you get the laws enforced—you have justice—contrasted with the executive branch decision, which will vary on many collateral considerations: U.S. foreign policy and U.S. defense policy.

I urge my colleagues to support this important amendment.

Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. VOINOVICH). Is there a sufficient second?

There is not a sufficient second.

Mr. SPECTER. What does it take for a sufficient second?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. One-fifth of those Senators present.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is not a sufficient second.

Mr. SPECTER. The determination is one-fifth of the Senators present?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is the Constitution.

Mr. SPECTER. If there are two Senators present and both agree to a roll-call—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The presumption is that there are 51 Senators present, and it takes 11 in order to get the yea and nay call.

Mr. SPECTER. That is a rebuttable presumption, Mr. President. As the Chair notes, there are not 51 Senators present.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is precluded from determining who is present without having a quorum call.

Mr. SPECTER. Well, if the quorum shows there is not a quorum present, then what?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate cannot proceed.

Mr. SPECTER. Except by unanimous consent to remove the quorum call?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. And by—

Mr. SPECTER. At which point, the Chair could make a determination if there were 51 Senators present until the quorum call, and with the 51 Senators not being present, the Senate could not proceed, so it is circular.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Those are the rules of the Senate.

Mr. SPECTER. I shall move to ask for the yeas and nays at a later time.

Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative assistant proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

AMENDMENT NO. 2487

Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President, I had a chance to speak earlier about the amendment I had introduced, and then we cut off the discussion to enable Senator Baucus to have a chance to speak on the floor. I look forward to comments by my colleague from Delaware, but I think what I will first try to do is summarize this amendment and then hear what my colleague, Senator ROTH, has to say.

This amendment would provide for mutually beneficial trade relations—that is what we talked about earlier—between the U.S. and Caribbean countries by rewarding those countries that comply with internationally recognized core labor rights with increased access to the U.S. market for certain textile goods.

Secondly, it would provide for enforceable labor standards. Before any of the CBI trade bill's benefits could go into effect, the Secretary of Labor would have to determine that a CBI country is providing for enforcement of ILO core labor rights. The Secretary would make this determination after consulting with labor officials in these other countries and after public comments. But the Secretary of Labor makes the final decision. U.S. citizens would have a private right of action in district court to enforce these provisions

This amendment would basically apply the labor standards of Senator FEINGOLD'S HOPE for Africa bill to CBI countries. Supporters of CBI parity claim that NAFTA-like benefits will help the Caribbean workers. I want to point out again—because I am an internationalist and I am interested in mutually beneficial trade—that an Octoreport on Mexican maguiladoras by the Comite Fronterizo de Obreros shows that wages and conditions have actually deteriorated since NAFTA. If NAFTA hasn't helped Mexican workers, why would NAFTA parity help CBI workers? I already presented data this morning, and I won't do it report detailing what happened to workers in the Mexican maguiladoras since the passage of NAFTA. They found that the maguiladoras paid the lowest wages in Mexican industry; that real wages in Mexican manufacturing have declined by more than 20 percent since 1994; that wage levels have come under attack whenever they are over the threshold considered competitive by the maquiladoras; that border workers have endured a sharp decline in their standard of living since NAFTA; that the practice of using child labor in the maquilas is widespread; and that in the name of NAFTA, Mexican companies, aided by their government, are "waging a tireless and surreptitious campaign of dirty tricks to stamp out unions in the maquiladoras." That is the report.

The same is true of the CBI countries. Those countries, which have the fastest growth in exports to the United States, have experienced the steepest decline in wages in the region. Honduran apparel exports to the United States increased 2,523 percent over the last 10 years but wages declined by 59 percent. In El Salvador, it was 2,512 percent and wages declined 27 percent. Jamaica had the least export growth, one reason being the rate of unionization in Jamaica.

You have average wages of 78 cents in Colombia, 69 cents in the Dominican Republic, 30 cents in Guatemala, and 23 cents in Nicaragua.

Basically, what we are saying again to workers in our own country is, if you organize and try to bargain collectively to make a better wage, these apparel companies will just go to these Caribbean countries. We will just basically undercut your right to organize.

I am in favor of the right of people to organize in our country. What we say to the workers in these countries is that if you want to make more than 35 cents an hour, or 43 cents an hour, and you join a union, or try to bargain collectively, we will deny you your right to do so. We don't have any enforceable labor standard to make sure these abuses don't continue to take place.

Sometimes I think the wage earners in our country are portrayed in some of this debate as if they are greedy or are portrayed as if they look backward and they don't understand this new international economy. I think in many ways this debate is about that.

What would you think if you were working for $8.50 an hour and you saw adopted on the floor of the Senate a trade agreement without any enforceable labor standard, which meant you were going to be competing against people who make 30 cents an hour or against people making 30 cents an hour in Guatemala? They are never going to get to $8.50. But don't we want to take these ILO standards and basic human rights standards and make sure they are enforceable? That way you can have the uplifting of the living standards of people in these countries.

Without this amendment, this CBI parity bill is going to merely encourage U.S. corporations to set up sweat-shops in the Caribbean. This is an antisweatshop amendment. This amendment does not require that CBI countries match U.S. wages in work and working conditions, although 67 percent of the American people think the minimum wage of our trading partners should be raised to U.S. levels. That is not going to happen. But that is not what the amendment does. It only requires these countries to respect the core ILO labor standards before we give them additional benefits.

It is a human rights amendment. This amendment basically says we should not be encouraging these CBI countries to compete against our workers by setting up sweatshops, and it says that we have to make sure there is some means of enforcing such antisweatshop standards.

I want to support trade agreements. People in our country want to support trade agreements. But do you want to know something. The reason the trade policy is losing its legitimacy with the American people—I think probably poll after poll shows that the American people are suspicious of these trade agreements—is because they know they put our workers in a terrible position because they know there aren't enforceable labor standards, because they know there aren't enforceable human rights standards, and they tout these trade agreements as being great for the apparel industry, great for these corporations, and terrible for wage earners.

That is what this vote on this amendment is all about. Are you on the side of working people in our country so that they know they can organize in textile plants and the apparel industry, and they won't basically be shut out and the companies won't be able to say, goodbye; we are going to these other countries because we don't have to abide by any labor standards? Are you on the side of these workers or are you on the side of these corporations? American workers compete with Caribbean apparel workers earning from 23 cents an hour in Nicaragua to 80 cents an hour in Colombia. Our workers make about $8.42, on average.

Who is going to benefit from extending NAFTA benefits to the CBI countries without enforceable labor standards?

All I am asking with this amendment, I say to my colleague from Delaware, is enforceable labor standards. It is not going to be the textile workers. It is not going to be the workers in the CBI countries. It is going to be the American textile companies that want to shift production to sweatshops offshore so they can save labor costs.

Can I repeat that one more time?

Who is going to benefit from this trade legislation without this amendment? Who is going to benefit from extending NAFTA benefits to the CBI countries without enforceable labor standards? Not American textile workers; not working people in our country; not the workers in the CBI countries. It is the American textile companies that are going to benefit that want to shift production to sweatshops offshore so they can save labor costs.

I say to Republicans and Democrats alike: Whose side are you on? If you are on the side of working people, if you are on the side of the right of people to be able to organize, if you are on the side of working people in these CBI countries and poor people in these CBI countries, and you are on the side of human rights of people in these countries, at the very minimum, we ought to vote for this amendment which will put some teeth into some enforceable labor standards. The alternatives to this amendment are unenforceable.

Let me be clear about that. I don't want a Senator to come to the floor and say we have already dealt with labor standards. The CBI parity merely includes labor rights as an eligibility criteria which can only be enforced by the administration. The administration already enforces the GSP program and has never suspended one CBI country despite their terrible labor rights record.

If the administration won't use its GSP leverage to significantly improve labor rights, why would it use eligibility criteria? Nobody can seriously argue that this administration would deny eligibility to a CBI country based on labor rights violations. They have never done it.

The GAO issued a report last year that listed the various GSP worker rights in CBI countries accepted for review. In each case—I gave examples earlier, so I will not do it again—the petitions were withdrawn usually after some nominal changes in the CBI country labor law. But in one CBI country after another, labor laws are flouted, often openly.

There have been 95 worker rights petitions against CBI countries under GSP. None, not one, has led to investigation and suspension. The ILO is not an acceptable substitute because it has no enforcement power.

This amendment speaks to the compelling need to have enforceable labor standards. The ILO has no enforcement power. The managers' amendment directs the President to "seek the establishment in the ILO of a mechanism to ensure the effective implementation of each of the core labor conventions that ILO members have ratified." I commend Senators Graham and Moynihan for their effort in this direction. But, again, I have to say this on the floor of the Senate. The ILO has no enforcement power, so I am not sure how the ILO can ensure effective implementation. I think enforceable standards for core ILO labor rights need to be built into the trade agreement itself.

Let me repeat that.

You have to take these basic ILO labor rights, and you have to make sure that enforceable standards are there built into the trade agreement. Otherwise, what you have is a CBI parity bill which is going to actually provide an incentive for CBI countries to move in the opposite direction.

I welcome the provision in the managers' amendment on increased transparency. Let me repeat that. I think it is a good idea. It will be useful. But I don't believe it is an enforceable standard that will encourage CBI countries to improve conditions for working people. That is what this is all about. I don't want anybody to misunderstand this amendment. This amendment is based upon a belief in the importance of international trade relations. It is based upon the importance of making sure we address the standard of living in CBI countries and the standard of living of working people in our country. But you can't do that unless you have enforceable labor standards. That is what this amendment calls for.

I reserve the remainder of my time. I will wait to hear what my colleagues have to say.

AMENDMENT NO. 2402

(Purpose: To clarify the acts, policies, and practices that are considered unreasonable for purposes of section 301 of the Trade Act of 1974)

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I filed on a timely basis an amendment numbered 2402. I ask unanimous consent to set aside the pending amendment, and I ask for consideration of amendment No. 2402.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The clerk will report.

The legislative assistant read as follows:

The Senator from North Dakota [Mr. DOR-GAN] proposes an amendment numbered 2402.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

At the appropriate place, insert the following new section:

SEC. ___. UNREASONABLE ACTS, POLICIES, AND PRACTICES.

Section 301(d)(3)(B)(i) of the Trade Act of 1974 (19 U.S.C. 2411(d)(3)(B)(i)) is amended by striking subclause (IV) and inserting the following:

"(IV) market opportunities, including the toleration by a foreign government of systematic anticompetitive activities, which include predatory pricing, discriminatory pricing, or pricing below cost of production by enterprises or among enterprises in the foreign country (including state trading enterprises and state corporations) if the acts, policies, or practices are inconsistent with commercial practices and have the effect of restricting access of United States goods or services to the foreign market or third country markets,".

Mr. ROTH. Will the Senator yield? Mr. DORGAN. I am happy to yield to the Senator.

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, I ask consent a vote occur on or in relation to the pending amendment No. 2487, of Senator Wellstone, and No. 2347, the Specter amendment, at 3:30, with 4 minutes prior to each vote for explanation. I further ask consent it be in order for me to make a motion to table at this point on both amendments with one show of seconds.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. ROTH. I move to table the above-described amendments, and I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, amendment No. 2402 deals with section 301 of the Trade Act. As a backdrop for this discussion, I wish to mention quickly several pieces of information.

First, we discuss the issue of trade with a backdrop of a trade deficit that is quite alarming. Almost everyone in this country now says a $25 billion-amonth trade deficit is unsustainable. The merchandise deficit is worse than this. But this is the trade deficit of goods and services. The trade deficit is spiking up, up, up, way up—a very difficult circumstance for this country. We must do something to address it.

What does this deficit result from? This chart shows imports and exports. We can see exports are a flat line, with imports spiking dramatically.

The section 301 trade law remedy, which I intend to discuss briefly in a moment, describes something that relates to a trade dispute we have not only with Canada but others, a statesanctioned monopoly selling Canadian wheat. This is what has happened with respect to the shipment of Canadian durum wheat into this country. It was almost nothing and then spikes up. It came down when this country enforced a tariff rate quota against Canada. This is unfair trade by a state-sanctioned monopoly with secret prices. It is unfair to our farmers who have flat prices. We produce more than we can use or consume domestically, and we have an avalanche of Canadian grain coming into our country traded unfairly by a state trading enterprise.

Is this problem receding or growing? The first 6 months of this year is nearly double the first 6 months of last year. Last year was a record high. This is just durum wheat, a small issue, but big in North Dakota and big for family farmers—just one issue.

What about a state trading enterprise or state monopoly that trades Canadian grain, or agricultural products to Australia, and decides they will have a trade relationship that doesn't play fair, for example, in Algeria? Assume that Canadians say: We will use our state trading enterprise and we intend to ship our grain to Algeria at 10 cents a bushel and take away the United States Algerian market. Is it fair trade? Is it actionable for the United States to file a 301 trade complaint? I think it ought to be. The law is unclear.

I propose with this amendment a simple process to clarify that section 301, a remedy in trade law, can be applied to predator pricing by state trading enterprises in third-country markets. Very simple. The law is completely unclear whether this now exists. I think it does; some people think it does not. In any event, I think it ought to.

If a state trading enterprise—for example in Canada, the Canadian wheat board—decides to push the United States out of a foreign market with predator pricing, is that not actionable by the United States? Of course, it should be. Our amendment clarifies that the actions, policies, and practices that are unreasonable and inequitable, that destroy market opportunities, are actionable under 301.

Anyone who is proud we have eliminated the fiscal policy deficit in our country—and I am among those—ought to be alarmed by this chart. Our budget policies have created a fiscal policy that is largely now in balance. We do not have growing, swollen Federal budget deficits, and that is a success; it belongs to everyone involved in public policy. However, this is a failure; this is a deficit that is running out of control.

The trade deficit is a very serious problem. We must remedy it. One way to remedy it is to be able to respond to unfair trading practices with remedies that work. This green book produced by the U.S. trade ambassador describes foreign trade barriers. In the bowels of this book rests the story about why our producers are unable to access foreign markets. It is a big, thick book, nearly 500 pages, country after country after country. One way to address these issues is to decide we are going to take action against those that discriminate against American producers with unfair trade practices.

A final point. I turn to Japan in this green book. Japan has agreed to gradually reduce tariffs on imports of beef, pork, fresh oranges, cheese, et cetera. Japan has a $50 to $60 billion trade surplus with us; we have a deficit with them, and it has gone on forever. Even after our negotiations on beef, if one buys a T-bone steak in Tokyo this afternoon, there is a 40.5-percent tariff on every single pound of beef that goes into Japan. It is unforgivable. This country cannot persuade our trade partners to trade fairly.

I ask we include in this piece of legislation something that strengthens section 301, that gives the United States a remedy to go after unfair trade practices. I hope the majority and minority will decide to accept this amendment and take it to conference. It is a small amendment. Nonetheless, I think it is very important to American producers—not just farmers but manufacturers, all producers.

I ask for some time to discuss this amendment with staff. Therefore, I ask that the amendment be set aside.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Louisiana.

AMENDMENT NO. 2430

(Purpose: To limit preferential tariff treatment to countries with a gross national product that does not extend 5 times the average gross national product of all eligible sub-Saharan African countries)

Ms. LANDRIEU. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to lay aside the pending amendment and call up amendment 2430.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows: The Senator from Louisiana [Ms. Landrieu] proposes an amendment numbered 2430

Ms. LANDRIEU. I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

SEC. ___. LIMITATIONS ON PREFERENTIAL TREATMENT.

Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the President may not exercise the authority to extend preferential tariff treatment to any country in sub-Saharan Africa provided for in this Act, unless the President determines that the per capita gross national product of the country (calculated on the basis of the best available information including that of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development) is not more than 5 times the average per capita gross national product of all sub-Saharan African countries eligible for such preferential tariff treatment under this Act.

Ms. LANDRIEU. Mr. President, I say to the Senator from Delaware that I am fully supportive of the efforts to provide opportunity for trade that will be mutually beneficial between the United States and Africa and the Caribbean. I have been to the floor now on more than one occasion talking about the merits of this bill. It is not perfect, but it is a good piece of legislation, and one I am convinced will be mutually beneficial to the nations included.

I believe my amendment will make this bill better and will clarify something which I think was the intention of this bill but may have been lost in the drafting.

This amendment simply says we will prohibit countries with a per capita GDP five times the average of all sub-Saharan African nations from participating in the Generalized System of Preferences portion of this legislation. Let me explain.

The African Growth and Opportunity Act, I believe, should live up to its billing; namely, this legislation should provide an opportunity for growth in Africa, not outside of Africa. As I stated last week, this bill is also an opportunity for businesses in my home State and for the whole country, but it is important we do not lose sight of this objective.

Faced with tight budgets, the United States will not make the same contributions to foreign aid as we have in the past. To replace this shortfall, we are relying on the great American promise of opportunity. In this case, the opportunity is represented by access to the greatest market in the world—our market. In essence, this bill is an invitation for Africa and the Caribbean to offer their best to America, to compete in our marketplace and, in so doing, raise the standard of living on both sides of the relationship.

The success of this new relationship between Africa and America rides on the ability of poor African States to capitalize on greater market access. Until now, they have been unable to do so, but one of the promises of this bill is it will attract additional investment in the region. With the necessary infrastructure and capital, Africa may compete in international markets and establish the requisites for a robust manufacturing base. The question becomes: If new foreign investment comes to Africa, where will it be applied?

I believe it is the intent of my colleagues in the Senate, as well as in the House, to assist the countries generally known as sub-Saharan Africa. We want to turn around two decades of economic decline in places such as Kenya, Tanzania, Liberia, and Ghana. That is the point of this amendment.

If the United States is going to take this step, it is important we make certain the results assist the intended nations. We need to have confidence that the direct investment inspired by this legislation is directed to the countries that need it most.

I restate that this amendment I am offering will try to make a good bill even better by prohibiting the Generalized System of Preferences to countries with a per capita GDP five times the average of all the sub-Saharan nations. The average per capita GDP in Africa, for anyone's interest, is $1,798. Thus, the cutoff of participation would be a per capita GDP of $8,987. This per capita cutoff is more than $2,500 more than South Africa, and also more than the per capita GDP in Russia, Brazil, Turkey, Hungary, and Poland. It is a reasonable cap.

Why is this important? This amendment does not seek to target any particular country, but it is important to know there is an island nation off the coast of Africa, Mauritius, that already has a GDP of $10,300. Furthermore, this island is closer to Africa than any other continent, and it is hardly the kind of place I believe our colleagues or the American public would conceive as part of sub-Saharan Africa.

One might well wonder how this island of over 1 million people has been able to attain such economic success. The answer is a well-developed textile industry. Through investments, Mauritius has managed to create a mature apparel processing shipment and manufacturing hub right in the middle of the Indian Ocean. It is a very tiny island with over 1 million inhabitants, but it is well developed. Its GDP would make countries in Europe green with envy.

Mauritius can proudly boast of unemployment rates that would be welcomed in countries in Europe and is unheard of on the African Continent.

Unfortunately, I am afraid if nations similar to this are included in the African Growth and Opportunity Act, much of, if not all of, the opportunity will go to the country that is already successful and hardly needs our assistance and directed help.

If, after a hard-fought battle to bring this legislation to the floor, all we accomplish is to raise the standards of a small island where standards are already raised and already has a successful industry, I do not think we have done much, and we have truly toiled in vain.

Again, this amendment creates objective and dynamic criteria for who can and cannot participate. It does not attempt to single out any particular place. But I do use that as an example of something I do not think is our intention.

If we are successful, the average per capita GDP of Africa will increase as the continent moves forward. A more wealthy nation, such as the one I have described, may be eligible to participate later on. However, at this juncture, I believe we must remain focused on our objective. That is why I urge our manager, the Senator from Delaware, to take a look at this amendment. I hope it can be acceptable to both sides as we work to make this bill even better.

I do not think it was our intention to move investments to a place that is already developed, and it is not fair to our industry in the United States. Our intention is to increase and bolster the infrastructure investment in the continent of Africa itself, particularly countries that are known as sub-Saharan Africa.

So with this small amendment, we can correct and make that clear. I urge my colleagues to support this amendment and thank them for their attention on this matter.

I yield the floor.

Mr. ROTH addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Delaware.

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, I oppose my colleague's amendment.

I do so because this amendment will undermine the very objectives this legislation is trying to further. In essence, this amendment says that if a country has managed to do well in that desperately poor and politically unstable region, its access to our market will be cut dramatically. I can't imagine a more damaging or more ironic signal to send

Let me be a little more specific about my concerns. The purpose of this legislation is to use tariff preferences to spur investment in the sub-Saharan African countries. That investment will help create economic growth and create jobs in a region that has suffered so terribly for so long.

My colleague's amendment, however, would tell the Africans to watch out if they start succeeding, because their access to our market will be taken. It is an ironic signal to send.

While the signal that it will send to the Africans is unfortunate, the signal it will send to investors is particularly damaging.

Let me explain. This legislation is designed to encourage increased investment in the sub-Saharan region. This amendment would undermine that objective by telling investors that they cannot count on the market access that this legislation provides over the long term. As an investor, nothing is more troubling than uncertainty. When investors cannot count on what the future will hold in terms of market access, then they will avoid the region.

Given the political and economic uncertainties that already exist in that region—and given the disincentives that this creates for investors—adding more uncertainty through this amendment would be particularly cruel.

This amendment also ignores the fact that trade among the African countries themselves is vital to their economic future and to the effectiveness of this legislation. The rules of origin in my legislation are specifically designed to encourage the Africans to enter into economic partnership amongst themselves.

Such partnering is particularly important among these nations because they each have different resources and capabilities. We should, therefore, encourage each of these countries to take advantage of their comparative advantage.

My colleague's amendment, however, would selectively exclude certain countries in that region. This, unfortunately, will undermine the process of economic integration and partnering among the African nations that is vital to sound economic development in that region.

This amendment seems to suggest that the economic growth of the sub-Saharan region must rely exclusively on trade with the United States. While we would all like to think that that is enough to spur growth and investment in that region, we all know that it is not

For these reasons, I oppose this amendment.

Ms. LANDRIEU addressed the Chair. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Louisiana.

Ms. LANDRIEU. Mr. President, could I ask unanimous consent to respond for a moment?

Mr. ROTH. I could not hear the Senator.

Ms. LANDRIEU. I ask unanimous consent for an additional 2 minutes to respond.

Mr. HARKIN. Please do.

Ms. LANDRIEU. The Senator from Delaware should know I am going to certainly support this bill. It is not my intention to offer an amendment that would in any way weaken this bill. But I also believe very strongly that we should not be presenting false hope or providing loopholes or providing special treatment; that if our objective is clearly to develop Africa the continent of Africa and not islands off its shore, if it is to really develop sub-Saharan Africa, then we should shape a bill that will actually do this.

I say to the Senator, without this amendment, which clearly outlines that the per capita GDP I am suggesting is five times higher than any African nation currently—if we do not adopt this amendment, I could see clearly that the industries would just continue to go over to this one island off Africa, undercut some of the American industries, not result in investment in Africa, and give help to a particular place that does not need help. That does not make any sense to me.

So I offer this amendment in good faith. I have to say, respectfully, I do not understand the arguments against this amendment because, again, the per capita GDP in Africa is currently $1,798, and the business community knows they would be free to continue to do work until the per capita income reached $10,000, which is the cap. That would be many years down the line and would give them the stability they need but not allow us to be circumvented by an island that is not part of sub-Saharan Africa and I think could undercut our intentions.

I thank the Senators for extending me the time to respond. I look forward to a vote on this later today.

Mr. ROTH addressed the Chair.

AMENDMENT NO. 2487

Mr. ROTH. These comments I will now make are in connection with the Wellstone amendment No. 2487.

Mr. President, I rise in opposition to the Wellstone amendment No. 2487. This amendment is very similar to one we tabled yesterday, and should be tabled today for similar reasons.

This amendment denies benefits until the U.S. Secretaries of Labor and State determine that the beneficiary country is enforcing internationally recognized human rights. In and of itself, this is unnecessary and duplicative. The managers substitute already contains criteria that the President must take into account in determining a beneficiary country's eligibility that includes the internationally agreed upon core labor standards.

I will address later in my statement the concern of the Senator from Minnesota as to the use of these criteria.

But this amendment goes further. It would force beneficiary countries to guarantee that the head of the national labor agency of that country, the U.S. Secretary of Labor, and an international union bureaucrat have access to all the private business information and records of all business enterprises in that country.

This undermines the sovereignty of these nations, and represents an intrusion on the privacy of their small businesses. The practical effect would be that no country would ever allow an international union head to peek into the business dealings of all of their citizens. These countries simply would not choose to enjoy the trade benefits offered in this bill—and rightly so.

This amendment would also create an unprecedented private cause of action in U.S. courts if a U.S. citizen wants to seek compliance by those countries with the labor standards. This would invite unnecessary, wasteful litigation, and would create novel discovery activities by U.S. courts, to say the least.

To sum up, the provisions of this amendment would simply eviscerate the goals of this bill and is nothing more than protectionism by another name. The labor standards in the managers' substitute and the flexibility given to the President provide an appropriate means for regular dialog with the beneficiary countries on labor issues.

Let me be clear that the labor standards in the managers' substitute—and which are reflected in current law—are effective. As my colleague may know, CBI benefits are linked to a country's eligibility for the GSP program. If a country violates one of the requirements of the GSP program by, for example, failing to afford workers internationally recognized workers' rights, then that country will lose eligibility for both GSP and the CBI program.

The labor standards under the GSP program are not meaningless. In fact, 11 countries have been suspended from GSP benefits since 1985 for labor standard violations. Six countries are currently suspended. What this should tell us is that the system works, both under GSP and under my legislation for the CBI countries.

As evidence of the effectiveness of these criteria, I cite a June 1998 GAO report that concluded that the GSP and CBI programs have led to improvements of workers' rights in the beneficiary countries.

This is not the only evidence, however. In fact, the best way to tell whether the management's amendment presents an effective approach to the protection of labor standards is by asking those most affected: namely, the workers. I have with me a list of the labor unions in the Caribbean and Central America who endorse my approach on this issue. These leaders understand that the manager's amendment provides an effective way to protect workers, while at the same time spurring investment and economic growth that creates jobs.

I ask unanimous consent that this list be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the list was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Mr. ROTH. For these reasons, I oppose the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, in the discussion of this trade bill, we hear a lot of talk about the different things involved in trade and how we want to lift countries up; that the essence of this trade bill before us is to open up the avenues and the corridors of free trade so people living in Third World countries, in Africa specifically, can begin to enjoy some of the benefits of increased production, increased distribution of goods and services, and an increased standard of living. That is what the proponents of the trade bill are arguing.

I am not here to argue against that. I believe free trade, if it is practiced as free trade, it can have genuine beneficial effects on all parties involved. There are anomalies, however, in the trade structure that keep the benefits of open and free trade from being genuinely and broadly distributed among people in Third World countries. There are a lot of these, but I believe the single most important feature, institution or practice of Third World countries that inhibits their economic growth, inhibits their social growth, even if they are allowed into a free trade structure, is the use and practice of abusive child labor.

Child labor is the last vestige of slavery on the face of the Earth. It is widespread. It is condoned—if not openly, at least passively—by many of the major industrial nations of the world. I think it is time we get rid of this last vestige of slavery: child labor.

I have an amendment that is very simple and straightforward. It builds on the international consensus that emerged from the ILO conference in Geneva this summer in which the delegates unanimously adopted a convention to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The amendment simply states that in order to be eligible for the trade benefits in this bill, a country must meet and effectively enforce the standards regarding child labor, as established by the ILO convention 182 for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor. It is just that simple. In other words, if a country wants the benefits of this trade bill, they must meet and effectively enforce the standards of the recently adopted ILO convention 182.

This convention defines the worst forms of child labor as: all forms of slavery, debt bondage, forced or compulsory labor, or the sale and trafficking of children, including forced or compulsory recruitment of children for use in armed conflict; child prostitution, children producing and trafficking narcotic drugs; or any other work which by its nature or the circumstances in which it is carried out, is likely to harm the health, the safety, and the morals of children. These are the provisions of ILO convention

As I stated earlier, for the first time in history, this last June, the world spoke with one voice in opposition to abusive and exploitative child labor. Countries from across the political, economic, and religious spectrum—from Jewish to Moslem, from Buddhist to Christians—came together to proclaim unequivocally that "abusive and exploitative child labor is a practice which will not be tolerated and must be abolished."

So gone is the argument that abusive and exploitative child labor is an acceptable practice because of a country's economic circumstances. Gone is the argument that abusive and exploitative child labor is acceptable because of cultural traditions. And gone is the argument that abusive and exploitative child labor is a necessary evil on the road to economic development. When this convention was approved, the United States and the international community as a whole laid these arguments to rest and laid the groundwork to begin the process of ending the scourge of abusive and exploitative child labor.

Additionally, for the first time in its history, the U.S. tripartite group to the ILO—consisting of representatives from government, business, and labor—unanimously agreed on the final version of the ILO convention 182.

I believe strongly that the time has come to say to countries: If you want the trade benefits outlined in this bill, you must, at a minimum, enforce international standards on abusive and exploitative child labor. That is at a minimum.

So let me be clear about what is meant by abusive and exploitative child labor. This is not about kids working on the family farm. It is not about kids who work after school. There is nothing wrong with that. I worked in my youth when I was in school. Probably most of us in the Chamber today worked when we were young and in school. There is nothing wrong with that, and that is not what we are talking about. The convention that the ILO adopted in June deals with children who are chained to looms, who handle dangerous chemicals, who ingest metal dust from working around machinery, children who are forced to sell illegal drugs, forced into prostitution, forced into armed conflict, forced to work in factories where furnace temperatures exceed 1,500 degrees.

Let me refer to this chart again and repeat, for the sake of emphasis, what the convention does. It abolishes the harshest forms of child labor, including child slavery, child bondage, child prostitution, use of children in pornography, trafficking in children, the forced recruitment of children for armed conflict, the recruitment of children in the production or sale of narcotics, and hazardous work by children. Those are the abusive and exploitative forms of child labor that are covered.

According to the ILO, in Latin America and the Caribbean there are an estimated 17 million children working. In Africa—and we are on the Africa trade bill—80 million children are working. In Asia, about 153 million children are working. There are about half a million in Oceania, in the islands of the southwest Pacific. This totals about 250 million children world wide that are working full time.

They are forced to work with no protective equipment under hazardous and slave-like conditions. They endure long hours for little or no compensation. They simply work only for the economic gain of others. They are denied an education and denied the opportunity to grow and develop.

I paint this in sharp contrast to afterschool jobs that kids have so they can have some more spending money to buy the latest CD. These kids are not buying CDs. They are not even in school. They are kept out of school and are forced to work.

Again, I know firsthand what this is about. I have some charts here, some pictures. Last year, my legislative assistant, Rosemary Gutierrez, and I traveled to several countries in South Asia to investigate child labor. This happens to be a picture that was taken outside of a compound in Katmandu, Nepal. This was on a Sunday evening. shortly after dark, maybe about 7 or 7:30 in the evening. I had heard repeated stories about children who were working, making carpets, children as young as 5 to 7 years of age. But I also knew from others I had talked to that if you asked to visit one of these plants, by the time you got there, they had the kids out the back door. So nobody could ever see them.

Well, it turned out that, through mutual acquaintances, we located a young man—I don't know how old he is now. maybe 21 or 22 years old—who had been a former child laborer in one of these plants. He knew of a plant where he knew the guard at the gate on this Sunday evening in question. So what we did is, we got in an unmarked car and we drove to the outskirts of Katmandu and went up to this compound. Later, we found out we were mistaken and the owner was in fact there. So we went up to the gate, four or five of us, with this young Nepalese man. He got us in the gate.

This was the picture I took outside the gate. There is a sign posted very prominently in Nepalese and in English. As you can see, it says, "Child labour under the age of 14 is strictly prohibited." They have these signs all over. So I took a picture of it.

We went to the gate of this compound. We walked down a fairly narrow alleyway. There were low-lying buildings on our left and right. We went down a few hundred yards and turned to our left to this carpet factory. We went into the carpet factory. Mind you, this is on a Sunday evening, and it is about 7:30. Here is what we found. I can tell you this is what we found because I took the picture. There were dozens and dozens of kids working in this building, with a lot of dust around; carpets put off a lot of dust when they make them. I took this picture of these two kids. I had the young man who spoke Nepalese there, and we were able to talk to them a little.

As best I could figure out, he was about 7 and she was about 8. This was at 7:30 in the evening. You can't see because the flashbulb wasn't strong enough, but there are dozens of children sitting in rows up and down the aisles working.

Here is a better picture, and I am in it. My staff assistant took this picture. These kids are 8, 9, 10, 11 years old, all the way back here, on both sides, up and down, working at 7:30 at night. These are kids who work probably 12 to 14 hours a day, 6 to 7 days a week. When they are not working, they are taken out of here to those low-lying buildings where they sleep and eat; that is where they live. They are not allowed to go out. They are not allowed to go out on the streets. They are not allowed to get an education, go to school. They go from their little Quonset hut, where they stay like stacks of cord wood. Then they are herded in here, work 12 to 14 hours a day, and they are herded back into the building. They are 7, 8, 9 years of age. I said: What happens when they get

I said: What happens when they get to be 12, 13, or 14? I didn't see any children there that old there. Well, sometimes the boys go into different kinds of work, and the girls are sold into prostitution. You don't have to take my word for that; you can talk with anybody in the U.N., the ILO, and talk about the trafficking of young girls from Nepal to India, some as far away as Saudi Arabia.

I met with some young girls who had been sold into prostitution. There is an organization in Nepal of women trying to repatriate these young women, get them back to their country and their villages. Some were sent as far away as Saudi Arabia. Trafficking in prostitution—that is what we are talking about in this amendment. We are not talking about kids working after school. We are talking about these kids. Should a country that permits this and condones this and doesn't take active steps to stop it—should they, I ask you, get the benefits of this trade bill?

Here is another kid. I did not take this picture. This is not my picture. I admit that. But there is a young boy in the Sialkot region of Pakistan. He is 8 vears old. His name is Mohammad Ashraf Irfan. You may not be able to see it from there, but he is making surgical equipment. These are scissors used in surgery that are shipped to this country. Think about that. Think about that the next time you go into the doctor's office. It is clean, it is sterile, you have a wound, and they are going to sew you up or they are going to make you well again. You see those little scissors come out, or the little knife, and the things they use. Think about Ashraf here who is 8 years old. Look at him. The next time you go into a doctor's office, think about Ashraf and think about hundreds of thousands like him sitting there day after day. He has no protective goggles, no protective equipment on his hands, and he is making surgical equipment to be used in the finest of doctor's offices and hospitals in Europe and America. That is what we are talking about in this amendment.

I believe our goal must be to encourage and to persuade other countries to build on the prosperity that comes with trade and to lift their standards up. Exploited child labor in other countries not only penalize Ashraf to a lifetime of illiteracy, low wages, bad health, and not only does it condemn him to that, and hurt his life, but the fact they exploit him means that it unfairly puts workers in our country and other countries at a disadvantage.

You can't compete with slavery. This is slavery. You can dress it up and call it what you want. But this is about the nearest thing you can get to slavery.

Yet, unfortunately, the legislation before us does not address this issue. It simply relies on the criteria of the Generalized System of Preferences, or GSP, to extend countries trade benefits.

Is that adequate to what we know is going on in the world?

This criteria in GSP has been on the books since 1984—15 years. And child labor today is worse than it was 15 years ago.

Let me explain that the USTR, our own Trade Representative office, in its implementation and enforcement of GSP, has, I believe, abused the language in the statute that calls for taking steps to afford respect for workers' rights, including child labor. They have interpreted that any gesture made by a country will satisfy the requirements of GSP

There is a list of five internationally recognized workers' rights provisions in GSP. Here they are: One, the right of association; two, the right to organize and bargain collectively; three, a prohibition on the use of any form of forced or compulsory labor; four, a minimum age for employment of children; five, acceptable conditions of work with respect to minimum wages, hours of work, and occupational safety and health.

If a country takes steps—we don't say how big a step—if a country takes one teeny, little bit of a step in any one of those areas, they are allowed GSP benefits. They may have the most abusive forms of child labor, but if they have taken steps—for example, to have the right of free association—there you go. They have satisfied the requirements. Quite frankly, these countries should be taking steps in all five areas and enforcing the laws they have on the books.

The fact is, there are laws in Nepal against the use of child labor in these looms. There are laws in Pakistan against what Ashraf Irfan is doing. They all have laws on the books. They are just not enforcing them. Many of these countries have been able to provide cosmetic and unenforceable actions. Then they are recognized as having taken steps, and they are off the hook. In fact, the principal sponsor of the GSP criteria, an individual I served with in the House of Representatives, Representative Don Pease, wanted to set a high standard to ensure that countries not only have laws on their books with regard to these rights and minimum age requirements but that they were also being enforced. When it got to conference, it was watered down. We have that today. If they meet just one of those criteria, that is all they have to do.

Fifteen years later after GSP, we now have a universal standard adopted this June by the ILO in Geneva. The ILO convention 182 is a well-defined, internationally accepted standard that I believe should be the criteria in granting any country U.S. trade benefits. ILO convention 182 that will hold everyone to one real and enforceable standard that was unanimously agreed to in Geneva this past June.

Again, as I have said before, I believe in free trade. I voted for the North American Free Trade Agreement. But I also believe in a level playing field. I also believe you should use trade to try to lift countries up—not lift countries up on the backs of children but to lift those countries up alongside of us.

U.S. workers can't compete with slaves. U.S. workers can't compete with 8-year-old kids working 12 and 14 hours a day who are paid almost nothing. You can dress it up any way you want. You can use whatever fancy words and language you want. That is slavery. These kids don't have a choice. They are forced to work in unbearable conditions. They don't have a choice. They do not have any freedom and liberty. Is that not the definition of slavery? Children are exploited for the economic gain of others. The child loses, the family loses, this country loses, and we in the world lose, too.

Every child lost to the workplace in this manner is a child who will not receive an education, learn a valuable skill, and help this country develop economically, or become a more active participant in the global market. When just one child is exploited in this manner, every one of us is diminished.

Recently, I came across a startling statistic. According to the UNICEF report entitled "The State of the World's Children 1999," nearly 1 billion people will enter the 21st century—the new millennium—1 billion people will enter unable to read a book, or unable to riame because they are illiterate. This is a formula for instability, violence, and conflict down the road.

Nearly one-sixth of all humanity—think about it; three and a half times the population of the United States—next year won't even be able to read a book or sign their name.

This is the reason: Because they were denied an education when they were young. They were forced to work in front of rug looms, or making surgical equipment, glassware, and metals in mines and places such as that.

I believe it is shocking. I believe children making pennies a day spells disaster and conflict down the road. In cold, hard, economic terms, children making pennies a day will never buy a computer, they will never buy the software to run it, they will never purchase the latest music CD or a VCR to play American-made movies.

By allowing abusive and exploitative child labor to continue, we not only doom the child to a future of poverty and destitution, we doom future markets for American goods and services.

Why in our trade bill do we not just look one foot in front of our nose? We think about next year or the year after. Why not think about 10, 15, or 20 years from now, when 8-year-old Ashraf Irfan is in his twenties and thirties? What will he be buying? Will he buy a computer? Will he buy software and log on to the Internet? Will he buy clothes? No; he will be functionally illiterate. He will go to a store and watch television and see how the rest of the world lives and say, Why do I live like this?

It is ripe for revolutions, wars, insurrections, and instability all over the world.

Some say child labor shouldn't be dealt with in trade measures. I think this is wrongheaded thinking and closed minded. I believe we should be addressing child labor issues on trade measures. After all, we are ultimately talking about our trade policy. Not too long ago, agreements on intellectual property rights were not considered measures to be addressed by trade agreements. In the beginning, only tariffs and quotas were addressed by GATT because they were the most visible trade-distorting practices.

As time went on and as we began to develop more and more intellectual property in this country, we said we ought to include intellectual property rights and services, too. Now they have become an integral part of our trade agreements. The trade bill two years ago had several pages on intellectual property rights and one small, ineffectual paragraph on child labor. Now the WTO will consider rules dealing with foreign direct investment. That is another new step. A part of our trade agreements will now involve foreign direct investment and competition policy

When I looked at the trade bill two years ago and saw all the pages dealing with intellectual property rights and I saw the little, ineffectual paragraph that actually turned the clock back on child labor, I thought to myself, if we can protect a song, can't we protect a kid? Think about it. We are going to protect someone's song so it can't be stolen, used, recorded, or sung by anybody else in the world—we can protect that; but we can't protect this kid? Tell me that child labor is not an apt policy for trade policy and trade bills. I believe it is time we do this. We as a nation cannot ignore what is happening.

In 1993, this Senate put itself on record in opposition to the exploitation of children for economic gain by passing a sense-of-the-Senate resolution that I submitted. That was in 1993. It was a sense-of-the-Senate resolution. Nonetheless, it passed. In 1994, I requested the Department of Labor to begin a series of reports on child labor. These reports now consist of five volumes representing the most comprehensive documentation ever assembled by the Government on this issue. Earlier this year, President Clinton issued an Executive order prohibiting the U.S. Government from procuring items made by forced or indentured child labor. We are making progress.

Some may say we have not even ratified convention 182 ourselves, so how do we expect others to abide by that? The chairman of the committee, Senator Helms, had a hearing about 2 weeks ago on this. I thought it was a great hearing. I am pleased to report to my colleagues, just today the Senate Foreign Relations Committee reported out the new ILO convention. I am hopeful we will have it on the floor to get a unanimous vote and to ratify that before we leave this year. I have every reason to believe we will before we leave this year.

Mr. REID. Will the Senator yield? Mr. HARKIN. I am happy to yield to the Senator.

Mr. REID. We are going to have a couple of votes at 3:30. There is no time agreement. The Senator may speak as long he desires. Both managers of the bill are in a position to accept the amendment of the Senator or, if the Senator desires a recorded vote, we can have that, too. They are willing to accept this amendment. There is an order in effect that there will be two votes at 3:30.

Mr. HARKIN. I will abruptly finish my remarks.

Mr. REID. And then make a decision. Mr. HARKIN. Normally, I would say fine to accept it, but since the Foreign Relations Committee passed it out this morning and I believe we will have it before the Senate before the end of the year, I think it is important for the Senate to express itself on this issue on the forms of abusive and exploitative child labor. It is important we do that. We have taken so many steps and come so far, we ought to do that. I am hopeful my colleagues will support this.

My amendment is cosponsored by Senator Helms, the chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, and Mr. Wellstone from Minnesota. There is a pretty broad philosophical spectrum encompassed on this amendment.

I ask unanimous consent the pending amendment be temporarily set aside, and I ask to call up my amendment No. 2495.

Mr. REID. Reserving the right to object, what was the unanimous consent request?

Mr. HARKIN. To set aside the amendment and call up my amendment.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, we are trying to work out a time sequence. The Landrieu amendment is now pending. It is my understanding that we have two votes set and Landrieu makes three votes; is the Senator willing to make his the fourth vote in that stack?

Mr. HARKIN. Yes; I have no problem. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to setting aside the pending amendment?

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa has the floor and has stated a unanimous consent request.

Mr. HARKIN. I ask unanimous consent the pending amendment be temporarily set aside, and I ask that my amendment No. 2495 be called up.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Îs there objection?

Mr. REID. Reserving the right to object, I say to my friend, he has no problem, if his amendment is called up, having his the fourth after these other three?

Mr. HARKIN. No. I don't have any problem with that, no.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. ROTH. I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Delaware objects. Objection is heard. The Senator from Iowa continues to have the floor.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I thought I had just agreed to have the amendment voted on.

Mr. REID addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa has the floor.

Mr. HARKIN. I will yield for a question to my colleague from Nevada. We are trying to work out an arrangement.

Mr. REID. I say to my friend, and the manager of the bill, this is my understanding of what the managers want to occur. We already have two amendments pending and there are motions to table those two amendments. The Landrieu amendment is going to come on as the third matter. They also want to move to table that. That can only be done while the amendment is pending. So that amendment is pending now.

I suggest there be a tabling motion made and then the Senator will offer his amendment, and his amendment be voted up or down.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, let me see if I can revise my unanimous consent.

I ask unanimous consent after the Landrieu amendment is disposed of, in whatever form that disposal may take, that I be recognized to call up my amendment, amendment No. 2495, and to have the yeas and nays on that amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Senator is advised he cannot obtain the yeas and nays by unanimous consent. That part of his consent cannot be granted.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. First, we will have the unanimous consent request. Is there objection to the unanimous consent request?

The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. HARKIN. I ask for the yeas and nays on my amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, I ask consent a vote occur on or in relation to the pending amendment—the Landrieu amendment to H.R. 434 in the voting sequence occurring at 3:30 p.m. today, with all the parameters provided for the first two amendments in order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to set aside the Landrieu amendment.

AMENDMENT NO. 2505

(Purpose: To authorize the extension of permanent normal trade relations to Albania and Kyrgyzstan, and for other purposes)

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, I send to the desk the managers' amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Delaware [Mr. ROTH] proposes an amendment numbered 2505.

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(The text of the amendment is printed in today's RECORD under "Amendments Submitted.")

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, President Clinton recently emphasized that while expanding trade, we also need to have basic labor standards so that people who work receive the dignity and reward of their work. The President said the WTO should create a working group in Seattle on trade and labor and asked, "How we can deny the legitimacy or the linking of these issues, trade and labor, in a global economy?"

How, indeed? The rhetoric sounds right—that we should link the granting of trade benefits to whether countries are abiding by internationally recognized standards on such things as child labor, collective bargaining, use of forced or coerced labor, occupational health and safety and other worker rights. This should be especially the case when these countries have freely undertaken such obligations in treaties or conventions. This is a laudable objective and one that the Administration is now promoting. But how do we implement this objective?

We have our first test case under consideration before the Senate today. We should begin to promote standards on such things as child labor, collective bargaining, use of forced or coerced labor, occupational health and safety and other worker rights as part of our trade relationships by considering progress on those goals when unilaterally granting a trade benefit. In considering whether to grant a country a unilateral trade benefit, the President surely ought to consider the extent to which that country has undertaken its own existing obligations, obligations under treaties and conventions it has freely entered into relative to child labor, collective bargaining, the use of forced or coerced labor, occupational health and safety and other worker rights. Unfortunately, in the bill under consideration today, the President is not required to even consider this factor.

Mr. President, the trade bill we are considering contains two provisions that would provide trade benefits to certain countries unilaterally without asking that reciprocal action be taken.

This bill is flawed and it doesn't live up to our repeatedly stated beliefs. It contains no required consideration of the extent to which a beneficiary country has undertaken to live up to its own commitments to internationally recognized standards on such things as child labor, collective bargaining, use of forced or coerced labor, occupational health and safety and other worker rights, before the country may receive the trade benefit conferred in the bill. I believe the extent to which a country demonstrates a willingness to abide by its own commitments freely undertaken, be it to labor standards, or anything else, should be an element that is at least considered when determining a country's eligibility to receive special henefits

As the bill is currently written, before granting the trade benefits, the President must make certain determinations, such as determining if the country has demonstrated a commitment to undertake WTO obligations and to take steps to join the Free Trade Agreement of the Americas (FTAA). Only as a secondary consideration, the President may consider, when determining if the country has demonstrated a commitment to the WTO and FTAA, additional criteria, including the extent to which the country provides internationally recognized worker rights.

This is not strong enough because it is a discretionary standard that the President is not required to even consider and it is also only a secondary consideration that can be taken into account when making a determination as to whether a country has demonstrated a commitment to pursue certain other ends. It is not an end in itself

It seems to me that the type of trade benefit we are considering today, a one-way-granting by the United States of duty free treatment, is a logical place to include a consideration of whether a country is attempting to live up to its own obligations it has freely undertaken with regard to standards on such things as child labor, collective bargaining, use of forced or coerced labor, occupational health and safety and other worker rights.

The President has said he wants to start to link trade and labor standards and will take steps to try to achieve this in the next round of WTO negotiations starting in Seattle. We should start here at home by requiring that the extent to which a beneficiary country has demonstrated a commitment to abide by obligations it has already undertaken in treaties and conventions it has freely entered into relative to child labor, collective bargaining, use of forced or coerced labor, occupational health and safety and other worker rights. If we can't even include such a consideration in today's legislation, how do we expect to succeed in including such provisions in a multilateral negotiation of over 130 member nations?

Mr. President, I am offering an amendment which would require consideration of internationally recognized labor standards when determining if a CBI country may benefit from unilateral trade preferences. My amendment would require the President, when designating a CBTEA beneficiary country, to consider the extent to which the country provides internationally recognized worker rights, such as the right of association, the right to organize and bargain collectively; prohibition on the use of any form of coerced or compulsory labor and a minimum age for the employment of children.

Most CBI countries are signatories of the International Labor Organization conventions. Considering the extent to which these countries abide by their own international obligations is the least we can do when considering whether they deserve to receive unilateral trade preferences from us.

Mr. MACK. Mr. President, I rise today to thank the chairman of the committee, Mr. ROTH, for including in the manager's package an amendment by Mr. SARBANES and myself expressing the sense of the Congress with respect to the issue of debt relief for poor countries. Our resolution simply expresses the desire of this body to work with the President and the international community to forgive the debt owed to us by the world's poorest countries in exchange for commitments from these countries to reform their economies and work toward a better quality of life for their people. This follows on legislation we introduced earlier this month to accomplish this important objective.

Our effort today is premised on the notion that we must help these poverty-stricken nations break the vicious cycle of debt and give them the economic opportunity to liberate their futures. This issue has united people of diverse interests and backgrounds from all around the world. There is a growing sense across the cultural and political spectrum that debt burdens are a major impediment to economic reform and the alleviation of the abject poverty facing the world's poorest countries. And there is increasing certainty that debt forgiveness-if done rightcan be a positive force for change in the developing world. Our resolution makes clear that the objectives of debt relief should be the promotion of policies that promote economic growth, openness to trade and investment, and the development of free markets. I am glad the full Senate is joining us in this endeavor.

Today, Mr. President, the world's poorest countries owe an average of $400 for every man, woman, and child within their borders. This is much more than most people in these countries make in a year—in fact more than one billion people on Earth today live on less than a dollar a day. Debt service payments in many cases consume a majority of a poor country's annual budget, leaving scarce domestic resources for economic restructuring or such vital human services as education, clean water and sanitary living conditions. In Tanzania, for example, debt payments would require nearly four-fifths of the government's budget. In a country where one child in six dies before the age of five, little money remains to finance initiatives that would improve the country's economic prospects, its openness to trade and investment, or the standard of living of its people. Among sub-Saharan African countries—many of the very countries we're looking to help in the trade package before us today—one in five adults can't read or write.

Mr. President, the problems in the developing countries that yield such grim statistics will never be solved without a monumental commitment of will from their leaders, their citizens, and the outside world. We cannot solve all these problems today. Rather, we are simply affirming to the world that the small step of debt relief is one that can and should be taken without delay.

The effort to forgive the debts of the world's poorest countries has been ongoing for more than a decade. During this time the international community and the G7 came to the realization that the world's poorest countries are simply unable to repay the debt they owe to foreign creditors. What's more, the payments that are being made are hampering progress toward more free, open, and economically vibrant economies. The external debt for many developing nations is more than twice their gross domestic product, leaving many unable to even make interest payments. We must accept the fact that this debt is unpayable. The question is not whether we'll ever get paid back, but rather what we can encourage these heavily indebted countries to do for themselves in exchange for our forgiveness.

In Uganda, for example, debt relief obtained under the existing debt for-giveness programs has cleared the way for a doubling of classroom size, allowing twice as many children to attend school as before. This type of benefit is real. It is tangible. And it will bring untold benefits to the country in future years. We must do more to encourage these types of programs and debt relief is one vehicle that can help effect real change in the developing world.

Prudent debt relief is in all of our best interests. It is an investment in the commitment of the world's poorest countries to implement sound economic reforms and help their people live longer, healthier and more prosperous lives.

Our amendment today is another step toward this goal and I thank my colleagues for their support.

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, I rise today to address the Trade Adjustment Assistance program.

Let me begin by stating—as others have on this issue—that I believe strongly in the concept of free and fair trade, and I have always supported legislation that opens foreign markets, assures that trade agreements are enforceable, and provides the opportunity for competitive U.S. firms to do business overseas. I support legislation of this type because I feel that in the long run it increases the economic welfare of our nation and leads to substantial and measureable benefits for Americans. Exports now generate over onethird of all economic growth in the United States. Export jobs pay ten to fifteen percent more than the average wage. Depending upon who you listen to, it has generated anywhere from two to eleven million jobs over the last ten years. Without expanded trade brought on as a result of globalization, we will end up fighting over an ever-decreasing domestic economic pie. Trade is inevitable, it is the terms of trade that we

And this debate is important, because while many Americans are enjoying unprecedented opportunities as a result of the process of globalization, others are not so fortunate. Clearly, free trade has negative attributes, and the United States has not been immune to them. In my state alone over the last two years we have seen several thousand people laid off in trade-related plant closures—from high-tech to apparel to copper. Many more New Mexicans have been forced to find other work because they can no longer compete on an international basis. The vast majority of these people live in rural communities where there really isn't anything else for them to do in terms of employment. When I talk to these people, they ask me: Where am I supposed to work now? Where do I find a job with a salary that allows me to support a family, own a house, put food on the table, and live a decent life? Where are the benefits of free trade for me now that my company has gone overseas? What good are cheaper products when I no longer have a salary to pay for them?

These are tough questions, especially from someone who is trying to pay a mortgage, or get their children an education, or buy food for the table, and they deserve an answer. In my opinion, the answer does not lie in protectionism, as many would suggest, because it is no longer a legitimate option. It is impossible to go back in time and trade only within our own borders. Instead the answer lies in the development of programs that provide people with the skills to be gainfully employed and provide companies with the tools so they can become internationally competitive. It is through workforce development and technological innovation. Globalization is inevitable. It is not going to stop. Therefore, the question for us in this Chamber is: How we can manage it to benefit the national interest of the United States? How can we make it work for our people? How can we establish an environment where high-wage jobs can be obtained and communities sustained?

The Trade Adjustment Assistance program is supposed to do just that. As my good friend and colleague Senator MOYNIHAN has pointed out on the floor many times, this program and its component parts are part of a very reasonable agreement with American workers and companies: If Americans lose their jobs as a result of trade agreements entered into by the U.S. Government, then the U.S. government should assist these Americans in finding new employment with equivalent or better wages. If the U.S. government supports an open trading system, it is responsible to repair the negative impacts this policy has on its citizens. If you lose a job because of U.S. trade policy, you should have some help from the U.S. Government in getting unemployment benefits and retraining to get a new job that pays you as much or more as you were getting before.

And, since its inception, the Trade Adjustment Assistance program has attempted to do just that. It has over the years consistently helped individuals and companies in communities across the United States deal with the transitions that are an inevitable part of a changing international economic system. It helps people that can work and want to work to continue to work in productive jobs that contribute to the economic welfare of our country.

But, as good as the Trade Adjustment Assistance program is, it is not without flaws, and these flaws frequently make the program difficult to use for those that need it most. Even worse, in some cases, it is simply unavailable for those who need it most.

What are some concrete examples of these problems? In my state of New Mexico, we have over the last few years seen a serious lack of coordination between the federal and state agencies responsible for the provision of unemployment benefits and retraining, and we have seen a near complete incompatibility of application procedures. This lack of harmonization has made potential recipients run in circles to find information and advice that would help them find viable work.

We have passed legislation that provides benefits to some individuals that are not available to others. For instance, the NAFTA Trade Adjustment Assistance program provides unemployment benefits and retraining for those who have been negatively impacted by trade or shifts in production overseas, but the Trade Adjustment Assistance program only provides retraining in the case of former, not the latter. Furthermore, secondary workers-individuals who with their company provide direct inputs into primary manufacturing facilities—are not eligible for any support at all, this in spite of the fact that they too may lose their jobs when a primary facility is forced to close. How do you explain these programmatic differences to workers who need help, and need it now?

Another problem: Trade Adjustment Assistance provides assistance to workers in specific communities, but it does not provide assistance to those communities that have been significantly impacted by trade or shifts in production overseas. No evaluation of community needs, no strategic plan for economic development, no technical assistance to help a community recover from what has happened. Thus, while we provide federal funds so workers can retrain to find employment, in many cases there is no simply gainful employment to be had in the community. There is no work to retrain for that pays a living wage. In other words, there is no linkage between retraining programs and community workforce needs. Individuals thus have a choice: stay in town on unemployment until it runs out, take a lesser paying job that disallows them from providing for themselves and their family, or relocate to a region that has employment to offer. In either case, the community loses. And this is happening with disturbing frequency not only in New Mexico, but in rural communities across the United States. Ask any of my colleagues, and they will tell you they have heard the same story.

I would argue that in some very specific cases foreign trade or the transfer of production overseas has had a such an impact on a community that it is analogous to a natural disaster. The impact on the community is so severe, pervasive, and painful that it is equivalent to a flood, tornado, or earthquake. In many cases, not just individuals, but an entire community has become dislocated, and is not prepared as a political or economic entity to take the steps needed to recover. Not only the individuals, but the community, needs help to get back on its feet.

So what must be done in these circumstances? In this country we have organized a unique approach to first anticipate, and then respond to, natural disasters—the Federal Emergency Management Agency, or FEMA—and it is designed to integrate the federal/ state/local activities to obtain optimal recovery. Why not have this kind of coordinated program for trade? We organize this kind of response through the Department of Defense and the Office of Economic Adjustment when a military base closes in a community. Why not have such a program for communities affected by trade? I am not talking about giving funds to those in need in perpetuity. I am talking about establishing a coherent strategic plan with an entry and exit policy that helps individuals and communities develop a workforce plan, create good jobs for their citizens, and become viable economic competitors in the international marketplace.

The time is ripe to examine these issues, and in my view it is time to think outside the box. There are too many inconsistencies in existing unemployment and re-training benefit programs—Trade Adjustment Assistance, NAFTA Trade Adjustment Assistance, the Job Training Partnership Act, the Workforce Investment Act, and unemployment insurance—and they must be examined so we can make them efficient and effective mechanisms for our workers. In my view, these problems are not necessarily the fault of the Department of Labor, which administers many of the programs I refer to today. The problems are indicative of an ad hoc approach to policy formation over the years, and it is time to align these programs so they will have the maximum benefit effect for those who need them. Trade Adjustment Assistance is an excellent idea and it has served us well, but it is time that it be refined to better fit the needs of an increasingly interdependent international political economy.

To this end, I offer a very straightforward amendment today, and an action that I see as a first, but very important, step to more comprehensive Trade Adjustment Assistance reform. The immediate goal of the amendment is to obtain the information necessary to make informed decisions on how to proceed in future legislation. My amendment asks that the General Accounting Office study this issue, and, within nine months, offer Congress specific data and recommendations concerning the efficiency and effectiveness of federal inter-agency and federal and state coordination of unemployment and retraining activities associated with the following programs: the Trade Adjustment Assistance program, the NAFTA Trade Adjustment Assistance program, the Job Training Partnership Act, the Workforce Investment Act, and the Unemployment Insurance Program. The report will examine the activities since the enactment of the NAFTA agreement on January 1, 1994, and will include analysis of many of the issues I mentioned previously: the compatibility of program requirements and application procedures related to the unemployment and retraining of dislocated workers in the United States, the capacity of these programs to assist primary and secondary workers negatively impacted by foreign trade and the transfer of production to other countries, and the effectiveness of the aforementioned programs relative to the re-employment of United States workers dislocated by foreign trade and the transfer of production to other countries. This is an unambiguous and uncomplicated amendment. and it will help us chart a course for the future.

Trade Adjustment Assistance is a necessary part of our national trade policy toolbox, and I believe it has done an admirable job over the years. But we all know it will become even more important as our country becomes more integrated into the global economy. For this reason, it is time that it be made more effective, and that its goals be better defined. I believe this amendment will assist us in this effort, and I hope that my colleagues will support the passage of this bill when it comes to a vote.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Mr. President, I rise to present legislative background and history on a provision contained in the Manager's Amendment to the African Growth and Opportunity Act adopted this evening by consent. Constituents in my state in the wool fabric industry have been concerned about any revision to tariff reduction and phase-out schedules that would unfairly alter their competitive posture and force layoffs of Connecticut employees

The final language in the provision states that, "It is the sense of the Senate that U.S. trade policy should place a priority on the elimination or amelioration of tariff inversions that undermine the competitiveness of the U.S. consuming industries, while taking into account the conditions in the producing industry in the United States, especially those currently facing tariff phase-outs negotiated under prior trade agreements." I want to note that this provision as adopted was modified to reflect specific concerns I raised about it. While this provision merely expresses a "sense of the Senate" and is in no way law or binding, I do want to provide background on the intent of the provision.

I note, first, that language in the provision as originally proposed directing the inclusion of the "wool fabric" industry sector in this provision was specifically deleted in the version that passed in the Manager's Amendment, underscoring the Senate's clear intent that this provision is not directed at this sector.

Second, the provision specifically requires that full account be taken of 'conditions' in the various "producing industry in the United States," indicating that whatever further action Congress may want to consider in the future on this issue, or that the U.S. Trade Representative may raise in future negotiations, must assure fairness and equitable treatment to those currently producing in the United States. Furthermore, the language specifically states that special attention and equity is to be provided to "those currently facing tariff phase-outs negotiated under prior trade agreements.' Since my constituents in the wool fabrication sector specifically fall into exactly that posture, properly relying on phase-out schedules negotiated in prior trade agreements, this protection and assurance is directed at their concerns, which, in turn, is why their industry sector was dropped from application of this provision.

I further appreciate the assurances provided me by the Managers of this bill that I will be provided full notice of any consideration of this issue in conference and that it will be resolved in a manner satisfactory to me in representation of my constituent's concerns.

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, the managers' amendment has been worked on by the distinguished ranking member, Senator MOYNIHAN, and myself. We have worked with Members on both sides of the aisle. This represents the results. There is no objection from the Democrat or Republican side.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New York.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, may I simply confirm the chairman's statement. I thank all who have worked very hard on this extensive measure.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate on the managers' amendment?

Mr. ROTH. I ask for a voice vote.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. If there be no further debate, the question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 2505) was agreed

Mr. ROTH. I thank the ranking member of the committee for his cooperation and help.

I think now we are about ready to proceed with the votes.

A quorum is not present.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative assistant proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

AMENDMENT NO. 2487

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Minnesota is entitled to 2 minutes of his time.

Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President, this amendment provides for enforceable labor standards. This is about the terms of trade and wanting to make sure with the CBI countries that when it comes to the right to organize and bargain collectively, people are not imprisoned for asserting this right, and that basic human rights and basic labor rights are met. In that way, we will have a trade agreement with enforceable labor standards that says to wage earners in our country: You are not going to lose your job in the apparel industry to other countries because they are paying 35 cents an hour and violate basic labor rights. It also says to workers in CBI countries: It is a benefit to you; you do not have to depend on investment by only making 35 or 40 cents an hour and not able to have basic human rights and labor rights.

This amendment calls for enforceable labor rights. It is the right thing to do. It is all about the right terms of trade, and I hope my colleagues will vote for this amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time in opposition?

The Senator from New York.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, the managers' amendment which has just been adopted at the behest of Senator Levin, myself, and others, requires that core labor standards are necessary matters that the President must consider in granting these trade privileges. Of course, the Generalized System of Preferences incorporates substantially the same measures. The President is authorized to consider countries' compliance with these standards. Indeed, the President has already endorsed the core labor standards through the ILO Declaration adopted in 1998. There is no need to micromanage his handling of foreign affairs.

In the interest of moving this measure along, with full agreement with the purposes of the Senator from Minnesota, I move to table the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. All time having been used or yielded back, the question is on agreeing to the motion to table amendment No. 2487. The yeas and nays have been ordered. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative assistant called the roll.

Mr. NICKLES. I announce that Senator from Arizona (Mr. McCAIN) is necessarily absent.

Mr. REID. I announce that the Senator from Hawaii (Mr. INOUYE) is necessarily absent.

AMENDMENT NO. 2347

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There are now 4 minutes equally divided before a vote on the motion to table amendment No. 2347.

The Senator from Pennsylvania, Mr. Specter, is recognized.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, this amendment provides for a private right of action to go into Federal court and stop dumped goods from coming into the United States in order to enforce U.S. trade laws and international trade laws, consistent with GATT.

For example, today, if you take a case under 30201, the International Trade Commission takes up to a year to have it acted on, and then the administration can have a suspension order and eliminate it totally. Dumped goods are unfairly taking jobs from farmers, where dumped wheat comes into the United States. Textiles are dumped, steel is dumped, lamb is dumped; and the administration consistently decides these cases—as they did on steel with Russia-on a suspension agreement as to what is going to help the Russian economy for foreign policy and defense reasons, as opposed to seeing to it that United States trade laws are enforced that prohibit dumping-selling in the United States at a lower cost than illustratively selling in Russia.

This would give an injured party a chance to go to court and get an injunction within a few weeks, to have countervailing duties imposed, which would be an effective way to see to it that our antidumping laws are enforced and we do not have the disintegration of industries such as steel or unfair practices for wheat farmers, lamb farmers, and the like.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Delaware is recognized.

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, I rise in opposition to my colleague's amendment. I do so because there is no evidence that the current antidumping and countervailing duty laws have failed to deliver relief to injured industries. Indeed, it is not clear to me that shifting the burden of the initial investigation to the courts, with any allowance at all for the normal process of discovery between private litigants, would help the petitioning industry in these cases.

While both petitioners and respondents complain about their treatment before the administrative agencies, largely due to what they consider to be the arbitrary basis for their decisions, both sides to the litigation seem to agree that the cases themselves are completed as rapidly as possible. They also agree that the current system provides more certainty and predictability.

Given that, I urge my colleagues to think carefully about the implications of shifting these cases to the Federal courts. While the system is not perfect, the fact is that petitioners have been very successful in these cases. Moreover, the system is surprisingly quick and responsive, given the complexity of these cases. Anybody who has spent years before the Federal courts in a complex commercial matter can tell you that the current system of litigation of unfair trade cases administratively is quite rapid.

For these reasons, I urge my colleagues to vote to table the amendment. No such change, as proposed by this amendment, should be adopted without thorough study on the part of the appropriate committee.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that this rollcall vote and future rollcalls in this series be limited to 10 minutes

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 2430

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, there will be 4 minutes equally divided for a vote on the motion to table the LANDRIEU amendment.

Ms. LANDRIEU. Mr. President, I will not ask my colleagues to vote. I will ask for the vote to be vitiated. However, I want to spend 1 minute on this amendment because there seems to be a misunderstanding about some of the facts. With all respect to the chairman and ranking member who do not support this amendment, perhaps we will have longer to debate this in the years

It is my understanding—and I am supporting this bill—that our idea is to help develop the continent of Africa in a mutually beneficial way that helps our Nation, also. However, in the current draft of the bill, there is an island that is included which is technically part of Africa. There are 1 million inhabitants and the per capita GDP is $10,300, far exceeding other nations, such as Sudan with a GDP of $875; Ethiopia, with a GDP of $520; Somalia, with a GDP of $600 per year per capita.

I don't understand why we are including some islands that are already doing very well—in fact, better than some of our European nations. I bring this to the attention of the Senate. I will not ask for a vote. The ranking member has said there are administrative provisions in this trade agreement that make it clear our efforts are directed to the nations that need development and not to give preferential treatment to nations or areas that are already quite developed.

That is my only point. I am not going to ask the Senate to vote on it. Perhaps we will have a time to discuss this in the next year or the next Congress.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, I thank my distinguished colleague. She is absolutely right. We should address this issue. We will. I thank her for bringing it before us and do not forget to come back.

I vield the floor.

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent we dispense with the vote on the motion to table the Landrieu amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Iowa.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I believe my amendment is next in order?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Chair has an inquiry. Is it the intention of the Senator from Delaware—is the motion to withdraw the amendment?

Mr. ROTH. The Senator withdrew her amendment and I asked unanimous consent we dispense with the vote on the motion to table.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendment is withdrawn.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa is recognized under the previous order.

Mr. HARKIN. For how long? Is it 2

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is recognized to offer an amendment.

Mr. HARKIN. I thought my amendment was pending, under the unanimous consent agreement.

AMENDMENT NO. 2495

(Purpose: To deny benefits under the legislation to any country that does not comply with the Convention for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor)

Mr. HARKIN. I call up amendment 2495.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows: The Senator from Iowa [Mr. HARKIN] proposes an amendment numbered 2495.

The amendment is as follows:

SEC. . LIMITATIONS ON BENEFITS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, no benefits under this Act shall be granted to any country (or to any designated zone in that country) that does not meet and effectively enforce the standards regarding child labor established by the ILO Convention (No. 182) for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor.

(b) REPORT.—Not later than 12 months after the date of enactment of this Act and annually thereafter, the President, after consultation with the Trade Policy Review Committee, shall submit a report to Congress on the enforcement of, and compliance with, the standards described in subsection (a).

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, under the understanding, I am going to take just a couple of minutes. Even though there was no time agreement, there was an understanding. I know people want to vote on this.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If the Senator will yield, the Senate will be in order.

The Senator from Iowa.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, this amendment is cosponsored by my colleague from North Carolina, the chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, Senator HELMS, and also by my friend from Minnesota. Mr. Wellstone. As you can see, this has broad philosophical support.

I also at this moment inform my colleagues and thank Senator Helms for reporting out just this morning, from the Foreign Relations Committee, the Convention 182 on the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor. That is record time. It was just adopted in June of this year. Then it had to go through some legal reviews and the President submitted to the Senate on August 5, 1999. So I want the chairman to know how much we appreciate the expeditious handling of that and the fact it is reported out. I am hopeful we can get a vote on it before we go out toward the end of this year.

The reason I had the clerk read the entire amendment is because it is not very long and not very convoluted. All it says, basically, is no country will get the benefits of this bill unless they adopt and enforce the provisions of this Convention 182 that was just adopted

I might point out that there are 160 signators to this Convention. It is the first time in history the entire three representatives of the ILO Tripartite group, which are representatives from government, business, and labor agreed on the final form of a convention out of ILO. So it has broad support.

This talk about the worst forms of child labor, child prostitution, child trafficking in drugs, child trafficking itself, hazardous work, any forms of bondage or slavery—all of those are listed under 182. All this amendment says is the benefits of this bill cannot go to any country that does not adopt and enforce the provisions of 182.

I hope we can get a vote on the convention itself before we go out this fall. I believe it will say to all these countries in Africa: We are willing to trade with you, we are willing to help, but if you are going to have child prostitution, if you are going to traffic in kids, going to use kids in the drug trade, if you are going to chain them to looms, and you are not going to let them go to school, you are not going to permit them to have their own childhood—vou are not going to get the benefits of this trade bill.

I think it is the least we can do, to try to help take one more step forward in eliminating child labor throughout the world.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New York.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, we can all thank the Senator from Iowa for bringing this matter forward. I think we are all close to being unanimously in support of the objectives.

I note, of 160 signatories to the convention, only one country has ratified it; that is the Seychelles, an island complex in the Indian Ocean with a population of 75,000.

Building up an international regime in which this convention will take hold and have consequences for the children is going to be the work of a generation. It will be well worth it, but we are only at the beginning. The chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee is to be congratulated and thanked for reporting the bill out. But we have not ratified it. That is the situation we face. But let us go forward with this vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate on the amendment? The Senator from Iowa.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment No. 2495.

The yeas and nays have been ordered. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll. Mr. NICKLES. I announce that the Senator from Arizona (Mr. McCain) is necessarily absent. Mr. REID. I announce that the Senator from Hawaii (Mr. INOUYE) and the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. Ken-NEDY) are necessarily absent. I further announce that, if present and voting, Mr. KENNEDY would vote

"aye."

"(6) SECRETARY.—The term 'Secretary' means the Secretary of Agriculture.

"SEC. 292. PETITIONS; GROUP ELIGIBILITY.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—A petition for a certification of eligibility to apply for adjustment assistance under this chapter may be filed with the Secretary by a group of agricultural commodity producers or by their duly authorized representative. "(a) IN GENERAL.—As soon as possible after the date on which a petition is filed under section 292, but in any event not later than 60 days after that date, the Secretary shall determine whether the petitioning group meets the requirements of section 292(c) (or (d), as the case may be) and shall, if so, issue a certification of eligibility to apply for assistance under this chapter covering agricultural commodity producers in any group that meet the requirements. Each certification shall specify the date on which eligibility under this chapter begins.

"(b) NOTICE.—Upon making a determination on a petition, the Secretary shall promptly publish a summary of the determination in the Federal Register together with the Secretary's reasons for making the determination.

"(c) TERMINATION OF CERTIFICATION.—Whenever the Secretary determines, with respect to any certification of eligibility under this chapter, that the decline in price for the agricultural commodity covered by the certification is no longer attributable to the conditions described in section 292, the Secretary shall terminate such certification and promptly cause notice of such termination to be published in the Federal Register together with the Secretary's reasons for making such determination.

"SEC. 294. STUDY BY SECRETARY WHEN INTER-NATIONAL TRADE COMMISSION BE-GINS INVESTIGATION.

"(2) The producer certifies that the producer has not received cash benefits under any provision of this title other than this chapter.

"(B) the amount of the agricultural commodity produced by the agricultural commodity producer in the most recent marketing year.

"(2) SPECIAL RULE FOR SUBSEQUENT QUALIFIED YEARS.—The amount of cash benefits for a qualified year shall be determined in the same manner as cash benefits are determined under paragraph (1) except that the average national price of the agricultural commodity shall be determined under paragraph (1)(A)(i) by using the 5-marketing-year period used to determine the amount of cash benefits for the first certification

"(A) the payment was made without fault on the part of such person, and

"(B) requiring such repayment would be contrary to equity and good conscience.

"(2) RECOVERY OF OVERPAYMENT.—Unless an overpayment is otherwise recovered, or waived under paragraph (1), the Secretary shall recover the overpayment by deductions from any sums payable to such person under this chapter.

"(b) FALSE STATEMENTS.—If the Secretary, or a court of competent jurisdiction, determines that a person—and as a result of such false statement or representation, or of such nondisclosure, such person has received any payment under this chapter to which the person was not entitled, such person shall, in addition to any other penalty provided by law, be ineligible for any further payments under this chapter.

"(c) NOTICE AND DETERMINATION.—Except for overpayments determined by a court of competent jurisdiction, no repayment may be required, and no deduction may be made, under this section until a determination under subsection (a)(1) by the Secretary has been made, notice of the determination and an opportunity for a fair hearing thereon has been given to the person concerned, and the determination has become final.

"(d) PAYMENT TO TREASURY.—Any amount recovered under this section shall be returned to the Treasury of the United States. "(e) PENALTIES.—Whoever makes a false statement of a material fact knowing it to be false, or knowingly fails to disclose a material fact, for the purpose of obtaining or increasing for himself or for any other person any payment authorized to be furnished under this chapter shall be fined not more than $10,000 or imprisoned for not more than 1 year, or both.

SEC. ___. AGRICULTURE TRADE NEGOTIATING OBJECTIVES AND CONSULTATIONS WITH CONGRESS.

- (a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds that—
- (1) United States agriculture contributes positively to the United States balance of trade and United States agricultural exports support in excess of 1,000,000 United States jobs:
- (2) United States agriculture competes successfully worldwide despite the fact that United States producers are at a competitive disadvantage because of the trade distorting support and subsidy practices of other countries and despite the fact that significant tariff and nontariff barriers exist to United States exports; and
- (3) a successful conclusion of the next round of World Trade Organization negotiations is critically important to the United States agricultural sector.
- (b) OBJECTIVES.—The agricultural trade negotiating objectives of the United States with respect to the World Trade Organization negotiations include—
- (1) immediately eliminating all export subsidies worldwide while maintaining bona fide food aid and preserving United States market development and export credit programs that allow the United States to compete with other foreign export promotion efforts;
- (2) leveling the playing field for United States producers of agricultural products by eliminating blue box subsidies and disciplining domestic supports in a way that forces producers to face world prices on all production in excess of domestic food security needs while allowing the preservation of non-trade distorting programs to support family farms and rural communities;
- (3) disciplining state trading enterprises by insisting on transparency and banning discriminatory pricing practices that amount to de facto export subsidies so that the enterprises do not (except in cases of bona fide food aid) sell in foreign markets at prices below domestic market prices or prices below the full costs of acquiring and delivering agricultural products to the foreign markets;

- (4) insisting that the Sanitary and Phytosanitary Accord agreed to in the Uruguay Round applies to new technologies, including biotechnology, and clarifying that labeling requirements to allow consumers to make choices regarding biotechnology products or other regulatory requirements cannot be used as disguised barriers to trade;
- (5) increasing opportunities for United States exports of agricultural products by first reducing tariff and nontariff barriers to trade to the same or lower levels than exist in the United States and then eliminating barriers, such as—
- (A) restrictive or trade distorting practices that adversely impact perishable or cyclical products;
- (B) restrictive rules in the administration of tariff-rate quotas; and
- (C) unjustified sanitary and phytosanitary restrictions or other unjustified technical barriers to agricultural trade;
- (6) encouraging government policies that avoid price-depressing surpluses; and
- (7) strengthening dispute settlement procedures so that countries cannot maintain unjustified restrictions on United States exports in contravention of their commitments.
- (c) Consultation With Congressional Committees.—
- (1) CONSULTATION BEFORE OFFER MADE.—Before the United States Trade Representative negotiates a trade agreement that would reduce tariffs on agricultural products or require a change in United States agricultural law, the United States Trade Representative shall consult with the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry and the Committee on Finance of the Senate and the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives.
- (2) CONSULTATION BEFORE AGREEMENT INITIALED.—Not less than 48 hours before initialing an agreement relating to agricultural trade negotiated under the auspices of the World Trade Organization, the United States Trade Representative shall consult closely with the committees referred to in paragraph (1) regarding—
 - (A) the details of the agreement;
- (B) the potential impact of the agreement on United States agricultural producers; and
- (C) any changes in United States law necessary to implement the agreement.
- (3) No secret side deals.—Any agreement or other understanding (whether verbal or in writing) that relates to agricultural trade that is not disclosed to the Congress before legislation implementing a trade agreement is introduced in either house of Congress shall not be considered to be part of the agreement approved by Congress and shall have no force and effect under United States law or in any dispute settlement body.
- (d) SENSE OF THE SENATE.—It is the sense of the Senate that—
- (1) reaching a successful agreement on agriculture should be the top priority of United States negotiators; and
- (2) if the primary competitors of the United States do not reduce their trade distorting domestic supports and export subsidies in accordance with the negotiating objectives expressed in this section, the United States should take steps to increase the leverage of United States negotiators and level the playing field for United States producers in order to improve United States farm income and to encourage United States competitors to eliminate export subsidies and domestic supports that are harmful to United States farmers and ranchers.

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, for point of clarification, this is a matter that has now been negotiated so that we could reach agreement on the negotiating objectives for our trade representatives at the WTO Round.

I thank all the Members who have participated in this, certainly my cosponsor, Senator Grassley of Iowa, and a special thanks to the chairman of the committee and the ranking member of the committee for their assistance in working this out.

I thank the Chair and yield the floor. Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, we are prepared to accept the modification.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate on the amendment?

If not, without objection, it is so ordered. The amendment, as modified, is agreed to.

The amendment (No. 2360), as modified, was agreed to.

Mr. FEINGOLD addressed the Chair. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Wisconsin.

AMENDMENT NO. 2427, AS MODIFIED

(Purpose: To provide expanded trade benefits to countries in sub-Saharan Africa)

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I call up amendment No. 2427 and ask unanimous consent that it be modified with the language I send to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request?

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, I reserve the right to object.

Would the Senator tell me what the modification is?

Mr. FEINGOLD. I say to the Senator, we have worked this out with you and your staff. What it does is add a certain number of items, goods, to the Lome Treaty product list of items that could be covered under this agreement. Actually, it makes it consistent with the legislation we have before us.

I believe we worked this out in advance with the Senator.

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HAGEL). Without objection, it is so ordered.

Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Wisconsin? Without objection, it is so ordered.

The clerk will report.

The bill clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. Fein-GOLD] proposes an amendment numbered 2427

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment, as modified, is as follows:

SEC. 111. ENCOURAGING MUTUALLY BENEFICIAL TRADE AND INVESTMENT.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress makes the following findings:

- (1) A mutually beneficial United States Sub-Saharan Africa trade policy will grant new access to the United States market for a broad range of goods produced in Africa, by Africans, and include safeguards to ensure that the corporations manufacturing these goods (or the product or manufacture of the oil or mineral extraction industry) respect the rights of their employees and the local environment. Such trade opportunities will promote equitable economic development and thus increase demand in African countries for United States goods and service exports.
- (2) Recognizing that the global system of textile and apparel quotas under the MultiFiber Arrangement will be phased out under the Uruguay Round Agreements over the next 5 years with the total termination of the quota system in 2005, the grant of additional access to the United States market in these sectors is a short-lived benefit.
 - (b) TREATMENT OF QUOTAS.—
- (1) KENYA AND MAURITIUS.—Pursuant to the Agreement on Textiles and Clothing, the United States shall eliminate the existing quotas on textile and apparel imports to the United States from Kenya and Mauritius, respectively, not later than 30 days after each country demonstrates the following:
- (A) The country is not ineligible for benefits under section 502(b)(2) of the Trade Act of 1974 (19 U.S.C. 2462(b)(2)).
- (B) The country does not engage in significant violations of internationally recognized human rights and the Secretary of State agrees with this determination.
- (C)(i) The country is providing for effective enforcement of internationally recognized worker rights throughout the country (including in export processing zones) as determined under paragraph (5), including the core labor standards enumerated in the appropriate treaties of the International Labor Organization, and including—
- (I) the right of association;
- (II) the right to organize and bargain collectively:
- (III) a prohibition on the use of any form of coerced or compulsory labor;
- (IV) the international minimum age for the employment of children (age 15); and
- (V) acceptable conditions of work with respect to minimum wages, hours of work, and occupational safety and health.
- (ii) The government of the country ensures that the Secretary of Labor, the head of the national labor agency of the government of that country, and the head of the International Confederation of Free Trade Unions-Africa Region Office (ICFTU-AFRO) each has access to all appropriate records and other information of all business enterprises in the country.
- (D) The country is taking adequate measures to prevent illegal transshipment of goods that is carried out by rerouting, false declaration concerning country of origin or place of origin, falsification of official documents, evasion of United States rules of origin for textile and apparel goods, or any other means, in accordance with the requirements of subsection (d).
- (E) The country is taking adequate measures to prevent being used as a transit point for the shipment of goods in violation of the Agreement on Textiles and Clothing or any other applicable textile agreement.
- (F) The cost or value of the textile or apparel product produced in the country, or by companies in any 2 or more sub-Saharan African countries, plus the direct costs of processing operations performed in the country or such countries, is not less than 60 percent of the appraised value of the product at the time it is entered into the customs territory of the United States.

- (G) Not less than 90 percent of employees in business enterprises producing the textile and apparel goods are citizens of that country, or any 2 or more sub-Saharan African countries.
- (H) The country has established, or is making continual progress toward establishing—
- (i) a market-based economy, where private property rights are protected and the principles of an open, rules-based trading system are observed;
- (ii) a democratic society, where the rule of law, political freedom, participatory democracy, and the right to due process and a fair trial are observed;
- (iii) an open trading system through the elimination of barriers to United States trade and investment and the resolution of bilateral trade and investment disputes; and
- (iv) economic policies to reduce poverty, increase the availability of health care and educational opportunities, expand physical infrastructure, and promote the establishment of private enterprise.
- (2) OTHER SUB-SAHARAN COUNTRIES.—The President shall continue the existing no quota policy for each other country in sub-Saharan Africa if the country is in compliance with the requirements applicable to Kenya and Mauritius under subparagraphs (A) through (H) of paragraph (1).
- (3) TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE.—The Customs Service shall provide the necessary technical assistance to sub-Saharan African countries in the development and implementation of adequate measures against the illegal transshipment of goods.
- (4) OFFSETTING REDUCTION OF CHINESE QUOTA.—When the quota for textile and apparel products imported from Kenya or Mauritius is eliminated, the quota for textile and apparel products from the People's Republic of China for each calendar year in each product category shall be reduced by the amount equal to the volume of all textile and apparel products in that product category imported from all sub-Saharan African countries into the United States in the preceding calendar year, plus 5 percent of that amount.
- (5) DETERMINATION OF COMPLIANCE WITH INTERNATIONALLY RECOGNIZED WORKER RIGHTS.—
 - (A) DETERMINATION.—
- (i) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of carrying out paragraph (1)(C), the Secretary of Labor, in consultation with the individuals described in clause (ii) and pursuant to the procedures described in clause (iii), shall determine whether or not each sub-Saharan African country is providing for effective enforcement of internationally recognized worker rights throughout the country (including in export processing zones).

- (iii) PUBLIC COMMENT.—Not later than 90 days before the Secretary of Labor makes a determination that a country is in compliance with the requirements of paragraph (1)(C), the Secretary shall publish notice in the Federal Register and an opportunity for public comment. The Secretary shall take into consideration the comments received in making a determination under such paragraph (1)(C).
- (B) CONTINUING COMPLIANCE.—In the case of a country for which the Secretary of Labor has made an initial determination under subparagraph (A) that the country is in compliance with the requirements of paragraph (1)(C), the Secretary, in consultation with the individuals described in subparagraph (A), shall, not less than once every 3 years thereafter, conduct a review and make a determination with respect to that country to ensure continuing compliance with the requirements of paragraph (1)(C). The Secretary shall submit the determination to Congress.

- (C) REPORT.—Not later than 6 months after the date of enactment of this Act, and on an annual basis thereafter, the Secretary of Labor shall prepare and submit to Congress a report containing—
- (i) a description of each determination made under this paragraph during the preceding year;
- (ii) a description of the position taken by each of the individuals described in subparagraph (A)(ii) with respect to each such determination; and
- (iii) a report on the public comments received pursuant to subparagraph (A)(iii).
- (6) REPORT.—Not later than March 31 of each year, the President shall publish in the Federal Register and submit to Congress a report on the growth in textiles and apparel imported into the United States from countries in sub-Saharan Africa in order to inform United States consumers, workers, and textile manufacturers about the effects of the no quota policy.
- (c) TREATMENT OF TARIFFS.—The President shall provide an additional benefit of a 50 percent tariff reduction for any textile and apparel product of a sub-Saharan African country that meets the requirements of sub-paragraphs (A) through (H) of subsection (b)(1) and subsection (d) and that is imported directly into the United States from such sub-Saharan African country if the business enterprise, or a subcontractor of the enterprise, producing the product is in compliance with the following:
- (1) Citizens of 1 or more sub-Saharan African countries own not less than 51 percent of the business enterprise.
- (2) If the business enterprise involves a joint-venture arrangement with, or related to as a subsidiary, trust, or subcontractor, a business enterprise organized under the laws of the United States, the European Union, Japan, or any other developed country (or group of developed countries), or operating in such countries, the business enterprise complies with the environmental standards that would apply to a similar operation in the United States, the European Union, Japan, or any other developed country (or group of developed countries), as the case may be.

- (II) if there is more than one manufacturer or producer, or if there is a contractor or subcontractor of the manufacturer or producer with respect to the manufacture or production of the goods, the information required under subclause (I) with respect to each such manufacturer, producer, contractor, or subcontractor, including a description of the process performed by each such entity;

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Wisconsin.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I thank the two floor leaders—the chairman and ranking member of the Finance Committee—for allowing me to make this modification to my amendment.

I understand they will be opposing it, but I very much appreciate their willingness to allow me to offer it in the form I want.

The African Growth and Opportunity Act is all about increasing our level of trade with sub-Saharan Africa. That's a worthy goal, because the current level of trade between the American and the African people is depressingly small. Africa represents only 1 percent of U.S. imports, 1 percent of U.S. exports, and 1 percent of U.S. foreign direct investment. AGOA's supporters want to see those numbers increase. and that is what I want as well. However, the principal trade benefit appearing in AGOA is temporary preferential access to the U.S. market for textiles and apparel. This kind of legislation discourages the economic diversification that Africa needs to build economic strength.

AGOA does renew the GSP program, but does not amend it to provide duty-free benefits for many of Africa's primary exports. This amendment, if accepted, will make the African Growth and Opportunity Act much more meaningful in terms of potential trade, while at the same time ensuring that this legislation does no harm. It expands the list of African products eligible for duty-free access to U.S. markets, while at the same time adding important qualifications to ensure that growth does not come at the expense of human development.

My amendment would make goods listed under the Lome Convention eligible for duty-free access, provided those goods are not determined to be import-sensitive by the President of the United States. Products covered include all of sub-Saharan Africa's industrial products, all primary mineral products, and most of Africa's agricultural products, such as fruits, nuts, cereals, cocoa, and basketware. These provisions mean more trade opportunities for more African people.

That's an important idea—opportunities for African people. In fact, unlike the African Growth and Opportunity Act as it stands now, this amendment would ensure that Africans themselves are employed at the firms receiving benefits. My amendment requires that any textile firm receiving trade benefits must employ a workforce that is 90 percent African. In addition, my amendment requires that 60 percent of the value-added to a product comes from Africa. These provisions hold out an incentive to African governments, businesses, and civil societies to develop their human resources. And that would not only be good for Africa, but it would be good for America as well, as our trade partners in the region gain economic strength. At the same time that this amendment does more for Africans, it also takes important steps to protect American jobs from being lost to transshipment.

Trans-shipment occurs when textiles originating in one country are sent through another before they come to the United States. In this way, the actual country of origin can ignore U.S. quotas. Approximately $2 billion worth of illegally transshipped textiles enter the United States every year. The U.S. Customs Service has determined that for every $1 billion of illegally transshipped products that enter the United States, 40,000 jobs in the textile and apparel sector are lost.

Those who think that transshipment isn't going to be a problem in Africa had better think again. An official website of China's Ministry of Foreign Trade and Economic Cooperation quoted an analyst as saying that:

Setting up assembly plants with Chinese equipment, technology and personnel could not only greatly increase sales in African countries, but also circumvent the quotas imposed in commodities of Chinese origin imposed by European and American countries.

The Chinese know that standard United States protections against transshipment are weak and easy to defeat.

The African Growth and Opportunity Act, as it currently stands, relies on the same old weak protections that have led to these statistics—the same textile visa system that China and the other countries have manipulated in the past. This inadequate system requires government officials in the country of manufacturing to give textiles visas before those textiles can be exported, in order to certify the goods' country of origin. But often, corrupt officials simply sell visas to the highest bidder.

My amendment would create a new system—one that makes the U.S. importer responsible for certifying where textiles and apparel were produced. This gives U.S. entities a strong financial stake in the legality of their imports. Instead of relying on foreign officials, this standard relies on the American companies who operate right here, under American law. This amendment also requires foreign governments to cooperate with Customs Service investigations into transshipment, or risk losing their trade benefits.

If we pass this amendment, countries that want to skirt U.S. trade regulations will have to re-think their designs on Africa. As the Senate moves to increase the levels of legal trade between the United States and Africa, we must think carefully about the context in which we conduct our trade relations. Labor rights, human rights, and environmental protections are given short shrift by the current version of the African Growth and Opportunity Act. This is a recipe for social unrest and distorted development, and it is clearly in the United States' best interest to address these issues.

We are all affected when logging and mining deplete African rainforests and increase global warming. We are all degraded when the products we buy and use are created by exploitation and abuse. And we all reap the benefits of an Africa where freedom and human dignity reign, creating a stable environment in which business can thrive. American ideals and simple good sense require that we be vigilant in this regard. This amendment contains provisions to address labor rights, human rights, and environmental protection. Mr. President, Africa labor unions have been opposing AGOA for good reasons. This amendment takes their concerns seriously. It clearly spells out the labor rights that our trade partners in Africa must enforce in order to receive benefits. These include the right of association, the right to organize and bargain collectively, a prohibition on forced labor, minimum age of 15, and provisions for acceptable conditions with respect to wages, hours, and safety.

This amendment also provides for a monitoring procedure that involves the Africa Region branch of the International Confederation of Free Trade Unions in compliance reporting. These provisions go far beyond the labor protections in the current bill, which are linked to GSP-and they do so for a reason. GSP labor rights provisions are rarely enforced. Some African countries—such as Equatorial Guinea—receive GSP currently yet do not allow the establishment of independent free trade unions. Clearly, GSP is not enough to ensure the growth and opportunity are not exchanged for abuse and exploitation.

This amendment would also deny benefits to countries engaging in significant human rights abuses. Mr. President, that is stronger language than AGOA currently contains, and it sends a clear signal about the kinds of partners the United States is seeking in Africa. As it stands, AGOA contains no environmental provisions whatsoever. Yet in some African countries like Tanzania, 85 percent of the population lives directly off the land. Clearly, development in Africa is contingent on environmental sustainability. My amendment grants additional trade benefits to U.S. and other foreign investors from developed countries when they use the same environmental technology and practices in Africa that they use at home. This amendment makes AGOA more important and more responsible. If we are serious about engaging in Africa, let's make a genuine effort, rather than a token one. Let's make a responsible effort rather than an indifferent one.

Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New York is recognized.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, regretfully, but once again, I rise in opposition to this measure. It would add overly restrictive African content and citizenship requirements, and the transshipment penalties are extraordinary. On the matter of citizenship, sir, I would not doubt that there are 30 garment shops, factories, if you like, floors or lofts, in New York City, in Manhattan, where a majority of the employees are not American citizens. They are legal immigrants, they have rights of American workers, they are paid, and they pay taxes. But in the course of the last three centuries, we have seen enormous movements of labor from one place to another, a lot of recycling.

If I could take one moment, since it is quiet and we have some distinguished Senators here, recently there was a study of illegal immigration from Mexico by some very fine sociologists, American and Mexican. The question is, Under what circumstances would illegal immigration increase? The answer is that immigration would increase if you sealed the borders because it is circular. People come up north to work. They raise money, and they go back and they can buy a car. Then they return. If there was a real wall, they would not go back. The world economy has been such since the 18th century. Exceedingly, these are good intentions of the Senator who offered essentially the same amendment vesterday.

I move to table the amendment and ask for the yeas and navs.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to speak for 30 seconds

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I hope Senators are not confused by the comments of the Senator from New York. Certainly, the 90-percent requirement with regard to workers in Africa is one of many provisions in this. This is not the same amendment as yesterday. This involves labor protections, human rights protections, environmental protections, expanding the list of goods. This is a much broader alternative. In fact, it is essentially the HOPE alternative. So I hope the Senators vote for this. Although we received 44 votes on the transshipment amendment, this is by no means a vote on this particular provision. I want to be clear about that.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, the Senator is right. If I mischaracterized his amendment, I apologize. It is an extension of yesterday's amendment. Would he accept that characterization?

Mr. FEINGOLD. It covers a range of topics that have nothing to do with yesterday's amendment. It expands the number of products and trade and an alternative provision of what should be done. The Senator is correct that a couple of provisions are the same. I think many other provisions are of substantial importance, and I hope people regard this as an alternative approach.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. I accept the Senator's account.

Again, I make a motion to table the amendment.

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that we set aside the Feingold amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 2410

(Purpose: To provide expedited trade adjustment assistance for certain textile and apparel workers)

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from South Carolina [Mr. Thurmond] proposes an amendment numbered 2410.

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

SEC. . TRADE ADJUSTMENT ASSISTANCE FOR TEXTILE AND APPAREL WORKERS.

Notwithstanding any other provision of law, workers in textile and apparel firms who lose their jobs or are threatened with job loss as a result of either (1) a decrease in the firm's sales or production; or (2) a firm's plant or facility closure or relocation, shall be certified by the Secretary of Labor as eligible to receive adjustment assistance at the same level of benefits as workers certified under subchapter D of chapter 2 of title II of the Trade Act of 1974 not later than 30 days after the date a petition for certification is filed under such title II.

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, as we consider the African Growth and Opportunity Act, I rise to speak about the status of the United States textile and apparel industry. Last week I made a more complete statement regarding the demise of the industry, done in the name of free trade, under the guise of promoting market-based economies and democratic governments in developing countries.

The result of these trade agreements on the textile and apparel industry in the United States has been a flood of imports and a significant impact on employment. In my own state, the loss of textile and apparel jobs has been particularly devastating. Since 1987, South Carolina has lost nearly one-third of all textile jobs and over 50 percent of all its apparel jobs.

Another concern I have is how our legislation impacts our broader foreign policy and drug control objectives. I am concerned that as we propose to drastically increase container shipping through the Caribbean, we will be exposing our Nation to the potential for a tremendous increase in illicit drug imports.

Mr. President, the key to resolving many of our hemispheric problems is coordinating our criminal justice efforts, defense requirements, foreign policy, and economic and trade strategy toward Latin American countries. We cannot afford to look at these in isolation of one another.

Finally, let me highlight some of the more dangerous elements of legislation which some in Congress are proposing. While the Senate bill alleviates some of the worst of these issues, I want the record to be clear on why these provisions must never become law. If, by some chance, this bill moves to a conference with the House, there may be an effort to incorporate some of these proposals. This would be a terrible mistake.

There are some in Congress who would favor the quota-free entry into the United States for apparel made in the Caribbean Basin countries from fabric produced anywhere in the world. Such a provision would void the Uruguay Round Agreement on Textiles and Clothing.

flawed proposal is the Another scheme to use Tariff Preference Levels. whereby fabric produced anywhere in the world may be used in apparel sewn in the Caribbean Basin countries and imported duty-free and quota-free into the United States. Such preferences are permitted under NAFTA. Canada has used its preferences to export into the United States textile and apparel products made of non-North American varns and fabrics. This violation of NAFTA has permitted $300 million from textile mills in Europe and Asia to severely damage U.S. manufacturers of wool suits and wool fabrics as well as other U.S. producers. Likewise, Mexico is now sending textiles and apparel made from cheap Asian yarns and fabrics into the United States. Tariff Preference Levels are bad for the American textile and apparel industry and for its workers. They must not be permitted to be extended further.

Perhaps the worst provisions proposed in the House bill are those related to transshipment. Transshipment is the practice of producing textile and apparel goods in one country, and shipping it to the United States using the quota and tariff preferences reserved for a third country. The most egregious part of the House bill is that it fails to provisions include for origin verification identical to those in Article 506 of the North American Free Trade Act. This could lead to Africa and the Caribbean Basin being used as an illegal transshipment point by Asian manufacturers. It would encourage the use of non-U.S. produced fiber and fabric in apparel goods entering the United States duty-free.

Finally, the House bill grants overly generous privileges and preferences to African and the Caribbean Basin countries in a unilateral fashion. There is little incentive for these countries to grant reciprocal access for products made in the United States.

Mr. President, there is no question that unfair trade policies have negatively impacted employment levels in this important sector of our economy. There is no reason to believe the trade bills we are debating will lead to a different result. Furthermore, these bills raise serious national defense and foreign policy questions. Finally, many provisions, which unfortunately might be included in the final legislative product, would cause unnecessary harm to the textile and apparel industry in the United States. The textile and apparel firms may survive as they adapt to our legislative actions and changing economic conditions. American textile workers may not be so fortunate. This is my main concern—for those textile and apparel workers who work hard, pay their taxes and raise their families. This is why I have reservations about this bill.

Mr. President, that is also why I am proposing an amendment to this bill. My amendment would correct an injustice in the current Trade Adjustment Assistance Program. If you accept the premise that it is good policy for the Senate to enact legislation that will result in Americans losing their jobs, then you must agree that Trade Adjustment Assistance is a program which deserves our support. This program provides extended unemployment insurance coverage and retraining benefits to displaced workers. It is the least we can do for the Americans working in the textile and apparel industry who will lose their jobs because of this bill.

My amendment would correct weaknesses in the current program. The Department of Labor would have 30 days to certify that the employees who are going to lose or who have lost their jobs would be eligible for the highest possible level of benefits available under the Trade Adjustment Assistance Program.

Mr. President, I call up amendment number 2410 and ask for its immediate consideration.

Mr. President, this amendment is very simple. It clarifies that textile workers who lose their job as a result of plant closure or relocation or as a result of a decrease in production or sales, shall receive trade adjustment assistance benefits from the Department of Labor. These benefits shall be the same as those available to workers who become employed as a result of NAFTA-related job losses.

I urge support for this amendment. It is the least we can do for the thousands of Americans who are going to lose their jobs as a result of this legislation. I yield the floor.

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, I ask for a voice vote on amendment No. 2410 at this time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 2410) was agreed to

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, for the information of our colleagues, I think we are getting close to a vote on the Feingold amendment momentarily, or in the next few moments, and a vote on final passage.

First, I want to compliment Senator ROTH and Senator MOYNIHAN for their leadership in managing this bill. This wasn't the easiest bill in the world to manage. They handled it professionally and with great class. I think we are getting ready to pass a good bill. I think we are going to pass a bill that proves, one, the Senate in 1999 is not isolationist and protectionist. It proves we can help a lot of our fellow people across the world by expanding trade, whether they be in Africa or whether they be in the Caribbean nations. We want to help them through trade, which we believe is mutually beneficial.

So I particularly compliment the two managers of this bill for their outstanding work and bringing to a close a bill that I think will be a real compliment to the first session of this Congress

AMENDMENT NO. 2480

(Purpose: To provide a waiver of a section 901(j) denial of foreign tax credit in the national interest of the United States, and to expand trade and investment opportunities for U.S. companies and workers)

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows: The Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. Nickles] proposes an amendment numbered 2480.

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

At the appropriate place in the bill, insert the following:

SEC. . APPLICATION OF DENIAL OF FOREIGN TAX CREDIT REGARDING TRADE AND INVESTMENT WITH RESPECT TO CERTAIN FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 901(j) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (relating to denial of foreign tax credit, etc., regarding trade and investment with respect to certain foreign countries) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(5) WAIVER OF DENIAL.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Paragraph (1) shall not apply with respect to taxes paid or accrued to a country if the President—

"(i) determines that a waiver of the application of such paragraph is in the national interest of the United States and will expand trade and investment opportunities for U.S. companies in such country, and

"(ii) reports such waivers under paragraph

"(B) REPORT.—Not less than 30 days before the date on which a waiver is granted under this paragraph, the President shall report to Congress—

"(\overline{i}) the intention to grant such waiver, and "(\overline{i} i) the reason for the determination under subparagraph (A)(\overline{i}).".

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by this section shall apply on or after February 1, 2001.

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, the essence of this amendment is to allow the President of the United States a waiver to section 901, which denies foreign tax credits if he determines it is in the national interest of the United States and also to expand trade and investment opportunities for U.S. companies and workers.

Again, I appreciate the cooperation of both managers of this bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate on the amendment?

Mr. ROTH. I call for a voice vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 2480) was agreed to.

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. NICKLES. I thank my colleagues.

AMENDMENT NO. 2402

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, I call up the Dorgan amendment No. 2402.

There is no further debate on this amendment. I ask that we proceed with a voice vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate on the amendment? If not, the question is on agreeing to the amendment.

AMENDMENT NO. 2427

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, we are now prepared to return to Senator Fein-GOLD's amendment, No. 2427 and proceed with the vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion to table amendment No. 2427. On this question, the yeas and nays have been ordered, and the clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. NICKLES. I announce that the Senator from Arizona (Mr. McCain) is necessarily absent.

Mr. REID. I announce that the Senator from Hawaii (Mr. INOUYE), the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. KENNEDY), and the Senator from Wisconsin (Mr. KOHL) are necessarily absent.

I further announce that, if present and voting, the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. Kennedy) would vote "no."

The result was announced—yeas 66, nays 29, as follows:

MODIFICATION TO AMENDMENT NO. 2505

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the previously agreed to managers' amendment be modified with a technical change which is at the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The modification is as follows:

SEC. 621. SENSE OF THE SENATE REGARDING TARIFF INVERSIONS.

It is the sense of the Senate that United States trade policy should, while taking into account the conditions of United States producers, especially those currently facing tariff phase-outs negotiated under prior trade agreements, place a priority on the elimination or amelioration of tariff inversions that undermine the competitiveness of United States consuming industries.

AMENDMENT NO. 2325

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the yeas and nays be vitiated on the substitute amendment and the amendment be agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment (No. 2325) was agreed to.

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, I further ask unanimous consent that the cloture motion on the underlying bill be vitiated and the bill be read a third time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The question is on the engrossment of the amendments and third reading of the bill.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read a third time.

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There appears to be a sufficient sec-

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, this is a difficult vote for me. This bill contains provisions I support such as the reauthorization of the Trade Adjustment Assistance Act (TAA) and the Africa Growth and Opportunity Act. But the CBI provision of the bill is troubling because it extends benefits unilaterally without assurances that reciprocal trade benefits will be granted to U.S. products.

However, with the adoption of the Levin-Moynihan amendment some progress is assured because under this amendment, the President would be required to take into consideration the extent to which a country provides internationally recognized worker rights, including child labor, collective bargaining, the use of forced or coerced labor, occupational health and safety and labor standards before the trade benefit can be granted.

The adoption of this amendment is a major reason I have decided to vote for this bill.

I hope this provision can be further strengthened in Conference. However, at a minimum, Senator MOYNIHAN has assured me a strong effort will be made to retain the provision in Conference.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that an analysis of the amendment be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

COMPARISON OF LEVIN-MOYNIHAN AMENDMENT WITH UNDERLYING BILL

(Criteria for Designating CBTEA Beneficiary Country)

Under the Senate bill prior to adoption of the Levin-Moynihan amendment, to designate a beneficiary CBTEA country, the President must determine that a country has demonstrated a commitment to three things: (I) undertake its obligations under the WTO on or ahead of schedule; (II) participate in negotiations toward the completion of the FTAA or a comparable trade agreement; and (III) undertake other steps necessary for that country to become a party to the FTAA or a comparable trade agreement.

It then allows the President to consider ten criteria for making the determination that a country has demonstrated a commitment to the above three things. Among the ten criteria that can be considered is; the extent to which a country provides protection of intellectual property rights; the extent to which the country provides protections to investors and investment of the U.S. and; the extent to which the country provides internationally recognized worker rights.

The Levin-Moynihan amendment would require that in designating a beneficiary country, the President must consider the extent to which that country has demonstrated a commitment to each of the 13 criteria in the underlying bill. In other words, the Levin-Moynihan amendment elevates the criteria in the underlying bill to a mandatory status for consideration. Under this amendment, the President, in designating a country as a CBTEA country, must take into account, for instance, the extent to which the country provides internationally recognized worker rights, including:

(a) the right of association, (b) the right to organize and bargain collectively, (c) prohibition on the use of any form of coerced or compulsory labor, (d) a minimum age for the employment of children, and (e) acceptable conditions of work with respect to minimum wages, hours of work, and occupational safety and health.

Some of the other specifically recognized items for mandatory consideration in our amendment are: (a) whether the country has met specific counter-narcotics certification criteria, (b) the extent to which the country becomes a party to and implements the Inter-American Convention Against Corruption, (c) the extent to which the country affords to products of the U.S. tariff treatment that is no less favorable then the most favorable tariff treatment provided by the country to any other country pursuant to any free trade agreement to which such a country is a party, other then the Central American Common Market or the Caribbean Community and Common Market.

Under the Levin-Moynihan amendment consideration of these items is no longer just an option. The President must take these factors into consideration.

Mr. KOHL. Mr. President, this bill was not an easy bill for me to support. While I believe that fostering trade with our neighbors leads to growth both here and abroad, I also know that some companies use trade to take advantage of foreign low wage workers. I had hoped that this bill would take stronger measures to ensure that labor and environmental rights received greater respect.

I opposed cloture initially on this bill because it would unfairly limit the ability to improve the bill. After an agreement was worked out to allow trade related amendments, I decided to support cloture to move the legislation forward. I supported amendments that would have required labor and environmental agreements and stricter oversight of imports to avoid trans-shipment. I was disappointed that these amendments were not agreed to, but I encourage the conferees to continue fighting for these important issues

Some important changes were made. The Senate included a provision to help our farmers cope with the negative effects of trade agreements. This Trade Adjustment Assistance for farmers parallels the Trade Adjustment Assistance program that has helped so many industrial workers. Senator HARKIN offered an amendment that will go a long way toward eliminating child labor in these developing countries if they hope to take advantage of the benefits in this legislation. This provision makes the bill more humane, and reflects our moral values, not just our economic interests.

While the bill is not perfect, increasing opportunity for some of the poorest countries is an important goal and deserves the support of the Senate. The countries of the Caribbean and sub-Saharan Africa know that trade and investment coupled with aid programs are more effective than foreign aid alone. The countries involved support this bill and look forward to a chance to sell their products in our market.

The struggle for labor standards is a long road, but that journey cannot start if people do not have jobs. There is no way to improve working conditions for the unemployed. Only when trade and investment bring jobs to these countries will workers be able to organize and fight for better conditions. Many of these countries are new democracies that have much to learn about the benefits of protecting their workers. We should remember that the United States is a democracy that is 225 years old, and that the backbone of our labor laws are only 65 years old. Those laws did not come easily. There was a long, bitter, and sometimes bloody fight before the United States saw the wisdom of protecting workers rights. We need to continue our efforts, both at the government and non-governmental level, to convince these countries to follow our example. Unfortunately, our trade negotiators have only recently come to the conclusion that labor rights matter to workers here and abroad.

Making access to the U.S. market difficult is not going to improve the lot of workers in Africa and the Caribbean. The more we do to engage these countries and improve the climate for investment, the closer these countries get to moving out of poverty and toward prosperity.

• Mr. McCAIN. Mr. President, I am, unfortunately, unable to be present for this vote, but would like to express my support for the final passage of the amended version of H.R. 434, the African Growth and Opportunity Act. This legislation includes a modified version of the African Growth and Opportunity Act, the United States-Caribbean Basin Trade Enhancement Act, and reauthorization of the Generalized System of Preferences (GSP) and Trade Adjustment Assistance (TAA) programs.

This legislation will end up helping more than 1 billion people begin to enjoy the benefits of democracy and the free market system. Unfortunately when most Americans think of recent politics in Sub-Saharan Africa and the Caribbean, they only think of dictatorships, civil wars, and people crushed in the grip of poverty. It is a compelling portrait and shows the necessity of this legislation.

However, there is hope in the nightly news reports. Both in the Caribbean and in Africa, democracy and economic development are emerging from the shambles of the past. According to a 1998 global survey by Freedom House. 30 countries in Africa are now politically free or partially free. In addition, these countries are beginning to pursue policies of economic development that will help their citizens rise above the debilitating poverty of the past. In 1998, while the Asian economic crisis pummelled other countries, Africa's economies actually grew by an average rate of 3.1 percent.

Democracy and market economics also are established in the Caribbean. The civil wars in El Salvador, Nicaragua, and Guatemala have ended. Unfortunately, many of these countries are still suffering from the effects of Hurricanes Mitch and Georges, and need these trade benefits to rebuild their economies.

This year's elections in Nigeria and South Africa, and the upcoming election in Guatemala, exemplify the democratic developments in Africa and the Caribbean. As the bulwark of freedom and liberty, the United States must do all that it can to ensure that democracy and market economics continue to spread and grow. This legislation is crafted to aid these transformations.

The African Growth and Opportunity Act establishes a special GSP program to give duty and quota-free treatment to selected African textiles and goods, and enhances cooperation between the United States and Sub-Saharan Africa. It is my hope that the President will use the provisions of this legislation to seriously pursue a free trade agreement with the leaders of Sub-Saharan African countries. The United States-Caribbean Basin Trade Enhancement Act grants selected exports from Caribbean nations the duty- and quota-free treatment that has benefitted Mexico in the North American Free Trade Agree-

Finally, the reauthorization of the GSP program helps many other developing countries benefit from preferential trade treatment. These GSP provisions will help developing countries become members of the global community and prosper in the growing world marketplace. Also, this legislation will reinforce the core American values of freedom and equal opportunity that are a cornerstone of our great country. This legislation is based on the commonsense principle that if you give a nation a handout, you feed it for a day, but if you teach its people to grow and trade, you assist them in becoming independent and self-reliant.

This legislation also helps U.S. workers and companies. U.S. exports to the Caribbean nations exceeded $19 billion last year, and produced a $2 billion trade surplus. This trade has created 400,000 American jobs. In 1998, the United States exported $6.5 billion in goods to Sub-Saharan Africa. This trade supported over 100,000 American jobs. However, the United States only has a 7% share in the African market, while Europe has a 40% share. More U.S. trade and investment in both the Caribbean and Sub-Saharan Africa will increase U.S. market share and create more American jobs.

While I support this legislation, I believe that it can be improved during the conference with our colleagues from the House side. The House-passed version of the African Growth and Opportunity Act includes programs under the auspices of the Export-Import Bank and Overseas Private Investment Corporation that will give American companies incentives to invest in Africa. Also, I am concerned that the Congressional Budget Office estimates that "almost no apparel imports would qualify for special treatment" under the textile provisions of the Finance Committee amendment. The Housepassed version of the bill removes quotas and duties on all African textile imports, and will be of much greater benefit to the African nations as well as to the U.S. It is my hope that the conferees will adopt these provisions in the House-passed version of the African Growth and Opportunity Act. These measures will ensure true economic development and increased U.S. market access in Africa.

In addition, I have some concerns about the provision of the bill referring to the excise tax collected on rum. This provision increases by $3.00 the amount of the excise tax on rum that is transferred to Puerto Rico and the U.S. Virgin Islands retroactively from June 30, 1999, to October 1, 1999. The bill earmarks $0.50 of this tax for the Puerto Rico Conservation Trust Fund. I am aware of the importance of helping our territories to become economically self-reliant, while also protecting their environments. However, I believe that we should look at more efficient ways to achieve this goal. It makes no sense for the federal government to collect a tax and then turn it all back over to the territories. I hope that this provision will be stricken from this legislation, and that we can more thoroughly examine how to help our territories achieve economic growth without unnecessary federal bureaucracy and taxation.

I am also concerned about certain other provisions that have found their way into this legislation. This legislation includes a provision to extend TAA benefits to farmers and fishermen. I know that the collapse of foreign markets abroad has hurt American farmers and believe that this issue should be given more consideration. I am also concerned by provisions included for Oregon power plant workers to apply for TAA benefits after their eligibility has expired, provisions to allow a company with operations in Connecticut and Missouri to obtain a refund on duties it paid on imports of nuclear fuel assemblies, and $2 million earmark for a two-vear study on how American Land Grant Colleges and not-for-profit international organizations can improve the flow of American farming techniques and practices for African farmers. These measures should be examined in the usual authorization process to ensure that it is considered on merit and not special interests. It should not be attached to this legislation when Senators have not had a chance to examine the costs and benefits.

In conclusion, I support this historic legislation to ensure the progress of democracy and economic development in Africa, the Caribbean, and other developing countries. By promoting freedom and interdependence, the United States can help millions of people live in a future without repression where any child's potential is limited only by their dreams.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, I rise today to speak on an issue of utmost importance to American suit manufacturers in New York and around the country, an issue that my colleague PAT MOYNIHAN has been fighting on for many years.

I am referring to an anomaly in America's tariff policy that harms

American companies like Hickey-Freeman, Pietrafesa, and other producers of fine wool suits.

Our response will determine whether this country will be able to support companies that manufacture suits with a "Made in America" label.

My general belief is that free trade is a boon to the overall economy. But our wool tariff policy is a patchwork quilt of part free trade, part high tariff, part no tariff: policies stitched together with no rhyme or reason as to how it will impact U.S. companies and consumers.

Under the current tariff schedule, U.S. suit companies that must import the very high quality wool fabric used to make high-end men's suits pay a tariff of 30 percent on that fabric. These American companies, in turn, compete with companies that import finished wool suits from other countries, which pay a 19 percent tariff on the finished suit. And since the NAFTA agreement, U.S. importers of suits made in Canada and Mexico pay no tariff whatever.

And those Canadian and Mexican suit manufacturers pay no, or very low, duties on their imported wool fabric from Italy and elsewhere. They, in effect, get a perfectly free ride into the U.S. market, while American clothing companies, employing American textile workers, have to pay to play.

Where is the consistency here? All we have today are randomly placed zero, 19 percent, or 30 percent tariffs with no concern over the big picture: American companies and American jobs.

In fact, U.S. companies have been fighting a war of attrition for nearly ten years, a war which they are slowly losing, due solely to American laws.

So we are now at a crossroads.

Some domestic fabric manufacturers support the tariff policies because they argue that Hickey-Freeman and other high-end suit manufacturers ought to buy their fabric here in the U.S. That would be great—if there was ample domestic supply of the fabric these suit companies require: But there is not.

According to leading American fabric manufacturers, U.S.-produced high-end wool fabric supply falls short of demand by more than 2.5 million square meters. That leaves Hickey-Freeman, a Rochester, New York, institution since 1899, Pietrafesa of Syracuse New York, and dozens of other fine suit manufacturers with two options: import more than half of their wool fabric at a 30 percent tariff, or shift their operations to countries where they will not be hindered by the restrictive added costs they face here.

In other words, these American companies are virtually compelled to move their operations out of the U.S. by these irrational U.S. laws.

That is why the textile workers unions are fighting hard to repeal these unfair tariff policies. Indeed, since 1991, fine suit manufacturers in New York and around the country have been forced to close dozens of manufacturing facilities, and lay off more than 10,000 employees.

Don't get me wrong: I support the idea of free trade. I believe that our nation is the strongest and most prosperous on earth, and in such a strong global leadership position, due to our open trading system, and our principles of free trade which we help instill on other nations around the world.

But what I'm talking about today is not free trade. It is a hodge-podge of non-sensical trade laws. These wool tariffs give the advantage to foreign companies in other countries in their ability to compete in our market.

All I ask for is a level playing field—I believe that under fair trade and competition the U.S. worker and U.S. industries will prevail. But they will not be given a chance if the deck is stacked against them. Under current law, the game is fixed.

Now, I recognize that good faith negotiations are ongoing between American fine wool suit manufacturers, domestic wool producers, Senators MOYNIHAN and ROTH, Members of this body from interested states, and the White House. Senator MOYNIHAN has, for many years, made this unfair wool tariff a cornerstone of his efforts to ensure fair trade. And I am doing what I can to help move these negotiations along.

But I want to make clear that we need to resolve this issue as soon as possible. The American fine suit industry and their employees can wait no longer. Too many jobs have already been lost due to these tariffs, and too many more remain on the line.

The trade package currently under consideration in the Senate provides the best opportunity to finally provide economic justice to American companies struggling to compete in a global trading system which is still struggling to work out its kinks.

I believe that reasonable minds will resolve this issue when the facts are clear to all involved. And the main fact is that loyal, productive, U.S. companies are currently at a serious disadvantage in its own home economy. That should not stand.

AMENDMENTS NO. 2379 AND NO. 2483

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Mr. President, I rise to explain my reasons for voting to table amendments No. 2379 and No. 2483 sponsored by Senator Hollings. The two amendments would have required the United States to negotiate side agreements with the countries named in the African Growth and Opportunity Act and the United States-Caribbean Basin Trade Enhancement Act concerning labor standards and the environment similar to the North American Agreement on Labor Cooperation and the North American Agreement on Environmental Cooperation. Mandating that the United States negotiate agreements before providing the benefits granted to these countries under this act would have had the effect of nullifying the bill.

Labor and environmental issues should be considered when negotiating trade agreements. In today's global economy, the economic actions of one country can have profound implications for the entire world economy. We witnessed this firsthand with the recent global economic crisis. Just as the economic decisions of one person in Indonesia can have significant consequences for someone in Germany, the living standards, working conditions, and the environment standards of workers in Peru or Malaysia can have an impact on our workers here in the United States.

The two amendments offered by Senator HOLLINGS have admirable goals, however they are unworkable in the context of this bill. Because this bill calls for the United States to take the unilateral action of reducing tariffs on a wide range of products in order to provide incentive for these countries to develop their economies, it would be out of place to mandate negotiations that were designed to accompany bilateral trade agreements. If we are serious about protecting workers and the environment, we should include them as part of a bilateral negotiation when our trading partners will have obligations to fulfill.

Our goal with this bill is to improve and grow the economies of sub-Saharan Africa and the Caribbean Basin. We are doing this by opening our markets in the hope that these economies will integrate into the world economy as responsible trading partners and will develop as future markets for our exports.

The two amendments offered by Senator Hollings would have had the effect of neutralizing the underlying bill to support economic development in sub-Saharan Africa and the Caribbean Basin. I could support similar amendments when they are raised in the context of trade agreements when side agreements can be enforced.

TARIFFS ON WOOL FABRICS

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, I rise to commend the chairman and ranking member for their efforts on an issue that is important to workers in Illinois, as well as those in New York and other states. Specifically, I refer to their efforts and leadership in addressing the need to modify tariffs on wool fabrics used in the men's suit industry. I am proud to be an original cosponsor of S. 218 introduced by Senator Moy-NIHAN at the beginning of this year, and have worked with both Senators from New York and many other colleagues on both sides of the aisle, on this issue.

Because of a loophole in NAFTA, Canadian suitmakers have become our largest source of imported suits at the expense of tens of thousands of American workers who have seen their plants close. I am a supporter of NAFTA—I voted for it and I believe it is good trade policy for our country. However, as part of NAFTA, concessions were made by our U.S. negotiators to allow Canada to bring Canadian manufactured suits in to the United States, duty-free. Canada proceeded by removing its tariffs on imported wool fabrics, setting up a situation where its manufacturers could import the same fine wool fabrics American manufacturers import, manufacture a suit in Canada, and export that suit to the United States, without paying a single tariff. Our U.S. manufacturers are forced to pay over 30 percent in tariffs for this same fine wool fabric. All our manufacturers ask for from us is to provide a level playing field on which they can compete.

This has been a difficult issue to resolve because of the various stakeholders involved. However, unless the final trade bill offers some relief for this industry, more Americans will lose their jobs as a result of our own U.S. trade policies.

The pending amendment will allow this issue to be resolved in conference, and I commend both our majority and minority committee leaders for their efforts.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, I also thank my chairman for his work. and that of his staff, in addressing an issue that I have worked on for many years. I first started this effort with my friend Congresswoman Louise SLAUGHTER a number of years ago. Since that time even more Americans have lost their jobs as a result of tariffs on wool fabric—fabric that is not produced in the quantity and quality needed by our domestic industry. I believe that we are close to finalizing an approach to finally resolve this issue, and I commend the chairman for his willingness to work with us on this important matter.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, on behalf of the thousands of workers in New York, I join my colleagues in thanking both Chairman ROTH and Senator MOYNIHAN for their work on this issue. Earlier this year I was visited by one of these workers, Mr. Fred Cotraccia, a Shop Steward for Hickey-Freeman of Rochester, NY. At that time he explained to me the importance of providing relief to the suit manufacturing industry, and he presented me with a teddy bear dressed in an American-made, hand-made, fine wool fabric suit. In a letter from him accompanying the bear he says, "Please stand up for American jobs . . . My livelihood and the livelihood of thousands of other hard working American employees, depends on you supporting our jobs—please choose 'made in America.'''

A number of my Senate colleagues received a similar type letter, and a similar request to help save their jobs. I believe we have made significant strides in finding a way to provide relief to this industry at the expense of no one, but to the benefit of many.

Mr. KERRY. Today we must vote on a package of bills that are intended to promote trade and thereby lift-up the economies of sub-Saharan African and Carribean Basin nations. I believe strongly in that premise. I believe that free and fair trade can improve the lives of workers in developing nations and is vital to improve our economy at home. On balance, this achieves those goals, and I therefore support it.

Much of the debate surrounding this package of trade bills has centered on the provisions dealing with Africa. This is proper, as it is the AGOA portion of the bill that I am most concerned about. Many argue that AGOA is the last chance for Africa to develop a textile industry. In 2005, current quotas on textiles from Asia and other parts of the world will be lifted. If we lift those quotas on sub-Saharan African countries now, those countries may have some chance to develop their textile industry in the next five years, before Asia—especially China—has a chance to dominate textile manufacturing. If Africa does not develop its textile industry now, there is no way it will be able to compete with China in 2005. This would not only hurt African nations, who will be without a textile industry, but it will hurt US apparel manufacturers, who will have one less resource to produce their products and will be forced to send more of their work to China.

That said, this bill fails to address many of the crucial problems facing Africa, and it would be tragic if this were the final word on Africa. First, this bill fails to address the perhaps the single greatest barrier to economic growth and development in Africa: the spread of AIDS. Unless our efforts to combat this epidemic are bolstered immediately, this public health disaster will result in severe economic distress for African countries. The effect of this disease, which strikes people in their most economically productive years, cannot be ignored if we expect these countries to be effective trading partners. It is imperative and entirely appropriate to include AIDS relief in this legislation. A recent study in Namibia estimated that AIDS cost the country almost 8 percent of its GNP in 1996. Another analysis predicts that Kenya's GDP will be 14.5 percent smaller in 2005 than it would have been without AIDS, and that income per person will be 10 percent lower.

The microeconomic outlook is not much better. Businesses across sub-Saharan Africa are already suffering at the hands of HIV. In Zimbabwe, for instance, life insurance premiums grew four-fold in just two years because of AIDS deaths. Some companies there have reported a doubling of their health bills. In Botswana, companies estimate that AIDS-related costs will soar from under one percent of wages in 1999 to five percent by 2005. In Zambia and Tanzania, some companies have already reported that costs resulting from AIDS-related health costs and lower productivity have exceeded total profits. Without addressing a health crisis of this enormity, we are ignoring one of the most important impediments to development of the African continent.

The second concern I have with the AGOA bill is that it ignores the great albatross of debt that hangs around the neck of the African people and is a tremendous impediment to their economic growth and development. AGOA provides no debt relief to Africa, despite the fact that Africa's crushing $230 billion debt burden is a massive obstacle to economic and social progress. By ending the vicious circle of debt and debt servicing, debt relief for Africa would open the way for private investment in African enterprises. investment that is critical to the longterm development and growth of every economy.

I believe that the United States should play a prominent role in reducing the debt burden of nations that are unable to achieve sustainable economic growth and development under the constraint of servicing their national debts. Our economic relationship with Africa must take the long view and advance policies that will build a solid basis for continued growth, rather than simply extending the short-sighted, debt-centered policies of decades past.

Unfortunately, many amendments that would have begun to address the weaknesses of the AGOA bill failed on the Senate floor. I supported amendments that would have improved labor and environmental standards and that bluow have better addressed transhipment concerns. Although those amendments failed, I will, nevertheless, support this package, not because I am fully satisfied with its treatment of Africa, but because as a whole, the package includes other important trade measures that will not only bolster the economies of developing nations, but will have a positive economic impact here at home. I have long been a proponent of Trade Adjustment Assistance as a way to help U.S. workers and industries that have been harmed by trade. The Generalized System of Preferences is also a crucial to developing countries by stimulating their exports. I am pleased that this package includes these very important programs.

Finally, the CBI portion of the package will put our neighbors in the Caribbean on more equal footing with Mexico. By providing duty free treatment to apparel assembled in the Caribbean basin only if US fabrics are used, this bill will strengthen the economy and long term stability of Caribbean Basin countries. This will go a long way to help them to recover from the extensive damage they suffered during Hurricanes Mitch and Georges. The U.S. has a trade surplus with Caribbean Basin which has led to more and better jobs in my home state of Massachusetts and throughout the country.

Because the balance of the package of trade bills before us today is favorable, I support the bill with the sincere hope that we revisit the issues of concern to sub-Saharan Africa soon.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, we have stepped back from the brink. A week ago it appeared that we would reject this essential trade legislation. The first in five years. Weeks before the opening of the Third Ministerial Conference of the World Trade Organization, which will launch a new round of trade negotiations. Here in the United States, in Seattle.

As a tribute to the patience of our esteemed chairman, Senator ROTH, and our leaders Senators LOTT and DASCHLE, we somehow agreed to revive the bill. We now move one step closer to providing the President with legislation that will confirm, when he arrives in Seattle, that the United States Senate remains committed to open trade policies.

I join the chairman of the Finance Committee in urging the Senate's support for this package of trade measures which includes the Finance Committee's sub-Saharan African and CBI trade bills, as well as the reauthorization of the Generalized System of Preferences (GSP) and the Trade Adjustment Assistance (TAA) programs. Each of these measures was approved by the Finance Committee with near unanimous support.

Federal Reserve Board Chairman Greenspan noted, in a speech he delivered in Boston on June 2, the "recent evident weakening of support for free trade in this country." We appear to be turning against trade policies that we have pursued for 65 years. It is hard to understand this in a period when, as the New York Times reported last Friday:

The American economy turned in its best quarterly performance of the year this summer, virtually guaranteeing enough momentum to carry the nation to its longest economic expansion in history early next year.

Let me repeat that last phrase—"its longest economic expansion in history. . . ." Not just peacetime, or just wartime, but "in history."

And what are the benefits of this unprecedented economic expansion—an expansion that started in April 1991, is now in its eighth year, will break the record of 107 months in February 2000, and shows no sign of ending? The answer is clear: an unemployment rate of 4.2 percent—a level not seen in almost 30 years; and near zero inflation.

To what can we attribute this remarkable performance of the American economy?

I dare say that if the Hawley-Smoot Tariff Act of 1930 was one of the causes of World War II, then trade liberalization is one of the reasons for the unprecedented expansion.

Other factors I would cite are just-intime inventories—made possible by the information age, the 1993 deficit reduction act, Alan Greenspan, and perhaps some "good luck."

Given the tremendous transformation of the American economy—between 1960 and 1998 manufacturing employment dropped from 30 to 15 percent of total employment—there inevitably were and will be dislocations. Since 1962 we have eased the cost of dislocation to workers by providing Trade Adjustment Assistance—assistance which will expire at the end of this week. More than 200,000 workers are eligible for trade adjustment assistance. The bill before us would continue Trade Adjustment Assistance, something we ought to do as we enact trade liberalization policies.

I would also note that this legislation reflects our commitment to honor the ILO's core labor standards, a commitment made by all 174 members of the ILO. The Declaration on Fundamental Principles and Rights at Work, adopted at the 86th International Labor Conference, declares that "all members, even if they have not ratified the Convention in question, have an obligation, arising from the very fact of membership in the Organization, to respect, to promote, and to realize, in good faith" these core labor standards; (1) freedom of association and the effective recognition of the right to collective bargaining; (2) the elimination of all forms of forced or compulsory labor; (3) the effective abolition of child labor; and (4) the elimination of discrimination in respect of employment and occupation.

Under the managers' substitute the President must assess the compliance of the CBI and sub-Saharan African countries with these core labor standards—these "internationally recognized worker rights."

The Generalized System of Preferences—which we put in place a quarter century ago—was the United States' response to the plea of developing countries that the industrial world ought to give them an opportunity—and a bit of an incentive—to compete in world markets. The theme then—as today—was that "trade, not aid" would ultimately wean countries from their dependence on foreign aid and help diversify their economies. This legislation will continue this important program.

The bill puts in place—at long last a trade policy with respect to sub-Saharan Africa, a policy that is long overdue. The economic challenges facing sub-Saharan Africa today may be even greater than they were at the height of the cold war. Consider the differing paths of South Korea and Ghana: in 1958, the year after Ghana achieved independence, its per capita GDP, at $203, exceeded that of South Korea ($171 at the time). Forty years later, in 1998, South Korea's per capita income had soared to $10,550, even after the Asian financial crisis, while Ghana's stood at a modest $390.

The Africa trade legislation in this package will not reverse years of neglect and decline, but it may provide a decent start.

And we endorse with this legislation President Reagan's Caribbean Basin Initiative—begun in 1983—updating the program to enable the CBI countries to remain competitive even as the NAFTA has eroded their market positions. The chairman and I met 6 weeks ago with the Presidents and Vice Presidents and Foreign Ministers of a number of the CBI states—the Dominican Republic, Honduras, Trinidad and Tobago, Costa Rica. They made a simple request—that we allow our trade to grow. And so this legislation will do.

This is legislation which deserves strong support here in the Senate, so that we can quickly move to a conference with the House and send the President to Seattle negotiations with the bipartisan backing of trade liberalization.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is, Shall the bill, as amended, pass? The yea and nays have been ordered. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative assistant called the roll.

Mr. NICKLES. I announce that the Senator from Arizona (Mr. McCain) and the Senator from Pennsylvania (Mr. Santorum) are necessarily absent.

Mr. REID. I announce that the Senator from Hawaii (Mr. INOUYE) and the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. KENNEDY) are necessarily absent.

I further announce that, if present and voting, the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. Kennedy) would vote "no"

The result was announced—yeas 76, nays 19, as follows:

The bill (H.R. 434), as amended, was passed.

Mr. ROTH. I move to reconsider the

Mr. MOYNIHAN. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, I want to take a few seconds to thank my colleagues on both sides of the aisle for a very strong bipartisan support for the bill. I also want to extend my thanks to the majority and minority leaders who worked so hard to find the compromise that enabled the legislation to move forward.

Let me underscore and emphasize that we would not be where we are if it had not been for my good friend, Senator MOYNIHAN. His patience, his historical perspective on trade, and the key role he has played through the years were instrumental in getting this legislation through. I want to say I think it gives a clear statement to our neighbors in the Caribbean, Central America, and Africa that we are willing to invest in a long-term economic relationship—a relationship of partners and a common endeavor of expanding trade, enhancing economic growth, and improving living standards.

I also think, most importantly, it will send a very clear signal to our partners around the world that isolationism is dead, that liberal trade policies are still supported overwhelmingly. It signals, I believe, that the United States is prepared to engage constructively in the wider world around us and to provide the kind of leadership necessary to reach our common goals.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New York is recognized.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, I stand here to assert that we would not be here at this moment without the revered chairman of the Committee on Finance. He has kept to a party tradition that goes back generations. He has enabled us, sir, to pass the first trade bill in this Senate in 5 years. We were beginning to send a signal that was ominous and could have been, in the end, ruinous. But we have stepped back from that brink, and we have WILLIAM ROTH of Delaware to thank.

I thank all of our wornout and excellent associates, David Podoff, Debbie Lamb, Linda Menghetti, and Tim Hogan on our side, and all of the majority staff. I see Frank Polk over there, and Grant Aldonas, Faryar Shirzad and Tim Keeler. It is a fine moment. Let us hope we make the most of it. sir.

With great thanks to all, I yield the floor.

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate insist on its amendments, request a conference with the House, and the Chair be authorized to appoint conferees on the part of the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Presiding Officer appointed Mr. Roth, Mr. Grassley, Mr. Lott, Mr. Helms, Mr. Moynihan, Mr. Baucus, and Mr. Biden conferees on the part of the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Illinois.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to speak as in morning business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without that before a person can buy a gun at objection, it is so ordered.

VIOLENCE IN SEATTLE

Mr. DURBIN, Mr. President, during the course of our debate on the floor of the Senate today, we have considered a myriad of important amendments to a very important trade bill. The attention of Senators on both sides of the aisle was focused on the floor, of course, but it was also focused on our Cloakrooms, the rooms that are a few feet away from me. Again, on television, every time we walked in the Cloakroom, we looked up to see another all-news channel with pictures that were incredible. Of course, the footage today comes from the city of Seattle, WA. Seattle, WA, has become another battlefront in America's endless gun war. Seattle, WA, erupted in violence today.

As I stand here now, I don't know if they have been able to apprehend the terrorist who was involved in this. They were searching for him. The latest news suggests that two people are dead and two are critically wounded. I know some eight or nine schools have been locked down with children inside in the surrounding neighborhood, for fear they might become victims of senseless gun violence as well.

One of my colleagues in the Senate, PATTY MURRAY, lives in Seattle, WA, just a few blocks away from the scene. She has been on the phone all day calling her son, a grown man who is working at a business nearby, to make certain he was safe. Her plea to her son to take care, I am sure, has been repeated over and over thousands of times by the residents in Seattle who are worried about their loved ones who might be in the path of another gun terrorist.

This surreal scene that seems to be unfolding in Seattle as we watch the television screen shows SWAT teams going through the neighborhoods of that lovely city with bulletproof shields, trying to find this gun terrorist, schools locked down, people staying behind closed doors for fear if they walk out in the street, they will literally be killed, as two already have

This is what happened today in the State of Washington. But America's families should also know what did not happen today in the city of Washington—Washington, DC. What did not happen today was a meeting between House and Senate conferees to finish work on a commonsense gun control bill to try to keep guns out of the hands of those who would misuse them—kids, criminals, people with a history of violent mental illness.

The Nation was shocked and the Senate was shocked a few months ago with the Columbine killings—shocked into finally doing something. We passed a bill by one vote, the tie-breaking vote being that of Vice President Al Gore, who came to this floor and voted for the bill which provided, very modestly, that before a person can buy a gun at a gun show, we have the right to know whether they have ever been convicted of a violent crime or whether they have a history of violent mental illness.

Is it a radical idea to try to keep guns out of the hands of kids, criminals, and those who are unstable? Most American families don't find that radical. I am glad we passed that bill. We sent it over a few hundred feet away to the House of Representatives so that, in our bicameral Government, they could do their part of the job.

Well, in the ensuing time between it leaving the Senate and arriving in the House, the people with the gun lobbies in Washington got very busy. They lined up enough votes to literally stall and kill that bill. So we have the only attempt in this congressional session for sensible gun control being stopped in its tracks by the gun lobby on Capitol Hill. Yet day after frightening day, another city across the United States of America is subjected to senseless gun violence.

Today, it was Seattle. Yesterday, it was Honolulu, HI, where a man walked into the company where he once worked and killed seven people with a handgun, a man who had a history of psychological problems. When they finally apprehended him and searched his home, they found some 18 different weapons, semiautomatic weapons, shotguns, and handguns—a small arsenal in the hands of a person who was turned down when he attempted to get a firearm owner's permit in 1994.

That was Honolulu yesterday; Seattle today, two more victims.

I need not tell you that nothing happened on Capitol Hill yesterday to deal with gun violence, and nothing happened today as this senseless violence unfolds in Seattle. You have to ask yourself whether the men and women elected to the Senate and to the House of Representatives can walk blindly by the television screens and ignore this endless war of gun violence in America that unfolds every day.

Have we become so oblivious to the pain that is being visited upon America by the proliferation of guns in the hands of those who shouldn't have them? You would have to draw the conclusion that the gun lobby has blinded this Congress to the reality of gun violence in America.

Sadly, what happened in Honolulu yesterday and is happening in Seattle even as we speak is repeated day in and day out across America. We lose 13 children every single day in America, as many children as were killed in Columbine we lose every day in gun violence.

Have we become so callous we can't even feel this any longer, that we don't understand what is happening to our country, this great and noble Nation which has allowed itself to disintegrate into areas of violence that, frankly, people around the world can't even understand? How can this Nation that has so much to say for itself stand by and do literally nothing when it comes to this gun violence?

This Congress has been at its worst when it comes to responding to this national crisis—at its worst. This Congress has been a captive of the gun lobby, unable and unwilling to promote even the most basic and modest provision in the law to protect families across America. We stand idly by.

Some even argue, well, the answer is to give everyone in America a gun. What a solution that would be, the so-called "concealed carry law." So that no matter what restaurant you walk into, what high school basketball game you attend, what mall you stroll through, never knowing if that little argument in the corner is going to erupt into gunfire because people are packing guns right and left. What an answer. That is no answer whatsoever. America's families know it.

Let me tell you something else that recently happened. Senator BOXER of California put a provision in an appropriations bill which said as follows: No licensed gun dealer in the United States can sell a gun to a person they know to be intoxicated. They accepted the amendment on the floor. As soon as it got to conference, the gun lobby took it out. Think about that. They would even want us to allow gun dealers to sell guns to intoxicated people. How irresponsible can you be?

When I tried to put in an amendment that held gun owners who are licensed legally responsible for the safe storage of their own guns away from children—beaten back by the gun lobby, unacceptable. Many States have put that standard in the law. But in Washington we wouldn't even consider it as we see day after weary day children finding the gun cabinet, reaching in, getting a handgun, killing themselves, or some innocent playmate whose family may not have even known there was a gun in the residence.

When we tried to put a provision in the law to say you can't buy more than one gun a month in the United States, unacceptable; one gun a month, unacceptable.

This fellow in Honolulu and others build up a personal arsenal and build up their own psychological problems to the point where they break and turn on innocent people.

I hope those who serve in Congress understand that we will be held accountable and should be held accountable. But I hope even more that families across America who are afraid of gun violence in their communities and who are fed up with what the gun lobby has done to this Congress will speak out. That is the only way this will change. You have to ask your candidate for Congress, the House Member or Senate: Where do you stand? Where are you going to be when it comes to sensible gun control? Will you stand up for the families of America or will you stand up for the gun lobby and the National Rifle Association? It is a very basic question. If it is not asked and answered, the sad reality is that what happened today in Seattle and what happened yesterday in Honolulu could happen in anyone's hometown tomorrow.

We have been told by the chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, Henry Hyde, that it is not likely the conference will meet in the next few days on this gun control bill. That is a shame. We may leave this year doing absolutely nothing to make America's streets safer.

Frankly, this Congress, again, has put first things last. We have done some good things today; we are proud of them, I am sure. But tonight's news will not herald our accomplishments on the Senate floor. Tonight's news reports another tragedy in America, a tragedy in America which this Senate and this House of Representatives refuses to even acknowledge.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas.

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, I can't help but lament that we have an administration that has prosecuted fewer people for gun violations than any administration in modern history. That is something that could be done today. It could have started this afternoon; It could have begun 7 years ago; but it was not.

FINANCIAL SERVICES MODERNIZATION ACT OF 1999—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, it is with great pleasure that under the previous agreement I call up the conference report to accompany S. 900, the Financial Services Modernization Act of 1999.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows: The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 900), to enhance competition in the financial services industry by providing a prudential framework for the affiliation of banks, securities firms, insurance companies, and other financial service providers, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective House as follows:

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House to the text of the bill and agree to the same with an amendment and the House agree to the same.

That the House recede from its amendment to the title of the bill; signed by a majority of the conferees on the part of both Houses.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the Senate will proceed to the consideration of the conference report.

(The conference report is printed in the House proceedings of the RECORD of November 2, 1999.)

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, in case any of our colleagues are watching, let me try to outline what we were going to do tonight.

Senator Sarbanes and I are going to make opening statements tonight. It is our understanding that no one else wishes to speak tonight. Then it would be our objective to reserve the remainder of our time for the debate tomorrow. Then the Senate would begin the process of shutting down for the evening.

Mr. SARBANES. Mr. President, will the chairman yield?

Mr. GRAMM. I am happy to yield.

Mr. SARBANES. Mr. President, as I understand it, there is a time agreement which has been entered into, which I hope all Members are aware of, with 4 hours equally divided between the chairman and the ranking member. There is an hour for Senator SHELBY, and an hour for Senator WELLSTONE, 30 minutes for Senator BRYAN, and 20 minutes for Senator DORGAN.

I understand Senator Wellstone intends to be here in the morning at 9:30 to start using his time, which is when the Senate will come in. I presume we will then work right straight through.

I think we ought to say to Members that we intend to try to carry this thing through to completion and run our time straight through, which would enable us to finish this bill by mid afternoon.

I understand the House would like to act on this matter yet tomorrow. Of course, that would be assisted, if we could move it through the Senate in a reasonable time.

Parliamentary inquiry: If quorum calls are registered, is the time then drawn down equally from allocations of time?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Only by unanimous consent. Otherwise, it is charged to the side to which it is assigned.

Mr. SARBANES. I am sure the chairman and I can work that out between us. I think it would be our intention not to have quorum calls. We want people to come and use this time, and not end up drawing it down.

I think we ought to, in effect, alert our Members to that effect, and also of our desire to be able to move straight through. So for Members who wish to speak beginning about 10:15 or 10:30, the thing will be open for Members to get time and speak on this conference report.

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, I join Senator SARBANES in urging Senators who want to speak on the bill, and I know there will be many, to be here. The clock will run. We will have to take a break right before 12 o'clock to swear in Senator Chafee, but except for that period of time where we will be off this bill, it will be my intention, and I know it is the intention of the leadership on both sides of the aisle, to stay on the bill until we finish it.

Today we are bringing to the floor a bill that has been a long time in the making. When Glass-Steagall was adopted, Franklin Roosevelt called it the most important and far-reaching legislation ever enacted by the American Congress. In fact, Time magazine just yesterday called it the defining financial legislation of the 20th century. Yet, while it is both of those, or has become both of those, Senator Glass almost immediately after the adoption of the Act bearing his name began to have second thoughts and started the process of overturning Glass-Steagall.

We are here today with a bill which I believe will prove to be the most important banking bill in 60 years. It does overturn the key provision of Glass-Steagall that basically divided the American financial system into securities and banking halves. In the process an unnatural competitive environment was created, and over time, the market and the regulators have through a variety of innovations sought to undo this separation.

This bill we bring to the floor of the Senate basically knocks down the barriers in American law that separate banking from insurance and banking from securities. These walls, over time, because of innovative regulators and because of the pressure of the market system, have come to look like very thin slices of Swiss cheese. As a result, we already have substantial competition occurring, but it is competition that is largely inefficient and costly, it is unstable, and it is not in the public interest for this situation to continue.

The Financial Services Modernization Act strikes down these walls and opens up new competition. It will create wholly new financial services organizations in America. It will literally bring to every city and town in America the financial services supermarket.

Americans today spend about $350 billion on financial services—on fees and charges and interest. Most people who have looked at the capacity for our markets under a more rational system believe, as I believe, that there are tens of billions of dollars of savings for the American consumer that will be produced by the reforms of this bill.

This bill will allow Dicky Flatt, a printer in Mexia, Texas, to go to the bank and take the checks he has received in his print shop that day and do his banking, deal with his insurance business, work on the retirement program that he and his wife and his employees have, all in one location with all the efficiencies and synergies that come from that.

This is a dramatic bill that will produce new products. It will produce a diversity of financial services and products that we have never seen before. Because of the competition in allowing these three major industries to compete head on, these products will be produced and these services will be provided at lower prices than we have ever seen.

There has been great debate in the media, and it will go on until the facts are in, as it should. That is what happens in a free society. But when people ask me who benefits from this bill, I answer, everybody who uses financial services will benefit from this bill: Everybody who borrows money, everybody who has a checking account or a credit card, everybody who buys insurance or securities, everybody who is engaged in modern financial transactions. When you sum all that up, that is everybody in America, for all practical purposes.

Once we had decided to tear down these barriers, the logical question was, in providing these new financial services and these new products, how were they going to be provided? Were they going to be provided within the bank itself, or were they going to be provided in a holding company, separated from the bank? We had a very heated debate and, I believe, a debate with very high intellectual content on that subject on the floor of the Senate. It was decided in the Senate by a relatively close vote. It is one of these issues on which everybody's eyes glaze over, but it is an issue that has profound importance.

What we have produced in this bill, which is what is always produced in the legislative process, is a compromise. I think the compromise on the question of whether banks should provide these new services within the bank or outside the bank is a good compromise, and I strongly support it. I want to congratulate Larry Summers, the Secretary of the Treasury, and Alan Greenspan, the Chairman of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, for working out this compromise. I very strongly support it.

The compromise allows banks, under very limited circumstances, to provide some of these expanded services within the bank. Basically, those circumstances try to deal with two problems about which many have been concerned. I have been concerned about them, Alan Greenspan was concerned about them, and others were as well. We were concerned about safety and soundness and concentration of financial activities within a bank, driven by the potential for a bank benefiting from a subsidy because deposits are insured by the taxpayer, because the bank has access to the Fed window in borrowing money at lower rates than anybody else, and because of the bank's access to the Fed wire, and transferring funds risk free.

I believe the compromise deals with that by very severely limiting what banks can do within the bank, requiring that banks, in order to provide even limited financial services within the bank, be extremely well managed and well capitalized. That is, they have to have at least an A rating on their subordinated debt. Subordinated debt is the last debt to be paid, so if you are a bank and you have outstanding subordinated debt, that obligation is paid after the depositors, after the creditors, after everybody. For a bank to have an A or an AA or an AAA rating, it has to be extraordinarily well managed and well capitalized, and banks will not be able to engage in activities within the bank unless they meet that test.

We eliminate the double counting of assets that is inherent in providing these services within the bank. If you provide securities activities and services within the bank by setting up a securities operating subsidiary in the bank, you put capital into that securities business, but because it is under the umbrella of the bank, it counts as part of the capital of the bank even though it is committed to capitalizing the securities business. What we require in this compromise—and I think wisely require—is that we eliminate this double counting by saving the capital that is invested in the subsidiary cannot count as part of the capital of the bank.

We limit all subsidiaries that banks can engage in, and the investments they can make within the bank itself, to no more than 20 percent of the capital of the bank.

So these are very strict limitations. We have an outright prohibition on many activities. In terms of where we started and in terms of the legitimate concerns that were raised on both sides, I think this is a very strong and a very good compromise.

The second major feature of the bill is that we promote and strengthen functional regulation. Under the bill, the general rule is that if you are a bank and you are in the securities business, you are regulated by the Securities and Exchange Commission. If you are a bank and you are in the insurance business, you are regulated by the state insurance commissioner in the area where you are engaged in the insurance business. If you are a bank and you are engaged in banking, you are regulated by the bank regulator. By opting for functional regulation, we preserve consumer protection, we lower

One of the issues on which an extraordinary amount of time was spent and which for 99.99 percent of the American people would be meaningless is the whole issue about swaps and derivatives. We currently have literally trillions of dollars of swaps and derivatives in the global economy that have become the underpinnings of the financial structure of the country. They are used by sophisticated parties. We went to great lengths in this bill not to upset the current regulatory environment for these products, to see that we did not create any new law giving anybody any new, or removing any existing, jurisdiction over swaps or derivatives. I thank Chairman Levitt and Chairman Greenspan for their help on this issue

Probably the most contentious issue in the bill, as it turned out, was not the decision to repeal Glass-Steagall but what to do with the so-called Community Reinvestment Act, or CRA. The CRA was a bill created in 1977, that started out as a very small program, but over the years it has grown to be a very large program with increased enforcement and with greater impact due to the tremendous mergers taking place among financial institutions in America. CRA has literally become bigger than General Motors, Ford, and Chrysler combined. It has evolved in such a way that it not only involves loans but cash payments.

Concerns were raised—and I as chairman of the committee raised many of those concerns—that we needed to begin to see a reform process. We have two changes in the bill that are related to reforming CRA. By far the most important is the sunshine provision. The sunshine provision is very important because it recognizes that banks are making CRA payments as part of compliance practices, that while these payments are made with private funds, they are made under public direction. As a result, this money takes on a very clear government tint because it is paid substantially in part as a way of complying with a Federal mandate that has become a cost of business for people who are engaged in commercial banking in America. Because of the fact that these funds are paid as a result of a Federal mandate and a Federal law and a Federal regulatory process, these funds do take on the characteristic of public funds.

A decision was made in this bill to make two fundamental changes that I believe will change CRA's operation in America. The first was a decision to require a public disclosure and reporting of CRA agreements. I believe this is fundamentally important. If I am a community activist and I am paid $175,000 in cash by a bank to promote objectives within the community, if people who live in the community don't know that I received the $175,000, purportedly to serve the needs of the community, how can they hold me accountable as to how I used the money?

Second, we require on an annual basis both the bank and the recipient of money and things of value under the Community Reinvestment Act to disclose in a report what was done with the money. The language of the bill is very precise and quite demanding on this subject. While we have made a strong effort to give the regulators the ability within this language to reduce regulatory burden and paperwork, the language of the law is very clear, and regulators are given no power to decide to negate or refuse to implement this law as it is written. The language is very clear. The language says in setting out the reporting requirement: "The accounting referred to in [the report] shall include a detailed, itemized list of the uses to which such funds have been made, including compensation, administrative expenses, travel, entertainment, consulting and professional fees paid, and such other categories, as determined by regulation by the appropriate Federal banking agency with supervisory responsibility over insured depository institution."

It is our intent that the regulators clearly have the authority within reason to try to minimize regulatory burden. If some of this information is included in someone's tax return and they want to submit their tax return in lieu of the report, clearly the regulator has the power to allow that to be done and to make the tax return public. If the tax return did not include this information, it could not be accepted in lieu of this information

The flexibility is flexibility in a reasonable enforcement of the law; it is not flexibility on the part of the regulator to decide to negate the law. As chairman, I say when we wrote "detailed" and "itemized," we meant it.

As I have discussed with other Members, if one is talking about taking somebody to lunch at McDonald's—we are talking about de minimus amounts—obviously the regulator has the ability to set rules of reason. If one is talking about expenditures of substantial amounts of money either in individual expenditures or the aggregate of those expenditures, or talking about reporting items specifically listed in the law when we wrote it. we meant it. This is critically important. If one is a CRA activist in a city, and they go to Atlanta to a CRA conference, that is a legitimate expenditure to be reported. People expect to see that on their report. If they went to Hawaii for 3 weeks, that should be reported, and people at the local newspaper would have a right, and I think a responsibility, to ask what they were doing with that expenditure.

What we are trying to do is reasonable. I urge the regulators to comply with the law and enforce it as it has been written.

The second reform of CRA we undertake is regulatory relief. Our ranking member and I got a good laugh out of my arithmetic. Senator BYRD objected to people bringing calculators or computers on the floor, so without the aid of my trusty calculator, I estimated the cost of compliance with CRA was $1 trillion when I meant to say $1 billion. The point is, for small banks, many of whom have fewer than 10 employees, $1 billion is a lot of money. What we have done in regulatory relief is this. We said that every bank in America with less than $250 million in assets will be audited for CRA compliance once every 4 years as the normal audit process if they had a satisfactory rating on their last CRA evaluation. If they had the highest CRA rating, an outstanding, then they would be audited every 5 years. People who work hard to get an outstanding rating would thereby be rewarded.

We put into the language the flexibility, for reasonable cause, that the regulators could go back on a case-by-case basis and reduce or increase the intervals at which such audits would occur. By reasonable cause, we mean based on the actions of the bank, the record of the bank. We are not here giving or intending to give, nor can it be reasonably construed to give to the regulators, any kind of blank check to alter the intention of this law. If they have a finding on a factual basis that something has changed, they have the right, as anyone would expect, to go in and to audit more or less frequently. However, they have to have a finding based on facts.

When this bill came to the floor of the Senate about a year ago, it had two provisions expanding CRA. One was a provision that said that being out of compliance with CRA was a violation of banking law and could have, in extreme circumstances, subjected a bank officer or director to fines of up to $1 million, and could have given the regulator the ability to impose strong sanctions against the bank as well. That provision is not present in this bill.

The second provision of the old bill required a maintenance of a CRA rating in order for a bank to conduct certain activities. That provision is not in this bill. That is critically important, because that would literally have given the regulator the ability to force a financial services holding company, that might have hundreds of billions of dolars in assets in the holding company, to unwind investments as a result of literally one branch being out of compliance with CRA.

This bill is very simple and, again, the language is very precise, and meant to be. It says that on the day you become a financial services holding company, you have to have been in compliance with your last CRA report. In other words, with the last audit that was done, you have to have had one of those two ratings, satisfactory or outstanding. This would be in the last CRA report that was filed, and if you had that rating, you are automatically qualified.

Once a company becomes a financial services holding company, they can invest any amount of their money and grow any activity already in engaged in within the financial services holding company, without regard to CRA. If they want to commence a new activity, on the date they make that undertaking they have to have been in compliance with CRA as certified on their last CRA report. This does not trigger a new audit. This does not entertain any new protest. It simply is a verification by the regulator that on that day of commencing their new activity, their most recent evaluation will have shown that they had at least a satisfactory CRA rating.

The next issue we dealt with was financial privacy. When we dealt with the bill in the Senate, this had not yet become an issue that had inflamed the public's consciousness. We adopted the provisions of the minority substitute related to privacy, and it basically had to do with people who willfully misrepresent themselves to get financial data. We come down on them like a ton of bricks, as we should. But by the time the House acted, financial privacy had become a substantial issue, and the House included very extensive privacy provisions.

We have made changes to those privacy provisions, and I believe we have strengthened them, and we have made the bill better. I want to very briefly say a couple of things about privacy.

Obviously, in the new world in which we live, we have become accustomed to people knowing a great deal about us. The day I turned 50, I got a kit from AARP with all kinds of applications for AARP and a tube of Preparation H. One might say my privacy was invaded, that somehow AARP found out I was 50 years old. My children got a great laugh out of the Preparation H. One could say that somehow my privacy had been breached, but do we really want a society where an organization such as AARP cannot get access to information about when we turn 50 and invite us to join? I chose not to join because 50 sounded younger every minute to me; 57 sounds younger than it used

I have hunting dogs, and like many people who have enlightened habits, I subscribe to Gun Dog magazine. I guess because I subscribe to Gun Dog magazine, I get every hunting catalog, every fishing catalog, every dog food catalog, every dog accessory catalog on the planet. I literally get two or three of them a week. Quite frankly, I love getting them.

Did Gun Dog magazine violate my most intimate secrets by selling the list so that I get, every once in a while, free samples of dog food or dog bones or a dried pig's ear? I get a lot of things in the mail. I do not think my privacy is being violated. Maybe some people object to that, but I do not.

What I have tried to do, and what I think we have done in this bill, is we tried to set a rule of reason. Above the archway going into Delphi, the ancient Greeks wrote: Moderation in all things. It is a hard thing for somebody who feels as strongly about things as I do to remember, but everyone should remember it.

We did not want to kill off the information age before it was ever born. We are not writing the final word on privacy. This is something we want to watch and follow and see where abuses are and, when they occur, try to fix them. But, on the other hand, we all benefit. Some people could say we lose.

I do not get a Neiman Marcus catalog. One might ask: How come I do not? Neiman Marcus catalogs cost a lot of money to print and mail, and they have somehow figured out enough about me to figure that I do not buy luxury items, so they do not send me a Neiman Marcus catalog. Again, is that an invasion of my privacy? Is my freedom somehow diminished? I do not think so. The point is, if Neiman Marcus can get the catalog to people who are likely to buy something, they can sell it at a lower price, so society benefits.

This is what we did on privacy: The most important thing we did was not in the House bill. It was an amendment that was offered by Senator Grams and Senator Santorum that put into the bill for the first time a full disclosure requirement. It requires every bank in America, when you open your account, to tell you precisely what their policy is: Do they share personal financial information within the bank? Do they share it outside the bank? We have a comprehensive listing of the conditions they have to meet. Do they disclose nonpublic information once you are no longer a customer? And what do they do to protect information?

Why is this important? This is important because this is the ultimate protection of privacy. If I do not believe a bank protects my privacy, I do not want to bank with them. I can bank with somebody else. If millions of people feel the way I do, you will get banks that will set out policies of not sharing information, and they will attract customers.

For example, I am proud to have an American Express card. American Express is a great American company. And I am proud I have been a member since 1970 something. They say that they do not share my information on that card with anybody.

I do not get that same guarantee from another card, but I get that guarantee from American Express. I happen to have a variety of credit cards. Obviously, I am not very worried about it, but if I were worried about it, I could just use my American Express Card. So I have an opt-in when people give me full information. If I do not like their policy, I do not become their customer. I can opt out. That is the basic freedom.

I just add, freedom is based on knowledge and the right to choose, not based on government. I believe that we are guaranteeing that with full disclosure.

Second, we adopted the House provision that said if the bank was going to use, or the financial services holding company was going to let people outside the bank have access to, the information, they have to give you the right to opt out. That provision was adopted.

Finally, we have a provision in the language which will allow financial institutions to partner with other financial services providers. This will give flexibility that we hope will be implemented to allow, in particular, small banks to share information with their business partners in a manner so that they can compete with a larger corporation that does a variety of activities within the corporation or among its affiliates.

Let me talk about one other issue, and then I want to say some thanks and stop, because I know Senator SARBANES wants to speak, and we want to go home.

This is not the end of the process. I believe this is the most important banking bill in 60 years. But there will be another banking bill within 10 years, and it will deal with commerce. Banking and commerce is already a reality. This bill is a pause, and it is only a pause, and it is not going to last very long.

One of the things that is in this bill, which I am opposed to—it was adopted by a two-thirds vote in the Senate, and here we live by majority rule, by and large—but basically this was a provision that said if you went in and invested money as a commercial company, in a thrift—and many people did when many thrifts were in trouble and we did not have money enough to shut them down—that now you cannot sell your charter unless the charter is broken apart into its component parts.

I do not believe this provision and other prohibitions against commerce and banking will last very long. It is just my opinion. I do not view with any great horror the possibility of going to Wal-Mart and having them sell financial services. In fact, I view it as something that would be good. They now do it all over America in partnership with city banks in those towns, but they can only get partners where they have enough customers to make it worthwhile to the bank.

The idea they might someday be able to provide the service as part of the overall functioning of Wal-Mart, through a thrift charter or through a credit union charter or a banking charter, I see that as a positive thing. I suspect that a very substantial number of Wal-Mart employees do not have a banking relationship with a credit union or an S&L or a bank. Many of their customers do not. And taking services to them, I would view as a public good, not a public evil. But other people see it differently.

What we are doing in this bill is agreeing that we have a pause. I do not believe it will last long. I think in 10 years we will have widespread commerce and banking in America.

I want to just say some thanks.

I thank Al D'Amato. I do not want people to forget that this bill did not start on my watch as chairman. This bill started when Al D'Amato was chairman of the Senate Banking Committee. And while that bill did not become law, and while in some ways this bill is very different from that bill, in other ways the two bills are very similar.

Al D'Amato did probably his best legislative work in his career in helping to move this process forward. When we started, we started where Al D'Amato left off. So I think the former chairman of this committee is due a substantial amount of the credit. I wanted to be sure that I began with that, and I did not want to forget to say that.

I thank Senator Lott for his strong, committed support. I think it is clear, without his support, with the long and difficult negotiations we have had, that this bill would be very different from what it is today. I can assure you, as every Member of the Senate knows, when you have your leadership's support, it is like having a good stone wall to your back in a gun fight. It does not keep you from getting killed, but at least nobody shoots you in the back. It has been a very important thing to me as we have negotiated out this bill, very important in a difficult process.

I thank Senator SARBANES, who is very knowledgeable and experienced on these issues. I thank him for his input, and that has been input that has varied, from issues to issues themselves, to advice on how, as a brand new chairman, I was conducting my part of the conference. I would have to say that more often than not I think he was right in the comments he made. I believe I have learned from that process.

I thank Senator Johnson, the first Democrat who signed the conference report.

I thank Senators DODD and EDWARDS and SCHUMER and BAYH. They were real catalysts in getting the administration together with us to push the ball over the goal line. I think they contributed significantly in doing that.

I thank Chairman LEACH, the chairman of the House Banking Committee, who also served as the chairman of the conference. There have been people in the media who tried to portray this conference as a contest somehow between Congressman LEACH and me. I do not think that is fair to me or to Congressman LEACH. I think Chairman LEACH did a great job. I think he contributed to the process. I would have to say there were difficult times in trying to work things out. Our approaches were very different. But in the end, it worked. And the great thing about success is, it has a thousand parents, and we can all claim credit; and we would have all rightly gotten blamed had we failed.

I thank Chairman BLILEY. I knew TOM much better than I knew Congressman LEACH when we started the process. I thank him for his leadership on securities issues and on the bill itself.

I thank Congressmen LAFALCE and VENTO, the ranking Democrat members of the House Banking Committee, for their input and their knowledge and their leadership.

I thank Congressman RICHARD BAKER, who I believe is a very talented young man, and certainly one of the most knowledgeable people in the House of Representatives on banking issues.

I thank Larry Summers and Gene Sperling. I had many hours of negotiating with them and others, and alone with them. If you could make a living selling them something or buying something from them to resell, you would be pretty good. They negotiated hard. They were totally honorable in their negotiations. I am glad that we reached a product that they have enthusiastically endorsed and I have endorsed.

I thank Arthur Levitt, Chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission. Chairman Levitt raised legitimate security concerns that I thought should be addressed. I and others sat down with Chairman Levitt and heard him out, and he had a substantial impact on the bill.

I thank Federal Reserve Board Chairman Alan Greenspan. I have said it on many occasions—and I am always happy to say it again—Alan Greenspan is the greatest central banker in American history; therefore by definition, the greatest central banker in the history of the world. He probably had as much impact on this bill as any non-Member did. His input and impact were always positive. And from the operating subsidiary issue, to virtually hundreds of other issues, his input was critically important.

And his general counsel, Virgil Mattingly, is one of these indispensable people who the public never knows about—thinks of them as faceless bureaucrats—but the reality is, his institutional knowledge and good sense had a substantial impact on this bill.

I thank all of my Republican colleagues on the conference. We had, at least in my opinion, an effort on the part of some on the House side to try to satisfy everybody. As a result, we got all sorts of amendments that came over to our side of the conference which basically were in conflict with the underlying logic of the bill, many of them popular, as various interest groups tried to go back and recut their deal once more or gain some special privilege or special advantage. I thank Senator SHELBY, Senator MACK, Senator Bennett, Senator Grams, Senator ALLARD, Senator HAGEL, Senator ENZI, Senator Santorum, Senator Bunning, and Senator CRAPO for consistently and courageously voting down every one of those amendments.

We have one of the cleanest pieces of major legislation I have seen and, I believe, one of the cleanest bills that has passed Congress in the last 20 years, in large part because these Members knew what they wanted to do. They took a position, and they stuck with it consistently throughout the process.

I thank Senator Bennett, who was chairman of the Subcommittee on Financial Institutions, the subcommittee with jurisdiction over major portions of this bill. I thank Senator Hagel for his leadership on Federal Home Loan Bank issues. I thank Senators Grams and Santorum on privacy issues.

Finally, I want to thank some people on my staff. I thank Dina Ellis, who has done all the hard work on CRA. She is a very sweet lady with a very soft voice, but she is a very serious, tough person. Much of our success in bringing sunshine to CRA and regulatory relief to smaller banks has been due to her great work.

I thank Christi Harlan, who has taken the dullest of issues that are totally incomprehensible to most people and done an excellent job in trying to communicate to the media in a form they could understand what was going on and why it mattered.

I thank Steve McMillin, who is an indispensable staff member to me. He came to work for me right out of college from the University of Texas. I am from Texas A&M, so I didn't start with any kind of overwhelming expectations. But Steve McMillin has become an indispensable person to me as a legislator. It would be virtually impossible to run my office and do what I do without him.

I thank Geoff Gray for his legal work in burrowing in on the issues that didn't seem important until he spoke up. But when he spoke up, they became very important.

I thank Linda Lord, Linda Lord, throughout this process, has known more about this bill and more about the underlying law that it changed than all the staff members of all the Members of the House and Senate, of all the staff members of the Treasury and the Federal Reserve Bank and the Securities and Exchange Commission. and all of the outside lawyers who were hired by people to represent their interests, all combined. Her knowledge and the force with which she has presented it have had a dramatic impact on this bill. In fact, the words of this bill are largely her words. She has been an indispensable person in doing this

I thank Joe Kolinski, who organized the conferences. It was a nightmare, moving from place to place. He was able to do it all. The mikes always worked. There was plenty of water. It was always crowded, which made people uncomfortable and got them to move on, which was very helpful.

Finally, I thank our staff director, Wayne Abernathy. Wayne started on the Banking Committee as an intern and is now the staff director. He knows everything about these issues. I trust his judgment as well as I trust my own judgment. I think I can sum up his contribution—the way I feel about him by simply quoting a great philosopher who once said: In no way can you get a keener insight into the true nature of a leader than by looking at the people with whom he surrounds himself. I would be very proud to have anybody on Earth judge me by Wayne Abernathy. I think they would be giving me mercy and not justice by doing it.

I thank everybody for their contribution, and I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BROWNBACK). The Senator from Maryland.

Mr. SARBANES. Mr. President, I rise in support of the conference report on the Financial Services Modernization Act of 1999.

The Congress has struggled for over two decades with the issue of whether to permit banks to affiliate with securities firms and insurance companies. This issue raises important questions for the safety and soundness of the financial system, important questions about the concentration of economic power, important questions about consumer protection, and important questions about access to credit for all Americans.

These are far-reaching and difficult public policy issues. The fact that they are so far-reaching and difficult, combined with differences among affected financial sectors—sectors of the financial industry over what should be contained in legislation and how to balance the concerns of consumers, the important consideration of safety and soundness and of assuring that the credit system will work to the benefit of all Americans—has made the enactment of a bill a significant challenge over an extended period of time.

In recent years, actions by regulators have permitted significant affiliations between banks and nonbank financial companies to take place. It is very important to keep that in mind as we consider enacting a piece of legislation because one has to be very much aware of what has transpired and the changes that have taken place in the financial arena as they consider the changes this legislation would now permit. Very frankly, the issue for Congress is not whether these affiliations should occur. because they have occurred one way or another, but whether they should take place on an orderly basis in the context of a responsible statutory framework or, instead, on an ad hoc basis as permitted by the regulators.

In my view, the preferable circumstance is for these affiliations to take place in the context of a responsible statutory framework established by the Congress, a framework that provides the regulators sufficient authority to protect the safety and soundness of the financial system, which maintains the separation of banking and commerce, protects consumers, preserves the relevance of the Community Reinvestment Act, and provides a choice to banks to conduct their expanded activities either through a holding company or a subsidiary of the bank.

It was not clear at the beginning of this Congress whether these goals could be achieved. The Senate passed a bill by the relatively close margin of 54-44 that, in my judgment, did not meet these objectives and was the object of a strong veto threat by the President. The House of Representatives, on the other hand, had passed a bill that largely met these objectives and that the Administration was prepared to support.

Today I am pleased to say to my colleagues that, in my view and in the view of the Administration, the bill produced by the conference committee is perceived as basically meeting the necessary standards. It is for that reason I am prepared to support the conference report. It is my understanding that the President is prepared to sign this legislation into law.

I ask unanimous consent that a letter from Secretary Summers to Senator DASCHLE stating the Administration's position, indicating their strong support for this legislation and urging its adoption, be printed in the RECORD at the end of my statement.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(See Exhibit 1.)

Mr. SARBANES. Mr. President, I want to take a few minutes to lay out why, on balance, I believe the enactment of this conference report is in the public interest.

First, the legislation gives the regulators significant authority to supervise newly affiliated financial companies and protect the safety and soundness of the financial system. I started with the safety and soundness issue because I think it is paramount. I think the U.S. economy, in large part, depends on the confidence in the safety and soundness of our economic and financial institutions. If we are to lose that confidence, which exists not only in this country, but around the world. I think we would be in severe difficulties in a very broad and fundamental economic sense. So safety and soundness, I think, always has to be at the very top of the list of our concerns.

Specifically, section 114 of the conference report provides the Federal Reserve, the Comptroller of the Currency, and the FDIC authority to place restrictions or requirements on relationships or transactions between a bank and an affiliated company or a subsidiary, appropriate to prevent an evasion of any provision of law applicable to depository institutions, or-and I quote the bill now, soon to become a statute, I hope—"to avoid any significant risk to the safety and soundness of depository institutions, or any Federal deposit insurance fund, or other adverse effects, such as undue concentration of resources, decreased or unfair competition, conflicts of interest, or unsound banking practices."

This important and broad delegation of authority to require "firewalls" to protect the federally insured bank from nonbank affiliates or subsidiaries emphasizes the important burden being placed on the regulators by this legislation to develop a coherent, responsible, safe and prudent approach to the supervision of the financial system. The permission contained herein for the expansion of activities calls for vigilant supervision of the financial system by the regulators. The legislation, in my view, provides the regulators the authority to do the job, but the responsibility will be on them to carry it out.

So this "firewall" provision that is in the conference report, which was actually taken from the House bill—we had no comparable provision on this side—gives the regulators the authority, I believe, to ensure a responsible, safe, and prudent approach. But it places, I think, a significant responsibility upon the regulators to exercise this authority in a way that it ensures that these objectives are realized.

This legislation also codifies a principle of functional regulation under which bank activities are generally supervised by bank regulators, securities activities by securities regulators, and insurance activities by insurance regulators. New financial activities are the joint responsibility of the Federal Reserve and the Treasury, which also serve as the umbrella regulators respectively of a financial holding company or a bank and its operating subsidiaries.

Now, secondly, the conference report strengthens the separation that currently exists in our financial system between banking and commerce. Financial authorities, including Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan, Treasury Secretary Larry Summers, former Treasury Secretary Bob Rubin, former Federal Reserve Board Chairman Paul Volcker, and many other commentators, such as Henry Kaufman, Gerald Corrigan—and the list goes on—have expressed strong concerns about the mixing of banking and commerce, particularly in light of the recent experiences in Asia.

The conference report, therefore, closes the so-called unitary thrift holding company loophole to the separation of banking and commerce. The report before us prohibits all unitary thrift holding companies from having commercial affiliates. In addition, it prohibits exists unitary thrift holding companies from being transferred to commercial companies. This prohibition on transfer to commercial companies was added to the Senate bill on the floor by an amendment offered by my colleague, Senator Johnson of South Dakota, and it carried in the Senate by a 2-to-1 vote and was subsequently adopted by the conference committee.

In addition, the conference report contains important limitations similar to the House bill on merchant banking activities and activities complementary to financial activities that are designed to maintain the separation of banking and commerce.

In regard to merchant banking, the conference report allows a financial holding company to retain a merchant banking investment only for a limited period of time and generally prohibits the company from routinely managing or operating a nonfinancial company held as a merchant banking investment. Importantly, the conference report also gives the Federal Reserve and the Treasury the authority to jointly develop implementing regulations on merchant banking activities that they deem appropriate to further the purposes and prevent evasions of the conference report and the Bank Holding Company Act. Under this authority. the Federal Reserve and the Treasury may define relevant terms and impose such limitations as they deem appropriate to ensure that this new authority does not foster conflicts of interest or undermine the safety and soundness of depository institutions, or the conference report's general prohibition on the mixing of banking and commerce.

In regard to activities determined by the Federal Reserve Board to be complementary to financial activities, it is expected that such activities will not be significant in size, and determinations will be made on a case by case basis.

Third, with respect to consumer protections, the conference report contains important protections for consumers regarding the sale of uninsured financial products by banks. The conference report provides the Securities and Exchange Commission significant authority to supervise the securities activities of banks and includes several crucial investor protections. The conference report incorporates provisions to ensure the SEC can adequately regulate bank-sponsored mutual funds. These provisions are necessary to ensure that the SEC has adequate information about and inspection authority over bank investment advisers to inspect for trading violations, such as front-running and personal trading.

The provisions also address potential significant conflicts of interest that may impact banks that advise registered investment companies. The conference report also ensures SEC protections for new hybrid products and for most sales of securities by banks. It also includes protections for sales of sophisticated securities instruments to retail investors.

Similarly, the conference report requires the Federal banking agencies to issue consumer protection regulations within one year, applicable to the sale of insurance by any bank or other depository institution, or by any person on behalf of such an institution. The regulations will give protection over several aspects of insurance sales, such as sales practices, including anti-tying and anti-coercion rules; advertising; location, limiting sales to an area physically segregated from where deposits are taken; and qualification and licensing of sales personnel.

The conference report also preserves important authorities for the States to provide consumer protection on bank sales of insurance products. These protections were in the House bill and were included in the Senate bill by an amendment offered by Senator BRYAN during the markup in the Banking Committee. It was in the legislation that came to the Senate floor, and was passed by the Senate.

Fourth, with respect to the operating subsidiary issue, the conference report contains a provision authorizing banks to conduct certain new activities through an operating subsidiary of the bank. I will not go into this provision in detail. I simply note that it was worked out between the Treasury and the Federal Reserve over an extended period of time, and was crucial to the Administration giving its support to this bill. It will give financial services firms some latitude in choosing the corporate structure that best serves their customers.

In regard to the Community Reinvestment Act, this legislation establishes a fundamental principle: No bank or financial holding company can engage in any new activities authorized by the bill, or engage in any new merger or acquisition authorized by the bill, if the bank or financial holding company does not have a satisfactory CRA rating.

This requirement on a bank or financial holding company for a satisfactory CRA rating in order to benefit from the new powers provided by the legislation was necessary to preserve the relevance of CRA in the new financial world which will be created by this bill. Without it, a bank's CRA performance would have become irrelevant to what will likely be the most intense area of activity in the financial industry. And the acceptance of this provision was essential for the Administration, and indeed for the Democratic members of the conference committee, to support the conference report.

The conference report does not contain two provisions with respect to CRA that were in the Senate bill, and I think would have been very damaging. One would have provided a safe harbor for banks from public comment on their CRA performance when they submitted an application to a regulator. The second exempted rural banks with assets under $100 million from CRA altogether.

The conference report does contain a provision providing for banks with assets under $250 million to have CRA examinations once every 4 years if they have a satisfactory rating, and once every 5 years if they have an outstanding rating. The regulators do retain authority to examine a bank at any time for reasonable cause.

The conference report also contains a provision requiring public disclosure and reporting on CRA agreements. The conference report explicitly directs the regulators to ensure that regulations prescribed by the agencies do not impose an undue burden on parties. In this regard, the statement of managers specifically provides that the reporting requirements of the provision can be fulfilled by the submission of a group's annual audited financial statement, or its Federal income tax return.

This was a provision that was intensely discussed and negotiated. The concept of public disclosure which was in the Senate bill was accepted by the conferees. The question that had to be worked out was exactly what did that mean and what was the reach of it and the requirements of it. As with many other provisions of this bill, the regulators will carry a particular responsibility to implement these provisions in a reasonable and responsible way.

Finally, let me point out where the conference report does not fully address two important areas. First, I do not think that the right of an individual to financial privacy is adequately protected. I expect that issue will be discussed at some length by some of my colleagues in the course of the debate on this conference report. Second, we have not dealt with what I think is a very important issue of what is called "too big to fail."

On the issue of privacy, last January I introduced the "Financial Information Privacy Act of 1999" together with a number of my colleagues, some of whom serve on the Banking Committee. I am frank to say I believe the central issue in this debate on privacy boils down to answering the question: To whom does this personal financial information belong, the individual, or the financial institution? I think upon reflection most people would answer the individual.

This legislation introduced earlier this year would have given an individual the right to "opt out", which would mean the right to sav "no" to the sharing of or selling of his or her personal information to an affiliate within a financial services holding company. It also would have required an "opt-in" for the selling of such information to a third party. An "opt-in" would require a customer's informed consent before selling or sharing confidential customer information with an unaffiliated third party.

Neither of these provisions are included in the legislation before us. However, we were able to include in the conference report an amendment that I proposed which ensures that the Federal Government will not preempt stronger State financial privacy laws that exist now or may be enacted in the future. As a result, States will be free to enact stronger privacy safeguards if they deem it appropriate.

I am very frank to say that I think Americans are becoming increasingly concerned about this issue of financial privacy protection. I predict that this issue of privacy will not go away with the passage of this legislation. I know Senators BRYAN and SHELBY took a very strong lead in the conference committee on the privacy issue, along with a number of their colleagues from the House. Many of those who were very supportive of that effort will want to speak at some length on this subject during the discussion of this conference report, and they have specifically reserved time in order to do that.

The conference report also fails to deal with the creation of institutions which may be deemed "too big to fail." The legislation before us substantially transforms the structure of the financial services industry by eliminating restrictions on the affiliations of banks, insurance companies, and securities firms. Despite the benefits which may accrue from such affiliations, there continue to be legitimate concerns that mergers permitted under this bill would create financial organizations so large that they would be deemed "too big to fail."

Organizations as diverse as the American Enterprise Institute, the Brookings Institution, and the former Bankers Roundtable have repeatedly encouraged us to address the "too big to fail" problem by requiring large banking organizations to back some portion of their assets with subordinated debt. Regrettably, the conference report contains no such mandatory subordinated debt requirement or other market policing mechanisms. The report does contain an 18-month study to be conducted by the Federal Reserve Board and the Treasury Department regarding the use of subordinated debt to protect the financial system, and to protect federally ensured deposit funds from the "too big to fail" institutions.

While obviously I think it would have been better to address this issue directly in the legislation, I certainly hope that 18 months from now, if not sooner, the Federal Reserve Board and the Treasury will present the Congress with a joint recommendation together with legislative proposals on how best to deal with the issue of "too big to fail." In trying circumstances, the consequences of failing to deal with this issue could be extremely severe. I am hopeful that the Federal Reserve Board and the Treasury will come back with a joint set of recommendations we can place into law.

These issues—dealing comprehensively with privacy and with "too big to fail"-remain to be addressed as we move into the future.

Finally, I want to make a brief observation about the context in which we are working and have to consider this legislation. The need for this legislation has been influenced by the marketplace. In seeking to respond to the financial needs of their customers, securities firms have offered bank-like products, banks have offered insurancelike products, and both banks and insurance companies have engaged in significant securities activities. This blurring of the lines among banks, securities, and insurance products has been taking place in the marketplace since at least the mid-1970s.

Those who look at this endeavor and say we don't want to allow any of this affiliation to take place need to appreciate and understand, it has been happening in a significant way. A development which began the blurring of the distinction between securities and bank products was the offering by securities firms of cash management accounts. That development added a bank deposit transaction feature to a securities account. It allows customers to write checks on their money market funds, enabling those accounts to function much like the traditional checking account. Subsequently, marketplace changes, regulatory actions, and court decisions have enabled banks to sell insurance and to develop annuity products that have insurance characteristics but are defined as bank prod-

On the commercial banking side, interpretations of existing laws have brought about a significant shift in ownership of firms underwriting securities. As of this past September, all the top 20 bank holding companies had what are known as section 20 subsidiaries that may engage under certain conditions in securities underwriting.

Updating our financial services laws is not only important to enable financial services firms to respond to the financial service needs of their customers, it is also important in order to ensure that appropriate regulatory oversight is maintained in the evolving marketplace.

In my view, this conference report will put in place a rational legislative framework for the future evolution of the U.S. financial services industry. It is a framework that will preserve safety and soundness, maintain the separation of banking and commerce, provide meaningful consumer protections, and preserve the relevance of the Community Reinvestment Act. I urge my colleagues to support this legislation.

I extend my congratulations to the chairman of the Banking Committee, Senator GRAMM. It has been a long ride, as one might say, with its ups and downs. However, the ship has been brought into port, so to speak. With the various accommodations worked out in the course of the conference, I expect the very close vote on the Senate bill will shift very markedly in the direction of support for this conference report.

Í echo Senator GRAMM's commendation of House Banking Committee Chairman LEACH who was chairman of the conference committee. Chairman LEACH showed great fairness and calm under pressing circumstances. He kept the process working at times when it might otherwise have been in some jeopardy. Congressman LAFALCE as ranking member of the House Banking Committee, Congressman BLILEY and Congressman DINGELL, the chairman and ranking member of the House Commerce Committee, and indeed all the members of the conference who in one way or another played very constructive roles in trying to work this situation out deserve commendation.

I am particularly grateful to my Democratic colleagues on the Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs Committee for working through and joining together as we sought to achieve legislation that would meet our desires and meet the perceptions of the Administration and therefore bring about a Presidential signature at the end of this process. All Members on both sides of the aisle did not want to go through this very extended process and then have it vetoed and have to start all over again. Fortunately, we have accomplished that.

Federal Reserve Board Chairman Greenspan played a significant role, as did the members of his staff who are extremely able, as did Treasury Secretary Summers and the members of his Treasury staff. I also acknowledge the role Bob Rubin has played in shaping where we are today, although he is no longer Secretary of the Treasury. Chairman Gramm appropriately recognized the role Chairman D'Amato played in moving this legislation along. The Chairman of the SEC, Arthur Levitt, was important on the investor protection provisions.

Finally, I thank the staff on this side of the aisle. Chairman GRAMM has recognized staff on his side of the aisle. I have high respect for their commitment and their competency. I don't think people fully appreciate the kind of dedication staff provides when Members are working through a very complex, complicated piece of legislation such as this. In this we have not only the concepts on which to reach agreement, but we have to work the concepts in the statutory language in a way that embodies what the understanding was that will also work in a technical and complex way. We are dealing with the sort of issues where, if it does not work, there are problems. I am hopeful we won't have to come back with extended technical corrections with respect to this legislation. If that is the case, obviously, we bow our heads to the staff.

On our side, I acknowledge our staff director Steve Harris, Marty Gruenberg, Patience Singleton, Dean Shahinian, Mitchell Feuer, Michael Jonathan Miller, Beresik. Yael Belkind, Erin Hanson, and Christen Schaefer. That is a long list, but it is a long list because some of the people are no longer on the staff. This issue has been going on long enough that people have come and gone. A number of those I listed are no longer on the staff, but they were here through at least part, if not a lot, of this effort. They made a significant contribution. It would be an oversight not to reference them.

Tomorrow, obviously, we will resume the debate. We will have the opportunity to hear from a number of our colleagues on this issue. I anticipate we will be able to go to a vote by midafternoon on this very important piece of legislation.

I yield the floor.

DEPARTMENT OF THE TREASURY, Washington, DC, November 3, 1999.

Hon. Tom Daschle,

U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR TOM: The Administration strongly supports passage of S. 900, the Gramm-Leach-Bliley Act of 1999. This legislation will modernize our financial services laws to better enable American companies to compete in the new economy.

The bill makes the most important legislative changes to the structure of the U.S. financial system since the 1930s. By allowing a single organization to offer any type of financial product, the bill stimulate competition, thereby increasing choice and reducing costs for consumers, communities and businesses. Americans spent over $350 billion per year on fees and commissions for brokerage insurance, and banking services. If increased competition yielded savings to consumers of even 5 percent, they would save over $18 billion per year.

Removal of barriers to competition will also enhance the stability of our financial services system. Financial firms will be able to diversify the product offerings and thus their sources of revenue. They also will be better able to compete in global financial markets.

The President has strongly supported the elimination of barriers to financial services competition. He has made clear, however, that any financial modernization bill must also preserve the vitality of the Community Reinvestment Act, enhance consumer protection to the privacy and other areas, follow financial services firms to choose the corporate structure that best serves their customers, and continue the traditional separation of banking commerce. As approved by the Conference Committee, S. 900 accomplishes each of those goals.

plishes each of these goals. With respect to CRA, S. 900 establishes an important, prospective principle: banking organizations seeking to take advantage of new, non-banking authority must demonstrate a satisfactory record of meeting the credit needs of all the communities they serve, including low and moderate income communities. Thus, S. 900 for the first time prohibits a bank or holding company from expanding into newly authorized businesses such as securities and insurance underwriting unless all of its insured depository institutions have a satisfactory or better CRA rating. Furthermore, CRA will continue to apply to all banks, and existing procedures for public comment on, and CRA review of, any application to acquire or merge with a bank will be preserved. The bill offers further support for community development in the form of a new program to provide technical help to low- and moderate-income micro-entrepreneurs.

The bill includes other measures affecting

CRA that have been narrowed significantly from their earlier Senate form. The bill includes a limited extension of the CRA examinational cycle for small banks with outstanding or satisfactory CRA records, but expressly preserves the ability of regulators to examine a bank any time for reasonable cause, and does not affect regulators ability to inquire in connection with an application. Finally, the bill includes a requirement for disclosure and reporting of CRA agreements. We believe that the legislation and its legislative history have been constructed to prevent undue burdens from being imposed on banks and those working to stimulate investment in underserved communities.

In May, the President stressed the importance of adopting strong and enforceable privacy protections for consumers financial information. S. 900 provides protections for consumers that extend far beyond existing law. For the first time, consumers will have an absolute right to know if their financial institution intends to share or sell their personal financial data, and will have the right to block sharing or sale outside the financial institutions' corporate family. Of equal importance, these restrictions have teeth. S. 900 gives regulatory agencies full authority to enforce privacy protections, as well as new rulemaking authority under the existing Fair Credit Reporting Act. The bill also expressly preserves the ability of states to provide stronger privacy protections. In addition, it establishes new safeguards to prevent pretext calling, by which unscrupulous operators seek to discover the financial assets of consumers. In sum, we believe that this reflects a real improvement over the status quo; but, we will not rest. We will continue to press for even greater protections—especially effective choice about whether personal financial information can be shared with affiliates.

We are pleased that the bill promotes innovation and competition in the financial sector, by allowing banks to choose whether to conduct most new non-banking activities, including securities underwriting and dealing, in either a financial subsidiary or an affiliate of a bank

The bill also promotes the safety and soundness of the financial system by enhancing the traditional separation of banking and commerce. The bill strictly limits the ability of thrift institutions to affiliate with commercial companies, closing a gap in existing law. The bill also includes restrictions on control of commercial companies through merchant banking.

Although the Administration strongly supports S. 900, there are provisions of the bill that concern us. The bill's redomestication provisions could allow mutual insurance companies to avoid state law protecting policyholders, enriching insiders at the expense of consumers. The Administration intends to monitor any redomestications and state law changes closely, and return to the Congress if necessary. The bill's Federal Home Loan Bank provisions fail to focus the System more on lending to community banks and less on arbitrage activities short-term lending that do not advance its public purpose. The Administration strongly supports S.

The Administration strongly supports S. 900, and urges its adoption by the Congress. Sincerely,

LAWRENCE H. SUMMERS.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas.

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, I thank Senator Sarbanes for his kind remarks and for remembering Bob Rubin, who was a very major contributor to this bill. Let me also say that I think it would be helpful if in the morning everyone will come over so we do not have long pauses. My concern is that we do have a lot of people who are going to want to speak on this bill. We are going to be forced to try to stay with the schedule because the House wants to vote on this tomorrow afternoon. So I hope people will come over and speak so we do not end up with this problem where people are given 1 or 2 minutes when they have something they need to say.

I think that can be avoided if people come over early.

Mr. SARBANES. If the chairman will yield, I want to echo the chairman's comments. I say to our colleagues, if Senators will come early on and we can perhaps sequence them, we can give them more time than if some of the time is used up in quorum calls. Waiting for people to come becomes lost time. Then, when people come over, we may be very limited in how much time we have available to give them.

If Senators have statements they want to make of some consequence, we very much hope they will come over and do that.

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, we both want to reserve the remainder of our time for use tomorrow.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, I now ask unanimous consent there be a period for the transaction of routine morning business with Senators permitted to speak for up to 10 minutes each

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

WOOL TARIFFS

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, a moment on a matter that is not included in the trade legislation that has just been approved by the Senate—the near-exorbitant tariff on fine wool fabrics. This modest proposal appears to have generated an inordinate amount of controversy, all the more baffling because the facts are so persuasive.

We have just a few suit manufacturers left in the United States, including Hickey-Freeman, which has produced fine tailored suits in Rochester, New York since 1899. Our tariffs are stacked against them.

There is only a limited supply in the United States of fine wool fabric. The suit makers must import significant quantities of this fabric, at a current tariff rate of 30.6%. But importers can bring in completely finished wool suits duty free from Canada and Mexico, and subject to a 19.8% duty when imported from other sources. This anomaly in our tariff schedule—this tariff "inversion"—puts domestic manufacturers of wool suits at a significant disadvantage.

Senators SCHUMER, DURBIN, HAGEL, MIKULSKI, SPECTER, NICKLES, FITZ-SANTORUM, GRAMM, GERALD, THOMPSON have joined me in sponsoring a very modest measure that would provide temporary relief to the suit-makers. We have proposed that the tariff on the very finest wool fabric-produced in only limited quantities in the United States—be suspended for a short period, and that the tariff on other classes of fine wool fabric be reduced to 19.8%—hardly a negligible tariff. This was an effort to provide some relief to our suit makers.

Through the good offices of the Chairman of the Finance Committee, we undertook to address the concerns that has been raised when our bill was first introduced. After a series of meetings with all of the interested parties—and there are many—we modified our proposal to address, in a constructive way, the concerns that were raised.

Our first compromise proposal was rejected out of hand. No counterproposal was forthcoming. The objection stems chiefly from two sources: a fabric manufacturer that is not currently producing the fine wool fabric at issue—but promises to do so in the future, principally from a plant it is building in Mexico; and from the American Sheep Industry Association—this despite the fact that wool of the quality required for suit fabric is sourced overwhelmingly from Australia.

I am at a loss to explain the vehemence of the opposition. The fabric producer that so strongly opposes this legislation—Burlington Industries—is positioning itself to compete in the global market. As it ought to do.

On January 26, 1999, the company announced a major reorganization. To quote, "operations will be streamlined and U.S. capacity will be reduced by 25%." Let me repeat: "U.S. capacity will be reduced by 25%." The company announced that 2900 jobs would be eliminated, an announcement made just one month after the company reported to its shareholders—on December 2, 1998, that "we have launched a major growth initiative in Mexico."

There followed an announcement to its customers that the fine wool fabric used to manufacture men's suits—so called "fancies"—would not be available for a time.

Even so, we cannot get agreement on tariff relief for our suit makers, who have greater need than ever for imported fabric. They must still pay a 31% tariff on imported fine wool fabric. We ought to enable them to remain competitive, just as Burlington has taken steps to remain competitive.

We have kept at it. In recent days, our efforts have intensified. With a great deal of good will on the part of all interested parties, it appears that we may be inching toward an agreement that would, in fact, benefit all parties in some measure.

We have included a place-holder in the trade legislation—not a solution to the wool tariffs problem, but a provision that will allow our discussions to continue over the next several days.

I do thank the chairman and his staff—particularly Grant Aldonas—for their efforts, as well as the considerable interest and attention of Senators DURBIN, SCHUMER, and BAUCUS, all of whom are eager, as am I, to work this out. I intend to continue to work with our chairman and with others to resolve this matter.

PRESCRIPTION DRUGS

Mr. WYDEN. Mr. President, the issue of prescription drugs for the Nation's senior citizens is back in the headlines this morning with yet another study having been published that millions of senior citizens in America cannot afford their prescriptions.

This is the 12th time I have come to the floor in recent days to talk about this issue because I think it is so critical that the Senate act in a bipartisan way to deal with what are clearly the great out-of-pocket costs for the Nation's older people. Specifically, as this poster next to me says, I have been urging senior citizens to send in copies of their prescription drug bills to each of us in the Senate in Washington, DC.

The reason I hope we will hear from seniors around the country is there is one bipartisan bill, one that is before the Senate now, to deal with this question of prescription needs for seniors. It is the bill on which Senator OLYMPIA SNOWE and I have teamed up in recent months, and 54 Members of this body, the majority, have already voted for the funding plan that is laid out in the Snowe-Wyden legislation. So we have 54 Members of the Senate on record as supporting a specific plan to cover prescription drugs for the Nation's older people.

The model in the Snowe-Wyden legislation is something that every Member of the Senate is familiar with because it is the model we have for health care for ourselves and our families. The Snowe-Wyden legislation is called SPICE, the Senior Prescription Insurance Coverage Equity Act. It would ensure that seniors would get their medicine at an affordable rate because our bill would allow them the bargaining power that big organizations, big purchasers such as the health maintenance organizations would have.

The tragedy today with respect to our Nation's seniors and prescriptions is they get shellacked twice; first, because Medicare does not cover prescriptions. When the program began in 1965, it did not cover prescriptions initially. Second, because the big buyers, the health maintenance organizations and the other big purchasers, are able to use their clout in the marketplace, those folks can get a discount and a senior citizen in rural Oregon or rural New Mexico or another part of this country in effect has to subsidize with their dollars the break the large organizations are getting.

Frankly, there are other ideas for dealing with this issue. Colleagues on both sides of the aisle have them. What I am trying to do to support the Snowe-Wyden bipartisan legislation is to come to the floor and, as this poster says, ask our seniors to send copies of their prescription drug bills directly to us in the Senate in Washington. I am going to, as I have done on 11 previous occasions recently, actually read from some of these bills so we can make the case for how urgent this need is.

For example, I recently received a letter from a woman in Portland who described to me what she and her husband are facing with respect to their prescription drug costs. This couple in Portland has a combined income of about $1,500 a month. She spends, from that $1,500-a-month income, $230 on prescription drugs and he spends about $180 a month. So the two of them, an elderly couple in Portland, are spending more than $400 a month on prescription drugs. They are spending upwards of $4,000 a year on their prescription medicine and, as they reported to me, they have no insurance to cover these costs.

This morning in Washington we saw, again, more press conferences on this issue. I guess we can go day after day having dueling press conferences with respect to this issue of prescription drugs. We can have a lot of finger pointing, we can have a lot of bickering, a lot of quarreling about how serious the problem is and what to do about it, but there is one bipartisan bill that uses marketplace forces to try to deal with this issue. The Snowe-Wyden legislation steers clear of price controls. We do not have a Federal regime for handling this benefit. It is not one-size-fits-all Federal policy. It uses marketplace forces to make sure seniors have choices and options and alternatives for their prescription medicines. It is based on a model that all of us are pretty familiar with because we utilize the Federal Employees Health Benefits Plan.

I want to go through a couple more of these cases. I know the distinguished Senator from Louisiana is here to speak on an important matter, as are other colleagues. But I do, as part of this effort, want to highlight with these specific cases some of what we are seeing all across this country as seniors walk this economic tightrope, balancing their food costs against their fuel costs, and their fuel costs against their medical bills and find themselves, again and again, not in a position to pay for their prescriptions.

I received another letter in the last few days from a senior citizen in Oregon. She is on seven prescriptions. She has heart disease; she has high blood pressure and diabetes. She and her husband exist on Social Security and a tiny disability check. They get a couple of thousand dollars a month maximum in their income. Every month, they spend at least $300 of it on prescription drugs. That is just the wife in the household. Her husband has to spend additionally on prescription drugs. This particular elderly person wrote and said if it were not for the free samples that she was getting from her physician, she simply could not meet her expenses.

Another letter I received described a senior taking five prescription drugs. She has high blood pressure and high thyroid. She has an income of a little under $1,000 a month. She spends about $100 a month on prescription drugs. And she wrote me:

I am lucky that my kids will give me a hand when I have difficulty in affording my prescriptions.

As part of this effort to have the Senate deal with this urgent need for older people in a bipartisan way, I would like to see the Senate consider the one bipartisan bill before us now, the Snowe-Wyden legislation. But I am sure colleagues have other ideas, and I think if we will listen to the senior citizens of this country who are sending me and our colleagues copies of these bills—as the poster says, "Send in copies of prescription drug bills directly to us here in the Senate"—we can help the Senate deal with this issue on a bipartisan basis.

I am going to wrap up this afternoon with a question I hope a lot of colleagues are asking with respect to prescription drug coverage: Can our Nation afford to cover prescription drug costs of older people? My answer to that is: I believe we cannot afford not to ensure that our seniors get this coverage. I want to cite an example before I wrap up.

Last week, I talked about the evidence we are seeing with the new anticoagulant drugs. These are important drugs that can help seniors prevent strokes and debilitating illnesses. As a result of seniors taking these medicines, which cost about $1,000 a year, there is documented medical evidence now that these drugs can help prevent strokes, which cost upwards of $100,000 a year. So think about the investment, the wise investment—not just from a health standpoint, not just from the standpoint of trying to make sure our seniors get a fair shake but purely from a financial standpoint—the benefit of having seniors get prescription drug coverage, getting, for example, these anticoagulant drugs that cost about $1,000 a year, and seeing a savings as a result of the older person not having a stroke, of that person not incurring $100,000 in expenses that would be involved in treating the stroke.

I was director of the Gray Panthers at home for about 7 years before I was elected to the Congress. Prescription drugs were important then. You would always hear from seniors that they want this coverage. But the prescriptions today are even more important because they can help keep seniors well. Prescriptions today, helping to lower blood pressure, helping lower cholesterol, are drugs that are going to help us hold costs down for the Medicare program.

As we all know, Medicare Part A, the hospital portion, the institutional portion of the program is particularly expensive, and these drugs today, if we can get decent Medicare coverage for the Nation's older people, will help us save some of the money that would otherwise be spent under Part A of the program when seniors incur these debilitating illnesses.

I intend, as I have done now on 12 occasions, to keep coming to the floor to urge seniors to send in copies of their prescription drug bills directly to us in the Senate in hopes we can get bipartisan action. I am very proud that the Snowe-Wyden funding plan got 54 votes, a majority of votes in the Senate already for going forward with a specific plan to fund this program, but I am sure colleagues have other ideas.

The distinguished chairman of the Finance Committee is here. He has been very involved in the question of Medicare. I was very honored when Senator MOYNIHAN, last week, spoke favorably about the SPICE legislation we have introduced. Colleagues have plenty of ideas on how to deal with it, but what is important is we go forward in a bipartisan way and not wait until after another election which is literally a year away.

In the hope the Senate will act in a bipartisan way, I intend to keep coming back to the floor to discuss this issue.

I vield the floor.

Ms. LANDRIEU. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Oregon for his terrific statement and his terrific work with our colleague from Maine on a very important piece of legislation. The President has said time and again, as have most of us, as the Senator from Oregon has pointed out, that we would never even think of designing a Medicare program today without having prescription drug coverage. It would be unthinkable, particularly because of the advances in science and technology which, at a minimal cost, help keep people well and out of hospitals and out of difficulty and pain and suffering. It would be cost-effective to the taxpaver.

I thank him and commit to him my intention to continue to work with him and with many Members on both sides of the aisle until we can resolve this problem and answer the legitimate needs and requests of our seniors in America.

BANKRUPTCY JUDGES

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, the Delaware bankruptcy court has come to fully understand the old adage that "the reward for a job well done is more work". Long recognized as one of the nation's quickest, most innovative and fairest, The Delaware corporate bankruptcy court's caseload has grown to the point that at least one additional judge is necessary. I want to commend a number of my congressional colleagues for joining with me to address this situation.

Yesterday, Senator Grassley and Representative GEKAS held a joint hearing on the need for additional judges. Representative bankruptcy MIKE CASTLE was among those who testified at this hearing, and I understand he eloquently elaborated on Delaware's status as the busiest bankruptcy venue per judge in the nation.

Simply put, more capable judges are needed to tend to corporate bankruptcy cases in Delaware and a select number of other states. Realizing this, Senator PAUL COVERDELL has introduced S. 1830, to provide for the appointment of additional temporary bankruptcy judges. I, along with Senator BIDEN and a number of other Senators, have cosponsored this vital proposal

I commend my fellow sponsors of this legislation as well as the chairmen of the subcommittees of jurisdiction for holding yesterday's hearing. I look forward to working with them on this important matter in the future.

AGREEMENT FOR COOPERATION BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA AND AUSTRALIA CONCERNING TECHNOLOGY FOR THE SEPARATION OF ISOTOPES OF URANIUM BY LASER EXCITATION—MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT—PM 70

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States, together with an accompanying report; which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

To the Congress of the United States:

I am pleased to transmit to the Congress, pursuant to sections 123 b. and 123 d. of the Atomic Energy Act of 1954, as amended (42 U.S.C. 2153(b), (d)), the text of a proposed Agreement for Cooperation Between the United States of America and Australia Concerning Technology for the Separation of Isotopes of Uranium by Laser Excitation, with accompanying annexes and agreed minute. I am also pleased to transmit my written approval, authorization, and determination concerning the Agreement, and an unclassified Nuclear Proliferation Assessment Statement (NPAS) concerning the Agreement. (In accordance with section 123 of the Act, as amended by title XII of the Foreign Affairs Reform and Restructuring Act of 1998 (Public Law 105-277), a classified annex to the NPAS, prepared by the Secretary of State in consultation with the Director of Central Intelligence, summarizing relevant classified information, will be submitted to the Congress separately.) The joint memorandum submitted to me by the Secretary of State and the Secretary of Energy, which includes a summary of the provisions of the Agreement and the views of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, is also enclosed.

A U.S. company and an Australian company have entered into a contract jointly to develop and evaluate the commercial potential of a particular uranium enrichment process (known as the "SILEX" process invented by the Australian company. If the commercial viability of the process is demonstrated, the U.S. company may adopt it to enrich uranium for sale to U.S. and foreign utilities for use as reactor fuel.

Research on and development of the new enrichment process may require transfer from the United States to Australia of technology controlled by the United States as sensitive nuclear technology or Restricted Data. Australia exercises similar controls on the transfer of such technology outside Australia. There is currently in force an Agreement Between the United States of America and Australia Concerning Peaceful Uses of Nuclear Energy, signed at Canberra July 5, 1979 (the "1979 Agreement"). However, the 1979 Agreement does not permit transfers of sensitive nuclear technology and Restricted Data between the parties unless specifically provided for by an amendment or by a separate agreement.

Accordingly, the United States and Australia have negotiated, as a complement to the 1979 Agreement, a specialized agreement for peaceful nuclear cooperation to provide the necessary legal basis for transfer of the relevant technology between the two countries for peaceful purposes.

The proposed Agreement provides for cooperation between the parties and authorized persons within their respective jurisdictions in research on and development of the SILEX process (the particular process for the separation of isotopes of uranium by laser excitation). The Agreement permits the transfer for peaceful purposes from Australia to the United States and from the United States to Australia, subject to the nonproliferation conditions and controls set forth in the Agreement, of Restricted Data, sensitive nuclear technology, sensitive nuclear facilities, and major critical components of such facilities, to the extent that these relate to the SILEX technology.

The nonproliferation conditions and controls required by the Agreement are the standard conditions and controls required by section 123 of the Atomic Energy Act, as amended by the Nuclear Non—Proliferation Act of 1978 (NNPA), for all new U.S. agreements for peaceful nuclear cooperation. These include safeguards, a guarantee of no explosive or military use, a guarantee of adequate physical protection, and rights to approve re-transfers, enrichment, reprocessing, other alterations in form or content, and storage. The Agreement contains additional detailed provisions for the protection of sensitive nuclear technology, Restricted Data, sensitive nuclear facilities, and major critical components of such facilities transferred pursuant to it.

Material, facilities, and technology subject to the Agreement may not be used to produce highly enriched uranium without further agreement of the parties.

The Agreement also provides that cooperation under it within the territory of Australia will be limited to research on and development of SILEX technology, and will not be for the purpose of constructing a uranium enrichment facility in Australia unless provided for by an amendment to the Agreement. The United States would treat any such amendment as a new agreement pursuant to section 123 of the Atomic Energy Act, including the requirement for congressional review.

Australia is in the forefront of nations supporting international efforts to prevent the spread of nuclear weapons to additional countries. It is a party to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons (NPT) and has an agreement with the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) for the application of full-scope safeguards to its nuclear program. It subscribes to the Nuclear Supplier Group (NSG) Guidelines, which set forth standards for the responsible export of nuclear commodities for peaceful use, and to the Zangger (NPT Exporters) Committee Guidelines, which oblige members to require the application of IAEA safeguards on nuclear exports to nonnuclear weapon states. In addition, Australia is a party to the Convention on the Physical Protection of Nuclear Material, whereby it has agreed to apply international standards of physical protection to the storage and transport of nuclear material under its jurisdiction or control.

The proposed Agreement with Australia has been negotiated in accordance with the Atomic Energy Act of 1954, as amended, and other applicable law. In my judgment, it meets all statutory requirements and will advance the nonproliferation, foreign policy, and commercial interests of the United States.

A consideration in interagency deliberations on the Agreement was the potential consequences of the Agreement for U.S. military needs. If SILEX technology is successfully developed and becomes operational, then all material produced by and through this technology would be precluded from use in the U.S. nuclear weapons and naval nuclear propulsion programs. Furthermore, all other military uses of this material, such as tritium production and material testing, would also not be possible because of the assurances given to the Government of Australia. Yet, to ensure the enduring ability of the United States to meet its common defense and security needs, the United States must maintain its military nuclear capabilities. Recognizing this requirement and the restrictions being placed on the SILEX technology, the Department of Energy will monitor closely the development of SILEX but ensure that alternative uranium enrichment technologies are available to meet the requirements for national security.

I have considered the views and recommendations of the interested agencies in reviewing the proposed Agreement and have determined that its performance will promote, and will not constitute an unreasonable risk to, the common defense and security. Accordingly, I have approved the Agreement and authorized its execution and urge that the Congress give it favorable consideration.

Because this Agreement meets all applicable requirements of the Atomic Energy Act, as amended, for agreements for peaceful nuclear cooperation. I am transmitting it to the Congress without exempting it from any requirement contained in section 123 a. of that Act. This transmission shall constitute a submittal for purposes of both sections 123 b. and 123 d. of the Atomic Energy Act. My Administration is prepared to begin immediately the consultations with the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and House International Relations Committee as provided in section 123 b. Upon completion of the 30-day continuous session period provided for in section 123 b., the 60-day continuous session period provided for in section 123 d. shall com-

STATEMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Mrs. BOXER:

S. 1846. A bill to redesignate the Federal building located at 10301 South Compton Avenue, in Los Angeles, California, and known as the Watts Finance Office, as the "Augustus F. Hawkins Post Office Building"; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

REDESIGNATION OF THE WATTS FINANCE OFFICE BUILDING AS THE AUGUSTUS F. HAWKINS POST OFFICE BUILDING

• Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, today, I am introducing legislation to pay tribute to a former colleague of mine and a fellow Californian, former Congressman Augustus F. Hawkins, by renaming the Federal building located at 10301 South Compton Avenue, in Los Angeles, California, currently known as the Watts Finance Office, as the Augustus F. Hawkins Post Office Building.

Gus Hawkins was born in Shreveport, Louisiana in 1907. His family moved to Los Angeles when he was 11 to escape the racial discrimination that was prevalent in the South at that time. This experience made him a passionate advocate of racial justice and social equality, and he committed his life to the service of others.

His efforts began in the California Assembly where he passed the state's first law against discrimination in housing and employment. Building on that success, he passed other important legislation concerning minimum wages for women, child care centers, workers' compensation for domestic employees, and the removal of racial designations on state documents.

In 1962, Gus was elected to the United States House of Representatives. During his 28 years in office, he served on the Committee on House Administration, and served as Chairman for both the Joint Committee on Printing and the Committee on Education and Labor. He authored more than 17 federal laws dealing with civil rights, educational improvements, job training and employment opportunities. He fought tirelessly for the rights of children, the poor, the disabled, the elderly, and minorities.

Throughout his distinguished career, Gus was recognized as a hardworking man of integrity who cared little for personal accolades while concentrating on the issues affecting his constituents. He has continually pursued fairness and opportunity for all.

Designating the Watts Finance Office Building as the Augustus F. Hawkins Post Office Building is an honor befitting his 56 years of service to his community and to the State of California.

REDESIGNATION OF THE COMPTON MAIN POST OFFICE AS THE MERVYN DYMALLY POST OF-FICE BUILDING

• Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, today, I am introducing legislation to pay tribute to a former colleague of mine and a fellow Californian, former Congressman Mervyn Malcolm Dymally, by renaming the post office located at 701 South Santa Fe Avenue in Compton, California, currently known as the Compton Main Post Office, as the Mervyn Dymally Post Office Building.

Mr. Dymally came to this country in 1945 from Cedros, Trinidad, British West Indies. In 1960, he began his political career by working as a field coordinator for John F. Kennedy during the Presidential campaign. Mr. Dymally's own service as an elected official began when he was elected to the California State Assembly in 1963 and then to the State Senate in 1967, where he served for eight years. Next, he was elected Lieutenant Governor of the State of California and was the State's highest ranking black elected official.

Building on a career of political success, Mervyn Dymally was elected to the United States House of Representatives in 1981. During his six terms in office, he served on several committees, including the Post Office and Civil Service Committee; the Committee on the District of Columbia, where he chaired its Subcommittee on Judiciary and Education; and the House Committee on Foreign Affairs, where he was the Chair of the Subcommittee on International Operations.

As the Chairman of the Subcommittee on Africa, Mr. Dymally's passion became immediately evident when he visited 20 African countries in his first year. He worked tirelessly to raise awareness of the plight of Africans and to monitor U.S. assistance levels to African and Caribbean nations. Throughout his distinguished career, he was recognized for his leadership in humanitarian efforts.

Since retirement from Congress in 1992, Mr. Dymally is busier than ever. He serves as President of the Grace Home for Waiting Children and as Chairman of the Caribbean Action Lobby. In addition, he is the President of a consulting firm and a Professor at the Central State University in Ohio. He still travels frequently, serving as Honorary Consul to the Republic of Benin, West Africa and Vice President of the Pacific Century Institute.

Designating the Compton Main Post Office as the Mervyn Dymally Post Office Building is an honor befitting his service to his community and to the State of California.

Mr. President, I ask that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

The bill follows:

S. 1847

By Mr. CAMPBELL:

S. 1848. A bill to amend the Reclamation Wastewater and Groundwater Study and Facilities Act to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to participate in the design, planning, and construction of the Denver Water Reuse project; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

THE DENVER WATER REUSE PROJECT AUTHORIZATION

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. President, I take the time today to reintroduce a bill that will help millions of water consumers throughout my state. This bill is based on S. 2140, legislation I introduced last year, which passed out of the full Senate.

The Denver Water Department has developed a unique plan to re-use non-potable water for irrigation and industrial uses. In the arid West, where growing populations and changing values are place increasing demands on existing water supplies, water and availability remain important issues. Recent conflicts are particularly apparent in the West where agricultural needs for water are often in direct conflict with urban needs. This legislation will help remedy some of this conflict.

This bill authorizes the Denver Water Department to access federal funds to assist in the implementation of this plan. The State of Colorado, the Colorado Water Congress, the Denver Board of Water Commissioners, and the Mayor of Denver have fully endorsed this legislation. I am pleased to assist these interested parties with this worthwhile proposal.

The Denver Water Department serves over a million customers and is the largest water supplier in the Rocky Mountain region. Over the past several years Denver Water has developed a plan to treat and re-use some of its water supply for uses not involving human consumption, such as irrigation and industrial purposes. In this manner, Denver will stretch its water supply without the cost and potential environmental disruption of building new reservoirs. It will also ease the demand on fresh drinking-quality water supplies.

The Denver Nonpotable Reuse Project will treat secondary wastewater, that is water which has already been used once in Denver's system. It is an environmentally and economically viable method for extending and conserving our limited water supplies. The water quality will meet all Colorado and federal standards. The water will still be clean and odorless, but since it will be used for irrigation and industrial uses around the Denver International Airport and the Rocky Mountain Wildlife Refuge, the additional expense to treat it for drinking will be avoided.

The nonpotable project will be constructed in three phases and ultimately will result in an additional useable water supply of 15,000 acre feet. The use of the nonpotable water for irrigation and industrial customers will make potable water supplies available for up to 30,000 homes.

Construction will include a treatment plant and a distribution system that is separate from the potable water system. Phase I will serve customers in the vicinity of the reuse plant, including a Public Service Company power plant, other industrial users and other public areas. Phase II will add irrigation for parks and golf courses in the former Stapleton Airport and the recently closed Lowry Air Force Base redevelopment areas. The Rocky Mountain Arsenal, which is being converted to a national wildlife refuge, will also use the reuse water to maintain lake levels on-site and to provide water for wildlife habitats. Phase III will serve existing parks as well as new development of a commercial corridor leading to the Denver International Airport. With the construction of Phase II, the irrigation, heating and cooling, and car washing facilities at Denver International Airport will convert to reuse water, where a dual distribution system has already been installed.

In the West, naturally scarce water supplies and increasing urban populations have furthered our need for water reuse, recycling, conservation, and storage proposals which are the keys to successfully meet the water needs of everyone. This plan would benefit many Coloradans, and would help relieve many of the water burdens faced in the Denver region. Again, I'd like to thank the interested parties for their support, and I am hopeful this bill can be quickly passed and put into effect.

I ask unanimous consent that the bill and copies of letters of support from the Colorado Department of Natural Resources, the Colorado Water Congress, the Denver Board of Water Commissioners, and the Mayor of Denver be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 1848

OFFICE OF THE EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR. DEPARTMENT OF NATURAL RESOURCES.

Denver, CO, November 1, 1999. Hon. BEN NIGHTHORSE CAMPBELL,

U.S. Senate.

Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR CAMPBELL: I am writing to support the inclusion of the Denver Water Nonpotable Reuse Project on the Title XVI authorizing list. Inclusion of this project recognizes the importance of creative procedures to meet future water needs for metropolitan Denver. As it becomes more and more difficult to provide water supplies for a rapidly growing metropolitan area, innovative projects such as reuse and conjunctive use must supplant existing capacity. Denver Water's reuse plant will produce over 1,000 acre feet of usable water supply by treatment of effluent for industrial and irrigation purposes. The reuse water will be treated to attain important public health standards even for those limited purposes.

Resuse of water is valuable not only for Denver, but for other areas of Colorado. Reuse of water will delay the need to develop new water supplies from other water sources. This project has wide-spread support in Colorado. Your efforts to see Denver Water's Nonpotable Reuse Project listed as a Bureau of Reclamation approved project are appreciated. Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely,

GREG WALCHER. Executive Director.

COLORADO WATER CONGRESS, Denver, CO, October 25, 1999.

Hon. BEN NIGHTHORSE CAMPBELL,

U.S. Senate,

Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR CAMPBELL: As you well know, the chronic water shortages in Colorado have forced Colorado Water supply agencies to develop water in new and ingenious ways. One of the best water projects being planned is Denver Water's Nonpotable Reuse Project that will take water already used, treat it and deliver it for industrial and irrigation supply. This project will supply about 15% of Denver's anticipated water shortfall without building a new reservoir, without tremendous federal compliance costs, and without a new transbasin diver-

The Water Congress has members throughout the state of Colorado; and I know of no opposition to this project. I understand you are trying to get the project listed pursuant to Title XVI of the Bureau of Reclamation approved reuse projects list. You have the support of the Colorado Water Congress. Thank you for your consideration in this endeavor.

Sincerely,

RICHARD D. MACRAVEY, Executive Director.

DENVER BOARD OF WATER COMMISSIONERS, Denver, CO, October 27, 1999.

Hon. BEN NIGHTHORSE CAMPBELL, U.S. Senate,

Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR CAMPBELL: I appreciate your support and sponsorship of the bill that adds the Denver Nonpotable Reuse Project to Public Law 102-575 Title XVI, the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation's authorized list. This project allows us to conserve potable water sources and helps us to defer importation of water from the Western Slope. As I think you know, we are only seeking authorization, not federal funding, for the Denver Reuse Project.

We are planning a project that will provide over 15,000 acre-feet of nonpotable supply. That, in turn, frees up enough treated water supply to provide for some 30,000 homes. It represents a substantial portion of the supply that will be needed for future demand in the Denver Water system as an expanding population strains our limited water resources. By reclaiming wastewater for irrigation and industrial use, we can serve growth in a way that is environmentally responsible and economic.

Please feel free to call upon us should you need further information or assistance.

Sincerely,

H.J. BARRY. Manager.

CITY AND COUNTY OF DENVER. CITY AND COUNTY BUILDING Denver, CO, November 2, 1999.

Hon. BEN NIGHTHORSE CAMPBELL. U.S. Senator, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR CAMPBELL: Once again, I want to express my appreciation for your support of legislation adding the Denver Water Non-potable Reuse Project to the Bureau of Reclamation's approved projects list.

We are proud to include non-potable reuse, coupled with water conservation and system refinements, as core components of the Denver Water 20-year plan. We certainly acknowledge the importance and value of our limited water resources throughout Colorado. Reuse efforts allow us to reduce or minimize the Denver metro area's demands on limited Colorado River sources.

Once again, thank you for your support.

Yours truly.

WELLINGTON, E. WEBB, Mayor.

By Mr. BIDEN (for himself and Mr. Roth):

S. 1849. A bill to designate segments and tributaries of White Clay Creek, Delaware and Pennsylvania, as a component of the National Wild and Scenic Rivers System; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

THE WHITE CLAY CREEK WILD AND SCENIC RIVERS ACT

• Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, today I am joined by Senator ROTH, in introducing a bill that would designate the White Clay Creek and its tributaries in Delaware and Pennsylvania as a unit of the National Wild and Scenic Rivers System.

It has been eight years since I introduced the bill authorizing the study of the White Clay Creek watershed, and thirty years since I began my efforts to protect this unique and valuable region from the over development and urban sprawl that are of increasing concern to all of us.

The White Clay Creek watershed is a truly remarkable environment, covering 107 square miles and draining over 69,000 acres in Delaware and Pennsylvania. Centrally located between the densely urbanized regions of New York and Washington, D.C., the White Clay Creek watershed is within a 2 hour drive of eight million people.

Its diversity of natural, historic, cultural and recreational resources, as detailed in the National Park Service's Resources and Issues Report in September of 1994, is extraordinary. The watershed is home to a wide variety of plant and animal life, archeological sites dating back to prehistoric times, a bi-state preserve and state park, and a source of drinking water for the region.

It became clear, early on, that these resources warranted the federal protection provided under the National Wild and Scenic Rivers System. With the introduction of my legislation today, we are entering the last major phase of seeing that protection become a re-

Before I begin to speak on the particulars of today's legislation and the study process that got us to this point, I think it is important to note that while there are over 150 National Wild and Scenic Rivers across this nation, the White Clay Creek brings with it two distinctions: Specifically, it will be the first and only Wild and Scenic River in Delaware; and, it is the first and only river to be studied for designation on a watershed basis.

The study of the White Clay Creek for possible inclusion in the National Wild and Scenic Rivers System recently culminated with the release of a National Park Service study report in September of this year. The study process began in 1992, when Congress directed the National Park Service to convene a study task force consisting of state and local governments, community organizations, watershed residents and landowners within the White Clay Creek watershed.

As described in the study legislation, the duties of the task force were to evaluate the eligibility and suitability of the White Clay Creek and its tributaries, and to develop a management plan for the preservation and protection of the watershed. Fifteen local governments in Delaware and Pennsylvania participated in the study task force.

I stated during hearings on the study legislation, before the Senate Subcommittee on Forests and Public Land Management in November of 1991, that there was tremendous support for the study and subsequent designation. However, I realized that with the diverse group of individuals, organizations and agencies making up the task force, the possibility for conflict in determining which segments should be designated and what protections afforded them, could be great.

What I could not have expected and what I am extremely pleased to report is that the support for protection of the White Clay Creek is so strong, that over 190 miles of the approximately 400 river miles studied in the watershed are being requested for designation today. Clearly, Delawareans and Pennsylvanians alike understand the value of preserving areas as unique as the White Clay Creek.

And, the legislation I am introducing will do just that. It directs the National Park Service to incorporate 190.9 miles of the White Clay Creek and its tributaries into its National Wild and Scenic Rivers System. Along with the designation, all 15 local governments within the watershed area have unanimously supported, through the passage of resolutions, the ideals and goals of the White Clay Creek Management Plan. The plan, developed by the White Clay Creek Task Force, will ensure long-term protection of the White Clay Creek watershed, emphasizing the importance of local governments working together, which is key in obtaining the federal designation I am seeking today.

Designation of the White Clay Creek and its tributaries will bring national attention to the unique cultural, natural and recreational values of the area. It will provide an added level of protection from over development, by requiring an in-depth review by the National Park Service of any proposed project requiring federal permits or federal funding in the affected area. And finally, it elevates the value of the watershed when applying for state, local and federal preservation grants.

Of the 69,000 acres in the watershed, 5,000 acres are public lands owned by state and local governments, the rest is privately owned and maintained. There are no federal lands within the watershed and no federal dollars will be used to purchase any land within its boundaries.

I believe the protection of the White Clay Creek watershed to be one of the most important environmental initiatives I have undertaken since taking office in 1973, and it is my hope that Congress will act quickly on this bill so it can be preserved not only for us, but also for all the generations to come. ●

By Mr. EDWARDS:

S. 1850. A bill to amend section 222 of the Communications Act of 1934 to modify the requirements relating to the use and disclosure of customer proprietary network information, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation. TELEPHONE CALL PRIVACY ACT OF 1999

Mr. EDWARDS. Mr. President, I rise to talk about privacy and about how we can regain some control over our personal information. Privacy is an increasing concern for all Americans. And the public rightly believes that their control over some of their most personal information is being slowly but surely eroded.

Today I introduce legislation that would help end that erosion. The "Telephone Call Privacy Act of 1999," would prevent telecommunications companies from using an individual's personal phone call records without their consent, in order to sell that individual products or services.

Most Americans would be stunned to learn that the law does not protect them from having their phone records sold to third parties. Imagine getting a call one night—during dinner—and having a telemarketer try to sell you membership in a travel club because your phone calling patterns show frequent calls overseas. My legislation would prevent this from occurring without the individual's permission.

Mr. President, no one denies that the rapid development of modern technology has been beneficial. New and improved technologies have enabled us to obtain information more quickly and easily than ever before. Students can participate in classes that are being taught in other states, or even other countries. Current events can be broadcast around the world as they happen. And companies have streamlined their processes for providing goods and services.

But these remarkable developments can have a startling downside. They have made it easier to track personal information such as medical and financial records, and buying habits. And in turn, our ability to keep our personal information private is being eroded. I have to say there are times when it feels like companies know more about me than I know myself.

The list of ways our privacy is being eroded is growing longer and longer. And sadly telephone call privacy got added to the list this August when the 10th Circuit struck down FCC regulations aimed at protecting privacy and implementing congressional intent.

The decision was the result of a suit filed by U.S. West against the FCC arguing that its regulations restrict the ability of carriers to engage in commercial speech with customers. In August, the Tenth Circuit issued its decision in the case and agreed with U.S. West. The court stated that "privacy is not an absolute good because it imposes real costs on society."

I believe the court was terribly wrong. Individuals have a reasonable expectation that their calling habits are not being shared with third parties without their knowledge or permission. And when I weigh the right of people to control who has access to their personal information against the ability of companies to use only one of many marketing methods, there is no question that the right of people to privacy is overriding. Surely people have a right to control some of their most private information. And surely they have the right to prevent harassing and unwanted solicitations. I for one cannot believe that expanding the variety of marketing techniques at a company's disposal is more important than a person's privacy right.

Mr. President, let me describe how my legislation would address the problem. Current law defines information about who we call, how often, and how long we talk to them as "customer proprietary network information," or "CPNI." It is possible for telephone companies to track an individual's CPNI and use it to market various products and services to that person.

My legislation requires that consumers be notified about potential disclosures of their private calling information and allows them to have some measure of control over how their information can be used. Specifically, my bill would do two things.

First, if a telecommunications carrier wishes to use CPNI in order to market its own products or services to them, it must provide each customer with a clear and conspicuous notice stating the type of calling information that may be used and the purpose for which it will be used. The customer may contact the carrier to deny permission to use their information within 15 days of the notice. If the customer does not contact the carrier in that time, the carrier can use the customer's CPNI to market its products and services to that customer. In other words, customers are provided with a limited opportunity to "opt-out" of the sharing of their information under these circumstances.

The second part of my bill addresses situations where a carrier wishes to share a customer's CPNI with a third party, such as a telemarketer. In these situations, in addition to providing the customer with notice, the carrier must also receive prior written approval from the customer. My bill clearly spells out that customers must affirmatively "opt-in" before a carrier can sell calling information to any third party.

The "Telephone Call Privacy Act" also allows for some reasonable and common sense exceptions. If a telecommunications carrier uses a customer's CPNI to provide the customer with the very services the carrier used to obtain the calling information, or if law enforcement or the courts require CPNI for certain reasons, the carrier does not need to provide the customer with notice and the opportunity to optout or opt-in.

Mr. President, consumers are very worried about how their personal information is being used. In 1994, a Harris Survey assessed Americans' views about privacy. It found that eighty-two percent of people surveyed are concerned about threats to their personal privacy. And more specifically, more than half the people surveyed also stated they would be concerned if an interactive service engaged in "subscriber profiling" or using an individual's purchasing patterns to determine what types of goods and services to market to them. The survey also showed that people are less concerned about subscriber profiling if they are provided with notice that a profile would be created and how it would be used, and also if they are given access to the information in the profile.

Something must be done to empower consumers to prevent their private calling information from being used without their consent. The Telephone Call Privacy Act is an important step towards this goal. I believe the principles set forth in my legislation are a reasonable way to protect privacy and do not unduly burden the ability of businesses to market their products and services.

As Justice Brandeis said in his famous dissent in Olmstead v. U.S., "the right to be let alone [is] the most comprehensive of rights and the right most valued by civilized men." The government must not only refrain from violating this right, but it must also ensure its preservation. I believe the Telephone Call Privacy Act is a sensible means to achieving this goal. I ask unanimous consent that the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Resolved, That it is the sense of the Senate that—

- (1) the United States Postal Service should make preparations to issue a commemorative postage stamp recognizing the 4-H Youth Development Program's centennial; and
- (2) the Citizens' Stamp Advisory Committee should recommend to the Postmaster General that such a postage stamp be issued in 2002.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, I rise to make a few remarks in support of the 4-H postal stamp resolution.

We must not fail to notice all the admirable efforts of youth today across the country. One fine example of young people joining together to make a positive impact in our country is the 4-H Youth Development Program. In the year 2002, 4-H will celebrate its 100th Anniversary. To recognize this national organization's achievements, I am submitting this resolution urging the U.S. Postal Service to create a stamp in honor of their centennial.

4-H is comprised of over 6 million youth, 45 million alumni, and over 600,000 volunteers. As the 4-H pledge states, they are working everyday to become positive members of "their clubs, their communities, their country and their world." Although this program started at the turn of the century focusing on rural agriculture and homemaking, today it boasts a diverse group with nearly a quarter of its members coming from central cities.

With programs in every state and 80 other countries, 4-H has demonstrated the importance of its ideals. Members follow the motto "To make the best better." Their mission is to create supportive environments enabling youth and adults to reach their full potential. In this way they become capable, competent and caring citizens. As a result, participation in 4-H programs has helped reduce violence, substance abuse, teen pregnancy, and unethical behavior in millions of youth.

Every state has seen the benefits of 4-H membership. A recent report, "Programs of Excellence" demonstrates this. Published by the USDA, the report highlights noteworthy 4-H programs in various states from New Jersey to New Mexico. In my state of Idaho, 4-H achieved recognition for its programs in youth development and ethics in agriculture. Idaho's "Know Your Government" conferences were applauded for giving youth positive attitudes toward government and increasing civic involvement and government knowledge.

This positive organization deserves our support and recognition. A centennial stamp issued by the U.S. Postal Service is the perfect way to honor and celebrate a job well done. SENATE RESOLUTION 219—RECOGNIZING AND HONORING WALTER JERRY PAYTON AND EXPRESSING THE CONDOLENCES OF THE SENATE TO HIS FAMILY ON HIS DEATH

Mr. FITZGERALD (for himself, Mr. DURBIN, Mr. LOTT, Mr. COCHRAN, and Mr. HELMS) submitted the following resolution; which was considered and agreed to:

S. RES. 219

Whereas Walter Payton was a hero, a leader, and a role model both on and off the field; Whereas for 13 years, Walter Payton thrilled Chicago Bears' fans as the National Football League's (NFL's) all-time leading rusher—and as one of the greatest running backs ever to play the game—culminating with his induction into the Professional Football Hall of Fame;

Whereas after retiring from professional football in 1987, Payton continued to touch the lives of both his fellow Chicagoans and citizens of his native state of Mississippi, as a businessman and a community leader:

Whereas Walter Payton was born 1954 to Mrs. Alyne Payton and the late Mr. Edward Payton, and his historic career began as a star running back at Columbia High School in his native hometown of Columbia, Mississippi, which he called "a child's paradise." He went on to choose Jackson State University over 100 college offers, and to set nine university football records, eventually scoring more points than any other football player in the history of the National Collegiate Athletic Association;

Whereas the first choice in the 1975 NFL draft, Payton—or "Sweetness" as he was known to his fans—became the NFL's all-time leader in running and combined net yards and scored 110 touchdowns during his career with the Bears;

Whereas Walter Payton made the Pro Brown nine times and was named the league's Most Valuable Player twice, in 1977 and 1985;

Whereas in 1977, Payton rushed for a career-high, 1,852 yards and carried the Bears to the playoffs for the first time since 1963;

Whereas Payton broke Jim Brown's longstanding record in 1984 to become the league's all-time leading rusher, and finished his career with a record 16,726 total rushing yards;

Whereas in 1985-86, Walter Payton led the Bears to an unforgettable 15-1 season and Super Bowl victory—the first and only Super Bowl win in Bears' history;

Whereas Payton was inducted into the Pro Football Hall of Fame in 1993, and was selected this year as the Greatest All-Time NFL Player by more than 200 players from the NFL Draft Class of 1999:

Whereas Walter Payton matched his accomplishments on the football field with his selfless actions off the field on behalf of those in need. He excelled academically as well as athletically, earning a degree in special education from Jackson State University in just three and one half years, and going on to undertake additional graduate study. Payton worked throughout his adult life to improve the lives of others through personal involvement with many charitable organizations. He was particularly active in working with children facing physical, mental, or economic challenges. In 1988, he established the Halas/Payton Foundation, which continues his legacy of community involvement to help educate Chicago's youth;

Whereas Walter Payton was a dedicated man of faith and principle, who, as a lifelong Baptist, was known for his deep reverence for God; and, as a gracious and selfless citizen, was a devoted father with sterling personal integrity and a warm sense of humor. Walter Payton will always be remembered as a true gentleman with a heart full of genuine and active concern for others;

Whereas Walter Payton was truly an American hero in every sense of the term;

Whereas the members of the Senate extend our deepest sympathies to Walter Payton's family and the host of friends that he had across the country; and across the country; and Whereas Walter Payton died tragically on November 1, 1999, at age 45, but his legacy will live in our hearts and minds forever: Now therefore, be it.

Resolved, That the Senate—

(1) hereby recognizes and honors Walter Jerry Payton (A) as one of the greatest football players of all time; and (B) for his many contributions to the Nation, especially to children, throughout his lifetime; and

(2) extends its deepest condolences to Walter Payton's wife, Connie; his two children, Jarrett and Brittney; his mother, Alyne; his brother, Eddie; his sister, Pam; and other members of his family.

SEC. 609. SENSE OF THE SENATE REGARDING FAIR ACCESS TO JAPANESE TELE-COMMUNICATIONS FACILITIES AND SERVICES.

- (a) FINDINGS.—The Senate makes the following findings:
- (1) The United States has a deep and sustained interest in the promotion of deregulation, competition, and regulatory reform in Japan.
- (2) New and bold measures by the Government of Japan regarding regulatory reform will help remove the regulatory and structural impediments to the effective functioning of market forces in the Japanese economy.
- (3) Regulatory reform will increase the efficient allocation of resources in Japan, which is critical to returning Japan to a long-term growth path powered by domestic demand
- (4) Regulatory reform will not only improve market access for United States business and other foreign firms, but will also enhance consumer choice and economic prosperity in Japan.
- (5) A sustained recovery of the Japanese economy is vital to a sustained recovery of Asian economies.
- (6) The Japanese economy must serve as one of the main engines of growth for Asia and for the global economy.
- (7) The Governments of the United States and Japan reconfirmed the critical importance of deregulation, competition, and regulatory reform when the two governments established the Enhanced Initiative on Deregulation and Competition Policy in 1997.
- (8) Telecommunications is a critical sector requiring reform in Japan, where the market is hampered by a history of laws, regulations, and monopolistic practices that do not meet the needs of a competitive market.
- (9) As the result of Japan's laws, regulations, and monopolistic practices, Japanese consumers and Japanese industry have been denied the broad benefits of innovative telecommunications services, cutting edge technology, and lower prices that competition would bring to the market.
- (10) Japan's significant lag in developing broadband and Internet services, and Japan's lag in the entire area of electronic commerce, is a direct result of a noncompetitive telecommunications regulatory structure.
- (11) Japan's lag in developing broadband and Internet services is evidenced by the following:
- (A) Japan has only 17,000,000 Internet users, while the United States has 80,000,000 Internet users.

- (B) Japan hosts fewer than 2,000,000 websites, while the United States hosts over 30,000,000 websites.
- (C) Electronic commerce in Japan is valued at less than $1,000,000,000, while in the United States electronic commerce is valued at over $30,000,000,000.
- (D) 19 percent of Japan's schools are connected to the Internet, while in the United States 89 percent of schools are connected.
- (12) Leading edge foreign telecommunications companies, because of their high level of technology and innovation, are the key to building the necessary telecommunications infrastructure in Japan, which will only be able to serve Japanese consumers and industry if there is a fundamental change in Japan's regulatory approach to telecommunications.
- (b) SENSE OF THE SENATE.—It is the sense of the Senate that—
- (1) the appropriate officials in the executive branch should implement vigorously the call for Japan to undertake a major regulatory reform in the telecommunications sector, the so-called "Telecommunications Big Bang";
- (2) a "Telecommunications Big Bang" must address fundamental legislative and regulatory issues within a strictly defined timeframe;
- (3) the new telecommunications regulatory framework should put competition first in order to encourage new and innovative businesses to enter the telecommunications market in Japan:
- (4) the Government of Japan should ensure that Nippon Telegraph and Telephone Corporation (NTT) and its affiliates (the NTT Group) are prevented from using their dominant position in the wired and wireless market in an anticompetitive manner; and
- (5) the Government of Japan should take credible steps to ensure that competitive carriers have reasonable, cost-based, and nondiscriminatory access to the rights-of-way, facilities, and services controlled by NTT, the NTT Group, other utilities, and the Government of Japan, including—
- (A) access to interconnection at marketbased rates;
- (B) unrestricted access to unbundled elements of the network belonging to NTT and the NTT Group; and
- (C) access to public roads for the installation of facilities.

- "(i) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in clause (ii), in the event that the United States initiates a retaliation list or takes any other action described in section 301(c)(1) (A) or (B) against the goods of a foreign country or countries because of the failure of such country or countries to implement the recommendation made pursuant to a dispute settlement proceeding under the World Trade Organization, the Trade Representative shall periodically revise the list or action to affect other goods of the country or countries that have failed to implement the recommendation.
- ''(ii) EXCEPTION.—The Trade Representative is not required to revise the retaliation list or the action described in clause (i) with respect to a country, if—

SEC. 614. SENSE OF CONGRESS REGARDING COM-PREHENSIVE DEBT RELIEF FOR THE WORLD'S POOREST COUNTRIES.

- (a) FINDINGS.—Congress makes the following findings:
- (1) The burden of external debt has become a major impediment to economic growth and poverty reduction in many of the world's poorest countries.
- (2) Until recently, the United States Government and other official creditors sought to address this problem by rescheduling loans and in some cases providing limited debt reduction.
- (3) Despite such efforts, the cumulative debt of many of the world's poorest countries continued to grow beyond their capacity to repay.
- (4) In 1997, the Group of Seven, the World Bank, and the International Monetary Fund adopted the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries Initiative (HIPC), a commitment by the international community that all multilateral and bilateral creditors, acting in a coordinated and concerted fashion, would reduce poor country debt to a sustainable level.
- (5) The HIPC Initiative is currently undergoing reforms to address concerns raised about country conditionality, the amount of debt forgiven, and the allocation of savings realized through the debt forgiveness program to ensure that the Initiative accomplishes the goals of economic growth and poverty alleviation in the world's poorest countries.
- (6) Recently, the President requested Congress to provide additional resources for bilateral debt forgiveness and additional United States contributions to the HIPC Trust Fund.
- (b) SENSE of Congress.—It is the sense of Congress that— $\,$
- (1) Congress and the President should work together, without undue delay and in concert with the international community, to make comprehensive debt relief available to the world's poorest countries in a manner that promotes economic growth and poverty alleviation:
- (2) this program of bilateral and multilateral debt relief should be designed to strengthen and expand the private sector, encourage increased trade and investment, support the development of free markets, and promote broad-scale economic growth in beneficiary countries;
- (3) this program of debt relief should also support the adoption of policies to alleviate poverty and to ensure that benefits are shared widely among the population, such as through initiatives to advance education, improve health, combat AIDS, and promote clean water and environmental protection;
- (4) these debt relief agreements should be designed and implemented in a transparent manner and with the broad participation of the citizenry of the debtor country and should ensure that country circumstances are adequately taken into account;
- (5) no country should receive the benefits of debt relief if that country does not cooperate with the United States on terrorism or narcotics enforcement, is a gross violator of the human rights of its citizens, or is engaged in conflict or spends excessively on its military; and
- (6) in order to prevent adverse impact on a key industry in many developing countries, the International Monetary Fund must mobilize its own resources for providing debt relief to eligible countries without allowing gold to reach the open market, or otherwise adversely affecting the market price of gold.

- (b) CONTENTS.—In preparing the report required by subsection (a), the Secretary of Labor shall—
- (1) assess the degree to which the existing trade adjustment assistance programs address the adverse effects on agricultural commodity producers due to price suppression caused by increased imports of like or directly competitive agricultural commodities; and
- (2) examine the effectiveness of the program benefits authorized under subchapter B of chapter 2 and chapter 3 of title II of the Trade Act of 1974 in remedying the adverse effects, including price suppression, caused by increased imports of like or directly competitive agricultural commodities.
 - (c) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

- (2) Of the 17 countries in sub-Saharan Africa rated by the international watchdog group, Transparency International, as part of the 1998 Corruption Perception Index, 13 ranked in the bottom half.

- (4) As a party to the OECD Convention on Combating Bribery of Foreign Public Officials in International Business Transactions, the United States should encourage the highest standards possible with respect to bribery and corruption.
- (b) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that the United States should encourage at every opportunity the accession of sub-Saharan African countries, as defined in section 6, to the OECD Convention on Combating Bribery of Foreign Public Officials in International Business Transactions.

- (3) dryland degradation is an underlying cause of recurrent famine in Africa;
- (4) the United Nations Environment Programme estimates that desertification costs the world $42,000,000,000 a year, not including incalculable costs in human suffering; and
- (5) the United States can strengthen its partnerships throughout Africa and other nations affected by desertification, help alleviate social and economic crises caused by misuse of natural resources, and reduce dependence on foreign aid, by taking a leading role to combat desertification.

SEC. 170. (a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds

nessed a spate of senseless killings of innocent citizens caught in the crossfire of shootings. A Justice Department crime victimization survey found that while the city saw a decline in the homicide rate between 1996 and 1997, the rate was the highest among a dozen cities and more than double the second highest city.

(2) The District of Columbia has not made adequate funding available to fight drug abuse in recent years, and the city has not deployed its resources as effectively as possible. In fiscal year 1998, $20,900,000 was spent on publicly funded drug treatment in the District compared to $29,000,000 in fiscal year 1993. The District's Addiction and Prevention and Recovery Agency currently has only 2,200 treatment slots, a 50 percent drop from 1994, with more than 1,100 people on waiting lists.

(3) The District of Columbia has seen a rash of inmate escapes from halfway houses. According to Department of Corrections records, between October 21, 1998 and January 19, 1999, 376 of the 1,125 inmates assigned to halfway houses walked away. Nearly 280 of the 376 escapees were awaiting trial including two charged with murder.

(4) The District of Columbia public schools system faces serious challenges in correcting chronic problems, particularly long-standing deficiencies in providing special education services to the 1 in 10 District students needing program benefits, including backlogged assessments, and repeated failure to meet a compliance agreement on special education reached with the Department of Education.

(5) Deficiencies in the delivery of basic public services from cleaning streets to waiting time at Department of Motor Vehicles to a rat population estimated earlier this year to exceed the human population have generated considerable public frustration.

(6) Last year, the District of Columbia forfeited millions of dollars in Federal grants after Federal auditors determined that several agencies exceeded grant restrictions and in other instances, failed to spend funds before the grants expired.

(7) Findings of a 1999 report by the Annie E. Casey Foundation that measured the well-being of children reflected that, with one exception, the District ranked worst in the United States in every category from infant mortality to the rate of teenage births to statistics chronicling child poverty.
(b) Sense of the Congress.—It is the sense of the Congress that in considering the District of Columbia's fiscal year 2001 budget, the Congress will take into consideration progress or lack of progress in addressing the following issues:

(1) Crime, including the homicide rate, implementation of community policing, the number of police officers on local beats, and the closing down of open-air drug markets.

(2) Access to drug abuse treatment, including the number of treatment slots, the number of people served, the number of people on waiting lists, and the effectiveness of treatment programs.

(3) Management of parolees and pretrial violent offenders, including the number of halfway house escapes and steps taken to improve monitoring and supervision of halfway house residents to reduce the number of escapes.

(4) Education, including access to special education services and student achievement

(5) Improvement in basic city services, including rat control and abatement.

(6) Application for and management of Federal grants.

(7) Indicators of child well-being.

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

CALIFORNIA DESERT PROTECTION ACT ANNIVERSARY

• Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, this week marks the fifth anniversary of the California Desert Protection Act, a bill I authored that was signed into law on October 31, 1994. This Act marked a watershed event for California and for the 2.8 million people who visit this pristine national treasure each year. This was the most extensive land-protection bill in U.S. history and protected the largest parcel of land in the continental U.S.

The bill was unique in many ways. It designated national park and Bureau of Land Management wilderness areas comprising more than 7.7 million acres, the highest category of federal protection. It also designated the Death Valley National Park and Joshua Tree National Park in areas that formerly fell under less protected "national monument" status and created the 1.6 million acre Mojave National Preserve.

At the time of its passage, the Desert Protection Act was the centerpiece of a long and contentious battle among a variety of different stakeholders. It faced enormous opposition from groups and individuals concerned about private property rights, grazing permits, mining claims, and access for off-road vehicle use. The bill took nearly eight years to pass over objections from miners, property owners, hunters, ranchers and off-road enthusiasts, who thought the legislation would restrict too much land and hurt business. I worked hard to craft a bill that protected private property rights and safeguarded the region's job base while preserving a treasured resource—the California Desert.

I am proud to say that after 5 years there has not been a single instance of a land transaction that did not involve a willing seller and willing buyer. Grazing has not been impeded and valid mining rights have been upheld. The 25 million acres of California desert remain a place of extraordinary beauty and diverse resources. There are soaring sand dunes, ninety mountain ranges, extinct volcanoes, streams, lakes, wildflowers, the world's largest Joshua Tree forest, waterfalls and cactus gardens.

The land also includes over 100,000 archeological sites, including the only-known dinosaur tracks in California, believed to be more than 100 million years old. More than 760 different wildlife species call the rugged California desert home. The protected land has aided in the recovery of the desert tortoise and has provided thousands of acres of needed habitat for big horn sheep.

The Death Valley National Park consists of more than 3.3 million acres of spectacular desert scenery, interesting and rare desert wildlife, complex geology, undisturbed wilderness and dozens of historical and cultural interest sites. It contains the lowest point in the Western hemisphere, the Death Valley badwater, which rests 282 feet below sea level. The Joshua Tree National Park comprises two deserts and vividly illustrates the contrast between high and low desert. Below 3000 feet, the eastern half of the park is the land of the creosote bush, smoke trees and occotillo. The higher, cooler and slightly wetter Western part is dominated by Joshua Trees.

But the crown jewel of the California Desert is the Mojave National Preserve whose geographical and wildlife diversity are practically unrivaled. The area contains eleven mountain ranges, four dry lakes, cinder cones, badlands, innumerable washes, mesas, buttes, lava tube caves, alluvial fans and one of California's most complex sand dune systems.

I would like to especially thank Mary Martin, the Mojave National Preserve Superintendent for her diligence and the commendable job she has done balancing the diverse needs of the Preserve with those of all the stakeholders who work and/or use the land.

The desert parks have attracted record numbers of tourists in recent years from across the globe. Tourism has increased the visibility of California's natural resources, created jobs for desert residents and brought additional income. In 1997, the three parks created more than 6,000 jobs and over $22 million in tax revenue from tourist expenditures.

The passage of the California Desert Protection Act has been one of my proudest accomplishments in the Senate. But there is still more work to be done.

To encourage out nation's westward expansion, in 1864 Congress gave the railroad industry every other section of land in a 50 mile swath in what is now the Mojave National Preserve and Joshua Tree National Park. Most of this remaining checkerboard arrangement of land is owned by the Catellus Development Corporation.

Earlier this year David Myers, the Executive Director of the Wildlands Conservancy, brokered a deal with Catellus to sell these lands at well below market value. Through David's hard work, The Wildlands Conservancy raised $25.5 million in private funding and donated land. The Catellus Corporation agreed to donate an additional $16.4 million in land.

Through the Federal Land and Water Conservation Fund the U.S. would acquire 487,000 acres of protected land. This includes 150,000 acres of Congressionally designated Wilderness areas, 87,000 acres in the Mojave National Preserve, 18,700 acres in Joshua Tree, land in Big Morongo, San Gorgonio wilderness, and the Kelso Dunes.

This acquisition would formalize rights-of-way over 165 jeep trails and dirt access roads leading to 3.7 million acres of land used for hunting, hiking, sightseeing, camping and recreational vehicle use.

The land includes the biggest cactus gardens in the world at the Bigelow Cholla Gardens.

The acquisition also includes one hundred miles of scenic lands and historic water stops along historic route 66 and would help to conserve one of the single most intact portions of America's "Mother Road" which provided many Americans their first look at the Golden State and became the source of much of America's western migration folklore.

The purchase is supported by an overwhelming majority of constituents in the 40th Congressional District including Republicans and Democrats alike and a broad coalition of interest groups from the Sierra Club to the National Rifle Association. This transaction would be one of the biggest land acquisitions in California history and one of the most substantial gifts ever to the American people.

It is my hope that we can take advantage of this rare opportunity to purchase these valuable lands and remove any remaining impediments for the millions of hikers, campers, and other recreationists who will continue to visit and enjoy this pristine area in the heart of California.

ASTEROID RESEARCH

• Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I want to commend a group of New Mexicans who are achieving some phenomenal results. In fact, they're currently batting .500 and more. If they were baseball players they would be acclaimed on every sports page.

But instead of baseball, this group has discovered half of the comets that are currently visible through telescopes. One of their latest comet discoveries may be bright enough to see with binoculars next year. And it's probably safe to guess that the brightest of comets attracts an audience well in excess of those watching major league baseball.

Instead of baseball bats, they are using a telescope at the north end of White Sands Missile Range in New Mexico. This Lincoln Near-Earth Asteroid Research project is run by Lincoln Laboratory of the Massachusetts Institute of technology. A second telescope at the site started operations in the last week—that may boost their discoveries still further.

The project grew out of an Air Force study involving space surveillance. Now space surveillance isn't a new subject, but in this project they're using a new automated system with a highly sensitive electronic camera. It's a great tool for discovering objects that move in the heavens, like comets and asteroids. The performance of their system exceeds any competitor by at least ten times. Today, both the Air Force Office of Scientific Research and NASA provide the funding for this project.

Their asteroid batting average even exceeds their comet batting average. Since the first telescope started operation in March 1998, the project has accounted for about 70 percent of all the near-Earth asteroids that have ever been located. That's especially impressive since astronomers have been searching for such objects for over 60 years.

As they find these asteroids, they also project their future path through the heavens and explore any possibility for an impact with the Earth. In the course of their work, they've found four asteroids that might possibly approach Earth—but so far, careful evaluations of their probable future trajectories have shown that each of these objects should miss us. So, while the dinosaurs may have become extinct after an asteroid impact, so far our coast looks clear.

The project team is headed by Dr. Grant Stokes, a 1977 graduate of Los Alamos High School and a New Mexico native. Dr. Eric Pearce directs the team at White Sands. This team has truly revolutionized the art of finding comets and asteroids. I want to commend Dr. Stokes and Dr. Pearce along with their supporters at the Air Force and NASA. This large group of New Mexicans deserves the title of the world's best comet and asteroid hunting team.

THE CITY OF BOSTON'S CRUSADE AGAINST CANCER

• Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I welcome this opportunity to commend the city of Boston's Crusade Against Cancer and I commend our outstanding Mayor, Thomas M. Menino, for his leadership on this excellent program. Donald Gudaitis, the chief executive officer of the American Cancer Society's New England Division, has called the Crusade Against Cancer, "the most visionary public health initiative ever undertaken in any city around the prevention and early detection of cancer."

Through innovative measures such as giving city employees time off for cancer screenings, Boston's Crusade Against Cancer uses a small public investment to create a large public health payoff. It may well serve as a model for communities throughout the nation.

Boston's program provides essential preventive care to the city's low income and minority communities, who are hit disproportionately hard by the ravages of cancer. Many members of these communities are neglected by HMOs and private insurers and might otherwise never receive a cancer screening.

Nearly a quarter of the women using the program's mobile mammography van were receiving a mammogram for the very first time. Since early detection is a critical factor in the successful treatment of cancer, these preventive screenings are literally a lifesaver for many Bostonians. Boston's program has gained nationwide attention and was described in a recent article in the New York Times. I believe the article will be of great interest to all of us in Congress and I ask that it be printed in the RECORD.

[From the New York Times, Nov. 2, 1999] Boston Battles Cancer With a Citywide Mailing

(By Carey Goldberg)

BOSTON, Nov. 2—Cities often undertake campaigns to fight crime or litter.

This city is fighting what health officials call its No. 1 killer: cancer.

Over the last few days, every household in Boston, in theory, has been mailed a brochure describing how to prevent cancer and to detect it early if it develop.

The quarter-million English-and-Spanish brochures, Boston's largest public health mailing ever, are the flashiest element of the city's "crusade against cancer," but they are only one of many.

Boston's municipal employees are allowed to take four hours off each year for cancer screening—a rule that city officials say was the only one of its kind until Springfield, Mass, adopted a similar rule last week.

Over the last several months, about 1,600 chemotherapy patients have been given free rides to and from their sessions, thanks to hospitals and taxis participating in the city's crusade.

Other cities and states run anti-cancer programs as does the federal government. But overall, said Donald J. Gudaitis, chief executive officer of the American Cancer Society's New England division. "This is the most visionary public health initiative ever undertaken in any city around prevention and early detection of cancer."

Such a campaign may seem logical at a time when the death rate from heart disease has been dropping and cancer, the nation's No. 2 cause of death, kills more than half a million Americans every year.

But Mr. Gudaitis attributed the anticancer campaign in Boston to a particular asset: a personally interested mayor.

Mayor Thomas M. Menino's father died of prostate cancer, and the mayor, who does not normally play up his personal life, said in a telephone interview that he saw his father "go from a big brawny guy to 70 pounds."

"And you ask yourself, why?" Mayor Menino added. "I want to try to help other people out."

In particular, it seems, he wants to help the poor. Boston, like many other cities, has found that cancer death rates are especially high in poor and minority neighborhoods. Patchy health care makes poor people less likely to have checkups for cancer and thus more likely to die from it.

More than a year ago, Mayor Menino convened a panel of medical experts and cancer survivors to help decide what to do. The process, which led to the crusade against cancer, is continuing, said John Rich, medical director of the Boston Public Health Commission. But the panel established three initial goals: that all Boston households, receive information on cancer prevention, that all Bostonians receive appropriate screenings and that all cancer patients have transportation to and from treatment sessions.

Transportation may seem minor compared with the first two goals but not to chemotherapy patients, said Maureen Sullivan, vice president of the Massachusetts Bay region of the American Cancer Society who is a cancer survivor. It might not be bad getting to chemotherapy sessions, but, Ms. Sullivan added, "Let me tell you, coming home can be really awful, and not only for you but for everyone else on that bus with you."

Boston has introduced other help on wheels, a mobile mammography van that has been booked solid since it began six months ago. Officials say the city is fighting cancer in small ways as well—supplying sunscreen to its outdoor workers, for example—and in bigger ones: Mayor Menino supported a ban on smoking in Boston restaurants, despite heavy opposition from restaurateurs. The program includes television advertising and a new city agency, the Office of Cancer Prevention.

The campaign costs little, Mr. Menino said, perhaps, $100,000 for the mammography van, about $250,000 for the brochures and nothing for the transportation and time off.

Asked why Boston is undertaking an anticancer campaign now, when the disease has killed millions for decades, those involved cited two factors: the accumulation of research finding on cancer prevention and widespread disillusionment with the prevention promise offered by health maintenance organizations.

"If we look at the actual synthesis and explosion, if you will, of information on the relationship between life-style factors and cancer in the last 20 years, it really has moved beyond just smoking as a major cause," said Dr. Graham Colditz, director of education at the Harvard Center for Cancer Prevention, which is participating in the campaign.

Dr. Colditz said the center had determined that at least 50 percent of cancer cases could be prevented through behavioral changes alone. The screenings could also prevent deaths among those whose cancer would be detected early, he said.

The brochure advises people to eat a healthy diet, to get at least 30 minutes of physical activity every day, to keep their weight down, to drink less alcohol, to avoid smoking, to avoid sexually transmitted diseases and to protect themselves from the sun

None of that was news to Mary Caulfield, a 58-year-old retired resident of the Dorchester section of Boston. But, Ms. Caulfield said, "I think a lot of newcomers, foreigners, probably don't understand even things like immunizations."

The Boston anticancer program is impressive, Sandra Mullin, spokeswoman for the New York City Department of Health, said upon hearing it described. New York does not give municipal employees time off for screenings, Ms. Mullin said, though it periodically includes reminders of the need for screenings in employees' paychecks, and it has a program to encourage exercise at lunch

While New York has done no blanket mailing and is not as involved in cancer screening, it does provide cancer information through mobile health vans, Ms. Mullin said. The city focuses some of its other anticancer efforts on antismoking programs and on making sure that managed care plans screen Medicaid patients for cancer.

What the Boston campaign will try next remains under discussion. Among some ideas mentioned: persuading private employers to give employees four hours off for cancer screening, making it easier for Bostonians to bicycle or job to work and making programs that help smokers quit available to anyone who wants them.

As for immediate results, Mayor Menino said that the four hours off for screening had already led to the early detection of some cancer and that nearly 5 percent of the women who used the mammography van had found suspicious lumps. Nearly one-fourth of those who used the van said the mammogram was their first, the mayor added.

For the most part, the campaign is expected to yield only gradual results. Certainly, the immediate effect of the brochure mailing seemed a bit underwhelming: Of more than a dozen people interviewed on the streets of Dorchester, most said they had paid little if any attention to the brochure, although some said they had set it aside to read later.

"Sometimes I'm just too tired to read," said Esther Ellis, 72, who nonetheless was having her annual mammogram at a local health center. "I just leave it to God. God respects my body."

Jose Navarro, a flea market vendor, said he did not recall getting the brochure. But when he read it in Spanish on the spot, he expressed surprise at what he learned.

"Drinking?" he exclaimed. "I know it's bad for you, I know it's bad for your liver, but I didn't know it causes cancer."

David Sheets, a 45-year-old friend of Mr. Navarro, said that he had saved the brochure at his South End home to read later but that the idea of cancer "doesn't bother me yet." "My mother died of it. my father died of "My mother died of it, my father died of it," Mr. Sheets said. "It doesn't faze me."

He smokes and refuses to quit, he said. Then, referring to cancer, he added, "I just think that it won't happen to me."•

RECOGNIZING THE MT. BAKER PTA

• Mr. GORTON. Mr. President, I take the floor today to applaud the members and volunteers of the Mt. Baker Parent-Teacher Association that have successfully raised over $100,000 for its schools. Mt. Baker is a small, rural community just south of the Canadian border that lacks a sufficient tax-base to cover the costs of buying new technology for its schools.

In an effort to raise funds to purchase up-to-date resources for their students, volunteers from the PTA opened a small restaurant with their own time and resources. To date, this venture has provided over $100,000 to improve education in Mt. Baker. For that reason, I am pleased to present one of my Innovation in Education Awards to the Mt. Baker PTA.

In January of 1989, 20 parents took out a loan and purchased a run-down restaurant booth at the Northwest Washington Fair Grounds. Parents and volunteers spent countless hours cleaning and preparing the restaurant for its opening in March of 1989. For the past 10 years, volunteers and parents have worked at hundreds of community events to feed the fairground visitors, raising money that funded new research and learning equipment for math and science students, field trips across western Washington, and countless other tools for learning that have enhanced the education at all Mt. Baker schools.

The volunteers at the Mt. Baker PTA demonstrate that local educators and parents know what their students need to succeed and deserve the freedom and flexibility in the Federal education funds to better educate their children.

The innovative thinking and hard work of the Mt. Baker community teaches its students of the importance of a good education and how a community can work together to achieve a common goal. The Mt. Baker PTA is an example for all of us to follow. I hope that my colleagues will join me in commending the people of this community for their hard work to improve the education for their children.

IN RECOGNITION OF LUIS ALBERTO ROBLES PADILLA, JR.

• Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, on September 9, 1999, I had the pleasure to be one of the keynote speakers at the Sixth Annual Scholarship Awards Banquet sponsored by the Hispanic College Fund, Inc. The Hispanic College Fund selects a student among the group of scholarship recipients to convey remarks on their behalf at the Annual Awards Banquet. Mr. Luis Robles, who attends Stanford University, where I attended Law School, spoke to the crowd of over one hundred people which included Members of Congress, Hispanic Business Leaders, friends of the Hispanic College Fund and family members of the award recipients.

Even though Louis is not from my home state of New Mexico, I feel that it is important to recognize the dedication, hard work, and commitment that this young man has undertaken in his academics and in his life despite great adversity. The remarks that Luis made to those in attendance that night left the room in utter silence. His remarks, and those of the teacher who nominated him for the scholarship, show that nothing in life is unattainable. This young man serves as an example that if you believe in yourself, believe in hard work, and believe you can achieve your goals, you can do anything and be anyone you want to be.

Mr. President, I respectfully ask that the attached statement which Mr. Robles made to the Sixth Annual Scholarship Awards Dinner and that of his teacher, Mr. David Layton, be printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD. The statement follows:

REMARKS BY LUIS ALBERTO ROBLES

I remember the day well . . . a few weeks after weeks after Thanksgiving in 1986. The gray Seattle morning smelled like drizzle as my father, Luis, and my mother, Maria, escorted me along evergreen-lined 8th street, to the school bus stop for the very first time. The other children laughed and frolicked. But without knowing English, without knowing what they said, my parents and I only stared in wonder.

Next thing I know the enormous school bus is pulling away, with me on board: frightened and alone. Hot tears streamed down my cheeks. The window was cold against my nose. My parents smiled worriedly, waved, and off I went . . . to Cherry Crest Elementary.

I had no idea what the future held.

I had no idea what graduation was, let alone college.

I had no idea that some day in the distant future I would standing here before you tonight.

 $Good\ evening.$

Buenas Tardes.

My name is Luis Alberto Robles Padilla, Jr. I am a sophomore majoring in Industrial engineering at Stanford University. I feel very privileged to join you tonight, and am honored to be speaking on behalf on this year's scholarship recipients.

On their and my behalf, I would like to offer a heartfelt thanks to the Hispanic College Fund, the corporate sponsors, the Board of Trustees, and American Airlines.

I would also like to thank the Lockheed Martin Corporation, in particular, for my scholarship. The scholarship is a tremendous help to my family, and I am truly thankful.

I would also like to share a part of my story: personal experiences that have shaped my life, ideas that have shaped what I believe, and people that have made me into the person that I am today. I will begin on December 17th, 1997, my 17th birthday:

"Dr. Johnson... Dr. Johnson..." As I wearily walked down the artificially lit corridor, I realized someone was paging my father's doctor. I turned and ran towards the intensive care unit that I had left only a few minutes ago, towards my terrified mother and toward my father's labored breathing. The sterilized odor of Harrison Memorial Hospital overwhelmed me as I raced through a maze of white walls to confront his death.

After bolting through heavy metal doors, I saw doctors and nurses rushing frantically around the room. I could only hear one sound. It filled the air, was audible above all the commotion, and drowned out the heavy pounding of my heart. The monotonous beep of the monitor meant "Pappy" was gone forever.

While sitting next to him, a body drained of the warmth and energy I had always known, I focused at the crimson drops that stained the yellow linoleum floor and the crisp white sheets; slowly remembering what a terrible ordeal the past six weeks of hospitalization had been. My life had changed forever since the day I sped through traffic, with my Dad shivering in the back seat next to my worried mother. I was scared to death without even knowing that the killer was Leukemia.

Although the chemotherapy proceeded well, it also gradually wore my father away. The first side effects were a loss of appetite, accompanied by nausea and vomiting. His hair fell out next, and I could tell my father's courage was beginning to waver. A look of pain and anguish had replaced his usual smile, and with each passing day, he looked more like my grandfather. It all seemed like a bad dream, both frightful and surreal.

While packing his belongings, hours after he had passed away, I found a note intended for me. It was in Father's handwriting; blurry scribbles because the medicine made his hands shake. I sat down and cried because it said in Spanish, "ya es tiempo de luchar," which means, "it is time to take up the struggle."

The poem he wrote to me, titled "Oda a mi Hijo," "Ode to my Son" goes like this:

Quiero cantarte una cancion,
(I want to sing you a song)
Desde lo mas profundo de mi alma,
(From the deepest part of my soul)
Brisa suave, que refresca y calma,
(Soft breeze that refreshes and soothes)
Tu tierra fecunda que riega mi oracion.
(Your fertile soil that showers my prayer)
El agua se hizo luz y dio una planta,
(The water turned to light and created a plant)

La tierra hecha vida, dio on rosal con un boton,

(The soil transformed into life and bore a rose in full blossom)

Carne de dos almas hecha con amor, (Flesh from two souls, made with love) Fue la suave brisa, que refresca y canta.

(It was the soft breeze that refreshes and sings)

Con el correr de los años, pajaro se volvio, (As the years passed, it transformed into a bird)

Dejar el nido quiere, hace el intento de volar, (Yearning to leave the nest, it attempts to fly)

La brisa, el amor, el cielo derramo,

(The breeze, the love, the heavens over-flowed)

El destino esta en tus manos, ya es tiempo de luchar.

(Destiny is in your hands, its time to take up the struggle)

I find it hard to understand Dad's absence, and that he left exactly on my seventeenth birthday. But though I miss him everyday, I am grateful for all the time we spent together and everything my father taught me. Through my family's Mexican restaurant, he showed me what Hispanic business leadership is: hard work, dedication, and most importantly, helping others and the community.

My father pointed me in the right direction, and made me believe in myself. There is good in this beautiful world, and life will always receive my best effort. Rather than cause embarassment, my heritage will always instill pride within me, and I will succeed. I know he is proud of me.

Ultimately, by succeeding I hope to influence other Hispanics. When I look at many of my Hispanic peers, I see them giving up on school, giving up bright futures, and giving up their dreams. Their intellectual capacity has nothing to do with it, and the issue is complicated, yet they also do not have the support or the opportunities.

At this point, I would like to thank my parents for their unending love, my family for their constant encouragement, and all of my friends for their help and support. I would also like to thank Mr. Paul Torno, who worked with me even after retiring. Special thanks to Mr. David Layton even though I lost my father, a great man and teacher, I am lucky to have found another great teacher, another great man. Finally, I thank my mother, an incredibly brave and strong woman. Most of all, however, I thank God all the blessings.

I and the other scholarship recipients, as well as countless other Hispanics, are yearning to fly . . . trying to fly . . . learning to fly . . .

Once again, I would like to thank the Hispanic College Fund, and its sponsors.

We want to demonstrate that anything is possible by working hard and following our dreams.

We want to see more Hispanics graduating from high school and college.

We want to have more Hispanics in business and government positions.

We want to truly thank all of you for helping us strive towards our goals.

Thank you and good night.

March 25, 1999.

To whom it may concern, Luis Robles has asked me to recommend him for acceptance for your scholarship. Few tasks will be as easy for me to do. I have known him as a student for two years in both honors history and honors English classes so I feel quite qualified to speak about his application.

It is impossible for me to recommend Luis without telling his story first. No other student in my 19 years of teaching has accomplished more with such adversity. An only child of immigrants from Mexico, Luis learned more than values from his parents; he learned who he was, who he could become, and what he could give back to his community. His father ran a small restaurant on our island and hired family and friends who needed work; but to keep dreams alive he insisted they go to night school and paid their tuition if they maintained a B. This pride and dignity wrapped in such strong humor are his legacy. Tragically last year his father died of Leukemia in his son's arms on his son's 17th birthday. As the only one who spoke clear English, Luis sold the restaurant. managed his mother's accounts. supported her till she finished her AA degree, and found work at the local hospital.

His commute to Bainbridge is 60-80 minutes each way. But he knew what he wanted—to be blunt we run one of the hardest programs in the state. He has aced every honors or AP course we offer. His maturity is beyond his years. He seeks out criticism and he listens and grows with suggestions. Specifically he has worked hard on his writing knowing that here his voice needs to be clear and purposeful. In both independent and group projects, Luis has had the discipline and creativity to make the connections between ideas, events, and more importantly to things in his own life. His work has shown original thought and a true conviction to understand the complications of individuals struggling to find meaningful solutions to their problems. Luis embodies the belief that this is his life, his chance to make a difference, his chance to give back far more than he takes. Make no mistake, he will take advantage of all you offer.

Luis has shared with my family the poetry his father wrote and the poems he has now written back. It is his genuineness that I wish to commend most. His 4.0 G.P.A. has been matched, the high marks on the SAT equaled, but none have his vision.

It should be obvious how strongly I feel about Luis; his heart separates him from the rest. If you have the chance to talk with him, you will understand.

Sincerely,

 $\begin{array}{c} \text{DAVID LAYTON,} \\ \textit{Faculty, Honors Program.} \bullet \end{array}$

HONORING ANNE KANTEN

• Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President, I speak today to say a few words about a remarkable farm leader and humanitarian, Anne Kanten.

Anne has served for 18 years on the board of directors of the Farmers Legal Action Group (F.L.A.G.), a non-profit law firm based in St. Paul, Minnesota, and dedicated to helping family farmers obtain economic and social justice. I salute Anne Kanten for her enlightened guidance to F.L.A.G. during her years as a director and her years on the board. But far more than that, I want to take this moment to acknowledge Anne Kanten's lifetime of service to others.

Anne served as Minnesota's Deputy Commissioner of Agriculture and as Chief Administrator of the Minnesota Farm Advocate Program during the years of farm crisis in the 1980's. She was a founding member of the American Agriculture Movement who, with her husband Chuck and son Kent, helped plan and carry out the Washington, DC Tractorcade of 1979. In addition, Anne has been a long time spokesperson for stewardship of the land and its people through her various leadership roles in her church.

Her efforts to achieve justice for farm families continue to this day.

Anne Kanten grew up on an Iowa farm, the daughter of immigrants who came to our country in pursuit of a better life. By her own admission, she longed to escape the 1930's Depression of her rural childhood. After attending college and becoming a teacher, Anne became re-connected to the land when she married Chuck Kanten, a young farmer from Milan, Minnesota. Anne and Chuck Kanten represent the best of American Life. They raised a wonderful family on their farm home. They believe strongly in giving of themselves.

I consider myself honored and fortunate to count Anne Kanten as my friend. I ask the Senate today to join me in recognizing Anne Kanten for her years of service to the Farmers Legal Action Group and to farm families everywhere.

DELAWARE WELL REPRESENTED AT AMERICAN CANCER SOCIETY GOLF CHAMPIONSHIP

• Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, I rise today to salute four Delaware golfers who continue to make the citizens of my State proud.

Last June, Margaret Butler, Mary Kaczorowski, Joyce Ruddick and Alice Wooldridge played in and won the American Cancer Society Golf Championship at Maple Dale Country Club in Dover, Delaware. They then advanced to the Mid-Atlantic Championship at The Homestead in Hot Springs, Virginia and won the Delaware State Title in Division 3. And on December 3rd and 4th, they will be representing Delaware and looking to continue their winning ways at the P.G.A. West in LaQuinta, California.

Having talked with members of this foursome on a few occasions, it is clear to me that these women take their golf quite seriously. Together, they embody the spirit of competition and sportsmanship and are fine examples of personal achievement and Delaware pride. But most importantly, these women realize that their participation in this event helps to raise essential funding for cancer research and programs. Millions of Americans suffer from cancerrelated illnesses, and events like these give us all hope for finding a cure.

While I acknowledge that I may be a bit biased in my viewpoint, I also know a group of champions when I see them. I, among many, believe that talent is often overrated and that character is the true determining factor for any success one has in life.

I have seen these women drive a golf ball and I can confidently say that both talent and character reign supreme for this team. It is therefore my pleasure to extend to them my deep expression of thanks for having represented Delaware so well this year and, as they prepare for their biggest challenge to date, to wish them continued success in the National tournament.

We in Delaware are very proud of these four women, and we will be rooting for them!●

IN HONOR OF REVEREND MONSIGNOR ANDREW P. LANDI

• Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, I rise to pay tribute to Reverend Monsignor Andrew P. Landi, a son of New York and internationally known humanitarian, who was taken from us this past September. He was 92.

Monsignor Landi was the retired assistant executive director and of Catholic Relief Services in New York City from 1966 to 1979. Upon of his retirement he was named assistant treasurer, a position he held until the time of his death. Monsignor devoted himself to the service of the poor and disposed throughout the world regardless of race, creed, or nationality.

Catholic Relief Services was founded in 1943 by the Catholic Bishops of the United States to alleviate suffering by removing its causes and promoting social justice beyond our boarders. Their mission is to aid in the development of people by fostering charity and justice throughout the world. Monsignor Landi's devotion to this mission was ceaseless

At a time when we are increasingly egocentric, we would do well to remember a man whose ministry to the disadvantaged was distinguished as a no other for faithful and untiring service. I wish to highlight the central role he played as a petitioner for overseas relief activities to numerous Federal agencies and Congress. He met with nearly every Pope since Pope Pius XII and counted Mother Teresa among his friends.

This champion of the downtrodden was sent to Rome in 1944 to minister to the victims of World War II. He spent the next two decades providing haven to refuges of civil strife and natural disasters. He was named the Regional Director of the Catholic Relief Services for Europe, the Middle East, and North Africa in 1962.

Monsignor Landi began his vocation as a parish priest at Our Lady of the Scapular and St. Stephen's Church in Manhattan in 1934. St. Stephens was at one time the largest Catholic parish in New York City. It is a special New York treasure as it contains several works by 19th century Italian Painter Constantino Brumidi who is best know for having done much of the artwork on display in the United States Capitol

In 1939, Monsignor Landi became the associate director of Catholic Charities in Brooklyn, NY. As I recently noted, Catholic Charities of the Brooklyn-Queens Diocese is the largest Roman Catholic human services agency in the nation. Perhaps on earth.

One of seven children orphaned after the death of their mother in 1913, he focused his mission toward young people. His benevolence toward the troubled youth of Brooklyn was exceptional.

During Monsignor Landi's 65 years in the priesthood he received numerous honors from several governments and organizations. He was honored by our own New York State Assembly which issued a citation on the his 90th birthday in recognition his humanitarian efforts.

In closing I would like to express my deep gratitude to Monsignor Landi for his life long commitment to ending social injustice especially toward children living in poverty. His distinguished devotion to God and his fellow man is a model to us all.

TRAGEDY IN ARMENIA

• Mr. TORRICELLI. Mr. President, I rise today to express my sorrow at last week's tragedy in the Armenian National Parliament. Prime Minister Sarkissian, Speaker Demirchian, and six other legislators were killed. While we may never know what motivated the gunmen to storm the building, we do know that a single act of terror was directed against individuals who were attempting to build and strengthen Armenia's democratic institutions. Armenia has made positive movement toward widespread democracy and free markets, and the leaders who lost their lives had played important roles in these reforms. As a result, this tragedy is truly a great loss for the Armenian people. For this reason, I have joined Senator Abraham in introducing a resolution condemning the incident.

After months of progress on a range of issues, from the rule of law, to Nagorno-Karabakh, to fighting corruption, Armenia is faced with a huge obstacle to overcome. Just this past week, Armenia held local elections nation-wide that were deemed free and fair by independent observers. These elections were not without minor irregularities, but the overall impact has been to reaffirm and further strengthen the commitment of the Armenian people to an open election process.

On the complex issue of peace in Nagorno-Karabakh, significant progress has been made recently. Bilateral meetings between President Kocharian and President Aliyev have been frequent and intensive in response to our encouragement for greater results. Just hours before the attack, Prime Minister Sarkissian had met with President Kocharian and Deputy Secretary of State Talbott to discuss the peace process. Clearly, it will be difficult for Armenia to move forward without Sarkissian's presence—difficult, but not impossible.

Given the tremendous amount of progress Armenia has made since declaring independence from the Soviet Union, I am confident that the Armenian people will move past this tragic event and continue to build upon their successes. But the key to doing so is ongoing support from the United States. Together, our two countries have built strong ties, focusing upon a prosperous, secure and democratic future. It is critical that, in the midst of such overpowering grief, we renew our support for the people of Armenia and their leaders. As they continue to build upon the principles that the victims had worked to fulfill, the people of Armenia should know that the United States supports their efforts. I hope my colleagues will join me in sending this message to the Armenian people.

TRIBUTE TO DR. PERCY G. HARRIS

• Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I ask my colleagues to join me in paying tribute to Dr. Percy G. Harris, a distinguished Iowan from Cedar Rapids who is retiring after forty years of practicing family medicine. His biography is truly a great American story.

Dr. Harris was born into a poor family in Mississippi in 1927. He was orphaned as a teenager and moved to Waterloo, Iowa to live with his aunt. High school was a struggle for Percy Harris, but he finally received his diploma at the age of 19. After that, he was determined to make something of his life, and set his sights on becoming a doctor. He was admitted to medical school at Howard University in Washington, DC. He paid his way by working as an elevator operator and janitor. After he received his medical degree. Dr. Harris returned to Cedar Rapids, Iowa to open a family practice.

His practice grew and flourished over four decades. His patients credit him with the old-fashioned virtue of patience and say he is always willing to spend extra time caring for them. He believes in giving back and is active in the community as a civil rights leader and as a volunteer athletic doctor for Jefferson High School.

Percy Harris's life is a list of firsts. He was the first African-American to hold an internship at St. Luke's Hospital in Cedar Rapids. He served as Linn County, Iowa's first and only medical examiner. In 1977. Governor Robert Ray appointed him to the Iowa Board of Regents where he served two terms as the Board's first African-American member.

Dr. Harris encountered adversity along the way, but he chose to view it as a challenge rather than an obstacle. In 1961, he and his wife, Lileah, decided to build a home for their growing family. They set their sights on a piece of property in one of Cedar Rapids' all white neighborhoods. The neighbors were up in arms, but Percy and Lileah Harris persisted and eventually purchased the property in a dispute that gained national attention. They built their family home on the property and raised 12 fine children, all of whom are now grown and successful in their own right.

Mr. President, Dr. Harris is one in a long American tradition of medical practitioners who put patients before profits, who lead by example, and who dedicate themselves to the well-being of humankind, from their community to their nation. I congratulate him on his many achievements and wish him well in all future endeavors. I know wherever he chooses to put his many talents, he will leave his mark.

IN HONOR OF TED WINTER'S 50TH BIRTHDAY

• Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President. I speak today to recognize a very special Minnesotan. Ted Winter will be celebrating his 50th birthday the day after Thanksgiving. Friends and family will be gathering at the American Legion in Fulda, Minnesota, to honor this very good and decent man.

It is very appropriate that this year his birthday falls so close to Thanksgiving because as a Minnesotan I am very thankful that Ted so ably represents the people of Southwestern Minnesota in the State Legislature; I am thankful that Ted continues to be a strong voice for those struggling to maintain their family farms; I am thankful that Ted struggles daily to ensure the vitality of our rural communities and that he is committed to a vision of Minnesota that is rich and diverse.

In the last few years, Ted has been the driving force behind uniting Midwest State Legislators in calling for a change in federal farm policy. He has been central in calling attention to the devastating effect the concentration of power in agriculture is having on family farmers. Day in and day out, Ted spends time away from his own farm to work with farm organizations and other farmers to come up with ways that family farmers can survive to farm another day. He drives throughout the state to make sure that any meeting discussing the future of Minnesota includes a discussion about the future of family farms and rural communities.

I am pleased to be able to speak today to honor my friend, Ted Winter.

HONORING KAREN LEACH

• Mr. REED. Mr. President, I rise today to honor an outstanding individual who has dedicated her life to the education of our young people. Karen Leach of Johnston, Rhode Island, is retiring from the Providence School Department after nearly thirty years of dedicated service.

Since Karen graduated from Rhode Island College in 1969 with a Bachelor's Degree in Elementary and Special Education, she has received Masters of Education Degrees in both Elementary Education and in Administration for Elementary and Middle Schools. She has also furthered her professional development by achieving certification in many areas.

The capital of Rhode Island, Providence is at the heart of our state's urban center and during her career, Karen has been assigned to several schools in the District. Karen began her long and accomplished career as a teacher and dedicated her efforts toward Special Education. During her tenure, the field of education has seen tremendous change—from curriculum. to technology, to teaching methods to administrative practices. Throughout nearly three decades of service. Karen has brought efficiency. expertise and professionalism to her many challenging assignments.

In 1988, Karen was named Supervisor of Elementary/Pre-School Education for the Providence School Department and in 1992, she became Principal of the Sackett Street Elementary School and the Reservoir Avenue Elementary School. Since the 1992-1993 school year, she has been Principal of the Sackett Street Elementary School and she is retiring from her present administration position as Interim Acting Superintendent of Teaching and Learning.

Karen Leach is a person of great integrity, compassion and initiative. She is accomplished and well respected for her many contributions to the Providence School System. She has made a positive impact on the quality of education, and in the lives of students, especially those with special needs. Most recently, Karen's leadership as a Principal and as an Administrator has left a lasting mark on the City of Providence.

So many young people have had their lives enriched by one person's efforts. Karen Leach's commitment and her tangible accomplishments clearly demonstrate that an investment in education is indeed an investment in the future.

Mr. President, I ask my colleagues to join me in commending Karen Leach for her commitment to educational excellence and for her efforts to improve the overall quality of our education system. Indeed, she has made a tremendous difference in the lives of her students. As Karen Leach leaves the Providence School Department, she plans to continue as a professional educational consultant. I wish her well and remain confident that we will hear more news of this outstanding educator's good works.

HEALTHCARE RESEARCH AND QUALITY ACT OF 1999

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the HELP Committee be discharged from further consideration of S. 580, and the Senate then proceed to its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The clerk will report the bill by title.

The legislative clerk read as follows: A bill (S. 580) to amend title IX of the Public Health Service Act to revise and extend the Agency for Healthcare Policy and Research.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill.

AMENDMENT NO. 2506

(Purpose: To provide for a complete substitute)

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, there is a substitute amendment at the desk submitted by Senators Frist, Jef-FORDS, and Kennedy. I ask for its consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows: The Senator from Texas [Mr. Gramm], for Mr. Frist, for himself, Mr. Jeffords, and Mr. Kennedy, proposes an amendment numbered 2506.

ments Submitted.'')
Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, ten years ago, Congress created the Agency for Health Care Policy and Research to help us deal more effectively with critical national priorities in health care and research. I introduced the legislation with Senator HATCH, and it passed as part of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1989. It was based on a precursor organization—the National Center for Health Services Researchthat was created by President Lyndon Johnson. The Agency's focus is primarily on health services research and other cutting edge methods to improve clinical practice. In its first decade, the Agency has proven its worth time and again by providing valuable information to Congress, health professionals, patients, businesses, and many others.

This reauthorization begins a new chapter for the Agency. New responsibilities come with its new name, the Agency for Healthcare Research and Quality. While the Agency's intramural and extramural research will remain focused on general outcomes research and assessments of the how well the nation is doing with respect to coverage and provision of health care, there will also be increased activity on research to monitor and improve the quality of care.

The Agency will serve an increasingly important role in the nation's effort to measure and improve the quality of health care, and to expand access to health insurance and health care. Research supported by the Agency provides critical information about the use, cost and quality of health services. As the health care market evolves, these data are necessary for informed decisions to help patients, providers, employers, government administrators, and policymakers. While the Agency is not directly involved in making policy, its research and expertise provide informed guidance to those who are. This legislation will help the Agency maintain and expand its efforts to encourpublic-private partnerships age every level of the health care system.

The American people deserve to know that their hard-earned dollars are buying high-quality care. They want to know, as they are voluntarily or involuntarily enrolled in managed care plans, that the quality of care they receive is improving, not declining. Employers deserve to know that their investments in health benefits lead to healthier employees. As a result of the Agency's work, more and more Americans will be able to make the right decisions about their health care.

The Agency also provides an important link between advances in medical research and technology, and adoption of these practices by the public and private sectors. The research conducted and supported by the Agency helps identify erroneous denials of treatment, and informs the nation about treatments that are the most effective or have the highest quality. While the Agency is not in the business of developing or promoting practice guidelines, its recommendations and research findings lead to significant savings for patients, providers, health plans, and taxpayers, while simultaneously improving the quality of care.

For example, if the Agency's recommendations were applied to even 20 percent of patients, the nation could save hundreds of millions of dollars annually—ranging from $8.5 million for enhanced prenatal care for diabetic women to $130 million for therapies that prevent stroke. We should do all we can to see that decision-making on health care is guided by the best available scientific information. The Agency for Healthcare Research and Quality will to help us achieve that goal.

The reauthorization of the Agency also provides an opportunity to expand research on health care for those with special needs. Our success in treating these patients is an important measure of the overall effectiveness of the nation's health care system. More needs to be done to evaluate how well our system treats those who need the most, and often the most complex, services. Persons with disabilities are often underrepresented in health services research. Assessing how well our fragmented system cares for a person with mental retardation or spina bifida or parapalegia or a person nearing the end-of-life will enable us to assess where better care can lead to both a higher quality of life and significant savings.

Reliable information about medical technology is an essential component of providing high quality health care to all Americans at a reasonable cost. It is especially important for Congress to be able to compare and understand the effectiveness of different technologies. For this reason, I was a strong supporter of the Congressional Office of Technology Assessment, which evaluated technologies in a wide range of scientific disciplines and provided a great deal of useful information to Congress before its funding was cut off in 1995. Fortunately, the Agency is fulfilling this essential role in the area of health care, and its mission is now more important than ever.

The ongoing biomedical revolution is bringing extraordinary benefits to our society. The next century may well be the century of life sciences. Every day, we hear about new medical procedures and technologies. To fulfill their promise, the quality and effectiveness of new procedures and technologies must be carefully evaluated. The Agency is uniquely qualified to meet this challenge, and to provide important information about the value and effectiveness of existing procedures and therapies.

The assessment reports prepared by the Agency are based on sound scientific data. Expanding access to the Agency's findings is an important step toward improving the overall quality of health care for the nation. We need to do all we can to see that the extraordinary discoveries being made in biomedical research are brought as quickly as possible to the bedside of the patient.

This reauthorization puts a new face on the Agency and refocuses and refines its functions. Adequate funding for the Agency is essential, and I look forward to working with the Appropriations Committees and the Administration to achieve these needed and wise investments in better health care for all.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I am pleased that we are witnessing today the passage of legislation that is critical to improving the quality of health care in this country. The "Healthcare Research and Quality Act of 1999," which I introduced on March 10, 1999, will significantly increase our federal investment in health care research and science-based evidence to improve the quality of patient care.

The health care system is a dramatically different system today than a decade ago when the Congress established the Agency for Health Care Policy and Research. The financing and delivery of health care has changed as we have moved to more complex systems such as managed care. At the same time, there has been an explosion of new medical information stemming from our biomedical research advances. As a result, patients and providers face increased difficulty in tracking and understanding the latest scientific findings.

As we have seen in the debate on the Patients' Bill of Rights Act, issues regarding the quality and appropriate use of health care services is a significant public policy concern. Thus, I felt it was important to include S. 580 in the Patients' Bill of Rights Act that passed the Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions Committee on March 18, 1999, and subsequently passed the Senate on July 15, 1999. As one of the conferees on the Patients' Bill of Rights, I look forward to working with my colleagues in an effort to improve the quality of health care delivered in this country by passing strong patient protection legislation next year. However, as we have been working on the legislation regarding AHCPR for quite some time—I introduced the first version of the bill, S. 2208, on June 23, 1998—I felt strongly that we pass the legislation reauthorizing the agency this year.

S. 580 reauthorizes the Agency for Health Care Policy and Research for fiscal years 2000-2005, renames the agency the "Agency for Healthcare Research and Quality," and refocuses the agency's mission to become the focal point for supporting federal health care research and quality improvement activities.

The new Agency for Healthcare Research and Quality will: promote quality by sharing information regarding medical advances: build public-private partnerships to advance and share true quality measures; report annually on the state of quality, and cost, of the nation's healthcare; aggressively support improved information systems for health quality; support primary care research, and address issues of access in underserved areas and among priority populations; facilitate innovation in patient care with streamlined evaluation and assessment of new technologies; and coordinate quality improvement efforts of the federal government to avoid disjointed, uncoordinated, or duplicative efforts.

AHCPR fills a vital federal role by investing in health services research to ensure we reap the full rewards of our investment in basic and biomedical research. AHCPR takes these medical advances and helps us understand how to best utilize these advances in daily clinical practice. The Agency has demonstrated their ability to close this gap between basic research and clinical practice.

I believe the Agency can truly make a difference in improving health care quality in this country. The work of the Agency fills a crucial need by translating advances in medicine into what works for me, as a physician, in my daily practice. I think these answers will help us address some of the critical issues raised in the patient protection or quality health care debate. I also believe the work of the Agency is essential for improving the long term stability of the Medicare program and improving the health care system in general by providing the tools we need to assess and improve health care qual-

I would also like to point out that the legislation we are passing today builds upon the good work of our House companion bill, H.R. 2506, introduced and passed by my colleagues Representatives BILIRAKIS, BLILEY, DINGELL, and BROWN. The bill we are considering today, S. 580, has been modified to reflect agreement between the authorizing committees on the House and Senate passed versions of the bill. I will not list all of the changes we have made, but I would like to highlight a few.

First, I am pleased that our bill has an increased emphasis on research regarding the delivery of health care in inner city and rural areas and of health care issues for priority populations including low-income groups, minority groups, women, children, the elderly, and individuals with special health care needs including individuals with disabilities and individuals who need chronic care or end-of-life health care. The legislation will ensure that individuals with special health care needs will be addressed throughout the research portfolio of the Agency.

A second provision included in the bill which I believe is extremely important for improving the health of our nation's children is the authorization to provide support for payments to children's hospitals for graduate medical education programs. The bill will provide funding to the 59 freestanding children's hospital across the country that do not receive any GME funds today. These 59 hospitals represent over 20% of the total number of children's hospitals in the U.S. and they train nearly 30% of the nation's pediatricians, about 50% of all pediatric specialists, and over 65% of all pediatric specialists. I believe this is a strong addition to our bill which will ensure the training of pediatric physicians to improve the quality of health care for our children.

Mr. President, this legislation would not have come to fruition without the contributions of many individuals. I would like to take this moment to express my gratitude to Senator Nickles and the entire Health Care Quality Task Force for making this bill a legislative priority. I would also like to thank Senator Jeffords, Senator Ken-NEDY, and all the members of the Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions committee who helped develop the legislation. The Administration and the Agency have been enormously helpful in providing their technical expertise as we rewrote the current statute, and I would especially like to thank Dr. John Eisenberg and Larry Patton for their tremendous contributions. Finally, I would like to thank my staff for their work on the bill, Andrew Balas, Susan Ramthun, and Anne Phelps. I look forward to working with my House colleagues and President Clinton to witness the enactment of S. 580 into law this year which will greatly improve the quality of health care for all Americans.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, today marks an important landmark in our efforts to improve children's health. We are taking the first step toward ensuring that the nation's children's hospitals have the support they need to continue to train physicians to care for children.

Less than one percent of the nation's hospitals are independent children's hospitals. Yet these hospitals train 30 percent of all pediatricians. These freestanding children's hospitals also train more than half of the country's pediatric specialists—the physicians who care for children with cancer, asthma, diabetes and many other chronic diseases and special needs.

In addition to their teaching responsibilities, they care for uninsured children, conduct pediatric research, and provide state-of-the-art specialty care for children in all parts of the nation. The services they provide and the activities they conduct are indispensable. When a child has a rare disease or complicated condition, children's hospitals are the hospitals of choice.

In Massachusetts, Boston Children's Hospital provides excellent care and conducts needed pediatric research and training. It provides the highest quality of care for sick or disabled children from Massachusetts, New England and the world. It is a national resource. The primary care and specialist physicians it trains serve in countless communities in Massachusetts and throughout the country. Boston Children's Hospital has been recognized as a world-class institution. Researchers at the hospital continue to offer new hope for children and adults, as they break new ground in battles to fight pediatric diseases. For example, Dr. Judah Folkman has developed two powerful agents that show great promise in the war on cancer. These agents-angiostatin and endostatinhave been shown to shrink cancerous tumors in animals. Clinical trials are now underway to test the effectiveness of bladder tissue grown in a laboratory. and to treat high-risk heart patients with a tiny device that can close holes in the heart without invasive surgery.

These advances are the result of the teaching hospital environment that is the heart of the mission of Boston Children's Hospital. Senior clinicians and scientists work with new doctors in training. The interns, residents and fellows who train at Boston Children's Hospital and other children's hospitals are the pediatricians, pediatric specialists and pediatric researchers of tomorrow. The federal government should invest in their training, just as we have invested in the training of physicians who care for adults. The benefits to the nation are immeasurable.

In general, graduate medical education activities are supported through Medicare. However, because children's hospitals treat very few Medicare patients, they receive almost no federal support to train physicians. In fact, they receive less than 1/200th per resident compared to other teaching hospitals. The lack of federal support makes no sense. It unintentionally penalizes children's hospitals, and we need to correct this problem as soon as possible.

The legislation accompanying the reauthorization of the Agency for Health Care Policy and Research authorizes a new discretionary program to provide support for pediatric graduate medical education. It authorizes the funding necessary to provide adequate support-$280 million in FY 2000 and $285 million in FY 2001. But this authorization is just a beginning. We need to continue to work together this year and next year to ensure that adequate funds are appropriated for this important new program to succeed.

Adequate and stable funding for pediatric GME activities can best be achieved by a permanent mandatory program. The Senate Finance Committee has agreed to hold a hearing on this important issue next year, and I hope action will quickly follow. Senator Bob Kerrey and I have introduced legislation that will create a mandatory program. It has broad bipartisan support in the Senate. Forty senators, evenly divided among Democrats and Republicans, favor this approach, and I am confident that we will prevail in the end.

However, this year we have an opportunity to begin to address this important children's health issue. Todav's authorization lays the groundwork for a downpayment in the appropriations for FY2000. The President's budget proposed $40 million for pediatric graduate medical education. The Labor, Health and Human Services Appropriations conference bill includes $20 million for this program. Congress should follow the President's lead and provide at least $40 million for next year, while Congress pursues full funding through a long-term solution.

It is an honor to support Boston Children's Hospital and other children's hospitals across the country as they strive to meet the health needs of the nation's children. I look forward to working with my colleagues in the House and Senate on this important issue in the coming year.

Mr. GRAMM. I ask unanimous consent the substitute amendment be agreed to, the bill be read a third time and passed as amended, the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table, and any statements relating to the bill be printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The substitute amendment (No. 2506) was agreed to.

The bill (S. 580), as amended, was read the third time and passed.

[The bill was not available for printing. It will appear in a future edition of the RECORD.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions, with an amendment to strike all after the enacting clause and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

AMENDMENT NO. 2507

(Purpose: To provide a grant program for strengthening families and to modify other provisions, and to make various technical corrections)

Mr. GRAMM. Senator FRIST has an amendment at the desk. I ask for its consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows: The Senator from Texas [Mr. GRAMM], for Mr. FRIST, proposes an amendment num-

(The text of the amendment is printed in today's RECORD under "Amendments Submitted.")

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I am pleased that the United States Senate will pass today, S. 976, the "Youth Drug and Mental Health Services Act," which I introduced on May 6, 1999. This action follows the overwhelming endorsement of the Health, Education, Labor and Pensions Committee, which passed this bill by a vote of 17 to 1 on July 28, 1999.

S. 976 represents a comprehensive attempt to address the tragedy of increasing drug use by our children. The 1998 National Household Survey on Drug Abuse, conducted by the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration (SAMHSA) estimated that nearly 9.9 percent of 12-17 year olds used drugs in the past month, which is dramatically higher that the 1992 rate of 5.3 percent. An estimated 8.3 percent of 12 to 17 year olds have used marijuana in the past month and nearly a quarter of our 8th graders and about half of all high school seniors have tried marijuana.

Let us not forget about the drug of choice for our youth and adolescents, alcohol. Although the legal drinking age is 21 in all States, SAMHSA reports that more than 50 percent of young adults age eighteen to twenty are consuming alcohol and more than 25 percent report having five or more drinks at one time during the past month.

There are many factors for this increase in youth substance abuse, but the factor that I, as a father, am most concerned with is the overall decline of the disapproval of drug use and the decline of the perception of the risk of drug use among our youth.

To help address this problem, the "Youth Drug" bill reauthorizes and improves SAMHSA by placing a renewed focus on youth and adolescent substance abuse and mental health services, while providing greater flexibility for States and new accountability in the use of funds based on performance.

SAMHSA, formerly known as the Alcohol. Drug Abuse, and Mental Health Services Administration (ADAMHA) was created in 1992 by the Public Law 102-321, the ADAMHA Reorganization Act. SAMHSA's purpose is to assist States in addressing the importance of reducing the incidence of substance abuse and mental illness by supporting programs for prevention and treatment. SAMHSA provides funds to States for alcohol and drug abuse prevention and treatment programs and activities, and mental health services through the Substance Abuse Prevention and Treatment and the Community Mental Health Services Block Grants.

SAMHSA's block grants are a major portion of this nation's response to substance abuse and mental health service needs, accounting for 40 percent and 15 percent respectively of all substance abuse and community mental health services funding in the States. In my own State of Tennessee, SAMHSA provides over 70 percent of overall funding for the Tennessee Department of Health's Bureau of Alcohol and Drug Abuse Services, which is headed by Dr. Stephanie Perry.

Last year Tennessee received over $25 million from the Substance Abuse Prevention and Treatment Block Grant to spend on treatment and prevention activities. With this funding the Tennessee Bureau of Alcohol and Drug Abuse Services provides funding to community-based programs that offer a wide range of services throughout the State. In all, the block grant funds provided under this bill permits nearly 6,500 Tennesseans to receive the substance abuse treatment they desperately need.

Today, we in part finish an effort in the Senate that began several years ago to reform and improve our Nation's substance abuse and mental health services. While working on this effort, I have targeted six main goals which I am pleased to report has been accomplished by this legislation. These goals include: promoting State flexibility in block grant and discretionary funding by eliminating or stripping back the numerous outdated or unneeded requirements which Congress has mandated on the States in their expenditure of Federal block grant and discretionary funds; ensuring accountability for the expenditure of Federal funds by beginning the process of moving away from the inefficiency of a system based on expenditure of funds to a performance based system determined in consultation with the States and based upon States' needs; developing and supporting youth and adolescent substance abuse prevention and treatment initiatives by including provisions to provide substance abuse treatment services and early intervention substance abuse services for children and adolescents; developing and supporting mental health initiatives that are designed to prevent and respond to incidents of teen violence by authorizing provisions that will assist local communities in developing ways to treat violent youth and minimize outbreaks of youth violence by forming partnerships among the schools, law enforcement and mental health services; ensuring the availability of Federal funding for substance abuse or mental health emergencies by giving the Secretary the authority to use up to 3 percent of discretionary funding to respond to substance abuse or mental health emergencies, such as an outbreak of methamphetamine activity, without having to go through the peer review process which adds countless weeks and months to the agency's ability to respond; and supporting programs targeted for the homeless in treating mental health and substance abuse by reauthorizing programs which develop and expand mental health and substance abuse treatment services for homeless individuals, including outreach, screening and treatment, habilitation and rehabilitation to homeless individuals suffering from substance abuse or mental illness.

In addition to meeting these six goals, the bill that the Senate passed today addresses several additional important substance abuse and mental health issues.

S. 976 addresses the very crucial issue of how to treat individuals with a cooccurring mental health and substance abuse disorder. There has been considerable debate on how to treat these individuals, and I am pleased that the National Association of State Alcohol and Drug Abuse Directors and the National Association of State Mental Health Program Directors reached a consensus on this issue. This agreement includes language which acknowledges that both substance abuse and mental health block grant funds can be used to treat individuals with co-occurring disorders as long as the funds used can be tracked to show that substance abuse dollars were used for substance abuse services and mental health dollars were used for mental health services.

Another very important issue that is addressed in S. 976 is the proper and safe use of restraints and seclusions in mental health facilities. I would like to acknowledge the important work done on this issue by Senator Dodd, who drafted the provisions included in the bill. He has been a true leader on this issue in the Senate and should be commended for bringing this issue to our attention.

There are also provisions in S. 976 to address the inadequacy of substance abuse services for American Indians and Native Alaskans. The bill establishes a Commission on Indian and Native Alaskan Health Care that shall carry out a comprehensive examination of the health concerns of Indians and Native Alaskans living on reservations or tribal lands.

And last, but not least, the bill has an important provision called "charitable choice." This provision would permit religious organizations which provide substance abuse services to be eligible for Federal assistance either through the Substance Abuse Prevention and Treatment Block Grant or discretionary grants through SAMHSA. "Charitable choice" acknowledges that no one approach works for everyone who needs and wants substance abuse treatment and that faith-based programs have strong records of successful rehabilitation. Despite this success, faith-based programs are currently not allowed to receive to federal funds. The "charitable choice" provisions in this bill will not allow the Federal government to continue to discriminate against faith-based providers regarding substance abuse services. I will not outline all the provisions of the amendment at this time, but would instead like to point out that this provision is similar to the charitable choice provisions that Senator ASHCROFT offered to the Welfare Reform Act of 1996. I would like to thank the leadership of Senators ASHCROFT and ABRAHAM on this critical issue, and especially thank the hard work and dedication of Annie Billings of Senator ASHCROFT's staff

I would like to thank all the Members of the Health, Education, Labor and Pensions Committee and their staffs for their help on this bipartisan piece of legislation, especially Senator Kennedy and his staff Dr. David Pollack, Debra DeBruin and David Nexon who have been instrumental in helping to draft this legislation. I would also like to thank the contributions of the Chairman of the Committee. Senator JEFFORDS, and his staff members Philo Hall and Sean Donohue, Senator DEWINE and his staff member Karla Carpenter, Senator GREGG and his staff Alan Gilbert and Shalla Ross, Senator DODD and his staff Jeanne Ireland and Jim Fenton, Senator HARKIN and his staff Bryan Johnson, Senator MIKULSKI and her staff, Rhonda Richards, Senator BINGAMAN and his staff Dr. Robert Mendoza, Senator REED and his staff Rebecca Morley and Lisa German, and Senator Wellstone and his staff Ellen Gerrity and John Gilman. I would also like to thank my staff, Anne Phelps, the Staff Director of my Subcommittee on Public Health, and Dave Larson, my Health Policy Analyst, for their efforts on this bill. I would also like to thank Daphne Edwards of the Office of Legislative Counsel and Julia Christensen of the Congressional Budget Office for their contributions. Finally, I would like to thank an individual who has worked tirelessly in assisting us in getting this process to where we are today. Joe Faha, the Director of Legislation and External Affairs for SAMHSA.

Mr. President, the bill we passed today will ensure that Tennessee and other states will continue to receive critically needed Federal funds for community based programs to help individuals with substance abuse and mental health disorders. The changes within this bill will dramatically increase State flexibility in the use of Federal funds and ensure that each State is able to address its unique needs. The bill will also provide a much needed focus on the troubling issue of the recent increase in drug use by our youth and address how we can be helpful to local communities in regard to the issue of children and violence. I am pleased to see this bill pass the Senate and I look forward to its ultimate enactment into law.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, this bill is the result of a concerted and cooperative bipartisan effort. It is an important and timely piece of legislation that is long overdue, and I urge the Senate to support it.

Mental illness and substance abuse are national problems that need comprehensive and compassionate attention. These conditions do not respect party affiliation or race or age. They are equal opportunity destroyers, but they don't have to destroy at all.

States and local communities provide some of the most critical and ongoing services for persons who struggle with mental illness and substance abuse. This bill enables these dedicated providers to do an even better job with limited resources to accomplish their prevention and treatment goals.

Since we passed the original authorizing legislation for the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration in 1992, a number of major clinical and service delivery issues have emerged which require legislative attention. Now we have crafted a bill that accomplishes a great deal and that includes significant compromises on a number of key issues.

The bill addresses three important clinical issues that have emerged in recent years: the growing problem of cooccurring mental health and substance abuse disorders, the distressing and pervasive impact of psychological trauma especially on our younger citizens, and the important relationship between mental health or substance abuse and primary care providers. It also places much greater emphasis on preventing and treating mental health and substance abuse problems in children and adolescents.

The provisions for children demonstrate the breadth and depth of this bill. It contains a children and violence initiative, centers of excellence for psychological trauma, grants for persons who experience violence-related stress, comprehensive substance abuse prevention and treatment for children and adolescents, special attention for children of substance abusers, wraparound services for youth offenders, and special training centers to increase the sensitivity and competency of staff who work on these issues in the juvenile justice system.

The bill also addresses special problems that adults face. It maintains and expands support for critical programs that serve the homeless, extends its protection to persons who are served in community-based facilities, limits the use of seclusion and restraints in psychiatric facilities, and addresses the special circumstances of Native Americans.

I am particularly pleased with the initiatives to meet the intense service needs of persons with co-occurring mental health and substance abuse disorders. Often, they need innovative treatment approaches, including integrated mental health and addiction treatment facilities. Over the next two years, the Secretary will compile a report that establishes the best practices for helping this very challenging but treatable group.

The bill authorizes the Secretary to provide additional funding for projects on the increasingly important ties linking mental health or substance abuse and primary care. Family physicians and other primary care providers see many patients with a wide range of psychiatric and psychological problems. Too often, however, they do not recognize the mental health problems of their patients. Even if they do, they are often ill-prepared to provide adequate treatment or counseling. We can do much more to help primary care physicians do a better job of caring for patients with serious mental illnesses. This bill seeks to do that.

The bill also accomplishes several important organizational goals. It gives States more flexibility in administering their grant funds, and removes a number of bureaucratic obstacles to greater efficiency. In exchange for this easing of certain mandates, the States will enter into a cooperative agreement with the Administration in developing outcomes-based accountability measures.

The bill also gives the SAMHSA Administrator greater authority in managing discretionary grant funds. It enables the Administrator to make emergency grants to deal with immediate problems that cannot be addressed by the standard grant-making process.

In spite of the many excellent features in this bill, one provision is seriously flawed. The section that allows religious organizations to compete for public funds for the provision of substance abuse services violates the prohibition against certain forms of discrimination. I recognize the valuable role that faith-based organizations can play in helping to address a wide array of social problems. However, the recent proliferation of charitable choice provisions in federal social service programs runs the risk of creating a religious litmus test for those who provide these services, thus barring many trained, qualified professionals from providing services for faith-based organizations. We need to do more to avoid that discrimination.

Our goal is to help many of those in communities across the country who have received inadequate care in the past. The many excellent provisions in this bill will help to ensure that these children and adults will finally receive the care they need and deserve—without stigma or shame, but with dignity and respect—and America will be a better nation because of it.

I commend my colleagues for this important action to reauthorize the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration. I want to thank Senator FRIST and his Republican colleagues and their staffs for their skillful work for this genuine bipartisan achievement. I commend Senator Dodd, who worked effectively on children's issues and the seclusion and restraint provision. Senator HARKIN contributed his important initiative on methamphetamine and inhalant abuse, and Senator DURBIN contributed his critical provision on residential treatment for pregnant women and women who have given birth. Senators BINGA-MAN, WELLSTONE, and REED effectively collaborated on a series of significant child and adolescent provisions, and Senator BINGAMAN worked effectively on the needs of Native Americans. Senators MIKULSKI and MURRAY provided excellent counsel on many issues, especially the mental health and substance abuse treatment needs of women. I thank Joe Faha, SAMHSA's Director of Legislation, for his generous assistance throughout the process, as well as Nelba Chavez, the Administrator of SAMHSA. I especially thank David Pollack, David Nexon and Debra DeBruin on my staff, for their dedication and excellent work in bringing this bill to passage.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I rise in support of S. 976, Youth Drug and Mental Health Services Act, and to express my appreciation for the leadership that Senator Frist has shown in moving this long-overdue legislation forward. At a time when so many other worthy legislative efforts have been derailed by partisan politics, the unanimous support for this measure in the Senate is particularly noteworthy.

Substance abuse and mental illness take a terrible toll on individuals, families and on society at-large. Each year, approximately 5.5 million Americans are disabled by severe mental illness and an estimated 4.1 million individuals are addicted to drugs, including 1.1 million of our children. In Connecticut alone, an estimated 130,000 adults suffer from severe mental illness and 224,000 are in need of substance abuse treatment. Among Connecticut's youth, an estimated 23,000 have a serious emotional or behavioral disorder.

Given that so many of our Nation's most intransigent social ills—poverty, violence, child abuse, premature death, and homelessness-have their roots in untreated substance abuse and mental illness, it is critical that we do all that we can to ensure that states, communities and families have the resources they need to combat these devastating conditions. This reauthorization of the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Act (SAMHSA) represents an important step in expanding and improving early intervention, prevention, and treatment services. Through S. 976, States are given the flexibility to develop innovative systems of care for substance abuse and mental health, but will also be required to improve accountability by developing performance measures and enhancing their data collection efforts.

I am particularly pleased that this reauthorization contains legislation that I introduced earlier this year, the Compassionate Care Act, which will address a critical issue that a Hartford Courant series brought to national attention last year—the inappropriate use of seclusion and restraint within mental health care facilities. The 5-day investigative series documented more than 140 deaths directly attributable to abusive seclusion and restraint practices. An additional investigation conducted by the General Accounting Office determined that 24 deaths of individuals with mental illnesses resulted from restraint or seclusion. However, both the Hartford Courant and the GAO report determined that these figures most likely represent just the tip of the iceberg of restraint and seclusion related deaths. In fact, the Harvard Center for Risk Analysis estimated that as many as 100-150 deaths each year may be caused by the inappropriate use of restraint and seclusion. This is a tragedy that must be stopped.

The Compassionate Care Act creates tough new limits on the use of potentially lethal restraints—whether physical or chemical in nature—sets rules for training mental health care workers: and increases the likelihood that a wrongful death of a mental health patient will be investigated and prosecuted—not ignored. The legislation simply seeks to put an end to a shameful record of neglect and abuse of some our Nation's most vulnerable and least cared for individuals. Specifically, the Compassionate Care Act will ensure that physical restraints are no longer used for discipline or for the convenience of mental health facility staff by extending to the mental health population a standard that has been demonstrated to be effective in reducing the use of restraints and seclusion in nursing homes. This legislation will ensure that restraint and seclusion will only be used when a mentally ill individual poses an imminent threat either to himself or others.

Further, this legislation will require that all restraint and seclusion related deaths be reported to an appropriate oversight agency as determined by the Secretary of Health and Human Services. Presently, there is no standard federal reporting requirement for deaths as result of seclusion or restraint. The simple reporting measure in this legislation will greatly aid the federal government, as well as state and local oversight agencies, in tracking and investigating abusive treatment practices. The Compassionate Care Act will also require mental health care facilities to maintain adequate staffing levels and provide appropriate training for mental health care staff, who are often the least paid and least trained of all health care workers. These safeguards will hopefully prevent further harm to individuals who may be unable to protect themselves from abuse by those entrusted with their care. I thank Senator Frist for working closely with my office in crafting this critically important part of SAMHSA's reauthorization.

I am also pleased that S. 976 incorporates legislation that I have cosponsored with Senator JEFFORDS, the Children of Substance Abusers Act (COSA). Children with substance abusing parents face serious health risks, including congenital birth defects and psychological, emotional, and developmental problems. We also know that substance abuse plays a major role in child abuse and neglect. In fact, it is estimated that children whose parents abuse drugs and/or alcohol are three times more likely to be abused and four times more likely to be neglected than children whose parents are not substance abusers. In an effort to lessen the terrible toll that substance abuse takes on children, COSA will promote aggressive outreach, early intervention, prevention, and treatment services to families struggling with addiction. In addition, COSA will strengthen the systems which provide these services by training professionals serving children and families in recognizing and addressing substance abuse.

I am also grateful that Senator FRIST agreed to include my Teen Substance Abuse Treatment Act of 1999 within this reauthorization. Each year, 400,000 teens and their families, including 7,000 in the state of Connecticut alone, will seek substance abuse treatment but find that it is either unavailable or unaffordable. At best only 20 percent of adolescents with severe alcohol and drug treatment problems who ask for help will receive any form of treatment. Without help, substance abuse puts young people's health at risk and exacerbates anti-social and violent behaviors. This legislation will provide grants to give youth substance abusers access to effective, age-appropriate treatment. It will also address the particular issues of youth involved with the juvenile justice system and those with mental health or other special needs. In short, this legislation will go a long way toward ensuring that no young person who seeks substance abuse treatment will be denied help.

I would also like to thank Senator FRIST for working with me and Senator GREGG on the Strengthening Families through Community Partnerships program, which will promote healthy early childhood development by intervening with at-risk families with young children and their communities. This legislation will support demonstrations to test the efficacy of deterring substance use and abuse and other high risk behaviors through a comprehensive substance abuse prevention program that targets the child's family.

I do have reservations, however, on one aspect of this legislation. While I support the ability of faith-based organizations to provide substance abuse services, I am concerned about provisions in this legislation that would allow religiously based facilities providing substance abuse services to hire only adherents to their own religion. The ability of faith-based providers to participate in providing valuable federally funded programs is a laudable goal. I firmly believe that faith-based substance abuse services can offer critical help in overcoming drug dependency. However, the ability of religiously based entities to provide federally funded programs within this legislation should not be allowed to blur the line between church and state and to erode crucial anti-discrimination protections.

S. 976 represents a bipartisan commitment to reducing the devastating impact of substance abuse and mental illness of our Nation's families. I want to again applaud Senator FRIST, Senator KENNEDY, Senator JEFFORDS, and other members of the Health and Education committee and their staffs for their efforts in developing this legislation and urge the House of Representatives to follow the Senate's lead by acting on this bill expeditiously.

Mr. ASHCROFT. Mr. President, I would like to take this opportunity to commend the members of the Senate Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions Committee for their efforts in crafting S. 976, the "Youth Drug and Mental Health Services Act," which reauthorizes programs under the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration. In particular, I want to recognize the Chairman of the Subcommittee on Public Health, the Senator from Tennessee, Mr. Frist, for his tremendous leadership in drafting this legislation.

I am especially pleased that this legislation contains the Charitable Choice provision-modeled after my Charitable Choice provision in the 1996 welfare reform law—which will expand the opportunities for religious organizations to provide substance abuse treatment services with SAMHSA block grant funds. This provision is also very similar to language contained in Senator ABRAHAM'S legislation, the "Faith-Based Drug Treatment Enhancement Act."

While government substance abuse programs have not succeeded very well in helping people break free from addictions, faith-based drug treatment programs have been transforming shattered lives for years by addressing the deeper needs of people—by instilling hope and values which change destructive behavior and attitudes.

What results have they achieved? We have heard countless stories of the efficiency and effectiveness of these faithbased programs. Teen Challenge has shown that 86% of its graduates remain drug-free. These are individuals who finally broke free of addictions after being routed through a number of government drug treatment programs. The Bowery Mission in New York City has had the most effective free-standing substance abuse shelter in the citywide system. Bowery also serves its clients at approximately 42% of the cost of some other city-sponsored men's substance abuse shelters. Mel Trotter Ministries in Grand Rapids, Michigan, named for its former alcoholic founder. has an astounding 70 percent long-term success rate in its faith-based rehabilitation program. According to director Thomas Laymon, government programs leave addicts without "spiritual support." Worse, addicts "are not held accountable for addictions, and they have no incentive to change their behavior." Meanwhile, Trotter Ministries provides guidance, a supportive community, and integration into a life bevond drugs. San Antonio's Victory Fellowship, run by Pastor Freddie Garcia, has saved thousands of addicts in some of the city's toughest neighborhoods. The program offers addicts a safe haven, a chance to recover, job training, and a chance to provide for themselves and their families. It has served more than 13,000 people and has a success rate of over 80%.

USA Today cited a study from Georgetown University Medical Center regarding recovery from opiate addiction. The study found that 45% of those who participated in a religious program were drug-free after one year, while only 5% of those who participated in a non-religious program remained drug-free after a year.

Why are faith-based organizations successful? Because they see those they serve as people, not profiles. They come at this with a holistic approach. They address the moral and spiritual cause of the problems rather than simply dealing with the symptoms.

While some states may already collaborate with religious and charitable organizations in the area of substance abuse programs, Charitable Choice is intended to expand the use of these partnerships by clarifying to government officials and religious organizations alike what the constitutional ground rules are for these partnerships. If we know that faith-based substance abuse programs are successful in helping people break destructive addictions, government should encourage their expanded use. That is precisely what this legislation does.

The Charitable Choice provision in this legislation makes clear that states may direct SAMHSA block grant funds to religious organizations through contracts, grants, or cooperative agreements to provide substance abuse treatment services to beneficiaries. The provision reflects our belief in Congress that government should exercise neutrality when inviting the participation of non-governmental organizations to be service providers by considering all organizations—even religious ones—on an equal basis, and by focusing on whether the organization can provide the requested service, rather than on the religious or non-religious character of the organization.

Unfortunately, in the past, many faith-based organizations have been afraid—often rightfully so—of accepting governmental funds in order to help the poor and downtrodden. They fear that participation in government programs would not only require them to alter their buildings, internal governance, and employment practices, but also make them compromise the very religious character which motivates them to reach out to people in the first place.

Charitable Choice is intended to allay such fears and to prevent government officials from misconstruing constitutional law by banning faith-based organizations from the mix of private providers for fear of violating the Establishment Clause. Even when religious organizations are permitted to participate, government officials have often gone overboard by requiring such organizations to sterilize buildings or property of religious character and to remove any sectarian connections from their programs. This discrimination can destroy the character of many faith-based programs and diminish their effectiveness in helping people climb from despair and dependence to dignity and independence.

Charitable Choice embodies existing U.S. Supreme Court case precedents in an effort to clarify to government officials and charitable organizations alike what is constitutionally permissible when involving religiously-affiliated institutions. Based upon these precedents, the legislation provides specific protections for religious organizations when they provide services with government funds. For example, the government cannot discriminate against an organization on the basis of its religious character. A participating faith-based organization also retains its religious character and its control over the definition, development, practice, and expression of its religious beliefs.

Additionally, the government cannot require a religious organization to alter its form of internal governance or remove religious art, icons, or symbols to be eligible to participate. Finally, religious organizations may consider religious beliefs and practices in their employment decisions. I have been told by numerous faith-based entities and attorneys representing them that autonomy in employment decisions is crucial in maintaining an organization's mission and character.

Charitable Choice also states that funds going directly to religious organizations cannot be used for sectarian worship, instruction, or proselytization. Government dollars are to be used for the secular purpose of the legislation: providing effective treatment for substance abuse problems.

The Charitable Choice provision also contains important and necessary protections for beneficiaries of services, ensuring that they may not be discriminated against on the basis of religion. Also, if a beneficiary objects to receiving services from a religious provider, he has the right to demand that the State provide him with services from an alternative provider.

Mr. President, the Charitable Choice provision is truly bipartisan in nature. Shortly after passage of the federal welfare law, Texas Governor Bush signed an executive order directing "all pertinent executive branch agencies to take all necessary steps to implement the 'charitable choice' provision of the federal welfare law. And earlier this year, Vice President GORE stated that Charitable Choice should be extended "to other vital services where faith-based organizations can play a role, such as drug treatment, homelessness, and youth violence." The Vice President described why faith-based approaches have shown special promise with challenges such as drug addiction. He said that overcoming these types of problems "takes something more than money or assistance—it requires an inner discipline and courage, deep within the individual. I believe that faith in itself is sometimes essential to spark a personal transformation—and to keep that person from falling back into addiction, delinquency, or dependency."

Mr. President, I am pleased to say that today we are responding to the Vice President's call for expanding Charitable Choice to drug treatment programs. We are ready to provide people with resources needed to experience a personal transformation and break free from drug or alcohol addiction. Through the bipartisan effort of the Senate Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions Committee, we have legislation that will provide greater opportunities to those in our society who are fighting to overcome substance abuse problems.

Again, I want to thank Senator FRIST, his staff, Chairman JEFFORDS, and the rest of the Committee for their fine work on this legislation.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, today I would like to express my disappointment about a provision that the Majority chose to include in the Youth Drug and Mental Health Services Act, S.976. In Section 305 of the Act, the "Charitable Choice" provision permits all religious institutions, including pervasively religious organizations, such as churches and other houses of worship, to use taxpayer dollars to advance their religious mission. Given the Supreme Court precedent, I believe this provision is Constitutionally suspect and be subject to greater review when this bill goes to Conference with its House counterpart.

Although charitable choice has already become law as a part of welfare reform and the Community Services Block Grant, CSBG, portion of the Human Services Reauthorization Act. efforts are being made to expand this change to every program that receives federal financial assistance. The inclusion of charitable choice in this legislation is particularly disturbing since, unlike its application to the intermittent services provided under Welfare Reform and CSBG, Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration (SAMHSA) funds are used to provide substance abuse treatment which is ongoing, involves direct counseling of beneficiaries and is often clinical in nature. In the context of these programs it would be difficult if not impossible to segregate religious indoctrination from the social service.

I agree with the Majority that faithbased organizations have an important and necessary role to play in combating many of our nation's social ills, including youth violence, homelessness, and substance abuse. In fact, I have seen first-hand the impact that faith-based organizations such as Catholic Charities have on delivering certain services to people in need in my own state. By enabling faith-based organizations to join in the battle against substance abuse, we add another powerful tool in our ongoing efforts to help people move from dependence to independence.

However, although there are great benefits that come with allowing religious organizations to provide social services with federal funds, the Vice President recently reminded us that "clear and strict safeguards" must exist to ensure that the dividing line between church and state is not erased. Even the front runner for the Republican Presidential nomination, Governor George W. Bush, acknowledged to the New York Times that these safeguards are necessary: "Bush said . . . that federal money would pay for services delivered by faith-based groups, not for the religious teachings espoused by the groups."

In my home state of Rhode Island there is a tradition of religious tolerance and respect for the boundaries of religion and government. Indeed, Roger Williams, who was banished from the Massachusetts Bay Colony for his religious beliefs, founded Providence in 1636. The colony served as a refuge where all could come to worship as their conscience dictated without interference from the state. Understandably, Rhode Islanders remain mindful of mixing religion with its political system.

Mr. President, I am particularly concerned that without proper safeguards, well-intentioned proposals to help religious organizations aid needy populations, might actually harm the First Amendment's principle of separation of church and state. For example, the charitable choice provision creates a disturbing new avenue for employment discrimination and proselytization in programs funded by the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration. Under current law, many religiously-affiliated nonprofit organizations already provide governmentfunded social services without employment discrimination and without proselytization. However, the legislation before us extends title VII's religious exemption to cover the hiring practices of organizations participating in SAMHSA funded programs. As the Majority's report language points out, even if the organization is solely funded by SAMHSA, it may "make employment decisions based upon religious reasons."

For example, a federally funded substance abuse treatment program run by a church could fire or refuse to hire an individual who has remarried without properly validating his or her second marriage in the eyes of that church—even if he or she is a well-trained and successful substance abuse counselor.

This is not an entirely hypothetical example. In Little v. Wuerl, 929 F.2d 944 (3d Circ. 1991) the Court held that "Congress intended the explicit exemptions to title VII to enable religious organizations to create and maintain communities composed solely of individuals faithful to their doctrinal practices, whether or not every individual plays a direct role in the organization's religious activities." The Court concluded that "the permission to employ persons 'of a particular religion' includes permission to employ only persons whose beliefs and conduct are consistent with the employer's religious precepts." This may be acceptable when the religious organization is using its own money, but when it is using federal funds, with explicit prohibitions against proselytization, this kind of discrimination is a cause of considerable concern.

During markup, Senator KENNEDY and I introduced an amendment that would have addressed this issue by including important safeguards and protections for beneficiaries and employees of SAMHSA funded programs.

The Reed-Kennedy amendment would have removed the bill's provision that allows religious organizations to reanire that employees hired for SAMHSA funded programs must subscribe to the organization's religious tenets and teachings. Since section 305 prohibits religious organizations from proselytizing in conjunction with the dissemination of social services under SAMHSA programs, it is contradictory to permit religious organizations to require that their employees subscribe to the organization's tenets and teachings. Second, the amendment would have eliminated the bill's provision that extends title VII's religious exemption to cover the hiring practices organizations participating SAMHSA funded programs.

Ultimately, the modest proposal would not have reduced the ability of religious groups to hire co-religionists or more actively participate in SAMHSA funded programs. It merely would have eliminated the explicit ability to discriminate in taxpayer funded employment and left to the courts the decision of whether employees who work on, or are paid through, government grants or contracts are exempt from the prohibition on religious employment discrimination. Unfortunately, the Majority chose to vote against including the important safeguards proposed in the Reed-Kennedy amendment.

For the last 30 years, federal civil rights laws have expanded employment opportunities and sought to counter discrimination in the workplace. I recognize that we need the assistance of religious organizations in the battle against substance abuse, but without a far more robust and informed debate must be far more circumspect of efforts to expand current exemptions to title VII.

Mr. President, I believe we should enlist the assistance of religious organizations without undermining constitutional principles and civil rights law. Accordingly, I am concerned that the charitable choice provision, though laudable in concept, would have disturbing practical and constitutional consequences. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that letters expressing the view of the Unitarian Universalist Association of Congregations and the American Jewish Committee be printed in the RECORD so my colleagues may become more aware of these organizations' views on this mat-

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

OFFICE OF GOVERNMENT AND INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS,
Washington, DC, November 2, 1999.
Hon. Jack Reed,

U.S. Senate, 320 Hart Senate Office Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR REED: I write on behalf of the American Jewish Committee, the nation's oldest human relations organization with more than 100,000 members and supporters, to urge you to place a hold on S. 976, the Substance Abuse Mental Health Reauthorization Act, which includes "charitable choice" provisions that are both constitutionally flawed and bad public policy.

The "charitable choice" provisions in S. 976 constitute an unacceptable breach in the separation of church and state that has played so crucial a role in ensuring the strength of religion in America, and places a risk the quality of healthcare services provided to individuals with chemical abuse and dependency behavioral disorders.

To be sure, the history of social services in this country began with religious institutions, and the partnership between religiously affiliated institutions and government in the provision of those services is a venerable one. Catholic Charities, not to mention many Jewish agencies across this land, have engaged in such partnerships for many years. Far from objecting to that partnership, the American Jewish Committee, in its 1990 Report on Sectarian Social Services and Public Funding, termed the involvement of the religious sector in publicly-funded social service provision as "desirable to the extent it is consistent with the Establishment Clause. It creates options for those who wish to receive the services, involves agencies and individuals motivated to provide the services, and helps to avoid making the government the sole provider of social benefits.'

What is new in the "charitable choice" arena is not the notion of a partnership of faith-based organizations and government. Rather the innovation of a "charitable choice" as a structure that seeks to ignore binding constitutional law, not to mention sound public policy, by permitting pervasively religious institutions, such as churches and other houses of worship, to receive taxpayer dollars for programs that have not been made discrete and institutionally separate. In so doing, and in failing to include other appropriate church-state safeguards, "charitable choice" opens the door to publicly funded programs in which recipients of social services may be proselytized. "Charitable choice" also creates a real possibility of creating rifts among the various faith groups as they compete for public funding and allows religious providers to engage in religious discrimination against employers who are paid with taxpayers dollars. (Although religious institutions are permitted to hire co-religionists in the contest of private religious activity, it is simply improper for taxpayer dollars to be used to fund religious discrimination.)

There is yet another aspect of the "charitable choice" initiative that is cause for concern. With government dollars comes government oversight. But this kind of intrusion into the affairs of religious organizations, at least in the case of pervasively sectarian organizations, is exactly the type of entangelement of religious and state against which the Constitution guards. Such intrusion can have no effect but to undermine the distinctiveness, indeed the very mission, of religious institutions.

In addition to the foregoing, we are greatly concerned by the portion of S. 976's "charitable choice" provisions that allow sectarian providers of treatment for chronic substance abuse conditions, such as alcoholism, and drug addiction, to avoid clinically based certification and licensure standards. This legislation should not be allowed to go forward without necessary improvements to the bill to provide essential church-state protections, and without closer examination of the consequences of allowing sectarian care providers to avoid compliance with applicable state education, training and credentialing standards.

Thank you for your consideration of our views on this very important matter.

Sincerely,

RICHARD T. FOLTIN,
Legislative Director and Counsel.

STATEMENT OF THE UNITARIAN UNIVERSALIST ASSOCIATION OF CONGREGATIONS OPPOSITION TO THE "CHARITABLE CHOICE" PROVISIONS OF S. 976

The Unitarian Universalist Association of Congregations has a long, proud record of support for both religious freedom and the separation of church and state. Our General Assembly has issued 10 resolutions since 1961 to this effect. It is thus with little hesitation that we voice our strong opposition to the "Charitable Choice" provisions of S. 976, SAMHSA, the Youth, Drug, and Mental Health Services Act.

These and other similar Charitable Choice provisions undermine the separation of church and state by (1) promoting excessive entanglement between church and state; and (2) privileging certain religions and religious institutions above others.

It does this in the fellowing ways:

By channeling government money into "pervasively sectarian" institutions. The Supreme Court has already clearly ruled that the government cannot fund "pervasively sectarian" institutions sively sectarian" institutions. By fostering inappropriate competition among religious groups for government money. With limited funding available for any one service, governments will be required to decide which religious institutions will receive funding and which will not. This necessarily puts those governments in the wholly un-Constitutional position of discriminating among religious groups.

By allowing government-funded institutions to discriminate in their employment on the basis of religion. This amounts to federally-funded employment discrimination, thus violating myriad employment and civil rights laws.

By subjecting service-recipients to government-sanctioned proselytization and religious oppression. Individuals receiving government services should not have "religious strings" attached to those services.

By encouraging religious institutions to "follow the dollars" when deciding what type of social services to provide. As a result, it may encourage these organizations to move away from their historic commitment to providing social services designed to meet basic human needs. We believe that religious groups are better suited to address these urgent human needs than they are to deal with the more complex mental and other health services that require trained professionals. These services are best left to government agencies or institutions closely regulated by governments.

We in the faith community speak often of "right relationship." We strive for "right relationship" in the world on many levels, both personal (such as between worshipper and God) and political (such as between church and state). To the Unitarian Universalist Association of Congregations, Charitable Choice legislation violates the right relationship between church and state.

In our vision of "right" church-state relations, "pervasively sectarian" institutions have the freedom to provide whatever services they chose with their own financial resources. "Religiously affiliated" institutions can accept government funding to provide basic human needs services, so long as they do so with no "religious strings" attached.

If mental and other health-related human needs are not being met by government agencies, than those agencies should adopt new strategies and approaches. Rather than throwing money at religious groups—who are not situated to handle such needs—adequate freedom and resources should be given to the relevant government agencies so that they may innovate and expand in the necessary ways.

Many Americans struggle with disease, drug addiction, hunger, and poverty. Both religious groups and the government have a responsibility to help those in need. Each is best suited to provide a particular kind of service. Rather than blurring the lines of responsibility, each should re-examine how it can do better what it is better suited to do.

The information available now indicates that very few religious institutions are pursuing funding under the "Charitable Choice" provisions of the 1996 Welfare Reform Law. Wisely, they are wary of the problems associated with government funding of religious institutions. Congress should take this as a clear sign that "Charitable Choice" is not an appropriate answer to the problems of adequate service provision.

Like others in the religious world, the Unitarian Universalist Association of Congregations is fully committed to helping those in need. We are concerned, however, that the public policies relating to these issues are good ones—appropriate and responsible—that fully respect both the needs and rights of those people receiving services. For the reasons stated above, we do not believe that "Charitable Choice" provisions are appropriate or responsible policy.

The Unitarian Universalist Association of Congregations opposes "Charitable Choice" and urges Congress to do the same.

Sincerely,

Rob Cavenaugh, Legislative Director.

The preamble was agreed to.

The resolution, with its preamble, reads as follows:

S. RES. 219

Whereas Walter Payton was a hero, a leader, and a role model both on and off the field; Whereas for 13 years, Walter Payton thrilled Chicago Bears' fans as the National Football League's (NFL's) all-time leading rusher—and as one of the greatest running backs ever to play the game—culminating with his induction into the Professional Football Hall of Fame;

Whereas after retiring from professional football in 1987, Payton continued to touch the lives of both his fellow Chicagoans and citizens of his native state of Mississippi, as a businessman and a community leader:

Whereas Walter Payton was born in 1954 to Mrs. Alyne Payton and the late Mr. Edward Payton, and his historic career began as a star running back at Columbia High School in his native hometown of Columbia, Mississippi, which he called "a child's paradise." He went on to choose Jackson State University over 100 college offers, and to set nine university football records, eventually scoring more points than any other football player in the history of the National Collegiate Athletic Association;

Whereas the first choice in the 1975 NFL draft, Payton—or "Sweetness" as he was known to his fans—became the NFL's all-time leader in running and combined net yards and scored 110 touchdowns during his career with the Bears;

Whereas Walter Payton made the Pro Bowl nine times and was named the league's Most Valuable Player twice, in 1977 and 1985;

Whereas in 1977, Payton rushed for a career-high 1,852 yards and carried the Bears to the playoffs for the first time since 1963;

Whereas Payton broke Jim Brown's longstanding record in 1984 to become the league's all-time leading rusher, and finished his career with a record 16,726 total rushing vards:

Whereas in 1985-86, Walter Payton led the Bears to an unforgettable 15-1 season and Super Bowl victory—the first and only Super Bowl win in Bears' history;

Whereas Payton was inducted into the Pro Football Hall of Fame in 1993, and was selected this year as the Greatest All-Time NFL Player by more than 200 players from the NFL Draft Class of 1999;

Whereas Walter Payton matched his accomplishments on the football field with his selfless actions off the field on behalf of those in need. He excelled academically as well as athletically, earning a degree in special education from Jackson State University in just three and one half years, and going on to undertake additional graduate study. Payton worked throughout his adult life to improve the lives of others through personal involvement with many charitable organizations. He was particularly active in working with children facing physical, mental, or economic challenges. In 1988, he established the Halas/Payton Foundation, which continues his legacy of community involvement to help educate Chicago's youth;

Whereas Walter Payton was a dedicated man of faith and principle, who, as a lifelong Baptist, was known for his deep reverence for God; and, as a gracious and selfless citizen, was a devoted father with sterling personal integrity and a warm sense of humor. Walter Payton will always be remembered as a true gentleman with a heart full of genuine and active concern for others:

Whereas Walter Payton was truly an American hero in every sense of the term;

Whereas the members of the Senate extend our deepest sympathies to Walter Payton's family and the host of friends that he had across the country; and

Whereas Walter Payton died tragically on November 1, 1999, at age 45, but his legacy will live in our hearts and minds forever: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate—

- (1) hereby recognizes and honors Walter Jerry Payton
- (A) as one of the greatest football players of all time; and
- (B) for his many contributions to the Nation, especially to children, throughout his lifetime; and
- (2) extends its deepest condolences to Walter Payton's wife, Connie; his two children, Jarrett and Brittney; his mother, Alyne; his brother, Eddie; his sister, Pam; and other members of his family.
