MORNING HOUR DEBATES

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mrs. BIGGERT). Pursuant to the order of the House of January 19, 1999, the Chair will now recognize Members from lists submitted by the majority and minority leaders for morning hour debates. The Chair will alternate recognition between the parties, with each party limited to not to exceed 30 minutes, and each Member, except the majority leader, the minority leader, or the minority whip, limited to not to exceed 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Florida (Mr. STEARNS) for 5 minutes.

QUESTIONING THE DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE ON ELIAN'S ABDUCTION

Mr. STEARNS. Madam Speaker, I come to the House floor to not talk about the debate whether Elian should be reunited with his father or not. I think the majority of Americans say he should. What I am here to talk about is the constitutionality of what was done by the Justice Department, and to pose some questions and urge our leadership on this side to hold hearings.

Regrettably, the American people, the Miami relatives of Elian Gonzalez and the Congress still do not have all of the answers which led up to the events that transpired on that Easter recess by the Justice Department and the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Madam Speaker, of course, the world has seen that famous photograph by now of an INS SWAT officer pointing an assault rifle at Elian, that assault rifle was a Heckler & Koch MP5 submachine gun.

The Attorney General during Easter weekend, ordered armed forces into the house of Mr. Lazaro Gonzalez in order to free Elian and reunite him with his father.

What the world, Americans and Congress do not know are the events that led up to activities that transpired during and after the government's raid on a private citizen's home, just as the Congress did in the case of the Waco and Ruby Ridge. I think it is the responsibility of this legislative branch to seek the truth and have government justify its actions in instances in which the sacred constitutional liberties of Americans have been jeopardized.

Madam Speaker, I submit this afternoon that there are many questions that still need to be answered, and we are not here to debate whether Elian should be reunited with his father. Those are answers that ultimately will be left up to the courts.

While the court struggles with the issue of immigration and family law, the Congress has the duty and responsibility to seek answers to the policies of the Justice Department that led up to the heavily armed Federal agents breaking into the house of peaceful American citizens, with agents pointing machine guns at American citizens in their own home and trashing their own home, too.

Just as important, oversight is needed to determine whether the judicial process was circumvented by the administration. Reports indicate that the nature by which the search warrants were issued were made under false pretenses. How many different judges did the administration go to before having the search warrant accepted? Did any of the judges refuse to issue a search warrant, and if so, on what grounds?

During the early days of Elian's arrival in the United States, the Justice Department and the INS were quick to point out that asylum and custody questions could only be answered in the courts.

What is the policy of the Department of Justice and INS when State courts do not agree with Federal agencies? Does the Attorney General have the power to overrule the decisions of State courts such as ones which decide custody measures?

In addition, Madam Speaker, why was the Justice Department not willing to await the outcome of Elian's claim for asylum before the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals? What does that say about how much weight the administration gives to our judicial branch of the government?

How will the Attorney General justify her actions if the 11th Circuit decides Elian's asylum claims are true in manners which contradict the Department's actions?

What constitutional authority does the Federal Government have in executing search warrants in cases that are not criminal? In how many other cases has the INS broken down doors and used armed agents in custody cases?

Additionally, why did the Attorney General feel compelled or pressured to use overwhelming armed force when Elian's life was not in danger?

The negotiations were still taking place at the time the INS broke down the door and trashed the Gonzalez house. Should it be the policy of the INS to present the possibilities of deadly force when confronting situations which are not criminal? Additionally, Gregory Craig, the attorney for Juan Miguel, also happened to be the attorney for the President during the impeachment trials.

Elian's Miami relatives and the American people have a right to know what role Gregory Craig played during the shaping of the Department's actions. Furthermore, what contact did the administration have with the Communist dictator Fidel Castro?

Was the President influenced by another Cuban boat lift? These are some of the questions I have, Madam Speaker. I call on Congress to hold hearings because the people across this Nation have a right to know. As Americans, we have inalienable rights to certain freedoms and protections. When government officials threaten or encroach on those rights, it is our duty to hold them responsible.

LIVABLE COMMUNITIES

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. BLUMENAUER) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. BLUMENAUER. Madam Speaker, focusing on livable communities is an opportunity for the major Presidential candidates to give citizens relief from the standard political fare by embracing a positive message: how to make our families safe, healthy, and economically secure.

One of the reasons this message has such potential for elevating the political discussion is because this is truly a national movement that is being driven at the grassroots level.

Every year it seems more State and local ballot initiatives are passed protecting open space, giving more transportation choices to our communities and controlling unplanned growth. One grassroots effort was dealt with this morning in the Washington Post describing the efforts to protect the Chesapeake Bay, one of our Nation's most cherished waterway and, sadly, Governor Gilmore of Virginia's reluctance for Virginia to provide true leadership.

For 15 years, citizens and communities across a six-State area and Federal partners and private citizens are developing solutions not necessarily to eliminate sprawl in this Chesapeake Bay watershed, but to cut it by one-third by the year 2012. The political leadership in Virginia, however, has been slow to respond and only recently provided its support for a new agreement, assuming that Virginians care less about the environment and protecting the Bay than their neighbors in the surrounding States. I think that is a sad commentary and a misreading of the citizens of Virginia.

In sharp contrast, one of the most exciting stories of regional cooperation and addressing unplanned growth is unfolding now in the Speaker's home State of Illinois. Metropolitan Chicago has a long tradition of being a leader in the heartland; its importance as a national transportation hub with the transcontinental railroads, so it is today with O'Hare Airport, the busiest in the Nation; and the important role that Chicago has played in the City Beautiful Movement at the turn of the century with the magnificent Burnham plan, one of the most influential city plans in world history, illustrating the power of planning for growth in a fashion that balanced downtown interests with open space and access to that city's majestic waterfront.

Chicago was unfortunately a leader in the consequence of unplanned growth. From 1970 to 1990, when metropolitan Chicago increased only 4 percent in population, it increased 46 percent in the urbanized area, 10 times faster than the rate of population increase and, clearly, a development pattern that is not sustainable. It has resulted in Chicago having the second longest average commute in the country, with 11 percent of its commuters traveling an hour or more each way each day.

But in keeping with the tradition of leadership, Chicago is now providing important direction on livability. I have had a chance to review the Metropolitan 2020 plan, a visionary document preparing metropolitan Chicago for the 21st century. It recalls the history and provides a vision for the future. This fascinating study is one of the best that I have seen, providing a framework for developing a regional vision of growth over the next 20 years while it recognizes the realities and challenges facing the region. It addresses the reality of the present system's inability to pave its way out of traffic congestion; the importance of the productivity of the region's growing minority population, which will supply the majority of its future work force; the need on focusing the entire region's pool of talent to meet the specialized needs of a growing economy; and, most important, the symbiotic relationship between the suburbanites, who actually earn twice as much from their income from downtown as Chicagoans earn from suburban areas, $14 billion versus $21 billion.

With over 1300 units of local government and almost 70 percent of the State's population living in the metropolitan Chicago area, the Metropolitan 2020 effort is a powerful example of the potential for business and civic leaders, community leadership, and the planning profession to come together to develop solutions to guide governmental investments. I strongly urge my colleagues to join me today at 2 p.m. in SC–10 of the Capitol for a joint briefing of the Senate's Smart Growth Task Force and the Livable Communities Task Force, hearing from a group from Chicago who will give a comprehensive overview of their initiatives. They will also focus on the important role of the Federal Government in assisting the regional effort to create more livable communities.

Chicago is as good a model as we will find in an area of the country that a lot of us spend a lot of time in. It is a solution to make our communities more livable and our families safe, healthy and more economically secure.

RECESS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 12 of rule I, the Chair declares the House in recess until 2 p.m.

Accordingly (at 12 o'clock and 43 minutes p.m.), the House stood in recess until 2 p.m.

AFTER RECESS

The recess having expired, the House was called to order by the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. PEASE) at 2 p.m.

PRAYER

The Chaplain, the Reverend Daniel P. Coughlin, offered the following prayer:

Blessed be the God and Father of us all, Who in great mercy has given us a new birth and made us a living hope for the world.

As a nation, we have inherited great natural resources and unfailing principles to guide our destiny. By Your power, O God, You have safeguarded faith in Your people. You have made us ready to reveal in our time Your creativity and goodness active in us, but for the common good of all.

We rejoice in Your blessings upon this Congress and the people they represent. Even during times of various trials and moments of suffering, our gaze is fixed on You, as the source of all goodness and foundation of peace.

May genuine faith which is more precious than gold tested by fire be proven in us. Then the great tasks we undertake in Your Name may truly give You praise, glory and honor now and forever. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair has examined the Journal of the last day's proceedings and announces to the House his approval thereof.

Pursuant to clause 1, rule I, the Journal stands approved.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Will the gentleman from Nevada (Mr. GIBBONS) come forward and lead the House in the Pledge of Allegiance.

Mr. GIBBONS led the Pledge of Allegiance as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

PAST AND FUTURE SUCCESSES

(Mr. GIBBONS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GIBBONS. Mr. Speaker, last Friday marked the 39th anniversary of the first United States space exploration mission.

On May 5, 1961 Alan B. Shepard, Jr., became the first American space explorer when he was rocketed 115 miles above the Earth's surface into space.

This feat proved to the world that the United States had the potential to become the winner in this space race.

Mr. Speaker, I urge all of us to take a moment to reflect on our past accomplishments and to celebrate how far we have come since that historic flight in 1961. There are enormous possibilities for future progress and for our progress still lying ahead of us.

The continued advancement of our space program, as well as the overall development of new and innovative technologies, demand and require our support.

With the assistance of this Congress, the United States can and will remain a world leader in technological development.

A NATION BANNING GOD

(Mr. TRAFICANT asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Speaker, the courts started their assault on God by banning school prayer. The courts then banned the public display of the Christmas nativity scene. The courts then banned students from writing papers about Jesus.

Now, if that is not enough to say the devil perhaps made them do it, check this out, the Ohio Supreme Court ruled that Ohio's motto with God all things are possible is unconstitutional.

Unbelievable Congress, what is next? Will ''In God We Trust'' be taken from the House Chamber? ''In God We Trust'' be removed from our currency? Beam me up, I say these judges make decisions while sitting on their brains.

I yield back the fact that a nation that bans God I believe promotes the devil.

PRESCRIPTION DRUGS FOR SENIORS

(Mr. PITTS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. PITTS. Mr. Speaker, too many seniors and disabled people in this country cannot afford the prescription drugs their doctors say they need.

Seniors should never have to choose between food and medicine. This is an important issue that needs a meaningful solution, not the empty rhetoric that we are hearing from the other side.

House Republicans are proposing a plan to offer a fair and responsible drug plan that is affordable, available and voluntary to all seniors and disabled Americans.

Mr. Speaker, it will help folks to get prescription drug coverage at lower costs by creating group buying power without Washington interference or big government-style price controls.

We will reduce the runaway costs of medicine, but not with a Washington-based one-size-fits-all program that kills research and innovation of live-saving cures.

Mr. Speaker, it is time to modernize prescription drug coverage. We should all be working together on this important issue. Let us stop the partisan rhetoric and do the right thing for our seniors.

LET US WORK TO KEEP FRAUD OUT OF THE MEDICARE PROGRAM

(Mr. BALLENGER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BALLENGER. Mr. Speaker, there are few things more important than taking care of our Nation's seniors. That means keeping the Medicare program healthy and solvent for the 39 million older Americans who depend on it.

Unfortunately, our efforts to improve Medicare will not work if we do not eliminate the waste and abuse that festers in the current programs. In FY 1998, Medicare's fee-for-service program made $12.6 billion in improper payments. Part of the reason this waste, fraud, and abuse occurred was that the Clinton-Gore administration was careless in monitoring and oversight of Medicare payments. This neglect has created a troughful of Medicare money, and crooks are glad to have it, to eat to their fill.

For example, a New York medical equipment company robbed Medicare of more than $6 million. A Florida home health agency fraudulently billed Medicare for $2.2 million.

Let us keep our seniors healthy. Let us work to keep fraud out of the Medicare program.

APPOINTMENT OF MEMBERS TO JOINT CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEE ON INAUGURAL CEREMONIES

Mr. GEPHARDT of Missouri.

There was no objection.

COMMUNICATION FROM THE CLERK OF THE HOUSE

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following communication from the Clerk of the House of Representatives:

Hon. J. DENNIS HASTERT
The Speaker, House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 8 of rule XX, the Chair announces that it will postpone further proceedings today on each motion to suspend the rules on which a recorded vote or the yeas and nays are ordered or on which the vote is objected to under clause 6 of rule XX.

Any record votes on postponed questions will be taken after debate has concluded on all motions to suspend the rules, but not before 6 p.m. today.

NORTH SIDE PUMPING DIVISION OF MINIDOKA RECLAMATION PROJECT, IDAHO, AUTHORIZATION INCREASE

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 3577) to increase the amount authorized to be appropriated for the north side pumping division of the Minidoka reclamation project, Idaho.

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 3577

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. INCREASED AUTHORIZATION FOR MINIDOKA PROJECT, IDAHO.

Section 5 of the Act of September 30, 1950 (chapter 1114; 64 Stat. 1085), authorizing appropriations for the north side pumping division of the Minidoka reclamation project, Idaho, is amended by striking ''$11,395,000'' and inserting ''$14,200,000''.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Idaho (Mr. SIMPSON) and the gentleman from California (Mr. GEORGE MILLER) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Idaho (Mr. SIMPSON).

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks on H.R 3577.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Idaho?

There was no objection.

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 3577 is a bill to increase the amount authorized to be appropriated for the north side pumping division of the Minidoka reclamation project in Idaho.

A&B Irrigation is the contracting entity for the north side pumping division of the Minidoka project. The division, located on the southern portion of the State of Idaho, consists of some 80,000 acres. Construction of the division was completed in 1959 and control was transferred to the district in 1966.

Due to the lack of natural surface drainage outlets to the Snake River and constraints associated with the drainage onto the lower-lying Minidoka Irrigation District, most irrigation return flows and stormwater runoffs are injected into drain wells which are part of the original project design.

The drain wells pass the water directly into the underlying aquifer. In 1991, the United States Environmental Protection Agency designated the eastern Snake River plain aquifer a sole source of drinking water.

Under provisions of the Federal Safe Drinking Water Act, if a sole source of drinking water is contaminated it could result in a significant public health hazard. In an effort to comply with the Act, the district and the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation developed a plan to dispose of this runoff.

The remaining work consists of constructing passive treatment and reuse systems at an estimated cost of $2.8 million, of which up to $1.3 million would be reimbursable to the district under a cost-sharing arrangement, 60 percent U.S. Federal Government, 40 percent irrigation, A&B irrigation.

As of now, 42 of the original 78 drain wells have been closed or abandoned, but 36 wells are still active. This legislation would amend the original language to increase the authorization by $2.8 million from $11,395,000 to $14,200,000.

In the energy and water appropriations bill for the fiscal year 2000, money was appropriated for the district to continue capping these wells in order to comply with the Federal Safe Drinking Water Act. Unfortunately, the ceiling was hit and no further funding could be used. By increasing the ceiling, the district will be able to complete its project, which in turn will help prevent the main source of drinking water from south central Idaho from being contaminated.

Mr. Speaker, I ask that all colleagues support H.R. 3577.

Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Idaho (Mr. SIMPSON) has quite properly explained this legislation to increase the spending ceiling for the north side pumping division of the Minidoka project in Idaho by $2,805,000. This increase would allow work already begun under the Minidoka north side drain water management plan to be completed.

We need to protect the underground drinking water supplies in this area of the Snake River plain because they are threatened by contaminated irrigation drain water. I would urge all members of the committee to support this legislation. The administration has testified in support of this legislation and it is not controversial.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Idaho (Mr. SIMPSON) that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 3577.

The question was taken.

Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 8 of rule XX and the Chair's prior announcement, further proceedings on this motion will be postponed.

RECOGNIZING THE HERMANN MONUMENT AND HERMANN HEIGHTS PARK IN NEW ULM, MINNESOTA, AS A NATIONAL SYMBOL OF THE CONTRIBUTIONS OF AMERICANS OF GERMAN HERITAGE

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and agree to the concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 89) recognizing the Hermann Monument and Hermann Heights Park in New Ulm, Minnesota, as a national symbol of the contributions of Americans of German heritage.

The Clerk read as follows:

H. CON. RES. 89

Whereas there are currently more than 57,900,000 individuals of German heritage residing in the United States, who comprise nearly 25 percent of the population of the United States and are therefore the largest ethnic group in the United States;

Whereas those of German heritage are not merely descendants of one political entity, but of all German speaking areas;

Whereas numerous Americans of German heritage have made countless contributions to American culture, arts, and industry, the American military, and American government;

Whereas there is no recognized tangible, national symbol dedicated to German Americans and their positive contributions to the United States;

Whereas the story of Hermann the Cheruscan parallels that of the American Founding Fathers, because he was a freedom fighter who united ancient German tribes in order to shed the yoke of Roman tyranny and preserve freedom for the territory of present-day Germany;

Whereas the Hermann Monument located in Hermann Heights Park in New Ulm, Minnesota, was dedicated in 1897 in honor of the spirit of freedom and later dedicated to all German immigrants who settled in New Ulm and elsewhere in the United States; and

Whereas the Hermann Monument has been recognized as a site of special historical significance by the United States Government, by placement on the National Register of Historic Places: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That the Hermann Monument and Hermann Heights Park in New Ulm, Minnesota, are recognized by the Congress to be a national symbol for the contributions of Americans of German heritage.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Idaho (Mr. SIMPSON) and the gentleman from California (Mr. GEORGE MILLER) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Idaho (Mr. SIMPSON).

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks on House Concurrent Resolution 89.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Idaho?

There was no objection.

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, House Concurrent Resolution 89 introduced by the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. MINGE) assures that Congress recognizes the Hermann Monument and Hermann Heighs Park in New Ulm, Minnesota, as a national symbol of German heritage.

Although there are currently almost 60 million individuals of German heritage residing in the United States, there is no recognized, tangible national symbol dedicated to German Americans and their positive contributions to American culture, arts, industry, military, and government.

The Hermann Monument was erected in 1897 in honor of the spirit of freedom and later dedicated to all German immigrants and has been placed on the National Register of Historical Places. House Concurrent Resolution 89 would recognize the achievements and contributions of Americans of German heritage at the Hermann Monument. I ask my colleagues to support H. Con. Res. 89.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, this concurrent resolution sponsored by the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. MINGE) would recognize the monument in New Ulm, Minnesota as a ''national symbol for the contributions of Americans of German heritage.'' As the legislation points out, Americans of German heritage represent with one-quarter of the U.S. population, and yet there is no national symbol recognizing the contributions that have been made to this Nation.

The recognition provided by this measure is appropriate and I would like to commend the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. MINGE) for his very diligent work on this legislation.

Mr. Speaker, it should be noted that this concurrent resolution does not alter the status of the monument in any way, nor does it create any new Federal obligation.

Mr. Speaker, I urge all of my colleagues to support it. I would again say that the effort on behalf of this legislation by the gentleman from Minnesota has really been outstanding, as many of us who serve on the committee know. He has, I think, talked to all of us individually, and to so many other Members on the floor, to bring this to the attention of the full House of Representatives. I also want to thank the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. VENTO), his colleague, for his work in lobbying on behalf of this legislation to give due recognition to the contributions of Americans of German heritage. Mr. Speaker, I urge its strong support.

Mr. MINGE. Mr. Speaker, I rise to urge my colleagues to support House Concurrent Resolution 89, which commemorates the many valuable contributions of German Americans to our society and culture through recognition of the Hermann Monument and Hermann Heights Park in New Ulm, Minnesota.

House Concurrent Resolution 89 designates a national symbol for the contributions of Americans of German heritage. German-Americans make up the largest ethnic group in the United States, yet we have no tangible symbols recognizing their contributions to our society. My resolution establishes the Hermann Monument and Hermann Heights Park in New Ulm, Minnesota as such a national symbol.

The story behind the historical figure Hermann is one of intrigue, valor and treachery that surpass any Hollywood script. Hermann was born into the nobility of the Germanic group called the Cherusker. He was sent to Rome for his formal education and military training. Hermann, then known as Arminius, was soon noticed as a natural leader and became a general in the Roman army. So highly regarded was he that Arminius was to help lead a campaign to conquer the Germanic peoples.

Despite his years in the Roman army, Arminius still cherished the independence of the Germanic peoples. Roman occupation of modern day Germany would surely have crushed the independent tribes. Arminius returned to his Germanic heritage and persuaded the tribes to unite in order to fend off the Roman invasion. They were successful and the German people retained their freedom. The autonomy of these various regions formed the foundation of the current federal system of government in Germany. In Germany, he is still remembered as ''the acknowledged liberator of the German race from Roman tyranny . . .'' He symbolizes the independence of the German people.

That sense of freedom and independence stayed with the Germans for centuries. Millions of Germans came to America for opportunity, to escape economic or political oppression in their homeland and to lead a life with the freedoms guaranteed in our Constitution. As the immigrants settled throughout the country, they looked for a symbol of their heritage.

In 1885, at the Sons of Hermann Convention in Philadelphia, it was decided that a monument should be erected to honor Germans who came and helped build America. Hermann seemed the perfect symbol. Hermann was recast as a German-American symbol, representing the bravery, hard work, and unity they strived for in the New World. These immigrants found themselves in a new land, yet they remained true to their heritage. They felt pride that they had reached America, and in having established opportunity for the future.

The Hermann Monument stands at a crest of a hill overlooking the city of New Ulm and the Minnesota River Valley. To the residents of the heavily German-American New Ulm, the monument symbolizes the pride they take in their German heritage. To German-Americans scattered across the country, the Hermann Monument represents unity of the German people. The monument was built in Salem, Ohio and erected in New Ulm in 1897. This is truly a national symbol.

I would like to thank Representative JAMES HANSEN, Chairman of the House Subcommittee on National Parks and Public Lands, for his assistance in moving this legislation. I would also like to thank Representatives GEORGE MILLER, DON YOUNG, and CARLOS ROMERO-BARCELO of the Resources Committee, for their support on this initiative.

Mr. Speaker, I ask that all my colleagues support House Concurrent Resolution 89 and show their support for the contributions of German-Americans.

Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Idaho (Mr. SIMPSON) that the House suspend the rules and agree to the concurrent resolution, H. Con. Res. 89.

The question was taken.

Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 8 of rule XX and the Chair's prior announcement, further proceedings on this motion will be postponed.

FEDERAL WATER POLLUTION CONTROL ACT AMENDMENTS AND TO REAUTHORIZATION

Mr. HORN. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 1237) to amend the Federal Water Pollution Control Act to permit grants for the national estuary program to be used for the development and implementation of a comprehensive conservation and management plan, to reauthorize appropriations to carry out the program, and for other purposes, as amended.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

(a) ADDITIONS TO NATIONAL ESTUARY PROGRAM.—Section 320(a)(2)(B) of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act (33 U.S.C. 1330(a)(2)(B)) is amended by inserting ''Lake Ponchartrain Basin, Louisiana and Mississippi; Mississippi Sound, Mississippi;'' before ''and Peconic Bay, New York.''.

(b) GRANTS.—Section 320(g) of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act (33 U.S.C. 1330(g)) is amended by striking paragraphs (2) and (3) and inserting the following:

''(3) FEDERAL SHARE.—The Federal share of a grant to any person (including a State, interstate, or regional agency or entity) under this subsection for a fiscal year—

''(A) shall not exceed—

''(i) 75 percent of the annual aggregate costs of the development of a comprehensive conservation and management plan; and

''(ii) 50 percent of the annual aggregate costs of the implementation of the plan; and

''(B) shall be made on condition that the non-Federal share of the costs are provided from non-Federal sources.''.

(c) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—Section 320(i) of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act (33 U.S.C. 1330(i)) is amended by striking ''$12,000,000 per fiscal year for each of fiscal years 1987, 1988, 1989, 1990, and 1991'' and inserting ''$50,000,000 for each of fiscal years 2000 through 2004''.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from California (Mr. HORN) and the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. BORSKI) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from California (Mr. HORN).

Mr. HORN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 1237, introduced by the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. SAXTON), reauthorizes and improves the National Estuary Program, a broadly supported, nonregulatory approach to estuary conservation and management.

Under the current National Estuary Program, the Environmental Protection Agency, EPA, provides assistance to States, local governments, and other interested parties to form a management conference for an estuary of national significance and to develop a long-term management plan for that estuary.

A total of 28 estuaries are currently in the National Estuary Program, known as NEP, and an estimated $50 billion will be needed to restore and to protect them. The majority of the estuaries in the program have already developed their long-term management plans and are now trying to implement them.

Unfortunately, the Clean Water Act, section 320, only allows Federal assistance for development of these plans and not for implementation. Passage of H.R. 1237 would authorize the Environmental Protection Agency to provide assistance for management plan implementation as well as development.

This bill is important for taking the next step to restore and protect our Nation's estuaries which provide important environmental and economic benefits to the entire Nation.

I thank the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure and the Subcommittee on Water Resources and Environment, on which I serve, and their bipartisan leadership on both the full committee and the subcommittee. They deserve our thanks for their assistance in bringing this bill to the floor for action.

Mr. Speaker, I strongly support the passage of H.R. 1237, and I urge my colleagues to do the same.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. BORSKI. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of H.R. 1237, to amend and reauthorize the Environmental Protection Agency's National Estuary Program.

Estuaries and coastal environments are precious natural resources that need to be restored and protected. They provide essential habitat for numerous fish and wildlife especially suited for life at the shore. In addition, estuaries provide important recreation areas, transportation linkages, and sources of residential and industrial water supplies vital to the needs of this country.

Recognizing the importance of estuary areas, in 1987 Congress amended the Clean Water Act to establish the National Estuary Program to promote comprehensive planning for long-term protection of our Nation's estuaries. This program authorized funding for the development of Comprehensive Conservation and Management Plans for estuaries of national significance.

Currently, 28 estuaries have been incorporated into the National Estuary Program. Of this number, 21 have completed the developments of their CCMPs and have begun implementation of the conservation plans. Funding for implementation has been provided predominantly by State and local organizations. Only limited Federal funds have been provided through the annual appropriation process since 1998.

Mr. Speaker, the legislation under consideration today would amend the National Estuary Program to specifically authorize Federal funds for use in implementation of the CCMPs. H.R. 1237 would reauthorize the NEP through fiscal year 2004, and raise the authorization level to $50 million per year to ensure that greater funding is available for implementation of the management plans.

In addition, H.R. 1237, as amended by the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure, would authorize two additions to the list of estuaries eligible for priority consideration under the NEP. This would permit the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency to begin the process of developing CCMPs for the Mississippi Sound and the Lake Pontchartrain Basin. I want to commend our committee colleagues, the gentleman from Mississippi (Mr. TAYLOR), the gentleman from Louisiana (Mr. VITTER) and the gentleman from Louisiana (Mr. JEFFERSON) for their work on this issue.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Chairman SHUSTER) and the gentleman from New York (Chairman BOEHLERT) for their willingness to address the issue of treatment works as defined by the Clean Water Act and the application of section 513.

Mr. Speaker, I support the bill and urge its approval.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. HORN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. BORSKI). He has always been constructive and he has done a great job as the ranking member on the Subcommittee on Water Resources and Environment. And I certainly thank the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. OBERSTAR), the ranking member of the full committee, and I think we all thank the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. SHUSTER) and the gentleman from New York (Mr. BOEHLERT) for their very precise and hard-fought efforts for this very worthwhile legislation.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. WU. Mr. Speaker, I rise today as a cosponsor of H.R. 1237. This bipartisan bill has great benefits to the people in my home State and I urge my colleagues to support it. H.R. 1237 reauthorizes the National Estuary Program, or NEP, which in turn provides desperately needed grants to improve the habitat, water quality and diverse plant and wildlife that depend on our Nation's estuaries.

In Oregon, the NEP has included the Lower Columbia River Estuary. Because of the NEP; the citizens businesses and governments of Oregon have been able to focus on the 146 miles of tidally influenced waters below the Bonneville Dam. The NEP requires the estuaries to create a management plan. The Columbia River plan defines specific actions for habitat, land use, and conventional and toxic pollutants. This common sense measure will serve fish and wildlife habitat and water quality in three important ways: prevention of further loss, protection and enhancement of existing resources, and restoration where damage has already occurred.

Mr. Speaker, one-in-six jobs in Oregon depends on the Columbia River. This magnificent river is home to many diverse animals and plants. In the Northwest we are faced with the challenge in ensuring that several of these species of plants and animals do not go extinct. Furthermore, in many of these resource-based communities, it is additionally challenging to ensure that the economies are developed and have a voice in the protection of their estuary.

With participation in the NEP, the Lower Columbia River Estuary Program has analyzed the problems with the estuary and has developed recommendations for dealing with them. Whether it is preserving the biological integrity of the estuary, mitigating the impacts of human activity and growth, controlling the entrance of conventional and toxic pollutants or engaging in public awareness, the NEP assists Oregon and other communities like it around the Nation.

I urge my colleagues to join me in supporting H.R. 1237.

Mr. SAXTON. Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank Chairman SHUSTER and the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure for their hard work and dedication to the National Estuary Program (NEP) and their support of reauthorization of H.R. 1237 with the requested amount of funding. H.R. 1237, which I introduced, will reauthorize the NEP at $50 million annually for FY 2000 through FY 2004 and allow Federal funds to be used for implementation, in addition to development of Comprehensive Conservation and Management Plans (CCMPs.)

Congress recognized the importance of preserving and enhancing coastal environments with the establishment of the National Estuary Program, as section 320 of the Clean Water Act Amendments of 1987. This popular program has not been authorized since 1991, but appropriately continues to be funded. The NEP's purpose is to facilitate state and local governments' preparation of ''Comprehensive Conservation and Management Plans'' (CCMPs) for threatened and impaired estuaries.

In support of this effort, section 320 authorizes the EPA to make grants to States to develop CCMPs for 30 designated estuaries across the country. While the NEP has been successful in developing these CCMPs (20 of which have been completed), the law does not authorize appropriations for implementation of the CCMPs—a deficiency which threatens to slow our progress in restoring these estuaries.

My own State of New Jersey has three approved sites in the NEP, one of which, Barnegat Bay, lies primarily within my District. The Barnegat Bay watershed drains from a land area of approximately 550 square miles.

Over 450,000 people live within the Barnegat Bay watershed. That population doubles in the summer as people flock to the shore. The continued economic health of the Barnegat Bay watershed is dependent on the continued health and natural beauty of its waters. The Barnegat Bay Estuary is not only a vital component of New Jersey's tourist industry, but is an important natural resource that supports populations of commercially and recreationally significant fish and rare and endangered species.

Non-point source pollution, while diffuse, is cumulatively the most important issue in addressing adverse impacts on water quality and the health of living resources in the Bay. The contaminants found in rain and snowmelt, as well as groundwater, contribute to non-point source pollution. The Final Comprehensive and Conservation Management Plan for Barnegat Bay will be available to the public in May 2000 for public review. But without the additional funding for this program, as well as explicitly permitting the NEPs to use Federal funds for implementation of their programs, the Federal government would have absolved itself of responsibility as a partner with the states in protecting and enhancing the Nation's most endangered habitats.

Therefore, I would like to thank my colleagues for supporting this important bill and protecting our Nation's natural resources for future generations.

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 1237, the National Estuary Program (NEP) Reauthorization. In 1987, the National Estuary Program was established to promote protection and restoration of the health of estuaries and their living resources. This program has made a profound difference nationally. This program has been tremendously important to the restoration of Galveston Bay which borders my district in Texas.

In 1995, the Galveston Bay Estuary Program (GBEP) received approval for its Comprehensive Conservation and Management Plan (CCMP) to improve water quality and enhance living resources. Galveston Bay's watershed lies in one of the most heavily industrialized and most heavily populated regions in the United States. Wastewater discharges from communities and industries in Galveston Bay account fully for half of Texas' total wastewater discharges every year. Since some pollution entering the Houston Ship Channel comes from industrial businesses located along or near the Channel, GBEP worked with the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission to decrease the amount of pollution through source reduction and waste minimization techniques. Together they developed one of the largest voluntary prevention programs in the country. Under this program, businesses located along or near the Channel are selected to voluntarily participate in environmental training and to submit to pollution prevention audits. Lessons learned from GBEP's voluntary program have been incorporated into the State's Clean Texas 2000 program.

GBEP has funded the Galveston Bay Foundation (GBF) Volunteer Water Quality Monitoring Program to not only monitor water quality but also recruit and train volunteers, obtain and distribute monitoring supplies and equipment. GBEP has also developed the Galveston Bay Information Center Project, a vital project to preserve long-term access to Galveston Bay research and information to prevent losses of data and information had occurred in the Bay's history.

Additionally, Mr. Speaker, the National Estuary Program has been instrumental in preserving and protecting America's treasured bays and estuaries including Galveston Bay. This legislation should be adopted.

I challenge my colleagues who support reauthorization of this vital program to take the next step to protect the almost 40 percent of our Nation's estuary waters under threat. I urge you to sign on as sponsors of H.R. 1775, the Estuary Habitat Restoration Act of 1999. To date, this legislation, which Representative GILCHREST of Maryland introduced last May along with myself and many others now has 121 cosponsors. The legislation would provide dedicated Federal funds to habitat restoration for estuaries like Galveston Bay. Moreover, H.R. 1775 would enhance the work of the National Estuary Program by developing new ways to optimize the numerous existing Federal restoration programs. It also promotes voluntary community estuary restoration efforts and the establishment of public-private partnerships to work with community-based organizations and local governments to protect estuaries.

I urge my colleagues to support H.R. 1237 and reauthorize this vital national program for another five years. We must strive to promote efforts on the local level to develop and implement long-term estuary conservation and management plans.

Mr. BOEHLERT. Mr. Speaker, H.R. 1237, introduced by Representative JIM SAXTON, would reauthorize and improve the National Estuary Program, a broadly supported, comprehensive approach to estuary conservation and management.

I want to thank the Transportation and Infrastructure Committee Chairman BUD SHUSTER, Ranking Democratic Members Representative JIM OBERSTAR, and BOB BORSKI, the Water Resources and Environment Subcommittee Ranking Democratic Member, for their leadership and assistance.

Under the current National Estuary Program, EPA provides assistance to State, local governments, and other interested parties to form a management conference for an estuary of national significance, and develop a comprehensive conservation and management plan for that estuary.

Of the 28 estuaries currently in the National Estuary Program, 21 have finished this planning process and are now trying to implement their management plans.

Unfortunately, section 320 only allows Federal assistance for development of these plans, and not for implementation.

Passage of H.R. 1237 would authorize EPA to provide assistance for management plan implementation, as well as development.

This bill will help protect and restore our Nation's estuaries—those natural resource treasures that are constantly under siege, yet continue to provide invaluable environmental and economic benefits to the entire Nation.

I strongly support passage of H.R. 1237 and urge my colleagues to do the same.

Mr. BORSKI. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. HORN. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from California (Mr. HORN) that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 1237, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill, as amended, was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

A message in writing from the President of the United States was communicated to the House by Mr. Edwin Thomas, one of his secretaries.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. HORN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks and to include extraneous material on H.R. 1237, the bill just passed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

SENSE OF CONGRESS REGARDING NECESSITY TO EXPEDITE SETTLEMENT PROCESS FOR DISCRIMINATION CLAIMS AGAINST DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE BROUGHT BY AFRICAN-AMERICAN FARMERS

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and agree to the concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 296) expressing the sense of the Congress regarding the necessity to expedite the settlement process for discrimination claims against the Department of Agriculture brought by African-American farmers.

The Clerk read as follows:

H. CON. RES. 296

Whereas the Secretary of Agriculture has conceded that the Department of Agriculture and agents of the Department discriminated against certain African-American farmers during the period from 1981 through 1996 in the delivery of Commodity Credit Corporation and disaster assistance programs;

Whereas, to permit the resolution of complaints that were filed by these farmers before July 1, 1997, but not responded to by the Department of Agriculture in a timely manner, section 741 of the Agriculture, Rural Development, Food and Drug Administration, and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 1999 (112 Stat. 2681–30; 7 U.S.C. 2279 note; as contained in section 101(a) of division A of Public Law 105–277), waived relevant statutes of limitation that prevented the adjudication of these complaints;

Whereas, on April 14, 1999, United States District Judge Paul Friedman issued a final opinion and order that finalized class action lawsuits filed by African-American farmers;

Whereas the farmers were ordered to file claims to determine their eligibility for the settlement ordered by the court;

Whereas the court has set and the Secretary of Agriculture has entered into a final settlement consent decree that has become the order of the court;

Whereas, once a claimant is deemed to be a member of the class and has proven discrimination, the claimant is entitled to the settlement set forth by the consent decree; and

Whereas the large volume of claims filed as ordered by the court have severely delayed

the settlement process as defined by the consent decree: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That it is the sense of Congress that the Secretary of Agriculture, the Attorney General, and the adjudicator and facilitator named in the consent decree should strictly follow the consent decree, commit the resources necessary to expedite the settlement process, and ensure that settlements are reached in an expeditious manner.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Idaho (Mr. SIMPSON) and the gentleman from Mississippi (Mr. THOMPSON) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Idaho (Mr. SIMPSON).

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks on H. Con. Res. 296.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. PEASE). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Idaho?

There was no objection.

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Arkansas (Mr. DICKEY) be allowed to control the time allotted to the majority.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Idaho?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Arkansas (Mr. DICKEY).

Mr. DICKEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, this is an issue involving the plight of the black farmers and their efforts to get reparations in their farming activities from the Department of Agriculture.

I started this project in 1993 when, at the time I started getting complaints, it was my first year in office, and I started getting complaints from black farmers to such a degree that I said we must have some type of public hearing for this. I asked then-Secretary of Agriculture Mike Espy to come to Pine Bluff, Arkansas and hold a black farmers seminar. That was held.

Mikes were set up all over the auditorium, and story after story after story came to us of the plight of the black farmers and how they had been discriminated against. It was such a big task at that time that we fell back to handling it case by case in what we call casework.

Since then, I had gone to five, six, seven different meetings of the black farmers in three different cities. I have listened to what they have had to say, and I have tried to bring their concerns up here to Washington.

It was not, though, until the lawsuit called Pigford versus Glickman that brought about progress. But then, in the meeting of January 8 of this year, a particular person stood up. We had another meeting. The mikes were still there. I was the only elected official present. One black farmer stood up. He was bawling. He was maybe 70 years old, 75, and he said, ''Mr. Dickey, I want you to know something. I wanted you to know how difficult it is to even hold out hope.'' He said, ''We have fought. We have tried to be in the farming industry for years and years and years. We have had our problems; there is no question about that. But we have also seen that we have been stopped from getting the full benefits from our government through the USDA.

''We then were told that we could bring this lawsuit, and we signed up, assigning some hope to it, only to find out that, once the lawsuit was won, that we are now facing the same people who used to discriminate against us in the first place to administer the lawsuit.'' He said, ''It is just hard sometimes to get your hopes up.''

I am seeing today that this concurrent resolution is answering the call of this man. It is saying that the legislative branch is coming out in agreement that the court decree needs to be followed, it needs to be followed quickly. We do not need to have any further reasons for a delay. Some of the reasons for delay now are that the USDA and the structure that is set in the administration, the structure that is set up to try to help the black farmers have, in fact, added another layer, and that is an investigation by the FBI.

What has occurred in response to this man who stood up and said it is hard to keep hope, what has occurred is the presumption has gone from all of the claims are proper, maybe some are not, to the presumption that all the claims were not proper and maybe some are. The delays are unbelievable.

I have been asked by the USDA to go over and talk to the people who are making the investigations to tell them how important it is. I got to stand before them and hear their stories. They had planned for some 3,000 petitions, and they got almost 20,000 petitions.

This is the sort of thing that was supposed to be handled by the court decree. Liquidated damages were given to each farmer who attempted or did farm and was discriminated against. It was supposed to be liquidated damages, which means there is not any proof needed except to prove the existence of the farming intent or the presence.

They have gone through delay after delay after delay after delay. Now we come to the concurrent resolution, which may not be the strongest thing that we could do, but, timewise, we thought it was the best. The gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. WATTS) and I have looked at this thing and said this is probably the best.

Now, that man who stood there on January 8 and said what he had to say is, again, seeing a frustration, and that is that people who should be helping are now objecting to this concurrent resolution.

I have instructed my office to contact every member of the Black Caucus. We have the name, the telephone number, the time we called. Every office has been contacted, asking them, can you support this. If not, what do you have as an alternative?

I believe, as they have stated before, that they are going to object to this resolution because it has some political overtones, or because it might not be as strong as it could be. Well, I am going to have to go back to that gentleman who stood up and said we have got even further delays. Rather than having a stamp of approval on the actions of the court as directed to the administration, we are going to have a defeat, if it happens, of our effort to try to get support.

I want my colleagues to know that the black farmers at home are in complete agreement with what I am saying here today. There has been some controversy, but the controversy has been created outside of the black farmers. They know who has been there. They know who is assigned the staff. They know who has been trying to help.

This is a press release that they issued Saturday. ''The Executive Director of the Arkansas Chapter of Black Farmers and Agriculturalists Association today are calling for all Members of the United States House of Representatives to support the black farmers resolution,'' H. Con. Res. 296, ''introduced by Congressman J.C. WATTS and Congressman JAY DICKEY.''

''Those of us who are affected by Pigford v. Glickman believe that the resolution will get us closer to our goal of getting all rightful claims approved and paid. 'Some may say that Congressman DICKEY is presenting this legislation to save himself, but for us, he has already proven himself to be willing to be a true representative for the people in his district,' said Fernando Burkett. 'We want to commend Congressman JAY DICKEY for this effort and we challenge Arkansas' other representatives to show their support by signing onto this legislation. This challenge is also extended to all other Members of Congress who say that they are concerned about the plight of the black farmer.''

''The Arkansas Chapter will not allow our efforts to be politicized in this election year. We are asking for, and it is critical that we receive bipartisan sponsorship on this issue across America. Those who would object and condemn those who are trying to help us have not to this day offered an alternative to Congressman DICKEY'S Concurrent Resolution. We have no choice but to support those who are trying to help us. Even though some may say the help is small, it is better than no help at all!'' said Burkett. ''To us the issue is not Democrat or Republican. The real issue is who is doing, who is helping, who is fighting for what is right!''

So we have placed before the black farmers another obstacle, and that is that there might be some political reasons for the efforts that are being done. But the black farmers know and they have asked me to concoct all the things that I have done.

They know what is on this list. They know I worked to get the statute of limitations extended so that the farmers would not be precluded from asking for their help. They know that I have aggressively sought after and sought after protecting their rights through casework and through solicitations up here. They know that I have supported an increase of $10 million for section 2501. It provides small farmers assistance in filing these claims.

They know that I have met with the Secretary of Agriculture, I have met with the monitor, I have met with the litigators, I have met with all of the people that are involved in this sort of thing. So they know that, and that is why this particular endorsement is so significant.

I would wish those people who want to curse the darkness and not light a candle would come talk to our farmers in Arkansas and find out how they feel. I think it is all over the Nation. We must pursue this. We must pass this so that they can keep going.

Now my colleagues may say, well, what difference does it make? I am on the Committee on Appropriations, and I have pledged to the black farmers that, if I can get the support of the Members of Congress up here, if I can, that I will go and try to get increased funds for the investigation of these claims so that we can hurry them up.

At one point, it was stated that there was not enough time, that the money was too scarce, and that the budget was in jeopardy; and that is the reason why they had to slow down.

I went over and said that I would pledge whatever I could to do that. This is how critical it is, if we had this vote, and this concurrent resolution in support of the black farmers is, in fact, defeated, then I do not know how we can go and ask for additional appropriations. All we can do then is just wait for the members of the Black Caucus to give us an alternative or the members of the Democratic Party.

Our farmers just this Saturday went to visit a representative of the Black Caucus who came to Arkansas. They thought he is going to come, we are going to have bipartisan support, which we have been trying to get all this time, and he is going to help. It turned out that that was not the case, that he came and asked them to do some political chores that they said they could not do at this time. So there is hope dashed again for the black farmers.

I just hope, Mr. Speaker, that today we would honor the intent of the court decree, we will honor the effort of these farmers who have, all these years, tried to stay in the profession, tried to stay in farming, and have been, by court order, found to be discriminated against.

We ask, through this resolution, the administration to please comply with the court order expeditiously so that we can, in fact, bring this to a close and solve the problems that have existed for all these years for the black farmers.

One other thought that I want to state, this is not the only discrimination that exists. If people think that we can just abandon this whole idea once we pay the $50,000 to those people who are worthy of it, abandon the idea that there is no more discrimination, that is not the case. There still is. These black farmers still need a listening ear. They need somebody who will listen and will react. That is another reason why I say vote for the concurrent resolution.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, the time allocated to the gentleman from Mississippi (Mr. THOMPSON) will be controlled by the gentlewoman from the District of Columbia (Ms. NORTON).

There was no objection.

Ms. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, the plane of the gentleman from Mississippi (Mr. THOMPSON) is late, and I am pleased to manage on my side and in his absence.

Mr. Speaker, I want to express some concerns regarding this resolution. H. Con. Res. 296 is offered by the gentleman from Arkansas (Mr. DICKEY) and the gentleman from Arkansas (Mr. WATTS), which attempts to express the sense of this Congress regarding their urgency to expedite the settlement process for the Pigford Black Farmer class action suit that has been filed against the Federal government. No one can disagree with the essential concept of this resolution when more than 9,000 claims remain unresolved.

In any event, Mr. Speaker, when all the claims are settled in accordance with the Pigford consent decree, an estimated $2 billion will be expended to redress past discrimination in agricultural lending and program benefits. But outreach and technical assistance funding for future needs will remain inadequate.

I do want to indicate that this consent decree is the result of a bill that was introduced by the gentlewoman from North Carolina (Mrs. CLAYTON), who also cannot be here; and that were it not for the Congressional Black Caucus, this consent decree could not have gotten through. It was the energy and the determination of the Congressional Black Caucus that made that consent decree possible. It was the Congressional Black Caucus that got the time extended so that these farmers could, indeed, file for these claims, if there is any dispute about what members of the Caucus have done.

Regardless of what we do or say in this resolution, it is questionable whether USDA, Justice or the monitor can legally expedite the settlement process where denials can be overturned due to rushed or inadequate decisions.

Although I do have some appreciation for the concept between H. Con. Res. 296, we question the sincerity of the efforts to help keep African American farmers on their land as well as to help them remain competitive in production agriculture.

Mr. Speaker, all of us who are familiar with production agriculture under the current economic conditions of low commodity prices recognize that farmers need to modernize operations in order to make a profit. Most of our farmers cannot afford to modernize without having an extension of credit.

The extension of credit was a major issue in the Pigford class action suit. Under the factual background section of the Pigford's court's opinion, Judge Freidman said, ''It is of utmost importance that credit and benefit applications be processed quickly, or the farmers will lose all or most of the anticipated income for the entire year.'' Further, Judge Friedman said that ''it does a farmer no good to receive a loan to buy seeds after the planting season is past.''

In the Pigford class action, there was sufficient facts to support a finding that Federal employees discriminated against African American farmers when they denied, delayed, or otherwise frustrated the loan applications of those farmers.

Therefore, it is clear that the even-handed extension of agricultural credit is the main issue that this resolution should address.

Nevertheless, Mr. Speaker, none of the language in H. Con. Res. 296 makes a specific reference to discrimination in the agricultural lending process; therefore, it cannot express the sense of Congress regarding the expedited settlement of this class action suit.

The Commodity Credit Corporation and disaster assistance program language of paragraph two of this resolution should not be linked to credit in a meaningful way to adequately express Congress' resolve to alleviate lending discrimination that affects farmers.

Mr. Speaker, if this Congress really wants to help African American farmers stay on their land and be productive, we should fully fund section 2501, the outreach and technical assistance program for minority and limited resource farmers and ranchers. This program provides assistance with loan applications and farm implementation plans so that these African American farmers can effectively demonstrate their ability to handle cash flow if they receive a loan from USDA's Farm Service Agency.

My colleague, the gentleman from Arkansas (Mr. DICKEY), is a sponsor of this resolution. The gentleman from Arkansas is a member of the House Subcommittee on Agriculture, Rural Development, Food and Drug Administration, and Related Agencies of the Committee on Appropriations that funds the section 2501 program. It would be interesting to know whether the gentleman from Arkansas would support the full funding of this program in an effort to provide some real meaning to this resolution. I urge my colleagues to oppose this resolution.

Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Mississippi (Mr. THOMPSON).

Mr. THOMPSON of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, let me from the outset associate myself with my colleague's comments in opposition to this sense of Congress resolution.

This sense of Congress resolution produces a cruel hoax on African American farmers in this country. Those of us who have labored very diligently trying to get relief, to no avail under the last two Congresses, really got to the point of having to go to court rather than an administrative remedy. But as I look at House Concurrent Resolution 296, it provides no relief, no direction, nothing other than some comfort or cover for Members of Congress when they have not done the representative acts that they should in their respective districts.

The 2501 program, which was a program specifically designed for outreach for African American farmers, languishes in the administration's budget and it is constantly opposed by members of the other side on the Subcommittee on Agriculture, Rural Development, Food and Drug Administration, and Related Agencies of the Committee on Appropriations. I challenge the supporters of this amendment to provide the necessary monies so that outreach and other things can be complemented rather than curtailed.

If we look at the Department of Agriculture and its historic discrimination against African American farmers, this sense of Congress resolution addresses none of those past discriminations. The last plantation is still the last plantation. Employees of the Department of Agriculture continue to pose a problem for many borrowers of color. This resolution is a hollow effort to try to correct some political missteps made by my colleague from Arkansas. This is not the way to do it. The way to do it is to provide in appropriation language monies necessary to assist these black farmers who have proven the historic discrimination.

In addition to this, John Boyd, President of the National Black Farmers Union, said that should kill this resolution. It did not and will not do anything for African American farmers.

Mr. Speaker, the other issue that I want to bring before my colleagues today is the notion that the Congressional Black Caucus labored long and hard trying to get support from this body on behalf of African American farmers. It was only with the help of the President and some Members on the Republican side, not the sponsors of this sense of Congress resolution that we were able to get language inserted in the last two appropriation bills allowing for lawsuits to be brought on behalf of black farmers. It was only because we were able to get the language inserted that we were able to bring suit and the farmers, through the help of Judge Friedman, received some support.

But it is still very difficult, Mr. Speaker. Sure, there are problems associated with the lawsuit, but it is because of a cumbersome government, a government that continues to only work for those who have when it should work for those who have not. This sense of Congress resolution does not get at the heart of the problem at the Department of Agriculture. We still have 14,000 employees who work for the Department of Agriculture who are paid by Federal dollars yet they are not Federal employees.

We have three personnel systems operating within the Department of Agriculture. So, clearly, we have a problem with the Department of Agriculture that no sense of Congress resolution can correct. We need legislation making sure that all the employees who work for the Department of Agriculture are, in fact, in one personnel system, unlike the three personnel systems that we have now.

We also need legislation, Mr. Speaker, that will also look at the discrimination that has gone on historically. We need to fully fund the civil rights division of the Department of Agriculture. As my colleagues know, this division was dismantled for a number of years and it was only because the Congressional Black Caucus fought that we did put monies back into the Department of Civil Rights in the Department of Agriculture.

There are a number of other problems associated with this resolution, Mr. Speaker. It is called too little, too late. It cannot be decided, after people have lost their land, some have even, because of stress associated with land loss, died, now provide a sense of Congress resolution that is really a Band-Aid on a cancer. What we need is comprehensive legislation to address the black land loss issues in this country, to look at the systemic discrimination continuing to exist in the Department of Agriculture, and the full funding of the outreach programs necessary for African American farmers in this country to be viable.

So, Mr. Speaker, this is not in the best interest of African American farmers. All of us are interested in making sure that all Americans benefit from the goodness of this country, but to now decide at this late juncture, when the gates are open, when all the livestock has been gone, the land is sold, to decide to come here with a sense of Congress resolution is not where we should be.

I challenge my colleagues who are supporting this sense of Congress resolution to help join the Congressional Black Caucus in fashioning comprehensive legislation that will really provide long-term relief for the African American farmers in this country and not a Band-Aid just to get by this election cycle.

Ms. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. DICKEY. Mr. Speaker, I understand I have 8½ minutes remaining?

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. PEASE). The gentleman is correct.

Mr. DICKEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I want to say quickly that I agree with what the gentleman from Mississippi (Mr. THOMPSON) says to a very large degree. I have been involved in this, as I said, since 1993. I have heard the complaints straight on. I have not known how to handle them. It has been only since 1995 that I have been on the Committee on Appropriations.

I will say that I have voted for everything they have mentioned. I voted for 2501, I voted for the statute of limitations, I voted for every other measure in the appropriations subcommittee, every one, and not one time has any member of the Black Caucus come to my office and asked me to help in any way.

I want my colleagues all to know that I am available. If it is necessary for me to come to the Black Caucus, like I have tried to do on this resolution to ask my colleagues to help on this, I will come. We have to find a solution.

My problem is it looks like there is some kind of qualification as to who can help the black farmers in the minds of the opposition to this and who cannot. I understand that I am a Republican and I am a white person, but I am also concerned and I have been active, as this list shows, in trying to be an advocate for the black farmers in their dilemma.

I have said before, and I will say it again, that it is not something that we can say we are going to handle just with this lawsuit and settling it. We have to move forward and get complete cooperation. I want to find a way. I waited a long time before filing this resolution. I was waiting for the Black Caucus or anybody else who is interested, any Member of the Democrat or Republican Party to come forward with some kind of idea. No idea has come forward. So we are now cursing the darkness again and not lighting the candle.

I will pledge my time, my energy, and my position on the Subcommittee on Agriculture, Rural Development, Food and Drug Administration, and Related Agencies of the Committee on Appropriations to push as hard as I can, no matter what the results of this might be, for the black farmers.

I want to answer the question about political missteps. The gentleman from Mississippi (Mr. THOMPSON) said I have made political missteps. That is only in his eyes. I will read again from the Black Farmers and Agriculturalists Association release. These are the people I spoke before. I spoke for about 45 minutes. I stayed there after that and took casework and everything else. There was not a problem then. But, again, for some reason, somehow the fact I would make statements to the people who I was closest to, and who they were the closest to as far as an elected official, it has been called a political misstep.

''The Executive Director of the Arkansas Chapter Black Farmers & Agriculture Association today are calling for all Members of the United States House of Representatives to support the black farmers resolution introduced by Congressman J.C. WATTS and Congressman JAY DICKEY.

''Those of us who are affected by Pigford v. Glickman believe the resolution will get us closer to our goal of getting all rightful claims approved and paid. 'Some may say Congressman DICKEY is presenting this legislation to save himself, but for us, he has already proven himself to be willing to be a true representative for the people in his district,' said Fernando Burkett. 'We want to commend Congressman DICKEY for this effort and we challenge Arkansas' other representatives to show their support by signing onto this legislation. This challenge is also extended to all other Members of Congress who say that they are concerned about the plight of the black farmer.''

''The Arkansas Chapter will not allow our efforts to be politicized in this election year. We are asking for and it is critical that we receive bipartisan sponsorship on this issue across America. Those who would object and condemn those who are trying to help us have not to this day offered an alternative to Congressman DICKEY's resolution. We have no choice but to support those who are trying to help us. 'Even though some may say the help is small, it is better than no help at all,' says Burkett. 'To us the issue is not Republican or Democrat. The real issue is who is doing, who is helping, who is fighting for what is right.' ''

And what this statement says, I would say to the gentleman from Mississippi (Mr. THOMPSON), is that these people are recognizing that the person who is standing up for them is doing it for what is right, not because it is political. There is no political gain in this from the standpoint of trying to get help for the black farmers, for me or for anybody else at this point, because it is beyond politics. It is that serious a problem.

And I pledge, I ask for help. I would like for my colleague to communicate. I have asked him to support this. He said he did not know about the resolution. I tried to get a copy to him. When I talked to him at the airport, he said he had not read it yet.

As far as John Boyd is concerned, he is a member of another organization. He is not involved. He has never been to any of the five or six meetings that I have been to. He has never seen what it is like in Arkansas. He does not know what motivates me to try to help.

Even though John Boyd has been in my office, we have had our picture taken together, he asked me for a favor even, and I did it because we had something in common. John Boyd does not have a problem with me or he would not have come to my office, he would not have had his picture made with me. We have talked about it because we have something in common.

So what is the deal? Why are we going to let this become a public record where we have rejected the pleas of the black farmers? As stated by this letter, we rejected their plea for help that someone please and come and help them, no matter what it might be to support those who are trying to help us. It is better than no help at all.

All they see and all they hear in this effort on behalf of the Black Caucus and other people is that this is just one more reason for them to hear the word ''no.'' ''No.'' ''No.'' ''No.''

What we can do is if we can work together, we can work through the appropriations process through the Committee on Agriculture and everybody else, we can work through all of those if we will just get together.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to reclaim the time remaining and to yield such time as she may consume to the gentlewoman from North Carolina (Mrs. CLAYTON).

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. PEASE). Without objection, the gentlewoman from the District of Columbia (Ms. NORTON) reclaims her time and yields to the gentlewoman from North Carolina.

There was no objection.

Mrs. CLAYTON. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman from the District of Columbia (Ms. NORTON) for yielding me the time.

Mr. Speaker, this resolution expresses the sense of Congress regarding it necessary to expedite the settlement process for discrimination claims against USDA brought by black farmers.

This resolution is well intended. However, much more needs to be done.

Mr. Speaker, in 1997, following four decades of systemic discrimination at USDA, black farmers from throughout the Nation consolidated their claims of discrimination into one class action lawsuit. In that lawsuit, Pigford v. Glickman, the lead plaintiff was from my congressional district.

On January 5, 1999, the plaintiff entered into a 5-year consent decree with USDA. The Court approved the settlement on April 14, 1999.

Since that time, we have had reason to be hopeful and reason to be fearful. We are hopeful because, after months and months of discussion and negotiations, the name plaintiff's case, Mr. Pigford's, has been settled.

Yet we are fearful, because more than a year after the Court approved the settlement, thousands of cases have not yet been adjudicated.

That fact alone makes this resolution somewhat useful. We are hopeful because more than 8,000 cases have been upheld by the adjudicator. Yet, we are fearful because almost 40 percent of the cases have been denied.

We are hopeful because more than $200 million has been paid to claimants. Yet, we are fearful because only a little more than 4,000 claimants have been paid thus far.

Indeed, USDA, in its April 2000 report, Commitment to Progress, acknowledged that there has been some difficulty in coordinating payments and that, in some cases, payments have been delayed.

We are hopeful because the adjudicator has identified more than 2,000 loans for cancellation. Yet, we are fearful because, to date, less than 150 of those loans have actually been canceled although promised. We are fearful because only three of Track B claims, the major claims, have been tried.

At this point, Mr. Speaker, I would have to say that our fear outweighs our hope. It greatly concerns me, and it should greatly concern each of us as well that in my home State of North Carolina, much like every State where farming is a way of life, there has been a 64 percent decline in minority farmers in just over 15 years, from 6,996 in 1978 to 2,498 farms in 1992.

Black farmers are declining at three times the rate of white farmers.

There are several reasons why the number of black farmers are declining so rapidly. But the one that has been documented time and time again is the discriminatory environment present in the Department of Agriculture, the very agent established to accommodate and assist the special needs of farmers.

The plight of the black farmer in America is a plight that has been fueled by the sting of discrimination. Once land is lost, it is very, very difficult to recover. And land has been lost by black farmers and black families.

Mr. Speaker, it is difficult enough for small farmers to eke out an existence in this time of inclement weather, economic downturns, and big farm takeovers. This difficult situation should not be made more difficult by discrimination rearing its ugly head.

When the history of this century is written, it is my hope that the year 2000 will be recorded as significant in the effort to change the course and the culture of the United States Department of Agriculture and the muddied legacy that it has left for black farmers.

This resolution is a step, perhaps, well-intended in the right direction, but it is a very, very limited step.

Ms. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. DICKEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman from North Carolina (Mrs.

CLAYTON) for her statements. And I think those are the reasons why I have gotten involved. It has taken me a longer time to learn that than she has. But since 1993, I have been listening, I have been meeting, I have been listening, I have been talking, I have been trying to find out. Now what we have is one last plea on my part on behalf of the black farmers.

My statement of January 8 was we cannot proceed any further without my colleagues in Congress being supportive of this effort. If we vote this concurrent resolution down, we are going to be changing it from legislative remedies to political, and I beg my colleagues not to do that.

These black farmers have not, in any way, done anything to deserve this, to be considered a political football, that someone has to be of a certain party or had to be a certain type of person to be able to bring something like this. It is a legislative matter. It is brought so that we can show concurrence. That is what it is.

I plead with my colleagues to let this pass so that we can, at least, say we are in unity with the black farmers. And then we can go forward from there. If we take it away from that, from being legislative, and we make it political and say, no, sir, we are not going to do this because somebody may get credit or can blame somebody else, then the black farmers are going to get a no in the same way that they have been getting noes for years and years and years. A no is a no, no matter what we say to it.

I think it would be a real disservice to their commitment and to their sacrifice for us to say no to them again. I plead with my colleagues to vote for this resolution.

Mr. WATTS of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, today the House will be considering House Concurrent Resolution 296, a resolution expressing the sense of Congress that the settlement process for discrimination claims brought by African-American farmers against the Department of Agriculture be carried out in a timely and expeditious manner.

The Secretary of Agriculture has conceded that the Department of Agriculture discriminated against certain African-American farmers in the delivery of payments from the Commodity Credit Corporation and disaster assistance programs during the period from 1981 through 1996. This discrimination has had a significant impact on the lives and economic well-being of these African-American farmers and their families.

A Federal District Court Judge ruled in April, 1999, that these African-American farmers, as a result of this discrimination, are entitled to settlement from the Department of Agriculture. However, even a year later, these claims have not been addressed by the Department of Agriculture in a timely manner. These settlements are desperately needed and much-deserved. The Court-mandated funds will help these farmers recover their losses due to this discrimination and provide them with the financial means to get back on their feet.

I rise in strong support of this resolution and I would like to thank Representative DICKEY for his efforts to ensure that these claims are dealt with fairly and expeditiously. I ask my colleagues in the House to join me in urging the Department of Agriculture to expedite the settlement process and commit the necessary resources to assist these farmers.

Mr. DICKEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The question was taken.

Mr. THOMPSON of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 8 of rule XX and the Chair's prior announcement, further proceedings on this motion will be postponed.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. DICKEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks on H. Con. Res. 296.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Arkansas?

There was no objection.

SOUTHEAST FEDERAL CENTER PUBLIC-PRIVATE DEVELOPMENT ACT OF 2000

Mr. LATOURETTE. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 3069) to authorize the Administrator of General Services to provide for redevelopment of the Southeast Federal Center in the District of Columbia, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 3069

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

(5) shall describe the consideration, duties, and responsibilities for which the United States and the private entity are responsible;

(6) shall provide—

(A) that the United States will not be liable for any action, debt, or liability of any entity created by the agreement; and

(7) shall include such other terms and conditions as the Administrator considers appropriate.

(c) CONSIDERATION.—An agreement entered into under this section shall be for fair consideration, as determined by the Administrator. Consideration under such an agreement may be provided in whole or in part through in-kind consideration. In-kind consideration may include provision of space, goods, or services of benefit to the United States, including construction, repair, remodeling, or other physical improvements of Federal property, maintenance of Federal property, or the provision of office, storage, or other usable space.

(d) AUTHORITY TO CONVEY.—In carrying out an agreement entered into under this section, the Administrator is authorized to convey interests in real property, by lease, sale, or exchange, to a private entity.

(D) any other provision of law (other than Federal laws relating to environmental and historic preservation) inconsistent with this section.

(2) UNUTILIZED OR UNDERUTILIZED PROPERTY.—Any facility covered under an agreement entered into under this section may not be considered to be unutilized or underutilized for purposes of section 501 of the Stewart B. McKinney Homeless Assistance Act (42 U.S.C. 11411).

(c) REVIEW BY CONGRESS.—A proposed agreement under section 3 may not become effective until the end of a 30-day period of continuous session of Congress following the date of the transmittal of a report on the agreement under this section. For purposes of the preceding sentence, continuity of a session of Congress is broken only by an adjournment sine die, and there shall be excluded from the computation of such 30-day period any day during which either House of Congress is not in session during an adjournment of more than 3 days to a day certain.

SEC. 5. USE OF PROCEEDS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Net proceeds from an agreement entered into under section 3 shall be deposited into, administered, and expended, subject to appropriations Acts, as part of the fund established by section 210(f) of the Federal Property and Administrative Services Act of 1949 (40 U.S.C. 490(f)). In this subsection, the term ''net proceeds from an agreement entered into under section 3'' means the proceeds from the agreement minus the expenses incurred by the Administrator with respect to the agreement.

(b) RECOVERY OF EXPENSES.—The Administrator may retain from the proceeds of an agreement entered into under section 3 amounts necessary to recover the expenses incurred by the Administrator with respect to the agreement. Such amounts shall be deposited in the account in the Treasury from which the Administrator incurs expenses related to disposals of real property.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. LATOURETTE) and the gentlewoman from the District of Columbia (Ms. NORTON) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. LATOURETTE).

Mr. LATOURETTE. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

First of all, Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank the gentleman from Indiana (Chairman BURTON) of the House Committee on Government Reform and Oversight for his close cooperation in waiving jurisdiction over certain portions of this bill.

Mr. Speaker, I include for the RECORD the following exchange of letters between the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Chairman SHUSTER) and the gentleman from Indiana (Chairman BURTON) regarding this matter:

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
COMMITTEE ON GOVERNMENT REFORM,
Washington, DC, April 13, 2000.

Hon. BUD SHUSTER,
Chairman, Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure, House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: Thank you for your letter regarding H.R. 3069, the ''Southeast Federal Center Public-Private Development Act of 2000.'' As you know, this bill contains certain provisions related to matters in the jurisdiction of the Committee on Government Reform. Specifically, Section 3 of the bill waives current law regarding the treatment of Federal property, which is under the Government Reform Committee's jurisdiction.

In the interest of expediting Floor consideration of the bill, the Committee will not exercise its jurisdiction over H.R. 3069. This action should not, however, be construed as waiving the Committee's jurisdiction over future legislation of a similar nature.

Thank you for your cooperation on this matter.

Sincerely,

DAN BURTON,
Chairman.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, COMMITTEE ON TRANSPORTATION AND INFRASTRUCTURE,
Washington, DC, April 13, 2000.

Hon. DAN BURTON,
Chairman, Committee on Government Reform, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN, In the near future, the House will consider H.R. 3069, the ''Southeast Federal Center Public-Private Development Act of 2000.'' While H.R. 3069 primarily contains provisions related to matters in the jurisdiction of the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure, I recognize that certain provisions of Section 3 of the bill, which waive current law regarding the treatment of Federal property affect the jurisdiction of the Committee on Government Reform.

I agree that allowing this bill to go forward in no way impairs upon your jurisdiction over these provisions, and I would be pleased to place this letter and any response you may have in the Report on this bill. In addition, if a conference is necessary on this bill, I would support your request to have the Committee on Government Reform be represented on the conference with respect to the matters in question.

I look forward to passing this bill on the Floor soon and thank you for your assistance.

Sincerely,

BUD SHUSTER,
Chairman.

Secondly, Mr. Speaker, I want to congratulate our colleague, the gentlewoman from the District of Columbia (Ms. NORTON), for her tireless efforts to move this bill forward. I know that this legislation means a great deal to the residents of the District of Columbia and will greatly improve the quality of life in the area of the Anacostia River, where the center is located.

H.R. 3069, as amended, the Southeast Federal Center Public-Private Development Act of 2000, authorizes the Administrator of the General Services Administration to enter into agreements, including leases, contracts, partnerships, joint venture trusts, and limited liability agreements with private entities to acquire, construct, rehabilitate, operate, maintain, or use land and make improvements at the Southeast Federal Center.

The Southeast Federal Center is a 55-acre parcel of land located on the Anacostia River in Southeast Washington, D.C., adjacent to the Navy Yard. The bill will also allow the GSA to leverage private capital and expertise to develop this site for use by the Government and private sector, including retail, commercial, and other uses.

This bill bars the Government from debt, obligation or liability in connection with development and allows GSA to prescribe terms and conditions for any lease by GSA for developed space as appropriate.

The Administrator is permitted to accept in-kind consideration of payment, including construction, repair or remodeling of physical improvements of Federal property. To ensure maximum development flexibility, any agreements shall not be subject to the Economy Act of 1932, which prohibits GSA from accepting in-kind contributions.

Further, certain provisions of the Property Act of 1949, the Public Buildings Act of 1959, the McKinney Homeless Act and other laws, not related to environmental law or historic preservation laws, are waived. These laws are waived to make an agreement with private-sector entities more attractive. GSA shall report to the committee prior to entering into any agreement, including master leases.

I support the bill and ask our colleagues to do the same.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, first I would like to thank the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. LATOURETTE) for his kind words and for his generous support.

I want to express my deep appreciation to the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Chairman SHUSTER) and the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. OBERSTAR), the ranking member, for their hard work in bringing H.R. 3069, the Southeast Federal Center Public-Private Redevelopment Act of 2000, to the floor today.

I also want to thank the gentleman from West Virginia (Mr. WISE), the subcommittee ranking member, for his strong support.

Mr. Speaker, I want to especially thank the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. FRANKS), the subcommittee chairman, because, were it not for his leadership and attention to the Southeast Federal Center, we would not finally be on the path toward making this valuable Federal asset productive and beneficial to American taxpayers.

The Southeast Federal Center Public-Private Redevelopment Act of 2000

reflects the best and strongest bipartisan intents of the Congress. It arose out of a hearing in May 1999, where I was engaged in perennial questioning concerning the failure of the Federal Government since 1962 to develop its largest tract of land in the city while leasing massive amounts of office space here and throughout the region.

Over many years, consistent criticism from our subcommittee concerning the magnitude of the waste never brought results until the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. FRANKS) at that hearing took a deep interest, suggested a tour and then worked with me in developing H.R. 3069, the Southeast Federal Center Public-Private Redevelopment Act of 2000 that is before us now.

H.R. 3069 would allow the GSA wide latitude to contract for arrangements to bring any appropriate development to the site, private, Federal, local or some combination. Our bill specifies that any agreement entered into between the GSA and the developing entity must: One, have as its primary purpose enhancing the value of the Southeast Federal Center; two, be negotiated pursuant to procedures that protect the Federal Government's interest and promote a competitive bidding process; three, provide an option for the Federal Government to lease and occupy any office space in the developed facilities; four, not require unless otherwise determined by the GSA Federal ownership of any developed facilities; and, five, describe the duties and consideration for which the government and the public and private entities involved are responsible. The bill also authorizes GSA to accept nonmonetary, in-kind consideration such as the provision of goods and services at the site.

A site centrally and strategically located just 5 minutes from the Capitol, the SEFC is considered one of the most valuable undeveloped parcels on the East Coast. Yet it has become a wasteland that also has triggered decay in the surrounding neighborhoods. The SEFC represents an astonishing denial of productive use to the Federal Government and of revenue to the taxpayers, particularly considering that the location is so close to the Mall and the Capitol.

Efforts by the Federal Government to develop the land exclusively for Federal uses have consistently failed. Most recently the Reagan and Bush administrations in a thoughtful innovation proposed a mall infrastructure to be built by the Federal Government with amenities to be provided by the private sector to attract Federal agencies, but regrettably this proposal had no effect on agency decisions and no relocation of Federal agencies to the SEFC occurred as a result. The Clinton administration also has encouraged Federal agencies to locate at the site, to no avail. The Washington Navy yard located next to the SEFC is being redeveloped successfully with civilian Navy personnel, but its very visible innovation has not reversed the fortunes of the SEFC. Nor has the Metro station which was located there in December 1991.

The subcommittee's analysis of the site and of the real estate industry makes clear that the reason that so attractive a site has not been developed after decades of trying by the Federal Government is that it is not developable as a traditional government-owned site today. Moreover, the limited set of tools available to the GSA do not enable the government to make productive use of the SEFC. The subcommittee's work demonstrates that without new tools, the Federal Government will not be able to capitalize on this valuable asset or to offer an economic incentive for private developers to develop the land. H.R. 3069 is applicable to this single parcel alone and its value to the government and to this city makes it important to proceed without further costly delay.

What are the government's realistic options? The land certainly is too valuable to sell in light of the scarcity of land in the District and the sale of federally owned land in any case would never be tolerated by Congress when the Federal Government is leasing space throughout the District and the region at a cost of billions of dollars to the taxpayers. Yet an OMB bureaucrat recently threw up his hands and was so anxious to get this embarrassment of unused land off the government's books that he did a pass-through to the District of Columbia until it was called back by higher authorities at the OMB. For years, the Congress has not allowed cost-free transfers of Federal land. Alternatively Congress, which has not appropriated funds for its own development of the SEFC, would clearly not fund a pass-through to another jurisdiction. Another alternative, leasing the land, is also unworkable and has at least two major drawbacks that would undercut the concept and purposes of the bill. First, the GSA is limited to supplying general purpose special office space and lacks mixed use authority through leasing. Second, leasing a government-owned site requires the sale of the site under the existing scoring rules. If leasing were the answer, GSA would have pursued it long ago, Mr. Speaker. The smart way to develop this property in today's climate is to combine the government's value in ownership with the private sector's ability to develop land.

H.R. 3069 not only represents the subcommittee's thinking, this bill is entirely in keeping with the reinventing government public-private partnership ideas and practices fostered by the present administration. Moreover, the Congress itself has long sanctioned the use of Federal land value in exchange for private development. The Veterans' Administration, the Department of Interior and the Department of Defense have this general authority not on a one-time basis as provided by H.R. 3069. The extensive experience from these agencies demonstrates conclusively that public-private partnerships involving the Federal Government not only are cost effective, these arrangements protect the government from risk because the scoring rules ensure that every GSA expenditure is accounted and appropriated for in a manner that insulates the Federal Government from financial risk. This bill allows the private sector to do the kind of development it does every day. At the same time, H.R. 3069 provides an option of locating Federal facilities as part of the mix and, therefore, of meeting Federal agency needs for which the SEFC has been unavailable for decades.

The Federal Government has been unable to commit financial resources for the development of the SEFC. Considering the competition with other resources, it is fair to say that the Federal Government is unwilling to develop the site notwithstanding the continuing loss in productivity and in revenue to the taxpayers. H.R. 3069, establishing a public-private partnership to develop the site, represents an important breakthrough in achieving the highest and best use of a wasted Federal asset, securing revenue for the Federal Government and providing enhanced opportunities for Federal agency occupancy while at the same time contributing to the local D.C. economy and revival of the surrounding neighborhood whose deterioration traces significantly to this large brownfield site. The approach is mutually beneficial. It is win-win. The Federal Government makes its property available for Federal and private development, including revenue-producing occupancy for the government, and the developer, selected competitively, receives a valuable opportunity to add value. Democrats, Republicans and the President, who have all said they will come together when government and private responsibilities are appropriately apportioned, have found a meeting place in H.R. 3069. I appreciate the bipartisan partnership we have achieved here in the House for the public-private partnership H.R. 3069 represents.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. LATOURETTE. Mr. Speaker, H.R. 3069 is a great idea. It is a good bill. I urge its passage.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

DONALD YOUMANS' INTERNATIONAL CUSTODY BATTLE

(Mr. LAMPSON asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. LAMPSON. Madam Speaker, I rise today to tell the story of Donald Youmans, a father whose son was abducted to Germany in 1993. Donald filed a missing persons report with police, and a United States court granted him temporary sole custody and ordered immediate return of his son.

A German court issued an ex parte order granting the mother sole custody of the son, stating that the child would suffer severe psychological damage to be taken away from his new environment of 3 months. In 1994, a German lower court denied return of the child, and 4 months later granted sole custody to the mother. In 1996, a court confirmed sole final custody and gave Donald restrictive access rights to be exercised only in Germany.

Despite the court order for these restrictive access rights, Donald's ex-wife continues to deny him access to his son. He has not seen his son since 1994. His son was abducted when he was two, and he is now eight.

Madam Speaker, these daily 1 minutes are about families and reuniting children with their parents. We must show respect and concern for the most sacred of bonds, the bond between a parent and a child. The House must do all that it can to bring our children home.

SPECIAL ORDERS

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mrs. BIGGERT). Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 6, 1999, and under a previous order of the House, the following Members will be recognized for 5 minutes each.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. LIPINSKI) is recognized for 5 minutes.

(Mr. LIPINSKI addressed the House. His remarks will appear hereafter in the Extensions of Remarks.)

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. WELDON) is recognized for 5 minutes.

(Mr. WELDON of Florida addressed the House. His remarks will appear hereafter in the Extensions of Remarks.)

CORPORATE INVESTMENT IN AUTHORITARIAN REGIMES

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. BROWN) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Madam Speaker, the fall of the Berlin Wall and the end of the Cold War opened up a 10-year flood of new trade investment and economic growth in the world. But underneath this trend lies an unsettling pattern.

When it comes to competing for U.S. trade and private investment dollars, democratic countries in the developing world, countries like India and Taiwan and Bangladesh and South Korea, are losing ground to more authoritarian countries, like Indonesia, and especially the People's Republic of China.

In the post-Cold War decade, the share of developing country exports to the U.S. for democratic nations fell from 53 percent in 1989 to 34 percent in 1998, a decrease of 18 percentage points. Nondemocratic nations increased their share commensurately.

In manufacturing goods, developing democracies' share of developing country exports fell 21 percentage points, from 56 percent to 35 percent.

Regarding U.S. foreign investment in manufacturing, developing democratic countries gained 1 percent over the last 10 years. Nations that do not support democracy gained 5 percent of U.S. foreign investment over the last 10 years. China was responsible for 5 percent of foreign investment gained for nondemocratic countries.

Not only have the U.S. export market shares decreased for developing countries that have always been democracies, countries that have recently become democracies have also lost market share.

Understanding that basis for the vote that is coming in the next couple of weeks about giving permanent trade, Most Favored Nations status trading privileges to China should make the difference in this vote.

Western corporations want to invest in countries, like China, that have below-poverty wages, that have unenforced environmental laws or nonexistent environmental standards, and have no opportunities to unionize. As a result, they are turning to the authoritarian countries that can suppress labor rights and guarantee high profits for American companies.

China, for instance, is much more attractive to an American investigator than is India; China, a country which has a docile hierarchal workforce where workers cannot join unions, where workers cannot talk back, where workers often cannot switch jobs and go to a competing factory.

United States pretends to promote democratic ideals worldwide through foreign aid and through the rhetoric in this chamber. But as developing countries make progress towards democracy, the American business community rewards them by pulling its trade and investment and depositing their investments in money in other totalitarian countries.

Understand, where corporate CEOs walk the halls of Congress asking Members of Congress to support permanent trade advantages for China, understand where they say that we need to engage with China so China improves its human rights record, where China will quit persecuting Christians and China will quit allowing forced abortions in their country, understand that the three major economic players in China are the Communist party of China, the People's Liberation Army of China, which runs many of the factories there, and Western investors.

Those Western investors, the Communist party, the People's Liberation Army, none of them want to change the rules. The rules work just fine for them. They like an authoritarian government structure that does not reward an ability to organize and bargain collectively, that does not tolerate any kind of dissent, that does not allow for any kind of worker rights.

That is why American investment is more and more likely to go to China instead of India, instead of Taiwan, instead of South Korea, instead of a country that really is a democracy. That is why China's permanent Most Favored Nations status trading privileges are such a bad idea.

Shame on this country, shame on this Congress if we give permanent Most Favored Nations status trading privileges to a country that violates every human rights standard, every value that we in this country hold dear.

SUPPORT $500 TAX CREDIT FOR SERVICE MEN AND WOMEN ON FOOD STAMPS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. JONES) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. JONES of North Carolina. Madam Speaker, as my colleagues know, for several weeks, I have been coming down to the floor talking about our men and women in uniform that are on food stamps. Quite frankly, it has been a couple of weeks.

I brought tonight, as I have each and every night, the Marine who is getting ready to deploy for Bosnia. On his feet is his little girl named Magan. In his arms, he has a baby named Bridgette.

It so happens, on April 14, as my colleagues know, the Congress had closed for Easter. I was asked, along with the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. MCINTYRE), to attend a memorial service at New River Marine Air Station, as four Marines were among 19 Marines that were killed in the V–22 helicopter accident in Arizona a few weeks ago.

Sitting in the sanctuary during the memorial, I started thinking, I was looking around at Marines in attendance and just how many times those of us in this Nation take for granted the men and women in uniform that are willing to be called upon at any time to go defend this country and to give their life for this Nation.

So I am back on the floor tonight because I have introduced H.R. 1055, which is a bill that would give each and every member in the military that qualifies for food stamps, it would give them a $500 tax credit. Quite frankly, it is not enough. At least it shows that we care, and it is a start.

I am pleased to tell my colleagues tonight, Madam Speaker, that we have 95 Members, both Democrats and Republicans, that are on this bill almost equally divided. Many on the Democratic side as well as the Republican side are in the leadership, and I am pleased they would join me in this effort to say to those who qualify for food stamps in uniform that we do care about them, we are trying to do something about it.

I have figures that are really kind of interesting, that the Defense Department says we have 6,500 men and women in uniform on food stamps, and the GAO says we have 13,000. Well, my point is, Madam Speaker, that one is one too many.

I think about the fact that we have already spent probably $9 billion or $10 billion in Bosnia, we have spent probably $11 billion in Yugoslavia, and yet we cannot find the money to take our men and women in uniform off food stamps. That is unacceptable.

I speak about this quite frequently in my district. I see a lot of people in civic clubs and sometimes at churches, like any Member here that serves the United States House of Representatives. People come up to me afterwards and say, ''I cannot believe that. I did not know that.''

So I am hoping, by coming to the floor once a week, that I can encourage the leadership both, again, Republican and Democrat, to move this bill. There are other ideas that Members have, and they are good ideas. But I tell my colleagues that we have researched this thing for months going back a year ago, and what we found out, that if one really wants to make sure that those who qualify for food stamps are the ones that receive the assistance and no one drops through the cracks, then it has to be this bill that we have introduced that would give a $500 tax credit.

If there should be some movement on this bill, I hope, quite frankly, that, in a bipartisan way, we would raise that figure from $500 to $1,000.

So, Madam Speaker, I am going to close now. But, again, I want to remind the Members of the House that not only this Marine, this Marine represents everybody that is in uniform. We are sending our troops around this Nation just like a police force. I think between 1991 and 1999, they have been on 149 operations or deployments. I think about 60 percent of those in uniform are married.

So, again, I hope that we, in a bipartisan way, before we leave in October, will pass legislation that those that are on food stamps will know that we care about them. Because I know truthfully, Madam Speaker, that the American people are just outraged that anyone in uniform is on food stamps.

THIRTEEN JEWS HELD IN SHIRAZ, IRAN ON CHARGES OF ESPIONAGE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from California (Mr. SHERMAN) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. SHERMAN. Madam Speaker, I rise to address this House on the issue of the 13 Jews being held in the city of Shiraz in Iran and on trial on charges of espionage. Let me first provide a bit of background. The Jewish community of Iran has been there since the Babylonia captivity over 2,500 years ago. It is the oldest Jewish community anywhere in the world except for Israel itself. For 2,500 years, Jews have lived in peace and in loyalty to whichever regime has governed Persia, now Iran.

In 1979, the Iranian revolution created the Islamic Republic. Since then, that Islamic Republic has found it necessary or appropriate for some reason to oppress its religious minorities. Its treatment of those of the Bahai faith is known to many of us and is deplorable. And as to those who practice the Jewish faith, some 17 have been killed in the last 21 years, roughly one a year, always after some sort of show trial, always absurd charges followed by execution.

In February of 1979, the government of Iran, perhaps dissatisfied with the idea of only one trumped-up execution a year of the Jewish community, instead decided to arrest some 13 Jews on absurd charges. They were charged with spying for the United States and spying for Israel.

Now, why can I brand these charges so absurd? Well, Madam Speaker, here in the United States we live in a multiethnic, multicultural society. People of all races, religions, and ethnicities are found in the National Security Administration, the CIA, the FBI, and other positions of importance to our national security. And so no matter what a person's ethnic background, every boy and girl in America could find themselves in a position where they could be tempted to become a spy. And in fact we have Anglo American spies in our history and Chinese American spies. Perhaps there have even been Jewish American spies.

But Iran is a very different country. No one of the Jewish faith is allowed anywhere near anything of national security significance in Iran. And so to think that the CIA would reach out to this one small community and from there hire its spies is absolutely absurd. We could not be the world's only superpower if we hired as our spies those very few individuals in Iran absolutely precluded from getting the information that a spy might want.

These charges are not only absurd, but at the beginning of this month the trials began. The trials are modeled after those of Joseph Stalin; show trials in which there is no evidence except confession, and the confessions so devoid of information that they are evidence not of guilt but of the fear of the defendant. No information is given as to what the espionage sought to discover, what information was passed, to whom it was passed, or how it was passed. No information at all comes out in this trial except the fear of the defendants. Their confessions are evidence perhaps of torture, but not of guilt. Not since the days of Joseph Stalin have we seen such trials.

The question is what will the world do about it? The key is to have not only the American representative at the World Bank but the representatives of Germany and Japan stand up and say human rights does matter and to vote to delay any World Bank loan to this Islamic regime, the Islamic Republic of Iran. Until these 13 innocents are released, the World Bank should not hide behind profestations that somehow its loans are only being used for a particular purpose, because loans are money that is fungible and that money will go to construction companies in Iran selected by and authorized by the Iranian government.

We must stand up for human rights. The World Bank is where this trial will be on trial.

PRESCRIPTION DRUG PRICES

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mrs. BIGGERT). Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. GUTKNECHT) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. GUTKNECHT. Madam Speaker, I want to talk tonight about prescription drugs and, most importantly, about prescription drug prices.

We have had some discussion. The good news is, I think here in Washington, that there is a growing bipartisan feeling that we need to do something particularly for senior citizens about prescription drugs this year. The bad news is, it appears to me that we are going to continue just to throw good money after bad.

I have a chart here that describes, I think, what is a big part of the problem we have with prescription drugs. These are some comparison prices for one of the most commonly prescribed drugs in the United States. It is a drug called Prilosec. They are currently running a pretty aggressive advertising campaign. It is the purple pill. If someone buys those purple pills in Minneapolis, Minnesota, and again these are not my numbers, these are from an HMO in my State called Health Partners, but they did some research and found if an individual buys a 30-day supply of Prilosec in Minneapolis, Minnesota, they pay $99.95. But if someone happens to be vacationing in Winnipeg, Manitoba, and they take the same prescription into a pharmaceutical drugstore, they will pay $50.88. And, if someone happened to be vacationing in Guadalajara, Mexico, for exactly the same drug, made in exactly the same plant, under the exact same FDA approval, they would pay only $17.50.

As a matter of fact, Health Partners claims that if they could recover just half of the savings between the United States and Canada, they could save their subscribers $30 million a year.

When we start applying numbers like that to how much the Federal Government spends on prescription drugs every year, last year, according to the Congressional Budget Office we, the Federal Government, spent over $15 billion on prescription drugs. Now, if we are paying 40 percent more than the folks on the north side and the south side of our borders, just imagine how much the Federal Government could save through Medicare and Medicaid, the VA, and other benefits.

Let me just run through some of the differences between what we pay in the United States for commonly prescribed brand name drugs and what they pay in Europe for exactly the same drugs. Premarin, $14.98 here, they pay $4.25 in Europe; Synthroid, $13.84 versus $2.95; Coumadin, and this is a drug my dad takes, and a lot of senior citizens take this, it is a blood thinner, we pay, the average price is $30.25, they pay $2.85; Prozac, $36.12, $18.50 over in Europe. Here we get a pretty good price, in Minneapolis. They say the average price for Prilosec, for a 30-day supply, is $109, in Europe it is $39.25.

Madam Speaker, the answer to our prescription drug problem in some respects does not require a whole new Federal agency. A big part of the problem, and I would like to share with Members and anyone who would like a copy, we can get a copy of a newsletter that was done by the Life Extension Foundation. It is available by calling my office at the Capitol or just sending an e-mail. We are easy to get ahold of. But this is an interesting little brochure and it talks about the differentiation and it really gets down to what the real problem is.

The real problem is our own FDA. Our own Food and Drug Administration is keeping American citizens from bringing prescription drugs across the border. I think the best comparison that I can give, let us say, for example, that there are three drugstores, one downtown, one on the north side of town and one on the south side of town, but our own FDA says you can only shop at the one downtown. Even though they are charging, according to the Federal Government in the United States, the drug companies are charging 56 percent more than the prices in Canada, but our own FDA says we cannot shop at a store in Canada.

Now, the reason this is important is because we have what is called the North American Free Trade Agreement. That means the goods and services are supposed to go across the border freely. And just about all goods and services do, except prescription drugs. Madam Speaker, we need to make it easier for seniors and all Americans to get the prescriptions that they need and we need to get competitive prices. One way we can do that is open up our borders.

The FDA has overstepped its actual authority. In fact, if Members would like a copy, this is the actual language, which basically says it is the FDA's responsibility to prove that the drugs that are being brought into the United States are not safe. Unfortunately, the way they have interpreted this law is they have said, no, it is the responsibility of the consumer. We want to put that responsibility back on the FDA, where it belongs.

We should not allow our own FDA to stand between our consumers and lower drug prices.

WORKING FOR RESUMPTION OF INDIA-PAKISTAN DIALOGUE ON KASHMIR

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. PALLONE) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. PALLONE. Madam Speaker, recently we have seen some reason for hope about the resumption of a dialogue between Pakistan and India on resolving the Kashmir conflict. But we have also received a reminder of how difficult the path toward dying dialogue can be.

On the hopeful side, the United States has asked Pakistan to take concrete steps for the resumption of a productive dialogue with India and a return to what is known as the ''Spirit of Lahore'' so that there will be no more Kargils.

I should explain, Madam Speaker, that Lahore is a city in Pakistan near the border with India. It was the scene not much more than a year ago of a very amicable meeting between India's Prime Minister Vajpayee and the former Pakistani Prime Minister Sharif. Given the longstanding animosity between the two South Asian neighbors, the image of the two prime ministers embracing and pledging to work in a spirit of partnership and respect was heart-warming, promising a new era in bilateral relations.

But a short time later there was Kargil. Kargil is the name of a town in Kashmir under India's jurisdiction near the line of control that separates the areas controlled by India and Pakistan. In May of 1999, Pakistani-backed forces crossed that line and attacked India's defensive positions near Kargil. This bold gambit by Pakistan was not successful militarily. Ultimately, it proved to be even more of a disaster militarily for Pakistan, and the United States urged Pakistan to withdraw its forces back to its side of the line of control. Our government refused to go along with Pakistan's bid to strengthen its position by internationalizing the crisis by trying to get the United States to step in as a mediator in the bilateral dispute.

What little was left of the ''Spirit of Lahore,'' Madam Speaker, was further eroded last October when a military coup in Pakistan removed the civilian government from power and threw Prime Minister Sharif in jail.

In a recent interview with an international news service, our Assistant Secretary of State for South Asian Affairs, Karl Inderfurth, said that a solution to the Kashmir project must be homegrown and not exploited from the outside. Mr. Inderfurth expressed that the State Department was trying to move away from the old days when there was typically a pro-Pakistan tilt in U.S. policy in the region, to a more even-handed approach for working with both of the major South Asian nations. But he stated, and I quote, ''Right now we have more opportunities to pursue with India, and, frankly, right now we have many more concerns about the direction Pakistan is heading.'' He also expressed hope that Pakistan would take concrete steps that would allow a productive and serious dialogue to be resumed with India.

Madam Speaker, I would stress that the most helpful concrete step that Pakistan could take would be to do all in its power to end the cross-border terrorism that has caused so much suffering to the people of Kashmir, Hindu and Muslim alike. While India has made clear its willingness to negotiate in good faith with Pakistan, India also has to maintain a vigilant defensive posture for as long as the Pakistani-supported cross-border terrorism continues.

Madam Speaker, I believe that President Clinton's recent trip to South Asia, which I had the opportunity to take part in, has played a significant role in helping to reduce tensions and hostility between Pakistan and India. As Secretary Inderfurth said, ''The President's visit has changed the terms of the relationship between the United States and India, the world's two largest democracies.'' The President made it clear to both India and Pakistani leaders that the U.S. would be happy to work with both countries as friends to try to encourage dialogue, but it is not our place to dictate the terms of the peace process in Kashmir much less the outcome.

The great thing about the Lahore process is that it rose as a bilateral initiative between India and Pakistan. The key for breathing life into the bilateral Lahore declarations is for Pakistan to accept India's outstretched hand. And so far, unfortunately, Pakistan has been sending somewhat mixed signals.

Meanwhile, Madam Speaker, we have seen how dangerous the Kashmiri militant movement, which is supported by Pakistan, has become. Over the weekend we heard from one of the militant leaders, Mushtaq Ahmed Zargar, who was one of the three militants freed last December by the Indian government in exchange for freeing the innocent hostages being held in the hijacked Indian Airlines plane. According to a news account from the AP, Mr. Zargar dismissed the idea of negotiations with India, promising to stay on the path of jehad, or holy war. He threatened punishment for any Kashmiri who opened talks with India. And this, unfortunately, is the true face of the so-called freedom movement in Kashmir.

Mr. Speaker, by taking steps towards negotiation, Pakistan could help to isolate and undercut these terrorist groups operating in Kashmir. So far, Pakistan has done just the opposite, actively supporting the terrorists. But at some point, I hope that the Pakistani leadership will recognize that that strategy is increasingly turning Pakistan into a pariah state.

If and when Pakistan changes its course, and I hope it will soon, they will find a willing negotiating party in India and a supportive friend in the United States. I just hope that we can resume the India-Pakistan dialogue in the ''spirit of Lahore'' as soon as possible.

COMMEMORATING MEN AND WOMEN WHO FOUGHT IN VIETNAM WAR

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. GUTKNECHT). Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. ISAKSON) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. ISAKSON. Mr. Speaker, yesterday, May 7, a celebration of sort, a commemoration of sort, took place in all 50 States in this country as we commemorated the 25th anniversary of the end of the Vietnam War.

Between 1958 and 1975, over 8 million Americans, 228,000 of whom were Georgians, fought in Southeast Asia on behalf of freedom against communism and totalitarianism. That was the war of my generation. It was the legacy that I remember.

America was divided throughout that war and remains, in some cases, divided today over whether we should have been there and our resolve was never what it should have been. But tonight, I rise not to debate that, but to commemorate the men and women who fought and died on behalf of the United States of America, 58,000 of them, 2,042 who remaining missing in action today.

While we debate the positive nature of issues we believe in and condemn others today in contemporary times, we must continue to pause and reflect on the sacrifice made on behalf of all of us.

To that end, I want to commend five individuals from Georgia, Susie Ragan, who founded the MIA/POW force in Georgia and now has moved to Maryland and is doing the same thing so we do not forget those 2,042; Tommy Clack, a triple amputee who returned to a divided America and has committed the rest of his life to see to it that Vietnam veterans get the attention and services that they deserve and their Government promised; Ron Miller, who served as the former executive director of the Georgian Veterans Leadership Program; and Colonel Ben Purcell of Georgia, a member of the Georgia legislature, but 25 years ago a man who ended more than 8 years as a prisoner of war, over 5 in solitary confinement.

We must never forget the sacrifice made by those men and women for our Nation and for our country and the duty and honor and commitment they made to this country and to their God.

And that fifth person to me is a person by the name of Jack Elliott Cox. Jack died in Vietnam in 1968. But Jack was a volunteer. He volunteered when we graduated from college to go to OSC. And like 70 percent of those who died in Vietnam, he was not drafted, he was a volunteer.

In fact, what is so often not talked about is that 25 percent of those who fought were drafted, 75 percent were people who volunteered for the service in a divided war and a divided time. But they were committed to their country.

Let us not forget the Jack Coxes, the Susie Ragans, the Tommy Clacks, the Ron Millers, and the Ben Purcells, those who fought and live today to fight on for the veterans of that war, and those who died for you and I.

As Members of this Congress, when we go to the 26th anniversary next year, may it be a time that we continue our commitment to the veterans of the United States of America and the men and women who, regardless of conflicts at home, fought and served and, in some cases, died for their country, for our Nation, and for those of us here tonight.

STATES SHOULD BE ALLOWED TO PROTECT THEIR OWN WATERS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Washington (Mr. METCALF) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. METCALF. Mr. Speaker, on March 6, the United States Supreme Court invalidated Washington State's standards for oil tankers entering their waters. That is, it invalidated Washington State's effort to control the tankers in their waters and, in doing so, potentially invalidated laws in 11 other States.

Even while admitting that Federal and international laws may be insufficient protection, the court refused to allow States to protect their own waters. That is hard to believe, but that is what the United States Supreme Court did.

We all remember the Exxon Valdez disaster in Alaska in 1989. The huge oil tanker ran aground in Prince William Sound, Alaska, dumping 11 million gallons of crude oil into the Pacific Ocean and damaging more than 1,000 miles of coastline in south-central Alaska.

The massive spill resulted in billions of dollars in damage claims by over 40,000 people, including some 6,500 Washington State fishermen who have yet to be compensated for their loss.

In response to the Valdez spill, my home State of Washington and many other coastline States issued tougher laws to prevent another catastrophe. Washington's laws created the Office of Marine Safety and added a number of requirements to Federal law. I was in the legislature when we did that.

For example, the State regulation required tanker crews to be proficient in English in order to prevent miscommunication between American navigators and foreign crews. Does it not seem logical that the people who are running the tankers in American waters should be proficient in English?

Among other rules adopted by Washington are prescriptions regarding training, location plotting, pre-arrival tests, and drug testing for tanker crews.

Ultimately, the Supreme Court invalidated these common-sense regulations. And, again, I cannot imagine how the Supreme Court could come to that decision.

Of course, Federal law must supersede State law in Coast Guard and national security matters, but States should have the right to enact safety standards within their own State waters.

Last week I introduced H.R. 4385, which reinstates the rights of States to adopt additional standards regarding maintenance, operation, equipping, personnel qualifications, or manning of oil tankers. I hope that all of my colleagues who care about States' rights and environmental protection will join me to support this important legislation. We must allow our districts and our home States to protect themselves from another Valdez disaster.

NEW ECONOMY OF THE 21ST CENTURY

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 6, 1999, the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. WELLER) is recognized for 60 minutes as the designee of the majority leader.

Mr. WELLER. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the opportunity to address this House today on issues I believe are extremely important to our economy and to working families not only from my State in Illinois, but across this country.

Mr. Speaker, I represent a very diverse district. I represent the south suburbs of Chicago, as well as the southern part of the city of Chicago. I represent bedroom communities and farm communities, a very, very diverse district of city and suburbs and communities.

I often find as I travel throughout the district that I have the privilege of representing, whether I am at the Steelworkers Hall in Hegewisch, a neighborhood in Chicago, or at the Legion Post in Joliet, or a grain elevator in Tonica, Illinois, or a coffee shop in my hometown of Morris, I find that there is a pretty common message whether I am in the city, the suburbs, or country; and that is that the folks back home in Illinois and the land of Lincoln, they tell me that they want us to work to find solutions to the challenges that we face.

Those solutions sometimes require a bipartisan effort. In many cases they do. I am proud that our efforts over the last few years of working together to come up with solutions produced the first balanced budget in 28 years, the first middle class tax cut in 16 years, the first real welfare reform in a generation. We stopped the raid on Social Security, and we began paying down the national debt.

Those are real accomplishments, and they are producing results. We have seen unprecedented economic growth for 9 years, economic growth that started in 1991 and continues to this day; and clearly, the balanced budget contributes to its continued growth.

I am proud to say the balanced budget now is producing almost $3 trillion of extra money. And rather than arguing over how to eliminate the deficit, today we are arguing over what to do with that extra money.

Our welfare reform has resulted in an almost 50 percent reduction in our Nation welfare roles. Seven million former welfare recipients are now working and have joined employment roles, having economic opportunity and a chance to move up the economic ladder.

I am also proud to say that when we stopped the raid on Social Security and began the process of paying down the national debt that, in the last 3 years, we paid down $350 billion of the national debt. And we are on track with the budget we are going to pass this year to eliminate the national debt by the year 2013. That is progress. That is real results.

Tonight I wanted to take the opportunity to talk about an area of our economy, an area of American society and, frankly, a part of our global economy, an area that there is greater interest in, for a lot of reasons. And tonight I wanted to talk about the new economy and some of the challenges, as well as some of the solutions, to the new economy of the 21st century.

Let me start, in talking about the new economy, to talk about some facts, some statistics about the Internet and the new economy.

Over 100 million United States adults today are using the Internet, and seven new people are on the Internet for the first time every second. Seventy-eight percent of Internet users almost always vote in national, State and local elections, compared with only 64 percent of non-Internet users.

From a historical standpoint, the Internet began as the Advanced Research Project's Agency Network during the Cold War back in 1969 as a way of trying to determine how our military could communicate in time of nuclear war. Clearly, here is a peacetime conversion of military technology.

What is hard to believe is that it only took 5 years for the Internet to reach 50 million users, a much faster one compared to the traditional electronic media. It took television 13 years and it took radio 38 years to reach that same audience. In just 5 years, 50 million users were on the Internet.

The Internet economy today generates an estimated 301 billion U.S. dollars in revenue, and it is responsible for over 1.2 million jobs. And preliminary employment data shows that the technology industry in America employed 4.8 million workers in 1998, making it one of our Nation's largest industries.

The average high-tech average wage was 77 percent higher than the average U.S. private sector wage. It is also interesting to note that 63 percent of Americans believe that the Internet will be equally or more important than traditional sources of information in the future.

When it comes to all of our pocketbooks, the Federal Reserve Chairman, Alan Greenspan, points out and says that in the last few years, one third of all the economic growth, one third of all the new jobs that have been created in our economy, result from technology, much of it generated from the Internet.

I am proud to come from a great State, the great State of Illinois. Illinois, of course, is nicknamed in many cases, we think of it as an industrial State, we think of Illinois as an agricultural State. But Illinois is also a technology State. People often think of Silicon Valley, they think of the Silicon Corridor in Boston, they think of Seattle and Redmond, home to Microsoft and some of our bigger technology corporations; and they often overlook the fact that the Chicago land region ranks fourth today in technology employment, with well over 210,000 technology workers currently working in technology in Illinois.

I pointed out that the wages of technology jobs are 77 percent more than other jobs in today's economy. I would also point out that technology trade is extremely important to Illinois, my home State. Illinois exported over $16 billion just a couple years ago, making Illinois the third highest ranking State in our Union when it comes to technology exports. I am pretty proud of that.

And we think of the map here, which shows the top cyber States, the States which generate the most jobs from technology. As I pointed out earlier, Illinois ranks fourth today in technology employment.

Of course, Texas and California have grown the most in technology employment. In fact, just in the last few years, technology employment in Texas, home to Governor Bush, has seen the greatest growth in technology.

As I mentioned earlier, technology employment not only in my State of Illinois but throughout this country is a major contributor to our economy, in jobs in millions, in technology. According to these statistics here, there were 4.8 million jobs in technology in 1998. That is more than the combined jobs in steel, chemicals, auto manufacturing and services.

Think about that. The traditional industries of steel and chemicals, which of course that is petroleum and, of course, auto, traditional basic jobs of our old economy of the 20th century, those jobs today are outnumbered by the jobs in technology. Clearly our economy is changing.

We often have to ask, how can we harness that change to benefit the average working American? How can we harness that growth in the new economy so that every American has the opportunity to participate in that economic growth as well as to contribute with their ideas and entrepreneurship? I have listened to many of those who work in technology, many of those who have created; that is, the companies that have done so well, those who have created that new technology, created those jobs and opportunity. It is all about creativity. That is something I have learned when it comes to technology. But the message is clear. If we want to harness the new economy to continue to provide growth and opportunity for the American people, if we want to ensure that, there are some three basic rules that we want to, I think, adopt.

Some say, what can Congress, what can government do to get involved in the new economy? Of course the government likes to regulate and tax as well as to stick its nose into a lot of things. But clearly this success of the new economy, the fact that high tech job wages are 77 percent higher than other sectors of the economy, the fact that one-third of all these new jobs have been created by the technology economy, the fact that our economy is growing so rapidly because of technology resulted basically because government was not in the way.

Clearly as we work to build our new economy, the best approach for government basically is to stay out of the way and let the private sector innovate and create with a goal of a tax-free, trade-barrier-free and regulation-free new economy. I am proud to say that House Republicans continue to lead in the effort to build and promote opportunity in the new economy.

We of course are working to honor what we call the e-contract 2000, a contract that we are committed to, to grow the new economy and to provide digital opportunity for all Americans. Of course, the central tenets, the central goals of our e-contract are to grow the new economy by reducing taxes, limiting regulation, reducing unnecessary lawsuits, promoting free trade and e-commerce and building a high tech future. Those are lofty goals. But if we all work together in Congress and we all work together in the same way that we succeeded in balancing the budget for the first time in 28 years, the way that we cut taxes for the middle class for the first time in 16 years, take the same approach that we succeeded in cutting our welfare rolls in half with the implementation of welfare reform and it all resulted in a growing economy that has seen unprecedented economic growth and the lowest unemployment in 30 years.

I am proud to say our approach to lowering taxation, minimizing regulation and promoting trade-barrier-free commerce has produced some real accomplishments in this Congress. I am proud that thanks to Republican leadership, we put in place a moratorium on new taxes on Internet sales so that we do not double-tax and increase taxation of the new economy. My hope is that will be extended and we can have a vote on that fairly soon.

I am proud to say as a Republican Congress that rewarded investment and the creation of new technology and research with what is the longest ever extension of the research and development tax credit, to make it easier to attract new investment in research and development technology, the R&D tax credit, that was one of those that every year was extended maybe for 9 months or 12 months. When you are a private employer considering investing your resources, your dollars in R&D, you always think about the tax consequences. By extending it for 5 years, we made sure that when they invest, they can be confident that that investment will be recognized and treated fairly under our tax code.

I am also proud to say that this Republican Congress recognizes the importance of protecting intellectual property rights, ensuring those who innovate and create and come up with new ideas get the credit as well as benefit from their hard work and their labors when we passed the Intellectual Property Rights Protection Act in 1998. Soon we are going to be passing the e-sign legislation, legislation that establishes a uniform and legally binding standard for electronic signatures in e-commerce. You often think of legal documents being a piece of paper. Today, so much of the business, so many transactions today are done over the Internet. We have to ensure that we can come up with a way to ensure that those business transactions are legally binding even though it is a virtual transaction and that e-sign legislation which has passed the House and Senate, we are now in conference working out differences in our legislation between the House and Senate, moves quickly so that we can continue to grow the new economy.

I am proud of those accomplishments. We have also passed out of the House more legislation protecting intellectual property rights; the American Inventors Protection Act addressed the issue of cyber-squatting, those folks who would steal names. I am also proud to say that under the leadership of those who want to promote research, which is the Republican majority, that we passed out of the House the Network and Information Technology Research and Development Act, legislation that boosts Federal investment in new technology, in new ideas helping grow the new economy. Those are accomplishments. We have moved that out of the House.

I have said that one of our other goals of the Republican majority is also to promote barrier-free trade. Coming up in less than 2 weeks is probably going to be the most important technology vote of the year, a vote that will determine what kind of access Americans would like to give themselves into what is the world's largest market. It will be a decision over whether Americans want to sell products to over 1.3 billion customers. That is the issue of whether or not we grant permanent normal trade relations with China.

China, of course, is the world's most populous nation. China has made a commitment to join the World Trade Organization and live by the rules, to honor intellectual property agreements, to honor trade agreements. As we know right now, they have access to our markets. All we have to do is go to the discount store and shop for some T-shirts to see that China has access to our markets. The question really is, do we want access to China's market? That is why the vote on permanent normal trade relations, the same trade status we give to almost everyone else, if we are going to give ourselves access to that market. To me it is the normal thing to do, to want to be able to sell our products that we make in Illinois in China.

Now, China is pretty important in technology. I would point out of the top five U.S. exports to China, the top five are electrical machinery as well as office machines, particularly computers. Of course it is expected that by the end of this year, within the next couple of years, by the end of 2001, that China will become the world's second largest personal computer market. I would note that over the last 10 years, U.S. technology exports to China have increased by 500 percent. Think about that. If technology is the fastest growing sector of our economy, if technology is the part of our economy that is creating the biggest chunk of new jobs, one-third of all new jobs being created by technology, would we not want to sell those products in the world's largest market? And, of course, that is China.

Illinois, of course, is a major exporting State. As I pointed out earlier, Illinois ranks fourth in technology jobs. But Illinois ranks third in export and trade of our technology. It is important to us. We exported over a billion dollars from Illinois to China last year. I think we need more opportunity in that market. That is why I support normal trade relations with China, because it is good for American workers and it is going to create more jobs for American workers. Clearly if we want to grow our technology economy, which I certainly want to do for the State I am proud to represent, Illinois, we need to increase our market.

I also wanted to talk a little bit as we talk about technology not only about trade but about another challenge that we face. That is something that some people call the digital divide, what I call the challenge to provide digital opportunity. What really hit home about the issue of the need to provide digital opportunity is when I talk to educators, teachers, school board members, school administrators, and they tell me that they are beginning to notice a difference in the classroom between the children who have a computer at home and those who do not. That the school kids who have a computer at home to work on their schoolwork, their homework seem to be doing a little better in school than those who do not. That is an issue of concern to our educators.

Clearly education has been a priority in this Congress. In fact in our budget this year, we increased funding for elementary and secondary education by 10 percent while balancing the budget. So at the same time we are making education a priority, maybe we need to think about what we can do to help those kids who do not have a computer at home so that they can compete in the classroom. That is a big issue here, creating digital opportunity for our kids and for the future. Because those young people, those children that do not have a computer at home, if they are behind in school because they do not have a computer and trying to compete with their classmates, think about what that means for them long-term in competing for jobs and, of course, competing in the new economy of the 21st century.

There are some interesting statistics out there. People say the digital divide. What really is the digital divide? We hear about it. If the digital divide is out there, is there something that we can do to make that digital divide really something called digital opportunity? If we think about it here, it is interesting that when we look at the digital divide, it is interesting that many cases it is the income level of the family that creates the digital divide. It says here, some statistics I have with me today, that urban households earning more than $75,000 annually are more than 20 times likely to have home Internet access compared to urban families at the lowest income levels. Think about that. In many communities in this State of Illinois as well as in this country, $75,000 is middle class or upper middle class. But they are 20 times as likely to have computers and Internet access as low-income families. I would also point out that those families with persons making less than $25,000 annually generally cite cost as the primary reason for not using the Internet at home, while those making more cite do not want it as the reason.

Let me repeat that again. Low-income families say the reason they do not have computer at home, the reason they do not have access to the Internet is because of the cost, whereas higher income families just because they do not want to have it. So clearly there is a recognition by those families in many cases who do not have computers and Internet access that if they had a little more money or somehow Internet access could be more affordable that they would want their children to have computers at home, too.

How can we create digital opportunity recognizing that income disparity on the so-called digital divide? I have also learned that if you look at statistics, that education level creates a digital divide. Those with the higher level of education, higher level of education degrees tend to have computers and Internet access. In fact, those with college degrees are 10 times more likely to have Internet access at work than persons with only some high school education. And that 62 percent of those with college degrees now use the Internet, while those with only a grade school education, only about 7 percent of them use the Internet. And also in rural areas it is interesting that those with college degrees are more likely to have access to the Internet than those without. So how can we ensure that those who are from families where there is not a college degree have computers and Internet access?

Some say we should be just talking about that digital divide. I believe that we should be looking for ways to create digital opportunity, because if we create digital opportunity, we can harness the new economy to ensure that every child has access to computers and the Internet, not only at school but at home. We are of course working in the Republican majority to find ways to provide digital opportunity, to eliminate the so-called digital divide. We want to pass tax incentives to encourage computers at home as well as in the school.

We want to encourage donation of computers to schools by the private sector. We want to bring down the costs of Internet access, and we pointed out earlier lower-income families identify the costs of Internet access and the costs of having that computer as their chief barrier to having a home computer for their child to be able to do their school work on.

Clearly, we have to work on an agenda, which will provide digital opportunity, digital opportunity for families, digital opportunities for e-commerce, both at home as well as at work. There are several ways we can do that.

Clearly, the ways we can do that is to give educational priority so that as we raise the education level, people tend to have a computer and Internet access, but also when it comes to education, should we not also ensure that families know how to use a computer; that teachers understand how to train students on how to use that computer for homework and classes, as well as research on school papers and preparing for a test?

I am proud to say that this House continues to lead the way in boosting education. As I mentioned earlier, we increased funding in this year's balanced budget by 10 percent for public education, a 10 percent increase while even balancing the budget, but we also worked to make sure those dollars reach the classroom, and that those dollars have distributed back to our local schools in a way that those schools can take advantage of those programs to train teachers, as well as to ensure that there is technology in the wire, in the fiber and the hardwares installed in the classroom.

We are ready soon to vote on here in the House the Education Options Act, legislation which will provide training for teachers, to integrate technology into the classroom, that has passed committee, and it is waiting for a vote here in the House.

I am also proud to say that the House Committee on Ways and Means which I serve on has improved the Education Savings in School Excellence Act, a program that would increase the amount of money you can set aside in Education Savings Account from $500 to $2,000 allowing families to save more for their child's education, but I would also point out that those dollars we would allow families to use to buy computer equipment and also the software they need to run those computers, and they would also be able to use those dollars to hire a tutor, if necessary, to help their child catch up in the classroom.

That legislation has passed committee. It is waiting a vote here in the full House of Representatives. The House of Representatives just this past year passed the Teacher Empowerment Act which allows local schools to spend Federal dollars to teach educators how to integrate technology into the classroom, to ensure that technology is in the classroom, but also to ensure that teachers understand how to use that technology and better educate the children.

Mr. Speaker, I would also point out that there is a number of initiatives in the Committee on Ways and Means that I serve on which would also help provide computers in the school. I am proud to say that the House Committee on Ways and Means is now considering the New Millennium Classrooms Act, legislation that would increase the amount of the charitable deduction that a business would receive if they donate their surplus computers to schools.

Those are good ideas, good ideas to help in the classroom, good ideas to ensure that our children have an opportunity at school in how to use a computer, that teachers know how to use those computers, that teachers also know how to train them, but the other solution I believe to helping eliminate so-called digital divide, providing greater digital opportunity, is to find ways so that families could have computers and Internet access at home, so that when school children bring their homework home, they have got a computer at home to work on it, a computer they can use to solve their problems and to access the Internet for research, so that they can contact the Library of Congress, the greatest library in the world, via the Internet, and, of course, have that literally at home as a research tool to prepare their schools paper. And that is a challenge.

As I mentioned earlier in the statistics, many of these low-income families that do not have computers identify the costs of Internet access as being the barrier that prevents them from having computer and Internet access. So how can we solve that challenge?

I am proud to say a major employer in our country, but also a major in the District that I represent, and I have two Ford auto plants in Hegewisch and Chicago Heights, that I represent would point out that companies have stepped forward, major corporations have stepped forward in our country, Ford Motor Company, Intel, American Airlines, Delta Airlines and have stepped forward in that effort to help ensure that their workers have computers at home so their workers children have those computers for their school work. Think about that.

American Airlines has 100,000 employees, between Ford Motor Company, American Airlines, Intel and Delta Airlines, 600,000 workers, every one from the guy who sweeps the assembly line floor, to the CEO, every one of those families, universal access to Ford Motor Company's families, to the Internet in computers, as a result of a program they are now offering, which will provide as an employee benefit computers and Internet access.

It would be an employee benefit the same as a pension or as your health care coverage, having a computer at home and subsidize reduced rate Internet access. Think about that. American Airlines, 100,000 employees, Intel, American Ford Motor Company and Delta Airlines, a total of 600,000 families that will benefit from this type of program.

I believe we should find more companies willing to step forward to provide digital opportunity on a universal basis for their employees. There is a consequence. We discovered that when Ford and Intel and American and Delta stepped forward to provide this benefit for their employees, computers and Internet access to help their children learn at home that there is a tax consequence.

The consequence was that this new benefit for employees having a computer and Internet access was taxable, which meant the worker would have to pay higher taxes in order to have that computer and that Internet access, and that is a question; is that right? I don't believe so.

To me, it is just good government policy to encourage private employees to help eliminate the digital divide, to provide greater digital opportunity. That is why I am proud that just prior to the Passover on Easter break, before Congress took a 2-week break to be back home in our districts, that I was joined by my colleague the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. LEWIS) in introducing what we call the DDATA Act, the Digital Divide Access Technology Act, legislation that treats this computer and Internet access benefit that is provided by private employer to employees as a tax-free benefit.

It treats it the same as an employee contribution to a worker's pension, as an employer's contribution to a worker's health care benefits. It just make sense.

My hope is this legislation will receive bipartisan support and move quickly through the House. Ladies and gentlemen, we want to eliminate the digital divide. We want to eliminate the digital divide by creating digital opportunity at school, as well as in the home. I am proud of that. It is important initiative. Both initiatives deserve bipartisan support.

We also want to provide greater digital opportunity in the workplace. One of the ways we need to do a better job here in the Congress, where we can stay out of the way, but also bring fairness to the Tax Code, is to recognize the need, the need to modernize and update the tax treatment of technology in the workplace. Technology changes pretty rapidly.

Mr. Speaker, today, private employers are replacing the computers in their office every 14 to 16 months, but under our current Tax Code, our employers and private businesses, whether it is the realtor or the insurance agent, as well as the big corporation, they have to carry those computers on their books for 5 years. They are depreciated over a 5-year period, even though that computer is replaced every 14 months.

Essentially, our Tax Code is discouraging private employers and business from taking advantage of the latest technology, because the Tax Code says if we are going to depreciate that you have got to keep it on the books for 5 years; that really delays the decision to upgrade the technology.

Now that we are in the global economy, do we not want the business community and our employers and those who use computers in the workplace to have the latest technology to compete? I think we do, and that is why I introduced legislation called the Computer Depreciation Reform Act of 2000, legislation which will eliminate that 5-year depreciation schedule and recognize reality here in the 21st century, and, that is, the need to reform depreciation and essentially what we call expensing in government jargon which means you can fully deduct the cost of that computer in the first year; 1 year, rather than 5, that recognizes the 14 to 16 months that you replace your computer.

Before I close, I am going to mention the last tax initiative that I believe deserves support that is now before the Committee on Ways and Means. Many poor families, as I noted earlier in the statistics that I share, have stated that the costs of Internet access in computers at home is a chief barrier to having those computers and having Internet access for children and their families in order to help them to do their schoolwork and do their research for school papers at home.

I have talked about solutions that Republicans are offering to ensure that computers are available at school and Republicans solutions to ensuring that computers are available at home, but I am also proud to say that there is legislation which I hope we bring before this House also early this summer, which will again help reduce the costs of those computers.

Frankly, what we are doing under this proposal is to eliminate what was once a temporary tax on your telephone, that was put in place during the Spanish-American war to pay off the Spanish-American war debt, probably the best example of one of those taxes that never ends, because when that tax was enacted 100 years ago, it was a luxury tax, because not many people had telephone. They figured they stick it to rich people and, of course, over time we now have telephones. And we are all paying this tax, and it was conveniently forgotten to end it. Three cents on every dollar of your telephone service is now collected and goes to Uncle Sam.

Mr. Speaker, if we want to reduce access costs to the Internet, we have to recognize that the majority of people who access the Internet obtain their of course, if you charge 3 cents on the dollar in taxes for every dollar of telephone use, that means every time you access your computer, access the Internet, it is costly.

Let us end that Spanish-American war tax. Let us repeal the telephone excise tax, and think about it if it is 3 percent, that means that your grandmother, who is on a limited income, who uses the telephone to call her grandchildren across this country is paying that 3 percent the same as the millionaire who may live across the street.

Ladies and gentlemen, it is a regressive tax as well, so we can reduce the costs for lower-income families, the Internet access by repealing the telephone excise tax.

Ladies and gentlemen, we have some big challenges before us and the new economy is contributing so much to the America's future, an economy that is driven by technology and an economy that has grown because government stayed out of the way. If we continue to want to see the new economy grow and technology provide greater opportunity for the American people, then I believe we need to continue that approach of a tax-free, regulation-free, trade barrier-free new economy.

We have some solutions. Solutions that promote education. Solutions that promote education as a way of contributing to the new economy. We also have solutions to address the so-called digital divide. I believe we need to provide digital opportunity in school, at home, and in the workplace, and that means we need to pursue a tax-free, trade barrier-free and regulation-free new economy, because that is what it is all about, digital opportunity for our kids and for our future.

Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the opportunity to address this House this evening.

SOCIAL SECURITY

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. GUTKNECHT). Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 6, 1999, the gentleman from North Dakota (Mr. POMEROY) is recognized for 60 minutes as the designee of the minority leader.

Mr. POMEROY. Mr. Speaker, I do not think I will take 60 minutes this evening.

Mr. Speaker, I want to commend my colleague, the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. WELLER) for a very interesting and thoughtful presentation preceding mine.

Mr. Speaker, I intend tonight to address the issue of social security. I am pleased to see that the candidates for president are each speaking to this vital issue, and I want in the next several minutes to present some background in terms of what is encompassed within the social security program, what are the strains on the program that need to be addressed in the future, and how the parties differ on the early proposals for change they are advancing, things that we need to look at very closely to make certain that we have a strong social security program going forward.

Let me begin by talking about social security. First of all, the program passed in 1935. Someone suggested that of the many initiatives of Franklin Delano Roosevelt, social security remains in place as perhaps his most significant contribution to this country.

I like to think of social security as a program designed to respond to the unavoidable, completely inescapable risks each of us have as Americans: dying at a time when we have dependents; becoming disabled and unable to make a living; or outliving one's assets in retirement years, each a very serious right-to-the-core financial threat to us and our families.

Social security was built as a system whereby all of us as Americans insure each of us against these perils.

I think it is vitally important that we remember social security is more than a retirement program. There is going to be a lot of discussion, I guarantee Members, over the next many months, a lot of discussion about whether a person is making enough return on their social security payments, the taxes withheld from our paycheck for social security; is the return on that what we might make if we just had that money and could go and invest it in the market?

Most of that discussion does not acknowledge at all that in addition to the retirement benefit there is an insurance policy, essentially, that covers workers in the workplace if they die prematurely leaving dependents at home.

More than one in seven Americans today will die before their 67th birthday. It is very foreseeable that they would have dependents at home depending on them, depending upon the income that no longer comes in.

I know something about this particular coverage. When my father died with a sudden and unanticipated heart attack, just struck down, a complete shock to all of us, he had dependents. I was one of them, a teenager; my younger brother was another; my mother, a displaced homemaker without employment skills; all of us absolutely not just in an emotional state of shock, but without the resources to make it.

The social security checks came. I have been a social security beneficiary. This vital support from social security helped us stabilize and allowed my brother and myself to get an education, to go out and get careers; allowed my mother that period of time she needed to get a job skill, get into the work force so she could make it on her own.

That was what that social security survivors' benefit meant to my family, and that is a very, very common story. I would challenge anyone who really does not know about this survivors' benefit in the social security program to ask around. They will not have to ask far to find out someone who has benefited when a loved one has died leaving them with dependents, and depending upon, therefore, social security.

Ninety-eight percent of the children in this country are covered under the survivors' benefit under social security, 98 percent.

As we look at issues like uninsured children for health and other issues, we design programs anymore that if they get half of that, we think it would be a smashing success. We literally have all but universal coverage of our children in this country if their dad or mom die while they are still in dependent years. That is something we do not talk about. Remember that survivors' benefit. It is a vital part of the protection social security provides.

Of course, we also have the disability coverage. Someone is working, becomes disabled, and can no longer make a living. What are they going to do? This is one of those core risks that social security responds to with its disability payment.

This was designed in the thirties. I had a grandpa who was smashed against a barn driving a team of horses. Members can well imagine the kind of disability threats that accompanied the hard physical labor in the thirties. But believe me, it is still very much part of the work force, very much with men and women going to work today.

In fact, if we just take 20-year-olds at a time in their lives where they are the strongest, healthiest, and have their career years right in front of them, it is pretty sobering to think that three out of 10 will at sometime in their lives become disabled and unable to work before retirement, three out of ten 20-year-olds today. That is the kind of risk that is associated with disability.

If you are in the work force, working for a living, getting by on your own, you become disabled and unable to pull down that paycheck, that is a very important coverage of social security.

There is private disability coverage available. It is expensive. It is medically underwritten. Most do not have it. In fact, three of four workers in the work force today, 75 percent of men and women going to work today, only have social security if they become disabled. But that is another thing we really do not talk about as being wrapped into social security.

Next time we hear somebody at the work force talking about, well, I am just not making on that social security money what I could make in the stock market, just ask them what they think the value of having coverage for their kids is if they get killed on the way home from work in an auto accident; or if tomorrow they have a stroke and they cannot work anymore, what the values of those coverages are like. Let me tell the Members, it improves the return on that social security investment very, very significantly immediately.

Of course, the hallmark, the feature that social security is best known for, is its survivors' benefit. On average, social security pays $800 a month for individuals in retirement, $800 a month. It is not enough to live comfortably on at the margin one can get by on if that is all they have, so there is a tremendous pressure to do more, with social security as the foundation for retirement income and more, retirement savings; even earnings, and we have lifted the earnings cap so people can earn whatever they can earn once they get 65 and their social security starts, because we want to help people get a comfortable income in retirement.

The reality is that $800 a month, that is more than 50 percent of the income for more than two-thirds, more than 66 percent, two-thirds of Americans receiving social security retirement payments. For one-third, the millions that represent one-third of social security retirement retirees, that social security check is all they have got. More than half of the income for two-thirds, that is all they got, for one-third.

Let us face it, that $800 a month average payment, it may not seem like a lot to some, but to some it is everything. That is why, when it comes to social security, we have to be very, very serious and careful because it is the retirement foundation. I do not believe it is one place where we should add risk, more risk, to Americans than we already have about our retirement savings earnings.

Social security at its formation was never intended to be a retirement plan, a stand-alone, this is all you need, live happy, plan. That is not what it was supposed to be. It was supposed to be the foundation. It continues to be just the foundation. No one aspiring to living on $800 a month in retirement years is looking at a standard of living that they might more fully aspire to. We need retirement savings in addition to achieve that. Let us just talk about how that one is coming along.

We know that Americans' savings rate, their household savings rate as measured by the Department of Commerce is at its lowest point since the Depression. The February statistic of .8 percent was the lowest retirement savings rate since the Depression. Between World War II and 1980, it averaged 8 percent. Now it is .8 percent.

We are on a spending binge. I worry a lot about it. I think we need to try and encourage more savings in this country so people can live comfortably in retirement.

If personal savings is not getting the job done, let us take a look at, are people saving in the work force, do they have their 401(k)s or whatever they have at the workplace that will help them save for retirement?

Here the news is also very, very disturbing. One-half of the workers in the work force have no retirement savings plan at work, even a 401(k) where the boss does not kick in anything. They do not even have that. They have nothing, nothing at work, so no personal savings and no savings plan at work for 75 million. Fifty million Americans have no retirement savings whatsoever, another statistic that we know.

We know that more than half of all Americans have never calculated whether the savings that they have is going to match their expected need in retirement years. That can be pretty sobering. Maybe they stick a couple of hundred in now and then, maybe they get $1,000 in the tax return that people manage not to spend and put that in and they figure, well, we are working away at it.

For the average man reaching the age of 65 today, he has 15 more years that he has to figure out how he is going to finance. For the average woman, it is even more telling, 19 additional years. They can expect 19 additional years once they have reached the age of 65. Yet, more than half of all Americans have not calculated whether they are saving enough with their workplace retirement plan and other savings to meet those needs in retirement.

There is another evolution going on. Even within those places where there are retirement plans at work, we are going to a new design of plans. We are going away from the old pension plan where, no matter how long you live, you had that guaranteed pension payment. We are going more to what is called a defined contribution model, where what you will have to sustain you in retirement is dependent upon what you have saved and how well you invested.

Unlike the old days when you did not have an investment responsibility, you now do have an investment responsibility under those 401(k) plans. We know some use it well and some do not use it well.

We also know that for the millions that are depending upon their 401(k) plans to sustain them in retirement years, those amounts may not be up to the test. Remember, there are literally lots and lots of years to account for once a person reaches the age of 65. Yet, a February year 2000 study by the Employment Benefits Research Institute shows that 47 percent, 47 percent of the 401(k) plans have less than $10,000 in them. The average account balance on average is $47,000. Now try to sustain a comfortable living for 19 years if your balance is somewhere between $10,000 and $47,000. It is one mean trick, let me say.

That is why we keep circling back to social security. It is the foundation. It must remain. We cannot have additional risk jeopardizing even that payment because we know we have all kinds of trouble on the private retirement savings side.

I think the conclusion we can draw from all of this is that Congress has to pay attention to private retirement savings. We have to make it easier for people to save individually for retirement savings. We have to help modest income households even under tight discretionary income circumstances save for retirement.

We also have to do more to help employers across this country offer retirement savings plans for their work force. Sometimes Congress has been guilty of putting in place way too much rigmarole and regulation. We have actually discouraged the very retirement savings that we want to encourage. We need to address that. That has to happen on the private retirement savings side.

But now we get to Social Security. Where are we standing on this one? Well, I am pleased to say that over the years I have been in Congress working on Social Security, the solvency outlook for Social Security has improved significantly. I do not claim full credit for that. It is a feature of our robust economy. It is a feature of more people in the workforce paying payroll taxes. And as a result, the solvency of this program has improved almost 10 years from only 2 or 3 years ago.

The strain, of course, on Social Security is that we do not have an evenly allocated age range across the population of the United States. We have got this bulge, the much-discussed baby boomers. And while we are in the workforce today, and I am one of them, we are going to move into retirement in disproportionate numbers. The number of active workers today is three to one. And by the time all the baby boomers retire, it is going to be two workers per retiree. That is what causes the strain on this Social Security program.

The earlier projections were that the surplus that has been generated will be completely exhausted by the year 2029, just when the baby boomers really are fully into retirement. Again, because of the increased participation in the workforce, low unemployment, a sustained record-setting economy in the history of this country, we have generated significant contribution to Social Security beyond what was anticipated by the actuaries even 3 years ago, and the most recent projection is that the Social Security Trust Fund will not be exhausted until the year 2037, and that is if nothing whatsoever is done with it.

At the time, 2037, benefits fall 30 percent. It is not as if Social Security payments stop, but they are funded only by the payroll tax coming in. That is not enough to fully make those payments, so benefits collapse 30 percent. Therefore, we need to take action. And anyone that knows something about this is going to say: The earlier we take action, the less painful it needs to be to make the fixes to sustain Social Security for the long haul.

So that is the backdrop to the presidential debate on Social Security that we will have in this upcoming election year. It is an absolutely vital program for Americans. It pays not just retirement, but survivors benefits and disability benefits. Its solvency has improved, and improved quite significantly, in recent years in light of the very healthy economy that we have had. But we have a shortfall and we have to address it.

Let us take a look at the competing proposals to address Social Security. Vice President Al Gore has advanced a proposal that basically captures the strengths of our existing economy. He holds absolutely secure all of the surplus being generated by Social Security. And, again, that surplus is because we have got a three-to-one ratio, three workers per retiree. So as we generate the Social Security withholding taxes, we are generating a lot more surplus than required to pay the benefit.

The Vice President would first of all hold that surplus secure for Social Security. He would use the surplus dollars to retire and eliminate completely the Federal debt owed by this country. He would save the money that the Federal Government now pays in interest on the debt, and commit it to the Social Security program.

Let me go through this again. Here is the Vice President's plan: Hold Social Security surplus secure; eliminate the Federal debt; calculate the amount of money that the Federal Government has been paying in interest and, because there is no debt and that money is not owed in interest anymore, take that amount and pay it into the Social Security program to sustain it well through the middle of the 21st century.

Some might say, wait a minute, we have Social Security taxes for Social Security and now we are going to take general fund revenues for Social Security? Absolutely appropriate. It is the Social Security surplus that is retiring the national debt, and this debt payment out of taxpayer dollars is staggering. To think that nearly 15 cents out of every dollar, just 15 cents of every dollar, take the first $15 in taxes out of $100, goes to pay interest on the debt. We are going to eliminate the debt. Eliminate it and then take that surplus, commit it to Social Security, take that savings, commit it into Social Security so that while preserving the full benefit structure, Social Security is with us through the life span of the baby boomers.

Mr. Speaker, I was born in 1952. A Social Security solvency program that gets us through the year 2050 takes care of me, believe me, and most of my peers in the baby boomer age group.

In the event there continued to be solvency issues past the middle of this century, we can address them. But I think making this strong commitment, given the sound economy of this country, to paying down the debt, capture the interest savings, invest in Social Security so it is there through the middle of the century and beyond, these are the hallmark of the Vice President's plan. I think they are solid principles for Social Security. They absolutely preserve it as the income bedrock for Americans and that is what we have to do.

Against that backdrop, the Bush plan, quite frankly, has caused me a great deal of concern. Although it is very sketchy and we hear that there may or may not be greater detail provided about the Bush plan, we know that he would basically carve up the program and create for each Social Security recipient an amount they could voluntarily elect as a private account.

Now, who would not like additional private account on top of our individual retirement assets? If someone would say to me, ''You want an additional 2 percent in retirement savings to play around with invest and make some return?'' Sure, what do I have to give up? And this is the critical thing.

To the extent that we invest our resources in an individual account, we subtract from the guarantee to the program. Now, there are those that advocate this private account business that say: No problem. We are going to make it a heads-you-win-tails-I-lose situation. If the individual account does not perform spectacularly, giving you more money that you know would otherwise have, the Federal Government is going to pony up the difference. So we have literally a no-lose situation. That sounds great.

But, Mr. Speaker, sometimes things that sound so great need a little closer inspection. I used to be an insurance commissioner. My colleagues would not believe some of the sales pitches that I have seen behind complex financial instruments. The fact is I disallowed a lot of them because they were not fundamentally honest. I do not think that promises of that nature that are not based on sound economics, I do not think those promises are fundamentally honest either.

Let us talk about the totality of the Bush economic plan and see whether this could possibly work. First of all, we know that instead of tackling that debt and eliminating it, the foundation of the Bush economic plan is a massive tax cut, even larger than the House passed and the President vetoed last fall. A tax cut that would basically take all of the non-Social Security surplus and eliminate it from the Federal budget.

Then he would create these individual accounts. And if we are doing our math, at this point we are thinking, let us see. The general fund revenue is gone. And then there is the individual account, and that has got to carve into the Social Security guarantee, but they say it will not. So how do we fund that part?

Well, Mr. Speaker, it really has not been made clear. Some of the options, frankly, if we do not have the revenue, would have to include benefit reduction, expanding the retirement age, not actually funding that backstop, that guarantee that we cannot do worse under this program. All of those are really core questions I think that have to come into the proposals advanced by George W. Bush.

I give him credit for talking about these issues. These are complicated, controversial issues and I think it is good that he has advanced them as part of his campaign for President. But then it is our responsibility to look at it and ask the questions.

Quite frankly, we do not have the dollars. We do not have the dollars with the tax cut he proposes to take the general fund revenue and the additional 2 percent commitment that he makes out of the Social Security revenue. We do not have the dollars to continue that base guarantee.

The bottom line is at a time when we have inadequate savings for retirement on the private side, we have individual workers in the workforce taking more and more risk for their retirement by whatever employer program they are covering, at a time when Social Security checks average $800 a month, and we know that Americans have more and more life expectancy to try and make on that kind of income, we know that the Bush plan adds uncertainty into the Social Security picture.

The investment counselors would say investors should allocate risk. There is a spectrum of risk in investment strategies, from the high-tech on the risky side down to the bonds on the low end side and that way we kind of protect ourselves. We protect our investment picture. I think we need to look at retirement income similarly.

Mr. Speaker, with retirement, we are going to have the high-risk stuff, and that is going to be including the private savings that we might have on a tech stock. It will include the kind of risky stuff that might be an aggressive portfolio of our 401(k). And then it has to include the bedrock, absolutely safe stuff, and that has to be the Social Security program.

So this is not a place and we do not add risk on top of risk. We backstop more risk by maintaining the foundation, and that means keeping Social Security, keeping the commitment, keeping the retirement age, keeping the defined benefit guarantee that there is a payment there every month that we cannot outlive. And it is up to us not just to see this program, I think, for retirement needs of those now in retirement or those of us in the baby boom generation about to come on to retirement, but for our children and grandchildren as well.

Mr. Speaker, for that reason this Social Security issue teed up in the presidential debate will be generating a great deal more discussion, and I thank you for giving me this time to advance these ideas tonight.

TRIBUTE TO D.C. FIRE CHIEF TOM TIPPETT

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 6, 1999, the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. WELDON) is recognized for 60 minutes.

Mr. WELDON of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, a terrible tragedy occurred on Friday of last week. The District of Columbia fire chief resigned his position. I have known Tom Tippett for a number of years. I have come to respect him and admire him, as do all of those firefighters, men and women, who serve in local 36 of the D.C. Fire Department Union.

Tom Tippett is a true firefighter. I first met him about 12 years ago, shortly after I first came to Congress and decided to try to work the issues involving fire and life safety in this country. To create a better awareness among our colleagues about the role of the firefighter in our inner-city areas, I started a tradition that each year would take our colleagues on a volunteer basis and have them run with one of the busiest D.C. fire stations.

Mr. Speaker, one of those nights we assigned a group of Members to run with Tom Tippett's station, a truck company and a rescue company that was at that time the busiest station in D.C. As Members of Congress in their jeans and shirts, with their running gear assigned by the Department, sat in the station talking to firefighters and responded throughout the evening to drug dealings, shootings, emergency trauma situations, fires, accidents, HAZMAT disasters, every kind of incident we could think of, all of us were in awe, Democrats and Republicans, of the job these people do every day.

Since that time, I have worked with Tom in a number of capacities. He became the President of the local here in the District of Columbia. And then when an opening occurred last year, he was offered the temporary assignment of serving as the District of Columbia Fire Chief.

He did an outstanding job, Mr. Speaker. When he took over the role of the chief, he said he would do it, but would have as his ultimate goal the objective of improving the life safety for the firefighters who he now had responsibility for.

The safety and well-being of fire fighters and EMS personnel across America is a major issue, Mr. Speaker. In fact, each year, we lose over 100 fire and EMS personnel, most of them volunteers, because the bulk of our Nation's fire fighters are volunteers, in the course of their doing their job. Over 100.

In fact, the D.C. Fire Department has lost three fire fighters within the last 3 years. In fact, Mr. Speaker, following a fire several years ago that took the life of one of D.C.'s finest, a fire where that life probably should have been able to be saved, a series of recommendations were made, recommendations following the death of fire fighter and Sergeant John Carter.

John Carter's widow was at the press conference today where we called for action to restore these cuts that were made to the D.C. fire department. John Carter was a dedicated professional. He left behind a widow and a 10-year-old son. He died in an unfortunate circumstance that probably could have been avoided, as did two of his colleagues who died almost 1 year ago in May of last year.

Following the death of John Carter, the Committee on Appropriations of this body in its legislative language in last year's bill put in the following item, and I will quote from this bill which is actually District of Columbia Appropriations bill for the year 2000 passed in this body on July 22, 1999. This is what it says, ''The Committee encourages the District to provide funding for two critically important safety measures that were developed by the fire department internal committee following the death of Fire Fighter John Carter 2 years ago. These safety measures include restoring the aide to the battalion chief within the fire fighting division and increasing staffing levels to at least five fire fighters on ladder companies.

''The mission of the fire and emergency medical services department is to improve the quality of life to those who choose to live, work, visit, and do business in the District of Columbia by preventing fires before they occur, extinguish those fires that do occur, and providing emergency medical and ambulance service.''

This was in the law that we passed last year in response to the death of Fire Fighter Carter.

Unfortunately, Mr. Speaker, last year we saw two additional deaths of D.C. fire fighters. In fact, in a fire that occurred on May 30, 1999 at 3146 Cherry Road in Northeast, two fire fighters paid the ultimate price, and they left their families behind.

In fact, Mr. Speaker, I came down to Washington at the request of the local fire department along with the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. HOYER), and we joined the thousands of fire fighters, both locally and nationally, who came to pay their respects to these two brave individuals.

There was a second study done, Mr. Speaker, following this fire. I will enter into the RECORD the report of that fire from the Reconstruction Committee, as follows:

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA FIRE AND EMERGENCY MEDICAL SERVICES DEPARTMENT—REPORT FROM THE RECONSTRUCTION COMMITTEE

REGARDING FIRE AT 3146 CHERRY ROAD, NE, WASHINGTON, DC, ON MAY 30, 1999

Incident Commanders need to follow the Incident Command System and sector every incident immediately upon arrival. This will reduce fireground confusion and allow the Incident Commander to quickly contact sector leaders to determine the locations of companies in their sectors.

The Safety Officer should not conduct roll calls. Instead, a member of the Incident Command Staff (e.g., a battalion chief aide) should conduct roll calls.

The Training Academy must conduct ongoing training and evaluation of fire fighters and fire officers to ensure that all Department personnel respond properly to roll calls. Roll call training must be part of recruit training, company level drills and training academy refresher courses.

FIREGROUND COMMAND

Problem—Command Post Location.—Battalion Fire Chief 1's vehicle was not in a position to allow him an adequate view of the incident. Battalion Fire Chief 1 unsuccessfully attempted to relocate the vehicle to obtain a better view, then left his vehicle and proceeded to the front of the building. Battalion Fire Chief 1 never established a fixed command post.

By leaving his vehicle, BFC–1 abandoned the stronger car-mounted mobile radio and was forced to communicate using a weaker portable radio. The use of a single portable radio also caused missed messages, due to switching back and forth between fireground and dispatch channels. In addition, it was impossible to maintain the command chart from a roving position.

Recommendation.—Incident Commanders must establish fixed command posts. A fixed position allows for better communication, tracking of companies and a better environment for decision making. The Incident Commander should use either his/her vehicle or another emergency vehicle that is more suitably located for this task. The command post should allow a view of the building that includes at least one, and preferably two, sides. The use of a fixed command post allows the Incidence Commander to simultaneously monitor multiple radio channels at greater signal strength as well as access to both mobile and portable radios.

Problem—Changing Tactics.—Extinguishing this fire involved a change in tactics from a front to a rear oriented attack. This change in tactics required close coordination and communication between BFC–1 and the front and rear fire suppression teams. Battalion Fire Chief 1 was unable to coordinate front and rear teams because he lacked information, particularly the location of engine company crews.

Recommendation.—Proper management of the fireground requires the assistance of a battalion chief's aide. This position was restored on December 19, 1999. Department should continue the position of battalion chief's aide and their role includes the following: Assist in the coordination of fireground activities; gather critical information for the Incident Commander; allow the Incident Commander to sector the incident sooner; handle specific tasks, such as accountability, as directed by the Incident Commander; improving fireground communications.

The position of battalion chief's aide is important to fireground safety. All personnel should understand the function of this and other command staff positions through training in the Department's Incident Command System.

Problem—Sectoring.—Battalion Fire Chief 1 never sectored the fire or properly used a tactical worksheet. He was quickly overwhelmed trying to manage this escalating incident. BFC–2 was assigned to the rear, however, he was never assigned any companies nor were specific companies directed to report to him.

Recommendation—Incident Commanders must follow the Department's Incident Command System procedures on sectoring an incident and use command charts at all incidents. Sectors must be established in the early stages of all emergency incidents. Sector leaders must be assigned companies for which they are responsible. Sector leaders must give progress reports to the Incident Commander every five minutes or more frequently, as necessary. The Department must ensure that all officers are trained to serve as sector leaders.

Mandatory use of sector assignments will reduce the risk of exceeding the span-of-control and increase the Incident Commander's effectiveness. Command Staff should also be increased to facilitate the sectoring process. Restoration of the battalion chief's aide will also help alleviate this problem.

Problem—EMS Command.—The EMS Supervisor established a separate EMS command structure at this incident.

Recommendation—EMS operations must be incorporated into the overall fireground operational plan as a sector that reports to the Incident Commander.

Problem—Mobile Command Unit.—It was too long into the incident before the Mobile Command Unit arrived on the scene. Consequently, the command process was hindered because the additional resources afforded by the Mobile Command Unit were not available.

Recommendation—The Mobile Command Unit should respond automatically to any incident that the DFC responds or if requested by the Incident Commander.

COMMUNICATIONS

Problem—Relaying Important Information.—After the Box Alarm was dispatched, Communications Division received an additional phone call, correcting the incident address and reporting that the fire was in the basement. This information was announced on the Fire Channel 1 at the end of a long transmission. Few companies heard this message and the information was not properly acknowledged. Acknowledgment was only received from E–26 on the address change information.

Recommendation—Communications must follow the established SOPs for relaying pertinent information. Communications Division must require that all responding units acknowledge all pertinent information.

The Department should also conduct a thorough evaluation of the Communications Division to ensure that its operations meet the Department's needs. Such an evaluation must also include recommendations to improve the Communications Division's performance during emergency incidents.

Problem—Size-up Reports.—There was no size-up report from the rear. As a result, personnel did not have a description of the building and the conditions found. Also, BFC–1 and company officers did not request important information, which caused them to act without sufficient information.

Recommendation—Company officers must be trained to give immediate and accurate size-up reports at every incident. Company officers must receive ongoing training in effective fireground communication and SOPs. In addition, Incident Commanders and company officers must be trained to request information, such as size-up progress reports, in the absence of this information. The use of Battalion Chief's Aides greatly improves size-up information.

Problem—Progress Reports.—The officers from E–26 and E–10 made no radio transmissions during their initial attack, nor did they give progress reports. These companies did not respond to repeated attempts by BFC–1 to contact them by radio. As a result, BFC–1 was not fully aware of the interior conditions or the location of these companies in the building. Accordingly, Battalion Fire Chief 1 delayed a rear fire attack out of concern for the safety of these interior crews.

Company officers were unable to hear all radio transmissions at all times. It is likely that the inability of some officers to hear radio transmissions was due in part to the position of the portable radios of the officers. This contributed to the poor communications at this incident.

Recommendation—The Incident Commander must be aware of the location, activities and conditions encountered by the companies at an incident. Department SOPs for the Incident Command System requires that companies provide regular progress reports to the Incident Commander. The Department must train personnel through in-service drills and annual training and enforce the existing SOPs for communications at all emergency incidents.

Speaker microphones should be used or radio pockets should be added to the Department's turnout clothing specification to improve effectiveness of radio transmissions.

Problem—Deteriorating Conditions.—During rescue operations, personnel noticed that the living room floor was deteriorating, becoming spongy and sloping. This critical information was not relayed to BFC–1.

Recommendation—Personnel must be trained to immediately relay any information about deteriorating structural integrity of fire buildings to the Incident Commander.

Problem—Radio Interference.—Fire Channel 1 (154.190MHz) and Fire Channel 4 (154.205MHz) are too close in frequency, creating interference when either channel is operated simultaneously. The Channel 4 radio transcript shows many unintelligible transmissions and microphone clicks that could not be identified. Fireground personnel may have missed important Channel 4 transmissions when Channel 1 was active. Identical problems were documented during the Kennedy Street reconstruction.

Recommendation—As a short term solution, the Department should replace Fire Channel 4 with Fire Channel 2 as the fireground channel. There should be a minimum bandwidth separation of at least 25 MHz between fire channels. There is an insufficient bandwidth separation between Fire Channels 1 and 4 to ensure clear communications capability. Fire Channel 2 is a significantly stronger frequency compared to Fire Channel 4 due to greater bandwidth separation. Fire Channel 2 is currently used by fire units responding on medical calls.

Replacing Fire Channel 4 with Fire Channel 2 will not eliminate the problem of insufficient bandwidth separation. Rather, it will shift the communication problems from fire units responding on fire calls to fire units responding on medical calls. EMS units will not be affected by this change because they use a different communications system.

Problem—Truck Company Staffing.—Current staffing of the Department's truck companies is inadequate. Working fires require truck company members to perform more work tasks then can be accomplished by four fire fighters in a timely manner. At this incident, improper and insufficient ventilation by truck companies was a critical factor contributing to the deaths and injuries. Other operational deficiencies include the following: Aerial ladders were not raised to the roof of the townhouses, even though it was possible to do so. An insufficient number of ground ladders were placed on both the front and rear of the structure. Truck companies did not turn off the gas or electric utilities at the fire building. Although not a factor in this incident, this certainly could have been catastrophic.

In part, the failure of truck companies in completing assigned operations resulted from truck company officers performing fire fighter tasks as well as the role of officer. Management of their companies was, necessarily, a secondary consideration to the primary task of carrying out vital fire fighter operations, such as placing ladders, ventilation, and forcible entry.

Recommendation—The Department must properly staff and train truck companies to ensure that vital fireground operations are accomplished in a timely manner. Truck companies must be staffed with a minimum of 5 or 6 fire fighters. Such a staffing level is nationally recognized by NFPA 1710, Standard for the Organization and Deployment of Fire Suppression, Emergency Medical Operations, and Special Operations to the Public by Career Fire Departments (scheduled for adoption May 2001), for all jurisdictions with tactical hazards, high-hazard occupancies, high incident frequencies, or geographical restrictions. This applies to all fire responses in the District of Columbia. Restoration of such staffing levels on truck companies will allow truck company officers to properly manage the overall operation of their company and ensure that critical tasks are accomplished. Note: December 1999, the Department restored truck company staffing to 4 fire fighters and an officer.

SAFETY

Problem—Integrated PASS Devices.—Fire Fighter Phillips wore an SCBA with an integrated PASS device that was automatically activated. Fire Fighter Matthews wore a manually activated PASS device, which he did not activate. Department personnel who entered the building in search of a missing fire fighter reported that they were able to rapidly locate F/F Phillips because they heard his PASS alarm. They were not able to locate F/F Matthews as quickly because his PASS device was not activated. In later interviews, the majority of fire fighters with manually activated PASS devices reported that they had not activated their devices before entering the building.

Recommendation—The Department must maintain SCBA units with integrated PASS devices for all fire fighters. Note: In December 1999, the Department provided every on duty fire fighter and officer with an SCBA with integrated PASS device.

Mr. Speaker, I will again quote from this report, although the text of it as I provided will be entered into the RECORD. But these are the recommendations that were made following two additional deaths of D.C. fire fighters. ''Proper management of the fireground requires the assistance of a battalion chief's aid. This position was restored on December 19, 1999'' at Chief Tippett's request. The ''Department should continue the position of battalion chief's aide and their role includes the following: Assist in the coordination of fireground activities, gather critical information for the incident commander, allow the incident commander to sector the incident sooner, handle specific tasks, such as accountability, as directed by the incident commander, improving fireground communications.

''The position of battalion chief's aide is important to fireground safety.''

Now, that was an internal recommendation of the D.C. Fire Department over the past year following the investigation of the cause of the death of these two fire fighters.

The report goes on to say, ''The use of battalion chief's aides greatly improves size-up information.''

On the staffing issue, this same report says the following, ''Current staffing of the Department's truck companies is inadequate. Working fires require truck company members to perform more work tasks than can be accomplished by four fire fighters in a timely manner.'' It goes on to say, ''Recommendation'', ''Truck companies must be staffed with a minimum of 5 or 6 fire fighters. Such a staffing level is nationally recognized by'' the National Fire Protection Association 1710. It goes on to say, ''This applies to all fire responses in the District of Columbia.''

Now, Mr. Speaker, here we have the Congress and the internal investigative arm of the District of Columbia on the record within the last year saying that we should increase the number of fire fighters on truck companies to five and that we should reinstate these aides to the battalion chief incident commander on the scene of a disaster in the District of Columbia.

The new fire chief put into a temporary position last year, Chief Tom Tippett, when he was sworn in said that he would protect the lives of those who he was charged to lead. The mayor supported Chief Tippett in that declaration, as did this Congress. That is exactly what Chief Tippett did.

Because there was not enough funding in the District of Columbia budget, he used money from the reserve account for overtime and excess dollars that he could find within the D.C. Fire Department budget to increase the staffing level and bring in these aides. So over the past several months, the District of Columbia has had better protection.

Unfortunately, it came to a showdown that ended in a very unfortunate decision last Friday. See, Mr. Speaker, the oversight authority for the District of Columbia, the Financial Responsibility and Management Assistance Authority, headed by former Clinton OMB director Alice Rivlin, told the mayor that they could not continue to fund these positions. Even though Chief Tippett found the money within his own budget allocation when he went back in for a reprogramming to complete this fiscal year, which amounted to over a million dollars, the oversight commission said no.

The mayor supported the chief; and to his credit, Mayor Williams said the chief is correct. D.C. fire fighters do not deserve to be treated as second-class citizens. They protect the Congress. They protect the American people. They protect the White House. They will be out there on the streets this coming Sunday when hundreds of thousands of moms march on Washington. They were there a few short weeks ago when thousands demonstrated in support of gay rights. They are here every week when thousands and tens of thousands of citizens from all over this country come to our city.

The fire department responds to medical emergencies, fires, disasters, and other problems that confront this city every day.

Chief Tippett did what he said he would do. He increased the funding to allow that support to take place for the D.C. Fire Department. Alice Rivlin and her oversight board laid down an ultimatum and told the mayor and the chief, ''We will not support your increased funding.'' Even though the proposed budget for the District of Columbia for the next fiscal year contained an additional $6 million to fund these initiatives, the oversight board said it would not provide the emergency funding to complete the rest of this fiscal year, which would have totaled somewhere less than $4 million.

When Chief Tippett was backed into a corner after having given his word, which unfortunately many in politics do not abide by, but that members of the fire service do abide by their word, Chief Tippett did what he felt was the honorable thing. On Friday afternoon of last week, he resigned. He stepped down from his office because he felt that he could not justify nor guarantee the safety of the D.C. fire fighters.

Mr. Speaker, I can tell my colleagues that there are at least three other next in line officers who were approached about taking the interim position of D.C. fire chief, and they refused. They refused because of this common bond of honor between all the fire fighters in this city and nationwide.

In fact, Mr. Speaker, the irony of this whole incident is that last Wednesday evening in Washington, for the 12th time, we had over 2,000 leaders of the American fire and EMS community come to Washington for a celebration of our domestic defenders, our American heroes, our fire and emergency service providers, volunteers and paid.

Yet 2 days later, Chief Tippett has to resign because of a short-sighted decision made by a pencil-pushing budget cutter overseeing a budget in excess of $2 billion that could not find $4 million to help this city to be properly protected.

Mr. Speaker, within the last 3 years, three D.C. Fire fighters have given their lives. These fire fighters were burned. In fact, there were a couple at the fire station today on New Jersey Avenue when we had a press conference who did live who were burned. These are not pencil pushers. These are men and women who every day in this city, as their brothers and sisters do across America, respond to every type of disaster that one can think of: bomb threats, explosions, stabbings, drug dealings, because the emergency response community in this city is the D.C. Fire and Emergency Services Department. Yet tonight, Mr. Speaker, those in D.C. are less protected. Those who protect the people of D.C., the brave fire fighters and EMS personnel, are more at risk.

Mr. Speaker, today, at a press conference in front of the fire station on New Jersey Avenue and in this room tonight, I call for the resignation of Alice Rivlin. Anyone who is as short-sighted as she must be, to deny a $4 million request, which I, as a Republican, will aggressively support in this body, out of a budget in excess of $2 billion to help guarantee the safety of fire fighters and EMS personnel in this city, in my opinion, is not fit to be the director of the oversight management authority for this the District of Columbia.

Either she restores the funding or she herself should resign. As I said today, Mr. Speaker, let her take the money that she makes and the staff that supports her and give that to the D.C. Fire Department. The people of D.C. would be safer if that money were being used to protect them and the people who visit this city.

But, Mr. Speaker, I want to go one step further, because Alice Rivlin is the hand-picked choice of this administration. Now, President Clinton and Vice President AL GORE talk a good game when it comes to supporting the Nation's fire fighters. In fact, AL GORE should talk a good game because it was the International Association of Fire Fighters who endorsed the candidacy of the Vice President before any other union in America.

Mr. Speaker, I ask myself where is the voice of the Vice President calling for the safety of these fire fighters? Where is his outrage that a former hand-picked senior manager of this administration would make such a disastrous decision? Yet, no word would come out of this administration about the impending problems for the safety and well-being of both the fire fighters, the emergency medical personnel, and the people who work and live in D.C.

Besides calling for the resignation of Alice Rivlin, I have today and I am again asking and requesting and demanding that the Vice President of the United States say something about the absolutely outrageous action that was taken by the oversight board to deny Chief Tippett's recommendations. If he does not respond, then I hope every union IAFF member in D.C. and around the country understands that that silence speaks louder than any words. We are talking about the safety of the men and women who protect this city.

Mr. Speaker, 5 years ago, under a different administration, the New Jersey Avenue fire station was closed down, the station that protects this Capitol. The gentleman from Maryland (Mr. HOYER) and I fought that decision and got on this floor and tried to pass legislation to restore the funding to keep that station operational. We were unsuccessful.

Five years later, a few short months ago, that New Jersey Avenue station was reopened. I could not make the reopening, but the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. HOYER) did, and he deserves much credit for his support in helping that station be reopened.

Within the first 30 days of their operation, they responded to 325 calls on Capitol Hill, 325 calls in 1 month, 30 days. Prior to that, those calls had to be answered by distance stations traveling much further to reach this Hill to take care of the citizens of America who visit and work here.

Today we have to respond to a different call. Chief Tippett, a brave and honorable man, gave up his profession on Friday based on principle. Now it is time for this Congress, Members from both sides of the aisle, to stand with Chief Tippett on principle.

Now, there are many of our colleagues, Mr. Speaker, who are railing about support for the fire service, about whether or not one is for this bill or for that bill; whether or not one is for this amendment or that amendment. Well, here is the chance for all our colleagues to join together this week and demand that the D.C. Oversight Board do the right thing and provide the additional $4 million for these brave men and women to protect this city and the people who live and work here, but more importantly to protect the lives of the fire and EMS personnel themselves.

It would be absolutely tragic, Mr. Speaker, if another incident like 3146 Cherry Road, Northeast, took place and additional D.C. firefighters were put at risk or, heaven forbid, lost their lives. All of us, Democrats and Republicans, must speak out and speak out loud and in a very clear and coherent voice.

Mr. Speaker, just a few short weeks ago tens of thousands of firefighters were joined by the President of the United States and the Vice President as they traveled to Worcester, Massachusetts, to join with all of us as we mourned the loss of six firefighters who were killed during the course of their assignment. They made the supreme sacrifice, just as the three D.C. firefighters did in the last 3 years.

Mr. Speaker, words are critical to console the families of those when a loved one is lost, as we all did when those six Worcester firefighters were killed. Where is the voice of those people today, before an additional D.C. firefighter is killed? Where is the voice of the President today? Where is the voice of the Vice President today? And where is the support for Alice Rivlin and the Oversight Board for the additional risks that are being put on those firefighters because they are not being adequately staffed and not being supported to respond to the incidences they have to face in this city?

Mr. Speaker, I hold those officials accountable. And I encourage all of our colleagues to join with me and to join with the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. HOYER), who went to the New Jersey fire station today, before I did, to state unequivocally that we will support the funding, but we want a decision made now. Not next week, not next month, not next year, but now, to restore the full support that Chief Tippett asked for. And we also want Chief Tippett back in that job.

Because, as I told the mayor 3 months ago when he began his search for his chief, when I called him on the telephone, I said, ''Mayor, you know you have a good man there. Your interim chief.'' He said, ''Congressman, I agree with you.'' I said, ''He deserves to be the chief.'' And he said, ''I agree with you.'' As I sat next to the mayor last June, as we had this memorial ceremony for those two firefighters that were killed here in D.C., he said, ''You know, Congressman, my top priority as the mayor is to guarantee the safety of our emergency service workers.''

The mayor is then on our side. The chief is on our side. The director of public safety for the city is on our side. Where is Alice Rivlin? Where is the oversight board? Where is the White House? And where is Mr. GORE with his IAFF endorsement? What is he doing to help protect the lives of these D.C. firefighters?

Congressional Record

PROCEEDINGS AND DEBATES OF THE 106th CONGRESS, SECOND SESSION

Vol. 146 WASHINGTON, MONDAY, MAY 8, 2000 No. 55

Senate

The Senate met at 1 p.m. and was called to order by the President pro tempore [Mr. THURMOND].

PRAYER

The Chaplain, Dr. Lloyd John Ogilvie, offered the following prayer:

Almighty God, before us is a brand new week filled with opportunities to serve as servant leaders. We trust You to guide us so that all that we do and say today will be for Your glory.

Since we will pass through this day only once, if there is any kindness we can express, any affirmation we can communicate, any help we can give, free us to do it today. Help us to be sensitive to what is happening to the people around us. We know there are unmet needs beneath the surface of the most successful and the most self-assured people. Today, some are enduring hidden physical or emotional pain; others are fearful of uncertain futures; and still others carry burdens of worry for families or friends. May we take no one for granted but, instead, be communicators of Your love and encouragement.

We pause to ask Your special blessing and healing on the members of the family of Officer Robert Lebron III, who were involved in an automobile accident this morning.

And now, Lord, we express gratitude for all of the people who make this Senate function effectively: Each Senator's staff, the Senate officers and staff, the Official Reporters of Debates, the Capitol Police and Secret Service, the maintenance crews, and the people who work so faithfully in hundreds of other crucial tasks. We also thank You for the outstanding young men and women who serve as Senate pages. We praise You for each one of these future leaders of our Nation. Lord, You have richly blessed this Senate so that You may bless this Nation through its inspired leadership. In Your holy name we pray. Amen.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The Honorable JON KYL, a Senator from the State of Arizona, led the Pledge of Allegiance, as follows:

EDUCATION

Mr. KYL. Mr. President, let me begin by thanking Senator THOMAS, again, for allowing the time to be devoted to this important subject which we began discussing last week and hopefully will be able to continue this week, namely, the Elementary and Secondary Education Act and specifically the bill the Republican majority in the Senate has put forth called the Educational Opportunities Act, S. 2.

It is my hope that by the end of this week we will have an opportunity to vote on this legislation, to finally conclude our work and move this bill forward so we can present it to the President for his signature and actually achieve a historic reform opportunity this year. As I said, I hope we will have that result. The reason, however, I have some doubt is that we have seen what I fear is a trend, on the part of the Democratic minority, to continue to talk about education but in the end not allow the Senate to vote on any meaningful piece of legislation. I think the debate so far has vividly portrayed two very different views of how the Federal Government should proceed with educational reform in our country.

On the one hand, you have the majority arguing for flexibility combined with accountability: Flexibility, so the local entities, the school districts, the States, the schools, and the parents can have the ability to direct the dollars from the Federal Government to do those things they know work best in their particular area, and to have some accountability for that by ensuring that at the end of the year they demonstrate what they have done with this money has actually produced results. We are talking here about academic achievement, we are talking about meaningful results, not simply more students in a particular program or more teachers hired or more school buildings built. We are talking about some tangible results of those particular actions. So it is flexibility with accountability.

Part of the way we achieve that is through greater competition, which is driven by more parental choice, parents having the ability to decide what is best for their kids; after all, they are the ones we presume care the most about them, know the most about their needs, and understand how best, therefore, to deal with those kids' needs.

On the other hand, you have the minority that has been arguing for the same system of Federal mandates and regulations that, frankly, after 35 years have proven to be a failure. It is the same system with a new layer of mandates and poll-tested, Washington-run spending programs added onto what we have right now. One of our colleagues from the other side put it this way. He said:

> The Senate has a choice. Will it pass the Republican Educational Opportunities Act or, on the other hand, are we going to follow the tried and tested programs that have demonstrated results for children at the local level?

They vote for the tried and tested programs that have demonstrated results. They have demonstrated results, all right. The problem is, not many people I know are very happy about those results. An old farmer friend of mine once said: If you want to get out of a hole, the first thing you do is stop digging. We just want to keep digging the hole deeper and deeper, it appears some of our colleagues are saying. That is not producing the right kind of results, good results: Enhanced achievement on test scores, enhanced ability to compete, and a real achievement-based accountability, which is what the Republican plan is asking for.

I have to say I am disappointed by this debate. I am disappointed with the direction in which the legislation itself appears to be heading because the American people have told us they want results. They would like to see reform now. Every poll says this is the No. 1 issue of concern of the American people—to improve our educational system.

As our colleague on the other side said, yes, the current system has produced tried and tested results. But over 80 percent of the American people do not like those results. They are not happy with those results. They think we can do better. We can do better. We are spending an awful lot of money, and we ought to get something for that money. But more important than that, more important than the accountability to the taxpayers, is the accountability to our children, our future.

These kids have one opportunity to get their education—right now. We are not talking about 20 years from now. We are talking about the children who are in our educational system today. Each year we delay is another year our children are involved in a school system that is less than adequate by most standards.

The American people who are demanding accountability are going to be very disappointed if we conclude this debate with yet another year failing to enact fundamental reforms. That is what has me concerned because there seems to be a rather cynical strategy developing on the other side to talk this thing to death, to set up a whole lot of amendments on which we have to vote, some of which have nothing to do with education, and then, in effect, put the blame on the Republican majority until, finally, when we have to move on to other business, the majority leader has to say: If you are not going to let us get to a final conclusion on this, if we cannot vote for these reforms, we have to move on. However, the blame would not be on the majority but on the minority for its refusal to let us move on and get this legislation passed.

I do not think it is too late to put politics aside and put our children first, but time is running out. I call upon my colleagues: Let's keep talking about education. Let's put the political gamesmanship aside for just a few hours. Is it just possible, for example, that we can conclude debate on one bill without getting bogged down on gun control?

Yet I predict, before this week is out, we will have colleagues from the other side say: We cannot really deal with S. 2 unless we deal with issues relating to gun control.

Let's talk about what is in this education bill, what is in our proposal. It may be that some of our colleagues on the other side are actually uncomfortable focusing the debate on education because of this notion that the current system is working just fine. I think they are reluctant to talk about reform, but the American people want reform. As I said, they know we can do better.

We heard last week from members of the minority that we cannot trust parents to do what is right for children. One of our colleagues said: Where are the guarantees that the parents will make the right decisions? There are no guarantees that parents will make the right decisions, but I suppose one can ask: Who is more likely to make right decisions for their children, the parents or some bureaucrat in Washington, DC, or some Senator in Washington, DC?

My heart is in the right place when it comes to taking care of the schoolkids in this country, but I certainly would not presume to set all the policies in Washington that would fit the needs of every single schoolchild in this country. We in Washington just do not have that capability. There are no guarantees that every parent will make every decision correctly, but it is a lot more likely that parents making the decisions will result in good decisions for the most number of kids than if those decisions are relegated to Washington, DC.

Another thing we heard was that the leaders in our States and communities cannot be trusted to do what is right for America's young people; again, we need guarantees. By guarantees they mean Federal enforcement that these local officials will do the right thing and, of course, the right thing is defined by the bureaucrats in Washington, DC: You have to do it the way Washington wants to do it or you are not going to get the money.

One of the things we heard was that it would be a better approach to the Republican reform ideas to simply fine-tune the Federal regulations that impose 50 percent of the paperwork requirements on the local schools, and that is in exchange for only 7 percent of their funding. In other words, the 7 percent of funding that primary and secondary education receives from the Federal Government accounts for 50 percent of the paperwork. It is a pretty expensive proposition, in other words, to get the Federal funding. Schools go after that Federal funding even though it is a very inefficient way for them to fund the education of the children.

The point is this: How can you expect to get different results if you keep doing things the same way? The answer is, of course, you cannot. That is where the reforms in S. 2 come into play. One of the things which exemplifies this debate is the issue of class size or class size reduction.

Members of the minority have said we have to use this money for the purpose of hiring more teachers so we can achieve a class size reduction. The majority has said we need to let the local schools decide if that is their top priority. If it is, then they have the ability to use the funds for that purpose. If they have a higher priority, who should make that judgment of how to spend the money? Should it be those of us in Washington or should it be the people who understand what their priorities are?

Almost everyone would like to see smaller class sizes. We intuitively believe that would be better for education, but with every other area of this debate, we do have to look at the track record. The fact is that class sizes have fallen over the period that the Elementary and Secondary Education Act has been in existence, but performance has not tracked. George Will, with his wonderful characteristic dry wit, looked at the data, and this is what he said:

Pupil-teacher ratios have been shrinking for a century. In 1955 pupil-teacher ratios in the public elementary and secondary schools were 30.2-to-one and 20.9-to-one respectively. In 1998 they were 18.9-to-one and 14.7-to-one. We now know it is possible to have, simultaneously, declining pupil-teacher ratios and declining scores on tests measuring schools' cognitive results.

The truth is, we have declining class sizes and with it declining test scores. We still think it would be a good idea to reduce the size of classes; that there are other reasons why those test scores have not improved. But under the proposal from the President, they have to spend the money strictly on hiring teachers. They cannot use it for anything else, as I will get to in a moment.

One of the things this money can be used for is to create more charter schools, something that has improved the education in my own State of Arizona. Our State superintendent of education, Lisa Graham Keegan, has pointed out under the President's proposal, the $17 million Arizona would receive to hire new teachers could actually start 425 new charter schools across the State, more than enough schools to keep class sizes relatively small, but they would not have that flexibility under the President's plan, under the Democrats' plan. No, they have to do it their way or no way. The only way they get the money is if they follow precisely their guidelines. That is the way it has been all these years. We can see the results. Again, the American people are asking for something different.

One of the ideas embodied in our legislation is something we call the Straight A's approach. The idea behind it is to actually look at where the Federal Government has been successful in making major reforms and applying that same technique to education.

There are few successes more dramatic than our success in welfare reform. It cannot be done, we were told, but we did it, and the results have been dramatic. The idea was pretty simple. The Federal Government said: We will repeal the regulations that have historically defined this program, and we will give unprecedented flexibility to the reformers in State government, as well as unprecedented accountability for them. Go out and pursue reforms, we said, and if you are successful, you will be rewarded. If you fail, then you will lose some of your latitude.

As with welfare reform, we need to put aside the certainty that Washington knows best and all wisdom that is formulated comes from Washington.

I know there is no such monopoly because I have the good fortune of coming from a State where education policy is made by people who really have been innovative, people such as our State superintendent of education, Lisa Graham Keegan.

I want to present some of the things she has had to say. When we consider how to provide this flexibility to education just as we did with welfare reform, I think we will see the same results. This is some of what Ms. Keegan had to say:

Federal programs have tied dollars to bureaucracies and institutions, not to students.

What that illustrates is the disorientation from Washington. We believe if you send the money to the institution, to the organization, automatically good things will happen. The fact is, we ought to be focused on what some call child-centered education. We ought to figure out how to get the money we want to educate these children as close to those children as possible because the sad fact is, when we send it to an institution or a bureaucracy, a significant amount of that money gets stuck at that bureaucracy.

As with many Federal programs, it costs a lot of money to administer the program, to comply with all of the Federal redtape and paperwork. That is why we say that, while the Federal Government only supplies 7 percent of the primary and secondary education dollars the States spend, the States have to spend 50 percent of their administration costs just administering that 7 percent at the Federal level. That is why if we can get over this business of tying dollars to the bureaucracies and the institutions and tie it more to the students, it will be a much more efficient expenditure of the money.

Ms. Keegan also says:

But before we ask Washington to get involved with the education of our children, we need to think about exactly what we're asking for. Sometimes, when we ask Washington for help, we run a very real risk of getting it. . . . More often than not, the government's preferred method for alleviating a perceived problem is to create a federally funded program with federally authored strings and federally enforced regulations. This approach may work fine when it comes to matters that have clearly defined federal responsibilities, such as highways or post offices. When it comes to education, which has always been largely a state and local matter with no clear federal role, such an approach tends not to work so well. . . .

. . . we still let Washington drive state and local decision making through the lure of federal dollars tied to programs with hazily-defined goals and well-defined regulations.

Then here is how she concludes this point:

The problem with this approach is that the federal government has tied its dollar to a program rather than to a student. An at-risk student who succeeds will, more often than not, find him or herself ineligible for more at-risk services. When the student moves on, the federal dollar dries up—and it won't come back until that child again slips into the at-risk group and becomes eligible for the federal program once more. These kinds of programs thrive on student stagnation, even failure.

We had that same situation with the welfare program. We tended to measure the success of the welfare program by how many people we had on the welfare rolls, by how much money we were spending on that. Then one day it dawned on someone that we ought to be measuring the success of the welfare program by how few people were on the welfare rolls and by how little we had to spend.

As a result, by giving flexibility to the local governments with regard to welfare, we have cut the welfare rolls in half. We are not spending near as much money on welfare. We have only half as many people involved in the welfare program. Is that failure? No. It is a success. And so it is with education.

If we are going to devote Federal dollars to the education of the students, then we ought to provide those dollars to the students so that wherever they think they can get their best education, whatever their needs are in terms of priorities, the money will be spent for that, not because the Federal Government makes a judgment that a particular expenditure is necessarily the right thing.

I think it is important to reiterate our responsibility to those who will pay the highest price if we fail to take advantage of the opportunities that are here presented. As I said, it is not necessarily the American taxpayer, even though we have, as stewards of those taxpayer dollars, an obligation to see that they are efficiently spent.

No. Those that will pay the highest price, if we fail, are the schoolchildren, the children who, this year, will not receive an improved education because, perhaps, we will not get these reforms passed this year. They will have to go yet one more year stuck with the kind of bureaucratic redtape and regulations that have failed them thus far in their careers.

Last week, we also learned that there are those on the other side who do not agree that choice should be available to children in failing or unsafe schools. I always find this interesting because very frequently people who make this argument have sent their kids to private schools.

I am a product of the public schools. That is where I received my education, including my college and law school education. It was from the public schools. Both of my parents were public school graduates and public school teachers. And others in my family are or have been teachers in public schools. So I fully appreciate the need to improve our public schools.

I think one does that by enabling some competition between these schools, and also with the private schools. What we find is that when that competition is allowed to work, everyone benefits. To use a crude example, it is similar to the automobile manufacturers. If one of them finds a new way to improve the way a car operates, it isn't long before the others find a way to incorporate that same technique or technology into their cars. If they do not, they are going to lose sales.

By the same token, when a school finds that something really works well—if we give parents a choice to send their kids to that school—the other schools are soon going to find that they will want to incorporate that same kind of technique to keep the kids there.

That is especially the case because so much of our Federal and State funding goes to the institutions, as we have said. If they want to continue to get that funding, under the Republican proposal, they would have to be able to continue to attract the kids.

In my State of Arizona, we have, in effect, open enrollment so there can be some degree of competition among the public schools. We also have more charter schools—almost 350 at last count—than any other State. I think it is a third of the charter schools in the country. These charter schools promote a lot of competition. A lot of them have learned to attract students by doing things a little differently. Some of the larger public schools have picked up on these techniques and have incorporated them into their curricula, into their procedures. As a result, they can be quite competitive with those charter schools. It does not hurt one at the expense of another.

It is not a zero sum game. Competition is like invention. What it does is lift all of the boats. When one begins to do something better, the others soon follow behind and copy it in order to keep up with the first one. When you have that kind of competition, therefore you can have innovation. If you have flexibility, you have the ability to experiment, and the net result is a better opportunity for more kids. That is what we want to promote in this Federal legislation.

As I say, in my own State of Arizona we already have a significant element of this in our public schools. But what we found last week from those on the other side of the debate was that there is a real desire to keep students and parents from having this additional flexibility, this additional choice. It seems to me there is a fear of it. There is a fear that not everyone will be able to do as well as those who do the innovation, and somebody might actually fail or fall behind, which would be bad.

Who is the somebody they are talking about? They are not focused on the student. They are talking about the school, that it would not be fair if a particular school failed. Why wouldn't it be fair if a particular school failed if the students all had the opportunity to go to the successful school? What is not fair is that failing schools keep ahold of failing students. We are failing in the education of these kids, and they will never be able to go back and get it.

Yes, we have some remedial education. But that is a very hard way to reeducate people in our society. So it is not the schools that we ought to be concerned about; it is the students in those schools. I remain convinced that no American child should be trapped in a school that cannot guarantee a good education. We have an obligation to those students.

So whatever happens with this bill, I believe we will continue to pursue this idea of choice, of competition, of flexibility, because it will work. Sooner or later, this approach will provide the basis for reform that will characterize the Federal program that provides the Federal funding to primary and secondary education. I still believe we can make a difference in this area.

So while it may become a disappointment that we are not able to conclude work this year on this important bill, that we may not be able to pass a bill that we can send to the President for his signature, I think, in the end, the power of this idea of flexibility and accountability and more choice—the power of that idea—will end up defining the Federal program.

It would be better if we could do it this year because that would mean we would not allow another year to pass with the same devastating results for the kids who are in school right now where far too many of them are failing. That is my hope.

I urge my colleagues this week to take this debate seriously, to try to move on beyond extraneous issues, and in the end, to bring it to a close so we can actually have a vote on S. 2 and get this important reform measure to the American people where it can begin to work.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The distinguished Senator from Wyoming is recognized.

Mr. THOMAS. I thank the Senator from Arizona. He obviously believes very strongly in this issue and has defined very clearly where we are with two very definite points of view. One is that the Federal Government ought to make the rules, ought to set up the redtape, ought to make the decisions here to be implemented in the country; the other is to send the assistance from here to local schools so they can make the kinds of decisions that are necessary to make their schools successful.

So I say to the Senator, thank you very much.

I yield to the Senator from Alabama.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The distinguished Senator from Alabama is recognized.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, I want to share some additional thoughts with the Members of the Senate and those watching what we can do to improve education in America.

I believe in public education. I have taught and my wife has taught in public schools. I say that to express how deeply I care about it. We have been active in PTA as our kids have gone forward. We want to improve the system. We want to make learning occur more regularly. We want to help teachers. I believe in American teachers. They are some of the finest in the world. They are well trained. They give their hearts and souls to it, only to be frustrated by regulations, paperwork, and discipline problems resulting from mandated rules passed by this Congress.

I am going to share some thoughts today, and those in education in any State of America will know what I am saying is true. They will have heard these kinds of examples time and time again. But the vast majority of Americans will not believe it; they will not believe these things occur.

Over 25 years ago, for example, we passed a federal disabilities act. It was designed to mandate to school systems and require that they not shut out disabled kids from the classroom and that they be involved in the classroom. If they have a hearing loss, or a sight loss, or if they have difficulty moving around, in a wheelchair, or whatever, the school system must make accommodations for them. They would be mainstreamed. They would not be treated separately.

That was a good goal, a goal from which we should not retreat. I hope no one interprets what I say today as a retreat from that goal. But in the course of that time, we have created a complex system of Federal regulations and laws that have created lawsuit after lawsuit, special treatment for certain children, and that are a big factor in accelerating the decline in civility and discipline in classrooms all over America. I say that very sincerely.

Teachers I have been talking to have shared stories with me. I have been in 15 schools around Alabama this year. I have talked to them about a lot of subjects. I ask them about this subject in every school I go to, and I am told in every school that this is a major problem for them. In fact, it may be the single most irritating problem for teachers throughout America today.

It was really brought to my attention a little over a year ago when a longtime friend, District Attorney David Whetstone, in Baldwin County, AL, called me about a youngster in the school system classified as having a disability. It is called ''emotional conflict.'' He was emotionally conflicted. He could not, or would not, behave. An aide would meet him in the morning at his home, get on the bus with him, and go to school, sit through the class all day, and ride home on the school bus with him. This student was known to curse principals and teachers openly in the classroom. Because he was a disabled student, he could not be disciplined in the normal way. The maximum 10-day suspension rule—and 45 days is the maximum a child can be disciplined under this Federal law and then they are back in the classroom. One day, he attacked the school bus driver on the way home. The aide tried to restrain him. He then attacked the aide. District Attorney Whetstone told me, ''I was never more stunned when I talked to school officials and they told me this is common in our county.''

We have children we cannot control because of this Federal law. He came to Washington, and we sat up in the gallery and talked about it. I respect David Whetstone and his views. He said this cannot be. I began to ask around, is this true? As a matter of fact, this very incident was focused on in Time magazine. There was a full-page story about it called ''The Meanest Kid in Alabama,'' and ''60 Minutes'' did a story about it because it is, unfortunately, so common around the country.

What can we do about it? I began to ask leaders in education around the State. The State superintendent: ''Absolutely, it is one of the biggest problems we have.'' I talked to Paul Hubbard, head of the teachers union in Alabama: ''Absolutely, it is a big problem.'' ''I am tired,'' he said in the newspaper recently, ''of children cursing my teachers in the classroom and nothing being done about it.''

Then we began to talk to teachers, principals, and school board superintendents. They talked about the lawyers and the complicated regulations with which they deal. It is really unacceptable. Teachers who have been trained with masters' degrees in special education to deal with these children have also overwhelmingly told me this is not a healthy thing, that we are telling special children with physical disabilities, or disabilities as defined by the Federal law, that they don't have to adhere to the same standards other children do. Right in the classroom, we create, by Federal law, two separate standards for American citizens. You can say to one child: You can't do this, you are out of school. But we can say to another children: You can do it, and you are only out 10 days, or maybe 45 days, and then you are back in the classroom. That is not defensible.

I want to share some of the letters I began to receive from teachers who care about this problem and want me and you and the Members of this Congress to do something about it. I believe we can. I hope it will be part of the debate this year in our political arena. Maybe we can make some progress with it.

First, I want to mention that when Congress passed the IDEA—Individuals with Disabilities Education Act—in 1975, we committed to pay the States, whom we were requiring to do it—we require these States to meet these standards. We agreed to pay 40 percent of the cost. We have never paid more than 15 percent of the cost. It has been below 10 percent in most years. We had testimony in the Health, Education, and Labor Committee, of which I am a member, from a superintendent in Vermont who testified to our committee that 20 percent of the cost of the school system in his county is for special education children. This is a major factor in education today. Let me share some stories with you about this.

An experienced educator in Alabama shared these thoughts with me in a letter:

We have a student who is classified emotionally conflicted, learning disabled, and who has attention deficit disorder. While this student has been enrolled, students, teachers, and staff have been verbally threatened with physical harm. Fits of anger, fighting, and outbursts of verbal abuse have been commonplace. Parents and students have expressed concern over the safety of their children due to the behavior of this young man. Teachers have also become extremely apprehensive toward the presence of the student due to his explosive behavior. His misbehavior has escalated to the point that the instructional process of the entire school has been jeopardized.

Here is another one:

I have taught for 25 years. I plan to continue teaching, but the problems with discipline are getting out of hand. We are not allowed to discipline certain students. Any student labeled as ''special needs'' must be accommodated, not disciplined. A student recently brought a gun to my school. He made threats to students and teachers which he claims were jokes. I was one of those teachers. This student has been disruptive and belligerent since I first encountered him in the ninth grade. Now, he is a senior. After bringing a gun to school, he was given another ''second chance.'' He should have been expelled. What is his handicap? He has a problem with mathematics. While this may be an extreme situation, it is not isolated.

Still reading from the letter:

Teachers are told to handle discipline in the classroom. The Government has taken most of the teachers' rights away; our hands are tied.

This is a letter from a young teacher in a small town of about 25,000 in Alabama. This is a story by which I think anybody would be moved:

As a special educator of six years, I consider myself ''on the front lines'' of the ongoing battles that take place on a daily basis in our Nation's schools. I strongly believe that part of the ''ammunition'' that fuels these struggles are the ''right'' guaranteed to certain individuals by IDEA '97. The law, though well intentioned, has become one of the single greatest obstacles that educators face in our fight to provide all of our children with a quality education delivered in a safe environment. There are many examples that I can offer first hand. However, let me reiterate that I am a special educator. I have dedicated my life to helping children with special needs. It is my job to study and know the abilities and limitations of such children. I have a bachelor's degree in psychology, a masters degree in special education and a Ph.D. in good old common sense. No where in my educational process have I been taught a certain few ''disabled'' students should have a ''right'' to endanger the right to an education of all other disabled and non-disabled children. It's nonsense; it's wrong; it's dangerous; and it must be stopped.

There is no telling how many instructional hours are lost by teachers in dealing with behavior problems. In times of an increasingly competitive global society it is no wonder American students fall short. Certain children are allowed to remain in the classroom robbing the other children of hours that can never be replaced.

There is no need to extend the school day. There is no need to extend the school year. If politicians would just make it possible for educators to take back the time that is lost on a daily basis to certain individuals there is no doubt we would have a better educated students.

It is even more frustrating when it is a special education child who knows and boasts ''they can't do anything to me'' and he is placed back in the classroom to disrupt it day after day, week after week.

It is clear that IDEA '97 not only undermines the educational process it also undermines the authority of educators. In a time when our profession is being called upon to protect our children from increasingly dangerous sources our credibility is being stripped from us.

I am sure you have heard the saying: The teachers are scared of the principals, the principals are scared of the superintendents, the superintendents are scared of the parents, the parents are scared of the children, and the children are scared of no one. And why should they be?

I have experienced the ramifications of the ''new and improved'' law first hand. I had one child attempt to assault me—he had been successful with two other teachers. He was suspended for one day. I had another child make sexual gestures to me in front of the entire class. Despite the fact that every child in my class and a majority of the children in the school knew of it, I was told by my assistant principal that nothing could be done because ''these special ed kids have rights.''

I literally got in my car to leave that day, but my financial obligations to my family and my moral responsibilities to the children I had in my class kept me there.

The particular child I spoke about frequently made vulgar comments and threats to my girls in my class on every opportunity he had when there was no adult present. Fortunately, the girls, also special ed, could talk to me about it. Unfortunately, they had to put up with it because ''nothing could be done.''

I know of a learning disabled child who cut a girl in a fight. The learning disabled child and her parents then attempted to sue the school system because the child was burned when she grabbed a coffee pot to break it over the other child's head. I know of another specific incident where three children brought firearms to school. The two ''regular'' children where expelled. The special education student was back to school the following week.

I fully expect that you and your colleagues in Washington will do what it takes to take our schools back from this small group of children who feel it is their right to endanger the education of every other child in school. As my grandmother said, ''right is right and wrong is wrong'' and to enable this to continue is just wrong.

She does have a right to expect Members of this Congress to confront this issue and not allow it to continue.

This is a letter from a town in Alabama with a population of 20,000, or so, from another special education teacher.

As a special educator teacher for 27 years, may I applaud your efforts to make special education students as accountable as any other student for any behavior they exhibit while in school. I fully support the idea that just because they are students in need of special education services that it in no way diminishes their ability to tell right from wrong. When teachers and administrators cannot provide some type of appropriate punishment, then the students are taught that their behavior has no consequences. Just the other day, we had a student, who had been offered detention to avoid mission school time, he responded that they could just go ahead and suspend him because he was not going to come to school on Saturday and that it was not going to hurt his grades because ''he'' was allowed to make up all the work. When students find out about this ''loophole'' then they often feel they have free reign to do or say whatever they feel and that there is nothing that anyone can do.

He is correct about that. This is a Federal law. We provide 7 percent of the cost of education in America. But we don't hesitate to mandate these kinds of rules in every school system in the country.

There federal rules often make teaching very difficult and it penalizes the students who come to school to try and improve themselves.

He is teaching a class of special education students, and wants all of them to learn. Many of them are there trying to learn, and they find it more difficult because of these rules.

I feel that for the best interest of the students and of the entire education population, changes in this policy must take place.

Mr. President. I don't want to disrupt the system. But I have some more comments that I am prepared to make.

This is a letter from a small town in Alabama.

Due to the federal rules and the situation they create, I cannot spend time in my class discussing a lesson. I do not do something to tantalize the students, they become disruptive. I can no longer simply explain a concept. I now must spend over half my time disciplining the disruptive students. I am no longer a teacher, I am a threatened and battered baby-sitter who is not allowed to do her job. Give us back our classrooms and our schools. Give the teacher the right to have these disruptive students removed. Please help us.

This is a letter from an assistant principal.

I am an assistant principal in Alabama. I taught middle school before taking this administrative position. As a teacher I saw a ''small picture'' of the problem, as an administrator I see a much ''larger picture''. You have chosen a much needed, but difficult battle. Most of the special education students are wonderful (emphasis added) unfortunately, a few are literally destroying the public education process in our country. We are teaching them that they have excuses not to follow rules or obey laws, then we act shocked when violence occurs. Now, perhaps more than ever in our history, we need to teach our children right from wrong and that there will be consequences for their actions. Instead we develop more and more excuses for unacceptable, sometimes criminal behavior. Thank you for anything you can do to help save our children, as well as our country's future.

I have a letter from a student in a good school system in Alabama.

I would like to let you know I agree with changing the section on IDEA law. I am in high school and I know how difficult it is for you to learn if there is disruption in the classroom. I think if there is a student who does not want to learn, they should be put in an alternative school or separate class.

Amen, young student. I agree.

Another student from an average town in Alabama.

I'm seeing more and more teachers getting out of education because of the ridiculous lawsuits by special education students.

We are losing good teachers today in America. If you check around, one of the biggest reasons is frustration over their inability to maintain discipline in the classroom. Talk to them about it. In most schools, that is a real problem. It is hurting public education. These laws don't apply to private schools. Teachers in private schools don't have these problems and are able to be more effective in creating a learning atmosphere. In a way, it hurts our ability to maintain public education as a competitive enterprise. We need to make sure what we do in Congress does not make it more difficult for our teachers to teach. First, do no harm.

The letter continues,

We have been told to give the parents whatever they want.

They have individual education plans for each student. A lot of times, that is very helpful. But they have become almost contracts with the parents, and schools have to obey them to the letter of the law. There are frequently lawsuits over whether the school is following the IEP, the individual education plan. It is sad.

We have been told if they sue us we are going to lose. Because of this, special education students are suffering and so are those students around them. They can disrupt class at will and take away from the education of the majority of the students. Often they do less, and even no work, and we are told to pass them anyway.

Then he makes an interesting point:

When these students leave school and enter the real world, they will not have things given to them as they do in school. They will not be prepared to function as a regular citizen should be. As a parent, I fear for my son's safety in school. He has already had one confrontation with a special needs child. The disabled student assaulted my child. In self-defense, my son hit the student back. The student was known to get into fights. My son was hauled off to the police station. His grades suffered. The special ed student could go on repeatedly assaulting, with very little consequence. As you can see, this is both an emotional and professional issue for me. I am glad you are aware of the large problem our educational system is having. I hope something can be done before it gets worse. We will see the repercussions for years to come if we don't change this system.

Another letter from a teacher:

I have over 30 years experience as a teacher, principal, Federal program coordinator, and school superintendent. I am greatly concerned about the future of public education in this country. IDEA has given local superintendents grief beyond description. First, in 1975, the law was first passed, Congress promised to pick up 40 percent of the cost to operate the program, and according to figures I have seen, 10 percent has been the norm since then. Second, this has made every system fair game, with litigation costs consuming more than education dollars. While our system is small, we have had to deal with a number of weapons cases in the last few years. Two of the cases students were caught with weapons they admit they accidentally left in their vehicles coming to school grounds from target shooting. The first boy was expelled 1 year. He never returned to school to graduate. According to him, the situation was just too embarrassing. Although the second boy was in the exact same position as the first, having accidentally left the weapon in his car, instantly we were told he was a special education student and has an IEP. He was then assigned to an alternative school for 45 days and is now back in our school. Both of these young men were not troublemakers at school. Senator, it is impossible to explain to the family of the first student that their son was deserving of more punishment. Think about that.

This family is now bitter toward me and toward the American system because they, in grave error, believe that all Americans have the same legal right and they were unaware that Congress now decides what rights we are entitled to hold as American citizens. As said in ''Animal Farm'': All are equal, but some are more equal than others.

The second student's handicap does not prevent him from knowing right from wrong. I'm sorry that I'm old fashioned and believe we should be teaching all students to be responsible for their behavior. We should be helping them develop good decisionmaking skills, not telling them that you are not responsible for your behavior and that there will be no consequences, or minimal consequences, regardless of your behavior.

I became a teacher in 1965 and I do not remember hearing of gun shootings prior to 1975 when Congress began telling ten percent of our students you are not responsible.

I think these teachers make a point. It is a matter we need to give careful consideration to, not overreact, not undermine the great principles of the Disabilities Act Program. But at the same time, we need to say that a child is not allowed to commit crimes, to disrupt classroom, to curse teachers, principals and students, and abuse them and do so with impunity.

I thank the Chair for the time and yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Ms. COLLINS). The Senator from Wyoming is recognized.

Mr. THOMAS. How much time is left?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has until 3 o'clock.

Mr. THOMAS. Madam President, I thank the Senator from Alabama for the great job of expressing the feelings the teachers and students have with respect to what we are doing.

We have had an interesting week of debate. A number of things, of course, have helped define where we are and the direction we will take. One of the quotes from the other side of the aisle is the reason we have title I is because we decided in 1965 the needs of disadvantaged children were not being addressed.

Madam President, 35 years later, we find once again, the needs of poor kids are not being addressed—this time, by those who defend the status quo, the means of trapping another generation.

A Wall Street Journal editorial indicates that this is an effort to restrict the States from making the decisions. Again, one of the comments made about it was the GOP plan allows a blank check for Governors who will see to it that the neediest and the poorest children will not benefit from the money.

This defines rather well where we are in this debate. Some of the facts seem to be different than what is being talked about. So $120 billion later, poor kids still lag behind in reading. The percentage of those reading below basic level at the 12th grade is still 40 percent. The percentage of those writing below basic level in title I is 38 percent in the 12th grade after $120 billion and 35 years of expenditures under this program.

We are talking about returning some of the decisionmaking to parents, to local leaders, sending dollars to the classroom rather than having them spent here, giving families greater educational choices, supporting and encouraging exceptional teachers, focusing on basic academics.

I think, if nothing more, we have defined very clearly where our priorities lie in terms of this body. I think we have a great opportunity to make some changes to bring about the results in education that all Members seek.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Minnesota.

Mr. WELLSTONE. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent I might have 4 minutes to speak about Mike Epstein, who passed away on Saturday.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Minnesota?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

IN MEMORY OF MIKE EPSTEIN

Mr. WELLSTONE. Madam President, first I want colleagues to know, and of course this is for Democrats and Republicans, and with Mike it is for staff and support staff and just about everybody who works here, pages and others, there will be a service for Mike in the Mansfield Room. It will be at 3 tomorrow. That is room S–207.

Many Senators came to the floor and spoke about Mike last week, on Thursday. It was wonderful. I thank you. About 70 people came to our office and did videos. All of this was sent to his family. Mike heard it. It was read to Mike. It meant a great deal to him. Letters have come in. It has really been wonderful to recognize such a great, great person.

Mike passed away on Saturday. We had a very small service for him today. He was buried in the Congressional Cemetery. Rabbi David Saperstein was there, Mike's family was there, and a few friends of many years were there. Then tomorrow we will have a service here. I look forward to that because it is wonderful, I say as a friend of Mike, the unbelievable impact he made.

I could go on forever. I will not because if I try to, the truth is I probably will not be able to go on at all. I just would not be able to do it here on the floor. I will say one unimportant thing because it is about me, and then I will say one important thing, and then I will be finished.

The unimportant thing is in some ways I will just be lost without him. It is not like Mike was my assistant; it was like he was my teacher. But I will talk to him every day.

The second thing I want to say, which is much more important, is if I had to summarize a life, I would say the reason there has been such an outpouring of love is because Mike loved his family; he loved his work. And do you know what else? This is the best thing of all. He really loved and believed in public service. He loved his country. He was just steady. It was just who he was. He never changed.

The world is going to miss him. The Senate is going to miss him. Most important of all, his family is going to miss him. Sheila and I are going to miss him.

EVAN BAYH, who went through a real tragedy in his own family and lost his mother at an early age, was kind enough, last week, to say to me: Paul, it's not how long you live your life; it's how you live your life.

I think Mike is one of the five greatest individuals I have ever met in my life. He lived a wonderful life.

I yield the floor.

Mr. JEFFORDS. Madam President, I know all of us share in Senator WELLSTONE's grief. I know I have lost, in the past, one of my chief staff persons. You never know how important they are until they are not with you. I know the Senator's chief of staff was an outstanding person whom we all appreciated for his ability.

I am sure I speak for all Members on this side of the aisle: We share in the Senator's grief. We want him to know that.

I yield to Senator KENNEDY.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KENNEDY. Madam President, first of all, we all reach out again to Mike's family. I think all of us in the Senate, just a few days ago, were very grateful of our good friend and colleague, Senator WELLSTONE, for giving us the opportunity to add a word to the comments on the extraordinary life of Mike Epstein.

As PAUL—Senator WELLSTONE—had pointed out last week, the hours were passing along and there was very little time left. But I think the challenge for all of us is to live a productive and useful life. That is the criterion the great philosophers have defined as the purpose in life, and Mike lived that. We all are the beneficiaries of it.

Our hearts reach out to PAUL at this time, and to all the members of the family. I think Mike would feel right at home here this afternoon, where we are debating the education act. He had strong views about these issues, as well as many others.

He made life better for people in this country. We will think of him during the course of this debate, too.

I thank the Chair.

CONCLUSION OF MORNING BUSINESS

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The hour of 3 p.m. having arrived, morning business is closed.

EDUCATIONAL OPPORTUNITIES ACT

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senate will now resume consideration of S. 2, which the clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 2) to extend programs and activities under the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Vermont.

Mr. JEFFORDS. Madam President, we are awaiting the arrival of the Senator from New Hampshire. I would like to say, in the interim, we would like to proceed today with other amendments. I hope by the end of the day we will be able to establish a program for the coming week, which will put us in a position where we can move the education bill forward.

At this time, I am happy to yield to the Senator from Massachusetts.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KENNEDY. Madam President, I will speak briefly. As soon as the Senator from New Hampshire is on the floor, I will be glad to yield so he will be able to make a presentation on his amendment. I have had the chance, over the weekend, to study it closely. I will reserve my comments on it until we have had an opportunity to hear his presentation in the Senate this afternoon.

Just to review very briefly, we have had, now, as I understand it, probably 4 days of discussion of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act. Of those 4 days, 1 day was a general kind of presentation, although that was a good presentation by the speakers who had different views on the Elementary and Secondary Education Act. We had five votes: on Senator GORTON's amendment, what they call Straight A's; our Democratic alternative, which was introduced by Senator DASCHLE and a number of us; Senator ABRAHAM's merit pay amendment—I offered a second-degree on the Abraham amendment; and then on the Murray class size amendment.

We had indicated there would be a number of others, although a relatively small number. Actually, the total number that would be offered by this side would be somewhat less than has been usually offered in past considerations of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act.

We were going to have proposed an amendment that would address the whole issue of the quality of our teachers, to guarantee we would have a well-trained teacher in every classroom at the expiration of the authorization bill. I will come back to that, how we are going to do it, and the importance of it for strengthening the quality of education and what the results are if you do have an excellent teacher, and what the academic results are, from various examinations of whether having a well-trained teacher, who is competent and knowledgeable about the content of the subject matter, and a good teacher. The difference that makes to children's ability to learn is intuitively obvious. Nonetheless, we will have an opportunity to present some very important and powerful evidence about why the way we have approached this will result in more favorable results.

Secondly, we have the whole issue about assisting many of the schools in this country that are older and are in great need of repair and modernization. We want an opportunity to make a presentation to make. The Senator from Iowa, Mr. HARKIN, has a powerful presentation to make. We need over $112 billion a year to bring our schools up to standard. There is much work that needs to be done, again, through a partnership among the Federal Government, States, and local communities.

We want to address the important issue of afterschool programs. Senator DODD, Senator BOXER, and others have been involved in the development of that program. We have important results as to how that program is working and has worked in advancing the cause of teachers.

We want to have a good debate on accountability. We believe the most knowledgeable member is on our side, Senator BINGAMAN of New Mexico, who has, going back to the time of the Governors' conference a number of years ago, made that a speciality of his. Most of the pieces of legislation that are before us reflect a good deal of what he has developed and has broad support. That has been very important.

Senator MIKULSKI has reminded us a number of times about the importance of addressing the digital divide. In a time of new technology, it is important we not look back 10 years from now and find that the new technology has been used in such a way it further divides our children who are attending schools, but instead that we have been creative enough to use technologies in ways that have reduced the divide that exists in our schools rather than exacerbate it. That is very important. Senator MIKULSKI wants an opportunity to talk about this issue.

Senator REED has made a very important contribution to our legislation. He was a member of the Education Committee in the House of Representatives prior to coming to the Senate, following Senator Pell. He wants to talk about the importance of the involvement of parents in decisionmaking in the local communities. That is very important.

Senator WELLSTONE will be bringing up the issue of fair testing of children. He has spoken about that issue a number of times. We have voted on some aspects of it in the past.

Those are the principal education issues. There are some on our side who feel safety and security in our schools is an important issue, and we will be addressing that issue.

We have a limited number of amendments. In my conversations with most of our colleagues, we are prepared to enter into very reasonable time limits. I know on six or eight of those subject matters, we are prepared to enter into time agreements of an hour or so evenly divided so we can move this process forward. These are not subjects the Senate has not addressed. We have addressed these issues in the full committee in our markups. We have spoken about these issues during the debate. I intend to speak on the issue of the quality of our teachers because that is relevant to the Gregg amendment.

I have talked with our leader, Senator DASCHLE, who will be talking with the majority leader and hopefully will work out a program so we can reach a determination on these issues in the next few days. There is no reason why we should not do that.

There are amendments on the other side as well. We have had an opportunity to look at some of those. There is no reason we cannot pick up the pace and resolve some of these issues in a timely way. We had hoped to do more of these amendments at the end of last week, and we are in the situation today, with the funeral of His Eminence Cardinal O'Connor, of being unable to reach a conclusion on some of these debates this afternoon.

Hopefully, we can, by the end of the day, give an indication of how the Senate wants to proceed. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Georgia.

Mr. COVERDELL. Madam President, I thank the Senator from Massachusetts for fulfilling the commitment he made during a discussion we had on Thursday night. I advise the Senator in Massachusetts that five of the seven amendments he talked about did arrive at our office Friday. I thank him and his staff for that. We are going to try to accommodate him this afternoon in return.

At the moment, by previous agreement, we were prepared to move to an amendment by Senator GREGG of New Hampshire. His arrival has been delayed somewhat—I do not think very long. I had a chance to talk with the chairman, and I thought we might accommodate Senator INHOFE, if the Senator from Massachusetts concurs, for some 5 to 10 minutes on an unrelated matter while we are locating Senator GREGG.

I ask unanimous consent that Senator INHOFE of Oklahoma be given up to 10 minutes to conduct his remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. INHOFE. Madam President, I thank both managers of the bill for giving me some time.

UPDATE ON LINDA TRIPP FILE CASE

Mr. INHOFE. Madam President, I want to update my colleagues and the American people on the latest developments in the Linda Tripp file case. As my colleagues will recall, this is a matter concerning how information from the confidential personnel file of a Pentagon civil servant was leaked to the media in March of 1998, more than 2 years ago, by the Pentagon spokesman Kenneth Bacon and a colleague in violation of the Privacy Act.

As my questions at an Armed Services Committee hearing revealed for the first time on April 6, the Pentagon's Office of Inspector General essentially completed its investigation of this matter within 4 months of the incident. In July of 1998, it referred its report to the Justice Department, having found sufficient evidence that a crime had been committed.

From July 1998 until March of 2000, the Justice Department sat on the report, taking no action, making us believe the IG report was not completed and not given to them—essentially engaging in a coverup, in its typical stonewalling, delaying tactics. Then finally, on March 28, 2000, they quietly returned the report to the Pentagon, informing them it would not criminally prosecute anyone in the case.

I reported all of this to the Senate in a floor statement I made on April 11. At that time, I pointed out that the offense in this case—disseminating to the media information from a Government employee's confidential personnel file—was the same offense Chuck Colson pleaded guilty to during Watergate. It was the same offense for which Colson served in the Federal penitentiary.

Since all of this was revealed last month, three principal defenses—I would call them excuses—have emerged as to why Mr. Bacon should not be prosecuted. These have been put forth to the media by Mr. Bacon's lawyer and by the Justice Department in its decision to take a pass on prosecution. Let me state these three defenses and what they are:

No. 1, defense by Kenneth Bacon is that Bacon only leaked a part of a confidential file, not the whole file;

No. 2, that the Freedom of Information Act ''trumps'' the Privacy Act; and

No. 3, that Bacon ''didn't intend to break the law.''

Today, I want to report to the Senate that all of these arguments have been refuted and exposed as having no merit in this case. This leaves us facing the stark truth: The law was violated, and those who violated it should be prosecuted.

In testimony on April 26 before the Senate Armed Services Subcommittee on Readiness, which is the Committee I chair, I asked Pentagon Deputy Inspector General Donald Mancuso about these issues. He confirmed these points:

No. 1, that criminal violations of the Privacy Act are not contingent on whether a whole file or just a part of a file is compromised.

Common sense would lead us to this conclusion anyway, but this was confirmed by the inspector general in our committee meeting.

Either one constitutes a violation. There is no distinction between leaking part of a file or leaking the entire file.

Secondly, that there was no formal written Freedom of Information Act request made prior to the Tripp file leak; that, in any event, the Freedom of Information Act does not trump the Privacy Act; and that, indeed, the Freedom of Information Act includes specific exemptions directly related to the Privacy Act.

So we are saying two things really. We are saying, first of all, when they said they used the Freedom of Information Act request as an excuse, they were lying, because there was no request under the Freedom of Information Act. Secondly, if that had happened, there is specific exemptions within our law to the Freedom of Information Act, one of which is the Privacy Act.

Finally, in its March 2000 decision not to prosecute, the Justice Department stated that Bacon and his colleague ''didn't intend to break the law when they released information from Linda Tripp's personnel file.''

What this tells me is that the Justice Department knows the law was broken. It is all the more reason why their decision not to prosecute is so outrageous. The next time I am stopped by a policeman for speeding, I am going to tell him, ''I didn't intend to break the law.'' I suppose then everything will be all right.

Recently, I received a letter from Mr. Bacon's lawyer taking exception to a couple of points I made it my previous remarks on the floor. I would like to respond to each of those points here:

First, Bacon's lawyer claims that comparing Kenneth Bacon's offense to Chuck Colson's offense in Watergate is ''inaccurate'' and ''unfair'' because the two cases, he says, are not ''remotely comparable.''

But he is wrong. They are directly comparable.

He goes into a lengthy description of the charges against Colson which were dropped by the court. All of this is interesting, but it is irrelevant to the current case.

Colson released information from Daniel Elsberg's confidential file, violating Elsberg's privacy.

Bacon released information from Linda Tripp's confidential file, violating Tripp's privacy.

What could be more ''comparable'' than this?

Second, Mr. Bacon's lawyer notes that the court said Colson implemented ''a scheme to defame and destroy the public image of Daniel Elsberg, with the intent to influence, obstruct, and impede the conduct and outcome'' of pending investigations and prosecutions.

Similarly, Bacon's action can easily be seen as part of ''a scheme to defame and destroy the public image of Linda Tripp, with the intent to influence, obstruct, and impede the conduct and outcome'' of pending investigations and possible prosecutions of the President and of Linda Tripp herself.

Let's not forget that Linda Tripp has testified that she was told by a top White House aide that she would be ''destroyed'' if she came forward and exposed illegal activities she witnessed in the Clinton White House, including matters related to the Filegate scandal. Tripp's FBI file was one of over 900 FBI files improperly obtained by the Clinton White House. Tripp remains a material witness in continuing legal proceedings on the Filegate matter.

In addition, let's not forget that Tripp has also been the target of a politically motivated prosecution in Maryland concerning the taping of Monica Lewinski's phone calls.

All of this provides ample evidence of possible motivations ''to defame or destroy'' her ''public image.''

Third, Mr. Bacon's lawyer claims that Bacon did not violate any law in releasing the information on Tripp.

Again, he is simply wrong. Bacon clearly violated the Privacy Act, the law which was enacted in 1974 as a direct result of the Colson case. It isn't even a close call.

The contention that the media inquiry constituted a FOIA request that somehow superseded the Privacy Act will simply not stand up to scrutiny.

Finally, Mr. Bacon's lawyer makes a legitimate point with which I am prepared to agree; and that is, that Mr. Bacon is a dedicated public official who has served the Department of Defense with distinction for 6 years.

Similarly, Linda Tripp is a dedicated public official who has served in the Pentagon and the White House with distinction for many years.

The problem is that there must be equal application of the law if the law is to have any meaning.

Mr. Bacon simply cannot be permitted to escape responsibility for an act that so clearly violated the law—a law which is designed to protect the rights of all government employees.

The news media, I think, has created a particular problem in this case. It is a travesty that the major news media have not covered this story and informed the American people about why this is important.

What a contract with how the news media acted during the Watergate era. At that time, the news media led the charge to uncover wrongdoing by high government officials, explaining why adherence to the rule of law was so vital to the protection of liberty.

In the aftermath of Chuck Colson's pleading guilty in June 1974, along with other Watergate figures, newspapers across the country expressed appropriate outrage. They covered the story. They commented on it forcefully. They didn't sweep it under the rug. They did not say they were bored. They did not argue that the country should ''move on'' to other things.

They knew that lawbreaking by high officials was one of the most important things they could report to the American people, because, as they kept telling us, an informed public is essential to the protection of liberty in a democracy.

Here are a few examples of editorials during the Watergate years. Where are the similar editorials today?

On June 12, 1974, the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin was upset that another Watergate figure got off too lightly with a 30-day suspended sentence for his Watergate crime. They said.

> The circumstances (in this case) did not call for a tap on the wrist. [The judge's] praise for (the defendant's) integrity in this setting seems inappropriate. If [the defendant] is to be so excused for failing to do his duty . . . then how are others to be held accountable for placing personal loyalty above their duty and the requirements of the law?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's 10 minutes have expired.

Mr. INHOFE. I ask unanimous consent for 2 additional minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. INHOFE. Then, speaking of Chuck Colson, on June 4, 1974, the Dayton (Ohio) Daily News wrote:

> In this tawdry matter, Mr. Nixon's White House again has been exposed—this time by an aide who was high in its deliberations and was an intimate of the President's—as acting against the political and judicial process of this country as if they were enemies.

Finally, in commenting on Chuck Colson, in the home state of the Presiding Officer, the Portland (Maine) Evening Express wrote on June 30, 1974:

> Yet another close aide or high appointee of President Nixon has been brought to justice . . . He had attempted to defame Elsberg and destroy his credibility . . . Daily, it becomes abundantly clearer that [the Nixon Administration is] the most morally reprehensible administration in the history of the nation.

So who is at fault? Of course, Ken Bacon is at fault for violating the law. But I suppose it is human nature to cover up to save oneself. Who is really at fault is the press—the media—who are covering up this crime. No one can look at the way the press assailed Chuck Colson for his crime and now covers up the crime of Ken Bacon without asking, ''Why? Why are they so defensive of Ken Bacon when they so aggressively went after Chuck Colson?'' Unequal application of the law is no worse then inequality in reporting. The consequences of both serve to diminish our liberty.

Unfortunately, Ken Bacon, who should have been prosecuted, is now in the hands of Secretary of Defense William Cohen. Cohen is charged with reviewing the IG report and issuing any administrative discipline, short of criminal punishment. I urge him to act swiftly and in accord with the seriousness of this matter.

Federal employees throughout government are watching this case. What will it say to them if someone who has so clearly violated the Privacy Act is not held accountable?

It will say that no one's privacy can ultimately be protected, that the law is largely meaningless, and that ideal of public service in support of the Constitution and the laws is forever diminished.

Madam President, I am not trying to single out Kenneth Bacon. I don't even know him. But I do know Chuck Colson, and he admits he was properly prosecuted, and Kenneth Bacon has committed the same crime and gets off free. This is wrong.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Georgia is recognized.

AMENDMENT NO. 3126

(Purpose: To improve the provisions relating to teachers)

Mr. COVERDELL. Madam President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Georgia [Mr. COVERDELL], for Mr. LOTT and Mr. GREGG, proposes an amendment numbered 3126.

Mr. COVERDELL. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(The text of the amendment is printed in today's RECORD under ''Amendments Submitted.'')

Mr. COVERDELL. Madam President, I rise to speak on behalf of this amendment and, in particular, a core provision of it, which is teacher liability.

As schools have become more violent, it is increasingly necessary for teachers to use reasonable means to maintain order and discipline in their classrooms. In order to provide a safe and positive learning environment, teachers and principals must not be afraid to remove disruptive students for fear of becoming the subject of frivolous lawsuits.

I forget the exact timing of this, but sometime within the last 2 years, the Senate and House passed the Volunteer Liability Protection Act. I want to use that as a backdrop in preparation for what the provisions of this amendment do.

At a time when the Nation was calling on more and more people to step forward and be charitable and be volunteers, we had a huge summit. The President and all the former Presidents were there, as was Gen. Colin Powell. They outlined a call to the Nation to step forward and volunteer. Several days after that summit, I, along with several others, introduced this Volunteer Liability Protection Act.

It was based on this premise that voluntarism in the country was declining, even though voluntarism is like a national monument in the United States, but it was declining. And when you looked into why—or among the reasons why—it was the fact that volunteers, such as sports figures, role models who were consistently asked to step forward and volunteer, and major figures in the community, people of substance, or a family who sold a business and, in effect, retired and had the time and the resources to step forward and help the local YMCA or a charitable group, were targeted for frivolous lawsuits. I will give an example of one and then I will get back to the teacher side of it.

Picture a YMCA gym. This woman, in particular, who I talked about over and over throughout that debate, was a volunteer receptionist; she was answering the phone. She had nothing to do with the actual rigors of what was going on in the gym. Well, a young man broke either an arm or a leg in some activity in the gym. So you would have thought, well, if there were grounds for a lawsuit—and it wasn't just an accident and it involved no willful neglect—you would go after whoever was supervising the young man. I think that sounds reasonable to most Americans. But, no, the person who was sued was the woman answering the phone because they knew she had assets. Needless to say, people such as that didn't want to volunteer anymore. It is kind of hard to be a phone receptionist for the YMCA and put your whole family on the line, where you might be subject to a lawsuit and you might inadvertently lose it, and everything the family had worked for could be gone.

So we introduced the Volunteer Liability Protection Act. After a rigorous debate, it passed here, it passed the House, and the President signed it. It has been welcomed throughout the entire country as a relief that allows Americans, whether athletes or people who have assets, or somebody else, to step forward and be a volunteer.

It is directly analogous to the situation that we have in schools. Again, I say in order to provide a safe and positive learning environment, teachers and principals must not be afraid to remove a disruptive student for fear of being subject to a frivolous lawsuit. You can picture it. There is a scuffle going on in the hallway. A teacher has to make a decision. I remember that in the near disaster in Rockdale County, after Columbine, a young man entered the school. He had a weapon and he threatened several students with it, and he fired several shots. No one, gratefully, was either killed or permanently wounded. But the assistant principal appeared and moved directly to the student who had the firearm and pointed the firearm at him. Courageously—in my judgment, he had unbelievable courage—he walked up, calmed the student and took the weapon and held the student, who had become very emotional, until law enforcement officers could arrive.

That is an exaggerated incident, but we all know that scuffles such as this occur between students, or a verbal attack might occur in a classroom. A teacher can't be sitting there computing whether or not she or her family is at risk if she does her job. As the Volunteer Protection Act, this legislation does not allow for any willful misconduct. If this teacher were involved in willful misconduct, aggravated conduct, she would be subject to a lawsuit. But what it would end is just picking her out and harassing her or him into a settlement.

Listen to these statistics. The percentage of public school teachers in the United States who say they have been verbally abused is 51 percent. Fifty-one percent of all of our teachers threatened with injury, which is perhaps an even more significant percentage, is down. But 16 percent have been threatened they would be harmed; physically attacked, just under 1 in 10. It is 7 percent.

In 1992, 33 percent of 12th grade public school students felt disruptions by other students interfered with their learning. In other words, a third of the school population is talking about the disruption another student is conducting that interrupts the schoolday sufficiently to interfere with that student's learning.

In my State of Georgia, in 1997, there were 38,000 violent incidents and 2,600 weapons violations.

My colleague from Massachusetts cited a survey of teachers which found that 43 percent of high school teachers felt their personal safety was in jeopardy in a 2-year period. A seventh grade student at Lincoln Academy in New York was arrested on June 2, 1999, for setting a fire to his teacher's hair.

Two Irving Middle School seventh graders in Lorain, OH, were charged in January of 1999 of plotting to kill their teacher with a 12-inch fillet knife. As 15 students placed bets on the girl's plot, another teacher found out and intervened—in moments. She overrode this situation before the stabbing occurred.

In Columbus, GA, my home State, seven students were sent to summer community service after planning to poison a teacher's iced tea and trip her on the stairs because the students thought she was too strict.

Recently, I met with a large number of school superintendents. They talked about the multitude of issues that are affecting them and their ability to do the job. But when you mention teacher liability, the threat to them of a lawsuit—whether it is the principal, the administrator, or teacher—is very high on their agenda; that we are creating an environment where prudent decisions might be missed. A circumstance where a teacher's intervention would be useful doesn't occur because the teacher is intimidated by the threat of being sued for having made that decision.

Again, I reiterate that in the Volunteer Liability Protection Act, this language does not excuse any willful conduct or any aggravated conduct. The person is still liable for that kind of behavior. It is the frivolous activity that would apply, just as in the Volunteer Liability Protection Act.

I am going to describe for a minute or two the language of this section. The teacher liability protection provisions provide limited civil litigation immunity for teachers, principals, and other educational professionals who engage in reasonable—I repeat ''reasonable''—actions to maintain order, discipline, and a positive educational environment in America's schools and classrooms. It protects teachers from lawsuits when using reasonable means to maintain order, control, or discipline in the school or classroom.

What does ''reasonable'' mean? It does not include wanton and willful misconduct. It does not mean a criminal act. It does not mean the violation of State law. It does not mean the violation of Federal civil rights laws. And it does not mean inappropriate use of drugs or alcohol on the teacher's behalf. As I said a little earlier, it is modeled on the Volunteer Protection Act of 1997 and various State laws that seek to provide teachers limited civil liability immunity, including my own State of Georgia.

It is narrowly crafted to protect teachers from lawsuits when they are attempting to maintain order, control, or discipline in the school and classroom. It protects teachers from frivolous lawsuits.

I always use the word ''teachers.'' But I think I should reiterate that it is teachers, principals, and administrators in the system. It is not only teachers, such as the person I just talked about who interceded to try to contain a student who brought loaded weapons to the school and threatened not only other students of being shot but his own life and the life of the assistant principal. All had been threatened. There is no telling what the outcome might have been without the courage of this administrator to intercede.

It protects teachers from frivolous lawsuits when they remove a disruptive or belligerent and possibly dangerous child from the classroom. That ought to be expanded. It is not necessarily from the classroom but from an environment on the school property that is potentially dangerous; a fight in the cafeteria. What do you do? Do you just sit there and watch the fight because you are saying to yourself, if I go over there and interrupt, the parents of one, or two, or three of those children are going to sue us. In this case, that would be considered frivolous. It would be the person doing their job. On the other hand, if the teacher was involved with starting or aggravating a fight, it would be wanton behavior, and that teacher or that administrator would be liable because they did something wrong; something outside the parameter of their job.

It would allow principals and administrators to take charge of circumstances in the school and the classroom. It would prevent the overactive trial lawyer community—and I believe by anybody's standard this is one of the great issues of our time with enormous utilization. We have become a society that is ready to sue—your neighbor or the guy who is packing your food at the grocery store. We are just suing everybody. Some of it is very appropriate, but a lot of it is not. It probably has to be dealt with in a lot more places than volunteers in the schoolroom.

But it certainly needed to happen. It has to protect volunteers, and it certainly needs to happen on these school properties. It does not, I repeat, override any State law that provides teachers with greater immunity—as I said, some do, including Georgia—of liability protections.

This is important: States can affirmatively opt out of Federal coverage by passing State legislation. They have their own view of it. If they want to expand it, they can. But they can opt out.

The provision does not address the rights of individual States to prohibit or allow use of corporal punishment by teachers and administrators to discipline unruly and possibly dangerous students.

Recently, parents brought a suit against a history teacher at a high school for damages the parents claim their son suffered when the teacher removed him from the classroom after the student refused to go to the vice principal's office.

We have a classroom. We have an unruly student. In this case, the teacher steps forward and says, You need to go to the vice principal's office. The student refuses to do so. The teacher removes that student from the classroom—this is not an appropriate interaction going on in the classroom—and gets sued for doing that.

That is an individual doing their job.

Matt Grimes, a student, went to a teacher's tutorial class. The gentleman's name was Mr. Stringer. Mr. Stringer told him to go to the tutorial he was scheduled to attend. In other words, the student was in the wrong place and needed to be somewhere else. Matt said his teacher would not let him into that class because he was late. That teacher did, indeed, refuse Matt's admittance because of a late arrival. Something was said to the teacher that was disrespectful, and the teacher pointed or touched his chest with his index finger. In other words, he touched him and was sued. The teacher ended up being sued as a result of that incident.

Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that a full article be printed into the RECORD from the Wall Street Journal on Tuesday, May 4, 1999, by Kay Hymowitz.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

HOW THE COURTS UNDERMINED SCHOOL DISCIPLINE

(By Kay S. Hymowitz)

In the wake of the Littleton school shootings, we've heard a lot about educators' need to pay attention to the ''warning signs'' of potentially violent youngsters. In this case such signs were plain to see: Eric Harris and Dylan Klebold produced videos and wrote essays for their classes depicting their murderous fantasies. But the legal culture produced by a pair of Supreme Court rulings makes it difficult for educators to do anything when confronted with such warning signs—or indeed even to enforce the ordinary discipline that our kids need in order to be molded into citizens.

In Tinker v. Des Moines School District (1969), the justices sided with students who had been threatened with suspension for wearing black armbands to protest the Vietnam War. Tinker protected young people who expressed opinions at odds with the government and reduced the possibility that educators could simply indoctrinate children with their own beliefs. ''It can hardly be argued,'' wrote Justice Abe Fortas, ''that either students or teachers shed their constitutional rights . . . at the schoolhouse gate. . . . Students in school as well as out of school are 'persons' under our Constitution.''

Six years later, in Goss v. Lopez, the court granted students the right to due process when threatened with a suspension of more than 10 days. Careful to insist that schools need only provide informal hearings, not elaborate judicial procedures, the justices believed that they could help guard against feared abuses of power without seriously disrupting principals' authority.

On first sight, these decisions seem balanced and sensible. But their unintended consequence was to help create the world Gerald Grant described in his 1988 book, ''The World We Created at Hamilton High.'' ''Assemblies often degenerated into catcalls and semiobscene behavior while teachers watched silently,'' Mr. Grant writes. ''Trash littered the hallway outside the cafeteria, but it was a rare teacher who suggested a student pick up a milk carton he or she had thrown on the floor.''

Cheating was sidespread, but ''few adults seemed to care.'' No wonder. Teachers who accused kids of cheating were required to produce documentation and witnesses to counter the ''other side of the story.'' One teacher who had failed a boy for plagiarizing a paper had to defend herself repeatedly before a supervisor after being harrassed by daily phone calls from the student's parents and the lawyer they had hired on their son's behalf. Another teacher was asked why she didn't report several students who were making sexually degrading remarks about her in the hallway. ''Well, it wouldn't have done any good,'' she shrugged. ''I didn't have any witnesses.'' The phrase ''You can't suspend me'' became the taunt of many a disruptive student.

Surely the justices who decided Tinker and Goss did not anticipate this. Indeed, subsequent decisions have made clear that students don't enjoy the same legal rights as adults. In Bethel School District v. Fraser (1986), the Supreme Court ruled in favor of a principal who suspended a student for making an obscene speech, and in Hazelwood v. Kuhlmeier (1988), it allowed principals to censor high-school newspapers. And lower courts often decide in favor of school administrators who take a strong stand against provocative student speech and behavior.

But the mere threat of a lawsuit is often enough to have a chilling effect on teachers and administrators. Educators are understandably wary of students backed by litigious parents, not to mention numerous rights manuals with titles like ''Up Against the Law,'' ''A High School Student's Bill of Rights'', and ''Ask Sybil Liberty.'' These guidebooks enumerate for already-disaffected kids all the impermissible things teachers are going to try to make them do. You don't have to answer a school official if he questions you; a teacher can't make you do anything that violates your conscience; if you don't like the way the school makes you dress, you can go to court; you can demand to see your school records.

In his dissent in Tinker, Justice Hugo Black, one of the court's strongest defenders of the First Amendment, wrote that the decision ''subject all the public schools in the country to the whims and caprices of their loudest-mouthed, but maybe not their brightest, students.'' Justice Black was right. A few years ago a Colorado high school principal took no action as one of his students strutted into school wearing Ku Klux Klan insignia. That is, until a black student punched the would-be Klansman. Only then, when the Klansman's ''speech'' could be construed as an incitement to violence, did the principal forbid it.

In another case, a high-school senior in New York state distributed articles urging students to urinate in hallways, scrawl graffiti on the walls and riot when the police arrived. In 1997 the school district suspended the boy, but only after the case had dragged on for two years, including an appeal to the state's highest court. Last year a 14-year-old eighth-grader in Half Moon Bay, Calif., wrote a pair of English compositions, one about torching the school library and beating up the principal and another, charmingly entitled ''Goin' Postal,'' about pumping seven bullets into the principal. When the boy was suspended for five days, his parents sued the school district. The district and the parents reached a settlement under which the suspension was reduced to two days and the grounds were changed from ''terroristic threats'' to ''habitual use of profanity in school assignments.''

Rights-empowered students are not merely a discipline problem; they have also helped dumb down the curriculum. Mr Grant found that as administrators and teachers became fearful of restless, back-talking adolescents, they resorted to keeping classes amiable and nonthreatening—in other words, unchallenging. All but a handful of charismatic teachers studiously avoided giving low grades, demanding homework or administering rigorous tests. This same dynamic is at work in the many schools today where students choose their courses from a number of faddish, ''creative'' options. After all, ''Music as Expression'' is much less likely to make a kid testy than ''19th-Century American History.''

Thus instead of enriching children's minds and challenging their media-fed fantasies, adults stand by and condone the worst forms of adolescent acting-out, sometimes with deadly results. Kip Kinkel, a 15-year-old Springfield, Ore., boy, reported in science class on how to build a bomb and read in literature class from his journal about his dreams of murder. Last May the teenager allegedly shot and killed his parents, then went to school, where he allegedly murdered two classmates and injured two dozen more; he is now on trial. The adults' response to his classroom rantings? ''He was a typical 15-year-old,'' the Springfield superintendent of schools said. Other school officials said classroom talk of murder and violence is nothing unusual.

The Supreme Court undoubtedly thought that Tinker and Goss would free students from oppressive adult power. Yet today, 30 years later, resentful students must march through metal detectors, get sniffed for guns by trained dogs, watch police and security guards patrolling the hallways—and fear for their lives.

Mr. COVERDELL. It says:

In the wake of the Littleton school shootings, we've heard a lot about educators' need to pay attention to the ''warning signs'' of potentially violent youngsters. In this case such signs were plain to see. Eric Harris and Dylan Klebold produced videos and wrote essays for their classes depicting murderous fantasies.

I make a point about the legal culture. A pair of Supreme Court rulings makes it difficult for educators to do anything at all when confronted with such warning signs. The warning sign in the case of the teacher in Georgia was a pistol pointed right at him. That is a little late. But he made a decision and he executed the decision, saved the child, and was not harmed himself.

It is difficult for educators to do anything when confronted with the warning signs or, indeed, to even enforce ordinary discipline that kids need in order to be molded into citizens.

That goes back to the point I was making a bit ago. Unfortunately, this happens in a lot of walks of life. It happens with employers. It happens with store owners. People stop making prudent decisions or become so overly cautious about the legal costs, which are passed on to the consumer, that they start doing things that do not make sense for society.

We pay a price when it occurs in the school, when a teacher sees a disorderly event or something that potentially is dangerous, wrong, or disruptive to the education in the school, and in that teacher's mind they decide not to do anything, not to act; they walk away because they are intimidated for fear of ultimate consequences. Maybe somebody else in the school system was involved in a frivolous lawsuit. We are producing an environment where persons in charge on school property are stopped from doing things we expect them to do.

In Tinker v. Des Moines School District, the justices sided with students who had been threatened with suspension for wearing black armbands to protest the Vietnam war. The court believed it was a form of expression. Now we hear about all these articles, one after other, condemning the school for not doing anything because students showed up dressed in a threatening manner in the school. They condemned them for not doing anything. On the one hand, if you do anything, you get sued. It is a Catch-22 situation.

This article says:

On first sight, these decisions seem balanced and sensible. But their unintended consequence was to help create the world Gerald Grant described in his 1988 book, ''The World We Created at Hamilton High.'' Assemblies often degenerated into catcalls and semiobscene behavior while teachers watched silently.

Mr. Grant writes, ''Trash littered the hallway outside the cafeteria, but it was a rare teacher who suggested a student pick up a milk carton he or she had thrown on the floor.''

One teacher who had failed a boy for plagiarizing a paper had to defend herself repeatedly before a supervisor after being harassed by daily phone calls from the student's parents and the lawyer they had hired on their son's behalf.

This is different from the place I went to school. There was no ''chill'' on those teachers. If something this egregious was going on, there was somebody who was going to do something about it. I know I am better off for it and so are all my classmates. This is not the kind of environment—we are talking reform in education—you want going on in schools.

Gratefully, it doesn't go on in all schools. But there is a teacher or principal or administrator in every school who has had it register: I am at legal risk here, even if I'm just doing my job. Everybody knows they are at legal risk if they engage in some wanton behavior that is obstructive or damaging. They cannot tell a student to pick up trash off the floor or do something about cheating going on in a classroom without getting sued. The mere threat of a lawsuit is often enough to have a chilling effect on teachers and administrators. Educators are understandably weary of students backed by litigious parents, not to mention the numerous rights manuals with titles like ''Up Against The Law,'' ''A High School Student's Bill of Rights,'' and ''Ask Sybil Liberty''—that is S-y-b-i-l Liberty.

These guidebooks enumerate for already disaffected kids, all the impermissible things teachers are going to try to make them do.

That is actually published literature out there, that somebody who is disaffected for some reason or other can seize onto to protect themselves from the environment of a stable school.

You do not have to answer a school official, if he questions you.

This is the advice from all these great documents I have just enumerated.

A teacher can't make you do anything that violates your conscience.

You know, like the other fellow a little bit ago who was asked to go to the vice principal's office.

If you don't like the way the school makes you dress you can go to the court.

You can demand to see your school records.

In another case, a high school senior in New York State distributed articles urging students to urinate in the hallways, scrawl graffiti on the walls, and riot when the police arrived.

In 1997 the school district suspended the boy but only after the legal case had dragged on for 2 years, including an appeal to the State's highest court.

Rights-empowered students are not merely a discipline problem; they have also helped dumb down the curriculum. Mr. Grant found that as administrators and teachers became fearful of restless, back-talking adolescents, they resorted to keeping classes amiable and unthreatening; in other words, unchallenging. All but a handful of charismatic teachers studiously avoided giving low grades, demanding homework, or administering tests.

We all came down here last week. We preached. We had different views about what we ought to do.

We know there is something badly wrong in K–12 today. We know it. Everybody knows it. The data is just beyond description—the number of students who cannot read, who do not have quality math skills.

With this activity going on, it is going to be pretty hard, no matter what we do, to get things reversed. We want quality teachers. We want to recruit quality teachers. How many Senators have come down here talking about wanting a quality teacher? I think just about everybody. How are we going to get a quality teacher with this stuff going on where they work?

Over the 5-year period, just 5 years, from 1993 to 1997, teachers were the victims of 1,771,000 nonfatal crimes at school, including 1,114,000 thefts, and 657,000 violent crimes. On the average this would be about 350,000-plus crimes per year.

Madam President, I made my point. I want to give the other side some time. For the moment, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KENNEDY. Madam President, we have the Gregg-Lott amendment before us. The Senator has spoken about the liability provisions that have been included. There are four other provisions that are included in the amendment.

At the appropriate time, I am going to urge the Senate to accept the Gregg amendment.

It seems to me the case ought to be made within the States, since the States have the power to take action on the matter discussed here during the course of this afternoon. The liability provision the Senator has mentioned would say if the States have weaker provisions, then these standards would stand. If they have stronger standards in order to deal with the problems of protecting those who are involved in education, than those would stand.

A number of States have taken it. It always seemed we were focused on what was going to happen in the classroom. If the States wanted to take that action, they should take it. A number of them have. The Senator has offered an amendment which includes these provisions. We are going to recommend they move ahead and they be accepted.

There were other provisions that were included in the Gregg amendment. It makes some small adjustments to what they call the TOPS Program by requiring every local district to take advantage of what the TOPS Program would be. They change the requirements to say that every local district has to do it, instead of just failing ones. I think that is an improvement.

It adds a part of our Democratic teacher quality accountability provision, so after 3 years, if the local district is not improving, the district cannot get the fourth and fifth year funds. We do that plus provide additional kinds of protections. Theirs is a modest change, but a useful one.

As I said, it provides teacher liability, which is acceptable. Then, as I understand it—I read it—there is, in addition, a small pot of money for financial incentives for certifications of teachers. That is not objectionable. It is a very modest program. It might provide some value for teachers.

But I want to come back to the underlying themes of where we are in this legislation. The amendment itself can be easily wiped out by the Governors of the States; the teacher quality program is blockgranted under Straight A's in S. 2.

So in effect, if the Governor wanted to block grant the whole TOPS Program—their basis for recruitment, mentoring, and upgrading skills for teachers in classrooms, which is their teacher education program, they could do it. It disappears. The teacher quality program can be block granted in the 50-State block grant and the 15-State block grant.

So we are effectively eliminating—or under the Republican program we are giving the Governor, at his own whim, the ability to eliminate all the teacher enhancement programs.

We are not there. Democrats are not there. We believe in having a strong emphasis in our program, a $2 billion program, that recognizes high quality recruitment, mentoring, and professional development.

Just on page 630, there is the treatment of the eligible programs, those which can be block granted. Here we have subparts 1, 2, and 3 of part (A) of title II, that is teacher empowerment. That is true on page 656, which is the 15-State block grant.

Why do we have this debate on a Monday afternoon? We say OK, we will accept it. If we are going to eventually pass S. 2, it will not be in effect in any event. So let's get on to other issues.

This is what has bothered many of us during the course of this whole debate. There is this fundamental commitment of our Republican friends to block grant these programs and issue a blank check for these programs. But, on the other hand, they say that they are really serious about these programs.

How can we accept the fact that they are serious about putting a well-qualified teacher in every classroom when they give an opportunity to the Governors to wipe out that entire program? We do not do that. We say it is essential, as part of the program to which we are committed, that you are going to have an effective program in recruiting and also in professional development.

Let's take another look at page 632 under the block grant program. We call it the blank check—block grant program. On page 632 it says:

(d) Uses of funds under agreement.—Funds made available to a State under this part shall be used for educational purposes . . .

Educational purposes. Do my colleagues know what qualifies for educational purposes? State administrators and their offices. That qualifies for State educational purposes.

We have heard a great deal of rhetoric about how they want to get the money where it ought to be, with needy students, and, under their own definitions, they say it can be used for any educational purpose. It can be used by local administrators for their needs, it can be used for sports facilities, it can be used for band uniforms, because States spend their educational money for those purposes.

What the Republicans say is that they can use the money we are going to provide to them on whatever the States want to use it. The States use it for band uniforms. They use it for administrative funds. They use it for State departments of education. Not our program, but theirs does.

On the one hand, we have an amendment to the TOPS Program that effectively can be wiped out by the Governors and the block grant, and then we look at how they define what are educational purposes under this legislation. They create a loophole for the Governors to drive a truck through. The Governors will make those decisions, not the local educators. It is not going to be the parents. It is not going to be the local school boards. It is the Governors.

One asks: Why, Senator, is it the Governors? Because the Governors are the only ones who, at the end of 5 years, are held accountable. They are the ones held accountable. All they need is to have substantial compliance, and then they can reapply for 5 more years. If this goes on—and I do not believe it will because I do not think they are going to get the results under this program.

I want to take a few minutes of the Senate's time to come back to why we feel so strongly about targeting these programs. I am going to speak about the importance of recruitment and professional development and the importance of mentoring.

As I have said at other times during this debate, we are committed to having a well-qualified teacher in every classroom in this country by the time this legislation has expired.

What is happening at the present time? This is the most recent report from 1999, using statistics from 1994. We see that about two-thirds of individuals who went into teaching had a regular or advanced license. ''No license,'' ''substandard license,'' or ''probationary license'' are terms used by the States to describe those who have not met certification. They use them interchangeably for the most part. Basically, a third have not met the rigorous standards. We are setting rigorous standards to make sure we have good teachers.

Let's see what is happening. This legislation was developed to meet the challenges of the neediest students in the country. We know approximately 25 percent of the teachers do not have competency in the subject matter or in training skills. Let's see where those teachers are going and what students they are teaching.

Let's look at ''by income.'' Where are these unqualified teachers teaching? 4.4 percent are in low-income communities, and 17.6 percent are in communities with more than 50 percent poverty. As this chart shows, they are not teaching in the wealthy suburbs of this country. They are not teaching where there are middle-income and high-income families in this country. They are teaching basically the lower-income students in this country. This is the very group on which this program and the ESEA is supposed to focus. That is what this whole program is about. That is why in 1965 we had a national concern about the poorest of the poor children in our country, and we decided to focus attention on their needs.

Now, when we are talking about one aspect of education, and that is the quality of our teachers, we are finding in excess of 17 percent are teaching low-income students. If we take this by race, this column shows in schools with 1 to 10 percent minority students, 3.2 percent of these unqualified teachers are teaching in those areas which have the wealthier schools. Again, 17 percent are teaching in schools with a higher percentage of minority students.

This clearly indicates that if we are going to provide the funds, let's try to make some difference. When we give it to the Governors—the Governors are the ones who are giving these numbers to us now. They are the ones responsible for this. They have 93 cents out of every dollar. We are saying that we want to have better qualified teachers.

Let's look at this next chart. This is another way of looking at the teachers in this country. This is the better prepared and the poorly prepared. This is alternative certification program, B.A., and summer training. Designated in red, of those who enter training, 80 percent went into teaching, and about a third remained after 3 years.

Seventy percent went into teaching with a 4-year program, B.A., and a major in a subject field or in education. They are better trained, 70 percent; 53 percent remain after 3 years.

The 5-year program: They get a B.A. and a major in a subject and master's in education. Of the 90 percent who went in after 3 years, 84 percent stayed. What does this say? If we develop the teachers professionally in their competency and skills and additional certification, they will remain in teaching.

And they will make a difference to the underserved in our communities. That is what these charts are all about. This is another feature, the mentoring.

The three provisions are professional development, recruitment, and mentoring. When you have mentors for new teachers, they stay in the profession. This chart shows the percentage of teachers who leave the profession after the first 3 years without mentoring, which is 23 percent; but with mentors, it is 7 percent. Teachers will stay in teaching when they have mentors. Those teachers who have better opportunities for continuing their education will remain in teaching.

We know how to help retain teachers. We can ask ourselves: What does all this mean in terms of academic achievement? This is from the Teacher Quality and Student Achievement, of December 1999:

> Increasingly, the States that repeatedly lead the Nation in mathematics and reading achievement have among the Nation's most highly qualified teachers and have made the longstanding investment in the quality of teaching. Top scoring States—Minnesota, North Dakota, and Iowa; recently joined by Wisconsin, Maine, and Montana—all have rigorous standards for teaching that include requiring the extensive study of education plus a major in the field to be taught. Case studies of States that undertook the most comprehensive teaching policy initiatives during the 1980s, especially Connecticut, North Carolina, and other States, such as Arkansas, Kentucky, and West Virginia, that pursued comprehensive reform initiatives in which teacher quality figured prominently showed evidence of steep gains in student performance.

We are not doing this as an academic exercise. We are trying to say what works for children. What is happening now can make a difference in terms of children:

> There have been steep gains in student performance from the early to mid-1990s for those States that have given a high priority to recruitment, mentoring, and professional development.

Listen to this. The study continues:

> By contrast, States, such as Georgia and South Carolina, where reform initiatives across a comparable period focused on curriculum and testing, but where they invested less in teacher learning, showed less success in raising student achievement within this timeframe.

Can we not learn, in terms of using scarce resources, what works and what does not work? This is only one aspect. This is one aspect of our effort here on the floor of the Senate.

We know what works, based upon the kinds of reports and evaluations that have been done.

Here is the study: ''What Matters Most: Teaching for America's Future, report of the National Commission on Teaching & America's Future. This was done by Republicans and Democrats alike. What do they point out in this area? They say:

> Some problems, however, are national in scope and require special attention: There is no coordinated system for helping colleges decide how many teachers in which fields should be prepared or where they will be needed. Neither is there regular support of the kind long provided in medicine to recruit teachers for high-need fields and locations. Critical areas like mathematics and science have long had shortages of qualified teachers that were only temporarily solved by federal recruitment incentives during the post-Sputnik years. Currently, more than 40% of math teachers and 40% of science teachers are not fully qualified for their assignments.

Since the successful recruitment programs of the 1970s ended (Teacher Corps), only a few States have created support in the form of scholarships or loans to prepare teachers for high-need areas and fields. In addition, investing once again in the targeted recruitment and preparation of teachers for high-need fields and location is a national need.

That is just with regard to the recruitment. They say it is a national need, a national responsibility.

On the issue of mentoring:

> The weight of accumulated evidence clearly shows that traditional sink-or-swim induction contributes to high attrition and to lower levels of teacher effectiveness.

That is just what the chart showed.

Further:

> The kinds of supervised internships or residencies regularly provided for new entrants in other professions—architects, psychologists, nurses, doctors, engineers—are rare in teaching, but they have proven to be quite effective where they do exist. Beginning teachers who receive mentoring focus on student learning much sooner; they become more effective as teachers because they are learning from guided practice rather than trial-and-error; and they leave teaching at much lower rates.

Then it continues:

> Although some states have created programs for new teacher induction, few have maintained the commitment required. With a few exceptions, initiatives during the 1980s focused on evaluation and failed to fund mentoring. Others provided mentoring that reached only a few eligible teachers or withered as funds evaporated. Again, the problem is not that we don't know how to support beginning teachers; it is that we have not yet developed the commitment to do so routinely.

This isn't only Democrats who are saying this. This is the most comprehensive report on how to get high-quality teachers, mentoring programs, professional development, and what it means in terms of academic achievement. That is what we stand for.

Further, on the issues of professional development, let me mention this:

> (Pg. 41) Most U.S. teachers have almost no regular time to consult together or learn about new teaching strategies, unlike their peers in many European and Asian countries.

Remember all the debate we heard last week about: Look what is happening in these European countries. Look what is happening there. One of the things they are doing in many of the European countries, where teachers have substantial time to plan and study with one another—

> In Germany, Japan, and China, for example, teachers spend between 15 and 20 hours per week working with colleagues on developing curriculum, counseling students, and pursuing their own learning. . . .
> The result is a rich environment for continuous learning about teaching and the needs of students.
> Instead of these ongoing learning opportunities, U.S. teachers get a few brief workshops offering packaged prescriptions from outside consultants on ''in-service days'' that contribute little to deepening their subject knowledge or teaching skills.

We challenge our Republican colleagues to point out in their bill where they are going to do these kinds of things and meet these kinds of challenges that have been outlined for our students. We ask them: Where is it? It is nonexistent. It just isn't there. I will show you why it isn't there.

Let us compare the various provisions under our amendment to S. 2.

This is where we say: Well, let's see where your program is. Let's take the issue of professional development and mentoring.

The allocation of funds goes to States by formula based on 60 percent poverty and 40 percent population. At the State level, funds go to districts by formula based on 80 percent poverty and 20 percent population. Funds are targeted and focused on the neediest areas. We guarantee funds for these two purposes.

In terms of recruitment, we provide that 30 percent of the State's allocation shall be used by the State agency to provide grants to recruitment partnerships under the sections that we have for recruitment activities. We guarantee funds in terms of the recruitment.

Pass this bill, and it is $2 billion for high quality professional development, mentoring, and recruitment. We are guaranteeing the funds for these activities. We spell it out in the bill.

They haven't done it yet in their bill. And they can't do it because it is just not there.

When it comes to the professional development, under the basic Republican bill, they say it doesn't guarantee substantial funds for professional development. They say a portion of the funds can be used. This could be as little as one dollar. It is an allowable use for professional development. It is an allowable use in terms of mentoring. It is an allowable use in terms of recruitment. There is no guarantee of any funds for these two activities. Also, there are no assurances to parents that they are going to have qualified teachers in the classroom.

On our side, we say if you are going to end up on the back end of this legislation with results, you have to invest in quality in the front end. You have to set criteria at the beginning of this legislation about what you are going to do in these particular areas.

That is what we have done because that is what is overwhelmingly called for.

Our amendment also guarantees that teachers are going to be prepared to teach children with disabilities along with other students with special needs. We have accountability not only at the State level in terms of teachers but also for every class at the local level.

Our amendment says if you do not make progress in student achievement after 3 years, you cannot continue in terms of the funds.

There is a dramatic contrast in the two different proposals on issues which are so incredibly important in terms of the children of this country.

We have tried in other areas as well: Afterschool programs, construction programs, accountability programs, and parental involvement.

Also, we have tried to find out the importance of those particular programs and what their impact has been on children to advance their academic achievement, accomplishment, enhance their sense of self-confidence, and advance their interests in learning. These are all extremely important. We have tried to include those various programs in the legislation we have advanced. We believe this is a much more valuable way of proceeding than just giving a blank check to the Governors.

How can we in good conscience vote for legislation that is going to send the money back to the States when the States are absolutely failing to do their job today?

We hear: Well, we want something different. We want something that is new. We want something revolutionary. We want something that will sound like it is something completely different from the past.

We are saying we have tried revenue sharing and block grants in the past. That is what we had from 1956 to 1969, and it didn't work. The studies and statistics demonstrate that it didn't work. But this is a very different approach. We didn't have the technology concepts and legislation 6 or 10 years ago. We have a new effort in the way we are going to use that technology, ways that will reduce the division in terms of the digital divide. Years ago, we didn't understand the importance of well-qualified teachers and the relationship between well-qualified teachers and the academic achievement of students. But, we have the statistics, the information, and the studies now, and we want to do something to make a difference.

We didn't really have afterschool programs years ago, because quite frankly, children went home, and more often than not, one of their parents was home working with the child and helping and assisting the child with their homework. That is entirely different today. We didn't know the importance of trying to develop afterschool programs. When you look at the demand for those afterschool programs in communities across the country, we know the importance and significance of giving help and assistance to those children with afterschool programs, which means they are going to continue to make progress academically in these afterschool programs. That is enormously important.

These are matters which are enormously important. They are tried and tested. They are different from where we were before. But there is compelling evidence that these kinds of efforts result in enhanced academic achievement and accomplishment.

The alternative just baffles me. I have been listening and have been on the floor for just about the whole time through: Monday of last week and during the brief time on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday. We continue to hear that we are having a lot of trouble with children in underserved and disadvantaged areas, and what we have tried in the past doesn't work. Therefore, we have to try something else. What is ''something else''? What is ''something new''? Block grants. They call that something new? That is an old word for revenue sharing. That has been a discarded and discredited program. If the Governors want to do all these things, there is no reason they cannot do them.

Debating merit pay. They said let's have merit pay. Well, the Governors can do that if they want to. If they don't want to, they don't. We are waiting to hear from any State that wants to develop the merit pay program for individual teachers rather than doing it on a schoolwide basis, which, as Governor Riley learned, is the way to go. Governors can go ahead and do it.

As we spelled out last week, different Governors made statements that they were committed to trying to do something about underserved schools. They made those commitments over a long period of time. There are notable exceptions, and I mentioned those States earlier today. They are Republican and Democrat Governors.

In the Governors' Association report of 1986, ''Time for Results,'' the task force was chaired by Governors Alexander, Riley, Clinton, and Keene. Intervene in low-performing schools and school districts and take over or close down academically bankrupt school districts—they urged the Governor to do that in 1986.

By 1997, there were nine States that moved ahead. In 1998, the support for the State focused on schools reiterating a position first taken in 1988 by the National Governors Policy. They say States should have the responsibility for enforcing accountability, including establishing clear penalties in cases of sustained failure to improve student performance. By the year 2000, we will have 20 States providing assistance to low-performing schools.

Some have not done it. Some Governors have not shaped up. Some have, and those Governors ought to be commended.

If we go at this rate from 1986 to the year 2000, from 9 States to 20, it will take 50 more years to get these programs active in the local community. Who wants to wait?

If you were able to demonstrate you had 10 States out of 50 with Governors who had turned that around, you would have some legitimacy on the floor of the Senate in desiring to try it in the other 40. But we haven't seen it.

Our Republican friends want to give them another chance to take all of this money and use it in the capitals of their States, use it for educational purposes which include bureaucracies, and permit them to use it for a wide range of different activities outside of the needs of underserved children. It is absolutely wrong.

I will discuss another offensive part of this legislation. That is the provision that eliminates our national commitment to help and assist the three categories of children which are the most vulnerable in our society: The homeless, migrant children, and immigrant children.

The immigrant children come from families impacted by federal immigration law and will eventually be eligible to become American citizens. Nonetheless, they have some very special needs. By and large, the States have never paid any attention to them.

We have the homeless children. As recently as 1987, the Center for Law and Education sent out a questionnaire regarding the State practices and policies for homeless students to the chief State officials in the 50 States and the District of Columbia. The majority of the respondents had no statewide data on the number of homeless children in their jurisdictions or whether those children were able to obtain an education. The majority of States had no uniform plan for ensuring homeless students receive an education.

I asked over the weekend, outside of Federal funds, what are the States doing for homeless children. We have been unable to get any indication from any State. Madam President, there were 625,000 homeless children in 1997 and 1998, and only 231,000 of those children were getting some additional help and assistance for educational services.

I hope our friends on the other side will tell us the things States are doing for homeless kids at the present time. I think we will wait a long time. They have not done it in the past, and they are not doing it today. That is true with regard to the migrant children, 718,000 children. They live in poverty, and only 40 percent have completed eighth grade. The instance of sickness among these children—not only physical, but also in terms of mental needs—is overwhelming.

We are saying we will not continue that program as we know it. We are going to send the money targeted for that program back to the States. The reason we created the program is because States were not doing anything for those students.

We have had 4 days of debate on this bill. I hope the other side will tell us—if not tonight, then tomorrow—what all the States are doing with regard to homeless children. We are not taking care of these children in the way we should, even with the funds being provided under the Elementary and Secondary Education Act. We are still reaching perhaps half of those children who need help and assistance. Is any person going to tell us, Senator, when we send these funds back to the States, the Governor will look out after the homeless children, the migrant children, and the immigrant children? Can any person demonstrate any history where the States have been willing to do it?

That is our challenge. We want to hear it. We have not been able to find that. To block grant all of these funds, send them back to the States, and say they will be able to deal with them, rather than at least have coordinated programs that help track the children as they move down from Florida, through Georgia, through the Carolinas, some all the way into New England and the west coast—they have worked with different communities knowing when the crops change—try to coordinate this.

There has been a positive response from some of the States to work in a coordinated way. We have had some leadership from the Department of Education. Why are going to leave that out? That does not make sense.

I hope when the time comes, there will be an acceptance of the Gregg amendment and then we will look forward to having a good discussion on some of the other matters as well.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Utah is recognized.

Mr. HATCH. Madam President, I have really enjoyed listening to my colleague from Massachusetts. He seems to think the only answer to education, public education in this country, happens to be the Federal Government. Of course, those of us who really have watched it and observed it over all these years realize that is not the answer.

The Federal Government spent, over the last 30 years, I guess, $120 billion. And in almost every category in title I, poor kids do a lot worse. We had over 700 Federal programs—over 700—300 of them just in the Department of Education alone. Yet we still have the same age old arguments that the Federal Government is the last answer to everything and really parents and families just don't know what to do for their kids.

I know there is a legitimate feeling on the part of those on the left that that is true, but there is more than a legitimate feeling on the part of us on the right who know that that is not true and literally the Federal Government is not the last answer. My good friends talks about block grants just being another name for revenue sharing—no, block grants are a way of letting the State and local people take care of their educational processes and to find out how and then to use the money in the best interests of the State and local educational processes. It is a pretty pivotal, basic Federalist principle, it seems to me.

I rise today to talk about the education bill pending before the Senate today. S. 2, the Educational Opportunities Act, if enacted would make a number of improvements to education. This bill that is on the floor would really help education. S. 2 allows up to 15 states to shake off federal restrictions in exchange for increased accountability. It allows eligible parents to choose the provider of Title I services for their children.

This bill also gives parents the right to move their children out of schools that are failing them.

Why would we not want to do this? why would we not want to allow parents more control over the education of their children? I am sincerely baffled as to why this bill has attracted such opposition—I cannot believe that my colleagues are more interested in protecting bureaucracy instead of supporting teachers and students. Why should my colleagues be more concerned with filling out forms than in getting needed funds into classrooms?

I commend the Chairman and the hard working members of the HELP Committee. This is one of the most difficult committees to chair and to work on. I should know. I think the committee has put together a commonsense piece of legislation that, while not as sweeping as some would prefer, moves us along in the right direction. I would like the opportunity to vote for this bill.

I listened with interest to the comments of my fellow Utahn, Senator BENNETT last week. I thought he made some excellent points, especially about the voluntary nature of some of more controversial elements of the bill. These really are very modest reforms, and this Congress and this President should move ahead with them.

It may come as a shock to some here in the Emerald City, but the Federal Government did not invent the public schools. Education in our country is never going to get better if we do not stop spinning our wheels here in Washington and start supporting the innovative reforms being implemented at state and local levels.

There is a role for the Federal Government, but it is a supportive one. And, many of those supportive programs are being reauthorized in this bill.

Today, however, I would like to speak about my amendment to the Title I funding formula for economically and educationally disadvantaged authorized in the Elementary and Secondary Education Act—ESEA.

Before I get into that, though, I would like to note the Federal Government pays about 7 percent of the cost of education. Yet it requires 50 percent of the paperwork. That is the equivalent of 267,500 full-time teachers. We could go a long way towards solving some of the teacher problems in this country if we would get off the kick that the Federal Government is the last resort to everything. I think the Federal Government muddles in education where it should not. And many of the things it has done have not been fruitful or beneficial, even though I admit that the Federal Government can have a supportive role, if it is truly supportive and not destructive.

My amendment would make the Education Finance Incentive Grant Program, EFIG, a permanent statutory factor in the allocation of resources in the Title I formula. The EFIG program is currently authorized as a separate part of the Title I formula, which has never been funded. I believe that including it as a permanent factor in the Title I formula has merit. The Education Finance Incentive Grant Program distributes resources to states based on two important factors: effort and equity.

The effort factor measures a State's own fiscal commitment to education. The equity factor is determined by a state's commitment to equitably distributing resources among its school districts. Unlike demographic factors, both effort and equity can be controlled to a substantial degree by states as a matter of policy.

The equity factor is a crucial element of the EFIG program. It measures the ''coefficient of variation'' of funding among a state's school district; i.e., the equity factor measures how well a state endeavors to even out education assistance between districts which have high property tax revenues and those which do not.

Let me reiterate my support and appreciation for the hard work done by the HELP Committee on this bill, which I support. But, I wish the Committee had looked a little harder at the Title I formula. S. 2, as reported, does not change the fundamental problem of using State-per-pupil-expenditure as a proxy for determining a state's financial commitment to education.

What this expenditure proxy does is place a higher value on a child who lives in a rich State than it places on a child from a poor state, which cannot spend a large amount. If a State can afford to spend more money per-pupil, it gets more money from the Federal Government. If a State has less capacity and cannot spend as much per-pupil, it gets less money under Title I. This seems backwards to me.

Second, use of per-pupil spending as the sole proxy for a State's commitment to education ignores other important factors—such as tax effort. Thus ''effort'' is also a component of the EFIG formula, which my amendment would finally incorporate into the Title I formula.

In my home State of Utah, education consistently ranks as one of the highest priorities for Utahns. During this year's session of the Utah legislature, Utah reaffirmed its commitment to improving education, reducing class size, and increasing salaries for teachers.

Utah takes its commitment to education funding very seriously. During the 1995–96 school year, education expenditures in Utah amounted to $92 per $1000 of personal income. The national average was $62 per $1000. In other words, Utah's education expenditure relative to total personal income is 50 percent more than the national average. It is the third highest in the nation.

In terms of education expenditures as a percent of total direct State and local government expenditures, Utah ranks 2nd in the Nation. Utah's expenditure for education was 41.5 percent of the total amount spent for government. The national average is 33.5 percent.

No one can tell me that Utahns are not serious about funding education. And these efforts have garnered results. Utah's scores on ACT tests are equal to or better than the National average in English, math, reading and science. Utah ranks 1st in the nation in Advanced Placement tests taken and passed.

Still, even with these efforts, Utah remains 1st in the Nation in terms of class size and last in per-pupil expenditure. This is due to Utah's unique demographic. Utah families are, on average, larger than any other state. Utah has the highest birth rate in the Nation.

But I am realist. While I would like to completely eliminate per-pupil expenditure from the Title I formula, I understand that this is not going to happen.

However, I do believe it is appropriate and very sound policy to include in the Title I formula a small measure of diversity, that is, other ways of measuring a state's commitment to education—namely, effort and equity.

Including the EFIG program as a permanent factor in the allocation of Title I makes sense from this perspective.

Equity in education financing is receiving considerable attention both in the media and in the courts. States are being compelled by the courts to equalize resources. Most experts agree that the courts are tending towards equalization. To the extent reluctant states are having to equalize education funding to comply with court decisions, my amendment provides these States with some measure of relief because greater equity will increase their allocations under Title I. David Goodman in ''Mother Jones'' noted:

> Since 1971, when the California Supreme Court declared in Serrano v. Priest that using property taxes to finance public education was a violation of the state constitution's equal protection clause, all but six states have been sued over educational equity. To date, school financing systems in 19 states have been deemed unconstitutional, and the courts have ordered these states to restructure their systems to improve the quality of education for all.
> The implication is clear: School funding and student performance are believed to be directly and inextricably linked and wide variances in school funding are thought to both promote and maintain inequality of educational opportunity.

Indeed, some States are increasingly compelled to demonstrate that not only are they equalizing resources, but are providing an equal quality of education to all students.

I understand that these initiatives are causing some community concerns. I know that the distinguished Chairman of the HELP committee is all too aware of the controversies associated with the legal ruling in his home State of Vermont. However, the increasing reliance on resolving these issues through the courts and the fact that the courts are tending to favor equalization as a means of mitigating educational disparities lead me to conclude that legally requiring States to equalize resources among districts will continue to be a strategy employed by those concerned about education equity.

I also conclude that it is an appropriate use of federal resources to provide incentives for states to implement equalization programs as well as to assist those implementing court-ordered policies.

Resource equity has been identified as an effective strategy to accelerate education reform, which was the theme of the 2000 education conference sponsored by the Aspen Institute. Included in the rapporteur's summary was the following:

> In the effort to raise the achievement of all American students, an extremely serious barrier is the huge disparities in resources for education across districts and states, It is not unusual for the per-student expenditure to be three times greater in affluent districts than in poorer districts of the same state. Although qualified, effective teachers and principals are key to student achievement—even more so for at-risk students—districts where salaries are low continually lose teachers and principals to districts that are able to pay more.
> . . . Equally important is crafting finance equalization strategies, such as allowing federal funds to go only to those states that demonstrate equitable and adequate state education funding.

A Rand report summarized that,

> A . . . promising strategy would offer federal incentives to states to equalize spending among their own districts. A crude form of incentive would make a state's eligibility for Chapter 1 funds contingent on a certain degree of interdistrict fiscal equality.

The Rand report concludes, however, that

> Potentially the most effective incentive-based approach would build rewards for intrastate equalization into a new program of general-purpose federal education aid to the states. The size of each state's general grant would depend on one of more indicators of school finance equity.''

This amendment that I will offer later in this debate is consistent with the Rand report recommendation.

Let me make it clear that my amendment does not call for equalization among States. In essence, that is what Title I itself is supposed to do—assist States and local education agencies to fund low-income districts and schools. My amendment is not even mandatory on the states. Those states who wish to retain their current within-state distribution plans, assuming the court has not compelled them to change those plans, may do so.

I am not asserting the equalization of resources among school districts is the answer to every education dilemma faced in our county. Indeed, like most reform efforts, the data on its effectiveness are contradictory.

Moreover, I have always been a firm believer that states and school districts must be able to adopt school policies—including school reforms—that work for them. Whether or not we happen to like a particular reform idea here at the national level should not matter. We should not be drawn into the ''reform du jour'' mentality. Just because something is the latest idea flowing from academia doesn't mean it will work for the Granite School District or any of the 41 local districts in my State or any other school district.

Equalization is not a silver bullet, and I am not claiming that it is. It is a very small modification. But, when equalization is combined with other education reform efforts, such as in Texas, there is improvement in education. The following from the National Journal illuminates the success Texas has had when the equalization of resources became the catalyst for other systemic education reforms.

Poor districts received substantially increased funds, but no one in Texas got a lot of money for education, especially compared with states such as New Jersey and Connecticut.

. . . Texas officials say the additional funds were crucial for low-income schools. ''If you went to poor communities that are doing well, they will point to programs they've implemented, issues they've addressed, that they would not have been able to address without the funding that's become available to them in recent years,'' said Joseph Johnson, director of the Collaborative for School Improvement at the Charles A. Dana Center at the University of Texas (Austin) . . . The crucial difference, he maintains, is focus, especially on the ''academic success of every student and making sure resources in those schools are very clearly, deliberately focused on instruction.'' The moral of this story: Money matters—but only if schools make it work for them.

I believe that an equalization factor is consistent with the intent of this Elementary and Secondary Education Act reauthorization to assist students at risk. I believe that the unequal distribution of resources among school districts disproportionately affects poor and minority students. A strong equalization factor will provide an incentive for States to address this.

A report prepared by the Policy Information Center of the Educational Testing Service, titled The State of Inequality, concludes that:

Thus, it can be established with national data that educational resources are unevenly distributed. It is also clear that, on average, students in poorer areas are likely to have fewer educational resources than those in wealthy areas. There are also wide variations in the effectiveness of schooling, after differences in socioeconomic status are considered.

Further studies have also determined that high poverty and minority students have fewer opportunities to take ''critical gatekeeping'' courses in math and the hard sciences, thus preventing access to institutions of higher learning.

A report prepared for the House Committee on Education and Labor, titled, Shortchanging Children: The Impact of Fiscal Inequity on the Education of Students At Risk found that, ''Inequitable systems of school finance inflict disproportionate harm on minority and economically disadvantaged students.''

Additionally, as I have discussed, the EFIG program has been modified to include a poverty factor in the effort portion of this formula.

This continues to be a pressing issue. I was particularly moved by a recent article I read in the Charleston, South Carolina, Post and Courier, that highlights once again, the glaring disparities between what poor children can except from schools and what rich children can expect from school.

I ask unanimous consent that this article be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

LACK OF RESOURCES HAMPERS STUDENTS IN POORER DISTRICTS

(By Sybil Fix)

Every morning, as the sun rises above the fields, students in Marion County School District 3 journey to Centenary to attend Terrells Bay School.

There, they could hope to find what other students in South Carolina have—experienced teachers, a rich array of classes and a chance for a good education. In their part of the world, where 85 percent of the students are on free lunch and few make it to college, that could change lives. But students in Marion 3 will get something less. At Terrells Bay, students learn physics, statistics, anatomy and biology via interactive television because the district can't afford to hire teachers for those subjects.

They study Spanish via television, too, and that is their only foreign language choice.

They have no teacher for math above Algebra II. They have no choir, no performing arts, no visual arts. They have no debate team, no clubs of any kind. Boys can choose only between basketball and football. The school has a successful girls basketball program.

They have a tiny library, with stained ceilings and half empty shelves, and bathrooms barely fit for use.

Principal Al Bradley gives thanks for a nucleus of good teachers he says save the school.

But his is a constant struggle to make do.

''The reality is that given the facilities and the money and the programs, we cannot provide an education that is equal in quality to what they get in Irmo or other schools,'' said Bradley, 36, a soft-spoken man whose office looks like a refurbished cubbyhole.

Outside, stray dogs wander between humble houses and rundown shacks surrounding the red brick, flat-roofed building a stone's throw from the town off S.C. Highway 41. Cows and mowed fields are steps away and continue for miles.

Bradley's two sons attend Terrells Bay.

''There is no way they are getting an equal education here,'' he says, shaking his head. ''It seems to make no sense. How do you explain it?''

In district after district across the state, educators face the constraints of a school system that fixes haves and have-nots in a pattern of inequity.

It is not only that less is spent on educating children who, mostly poor and mostly black, live in poor school districts. It is also that less is spent on addressing the greater educational needs of children in concentrations of poverty in districts with scant local revenues.

Poor districts have less to spend on teachers, materials, building maintenance and capital projects.

Their academic programs lag behind; they have fewer and less-experienced teachers; their schools are old and decrepit; and most often, their performance is lower.

While per pupil expenditure doesn't tell the whole story, few seem to believe that the spending levels in South Carolina's poorest school districts can ensure an adequate education.

''My kids deserve the opportunity to consider Harvard, Yale or Duke just like everyone else,'' said John Kirby, superintendent of the Dillon 3 School District. ''But we are like a poor country family. We have the good morals, we love our children and we want the best for our children, but we can only take them so far and they deserve so much more.''

He shrugs.

''All of us here in South Carolina were invited to the Kentucky Derby, but some of us were given thoroughbreds and some of us were given mules. We might all get to the end . . . but some of us might be cleaning up the track.''

INEQUITY IN THE MAKING

The inequities in South Carolina's school system were cast with the birth of the state's free schools in the early 1800s.

''A lot of the difficulties from the beginning are ones that occurred throughout the South and throughout the United States,'' said Dr. Craig Kridell, curator of the Museum of Education at the University of South Carolina and a professor of history of education.

Efforts were made to place a free school in each county, but in rural areas the schools were too distant for many to attend. Because they were labeled pauper schools, many shunned them. And many of the families they targeted preferred to keep their children at home to work.

The state provided money for free schools, but local need wasn't considered. There were great differences in competence among teachers and among local school commissioners, Kridell said.

''The History of South Carolina Schools,'' published in part by the Department of Education, quotes governors and superintendents throughout the 1800s remarking on the scarcity of efforts made to educate the middle—and poorer—classes, particularly in rural areas.

By the mid-1800s, when it became clear that funding schools was too costly, the state shifted most of the burden to the counties, through local property taxes.

The state did guarantee a minimum amount of state funds per pupil per district, but the funds often were withheld, Kridell said, and local funds were not shared equally between black and white schools.

By 1900, education superintendent John McMahan reported to the Legislature that ''each county supports its own schools with practically no help from the state. Each district has as poor schools as its people will tolerate, and in some districts anything will be tolerated.''

At that time, school attendance was not mandatory, and nearly 75 percent of children never went beyond fifth grade.

In the early 1950s, under Gov. James Byrnes and facing the threat of integration, the state passed its first sales tax to try to equalize conditions among school districts—generating $100 million to build 200 black schools and 70 white schools.

The number of official school districts, some without schools, went from more than 1,700 to 109—now 86—and a new bus system offered transportation to black students for the first time.

But the quality of education was inconsistent, and teacher quality was abysmal, Kridell said.

Between 1940 and 1970, because of the sales tax and increases in federal Title I funding for disadvantaged children, school funds went from $178 million to more than $300 million.

But the gap between tax-poor and tax-rich districts remained.

EFFORTS TO CHANGE

In 1977, under the leadership of Gov. James Edwards, South Carolina passed the Education Finance Act, specifically to address underfunding of schools in rural and black areas.

The law guaranteed a base amount for a minimum education per student, and required that the state allocate a certain portion of funds based on children's needs and the districts' ability to raise local revenues.

The districts with the least property wealth and the highest number of at-risk children were to receive more money.

And they do.

The effort pumped $100 million into the school system over the next five years. In 1983, an audit praised it for bringing more equity to the system.

But a 1989 audit concluded that the money allocated for the minimum education per student wasn't enough. Entire categories of funding—transportation and teacher benefits, for example—were exempt from equity formulas.

The poorest districts had 35 percent of the wealth of the richer districts. To compensate fully for the difference, the state would have had to give an average 39 percent increase in funding to the poorer districts and a 33 percent decrease in funding to the richer districts.

Passage under the leadership of Gov. Dick Riley of the Education Improvement Act in 1984 provided an additional $217 million to the schools, primarily aimed at increasing student performance. The law called for stiffer graduation requirements, teacher evaluations and salary increases, grants for good schools and for gifted and talented students.

But the quality-based act included no equity formula, and through the years it gave much more money to the better-performing, wealthier districts, state data shows.

''While poorer districts receive more total state funds per pupil than wealthier districts, state funding does not fully compensate for wealth disparity,'' the audit concluded. ''There is less assurance that students from poor districts are receiving comparable educational programs to those in wealthy districts.''

FUNDING NOW

The local ability to raise taxes still drives education funding, and it is the prime source of inequity.

Operating expenditures per pupil vary from $8,062 to $4,769 across the state. The amount per district is mostly determined by the local tax rate plus the state allocation.

On average, the state pays about 52 percent of the cost per district and the federal government about 8 percent. The districts are expected to come up with the rest, said John Cooley, the Department of Education's director of budget in the Office of Governmental Affairs.

The problem is that many districts can't raise the remaining 40 percent, and the state doesn't make up the difference.

About 55 percent of all state school funding—or about $1.3 billion—is distributed according to some consideration of equity, Cooley said.

But here, as in most states, said Georgia State University school finance expert Ross Rubenstein, there is no consideration of simple poverty.

Education improvement money, which accounts for about a fourth of all state education funding, is distributed without any consideration of a district's finances.

In addition, revenue-hungry districts often have to compete with wealthy districts to receive state grants for necessities such as computers and software and computer training for teachers. While priority sometimes is given to poorer districts, wealthy districts often receive the same amount.

Funds raised locally, meanwhile, are vastly different.

Districts with high assessed property values can collect more money with low tax rates—and spend more money on schools—than can school districts with low assessed property values.

The value of the mill—the unit of taxation—ranges from less than $10,000 in Clarendon 3 and Marion 3 and 4 to $1 million in larger counties such as Greenville and Charleston. Charleston has a legislatively imposed cap on the amount of tax dollars that can be raised for schools.

Over the years, development in the wealthier districts has brought in higher tax revenue than equity funding formulas have been able to compensate for, Cooley said.

State data show that, over the past 10 years, the increase in total revenue per student for the poorer districts is barely comparable to and in some cases lower than the increases in revenue per student for the richer districts.

For example, Spartanburg 7 school district has seen a $3,082 per pupil revenue increase since 1988, while the districts in Dillon, Marion and Clarendon counties have seen increases ranging from $2,000 to $2,500.

While Lee County school district receives $3,469 more per pupil from the state than the York 2 school district, York 2 still receives more in local taxes per pupil—$4,426. In total per pupil revenue, York 2 comes out ahead by $1,291.

What difference can $1,291 make per pupil?

In Lee, that amounts to $4.5 million that the district could spend on everything from music and art rooms to science labs and lighting, said superintendent Bill Townes.

''Four and a half million would not address all of our needs in this district, but it would go a long way,'' he said.

TEACHER SAINTS

In the evening, when the sun sets below the fields of Orangeburg County, teachers at Elloree Elementary School wrap up classroom activities and pack up their cars to take their students home.

Were it not for the teachers, the students couldn't stay at school to play, to work on reading, to get extra attention.

In countless poor schools around the state, from Memminger Elementary School in downtown Charleston to Anderson Primary School in Kingstree, teachers spend an inordinate amount of their time and money to make up for what school systems don't fund and what home lives don't offer.

''You have to put forth a lot of effort to provide experiences that they would otherwise not get,'' said Debora Brunson, principal of Elloree Elementary School, which sits on a sun-beaten field at the northeasternmost corner of Orangeburg County.

Teachers in poorer districts have double duty, said Holly Hill-Roberts High School Principal Patricia Lott.

''You are supposed to teach them what you are supposed to teach them at that particular time of their lives, and make up for what they are not bringing with them when they come to you.''

Schools in wealthy areas can rely on fees, fundraisers and donations.

In poor districts, stories abound of teachers who spend their earnings to buy children materials, clothes, food.

Yet teachers in those districts are paid much less than those who teach less needy populations of students.

''You find schools with the greatest needs, children with the greatest needs and staff with the greatest needs all together,'' Brunson said. ''What does a poor school do?''

Dillon 3 spends 69 percent of what is spent in Spartanburg 7 on instruction per student—$2,779 to $4,029.

The beginning teacher there makes $21,925. Teachers in Horry County make $10,000 a year more because local money covers hiring bonuses, Kirby said.

This year, for the first time, Kirby can offer an $1,000 incentive to teachers with perfect attendance. But the average contracted salary for longtime teachers there remains at $30,858, compared to $36,816 in Lexington 5. Marion 3 ranks last with $27,848.

The Dillon 3 district has cut all teacher aides except for special education and kindergarten. So teachers are even more burdened.

If, under those circumstances, teachers are actually good at what they do, said University of New Hampshire sociology professor Cynthia Duncan, ''they are missionaries. We should not require people who teach in bad circumstances to be saints.''

Attracting experienced teachers to poor and poor-performing rural areas is nearly impossible. Marion 3 and other such districts become training grounds for young, inexperienced teachers who commute long distances.

Who wants to live there, asks Everett Dean, superintendent of Marion 3, opening his palms to the countryside outside his window.

''People with master's degrees from prestigious universities have the luxury of going to teach at really good schools, and the kids who most need them are least likely to have high quality teachers,'' said urban education professor Gloria Ladson-Billings of the University of Wisconsin.

Ladson-Billings said children in poor schools are five times as likely to have teachers who are not certified in math and science—subjects that might help them break free from lives of low expectations.

Terrells Bay School, which has abysmal student performance, is allowed to use uncertified teachers because it is considered a critical needs school that can't attract teachers.

ACADEMIC PROGRAMS

In Marion 3, students who want to take anatomy sit in a small room cramped with old equipment and stare at a television screen.

There are simply not enough interested students to justify offering certain courses, says Dean. Even if they had the students, the district doesn't pay enough to attract teachers for advanced courses.

Students who most need interactive classroom work get distance learning. And students who wouldn't otherwise be exposed to foreign cultures are offered only Spanish while students in Lexington and Spartanburg, in addition to French and Spanish, can study Japanese.

Dillon 3 has only two advanced placement courses. There is no dance, no theater, no performing choir.

''We have great singers and talented students here,'' Kirby said. ''But I can't provide an environment where they can use their skills.''

While his students perform at average level, ''I feel like we are still handicapping them. The differences show up in the real world. They simply don't have the same opportunities,'' Kirby said.

At nearby Rains-Centenary Elementary School in Marion 3, there is no performing arts program, no arts or music program, said Principal Linda Bell.

''We don't have enough books. We are nowhere near where we need to be,'' she said.

Patty Schaffer, principal of North Charleston's Ron McNair Elementary School, another school with a high ratio of students living in poverty, points out inequities in the availability of arts and music teachers.

Her school has a music teacher and an arts teacher only two days a week.

''It is a huge equity issue,'' she said. ''We know that this population should have more exposure to art and music and it shows on the tests, but we give more art and music to children who have piano lessons at home. We need to look at what children already have, and that should drive the horse as to what we give them.''

Because of the inequities in the system, those who have to rely on schools for all their learning are at a huge disadvantage, said University of Wisconsin literacy scholar James Paul Gee.

''Upper middle class families give their children tremendous social and cultural and educational capital outside of school, and many families are able to buy more and more outside of school,'' he said.

THE SOCIAL WORK

In a small room at Latta Middle School, six profoundly mentally disabled students amble around, one practicing walking steps, another wandering in circles, another sitting idly.

Down the hallway, between the middle school and the high school, there are four classes of learning disabled children.

Kirby calls it a disproportionate number of special needs children—nearly 15 percent of his school population.

''Our health problems are off the chart,'' Kirby said. School districts with high concentrations of poverty and high births to teens face the fallout of poor health services, prenatal care and nutrition.

While they receive some federal and state funding for special education, often it's not enough.

''I have some students that cost me $20,000 a year to educate,'' Kirby said.

''When you are in a poor small rural district, often you are the richest agency,'' he said. ''They see us as the hub for services and they bring their needs to us.''

To care for them, the Latta school system has one social worker per school and two shared mental health counselors. Other schools have comparable numbers of people but fewer students in need.

Ron McNair has 13 mentally disabled students and a full class of emotionally disabled ones. Because of low pay, the school is unable to attract a teacher for them. So they are taught by non-certified substitutes with no training.

''To put students who a regular teacher cannot handle in a class with a non-certified teacher . . . it is a real disservice to the child,'' Schaffer said.

North Charleston Elementary School has a comparable number of students in special programs, said Principal Bill Hayes.

''Most people have no idea of what we deal with these days. We dispense enough medicine at lunchtime from this school to run a drug store,'' Hayes said.

BUILDINGS

Dean takes a visitor around the Rains-Centenary Elementary School, seeming almost ashamed.

''I could tell you some facilities horror stories,'' he said.

This year his district spent $494 in facilities per student. But the buildings have not been renovated since their construction in the 1930s and the 1950s. The need is much greater than the spending.

''The fact that we are educating our students in an old dilapidated building affects everyone, even the recruitment of teachers,'' said Bradley. ''It's a negative feeling when you walk into a restroom and the commodes are 40 years old.''

For the first time in decades, South Carolina this year begins distribution of $750 million in bonds for school construction and renovation. The money is distributed among districts based on need, on the number of students—with more money going to children with greater educational needs—and on past effort made to upkeep buildings. It also has an equity component, and it appears that poorer districts will receive more than wealthier ones.

But it is unclear if that will make up for the inequities in conditions.

Marion 3 this year spent 71 percent of what was spent on facilities per pupil in York 2. It spent $3 per pupil on capital projects. Terrells Bay spent $70; Latta High, $24.

By contrast, Clover High School in York spent $2,270 per student on capital projects last year.

Clover High has 17 empty classrooms for growth, a state-of-the art library, a new 2,500-seat gym, a new cafeteria with heated outside areas, a security system with 64 cameras, a $7.5 million auditorium, and a lab for every science teacher, said Principal Wayne Flowers.

To attract good teachers, in addition to considerably higher salaries, Clover High offers an early childhood day-care program for employees.

Clover High is in a district that receives high local tax revenues—nearly $5,400 per student a year.

Not so in Dillon 3, with local revenues at $1,037 per pupil.

Latta Middle and Latta High schools share the library, gym and cafeteria. The library triples as a computer lab and a tech prep construction site of sorts, and is cluttered with piles of old books.

The cafeteria is bare, the hallways dismal. The window treatments are yellowing and warped.

''We have a lot of makeshift here,'' Kirby said, showing a visitor an arts lab with tables from the old cafeteria.

STEPCHILDREN

When Dean gathers with other educators to talk about the schools, he sometimes feels like an ugly stepchild.

''You are not sure that people understand that you can't change some of the things that are not providing opportunities for our children.

''Money alone does not solve the problem,'' Dean said, ''but when you can't employ the best teachers because of your location and your low salaries, yes, that is going to impact the quality of the education you can offer.''

Since 40 of the state's school districts filed suit seeking equitable funding, the General Assembly has been trying to be more sensitive to wealth differences, Cooley said.

But South Carolina continues to contend with its history.

''It has not been real important that all children be educated. While it is changing slowly,'' Dean said, ''we are still dealing with the economics of a system of the past. Particularly when it comes to race, we have not understood that it benefits everyone to be better educated.''

Mr. HATCH. The purpose of title I is to give educationally and economically disadvantaged students additional assistance: teachers, textbooks, and additional education resources. These resources were never intended to comprise the entirety of aid to an educationally or economically disadvantaged student.

Unless there is an equity factor used in their distribution so that poorer districts within a state can be brought closer to even, those title I funds that are provided will merely be a thin coat of paint covering up the cracks. The layering of resources where resources are already inadequate will not meet the needs of disadvantaged children. Title I was meant to provide additional resources, not to compensate for an inadequate financial commitment to poorer LEAs on the part of States.

By directing resources to states where this is not the case, we are being true to the underlying intent of title I.

Indeed, as the following excerpts from the debate over the final conference report reveal, the addition of the effort and equity factor in the title I formula it was the reason why many Members of the Senate may have voted for the conference report. However, title I funds have yet to be distributed using this factor.

I refer my colleagues to excerpts from the debate over the conference report to ESEA and ask unanimous consent that they be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

APPENDIX II

Mr. GRASSLEY . . . I am also concerned, Mr. President, with the chapter one formula that came out of the conference committee. I supported the Senate language added by Senator Hatch, which removed the restrictions on the equity bonus. Under the change made by Senator Hatch's language, each State received the full benefit of its equalization effort.

Under the Hatch chapter one formula which passed the Senate, 38 States would have received increased chapter one allocations. Iowa would have received $2.5 million more than the original formula in S. 1513.

Unfortunately, according to the Congressional Research Service, Iowa is among 31 States to lose funds from 1996 to 1999 under this conference passed formula. Iowa loses almost $10 million in funds from 1996 to 1999. The big winners under the formula changes are New York, California, Texas, and Illinois.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, as a member of the Labor and Education Committee and also as chair of the Senate Appropriations Committee that appropriates money for the Department of Education, including title I, I would like to correct the record. I have the greatest respect and friendship for my colleague from Iowa. However, sitting here listening to his remarks and comments, I certainly wish the Senator, my colleague, had talked to me before he made those comments. Maybe I would not have to stand up to correct them. Because, frankly, what my colleague just said simply does not comport with the facts.

The chart that Senator Coats sent out this morning, and used this morning, it is like that old saying: In the Bible it says 'There is no God.' It says that in the Bible.

But the sentence before it says, 'The fool hath said in his heart, There is no God.'

So, if you take things out of context you can prove the Bible says 'There is no God.' That is what Senator Coats did this morning.

Senator COATS sent this notice around to our offices this morning, ''Urgent, Members Attention Only,'' and it says, ''Senator Harkin: Reasons to Vote No on Elementary-Secondary Act; Iowa Would Lose $9.95 a million.'' I assume that is where my colleague got that figure.

Senator COATS is only telling half the story. He is sort of saying it says, in the Bible, ''There is no God,'' but he does not tell you what the sentence before it says.

I tried to get the floor this morning to correct it. We were under a time agreement, the time ran out and I could not get the floor. Fortunately, I was able to talk to Senators as they came to the well to let them know that the figures that Senator Coats was putting out were wrong.

Let me correct that record now. Iowa does not lose $10 million. I happen to chair the Appropriations Committee that funds the money. There is no way this would have gotten through if my State was going to lose $10 million, I can tell you that, Mr. President. No, what we did and what is not being said here and what is not understood—and I say this to my friend from Iowa, my colleague—there are two parts to this formula on title I. There is the targeted grant formula. That is what Senator Coats is using. If you only look at the targeted grant money, yes, Iowa and a lot of other States lose money. But what we added in conference was another portion of the formula called effort and equity, something I feel very strongly about. I debated it on the Senate floor. So when we went to conference, in trying to strike a deal with the House, they only wanted targeted grants, but I insisted that we also have a second formula for effort and equity, and that is what we did.

So under the bill itself, there is money that goes for targeted or for effort and equity. New moneys that we will appropriate can be split by the Appropriations Committee. Some can go to targeted, some can go to effort and equity. The Appropriations Subcommittees will decide. First of all, next year we have already appropriated the money for fiscal year 1995. That is already done. For fiscal year 1996, there is a hold-harmless clause. So no States are going to lose money in 1996, not Iowa nor any other State can lose money in 1996. So, again, Senator Coats used this from fiscal year 1996 to 1999. You cannot use 1996 because there is a hold-harmless clause.

Beginning in fiscal year 1996, the Appropriations Committee, under the authorization of this bill, is allowed to use whatever new moneys we appropriate, up to $200 million in 1996, for effort and equity. Beyond that, such sums as are necessary.

Senator Coats used a figure from CRS of $400 million. I can show you the record in conference. They were talking about $400 million increases in title I. I said, I don't know what you are talking about. The average over the last 5 years has been $275,000, and under the budget caps and the ceilings we have, there is no way over the next 5 or 6 years that we are going to have a $400 million increase in title I. I would like to see it. If you are asking me if we can get the money, would I like to put $400 million in title I, absolutely; but we are not going to have that kind of money.

So in title I then, assuming we can get a $200 million increase, the Appropriations Committee can put all of it into effort and equity, 75 percent of it into effort and equity, half of it into effort and equity—whatever we want to do.

So what we did is we prepared a chart showing what would happen to the States if just half of the money went into the effort and equity or if all of it went into effort and equity.

Under either one of those scenarios, Iowa, instead of losing money, makes money. In fact, I do not have the runs for anything other than $400 million, but even under $400 million, Iowa would gain about $400,000 a year; and if we put the whole thing into effort and equity, Iowa would gain about $1.8 million a year.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. HARKIN. I will be delighted to yield.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. HARKIN. I will be delighted to yield.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Prior to the question, if I can just say, first of all, I compliment the Senator because I know when it came out of committee the first time, that he got the formula that was in the original bill introduced improved dramatically. So our State would be helped and probably a lot of other States would be helped. So I compliment him on that.

I do not know anything about his activity in conference or any other process, but I did notice his work in that area, and he did improve it and I compliment him for it.

My question is only this: Senator Coats and I are both relying upon the work of the Congressional Research Service. I have not found the Congressional Research Service to be wrong very often, if at all, that I can recall. Has my colleague from Iowa discussed this with the people in the Congressional Research Service to see if they made a mistake and how they made a mistake? Can you tell me how they made a mistake?

Mr. HARKIN. I appreciate the question. I will try to respond to it. The figures I am using come from the Congressional Research Service. What I am saying is that Senator Coats only took one column.

Mr. GRASSLEY. I think I have that chart here.

Mr. HARKIN. If you look at the chart, what he did was he took the second column over, which just says $400 million under targeted formula. Senator Coats used that column. He did not take the other two columns. The other two columns add effort and equity; the third column over showing what would happen if we split it in half; the last column showing if we put it all into effort and equity.

I cannot in any way tell my colleague how much we will put in. I can assure him it will be a minimum of 50 percent. I suggest, knowing the members of the Appropriations Committee and that 33 States will be helped by effort and equity, it stands to reason that the bulk of the money will go into effort and equity. So I would say we are probably close to the column on the right-hand side, which shows Iowa getting $54 million.

Keep in mind, that is based on $400 million. There is no way we are going to get $400 million, but it gives you an idea of what happens under this thing.

So what Senator Coats did is he simply took out of context what CRS came up with. He took one column, and that is why I tried to get the floor this morning to explain that is not so. That is just not the way the Appropriations Subcommittee is going to operate, and that is why we put the effort and equity thing in there.

In no way is Iowa going to have their moneys reduced under this effort and equity formula. That is the point I tried to make this morning and I tried to make it in the well to the Senators. As I said about my Biblical example, about taking something out of context, sure you can take one column, but that is not what we are operating under.

I hope that clears it up. Does my colleague have any further questions on that?

Mr. GRASSLEY. I do not have any further questions, Mr. President. I will say, I hope it clears it up because I would like to think we are passing legislation that will be more fair to more States than that original chart that I saw. But I also suggest that I have been informed that Senator Coats is going to come over and try to discuss what interests my colleague from Iowa in some further depth, and I think I will defer to his discussion of that.

Mr. HARKIN. I will be glad to. I talked about this with Senator Coats in private. I will discuss it with him on the floor and have him respond as to what CRS put in the other columns because he just used one column, he did not use the other two.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, if my colleague wanted to make the point that what we came back with from conference was not quite as good for certain States, including my own, as was in the bill passed by the Senate, he is absolutely right. But the reality is that the House would not accept that. So we had to work it out with the House, and I think we worked it out in a reasonably fair manner, I must say.

The original formula that came out of the Clinton administration, what they had advocated, was devastating for Iowa and for a number of other States.

But we worked with Senator Pell, Senator Kennedy, Senator Hatch, Senator Kassebaum and Senator Jeffords. We worked this whole thing out in committee on a bipartisan basis to come up with a better formula. We did that. We had votes on it. We had debates. We even had a debate here on the Senate floor. We had a vote. But in going to conference it was clear that the House Members were not going to accept in totality what we had done in the Senate. And thus we came up with this new formula. And, quite frankly, I must say I think the new formula is fair.

I just want to say the Congressional Research Service, again, will do any run that Senators ask for. If you ask for a run on $500 million a year, they will do that. You can do a run on $1 billion a year. They will do that. But just because these tables are prepared does not mean that is actually what is going to happen. As I said, they ran these tables based upon a $400-million-a-year increase in title I. As the chairman of the Appropriations Subcommittee that funds this program, I can tell you right now, unless somebody comes up with some magic money someplace, we are not going to have that kind of money. We will be lucky to get the average of the $275 million that we have gotten over the last 5 years.

So we tried to do two things with title I: target our scarce resources to areas where they have a high concentration of eligible children, but then also to be fair to rural States such as Iowa where we may not have high concentrations but we certainly do have needy children, children in poverty, title I eligible children, but they may be in small towns and communities scattered around the States and thus the formula does address that.

Mr. HARKIN. I thank the Chairman, and I commend him again for his work on this important legislation, and in particular this provision. The problems of youth violence and drug abuse are no longer contained within urban school districts, and are rapidly spreading to suburban and rural communities. By making a program available for statewide distribution, we can better ensure that each student in a State will be reached by a program, and that students throughout the State will receive the same messages.

I was extremely impressed by Jonathan Kozol's ''Savage Inequalities,'' and I know the Senator from Utah has also done considerable research on school equalization. Is it his view that the concept of equalizing resources among school districts as public policy is supported by experts in the field?

Mr. HATCH. The Senator from Iowa is correct. The literature in the education field is loaded with recent articles suggesting that equalization is an important means of addressing inequalities. In a statement I gave on July 28, 1994, I outlined the reasons, which are supported by the literature in the education field, why I support equalization as a sound policy.

Mr. HARKIN. Does the Senator from Utah therefore support effort and equity as factors in determining the allocation of title I money?

Mr. HATCH. Yes, I do, provided that it is not mandatory. If effort and equity were factors driving education dollars, states would be encouraged to take steps toward equity on their own. Education is primarily a state and local responsibility to begin with. The equity factor included in this authorization, unlike the State per pupil expenditure—which I believe is an extremely poor and terribly unfair measure of effort—can benefit a State even if its needs are great and its tax base is small. This is because an equalization incentive is based not on how much a State has, but on how it distributes what it has. I confess that in many areas of public policy I do not favor such an approach. In many areas, I believe this type of allocation destroys incentives to work hard and to do more that contributes to our economy overall.

But, education is a legitimate function of State and local governments. We do not need to be concerned with hindering private sector incentives. Educational equalization—based on a plan developed by the State itself—should be encouraged.

Some of our colleagues have expressed concern regarding the equity factor. Does the Senator from Iowa believe that the equalization of resources within a State is inherently consistent with the premise of the title I program?

Mr. HARKIN. I would respond to the Senator from Utah that yes, I believe the equalization of resources is consistent with the premise of the title I program which is to give disadvantaged students additional help by directing supplemental resources to them. If federal resources are not supplementary, then States have absolutely no incentive to deal effectively with education financing problems in their own States. The Federal Government should not subsidize this kind of inaction.

Mr. HATCH. I agree with the distinguished Senator from Iowa. Many States have recognized the need to more fairly redistribute their resources. I am very proud that Utah has been a leader in just about every aspect of education—achievement, graduation rates, school finance. Utahans long ago developed a workable plan for school equalization. It is working in our State.

I believe the title I formula should reward real effort and real progress toward serving every child in a State equally.

I obviously would have preferred that the effort and equity provisions that were included as an integral part of the Senate-passed title I formula. However, it was the final decision of this conference to include these factors in the title I formula but to include them as a separate authorization that is, based on the Senate-passed version of the bill. This, I believe, is a step in the right direction.

I hope that this will not be a hollow authorization, that is, one with no money. While I do not want to put my colleague from Iowa on the spot because I know he is as committed to this idea as I am, I wonder if he would comment on this last point? He is in a position of some influence on that subcommittee.

Mr. HARKIN. The Senator from Utah is correct. I share his commitment to education finance reform and I favor the establishment of this effort and equity incentive in title I of ESEA.

The Senator from Utah mentioned that he was proud of the efforts his State has made to equalize resources among schools. The State of Iowa revamped its State aid formula to equalize funding in the 1970's. I am equally proud of efforts in my State to provide a quality education for all students.

I will do what I can as chairman of the Labor, Health, and Human Services Appropriations Subcommittee to support this new authorization.

Mr. HATCH. I thank my colleague from Iowa for his analysis and support.

Mr. HATCH. I am pleased to point out that 30 States, plus Puerto Rico, would increase their title I allocations under my amendment relative to their allocations under the formula in S. 2. A number of these beneficiaries are States with high poverty districts.

Moreover, as my colleagues will note, my amendment holds states harmless for funds going out under the remaining title I part A formula. Additionally, my amendment allows school districts affected by census changes to retain 95 percent of their FY 98 funds.

One of my priorities in crafting this amendment was to improve title I while preventing huge shifts in the allocation amounts. Of those States which would currently stand to lose under my amendment, only one state loses 7 percent of their allocation, 4 States lose an average of about 5 percent of their allocation, 7 States lose about 3 percent of their allocation and 8 States lose under 1.3 percent of their allocation.

I reiterate that I have worked to adjust my proposal so that it not only captures the benefits of including effort and equity in the formula but also so that the minority of states who would currently lose under these factors would lose as little as possible.

Again, I hasten to add that States can change their own circumstances under my amendment. If States wish to access more Federal title I money, they can take steps to increase their effort and their equity. My amendment provides a degree of control for States.

States can, and many have already, adopted financing systems to equalize resources among districts. States have chosen a variety of equalization systems of their own design. A fair equalization factor will promote ''bottom up'' education reform that will help all kids make progress towards achieving the national goals.

Real education reform must take place at the grassroots level. A series of edicts issued from Washington, D.C. is not going to improve education for Americans. State and local education agencies must take on this challenge. But, the Federal Government should help—and at least not plant obstacles in the way which cannot be overcome.

The degree to which a State equalizes funding for education is a factor that a State can control. A State that equalizes is a state that will benefit under a this improved title I formula.

Also, equalization is a factor that can be quantified. So much of what the Congress is asking the State and local education agencies to do requires a judgment based a series of qualitative analyses. An equalization factor does not rely on subjective determinations.

An equalization factor does not rely on mandates or guidelines for how a State should achieve equalization. I, for one, would oppose a measure that specified how a state was to engage in equalization. On the contrary, I believe States are perfectly capable of figuring this out for themselves.

S. 2 is a good bill. It was thoughtfully prepared, appropriately amended, and now after many days, is being thoroughly debated. I think my amendment improves this bill. I sincerely believe that this amendment will help needy schools make important improvements in education for all children. I urge the Senate to support my amendment. I thank the Chair and yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. SESSIONS). The Senator from Minnesota.

Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President, before the Senator from Utah leaves the floor, I thank him for his discussion of his amendment. I was listening carefully to his discussion, and his focus on providing States incentives for moving toward equity and his focus on what Jonathan Kozol calls savage inequalities and the tremendous disparity of resources, depending on the wealth of the community in which a child lives, is right on the mark.

I thank the Senator from Utah for his words.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I notice probably one of the wealthiest States in the Union, Connecticut, gets more money per pupil than any other State, and it does not even need the money. What about these States that do? I hate to call it a stupid formula because it is in an education bill, but it is really a dumb, stupid formula, and it ought to be changed. I thank my colleague for his kind remarks.

Mr. KENNEDY. Will the Senator yield for the purpose of a question?

Mr. HATCH. I will be glad to.

Mr. WELLSTONE. Senator KENNEDY wants to ask the Senator from Utah a question, and then I will regain the floor after that.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. KENNEDY. As I understand it, the Senator from Utah said 48 percent of the paperwork done by teachers and principals is mandated by the Federal Government.

Mr. HATCH. That is correct. That is in the neighborhood. That is what I have been led to believe.

Mr. KENNEDY. This was a 1990 study done by the Ohio General Assembly Legislative Office, Education Oversight of Public Schools reporting requirements. That study attributed only 20 percent of paperwork requirements to the Federal Government. If the Senator will be good enough to put in the RECORD the authority for that, I am going to put in the RECORD the authority rebutting that, and we will let the Members look at it.

Mr. HATCH. I will be happy to do that, and also it may be more than 50 percent. All I can say is, all I get is complaints from the State and local people that they are being overrun with paperwork that seems silly and nonproductive.

Mr. KENNEDY. I think it is worthwhile to know the authority for these allegations. I think it is important. I thank the Senator.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Minnesota.

Mr. WELLSTONE. Since part of the remarks by the Senator from Utah dealt with the equity question, I just want to add to the RECORD a quote from John Powell, who is director of the Institute on Race and Poverty in Minnesota:

> When low-income children are segregated into schools that are predominantly poor, the students confront not only their own individual poverty, but the effects of concentrated poverty on the school system itself. This combination often results in more drop-outs and teenage pregnancies, lack of parental involvement, inability to pay for books, lack of role models, and inability to afford college.

It goes on to say:

> Teachers and staff in racially segregated and high poverty schools are too often overwhelmed by student needs.

Let me take my remarks in a couple of different directions.

I want to first talk about a meeting I had with the National Alliance of Black School Educators who were here last week. I had a chance to drop by and not talk at them but talk with them.

Since the Senator from Utah was talking about the whole question of equity, or lack of equity, let me, right away, say to colleagues that I really hope we go forward with this debate. Sometime later on in the debate, I am going to come out on the floor and talk about it and have some amendments speaking to this question. It is the question of the reliance on high-stakes testing—the single measurement of standardized tests to determine whether or not children go from third grade to fourth grade, from eighth grade to ninth grade, whether they graduate, what grouping they are in.

I just want to point something out since Senator HATCH talked about this. We ought to make sure we meet the opportunity-to-learn standard if we are going to be implementing these tests. In other words, we had better make sure we do not hold children responsible for our failure to adequately invest in their achievement and in their future.

If we just focus on tests and then flunk students who do not pass the tests, and we do not do what we should do both at the Federal level and, I say to my colleague from Arkansas, the State and school district level combined, to get the resources so that each one of these children has the same chance to pass these tests, and to succeed, then, frankly, I think reliance on these tests alone is punitive. So you need to do it both ways. Yes, you need to have standards, but you also need to make sure every child has the same opportunity to meet those standards.

I will say one other thing about the tests. I will have an amendment that says these tests ought to meet professional standards. We want to make sure they are implemented in the right way. I will have an amendment that says we need to take into account especially learning disabilities, which I think is the law of the land. I think we ought to make that clear in this bill. We ought to speak to those students who have a limited proficiency in English as well.

More than anything, I want to talk a little bit about this opportunity-to-learn standard that I do not think we are meeting. I think it is so key to the whole discussion. I think it is key to what John Powell has said. I think it is key to what other Senators have said as well. I think it is key, actually, to at least part of what the Senator from Utah, Mr. HATCH, was saying as well.

We are out here debating this bill, and we should. In a moment I am about to, one more time, say where I think the Republican bill is deeply flawed and why I am so disappointed in it. But for a moment I would like to just talk about the budget implications.

I do not know whether we are spending 1 percent of the Federal budget—someone can help me—or thereabouts on education altogether. Does that sound right? Is it 1 percent of the overall Federal budget on education? It is 2 percent.

I argue that key to our national security is whether or not we are going to adequately invest in the skills and character of the children. I argue that key to our national security is not so many more bombs and missiles and more money spent on the Pentagon; the key to our national security is the security of local communities. I think that is what matters first and foremost.

The key to security for local communities is good housing, reducing violence, and having decent health care. But I think most importantly, the key to our national security is the security of local communities. And the security of local communities means we have a commitment to education second to no other nation in the world so that every child—every single child—is full of hope, and every child has dreams, and every child can do well.

I tell you, I think 2 percent of the Federal budget spent on education is pathetic. I know the Senator from Vermont agrees because he has been one of the Senators who has been most vocal in saying we ought to get our priorities straight and we ought to be allocating more resources.

We are going to debate how we allocate those resources to States and local school districts. That is the debate on this bill. I will speak just for a few minutes. I said to my colleague from Arkansas I would not take more than 20 minutes altogether, and I will not.

But I think the larger question is, Why in the world are we not allocating more of our Federal budget to education? Why aren't we getting more of the resources back to the school districts, whether it be for the IDEA program, kids with special needs—boy, that would help our school districts—whether it be moving beyond just 30 percent funding for title I; whether it be a real investment in affordable child care, prekindergarten, so kids come to school ready to learn; whether it be some money we can leverage. Senator HARKIN has that amendment that will enable school districts to have more funding to put into rebuilding crumbling schools, you name it.

I am just amazed that with a booming economy and the country doing so well economically, we in the Congress, in the Senate, cannot invest more than 2 percent of our overall budget in our children's education. They are 100 percent of our future. I do not know how in the world any Senator believes, on a tin cup budget, we are going to be able to make the kind of investment we should be making. That is my first point.

My second point is—Senator KENNEDY spoke about this. My guess is we will get a different point of view from some other Senators in just a moment—I think the fundamental flaw of S. 2 is the abandonment of a commitment we made over 30 years ago as a nation that we would have some basic national standards, some basic protection, to make sure the poorest children in this country, the most vulnerable children in this country, would be well served or at least would be served. We do not serve them well, but at least to make sure that for the homeless children and the migrant children there would be programs that would speak to the needs and circumstances of their lives, that we would target title I money to the neediest and poorest and most vulnerable children.

Do you know what. I sometimes think Senators are taking this too personally because it is not necessarily an attack on my State or an attack on the State of Arkansas or an attack on the State of Vermont; it is just a matter of philosophy.

Over three decades ago, we made a commitment that the Federal Government, representing the national community, with certain core values, would make sure we provide some programs that really speak to the most vulnerable children, that we are not going to abandon those children.

I said it last week; I will say it one more time. My colleagues keep talking about change, change, change. I do not think it is a great step forward. I think it is a great leap backward. That is why many of us oppose it. That is why I think the President opposes it. That is why I think we have started out on the wrong foot.

Going further than that—and this will be the last part of what I want to say; I will just divide it in two quick parts—one, I say to Senator LOTT and others, I look forward to having a chance to bring amendments out here. I want to have some amendments that speak to the discriminatory effect of the standardized testing. I want to have some amendments that provide support for children who witness violence at home and, therefore, cannot do well in school.

I want to have an amendment that provides for more counselors in our schools. In some ways, I cannot think of a more important amendment. Right now, we have a ratio of 1 counselor for every 1,000 students, or thereabouts, in the country.

I want to have an amendment that speaks directly to the challenges of urban education. Some of my colleagues have put back language that deals with the special challenges of rural education, which I also think is a real challenge, but I also want to put a focus on urban education as well.

As someone who was a teacher at the college level—but, boy, I will tell you, I came to respect teaching at the high school and middle school level; I think sometimes even more at the elementary level, and the pre-K level even more so, as well—I am interested in anything and everything that leads to better teacher quality, with the proviso that we understand there are many really fine teachers right now in the country.

I said this last week, but I will say it again, too.

I don't mind holding everybody accountable if we do it in the right way. But I also think that some of the people who bash public school teachers couldn't last an hour in the classrooms which they condemn. I think we have to be very careful in how we do it.

The other thing I want to mention beyond my amendment is to say one more time to other Senators that I think there are some amendments we have introduced and we will be introducing that certainly speak to many of the meetings I have had with people in Minnesota.

I have been ready for this bill to come to the floor for almost 2 years.

I think all together in our State of Minnesota—between myself and staff—we had meetings with close to 100 different school districts. It is incredible. We have been all over the State. People were genuinely excited about this bill. They know that most of the money for K through 12 is at the State level. They know that. But people have been very interested in how we can provide more incentives for more teachers. They are very interested in the whole question of what we can do about the needs of physical infrastructure. They are very interested in trying to get more counselors in our schools. They are very interested in the sense of getting more young people interested in education. They are very interested in what we did do in prekindergarten. They think that would make a huge difference. They are very interested in afterschool programs. They are very interested in reducing class size.

Frankly, the Republican bill on the floor speaks to very little of that—not directly. It assumes with sort of a blank check that it will all happen.

I say to my colleagues in the majority that you have not invested nearly enough money in your budget, nor will it be in the appropriations bill. We have too many speeches given about the importance of children, but we are not matching the rhetoric with the resources.

The second thing I say to my colleagues is in terms of how you allocate the money. I think it is not a big step forward. I think it is a great leap backward from the kind of commitment we have made to all of the children in the country, including the most vulnerable children and the poorest children in this country.

Third, and finally, there should be some decisive priorities in this bill. I have tried to outline some of those priorities. I don't see it.

We will move forward this week, next week, and I hope the next week as well. Maybe in 2 more weeks we will have amendments, votes, and see where we wind up.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arkansas.

Mr. HUTCHINSON. Mr. President, as we continue to debate the Elementary and Secondary Education Act, and the Educational Opportunities Act, there are fundamental fault lines and differences between the Democrats and the Republicans on this very critical and very important issue for this country and for our children.

I noticed when Senator WELLSTONE spoke that he said the Republicans just keep saying change, change, change. I plead guilty to that. We are saying change. That is one of the very clear lines in this debate between those who are defending the status quo—defending the old system, defending the old model, who are saying create more programs, who are saying pour more money into the old programs and the same models—and those of us who say, yes, let's fund education adequately. Yes, let's increase our appropriations for education. But let's make certain that we are using that money efficiently and effectively. If the old model isn't working, it is time that we try something new.

That is the fundamental fault line in the debate that has gone on in the Senate for the last week and will continue for the next few days.

I have to say that I believe there has been a lot of misinformation about the Educational Opportunities Act that has been put forth on the floor of the Senate. I understand that change is difficult and change is discomforting. There are those who are going to recoil at the thought that we might try something different. But there have been, in the arguments put forward by the other side, several themes that have recurred.

They said title I has enhanced academic achievement. That has been one of the things they have argued consistently.

They said the status quo somehow guarantees student achievement.

They said parental control is something to be feared.

They said the contents of the Educational Opportunities Act contain no accountability safeguards.

I would like to, in their own words, go through those arguments and rebut them one by one in the few minutes that I have on the floor.

First of all, Senator KENNEDY made, I think, one of the clear statements last week when he said, ''We want to support tried and tested programs that have worked.''

The question that I have raised over and over again is, How has title I worked? How has title I been so successful that we want to continue it as it has been, and as Senator KENNEDY suggests we should continue it?

After 35 years and $120 billion has been expended, we have seen no closing of the achievement gap.

The original purpose of title I was that we would see those disadvantaged students improve, we would see their academic performance elevated, and we would see the gap between the advantaged and the disadvantaged closed. After 35 years, any objective assessment of what we have done would have to say we have failed.

That is why it is so amazing to me to hear my colleagues and friends on the other side of the aisle stand and say: We want to support tried and tested programs that have worked.

If they had worked, this debate wouldn't be going on. We would be delighted to be supporting the status quo. But the status quo has failed America's children.

Instead of letting States have flexibility under

Straight A's, requiring improvements in student achievement, the Democrats would rather leave disadvantaged children the same programs they have had for the last 35 years.

Senator KENNEDY speaks movingly, and I know sincerely, about the homeless, the migrant children, and the immigrant children, saying that they are the ones who are going to be hurt most under the Educational Opportunities Act—the homeless, the migrants, and the immigrant children are the big losers.

I would suggest just the opposite is the case; that they have been the big losers in a system that continues to fund a broken system, a broken program; that for the first time under Straight A's we will require test scores to be disaggregated and broken down on the basis of those who are disadvantaged and those who are advantaged based upon their backgrounds and economic backgrounds so that we will be able to see clearly whether or not the educational curriculum, the textbooks, and the programs being utilized in a local school district are working for the least advantaged and the most vulnerable in our society. These homeless children, migrants, and immigrant children, to whom all of our hearts go out, are the ones who have been left behind under the status quo.

Of course, Senator KENNEDY said, ''We want to support tried and tested programs that have worked,'' even though 35 years of these programs has demonstrated they have not worked.

He said that block grants—he always likes to use that loaded term, ''block grants''—have no accountability.

And then he uses the term ''blank check.'' This is a ''blank check.''

I suggest that trying to compare the Educational Opportunities Act with any of the old block grant experiments of the past is as if to compare apples and oranges. It is a total mismatch. It is an unfair comparison.

These are exactly and precisely, word for word, the same arguments we heard against welfare reform. Welfare reform was block grants with no accountability. Welfare reform was a blank check to the Governors: You can't trust the Governors—the same rhetoric that we heard for the last week.

If you compare block grants, the Educational Opportunities Act has more accountability than any of the existing title I programs or any of the existing Elementary and Secondary Education Act programs because we require the testing. We require the States to say what they are going to do and how they are going to do it and then demonstrate that they, in fact, have done it. That is what has been lacking under the existing program.

As Senator KENNEDY said, ''We are not prepared, with the scarce resources here, to try to turn that over to the Governors one more time and expect they are going to do the job. No.''

I can't reach his volume level when he said, ''No.''

But he said, ''We are going to insist that there will be incentives and disincentives for performance. That is what we do.''

Throughout this debate we have heard, ''We don't trust the Governors. You can't trust the Governors.''

I remind my distinguished colleagues that the same people who elected us to the Senate elected those Governors to serve the same people. They are every bit as accountable to their constituents as we are accountable to our constituents. Yet it has been a recurring theme: Do not trust the State; Do not trust the Governors; They won't have the most vulnerable in their States in their concerns and in the programs that they put forward.

I reject that. Then he said, ''We are going to downsize.'' He said, ''We are going to insist that there will be incentives and disincentives for performance.''

Where in the Democratic proposal are there incentives and disincentives? Their proposals are for new teachers and for school construction and contain no requirements that student achievement must increase—none.

If we want to talk about incentives for performance, and if we want to talk about disincentives, look at what the Republicans have proposed in our Straight A's plan and in our performance contracts and agreements because in that you find real requirements concerning student achievements and student elevation in academic performance.

Then Senator KENNEDY said, ''Under Straight A's, the State could demonstrate statewide overall progress based on progress being made by wealthier communities, while a lack of progress in disadvantaged communities remains statistically hidden.''

The irony of that criticism of the Republican bill is that is what can happen under the current system where the performance of the disadvantaged is hidden by aggregating the scores and concealing those who are supposed to be targeted—those children we are supposed to be helping the most—concealing those in the overall scores.

I think this is a very misleading charge against the Republican proposal.

Straight A's requires each participating State and local school to report data by each major racial and ethnic group, gender, English proficiency, status, migrant status, and by economically disadvantaged student as compared to students who are not economically disadvantaged.

That language in our bill prevents what Senator KENNEDY expressed from ever taking place. In fact, we are going to know much more about whether we are really helping the disadvantaged under the Straight A's proposal.

Then Senator KENNEDY said this last week: ''We are still finding out that of the more than 50,000 teachers who were hired this past year, the majority of those serving in high-poverty areas are not fully qualified.''

I will accept Senator KENNEDY's statement as being accurate. But it raises in my mind this question: Why then are Democrats proposing their Class Size Reduction Program if in fact it has led to the hiring of unqualified teachers?

The evidence is that as much as we would all like to see school class sizes reduced, and while that is a desirable goal, one of the unintended consequences in Class Size Reduction Programs around the Nation has been that it has resulted in unqualified teachers filling slots that have been opened up, and those who have been harmed the most are those who are in schools with a high percentage of disadvantaged students. That is the tragedy of it. That is acknowledged by Senator KENNEDY's statement.

He has repeatedly said only 7 percent of the funds come from the Federal Government. Then he suggests, because it is a relatively small portion of the local school districts' funding base and their budget, we cannot expect whatever we do up here will have too much of an impact upon local school policy.

If, in fact, our influence over local schools and the States were proportionate to our funding about 7 percent, I would not be too concerned, either. The reality is, though, we provide only 7 percent of the funding; we provide a much higher level of the mandates under which the local schools are laboring. It has been estimated we provide 50 percent of the paperwork that is required of the local schoolteachers for the 7 percent of funding.

To diminish the importance of the debate because it is only 7 percent of the funding misses the point. The State of Florida takes six times as many personnel to implement a Federal education dollar as it takes to implement a State education dollar. I suspect that figure is typical across the Nation.

Senator MURRAY made this statement regarding the Abraham teacher testing and merit pay amendment:

> It requires testing, and there is no money. That money will have to come from somewhere in the districts. The districts will not have the money, and likely they will require the teachers themselves to pay for it. That has been the practice in the past.

First, the Abraham amendment only made teacher testing and merit pay an option. They are in no way required to implement it.

Speaking of unfunded mandates on the districts, what about the class size reduction mandate? What happens at the end of that program? I have raised that concern. When the authorization for the Class Size Reduction Program ends, don't the schools then have to pick up the tab for a program that they did not start?

Senator DODD made this comment last week about the Abraham teacher testing merit pay amendment which added teacher testing and merit pay to the list of optional uses of funds. Senator DODD said:

> What works best is a decision that ought to be left to the local communities. For the Senate to go on record to decide what will work best in the 50 States is in direct contradiction to the arguments I hear being made in support of the underlying bill, and that is: We do not know what we are doing here; we ought to leave this up to the local governments. Now we are going to decide, apparently, that teachers ought to get a pay increase rather than leaving that decision to the local level. It seems they have it backwards. Those decisions are best left at the local level.

It takes my breath away. Amazing. Since the Democrats' proposal for teachers mandates separate funding streams, they mandate separate funding streams for professional development, alternative certification, teacher recruitment, and mentoring, separate funding for all of those, school districts must do each of these or they don't get any of their funding. Our proposal only adds teacher testing and merit pay to a list of allowable uses of funds. It is absolutely consistent with our belief in local control. It is an option. If we ought to leave this up to the local government, as Senator DODD says, then why does the Democratic proposal provide repeated mandates on how to spend the money?

Senator KENNEDY also said in the debate last week in his continual theme that the Republican bill lacks accountability:

> We asked our good friends on the other side how their bill is going to solve the issue of accountability. They cannot do it. We have been challenging them since the beginning of the debate. They cannot do it. We can.

I remind my colleagues of the one single example I left before the Senate that I think is illustrative of the problem and the current system and lack of accountability in the current system: Holly Grove. Or think in your mind's eye of the pictures of treadmills, Nautilus equipment, StairMasters, and $239,000 in a Federal grant that could not be spent for computers, for textbooks, for renovating a falling down building, a dilapidated school building, could not be spent in those ways, but could be spent on expensive exercise equipment when what was needed was improving the school facility.

Senator KENNEDY would dare to say that the current system provides accountability. I suggest when we tell the Governors they have to sign a contract with the Federal Department of Education to state what they are going to do, how they are going to do it, how they will accomplish it, when they will achieve it, require testing the students, require breaking down the test scores and show how every subgroup is performing and whether, in fact, the gap is being closed, I suggest that is far greater accountability than the current system of categorical agreements that can be misused and used in inappropriate ways.

Senator KENNEDY said last week:

> I hope our friends on the other side of the aisle are going to spare us a lot of discussion about local control and parental involvement because it just isn't there, it just isn't there.

We are not going to spare you; we are going to continue to talk about local control. We will continue to talk about parental involvement. That is the key to education in the country and the key to making significant and meaningful education reforms.

When Senator KENNEDY says it just isn't there, first of all, there have been a number of speakers, and I will allude to their statements later, who acknowledged parental control is at the core of the Republican bill. Aside from that, I simply point out two things. The portability provisions provide the ultimate in parental control. If parents are unhappy with the services the school is providing their child with Federal money, they can use that Federal money to improve their child's education in the way they best see fit. That is very consistent with parental control.

I also point out the provisional public school choice where a failing school that has been deemed failing, failing and failing, given years of opportunity to improve and they still don't improve, there is an exit, a way out. No disadvantaged child ought to be locked to a failing school and consigned forever throughout their educational experience to a school that is failing them. They shouldn't be required to do that. We show them a way out.

I quote Senator MURRAY from last week:

> I am looking at language of the bill. It says . . . that a parent directs that the services be provided through a tutorial assistance provider. It is not directed by the school but is directed by the parent. I think that is one of the underlying flaws and concerns that we have . . . frankly, the parent is in control.

I wish I had another chart showing Senator KENNEDY saying that the parental involvement is not there. Senator MURRAY said, ''. . . frankly, the parent is in control,'' under the Republican plan.

Senator MURRAY is right. That is not bad. That is not something to fear, the fact that we increase parental involvement. Since when did parental control become a bad thing? It is part of the problem, that parents have too few choices when their child is forced to remain in a failing school.

I have heard repeatedly, and I am paraphrasing, but this has been the message from the other side: We don't trust the Governors; we don't trust the local educators; we don't trust the parents. We just trust ourselves. We can make the decisions. We are the 100 Members of Senate, the super school board for America. Let us make the decisions; let us prescribe the formulas.

That is what we have done for 35 years. If we want to stick with that formula, that failed formula, then the status quo is the way to go on and the Democratic counterproposal is the way to go. I think America says no. Our children deserve better, American families deserve better, and we can do better by American education under the Educational Opportunities Act.

I commend Senator REID last week with one last quote from the other side of the aisle. Senator REID, the assistant minority leader, said:

> One of the things I have tried to do following the direction of the minority leader, in consultation with the majority leader, is to keep this debate on this education bill on education. We have worked very hard to keep other matters off this bill, Patient's Bill of Rights, prescription drug and minimum wage.

I commend Senator REID. I think that is the right approach. I am pleased we went through the first week of this debate without having extraneous amendments, nongermane amendments. I hope that will continue to be the case as we go through this second week of the most important debate we will have in the Senate during this Congress.

Rather than kill the pending education bill by offering irrelevant amendments, I ask my colleagues to complete the work we have been so successful debating for the past week. We have the chance to help millions of American students overcome illiteracy, to cite U.S. history, to master basic mathematical skills. Let's do our jobs and not fail these kids. Let's not put politics above American education and student achievement.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Vermont.

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that all pending amendments be temporarily laid aside, and it be in order for Senator Collins to call up her amendment, re: Straight A's, which is filed, amendment No. 3104.

I further ask unanimous consent that there be up to 10 minutes for debate on the Collins amendment, to be equally divided in the usual form, and following the use or yielding back of time, the amendment be agreed to and the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table, and the Senate resume the pending question, all without any intervening action or debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Maine.

AMENDMENT NO. 3104

(Purpose: To modify the list of eligible programs that may be subject to a performance partnership agreement)

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, I call up amendment No. 3104, which is pending at the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

> The Senator from Maine [Ms. COLLINS] proposes an amendment numbered 3104.

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

> On page 657, strike lines 6 through 8.

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, let me express my very sincere appreciation to the chairman of the committee and the ranking minority member for their cooperation in accommodating my amendment this evening. I am very grateful for their efforts.

My amendment is very straightforward. It simply removes the Perkins Act from the programs listed under the Straight A's proposal that is in this legislation.

I am a strong supporter of the Straight A's approach, but the Perkins Act simply does not belong in Straight A's, and I believe it was probably included as an oversight. There are three reasons why the Perkins Act should be separated from Straight A's.

First of all, the Perkins Act, which funds vocational education, is simply not part of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act. It is not part of the programs that we are reauthorizing. In Maine, and in many other States, secondary vocational education is operated on a parallel, independent system. In Maine, there are even restrictions on the ability of an academic high school to offer vocational education. Moreover, the Perkins Act and the ESEA have very different specific objectives, and they are not easily merged together.

The second reason is the Perkins Act authorizes programs at both the secondary and the postsecondary levels. Each State decides how to allocate its Perkins grant. In fact, 56 percent of Perkins funds go for postsecondary education, and in at least one State, all of the Perkins funds are used for postsecondary education.

In my State, the funds are allocated equally to secondary and postsecondary education, with the requirement that vocational high schools and technical colleges allocate 30 percent of their funding to training programs operated by the Maine adult education system.

The third reason is the Perkins Act was written to be part of the national workforce development efforts and is designed to coordinate it with provisions of the Workforce Investment Act, which the Senate successfully passed in 1998. If we pull out the Perkins Act funding, we will allow the intentions of Congress in redesigning the Workforce Investment Act to go forward.

In short, the Perkins Act does not belong in this legislation. It makes sense for us to take out the Perkins Act from the list of programs under Straight A's. It is not part of the ESEA, and as it is used, at least 56 percent of the funds under the Perkins Act do not go to secondary schools but, rather, to postsecondary schools.

I thank the chairman and ranking minority member for their cooperation in this effort and particularly for accommodating this amendment this evening.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I thank the good Senator from Maine and our chairman of the committee for urging the Senate to accept this amendment. I join with her in making that recommendation.

In 1998, with the reauthorization of the Perkins Act, we made improvements in the coordination of vocational education, adult education and job training. We did this in a bipartisan way with Senator JEFFORDS and Senator DEWINE. We took valuable lessons that we learned from the school-to-work program, emphasizing the importance of partnerships between education and business.

Unfortunately, the school-to-work legislation is not being considered for reauthorization. I hope that my colleague will work with me to make sure this important program finds a way to exist in ESEA.

What we have found is the importance of integrating academic skills with state of the art career and technical skills. Every child should graduate from high school with the academic credentials necessary to give him or her a wide variety of career choices within a given industry. Children should be able to choose to go on to post-secondary education or directly enter the workforce, with a competitive edge. So there have been, as she pointed out, very important and significant changes in these vocational and professional schools. I think we are at a place where they are offering great opportunities for young people in an economic climate of higher academic challenge and higher skill challenge. I think the value of her amendment is it is going to complete the process rather than undermine it, which I think was one of the principal dangers of having it as a block grant.

I thank the Senator. We in Massachusetts, as in Maine, as in other States in New England, place a very high value on these training programs and academic programs. They have been a lifeline to many of our communities and to our economy over a very long period of time. Nothing is more dramatic of an example than the ability to channel our career and vocational education students directly into high skill, high wage jobs in industry. They are enormously important and they do good work and their work will be enhanced because of the Senator.

I reserve the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Vermont.

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, I join in commending the Senator from Maine for this amendment. It certainly removes a serious problem I had in the bill. We have removed that from the bill, and it will be very helpful in making sure our vocational education programs can do the best possible for our young people. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maine.

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, I thank my two colleagues for their kind comments and for agreeing to accept this amendment. I think it is very important to the future of vocational education, which, as the Senator from Massachusetts points out, is so important to so many students and so many adults in this country, and particularly in our section of the country, in New England.

With that, I yield the remainder of my time and I urge the adoption of the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is all time yielded back?

Mr. KENNEDY. I yield the remainder of our time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendment is agreed to.

The amendment (No. 3104) was agreed to.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. COVERDELL. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Georgia.

Mr. COVERDELL. Mr. President, I think we are close to concluding this evening's presentation. I just told the Senator from Massachusetts I think Senator GORTON has a comment or two to make. He should be here shortly.

There is some effort underway to have a vote on the Gregg amendment tomorrow between, say, noon and 2:15, if this is ultimately agreed to on both sides. The Lieberman amendment, it is hoped, could be voted on in the same timeframe, but we do not know that yet. There are some negotiations on the other side. This should clarify itself in the early evening here.

I thought I would take just a moment, while we are waiting for Senator GORTON, to talk about the amendment for which we are next going to vote, and that is the Lott-Gregg amendment, the Teachers Bill of Rights, and of which the ranking member on the committee, Senator KENNEDY of Massachusetts, has indicated there will be broad acceptance, even though it will be a rollcall vote.

The amendment amends title II of S. 2 to ensure that States and local communities are able to use their portion of the $2 billion to hire highly qualified teachers to address the teacher quality shortage facing this country. It adds a strong accountability component. School districts must show they have increased student achievement with the percentage of classes in core academic subjects that are taught by highly qualified teachers. It authorizes a new, up to $350 million recruitment program. This language was inserted by Senator KAY BAILEY HUTCHISON of Texas, Senator FRIST of Tennessee, and Senator CRAPO of Idaho. It encourages midcareer professionals and outstanding college graduates to take teaching positions in tiny public schools and rural schools.

It includes the language I discussed at some length earlier this afternoon to protect teachers from frivolous lawsuits so they are not inhibited from doing the job they are supposed to do in school, that is, if they see a problem they avoid it or are silent about it because they are afraid they are going to be the subject, as I said, of a frivolous lawsuit.

This is a brief overview of the Teachers' Bill of Rights, the Teacher Empowerment Act as it has been referred to in the past. It authorizes $2 billion a year for States and local districts to enable them to develop a rigorous, professional development program. Federal dollars can only be used on professional development programs that increase teacher knowledge and are directly related to the curriculum and subject area in which the teacher provides instruction.

It enables them to retain, recruit, train, and hire highly qualified teachers and to hire teachers to reduce class size, which has, of course, been a goal of the other side of the aisle, and the President. It enables them to assist innovative teacher reforms aimed at increasing teacher quality, including mentoring and master teachers. The Senator from Massachusetts talked about mentoring earlier today. Studies and teacher polls have found that hiring master teachers who mentor new teachers improves both teacher quality and the likelihood that new teachers will stay and thrive at the school.

It enables them to provide merit pay and teacher testing and alternative certification programs. These are programs that provide opportunities for experienced professionals from other fields to enter teaching. It enables them to provide teacher opportunity payments, funds that go directly to teachers so they can choose their own professional development. Teachers could select to use their payment at a university that has a reputation for intensive professional development programs in math and science.

It incorporates the language of Senator GREGG of New Hampshire dealing with teacher quality provisions that are included in this amendment, including addressing teacher shortages. Due to rising enrollments, many school districts are having difficulty filling hundreds of teacher slots, and of those teachers already in the classroom, many lack the skills and knowledge to be effective teachers. Earlier, Senator KENNEDY had very interesting data that demonstrates this problem. The amendment clarifies that States and school districts are permitted to not only use the money to hire teachers to reduce class size but to also use the money to hire teachers to address the shortage of high-quality teachers. If a school district wishes to use these dollars to hire a teacher, they should have the freedom to hire teachers to reduce their class size or to address the shortage of high-quality teachers.

It includes compulsory language relating to class size, which exacerbates the shortage of high-quality teachers, in our view.

Requiring smaller class sizes would only exacerbate the teacher shortage because it forces school districts to hire more teachers when they are already having enough trouble hiring teachers for the classes they already offer.

During the next decade, enrollment growth and higher teacher attrition rates mean many districts will have the need for more teachers, obviously. Yet the real shortage in our country is not so much in the number of teachers as it is in getting qualified teachers to work in the classroom, especially in hard-to-serve areas, such as inner cities and rural schools.

That reminds me, during the debate on the education savings account, which was a tool this Congress passed at least two or three times and is yet to get past the President—but during that debate, Senator BYRD of West Virginia came to the floor. He ultimately supported the education savings account. He said—and I am paraphrasing it; I hope I am correct; Senator BYRD is pretty much a stickler for being correct—but he indicated he voted historically for all the funding measures over the last 30 years and he was not all that happy with what has happened and he was ready to try some new ideas.

The telling thing about his commentary to the Senate that day, in my judgment, was to describe where he went to school. I do not believe anybody would argue Senator BYRD is among the most capable, intellectual in the Senate. When he took us back to his schoolroom, it was a remarkable story.

He was educated in a one-room school for much of his early training. It had no heat and no air-conditioning. The plumbing was outside. It had a bucket of water which was the potable water—that was the drinking water—and a ladle. Yet that environment produced one of the most competent, intellectual Members of the Senate. It is something we should all remember. He obviously had a quality teacher. He was educated in those circumstances and went on to become one of our more famous Members of the Senate.

I repeat that during the next decade enrollment growth and higher teacher attrition rates mean many districts will have the need for more teachers. Yet the real shortage in our country is not so much in the number of teachers as it is in getting qualified teachers to work in the classroom, especially in hard-to-serve areas, such as inner cities and rural schools.

Many teachers lack the necessary skills and knowledge to be a high-quality teacher. More than 25 percent of new teachers in our Nation's schools are poorly qualified to teach. Studies have shown the mastery of the subject is the most tangible measure of teacher quality. Many teachers lack either a major or minor in the subject in which they are teaching.

One-third of all secondary school teachers, grades 7 through 12, who teach math have neither a major nor a minor in math or a related field; 25 percent of all secondary school teachers who teach English lack a major or minor in English or a related field; more than half of all physical science teachers did not major or minor in any physical science; and more than half of all history teachers neither majored nor minored in history.

The shortages are even more troubling in inner-city schools where students only have a 50–50 chance of being taught by a quality teacher. In high schools where more than 49 percent of the students qualify for free lunch, which are classified as high-poverty schools, 40 percent of all classes in those high-poverty schools are taught by underqualified math teachers. In more affluent schools, only 28 percent of the math classes are taught by unqualified math teachers.

I do not think either number is very impressive—the fact that nearly one out of three math classes taught in our more affluent schools can only muster two-thirds of the teachers who have the qualifications to teach the subject and that rises to nearly half in inner-city schools.

Nearly one-third of all English classes in high-poverty schools are taught by underqualified teachers.

The sad fact is that this amendment actually worsens the shortage of high-quality teachers.

I will move on to accountability. The second half of the Gregg provision in this amendment adds a strong accountability piece. The amendment stipulates that States are to monitor the progress of school districts in increasing both student achievement and the number of classes taught by high-quality teachers. If the school district fails to make progress after 3 years, the State is authorized to take control of the teacher dollars and use those funds on rigorous professional development, teacher reforms, such as merit pay, or other teacher initiatives to ensure student achievement increases and the number of high-quality teachers increases.

We do not prescribe a Federal ratio as to how much school districts must spend on recruitment versus how much to spend on professional development. We let States and districts set their own priorities. We do not focus on input measures—how much money is spent on what. Rather, we focus on outcomes and outcomes alone—student achievement and teacher quality. This accountability amendment ensures States and school districts will be held accountable for increasing student achievement and the number of high-quality teachers.

The recruitment provisions include in this amendment a section developed by Senators HUTCHISON of Texas, FRIST of Tennessee, and CRAPO of Idaho, which focuses on the need to recruit excellent teachers from other professions and from among our outstanding college graduates. Recruiting qualified people from other walks of life to enter the teaching profession will dramatically improve the quality of our teaching pool.

I outlined earlier the significant number of teachers teaching outside their subject area in schools throughout our country. The recruitment provisions in this amendment address the serious problem of underqualified teachers by attracting qualified teachers to step in and meet the needs. This amendment gives teacher quality the attention we believe it deserves.

I am pleased the other side of the aisle is amenable to the amendment.

I yield the floor so the Senator from Massachusetts can make his closing remarks, and then I believe we are getting close to coming to an end.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. FITZGERALD). The Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, we took a valuable and useful step a few moments ago when we preserved the vocational education legislation outside of the block grant, the basic Perkins program, which affects some 6 million children in the K–12 and some 3 million students in post-secondary programs.

I intend to offer an amendment on teacher quality tomorrow. I have spoken on it this afternoon.

Before this legislation is finished, there will be efforts made by members of our committee to also exclude the block granting of the Migrant Education Program and the homeless programs. I will take a moment to mention what the current situation is with regard to the Migrant Education Program.

The Migrant Education Program provides financial assistance to State educational agencies to establish and improve programs of education for children of migratory farm workers that enable them to meet the same academic standards as other children. To help achieve this objective, program services help migrant children overcome the educational disruption and other problems that result from repeated moves. Program funds also promote coordination of needed services across the States. The most recent data reported by States indicate more than 750,000 migrant children are eligible for services.

The Federal Migrant Education Program is the only ongoing source of support for these highly mobile migrant children. The poverty and mobility, and often limited English proficiency, characteristics of the migrant student population combine to make demands for educational services go well beyond the services traditionally supported under State and local education budgets.

No State currently provides ongoing funding for migrant programs to help these children. We are wiping out the Federal commitment. For example, the Migrant Education Program supports supplementary instruction in core academic subjects, beyond which title I typically provides, often provided outside the regular schoolday and in the summer designed to address the special educational needs of children who move and are out of school frequently.

Without these funds, many highly mobile migrant children may attend school sporadically throughout the year or not attend school at all. Without the funds, the local education groups are unlikely to provide the normal range of services to children who attend their schools for brief periods of time, or go out to find and enroll migrant children outside of normal school enrollment procedures, or grapple with either the school interruption problems faced by migrant children or their needs for special summer programs.

Without this program, States and the local educational authorities would have little incentive to identify and serve migrant children, who cross school districts and/or State boundaries.

No single local educational agency, and, in many cases, no single State, is responsible for the education of a migrant child. No single local educational agency, and, in many cases, no single State, provides educational services to a migrant child during a single year.

The Migrant Education Program encourages and supports collaborative efforts and interventions across State lines to accommodate the needs of migrant children.

The Migrant Education Program provides support services that link migrant children and their families to community services. For example, during the regular school year, almost half of migrant students receive social work/outreach services, about 30 percent receive guidance and counseling, and almost a fourth receive health services under the Migrant Education Program.

Effectively, the point is that certainly at the national level we are dropping the commitment to try to do something about all of these children.

With regard to the homeless children, nationally there were 625,000 school age children identified as homeless during the 1997–1998 school year. Without separate funding for this national program, it is unlikely that significant numbers of these children and their unique problems will be addressed. They have higher than average rates of poor health, anxiety, depression, withdrawal, delinquency, aggressive behavior, learning disabilities, and suicides. Those problems will not be addressed. Through participation in the existing program, the States are focusing on reducing the barriers homeless children face in enrolling in and attending school on a regular basis.

Because of national leadership, almost all the States have revised their laws. Almost all the States revised their laws, regulations, and policies to improve the access to education for homeless students. Twenty-seven States changed their residency laws or regulations. Otherwise, the children would not be able to be eligible. Almost all State coordinators report either that all the students can enroll without school records—that previously stopped children from being able to participate in the schools—or that they have made special allowances to expedite their record transfers. Thirty-five States eliminated the barriers of immunization and guardianship requirements, otherwise some homeless children would be prohibited from participating in services.

These are enormously vulnerable children. There is absolutely no reason or justification to eliminate these programs, block grant them, and send them to the States. The States have not responded to this population's unique needs.

In the absence of the homeless program, I think States would not have the resources to employ a State coordinator for homeless children and youth, a position that is responsible for ensuring that homeless children and youth have access to a free, appropriate public education.

Without the homeless program, the local educational authorities that rely on Federal funds to provide services to homeless children would have to find funds in their own operating budgets, which are already overextended, or stop providing supplemental services to these children, who are among the neediest.

Last year, we provided $29 million for the education of homeless children. That is going to be eliminated. These funds most likely will not be made up by the States. These children are going to be ill served. It is basically and fundamentally wrong. I think we are going to be abdicating our responsibilities if we do not target some resources to what I think has been an effective program.

We have had some hearings on this problem in the past. People have just been extraordinary in how committed and dedicated they have been and how they have stretched scarce resources to make a real difference in children's lives.

We in this body rarely go a day when someone isn't talking about our future being our children and our responsibility to them. We ought to understand what we are doing to the most vulnerable children in our society, the poorest children, the homeless children, the migrant children, the immigrant children, and others in failing to guarantee their protection. I take strong exception. And I will offer an amendment, with others. Others have offered an amendment to restore those programs. I look forward to that. Hopefully, we will have an opportunity to address that.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Washington.

Mr. GORTON. Mr. President, the subject before the Senate this afternoon, and until the vote is taken on it tomorrow, is the Lott-Gregg amendment to the Teacher Empowerment Act section of this bill.

The Teacher Empowerment Act itself is quite significant in a number of ways, primarily in focusing on increased teacher quality across the United States of America but, at the same time, allowing a maximum degree of flexibility in local choices with respect to how that teacher quality is, in fact, enhanced.

It provides a significant amount of money for teacher training that can also be used for increasing the number of teachers, for increasing the competition of those teachers most prized by our school districts across the country. For with the amendment that is added today—with the recruiting of people in midcareer from other professions, who will be quality teachers of particular subjects—it will provide a degree of protection against frivolous lawsuits when teachers or administrators or school authorities have taken actions that will protect the safety and security of students in classrooms and of the faculty and administration of the schools themselves. We literally have faced the situation in which actions taken in good faith, and for valid reasons, have subjected teachers and administrators to frivolous lawsuits brought by lawyers for highly disruptive and destructive students.

It does seem to me that the specific amendment on which we are going to vote will be effective in providing that kind of protection, providing a modest program to recruit quality people in midcareers into teaching, and to assure that the $2 billion authorization for teacher quality can be used in a widely significant fashion for increasing the quality of teaching, not only the quantity, though that is there, but the quality of teaching in our public schools.

The accountability, in this case, again, is going to be a student accountability. Are the results positive, from the perspective of student achievement in our schools? In that respect, of course, both the amendment that is before us at the present time and the portion of the bill to which the amendment applies are consistent with the overall philosophy of the bill, a philosophy that is perhaps summarized best by saying that after 35 years of procedural accountability—that is to say, proving that money was used for the precise purposes for which the authorization was directed, with a seeming total indifference to whether or not student achievement improved, a procedural accountability which was satisfied by filling out forms correctly and by having clean audits—now it is to be succeeded by a performance accountability, accountability that says, after all, that we aim our assistance to public education across the United States of America to see to it that our students themselves are better educated; that their test results in the multitude of achievement tests being developed across the United States show actual progress; that this is the accountability we wish; that this is the accountability that is found in Straight A's; that this is the kind of accountability that is found in the Teacher Enhancement Act in this bill; and that this is the goal of these amendments today.

We have a curious debate on the other side, one speaking about the successes of title I, a title with which all the goodwill in the world has not reduced the disparity between its beneficiaries and other students in the extended period of time; a position that says the status quo is to be protected at all costs; and a position that says parental control and influence over public education is something to be feared.

We on this side of the aisle have every hope that the rather dramatic change from procedural accountability to performance accountability will result in a true improvement in the quality of education being given to our schoolchildren as measured by their actual achievement. That is, in fact, our goal.

Having said that, I should also say there are at least some signs during this second week of debate over the Elementary and Secondary Education Act that we may be able to reach across the political divide and find a way to satisfy a substantial number of members of both parties in a way consistent with the precise goals I have outlined here with the proposition that we need to encourage innovation, that we need to encourage parental involvement, and that we need to provide a degree of trust and confidence in those men and women across the United States who have devoted their lives and their professional careers to the education of our children, together with those who volunteer for the slings and arrows of political campaigns and run for office as school board members—that perhaps all wisdom with respect to education policy does not preside in this body and in the Department of Education down the street; that perhaps those who know our children's names may very well know best what priorities should be funded in 17,000 different school districts with 17,000 different types of challenges across the United States.

The amendment before us at the present time leads us in that direction. The Teachers Enhancement Act that is a part of this bill leads us in that direction. Straight A's leads us in that direction. I hope we will soon have a proposal involving some reason from both sides of the political aisle in this body that will lead us in that direction as well.

At the present time, however, I commend to my colleagues the Lott-Gregg amendment. I think it improves an already very first-rate bill—the product of a tremendous amount of work on the part of the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions, one of the best pieces of working proposals in this body and by one of its committees in an extended period of time.

I have a far greater hope today than I did 2 or 3 weeks ago that this body may actually not only begin a debate on education but may conclude a debate on education with a successful vote, and at the very least send this thoughtful bill, slightly amended, to a conference committee, and one hopes from that conference committee to the President of the United States.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Vermont.

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Washington for his usual eloquence, as well as for his understanding and perception of the education problems in this country.

I would like to speak about other areas I think are important. We must look closely at these two areas during consideration of this legislation.

We are talking today about the need for improving the quality of teacher education and further improvements in the legislation before us for that purpose. I think we will find that we have reached agreement on that. One of the most critical parts of the equation in improving education is ensuring classrooms are led by quality teachers.

I am a member of the Goals 2000 panel. Here we are already in 2000 and we haven't reached these important education goals. I want to share with you some of the concerns about some of the areas in education where we need improvement, and what we intend to do through amendments to try to move us forward in these most critical education areas.

We received notice in 1983. President Ronald Reagan called on the Secretary of Education to convene a panel to examine the quality of education in our Nation. It was very tersely stated in a phrase that says it all, if a foreign nation had imposed upon us the educational system that we had in the country especially our elementary and secondary education, it would be considered an act of war.

Since 1983, we have seen measurable improvement across this Nation in reaching the goals that we set at that time. This bill provides us with an opportunity to reevaluate where we are. It is the year 2000 and we have not achieved many of our most important and pressing educational goals.

Still, we have learned a great deal since that time about the area of huge need in this Nation involving preschool children—the 0 to 3, or 0 to 5 age group, depending on what you want to talk about. These are problems that are created when the parents do not take a leadership role in educating the children. Often times, sadly, it is because they don't have a strong educational backgroud themselves. Some are illiterate and do not have the tools to help their children as they grow up to enter school ready to learn.

The amendment that will be offered by Senator STEVENS and myself, and others will, on a voluntary basis—I want to emphasize over and over again that it is a voluntary basis—to provide information for parents, information for child care providers, and information to schools to ensure that as a child grows, they all have the basic educational opportunities to learn to read and achieve academically. The successful passage of this amendment will make sure that we take care of those children who currently do not have that kind of assistance and educational support in a variety of ways. It is a critical issue that must be addressed.

Some years ago, studies were done on the impact to the growth and development of a child's brain. A comparison was done between the brain of a child who received attention, support, nurturing and good care, and one who unfortunately, like too many, had little or no real nurturing as children. The brain of the well-developed child who had all the nurturing necessary was what we would like to see—a large healthy brain. For comparison, they showed you one of an old man in his eighties or nineties which was shriveled up and shrunk. The other picture was the brain of a child that was not nurtured and did not receive the care that a normal child should receive from a parent. That child's brain was just as shriveled up as the old man's. That is what can happen to a baby, a very young person that does not receive the care, attention and nurturing at home that it should.

We will have an amendment which will assist us in understanding that, and which will make sure that throughout that period of time, in a voluntary way, the information will be available.

I ask unanimous consent that the document explaining the Early Learning Opportunities Act amendment be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

EARLY LEARNING OPPORTUNITIES ACT AMENDMENT

PURPOSE

The purpose of this amendment is to increase the availability of voluntary programs, services, and activities that support early childhood education and promote school readiness of young children (age birth to 6) by helping parents, caretakers, child care providers, and educators who desire to incorporate appropriate developmental activities into the daily lives of pre-school age children, and to facilitate broader involvement of the community to develop a cohesive network of early learning opportunities. The Secretary of HHS is responsible for administering this initiative in collaboration with the Secretary of Education.

COORDINATION OF FEDERAL PROGRAMS

The legislation requires and provides the authority to the Secretaries of the Department of Health and Human Services and Education to develop effective mechanisms to resolve conflicts between early learning programs and remove barriers to the creation of a community-driven, unified system of services, activities, and programs for young children and their families.

PRESERVING PARENTAL RIGHTS AND ROLES

While the legislation focuses on providing more opportunities for parents to participate in activities designed to promote early learning, it is essential that participation be voluntary. The bill clearly states that parents are not required to participate in any programs, services or activities funded under this part and reinforces that parents are their child's first and most effective teacher.

FEDERAL FUNDING

$3.25 billion over three years for a discretionary grant program to the states; $750,000,000 in the first year, increasing to $1 billion in the second year and $1.5 billion in year 3.

GRANTS TO STATES

The federal share is 85% for the first two years of the grant, decreasing to 80% in the second and third years, and to 75% for the remainder of the initiative. There is a broad definition of how states can meet the match requirements including cash or in-kind facilities, equipment or services. The funds are allocated to the states based equally on the population of children aged 4 or under and the number of children aged 4 or under who are living in poverty. There is a small state minimum of .4% and a 1% set-aside for Indian Tribes, Native Alaskans. Hawaii Natives, and the Outlying areas. States are not permitted to use the funds to supplant existing funding for child care, Head Start, and other early learning programs.

LIMIT ON ADMINISTRATIVE COSTS

Administrative costs are limited for both the Department of Health and Human Services (3%) and the States (2% for state-level coordination of services, 2% for administrative costs, and 3% for training/technical assistance/wage incentives).

STATE ELIGIBILITY

To receive a grant allotment, States must submit an application, designate a lead entity, ensure that funds are distributed on a competitive basis throughout the state, ensure that a broad array/variety of early learning programs, activities, and services receive funds and develop mechanisms to ensure compliance with the requirement of the initiative. States also are required to develop performance goals based on an assessment of needs and available resources and annually report the State's progress towards meeting those goals.

AWARDING GRANT TO LOCALITIES

States must award grants consistent with the performance goals set by the State. To the maximum extent possible, states will ensure that a broad variety of early learning programs which provide a continuity of services across the age spectrum will be funded. The state must fund programs that help increase parenting skills, that provide direct activities for young children, as well as improve the skills of child care providers. Local Councils receiving funds will work with local educational agencies to identify cognitive, social, and developmental abilities which are expected to be mastered prior to a child entering school. Programs, services and activities funded under this initiative will represent developmentally appropriate steps to mastery of those abilities. Preference is given to grants which include services to areas of greatest need (as defined by the state), and to grants which increase local collaboration to maximize the use of existing resources. There is no definition of entities eligible to receive grants, in order to facilitate the broadest possible participation among local community resources.

USE OF FUNDS

Local Councils receiving funds from the State grant allotment will distribute the funds to community resources to:

(1) Help parents, care givers, child care providers, and educators increase their capacity to facilitate the development of cognitive, language comprehension, expressive language, social-emotion, and motor skills and promote learning readiness in their young children;

(2) Promote effective parenting

(3) Enhance early childhood literacy

(5) Increase access to early learning opportunities for young children with special needs, by facilitating coordination with other programs serving this population

(8) Remove ancillary barriers to early learning, including transportation difficulties and absence of programs during non-traditional work times.

ACCOUNTABILITY

The State is primarily responsible for monitoring the use of funds by state grantees. If the State determines that the grantee is not complying with the requirements of the grant, the state must inform the grantee of the problems, provide training and technical assistance to help them correct the problems, and if that fails, terminate the grant.

AVAILABILITY OF FUNDS

The State has 3 years to expand the funds received under the State's allotment. Any unexpended funds will be used by HHS to fund research-based early learning demonstration projects.

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the vote in relation to the Gregg amendment occur at 2:15 p.m. on Tuesday, May 9.

In addition, it would be my hope that by late morning tomorrow the Senate would be in a position to conduct a second vote to be scheduled following the 2:15 vote which will be relative to the Lieberman amendment. However, while that consent is being worked out, I ask unanimous consent that the next two first-degree amendments in order to S. 2 be the following, limited to relevant second degrees following a vote in relationship to the amendment.

The amendments are the Stevens-Jeffords amendment on early childhood investment, and the Kentucky amendment on teacher quality.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, I have just been discussing the amendment which we just got unanimous consent to consider.

I would like to briefly discuss another amendment that I am hopeful that I will have an opportunity to offer this week. It addresses another significant educational problem we face in this nation.

As I said, on the goals panel we studied what is happening with our young people. It is telling when one considers those young people who end up incarcerated.

Eighty percent of the individuals incarcerated in jail in this country are school dropouts.

Consider those students that don't drop out. Far too many of our students who stay in high school are not receiving the kind of education they need to prepare them to enter the workforce.

Therefore, I will have an amendment that tackles these critically important problems. We must do what we can to make sure that young people stay in school and we must do what we can to ensure that students receive a relevant education in high school. Students graduating from high school must be literate. At the same time, we have got to strive for improvement in our high schools so that our nation's young people will have the skills they need to graduate and get a job.

Since 80 percent of people incarcerated in our institutions are school dropouts, it is essential we pay more attention to those young people as well. Those institutions must have the capacity to provide those completing their sentences with literacy skills and are job skills so that they can enter the workforce and not return to crime.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I once again come before the Senate to discuss an often-overlooked population in our schools, talented and gifted students. It's time that we recognized the nearly three million students who are talented and gifted and provide them with the assistance they need.

For the past three years, I've been working to change the way people think about talented and gifted students. In order to do this, several destructive myths must be dispelled.

Currently, many schools operate under the false assumption that these students are just ''extra-smart'' and can fend for themselves with a little help. One such example of this faulty thinking is giving a talented and gifted third grader a fifth grade math textbook.

Students who display gifted qualities look at the world and think in a very different way from other pupils. Instead of thinking in a sequential or linear fashion like most students, they jump from one concept or idea to another. Specialized teaching and activities, designed for their thought process, will help these students excel.

In addition, these students often have problems fitting in socially because they are 'different' and suffer emotionally from peer rejection and stigmatization. Tragically, as a result, some talented and gifted students experience depression, eating disorders and high levels of anxiety. Some are also vulnerable to violence and antisocial behavior.

Another myth is that gifted and talented programs only help middle and upper-class white students. Talented and gifted students cover the entire spectrum in terms of race, background, geographical region, and economic status. In other words, gifted students can be found in every classroom.

Along with getting rid of false notions and stereotypes about gifted and talented students, we need to direct resources to these kids to ensure that they will have an educational program that fits their needs.

I would like to thank Senator JEFFORDS for his leadership and for including provisions to help talented and gifted students in the Educational Opportunities Act, S. 2. The provisions found in S. 2 are based on a bill I introduced as the Gifted and Talented Education Act, S. 505.

These provisions establish a program through which states can apply for grants in order to fashion their own talented and gifted programs. States can use the money for a number of activities such as teacher training, equipment, materials, and technology. Under this program, states have a great deal of leeway in determining how best to meet the needs of their students. It also ensures that 88 percent of these funds will go toward enhancing student learning, not administrative costs.

These talented and gifted student provisions fill a gap in current education policy. There is no federal directive to serve this student population. The only federal program dealing directly with talented and gifted education is the Jacob Javits Program. However, that program is directed toward research, not the students themselves.

Furthermore, there is a great deal of disparity between the programs available to meet the needs and quality teacher preparedness of talented and gifted students. While most states do have some kind of talented and gifted program, the programs are not uniform across school districts and grade levels.

I think all of us, regardless of party affiliation, agree that all students should get the education they need. While all students have the potential to make great contributions to society, the reality, Mr. President, is that talented and gifted students have the greatest potential to be either the leaders of tomorrow or a burden to society. These students will either put their talents to good use or they will direct their energy and gifts toward destructive, wasteful activities. It's important that we help to direct these students in a positive way.

As a fiscal conservative, I have always fought for the wise and efficient use of the public's money. Investing in our future leaders, artists, scientists, and law enforcement officials, among others, is the most sound investment we can make. Again, I applaud Senator JEFFORDS for including this important provision in the bill and I urge you to join us in making a commitment to our nation's talented and gifted students.

Mr. JEFFORDS. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. GRASSLEY. I yield.

Mr. JEFFORDS. I thank the Senator for those pertinent and eloquent remarks.

I deeply appreciate the effort the Senator has gone to, making sure the talented and gifted program is improved to meet the goals for which it was intended. We have a tremendous opportunity now with modern technology to be able to link people up and broaden the availability of gifted and talented programs through the State and the country.

If we fail to do that, we will not be maximizing the opportunities we have to give these young people who are the best hope—in many cases, for leadership in the future—to be able to reach the goals they choose.

I thank the Senator for the excellent words and what he has given to this bill.

Mr. GRASSLEY. The Senator has expressed a perception that is very important. It is because of that perception that the Senator was able to include this in the bill.

Mr. LUGAR. Mr. President, I have an amendment to the Elementary and Secondary Education Act Reauthorization bill. My amendment would increase the authorization for the Comprehensive School Reform Program from $200 million to $500 million. I believe that there are few areas of this bill that can have a more positive impact on education in American than the Comprehensive School Reform Program.

Educators in this country are trying hard to improve the success of their schools. Teachers, administrators, and parents routinely organize and staff tutorial programs, remedial classes, after-school programs, and innumerable other initiatives designed to bolster school performance. But in most cases, achieving breakthrough results requires research-based reform that embraces innovation and instills discipline in both the children and the methods of the schools.

School-wide reform programs effectively implemented through the hard work of administrators, teachers, and parents have transformed many struggling schools. Unfortunately, some schools—especially poorer Title I schools—lack the means to pay for these programs. The Comprehensive School Reform Program, CSRP, was established three years ago to help public elementary or secondary schools pay for the initial costs of implementing comprehensive strategies for educational reform. Under CSRP, grants to individual schools are to be at least $50,000 per year (renewable up to three years), in addition to all other federal aid for which they may be eligible.

Schools that adopt comprehensive reform plans generally have searched the education landscape for effective methods. They have studied intensively the reform programs that have been developed by educators around the country. And they have chosen the program that they believe will produce the best results in their school.

Most schools that adopt a comprehensive reform plan do so based on two premises: first, that significantly improving the performance of their school demands a complete reorientation of its resources, methods, and culture; and second, that the reform plan should be based on a body of sound research and should have a proven record of success.

Many reform plans focus on reading, because it is the critical foundation for success in other subjects and in later grades. In most cases, the problems of a student who fails begin early. So must the solutions. We should start by ensuring that all students are able to read by the end of the third grade. Educators widely proclaim that this is a crucial goal. If students have not achieved this standard, they have a very hard time catching up in later grades. The inability to read well handicaps the rest of their studies, and their employment prospects later in life are greatly diminished. In Indiana, as many as a third of all students fall behind by the end of the third grade. Indiana's performance is not unusual—the entire country is failing to meet the challenge of educating all our children.

Mr. President, my first elective office was as a member of the Indianapolis Board of School Commissioners in the mid-1960s. At that time, our school board struggled with basic questions of improvements in educational standards, desegregation of schools, and getting children proper nutrition and immunizations. Since that time, as a mayor and as a Senator, I have followed closely the development of education in America. In some areas we have done well. In other areas, our progress has been disappointing.

But during that time, few developments have encouraged me as much as the advances in comprehensive school reform. There are many reform programs achieving positive results. But to illustrate the concept, I would like to describe one in particular. This is ''Success for All,'' which was developed by Dr. Robert Slavin at Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore. Success for All is a great idea that has proven its value in many schools across the country, including 13 in Indiana.

Reading is serious business at a Success for All school. For 90 minutes each day, students are grouped by their reading ability rather than their grade level. This allows students who excel at reading to progress at their own rate, while ensuring that students who fall behind will receive intensive attention to stimulate their progress. To set the tone and importance of the reading period, students proceed silently and purposefully through the hall to their reading group classroom.

Once the period begins, there is a rapid-fire of sequential lessons. Each segment is short enough to maintain the interest and attention of even the most distracted student. The lessons are fun but rigorously structured. Teachers read a story. Then students are involved in reading the words to the story in unison, discussing the story with a partner, then answering questions to test comprehension. At the completion of a successful lesson segment, students choose one of many group cheers. This positive reinforcement both encourages children, and fosters group cooperation.

During the reading period, every staff person in the school is involved in reading. The art teacher or gym teacher may be tutors, for example. Parents also agree to have their children read to them for 20 minutes each night. If this doesn't happen, adults are available to work with the students during the morning school breakfast period.

Because Success for All depends on the commitment of the entire faculty and because it requires such a fundamental change in the way a school operates, Dr. Slavin requires that at least 80 percent of the faculty must approve Success for All by secret ballot.

The discipline and accountability of the program greatly reduce the possibility that students will fail. If a student falls behind, tutoring sessions are set up to get the student caught up. By teaching children to read in the early grades, our schools can avoid holding students back, promoting them with insufficient ability or transferring them out of the normal curriculum to special education courses. Referrals to special education in Success for All schools have been shown to decrease by approximately 50 percent. In schools where Success for All is taught, students learn to read by the third grade. By the fifth grade, students in these schools are testing a full grade level ahead of students in other schools.

I would strongly encourage each of my colleagues to visit a Success for All school, if they have not already done so. I have had the pleasure of visiting Maplewood Elementary School in Wayne Township, Marion County, Washington Elementary in Gary, and Fairfield Elementary in Fort Wayne, which has had Success for All since 1995. In my judgment, anyone who sees Success for All in action will become a believer. I have contacted every school district in my state to suggest that they take a look at Success for All or another comprehensive school reform program based on rigorous research.

Mr. President, the amendment I am offering today would allow more struggling schools to adopt comprehensive school reform programs. These programs are a comparative bargain for our schools and our children when one considers their success at preventing the enormous costs of retention, special education and illiteracy. But many schools need help paying for the start-up costs and the reading materials associated with comprehensive reform programs.

Most of the more than 1,500 schools nationwide that use Success for All fund it with the Federal Title I program. Others have tapped private sources. But increasing funding for the Comprehensive School Reform Program is the most direct way to give more local schools the chance to embrace school-wide reform and transform the lives of their students. The program deserves more support because its positive impact on literacy and the ultimate success of students is so demonstrable.

Each child must learn to read. The quality of life for that child depends upon that single achievement, as does the economic future of our country. I ask my colleagues to support this amendment.

MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that there be a period for the transaction of routine morning business, with Senators permitted to speak for up to 10 minutes each.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

UNIVERSITY OF NORTHERN IOWA'S TONY DAVIS

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I am here to discuss the achievements of an outstanding student athlete at an outstanding institution.

Tony Davis, a secondary education major at the University of Northern Iowa—my alma mater—was recently named the NCAA Champion for wrestling in the 149-pound division.

Tony was born and raised in Chicago.

Before coming to UNI, he wrestled at Mount Carmel High School in Chicago and Iowa Central Community College, where he received two national junior college championships.

Tony chose to come to UNI for two reasons: to wrestle at a Division I school and to study to be a teacher and coach.

Before the 1999–2000 season, Tony was ranked first in the nation in his weight division. And, he maintained that ranking and came to the NCAA finals with a 26–1 record.

Tony's life philosophy is this: focus and dedication lead to success at all levels.

Looking at the road Tony has traveled to reach this point, it is evident focus and dedication played a large role in his success.

And, to quote Tony:

> God played a big role in . . . getting on the right track of life. I have a lot of people to thank along the way. It was a long way to come. The most important thing is I got here.

This past week was finals week at UNI. And, I want to commend Tony Davis for his commitment and dedication—not only to sports but also to academics.

Next year, Tony Davis will return to UNI—again for two reasons. Tony will be finishing up his academic degree while also serving as an assistant wrestling coach.

UNI has a long tradition of excellence in training teachers.

This legacy of excellence in education will be continued as Tony has an opportunity to train wrestlers to succeed—both on and off the mat.

And so, I salute Tony Davis, his teammates, Coach Mark Manning, and the University of Northern Iowa for supporting each student on and off the mat.

Go Panthers!

SHOTINGS IN PITTSBURGH, PENNSYLVANIA

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I seek recognition today to speak about an incident that has sent shock waves throughout the conscience of our Nation. On April 28th, in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, five of my constituents were brutally murdered and one critically injured in what seems to be a hate crime. Reports indicate that the perpetrator actively and methodically sought out his minority victims during the 72-minute rampage. The victims of this brutal rampage were a 63-year-old Jewish woman, a 31-year-old man of Indian descent, a 22-year-old African-American student, a 27-year-old Vietnamese man, and a 34-year-old Chinese-American man. In addition to the five people killed, another 25-year-old man of Indian descent was shot in the neck and critically injured. The alleged killer also fired rounds at two synagogues and spray-painted the word ''Jew'' and two swastikas on the wall of one of them.

The alleged murderer was arraigned on five counts of homicide, seven counts of ethnic intimidation, three counts of criminal mischief, two counts each of arson and institutional vandalism and one count each of attempted homicide, firearms violations, reckless endangerment and aggravated assault. This senseless rampage that left five people dead and one in critical condition poses some of the most important and vexing law enforcement challenges currently facing our Nation. Such heinous hate-filled acts of violence divide our communities, intimidate our citizens, and poison our collective spirit. While our hearts are grieving for those who have lost loved ones, we must try and find some consolation by using this atrocity to send a strong message that hate crimes will not be tolerated.

Such vicious attacks are a form of terrorism that threaten the entire Nation and undermine the ideals on which we were founded. I am a principal sponsor of S. 622, the Hate Crimes Prevention Act of 1999. I was the District Attorney in Philadelphia for eight years and I did not like Federal encroachment on State jurisdiction—but there are some instances when Federal intervention is necessary. Some of the ugliest instances of violence in our nation have been motivated by hatred based on race, color, religion, national origin, sexual orientation, and disability. It is in the case where it is plain that it was a hate crime situation—in these extremely usual situations, the I believe Federal authority ought to be present where it is necessary.

I know that there are those that are concerned about the expansion of Federal jurisdiction, which is something that we should be very careful about. It is with this very concern in mind that this legislation has been narrowly tailored to target a very, very important area—it has been done with a scalpel and not a meat axe. We need to let people out there know that if the crime is bad enough and the local prosecutors won't act that there is a Federal authority to come in where absolutely necessary. Current law, 18 United States Code, Section 245, permits federal prosecution of a hate crime only if the crime was motivated by bias based on race, religion, national origin, or color and the assailant intended to prevent the victim from exercising a ''federally protected right.'' These activities are: (A) enrolling in or attending a public school or public college; (B) participating in or enjoying a service, program, facility or activity provided or administered by any state or local government; (C) applying for or enjoying employment; (D) serving in a state court as a grand or petit juror; (E) traveling in or using a facility of interstate commerce; and (F) enjoying the goods or services of certain places of public accommodation. The statute's dual requirement that the government has to prove that the defendant committed an offense not only because of the victim's race, color, religion, or national origin, but also because of the victim's participation in one of six narrowly defined ''federally protected activities'' substantially limits the potential for federal prosecution of hate crimes, even when the crime is particularly heinous. The Hate Crime Prevention Act will make it easier for the Federal government to successfully prosecute ate crimes by amending current law to eliminate the dual requirement and by expanding the list groups entitled to protection under Federal law to include women, homosexuals and the disabled. Under this bill, hate crimes that cause death or bodily injury can be investigated federally, regardless of whether the victim was exercising a federally protected right. In cases involving violent hate crimes based on the victims gender, sexual orientation, or disability, the bill would make it a Federal crime to willfully cause bodily injury to any person, or attempt to do so through use of a firearm or explosive device, whenever the incident affected or involved interstate commerce. No longer would Federal criminal civil rights jurisdiction hinge upon whether a racial murder occurs on a public sidewalk versus a private parking lot. No longer would the Federal government be without the power to work with State and local officials in the investigation and prosecution of a racist who targets and assaults an African American. Criminals will no longer be able to evade Federal prosecution simply because their victims were not enrolling in a public school, using a place of public accommodation, or participating in any of the six federally protected activities at the time they were assaulted.

Mr. President, this is a bill that is narrowly tailored to reach only the most egregious forms of hate crimes. It is important to note that this bill does not impact issues such as job discrimination, political speech or graffiti.

America is the great melting pot. People of different races, religion, and creed join together from all around the globe seeking freedom—religious freedom, political freedom and economic freedom. But unfortunately in our society today there are those who harbor animus towards others because of the color of their skin or the church they attend. Few crimes tear more deeply at the fabric of our Nation than crimes motivated by such hatred. We must continue to work towards freeing our Nation from such violence, discrimination, hatred, and bigotry through education and public awareness. However, while we work towards this goal we must ensure that each and every American is protected from crimes based on race, color, religion, national origin, gender, sexual orientation, or disability.

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

RICHARD B. HARVEY

• Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, today I honor Dr. Richard B. Harvey, Distinguished Service Professor of Political Science on the occasion of his retirement from Whittier College. Over the span of four decades, Dr. Harvey has also served as Assistant Dean, Dean of Academic Affairs and Chair of the Political Science Department of Whittier College.

In addition to his academic pursuits, Dr. Harvey is the accomplished author of The Dynamics of California Government and Politics, a well known textbook in its sixth edition, Earl Warren, Governor of California, and a number of articles and book reviews. He is also a radio commentator, delivering political analysis of election results.

His educational leadership has inspired countless young students to pursue civic opportunities. Dr. Harvey's Politics Outside the Classroom course exposed students various powerhouses in the Los Angeles and Sacramento areas. Students met and discussed California politics with some of the state's most influential political officials, learning more about the practical world of politics than a textbook or lecture can offer.

Dr. Harvey's dedication to educating students and his belief in the significance of the political process are worthy of recognition. He earned a B.A. degree from Occidental College, and M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from the University of California, Los Angeles.

Mr. President, I ask my colleagues to join me in wishing Dr. Richard Harvey best wishes on his retirement and in all of his future endeavors. His dedication and commitment to teaching California politics for over forty years has set an example that will be emulated for years to come.•

TRIBUTE TO NATIONAL LIFE

• Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, I rise today to honor an organization that has served the state of Vermont, and the nation, for 150 years. National Life has served the needs of millions of Americans during this time, starting with its first policy, issued in 1850, and continuing into the contemporary insurance business. As Chairman of the Senate Health, Education, Labor and Pension Committee, I can personally attest to how valuable their services have been and continue to be. However, National Life is more than just a business, it is an archetype of community relations and a leader in the promotion of ethical market conduct.

National Life was founded in 1848 by Dr. Julius Dewey as a mutual life insurance company. The first claim was paid to a policy owner who had traveled to California for the Gold Rush. From this beginning, National Life has expanded to include 800 career and general agents, and over 3,000 independent brokers. National Life has also grown to include some of the most prestigious services in America, including the Sentinel Fund—established in 1968, the American Guaranty and Trust—chartered in Delaware in 1914, and the national Retirement plan Advisors—founded in 1940.

In 1998, National Life joined the Insurance Marketplace Standards Association. This group promotes ethics in market conduct of the life insurance industry. Among the criteria that National Life had to meet were high standards of honesty in fairness to customers, fair competition, quick resolution of customer disputes and complaints, and customer-focused sales and service. Needless to say, National Life met the criteria in 1998, as they have throughout their long and prestigious history.

This 150th Anniversary also marks a rare meeting of past, present, and future, in 1960, the National Life building was opened. At the dedication ceremony, a time capsule was interred in the floor of the lobby. This time capsule will be opened on May 12, 2000, and we will be able to compare where we are today with where we thought we would be. The hopes and wishes of yesterday have evolved into today's reality, and the year 2000, once an incomprehensible milestone, is no longer the distant future.

While the past and present will merge at this ceremony, the anniversary also provides an opportunity to look forward. True to form, National Life again initiates a bond with the community; among the entries in the Year 2000 time capsule will be the predictions of children of Central Vermont. The hopes and wishes of these children for the future are significant, as they will be the ones living it. Recognizing this, National Life is also contributing money to each participating public elementary school. The students' whose predictions will be included in the time capsule, along with their respective schools, will receive an additional contribution.

On this occasion of celebrating the venerable and storied past of National Life, let us pay tribute to their Vermont roots and their contributions to the Vermont economy during the past century and a half. Far from simply administering to their community, National Life is a part of it. National Life has realized from the start that the investment we make in the children of today will pay dividends in the leaders of tomorrow. For their continued commitment to the community and their customers, they should be commended.•

A TRIBUTE TO THE SOUTH DAKOTA STATE MEDICAL ASSOCIATION ALLIANCE

• Mr. JOHNSON. Mr. President, I rise today to recognize the South Dakota State Medical Association (SDSMA) Alliance. This year the SDSMA Alliance will celebrate its 90th anniversary, making it the oldest continuous medical Alliance in the United States. For ninety years, this physicians' spouses organization has proudly been the volunteer hands and voices of the South Dakota State Medical Association.

Though their accomplishments may not be always easily enumerated or quantified, their impact has been felt across every mile of the state of South Dakota. The SDSMA Alliance has led or united with other organizations in an effort to insure that our communities are healthier and safer. Members of the SDSMA Alliance have always reached out to feed the hungry, give warmth to those who were cold, provide shelter and safety to the abused, and bring smiles and joy to children in need of books or toys. Health promotion and community projects are, indeed, the cornerstone of the Alliance.

Oftentimes, the mission statement of an organization tells us all we need to know about the character of the individuals who have joined together. In the case of the SDSMA Alliance, this statement holds true once again. Their mission to promote public health, create safer communities, protect the patient-physician relationship, and generate funds to help educate future physicians is a testament to their desire to positively impact every South Dakota community in which their work is done.

As just one example of the Alliance's hard work and dedication, last June they declared-not war-but peace on all school campuses throughout out state. Their focus was not just on guns and grenades, but bullying and fist fights, taunting and threats, intolerance and isolation, because that, as we all know, is where the problems usually begin.

To emphasize the need to provide our children and educators with a safe school environment, the SDSMA Alliance launched a campaign to provide K–3rd grade students with conflict resolution and self-esteem building activities. Thousands of ''I Can Choose,'' ''I Can Be Safe,'' ''Hands Are Not For Hitting,'' and ''Be A Winner'' workbooks were distributed to schools and shelters throughout our state. Their goal was to arm children with self-esteem and to teach them how to make healthier and safer choices. It is efforts such as these that weave the fabric of our communities closer together and promote safe, learning environments for South Dakota's children.

Mr. President, it is with great honor that I rise today to recognize the South Dakota State Medical Association Alliance for ninety years of hard work and dedication to the health and safety of the people of South Dakota. I applaud the SDSMA Alliance's efforts to combat those forces in our society which would jeopardize the mental and physical wellness of any citizen. I sincerely thank the Alliance for their positive contributions to South Dakota's communities, and I hope that one day we can stand together and say, ''Mission accomplished.''•

TRIBUTE TO STERLING EDWARDS RIVES, JR.

• Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I rise to pay tribute to a friend and patriot Sterling Edwards Rives, Jr. of Petersburg, Virginia who died on February 13, 2000, at the age of 78 years.

A native of Surry County, sterling served in the Army at the close of World War II and then spent a year building airfields in the Philippines. He returned to a position as an inspector with the U.S. Department of Agriculture traveling with his wife Virginia Anne and newborn son Sterling III throughout the Southeast grading peanuts, potatoes and produce. Two more sons Andrew II an Bailey were born as they moved to Petersburg where he began his 35-year career where he held leadership positions in the Christ and Grace Episcopal Church.

Sterling Rives served on the Virginia Republican State Central Committee, as a delegate to four national conventions, vice-chairman of the Petersburg Electoral Board, and as a delegate to the White House Council on Aging.

President Ronald Reagan once told me that ''Politics is not a spectator sport.''

No one took that more to heart than Sterling Rives who believed that it was his civic responsibility and patriotic duty to contribute freely his time and talents to elect those he supported to public office. I was privileged to be one of those public servants whom Sterling took by the hand and guided towards election day after election day.

Sterling Rives drove the original footings for the foundation of the Republican Party of Virginia. He and his family gave tirelessly in election after election.

Just last year Virginians elected a Republican Governor, Lt. Governor,

Attorney General and a new Republican majority in the House of Delegates and the Senate for the first time in our state's history. That impressive victory was a most appropriate tribute to Sterling Rives' long public service encouraging people to be active in politics.

We have far too few citizens who recognize the importance of the political process in preserving our democracy and our freedom. The life of Sterling Rives will stand as a model for patriots who seek to preserve our liberty. I know my colleagues join me in paying tribute to Sterling Rives and extending to his family our deepest sympathy.●

RECOGNITION OF MOUNTAIN HOME JUNIOR HIGH SCHOOL STUDENTS

● Mrs. LINCOLN. Mr. President, I am honored to rise today to pay tribute to an exceptional group of students from Mountain Home Junior High School in my home state of Arkansas. These students won first place in the state competition of the ''We the People . . . The Citizen and the Constitution'' program. I am proud to report that the following students will represent my home state at the national competition this May 6–8 in Washington, DC:

Matthew Brinza, T.C. Burnett, Patrick Carter, Cody Garrison, Meredith Griffin, Kayla Hawthorne, Delia Lee, Megan Matty, Zachary Milholland, Stacy Miller, Jennifer Nassimbene, Rebeca Neis, Patty Schwartz, Carrie Toole, and Kris Zibert.

I also want to say a special word of thanks to their teacher, Patsy Ramsey, who deserves much of the credit for the success of the class.

The We the People . . . program is an outstanding educational initiative developed specifically to educate young people about the Constitution and the Bill of Rights. Students who compete at the three-day national competition, which is modeled after hearings in the U.S. Congress, testify as constitutional experts before a panel of judges representing various regions of the country. The students are then asked a series of challenging questions to test their depth of understanding and ability to apply their constitutional knowledge.

Teaching students about the benefits of public service and the value of representative government is essential to the long-term viability of our nation's democracy. Since its inception in 1987, more than 26 million students and 75,000 educators nationwide have participated in this worthwhile program designed to encourage civic awareness and understanding. I am extremely proud of the Mountain Home students who have earned the opportunity to compete in the We the People . . . finals in Washington, DC. I wish them well in their endeavor and know they will provide an excellent example for others in my state and the nation to follow.●

GOODWILL INDUSTRIES WEEK

● Mr. GRAMS. Mr. President, I rise today to commemorate Goodwill Industries Week and call attention to a leader in job training and employment services for people with disabilities and other barriers to employment.

Nearly a century ago, Reverend Edgar Helms, a Methodist minister from Boston, founded Goodwill on the premise of reusing household goods and clothing from wealthy neighborhood homes to create a system that provides the poor with training, jobs, and self-esteem. The Goodwill philosophy of ''a hand up, not a hand out'' was born, and has blossomed into a $1.5 billion nonprofit organization. Dr. Helms' own words described Goodwill Industries as both an ''Industrial program as well as a social service enterprise . . . a provider of employment, training and rehabilitation for people of limited employability, and a source of temporary assistance for individuals whose resources were depleted.''

Just a few of the programs offered include retail skills training through a partnership with Target stores, service technician training on-site at Valvoline Instant Oil Change locations, and construction skills training at Habitat for Humanity building sites. These programs, matched with Goodwill employment services, prepare people to enter the workforce in high-demand fields.

Goodwill Stores funnel nearly 84 cents of every dollar spent at Goodwill towards employment and training programs for people faced with barriers to employment. This includes individuals with disabilities, people with limited work history, those who have experienced corporate downsizing, and recipients of government support programs. By operating autonomously, each of the 182 Goodwill member organizations adapts its services to meet the needs of its local community. This allows them to design specific programs and services that give Goodwill graduates the appropriate skills they need to find work close to home.

Goodwill programs may not be for everyone, but Goodwill Industries International, through its employment and training efforts, provided necessary services for nearly 321,000 people worldwide in 1998, people who now have the tools to accomplish the goals in life that were once beyond their grasp.

For this week of May 7–13, I commend those who have made a difference in someone's life through the services of Goodwill Industries and those who accomplish new heights in their careers thanks to these much-needed programs.●

SISTER CITIES OF NORTH ADAMS, MASSACHUSETTS AND NOISIEL, FRANCE

● Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, it's a privilege for me to commend the new sister cities of North Adams, Massachusetts and Noisiel, France. They will officially establish a sister-city relationship on May 20. I extend my warmest congratulations to both cities as they embark on this excellent opportunity.

North Adams and Noisiel have a great deal in common. They have similar population sizes, and they are communities that worked effectively to overcome economic difficulties during the 1980's. Both cities have revitalized former manufacturing plants to create contemporary arts facilities that will attract visitors from many other nations. These two cities have shared remarkably similar experiences, and I commend them both for their impressive success.

Last year, the City of North Adams welcomed Deputy Mayor Daniel Vachez of Noisiel. He visited the many cultural and historic treasures that make North Adams a wonderful example of New England's history and heritage. Mayor John Barrett III has done an outstanding job of supporting impressive development initiatives for the city, and I commend him for his leadership.

I'm sure that the new sister city relationship will be a successful initiative. The relationship is a tribute to the vision and dedication of Mayor Barrett, Deputy Mayor Vachez and the many others in both cities whose enthusiasm and energy have made this project possible. I'm confident that both North Adams and Noisiel will benefit significantly from this relationship, and that their program will be an outstanding example to cities worldwide. I congratulate them for their achievement, and I look forward to a very productive sister city relationship.●

THE 70TH ANNIVERSARY OF ANTHONY WAYNE ELEMENTARY SCHOOL

● Mr. ABRAHAM. Mr. President, I rise today to recognize Anthony Wayne Elementary School in Detroit, Michigan, which on May 12, 2000, will officially celebrate its 70th Anniversary. Events have been scheduled throughout this week, providing administrators, teachers, students and parents an opportunity to reflect upon the history of their elementary school, and at the same time witness how far it has come in seventy years.

The roots of Wayne Elementary School lie in a two room portable building near the heart of Detroit, where Mrs. Jessie Baum and Ms. Etta Coetzer, under the guidance of Principal Ms. Florence Kessler, began teaching kindergarten through fifth grade students in March of 1928. Their efforts led to the construction of a six-room building at 10633 Courville Street in February of 1930, officially marking the birth of Wayne Elementary School.

Though the face and shape of the building have been forced to change often to accomodate a growing number of students, the teachers and administrators of Wayne Elementary School still instill the same values into their students as did Ms. Kessler, Mrs. Coetzer, and Mrs. Baum: learning two different sets of three R's, not only the traditional writing, reading, and arithmetic, but also rights, responsibility, and respect.

To this end, Wayne Elementary School encourages parents and other members of the community to become involved with the education of their children. In 1998, working in cooperation with the Greening of Detroit and the Ford Motor company volunteers, the children planted trees, bushes and wild flowers during the month of May. The habitat area now serves as an outdoor classroom and each spring the students intend to plant more trees, bushes and flowers.

Two other important programs have recently been developed at Wayne Elementary School. Academic Games, started by Ms. Nicole Stewart, encourages learning achievement while at the same time demonstrating to students that learning can indeed be fun. And in 1995, two chess teams were formed by Mr. Carter and Mr. Cook, a primary team (K–3) and an upper elementary team of fourth and fifth graders. On May 11, these teams will send ten students to Dallas, Texas, to compete against the nation's best elementary school chess players. I would like to wish them the best of luck in that competition.

Mr. President, I applaud all of the teachers, parents, students and administrators whose hard work over the years has made this anniversary possible. On behalf of the entire United States Senate, I wish Anthony Wayne Elementary School a happy 70th birthday, and continued success in the coming years.●

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS

The following petitions and memorials were laid before the Senate and were referred or ordered to lie on the table as indicated:

POM–491. A joint resolution adopted by the Legislation of the State of Idaho relative to the Northern Rockies Protection Act; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

HOUSE JOINT MEMORIAL NO. 6

Whereas, on February 2, 1999, H.R. 488, known as the ''Northern Rockies Ecosystem Protection Act,'' was introduced in the U.S. House of Representatives;

Whereas, the Act is far reaching and would designate wilderness, wild and scenic rivers, national park and preserve study areas, wildland recovery areas, and biological connecting corridors in five northwest states: Idaho, Montana, Oregon, Washington and Wyoming;

Whereas, the Act would create over eighteen million acres of new wilderness alone, approximately five million acres of which would be in Idaho, more than in any other state;

Whereas, the Act also designates over a million acres along the Idaho-Oregon border as the Hells Canyon/Chief Joseph National Preserve;

Whereas, the Act, a concept presented by the Montana-based environmental group, the Alliance for the Wild Rockies, was first introduced in 1992 to oppose a bill designating wilderness areas only in the state of Montana;

Whereas, the members of the Idaho congressional delegation opposed the Act in 1992 and continue to oppose it now;

Whereas, the Act is also opposed by the majority of representatives in the Congress from the other affected states: Montana, Oregon, Washington and Wyoming;

Whereas, the lands addressed by the Act closely resemble those at issue in President Clinton's current roadless lands initiative, which is also opposed by the state of Idaho and the Idaho congressional delegation;

Whereas, setting aside so much acreage in Idaho as wilderness, wild and scenic rivers, national park and preserve study areas, wildland recovery areas, and biological connecting corridors would severely reduce employment and income in many areas of the state in which it is difficult to replace the lost money by other means, and would landlock thousands of acres of state endowment land, thereby reducing funds for public education in Idaho. Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the members of the Second Regular Session of the Fifty-fifth Idaho Legislature, the House of Representatives and the Senate concurring therein, that we urge the Congress of the United States to oppose H.R. 488, known as the ''Northern Rockies Ecosystem Protection Act.'' Be it further

Resolved, that the members of the Second Regular Session of the Fifty-fifth Idaho Legislature, the House of Representatives and the Senate concurring therein, that we urge the Congress of the United States to oppose H.R. 488, known as the ''Northern Rockies Ecosystem Protection Act.'' Be it further

Resolved, that the members of the Second Regular Session of the Fifty-fifth Idaho Legislature, the House of Representatives and the Senate concurring therein, support natural resource planning and environmental management featuring site-specific management decisions made by local decision-makers, local citizens and parties directly and personally affected by land and resource management decisions. Be it further

Resolved that the Chief Clerk of the House of Representatives be, and she is hereby authorized and directed to forward a copy of this Memorial to the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives of Congress, and the congressional delegation representing the state of Idaho in the Congress of the United States.

POM–492. A joint resolution adopted by the Legislature of the State of Idaho relative to additional de facto wilderness in Idaho; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

HOUSE JOINT MEMORIAL NO. 7

Whereas, Idaho is a state which has sixty-six percent of its landmass controlled by the federal government; and

Whereas, access to Idaho's public lands is a vital part of Idaho's natural resource economy as well as an important part of our citizens heritage, recreation and enjoyment; and

Whereas, Idaho currently has 4,081,315 acres of wilderness which is sufficient; and

Whereas, President Clinton has proposed to establish another nine million acres of defacto wilderness in Idaho by declaring certain public lands in the state to be roadless; and

Whereas, Idaho Governor Dirk Kempthorne requested a longer comment period for Idaho citizens to study and comment on the roadless plan and his request was summarily denied by the United States Forest Service; and

Whereas, the state of Idaho has been compelled to initiate a lawsuit to protect its interests in Idaho land designated as public; and

Whereas, roadless areas prevent access to the forests of Idaho and negatively affect forest health by preventing intervention in disease, insect infestations and fire suppression. Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the members of the Second Regular Session of the Fifty-fifth Idaho Legislature, the House of Representatives and the Senate concurring therein, that the Congress of the United States is urged to pass legislation negating any Presidential Executive Order President Clinton may issue regarding additional defacto wilderness and instructing the United States Forest Service and the Bureau of Land Management to maintain roads and access into the public lands in Idaho. Be it further

Resolved that the Chief Clerk of the House of Representatives be, and she is hereby authorized and directed to forward a copy of this Memorial to the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives of Congress, and the congressional delegation representing the State of Idaho in the Congress of the United States.

POM–493. A joint resolution adopted by the Legislature of the State of Idaho relative to extending the deadline on the notice of intent to solicit comments on two draft environmental impact statements, one set of draft rules and a draft environmental assessment; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

SENATE JOINT MEMORIAL NO. 105

Whereas, on October 19, 1999, the United States Forest Service announced a vast ''rulemaking process to propose the protection of the remaining roadless areas within the National Forest System.'' 64 FR 56306. This rulemaking purportedly includes two draft environmental impact statements, at least one set of draft rules, and a draft environmental assessment; and

Whereas, the Notice of Intent (NOI) solicits comments ''on the scope of the analysis that should be conducted'' and ''on the identification of alternatives to the proposal'' that will be set out in this multitude of documents. The NOI then provides prospective commentators with slightly more than sixty days to comment on this enormous and poorly defined proposal. The NOI is an unacceptable affront to the promise of meaningful public participation that is the centerpiece of the National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA); and

Whereas, more than forty million acres of land in the West could be affected by the actions contemplated in the NOI. A permanent moratorium on Forest Service road development will have a devastating impact on timber communities in the West. The proposed moratorium will destroy attempts to develop recreational economies in the West and deny access to huge areas of the West to all but the able-bodied. The sum, the moratorium will deny thousands of citizens the opportunity to use, enjoy and benefit from the land; and

Whereas, the process used by the Forest Service to consider such a potentially severe decision must reflect absolute fairness and deliberation. The NOI demonstrates neither of those traits. No specific proposals are identified. No preliminary findings are referenced; and

Whereas, these failures violate one of NEPA's primary objectives of encouraging and facilitating ''public involvement in decisions which affect the quality of the human environment.'' 40 CFR 1500.2(d); and

Whereas, the NOI states that it ''initiates the scoping process.'' 64 FR 56307. However, the NOI does not identify ''the significant issues related to [the] proposed action,'' as is required by federal regulations. 40 CFR 1501.7. The NOI does does not encourage ''the participation of affected federal, state and local agencies'' and the regulations implementing NEPA anticipate. 40 CFR 1501.7(a)(1); and

Whereas, the ambiguity and confusion that characterize the NOI are compounded by the fact that the comment period is so brief. Title II 40 CFR 1501.8(b)(1)(i)–(viii) specifically set out considerations that the Forest Service should be using in determining the time limits for soliciting comments on the NOI.

''(b) The agency may:

(1) Consider the following factors in determining time limits:

(i) Potential for environmental harm.

(ii) Size of the proposed action.

(iii) State of the art of analytic techniques.

(iv) Degree of public need for the proposed action, including the consequences of delay.

(v) Number of persons and agencies affected.

(vi) Degree to which relevant information is known and if not known the time required for obtaining it.

(vii) Degree to which the action is controversial.

(viii) Other time limits imposed on the agency by law, regulations or executive order.''; and

Whereas, it should be obvious that all of these factors support a careful, deliberate, consideration of the environmental impacts of the proposed permanent moratorium. The expedited deadline in the NOI is completely inconsistent with 40 CFR 1501.8(b); and

Whereas, in an October 28, 1999, letter to forest service managers, Mike Dombeck, Chief of the U.S. Forest Service suggested that the Forest Service is attempting to complete the environmental analysis of a permanent moratorium in a ''short time frame.'' The U.S. Forest Service should not be trying to ramrod a decision that will shut down forty million acres of western lands into ''a short time frame.'' You should be honoring the spirit, not to mention the clear mandate, of NEPA by providing meaningful opportunity for public participation and careful, principled, environmental analysis; and

Whereas, the closing date for public comments was set for December 20, 1999. With decisions on the management of over forty million acres of land in the West at stake, the time is clearly not adequate time for officials to thoroughly review and analyze the proposal, and to provide the Forest Service with informed and substantive comment. Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the members of the Second Regular Session of the Fifty-fifth Idaho Legislature, the Senate and the House of Representatives concurring therein, that we respectfully request that the U.S. Forest Service extend the deadline to submit comments on the NOI by one hundred twenty days. An expedited consideration of this request is appreciated. Be it further

Resolved that the Secretary of the Senate be, and she is hereby authorized and directed to forward a copy of this Memorial to the President of the United States, the Chief of the United States Forest Service, President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives of Congress, and the congressional delegation representing the State of Idaho in the Congress of the United States.

POM–494. A joint resolution adopted by the Legislature of the State of Idaho relative to a United States Forest Service proposed rule regarding forest service land and resource management planning; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

SENATE JOINT MEMORIAL NO. 106

Whereas, the United States Forest Service (USFS) published in the Federal Register on October 5, 1999, a proposed rule regarding forest service land and resource management planning; and

Whereas, the Legislature of the State of Idaho advocates improvements to the forest planning regulations; and

Whereas, the USFS needs to simplify, clarify and otherwise improve the planning process as well as reduce the burdensome and costly procedural requirements, and strengthen collaborative relationships with the public and other governmental entities; and

Whereas, the USFS organic act calls for multiple use in managing the national forests with meaningful public input; and

Whereas, the proposed rules are inconsistent with the legislative direction for multiple uses and high-level sustained yield outputs of the renewable timber resource; and

Whereas, timber production must remain a primary use in the National Forest System; and

Whereas, the proposed rules would alter the multiple use and sustained yield mandate prescribed by Congress. Moreover, they reverse the multiple use priorities set by Congress by subordinating timber production to achievement of biological diversity and similar ecosystem goals; and

Whereas, no other law provides authority for the Forest Service to alter the course of management and primary purposes set by Congress for management of the National Forest System; and

Whereas, the proposed rules lack commitment to carrying out economic multiple uses; and

Whereas, the proposed rules fail to provide direction on which plan revisions and amendments require environmental impact statements. Procedures and standards should be revised for significant plan amendments; and

Whereas, the proposed rules provide no effective date for the adoption of an amendment or plan revision. Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the members of the Second Regular Session of the Fifty-fifth Idaho Legislature, the Senate and the House of Representatives concurring therein, that we request the United States Forest Service not move forward with final rule based on the October 5, 1999, proposal. Ecological sustainability must start looking at current conditions of the national forests and determining the desired future conditions, which should be healthy forests for the American people to use and enjoy. There should be aggressive, active management, rather than passive management, to restore the health of all land identified as being high risk to insect and disease infestation and/or catastrophic wildfire. Prohibiting management puts our forests at risk to insects, diseases and fire. These proposed rules will cause greater damage to our forests in the long run. Be it further

Resolved, that the Legislature of the State of Idaho encourages the agency to readdress its entire approach to ecosystem management. The agency needs to streamline and clarify the forest planning and decision-making processes, strengthen relationships with the public, ensure long-term sustainability of forest ecosystems, and promote adaptive management. The proposed rules cannot accomplish these critical goals in its current form. Ecosystem management and forest planning cannot be successful if the process becomes the goal. Ecosystem management must instead be considered a tool to accomplish the goals which are set in law and through the development of forest plans. Be it further

Resolved that the Secretary of the Senate be, and she is hereby authorized and directed to forward a copy of this Memorial to the President of the United States, President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives of Congress, and the congressional delegation representing the State of Idaho in the Congress of the United States.

POM–495. A joint resolution adopted by the Legislature of the State of Idaho relative to the Bureau of Land Management actions relating to grazing in Owyhee County; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

SENATE JOINT MEMORIAL NO. 107

Whereas, a developing scenario in Owyhee County has been brought to the attention of the Legislature, and it is appropriate that public attention be drawn to this situation as representative of other similar events occurring in Idaho; and

Whereas, the Bureau of Land Management is charged with management of lands in Owyhee County known as the Cliffs Allotment; and

Whereas, the BLM has notified holders of grazing permits in the Cliffs Allotment that the grazing season will be reduced by two and one-half months which is a 53% reduction in the grazing allotment; and

Whereas, the area is managed to meet a requirement of six inch stubble height at the end of the grazing season, a goal which the BLM says has not been met despite photographic evidence and independent monitoring to the contrary; and

Whereas, federal law requires one year's notice before any significant reduction in grazing is ordered, a requirement which has clearly not been met in this case; and

Whereas, a reduction of the size now contemplated would effectively put five ranching families, with a long history in the Cliffs Allotment and evidence of management efforts which have actually improved the conditions of the allotment, out of business; and

Whereas, the BLM is acting with callous disregard of the local economy, the law, and the best interests of the land and the people of Idaho; and

Whereas, the BLM must be brought to recognize and consider all of the interests which are indigenous to the locale including the legitimate goals of citizens who make their living off the land. Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the members of the Second Regular Session of the Fifty-fifth Idaho Legislature, the Senate and the House of Representatives concurring therein, that we join together with the citizens of Owyhee County in their grievance against the untenable action of the Bureau of Land Management in limiting grazing permits with a reduction of the grazing season by two and one-half months. Further, we urge thoughtful reconsideration not only of this decision, but the accumulating body of management decisions made by the Bureau of Land Management which are resulting in further reductions in the resources available to Idahoans who live off the land. Be it further

Resolved that the Secretary of the Senate be, and she is hereby authorized and directed to forward a copy of this Memorial to the Director of the Idaho Office of the Bureau of Land Management, the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives of Congress, and the congressional delegation representing the State of Idaho in the Congress of the United States.

POM–496. A joint resolution adopted by the Legislature of the State of Idaho relative to agreements made at the Idaho-Canada Summit regarding agriculture; to the Committee on Finance.

HOUSE JOINT MEMORIAL NO. 9

Whereas, on January 19 and 20, 2000, an agricultural summit was held in Boise, Idaho, involving representatives from the governments of the United States and Canada, the provinces of Alberta, Manitoba, and Saskatchewan, and the states of Idaho, Oregon, Washington and Montana, and representatives from the beef and potato industries of those provinces and states; and

Whereas, through discussions, and the exchange of information and briefings from government and industry, a dialogue was initiated and consensus reached in certain areas of mutual concern; and

Whereas, both the Alberta and Idaho conference attendees agreed that they would communicate points of agreement to their national governments through a formal communication, which this memorial embodies and constitutes. Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, by the members of the Second Regular Session of the Fifty-fifth Idaho Legislature, the House of Representatives and the Senate concurring therein, that we support the agreements made at the Idaho-Canada Summit, and urge the United States Congress and the United States trade representative to meet with the Canadian government to review and reconcile their statistics concerning the cattle and beef industry, so that the industries on both sides of the border have access to accurate, comparable and timely data. Be it further

Resolved, That the states and provinces involved in the Pacific Northwest Cattle Project meet and develop a consistent set of cattle statistics and a single methodology for gathering and reporting these statistics, and also improve communication through regional meetings, tours and exchanges. Be it further

Resolved, That the United States Department of Agriculture and Agriculture Canada work towards the removal of federal certificates and federal endorsement requirements for the movement of cattle between Canada and the United States within the Northwest region. Be it further

Resolved, That the states and provinces involved should be encouraged to expand the Pacific Northwest Cattle Project for feeder cattle from six months to twelve months access and expand the project to include other classes of cattle. Be it further

Resolved, That the Chief Clerk of the House of Representatives be, and she is hereby authorized and directed to forward a copy of this Memorial to the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives of Congress, and the congressional delegation representing the State of Idaho in the Congress of the United States.

POM–497. A joint resolution adopted by the Legislature of the State of Idaho relative to shipments of potatoes between the United States and Canada; to the Committee on Finance.

HOUSE JOINT MEMORIAL NO. 8

Whereas, on January 19 and 20, 2000, an agricultural summit was held in Boise, Idaho, involving representatives from the governments of the United States and Canada, the provinces of Alberta, Manitoba and Saskatchewan, and the states of Idaho, Oregon, Washington and Montana, and representatives from the beef and potato industries of those provinces and states;

Whereas, through discussions, the exchange of information and briefings from government, industry and university personnel, a dialogue was initiated and consensus reached in certain areas of mutual concern;

Whereas, both the Alberta and Idaho conference attendees agreed that they would communicate points of agreement to their national governments through a formal communication, which this memorial embodies and constitutes. Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the members of the Second Regular Session of the Fifty-fifth Idaho Legislature, the House of Representatives and the Senate concurring therein, That we support the agreements made at the Idaho-Canada Summit, and urge the United States Congress and the United States trade representative to urge the government of Canada to remove the prohibition on bulk shipment of potatoes between the United States and Canada; and to recognize that United States Department of Agriculture marketing orders should be considered as a quality assurance measure and not as a technical trade barrier. Be it further

Resolved, That the United States government should make every effort to quickly harmonize and equalize laboratory testing of potatoes so that there is mutual acceptance of each country's respective test results. Be it further

Resolved, That the dialogue initiated during these meetings should be continued through further meetings of smaller working groups comprised of industry, state and provincial representatives and that their recommendations should be given great weight by their respective national governments. Be it further

Resolved, That the Chief Clerk of the House of Representatives be, and she is hereby authorized and directed to forward a copy of this Memorial to the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives of Congress, and the congressional delegation representing the state of Idaho in the Congress of the United States.

POM–498. A joint resolution adopted by the Legislature of the State of Idaho relative to full deductibility from federal income taxes of health insurance premiums for individuals, the self-employed small groups; to the Committee on Finance.

SENATE JOINT MEMORIAL NO. 108

Whereas, the Health Insurance Premiums Task Force was established to identify, explore and address causes of the alarming increase in the costs of health insurance; and

Whereas, in the course of its examination the task force received extensive information, data and testimony from consumers, employers and representation of the health care industry, including carriers, agents, pharmaceutical manufacturers, pharmacists, hospitals, physicians and other health care providers; and

Whereas, the task force found that federal and state reforms and mandates, including those requiring guaranteed issue of insurance policies in the individual and small group insurance markets, have created a segment of high risk individuals who must be insured, causing the entire population, and particularly the healthy, to pay much more for health insurance; and

Whereas, the task force further found that the dramatic increase in premium rates has driven expanding numbers of healthy individuals into the ranks of the uninsured, resulting in even greater costs to insurers to provide required coverage for the high risk unhealthy population, and greater costs to the remaining insured population; and

Whereas, the task force also determined that costs to provide health care and treatment for uninsured individuals is another significant factor in the high cost of health insurance; and

Whereas, the task force concluded that among other possible solutions, providing full deductibility from federal income taxes of health insurances premiums for individuals, the self-employed and small employers would bring the healthy back into the insured market, lower costs to employers who must provide coverage, reduce the uninsured population, and restore a balance of risk in the market that will make health insurance more affordable and accessible. Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the members of the Second Regular Session of the Fifty-fifth Idaho Legislature, the Senate and the House of Representatives concurring therein, That federal legislation be enacted providing full deductibility from federal income taxes of health insurance premiums for individuals, the self-employed and small groups. Be it further

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Senate be, and she is hereby authorized and directed to forward a copy of this memorial to the President and Vice President of the United States, the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives of Congress, the congressional delegation representing the state of Idaho in the Congress of the United States, the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives of each State Legislature, and to the presidential candidates.

POM–499. A resolution adopted by the Senate of the General Assembly of the State of Illinois relative to Social Security; to the Committee on Finance.

SENATE JOINT RESOLUTION NO. 32

Whereas, Social Security provides American workers and their families with universal, contributory, wage-related, inflation-adjusted benefits in the event of the retirement, disability or death of a wage earner; and

Whereas, Social Security is more than a retirement program, it is a family program; without Social Security, about 54 percent of the population aged 65 and over, and more than 15 million beneficiaries overall, would be living in poverty; about 98 percent of children under age 18 can count on monthly cash benefits if a working parent dies; seven and a half million Americans with disabilities currently benefit from the program; and

Whereas, throughout its existence as a federal program, Social Security's trustees and administrators have carefully modified the benefit and financing structure to ensure the program's viability in light of demographic and economic developments; and

Whereas, congressional leaders and the President are seeking to engage the American people in a dialogue about Social Security that could lead toward enactment of bipartisan legislation ensuring Social Security's long-term solvency; and

Whereas, Social Security is not in crisis and, without any changes, could pay full benefits until 2032 and 75 percent of benefits thereafter based on the most recent projections of the Social Security Board of Trustees; and

Whereas, the long-term solvency of Social Security can be ensured for future generations with measured and timely adjustments to the program made by Congress; and

Whereas, the federal Medicare program provides health care for the nation's citizens who qualify for Medicare benefits; and

Whereas, Medicare benefits are the subject of reform discussions in the United States Congress; and

Whereas, participants in the federal Medicare program do not currently enjoy full coverage for prescription medication; therefore, be it

Resolved, by the Senate of the ninety-first general assembly of the State of Illinois, the House of Representatives concurring herein, That the Congress of the United States of America is hereby petitioned to preserve Social Security as a contributory social insurance system where risk is pooled among all workers and participation is mandatory within a covered group; and be it further

Resolved, That the Congress of the United States of America be urged to ensure the long-term financial viability of Social Security, as described above, and restore public confidence in the future of the program; and be it further

Resolved, That Social Security must continue as a federal program, having a unified program allows for the portability of benefits, disability and family support protections, and maximum retirement security for low and moderate wage earners; and be it further

Resolved, That we urge the Congress of the United States of America to provide full benefit coverage for prescription medication under the federal Medicare program; and be it further

Resolved, That suitable copies of this resolution be delivered to the President of the United States Senate, the Speaker of the United States House of Representatives and each member of the Illinois congressional delegation.

POM–500. A concurrent resolution adopted by the Legislature of the State of West Virginia relative to the Internal Revenue Code; to the Committee on Finance.

HOUSE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION NO. 68

Whereas, The State of West Virginia has an aggregate unfunded liability in its pension programs of some four billion dollars; and

Whereas, The Governor of West Virginia has proposed to the West Virginia Legislature and the West Virginia Legislature has enacted Senate Bill 175 providing for the issuance of pension bonds to fund the retirement plans of the State of West Virginia and to fix the amortization of the current, unfunded liability; and

Whereas, If all of the bonds to be issued pursuant to this legislation could be issued as ''tax-exempt'' bonds, so that the income received therefrom by the holders of said bonds were exempt from federal income taxes, then the bonds could be issued at substantially lower interest rates than they will pay as taxable bonds, resulting in the savings of tens of millions of dollars to the citizens of West Virginia; and

Whereas, In this area of large federal budgetary surpluses, it seems reasonable that the United States of America could take this modest action to assist West Virginia, whose citizens, while being patriotic Americans, still enjoy lower per capita incomes than do the citizens of most other sister states; therefore, be it

Resolved by the Legislature of West Virginia: That the West Virginia Legislature does hereby respectfully request that the United States Congress will enact appropriate legislation to amend the Internal Revenue Code to permit the pension bonds to be issued and sold as ''tax-exempt'' bonds, so that the income received from said bonds by the holders thereof would be exempt from federal income taxes; and, be it Further Resolved, That the Clerk of the West Virginia House of Delegates is directed to forward copies of this resolution to the Clerk of the United States Senate and the Clerk of the United States House of Representatives and to the members of the West Virginia Congressional Delegation including The Honorable Robert C. Byrd, The Honorable John D. Rockefeller, IV, The Honorable Alan B. Mollohan, The Honorable Robert E. Wise, Jr. and The Honorable Nick Joe Rahall, II.

POM–501. A resolution adopted by the Senate of the Legislature of the State of Michigan relative to Mortgage Revenue Bonds; to the Committee on Finance.

SENATE RESOLUTION NO. 139

Whereas, State and local governments sell tax-exempt Mortgage Revenue Bonds (MRBs) and pass on the interest savings in discount mortgages to low income first-time home buyers for rehabilitation and energy improvements for existing homes, and to older home owners to use to draw on their home equity for living costs; and

Whereas, Each state's annual supply of MRBs is grouped under a more than 12-year-old limit with tax-exempt bonds for industrial development, public-private partnerships for municipal services, redevelopment of blighted areas, and student loans. This limit is $50 per state resident and has never been adjusted for inflation. Last session, the federal Omnibus Appropriations Act contained partial, phased-in cap relief, but it does not take full effect until 2007; and

Whereas, Since 1986, when the limit was enacted, the economy has doubled in size, home prices for first-time buyers have nearly doubled, and inflation has increased by 50 percent. As a result, MRBs have lost nearly 50 percent of their purchasing power. Moreover, the bond limit is curtailing Michigan's ability to meet its housing needs; and

Whereas, More than 67 percent of low and moderate income renters desperately want to own their own homes. Yet, millions of teachers, fire fighters, police officers, and industrial, service, and agriculture workers are denied the opportunity of home ownership because their incomes are insufficient; and

Whereas, MRBs have made first-time home ownership possible for 2 million low-income families, about 125,000 every year. A typical MRB mortgage saves as much as $100 a month in comparison to a conventional mortgage. MRBs also provide low-income workers with down payment and closing cost assistance; and

Whereas, Raising the bond limit would cost just over $1 billion of the $143 billion budget surplus the Congressional Budget Office projects over the next 5 years. These additional bonds will create thousands of jobs and generate billions in wages and tax revenues, paying back a significant portion of their cost to the United States Department of Treasury; now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate, That we memorialize the Congress of the United States to enact legislation to increase the state ceiling on Mortgage Revenue Bonds and index it in accordance with the Consumer Price Index; and be it further

Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be transmitted to the Speaker of the United States House of Representatives, the President of the United States Senate, and members of the Michigan congressional delegation.

POM–502. A joint resolution adopted by the General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Virginia relative to protecting senior assets from liquidation to meet the eligibility requirements for federal medical and long-term care benefits; to the Committee on Finance.

SENATE JOINT RESOLUTION NO. 163

Whereas, throughout our nation's history, older generations of Americans have contributed greatly to the prosperity of the United States; and

Whereas, older Americans have always recognized the value of the economic freedoms that our forefathers fought to ensure; and

Whereas, older Americans have always been leaders in the realms of business and industry, serving as mentors and teachers to ensure that younger generations would have the knowledge and skills to carry on; and

Whereas, throughout their toil and enduring commitment to the principles of freedom, older Americans have laid the foundation for the economic prosperity and financial security of all Americans; and

Whereas, during the early years of the twentieth century, the current generation of older Americans have worked hard to ensure that their families and communities could continue to enjoy this financial security for generations to come; and

Whereas, they endured the struggle of the Great Depression, undergoing countless hardships as they rebuilt this nation, by the sweat of their brows, both economically and spiritually; and

Whereas, they fought in wars to preserve the liberties that have enabled our nation to earn its place as the economic leader in the world; and

Whereas, throughout those hardships, the current generation of older Americans learned to appreciate the importance of preserving assets—the homes, land, durable goods, and ''nest eggs'' they had managed to hold onto despite the economic challenges they had faced; and

Whereas, today, these personal assets help them maintain the dignity, independence, and health they so cherish as Americans; and

Whereas, with nursing home care now costing an average of $40,000 to $50,000 per year, long-term care expenses can have a catastrophic effect on families, wiping out a lifetime of savings; and

Whereas, steps need to be taken to inform the public about the financial risks posed by rapidly increasing long-term care costs and about the need for families to plan for their long-term care; and

Whereas, the federal laws governing the rules of qualification for federal medical and long-term care benefits force many older Americans to liquidate their assets, including their homes and life savings; and

Whereas, these confiscatory policies impose unjust and inequitable burdens on older Americans who have contributed so much to our economic security; and

Whereas, widespread use of private long-term care insurance has the potential to protect families from the catastrophic costs of long-term care services while, at the same time, easing the burden on the federal government to provide medical and long-term care benefits; now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate, the House of Delegates concurring, That the Congress of the United States be urged to protect senior assets from liquidation to meet the eligibility requirements for federal medical and long-term care benefits; and be it

Resolved further, That the Congress of the United States be urged to ensure that persons who purchase long-term care insurance policies will be able to protect their assets equal in value to the policy purchased; and be it

Resolved finally, That the Clerk of the Senate transmit copies of this resolution to the Speaker of the United States House of Representatives, the President of the United States Senate, and the members of the Virginia Congressional Delegation in order that they may be apprised of the sense of the General Assembly of Virginia in this matter.

POM–503. A joint resolution adopted by the Legislature of the State of Idaho relative to increased Medicare reimbursements; to the Committee on Finance.

SENATE JOINT MEMORIAL NO. 109

Whereas, alarming increases in the costs of health care and health insurance have caused a health care crisis of epidemic proportions;

Whereas, the Idaho Health Insurance Premiums Task Force was established to identify, explore and address the causes of this crisis; and

Whereas, in the course of its examination the task force received extensive information, data and testimony from consumers, employers, and representatives of the health care industry, including carriers, agents, pharmaceutical manufacturers, pharmacists, hospitals, physicians and other health care providers; and

Whereas, the task force found that among the factors contributing to inflated health care and insurance costs are an aging population, new and more expensive technologies, advancements in drug therapy and greater reliance upon costly designer pharmaceuticals, as well as increasing consumer demand, utilization and expectations with respect to health care services; and

Whereas, the task force further determined that reimbursements to providers for health care services furnished to patients receiving Medicare are significantly below the actual costs to the provider to furnish these health care services; and

Whereas, providers are finding it necessary to recoup losses incurred to serve Medicare patients from other sources, including shifting costs to non-Medicare patients, which leads to higher claims expenses to insurers and increased premium rates to the insured; and

Whereas, some providers are no longer taking Medicare patients because of the providers' inability to recover their costs, thus reducing provider availability and limiting access to health care for many who are most in need of health care services. Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the members of the Second Regular Session of the Fifty-fifth Idaho Legislature, the Senate and the House of Representatives concurring therein, That federal legislation be enacted to increase Medicare reimbursements to levels allowing providers to fully recover the actual costs of providing necessary health care services to Medicare eligible patients. Be it further

Resolved, That the members of the Idaho Legislature respectfully suggest that if the President and Congress are sincere in their resolve to find solutions to the health care crisis they should start by funding Medicare at appropriate levels. Be it further

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Senate be, and she is hereby authorized and directed to forward a copy of this memorial to the President of the United States, to the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives of Congress, to the congressional delegation representing the state of Idaho in the Congress of the United States, to the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives of each State Legislature, and to the presidential candidates.

POM–504. A joint resolution adopted by the Legislature of the State of Idaho relative to the Coeur d'Alene Basin; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

SENATE JOINT MEMORIAL NO. 111

Whereas, the United States Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) continues to engage in unilateral actions regarding efforts to expand the existing twenty-one square mile Superfund site to include the entire 1,500 square mile Coeur d'Alene River Basin; and

Whereas, the EPA staff members working on Coeur d'Alene Basin issues continue to disregard the views of Idaho's citizens and elected officials; and

Whereas, the EPA has already spent many millions of dollars in the Coeur d'Alene

Basin outside the existing Superfund site without any meaningful cleanup to date; and

Whereas, the EPA has undertaken the steps to complete a Remedial Investigation/Feasibility Study (RI/FS) even though the basin is not listed on the national priorities list; and

Whereas, the state of Idaho has been previously granted the leadership role in the Human Health Risk Assessment portion of the RI/FS; and

Whereas, the EPA efforts to bifurcate the RI/FS process appear detrimental to current settlement discussions among all of the parties; and

Whereas, the state of Idaho, the Governor and the Director of the Department of Environmental Quality, have taken the leadership role in development of a plan to remediate the problems in the basin and have actively gained support of local units of government, local citizens, tribal members and responsible parties. Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the members of the Second Regular Session of the Fifty-fifth Idaho Legislature, the Senate and the House of Representatives concurring therein, That we strongly support efforts by the Idaho Department of Environmental Quality to assert and maintain the leadership role in designing and implementing a solution to the multiple dilemmas in the Coeur d' Alene Basin. Be it further

Resolved, That we request the Environmental Protection Agency to use its authority to support efforts by the Idaho Department of Environmental Quality to resolve this problem and to refrain from any strategic delays, unilateral decisions or media manipulation. Be it further

Resolved, That we request a letter be sent from the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency to the Region 10 office of the EPA instructing the region to fully support and cooperate with the Governor of the State of Idaho and the Director of the Idaho Department of Environmental Quality in reaching a settlement in these matters. Be it further

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Senate be, and she is hereby authorized and directed to forward a copy of this Memorial to the President of the United States, to the Administrator of the United States Environmental Protection Agency, to the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives of Congress, and the congressional delegation representing the State of Idaho in the Congress of the United States.

POM–505. A joint resolution adopted by the General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Virginia relative to the Southern Dairy Compact and the federal Clean Water Act; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

SENATE JOINT RESOLUTION NO. 255

Whereas, the dairy industry is an essential agricultural activity of the South, and dairy farms and associated suppliers, marketers, processors, and retailers are an integral component of the region's economy; and

Whereas, the ability of dairy producers to provide a stable, local supply of pure, wholesome milk is a matter of great importance to the health and welfare of the Commonwealth and region; and

Whereas, milk is Virginia's number two livestock commodity in terms of cash receipts, and dairy farms are an integral part of the Commonwealth's rural communities; and

Whereas, the United States has lost two-thirds of its dairy farms since 1975; and

Whereas, because of the perishable nature of milk and the fact that milk production is capital intensive and generates a low profit margin based on equity, dairy farmers are uniquely vulnerable to fluctuations in market prices; and

Whereas, the price of milk dropped forty percent on one month during the spring of 1999; and

Whereas, recognizing the interstate character of the southern dairy industry, Virginia and several other southern states have enacted the Southern Dairy Compact, for the purpose of taking such steps as are necessary to ensure the continued viability of dairy farming in the South, and to assure consumers of an adequate, local supply of pure and wholesome milk; and

Whereas, Congress has not yet approved the Southern Dairy Compact; and

Whereas, the federal Clean Water Act requires states to develop Total Maximum Daily Loads (TMDLs), which must be approved by the United States Environmental Protection Agency (EPA); and

Whereas, TMDLs are written plans and analyses established to ensure that a particular impaired water body will attain and maintain water quality standards; and

Whereas, the EPA may require that Virginia's TMDLs impose requirements on farmers to control nonpoint source pollution; and

Whereas, both the failure of Congress to approve the Southern Dairy Compact and the threat of environmental regulation of farms add to the uncertain future of dairy farming in Virginia; now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate, the House of Delegates concurring, That Congress be urged to protect Virginia's dairy industry by approving the Southern Dairy Compact and ensuring that the federal Clean Water Act is implemented in a way that does not place an undue burden on farmers; and, be it

Resolved further, That the Clerk of the Senate transmit copies of this resolution to the Speaker of the United States House of Representatives, the President of the United States Senate, and the members of the Virginia Congressional Delegation in order that they may be apprised of the sense of the General Assembly of Virginia in this matter.

POM–506. A joint resolution adopted by the Legislature of the State of Idaho relative to water quality goals; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

HOUSE JOINT MEMORIAL NO. 10

Whereas, the state of Idaho is fully committed to achieving and maintaining water quality for public use and recreation and the protection and aquatic ecosystem; and

Whereas, substantial progress has already been made toward this objective nationwide through the investment of almost one trillion dollars by the municipal and industrial sectors of the economy and an effective federal, state and local partnership with the private sector, in which the states have primary and lead authority; and

Whereas, the state's direct experience demonstrates that achievement of water quality goals depends upon the use of sound science and quality of data, an interative approach to water quality management, a commitment to accommodating economic development, and careful investment of limited resources to maximize environmental benefits, and broad-based public support; and

Whereas, the state's direct experience also demonstrates that the remaining water quality challenges are complex, difficult and site-specific, requiring tailored solutions, better science and monitoring data; and

Whereas, the state has many effective regulatory and cooperative programs underway that are achieving better and greater protection of water quality that can be achieved with a prescriptive federal approach; and

Whereas, Section 303(d) of the Clean Water Act, pertaining to total maximum daily loads (TMDLs), is but one of the many tools that the state and local government have to assure effective water quality management and is not always the most efficient and effective; and

Whereas, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency's recently proposed TMDL regulations exceed their authority; impose upon the states many new prescriptive, costly, unattainable and often unnecessary requirements; position the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency to arbitrarily take over state program activities; and halt economic development in many waters far into the future; and

Whereas, the proposed regulations impose ''unfunded mandates'' on the state agencies; and

Whereas, the proposed regulations circumvent the state-based best management practices approach under Section 319 of the Clean Water Act to managing nonpoint source runoff from land-based activities, such as forestry, and superimpose a federal regulatory program on millions of landowners, reversing more than two decades of precedent under the Clean Water Act; and

Whereas, the proposed regulations contain inconsistent and vague terminology that will lead to more state and federal litigation and misallocation of resources while stifling creativity and development of more cost-effective approaches at the state level. Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the members of the Second Regular Session of the Fifty-fifth Idaho Legislature, the House of Representatives and the Senate concurring therein, That the United States Environmental Protection Agency should, in partnership with the states, reconsider and significantly revise its TMDL proposed regulations and guidance, while taking a more reasonable approach that:

1. Recognizes the limits of the TMDL statutory tool and relies on the many effective approaches states have undertaken under the Clean Water Act and other statutory authorities in partnership with local government, federal agencies and the private sector;

2. Uses Section 303(e) rather than Section 303(d) to inventory water quality generally and establishes a more focused basis for listing of waters under Section 303(d);

3. Provides states the ability to deal, in the most reasonable, cost-effective manner possible, with complex or difficult water quality situations, such as where legacy pollutants, air deposition and nonpoint sources contribute to impairment;

4. Provides fair and workable procedures for issuing new or renewed permits, which allow flexibility in making reasonable progress in reducing loadings, without imposing unnecessary restrictions stifling economic growth;

5. Postpones the April 2000 listing of 303(d) waters for which TMDLs will be required until two years after promulgation of changes to the existing regulations;

6. Is performance based, enabling states to take alternative ''functionally equivalent'' approaches through regulatory and other means states deem appropriate so long as their water quality standards will be achieved; and

7. Focuses the federal government on the priority need for better funding of state monitoring and watershed technical assistance. Be it further

Resolved That we request the congressional authorizing committees and other interested committees to conduct comprehensive hearings on the proposed rules and the Section 303(d) program in general, and ensure that a comprehensive analysis of the economic and program impacts of the entire TMDL program is completed; and be it further

Resolved That due to the continued proliferation of lawsuits, court orders and consent decrees that are placing an onerous burden on many states, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency should support state efforts to renegotiate those requirements based on improvements made to the national program. Be it further

Resolved That the Chief Clerk of the House of Representatives be, and she is hereby authorized and directed to forward a copy of this Memorial to the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives of Congress, and the congressional delegation representing the state of Idaho in the Congress of the United States.

POM–507. A joint resolution adopted by the Legislature of the State of Idaho relative to the establishment of an Idaho State Veterans Cemetery; to the Committee on Veterans' Affairs.

HOUSE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION NO. 46

Whereas, Idaho is the only state in the nation without a state or federally-supported cemetery for its wartime veterans; and

Whereas, Thirty-two states currently have, or are planning, the construction of a state cemetery; and

Whereas, Idaho World War II veterans are dying at an alarming rate and deserve to be laid to rest in a field of honor befitting their sacrifices; and

Whereas, the federal government will commit funding for one hundred percent of planning, construction and support equipment costs for the establishment of a state veterans cemetery for Idaho; and

Whereas, the state of Idaho is obligated to provide the land and perpetual funding for operation and maintenance of the cemetery; and

Whereas, a land donor has committed sufficient acreage in the Hidden Hollow subdivision of Boise, Idaho, located north of Dry Creek Cemetery, west of old Highway 55; and for the purposes of applicable taxes, the real property, when accepted by the state of Idaho, shall be considered a gift with the understanding that the property shall revert to the donor if a veterans cemetery is not constructed on such property; and

Whereas, funding for the continued operation and maintenance of the state veterans cemetery shall be derived from veterans motor vehicle license plates; and

Whereas, preliminary estimates gained through proposed bids for operation and maintenance of the cemetery are less than one hundred thousand dollars annually. Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the members of the Second Regular Session of the Fifty-fifth Idaho Legislature, the House of Representatives and the Senate concurring therein, That we support the establishment and perpetual maintenance and operation of an Idaho state veterans cemetery. Be it further

Resolved That it is the intent of the Legislature that two hundred thousand dollars be appropriated for fiscal year 2001 for cemetery design, and that such amount be reimbursed to the state of Idaho by the federal Veterans Administration. Be it further

Resolved That the Chief Clerk of the House of Representatives be, and she is hereby authorized and directed to forward a copy of this resolution to the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives of Congress, and the congressional delegation representing the state of Idaho in the Congress of the United States.

POM–508. A joint resolution adopted by the Legislature of the State of Washington relative to the National World War II Veterans' Memorial; to the Committee on Veterans' Affairs.

Whereas, The people of the State of Washington, have dedicated a wonderful World War II memorial to honor our committed citizens who lived and died through this period of history to ensure freedom and prosperity to future generations; and

Whereas, The people of the State of Washington wish to participate with the Congress at the national level to add their sincere thanks to all American veterans of World War II for their courage, patriotism, and sacrifice;

Now, therefore, Your Memorialists respectfully pray that the Congress accept the support of the people of the State of Washington for the National World War II Veterans' Memorial, a most well-deserved and worthy project.

Be it resolved, That copies of this Memorial be immediately transmitted to the Honorable William J. Clinton, President of the United States, the President of the United States Senate, the Speaker of the House of Representatives, and each member of Congress from the State of Washington.

POM–512. A resolution adopted by the Senate of the General Assembly of the State of Illinois relative to submission to the states for their ratification an amendment to the Constitution to restrict the ability of the Supreme Court to mandate any state or political subdivision of the state to levy or increase taxes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

SENATE RESOLUTION NO. 216

Whereas, Unfunded mandates by the United States Congress and the executive branch of the federal government increasingly strain already tight state government budgets if the states are to comply; and

Whereas, To further compound this assault on state revenues, federal district courts, with the blessing of the United States Supreme Court, continue to order states to levy or increase taxes to supplement their budgets to comply with federal mandates; and

Whereas, The court's actions are an intrusion into a legitimate legislative debate over state spending priorities and not a response to a constitutional directive; and

Whereas, The Constitution of the United States of America does not allow, nor do the states need, judicial intervention requiring tax levies or increases as solutions to potentially serious problems; and

Whereas, This usurpation of legislative authority begins a process that over time could threaten the fundamental concept of separation of powers that is precious to the preservation of the form of our government embodied by the Constitution of the United States of America; and

Whereas, Fifteen states, including Alabama, Alaska, Arizona, Colorado, Delaware, Louisiana, Massachusetts, Michigan, Missouri, Nevada, New York, Oklahoma, South Dakota, Tennessee and Utah, have petitioned the United States Congress to propose an amendment to the Constitution of the United States of America that reads as follows:

''Neither the Supreme Court nor any inferior court of the United States shall have the power to instruct or order a state or political subdivision thereof, or an official of such state or political subdivision, to levy or increase taxes.''; therefore, be it

Resolved, by the Senate of the Ninety-First General Assembly of the State of Illinois, That this legislative body respectfully requests and petitions the Congress of the United States to propose submission to the states for their ratification an amendment to the Constitution of the United States of America to restrict the ability of the United States Supreme Court or any inferior court of the United States to mandate any state or political subdivision of the state to levy or increase taxes; and be it further

Resolved, That copies of this resolution be transmitted to the President of the United States, the Speaker of the United States House of Representatives, the President Pro Tempore of the United States Senate, the Secretary of the United States Senate, the Clerk of the United States House of Representatives, and the members of the Illinois Congressional delegation.

POM–513. A resolution adopted by the Senate of the General Assembly of the State of Illinois relative to the 2000 Census; to the Committee on Government Affairs.

SENATE RESOLUTION NO. 39

Whereas, The U.S. Constitution requires an actual enumeration of the population every ten years, and entrusts Congress with overseeing all aspects of each decennial enumeration; and

Whereas, The sole constitutional purpose of the decennial census is to apportion the seats in Congress among the several states; and

Whereas, An accurate and legal decennial census is necessary to properly apportion U.S. House of Representatives seats among the 50 states and to create legislative districts within the states; and

Whereas, An accurate and legal decennial census is necessary to enable states to comply with the constitutional mandate of drawing state legislative districts within the states; and

Whereas, Article 1, Section 2 of the U.S. Constitution, in order to ensure an accurate count and to minimize the potential for political manipulation, mandates an ''actual enumeration'' of the population,which requires a physical headcount of the population and prohibits statistical guessing or estimates of the population; and

Whereas, Title 13, Section 195 of the U.S. Code, consistent with this constitutional mandate, expressly prohibits the use of statistical sampling to enumerate the U.S. population for the purpose of reapportioning the U.S. House of Representatives; and

Whereas, Legislative redistricting conducted by the states is a critical subfunction of the constitutional requirement to apportion representatives among the states; and

Whereas, The United States Supreme Court, in No. 98–404, Department of Commerce, et al. v. United States House of Representatives, et al., together with No. 98–564, Clinton, President of the United States, et al. v. Glavin, et al. ruled on January 25, 1999, that the Census Act prohibits the Census Bureau's proposed uses of statistical sampling in calculating the population for purposes of apportionment; and

Whereas, In reaching its findings, the United States Supreme Court found the use of statistical procedures to adjust census numbers would create a dilution of voting rights for citizens in legislative redistricting, thus violating legal guarantees of ''one-person, one-vote''; and

Whereas, Consistent with this ruling and the constitutional and legal relationship of legislative redistricting by the states to the apportionment of the U.S. House of Representatives, the use of adjusted census data would raise serious questions of vote dilution and violate ''one-person, one-vote'' legal protections, thus exposing the State of Illinois to protracted litigation over legislative redistricting plans at great cost to the taxpayers of the State of Illinois, and likely result in a court ruling invalidating any legislative redistricting plan using census numbers that have been determined in whole or in part by the use of random sampling techniques or other statistical methodologies that add or subtract persons to the census counts based solely on statistical inference; and

Whereas, Consistent with this ruling, no person enumerated in the census should ever be deleted from the census enumeration; and

Whereas, Consistent with this ruling, every reasonable and practical effort should be made to obtain the fullest and most accurate count of the population as possible, including appropriate funding for state and local census outreach and education programs, as well as a provision for post census local review; therefore; be it

Resolved, by the Senate of the Ninety-First General Assembly of the State of Illinois, That we call on the Bureau of the Census to conduct the 2000 decennial census consistent with the aforementioned United Supreme Court ruling and constitution mandate, which require a physical headcount of the population and bars the use of statistical sampling to create or in any way adjust the count; and be it further

Resolved, That the Illinois Senate opposes the use of P.L. 94–171 data for state legislative redistricting based on census numbers that have been determined in whole or in part by the use of statistical inferences derived by means of random sampling techniques or other statistical methodologies that add or subtract persons to the census counts; and be it further

Resolved, That the Illinois Senate demands that it receive P.L. 94–171 data for legislative redistricting identical to the census tabulation data used to apportion seats in the U.S. House of Representatives consistent to the aforementioned United States Supreme Court ruling and constitutional mandate, which require a physical headcount of the population and bars the use of statistical sampling to create or in any way adjust the count; and be if further

Resolved, That the Illinois Senate urges Congress, as the branch of government assigned the responsibility of overseeing the decennial enumeration, to take whatever steps are necessary to ensure that the 2000 decennial census is conducted fairly and legally; and be it further

Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be presented to the Speaker of the U.S. House of Representatives, the Majority Leader of the U.S. Senate, the Vice President of the United States, and the President of the United States.

STATEMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Mr. THURMOND (for himself and Mr. BIDEN):

S. 2516. A bill to fund task forces to locate and apprehend fugitives in Federal, State, and local felony criminal cases and give administrative subpoena authority to the United States Marshals Service; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

FUGITIVE APPREHENSION ACT OF 2000

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce legislation on behalf of myself and Senator BIDEN that will help address the growing problem of fugitives by giving the U.S. Marshals Service tools they need to apprehend fugitives from justice. Senator BIDEN and I have worked together many times over the years in support of Federal law enforcement.

Fugitives are those who the courts have found warrant prosecution or have already been found guilty, but are attempting to beat the system. These are individuals who, by their conduct, have indicated a complete lack of respect for our Nation's criminal justice system. This situation represents not only an outrage to the rule of law but also a threat to the safety and security of Americans. Fugitives from justice often continue to commit additional crimes while running free on the streets.

According to some estimates, there are approximately 45,000 fugitives from justice in Federal felony cases. The number of serious Federal offense warrants received by the U.S. Marshals Service has increased each year for the past 4 years. Also, over one-half million fugitives in State and local felony cases have been entered into the database of the National Crime Information Center or NCIC. This number is up from 340,000 reported in 1990. Also, the NCIC receives only about 20 percent of all outstanding State and local felony warrants in the country. If the NCIC estimates are correct, then there could be over 2.5 million State local fugitive warrants in felony cases alone. This does not even include misdemeanor warrants.

Mr. President, this is a serious problem. We must do more to address the growing threat of fugitives on the State and Federal level. It is critical to our fight against crime.

Task forces have been shown to be successful in tracking fugitives. This legislation would create more multi-agency task forces around the country to locate and apprehend the enormous number of fugitives nationwide. The marshals involved would be directed by headquarters, so they would not be diverted to tasks such as courtroom security. Also, the task forces would be a joint effort, staffed by U.S. Marshals and State and local law enforcement authorities. These task forces would share case workload and intelligence to locate and apprehend fugitives wanted in their jurisdictions.

Fugitives are the one investigative priority of the U.S. Marshals Service. Because of this expertise, the marshals have been able to specialize their personnel and investigative techniques to deal with this one critical mission. Conducting an investigation to make a criminal case against someone is nothing like trying to find a person who does not want to be found. The same techniques used to conduct criminal investigations cannot be used successfully in fugitive investigations. This puts the majority of law enforcement agencies at a disadvantage, especially State and local law enforcement, who are forced to put their resources into a wide variety of normal police duties. These task forces can help State and local law enforcement develop greater expertise in this area so they can be more efficient and successful in tracking fugitives.

Fugitive investigations are very fluid and time sensitive. The difference between locating and apprehending a fugitive or missing the individual can be merely a matter of minutes.

The time-sensitive nature of these investigations often creates problems under current Federal law. As a general matter, if there is no intent to indict the fugitive for escape, which is true in most fugitive cases, investigators may not use a grand jury subpoena to obtain information on the fugitive. Although investigators can get information through application to the court, the time necessary in seeking Federal court orders can make the difference between apprehension and further flight of the fugitive.

This bill would remedy this deficiency in the law by providing the U.S. Marshals Service administrative subpoena authority in fugitive investigations. This subpoena authority is based on the same authority current law already provides to the Drug Enforcement Administration in drug investigations.

In summary, this bill would help bring to justice dangerous fugitives that are roaming the streets of America. I hope my colleagues will support this important initiative.

I ask unanimous consent to print into the RECORD a copy of the bill and a section-by-section explanation of its provisions.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 2516

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the ''Fugitive Apprehension Act of 2000''.

SEC. 2. FUGITIVE APPREHENSION TASK FORCES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Director of the United States Marshal Service shall establish permanent Fugitive Apprehension Task Forces in areas of the United States as determined by the Director to locate and apprehend fugitives.

(b) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to the United States Marshal Service to carry out the provisions of this section $32,100,000 for the fiscal year 2001, $5,000,000 for fiscal year 2002, and $8,000,000 for fiscal year 2003.

SEC. 3. ADMINISTRATIVE SUBPOENAS TO APPREHEND FUGITIVES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 49 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''§ 1075. Administrative subpoenas to apprehend fugitives

''(a) In this section—

''(1) the term 'fugitive' means a person who—

''(A) having been indicted under Federal law or having been convicted of committing a felony under Federal law, flees or attempts to flee from or evades or attempts to evade the jurisdiction of the court with jurisdiction over the felony;

''(B) having been indicted under State law or having been convicted of committing a felony under State law, flees or attempts to flee from, or evades or attempts to evade, the jurisdiction of the court with jurisdiction over the felony;

''(C) escapes from lawful Federal or State custody after having been indicted or having been convicted of committing a felony under Federal or State law; or

''(D) is in violation of subparagraph (2) or (3) of the first undesignated paragraph of section 1073;

''(2) the term 'investigation' means, with respect to a State fugitive described in subparagraph (B) or (C) of paragraph (1), an investigation in which there is reason to believe that the fugitive fled from or evaded, or attempted to flee from or evade, the jurisdiction of the court, or escaped from custody, in or affecting, or using any facility of, interstate or foreign commerce, or as to whom an appropriate law enforcement officer or official of a State or political subdivision has requested the Attorney General to assist in the investigation, and the Attorney General finds that the particular circumstances of the request give rise to a Federal interest sufficient for the exercise of Federal jurisdiction pursuant to section 1075;

''(3) the term 'State' means a State of the United States, the District of Colombia, and any commonwealth, territory, or possession of the United States; and

''(4) the term 'relevant or material' means there are articulable facts that show the fugitive's whereabouts may be discerned from the records sought.

''(b) In any investigation with respect to the apprehension of a fugitive, the Attorney General may subpoena witnesses for the purpose of the production of any records (including books, papers, documents, electronic data, and other tangible and intangible items that constitute or contain evidence) that the Attorney General finds relevant or material in the investigation. The attendance of witnesses and the production of records may be required from any place in any State or other place subject to the jurisdiction of the United States at any designated place where the witness was served with a subpoena, except that a witness shall not be required to appear more than 500 miles distant from the place where the witness was served. Witnesses summoned under this section shall be paid the same fees and mileage that are paid witnesses in the courts of the United States.

''(c) A subpoena issued under this section may be served by any person designated in the subpoena to serve it. Service upon a natural person may be made by personal delivery of the subpoena to that person or by certified mail with return receipt requested. Service may be made upon a domestic or foreign corporation or upon a partnership or other unincorporated association that is subject to suit under a common name, by delivering the subpoena to an officer, to a managing or general agent, or to any other agent authorized by appointment or by law to receive service of process. The affidavit of the person serving the subpoena entered on a true copy thereof by the person serving it shall be proof of service.

''(d) In the case of the contumacy by or refusal to obey a subpoena issued to any person, the Attorney General may invoke the aid of any court of the United States within the jurisdiction of which the investigation is carried on or of which the subpoenaed person is an inhabitant, or in which he carries on business or may be found, to compel compliance with the subpoena. The court may issue an order requiring the subpoenaed person to appear before the Attorney General to produce records if so ordered. Any failure to obey the order of the court may be punishable by the court as contempt thereof. All process in any such case may be served in any judicial district in which the person may be found.

''(e) This section shall be construed and applied in a manner consistent with section 2703 and with section 1102 of the Right to Financial Privacy Act of 1978 (12 U.S.C. 3402).

''(f) The United States Marshals Service shall report to the Attorney General on a quarterly basis regarding administrative subpoenas issued pursuant to this section. The Attorney General shall transmit the report to Congress.

''(g) The Attorney General shall issue guidelines governing the issuance of administrative subpoenas by the United States Marshals Service. Such guidelines shall mandate that administrative subpoenas shall issue only after review and approval of the Director of the Marshals Service or his designee in a position of Assistant Director or higher.''.

(b) TECHNICAL AND CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The analysis for chapter 49 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''1075. Administrative subpoenas to apprehend fugitives.''.

SECTION-BY-SECTION ANALYSIS—FUGITIVE APPREHENSION ACT OF 2000

Section 1. Short title

The title is the ''Fugitive Apprehension Act of 2000.''

Section 2. Fugitive apprehension task forces

The purpose of this provision is to assist Federal, state and local law enforcement authorities by forming several multiagency task forces around the country to locate and apprehend fugitives wanted by their jurisdictions.

The bill would authorize to be appropriated to the U.S. Marshal Service funds to establish new permanent Fugitive Apprehension Task Forces and supplement task forces already operating in areas throughout the United States. The task forces would be totally dedicated to locating and apprehending fugitives under the direction of a National Director and not under a specific District to insure that they are not utilized for other USMS missions.

Section 3. Administrative subpoena authority

As a general matter, under Federal law, if there is no intent to seek Federal indictment—as is true in a great majority of fugitive apprehension investigations—law enforcement officers may not use a grand jury subpoena to obtain information relevant to a fugitive investigation. Indeed, to do so would constitute abuse of the grand jury process. Although there are some mechanisms to obtain this information through application to the court, time spent by law enforcement seeking state and federal court orders to obtain the release of information can make the difference between apprehension or further flight of a fugitive.

This provision would remedy the current deficiency in the law by providing for administrative subpoena authority in fugitive investigations. The provision is based on the administrative subpoena authority provided in title 21, United States Code, Section 876, which authorizes the Attorney General to issue administrative subpoenas in controlled substance related criminal investigations and administrative proceedings. However, this provision incorporates significant restrictions on its use in order to satisfy concerns over an expansion in the use of administrative subpoenas.

First, this is more narrowly tailored than Title 21, United States Code, Section 876. The proposed section 1075 authorizes the Attorney General to obtain only documents in response to the subpoena, not testimony.

Second, the statute is limited in its application to fugitives in Federal and state felony cases, not just those suspected of committing crimes. The authority would only apply to those who had been indicted.

Third, the statute strictly controls any delegation of the Attorney General's authority to issue such subpoenas, by requiring that any such delegation be accomplished only through formal Attorney General guidelines that would be subject to scrutiny. These guidelines would require that an official at the level of Assistant Director in the Marshals Service must approve any such subpoena.

Fourth, the statute requires that before a subpoena can be issued, the Attorney General must find that the records sought are ''relevant or material,'' i.e., there are ''articulable facts'' that show the fugitive's whereabouts may be discerned from the records sought.

Fifth, the statute makes clear that an administrative subpoena issued under this section does not ''trump'' protections accorded records under existing statutes, such as electronic records whose production is covered by section 2703 of Title 18 and financial records whose production is covered by section 3402 of Title 12. Rather, this statute is to be construed and applied consistent with such existing statutes.

Sixth, the statute requires the Marshals Service to report to the Attorney General quarterly regarding the number of administrative subpoenas issued, and this report will be submitted to the Congress.

This provision would help bring to justice the larger number of federal fugitives whom the government has already decided merit prosecution insofar as they have been charged with and or convicted of a Federal felony offense or have escaped after having been convicted of such an offense. By their conduct, these individuals have indicated a complete lack of respect for our nation's criminal justice system. As to these fugitives, the government does not need proof that they have moved in interstate commerce prior to issuing a subpoena.

The provision also would allow Federal law enforcement officials to issue an administrative subpoena to assist state law enforcement officials in apprehending state fugitives when they affect interstate commerce or when there is a request for assistance from the appropriate state official, and the Attorney General finds that the request gives rise to a Federal interest sufficient to warrant the exercise of Federal jurisdiction under section 1705. This portion of the statute is modeled on similar provisions in Title 28 U.S.C. sections 540 and 540a. It responds to the need of state officials to use the unique, nationwide detection and enforcement capabilities of Federal law enforcement agencies in apprehending fugitives, many of whom cross state lines to avoid capture. It also recognizes the importance of, and provides additional support for, ongoing cooperation between state and Federal officials in capturing fugitives, particularly in joint Federal/state task forces.

Under Title 28 U.S.C. Section 566(e)(1)(B), the U.S. Marshal Service has authority to investigate fugitive matters ''as directed by the Attorney General.'' The FBI has authority to investigate fugitive matters (in violation of Title 18 U.S.C. section 1073) under Title 28 U.S.C. section 533(1). This bill would neither increase nor decrease the Attorney General's authority under those statutory provisions to direct the activities of the Marshal Service and the FBI.

Finally, it would provide investigators a mechanism to obtain documentary information in cases alleging a violation under the Unlawful Flight to Avoid Prosecution (UFAP) statute for fugitives fleeing from the testimonial responsibilities or to avoid lawful process, 18 U.S.C. section 1073(2) and (3). For this lower priority category of fugitives, it incorporates by reference the UFAP interstate movement requirement.

By Mr. MCCAIN:

S. 2518. A bill to provide for the technical integrity of hte FM radio band, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

FM RADIO ACT OF 2000

● Mr. MCCAIN: Mr. President, I rise today to introduce a bill to resolve the controversy that has erupted over the Federal Communications Commission's creation of a new, noncommercial low-power FM radio service.

As you undoubtedly known, the FCC's low-power FM rules will allow the creation of thousands of new noncommercial FM radio stations with coverage of about a mile or so. Although these new stations will give churches and community groups new outlets for expression of their views, commercial FM broadcasters as well as National Public Radio oppose the new service. They argue that the FCC ignored studies showing that the new low-power stations would cause harmful interference to the reception of existing full-power FM stations.

Mr. President, legislation before the House of Representatives would call a halt to the institution of low-power FM service by requiring further independent study of its potential for causing harmful interference to full-power stations, and Senator GREGG has introduced the same legislation in the Senate. While this would undoubtedly please existing FM radio broadcasters, it understandably angers the many parties who are anxious to apply for the new low-power licenses. Most importantly, it would delay the availability of whatever new programming these new low-power licensees might provide, even where the station would have caused no actual interference at all had it been allowed to operate.

With all due respect to Senator GREGG and to the supporters of the House bill, I think we can reach a fairer result, and the bill I am introducing, the FM Radio Act of 2000, is intended to do just that.

Unlike Senator GREGG'S bill, the FM Radio Act would allow the FCC to license low-power FM radio stations. the only low-power FM stations that would be affected would be those whose transmissions are actually causing harmful interference to a full-power radio station. The National Academy of Sciences—an expert body independent of the FCC—would determine which stations are causing such interference and what the low-power station must do to alleviate it.

It gives full-power broadcasters the right to sue any low-power FM licensee for causing harmful interference, and stipulates that the costs of the suit shall be borne by the losing party. Finally, to make sure that the FCC does not relegate the interests of full-power radio broadcasters to secondary importance in its eagerness to launch the new lower-power FM service, the bill requires the FCC to complete all rulemakings necessary to implement full-power stations' transition to digital broadcasters no later than June 1, 2001.

Mr. President, this legislation strikes a fair balance by allowing non-interfering low-power FM stations to operate without further delay, while affecting only those low-power stations that an independent scientific body finds to be causing harmful interference in their actual, everyday operations. This is totally consistent with the fact that low-power FM is a secondary service which, by law, must cure any interference caused to any primary, full-power service. This legislation will provide an efficient and impartial means to detect and resolve harmful interference. By providing a judicial remedy with costs assigned to the losing party, the bill will discourage the creation of low-power stations most likely to cause harmful interference even as it discourages full-power broadcasters from making unwarranted interference claims. And for these reasons it will provide a more definitive resolution of opposing interference claims than any number of further studies ever could.

Mr. President, in the interests of would-be new broadcasters, existing broadcasters, but, most of all, the listening public, I urge the enactment of the FM Radio Act of 2000.●

EXTENSIONS OF REMARKS

REGARDING THE WRITINGS OF THE FORMER REPRESENTATIVE RON DELLUMS

HON. BARBARA LEE

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, May 8, 2000

Ms. LEE. Mr. Speaker, I am happy to present to the house a review by Don Hopkins of a book by my friend and mentor, Ron Dellums. It is a moving account of his rise in politics, and the major contribution he made to Congress, and indeed to the world as follows:

DELLUMS' ''LYING DOWN WITH THE LIONS''

Former Berkeley/Oakland Congressman Ronald Dellums has recently written a book, co-authored by his long time colleague, H. Lee Halterman, entitled ''Lying Down with the Lions.''

Since I was also a staffer of the Congressman, one would expect that I would have laudatory things to say about his book. I will not disappoint such expectations. My interest is to urge people who are interested in the struggle for social, political and economic justice in America to read the book and enjoy what it says about us, as much as what it says about him and for the movement he came to symbolize, and to the best of his abilities, to lead.

My thought is that for Bay Area residents who take pride in the Niners, the Sharks, the Raider, the Warriors, the Stanford Cardinals and the Cal Bears et al., it does not seem a reach to suggest that they take pride in a home grown warrior on the political front, like Ron Dellums.

Ron, after all, grew up in West Oakland. West Oakland, it might be recalled, is that picturesque corner of Oakland that Leslie Stahl of 60 Minutes recently defamed as a ''pocket of poverty'' within an otherwise prosperous Northern California. What Ms. Stahl apparently did not know, and what one can discern by reading ''Lions,'' is that their exists serious progeny from West Oakland that has contributed monumentally to the success of this nation.

For the purpose of this note, however, I would focus on Ronald V. Dellums. As we speak, there is a federal building named after him. There is a train station named after his uncle and mentor, a hero of the civil rights movement, the distinguished C.L. Dellums. There are countless public improvement projects and programs in the era, like the Chabot Science Center, the Federal Building, the Military Base projects, that are extant and flourish because of his work and sacrifice.

More than all of this, however, what should be known by Bay Area residents is the tremendous contribution Dellums made to the politics of this area, this nation, and most significantly, the world.

Ron Dellums' politics, which were grounded on the notion of ''coalition'', gave meaning, structure and guidance, across race, gender and class lines, to a set of politics that first led to the significant inclusion of minorities in elected positions in the Bay Area of Northern California. The same politics, grounded in the notion that all of the world's ''Niggers''—the excluded and disenfranchised—working together, could ''change the world.''

This particular characterization of logic and integrity of a coalition of, all the disenfranchised later became passe (Nigger could only be snickeringly referred to, as during the O.J. Simpson trial, as the ''N'' word, and what a crock, for a word so well worn) the fact is that the political activists of the Bay Area and other urban communities touched by the intractable logic of Dellums' ''Nigger speech'', was a critical ingredient in the development of the coalition, the struggle, that ended America's involvement in the war in Vietnam. It gave philosophical and emotional resonance to Lyndon Baines Johnson's call for a War on Poverty, and it laid the groundwork for a political movement that brought Blacks, Hispanics, Asians, Women, Handicapped people, Gays, etc., into the limelight of political recognition, respectability, and redress.

Dellums built upon the eloquence and commitment of the likes of John George and Bob Scheer to give the antiwar movement focus, legitimacy, credibility, multiethnic support and moral tonality. His passion for justice for the disenfranchised was responsible for the impact his presence made in the legislative agenda and the political culture of the United States Congress.

Upon his retirement from the Congress, members from both sides of the aisle, testified, that his efforts contributed significantly to the culmination of the cold war, the modification of military procurement policies that prolonged that war, and to a social agenda that promised a peace divided that would benefit the poor and less fortunate in American communities.

None of what Ron Dellums accomplished can be known without some effort. Books have been written about the Kennedys and Martin Luther King, about Whitney Young, Andrew Young, Jesse Jackson and other heroes of that struggle. Those of us, who believe in the importance of coalition politics, the politics that binds the interests of the disenfranchised American across ethnic, gender, age, and sex lines, could not be fulfilled by any chronicle of the era, without a book by and about Ron Dellums.

Dellums' book, which is a short but thoughtful recapitulation of the issues that first led him to Congres—the philosophical and political ideas that sustained his growth as a public person, and the impact these had on the political process, is therefore a ''must'' to read for anyone who seeks a handle on the flavor of what happened and why during the critical years of our national life when he served us as an activist, a local legislator, and a member of Congress.

I trust that those who lived through the tumultuous sixties, seventies, and eighties in the Bay Area, who lived through the saga of the Black Panther Party, the antiwar movement, the struggle for the liberation of South Africa, and the struggle to end the Cold War, will take time to read the Dellums tome.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

HON. LUIS V. GUTIERREZ

OF ILLINOIS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, May 8, 2000

Mr. GUTIERREZ. Mr. Speaker, last week I traveled to Puerto Rico to show my support for the people of Puerto Rico and the peaceful demonstrators who are opposed to the resumption of Naval training on the island of Vieques.

As a result of my absence from this chamber during last week, I missed voting on the following recorded votes: rollcall vote Nos. 131, 132, 133, 134, 135, 136, 137, 138, 139, 140, 141, 142, and rollcall vote number 143. Had I been present in this chamber when these votes were cast, I would have voted ''yes'' on each of these rollcall votes.

EXPRESSING SENSE OF CONGRESS ON DEATH OF JOHN CARDINAL O'CONNOR, ARCHBISHOP OF NEW YORK

SPEECH OF

HON. CAROLYN B. MALONEY

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, May 4, 2000

Mrs. MALONEY of New York. Mr. Speaker, today, I celebrate John Cardinal O'Connor.

It is my deepest hope that Cardinal O'Connor's wise, charitable, and dynamic legacy of leadership becomes a standard for all future New York City Cardinals.

Cardinal O'Connor had an extraordinary capacity to speak to New York's many diverse communities—to both comfort and inspire.

The Cardinal cast light on our City's most pressing problems, and then showed us what needed to be done, particularly for homelessness, the AIDS crisis, and condition of the poor.

In the past months, many people learned that Cardinal O'Connor often anonymously volunteered in AIDS clinics.

We may never know the other people and place Cardinal O'Connor selflessly aided. We can only assume that his actions were innumerable and always compassionate.

Cardinal O'Connor was a great leader and a friend of all leaders in our city. More than one mayor told me they often consulted with him on how to handle their work and to respond to the challenges of leading the City. He received almost every award his Church and City could bestow on him.

WORLD BANK AIDS MARSHALL PLAN TRUST FUND ACT

SPEECH OF

HON. BARBARA LEE

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 2, 2000

Ms. LEE. Mr. Speaker, please submit the following article into the RECORD.

[From the Washington Post, Sun. Apr. 30, 2000]

AIDS IS DECLARED THREAT TO SECURITY—WHITE HOUSE FEARS EPIDEMIC COULD DESTABILIZE WORLD

(By Barton Gellman)

Convinced that the global spread of AIDS is reaching catastrophic dimensions, the Clinton administration has formally designated the disease for the first time as a threat to U.S. national security that could topple foreign governments, touch off ethnic wars and undo decades of work in building free-market democracies abroad.

The National Security Council, which has never before been involved in combating an infectious disease, is directing a rapid reassessment of the government's efforts. The new push is reflected in the doubling of budget requests—to $254 million—to combat AIDS overseas and in the creation on Feb. 8 of a White House interagency working group. The group has been instructed to ''develop a series of expanded initiatives to drive the international efforts'' to combat the disease.

Top officials and some members of Congress contemplate much higher spending levels. The urgency of addressing AIDS has also touched off internal disputes over long-settled positions on trade policy and on legal requirements that aid contractors buy only American supplies.

The new effort—described by its architects as tardy and not commensurate with the size of the crisis—was spurred last year by U.S. intelligence reports that looked at the pandemic's broadest consequences for foreign governments and societies, particularly in Africa. A National Intelligence Estimate prepared in January, representing consensus among government analysts, projected that a quarter of southern Africa's population is likely to die of AIDS and that the number of people dying of the disease will rise for a decade before there is much prospect of improvement. Based on current trends, that disastrous course could be repeated, perhaps exceeded, in south Asia and the former Soviet Union.

''At least some of the hardest-hit countries, initially in sub-Saharan Africa and later in other regions, will face a demographic catastrophe'' over the next 20 years, the study said. ''This will further impoverish the poor and often the middle class and produce a huge and impoverished orphan cohort unable to cope and vulnerable to exploitation and radicalization.''

Dramatic declines in life expectancy, the study said, are the strongest risk factor for ''revolutionary wars, ethnic wars, genocides and disruptive regime transitions'' in the developing world. Based on historical analysis of 75 factors that tend to destabilize governments, the authors said the social consequences of AIDS appear to have ''a particularly strong correlation with the likelihood of state failure in partial democracies.''

Another mobilizing factor is American politics. African American leaders, such as former representative Ron Dellums (D-Calif.) and Rep. Jesse L. Jackson Jr. (D-Ill), have adopted the cause of AIDS in Africa. Their interest is converging with that of longstanding AIDS activists in the United States and Europe, where the course of the epidemic has been slowed by preventive efforts and life-saving combinations of anti-retroviral drugs. They are angry at policies that price those medicines beyond the reach of the developing world.

In June, those activists disrupted Vice President Gore's presidential campaign announcement in Carthage, Tenn., and two other speeches that week—''blindsiding us completely,'' as one senior adviser put it. The activists, and several senior Clinton administration officials, say that pressure accelerated the White House's response.

There is no recent precedent for treating disease as a security threat. So unfamiliar are public health agencies with the apparatus of national defense that one early task force meeting was delayed when co-chairwoman Sandra Thurman, whose Office of National AIDS Policy is across the street from the White House, could not find the Situation Room.

For all the stakes they now describe, Clinton administration officials do not contemplate addressing them on a scale associated with traditional security priorities. Gore's national security adviser, Leon Fuerth, freely acknowledged that the 2001 budget request of $254 million to combat AIDS abroad—a sum surpassed, for example, by drone aircraft in the Pentagon budget—provides ''resources that are inadequate for the task.'' He called the work of the task force ''an iterative process'' aimed at slowing the plague's rate of increase and alleviating some of its effects. Before this year, federal spending on AIDS overseas remained relatively flat.

Other officials noted that the United States has endorsed U.N. Secretary General Kofi Annan's declared five-year goal of reducing the rate of new infections by 25 percent. That falls close to the CIA's best-case, and least probable, scenario. Because such a turn of events would demand resources from U.S. allies and multinational bodies, the new White House group has been instructed to ''develop a series of expanded initiatives to drive the international efforts.''

Fuerth, a member of the ''principals committee'' that takes up the most important foreign policy questions, told representatives from 16 agencies on Feb. 8 that the panel wanted a package of proposals for Clinton within several weeks. The working group is scheduled to finish drafting its proposals in May. Fuerth said the government is looking for ''the kind of focus and coordination on this issue that we normally strive for on national security issues.''

''The numbers of people who are dying, the impact on elites—like the army, the educated people, the teachers—is quite severe,'' he said. ''In the end it was a kind of slow-motion destruction of everything we were trying, in our contact programs and our military-to-military programs, to build up, and would affect the viability of these societies, would affect the stability of the region. . . . In the world that we're facing, the destiny of the continent of Africa matters. And it isn't as if this disease is going to stay put in sub-Saharan Africa.''

Twenty-three million people are infected in sub-Saharan Africa, with new infections coming at the rate of roughly 5,000 a day, according to World Health Organization figures. Of 13 million deaths to date, 11 million have been in sub-Saharan Africa. In the developing world, the disease spreads primarily through heterosexual contact.

The intelligence estimate portrays the pandemic as the bad side of globalization. Accelerating trade and travel—along with underlying conditions favorable to the disease—are pushing much of Asia, and particularly India, toward ''a dramatic increase in infectious disease deaths, largely driven by the spread of HIV/AIDS,'' the intelligence report said. ''By 2010, the region could surpass Africa in the number of HIV infections.'' The number of infections now is relatively low, but the growth rate is high and governments have been slow to respond.

Infections are also growing rapidly, and largely unchecked, in the former Soviet Union and Eastern Europe. The intelligence estimate said this growth will ''challenge democratic development and transitions and possibly contribute to humaniarian emergencies and military conflicts to which the United States may need to respond.'' The report also anticipates that ''infectious disease-related trade embargoes and restrictions on travel and immigration also will cause frictions among and with key trading partners and other selected states.''

''The thing that's most staggering, and people are just begnning to grasp, is that Africa is the tip of the iceberg,'' Thurman said. ''We are just at the beginning of a pandemic the likes of which we have not seen in this century, and in the end will probably never have seen in history.''

Senior administration officials, some of them apparently frustrated, said that the government does not dispute estimates by the Joint United Nations Program on HIV/AIDS that it would take nearly $2 billion to fund adequate prevention in Africa, and a like sum for treatment. What the United States has been spending, by contrast, ''is a rounding error for county budgets'' in Fairfax and Montgomery counties, said one disgusted official.

''I don't have a fantasy that we're going to go to the Hill and get $5 billion to build Africa's health care infrastructure,'' said one senior Africa policymaker. ''We're trying to determine effective steps that need to be taken, and can be taken, right now.''

After initial resistance from U.S. Trade Representative Charlene Barshefsky, the government has agreed in principle to encourage cheaper access to life-saving drugs by relaxing hard-line positions that protect U.S. drugmakers' intellectual property. Gore has said publicly that the United States does not rule out the use by afflicted countries of locally made or imported generics of drugs under patent by American companies. Assistant Trade Representative Joseph Papovich has written to the governments of Thailand and South Africa with new formulas for resolving intellectual property disputes on such medicines.

But several participants in the government effort said the practical meaning of the change, if any, will have to be decided at the Cabinet level or by Clinton personally. An early test comes in May, when Barshefsky's office decides whether South Africa should be removed from the ''watch list'' of countries facing potential trade sanctions. South Africa is on that list because it passed a law the United States initially described as threatening to the intellectual property of American drug manufacturers.

With the prospect of substantial new spending, agencies ranging from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) and National Institutes of Health to the Labor Department are fighting over the allocation of funds. Undersecretary of State Frank Loy, meanwhile, is said by participants to be resisting the emerging consensus that the international AIDS effort should be centered in Thurman's office.

The task force has also battled over proposals to amend the Foreign Assistance Act, which requires all taxpayer-funded aid to come from American suppliers. Public health agencies want exceptions for condoms and AIDS test kits, which can be acquired more cheaply overseas. Congress willing, the task force is likely to recommend that change.

The high-profile attention from the top is ''raising this issue in ways that leaders [of afflicted nations] can't ignore it,'' one White House official said. Richard C. Holbrooke, the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, used his rotation as Security Council president in January to declare a month on Africa. He made AIDS the subject of the first Security Council meeting of 2000 and invited Gore to speak. When Clinton traveled to India in March, he successfully pressed the government to issue a joint declaration on AIDS.

Pervading the recent U.S. effort is a strong sense among participants of time misspent. The virulence of the pandemic are accurately foreseen, and ''the United States didn't exactly cover itself with glory,'' said one close adviser to Clinton.

''We saw it coming, and we didn't act as quickly as we could have,'' said Helene D. Gayle, a physician who directs AIDS prevention at the CDC. ''I'm not sure what that says about how seriously we took it, how seriously we took lives in Africa.''

Peter Piot, a virologist who heads the United Nations AIDS efforts in Geneva, said ''the good news is that the U.S. government is mobilizing. The bad news is that it took so long. This is not a catastrophe that came out of the blue. It has been clearly coming for at least 10 years.''

Asked about those comments, Thurman looked pained.

''Oh yeah,'' she said softly. ''It's very late. But better late than never. You rarely ever get a second chance in an epidemic.''

IN HONOR OF THE LEXINGTON DEMOCRATIC CLUB OF MANHATTAN

HON. CAROLYN B. MALONEY

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, May 8, 2000

Mrs. MALONEY of New York. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay special tribute to the Lexington Democratic Club, a very special and important democratic organization in the Upper East Side of Manhattan. Over the fifty-one years of the club's existence, Mr. Speaker, the members of the Lexington Democratic Club have forged a more democratic, more inclusive form of civic participation in New York City.

The ''Lex Club'' was the first Reform Club in Manhattan. Driven by the belief that openness and public deliberation are the key ingredients for a healthy democracy, the Lexington Democratic Club blazed a trail for opponents of top-down, closed-door decision making in the political process. Decisions at the Club are made at open meetings of the membership and patronage positions have been replaced with merit-based nomination systems.

Furthermore, Mr. Speaker, the Lexington Democratic Club led the way in reforming the system for judicial appointments in New York. The Club spearheaded the creation of a system where independent experts screen applicants and recommend three candidates to the club for every open judicial seat. The Club then endorses a final candidate through open meetings.

The Lexington Democratic Club has been graced with dynamic leaders since its inception. Jack Baltzell and Alice Sachs were the very first Reform District Leaders in the city and they helped make the reform movement a major political force in New York.

Ken Mills, the current President of the Lex Club, has increased membership in the club, tripled its financial resources, and managed the club's monthly newsletter. More importantly, Mr. Mills has led the club's major civic efforts—including the successful election of candidates and the mobilization of major tenant protests against plans to abolish the city's rent control laws. In short, Ken Mills, aided by Niki Stern, the club's Executive Vice President, and all the club's members, has revitalized the Lex Club and returned it to its place as one of the most prestigious civic organizations in the city.

Mr. Speaker, I salute the Lexington Democratic Club of Manhattan and I ask my fellow Members of Congress to join me in recognizing the great contributions of the club's membership to the New York community and to our democracy.

RECOGNIZING THE LIFETIME ACHIEVEMENTS OF DR. ROBERT C. CORLEY

HON. WILLIAM M. THOMAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, May 8, 2000

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Speaker, I hope the House will join me in recognizing and applauding the achievements of Dr. Robert C. Corley of the Air Force Research Laboratory as he prepares to retire June 2nd as Senior Scientist for rocket propulsion in the Propulsion Directorate, Air Force Research Laboratory at Edwards Air Force Base. As we assess the role the Air Force has played in this nation's security during the last 40 years, it is clear that Bob Corley's contributions to defense technologies have been significant.

Dr. Corley is recognized as one of the world's foremost experts on missile propulsion technologies. His research skills helped produce the extremely dependable solid fuel propellants that are used in almost all American tactical and ballistic weapons systems. His work also promoted our space program through booster systems development. The dependability of those systems is in large measure the result of his efforts.

In addition to research, Bob Corley has managed propulsion research projects. He coordinated international research projects involving university and government researchers across the globe. More recently, he has been the founder of the current Integrated High Payoff Rocket Propulsion Technology (IHPRPT) program. The latter program is a joint project coordinating efforts by the Department of Defense, NASA and private industry to develop new, dependable propulsion technologies for the 21st Century. They have already begun producing better launch systems for military and civilian programs, and the coordination of government and private efforts under the structure Dr. Corley established will continue to be of benefit well into this century.

From the time he arrived at Edwards Air Force Base in 1958 as a Second Lieutenant in the Air Force right through his retirement as one of the most senior research managers in federal service, Bob Corley has worked on tough projects vital to this nation's security and scientific advancement. The executive branch recognizes his contribution. He has been named as a recipient of the Outstanding Civilian Career Service Award. I join his colleagues in recognizing the value of his work and wish him a well deserved retirement.

IN RECOGNITION OF CHESTER A. SADOWSKI: SBA'S 2000 FINANCIAL ADVOCATE

HON. NYDIA M. VELAZQUEZ

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, May 8, 2000

Ms. VELAZQUEZ. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize Chet Sadowski for his appointment as the Small Business Administration's 2000 Financial Advocate.

President John F. Kennedy once said ''Leadership and learning are indispensable to each other.'' Mr. Sadowski has exemplified great leadership and has had a life-long career assisting the small business community and aiding in its growth of 7A and 504 loans.

Mr. Sadowski's distinguished career began in 1972 as an SBA Loan Officer. By the time he left in early 1980, he held the position of Chief of Finance and was responsible for the overall processing and approval of all SBA lending for the New York District Office. In March of 1980, Mr. Sadowski joined Citibank, NA as Manager where he developed an SBA lending program based in Queens County. Within several years, he became Vice President and Team Leader.

In 1987, Mr. Sadowski joined the New York Business Development Corporation to establish and manage a New York City regional office. This office was part of NYBDC's program to increase lending activity throughout the State of New York. Within a few years, the New York regional office and the company grew dramatically.

This past fiscal year, the New York office was ranked high among lenders in both the 7A and 504 SBA lending programs.

Mr. Sadowski and I worked together traveling throughout the 12th Congressional District discussing economic development. His commitment to small businesses has provided financing for hundreds of jobs in our community.

I would like to honor Chet Sadowski today, congratulate him on his appointment as SBA's Financial Advocate and personally thank him for his hard work and dedication to the small business community.

THE ADLER PLANETARIUM CELEBRATES ITS 70TH BIRTHDAY

HON. JOHN EDWARD PORTER

OF ILLINOIS

Monday, May 8, 2000

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased to recognize one of Chicago's premier cultural institutions, the Adler Planetarium and Astronomy Museum, as it celebrates its 70th birthday on May 12, 2000. I would also like to take this opportunity to recognize the outstanding contributions of J. Douglas Donenfeld, a member of the Adler Board of Trustees for nearly 21 years and Chairman of the Board for nine years, as he steps down as Chairman.

Located on Chicago's stunning lakefront, the Adler was founded in 1930 by Sears executive Max Adler to showcase leading planetarium technology and to serve as a center for the study of the evolving human conception of the Universe.

When the Adler opened its doors to the public on May 12, 1930, it was the first planetarium in the Western Hemisphere. Seventy years later, more than 20 million people have visited the Adler to see sky shows, enjoy exhibits, find answers and craft new questions. The Adler has fulfilled Max Adler's mission by becoming one of the world's premier planetaria and astronomy museums.

Today, the Adler continues to grow and remain on the cutting edge of technology. Last year, the Adler celebrated the completion of its new Sky Pavilion and the complete renovation of the original building, a project which doubled the Adler's exhibit space. The architecturally striking Sky Pavilion is a two-story, 60,000-square-foot addition on the east side of the Adler's existing 1930 landmark structure. This facility comprises four major exhibition galleries, including the world's first StarRider Theater, a 3–D interactive virtual reality experience that transports audiences to other planets, stars and distant galaxies.

Doug Donenfeld has been a leading force in the growth of numerous Chicago-area charitable, cultural and other not-for-profit organizations for more than 20 years. The Adler has been extremely fortunate to have him on their board. His contributions to the success of the Adler and its recent rejuvenation has been unparalleled. Mr. Donenfeld's dedication and efforts on behalf of the Adler have enhanced Max Adler's original vision of the Adler Planetarium & Astronomy Museum.

Mr. Speaker, 70 years have seen remarkable changes in astronomy and at the Adler Planetarium & Astronomy Museum. Yet, Max Adler's vision remains as vital as ever. Astronomical discovery will continue to push the boundaries of human knowledge, challenging our most basic understanding. The Adler will be there as an evolutionary educational resource and guide for all of us seeking to learn more about our Universe.

HONORING THE 257TH ORDNANCE COMPANY

HON. JOHN ELIAS BALDACCI

OF MAINE

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, May 8, 2000

Mr. BALDACCI. Mr. Speaker, on this day 55 years ago, the bells rang out for VE Day. World War II was finally over in Europe.

I want to pay tribute to members of the 257th Ordnance Company whose ''behind the scenes'' work was essential to making the Allies' victory over the Axis powers possible. One member of the Company, Harry Dixon, is from my district. Harry is hosting a reunion of fellow members of the Company in June.

The Company performed exceptionally in keeping the mighty military machine moving. The Instrument Section, in which Harry Dixon served, was responsible for maintaining military property from watches, to tanks, to artillery.

During their service, they won the admiration of all with whom they served for their technical proficiency, their Yankee ingenuity, and their grace under fire. No job was too large or too small.

Without the work of these brave American men, it is likely that other soldiers would have been unable to perform their duties. Well-maintained equipment is crucial to a successful campaign, and the men of the 257th took their work seriously.

Harry Dixon and his fellow members were among the countless unsung heroes of World War II. While the Company received many commendations and 5 were awarded the Bronze Star, few Americans know their names. What we do know, however, is that without these men, the War would have continued much longer and cost our world even more.

And so 55 years later, it is an honor to be able to say thank you to Harry Dixon and the rest of the 257th Ordnance Company. I offer them every best wish as they gather for their reunion this summer.

HONORING ETHEL BAMPFIELD DENMARK

HON. EDOLPHUS TOWNS

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, May 8, 2000

Mr. TOWNS. Mr. Speaker, today I honor Mrs. Ethel Bampfield Denmark, an educator, community leader, wife, parent, and a pillar of her community. Ethel Bampfield was born in Hampton, South Carolina, to Mr. and Mrs. James H. Bampfield. In 1958, she graduated from the Mathis School for Girls and enrolled in Florida A & M University. She was a proud graduate of FAMU in 1968, and joined her family, who had moved to Brooklyn, and made it her home for the past thirty-two years.

When Mrs. Denmark began her career in the field of Juvenile Justice, it never occurred to her that she was beginning an impressive, challenging, and extensive career that today holds for her many positive memories, and opportunities for meaningful moments of reflection. In 1969, Mrs. Denmark was hired as a caseworker at the Manida Juvenile Center For Girls. Had it not closed, this innovative center would have become part of the New York City Department of Juvenile Justice. After spending approximately two years with the Manida Juvenile Center For Girls, Mrs. Denmark decided to seek a graduate degree. In 1972, she began pursuing her Masters of Social Work Degree at Hunter College School of Social Work. In 1974, she earned her MSW degree, and shortly thereafter accepted a position as a Foster Care Worker and the New York State Division for Youth. In the years that followed, she also obtained her license as a New York State Certified Social Worker.

While pursuing the position with the Department of Youth, Mrs. Denmark met Thaila Carpenter-Paige and Beatrice A. Hudson, two women she came to know, respect and appreciate over the past 26 years. Throughout her career with OCFS, she feels fortunate and blessed to have had mentors who recognized her abilities, believed in her potential, and provided opportunities that contributed to her growth and development while she was with the Division for Youth.

Over the past three decades, Mrs. Denmark has remained very aware of all of the people who have contributed to her professional achievements. On behalf of Mrs. Denmark, I want to thank everyone who touched her life, and to convey to them her belief that her work in the Downstate area rang of success only because of the efforts of those with whom she worked—those who supported her and provided her with valuable opportunities.

Mr. Speaker, today Mrs. Denmark wants to pay homage to her family: her husband James Denmark, an outstanding contemporary artist; her mother, Mrs. Johnnie B. James, and; her children and grandchildren. She believes that, had it not been for her families' blessing, she would not have been able to devote the time and energy that she did to her very demanding career. Even as she prepares to retire, Mrs. Denmark continues to participate actively in the Brown Memorial Baptist Church in Brooklyn, as well as in a number of social and civic organizations, and also to serve on various Boards and Committees.

Mr. Speaker, Ethel Bampfield Denmark feels fulfilled for having had the opportunity to touch as many lives as she has through teaching, and learning, during her tenure with OCFS. Her travels brought her to us in Brooklyn, where she has stayed for three decades, always enjoying the experience of life to its fullest. She has earned this honor, and I hope that my colleagues will join me in wishing her peace and happiness as she continues her travels through this remarkable journey we call life.

CHINA AND THE ITC

HON. JOHN P. MURTHA

OF PENNSYLVANIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, May 8, 2000

Mr. MURTHA. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to address a serious rash of problems revolving around the enforcement of our trade laws. This body, in concurrence with the rules of the WTO, has enacted laws to ensure fair and equitable trade for American industry and its workers. Unfortunately, our own International Trade Commission appears to have decided to disregard these laws, as recently demonstrated in its decision regarding the dumping of cold-rolled steel into the United States and its seemingly rubber-stamp approach to Sunset determinations whereby foreign unfair traders can have the offsetting duties—which were applied only after they were found to be engaged in unfair trade—erased just by showing up at the ITC and asking.

As troubling as the situation is now, I'm afraid I can see far greater problems on the horizon—problems that quite possibly will accompany China's accession to the WTO. Congress has been asked to accept that China's entry into the WTO contains meaningful protections against unfair trade practices by Chinese companies. In light of the ITC's recent failure to correctly apply the U.S. Trade laws and to effectively respond to massive foreign unfair trade, I am losing confidence in our ability to counter unfair trade from China and other countries.

This matter is deeply troubling to me. The domestic steel industry has suffered through massive dumping of foreign steel in the U.S. market over the last two years. The Administration responded by declaring a policy of ''zero tolerance'' for unfair trade. The Congress provided the necessary funding to the Commerce Department to investigate this unfair trade and Commerce did its job. It found that, in the case of cold-rolled steel for example, that foreign producers were illegally dumping by as much as 80 percent.

The ITC, however, did not do its job. The ITC determined that dumped steel imports more than doubled during the period of investigation and consistently undersold domestic steel. It also found that, during a period of record demand, the U.S. steel industry experienced significant revenue losses, with several major steel producers even forced into bankruptcy. Nevertheless, the ITC inexplicably determined that this massive dumping of cold-rolled steel was not even a cause of this injury to the domestic industry. Without a determination of injury—which is irrefutable in these cases—U.S. industry and its workers have no form of relief and nowhere to turn. As legislators and appropriators, it is our responsibility to reevaluate the ITC and whether it is properly managing its resources and correctly adhering to Congressional intent.

Just last year the Administration committed to ''zero tolerance'' for unfair trade, yet this commitment apparently doesn't extend to the ITC. I'm tired of promises of ''zero tolerance'' and think it's time we insist on some action. Before we allow the Administration to sell us an agreement with China that promises to benefit America, let's insist on some proof that promises are sometimes answered.

IN MEMORY OF REVEREND RUDOLPH S. SHOULTZ

HON. JOHN SHIMKUS

OF ILLINOIS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, May 8, 2000

Mr. SHIMKUS. Mr. Speaker, I share an article from the March, 2000 issue of the Pure News, published in Springfield, Illinois, by T.C. Christian.

BUT HE TRIED TO HELP SOMEBODY

(By T.C. Christian, Jr.)

It would be wonderful if I could remember and name all the wonderful people who have made a difference in my life, but that just can not be done. Part of the problem is that there have been too many to count and no matter how good my intentions may be, somebody would undoubtedly be missed.

However, death has a way of refreshening our memory by placing yesterday's faces, deeds and conversations on a giant screen where we can all watch the previews at the same time.

Such was the case in hearing about the death of Reverend Rudolph S. Shoultz, pastor of the Union Baptist Church in Springfield, Illinois. His death refreshened my memory that life is but a book, sometimes a short story, sometimes several chapters, sometimes a happy beginning and sometimes a sad ending.

After reading and listening to all the different tributes paid to this man whom some even called the ''Godfather,'' a stranger would have to conclude that ''this preacher must have helped somebody.'' In one chapter of the ''Life of Reverend Rudolph S. Shoultz,'' somebody called him a civil rights leader who fought in the trenches, another writer said he not only fed his members with religion but fed them with state jobs, one minister said the good Reverend adopted him as his son and just before we get to the final chapter, there was recognition of the awards he received and how he provided housing for senior citizens.

In reminiscing about yesterday, I decided to review another book yet to be published. This book's title is ''The Life of T.C. Christian, Jr.'' This book contains several chapters about Reverend Shoultz.

In chapter one, the author (yours truly, of course) is introduced to the Reverend and a friendship develops.

In another chapter, which was written and dated November, 1983, Reverend Shoultz appears on the front page of the very first issue of The Pure News. Also in that chapter, the author describes how Reverend Shoultz provided personal assistance to help maintain the existence of the newspaper you're now reading.

The chapter in the middle of the book describes the wedding of the author which was also performed by Reverend Shoultz. And in ''telling it like it is,'' in that same chapter (as a result of the Reverend's political connections) the author's newly wedded bride was soon to be employed in the Governor's office.

And incidentally, we did not agree on everything which gives credence to a statement made by one minister during the funeral when he said, ''If two people think just alike, one of them is not necessary.''

Reverend Rudolph S. Shoultz, who died on March 3, 2000 at the age of 81, was a living legend. Perhaps his legacy can best be remembered as a preacher who was always trying to help somebody.

NATIONAL NURSES WEEK

HON. JERRY WELLER

OF ILLINOIS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, May 8, 2000

Mr. WELLER. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in recognition of National Nurses Week, and to especially express gratitude and appreciation to the outstanding Nursing Staff at Edward Hine's Junior Veteran's Medical Center.

Throughout the year, these compassionate, hardworking nurses are entrusted with the care of our nation's veterans. The nursing staff at Edward Hine's Junior Veteran's Hospital is comprised of 518 Registered Nurses (RN), 144 Licensed Practical Nurses (LPN), 40 Nursing Assistants (NA), 56 Health Care Technicians (HCT), and 91 Clerks, all dedicated individuals whose diligent care is deeply appreciated. I recognize their commitment and endless efforts to offer exceptional patient care, while taking part in research, education, quality improvement, infection control, administration, and many other areas. Clearly these nurses make a tremendous contribution to the well-being of their patients.

We owe a tremendous debt of gratitude to those who served and sacrificed for our freedoms. It is only fitting they in turn receive the best quality care.

In closing, Mr. Speaker, I am proud and honored to offer to my colleagues in the United States House of Representatives an example of the American Spirit where traditional patriotic values of ''Helping Sharing, Always Caring for Our Veterans'' are practiced on a daily basis. The Nursing Staff at Edward Hine's Junior Medical Center is recognized for their professionalism, sensitivity and interpersonal skills as well as their altruistic dedication.

IN HONOR OF LEMONT'S MEGAN DOHERTY—ONE OF AMERICA'S TOP TEN YOUTH VOLUNTEERS

HON. JUDY BIGGERT

OF ILLINOIS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, May 8, 2000

Mrs. BIGGERT. Mr. Speaker, I rise to recognize Megan Doherty of Lemont, Illinois, for being named one of America's top ten youth volunteers by the Prudential Spirit of Community Awards.

As my colleagues are no doubt aware, the Prudential Spirit of Community Awards honor outstanding volunteer community service. The award was created five years ago by Prudential to encourage youth volunteerism and to identify and reward young role models.

And what a role model Megan is.

Though just a junior at Mt. Assisi Academy in Lemont, she has proven that one person can make a difference.

Over the past two years, Megan raised more than $56,000 to bring 29 young cancer victims of the 1986 Chernobyl nuclear disaster in Ukraine to Illinois for life-saving medical treatment and dental care that were not available to them in their own country.

Inspired by a speech by the executive director of ''Camps for Children of Chernobyl,'' Megan first asked her parents only to be a host family for one of the sick children. However, upon learning that the children had to travel in groups of 10 or more to hold down costs, she set out to find enough host families and raise enough money to bring an entire group to Lemont.

She was more than successful.

In the summer of 1998, 13 cancer-stricken children traveled to Lemont, and 16 more came in 1999. Two of the children underwent major surgery and another is now in the process of being adopted by an American family.

Megan isn't finished either. She plans to bring another 16 Ukrainian children to Lemont this summer.

Being named as one of the top ten youth volunteers in the nation—out of more than 20,000 nominees—is a true achievement.

More importantly, though, at a time when we all too often hear only of the senseless or negative acts of our nation's youth, Megan proves again the enormous capacity for goodness that our children and youth possess.

It is an honor to represent this outstanding young woman in Congress and a privilege to recognize her achievements here today.

TRIBUTE TO WILLIAM AND CATHERINE UPCHURCH

HON. J.D. HAYWORTH

OF ARIZONA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, May 8, 2000

Mr. HAYWORTH. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to a wonderful Arizona family on the very happy occasion of the 40th anniversary of William and Catherine Upchruch. From this marriage came two beautiful daughters who have always been a source of pride and joy to their parents. Susan Upchurch was born on May 1, 1962, and Sharon Upchurch was born on November 5, 1963,

The marriage of Sharon Upchurch to Michael Maita has been blessed with two children. William and Catherine are the proud grandparents of Alyssa Morgan Maita, born on January 5, 1998, and Andrew Jordan Maita, born on October 1, 1999.

I am pleased to help honor the Upchurches, their strong and enduring marriage, and the wonderful family they have raised. Mr. Speaker, I am sure the whole House will join me in wishing the Upchurches all the best in the years to come.

RECOGNITION OF FOOD ALLERGY AWARENESS WEEK

HON. THOMAS M. DAVIS

OF VIRGINIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, May 8, 2000

Mr. DAVIS of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I rise to bring to the attention of my colleagues the celebration of Food Allergy Awareness Week, which will be observed around the country this week, May 8–12. The Food Allergy Network, which is based in my district, is celebrating this week to increase the public's awareness of food allergies and anaphylaxis.

Scientists estimate that more than 6 million American children and adults have food allergies. A food allergy is the immune system's reaction to a certain food, which differs from food intolerance; a metabolic disorder. During an allergic reaction the immune system mistakenly believes that a harmless substance, in this case a food item, is harmful. In its attempt to protect itself, the body creates specific antibodies to that food. The next time the individual eats that food, the immune system releases massive amounts of chemicals and antihistamines. These chemicals trigger a cascade of allergic symptoms that can affect the respiratory system, gastrointestinal tract, skin, or cardiovascular system.

Any food can cause an allergic reaction, but eight foods cause 90 percent of all food allergies and they are: milk, egg, wheat, peanut, soy, tree nuts, fish, and shellfish. In most cases, children outgrow their food allergy with the exception of allergies to peanuts, tree nuts, fish, and shellfish, which are life-long allergies.

Presently, a cure does not exist for food allergies, only a strict avoidance of the problematic food will allow these individuals to lead a near-normal life. Therefore, accurate food labeling is vital to avoid life-threatening allergens.

If a problematic food is consumed, the individual will experience symptoms ranging from a tingling sensation in the mouth, swelling of the tongue and the throat, difficulty breathing, hives, vomiting, abdominal cramps, diarrhea, drop in blood pressure, loss of consciousness, to death. Symptoms will typically appear within minutes or up to two hours after the person has eaten the food to which he or she is allergic. The most severe reaction will cause anaphylactic shock or anaphylaxis. Anaphylaxis is a sudden, severe, potentially life-threatening allergic reaction. It typically involves two or more of the body's systems and can be fatal, sometimes within minutes. Peanuts, nuts, fish and shellfish commonly cause the most severe reactions.

Epinephrine also called adrenaline, is the medication of choice for treating a severe food allergy reaction. Epinephrine usually relieves anaphylactic symptoms for about 15 minutes, just long enough for the patient to get medical treatment. That is why it is so very important that ambulances and emergency health care providers, such as EMT's carry and be allowed to administer this life-saving drug. Unfortunately, only nine states currently allow EMT's to administer epinephrine, but the Food Allergy Network has been working hard to educate states about why this is so vitally needed.

Mr. Speaker, physicians are reporting an increase in the number of patients with food allergies across the country. It is estimated that between 100 and 200 people die each year from food allergy-related reactions. That is why the Food Allergy Network's mission of increasing public awareness about food allergies and anaphylaxis, to provide education, and to advance research on behalf of all those affected by food allergies is so important. I hope that all of my colleagues will join me in supporting Food Allergy Awareness Week and recognizing the valuable work of the Food Allergy Network.

HON. MICHAEL G. OXLEY

OF OHIO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, May 8, 2000

Mr. OXLEY. Mr. Speaker, today I rise to spotlight a very special individual who has unselfishly given his time, energy, and spirit to others in the Fourth Congressional District of Ohio. The month of June will pose many challenges to Findlay High School since it will be losing a top notch teacher and educator to a well-deserved retirement. His shoes will be very difficult to fill.

Al Bell has taught at Findlay High, my alma mater, in Findlay, Ohio since 1964. It is not every high school that can boast of a teacher who has taught there for 36 years. Over the years I have witnessed how Al cares very deeply for his high school community family. For twelve years. Al has instructed and guided his students to state and national awards for their accomplishments in the We the People . . . competition. He has served eleven years as the History Department chair at FHS. Al sat on the Strategic Planning Committee for Technology and the Selection Committee for the Robert H. Hill Award for Findlay City Schools. Al has served in all aspects of academic life. He has been a teacher, advisor, scholar, international consultant and mentor. He knows inside and out how to guide a school to academic success and national recognition.

The Center for Civic Education has also recognized that Al's academic strength and professionalism can benefit those around the world. He has served in both consultative and editorial roles for the Center. The Center has twice selected Al to travel to war-torn Bosnia to help educate Bosnian teachers on the virtues and benefits of democracy and how to impart this knowledge to young Bosnians. Al Bell is a peacekeeper in his own right.

Though he will no longer work as a teacher for FHS, he will never be far from it in mind and spirit. The inspiration to ''think'' is perhaps one of his greatest legacies which lives on in those blessed enough to have known him. To Al and his wife, Judy, all the best as they approach this new adventure of retirement together.
