The House met at 10 a.m. and was called to order by the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. LAFORETTE).

DESIGNATION OF THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE
The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following communication from the Speaker:
I hereby appoint the Honorable STEVEN C. LAFORETTE to act as Speaker pro tempore on this day.
J. DENNIS HASTERT, Speaker of the House of Representatives.

PRAYER
The Chaplain, the Reverend Daniel P. Coughlin, offered the following prayer:
Father of mercies and God of all consolation, You pursue us with untiring love. At certain moments of life, any one of us can be overshadowed by sickness or the death of a colleague, relative, or friend. Be our refuge and our strength, O Lord. Comfort all those who are lost in grief. Dispel the shadow of death with Your bright promise of new life. Lift Your people from their meandering questions of doubt and darkness; lift them into the peace and light that comes from Your presence. Confirm in them love which never dies but lives on and on. Amen.

THE JOURNAL
The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair has examined the Journal of the last day’s proceedings and announces to the House his approval thereof.
Pursuant to clause 1, rule I, the Journal stands approved.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE
The SPEAKER pro tempore. Will the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. PRICE) come forward and lead the House in the Pledge of Allegiance.
Mr. PRICE of Georgia led the Pledge of Allegiance as follows:
I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE
The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will receive ten 1-minute speeches per side.

FREEDOM FOR JOSE DANIEL FERRER GARCIA
(Mr. LINCOLN DIAZ-BALART of Florida asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)
Mr. LINCOLN DIAZ-BALART of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to speak about Jose Daniel Ferrer Garcia, a political prisoner in totalitarian Cuba. Mr. Ferrer Garcia is a peaceful pro-democracy activist in Cuba. In January 2002, he was forced from a bus and beaten by the tyrant’s thugs. In March 2003, 2 years ago, he was arrested as part of the dictator’s crackdown on peaceful pro-democracy activists and in a sham trial sentenced to 25 years in the totalitarian gulag because of his support of democracy.
Mr. Ferrer is a brilliant example, Mr. Speaker, of the heroism of the Cuban people. The totalitarian gulag is full of men and women of all backgrounds and ages who represent the best of the Cuban nation. Thousands languish in the gulag because, like Mr. Ferrer, they refuse to accept tyranny.
Mr. Speaker, we must speak out against the grotesque disregard for human rights, dignity, and freedom just 90 miles from our shores. We must demand the immediate and unconditional release of Jose Daniel Ferrer and every political prisoner in totalitarian Cuba.

TILLIE FOWLER: IN MEMORIAM
(Ms. HARMAN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)
Mr. PRICE of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, never before in my years in this House have I taken the floor with such sadness. It is the sadness that penetrates to my very core, for I have lost a dear friend and Congress has lost one of its most distinguished Members.
Everyone was stunned by the news that our former colleague, Tillie Fowler, suffered a massive brain hemorrhage on Sunday. Now that she has died, we mourn her passing with the heaviest of hearts.
Tillie and I were Members of the class of 1992 and for some time the only women serving on the House Committee on Armed Services. She was a source of inspiration, a sister, a soul mate. We can take some comfort in knowing that she did not suffer and that her beloved husband, Buck, and her daughters were by her side. But nothing can bring her back, and she cannot be replaced.
Never partisan and always principled, the Congress and the country are better places because of her service, and she leaves a legacy we all learn from.
I will miss Tillie, my wonderful friend and staunch ally. We looked at the world the same way, through the same kind of eyes, and for me, for a while, the path ahead will be less clear without her.

SOCIAL SECURITY
(Mr. PRICE of Georgia asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)
Mr. PRICE of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, America’s Social Security system has been described with nearly every word in the dictionary: crisis, problem, trouble, bankruptcy. One can play the semantics game with Social Security all... they want, but the fact of the matter is that Social Security is broken and needs fixing.

Back in 1935 the system worked well. Retirement age back then was 65 and the average life expectancy 63. A pretty good deal for the government. Today, however, Americans are living longer than ever and far more likely to live long enough to get their benefits.

Social Security is not a savings plan. It is a pay-as-you-go system where today’s workers support today’s retirees and tomorrow’s workers support tomorrow’s retirees. The number of workers supporting each retiree was 42 when the program started. It is now three, with the payroll taxes on the paychecks of hard-working Americans going up 600 percent over the time when it gets to two.

Just in 3 years, 2008, the government will begin to pay out more in Social Security benefits than it collects in payroll taxes. It does not take a math whiz to see that the pay-as-you-go system will not provide retirement security for American workers.

Mr. Speaker, it is a problem and must be resolved. I urge my colleagues to join me in solving it.

MILITARY READINESS ENHANCEMENT ACT

(Mr. MEEHAN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. MEEHAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to urge my colleagues to support H.R. 1059, the Military Readiness Enhancement Act, bipartisan legislation to repeal the military’s senseless Don’t Ask, Don’t Tell policy.

With our troops spread thin in Iraq and Afghanistan, our military is having serious problems meeting personnel requirements. The Army missed its requirements. The Army missed its recruiting goals by 27 percent. The Don’t Ask, Don’t Tell policy, we are discharging thousands of experienced, dedicated servicemembers simply because of their sexual orientation.

Hundreds of people let go under the Don’t Ask, Don’t Tell policy have skills that are critical to the war on terror, including translators and linguists. These soldiers have the courage to fight and the skills our military needs. There is no reason we should not allow them to serve their country. It is time Congress to put national security interests first. It is time to repeal the Don’t Ask, Don’t Tell policy so we can keep the United States military the strongest in the world.

RECOGNIZING THE CENTENNIAL CELEBRATION OF BAD AXE, MICHIGAN

(Mrs. MILLER of Michigan asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Mrs. MILLER of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, today I rise to recognize the centennial celebration of Bad Axe, Michigan, the capital of Huron County. This beautiful city was founded originally in 1861 in the “thumb area” of Michigan, and it has remained a distinct part of history as it has continued to grow and prosper over the past 150 years.

Bad Axe is a unique city. In fact, its very name gives it a very unique distinction. It is located in one of the most beautiful areas in the State of Michigan. It is a favorite destination for so many people who love the outdoors, either hunting or fishing or just enjoying the magnificent scenery.

Bad Axe’s rich history includes some outstanding Michiganders, including Albert E. Sleeper, who became Michigan’s 29th Governor, served from 1917 to 1921, certainly leaving his mark on the entire State as he worked to establish the State highway system and the State park system. So it is fitting that some of the most beautiful State parks are in Bad Axe area.

I am proud to represent this unique city in Congress as it has developed and transformed over the years. From its pioneer beginnings during the Civil War, Bad Axe has managed to leave its mark on history.

Mr. Speaker, I wish the city and its citizens the very best as they celebrate the future and as they remember the past.

HOMECOMING OF USS “LINCOLN” CARRIER GROUP

(Mr. LARSEN of Washington asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. LARSEN of Washington. Mr. Speaker, today I rise to honor the service of the sailors and Marine Corps of the USS Abraham Lincoln Carrier Strike Group. They compassionately served the Nation and the world in the Western Pacific and Indian Ocean in the wake of December’s tragic tsunami.

These women and men began their new year by delivering vital food, water, and medicine around the clock to the people of Southeast Asia and the Indian Ocean. They showed the world the values that we represent and why this country is so great.

From January 1 until February 4, carrier group aircraft flew over 1,700 missions in support of Operation Unified Assistance, carrying almost 6 million pounds of supplies. Over 1,200 crew mechanics from the group volunteered to go ashore and help.

Tomorrow I will attend the USS Lincoln and USS Shoup homecoming to Everett Washington. The VAF 131 Prowler Squadron out of NAS Whidbey, the Lancers, just returned; and they are all part of Operation Unified Assistance.

Tomorrow, with their return, will be a great day for our country, a great day for our Navy and Marine Corps and for their families to celebrate.

BUILDING AWARENESS AND UNDERSTANDING ABOUT MENTAL ILLNESS

(Mr. WILSON of South Carolina asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. WILSON of South Carolina. Mr. Speaker, I am honored to discuss how two service organizations in the Second District of South Carolina have joined together on the Nothing to Hide project to promote awareness about mental illness. This project is an educational photo exhibit about families whose lives have been affected by mental health disorders.

By sponsoring the Nothing to Hide project, the Rotary Club of Hilton Head Island, Sunset, and the Mental Health Association of Beaufort and Jasper are addressing the myths and stigmas surrounding mental illness and are helping connect people who suffer from mental illness to the appropriate resources for support, education, and treatment.

Sunset Rotarians have volunteered to oversee the transition of the display during its 8-week tour through Beaufort and Jasper Counties. I would especially like to recognize the good work and leadership of the dedicated volunteers, Ed Dowaschinski, Krista Delgado, and Sandy Leath. Their strong efforts to raise awareness about this issue that affects so many of our friends and family members will help increase understanding throughout our community.

In conclusion, God bless our troops and we will never forget September 11.

CELEBRATING PEACE CORPS WEEK

(Ms. McCOLLUM of Minnesota asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. McCOLLUM of Minnesota. Mr. Speaker, this week we celebrate the 44th anniversary of the Peace Corps and the service of current and return Peace Corps volunteers.

Today 7,700 Americans of all ages, including 38 volunteers from my congressional district, are serving our Nation and advancing the cause of peace in cities, towns, and villages in 72 countries around the world.

As we all know, with service also comes sacrifice. So as we celebrate this Peace Corps success, I would like to remember a young Minnesota Peace Corps volunteer, Melissa Mosvick, who died in a bus accident last November while serving our Nation in Morocco. Her service and sacrifice are also honored.

Nearly 180,000 Americans have served our Nation as Peace Corps volunteers over the past 44 years. The service and commitment of all Peace Corps volunteers to our Nation and the world is truly a very special gift all Americans can celebrate.
HONORING COLONEL WILLIAM GLEN GUSTAFSON

(Mr. GINGREY asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GINGREY. Mr. Speaker, I rise to honor Colonel William Glen Gustafson of Marietta, Georgia, who sadly passed away last Tuesday.

Throughout his life, Colonel Gustafson served his country and his community. He was a master parachutist and troop commander during two tours of duty in Vietnam. He worked for the American Defense Preparedness Association here in Washington. He served on the academy review committees of former Georgia Senator Sam Nunn and former House Speaker Newt Gingrich.

And from 1991 to 1997, he served three terms as chairman of the Cobb County Republican Party.

In all these capacities, Colonel Gustafson exemplified the virtues of honor, dignity, and leadership. His death is a great loss not only for his family but for the entire Cobb community as well. I will always remember the enthusiasm he brought to his work and his commitment to solving every challenge he faced. I will greatly miss his charisma, his leadership, and, most of all, his friendship.

Mr. Speaker, I ask that my colleagues join me in honoring Colonel Gustafson.

WELCOME HOME G.I. BILL

(Mr. EMANUEL asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. EMANUEL. Mr. Speaker, in every major war since the Revolution, the United States Congress has acknowledged our returning veterans for their service and sacrifice. In this proud tradition, last weekend I announced a Welcome Home G.I. Bill for the veterans returning from Iraq and Afghanistan. It is a bold new direction in helping our veterans achieve the success they so rightly deserve and earned.

The Welcome Home bill provides health care for up to 5 years for that member and their family if they cannot get it from their employer or lost it when they were overseas. The Welcome Home bill includes $75,000 for college education and waives the $1,800 fee required for the benefit. And, finally, it will offer them a tax-free $5,000 down payment on a home.

Most importantly, under the plan all returning veterans are treated equally whether they served in active duty, National Guard, or Reserve. Because their experience over there was the same, their benefit over here should be the same.

Mr. Speaker, we do not owe our newest veterans a favor. We must repay one.

SAy NO TO FOREIGN LAW INFLUENCING AMERICAN COURT DECISIONS

(Mr. PITTS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. PITTS. Mr. Speaker, George Washington once said that “history and experience prove that foreign influence is one of the most baneful foes of Republican Government.” But the United States Supreme Court has taken to relying on foreign law and foreign documents when issuing opinions.

This week, the Supreme Court ruled that the Constitution forbids the execution of convicted killers who are under the age of 18 when they commit their heinous crimes. Many of us might agree with this decision, but the court used the laws of other countries and foreign documents to determine whether American laws on this should stand.

American laws are made by the people chosen by Americans to make them. That is a republic. The court has no right or authority to consider any other basis for legal opinion. In doing so, it only undermines the very structure under which it operates, the consent of the governed as defined by the United States Constitution.

Foreign law is still a baneful foe of our republican government.

NATIONAL MISSILE DEFENSE SYSTEM A LEMON

(Mr. KUCINICH asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. KUCINICH. Mr. Speaker, Canada has officially opted out of the laughably named National Missile Defense System. We should take a lesson from our neighbors. They knew the NMD has a terrible record, 10 highly artificial and carefully scripted flight intercept tests, only five resulting in hits. One hit occurred when the equivalent of an electronic “hit me” sign was put on a supposed attack missile.

The new booster rocket for the kill vehicle has a one-in-three success rate. That is a one-in-three chance of even getting off the ground. The Pentagon canceled nine of the original 20 tests to focus on building the system instead of testing it.

Today, the NMD benefits no one except a few contractors and their patrons. Meanwhile, the Canadians chose not to buy a lemon. Here we plant a lemon grove and then franchise lemonade stands.

CONGRATULATING DELL COMPUTER FOR NEW PLANT IN FORSYTH COUNTY, NORTH CAROLINA

(Ms. FOXX asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. FOXX. Mr. Speaker, today I ask my colleagues to join me in congratulating Dell for beginning construction last week on a new $100 million assembly plant in the Fifth District of North Carolina.

The 527,000 square foot facility set to open in Forsyth County this fall will be Dell’s largest plant in the world. It will bring jobs to 700 people in its first year and employ up to 1,500 people within 5 years. Most of these jobs are expected to be new and most of them will go to local residents. The plant will join Dell’s two other American manufacturing operations in Texas and Tennessee and produce Dell’s OptiPlex and Dimension desktop computers.

Dell, which was named Fortune Magazine’s “Most Admired Company” for 2004, will be a tremendous asset to the Fifth District. Its presence will attract other businesses and suppliers that will add millions of dollars to the local tax base and bring thousands of new jobs to the region.

I would like to thank the local leaders in Forsyth and surrounding counties for working so hard to make this possible. I am proud of the success in manufacturing coming from the Fifth District and look forward to many prosperous years at Dell.

WORKING TOGETHER AS DEMOCRATS TO IMPROVE SOCIAL SECURITY FOR ALL AMERICANS

(Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. JACKSON-LEE. Mr. Speaker, there has been an ongoing discussion with the American public on what is good for them in the future and today. It is interesting that the American public, when you hand them the facts, understand the underpinnings of Social Security. Over 51 percent of them do not agree with the present plans offered by the administration to allegedly solve the solvency question on Social Security.

The American public understands what it means to take $1.5 trillion away from Social Security to establish a private savings account that does not equate to solvency; the American public understands that Social Security is an insurance plan; the American public understands that Social Security is bipartisan; and the American public understands that when you begin to engage and divide a nation on a generational gap, that you are not moving toward a solution, you are only moving toward divisiveness.

Social Security has endured since 1935. It has provided an umbrella on a rainy day. It is an insurance plan, a survivor’s benefit, and it allows the disabled to live in dignity.

Fix Social Security, do not destroy it. The plan before us destroys it. We are prepared to work together as Democrats, as Americans, to solve it.
ECONOMY CONTINUES TO GROW

(Mr. STEARNS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. STEARNS. Mr. Speaker, the economy continues to grow as a direct result of the President’s economic policies and those of the Republican Congress. Here are a few facts to illustrate this.

In January, we saw 146,000 new jobs and witnessed the twelfth consecutive month of job gains in the United States.

The national unemployment rate is down to 5.2 percent, the lowest since September 2001.

Job creation was up in 48 of the 50 States last year, and unemployment was down in all regions of the country.

Mr. Speaker, opposing tax increases and endorsing pro-growth policies has led to job creation. We are increasing consumer confidence and ensuring that the American working families no longer bear the burdens that impede economic growth.

We will continue here in Congress the hard work so that this progress continues.

WAITING FOR DEMOCRAT PLAN TO FIX SOCIAL SECURITY

(Mr. KINGSTON asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. KINGSTON. Mr. Speaker, well, the month of January went by and nothing happened. The month of February went by and nothing happened. Here we are, it is March, as a matter of fact, it is March 3rd. It looks like nothing is going to happen from the Democrat side to address Social Security.

One more day has gone, one more day of rhetoric and denouncing what the President is doing to do and denouncing what the Republicans are doing and scaring senior citizens. But, still, no plan from the Democrat party to save and protect Social Security.

Now, it is interesting, up until last week they were saying there is no problem, we like it how it is. And yet in a major policy shift for the Democrat party, the Democrat Committee Chairman, Howard Dean, also known as “Screaming Dean,” pointed out in a quote at Cornell University, which, as you know, is not exactly a sanctuary for conservative thought in America, Dean pointed out that if Social Security were left alone for 30 years, its benefits would be reduced to 80 percent of what it is now. He acknowledged there were problems.

Thank goodness, hallelujah, we have a Democrat who admits there is a Social Security problem. That means maybe the month of March will not go by. Maybe by the end of March the Democrats will join us and come up with a plan. We welcome their ideas. We solicit their ideas. We want their support.

WAITING FOR REPUBLICANS TO PUT SOMETHING ON THE TABLE

(Mr. HASTINGS of Florida asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. HASTINGS of Florida. Mr. Speaker, my good friend the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. KINGSTON), motivated me to come to the floor when he suggests that the Democrats do not have a plan for Social Security.

I would say to my good friend, the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. KINGSTON), it is the President of the United States that Social Security should be privatized. During the last recess, the President’s Day recess, Democrats went home, and almost every one of the House Democrats, except 40, held town meetings. I want the gentleman to know that most of his colleagues did not hold town meetings on Social Security at all for the reason that you really do not want to put your plan on the table.

The Democrats are ready when you bring your plan. The last time I looked over there, you all were in charge. I do not recall that we have to do anything at all in that regard.

But we are going to fix Social Security. The question is, are you going to fix Medicare and Medicaid? Are you going to do something about prescription drugs? Are you going to do something about inadequate education, inadequate housing and inadequate jobs in this country? I think that is what we need to be looking at.

We will fix Social Security, if you put something on the table.

REPUBLICANS SEEKING BIPARTISANSHIP IN FIXING SOCIAL SECURITY

(Mr. COLE of Oklahoma asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. COLE of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COLE of Oklahoma. I yield to the gentleman from Georgia, Mr. KINGSTON. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding, and want to say to my good friend from Florida that I have always enjoyed working with my distinguished colleague from the south tip of the peninsula of Florida, the great State. But I want to say, even though we are the majority, we still want your ideas. We want the Democrat party to put a plan on the table.

On the subject of town meetings, I personally held nine town meetings. There is a lot of division out there as to what we should do, and that is why it should be done in a bipartisan way, and that is why I think everybody needs to come together.

And Mr. Speaker, I want to say this: I have not introduced the plan. If the gentleman would like to work with me on a plan, I would love to have the Hastings-Kingston bill, or the Kingstone-Hastings bill, if we could do that, because I think it is important.

I know the gentleman’s fondness for seniors. I have heard the gentleman speak fondly about his mom, and he has heard me speak fondly about my mom, and we owe them, and that is what we should be doing.

Mr. HASTINGS of Florida. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will yield, let us do it.

Mr. KINGSTON. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will yield further, I am ready to work with the gentleman.

CONTINUITY IN REPRESENTATION

question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereon to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit with or without instructions.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. LATOURETTE). The gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. COLE) is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. COLE of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, for the purpose of debate only, I yield the customarily 30 minutes to the gentleman from Florida (Mr. HASTINGS), pending which I yield myself such time as I may consume. During consideration of this resolution, all time yielded is for the purpose of debate only.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. COLE of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks on this resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

There was no objection.

Mr. COLE of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, on March 1, the Committee on Rules met and granted a structured rule for H.R. 841, the Continuity in Representation Act of 2005. I believe this is a fair and reasonable rule that allows for a full discussion of the relevant points pertaining to the legislation before us.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 841 is an important step forward in addressing what are critical shortcomings in America’s plan for the continuity of this House in the event of an unexpected disaster or attack.

While I was not a Member of Congress on September 11, 2001, I was in an office directly across Lafayette Park from the White House. Like all Americans, I remember that day in detail. One image that has seared itself into my memory is that of first responders on the steps of the Capitol and let it be known to the world that our government should continue to operate.

Mr. Speaker, the response of Congress to 9-11 should never be forgotten. It was a sign to the world that America was strong, that it would persevere and that we would go forward as a Nation. The underlying legislation today does the exact same thing. It takes an important step toward ensuring the preservation of our Republic and the continuity of our government under the most trying of circumstances.

Mr. Speaker, very simply, this legislation ensures a continuity of operations for the House of Representatives. In the event that more than 100 Members of Congress are killed, the Speaker may announce that “exceptional circumstances” exist and thereby trigger expedited special elections that must occur within 7 full weeks, thus ensuring the continuity of the House of Representatives.

Mr. Speaker, this legislation should not be very divisive based on the fact that a similar measure passed the House by a substantial bipartisan margin of 365 to 97 in the last session of Congress. This legislation ensures the continuity of the people’s House. It ensures that the House will still be an elected body chosen by the American public just as the Founders intended.

With that said, let us talk about what the bill is not. It is not an election law bill. It is a continuity bill.

Mr. Speaker, you may well hear many Members mention various provisions today in the context of Federal election law. These measures may have genuine merit. However, they are not relevant to this legislation. Personally, I firmly believe that most Members would agree with me when I suggest that election law should remain essentially a local issue. This is where it resides historically, and this is where it should continue to reside.

Mr. Speaker, we have a clear decision before us today. We can either be responsible in what we all hope never occurs, or we can engage in pointless bickering over election laws that are historically controlled by the localities. Just a few years ago almost all Members would have viewed a tragic event like September 11 as an unthinkable event, and that is precisely the point. We cannot predict tomorrow. What we do know, however, is that we are engaged in a real, genuine, and taxing global war on terror. This is a generational war in which one that will not disappear over night.

Mr. Speaker, simply put, this legislation is about the security and continuity of America’s governing institutions. It is an issue of critical importance in establishing an orderly response should the unthinkable occur again.

The legislative history of this bill is clear. This bill originated in direct response to the events of September 11. It is not a continuity bill, not an election reform measure. To confuse the former with the latter by encumbering this bill with extraneous provisions would be to lose sight of the fundamental purpose of the legislation. Our job here is to ensure the continuity of the House of Representatives, not reform a state-based electoral process with Federal legislation.

During my time as Secretary of State in Oklahoma, the bombing of the Alfred P. Murrah Federal building in Oklahoma City was a grim reminder of the potential for such an event. At that time such an event was considered unthinkable in the United States. That incident and the larger tragedy of 9-11 are sober warnings that we should prepare for the unexpected before it happens. H.R. 841 is an important part of that preparation, and it also is a tangible sign to terrorists that they will never intimidate this country, change the nature of this House as the elected representatives of the American people, or keep our government from facing the challenges it may face in the future.

Mr. Speaker, let us wait no longer. Let us move forward. And to that end, I would urge all Members to support this rule and the underlying bill.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. HASTINGS of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, let me thank the gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. COLE) for the time. This is the first rule of which I hope are many that the gentleman and I are managing together. He has already been welcomed to the committee, so I extend those same warm welcomes to him for managing this measure.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today in opposition to this closed rule which limits debate on how this body should operate if it experiences mass casualty. This is an issue of grave importance to the American people and the integrity of that democracy in times of dire crisis.

The decision of the majority to place any restrictions on this body prohibiting Members from offering amendments and freely debating the subject is not responsible.

The terrorist attacks of September 11 changed the way that we as a country operate. In turn, Congress has rightfully committed itself to creating policies that protect Americans from future attacks, though I question how successful we have been in our actions. September 11 also presented us with a challenge to consider continuity in the House during a worst-case scenario. In examining such a grim situation, we must foresee what will be needed to regain stability and reassure the American people and the world that our government is going about business as usual.

While I believe that the underlying legislation is an honest attempt to address the concerns which I just raised, the discussion surrounding the issue has been, as one constitutional scholar wrote, embarrassingly partisan. Even more, the product of 3 years of discussion on the issue that the majority is bringing to the floor is incomplete, unrealistic, and fails to consider the implications of changing statute when we should be amending the United States Constitution.

The underlying legislation requires the States to hold special elections within 45 days in the case of extraordinary circumstances. This is a problematic requirement. When the Committee on House Administration took testimony from State and local election officials, it was told that 45 days is not enough time to pull off a primary and general election. Election officials noted that mailing ballots to absentee, overseas, and military voters for a primary and general election and then waiting for their return would alone take more than 45 days. This does not include the time that it takes to print and process ballots.

Should this time period be adopted, it would undoubtedly result in the disenfranchisement of millions, including seniors who vote absentee, our diplomatic corps, and our men and women serving in our Armed Forces.

The majority finally agreed with Democrats and local election officials yesterday that 45 days is not enough time. We cannot be conducted for 45 to 49 days. Four days, Mr. Speaker. What can you realistically do in 4 more days?

This is more of a cosmetic and convenient change than substantive. It still sets up a process that will lead to the selection of Members of Congress who are potentially not the real choice of the citizenry. All of this is happening at the same time my friends in the majority have blocked Democratic Members from offering three different amendments, all of which were germane and all of which were turned in on time. It seems to me that we operate under two rules in the House of Representatives: one for them and one for us.

Lately, Democrats will offer an amendment lengthening the special election period from 45 to 60 days. Our proposal provides election officials with a more realistic solution to a daunting task most likely over-shadowed by grief and angst. I hope that Members of this body will place the integrity of our democracy above petty politics and vote to adopt the Millender-McDonald amendment.

Additionally, the continuity-in-gov-ernment commission has recommended a different approach. It has suggested that States create lists of possible appointees to seats vacated due to mass causality to ensure that the House can continue to operate while States move forward with their own special elections process. These temporary appointments would serve until States are able to elect representatives in accordance to their own laws.

This is a fair approach and one which should be considered on equal footing as the underlying legislation. Yet, when our colleague, the gentleman from Washington (Mr. BAIRD), offered this proposal in the 108th Congress, as a footnote, the gentleman from Washington (Mrs.) Baier is about to deliver their child and he might not get here. We are hoping that he does. But he certainly has been a stalwart leader in the effort to do what is necessary to preserve the integrity of this body. When he introduced this proposal, Republicans sought to embarrass him and me, along with former Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice and our distin-guished colleagues, the gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. COLE), the gentleman from Texas (Mr. PAUL), and the gentle-man from Maryland (Mr. BARLETT), in co-sponsoring this legislation.

As a former Secretary of State, the gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. COLE) understands how important this issue is for us to address.

I also want to express appreciation to my colleagues on the other side of the aisle. In the last Congress, while it has not happened in this Congress, I was very pleased that the distinguished minority member of the Committee on the Judiciary, the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. CONVERSE), joined as a cosponsor of this legislation, as well as my good friend and colleague, the gentleman from California (Mr. BERMAN). And it is my hope that we will be able to move ahead in a bipartisan way dealing with this very, very important institutional issue.

We all remember September 11 of 2001. My judgment has often been ques-tioned because I was the last human being to walk out of this building on September 11. 2001, and probably cor-rectly. I did not think anyone would attack it. And I will say that when I left the building on September 11, 2001, I did so when one of the great Capitol Hill policemen said to me there was a plane headed towards this build- ing, and we all know now that that is the plane that went down with those very courageous passengers in Pennsyl-vania.

When we think back on September 11th, obviously it was one of the dark- est days in the history of our republic, and it has led us to spend a great deal of time thinking about the unthink- able. Because of September 11th, we have had to ponder things that we would never even possibly consider because of the fact that we had not seen that kind of attack on U.S. soil. But since that time, the Speaker of the House has really stepped up to the plate and done a wide range of things that are designed to ensure that the people’s House and, in fact, we hope both Houses of Congress, are able to continue to function.

If you recall on September 11th, late that afternoon, when Members of both Houses of Congress, both political par-ties, stood on the east front of the Cap-itol singing God Bless America. The reason that Members stood on the east front of the Capitol was to let the American people and to let anyone who were watching know that we, as a Nation, are strong, and this in-stitution, the greatest deliberative body known to man, was continuing to function.

So beginning almost immediately after the attacks of September 11th, the Speaker took a number of steps that were designed to maintain the continuity of this great institution. He established the ability to adjourn to an alternative place and to declare an emergency recess. He established the joint leadership re-call from a period of adjournment through designees, and the require-ment that the Speaker submit to the Clerk of the House a list of designees to act in the case of a vacancy in the Office of the Speaker. And, Mr. Speaker, we all know that at the beginning of this 109th Congress, we included in our opening day rules package the provisions that allow the House to proceed with a quorum call. It is important to note that we provided a number of protections in the use of that rule, including several that have been suggested by the Members of the other side of the aisle. And I have to add, Mr. Speaker, that the Speaker of the House and the minority leader, the gentlewoman from California (Ms. Pelosi), have personally engaged and spent time talking about this very important issue. And it is my hope that we will, at the end of the day, end up with, as I said, a bipartisan compromise.

Some of those recommendations that came from Members of the minority on this issue: Extended roll calls lasting days at a time and excluding any time in recess so that Members can contact the House even when they know that they can come to vote. The availability of the motion to adjourn at any time. The nonpartisan advice of the Sergeant at Arms, the Capitol physician, and the medical and emergency personnel about when Members can actually be recalled. And, Mr. Speaker, at the recommendation of the minority, consultation with the minority leader, in accordance with the traditional relationship between the Speaker and the minority leader.

And, finally, it is very important for us to remember that, as I just alluded to, that we have a bicameral legislature. The United States House of Representatives does not operate unilaterally. There is always a check on any action taken under the mass incapacitation quorum provision.

What I have been discussing, Mr. Speaker, answers how we will do the job that we were debating the legislation, and that is included in this. Again, that is a recommendation that came from the minority.

We allow States to have primaries and other options for selection of candidates for the special election so long as the general elections are completed within that period of time, which would be 49 days, excluding districts within that period of time, which would be 49 days, excluding districts that have either a general or special election scheduled, and including the four delegates and the resident commissioner of Puerto Rico within the provisions of the bill.

Now, I mentioned the large bipartisan support. Last year, this legislation passed the House by a vote of 306 to 97. I believe that we need to continue working in a strong bipartisan manner to move this bill through the House and get it to the other body just as quickly as possible. In that spirit, I anticipate that we will amend the rule, as I said, to move under this manager's amendment from 45 to 49 days. Again, our attempt to continue to work and address very, very important concerns that are emerging from the minority.

I also have to say that on this rule itself we are very happy to have made in order the amendment of my colleague and neighbor, the very distinguished Gentleman from California (Ms. Millender-McDonald), who has offered an amendment calling for 60 days. I also want to congratulate her, Mr. Speaker, on her new assignment as the ranking minority member of the Committee on Administration. She is working closely with the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. Ney) I know, and with the gentlewoman from Michigan (Mrs. Miller), who is going to be managing this legislation, and so we look forward to seeing what I hope is, again, a good bipartisan product.

I want to talk now, if I can, Mr. Speaker, about how this bill protects what I feel is a very, very key part of our responsibility here: Our representation. When I was an undergraduate at Claremont McKenna College, I had a professor who pounded the Federalist Papers into me. I remember my mentor and the importance of the Constitutional Convention, and the great Constitution of 1787. And I remember that date because we convened the Congress in Philadelphia to mark the bicentennial of the Connecticut Compromise back on July 16 of 1787.

Of course, the Federalists have been so important in explaining and justifying the actions of the framers as they put the Constitution together. We all know that James Madison was the Father of our Constitution, as well as having been President of the United States, he, as a matter of fact, was a member of the first Committee on Rules. And a relative of mine served on that Committee on Rules at the founding.

Mr. Speaker, we all know that the 435 of us who serve as Members of the House of Representatives are the only Federal officials who must be elected by the people. And I think it is important to note that Madison talked about the absolutely critical importance of this institution being elected.

Now, Mr. Speaker, we all know that the 435 of us who serve as Members of the House of Representatives are the only Federal officials who must be elected by the people. And I think it is important to note that Madison talked about the absolutely critical importance of this institution being elected.

No. Mr. Speaker, as I said, we are the only Federal office where no one has served here without having first been elected, and I think that is something we need to do everything we can to maintain.

In Federalist 52 Madison wrote: “It is essential to liberty that the government should have some respect for the opinions of the people, which I suppose in particular interest with the people, so it is particularly essential that the branch of it under consideration should have an immediate dependence on and an intimate sympathy with the people. Frequent elections are unquestionably the sole reliance by which this dependence and sympathy can be effectively secured.”

He went on in Federalist 57 and wrote: “Who are to be the electors of the Federal representatives? Not the rich more than the poor; not the learned more than the ignorant, not the haughty heirs of distinguished names more than the humble sons of obscenity and unpropitious fortune. The electors are to be the great body of the people of the United States.”

And, Mr. Speaker, Madison rejected the idea that appointment of Members is acceptable to the American public. He said, “The right of the people to elect is certainly one of the fundamental articles of democratic government and ought not be regulated by the legislature. A gradual abridgement of this right has been the mode in which we have been built on the ruin of popular forms."

I think it is very important for us to understand that there have been times in our Nation’s history where we have faced greater difficulty than the difficulty that we face today, or even greater difficulty than we faced following September 11 of 2001, and that was the Civil War. If we think back to that time of the Civil War, we have to remember that this Capitol was surrounded by troops who were threatening the very survival of our Republic. Yet President Lincoln proceeded with elections, understanding how critically important they are for our Republic’s survival.

And, of course, we have the newest example of self-determination in the world. The brave people of Iraq recently tasted freedom and the joy of elections. What happened? We had many people saying those elections could not take place. Why? Because there was a great deal of tension. We saw terrorist attacks, and we continue to see that in Iraq. But we know that despite the bombs and the snipers and the fear of death, people exercised that very important right to self-determination. Having faced down aristocracy and tyranny, they knew just how important elections would be for them. We too are a democracy borne out of facing down aristocracy and tyranny ourselves, and we should never forget that.

Mr. Speaker, I am convinced that as we look at the struggles taking place in Iraq today, that building and reinforcing democratic institutions is crucial for the safety, security, and happiness of a nation’s people, whether it is the people of Iraq or the people of the United States of America. That is why when we looked at some of the other options to provide for our continuity as an institution, such as the stand-in appointments that the House overwhelmingly defeated last year, we should ask what we lose if we, for one moment, give up on elections.

Some have said that this is different; that we will be dealing with a national emergency. And I say that elections are particularly important during a time of a national emergency. We should not have stand-ins or successors from a list in our back pockets passing laws, declaring war, or suspending habeas corpus, because that is what we take this body, very unique institution, the people’s House, where no one has served without having first been elected, and move away from elections, that we threaten the very basis of our strength as a democratic Nation.

Thus as we look at the very tough challenge of how to preserve our democracy in the face of catastrophe, this legislation is the most responsible way to continue the legitimacy of our government. If we look at the tragic loss of more than 100 Members, the idea of the States holding special elections in that period of time is something that is doable. People will unite and will remove all obstacles in conducting elections.

Think about it, Mr. Speaker. In the time of a horrible tragedy, feeding and clothing one’s family, making sure the roof is over their head, and then playing a role in picking one’s leaders, that is all part of the process of rebuilding. And it can be done in a relatively short period of time.

My colleague (Ms. MILLENDER-MCDONALD) and I represent the State of California. A year and a half ago in our home State, we went through a special election—recently, going through an unprecedented situation. We had the international election and an election that took place in 55 days. It was not a single congressional district of 650,000 people with two or three candidates. That race had 135 candidates on the ballot, and they were running a month for a million people. And I am happy to say that that election came off without a hitch. And I should parenthetically say I am happy with the outcome as well, Mr. Speaker. Let me close by saying that I think it is very important for us to realize again what James Madison was telling us when he said “When elections end, tyranny begins.” We should do everything we possibly can to make sure that we keep this House’s very, very precious election process. This rule allows for consideration of measures that address that. It is a very fair rule that again gives the ranking minority member an opportunity to have her proposal considered. I do oppose that proposal because I believe that the notion of moving to 49 days will allow us to work this out very well. And I again thank my colleagues, the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. NEY) and the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. SENSENBRENNER) and others, who have worked long and hard on this.

Mr. HASTINGS of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume. I have great respect for the gentleman from California (Mr. DREIER), and I know that he knows that the 17th amendment of the United States Constitution speaks to continuity.

I also know that he knows that the Congress, for purposes of preserving our institutions, allowed for the development of a continuity-of-government commission that commission a significant number of outstanding individuals from America, a broad cross-section of them, came up with the notion that it was critical that we have a constitutional amendment to go forward. Let me name some of the people that were on that commission: Lloyd Cutler; Alan Simpson; Philip Chase Bobbitt; Kenneth Dubberstein; Tom D’Amato; Tom Daschle; Newt Gingrich; Robert Michel, minority leader; Newt Gingrich, former Speaker of the House; Nicholas B. Katzenbach; Jamie Gorelick; Robert Katzenmann; Kwesi Kumi; Lynn Martin; Donna Shalala; and their senior counselors were Norm Ornstein and John Katzenbach.

What they said in the very preambles of their document is the following: We held two public meetings where we heard testimony from experts, and in the course of our investigation, we explored a wide range of options short of a constitutional amendment to ameliorate or solve these problems.

The commissioners, all of those persons that I just identified, shared dis-more meaningful way so that the minority can have their amendments contemplated in good kind.

I end by saying that Thomas Mann of the Brookings Institution, who was one of the lead authors of the continuity commission’s report, stated in front of the Committee on House Administration that following 9/11, ‘the ability to swiftly constitute the House and Senate would deprive the country of a fully functioning first branch of government at a time of grave national crisis. Unable to achieve a quorum, or rely on another quorum to govern, the country would be left in the hands of a stunned Nation that their constitutional democracy is alive and well.’

 Constitutional democracy, not statutorily established democracy as we are offering here today.

Mr. Madison offered the 17th amendment to the United States Constitution that would authorize Congress to provide for the orderly succession of the President and Vice President, both critical links in our democracy. It would deal with a catastrophe of unprecedented proportions. To ignore this possibility actually of a tragic attack that would result in the death of a significant number of our colleagues in the House. Though I think it is safe to say that none of us are eager to consider this issue, the events of September 11, 2001, forced this House to consider the ramifications of a successful terrorist attack against this body. On that fateful day, the enemies of freedom clearly targeted the pillars of our Nation. The terrorists attacked the World Trade Center which represented our economic freedom. They attacked the Pentagon which represents our military strength. And, by all accounts, Flight 93 was targeted either at the White House or at this building, both symbols of our form of democratic government and of our freedoms.

In closing, I would like to say I believe the debate has been an excellent discussion underlining many of the substantive concerns of both sides of a complex issue. But let us make one thing clear, this bill is about America’s security and the way that Congress will deal with a catastrophe of unprecedented proportions. To ignore this basic fact is to ignore the warnings of history and the tragedy of September 11.

Mr. Speaker, today others have placed this debate in the context of election laws and constitutional issues. I appreciate their concerns, but this is not what this legislation is about. It is about establishing an orderly procedure to ensure the continuity of the House in the aftermath of a catastrophic event. The potential for this was underlined by what occurred on September 11. We cannot ignore those facts and the realities and survivors of a changed international and geopolitical environment. To do so would be irresponsible.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. COLE of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself the balance of my time.

gentleman from Ohio (Mr. Ney) are to be commended for their great commitment and dedication in crafting this bill and bringing it to the floor today. The Congress must ensure that the government remains strong and stable during and following a terrorist attack, and this legislation would accomplish that goal.

Mr. Chairman, all the other branches of government already have contingency plans in place. In the case of a vacancy, the President would be replaced quickly by the existing line of succession. The courts would be replaced quickly by presidential appointment. The Senate would be reconstituted very quickly through gubernatorial appointment as is outlined in the 17th amendment. Only the House would be unable to function quickly in a time of national emergency.

The Continuity in Representation Act would correct this problem by requiring States to hold special elections to fill vacancies in the House of Representatives not later than 49 days after the vacancy is announced by the Speaker of this House in the extraordinary circumstances that vacancies in representation from any State, the executive authority thereof happen in the representation from any State, the executive authority thereof.

When vacancies happen in the representation from any State, the executive authority thereof shall issue writs of elections to fill such vacancies. The key word here is “elections.” No event should be reason enough to change this historic and constitutional constant.

The bill under consideration today allows us to remain true to the course charted for us by our Founding Fathers. There have been a number of suggested alternatives to the proposal in this legislation. Some have called for perhaps temporary appointment of the Members of Congress in such an emergency either through gubernatorial appointment like that in the Senate, or even by a sitting Member naming a successor to take the seat in the event of that Member’s death.

Any of these ideas would require a constitutional amendment, which would come from both the House and constitutional mandate which express calls again for the direct election of Members of the House of Representatives. Concerns have also been expressed regarding the requirement that special elections be completed within 49 days of the Speaker’s announcement of 100 existing vacancies in the House would be difficult.

Mr. Chairman, before I came to Congress actually, I was honored to serve as Michigan’s Secretary of State for 8 years in a principal responsibility of serving as that State’s chief election official, so this is an area that I do have some expertise in. Some have argued and will argue that more time is necessary, but I disagree.

Under this legislation, States would have the option, let me repeat, the option, of eliminating the primary election and permitting political parties recognized by States to choose their candidates. In turn, this would eliminate the petition requirements and the verification process that accompanies it. Additionally, it is important for us to remember that the U.S. Representative position would really be the only position on the public rolls that would dramatically ease printing, programming and testing.

Further, Mr. Chairman, the passage of the Help America Vote Act of 2002, HAVA as we commonly call it, has helped to prepare local election officials more than ever to conduct special elections. HAVA is granting Federal dollars to the States in historic proportions, quite frankly, dollars that they are using to eliminate antiquated election equipment and purchasing new state-of-the-art equipment. States have either constructed or are moving very quickly toward construction of statewide computerized voter registration files, similar to the one that we built in Michigan several years ago. Technology actually allows for these lists to be updated daily so that a clean, up-to-date file can be printed out literally any day of the year anytime, and provided to the polling sites. Obviously this is a fantastic election tool for any election, but particularly so for an expedited election.

Also, States are now moving toward uniformity of voting systems in their precincts. Uniformity of election equipment in a State will enable vendors to always have a camera ready template of the ballot, and then all they literally have to do is fill in the names of the nominees for U.S. Representative and go to print. Having a uniform system will eliminate confusion amongst poll workers and further ease election preparation.

H.R. 841 also Protects the ability of military personnel and overseas citizens to participate in a special election by requiring that absentee ballots be transmitted to such voters within 15 days of the Speaker’s announcement and that such absentee ballots be counted if they are received not later than 45 days after the State transmits them.

In fact, even now the Department of Defense, the DOD, is moving towards a program where service men and women stationed overseas can actually download their ballots via the Internet.

Some will make the argument, again, that 49 days is simply not enough time for the States to prepare. To that argument, I would simply point out that some States today already have requirements that special elections be held in much less time than the 49-day period. I believe that argument is obviously moot.

Mr. Chairman, I certainly do not intend to imply that this would be a simple task. There is no question there is lots of hard work. Regardless, it has been my observation and my personal experience that the fine men and women who administer our elections always rise to the occasion to complete the required work on time. I have no doubts that they will do so in a time of national emergency.

While I hope, Mr. Chairman, that we never have to face this situation, we must nonetheless prepare for it. Clearly it is incumbent on us to find a solution to this issue which honors the wishes and the wisdom of the Founding Fathers that the House of Representatives remain the people’s House.

Mr. Chairman, it has been said that the price of freedom is remaining ever vigilant. I believe passing H.R. 841 is a step in showing the enemies of freedom that America is remaining ever vigilant. Similar legislation received over 300 votes in the last Congress, and I would, again, ask my colleagues for their strong bipartisan support of this legislation.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. MILLENDER-MCDONALD. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

First, let me congratulate the gentlewoman from Michigan in joining our committee, the Committee on House Administration. She is quite an addition to the committee and we congratulate her.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to H.R. 841 in its current form. While the bill number has changed since last year, the core problems in this legislation remain the same as in last year’s bill, H.R. 2844. H.R. 841 is unworkable, unfair and undemocratic. It restricts the franchise and inhibits public participation in the expedited special election that would create, an especially unfortunate development following so closely after the serious problems revealed in the aftermath of the 2004 elections.

This bill is part of a series of actions by the majority over the last 2 years as advertised in addressing problems of congressional continuity. The stated objective of the legislation is to override State laws in order to hold expedited special elections within 45 days of a catastrophe which may last more than 100 vacancies in the Chamber. While this goal is laudable, the bill defines a problem, creates an unfunded mandate, but then provides no solution. This legislation dumps the problem onto the States to produce something called an “election” within 45 days, but without the political and democratic substance we associate with campaigns for the House of Representatives.

I want to stress that H.R. 841 has no partisan content. It is simply the result of the lack of reconstitution of the House in a truly democratic fashion. Members on our side of the aisle were split almost down the middle last April in the vote on this legislation because they felt pressured to do something. But the majority voted for it virtually lockstep when not even its principal sponsors could explain how the bill was actually supposed to work. The Senate is not surprisingly, never acted on it. So here we go.

H.R. 841 contains a wish list of provisions which would set impractical deadlines, ignore the rights of candidates to run and of voters to participate in elections, and create confusion in the aftermath of a national catastrophe when the country needs the stability of established constitutional processes and the legitimacy of the rule of law.

Let us look at some of the specifics of this bill. Among the principal flaws of this legislation are the time frame is much too short for the conducting of special elections in many States. Even States whose present laws contemplate 45 days may not cope in the aftermath of a national catastrophe which could affect our infrastructure and communications systems nationwide. The House last year rejected a proposal for 75 days in which to conduct these elections. This year, I will offer a compromise proposing 60 days, which is not a magic solution, either, but which at least provides valuable additional flexibility to the States.

The bill represents an unfunded mandate. While States could conduct special elections to fill vacancies every 2 years without this bill, it eliminates their flexibility in the scheduling of elections, in the format of the elections and in the costs of elections.

There is insufficient time for voter registration for those wishing to participate in an unscheduled, sudden election for the House. New voters would be blocked out of the system. Why should we prevent full public participation when a Congress, seeking to renew itself, needs the legitimacy which an open democratic system provides?

The bill provides no mechanism for candidates to qualify for the ballot in States which require petition gathering or other potentially time-consuming measures intended to assess the public support and credibility of potential candidates. States are expected to develop some faster method to accomplish these central goals of qualifying, to run votes very early before the bill’s trigger is pulled or risk missing the deadline. So which should it be?

This bill assumes that there are instant candidates out there who, upon learning of a vacancy, will decide to run without full consultation with family and friends, or with their potential parties and relevant interest groups and who can instantly arrange financing and instantly have an infrastructure in place to negotiate the campaign. These laws are extraordinarily difficult even in normal circumstances. Are candidates who can make instant decisions to run and instantly finance their campaigns representative of the full range of political talent of America? More importantly, are they the people we want to give a head start in gaining seats in the House? I do not think we want that, Mr. Chairman.

This bill also allows insufficient time to conduct primary elections in the many States which allow them for special elections. Last year’s bill originally banned primaries entirely, but the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. Ney) improved this bill by removing the prohibition on primaries. Nevertheless, the 45-day scheme would still effectively block them in many States.

This bill still allows insufficient time to send, receive, and count absentee ballots, even in those States which will not use primaries. Those most likely to face exclusion include Americans abroad and our military personnel stationed and fighting overseas. Mr. Chairman, this bill contains no mechanism to activate its own provisions in the event the entire House membership is wiped out. If so, what happens next?

H.R. 841 deals with a practical catastrophe and a partial one, but becomes useless in the event of a total catastrophe. It was suggested on the House floor that in the circumstances that the entire House was wiped out, it would be up to the people to come together and make the determination as to the rebuilding process and how it begins. Really? Then how? Is it not the responsibility of Congress to anticipate and find solutions to problems when it enacts laws and not to rely on some vague national town meeting if the bill fails to work? Should we not be settling this issue right now right here in the legislation before us?

The 45-day provision in the bill allows insufficient time to assemble the infrastructure of elections necessary to manage elections competently and fairly. Even in elections, under the best of circumstances, there are inevitably problems with voter registration lists, voting with provisional ballots, transmitting, receiving, and counting absentee ballots, reserving polling places and staffing the polls with voting machines and election workers.

After a catastrophe we can add a potential breakdown in communication systems and other infrastructure, including transportation, along with the potential inability to order voting machines and ballots. Put it another way, 45 days is simply not enough time in many States to conduct special elections, especially after a national catastrophe.

Mr. Chairman, this bill represents the wrong choices of values in a democracy. It creates an artificial election timeline at simply creating a result, and that is just Members of the House. The American people deserve real choices, emergency or not.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mrs. MILLER of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, I have no further requests for time, and I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER, Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of H.R. 841, the Continuity of Representation Act of 2005. On September 11, 2001, the fourth hijacked plane was headed toward the Nation’s capital. Had it not been for the heroic actions of the passengers of United Flight 93 who forced the plane down over Pennsylvania, Congress’s ability to serve the American people may have been severely disrupted.

Currently, there is no mechanism to quickly replace House Members by special election. During the last Congress, the House acted in an overwhelmingly bipartisan fashion to fill the vacancy in Pennsylvania resulting from the death of Mr. Murtha. Consequent to the right of the right to elected representation following a catastrophic incident has yet been unnecessarily imperiled.

The legislation before us again today will preserve the people’s constitutional right to directly elected representation by providing for the expeditious special election of new Members within 49 days of the Speaker’s announcement that there are more than 100 House vacancies. The House, unique among all branches and bodies of the entire Federal Government, is rooted in the principle of direct elections, and that principle must be preserved. Current Federal law allows the Presidency and the Senate to consist of entirely appointed in certain circumstances. Without an elected House, the entire Federal Government could be run and laws could be written without a single branch directly representing the popular will.

Congress has the clear authority to enact the Continuity in Representation Act under article I, section 4 of the Constitution, which allows Congress, at any time by law, to make or alter State election laws. Consistent with the Founders’ wishes to choose representatives, the Constitution explicitly considered Congress’s power to require expedited special elections as the solution to potential discontinuity in government in extraordinary situations. As Alexander Hamilton wrote, the Constitution gives Congress “a right to interfere” its special election rules on the States “whenever extraordinary circumstances might render that interposition necessary to its safety.” The Supreme Court has unanimously approved such clear congressional authority.

Members from both parties have a significant stake in the operation of the House following a terrorist incident, and I am pleased that the legislation before us today is appropriately a product of bipartisan cooperation and input. For example, I worked with the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. SKELOTON), a member of the Constitution Committee on Armed Services, to craft provisions that govern absentee ballots cast by members of the Armed Forces, and overseas voters, whose ballots would be counted if they are received within 45 days after the State transmits them.

Further, I have worked with the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. CONYERS), ranking member of the Committee on the Judiciary, to add a provision that ranks the top member from the Committee on House Administration's markup of the bill, a subdual. I have different views. I have no doubt that the boundless spirit of the American people will ensure that democracy prevails even in the most pressing conditions.

What I have heard from the opponents is that they say, well, we cannot have an election put to the American people will ensure that democracy prevails even in the most pressing conditions.

Mr. MILLER of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from California (Ms. MILLENDER-MCDONALD). Ms. MILLENDER-MCDONALD of California. Mr. Chairman, this bill does have flaws, as have been identified. I think the criticisms are fairly taken. And the ranking gentlewoman's amendment is a sound one I support. But in the end, we do need to have special elections in the States. There is not a single Member of the House in the absence of other Members. Therefore, a special election for a temporary appointment, we will hold the special election within the 45-day period. Second, the bill considered today includes a provision that will allow seats left vacant by delegates and resident commissioners to also be filled by special election pursuant to the bill's requirements.

While some take the pessimistic view of the resiliency of the electoral process following an attack on the Nation's capital, I have a different view. I have no doubt that the boundless spirit of the American people will ensure that democracy prevails even in the most pressing conditions.

What I have heard from the opponents is that they say, well, we cannot have an election put together so quickly. The gentlewoman from Michigan (Mrs. MILLER), I think, has made it quite clear that from her experience as Michigan's Secretary of State and chief election officer that we will be able to do that. And I point out what that this bill does is to ensure the prompt filling of vacant seats in States that have long special election processes.

Virginia is able to fill vacancies in its general assembly by special election within 12 days after the vacancy occurs provided the Governor calls a special election. If Virginia makes that apply in the House of Representatives, we are going to have a full Virginia delegation sitting in this Chamber or elsewhere legislating while the States that decide that they want to have more debates and keep the seats vacant will end up sitting unrepresented here.

What this bill does is that it speeds up the process in the slow States, the ones that have lengthy special election processes, including the gentlewoman from California's own State.

The one seat in the House of Representatives that is vacant today is that occupied by our beloved colleague, the late Representative from California, the gentlewoman from California (Ms. MILLENDER-MCDONALD) passes, in the 75 days. What happens then?

I read with some alarm the "Roll Call" article of December 6, 2004, on this subject, and I will quote from that article: "The country is going to be an unelected person. The sponsors of the bill before us that the Constitution of December 6, 2004, on this subject, and I will quote from that article: "The country is going to be an unelected person. The sponsors of the bill before us have not included a provision that will allow seats to be filled by special election within the 45-day period. Many of our States are going increasingly to mail-in ballots. We in this body were effectively disabled by an anthrax attack not long after September 11. I would ask my dear friends, will you conduct this election in 45 days if the elections in the town and still preserve the franchise of the American people? How will you do that? You have no answer to that question.

I find it extraordinary, frankly, that while saying you do not want to amend the Constitution, we began this very Congress by amending the Constitution through the rule, by underlining the principle that a quorum is 50 percent of the body and instead saying it is however many people survive. And if that rule applies, who will designate it, who will implement it? The Speaker, or the Speaker’s designee? Again, not an elected person, as you say is so critical and so critical, but a temporary appointee, frankly, who not a single other Member of this body knows who they are. So we not only have an unelected person, we have an unknown person who will convene this body in the way, conceivably convene it for their own election to then become the President of the United States under the Succession Act.

You have refused steadfastly to debate this real issue broadly. You had a mock debate in the Committee on the Judiciary in which the distinguished chairman presented my bill without allowing any questions or dignity to defend it myself. And on that, you proudly say you defend democracy. Sir, I think you dissemble in that regard.

Here is the fundamental question for us, my friends, and it is this: The American people are watching television and an announcement comes on and says the Congress has been destroyed in a nuclear attack, the President and Vice President are killed and the Supreme Court is dead and thousands of people are killed in this town.

What happens next? Under your bill, 45 days of chaos. Apparently, according to the Committee on the Judiciary Subcommittee on the Constitution chairman, our 45 days of a new law, rule of this country by an unelected President with no checks and balances. Or an alternative, an alternative which says quite simply that the people have entrusted the Representatives they send to the House with the profound decisions, war, taxation, a host of other things, and those Representatives would have the power under the bill of the gentleman from California (Mr. Rohrabacher) bill or mine to designate temporary, temporary, only until we can have a real election.

The American people, in one scenario, are told we do not know who is going to run the country, we have no Representatives; where in another you will have temporary Representatives carrying your interests to this great body while we deliberate and have real elections. That is the choice.

You are making the wrong choice today if you think you have solved this problem.

Mrs. MILLER of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, I continue to reserve my time.

Ms. MILLENDER-MCDONALD. Mr. Chairman, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from California (Mr. Rohrabacher).

Mr. ROHRABACHER. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to H.R. 841, and I regret the partisan flavor that seems to have become part of this debate.

Mr. Chairman, this bill offers a solution to a crisis, to a problem that we face, to a challenge that we face, but it is a solution that will not work. I plead with my fellow Republicans to listen to the arguments that have just been made and to determine for themselves whether or not this legislation will do the job that it claims it is intended to do.

I looked at it with an open heart and an open mind and find that I agree with the gentleman from Washington (Mr. Baird) that at a time when we need it the most, this bill will leave us in limbo, without leadership, and it will make America vulnerable at a time when we need leadership the most.

I oppose this legislation. This bill focuses on the continuity of the election process rather than the continuity of Congress. The people who wrote this bill got their bill mixed up as to what the purpose of this was supposed to be.

Mr. Chairman, the time frame in this bill of 45 days is both too long and too short. Forty-five days is too long to reconstruct the House of Representatives in a time of crisis when decisions need to be made immediately, so in that 45 days, when we are the most vulnerable, this legislation would leave America the most vulnerable.

But 45 days is also too short a period to preserve the democratic representation that we have heard about, because, yes, you could have elections, but it does not allow time for primary elections. So who are those elections going to be all about? Under this law, party bosses rather than party voters will choose the candidates; thus, they will choose the Representatives. This is hollow, a very hollow approach to democracy, suggesting that this would permit people to be elected, when in fact it will be the party bosses that will be deciding who the voters will have a chance to vote on.

The gentleman from Washington (Mr. Baird) and I have introduced a bipartisan constitutional amendment that solves the problems that H.R. 841 attempts to address, and it does this without the inevitable limitations of trying to fix a constitutional problem with a simple statute.

House Joint Resolution 26 provides for the immediate replacement of both deceased and incapacitated Members by alternates, who become acting Representatives only until a new Representative is elected. Just as the Vice President of the United States is elected as part of a ticket with the President, alternate Representatives would go on the ballot and be elected as a ticket with their Representative so that in times of crisis, there would be a fully democratic procedures used by States today. Thus the Rohrabacher-Baird amendment not only solves all the continuity problems, but also preserves the principle that only elected officials may cast a vote in the House of Representatives.

Mr. Chairman, although I oppose the bill before us, the Rohrabacher-Baird amendment is something that can be supported even by those who vote for the bill. I ask my colleagues for their support and co-sponsorship of H.J. Res. 26.

On 9/11 we lived through a crisis that at times seemed bizarre and even surreal. Many otherwise competent leaders were in a state of shock and at one moment when we gathered on the Capitol steps to send a message to the American people, Representative Baird and I realized more was needed and began singing God Bless America. All our colleagues joined in. That was the message the American people needed.

Today let’s do what is needed for the American people at a time of maximum crisis.

Mr. Chairman, I would ask my fellow Republicans, please give this serious consideration. This is too important an issue to think about in terms of party politics. This is a time of crisis, when American people will be counting on us to do our best and to set up something that will work in a time of crisis.

Ms. MILLENDER-MCDONALD. Mr. Chairman, I continue to reserve my time.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair would announce that the gentlewoman from Michigan (Mrs. Miller) has 12 minutes remaining. The gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. Sensenbrenner) has 45 minutes remaining. The gentleman from California (Ms. Millender-McDonald) has 5 1/2 minutes remaining and the gentlewoman from California (Ms. Millender-McDonald) has 30 seconds remaining. The order of closing is the gentlewoman from California (Ms. Milender-McDonald), the gentleman from Michigan (Mrs. Miller), the gentlewoman from Michigan (Ms. Millender-McDonald) and the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. Baird).

The Chair would announce that the gentlewoman from Michigan (Mrs. Miller) has 12 minutes remaining. The gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. Sensenbrenner) has 45 minutes remaining. Mr. SENSENBRINGER, Mr. Chairman, I yield myself the balance of my time.

Mr. Chairman, the primary opposition to this legislation comes from people who have favored a constitutional amendment to provide for the appointment of Representatives. If a catastrophe should there be a catastrophe that wipes out a significant part or all of the House of Representatives.

I believe last year, the House of Representatives laid that proposition to rest. We did have a full debate on the floor of the constitutional amendment that both the gentleman from Washington (Mr. BAIRD) and the gentleman from California (Mr. ROHRABACHER) supported. It only got 63 votes. Twenty votes are necessary for the two-thirds majority necessary to propose amendments to the Constitution on any subject, and I believe that the House of Representatives at that time clearly and emphatically spoke in favor of maintaining elections as the only way one can enter the House of Representatives, the people’s House.

So now we hear that the 49 days that are proposed in this bill are too short to be able to organize a proper election in a time of crisis. I do not think that is correct. During the Second World War, Great Britain was under attack constantly by the German Air Force, and even during the war they were able to hold special elections to fill vacancies in the House of Commons within 42 days. Democracy prevailed because the people of Great Britain insisted that it do so, and those elections worked and those people who were elected entered the House of Commons with a mandate from the people.

This bill will work just as well in a time of crisis as a way of repopulating the House, you are not going to have appointed Representatives. The constitutional amendment has been overwhelmingly rejected here. So the responsible thing to do is to speed up the special election process, particularly in those States whose elections work and take forever to fill a vacancy so that the States can have full representation as quickly as possible.

Pass the bill.

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mrs. MILLER of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself the balance of my time.

Mr. Chairman, the Continuity in Representation Act provides a process to ensure that our democratic government remains stable and orderly during a possible time of great instability. In addition, it preserves the unique status of the House of Representatives by continuing the tradition and the constitutional mandate that every Member of this body must be elected by his constituents. In such a time of crisis, the people of this Nation must have a voice in the critical decisions that are being made. This legislation ensures that that will be the case.

The time limit of 49 days that this bill lays out is more than adequate, Mr. Chairman. In fact, a survey of election officials confirmed that this is a realistic time frame, and I will tell you as a former elections official myself, I concur with those findings.

Furthermore, States already have laws in place that require special elections to be conducted in a shorter period of time than the 49-day limit that this legislation requires. It is a short enough period that the House is reconstituted quickly and loses none of its authority, and, at the same time, it is a long enough period for fair elections to be conducted.

When this issue was before the 108th Congress, Mr. Chairman, the House acted in an overwhelmingly bipartisan fashion and approved the Continuity in Representation Act by a more than three-to-one margin. In fact, H.R. 841 that we consider today has improved on the previous bill by addressing the following reservations that some Members of the House and some of the States had regarding that bill.

First, the special election privilege is extended now to Delegates and Resident Commissioners so that they could be replaced just as quickly as Members.

Second, the legislation explicitly gives States any method that they choose to select the candidates for special elections. Certainly as an advocate of States’ rights, this provision was extremely important to both myself and many of us here in this Chamber.

Finally, the time limit for special elections to be completed has been extended to 49 days from the time of the Speaker’s announcement that over 100 vacancies exist. This gives local and State officials 7 full weeks to select candidates, to print ballots and to fully execute those special elections.

With these changes I am hopeful that the bipartisan support for this legislation will be even greater today than it has been in the past. Mr. Speaker, this is not simply a bill about elections or the ability to fill the Members of Congress, Mr. Chairman, this bill is about the strength of our Nation. It is about our ability to secure the homeland, and it does that by ensuring that our democratically elected government is able to respond in the face of an urgent threat.

Homeland security is not a Republican issue. It is not a Democratic issue. This is an issue that affects every single American, Mr. Chairman; and the Congress should act in the interest of America and of democracy.

I urge all of my colleagues to join me in supporting H.R. 841, the Continuity in Representation Act, introduced by my distinguished colleague, House Judiciary Committee Chairman JAMES SENSENBRINGER. H.R. 841 provides a practical and constitutional way to ensure that the House of Representatives can continue to operate in the event that more than 100 Members are killed. H.R. 841 thus protects the people’s right to choose their Representatives at the time when such a right may be most important, while ensuring continuity of the legislative branch.

Article I section 2 of the United States Constitution grants State governors the authority to hold special elections to fill vacancies in the House of Representatives. Article I, section 4 of the Constitution gives Congress the authority to designate the time, place and manner of such elections. States have the authority to determine whether or not special elections should be held and to act expeditiously following a national emergency. Alexander Hamilton, who played a major role in the drafting and ratification of the United States Constitution, characterized authority over Federal elections as shared between the States and Congress but not shared by either the House or the Senate. The House’s role in Federal elections has been killing members.

I have no doubt that the people of the States are quite competent to hold elections in a timely fashion. After all, it is in each State’s interest to ensure it has adequate elected representation in Washington of H.R. 841 before Congress today was drafted with input from State elections commissioners to make sure it sets realistic goals and will not unduly burden State governments.

I am disappointed that some of my colleagues reject the sensible approach of H.R. 841 and instead support amending the Constitution to allow appointed Members to serve in this body. Allowing appointed Members to serve in “the people’s house” will fundamentally alter the nature of this institution and sever the people’s most direct connection with their government.

Even with the direct election of Senators, the fact that Members of the House are elected every 2 years while Senators run for state-wide office every 6 years, Members of the House of Representatives are still more accountable to the people than members of any other part of the Federal Government. Appropriated Members of Congress simply cannot be truly representative. James Madison and Alexander Hamilton eloquently made this point in Federalist 52:

As it is essential to liberty that the government in general should have a common interest with the people, so it is particularly essential that the branch of it under consideration should have an immediate dependence on, and an intimate sympathy with, the people. Frequent elections are unquestionably the only policy by which this dependence and sympathy can be effectively secured.

Mr. Chairman, there are those who say that the power of appointment is necessary in order to preserve checks and balances and thus prevent an abuse of executive power during a time of crisis. Of course, I agree that it is very important to carefully guard our constitutional liberties in times of crisis and that an over-centralization of power in the executive branch is one of the most serious dangers to that liberty. However, Mr. Chairman, during a time of crisis it is all the more important to have Representatives accountable to the people. Otherwise, the citizen has no check on the inevitable tendency of government to infringe on the people's liberties at such a time. I would remind my colleagues that the only reason we are considering reexamining provisions of the PATRIOT Act is because of public concern. The President has taken extraordinary steps that the appointed Representative will only be temporary. However, the laws passed by these “temporary” Representatives will be permanent.

Supporters of amending the Constitution claim that the appointment power will be necessary in case of an emergency and that the appointed Representative will only be temporary. However, the laws passed by these “temporary” Representatives will be permanent.

Mr. Chairman, this country has faced the possibility of threats to the continuity of this body several times in our history. Yet no one suggested removing the people’s right to vote for Members of Congress. For example, the British in the War of 1812 attacked the city of Washington, yet nobody suggested the States could not address the lack of a quorum in the House of Representatives through elections. During the Civil War, the neighboring State of Virginia, where today many Capitol Hill staffers reside and many Members stay while Congress is in session, was actively involved in hostilities against the Federal government. Yet, Abraham Lincoln never suggested that non-elected persons serve in the House. Adopting any of the proposals to deny the people the ability to choose their own Representatives would let the terrorists know that they can succeed in altering our republican institutions.

As the framers gave Congress all the tools it needs to address problems of mass vacancies in the House without compromising this institution’s primary function as a representative body. In fact, as Hamilton explains in Federalist 59, the “time, place, and manner” clause was specifically designed to address the kind of extraordinary circumstances imagined by those who support amending the Constitution.

In conclusion, I urge my colleagues to support H.R. 841, the Continuity in Representation Act, which ensures an elected Congress can continue to operate in the event of an emergency. This is what the drafters of the Constitution intended. Furthermore, passage of H.R. 841 sends a strong message to terrorists that they cannot alter our republican government.

Mrs. MILLER of Michigan. I yield back the balance of my time, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. All time for general debate has been used.

Pursuant to the rule, the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute printed in the bill shall be considered as an original bill for the purpose of amendment under the 5-minute rule and shall be considered read.

The text of the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute is as follows:

H.R. 841

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled.

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE. This Act may be cited as the “Continuity in Representation Act of 2005”.

SEC. 2. REQUIRING SPECIAL ELECTIONS TO BE HELD TO FILL VACANCIES IN THE HOUSE IN EXTRAORDINARY CIRCUMSTANCES. Section 26 of the Revised Statutes of the United States (2 U.S.C. 6) is amended—

(2) by adding at the end the following new subsection:

(b) Special Rules in Extraordinary Circumstances.—(1) In general.—In extraordinary circumstances, the executive authority of any State in which a vacancy exists in its representation in the House of Representatives shall issue a writ of election to fill such vacancy by special election.

(2) Timing of Special Election.—A special election held under this subsection to fill a vacancy shall take place not later than 45 days after the Speaker of the House of Representatives announces that the vacancy exists, unless, during the 75-day period which begins on the date of the announcement of the vacancy—

(3) Nominations by Parties.—If a special election is to be held under this subsection, the determination of the candidates who will run in such election shall be made—

(A) by nominations made not later than 10 days after the Speaker announces that the vacancy exists by the political parties of the State that are authorized by State law to nominate candidates for the election; or

(B) by any other method the State considers appropriate for primary elections, that will ensure that the State will hold the special election within the deadline required under paragraph (2).

(4) Extraordinary Circumstances.—(A) In general.—In this subsection, ‘extraordinary circumstances’ occur when the House of Representatives announces that vacancies in the representation from the States in the House exceed 100.

(B) Judicial Review.—If any action is brought for declaratory or injunctive relief to challenge an announcement made under subparagraph (A), the following rules shall apply:

(i) Not later than 2 days after the announcement, the action shall be filed in the United States District Court for the district of the Member of the House of Representatives whose seat has been announced to be vacant and shall be heard by a 3-judge court convened pursuant to section 2284 of title 28, United States Code.

(ii) A copy of the complaint shall be delivered simultaneously to the Clerk of the House of Representatives.

(iii) A final decision in the action shall be made within 3 days of the filing of such action and shall not be reviewable.

(iv) The executive authority of the State that contains the district of the Member of the House of Representatives whose seat has been announced to be vacant shall have the right to intervene either in support of or opposition to the position of a party to the case regarding the announcement of such vacancy.

(5) Protecting Ability of Absent Military and Overseas Voters to Participate in Special Elections.—(A) Deadline for Transmittal of Absentee Ballots.—In conducting a special election held under this subsection to fill a vacancy in its representation, the State shall ensure to the greatest extent practicable (including through the use of electronic means) that absentee ballots for the election are transmitted to absent uniformed services voters and overseas voters (as such terms are defined in the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act) not later than 45 days after the Speaker of the House of Representatives announces that the vacancy exists.

(B) Period for Ballot Transit Time.—Notwithstanding the deadline for transmittal of absentee ballots for the election in paragraph (A), a State shall accept and process any otherwise valid ballot or other election material from the voter so long as the ballot or other material is received by the appropriate State election official not later than 45 days after the State transmits the ballot or other material to the voter.

(C) Application to District of Columbia and Territories.—This subsection shall apply—

(i) to a Delegate or Resident Commissioner to the Congress in the same manner as it applies to a Member of the House of Representatives; and

(ii) to the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, American Samoa, Guam, and the United States Virgin Islands in the same manner as it applies to a State, except that the vacancy in the representation from any such jurisdiction in the House shall not be taken into account by the Speaker in determining whether vacancies in the representation from the States in the House exceed 100 for purposes of paragraph (4)(A).

(D) Rule of Construction Regarding Federal Election Laws.—Nothing in this subsection may be construed to affect the application to special elections under this subsection of any Federal law governing the administration of elections for Federal office (including any Federal law providing for the enforcement of any such law), including, but not limited to, the following:

The CHAIRMAN. No amendment to the committee amendment is in order except those printed or considered as printed in House Report 109-10. Each amendment may be offered only in the order printed or considered as printed in the report, by a Member designated, shall be considered read, shall be debatable for the time specified, equally divided by the presiding officer and an opponent of the amendment, shall not be subject to amendment and shall not be subject to a demand for division of the question.

It is now in order to consider the amendment as stated to be the first amendment printed in House Report 109-10.

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. NEY

Mr. NEY. Mr. Chairman, I offer the manager’s amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment made in order pursuant to House Resolution 125 offered by Mr. NEY.

In section 26(b)(2) of the Revised Statutes of the United States, as proposed to be added by the bill, strike ‘‘45 days’’ and insert ‘‘49 days’’.

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to House Resolution 125 offered by Mr. NEY, and a Member opposed each will control 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. NEY).

Mr. NEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself and my colleagues in this Committee the balance of the time.

I rise today to offer this manager’s amendment, but first I want to thank the gentlewoman from Michigan (Mrs. MILLER). She is our able new committee member. We are so pleased to have the gentlewoman on the Committee on House Administration and thank her for managing this bill.

She is a former Secretary of State. She brings a wealth of knowledge and personal experience regarding running elections to this debate. And of course House Administration does a wide variety of things, but we also oversee Federal election laws, so we appreciate her perspective on it.

And it is a pleasure to be here with the gentlewoman from California (Ms. MILLER-MCDONALD), our new ranking member. And again, we like the working relationship we have had on the issues.

Mr. Chairman, H.R. 841, the Continuity in Representation Act of 2005 is an important piece of legislation that furthers the vital objective of ensuring that the people’s House would continue to function effectively and with legitimacy in the event of a catastrophic terrorist attack in which a large number of House Members would be killed.

This amendment also addresses the concerns of those who felt that too little time was provided for conducting expedited special elections. It marks yet another step the majority has been willing to take to accommodate some concerns that have been raised by the minority.

Last Congress, Doug Lewis, executive director of the Election Center, a non-profit organization representing State and local election officials whose purpose is to preserve and improve democracy, testified before our committee that it appears that elections administrators feel they can conduct an election within as few as 45 days. He had varied opinions on how long; frankly, this process could take.

He pointed out, however, that any additional days would enable election officials to better prepare for the election and ensure that the process went forward as smoothly as possible.

When operating on a tight time frame, any additional time can make a difference in the quality of the process.

Thus I believe this amendment enables us to better strike the proper balance between the desire to fill House vacancies through special elections in as short a time frame as possible and the need for election officials and the voting public to have the necessary time to get ready for elections and to examine the candidates and the issues.

It is a good important piece of legislation. And I want to thank the gentleman from Wisconsin (Chairman SENNENBRENNER) for carrying this through. And it preserves the fundamental characteristic of this amendment, the majority party’s consent, ensuring that only elected Members and allows for reconstitution of that body as quickly as possible if we ever face these terrible circumstances which we hope do not happen. Therefore, I urge my colleagues to support this amendment and the bill.

Mr. Chairman, I yield the balance of my time.

Mr. ROHRABACHER. I claim the time for the opposition.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from California is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. ROHRABACHER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume. I oppose this amendment because it does not correct the fundamental flaw of H.R. 841, which is leaving the United States of America at a time of its worst crisis, its worst potential for political and logical disaster. It leaves the American people in the lurch, leaves them without representation and without representation in the Congress for 7 weeks. According to this amendment, there will be no representation for the American people at a time when our government needs leadership.

On 9/11 we lived through a crisis which at times seemed bizarre and even surreal. Many members competent leaders were in a state of shock and at that moment, on 9/11, did not necessarily know or were incapable of doing exactly what the right thing was.

Many of us gathered at the Capitol on that fateful day; we gathered on the steps to back up our leadership. The purpose was to send a message to the American people. Representative BARRETT and I realized, once a very short message had been given by our leaders, was that that was not adequate enough. And let me note that on that day, that time of crisis when we were all in confusion, standing on the Capitol ready to break up. Representative BARRETT and I looked at each other in our eyes and said this is not enough. We are going to start singing God bless America right now. And it was Representative BARRETT and myself that started leading that singing and were joined in by our colleagues.

Let me note that that was the message the American people needed to hear of unity and God bless America at that moment.

Let us today do what is needed for the American people at the time of the next crisis. What is happening is we are being offered an alternative that will leave them in the lurch, leave them at the time of the next crisis. If we do believe in God bless America, let us join in now with the partisan flavor of this debate and do what is right to make sure our people are prepared if our country is ever attacked like this again.

Mr. Chairman, I yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from Washington (Mr. BAIRD).

Mr. BAIRD. Mr. Chairman, I want to thank my good friend from California (Mr. ROHRABACHER) and I. Have put forward because it seems to support their autocratic views of government. Nothing could be further from us.

In fact, what our bill would do is tell the terrorists, you could come on a single day, set up a regime in this town and kill every single Member of us; and though we would be missed, the very next day the Congress would be up and functioning with every single State, every single district having full representation by senators and state women at a time of national crisis.

That is what the gentleman from California (Mr. ROHRABACHER) and I are trying to do. We are trying to tell the terrorists you can kill all of us as individuals, but you will not defeat this institution. You will not defeat the principle of representation. You will not defeat the principles of checks and balances. You will not impose martial law.

Here is the irony. If terrorists hit us today when we finally vote on this, let us suppose a few Democrats do not make it over here. You are leaving this country vulnerable to change. If the terrorists were to strike your conference retreat where the President speaks to the Republican House and Senate Members and kill hundreds of House and Senate Members on the Republican side, the Democrats at that point claim the majority. The Democrats at that point elect a Speaker of the House. I am a Democrat, for goodness sakes; but that is not the way to leave our country vulnerable.

You are leaving your own party, you are leaving the will of the people through their elections vulnerable. If we have temporary replacements, you immediately reconstitute the House; you immediately ensure representation; you maintain the balance of political power; and you do it in an orderly, structured way with no chaos, in a way that is constitutionally valid by definition.

What you have proposed is not necessarily constitutionally valid. It leaves the terrorists able to change our system of government. It depends on a fantasy immediate or quick election. It does not allow really qualified people necessarily to get here and act in time. There are so many things you have left undone.

You are going to try to say that at the start of this year we have solved this problem; let us go home. You have not solved the problem, and it is a doggone disgrace, and it is a danger to this country.

The other day a gentleman testified before the Committee on the Budget and said this: “The lack of preparation for continuity, for true contingency invites attack.”

You are inviting attack. Not preventing attack.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Ohio (Mr. NEY) has 2 minutes remaining.

Mr. NEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. NEY).

The amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. It is now in order to consider amendment No. 1 printed in House Report 109-10 or the amendment made in order in lieu thereof.

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MS. MILLENDER-MCDONALD

Ms. MILLENDER-MCDONALD. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment in lieu of amendment No. 1.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment made in order pursuant to H. Res. 125 in lieu of amendment No. 1 printed in House Report 109-10 offered by Ms. MILLER-MCDONALD:

In section 28(b)(2) of the Revised Statutes of the United States, as proposed to be added by the bill, strike “shall take place” and all that follows through “the vacancy exists,” and substitute “shall take place not later than 60 days after the Speaker of the House of Representatives announces that the vacancy exists.”

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to House Resolution 125, the gentlewoman from California (Ms. MILLER-MCDONALD) and a Member opposed each will con- trol 15 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentle- woman from California (Ms. MILLER-MCDONALD).

Ms. MILLENDER-MCDONALD. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 5 minutes.

Mr. Chairman, this compromise amendment would change the overall deadline to conduct expedited special elections under extraordinary circumcumstances to 60 days instead of the 49 which we just voted on.

I urge Members to support 60 days because it is a more practical and realistic time frame to work. States, and still accomplishes the bill’s goals to expedite special elections in a large number of States.

A 60-day deadline would allow more time for States to attempt to implement the election structuring, whatever that might be, and require to comply with the bill’s goals.

It would also allow some States more options if they wish to preserve their primary elections which at the insistence of the Republican Party, is explicitly prohibited by this version of the legislation. But while primaries may no longer be barred, 49 days to hold both a primary and a special election is still a high bar to meet.

Mr. Chairman, I would like to read from a letter that was presented by Kevin Kennedy, the executive director to the State Elections Board of Wisconsin, the State which the author of the bill comes from. And he states in portions of his letter: “The minimum time necessary to ensure proper mechanical operation of an expedited special election, consistent with democratic integrity, and offering of all voters the opportunity of a meaningful opportunity to vote.”

This is what I am speaking about in my amendment. The principle 49 days is really not enough time; and so, therefore, the bill is really flawed because it decrees that the elections will occur 49 days after the Speaker’s announcement of the bill, having said that, what would happen next?

How States which would have to reduce their preexisting time frame for special elections could actually accomplish this is the great unknown. Would States’ enactments, States’ constitutional amendments, popular referenda in some States?

I do not know the answers and the bill’s sponsors surely do not know the answers. But 60 days, at least provides some additional flexibility in the hands of the decision-makers who must grapple with the jigsaw puzzle of demands of the individual contestants, and then going to the polls to make that choice? The point is this: If it is only an event, then we can structure an event in a short time frame and carry out the event as flawlessly as possible. If, however, you define it in the broadest possible terms, then you have to allow the process time to work.”

Mr. Chairman, I agree that elections are a process which implement democ-

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. MILLER of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment, and I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, the amendment proposed by the gentlewoman from California, while certainly a very well-intentioned amendment, is completely unnecessary, and, I believe, would severely weaken this bill.

While this amendment would only increase the time limit in which to conduct the special election by 11 days, and thereby in H.R. 841, it would weaken the power of Congress in a significant way. According to the War Powers Act, when the
Mr. Chairman, I agree with that assessment. As a former Secretary of State, I have always work out as we had intended. During the last 31/2 years.

Mr. Chairman, make no mistake about it, under this limited time period in which to conduct a special election. Again, dramatically easy printing, programming, and testing.

President has put our Armed Forces into action. Congress must act within 60 days to either approve or to disapprove the use of those troops. Following an attack in which over 100 Members of Congress have been killed, it is quite likely that a military response is required.

If Congress is not reconstituted within this 60-day period, it would lose its ability to either affirm or disapprove of the executive’s use of military actions and, thus, the power of the legislative branch would be diminished. The amendment by the gentlewoman would prevent Congress from acting in this situation. H.R. 841, as it stands, would allow for Congress to reconstitute and to act on such an important matter.

Another argument against this amendment, Mr. Chairman, is that while it is not only dangerous, again it is completely unnecessary. A survey of election officials, as I mentioned earlier, shows that 49 days is a reasonable period of time in which to conduct a special election. And as a former chief elections officer of the State of Michigan, I agree with that assessment. As the legislation currently stands, States would have the option, and let me reiterate, the option to conduct a special election. And as a former chief elections officer of the State of Michigan, I agree with that assessment.

In turn, this would eliminate the petition requirements, and the verification process that accompanies it. Additionally, it is again very important to remember that the U.S. Representative position would really be the only race on the ballot. Again, dramatically easy printing, programming, and testing.

Furthermore, Mr. Chairman, the passage of the Help America Vote Act of 2002, HAVA, as it is commonly called, has helped prepare election officials more effectively, and to conduct such a special election. HAVA is granting Federal dollars to the States in historic proportions, dollars that are being used to eliminate antiquated election equipment, and the States are purchasing new state-of-the-art equipment. States have either constructed or are moving towards construction of statewide, computerized voter registration files, similar, as I mentioned, to the one we built in Michigan several years ago.

Technology is allowing these lists to be updated literally daily, so that a clean up-to-date file can be printed out within 49 days. Well, Mr. Chairman, I am sure that the authors of this legislation had all the good intentions in the world, but unfortunately we find in the real world, in practice, it does not always work out as we had intended. As a former Secretary of State, I have run numerous elections, and I can tell you that the 49-day limit would constrain election officials’ ability to prepare ballots, train poll workers, select polling locations, and inform the voting public about the process.

Mr. Chairman, make no mistake about it, under this limited time frame, there would be voters who would be disenfranchised. The mail-ballot process itself can be very cumbersome, and I can guarantee you that very potentially the elderly, people with disabilities, and most especially, our men and women in uniform who are overseas would potentially be disenfranchised by this shortened time frame.

Now, at a time when our Nation would be looking to its government for answers, it will instead face confusion and uncertainty about how its leaders are acting. Mr. Chairman, it would seem to me to be reasonable to support the gentlewoman’s amendment to extend the time period to 60 days. At the very least, if we are going to do this, I believe we need to do it the right way, and this would allow us the extra time we would need.

But, Mr. Chairman, my colleague the gentleman from California (Mr. Rohrabacher) really said it right. Whether it is 49 days or the 60 days, it is really both too long and too short. Even if we were to have to hold elections within the 49 days, that still would be too long for Congress to remain inactive. I want to remind everyone that in the 6 weeks after the attacks of September 11, Congress passed legislation authorizing the use of military force, an airline assistance measure, an economic stimulus bill, the Defense Authorization Act, numerous appropriation bills, the farm bill, legislation pertaining to bioterrorism, victims assistance, and terrorism financing.

H.R. 841 would leave important decisions to a greatly diminished and possibly unrepresentative House. Worse, in the case of widespread incapacitation, the House would be unable to achieve a quorum and become inoperative during a time of crisis. A recent change in House rules tried to circumvent this problem by creating a provisional quorum, which would permit a smaller number of Members to constitute a quorum in emergent circumstances. However, one must question the constitutionality and public support of laws that would be passed by a handful of Members during a time of national crisis.

The House is attempting to address this complex issue over congressional continuity, Mr. Chairman, by passing feel-good legislation and tweaking our internal rules. But I am disappointed that H.R. 841 does not take a comprehensive approach to continuity nor does it address a primary aspect ofnice, deciding how Congress could communicate and function if terrorist acts prevented it from meeting in one location.

Mr. Chairman, these matters warrant greater discussion than the limited bill before us, and I urge my colleagues to oppose H.R. 841 so that we can have the full debate that this Congress and our Nation deserves.
who has been a driving force in bringing this legislation to the floor today.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, I would like to make three points.

First, under the 60-day time frame proposed by the gentlewoman’s amendment, the time under the War Powers Act for Congress to make a decision following an attack will have expired and, consequently, less than the full House can make the important decisions relative to under what circumstances American troops will be committed overseas. Under the 49-day time limit, that problem will not exist because the House will be reconstituted and reactivated before the War Powers Act limitation expires.

Secondly, the purpose of this bill is to require special elections to be held in those States with slower special election processes, to be held as quickly as possible. Fifty days will not cut it. Defeat the amendment. Defeat the amendment. We did debate a constitutional amendment and it was defeated by a vote of 63 ayes to 350-plus nays. I rise in support of the Millender-McDonald amendment and to express concern for the underlying bill. I am glad we are considering legislation that would address what should be done in the event of a large-scale incapacitation of Congress. It obviously makes sense to do that. It is more essential than ever in a time of national emergency that democracy be preserved.

Our Constitution established the House of Representatives to provide directly elected representation in the event of a catastrophe that must be restored as quickly as possible. We have heard sort of grand, philosophical statements of our allegiance to democracy on the floor of this House; but at the same time we talk about what actually can work in a time of national crisis. I think my friends on the other side of the aisle have glossed over the problems that especially military voters, the elderly, others who do not have access on an election day to the polls, the kind of problems that they would face. I was Secretary of State in the 1980s for 8 years in the State of Ohio, a large State with several million registered voters, a State that has always had a tradition of bipartisan elections conducted fairly. The year of 2004 may have been different where the election machinery frankly was not so well administered as it had been in the past by Secretaries of both parties. That aside, I have serious concerns as a former Secretary of State about the legislation we are considering today. Forty-nine days establishes an unrealistic time frame for holding legitimate, fair elections where people have access to the polling booth. In a national emergency, Congress must be able to provide immediate relief, and this legislation would allow the country to elect representation for those 6 or 7 weeks. You cannot, I believe, hold fair elections, accessible elections, in 49 days. The process simply takes longer than that. Again, military voters, people far away outside the country, in uniform serving our country, elderly voters who do not have access to the polls do most vulnerable among us, in many ways, that cannot simply do that.

There are alternatives, and I want to answer the concerns of the gentleman from Wisconsin (Chairman SENSENBERNNER) said, was defeated, but could be considered in the light of understanding how elections actually work in that there needs to be a time line to get candidates on the ballots, to get the ballots printed, to get them sent to the military overseas, and get those ballots back in time for an election.

The Baird proposal would allow States to appoint temporary replacements for deceased or incapacitated Representatives. States could then conduct special elections to elect permanent Representatives according to State laws.

I support the Millender-McDonald amendment because appointing the process, if we could do that down the line, and I understand that is not on the table today, but to do them in 45 or 49 days simply is not practical, and too many people will be denied the right to vote.

We want to do this right. We want to refill, if you will, the House of Representatives as quickly as possible, but we want to do it in the most democratic way possible, and ultimately that means giving the election machinery enough time so that everyone, especially our servicemen and -women overseas, so that everyone has access to the ballots. I think the underlying bill does not do that. I think the Millender-McDonald amendment makes this bill work much better than it does otherwise. I ask support for the Millender-McDonald amendment.

Mrs. MILLER of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself the balance of my time.

As I have listened to the debate, I feel more strongly than ever that this amendment would severely weaken the impact of H.R. 841. I urge my colleagues to reject the Millender-McDonald amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

Ms. MILLER- McDONALD. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself the balance of my time.

In this book we have, the first “Report of the Continuity of Government Commission,” in that it outlined an election in Michigan, Michigan’s Third Congressional District where the vacancy occurred in 1993, and the time that was allotted for that election was 178 days, which brought us the distinguished gentleman from Michigan (Mr. EHLEERS) who is part of our committee.

Mr. Chairman, in returning to the testimony of Mr. Doug Lewis, executive director of Election Center, after polling election officials from around the country, he summarized the results: “While the responses indicated a variety of dates ranging from the shortest time period of 35 days after determination of who the candidates will be to a period of 4 months, it appears plain that a time frame of at least 45 days is required” that they can conduct an election with as few as 45 days. However, the election officials would be far more confident that the interest of democracy would be best served by having up to 60 days to get the elections organized and held. Each additional day beyond the 45 day minimum time frame creates greater confidence in the process.

Mr. Chairman, I put to come down on this side of the interest of democracy, and my instincts after campaigns for local, State, and Federal office tell me 49 days is simply too short.

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from California (Ms. MILLENDER-McDONALD).

The question was taken; and the Chairman announced that the noes appeared to have it.

Ms. MILLENDER-McDONALD. Mr. Chairman, I demand a recorded vote.

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to clause 6 of rule XVIII, further proceedings on the amendment offered by the gentleman from California (Ms. MILLENDER-McDONALD) will be postponed.

It is now in order to consider amendment No. 2 printed in House Report 108-10.

AMENDMENT NO. 2 OFFERED BY MS. JACKSON-LEE OF TEXAS

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment No. 2 offered Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas:

In section 26(b)(4)(B)(i) of the Revised Statutes of the United States, as proposed to be added by the bill, strike “2 days” and insert “5 days”.

In section 26(b)(4)(B)(ii) of the Revised Statutes of the United States, as proposed to be added by the bill, insert after “vacant” the following: “and any citizen of the district or any group of citizens of the State”.

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to House Resolution 125, the gentleman from Texas (Ms. JACKSON-LEE) and the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. SENSENBRENNER) each will control 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. SENSENBRENNER) of 5 minutes.

The Gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. JACKSON-LEE) of 5 minutes.

Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, I want to inquire of the distinguished gentleman from Wisconsin (Chairman SENSENBRENNER), I have an amendment in the nature of a substitute. In the spirit of collegiality, I realize that we have a rule, but I gained a sense that the Committee on House Administration would be supportive of this substitute which would only allow an added 5 days for an appeal from 2 days, less than a week. I would inquire of the chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary, would the gentleman allow that to move forward by unanimous consent? If the gentleman would answer with just a yes or no whether we would be able to move forward with this substitute, I would be delighted to work with the chairman.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentlewoman yield?

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, I appreciate the gentlewoman yielding.

The membership has been preparing for the debate on this bill with the amendment made in order under the rule. The gentlewoman now wants to submit a new amendment. I do not think that is fair to the membership who have prepared debate on the bill; so the answer is no.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Re-claiming my time, I ask that they would have followed the gentleman’s lead, but I thank the gentleman very much.

Let me move forward with the amendment before us. This is my very point. I encourage my colleagues, both Republicans and Democrats, to look very carefully at the Jackson-Lee amendment, and I ask for their support.

This is the problem we have here today, and that is the continuity and the preservation of this historic and honorable institution, the Members of the United States Congress, really should be a bipartisan process. I am disappointed we are not, even in time of war and terrorism, that we cannot find in our hearts and in our intellectual minds the ability to be collegial and to work in an very informed and thoughtful way.

This particular amendment is very succinct, and I ask my colleagues to give it considerable thought and vote for it. One, the amendment has the expansion of the ability of an aggrieved party to file suit for declaratory or injunctive relief from just 2 days to 5 days. Second, to answer the needs of the Secretaries of State and the States that when this crisis occurs, that all of them have the procedures in place to be able to fulfill our democratic calling.

This is not a constitutional amendment. I wish it were. But since we are doing this by statute, why not give the opportunity for there to be enough open view and transparency for this to occur?

Number 2 of this amendment is a provision for an expedited appeals process to the United States District Court for matters rising out of the special election process because a 45-day deadline for special State election already places significant constraints on the electoral process and on the citizens represented due to its brevity, taking away the right to an appeal from the U.S. District Court.

This gives an expedited appeal.

In addition, this provides for an expansion of the right to sue for declaratory judgment beyond the Governor, but to citizens and classes of citizens.

Mr. Chairman, the gravity of the matter of reconstituting the House of Representatives in the face of catastrophe requires the fullest debate possible. However, due to the fact that a structured rule was reported out of Committee, this body is relegated to saving this severely flawed legislation with no changes, the only two amendments made in order last Tuesday—those of my colleague, the distinguished Ranking Member of the House Administration Committee and the Jackson-Lee Amendment. The Jackson-Lee Amendment has three essential components which propose to preserve the rights of the States, the voters, and of the spirit of democracy:

The first portion of this amendment, Jackson-Lee #1, reads as follows:

In section 26(b)(4)(B)(i) of the Revised Statutes of the United States, as proposed to be added by the bill, strike “2 days” and insert “5 days.”

This change would amend the section of the bill that deals with the time in which a person(s) may file a lawsuit arising out of the Speaker of the House’s announcement of vacancies in the House of Representatives in excess of 100. This change would amend paragraph (4), subparagraph (B)(i) and expand the ability of an aggrieved party to file suit for either declaratory or injunctive relief from just two (2) days to five (5) days.

Because not every State has a Capital Beltway or even a superhighway system, and because information travels at a different rate in every location, it is important that we establish a fair standard for a filing rule that affects every State in the country. The principle of procedural due process dictates that every citizen of each State have a realistic opportunity to obtain legal relief through our Judicial Branch.

The second portion of this proposal speaks even more to the issue of due process for all citizens. Its text reads as follows:

In section 26(b)(4)(B)(ii) of the Revised Statutes of the United States, as proposed to be added by the bill, insert after “vacant” the following: “and any citizen of the district or any group of citizens of the State.”

This proposal would curtail the procedural due process rights enjoyed by citizens. Given that the time in which a Federal judge has to compose an order disposing of these matters is provided in this bill, an equally expedient appeals process should be provided so as to maintain consistency with the U.S. Constitution and the commitment to both the 5th and 14th Amendments.

Thirdly, the amendment reads as follows:

In section 26(b)(4)(B)(iv) of the Revised Statutes of the United States, as proposed to be added by the bill, insert after “vacant” the following: “any citizen of the district or any group of citizens of the State.”.

This proposal is very important to protect the interests of all citizens in the various congressional districts in the midst of party politics and any certification of classes in legal actions. As the bill is drafted, Section 2, paragraph (4), subparagraph (iv) would confer the right to sue in the event of a vacancy announcement by the Speaker of the House.

This is the problem we have here today, and that is the continuity and the preservation of this historic and honorable institution, the Members of the United States Congress, really should be a bipartisan process. I am disappointed we are not, even in time of war and terrorism, that we cannot find in our hearts and in our intellectual minds the ability to be collegial and to work in an very informed and thoughtful way.
solely to the “executive authority,” in the case of Texas, the Governor. Such overly restrictive language almost certainly threatens to deprive the citizens of a right that they should enjoy in the event that the Governor chooses not to participate in a suit for declaratory or injunctive relief pursuant to a vacancy announcement made by the Speaker of the House. In order to protect the rights of every person who truly has an interest in a call for a special election under this Act, this provision must be amended to allow citizens and classes of citizens to sue for relief.

Mr. Chairman, I ask that my colleagues support the voters of each State, the framework of the U.S. Constitution, and the spirit of democracy by supporting the Jackson-Lee Amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, I urge the committee to defeat this amendment, just as it did last year when the gentleman from Texas (Ms. JACKSON-LEE) brought it up. The issue is very simple. We want elections. Her amendment wants lawsuits. The way she has phrased her amendment for the lawsuits is that anybody can sue just the Governor to determine whether or not a vacancy actually exists. And also, there is an appeal process in the gentlemwoman’s amendment that would allow the appeals to be dragged out indefinitely.

What we need is a catastrophe that wipes out a significant number of Members of the House, is it in the interest of the public to fill those vacancies as quickly as possible through a fair election. We should not allow anybody to tie up an election call in the courts forever and ever and ever simply because their candidate might not be in a proper position to win the election.

So let us have the people decide when these vacancies will be filled and who will be chosen. Let us not allow endless litigation at a time of national catastrophe. Elections can bring people together. They will result in new Representatives coming with mandates rather than having the frustration of lawsuits that go on interminably.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Chairman, do I have the right to close? The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman does not.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 45 seconds.

Mr. Chairman, this is about chaos and confusion. There is no definition of how the announcement will go out to the people beyond the beltway. A mere extension from 2 days to 5 days to make sure that Americans, even in crisis, have due process and democracy and justice is not too much to ask. I would indulge and beg my colleagues to realize all this mess is simply for the people of America in crisis to be represented and to be responded to.

Mr. Chairman, I yield 30 seconds to the gentlewoman from California (Ms. MILLENDER-MCDONALD), the ranking member of the Committee on House Administration.

Ms. MILLENDER-MCDONALD. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of the Jackson-Lee amendment. A portion of the gentlewoman’s amendment seeks to put a significant constraint on the United States District Court for matters arising out of the special election process. We have been talking about this 44, 45, 49-day deadline for special State elections, and it already places a significant burden on the electoral process and on the citizens represented due to its brevity.

Taking away the right of an appeal to United States District Court would excessively curtail the procedural due process rights enjoyed by citizens. I support the gentlewoman’s amendment.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself the balance of my time, and thank the gentlewoman for her amendment.

Again, the idea of this amendment, in the judicial review aspect, one, there is no definitive information about how the information will be disseminated to our States and to citizens in a 2-day period if support of this act has occurred. My amendment gives an additional 5 days to guarantee that that notice be given.

In addition, the other aspects of the legislation provides for an expedited time frame. It does not in any way cause a sufficient delay that would not allow us to restore this body to its ability to do business on behalf of the American people. Continuity, tragedy, all equal bipartisanship, I would ask my colleagues to look at this amendment and all it does provide, the enhanced due process. And I think we would not want the terrorists to believe that because of a terrorist act that we have lost our sense of judgment, the Constitution and due process.

After 9/11, we went to New York to show that we are not afraid of the terrorists. I believe we should show that we are not afraid of them by upholding the Constitution and due process on behalf of the American people. Vote for the Jackson-Lee amendment. I ask my colleagues to vote for this amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself the balance of my time.

Mr. Chairman, the fatal flaw in this amendment is it does not extend the 49 days under which the election is required to be held under the provisions of this bill.

We have heard an awful lot saying, well, the time frame is just too compact in order to run a fair election. What the gentlewoman’s amendment does is that it makes it more compact because every day and every week that is spent tied up in the courts is going to be that much less time for the election machinery to operate.

This is a question very simply of lawsuits versus elections. If you want more lawsuits, vote yes. If you want a quicker and fairer election, vote no. I urge a “no” vote.

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. JACKSON-LEE).

The question was taken; and the Chairman announced that the noes appeared to have it.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I demand a recorded vote.

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to clause 6 of rule XVIII, further proceedings on the amendment offered by the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. JACKSON-LEE) will be postponed.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—ayes 134, noes 229, not voting 11, as follows: [Roll No. 50] the proposal of the gentleman from California (Mr. ROHRABACHER) and mine or others, we should commit to having this full House seriously consider this. If we do not and we are not fortunate, history will not look kindly upon the jeopardy in which we have left this great Nation.

Vote no on this bill and insist on true debate on true continuity of Congress in extraordinary circumstances, and for other purposes, pursuant to House Resolution 125, he reported the bill back to the House with an amendment adopted by the Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was read the third time.

Motion to recommit offered by Mr. CONYERS

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion to recommit.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is the gentleman opposed to the bill?
Mr. CONYERS. I am, Mr. Speaker, in its present form.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the motion to recommit.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. CONYERS moved to recommit the bill H.R. 841 to the Committee on House Administration with instructions to report the same back to the House forthwith with the following amendments:

In section 26(b) of the Revised Statutes of the United States, as proposed to be added by the bill, insert after paragraph (5) the following new paragraph (and redesignate accordingly):

"(6) MINIMUM REQUIRED VOTING SYSTEMS AND POLL WORKERS IN POLLING PLACES USED IN SPECIAL ELECTIONS.—In carrying out special elections under this subsection, each State shall provide for the minimum required number of functioning and accurate voting systems and poll workers required in each precinct used on the day of the election, using a uniform and nondiscriminatory geographic distribution of such systems and workers taking into account the number of individuals residing within the precinct who are eligible to register to vote, and the level of voter turnout during previous elections held in the precinct.

Mr. CONYERS (during the reading). Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the motion to recommit be considered as read and printed in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. CONYERS)?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Michigan (Mr. CONYERS) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, my motion to recommit would simply require that each State provide a minimum required number of functioning and accurate voting machines and poll workers for each precinct on the day of any special election. I do this and offer the amendment so that we can avoid the misallocation of voting machines and poll workers that occurred last year in the Ohio Presidential election that led to lines of sometimes 10 hours and disenfranchisement of tens of thousands of voters.

Consider the following: In Franklin County in that State, 27 of the 30 wards with more than 2,800 machines per registered voter showed majorities for Bush while six of the seven wards with the fewest machines delivered the large margins for Kerry. They also found that election officials in Franklin County décided to make due with 2,906 machines even though their analysis showed that 5,000 machines were needed. In Columbus alone it is estimated that the misallocation of machines reduced the number of votes by up to 15,000 votes.

There is also an investigation that revealed the Franklin County election officials reduced the number of election voting machines assigned to downtown precincts and added them to suburban precincts. They used a formula based not on the number of registered voters but on past turnout. In the Columbus area, the result was that suburban precincts that supported Mr. Bush tended to have more machines per registered voter than those in the inner-city precincts that supported Mr. KERRY.

The Election Protection Coalition testified that more than half the complaints about the long lines they received came from Columbus and Cleveland and whether a huge proportion of the State's Democratic voters lived.

This should never happen again in an election in our Nation. It is unconscionable to stack the deck so that Americans are forced to wait in the rain in line while others are given the red carpet treatment.

Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as she may consume to the gentlewoman from California (Ms. WATERS).

Ms. WATERS. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. CONYERS) for allowing me a moment to speak on this issue.

This is very, very important. I would like to point out the fact that former Minority Leader Gephardt appointed me to chair a special committee on election reform of the Democratic Caucus. And I have traveled to at least four states talking to people about what had gone wrong in the elections in the 2000 election.

One of the things that we concentrated on was provisional ballots. And we wrote into the Help America Vote Act that if you went to a polling place and the name was not there, that you are to be given a provisional ballot no matter where you went. Little did I know that something had happened in the Help America Vote Act, perhaps, that allowed Ken Blackwell in Ohio to have a different law from everybody else on provisional ballots. And so thousands of people went to polling places and were told they could not vote because they were in the wrong precinct. That is not what we wrote into the law. So we had thousands of ballots not counted in Ohio because Mr. Ken Blackwell described his law a lot differently than we had framed the law in the Help America Vote Act.

That is not place perhaps in America with a law on provisional balloting that does not allow someone who swears that they are registered to vote to be able to vote.

I thank the gentleman for the opportunity to share this information at this important time.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself the balance of my time.

The motion to recommit would fix the problem raised by the gentlewoman from California (Ms. WATERS), at least for special elections under this bill.

I urge the support of the motion to recommit.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mrs. MILLER of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the motion to recommit.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentlewoman from Michigan (Mrs. MILLER) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mrs. MILLER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

The language in the motion to recommit is very similar to the language in the Help America Vote Act legislation, HAVA, as it is commonly called, that legislation being H.R. 533. In fact, the gentlewoman from Michigan (Mr. Conyers) is not the only Member who has proposed comprehensive election reform. A number of other bills have been introduced by Members on both sides of the aisle proposing amendments to the HAVA bill.

The Committee on House Administration has scheduled hearings on these issues, including in the State of Ohio I would say, and we will be considering all of these bills in due course.

Today is not the time nor is it the place to be debating election reform issues. We are here to provide for continuity and representation of this House and the American people. So let us focus on what needs to be done to provide for expedited special elections so that we can have a functioning House as soon as possible. There is a horrible, catastrophic attack.

Let us leave these other issues for a later day when they can be debated in the proper context.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. HASTERT), the Speaker of the House.

Mr. HASTERT. Mr. Speaker, our forefathers fought a revolution. They fought a revolution for freedom against a power that at that time was much greater than the sum of this Nation. They fought against private gentry.

George Mason said at the Constitutional Convention that "the people will be represented; they ought therefore to choose their representatives." That is a framework that has governed this body for more than 2 centuries. Today, even though times have changed, the spirit of Mason lives on. And with God's blessing we will never have to use this piece of legislation. But we have to seriously consider the issue of the continuity in Congress.

We have specifically designed authority to other Members of this body to call the House back into session should I not be here to do it. We have changed the nature of the House to allow it to function if Members are incapacitated.

Today we debate a bill that calls for the States to provide special elections if more than 100 Members are killed. And yes, even though we have provided for rules if Members are incapacitated, we have a constitutional responsibility to ensure the American people have full representation in this Congress.

Congress has always been for the people and by the people. And in keeping with the great traditions of our country, we need to keep it that way. Last Congress we overwhelmingly passed a very similar bill to the one we are debating today. It was improved by the Congress with various amendments, many from the other side of the aisle, which the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. NEY) has incorporated into this bill. We heard a desire to make sure that this bill specifically allows for primaries; that language is incorporated in this bill. And any good friend, the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. SHELTON), wanted to make sure that the military ballots from overseas were counted. We have incorporated that suggestion into this bill.

I discussed with the Democratic leader that another issue of increasing the number of days from 45 to 49, 7 weeks, to provide the 7 weeks for these special elections. I thought it was important to add a few more days. However, 60 days is too long a time for the framework of the national crisis because of our role under the War Powers Act.

The bill we had adopted last Congress with the support of 306 Members was a very good bill. The gentleman from Ohio (Mr. NEY) and the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. SENZIGER) have even a better bill this year, and I expect the same overwhelming bipartisan support.

In closing, we face a significant threat. What makes America great is that we can come together during times of national tragedy. And my point is that after September 11, partisan bickering was on the back burner, and we were able to come together and do great things for the American people.

Terrorists hate everything we stand for, especially our democracy. Their whole object is to disrupt and destroy. In the event of the unthinkable, this bill strikes a blow to the heart of the terrorists and allows this body to re-constitute itself as quickly as possible, therefore carrying on the spirit of Mason and of this great Nation.

I urge the defeat of the motion to recommit. I urge the passage of this bill.

Mrs. MILLER of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The motion to recommit. The question is on the motion to recommit.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion to recommit. The motion was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the noes appeared to have it.

RECORDED VOTE

Mr. CONYERS, Mr. Speaker, I demand a recorded vote.

The Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure ordered the bill reported on March 2 and is expected to file its report with the House on Monday, March 7.

Any Member wishing to offer an amendment should submit 55 copies of the amendment and one copy of a brief explanation of the amendment to the Committee on Rules up at H-312 of the Capitol by 1 p.m. next Tuesday, March 8. Members should draft their amendments to the text of the bill as reported by the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure which will be available for their review March 4 on the Website of both the Committee on Rules and the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure.

Members should use the Office of Legislative Counsel to ensure that their amendments are drafted in the most appropriate format. Members are also advised to check with the Office of the Parliamentarian to be certain that their amendments comply with the rules of the House.

LEGISLATIVE PROGRAM

(Mr. HOYER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Speaker, for the purpose of informing us of the schedule of the week to come, I yield to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. DELAY), the majority leader.

Mr. DELAY. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me the floor. Mr. Speaker, the House will convene on Tuesday at 2 p.m. for legislative business. We will consider several measures under suspension of the rules. A final list of these bills will be sent to Members' offices by the end of the week. Any votes left on these measures will be rolled until 6:30 p.m. On Wednesday and Thursday, the House will convene at 10 a.m. We will likely consider additional legislation under suspension of the rules, as well as the Transportation Equity Act: A Legacy for Users.

And, finally, I would like to note for all the Members that we are making a change to the schedule that was sent to offices at the beginning of the year. We do not plan to have votes next Friday, March 11.

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for that information. Let me say that I am pleased, and I know our side is and I am sure the gentleman's side is as well and I know the Governors and county officials throughout the country are pleased, to see that the transportation bill is on the floor. This was a bill, as the majority leader knows, that expired, I think, September 30, and we have done extensions since that time.

It is scheduled for 2 days on the calendar, as I understand, and we just heard the announcement of the Committee on Rules chairman that there may be limitations to amendments in the bill. In light of the fact that I know there are still some substantial questions, this bill was reported out on voice vote unanimously but with one of the most contentious issues, as I understand it, left unresolved in terms of border/donor States.

Can the majority leader amplify, perhaps, on what the Committee on Rules chairman said in terms of whether we will have general debate on one day and amendments on the next, or does he think he will start considering amendments on the first day of consideration.

Mr. DELAY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOYER. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. DELAY. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the gentleman's yielding to me. The gentleman is correct in that we really want this bill to move as quickly as possible, get it through the other body, because contract letting is seasonal, particularly in the northern States and that contract letting needs to be done. So we are working as hard as we can to get this bill done.

Since this bill is very similar to the reauthorization that was passed in the last Congress, I would expect that the Committee on Rules would develop a rule that was very similar to that one that was used when we considered this bill last Congress which if I recall, there were 23 amendments allowed under the rule, a manager's amendment. So we have to see what the Committee on Rules is going to do and see how we can divide the work between Wednesday and Thursday.

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for his response. And I think the gentleman is correct. There were a substantial number of amendments which I would hope that those Members on either side of the aisle who have substantive amendments to offer, in light of the fact that we have been waiting on this bill for some time, would have ample opportunity on either side of the aisle, and I appreciate the leader's focus on that.

Mr. Speaker, lastly, if I can, can the majority leader tell us what his thoughts are in terms of scheduling, we have 2 weeks left before the Easter work period, with reference to either the supplemental appropriation and/or the budget?

Mr. DELAY. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the gentleman's yielding to me. It is our anticipation, or I have been notified by the respective committees, that we will be considering the supplemental from the President and the budget that both committees expect to hold markups on those two bills next week, which would prepare us and give us plenty of time to have both of those bills on the floor the week prior to the Easter recess.

Mr. HOYER. So, Mr. Speaker, it would be his expectation that we would consider both those bills before the break?

Mr. DELAY. The gentleman is correct.

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the majority leader for his answers.
Mr. DeLay. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that when the House adjourns today, it adjourn to meet at noon on Monday, March 7, 2005; and further, when the House adjourns on that day, it adjourn to meet at 12:30 p.m. on Tuesday, March 8, 2005, for morning hour debate.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. Shimkus). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

DISPENSING WITH CALENDAR WEDNESDAY BUSINESS ON WEDNESDAY NEXT

Mr. DeLay. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the business in order under the Calendar Wednesday rule be dispensed with on Wednesday next.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

INCAPACITATED PERSON’S LEGAL PROTECTION ACT

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. Weldon) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. Weldon of Florida. Mr. Speaker, soon I will be introducing legislation to give incapacitated individuals their explicit due process rights of habeas corpus, thus prevent their death by removal of nutrition, hydration and medical treatment. The Incapacitated Person’s Legal Protection Act gives incapacitated persons the same rights of due process available to death row inmates.

Ten years after Terri’s unfortunate condition occurred, her husband moved to have the feeding tubes removed intending to end her life. This occurred after Terri received nearly $1.5 million in jury awards and legal settlements. Fortunately for Terri, her parents intervened against the decision and have stayed her death through legal maneuvering until last week.

On Friday, February 25, Judge George Greer issued an order to remove the nutrition and hydration of Terri on Friday, March 18 at 1 p.m. This order will initiate the starvation death of Terri. To my knowledge, it is unprecedented in law.

All through the Schiavo trial, Terri’s parents and husband have been afforded counsel, yet Terri has never been afforded independent counsel, in a matter that will result in her life or death. Terri has had no voice of her own in these legal proceedings, something so fundamental to every adult American, even convicted murderers.

The case of Terri Schiavo deserves a second look by an objective court. For example, despite the court’s pronouncement that she is in a persistent vegetative state, evidence exists to the contrary.

Terri is not in a coma as I would define it, and I am a physician. She is not on a respirator or other 24-hour-a-day medical equipment. Terri is responsive to stimuli, such as voices, touch and the presence of people. She can move her head and establish eye contact. Terri can smile, demonstrate facial expressions and cry. She can arch her back and move away or towards voices and people. Terri makes sounds and attempts to vocalize as a way of communication.

As a physician who has cared for people in comas and who were considered in a persistent vegetative state, I have some experience in determining the degree of incapacitation of disabled individuals, and it is a travesty to countenance the notion of putting her to death somehow because she is not able to speak.

Terri and similar incapacitated people should be afforded the same constitutional protection of due process as death row inmates whose lives hang in the balance in judicial proceedings. Because in cases like these, mistakes are not subject to correction. Terri and people similarly situated must have access to de novo review of their cases and representation, just like any death row inmate gets.

The Incapacitated Person’s Legal Protection Act, which I am going to introduce soon, explicitly recognizes in Federal law the due process protection of habeas corpus appeal for incapacitated individuals who are the subject of a court order to effect their death by removal of nutrition, hydration or medical treatment. It does not apply to circumstances where advanced medical directives are in effect. The Act simply provides a final avenue for review of the case to ensure that a incapacitated person’s constitutional rights of due process are maintained and that justice is done.

Now, we know that lawyers are going to file habeas corpus claims about this case, and that is not a surprise and nothing prohibits them from doing so. The Incapacitated Person’s Legal Protection Act is needed because the state of the law on this topic needs to be clarified.

These cases are typically reserved for criminal cases. In civil cases like Terri’s, the decision to even consider a habeas appeal is at the court’s discretion. The Constitution in the 14th Amendment, however, gives Congress the express authority to protect the life of any person by directing the judiciary with respect to the guarantee of due process and equal protection under the law. That is what the Incapacitated Person’s Legal Protection Act does. It tells the courts that the due process and equal protection rights of incapacitated persons are explicitly authorized under Federal habeas corpus statutes.

DEMOCRACY IN THE MUSLIM WORLD

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from California (Mr. Schiff) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. Schiff. Mr. Speaker, the terrorist attacks that were attacked this country on September 11th emerged from part of the world where oppression of popular will often finds its outlet in Jihadi extremism and hatred of the West, especially the United States.

Throughout much of the Muslim world, brittle, autocratic regimes jealously guard wealth and political power, while the vast majority of the citizens languish in poverty. Despite the Arab world’s vast oil wealth and its rich cultural and intellectual history, the region has languished, in large part, because its leaders refused to enact the liberalizations necessary to unleash the power of hundreds of millions of people.

After the 9/11 attacks, the President and other senior administration officials vowed to “drain the swamp” that birthed al Qaeda and other radical Islamists. Now, after two wars, thousands of casualties and hundreds of billions of dollars, the people of the Arab and greater Muslim world are beginning to drain the swamp on their own.

Last fall, the people of Afghanistan, who only 3 years ago were suffering under the medieval yoke of the Taliban, voted in large numbers in that country’s first presidential election, and later this year, they will return to the polls to select a new parliament.

In Iraq, the Iraqi people took concrete steps to end the Arafat era’s corruption and embrace of terrorism and elected Mahmoud Abbas as their new president.

Last month, in an inspiring act of collective courage, millions of Iraqis defied a vicious insurgency to cast ballots for a new national assembly that will draft a constitution for a permanent Iraqi government.

In just the past two weeks, we have seen the people of Lebanon respond to the savage car bombing that claimed the life of former prime minister Rafiq Hariri by peacefully calling for the restoration of Lebanese sovereignty. Lebanon’s “revolution” has already invited comparisons with Ukraine’s “orange revolution” that swept Viktor Yuschenko into power last December.

Today, Saudi Arabians voted in the second of three regional rounds of municipal elections, the kingdom’s first, and last Sunday President Mubarak of Egypt proposed a change to the Egyptian constitution that will provide for direct contested elections of president, and last, but not least, Ayman Nour, one of the few Egyptian politicians who have dared to challenge the regime has remained free.

Individually, these developments vary in significance. The Saudi elections, for example, are open only to men, and the Egyptian reforms could end up being an effort to fend off rather than promote democracy. Collectively, however, these stirrings of democracy could be the long-awaited beginning of a seismic shift in the politics of the Muslin world. If our national security will be enhanced.

For too long, American foreign policy in the Middle East rested on a Faustian bargain with the ruling elites. Even as the Middle Eastern regimes leaned toward populations that detested them, successive American administrations provided material and political support. As long as the rulers guaranteed the continued flow of reasonably priced oil, we were willing to ignore the turmoil bubbling beneath them.

To some extent, this policy was fueled by American policy makers’ belief that Arab and Islamic societies were somehow incompatible with democracy. It was also the product of a genuine fear of what democracy in the Arab world would mean for American influence in the region. The Iranian revolution of 1979 was seen as a harbinger of what could be the constrictions that would ensue throughout the region if American allied regimes loosened their grip.

After 9/11 and the explosive growth of Islamic radicalism throughout the Muslim world, we have come belatedly to the realization that the antidote for terrorism is democracy. Much of the hatred directed at the United States in the Arab world is a direct consequence of our support for despotic regimes.

The administration and Congress need to continue to push our friends in the region to do more to ensure that the tentative steps that we have seen do lead to a new birth of freedom in the Muslim world.

I am particularly concerned about Egypt and its 73 million people. Egypt is the intellectual, political and cultural heart of the Arab world. It is a long-standing American ally that has played a crucial role in the search for peace between Israel and its Arab neighbors. But even as President Mubarak and the Egyptian government have shown great leadership in the quest for peace, they have dragged their feet when it comes to the political and economic reform that is crucial if Egypt is to remain a regional leader.

Recently the Egyptian government arrested Ayman Nour, the leader of a small pro-democracy party in the Egyptian parliament. Nour’s arrest is widely seen as politically motivated and precipitated a decision by Secretary Rice to cancel a planned trip to Cairo this week.

I have introduced a resolution calling on Egypt to release Nour and embrace the recommendations of President Mubarak. As an important ally, we must not stand idly by and watch Egypt take steps that threaten not only democracy, but our own security.

Throughout the 20th Century, America fought to expand the reach of liberty and democracy, first against Nazism and fascism, and then against Soviet communism. Now with the dawn of the 21st Century, we are again faced with both the fundamental challenge to our core values and the opportunity to bring those values to millions of people. Mr. Speaker, we can and must both meet the challenge and seize the opportunity.

THREAT TO UNITED STATES
STILL VERY REAL

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from New York (Mr. FOSSIELLA) is recognized for 15 minutes.

Mr. FOSSIELLA. Mr. Speaker, the threat to the United States is still very real. Just yesterday it became public that one of the terrorists responsible for the Madrid train bombings had sketches of New York City’s Grand Central Station on his computer.

A few days ago it was reported that Osama bin Laden was caught urging some of his associates to take the threat to the United States once again. Clearly the threat to our country is real, and it is essential that we have a comprehensive strategy for distributing homeland security grant funding to confront it.

That is why today I am introducing the Responsible Funding For First Responders Act of 2005. The bill reforms the current formula used to distribute homeland security grant money.

Yesterday, our newly confirmed Homeland Security Secretary said, “I think we owe the American people a more focused and priorities driven” funding formula. This bill aims to address just that.

Over the past few years, we have gone a long way in fighting terrorism. Last year, Congress passed a meaningful intelligence reform which implements many of the 9/11 Commission’s recommendations. This was one recommendation that we did not address adequately.

The 9/11 Commission explicitly stated “homeland security assistance should be based strictly on assessment of risks and vulnerabilities.” This bill would put that recommendation, which I think is common sense to most Americans, into effect.

In introducing the bill, I wish to start the debate anew and begin working towards a meaningful first responders funding reform. Since September 11 homeland security funds have been distributed under a formula that requires a minimum of .75 percent to go to each State, and then the remainder is distributed on what we call a per capita basis.

The block grant formula, where most of the funding has originated, does not consider threat at all. This means that almost 40 percent of the money is distributed equally to each State as a result of that minimum, about $1.5 billion. Congress needs to do better.

This year the President’s budget once again distributes all the funds based on threat. His fiscal year 2006 budget request which distributes a little over $1 billion in State homeland security grants is based upon risks, threats, vulnerabilities, and unmet essential capabilities.

Let me say what this bill is not. This bill is not designed to pit one area of the country against another. It is designed. I think again speaking to the common sense and conventional wisdom of the American people, to identify where the vulnerabilities are, identify where the threats exist, identify where the risks are and send the money to those areas where it’s most needed.

Why New York City in particular, for example, I think is still a target, let us look what happened after the first bomber of the World Trade Center that took place in 1993.

In between the bombing in 1993 and the tragic day of September 11, there was a conspiracy to destroy the Holland and the Lincoln tunnels, the George Washington Bridge, the United Nation and the Main Federal Building in Lower Manhattan, as well as a plot to bomb the subway system. The plot was foiled at the last minute by New York City police officers who broke down the door of two individuals who were cutting finishing touches on the device.

Since then major media outlets in New York City were the subject of anthrax attacks. In February of 2003 a seasoned al Qaeda operative named Imran Faris was in New York City on a mission to destroy the Brooklyn Bridge. Faris fought alongside bin Laden, engaged in a battle which included the wholesale slaughter of Russian prisoners and helped supply all al Qaeda fighters more recently with sleeping bags, airline tickets, cash and cell phones.

Nearly 2 years after the destruction of the Trade Center, Faris was in New York City conducting surveillance on the Brooklyn Bridge. Faris reported back to his handlers that “the weather is too hot,” meaning that security was too tight for the plot to succeed. He was deterred this time.

New York City nevertheless remains a prime al Qaeda target.

Most recently, just before the 2004 Republican National Convention in New York City, two suspected terrorists were arrested for yet another plot to destroy the subway system, this time near Herald Square in midtown Manhattan.

I think it is in our national interest to move this process forward to a point that just makes sense. It is one thing for Congress to come together and commit on how much of the funding is distributed among the States and towns and villages and cities across the country, for example, agricultural funding or funding for our national security; but when it comes to the lives of the American people and the mil-ions of people who come to our shores annually, it is responsible and above all it is not a Democrat or Republican issue. It is just common sense to send the money where it is needed the most. That is what this bill seeks to do.

TALE OF TWO YOUNG MEN

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. DAVIS of Kentucky). Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. POE) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. POE. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to speak about two young men. They both grew up in Houston, Texas. They both grew up without any family support. They both were basically raised by others. They were both named Michael. And they both chose careers in the criminal justice system.

Michael Lopez chose in the criminal justice system the career of crime. He started committing violent crimes at the age of 11. He spent a lot of time in and out of the criminal justice system. He was a gang member, a drug abuser, committed numerous robberies against other juveniles, aregular, and a thug in his own community.

Michael Eakin also chose criminal justice as a career, but he chose it as a police officer. Their paths crossed on a quiet peaceful night in Houston, Texas, after Officer Eakin and his fellow gang members who were cruising Houston, Texas, looking for criminal opportunities.

When Officer Eakin stopped the vehicle, Lopez jumped from the vehicle, took off running and Officer Eakin made the decision to chase Michael Lopez. After capturing Lopez, Lopez pulled out a pistol, pointed it at point blank range and shot Officer Eakin, and then he fled in the darkness of the night.

Lopez was 17 and on probation for criminal offenses. Eakin was 24 and a rookie police officer. Lopez was charged with capital murder of a police officer. In Texas, a 17-year-old is an adult by state law for criminal law purposes and not a juvenile.

It is a long-established rule of law that the States determine the age of accountability for criminal law purposes. Not the Federal Government, not the Federal courts. I was the judge in the Lopez case, having been a judge for 22 years in criminal cases. A jury heard the case in my court. A jury found the defendant Michael Lopez guilty of capital murder of a police officer. Court TV even showed this on national television. The same jury unanimously found the defendant would be a continuing threat to society in the future. The jury unanimously found there was no mitigation of the death penalty. The sentence was death with Michael Lopez.

The defendant was assessed the death penalty by a jury in 6 hours. During sentencing I referred to the defendant as a street terrorist based upon the evidence in the case. On appeal, the highest court in Texas referred to the defendant as a mean little guy and upheld the death penalty.

Now the Supreme Court has gotten involved in these cases and declared once and for all that no one 17 or under can be executed for the crimes that they commit. Citing international court decisions and the so-called evolving United States Constitution, the Court yesterday struck down these types of cases live to four.

The Supreme Court of the United States should not look to foreign courts for guidance but to the United States Constitution because that is what they are sworn to uphold. The Supreme Court once again has discriminated in sentencing based upon the age of the defendant. Whether or not a person agrees or disagrees with the death penalty, whether or not a person feels the age of accountability should be 17 or 18 or 21, there is no precedent in law that the Supreme Court may arbitrarily say a 17-year-old is a mere child and an 18-year-old is an adult.

The Supreme Court has once again promoted the philosophy that America is becoming the land of excusable conduct in our criminal courts. There should be consequences for criminal conduct even for 17-year-olds.

The Supreme Court has replaced the law of the land with its own personal opinion and European thought. This is an affront to the rule of law, to the Constitution, to the 10th amendment. It is an affront to the peace officers in the United States, and it is an affront to Officer Michael Eakin and his fami-

GREEN RIVER KILLER

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 4, 2005, the gentleman from Washington (Mr. REICHERT) is recognized for 60 minutes as the designee of the majority leader.

Mr. REICHERT. Mr. Speaker, I am a new Member of this body, and I am proud and humble to serve the 8th District of the State of Washington. I am also honored and privileged today to address this body.

My first address is on a very serious note, but I think it is a necessary one for us to talk about because it affects and impacts the young women and children in our community. It is the future of our country.

For 33 years I had the privilege of serving in law enforcement in King County which is the Seattle area of Washington State. And I served in a number of different capacities, but in one of those capacities I served as the lead investigator in the most notorious serial killer case in this Nation's history.

Mr. Speaker, we had a monster who was stalking our young women and children in our community. These were young women and children who were lost; children who were afraid; who in some cases were driven from their homes by domestic violence, drug abuse, alcohol abuse, emotional and physical abuse. Sometimes, though, they were lured away from their homes by people who preyed on their weakness and their vulnerability. They were lured into an environment of street life where drugs and alcohol are rampant, where prostitution is rampant; and they were told they were going to live the life of luxury, fast money, fast cars, and freedom. Instead, their lives ended. They just ended. The promises for a better life by these predators were all lies.

Our community was gripped by fear by this monster who literally grabbed our children by the throat and snuffed out their lives, their hopes, and their dreams. This monster struck at the very hearts of our communities; our children.

And my purpose today is to stand before you, Mr. Speaker, to tell this story, to honor the victims so that we never forget the victims, to remind us of all the families who are still suffering the losses of their loved ones who have been sentenced to a life sentence without their loved ones.

Lastly, it is to recognize, Mr. Speaker, and officially thank those who worked so hard and so long to solve this case. The nearly 90 detectives in the King County Sheriff's Office which is the lead agency that worked this case for nearly 20 years, the Seattle Police Department, the Kent Police Department, the Washington State Patrol and the State Patrol Lab; the medical examiner's office, the FBI, scientific personnel, search and rescue, prosecutor's office in King County led by Norm Maleng, and the defense team.

I would be remiss, Mr. Speaker, if I did not mention that just last week, as most everyone is aware, the so-called BTK killer was arrested in Wichita, Kansas. I think this House should also recognize and congratulate the community and the law enforcement/criminal justice system for bringing that case to a close and bringing some answers to questions that the families of these victims have been asking for over 25 years.

These monsters are in our communities, and I want to tell the story briefly. Sometimes it takes me almost 3 hours to go through this, but I have only an hour, so you will get a brief overview of this case. Let me just tell you about the numbers.

Now, I was 31 years old when I started this case back in 1982 with the first victim. But 48 guilty pleas, 44 recovered victims. Six of the victims are unidentified, four are still missing.

This case was open for 7,500 days. Over 90-plus King County detectives worked on this case. 15,500 photographs were taken. Over 1,500 cassette tapes, over 10,000 items of evidence were collected. Over half a million pieces of paper were put together.

Twenty to 30 people worked full-time once the arrest was made in our office for about 6 months to complete the documents and the process that cost us nearly $1.2 million. There were 40,000 suspect tips, almost 13,000, actually 40,000 tip sheets on a variety of different leads, but almost 13,000 tips on different people as suspects.

Imagine working one murder case, having 10 suspects and trying to figure out who out of that 10 is that one person who committed the murder. We have 50 murders and nearly 13,000 suspects. And they ranged from attorneys to police officers to people who worked for the post office and truck drivers and iron workers and every walk of life that you could think of.

King County Sheriff's Office spent $2.8 million in 2002 on this case. The prosecutor's office spent a million and a half. The defense spent $2.5 million. There were 12 prosecutors that worked on this case, a combined team. There were almost 20 King County sheriffs deputies and detectives and civilians who worked on that case. After the arrested, the investigative team had about 16 team members to their effort.

And all of this for one monster, one defendant, one person who pled guilty to 48 lives. And it is, in my opinion, he has killed nearly 75, probably more than that.

King County, if you do not know, is in the State of Washington right on Puget Sound. The city of Seattle is the county seat. Green River runs south of Seattle through the countryside and toward the foot hills of the Cascade Mountains.

This case started on July 15, 1982, when the first body, Wendy Coffield, was found floating in the river south of Seattle with a ligature around her neck, a 15-year-old girl from our community.

On August 12, 1982, I was called to the river for the second body, for the first body was in the sheriff's jurisdiction. Debra Bonner was found floating in the river, and she had been strangled.

Three days later, I was called back to the river once again. A rafter had been floating down the river. He looked on the shore in amazement and thought he had found two mannequins. And as he floated down the river, he got closer and discovered that these mannequins, these images, were not mannequins but human bodies.

And as he looked up on the river bank there was a man standing there and there was a pickup truck parked at a turn-out. And the man on the river bank waved at the raft, drove away in his truck as the man on the raft waved goodbye.

The man on the raft then called the police department, I showed up, and as I was processing I found a third body on the river bank that we did not know about, that the rafter had not seen.

That man on the river bank was the man that we eventually arrested. And I am not going to say his name today, because I do not want to honor him by having his name mentioned in this very historical place and place of honor.

The evidence we collected off of Wendy Coffield and some of these early victims was very important. This evidence was collected in 1982. It came together in 1987. In 1987 we finally got enough evidence together where we were able to search the home of the person that we finally arrested. A lot of things, pieces of the puzzle started to come together. We collected hundreds of lists. We collected lists of people who were arrested for patronizing prostitutes. We arc diseged lists of people who actually gathered lists of people who were arrested for assaulting women during that period of time. We collected lists of people who were known to fish in the Green River, who had fishing licenses. We collected lists of people who worked in the area, who lived in the area, who were stopped by the police in that area. So we collected list after list after list.

And back in those days we had no computers. You think about 1982 when I started this case, we had no computers. There was no such thing as DNA. There was no automated fingerprint identification system, which is an automated system that compares fingerprints today. People are aware of that. In fact, in 1982 I was managing this case on 3 by 5 note cards on a Rolodex file. And a lot of times when I mention the Rolodex file, especially in junior high or high school classes, a very genuine question is asked, Sheriff, what is a Rolodex file? That is how far technology has come.
This case was one of hard work, dedication, commitment, and let me tell you, just pure frustration. The detectives, investigators, scientists, and the community involved in helping to solve this case never gave up. They were dedicated to solving this case, to finding the person responsible for this case.

There were so many great suspects in this case. We followed one suspect for nearly 3 or 4 months. We discovered that as we looked at each one of these suspects, that the FBI had provided us to a certain degree were so interesting and were such good suspects that they would use and could use our resources for weeks or months at a time.

In 1982, after we found the three bodies on Sunday, on that following Monday, August 16, we formed the first task force of 25 detectives within the sheriff's office. We thought we had six victims and we worked through 1982. And by the fall of 1982 the administration already started to talk about cutting back and reducing our effort because they felt we had identified the suspect.

By the end of 1982, when we thought we had six victims, we actually had 16 young women killed. We did not even know about the other 10 yet.

In 1983 we spent most of our time collecting bodies, sad to say. Reports of found skeletal remains were coming in continuously. And so we fell behind in following up our tips. And finally, by the end of 1983, a new sheriff was appointed and he decided, you know what, it is time to do something. It is time to investigate this case properly.

He brought a task force together in January of 1984. It was called the enhanced task force. Because by the end of 1983 we thought we had 13 victims, when in reality we had 27 women killed. So we put together a task force made up of FBI and some of the agencies that I had listed earlier, to nearly come to a number of 80 investigators and personnel who were working on this case together almost 24 hours a day, 7 days a week.

And as this case went on, we discovered more bodies. We discovered a body of a young woman who was 9 months pregnant who met this killer on the streets. And here, stop and think about this for a minute. Some people ask why screaming. There is nothing that calls in our society.

In our society.

For prostitution have picked the most sons. Men who are preying on young women killed. We did not even know about the other 10 yet.

That evidence came together and identified a suspect and we arrested this man on November 30, 2001. We had him on four counts.

When we arrested him, we drove up to his place of work, where he worked for 31 years. He was married for 13 years to his wife, and he was a member of the community. The women he killed, they were found in his locker at work, which still had microscopic paint spheres.

We were able to charge him with, and that evidence confirmed him back. We drove up to him and we said, welcome to the United States. We are looking for this woman. We were looking for one of four women connected with the Green River cases, and he shrugged his shoulders and he said, okay. He got into the police car and we took him to jail. He was not upset. It was not a big deal. I share this with you to share a little of his personality. He is a psychopath, a pathological liar, and has no remorse whatsoever about the lives that he took. The women he killed, he killed because he could, and that is what his answer was to that question. When we arrested him, we spent 6 months interrogating him to try to pull out every piece of evidence and all information that we could.

Those three other cases we were able to charge him with, and that evidence came from microscopic paint spheres. Those paint spheres were collected in 1982. Let me give one example.

I mentioned first the body that took 6 years to find. In September of 1982, a young woman was missing. We found her body 6 years later. And as we were processing that scene, we found a piece of cloth at that site where she was buried. It was decomposing, and it decomposed to the point where if you were to try and lift it with your fingers, it would crumble between your fingertips and onto the ground. We collected that, put it together, and we saved it.

In 2002, when the science again was to the point where they could find those microscopic spheres and compare them to the paint at a trucking company where this suspect worked as a truck painter for 31 years, we were able to take that paint from that decomposing piece of cloth and the paint spheres from a ligature that was on a victim who was floating in the river. One might assume that the evidence on the victim had been washed away, but it still had microscopic paint spheres. We collected those, have them examined by the scientists.

Those microscopic paint spheres in 1987 were also discovered in his locker. So we have a connection between three victims who had microscopic paint spheres attached to them, and we also had microscopic paint spheres that were found in his locker at work, which connected him back.

Once we had seven cases on him, his answer was to that question. When we arrested him, we spent 6 months interrogating him to try to pull out every piece of evidence and all information that we could.

Once we had seven cases on him, his attorneys quickly came to us and said we want to talk to you. We were hoping for that, and I will tell you why. Most people might say this man, if anyone, and I would agree with this, if anyone deserved the death penalty, this man deserved the death penalty. But one of the things that had happened over the years as we worked with the families is we had become friends with the family members. We were their link to their loved ones. They are all asking, who is my daughter? Is she alive? People were still hoping their daughter could be found. If my daughter is dead, who killed her and why? And, Mr. Speaker, I would say that every one of us in this room, we say I want to know. I would want to know. I would want someone to talk to the guy and find out; find out why and where my daughter is buried. So we did.

We had choices of going forward with seven cases and following that through the court system. We had seven strong cases. But what if he was found not guilty? Stranger things have happened. What if he was found guilty and we went to the penalty phase and the jury decided to spare a girl with out-parole. We only had seven cases solved.

We decided to take a chance and interview this monster, and we spent 6 months interviewing him to pull out every piece of information and fact that we could about every one of these cases. The last day that I talked to him was on December 31, 2003, before he was sent to prison. I spoke to him for about an hour, and I forget what he said to me, the last thing he said. He said, I have killed 71 and you are too stupid to find the others. And it is my belief, as I said earlier, he has probably killed near 80.

So now you have an idea of the difficulty of this case. I have really only scratched the surface of how tough this case was. But the importance of bringing this case to the floor today, Mr. Speaker, is that we must never forget the victims. We must never forget the families whose pain still is being endured, today and we must always be able to say thank you to the men and women in law enforcement, the criminal justice system, and those who are in the forensic science field coming up with new and innovative ways every day to help law enforcement solve these cases, cases like the BTK case.

And then, as a reminder, we need to stop and think about why these young ladies were killed. I mentioned earlier some of the reasons, but what can we do about it? Are we willing to do anything about it? Yes, there are people out there working with young people on the street, working with young people who are on drugs and alcohol and we are trying to make a difference there, but it has to start earlier.

One of the places that does that in Seattle, just south of Seattle in a small town called Kent, where I grew up, is a place called the Pediatric Intensive Care Center. This facility takes in babies who have been born to drug-addicted mothers, some of these mothers who have been on the street. These babies are placed into homes where they have a chance to live a life, a real life, the life that I talked about earlier: A life of hope, a life with dreams for those little girls who have dreams.

And you know what, it is our duty, Mr. Speaker, to take this case and make an example of this Nation, to protect those dreams, to make sure that the hopes and dreams of our children are not stolen away by something we might do at home and not stolen away by someone who lures away a child or a teenager, or compromises a better life somewhere else. It is our responsibility to step up and act.

People talk about human trafficking, and it is an international problem. Human trafficking is a problem right here in this country. It happens on our Nation’s streets every day. I hope to join with my colleagues here in Congress to begin to make a difference in the lives of our children so that we can protect them and they can enjoy a life of freedom and safety.

I want to end, Mr. Speaker, by reading a list of each of the victims whose lives were taken by this monster in the northwest:

Marcia Fay Chapman; Cynthia Jean Hinds; and Opal Charmaine Mills. She’s the one I found on the river bank.

Carol Ann Christensen, Wendy Lee Coffield, Gisele Ann Lovvorn, Debra Lynn Bonner, Marcia Fay Chapman, Cynthia Jean Hinds, Opal Charmaine Mills, Terry Rene Milligan, and Mary Bridget Meesan. She was the one 9 months pregnant.

Debra Lorraine Estes, Linda Jane Rule, Denise Darcel Bush, Shwandra Leea Summers, Shirley Marie Sherrill, Colleen Renee Brockman, Alma Ann Smith, Dolores Williams, Gail Lynn Mathews, Andrea Childers, Sandra Kay Gabbert, Kimm-Kai Pitsor, Marie Malvar, Carol Christensen, Martina Authorlee, Cheryl Wims, Yvonne Antosh, Carrie Rois, Constance Elizbeth Naon, Kelly Marie Ware, Tina Thompson, April Buttram, Debbie Abernathy, Tracy Winston, Maureen Sue Feneey, Mary Sue Bello, Pammy Avent, Delise Plager, Kimberly Nelson, Lisa Yates, Mary West, Cindy Smith, Patricia Barczak, Roberta Hayes, Marta Reeves, Patricia Yellow Robe.

And then there are four others who have not been identified: Unidentified victim number ten, unidentified victim number sixteen, unidentified victim number seventeen, and unidentified victim number twenty.

DELETIONS OF SPONSORS FROM PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 7 of rule XII, sponsors were deleted from public bills and resolutions as follows:

H.R. 25: Mr. Davis of Kentucky.
The Senate met at 9:30 a.m. and was called to order by the President pro tempore (Mr. STEVENS).

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senate will be led in prayer this morning by our guest chaplain, Rev. Kenneth Leal Harrington of Hope United Church of Christ in Alexandria, VA.

PRAYER
The guest Chaplain offered the following prayer:

Let us pray.

Gracious and loving God of all people, we give You thanks for the gift of this day, for all the opportunity it holds to know and embrace Your love. You have given us a world filled with diversity so that we might never forget there are varied ways of knowing You. We pray along with the evangelist John, that we might love one another because You have first loved us.

In this season of repentance You offer us freedom and liberation from our mistakes and You set us on a path of new life. For this gift we give You thanks. Teach us to seek You in all times of our life and to always put You first. Help us never forget that You are the God of second chances.

We pray today for our Senators and the awesome task You have given them in this service to our great country.

You have called people throughout the history of our Nation to come to this room and make the hard decisions that will ensure peace and prosperity for all. For those You have called to be here in this moment in time, we ask that You remind them of the need for humility, compassion, and truthfulness so that they might accomplish the task that is before them. Give them the gift of Your wisdom and integrity that will guide them in their discussions, debates, and dialogues. Help them to recall that in all circumstances it is Your Holy Spirit that guides them.

We offer this prayer in Your Name that unites more than it divides. Amen.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE
The PRESIDENT pro tempore led the Pledge of Allegiance, as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

RESERVATION OF LEADER TIME
The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, the leadership time is reserved.

The Senator from Hawaii is recognized.

THANKING THE GUEST CHAPLAIN
Mr. AKAKA. Mr. President, I thank our visiting chaplain, the Rev. Kenneth L. Harrington, for giving the opening prayer this morning, and Chaplain Black who joined me to make this possible.

Rev. Ken Harrington is the popular and beloved, respected and well-credentialed pastor of Hope United Church of Christ in Alexandria, my church away from home. Ken is a graduate of the State University of New York, Wesley Theological Seminary in Washington, DC, and the Seminary of Drew University in New Jersey.

Hope Church has been my church away from home for three decades. It was my good fortune to be invited to the church many years ago by my late and cherished friend, Mahina Bailey, and his dear wife, Linda. Mahina was a Hawaiian born in Hawaii, who spent his adult life here.

Over the years, I have gone to many services at Hope and have always been uplifted by the sermons, and since 2000, by the inspiring sermons delivered by Reverend Harrington. Hope Church is a family-friendly church, dedicated to teaching the values of tolerance and inclusivity.

You can actually see this reflected on the diverse faces of its congregation, the result no doubt of the sincerity of its message of inclusivity. The diversity of its congregation is so much like mine at home. Together with inspirational sermons come seeds for thought to be thought through and digested, and practiced in daily life. Foremost among these thoughts, in my mind, is how we can make this a better world for all of us.

I think this is particularly true for Members of Congress in whom a great trust has been placed by our constituents.

As we go through on a daily basis to achieve the greatest good for the greatest number, and have succeeded for the most part but been frustrated at times on issues so dear and right in our hearts, it is good to open our daily session with a prayer and have the spiritual support and guidance of a divine being, to each from his or her own faith.

To end on a lighter note with a ray of optimism for the passage of bills that are near and dear to our hearts, let me say that with all the seriousness that the mission of a church involves, intertwined in its spiritual voyage are social programs. One of Hope’s most popular social events is its annual luau, complete with Hawaiian food and entertainment.

An oversold event every year where congregants and friends thank the Lord for his bounty.

Reverend Harrington, thank you for being here this morning and thank you for your stewardship of Hope United Church of Christ.

RECOGNITION OF THE MAJORITY LEADER
The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The majority leader is recognized.

ORDER OF BUSINESS
Mr. REID. Would the distinguished majority leader yield for a question?

Mr. FRIST. I yield.
Mr. REID. Through the Chair: to my distinguished friend, at 9:45 or thereabouts, we are supposed to talk on the mad cow resolution before the Senate. We have no morning business, as I understand it. I am not going to be here, but I would have a standing objection to any morning business. We have had very few amendments completed on the bankruptcy matter. Maybe the time on morning business could be yielded off the resolution in opposition to that.

It is my understanding the Senator from Iowa is here to speak in morning business.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Five minutes on the beef resolution because I have to go to a committee meeting.

Mr. REID. Fine. I want to make sure we do not get into extended time on morning business because we do not have time.

Mr. Frist. Mr. President, I understand the Senator from Iowa will speak on the resolution. For scheduling purposes we believe that statement even if it is before 9:45. Otherwise, as we have discussed, we will proceed after my leader statement to Senator Grassley and then on to the resolution.

SCHEDULE

Mr. Frist. Mr. President, this morning following the leader time we will proceed to consideration of Senate Joint Resolution 4, which is a disapproval resolution relating to a Department of Agriculture rule regarding Canadian cattle. The agreement reached last night provides for up to 3 hours of debate on the resolution prior to a vote. We hope to be able to yield back some of that debate time and vote earlier so we can resume consideration of the bankruptcy bill for further progress.

Last night’s order also allows for two more blocked votes on bankruptcy-related amendments; therefore, we will have three votes today, sometime around noon, depending on the amount of time consumed for the disapproval resolution. In other words, we hope as much of that can be yielded back as possible after debate on the resolution.

Once those votes are completed, I expect the Senate will stay on the bankruptcy bill through the day and possibly into the evening. We will continue this afternoon and into the evening as necessary to move toward passage of this bill. We have made great progress on the bill thus far. We had five amendments yesterday. We look forward to many amendments today so we can bring this very soon to a resolution. By the end of today, I hope we will have some indication as to when we can complete the bankruptcy legislation.

Members should plan their day today around what will be a very busy session today. I think we will have a lot of business in all likelihood tomorrow, we will not be having rollcall votes tomorrow. We have a lot of work to do.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Mr. Frist. Mr. President, I have a brief statement on an issue that is receiving a lot of attention, a lot of work, and a lot of engagement, both in the Senate and the House of Representatives, by the President of the United States and lawmakers across America. It is on Social Security.

When the 109th Congress convened, I stated that our mission in this Congress over the next 2 years would be to govern with meaningful solutions. Stepping up on the floor of the Senate, we made a fast start, very effective start, confirming the President’s Cabinet and enacting, 2 weeks ago, class action legislation. We are making good progress on the bankruptcy legislation, as I just mentioned, and very soon we will be turning our attention to writing the Government’s spending blueprint for the coming year; that is, governing with meaningful solutions.

This Congress, the time that activity is going on in the Chamber, is tackling many problems and will be tackling these problems in the weeks and months ahead, including Social Security. Whacked into this body every day, whether it is working in our own caucuses or conference or in committees.

Social Security, a critically important, great program which does serve as the cornerstone of support for senior citizens, now faces challenges that threaten its long-term stability and well-being. The facts are there. The facts are crystal clear. We are grounded in demographics that were defined two generations ago. Those demographics cannot be changed.

What the facts lead to is that in 3 years, the baby boomers arrive on the Social Security rolls. That will begin the process of drawing rigid lines in the sand. Thus, we encourage people to continue the discussion, the debate, the understanding of the issues and the nature of the problem.

Fourth, together with the President, we agree that we should act this year and not put it off to the future.

Those who insist there is no problem, I simply say, look at the facts. As people increasingly look at the facts—and we are seeing the response around the country—people see the problem is real, that it is significant, and that it is growing.

For those who say we do not need any action, well, if you have a problem that is growing, it is much easier to act now, to take some medicine to cure the problem, than to have some radical surgery in the future.

We need to test the ideas with regard to the scope of the problem and the ideas for solutions in that crucible of public debate. We need to put them to a vote. We must let the people ultimately judge.

I say all this so people will know that our majority is hard at work, every day, on this vital issue. In consultation with the administration and the House of Representatives, we will continue to govern with those meaningful solutions that will make a difference in the lives of our seniors. The assurances of Social Security should be guaranteed. To be able to guarantee those assurances, we must diagnose the problem, and then we must act. We must govern with meaningful solutions, and that is exactly what this Congress will do.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Iowa seek recognition?

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, with the permission of the Senator from Georgia, I yield myself 5 minutes.
Mr. CHAMBLISS. No objection. The President pro tempore. The Senator is recognized for 5 minutes.

JOINT RESOLUTION ON DISAPPROVAL

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I rise to speak on the resolution that comes before us disapproving the actions of the Department of Agriculture on the importation of Canadian beef into the United States. But in doing so, I do not denigrate the efforts that are being made to have a debate on a legitimate public policy issue, but to put it in context.

First, from the standpoint of my chairmanship of the Senate Finance Committee with jurisdiction over international trade, I think this is something for which we have developed policies over the last couple decades, where we have worked very hard to see that certain rights can be preserved, but the key word in the act is “safeguard.”

One, probably basic to this debate, is obviously the sovereign right of any country to make sure that it does not in any way allow products into the country that would in any way hurt the health and safety of the consumers of that particular country. I think every trade agreement takes that into consideration.

Within the last 10 or 15 years, we have worked very hard and have included in trade agreements rules concerning sanitary and phytosanitary measures. These rules require that science, as opposed to political science, be the basis upon which we base decisions as to whether a product is safe to enter the U.S. market.

So I hope during this debate that we keep in mind that we do have commitments to rely on science when making determinations as to whether products are safe. Hopefully, each country respects that, particularly the United States, being a leader in the rule of law in international trade, ought to do that. But we expect every country that comes under the WTO to do exactly the same, and the same holds with other trade agreements. We also, of course, reserve the right to make sure our food is safe.

For the debate we are in now, I hope we remember that if it had not been for mad cow disease in Canada, there would never be any such discussion before Congress over a period of time we had imports of beef from Canada, and we have been exporting our red meat and other food products to Canada. So if we had not had mad cow disease in Canada, then we would not be having this debate.

So when it comes to the issue of whether mad cow disease is an issue with Canadian beef coming into the country, then let’s remember that decision ought to be made strictly on the sound science of whether that meat is safe. If we allow it to be a political decision in place of a scientific decision as to whether Canadian beef should come into the country, then, of course, our purity in international trade is going to be questioned by other countries.

The second point is that, during this very same period of time when we have been having this problem with Canada as to whether their meat is safe to come into the country, we have also been trying to negotiate with the Japanese, and the Japanese and other countries are not taking our beef. We have been working over the last several months to get Japan to take our beef based upon our following the sanitary and phytosanitary rules, on a scientific basis, for making sure our meat is safe for the Japanese consumers. We do not want to get ourselves into a position where we are going to ignore the science of the safety of our meat in Canada versus the Japanese.

The Presiding Officer. (Ms. Murkowski.) The Senator’s time has expired.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Madam President, I will finish that sentence.

Mr. CHAMBLISS. I am happy to yield the Senator an additional 30 seconds.

Mr. GRASSLEY. We do not want to get ourselves in a position of having the Japanese say to our meat is not safe even though it is shown to be it is shown to be safe based on sound science. Since we want our beef to go to Japan because it is safe, then, obviously, if meat is safe coming in from Canada, it has to be received as well.

PROVIDING FOR CONGRESSIONAL DISAPPROVAL OF THE RULE SUBMITTED BY THE DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE RELATING TO RISK ZONES FOR INTRODUCTION OF BOVINE SPONGIFORM ENCEPHALOPATHY.

The Presiding Officer. Under the previous order, the Senate will proceed to the consideration of S.J. Res. 4, which the clerk will report by title.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A joint resolution (S.J. Res. 4) providing for congressional disapproval of the rule submitted by the Department of Agriculture under chapter 8 of title 5, United States Code, relating to risk zones for introduction of bovine spongiform encephalopathy.

The Presiding Officer. Under the previous order, there will be up to 3 hours for debate equally divided.

The Senator from Georgia.

Mr. CHAMBLISS. Madam President, I rise today in opposition to the resolution and in support of the rule as proposed by the U.S. Department of Agriculture. I do this, first of all, with great appreciation of the efforts of my colleagues to bring this resolution forward.

But I must encourage my colleagues to vote against this resolution. This is not the time to pull the plug on a rulemaking process that is rooted in available science and, instead, to be guided by the concerns that seem to be less about science than about trade advantages.

The illustrious chairman of the Finance Committee went into great detail about the trade issues and the fact that the rule change is based on sound science. That is a lot of what I want to talk about initially this morning.

I think we must understand exactly what the resolution seeks to disapprove of today. On January 4, 2005, the U.S. Department of Agriculture published its final rule regarding further reopening of the U.S. border for beef imports from beef importing countries. The rule determined Canada as the first “minimal-risk region” for bovine spongiform encephalopathy, otherwise known as BSE. I will not try that long word again. We are going to call it BSE. It is due to become effective on this Monday, March 7, 2005.

The original rule would have allowed bone-in beef from cattle of any age and live cattle under 30 months of age.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture conducted two rounds of public comments and received comments on the proposed rule. Over a period of months, USDA considered these comments, and responses were published with the final rule. The final rule establishes criteria for geographic regions to be recognized as presenting minimal risk of introducing BSE into the United States.

USDA utilized the OIE, which is the International Office of Epizootics, the international body that deals with animal diseases worldwide. As this will be referred to as the OIE. The USDA utilized the OIE guidelines, which recommend the use of risk assessment to manage human as well as animal health risks of BSE, as a basis in developing final regulations defining Canada as a minimal-risk country.

The final rule places Canada in the minimal-risk category and defines the requirements that must be met for the import of certain ruminants and ruminant products from the United States.

The OIE definition, a minimal-risk region can include a region in which animals have been diagnosed with BSE but where sufficient risk mitigation measures are in place to reduce the likelihood of the disease’s introduction into the United States.

On January 2, 2005, Canada confirmed its second domestic case of BSE, and a third case 9 days later. The USDA sent a technical team to Canada on January 24, 2005, to investigate and receive answers from the USDA definition, a minimal-risk region can include a region in which animals have been diagnosed with BSE but where sufficient risk mitigation measures are in place to reduce the likelihood of the disease’s introduction into the United States.

On February 9, 2005, Secretary Johanns announced USDA would delay the implementation of that part of the rule allowing for older bone-in beef—that is beef in excess of 30 months old—because the technical team’s investigation in Canada would not be complete by March 7.
The current rule now allows imports from Canada of bone-in beef and live cattle under 30 months of age intended for immediate slaughter.

On January 24 of this year, USDA sent a team to Canada to assess the adequacy of Canada’s current ruminant feed ban and cattle import controls. On January 26, USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service (APHIS) published their report, and in this report USDA stated:

[T]he inspection team found that Canada has a robust inspection program, that over-all compliance with the feed ban is good, and that the feed ban is reducing the risk of transmission of BSE in the Canadian cattle population.

Furthermore, the report notes the obvious fact that:

[T]he Canadian feed ban is not substantially different than the U.S. feed ban.

Those who want to seriously question the adequacy of the Canadian BSE controls should keep in mind that Canada almost perfectly mirrors the controls in place in the United States. The controls for BSE in the United States are sufficient and, according to all the data available, the similar controls in Canada are also sufficient.

We should keep in mind also that the question regarding Canadian beef and cattle imports is not a food safety issue. I repeat, it is not a food safety issue. It is an animal health issue. That is what we are talking about today.

BSE is not spread by contact between people or animals. Safeguards are in place in both the United States and Canada to ensure that no potentially infectious material would ever make it into the human food supply, period.

Internationally accepted science maintains that the removal of certain specified risk materials that contain the prions that cause BSE eliminates the disease’s infectivity. Canada has adopted SRM removal requirements that are virtually identical to current U.S. regulations.

In addition, while the Canadians do not view tonsils in cattle under 30 months as SRMs, the U.S. requires that all meat exported from Canada to the United States have the tonsils removed pursuant to U.S. regulations.

Finally, the Food Safety Inspection Service, FSIS, has audited a number of Canadian plants and found them to be in compliance with U.S. BSE requirements, including SRM and small intestine removal requirements.

Since all potentially infectious materials are removed from every animal old enough to theoretically exhibit the disease, both in the United States and Canada, it should be clear that this is an animal health debate only. We are all committed to maintaining the highest standards of human health protection. We have those already today, and we will still have those standards after this rule takes effect.

Regarding the issue of animal health, the NCBA Delegation concluded:

The Canadian feed industry appears to be in compliance with the feed ban, based on visual inspections and multiple annual audit reports.

They also concluded that Canada’s BSE surveillance and proposed import requirements related to animal health were sufficient to protect the U.S. cattle herd, if the border with Canada is opened even further.

While we would never want to formulate U.S. policy merely based on the practices of another country, it is important to note that domestically produced beef consumption in Canada is up, not down. It is clear that Canadians are not shipping beef to us that they don’t choose to eat themselves.

In 2003, the last year for which numbers are available, Canadian beef consumption increased 5 percent to 31 pounds per person per year. Indications are that consumption in 2004 will be just as strong if not stronger. We can be confident that the beef exports from Canada, presently underway and the ones proposed by USDA’s rule don’t constitute dumping unwanted product in our market but are composed of the same beef that Canadian consumers recognize as wholesome and are buying in increasing quantities.

In the past, a large percentage of Canadian cattle came to the U.S. processing plants for further value-added processing and to provide sufficient livestock numbers to keep in business many U.S. plants near the northern border. Since the closure of the U.S. border to Canadian beef, the Canadian processing capacity increased by 22 percent in 2004 alone.

This means that those processing jobs and all the added carcass value are now increasingly in Canada and no longer in the United States. This may have especially significant impact on U.S. processors in the Pacific Northwest who have relied on Canadian cattle for years. In recent months, several U.S. companies have announced that they are suspending operations or reducing hours of operation due to the tightening cattle supplies and lack of an export market. If we resume Canadian bone-in slaughtered and bone-in carcasses, then their meat will still come to the United States as boneless cuts because that is already happening with or without this rule. But the added value and jobs that could be in the United States will increasingly be kept in Canada.

Agricultural trade is vital to maintaining a robust agricultural economy in the United States. The future of agriculture in this country, the future of ranching depends upon our ability to export the finest quality of agricultural product of anybody in the world. As the world’s largest trading partner, we must base our trade decisions on science and evidence. We have the most to lose when non-tariff trade barriers are enacted.

USDA has made resumption of international trade in U.S. beef a high priority. The United States and Japan had considered consistent and agreed that the trade in beef between the two countries should resume given certain conditions and modalities. We have to remember that our beef exporting trade with Japan has been discontinued due to the fact that we found one cow in the United States with BSE, although it turns out that cow originated in Canada and came into the United States.

Japan is one of our largest markets, and for agriculture, it is a critical market that we can no longer open. USDA is in the midst of negotiations today for the reopening of that market. Taiwan has also agreed in principle to resume imports of U.S. beef and beef products. Removal of restrictions by some of our major Asian trading partners is on the horizon.

In 2003, we exported $1.3 billion worth of beef products to Japan, $314 million worth of beef to South Korea, and $331 million to Canada. In 2004, after the Taiwan issue was put to rest by the United States, we exported essentially zero dollars’ worth of beef products to Japan and South Korea and $98 million worth of beef to Canada. These countries are aware of our rulemaking and are watching how we address this issue with Canada. We have a huge stake in seeing worldwide trade in beef resume on the basis of sound science rather than on trade protectionism.

Make no mistake, we are sending a very powerful message today with our actions on their plant inspection. If all of our trading partners. For countries prohibiting beef imports from the United States, whether we continue to adhere... to sound science in our dealings with Canada could influence their future actions toward our beef. Canada has met our minimal risk standards, and we must adhere to the policy dictates of sound science or face others using arbitrary standards toward us.

Currently, there is a suit filed in U.S.
district court in Billings, MT, challenging USDA's BSE minimal risk region rule. Yesterday, after a hearing, a temporary injunction was granted staying the implementation of the final rule, allowing the two parties to sit down and agree to a schedule for a trial which must take place in the short term because of this being a temporary injunction. At this point in time it would be wise to allow the court proceeding to play out. It would be premature to pass this resolution and interfere with the operations of that court. We can always come back after the judicial proceedings are finished and express our disapproval. It is appropriate to allow the third branch of Government to finish their review of this rule, and we should not usurp the judiciary on this matter.

In summary, according to the best science available in our hands today, further opening of the U.S. border to Canada's bone-in beef and cattle under 30 months of age does not pose a serious threat to the U.S. beef herd. It certainly does not increase the risk of human BSE exposure. Recent evaluations of the Canadian cattle industry by the NCBA indicate that there is not a wall of cattle that will flood into the U.S. market from Canada should this rule go into effect.

The Canadian Government, USDA, and the NCBA have all reviewed the Canadian BSE safeguards and found them sufficiently robust and protective for trade to be expanded as this rule proposes. Beef exported from Canada has to meet the same science-based standards that have been successfully protecting our consumers and beef producers for many years.

It has been stated before—and I repeat—that Americans are blessed with the most abundant, affordable, and safest food supply in the world. The action we take today will not make our food supply safer. It merely enforces and encourages the actions of those who would restrict trade with measures not related to sound science.

I encourage my colleagues to say yes to sound science by saying no to this resolution today.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Ensign). The Senator from North Dakota.
Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, I thank the Chair and the chairman of the Agriculture Committee. I respect the chairman of the committee, but on this issue we have a profound difference.
Let me alert my colleagues and their staffs who are watching, this is going to be a long vote. Unfortunately, I spend 3 hours on this issue this morning because we are operating under special procedures. But let every colleague of mine understand: They are going to be responsible for the votes they cast today. The risk that is being run here is significant.

Let me remind my colleagues what happened in Europe when mad cow disease got loose. One hundred forty-hundred eighty people died in England alone. Nearly 5 million head of livestock were slaughtered in that country. They found 183,000 head that were infected, and they believe there were 2 million head of livestock infected. It is important to make sure we are not able to complete tests on because of the magnitude of the crisis.

This vote may be critically important to the health of consumers and to the health of an entire industry. Make no mistake. When the question is science, that is precisely what this debate is about. Is, in fact, science being used by our neighbors to the north or are they simply putting regulations on the books that are not enforced?

The truth is clear and the facts will demonstrate conclusively, Canada is not enforcing their own regulations that are based on sound science. But if you don't enforce the regulations, if you don't do the inspections, what does it do but cause us to have on the books regulations that are based on sound science if they are not enforced?

I introduced S. J. Res. 4 on February 14 pursuant to the Congressional Review Act. It is a resolution to disapprove of the final rule produced by USDA that designates Canada as a minimal risk region for BSE or mad cow disease.

Let's review the facts. Canada already has four known cases of mad cow disease. That is not speculation. That is not based on some wondering about what is happening in Canada. That is based on facts, known cases. In addition, they have one case of a cow imported from England positively tested for BSE. Since the European outbreak, scientists from around the world have engaged in efforts to learn more about the disease. They have developed methods to test, control, and eradicate BSE. Through research and responsibility for animal health, known as the OIE, experts have designed science-based standards for the safe trade of beef products and live cattle from countries that have, or may have, BSE.

In particular, because BSE is transmitted through livestock feed contaminated with animal protein containing BSE, it is critical that countries adopt measures to ensure that animal protein and other specified risk materials are not present in cattle feed. That is what is so important to understand here.
This is a matter of what is in the feed that the cattle are eating. The OIE guidelines require a ban on cattle feed containing meat and bone meal from cattle in effect for 8 years as the primary means to reduce the likelihood of BSE infecting cattle.

Unfortunately, the USDA does not appear to have followed OIE guidelines in developing its rules. Canada's ban was effective in 1997, that is less than 8 years ago. Even then, the Canadian rules allowed for potential BSE contaminants that were in the feed manufacturing and marketing system. Unfortunately, the way the Canadians put their rule into effect, it allowed international BSE contaminants to work their way through the industry.
Moreover, with respect to Canada,
USDA has not done a thorough evaluation to ensure that Canada's cattle feed is not contaminated with animal protein that might be BSE infected. The U.S. has appropriately blocked cattle imports from Canada since Can-da confirmed its first case of BSE in May of 2003. Concerns were only heightened when BSE was confirmed in a dairy cow of Canadian origin in Washington State in December of 2003. This case resulted in many important U.S. trading partners banning the importation of U.S. cattle and beef, a situation that continues today.

Let me make this clear. When our friends say we have to open our border so others will open their borders to us, you have it backwards. The reason others are closed to our exports is because of their concern about our allowing imports of our cattle. But the USDA rule cases of BSE, and when it is quite clear you have it backwards. The reason is because of their concern about our allowing imports to our exports is because of their concern about our allowing imports from Canada, when they have known cases of BSE, and when it is quite clear that Canada is not enforcing their regulations to prevent additional outbreaks of this serious disease.

So it is very important that we and USDA move slowly, cautiously, and deliberately, and evaluate all possible risks before reopening our border to Canadian cattle. But the USDA rule does not do that. It is particularly disturbing, because it involves a case of an entire industry on that kind of a review regime? Is that what we are going to do today? I hope not.

Since USDA announced its final rule designating Canada as a minimum-risk region for BSE, Canada has confirmed two additional BSE cases. Let me repeat that. Since USDA proclaimed Canada to be a minimal risk region, two more cases of mad cow disease have been discovered. The most recent one is particularly disturbing, because it involves a cow born several months after Canada implemented its ban on animal proteins in cattle feed. Again, let me repeat that. The most recent case of mad cow disease in Canada is in a cow that was born after Canada implemented its ban on animal proteins in cattle feed.

Let's connect the dots. Four cases of mad cow disease in Canada and an additional one reported to CCFDA from Britain. Half of the Canadian feed industry has been inspected in only 3 percent of the cases over the last 3 years. The most recent cow discovered with the disease was discovered after the Canadian ban on animal proteins in cattle feed was put forward.

What does this tell us? I believe it tells us the Canadian ban has been ineffective. I have a feeling that we have evidence from Canada's own inspection service. Let's put up the first chart, if we could. This is from the Vancouver Sun, December 16, final edition:

Secret tests reveal cattle feed contaminated by animal parts: Mad cows in spark review of "vegetable-only" livestock feeds.

It says that according to internal Canadian Food Inspection Agency documents—obtained by the newspaper through the Access to Information Act—70 feed samples labeled as vegetable-only were tested by the agency between January and March of 2004. Of those, 41, or 59 percent, were found to contain animal materials.

This is the risk being run if this border is open to Canadian cattle on March 7 of this year. We know what happened in Europe. In England alone, 146 people died. Nearly 6 million head of livestock were slaughtered. Canada has 4 known cases of mad cow disease, and their own inspection service finds that in 59 percent of the cases where they have done testing, material that was not supposed to be present was present—the very material that can lead to the disease. Are we going to run the risk of allowing that to come into the United States?

On February 2, 2005, 1 month ago, the Canadian Federation of Agriculture finally issued a report concerning these very serious charges. Of 65 Canadian samples that received further testing, 54 cases containing animal protein were determined to be proteins that were not prohibited. That is good news.

Unfortunately, in 11 cases, or 17 percent, Canada could not rule out the presence of prohibited material. Since October 2003, our own Food and Drug Administration has issued 19 import alerts expressing concern about Canadian feed products that are contaminated with illegal animal proteins. Eight of these import alerts against Canadian livestock feed manufacturers are still in force.

I am getting very able assistance by my colleague from Kansas, Senator Roberts. That is high-class help.

Let me repeat this because it is important for my colleagues to understand. Since October 2003, our own FDA has issued 19 import alerts concerning Canadian feed products contaminated with illegal animal protein. Eight of those import alerts are still in force. Here they are: Muscle tissue in feed, where it is not supposed to be; muscle tissue and blood material in feed, where it is not supposed to be; May 10, 2004, muscle tissue and blood material in feed, where it is not supposed to be; February 5, 2005, mammalian bone and bovine hair in feed; October 28, 2003, suspect muscle tissue and unidentified animal hairs; April 6, 2004, blood and bone material present.

These alerts—every single one of them—are still in force today. Are we going to run the risk here of opening this border before we can be confident that Canada is enforcing their own regulations?

Recently, Canada has recently implemented new rules to further restrict the use of animal protein in livestock feed, as well as in fertilizer.

Listen to this: Canada's own justification for tightening its regulations is to reduce the potential for the cross-contamination of livestock feed products and fertilizers with animal protein that might contain the BSE prions. To me this suggests clearly that even Canadian officials are concerned that the enforcement and compliance with existing regulations may be inadequate.

As I noted in a letter I sent with Senator Harkin, Senator Johnson, and Senator Salazar to the Secretary of Agriculture, there is concern that not enough time has elapsed to be certain Canada is enforcing their own regulations, and testing measures are truly indicative of their level of BSE risk.

The bottom line is this: Canada has not achieved the necessary level of compliance to justify designating it as a minimal risk region. Their failure to enforce their own BSE measures could have serious consequences if USDA proceeds to reopen the border.

What is the risk? First and foremost, it could create potential dangers for consumers in this country. The Canadian Federation of Agriculture has expressed concern about the ramifications for consumer health and safety if the border reopened.

It is not just the consumer groups that are concerned. Agricultural groups are concerned as well because this would not only pose a danger to our consumers but to an entire industry.

The National Farmers Union and R-CALF USA have expressed strong support for the resolution because of their concern about ensuring the continued safety and integrity of our domestic cattle industry. This is what the Farmers Union has said:

. . . National Farmers Union President . . . issued the following statement.

"We believe it is inappropriate to proceed with reopening the border at this time given Canada's most recent discoveries of BSE positive cattle and the need to know how many additional cases will be detected.

I urge members of the United States Senate to support and cosponsor this important resolution.

R-CALF USA said:

United States cattle producers should not be excluded from protections afforded by the more rigorous science-based BSE standards recognized throughout the world as necessary to effectively manage the human health and animal health risks associated with BSE.

Our major export markets have remained overwhelmingly Republican, even though there has been no indigenous case of BSE in the United States. Compared to 2003, our beef product exports are off by over 82 percent. Let’s connect the dots. We have four cases of BSE, mad cow, proven in Canada. We have had no cases in the United States, yet countries we export to have remained closed to us. Why? Because of the risk they see from Canadian cattle coming into our market and being then further shipped to them.

Here is what has happened to our U.S. beef exports: in 2003, $3.2 billion, down to under $600 million in 2004. Prior to the discovery of BSE in Canada, Canada’s total live product and beef product exports to the U.S. amounted to over $2.2 billion. In 2004, their exports to the United States were cut in half, $1.2 billion.

U.S. ranchers and our cattle industry have suffered greater trade losses in our overseas markets than Canada has experienced because of U.S. limitations on their sales. In fact, our losses have been twice as big as theirs.

I believe that reopening the border now before we have reached agreement on reopening our export markets will only give our partners a further excuse to delay reopening these critical markets for U.S. producers.

We heard earlier a reference to the National Cattlemen’s Beef Association, which, prior to the new cases of BSE in Canada, supported reopening the border. They have recently adopted a new policy. It requires 11 conditions to be met before we designate Canada as a minimum-risk region. Of those conditions, only three will be met under the current rule.

Let me be clear, the National Cattlemen’s Association has outlined 11 specific items that need to be met. Only three of them have been under the rule. And it is not just a national issue. My State perhaps has as much at stake as any. The North Dakota State Legislature recently passed a resolution urging that our border with Canada remain closed for live cattle and beef product trade. My legislature is overwhelmingly Republican—overwhelmingly saying keep our border closed until you can assure us and assure our people that it is safe. They have made a determination that nobody can give that assurance today.

They recent announcement by Secretary Johanns to restrict the importation of Canadian beef products to those from cattle under 30 months of age is a step in the right direction; however, the announcement does not address the unresolved concerns about Canada’s compliance with its own feed regulations.

It was my hope that our new Secretary would withdraw the proposal to resume trade when he learned of these serious issues. But it now appears that the only way to stop this rule is for Congress to block it. Therefore, I hope my colleagues will join me in supporting this resolution of disapproval.

At the least, we ought to delay this rule from being set into effect until we have a better sense of what is happening in Canada. There is an investigation ongoing. Why ever would we decide to go forward and open this border before our own investigation is complete?

Let me conclude as I began by saying to my colleagues, this is a consequential vote. None of us know precisely how great the risk is. What we can say with some certainty is there is risk, and the consequences of a failure to get this right could be enormous. I hope my colleagues think very carefully about this vote.

I thank the Chair and yield the floor.

Mr. CHAMBLISS. Mr. President, I yield 10 minutes to the distinguished Senator from Kansas, Mr. ROBERTS.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kansas.

Mr. ROBERTS. Mr. President, I thank the chairman for yielding.

I rise today to join the joint resolution that has been brought forward by the distinguished Senator from North Dakota. This is a great “while I’” speech. While I share the Senator’s concern, want to share his sense of frustration while I share his sense of making sure that our beef is safe from BSE, I cannot support the resolution.

I am from Dodge City, KS. This is a town that began along the cattle trail days of the Wild West days and which still bases much of its economy on the beef industry. You cannot have anybody more interested, more vitally concerned about the beef industry than this Member. In fact, the number of cattle alone employs over 18,700 Kansans. We are a State that not only is the beef industry king in Kansas, and the State of Kansas, it is a huge industry representing over $5 billion in annual revenues. We are a State with 6.65 million head of cattle compared to a human population of 2.6 million. Cattle represented 62 percent of the Kansas gross state product, which is the processing industry alone employs over 18,700 Kansans. We rank in the top three of virtually every major beef statistic. There are few issues as important to the people of Kansas as the issue of how we handle actions that are related to BSE.

Prior to the discovery of BSE in the United States in December 2003, Kansas was one of the top exporters of beef to the Japanese market. Since that fateful day in December of 2003, Kansas and U.S. beef have been locked out of the Japanese market.

We should not still be locked out of that market by taking action like we may do as of today on this vote. The international science—I mean international science in every country concerned—says our cattle under 30 months of age are safe and not at risk for BSE. Yet we have agreed to not send meat from any animals under 30 months of age to Japan. Still that market remains closed to the United States.

The market is not closed because of scientific concerns. It remains closed because of State and international politics, and that is a fact. But we are moving forward, and I am hopeful that by continued pressure from the administration—from the President, the Secretary of State, everybody who has been in contact with the Japanese Government, and this Congress, many Members of Congress—we can somehow reopen that market, we can expedite that process.

But today, be careful what you ask for. We will take a giant step backward in our efforts to get our export markets to Japan—or, for that matter, anywhere—if we vote to approve this resolution. The same international science and guidelines that say that U.S. beef and animals under 30 months of age are safe also say that the beef and animals in Canada under 30 months are safe as well. That is the international standard. That is the sound science standard.

If we vote today to approve this resolution, the United States will be taking the same actions as the Japanese. I am not going to say it is based on politics. I know all of the concerns of my colleagues who are up on the northern border and the long history of those disputes. But we are going to be basing our decision on those concerns instead of sound science. I fear it will have both short-term and long-term ramifications. In the near term, it will undoubtedly set us back in our efforts to reopen the Japanese market.

How can we argue that they are not basing their decisions on sound science if we cast a vote that is not based on the same sound science? We have staffers today meeting, Agriculture Committee staffers, under the direction of the distinguished chairman, with ambassadors from Japan. If we vote on this today, why meet? What kind of progress could we possibly make? Long term, how can our negotiators in this Congress argue in the international arena that all agriculture issues—not just this issue—including biotech crops, beef hormones, food safety, and any number of other issues should be based on sound science if we ourselves vote on the concerns of individuals?

I have heard some Members talk about they are going to vote for this because they worry about the lumber that is coming in from Canada. Are we about to open a trade war? I am concerned about that. But this is not the way to approach it.

I understand the concerns of many of our producers and of my colleagues who support this resolution. Senator CONRAD—I affectionately call him the agriculture program policy chart man because he has, at last count, 4,153 charts he has brought to the floor since I have had the privilege of serving here—is really a champion explaining rudimentary agriculture program policy, colleagues but to all who watch these proceedings.

So I understand his concern. I did oppose the entry of beef from animals over 30 months of age because it did not make any sense to allow that beef in the United States if we would not allow any cattle over 30 months due to safety concerns. That is a given.

The international science and guidelines are clear on this issue. Animals under 30 months and meat from those animals is safe. If we vote for this resolution today, we will turn our back on the longstanding U.S. position in all international trade negotiations. We are going to hurt our efforts to reopen the Japanese market. We will be setting dangerous precedent. Agriculture policy battles, and Lord knows we are going to have those with this issue and many other agricultural trade policies, and Lord knows we are going to have those with the WTO ruling brought by Brazil.

We have too much at risk to base this decision, no matter how difficult it may be. We are in a position now strong our feelings may be, on the politics and the passion of the moment. The long-term future of the U.S. beef industry may very well turn on this action we take today. I fear that this vote in favor of this resolution will send a negative message that will come back to haunt us on this issue and many other agriculture trade matters for years to come. I do not think we can allow that to happen. So I respectfully disagree with the Senator from North Dakota and I urge the defeat of this resolution.

I yield back whatever time I have remaining.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. JOHNSON. Mr. President, I have great respect for the Senator from Kansas. He is my friend. I profoundly disagree with him about the conclusion. I think the risks run the opposite way. We want Japan to open their market to us? Then we better be able to assure them that our market and our supplies are safe. I believe the evidence is overwhelming that Canada is not enforcing their own regulations. Their own tests show it. They are not our tests. Their tests show they are not enforcing their own regulations.

I remind my colleagues of the consequences of a failure to get this right. In England, 146 people died. Almost 5 million head were slaughtered. There are four known cases of mad cow in Canada today, and an additional case of a cow imported from England. And we are going to open our border on March 7, when the Canadians’ own testing agency shows that in 59 percent of the cases animal matter is present whereas we need to be sure that what we are doing to? I hope not.

I yield 15 minutes to the Senator from South Dakota.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Dakota.

Mr. JOHNSON. Mr. President, I thank my colleague from North Dakota for his leadership on this crucial issue before the Senate today. I rise to speak on an issue of enormous significance to consumers, producers, and ranchers in my home State of South Dakota and all across America. The U.S. border is scheduled to be thrown open on March 7, 2005, to Canadian and other assorted bovine products. While the rule was modified to ensure that live cattle and beef imports come from animals under 30 months of age, which is a modestly helpful adjustment, I retain profound concerns about the lack of scientific basis for the decision to throw open the border and feel that the timing of this administration decision could not possibly be worse for consumers and producers alike.

We have seen four instances of BSE in cattle of Canadian origin, while the United States has not experienced even one indigenous case. In fact, two of these cases were detected after the Department of Agriculture released their final rule. I think those numbers become critical when we compare the annual slaughter populations or total animals slaughtered in that time frame.

There is an overwhelming difference when our neighbors to the north buy our beef. A quarter of the U.S. slaughter population and yet they have all of the indigenous BSE. I am concerned that the Department of Agriculture’s rule is not based all on sound science, and I agree, science ought to be the determining factor.

The USDA has chosen instead to adopt weaker standards in their final rule. Animals entering the United States will not and cannot be tested for BSE. Yet, the evidence available to United States producers to relieve the effect of the millions of Canadian cattle lined up at our border.

The final rule establishes minimal-risk regions for BSE and recognizes Canada as a minimal-risk region. However, that rule fails to recognize the internationally accepted standards set forth by the OIE, or World Organization for Animal Health, for minimal-risk regions, which are the only recognized standards that are accepted on a world-wide scale.

Transmission of BSE is, in fact, still unclear and uncertain. Maintaining segregation of the Canadian and American herds to the largest extent possible is the only scientifically sound approach, and USDA’s final rule only seeks to mix these cattle populations.

The Bush administration and a Japanese Government panel have discussed certain parameters for importation of American beef. Namely, imported products would be from animals age-verified at under 20 months of age and adhere to a certain grade of meat. These criteria were set because of Japanese consumer concerns. I fail to see how allowing the importation of Canadian cattle and products from cattle under 30 months of age into the United States, 10 months older than American beef that could be potentially exported to Japan, can possibly be beneficial for regaining consumer confidence in Japan or for maintaining consumer confidence in the United States.

At one point, we were exporting about 10 percent of our beef to foreign nations, the Japanese being the largest buyer of American beef abroad. The Japanese, because of their own experiences with mad cow disease and human disease in that nation, are understandably very concerned that if they buy beef from another country, they want that beef, in fact, come from a non-BSE country. It is the United States that jeopardizes our export market by throwing open the doors to a huge tidal wave of Canadian animals into the United States, mixing the whole herds together and then selling that export product or attempting to sell that without being able to identify whether we are, in fact, selling Canadian products or American beef or Japanese or anyone else. It is no wonder that throwing open this border is going to further jeopardize what is already a difficult circumstance for American exporters.

Then for American producers, they wind up with a double whammy. The Canadian import into the United States is roughly equivalent to about 10 percent of our herd, while we lose an additional 20 percent, which is a 30 percent swing jeopardizing our export market by allowing the importation of Canadian cattle and products from cattle under 30 months of age into the United States, 10 months older than American beef that they are buying and not beef they would love to buy American beef, and we are, in fact, selling Canadian products or American beef or Japanese beef, but they want to know it is American beef that they are buying and not beef that has simply been funneled through our country from BSE-infected nations.

The USDA’s decision is not only an economic threat for the viability of our rural communities, but it is also a consumer choice issue. Consumer groups have repeatedly voiced concern over this final rule. USDA is accountable and obligated to ensure that our consumers and ranchers are protected, which means keeping our borders closed for now. USDA has not been working with American consumers, ranchers, and producers with this final rule.

There are several steps that should be taken before the Department of Agriculture would even consider opening our border with Canada, and country-of-origin labeling is one of those steps. I have long advocated a mandatory country-of-origin labeling program. The administration delayed COOL for 2 years, and I support the inclusion of the 2004 Omnibus appropriations measure. A mandatory country-of-origin labeling program for beef is now not scheduled to be implemented until September 30, 2006. Yet, even lacking that, the president is not to make knowing choices about the origins of the meat they serve their family. USDA would open the borders to a cattle population that poses a significant risk to ensuring consumer choice in the grocery store aisle to buy American beef. I introduced bipartisan legislation to ensure that Canadian beef and cattle could not come across the border until country-of-origin labeling was implemented because that is simply the right thing to do, and I am pleased that we have bipartisan support for that measure.

Because USDA insists on plowing ahead with an outrageously ill-timed decision, congressional action is required and we have a congressional resolution of disapproval to consider. An ample number of my Senate colleagues felt this opening the border rule should be set aside and chose to sign their names to a petition to do so. The vote on this resolution is an opportunity to stop a flawed course of action, and I urge my colleagues to vote for this resolution of disapproval. It is crucial that USDA act in a responsible manner and revoke the final rule immediately.

I am hopeful the administration will recognize the message this body will send today about the severity and urgency of this situation. We need America to side with the best science on the Canadian border. We need America to be prudent relative to the enormous risk to both the livestock economy and the public health in America and the jeopardy of opening the border to our potential export market for beef.

I urge my colleagues to join us in supporting passage of this resolution of disapproval and to send a strong bipartisan message to USDA and to the Canadian border. We need the White House to reverse course, to allow greater time for the best science to determine what in fact is happening in Canada relative to BSE, relative to their feed regime, and to give us an opportunity to be assured we are not endangering either our economy or the public health in the United States of America.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. CHAMBLISS. Mr. President, I yield 20 minutes to the distinguished Senator from Colorado, who by profession is a veterinarian. Certainly he has, in addition to legislative knowledge, professional knowledge about this issue, Mr. ALLARD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Colorado is recognized.

Mr. ALWARD. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Georgia for yielding time. I want to talk about the situation facing the U.S. beef industry. I have long advocated a mandatory country-of-origin labeling program. The U.S. Department of Agriculture is risky, I do not think it is premature, and I think if we were to pursue this path, we must pursue a policy of opening our borders of free trade. Colorado is one State that has historically benefited from the cattle industry and today it remains an important part of our economy.

I will respond to a few specific points that were mentioned by my colleague on the other side. I will talk briefly about the people who became ill as a result of the BSE prion. It is a form of protein, modified virus, in Europe. The diet of Europeans is markedly different than the American diet in the fact that they view brains and spinal cord tissue as a delicacy. Here in the United States and in Canada, as a part of our processing of meat, we discard our central nervous system tissue, so it does not get into the food supply. We have rigorous enforcement in the United States. Canada has rigorous enforcement. As late as February 22, we had a group of scientists go to Canada, and they reported that the enforcement of the rules and regulations in Canada was very robust, as it is here in the United States.

But I think the most important thing we learned from the outbreak in Europe, and what we have learned with time, is that the prion, the organism that causes mad cow disease, occurs as a result of ruminant upon ruminant. By using that terminology, I mean that there are food supplements that are derived from animals, mostly ruminants, that then are fed back, either calcium or phosphorus, to the animal. When that happens that provides a vehicle for the transmission of the prion, the infectious organism. It doesn’t transmit directly animal to animal by live contact or by human to animal by live contact. It is passed in the food supply when you have a ruminant supplement from another ruminant being fed.

Finally, of the three or four cases that were found in Canada, three of those actually were before the provisions were put in place by Canada and the United States to prevent the consumption of ruminant-on-ruminant feeds—except for one case. But that one case occurred very close to 1997. As a result of more rigorous efforts by both Canada and the United States, I believe beef is a good product, and I plan on eating beef. I do not hesitate for one moment talking about how good I think beef is and how we should not be overly concerned about the health effects of beef in our diet.

The closure of our Canadian border has cost Greeley County, CO, which is one of the largest agricultural-producing counties in the United States, alone, $250 million to $300 million over the past year from diminished economic activity due to declining productivity of one single meatpacking facility. This is a result of the Canadian border closure. Totally, the economic impact of the border closure throughout the United States is $3 billion. The border with Canada should be open based on sound principles that ensure the integrity and safety of the U.S. cattle food supply.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture approach to these discussions has been rational and science based. Sound science is critical because it separates fact from myth and ignores mad cow hysteria. Television pictures of seizure-stricken cows are intended to draw viewers but do not represent the truth behind the image.

Five other Senators joined me in April of last year in support of the immediate reopening of the Canadian border following these principles. Joining me on a letter to the U.S. Trade Representative were Senators BEN NELSON, Senator CAMPBELL, Senator MURKOWSKI, Senator HATCH, and Senator BROWNBACK.

I ask unanimous consent to have that letter printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Hon. ROBERT ZOELLICK,
Seventeenth Street, N.W., Washington, DC.

DEAR AMBASSADOR ZOELLICK: The purpose of this letter is to bring to your attention our concerns relating to the present economic and trade situation facing the U.S. beef industry as a result of the Canadian border closure. We ask for your assistance to facilitate the immediate reopening of the border to trade in live cattle, based on sound scientific principles that will ensure the integrity and safety of the U.S. cattle industry and the American consumer.

Since the discovery of BSE in North America, the U.S. beef industry is confronting the most significant challenge in its 105-year history. The economic impact of the border closure has escalated over the past year and the industry is now at a point where difficult decisions are being made to protect long-term jobs and income in the U.S. cattle industry. For example, the industry has suffered a 12 percent reduction in U.S. fed cattle
Open the border to live cattle will not flood the U.S. market with Canadian cattle, which continues to expand its processing industry to handle all its cattle, while the U.S. industry shrinks—running about 10 percent below preban averages. The jobs moving to Canada are not likely to return.

Industry officials have determined that reopening the border will not flood the U.S. market because the Canadian market is relatively current. Those Canadian processors have been running six days a week around the clock to process their cattle, then sell the beef in the United States or in the markets where they compete.

During his campaign, Salazar said he intended to put his constituents ahead of party politics, yet in this case, he sided with primarily Democratic legislators against the Bush Administration.

This position, being pushed by senators without major beef-processing plants, puts Salazar at odds with Allard and the Greeley beef-packing plant of Swift & Co. Allard was joined by almost 20 other senators—seven of them from states that because of U.S. policies, U.S. corporations are outsourcing jobs. The border closure has allowed Canada to grow its beef industry and increase its slaughter capacity, making Canada into a global competitor. While U.S. beef processors have been running six days a week around the clock to process their cattle, then sell the beef in the United States or in the markets where they compete.

Mr. ALLARD. Many of the supporters of the Resolution of Disapproval argue that because of U.S. policies, U.S. corporations are outsourcing jobs. While U.S. beef processors have been running six days a week around the clock to process their cattle, then sell the beef in the United States or in the markets where they compete.

During his campaign, Salazar said he intended to put his constituents ahead of party politics, yet in this case, he sided with primarily Democratic legislators against the Bush Administration.

This position, being pushed by senators without major beef-processing plants, puts Salazar at odds with Allard and the Greeley beef-packing plant of Swift & Co. Allard was joined by almost 20 other senators—seven of them from states that because of U.S. policies, U.S. corporations are outsourcing jobs. The border closure has allowed Canada to grow its beef industry and increase its slaughter capacity, making Canada into a global competitor. While U.S. beef processors have been running six days a week around the clock to process their cattle, then sell the beef in the United States or in the markets where they compete.

Mr. ALLARD. Many of the supporters of the Resolution of Disapproval argue that because of U.S. policies, U.S. corporations are outsourcing jobs. The border closure has allowed Canada to grow its beef industry and increase its slaughter capacity, making Canada into a global competitor. While U.S. beef processors have been running six days a week around the clock to process their cattle, then sell the beef in the United States or in the markets where they compete.
increase to about 95,000 head per week. Canada is expanding available slaughter capacity in the country so it can be less reliant on the U.S. market to process animals. Reliance on the U.S. market will continue, but Canada will compete effectively against the United States in the world marketplace.

According to the Canadian Meat Council, since May 2003, the Canadian beef industry has increased its daily beef production capacity by more than 30 percent. The additional slaughter capacity that is available, or planned, will allow the Canadian beef industry to increase cattle slaughter totals by about 25 percent from 2004 to 2007.

Thanks to the border closure, thousands of U.S. workers have been laid off or have had their operations suspended. In Greeley, CO, located in the State’s largest agricultural county, nearly 1,000 workers lost their jobs thanks to the closure.

Weekly cattle harvests in Canada are up 14 percent, from 72,000 to 82,000 over the past year, and are expected to rise to 95,000 per week by mid-2005, a 25-percent increase over pre-BSE levels. The jobs growth that increased production probably will never return to the United States.

Prior to May of 2003, cattle imports from Canada accounted for approximately 4 percent of the U.S. production capacity. A number of these animals were also a part of the U.S.-Canadian Northwest Cattle Feeder Initiative. By allowing them to increase production capacity, we threaten U.S. production and jobs.

The average number of imported Canadian cattle for all purposes, between 1970 and 2003, is 795,563 head per year. The highest level of cattle imports was 1.68 million in 2002, and the lowest was 243,000 in 1986. The Minimal Risk Region rule requires animals to be imported exclusively for slaughter. Dairy, stocker, or other livestock segments are prohibited from importing animals for breeding or other purposes.

If we do not address this problem, we are going to have a real impact, in a negative way, on the Colorado beef industry and, throughout the country.

Canada is one of our most important trading partners. Agriculture is a fundamental component of U.S. trade. If we cannot rationally restore the beef and cattle trade with our most important trading partner, I ask the question: How will we ever restore trade on a global scale?

We received a report a week or so ago from a group of scientists who visited Canada, saying they have a robust effort in their rules and regulations, just as we have a robust effort in this country.

Again, when asked the question, What is for dinner? my answer is beef.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Dakota.

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, let me say to my colleague, the Senator from Colorado, that in the Conrad family, when asked, What is for dinner? beef is often the answer.

But that is not the question. The question is, Are we going to keep the beef supply safe? The evidence is overwhelming that Canada is not enforcing their own regulations and testing shows they have right now four cases of mad cow identified in Canada.

I suggest to my colleagues that the better part of wisdom is for us not to open this border in a premature way. The risk is too great to our people and to our industry. The Senator cites the National Cattlemen’s Beef Association. I met with my representative of the National Cattlemen in my State. They urged me to proceed. They urged me to go to a vote. They urged me to try to carry the vote.

When I look at what the National Cattlemen said, here it is. They put out 11 conditions that need to be met before the border is opened, and only 3 of them have been met. I would be glad at a later point to go right through the 11 conditions they said should be met. We can go right to the eight that are clearly not met. This border should not be opened until these 11 conditions have been met.

I yield 10 minutes to my colleague Senator DORGAN.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Dakota is recognized.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, we have apparently resolved what everybody is going to have for dinner. Apparently it is beef. We haven’t resolved who is going to stand on the floor of the Senate this morning and support our farmers and ranchers who produce that protein that is the meat we are eating for dinner. Who is going to stand for the farmers and ranchers on this issue?
It took a nanosecond to hear that we are protectionist this morning. Every thoughtless discussion turns into a thoughtless discussion in a nanosecond around here when it deals with trade, because instantly the subject of protection comes up, and the word "protectionism" is used. God forbid that someone should be accused in this Chamber of the Senate of standing up to protect the economic interests of this country. It happens precious few times.

But let me be somebody who says, if that is the charge, I plead guilty. I want to protect our economic interests. I don’t want to build walls around this country. I believe expanded trade is helpful. But I also want to stand up for the economic interest of this country when it is at stake.

Let me say one other thing, as I have been listening here. Let us stop walking hat in hand to the Japanese and asking for favors. Let us stop killing this country. I believe expanded trade is helpful. But I also want to stand up for the economic interests of this country.

Now we have people who say somehow the Japanese will be more confident to eat American beef, if we allow Canadian cattle to come into this country—cattle from a country where investigations have shown that the feed supply has prohibited animal materials. My colleague Senator CONRAD described it. In December, the Vancouver Sun reported that officials from the Canadian Food Inspection Agency found prohibited animal materials in 141 of 70 samples of the feed that was tested, 58 percent was found to have had prohibited animal materials.

when we finally cast this vote, we will have done so this morning.
I yield the floor.
Mr. CHAMBLISS. I yield 10 minutes to the distinguished Senator from Missouri, Mr. Bond.

Mr. Bond. Mr. President, I thank the distinguished chairman of the Agriculture Committee for allowing me this time.

I rise today as cochairman of the beef caucus to speak against Senate Joint Resolution 4, which seeks to condemn the U.S. Department of Agriculture plan to reopen the Canadian border to live cattle.

I concur with the sentiments already expressed by the chairman of the Agriculture Committee and the distinguished agriculturalist from Kansas, Senator Roberts. I also learned a great deal from the professional testimony of our Senator, Dr. Allard, from Colorado, about the safety and about the science that goes into the decision made by the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

I note also that this past week, a group of our scientists who visited Canada said their system of protecting the food supply and the beef was robust and could only be counted on. As a member of the agriculture posse, I have heard Secretary Johanns, the Secretary of Agriculture, describe the steps they were taking to ensure our beef supply is protected.

We need to be on defense of protectionism. Let me define what protectionism is. Protectionism is, in my view, the use of scare tactics, the use of unsound scientific information, in an attempt to protect our markets. In this case, I believe sound science dictates it is time to open the border. Were it not so, I would not be rising today in support of the Department of Agriculture.

The fact remains, as Senator Allard has pointed out, not only is this not based on science, the reported USDA study of the beef ban has been to create a feeding and slaughter operation in Canada, which is moving the production facilities and jobs out of the United States and into Canada, potentially putting a very harmful impact on our ability to raise, slaughter, and produce the beef we eat in the United States. Yes, beef is what was for dinner last night. Tonight it will be my dinner, and it will continue to be.

Everyone of this body and our constituents back home expect the U.S. Government to work to ensure we have the safest food supply possible. That is why we hire scientists. That is why we hire veterinarians. That is why we devote efforts to make sure it is safe. Unfortunately, all too often, the United States takes the abundance and safety of our food supply for granted. When we are faced with challenges to these expectations, like reports of BSE or mad cow disease in our cattle or in our immediate neighbor's, the floodgates of demagoguery from so-called consumer advocates are opened, every mother is frightened into believing she may be jeopardizing her family at the next meal she serves, and markets react.

Statistics and science say the likelihood of you, me, or our children at home eating a BSE-tainted burger or steak not cooked hot enough to kill the pathogen or magnitude, less of a threat than many of the other risks we accept in our everyday lives, such as driving our children to school and back.

The alarmism and subsequent waves of fear of BSE threats are seen as opportunities by many of our trading partners who see the chance to find any excuse to erect trade barriers to our products. These foreign buyers ignore the science, statistics, and history. The U.S. position in the world market is based on the very sound principle that good science should and must prevail.

Whether our trade representatives are negotiating exports of genetically enhanced rice or soybeans, meat produced using the most advanced commercial technologies, we negotiate the re-opening of the Japanese beef markets to our own production, sound science is the best negotiating tool we have against the Luddites and naysayers in our potential foreign markets.

We cannot allow the wonderful exuberance of populism in protecting our markets with false or pseudo-science-based claims while expecting the world to accept the products of U.S. farmers who feed the world largely due to our use of the latest technologies.

The Agriculture Department's amended final rule on resumption of beef and live cattle trade with Canada was developed based on the best science at hand and with broad input from the cattle industry. The amended rule restricts imports of beef animals older than 30 months. Also, Canada, as I said earlier, has implemented appropriate BSE prevention standards similar to our own. As I said earlier, this has been confirmed by our scientists who have visited and inspected the operations in Canada. This includes the banning of all ruminant to ruminant feed and effective enforcement. This alone will drastically reduce further contamination in the Canadian beef herds. Sound science should prevail here and in all of our trade negotiations.

I would be remiss if I did not take the opportunity to encourage the USDA, our trade representatives in Japan, to apply sound science and to continue the move to reopen markets in Japan to our beef exports. Recently, I joined with several of my colleagues who also spoke today sending a letter to the Ambassador to Japan saying we would not stand for pseudoscience-based protectionism preventing the export of U.S. beef to Japan.

This past week, I had the opportunity to meet with representatives of the Japanese Diet, the legislative body of Japan. I told them of our interest in providing beef to the consumers of Japan. They assured me that American beef is a very high priority for those Japanese consumers. We said, OK, they want it, we have shown it is going to be safe, it is time to open your markets and provide a significant export opportunity which will serve and reward the U.S. farmers and producers.

I hope we will reject this resolution and allow sound science to rule.

The remarks of Mr. Bond pertaining to the introduction of S. 503 are located in today's Record under "Statements of Members of Introduced Bills and Joint Resolutions.")

Mr. CONRAD. I yield 5 minutes to the Senator from South Dakota.

Mr. THUNE. I thank the Senator from North Dakota for yielding the time.

I join today with him and others in the Senate in support of this resolution. I hoped it would not come to this, that we could achieve a result, an outcome short of having to have this debate in the Senate. I have to say I wholeheartedly agree with the premise of this resolution; that is, that the rule in question is wrong. It is wrong timing.

Agriculture is the No. 1 industry in South Dakota. The canola industry, the livestock industry, the potato industry, the beef industry, the hog industry, the potato component of that. This industry has an enormous impact on the economy, the gross domestic product in my state. In fact, as noted earlier today by another speaker, we have probably five or six times as many people who buy things than we have people in South Dakota.

Growing up on the Plains of western South Dakota, I have witnessed first-hand the incredible work ethic of our livestock producers, the willingness to go out during calving season and fight the elements and conditions, and to work to nurture the herds and bring them to the marketplace, to go through the weather we have to deal with in South Dakota on an ongoing yearly basis, and to haul water and to haul feed to those herds, to get them to where they can take them to the marketplace.

As a member of the House Ag Committee when we were debating the 2002 farm bill, I advocated and fought on behalf of country-of-origin labeling because I believe it is important that American consumers know where their products are coming from. It was included in the 2002 farm bill.

More recently, in the past year or so, this body and the House adopted legislation that would delay the implementation of country-of-origin labeling, which is unfortunate because I think it would alter and change the dimensions of the debate we are having here today.

So I come here today to speak in support of this resolution, and I do so knowing full well that as a three-term Member of the House, I come here with a record supporting free trade. I support trade promotion authority for both President Clinton and President Bush because I believe our leaders in this country need to have the authority to go out there and make the best
It is about science. It is about making sure that our cattle are safe and that we continue to be in the future. I am hopeful that when this is all said and done, we will be able to restore that relationship. But, frankly, this issue is not about protectionism. It is about safety. It is about making sure that America’s consumers have a safe supply of beef products in this country, and also that those that we do business with overseas, our trading partners, are fully confident in the exports we send their way.

I believe exports are important to America. They are important to agriculture. In this country today, one in every three rows of corn goes to the export market. It is more—would like to see more of it going into ethanol. I hope it will. But the reality is, we depend heavily upon export markets for the success and prosperity of American agriculture.

So I supported increasing trade opportunities for our producers. But the fact is, we have not been able, at this point. I believe, to provide the level of confidence and assurance to the American consumer and to producers in this country that, in fact, the Canadians are taking the steps necessary to ensure that their herds are 100 percent in compliance with the ruminant feed ban.

My first official act, after being sworn in as a Senator, was to ask the President to delay the opening of the border beyond March 7. I have insisted that decision to open the border be based, first, on two prerequisites: sound science and a return of our foreign markets—namely, the Pacific rim. This has not been answered.

USDA’s own risk assessment in 2002 states the Canadian feed mills were not—were not—100 percent complying with the feed ban. The borders should not be open until that allegation is fully investigated and it is confirmed that the ban is being properly enforced. The most recent assessment completed by the USDA team this year concluded that the feed ban is being complied with, and we are due to hard work to make sure our export markets are open before this rule is implemented.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

The Senator from Georgia.

Mr. CHAMBLISS. Mr. President, I yield to the Senator from Colorado.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Colorado is recognized.

Mr. ALLARD. Mr. President, I thank the PRESIDING OFFICER for yielding some time to me so I can respond to a number of issues that have been brought up.

First of all, I would like to say that the information we have on the food contents is older information. The newest information we have is from a group of scientists that went to Canada to check on their rules and regulations, on their enforcement. These scientists reported back to us on about February 22 of this year saying that the rules and regulations are being enforced robustly in Canada. That includes the ruminant on ruminant food regulation where you prevent the consumption of ruminant byproducts by other ruminants. I have confidence in these trained scientists who know what they are looking for and have given us the most recent report on what is happening as far as the food on food regulation.

I would also like to go over some of the positions by the Colorado Cattlemen’s Association as well as the National Beef Association. They support the reopening, and the Colorado Cattlemen’s Association supports the reopening, and the National Cattlemen’s Association, which is headquartered in Colorado, supports the Department of Agriculture’s provision on minimal risk.

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, let me make a couple quick points. It is true we had an investigation group go to Canada. Here is what they found. They went to seven feed mill operations in Canada. In six of the seven, they found one or more unsatisfactory task ratings. In two of the seven, they found serious failures to ensure prohibited material did not enter the food chain. More seriously, the assessment found that only 3 percent of Canada’s on-farm feed manufacturers have been inspected at least once over the last 3 years.

Now we are talking about 25,000 on-farm feed operations. These mills represent one-half of Canadian livestock feed production. Only 3 percent have been investigated, were checked in the last 3 years.

My friends, we are talking about risk. What are the consequences of failure? In England, 146 people died. In England, they had to slaughter 5 million head.

In Europe, these were the headlines, week after week: “French Farmers in Grip of BSE Panic.” “Worry of Europe Spreading for UK Exporters.” “Mad Cow Disease Kills 500 Dairy Cattle Every Week.” “Slaughter to Prevent Disease on Continent.”

There were 6 million heads slaughtered. We are talking about substantial risk to our industry and our consumers. Let’s be cautious. Let’s not open the border before we are confident Canada is actually enforcing the regulations.
they have on their books. The evidence is very clear that they are not.

Mr. President, I yield Senator Thom-as 5 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Sen- ator is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President, we have had a good discussion. I am glad we have. There are a number of parts to it, of course. We have talked a lot about the safety issue, which is key, and to be clear about the things that we have asked Canada to do. We had a hearing with the Secretary some time back. He had his scientists there with him, and they were not certain they had done all the things that they might do. But I think the key is the matter of opening the markets for us.

Our markets for beef have grown in the last number of years. It has been one of the most important things that we have had to export. Most of that growth has been in the Pacific Rim—Asia, Japan, Korea. Of course, now that is closed. Regardless of what you say about how well the Canadians have done, that market is still closed, and it is clear to Canadian activity or lack of it. That is really the key that we have to look forward to.

I am certainly for trade. As a matter of fact, I am chairman of the Sub-committee on Trade of the Finance Committee. We need to do that. I am reluctant to see us open this one country, that market is still closed, and it is clear to Canadian activity or lack of it. That is really the key that we have to look forward to.

You say: Well, this is unfair to Can- ada. Nevertheless, that is where the problem all comes from. That is where the cows came from, the mad cow dis- ease, not the U.S. They came from Can- ada, and the difficulty has arisen there.

So I guess I just simply want to em- phasize that we can talk all we want to, as my friend from Colorado has, about what has been done there. The fact is, we still haven’t got our market back. We had good exports. We don’t have them now. I am not as concerned about the feeders being able to move up to Canada. The cows are here, actually, and that is where they are going to be. So I won’t take more time because I know there are many others who need and want to talk.

I hope we can keep in mind that all we are asking is that we have more of an opportunity to deal with opening the markets in Japan, opening the markets in Korea, before we open the market in Canada.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Sen- ator from Georgia.

Mr. CHAMBLISS. Mr. President, I yield 5 minutes to the Senator from Montana.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Sen- ator is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. BURNS. Mr. President, I rise today in support of this resolution. I wish it didn’t have to come to this. Maybe it is just an exercise, in light of a Federal judge ruling yesterday, when some folks in my State have chosen to settle this in court rather than what they can get through the policy of Congress.

I reluctantly rise in support of this because I wish that USDA would have listened to those of us who have been saying for two months that this rule has some problems. I want to say up front that I appreciate the new Sec- retary of Agriculture Johanns’s work with this and his efforts in this regard. He had his team come down and talked to us. He got thrown in on this with a cold hand, and I know he has been working tirelessly to try to respond to everybody’s con- cerns. Then it comes down to the point where we’ve got to talk about what everybody’s concerns cannot be fully addressed. I thank him for doing the right thing and restricting the elig- ible beef cattle to under 30 months old. I feel strongly about that. I appre- ciate his action. I think when we said we are not going to take products or cattle over 30 months into this coun- try, that was a prudent move.

But there are still lingering con- cerns. Whenever this whole thing broke open with the ban in 1997, the only one who stood up and said: They have a feed problem because, No. 1, it started with an Angus cow in Alberta, and then the second cow was the Holstein cow that we found in the State of Wash- ington. Then of the two after that, you had one cow, two Holstein cows, and one Charolais cow. So we know we don’t have a genetic problem.

In this ban, we have to be very care- ful of another unintended consequence because there is a great exchange of breeding cattle and seed stock produc- tion that crosses that border both ways. So we have to have some way to deal with that. The Department of Agri- culture is addressing that situation, too. But it hadn’t got there yet. I said from the get-go, it is the feed. And every number that we see coming out of Canada, and even the report of our USDA team does not draw the con- clusion that Canada has not really got- ten the feed problem, and the herd, live- stock, or cattle feed, in Alberta, Sas- katchewan, or across the whole coun- try as far as that goes.

That is where we all have a little bit of a problem. Consumer confidence in beef has never been as good as it is right now. It is because we have taken certain steps to make sure that the safety of the food is utmost because losing consumer confidence would be much more costly than anything that we could do.

So, yes, I eat beef. Obviously, I have eaten quite a lot of it. I have never missed a meal, nor do I plan to.

So when we talk about those things that are based on science—and my friend from Colorado, who has pointed in this debate, is right on target—we have to face the reality of what is best for the cowman. Because in my State, un- like Colorado, we don’t have a pre- dominance of processors. We don’t even have a lot of feed cattle, but we have cow-calf producers. And we deal in older cattle, especially at this time of the year. And, of course, we sell yearlings and feeder calves. Some of those calves will go to Canada under Canada’s new rules. That was a positive step.

But if we back off and take a look at this and let the facts come to the top and we consider those facts, we will make better decisions not only for our cattle people but also the consumers of this country. Even though we have the report of the USDA’s team back from Canada, we were on break and had lit- tle time to look at that report and make a decision: Are they doing what they are supposed to do in order to pro- tect their own livestock? That is what Canada did. They let their own people down—when you don’t enforce the rules of the 1997 ban of certain in- gredients in cattle feed.

So what we are saying right now, is that this action furthers the protection of two of the most important econo- mies that we have in this country, and that is our consuming public and our cow-calf producers.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time? The Senator from Colorado.

Mr. ALLARD. Mr. President, since the floor manager is not here, I yield myself 5 minutes to the Senator from Montana.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the Senator is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. ALLARD. Mr. President, I want to emphasize again how very important it is that we proceed on this matter using good scientific evidence. I appre- ciate the statement that was made by the Senator from Montana. He is right in many regards that we need to be sure that we use good science. I feel good about the enforcement of the rules and regulations based on the visit by scientists who just reported back in February. It is the most recent report that we have on the enforcement of the rules and regulations in Canada. They are very competent scientists, very dedicated scientists. And what they re- ported back to us is valid.

From a trade standpoint, we need to do something for our cattlemen. I be- lieve strongly that what we need to do for the cattleman is get the borders opened because we are importing Cana- dian beef today. It is boxed beef. The reason that is coming in is because our plants can’t economically make it. They are having to pay high prices for beef. They only have a limited supply on hand, and so they sell up to ca- pacity. In the meantime, the proc- essing plants, the beef that they are getting is lower cost beef. And then they are putting that on the world market. They are importing that into the United States.

The result is that we see an expan- sion of the beef industry in Canada. They have got plans to build more processing plants. They are in the proc- ess right now of building more proc- essing plants.

The reason there are going to be more people raising cattle in Canada. That means if our processors here don’t make it like the one in Colorado, we lose our local markets. We lose an opportunity for our cattlemen to readily get their beef to market. That costs in shrinkage and extra transportation costs, particularly when we look at the cost of gasoline and diesel fuel. So this is a problem that needs to be resolved quickly.

We need to move forward with the guidelines that were laid out. By the way, the principles laid out in the guidelines have been used by the cattle industry in this country to control livestock disease, which also affects humans. The principles are laid out here, things like brucellosis. We know in cattle country what that is all about. We have States classified as brucellosis-free, and there are those having problems with that. The movement of cattle back and forth begins with addressing brucellosis in those States. Using those principles, we have been able to reduce the incidence of brucellosis in this country. It works. They are the same principles we are using on BSE and asking for Canada and the world organizations to apply, where we take minimal-risk countries, such as Canada and the United States, and apply those provisions in a good, scientifically sound manner.

That is only part of it. The other part is that during the process you don’t increase the risk by handling the processes improperly. No. 1, you don’t want to circulate the food and feed it back to the cows, the byproducts. That is a policy that has been adopted here in Canada, and it is something we have learned since the outbreak in the European Community.

So, again, I also compliment Secretary of Agriculture Johanns for his efforts in trying to protect the beef industry and to use good science. He comes from Nebraska. That is a big beef State, as are many of the other States. But the important thing is to recognize that free trade is a benefit of agriculture and has benefited particularly the beef industry. We want to make sure we get the border open, and we need to use good science in opening it.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Dakota is recognized.

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, I yield 5 minutes to the Senator from Colorado.

Mr. SALAZAR.

Mr. SALAZAR. Mr. President, I rise in support of the bipartisan resolution to disapprove the opening of the Canadian border. My position on this is clear. Until we resolve comprehensively the underlying issues comprehensively in the interest of health and safety in support of our family farms and ranchers, we should keep the border closed.

Today, I speak on behalf of those men and women who are on farms and ranches across America, whose livelihood may depend on being able to have quality livestock industry in place in their States. I join organizations such as the Colorado Cattlemen’s Association which said it is not now time for us to lift the ban on Canadian imports.

I have spoken with Secretary Johanns about this issue. I have told him that I am for the lifting of the Canadian ban at the appropriate time. For me, that means we are not yet ready and there are too many questions that still have to be answered prior to getting to that decision.

Many of the questions we have asked Secretary Johanns and the Department of Agriculture are questions to which we have not received any answers at this point in time: How many inspectors will we have at the border as the million, more or less, cattle from Canada start coming across the Canadian border and flooding the markets in our Nation? How many cattle will they actually check as they come across the border? How will they determine which of those cattle are 30 months or less of age?

I have been around cattle for most of my life, and I can tell you it is difficult to tell which cows or cattle are more than 30 months of age, or more than 3 or 3 1/2 years. My father might have been able to tell us that. When you are talking about that kind of prediction, we don’t have an answer from the Department of Agriculture.

How will the entire BSE risk mitigation system be documented? What are the segregating procedures for the process of cattle that are checked at this point? How are we integrating the efforts in trying to deal with the BSE issue and opening up markets in South Korea and Japan with the efforts that we are dealing with now in Canada? Those are very serious questions that will impact the American farmer and rancher for a long time to come.

It seems to me it is a very reasonable request that many of us have made to Secretary Johanns—that there ought to be a delay in opening of the Canadian border until we have the answers from the Department of Agriculture that these questions that have been appropriately asked by the ranchers and farmers of America are answered.

With that, I urge my colleagues to join in approval of the resolution. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Georgia is recognized.

Mr. CHAMBLISS. Mr. President, I yield 5 minutes to the Senator from Idaho.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Idaho is recognized.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, it is not often that persons speaking on the opposing side of the issue on the floor yield time to someone who might disagree with them. So I am thankful to the chairman of the Agriculture Committee, Senator Chambliss, for being so accommodating.

Yesterday, a judge in Montana said there remains a question of concern as to whether the ability to test cattle has been well underway in Canada. You have certainly heard my colleagues from Montana and others argue that is a legitimate concern. Senator Conrad has made that point time and time again. It is fair for us to err on the side of science. That is where we ought to be. That is where our industry is. That is where we ought to demand of the Canadian industry.

Our industry people have been north of the border and they have seen the tremendous progress that has been made. Our Secretary of Agriculture has recognized that progress and, in part, premised his rule on that the same. But time, I am one of those who remain skeptical. I think we have to ensure that we cannot take another hit in our agricultural economy. In 2003, May, Canada, boom. And then in December, along came the cow in the lower 48 that stole Christmas. She wasn’t green, she was black and white and she pulled the rug out from under the industry just for a moment in time.

Our Secretary of Agriculture effectively stopped in and talked our industries the consumer into stability again. Why? Because the cow had come from Canada. We have had our act together in the lower 48 for a good long while, prohibiting the incorporation of animal protein into the feed supply. We have played by the rules, and they have been sustainable, scientific rules, which has assured the American consumer safe, high-quality beef.

But when Canada sneezed and we got the cold, our trading partners backed away. In that backing away, we lost a billion-dollar Japanese market. I have been one saying to my industry in Idaho that I am going to work to force the Canadians to get their act together, while at the same time we are going to assure that we open the Japanese market. Our President has put pressure openly and personally on the Japanese, as has our Vice President and Secretary of State. It is unique and unusual, but it demonstrates the importance openly and personally on the livestock and cattle industry to this administration and to our country for them to say to the Japanese: Get your act together. We are clean; you know it; you see our science. We are doing the right thing.

Yet the Japanese push back. I cannot in good conscience open a border that brings greater numbers to the lower 48 when the science remains questionable and we have not resumed the Pacific rim markets that are extremely valuable to the livestock industry.

The new Secretary of Agriculture, Secretary Johanns, has been to the Hill. We have talked with him. He is doing the right things. We sent a letter to him in opposition. He backed away for a time. He is pushing the science, and he will continue to do so. But I do believe that a March 7 implementation is premature.

I trust that the judge looking at the evidence in Montana yesterday has the same concerns that are being reflected by the Senator from North Dakota and certainly by this Senator and many of us firsthand.
Actions do produce reactions. There are consequences to our action. The Senator from Colorado has been concerned about the displacement of the packing industry and what it will do, and it is having an impact. I am tremendously concerned that if we believe in competitive pressure, we could lose capacity in the lower 48 as the Canadian industry begins to extend its ability into packing of their livestock products.

Today, in good conscience, I cannot nor would I support S.J. Res. 4. I believe we are sending an extremely valuable message to all of the markets involved, including the Canadians. The Canadians do not get it. They see NAFTA as a one-way road. We have been fighting them for 4 years on timber. They do not get it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has used the 5 minutes yielded to him.

Mr. CONRAD. I yield an additional minute.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. GRAHAM). The Senator from Idaho is recognized for an additional minute.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, I appreciate that.

The Canadians do not get it in timber and are still rope-a-doping us. The Senator from Montana is in the Chamber. He and I have partnered in trying to get them to get their act together on timber. They do not play the same game when it is one-way traffic. They are doing the same thing in potatoes, and my potato farmers in Idaho are understanding the consequence of losing markets.

Those are the real problems. To our Canadian friends: Listen up. Get your act together in Canada. Play by the rules in NAFTA and resume and remain the good friends and trading partners we have always been. But we will not dislocate economies in the lower 48 for the benefit of economic gain in Canada. That is not equality, and that is not the fair trade that we are looking at.

Let’s make sure the science is right. We cannot allow another hit on the livestock industry of the lower 48. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. CONRAD. I yield 5 minutes to the Senator from Montana. If he asks for additional time, I will be happy to extend it to him.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I thank my friend from North Dakota. This is obviously an extremely important matter because it affects the consumption of one of the most valuable staples in the American diet, and that is meat. It also affects the livelihood of so many Americans, the cattle ranchers, and other producers of meat and red meat products in the United States.

Agriculture is our No. 1 industry in Montana, so this is an extremely important matter. We also very much want people in the United States and around the world to be confident that the beef produced in the United States is free of BSE and is the best beef in the world.

pose a risk that ruminant materials may find their way into cattle feed. Although the U.S. Food and Drug Administration promised to close these loopholes and stated that it had reached a preliminary conclusion last July to remove SRM from all animal feed, the agency has failed to act.

Therefore, to address this issue, I have introduced legislation entitled the Animal Feed Protection Act of 2005, which would ban SRM from being used in any animal feed. This would eliminate the possibility that ruminant materials are knowingly or accidentally fed to cattle.

Banning SRMs from all animal feed is an important step we can take to fully ensure the safety of ruminant feed, and I hope that the Senate’s vote today will encourage our Government and the Canadian Government to act more swiftly on this issue.

So that I should be convinced by the report APHIS released at the end of February stating that Canada’s feed ban compliance is good. I am not convinced.

On January 24, 2005, the U.S. Department of Agriculture’s Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, APHIS, sent a team of technical experts to Canada to assess Canada’s current feed ban and feed inspection program. The APHIS investigation was initiated in response to Canada’s latest case of bovine spongiform encephalopathy, BSE, which came just days after the USDA released its “Minimal Risk Rule” in the Federal Register on January 4, 2005.

The purpose of this investigation was to determine whether the control measures put in place by the Canadian Government are achieving compliance with regard to these regulations. This was a serious investigation. Canada’s latest BSE case, reported on January 11, 2005, was particularly alarming because it was discovered in a cow under 7 years of age and was thus born after implementation of the 1997 ruminant-to-ruminant feed ban.

On January 12, 2005, I sent a letter to Secretary Veneman and then-Governor Johanns, requesting that the audit being conducted by APHIS inspectors be given time for a full and fair analysis. The final APHIS report of last week largely repeats information USDA released as part of its risk assessment supporting the minimal risk rule in January. This Senator asked for a full, independent review of Canada’s inspection yields compelling evidence that the Canadian feed ban was being fully enforced, this report misses the mark.

I strongly believe that all consumers deserve reassurance that Canadian rendering facilities, feed mills, and ranchers are in compliance with Canada’s feed regulations. As you know, the ruminant feed ban has been determined to be arguably the most important BSE risk mitigation measure to protect animal health.

The APHIS report states that “Canada has a robust inspection program, that overall compliance with the feed ban is good and that the feed ban is reducing the risk of transmission of bovine spongiform encephalopathy in the Canadian cattle population.”

It is not clear what “good” compliance means. We must provide our trading partners with the assurance, to South Korea, stronger assurances than those provided in this APHIS report.

We must provide them proof that we have done everything possible to contain and eradicate this deadly disease as we work to reestablish the trust of their consumers and access to their markets.

It is very important that USDA systematically evaluate all possible risks before reopening the border to Canadian cattle. I do not believe that USDA has completed this level of evaluation.

Therefore, I will be asking the National Academy of Sciences to review the APHIS findings. They should assess whether every aspect critical to evaluating feed compliance has been addressed in this report or if additional analyses and inspections are needed.

The American public must be assured that Canadian cattle will not increase the risk of BSE in the U.S. until the Canadian public has been assured, beyond a shadow of doubt, that the Canadians are in full compliance with feed regulations it is prudent that we delay moving forward on reopening the border until this assurance has been made.

The question of what will be best for the U.S. beef industry with respect to reopening the border to Canada is complex. And deciding how best to proceed is not an easy decision to make or an easy step to take.

Segments of the U.S. beef industry are clearly divided on this issue and not in agreement regarding what is best for the future of the U.S. beef industry. This is due in part because of the complex and differing industry segments in vastly different ways.

Although some regions of the U.S. have been hit harder than others, I know we all agree that as a nation, reestablishing the export markets and international market share that the U.S. beef industry once held, is our No. 1 priority. With that common goal in mind, we must use basic common sense and delay going forward with the implementation of this rule at this time.

Further recognizing the short-comings of USDA’s rule, the U.S. District Court for the District of Montana has granted the Ranchers-Cattlemen Action Legal Fund, United Stockgrowers of America’s, R-CALF, request for a preliminary injunction barring USDA’s minimal risk rule from taking effect. This is the second time this year that USDA has lost in court on this issue.

While we still await the judge’s rationale for this decision, I believe the unfortunate reality is that USDA has largely dug its own hole by failing to follow U.S. legal procedure and scientific guidelines in its rule for further reopening U.S. markets to Canadian cattle and beef. Sadly, it is U.S. producers and processors that bear the brunt of USDA’s failings.

This has been characterized that USDA’s final minimal risk rule strays from the World Animal Health Organization’s—OIE—scientific guidelines in important respects. Specifically, USDA has crafted minimal risk criteria that are weaker than OIE standards specify. For instance, USDA’s rule does not spell out what is required to have an effective ruminant-to-ruminant feed ban, an effective BSE surveillance plan, or require a compulsory reporting and intervention system. USDA seems to have purposely dropped elements of the OIE guidelines that might have required the United States to classify Canada as a moderate risk country for BSE instead of minimal risk.

At a hearing of the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry on these issues, USDA attempted to explain these discrepancies by stating that there are redundancies among the several types of measures against BSE, and therefore if a country is weaker in one measure it might compensate in another measure. However, in the case of Canada, USDA has failed to set forth what measures Canada might be stronger in that warrant allowing shipments of beef and cattle feed from Canada to the United States.

I am fully aware that these concerns about Canada are relevant to our systems here in the United States for preventing and detecting the incidence of BSE. Since we first discovered BSE in this country, I have questioned the efficacy of both our restrictions on feeding ruminant byproducts and our BSE surveillance plan. I do not believe there are grave problems that threaten human health, but I do believe there are areas where we need improvement, such as enforcement of our feed rules and the effectiveness of our surveillance efforts.

Ultimately, we need to come to a common agreement with our beef and cattle trading partners regarding an acceptable framework for classifying a country’s risk of BSE. If USDA designates a minimal risk region for trading that does not stand up to the scientific principles that are established by OIE, we will hinder those efforts to reopen markets.

It is a sadly ironic footnote to this debate that, were USDA to correct the deficiencies in its rule, it would not prevent any of the Canadian cattle or beef products that USDA has proposed to allow from entering the United States. It would simply necessitate that some additional safeguards be put into place.

Unfortunately, USDA has turned a deaf ear to these valid concerns about the rule, and that is why we find ourselves here today. I hope USDA is listening to today’s debate and will take these concerns more seriously. Our objective today is not to shut down trade indefinitely but, rather, to obtain the needed changes in the rule to facilitate the restoration of safe trade in cattle and beef products with countries that have experienced BSE. And that includes reopening now-closed markets for U.S. beef exports.

I urge my colleagues to approve this resolution.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, let me be very clear about this. I feel passionately about competition and concentration-based issues.

Last Congress I introduced the Pack- er Ban, the Transparency Act, which requires packers to purchase pigs and cattle for slaughter from the cash market or live bill, which bans any packer which owns more than 20 million head of pigs to slaughtering less than 10 million vertically integrated pigs, and a bill to eliminate mandatory arbitration clauses from production contracts, similar to legislation we passed for car dealers.

I feel strongly that we need to empower producers through legislation based on leveling the playing field, but this resolution is not how we should accomplish that.

By supporting this resolution we are taking a protectionist position instead of encouraging free trade. We might delay the importation of 900,000 feeder cattle. It is not used for consumption. It is not used for consumption. It is safe and the beef processed in this country is safe.

Sound science must be a basis to govern our trade relations around the globe. I believe that such science has been applied here and that the administration’s regulations that would reestablish trade with Canada for live cattle under the new Secretary of Agriculture Ann Veneman are appropriate.

I urge my colleagues to reject this resolution.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. CHAMBLISS. Mr. President, I yield the Senator from Colorado 5 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Colorado is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. ALLARD. Mr. President, questions were raised earlier about the accuracy of dentition; in other words, looking at the eruption of teeth to identify when the animal is 30 months old. That is pretty exact science. It is very reliable; not to say maybe one or two cows will slip through that are off a month or two. That is why the 30-month period was selected, because this is a disease of slow onset, and when they are under 30 months, we ordinarily do not have to worry about them.

Let us suppose somebody has some concerns about an animal that may be infected with BSE coming across a border. What happens is there are certain rules and regulations where one transfers from Canadian regulation over to American regulation. We only have certain points of entry into the United States, and when that animal comes into the United States, it is very adec- quately marked. They have ear tags and they are branded so that if some- thing should happen to the ear tags, they still have the brand on the animal.

The only thing that can happen to that animal is it moves into an approved feedlot, it is isolated in that feedlot, for the purpose of slaughter. So that animal then is processed for slaughter. In the processing procedure, all of the central nervous system tissue—the brain, spinal cord—is discarded. It is not used for consumption. If there is a temperature on that animal, it is not slaughtered.

So when one takes into consideration the final steps of the process, they can feel pretty comfortable that people ought to eat beef. Our beef is safe and the beef processed in this country is safe.

I thank those 19 Senators who joined me in writing a letter to the Japanese Ambassador to open their markets to American beef.

Mr. McAdams states that the failure to open these markets has cost the U.S. cattle producers $175 per head and a cumulative loss of nearly $5 billion in income. We need the full attention of the President and the Senate to support an effort to open these Asian markets to our exports. Under the new Secretary of Agriculture Mike Johanns, the U.S. Department of Agriculture under the new Secretary will take a new look at the situation in Canada.

I have a letter dated March 3. It was sent to me and is from Jim McAdams, president of the National Cattlemen’s Beef Association. He states flatly that, in his opinion, this resolution should be supported for the following reasons, and he gives six reasons.

As a doctor, I fully appreciate our responsibility to protect the American public’s health and safety by making sure our food supply is secure.

At the outset of the bovine spongiform encephalopathy, BSE, scare in December 2003, the former Secretary of Agriculture Ann Veneman worked diligently to address this public health concern. That work has continued under the new Secretary of Agriculture Mike Johanns.

Based on the information I have seen, I believe multiple safeguards are in place both in Canada and the United States to protect human and animal health. Based on a U.S. investigatory team that has examined Canada’s compliance with a feed ban, based on a strong Canadian surveillance system testing cattle most likely to have had BSE, and based on a ban on cattle imports from Canada countries that have had widespread BSE, all reasonable efforts appear to have been taken at this time to minimize the risk of Canadian beef imports into the United States.

Sound science must be a basis to govern our trade relations around the globe. I believe that such science has been applied here and that the administration’s regulations that would reestablish trade with Canada for live cattle are appropriate.

resolution perpetuates fear mongering over nonexistent safety concerns and misrepresents well-documented science doing a disservice to the cattle industry and U.S. consumers.

The USDA has already addressed prior producer concerns of this rule, to the extent that USDA has withdrawn the section of the final rule regarding beef from animals over thirty months.

We urge you to vote NO on this resolution.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, the issue before this body is as clear as it can be. This is going to be a consequential vote, make no mistake about it. This may be a vote that Members look back on and, if they vote against this resolution, they may deeply regret that in the future, because if, God forbid, additional mad cow cases come in from Canada, and that awful disease spreads in America, the consequences to this country could be enormous.

We must happen in Europe. It is not a matter of speculation. In England, 146 people died. Nearly 5 million head were slaughtered in England alone.

Let us connect the dots. In Canada, we know there are four confirmed cases of mad cow disease from cattle raised in that country. In addition, there is one case of a confirmed BSE positive cow, mad cow, that was imported from England. That is five cases. The most recent was a cow born after Canada supposedly passed in the protection. The Canadians’ own inspection service found that in 59 percent of the cases where they tested, animal matter was found where it was not supposed to be. That is what heightens the risk of mad cow disease.

Some of those cases, in fairness, have now been resolved. Seventeen percent of the cases have not been. In Canada, there are 25,000 feed-producing entities on farms. They produce half of all the feed. Only 3 percent have been checked in the last 3 years. There are four known cases of mad cow in Canada. There should be no rush to open this border in the face of that evidence. The risk to this country, the risk to human life, and the risk to this industry is simply too great.

My colleague talks about the National Cattlemen’s position. This is what they have said with respect to opening the border. They said there are 11 conditions that should be met, and 8 of them have clearly not been met. I do not know if they have changed their position subsequently, but this is what they outlined, and 8 of these 11 positions have not been met.

In my own State, the cattlemen have told me to go forward with this resolution. My own State legislature, overwhelmingly Republican, has overwhelmingly approved a resolution asking us to keep this border closed until we can have greater confidence that Canada is enforcing their own regulations.

This is a consequential vote. The potential risk to this country is enormous. Anybody who is betting that Canada is enforcing their regulations is making a bet that I do not think stands much scrutiny.

I will end as I began, at least in this part of the debate. When the Canadian media went on the air in their country to look at what the Canadian testing authority themselves had found, they looked at 70 tests conducted by the Canadian agency, and they found in 59 percent of the cases, animal matter was present where it was not supposed to be. This is a risk that is not worth taking. The consequences could be far too grave for the American people and the American economy.

I yield the floor.

Mr. CHAMBLS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent the order for the quorum call be suspended.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. CHAMBLS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that we proceed as in morning business and that Senator Dole be recognized for 5 minutes, Senator Martinez for 5 minutes, Senator Allard for 3 minutes, and myself for 3 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(The remarks of Mrs. Dole, Mr. Martinez, Mr. Conrad, and Mr. Allard are printed in today’s Record under “Morning Business.”)

Mr. CHAMBLS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the votes in relation to the Dayton and Nelson amendments, which were to follow immediately after the vote on S.J. Res. 4, be set to occur at 2 o’clock.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. CHAMBLS. I further ask unanimous consent that at 12:50 the Senate proceed to a vote on adoption of the pending resolution with the time equally divided between Senators Chambliss and Conrad.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, if I may very briefly sum up, I hope my colleagues will give careful consideration to this vote. This vote would disapprove the ruling from the USDA that the border with Canada should be opened on March 7.

I say respectfully that this runs a risk which we should not take. It is very clear from all of the evidence that Canada is not enforcing the regulations upon which we relied in recommending that the border be opened. The consequences to our country could be serious and dramatic.

Let me close by reminding my colleagues that when mad cow disease got loose in England, 146 people died, and nearly 5 million head of livestock were slaughtered. We cannot and we should not run the risk of prematurely opening a border that would not have been open if there were four confirmed cases of mad cow disease in Canada, and when we know from the Canadians’ own inspection service that in nearly 60 percent of the cases, animal matter was found where it was not supposed to be.

This is a consequential vote. I hope my colleagues will take it seriously. We ought to at least buy time until further investigations are made to assure us that the risk of mad cow disease to vote, know and understand that once again the checks and balances system we have in our Constitution is at work on this issue. There was a court decision yesterday. A temporary restraining order was issued relative to the border and that the border should be opened with Canada for the importation of beef and cattle under 30 months of age.

I want to remind our folks, too, that as you think about how you are going to vote, know and understand that once again the checks and balances system we have in our Constitution is at work on this issue.

Let me read two things. First of all, I have a letter from the Secretary of Agriculture dated March 3, 2005, and I want to read two sentences from the letter.

First, the Secretary says:

If Canadian beef and cattle posed a risk to U.S. human or animal health, USDA would never have proposed reopening the border. This position must be taken into account when governing our trade relations and guiding our actions.

If the USDA and the President find that the Canadian border is not justified by the best scientific understanding of BSE risks, then USDA must not propose reopening the border.

Previously, the Administration Policy dated March 3, 2005, from the Executive Office of the President of the United States, Office of Management and Budget, as follows:
The Administration strongly opposes Senate passage of S.J. Res. 4, a resolution to disapprove the rule submitted by the United States Department of Agriculture (USDA) with respect to establishing minimal risk regions and re-opening the Canadian border for beef and cattle imports. USDA’s rule is the product of a multi-year, deliberative, transparent, and science-based process to ensure that human and animal health are fully protected. S.J. Res. 4, which would prevent the reopening of our Canadian border, would cause continued serious economic disruption of the U.S. beef and cattle industry, undermine U.S. efforts to ensure that international trade standards are based on science, and impede ongoing U.S. efforts to reopen foreign markets now closed to U.S. beef exports. If S.J. Res. 4 were presented to the President, he would veto the bill.

Mr. CONRAD. How much time remains?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is 56 seconds remaining.

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, I say quickly in response, no court can relieve the responsibilities of this vote from our Members. Every Member is going to be responsible for the vote we cast. When my colleague says this is not a health issue, I respect fully disagree. This is profoundly a health issue. If mad cow disease is ever unleashed in this country, God forbid, we will find out what an acute health issue it is.

I urge my colleagues to support the resolution. It is the prudent, careful, and cautious thing to do.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

Mr. CONRAD. How much time remains?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is a sufficient second.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the joint resolution.

The joint resolution was ordered to the desk.

The motion to lay on the table was set aside.

The joint resolution (S.J. Res. 4) was passed, as follows:

S.J. RES. 4

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That Congress disapproves the rule submitted by the Department of Agriculture relating to the establishment of minimal risk zones for the introduction of bovine spongiform encephalopathy (published at 70 Fed. Reg. 460 (2005)), and such rule shall have no force or effect.

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote we cast. We are going to have some hearings on similar matters in the Banking Committee, and I hope Senator DAYTON would work with us in that regard.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maryland.

Mr. SARBANES. Mr. President, I rise to underscore the statement just made by the chairman of the Banking Committee. This issue embraced in this amendment is very far-reaching. There have been no hearings on it. The chairman has indicated he intends to do some hearings on issues relating to the matter that is before us. It does not seem to me to be a wise or prudent course to consider what would, in effect, be a very major legislative step in the absence of appropriate consideration by the committee of jurisdiction; therefore, I intend to also oppose this amendment, primarily on those grounds.

The substance is a complicated issue, and in any event it is very clear it needs to be very carefully examined and considered. I do not think that has occurred in this instance, and I hope my colleagues would perceive the matter in the same way.

I thank the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the pending amendments are set aside.

The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 256) to amend title 11 of the United States Code, and for other purposes.

Pending:

Leavy Amendment No. 26, to restrict access to certain personal information in bankruptcy documents.

Dayton Amendment No. 31, to limit the amount of interest that can be charged on exempt debtors from means testing if their financial problems were caused by identity theft.

Durbin Amendment No. 38, to discourage predatory lending practices.

Nelson of Florida Amendment No. 37, to exempt debtors from means testing if their financial problems were caused by identity theft.

Nelson Amendment No. 29, to amend the wage priority provision and to amend the payment of insurance benefits to retirees.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alabama.

Mr. SHELBY. Mr. President, I rise in opposition to the amendment offered by my colleague from Minnesota, Senator DAYTON. Basically, he has offered an amendment to create a Federal usury law. While I understand and appreciate the good intentions of my colleague, I cannot support what amounts to Federal price controls. This is a mode of regulation from a bygone day.

Price controls are a failed experiment that often hurt those who they are intended to help. If the price control envisioned in this amendment was never triggered, it would set a very bad precedent.

Credit underwriting is the assessment of the risk. Interest rates are intended to reflect the risk of a particular credit. They have to.

While I appreciate my colleague’s concerns, I fear that his amendment will result in credit becoming less accessible to more Americans. Market forces are the best regulator of prices. As chairman of the Banking Committee, which has jurisdiction over consumer credit and price controls, I must oppose this amendment and encourage my colleagues to do so. We are going to have some hearings on similar matters in the Banking Committee, and I hope Senator DAYTON would work with us in that regard.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the pending amendments are set aside.

The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 256) to amend title 11 of the United States Code, and for other purposes.

Amendment No. 44

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:
(Purpose: To amend the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 to provide for an increase in the Federal minimum wage)

At the appropriate place, insert the following:

TITLE I—FEDERAL MINIMUM WAGE

SEC. 01. SHORT TITLE.
This Act may be cited as the “Fair Minimum Wage Act of 2005”.

SEC. 02. MINIMUM WAGE.
(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 6(a)(1) of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 (29 U.S.C. 206(a)(1)) is amended to read as follows:

"(1) Except as otherwise provided in this section, not less than—
"(A) $5.85 an hour, beginning on the 60th day after the date of enactment of this Act and every 6 months thereafter until the date of enactment of the Fair Minimum Wage Act of 2005; and
"(B) $5.85 an hour, beginning 12 months after that 60th day; and
"(C) $7.25 an hour, beginning 24 months after that 60th day;"

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall take effect 60 days after the date of enactment of this Act.

SEC. 03. APPLICABILITY OF MINIMUM WAGE TO THE COMMONWEALTH OF THE NORTHERN MARIANA ISLANDS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 6 of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 (29 U.S.C. 206) shall apply to the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands.

(b) TRANSITION.—Notwithstanding subsection (a), the minimum wage applicable to the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands under this subsection is equal to the minimum wage set forth in such section.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, this amendment will increase the minimum wage an hour to $7.25 an hour over roughly a 2-year period. My friend from Pennsylvania, Senator SANTORUM, will offer his own minimum wage amendment, and he will do so later in the afternoon. We intend to debate this and vote on it, subject to the agreements of the leaders, probably late Monday afternoon, and we will take the opportunity during Monday afternoon to get into greater details. Both Senator SANTORUM and I have agreed that we would each make a brief presentation on this item at this time.

We have not seen an increase in the minimum wage for 8 years. At the present time, the minimum wage has fallen to the second lowest level in the last 45 years. Since 1938, the minimum wage has been increased on eight different occasions. On most of those occasions it has been with bipartisan support. Republicans have recognized that we ought to treat people fairly and decently, and those at the lower level of the economic ladder ought to be able to have a livable wage. President Eisenhower felt that way, President Ford felt that way, and the first President Bush felt that way. We are asking the Senate to join us in going back to having the minimum wage at least increase to a reasonable level.

Now, who are the minimum wage earners? The minimum wage earners are men and women of dignity. Even at a minimum wage, they work hard, they take a sense of pride in what they achieve, and they do a hard day’s work. More often than not, they not only have one job, but they have two jobs and sometimes even three jobs.

What sort of jobs do the minimum wage workers have? First, many of them are teachers’ aides in our school systems, working with the young students of America. Many others are working in our nursing homes, looking after the parents who were part of the “greatest generation,” and women who sacrificed for their own children, men and women who brought this country through the Great Depression. These are men and women of dignity who take a sense of pride in their work.

Beyond that, who are they? This is basically a women’s issue because the great majority of the millions of people who would benefit from this minimum wage increase are women. It is a children’s issue. One-third of those women have children. So it is a women’s issue and it is a children’s issue. It is also a civil rights issue because many who earn the minimum wage are men and women of color. So it is a minority’s issue, a children’s issue, a civil rights issue, and, most of all, it is a fairness issue. Americans understand fairness. What they understand is anyone who will work 40 hours a week, 52 weeks of the year, should not have to live in poverty in the United States of America. That is what this issue is all about. That is what the vote will be on, on Monday next, whether we are going to say to the Members of this body who have said to us, millions of our fellow citizens that although they will still be earning below the poverty rate.

What the amendment will do is the following. It is the equivalent of 2 years of childcare. It will provide full tuition for a child in a community college, or a year-and-a-half of heat and electricity, or more than a year of groceries, or more than 9 months of rent.

This might not sound like very much to the Members of this body who have seen millions of times since we have last increased the minimum wage. But we ought to be able to say here and now that we will join the traditions of an Eisenhower, a Ford, and the first President Bush, Democrat and Republican Presidents alike, and say, “Yes, America is a country who work at some of toughest and most difficult jobs, men and women of pride and dignity, ought to be paid a fair wage.” That is what this amendment is about. We look forward to a further debate when we have the opportunity to do so on Monday next.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New York.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to temporarily set aside the pending amendments to offer an amendment. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. SCHUMER. The amendment is at the desk. I ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the amendment.

The assistant legislative clerk read the following:

The Senator from New York [Mr. SCHUMER], for himself, Mr. BINGAMAN, Mr. DURBIN, and Mrs. FEINSTEIN, proposes an amendment numbered 42.

Mr. SCHUMER. I ask unanimous consent the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To limit the exemption for asset protection trusts)

SEC. 332. ASSET PROTECTION TRUSTS.
Section 548 of title 11, United States Code, as amended by this Act, is further amended by adding at the end the following:

"(c)(2) The trustee may avoid a transfer of an interest in the debtor in property made by an individual debtor within 10 years before the date of the filing of the petition to an asset protection trust if the amount of the transfer or the aggregate amount of all transfers to the trust or to similar trusts within such 10-year period exceeds $125,000, to the extent that debtor has a beneficial interest in the trust does not become property of the estate by reason of section 541(c)(2). For purposes of this subsection, a fund or account of the kind specified in section 529(a)(12) is not an asset protection trust."
The amendment has been read.

Mr. SCHUMER. It is in order so I will yield the floor.

Mr. KENNEDY. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. SCHUMER. I am happy to.

Mr. KENNEDY. One of the concerns many of us had in this bill is the interest of fairness. I think fairness ought to be standard for any piece of legislation. As it is currently before us, we will have those who will be able, with their homestead exemption, to preserve homesteads valued at millions and millions of dollars and, on the other side, individuals will lose completely all of their savings because they will lose their homes. There is no fairness there.

The Senator from New York is pointing out in another area the issue of fairness. Those who have resources and have wealth and have the contacts will be able to get away with abuses that are basically middle-income working families, the working poor who are trying to get by and have seen an explosion of different costs, on housing, on health care, on tuition, will be buried.

That will be another dramatic example where those who have it will be able to preserve it and those who have been struggling will lose it.

Mr. SCHUMER. I thank my colleague. He is exactly on point. It is outrageous that someone worth millions or billions of dollars can declare bankruptcy and then shield their assets in this trust so they do not come before the bankruptcy court. The Senator, my friend from Massachusetts, is exactly right; we are talking about people who make $45,000 and we are going after them, yet we are allowing billionaires to use this loophole. Of course, it is not all millionaires and billionaires, it is a small number who go into bankruptcy and who can, in effect, close it. We will debate this amendment later this afternoon, but let us hope that we do not have a lockstep, let’s vote “no” on everything. It would be hypocritical to say we have to close abuses on middle-income people and not close abuses on the very wealthy. I will be happy to continue to yield to my friend.

Mr. KENNEDY. I will ask a final question. A third of all the bankruptcies are among those who are earning below the poverty line. Does the Senator think they will be able to take advantage of this loophole?

Mr. SCHUMER. I would say to my colleague from Massachusetts, they can’t even afford the lawyer to write the first page of the trust that these others can. Again, the question answers itself. What is good for the goose is good for the gander. What is good for someone below the poverty line certainly ought to be good for millionaires and billionaires who want to abuse the bankruptcy process.

I yield the floor in deference to my colleague from Pennsylvania.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Alexander). The Senator from Pennsylvania is recognized.

Mr. SCHUMER. I am happy to.

Mr. SANTORUM. Mr. President, I understand I only have a couple of minutes, so I will be brief. I want to speak of the issue of minimum wage. I know the Senator from Massachusetts has offered this amendment on the minimum wage to this package. I will be opposing the Kennedy amendment and will be offering an alternate to this amendment. But let me explain first why I oppose the Kennedy amendment. First, it doesn’t belong on this bill. Even the amendment I will offer as an alternative does not belong on the bill. I have spoken to Senator Kennedy and others about what I believe is the appropriate place for this discussion. That is the welfare reform bill. It will be a bill that will come here and have a lot of amendments and it focuses on how we help those who are transitioning from welfare to work, how we help them and give them the support they need to be able to have work that pays well enough for them to get out of poverty. I think this discussion fits best, and I would argue has the better chance of actually ending up in a final bill and being sent to the President, on the welfare bill as opposed to here, which I think everyone recognizes is a bill that has been worked on for years and years and years.

We have a bill that has bipartisan support, with the hope of trying to get this to the President at a propitious time. So I would make the argument, No. 1, first and foremost I would oppose the Kennedy amendment on that ground.

Second, I suggest——

Mr. KENNEDY. Will the Senator yield for a question on that part?

Mr. SANTORUM. I only have about 1 minute and I am happy to yield to the Senator from Massachusetts for a brief question.

Mr. KENNEDY. I offered the amendment on the TANF bill last year and the bill was pulled because it was offered as an amendment. So that is part of our frustration.

Mr. SANTORUM. I respect the Senator from Massachusetts. I think there is a different environment. I think there is a broad group who will support the reauthorization of welfare and deal with that and get a bill passed and sent to Congress this year, and you will certainly have my support trying to get that done in a fashion that I believe reinstates work requirements, which have fallen off because of the drop in the welfare rolls across America.

The second reason I oppose the Kennedy amendment is because the increase is too dramatic at this point. We are talking about an over $2 increase, a 40-percent increase in the minimum wage. While I do support a modest proposal, something about half that amount, I think that is the wise thing to do in this economy, which is not to put a jolt of that nature into what is already a concern about inflation. To be able to put that kind of minimum wage increase in I think would fuel inflationary fears. It would have strong negative repercussions in our economy, broadly.

While I do understand the need now that it has been almost 8 years without a minimum wage increase, I think what I will be offering is a modest one that would comport with and will fit within this economy. We do some things to address the issue of small businesses, which the amendment of the Senator from Massachusetts does not do.

We don’t want to disproportionately affect those poor communities, or hurt the small business neighborhood store or cleaners or whatever the case may be that is trying to make ends meet by putting this kind of increased cost on them as high as the Kennedy amendment would be, or even what I would suggest, without some sort of relief to compensate very small businesses. I think that would be unwise and it would hurt the community. We need help by providing more resources. Increasing the minimum wage does not help those small businesses in that community. I think it would have a bad, overall negative effect on the very poor communities of our society.

I see my time is up. I yield the floor.

Mr. DAYTON. Mr. President, this legislation is entitled “The Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act.” Unfortunately, there is actually very little consumer protection in it.

My amendment would add some much-needed consumer protections to the bill and end one of the principal abuses that drives people into bankruptcy—exorbitant interest rates.

My amendment would limit the maximum annual interest rate that could be charged to any consumer by any creditor to 30 percent. Thirty percent is still a very high interest rate—far too high, in my view.

Inflation is currently running around 2 percent. The interest rate on 3-month Treasury bills is 2.75 percent. The prime lending rate is 5.5 percent. So 30 percent is exorbitantly high, but it is much less than the 384 percent that is being charged by money centers in Minnesota, or the 335-percent annual interest rate charged by centers in Wisconsin, or the 1,995-percent interest rate being charged by the County Bank of Rehoboth Beach in Delaware. That is not just predatory lending, that is “terroristic” lending.

My amendment would apply to any rate of interest charged by any creditor to any borrower for any purpose. However, it would not preempt any State, local, or private restriction that imposes a lower rate of interest.

For example, 21 States, which include my home State of Minnesota, cap interest rates for credit cards. Minnesota's ceiling is 18 percent. That would not apply. Yet when money centers operate in Minnesota at 384 percent interest, that limit would be 30 percent.

Again, under my amendment, whenerver a creditor is limited to a lower interest rate, that lower rate would apply.
Whenever there is no interest cap, or wherever that cap is higher than this amendment's 30-percent limit, then this 30-percent annual interest rate would apply.

I urge my colleagues to support this amendment. It has the support of the Consumer Federation of America, the National Association of Consumer Advocates, and the U.S. PIRG.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, let me just say a few words about why this amendment is not a good amendment and one that should be voted down.

This would cap the interest rate for consumer credit extensions at 30 percent in this country, and, frankly, would preempt many States' usury laws unless the State has a lower interest rate.

In other words, preemption of State laws is something we sought to avoid in this bill. We have refused to do so in the homestead provisions, so there is no reason to touch the State usury laws as well.

There is no dispute that lending agencies are already heavily regulated.
We have already restricted usury rates on first-lien loans. Additionally, special usury provisions in the National Bank Act and Federal Deposit Act pre-empt State usury laws for national State banks.

We did not preempt these State laws haphazardly as we do today by passing the Dayton amendment.

I believe we should stick with the bill as written. We have taken this into consideration. We have worked long and hard over 8 years to get this right.
And, frankly, I think this amendment is an inappropriate amendment and should be voted down.

I hope our colleagues will vote it down.

I yield the remainder of our time.

Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I rise in opposition to the Nelson amendment, although I commend the Senator from Florida in his work on this issue of identity theft. This amendment is written so broadly, it actually invites fraud against its well-intentioned purposes.
I understand there will be several hearings on the issue of identity theft, and I look forward to working with my friend from Florida and my other colleagues to find a solution. But for now, this is written so broadly that I think it is actually invites fraud. I hope my colleagues will oppose the amendment because it would cause a lot of difficulty on this bill.

Mr. NELSON of Florida. Will the Senators yield for a clarification?

Mr. HATCH. I am happy to yield.

Mr. NELSON of Florida. Does the Senator realize that in my amendment anyone who incurs less than $20,000 of debt as a result of identity theft would not be eligible to become an exception under the bankruptcy bill?

Mr. HATCH. I do. But it is written so broadly that anybody who claims they have been defrauded, whether they have or have not, qualifies under your amendment. That is way too broad under this bill. I am happy to work with the distinguished Senator, and we will see what we can do later in this Congress. I hope everybody will vote down this amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, reserving the right to object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I did not quite understand the last portion of the unanimous consent request. I understand Senator BYRD shall be recognized for 10 minutes, and then what transpires?

Mr. DORGAN. Then we move to the Durbin amendment, with a vote at 3:25.

Mr. DORGAN. My understanding is Senator BYRD will take 10 minutes. I have no objection to the vote at 3:25, but I ask unanimous consent that the request be modified and I be recognized following Senator BYRD’s comments.

Mr. DORGAN. I ask unanimous consent that Senator DORGAN be recognized at the conclusion of Senator BYRD’s remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from West Virginia.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I thank the Chair, and I thank Senator McCONNELL and also my own leadership for the kindness in arranging for me to speak at this time.

(The remarks of Mr. BYRD pertaining to the introduction of S. 515 and S. 514 are located in today’s Record under “Statements of introduced Bills and Joint Resolutions.”)

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, we are dealing with the bankruptcy bill. I am going to send an amendment to the desk. I ask the pending amendment be set aside so my amendment may be considered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(Purpose: To establish a special committee of the Senate to investigate the awarding and carrying out of contracts to conduct activities in Afghanistan and Iraq and to fight the war on terrorism)

Mr. DORGAN. I send the amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows: The Senator from North Dakota (Mr. DORGAN), for himself and Mr. DURBIN, proposes an amendment numbered 45.

Mr. DORGAN. I ask unanimous consent the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is printed in today’s Record under “Text of Amendments.”

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I send that amendment to the desk on behalf of myself and Senator DURBIN, who joins me as a cosponsor of the amendment.

The The bankruptcy reform bill on the floor of the Senate today ostensibly deals with the subject of those who would attempt to cheat with respect to filing bankruptcy. We have had a lot of discussion on the floor about the abuse of bankruptcy. There is no question about that; there is some of that. It is called cheating. But there is another form of cheating going on now to which very little attention is paid, and my amendment attempts to deal with it.

I am going to put up a chart that shows $2 million dollars on a table, in a room somewhere in Iraq. These are Americans holding this cash. This cash is taken in a plastic bag to pay contractors in Iraq. The contractors are told “bring a bag and we will fill your bag with cash.” That is the way you pay bills over there.

This particular picture was given to us by this gentleman here, who was working in Iraq. He said it was like the Wild West; just bring your bag and fill it with cash.

His testimony, which we heard at a hearing of the Democratic Policy Committee, followed the testimony of others that we have received about the massive waste, fraud, and abuse in contracting that has been going in Iraq. The American taxpayers are taking it on the chin, but none of the authorizing committees of jurisdiction in the U.S. Senate are holding hearings about this.

Well, the Democratic Policy Committee has held some oversight hearings. The testimony at the hearings is absolutely breathtaking.

Halliburton charges for 42,000 meals to be served in a day to American soldiers. It is determined, however, that the company is only serving 14,000 meals a day. So they are charging the taxpayer for 42,000 meals to be served to soldiers when in fact they are only serving 14,000 meals.

We hear about the payment of $7,500 a month to lease SUV vehicles. We hear about the ordering of 50,000 pounds of nails, that turned out to be of the wrong size, and just get dumped by the side of the road. We hear about $40 to $45 a case for soda pop.

A senior manager from the Defense Department, who used to be in charge of providing fuel for vehicles in war zones, testified that Halliburton was charging $1 more per gallon for gasoline than they should have. There are overcharges adding up to $61 million on that issue alone.

One fellow came to a DPC hearing and he held up towels. He worked for a subsidiary of Halliburton. He ordered towels because the soldiers needed the towels and they got a requisition order. Guess what? KBR, a subsidiary, charged nearly double the cost of regular towels because they insisted on having the KBR logo embroidered on the towels. So the U.S. taxpayer gets soaked because the company wants their logo on the towels. It is extraordinary what is happening here, and nobody seems to care that much.

We heard of contractors that were driving $85,000 brand new trucks in the country of Iraq, and whenever they had flat tires or a plugged fuel line, they abandoned the vehicles and just bought new ones. The American taxpayer is paying for all of that, and nobody seems to care.

Well, in the years of 1940 and 1941, Harry Truman, as we were about to enter World War II, got into his car and drove around this country touring air bases and military installations. He came back and suggested a special committee be impaneled in Congress.

That committee became the Truman Committee, and was active for several years. They saved, by today’s accounts, somewhere close to $15 billion by exposing waste, fraud, and abuse. That was a Democratic Senator working at a time when there was a Democrat in the White House. He didn’t care whether anyone was embarrased. On behalf of the American taxpayer, he insisted that we get to the bottom of waste, fraud, and abuse.

I am going to offer today an amendment that would establish a special bipartisan committee of the Senate on war, reconstruction, and contracting. Four members of the committee would be selected from the majority and three members from the minority. It would have subpoena power, and it would put a magnifying glass on the massive amounts of money being wasted, being abused, and in some cases simply being defrauded from the American taxpayer.

We owe it to the American taxpayers to do this.

We have pending right now before this body another request for $82 billion. Most of that is to provide resources for the soldiers, not all of it but most of it. In addition to that, there is some $35 billion to this yet unspent for the reconstruction of Iraq.

That is American taxpayers’ money which is in the pipeline.

You hear about all of this waste, fraud, and abuse, and the whistleblowers, and you ask, Who is looking after all this? Who is minding the store? Who is looking after all this? Who is looking after all this?

Mr. President, it is this committee, with members from both sides, who will have this kind of a task. It is this committee, with members from both sides, who will have this kind of a task.
that went to Iraq. Two guys went to Iraq with no experience and no money. They just showed up. They wanted to be a contracting company. Guess what? They won a contract, all right. They had delivered to them $2 million in cash, and they were suddenly a security contractor at the airport. Then their employees turned whistleblowers on them. They said the company was taking forklifts, repainting them, and selling them back, and setting up front companies so they could buy and sell overinflated charges. A couple of employees turned whistleblowers and they were threatened to be killed for doing it. That company, I am told, got over $100 million in contracting in the country of Iraq.

One final point: Do you know that when the allegation was made that this contractor was ripping off the Coalition Provisional Authority, which was a U.S. creation and represented us in Iraq, the U.S. Justice Department failed to intervene under the False Claims Act because they said defrauding the Coalition Provisional Authority is not the same as defrauding the American taxpayer. There is something fundamentally wrong with that. This amendment would address that as well, by specifying that the investigation called for in this amendment should include the Coalition Provisional Authority spending.

I have the amendment at the desk. I said I offered it on behalf of my colleague, Senator DURBIN, and myself, and I hope others as we move along. I understand this is not strictly a bankruptcy amendment, but we must waste billions of dollars of the American taxpayers’ money.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, will the distinguished Senator yield for a question?

Mr. DORGAN. I am happy to yield. Mr. BYRD. Actually, the question will be very easy to answer. But for the moment, I must say to the very distinguished Senator that this is one Senator who is not at all surprised at what he found. I can remember when we had Mr. Bremer before the Senate Appropriations Committee to be heard. I asked him, after a while during which he delivered testimony and answered questions, if he would be able to remain back before the committee for some additional questions—meaning the same day—if the chairman should ask him to do so. His answer was, “I am too busy.”

I came back to our caucus on that day, and I believe he came to the caucus at the same time. I told this to my caucus while Mr. Bremer was there. It was a shocking thing to me—an individual claiming he is too busy, and yet he is asking for quite a great amount of money to be appropriated, $2 billion.

I am not at all surprised at this. I believe as time goes on we will find more and more of these kinds of stories. I congratulate the distinguished Senator on the excellent work he is doing in bringing these things to light.

Now the question: Will the distinguished Senator add me as a cosponsor to his amendment?

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I would be happy to do so.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senator from West Virginia be added as a cosponsor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection. The amendment (No. 39) was rejected.

Mr. BYRD. I thank the Senator. Mr. DORGAN. I thank the Senator from West Virginia.

I see the hour of 3:25 has arrived. I believe by a previous order we have other business. I appreciate the opportunity to offer my amendment, and hopefully we will have a vote on it at some point in the future.

Mr. President, I ask the yeas and nays on the amendment. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The question is on agreeing to the amendment. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. DURBIN. I announce that the Senator from Wisconsin (Mr. FEINGOLD) and the Senator from Hawaii (Mr. INOUYE) are necessarily absent.

The amendment (No. 38) was rejected.

Mr. PRYOR. Mr. President, I offer my amendment, and hopefully we will have a vote on it at some point in the future.

The amendment (No. 39) was rejected. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To amend the Fair Credit Reporting Act to prohibit the use of any information in any consumer report by any credit card issuer that is unrelated to the transactions and experience of the card issuer with the consumer to increase the annual percentage rate applicable to credit extended to the consumer, and for other purposes.)

At the appropriate place, insert the following:

SEC. 2. LIMITATION ON USE OF CONSUMER REPORTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 604(d) of the Fair Credit Reporting Act (15 U.S.C. 1681d(b)) is amended to read as follows:

“(4) LIMITATION ON USE OF CONSUMER REPORT.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—A credit card issuer may not use any negative information contained in a consumer report to increase any annual percentage rate applicable to a credit card account, or to remove or increase any introductory annual percentage rate of interest applicable to such account, for any reason other than an action or omission of the card holder that is directly related to such account.

“(2) NOTICE TO CONSUMER.—The limitation under paragraph (1) on the use by a credit card issuer of information in a consumer report shall be clearly and conspicuously disclosed to the consumer by the credit card issuer in any disclosure or statement required to be made to the consumer under this title.

“(b) TECHNICAL AND CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section 604(a)(3)(F)(ii) of the Fair Credit Reporting Act (15 U.S.C. 1681a(a)(3)(F)(ii)) is amended by inserting "subject to subsection (d)," before "to review".

Mr. PRYOR. Mr. President, I offer my amendment because I want to address an issue in the credit card industry. Basically, what happens with some credit companies and some of them, certainly—is they make it a practice to look at their cardholders’ credit reports on a monthly basis. When they find that the cardholder has a late payment maybe on a utility bill, or a car note, or whatever the case may be, they will actually raise the interest rate on the cardholder, even though they may have made every credit card payment on time. They use that as a justification to raise the interest rate on the cardholder. I think that is an unfair practice. It is fraught with all kinds of problems, including the problem that many of these credit reports contain errors. I have certainly been subject to those. I am sure almost every Senator in this Chamber has been subject to an error on their credit report at one time or another. The credit card companies don’t take that into consideration. They will routinely increase interest rates, I think it is an unfair business practice.

We are talking about bankruptcy. We all know that one of the main reasons people get into financial trouble is because they have credit cards. Sometimes they abuse them. Sometimes the interest rate is so high that it creates great difficulty on our citizens.

I think this amendment is important. I think it is one we can certainly justify, and I think it is one that, if people take a look at it, they would think this is a bad industry practice and this is a way to, hopefully, decrease the number of bankruptcies and the number of families in America who get into financial trouble, if some of these hidden methods of increasing interest rates are taken away.

With that, I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 48

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I have sought recognition to support a technical amendment, which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the pending amendment is laid aside. The clerk will report the amendment.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. SPECTER] proposes an amendment numbered 48.

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To increase bankruptcy filing fees to pay for the additional duties of United States Trustees and the new bankruptcy judges added by this Act)

On page 194, strike line 13 and all that follows through page 195, line 22, and insert the following:

SEC. 325. UNITED STATES TRUSTEE PROGRAM FILING FEE INCREASE.

(a) ACTIONS UNDER CHAPTER 7, 11, OR 13 OF TITLE XII OF UNITED STATES CODE.—Section 1930(a) of title 28, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by striking paragraph (1) and inserting the following:

"(1) For a case commenced under—

"(A) chapter 7 of title 11, $200; and

"(B) chapter 13 of title 11, $150; and

(2) in paragraph (2), by striking "5 percent" and inserting "75 percent"; and

(c) COLLECTIVE BENEFITS.—The amount of miscellaneous bankruptcy fees. Section 406(b) of the Judiciary Appropriations Act, 1990 (28 U.S.C. 1931 note) is amended by striking "pursuant to 28 U.S.C. section 1931(b)") and all that follows through "28 U.S.C. section 1931(b) and inserting "under section 1930(b) of title 28, United States Code, 31.25 percent of the fees collected under section 1930(a)(1)(A) of that title, 30.00 percent of the fees collected under section 1930(a)(1)(B) of that title, and 25 percent of the fees collected under section 1930(a)(3) of that title shall be deposited as offsetting receipts to the fund established under section 1931 of that title."

(d) SUNSET DATE.—The amendments made by subsections (b) and (c) shall be effective during the 2-year period beginning on the date of enactment of this Act.

(e) USE OF INCREASED RECEIPTS.—

(1) JUDGES’ SALARIES AND BENEFITS.—The amount of fees collected under paragraphs (1) and (3) of section 1930(a) of title 28, United States Code, during the 5-year period beginning on the date of enactment of this Act, that is greater than the amount that would have been collected under amendments made by subsection (a) that had not taken effect shall be used, to the extent necessary, to pay the salaries and benefits of the judges appointed pursuant to section 453 of title 28, United States Code.

(2) REMAINDER.—Any amount described in paragraph (1), which is not used for the purpose described in paragraph (1), shall be deposited into the Treasury of the United States to the extent necessary to offset the decrease in governmental receipts resulting from the amendments made by subsections (b) and (c).

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, this amendment, as I have noted, makes a technical correction to ensure that the bill does not violate our budget laws. It has come to my attention that the bankruptcy bill could draw a potential budget point of order. To the extent there are concerns that the increase in bankruptcy filing fees will make it more difficult for financially strapped debtors to use chapter 7, let me remind my colleagues that I pushed for an amendment in committee during the 105th Congress to give bankruptcy courts the discretion to waive filing fees for lower income debtors. The committee accepted that amendment and it is now embodied in section 418 of the bill.

This amendment removes a significant procedural obstacle that could jeopardize the prospects of this bill’s passage in the Senate. As such, I urge my colleagues to support this amendment.

What this all boils down to is we need new bankruptcy judges. We have to pay their salaries and their health benefits, and we do not want to run afoul of the budget laws which would strike down the entire bill unless we got 60 votes.

Mr. President, in the absence of any other Senator seeking recognition, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 49

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to set aside the point of order because of two provisions in the amendments made by subsections (b) and (c). By doing so, we estimate that the bill will provide sufficient offsets to cover the potential budgetary problems facing this bill.

Specifically, the amount of the increased filing fees that is greater than the amount that would have been collected, but for this legislation, is earmarked towards the payment of salaries and benefits for the judges. The remaining amounts from the increased filing fees are also used to offset the Federal revenue loss caused by section 325 for the 2 years that the provision stays in existence. I believe this amendment represents the best way of creating offsets within the bill. It will obviate the need to strike the bankruptcy judgeships provision altogether and, most importantly, allow this bill to survive a potential budget point of order.

To the extent that the provision in bankruptcy filing fees will make it more difficult for financially strapped debtors to use chapter 7, let me remind my colleagues that I pushed for an amendment in committee during the 105th Congress to give bankruptcy courts the discretion to waive filing fees for lower income debtors. The committee accepted that amendment and it is now embodied in section 418 of the bill.

This amendment removes a significant procedural obstacle that could jeopardize the prospects of this bill’s passage in the Senate. As such, I urge my colleagues to support this amendment.

What this all boils down to is we need new bankruptcy judges. We have to pay their salaries and their health benefits, and we do not want to run afoul of the budget laws which would strike down the entire bill unless we got 60 votes.

Mr. President, in the absence of any other Senator seeking recognition, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.
The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Illinois [Mr. DURBIN] proposes an amendment numbered 49.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To protect employees and retirees from corporate practices that deprive them of their earnings and retirement savings when a business files for bankruptcy.)

On page 499, strike line 3 and all that follows through page 500, line 2, and insert the following:

The amendment is as follows:

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To protect employees and retirees from corporate practices that deprive them of their earnings and retirement savings when a business files for bankruptcy.)

The amendment is as follows:

The amendment is as follows:

The amendment is as follows:

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, this is the bankruptcy reform bill. It is about 500 pages long. If I went to Illinois and asked the people I represent what they think we should do when it comes to bankruptcy, I am virtually certain that the first thing they would say to me is, you have to do something about these horrible corporate bankruptcies, Enron, WorldCom, and the list goes on.

We let them off the hook, if we are going to go to Illinois and ask to be declared bankrupt and start their lives again. That is what this bill addresses.

My amendment goes to the 5 pages about corporate bankruptcy. I believe this: If we are going to hold Americans and families to a high moral standard, if we are going to say to them that before they go into a bankruptcy court, pay their bills and prove to the court that they cannot pay their bills before we let them off the hook, if we are going to say that it is immoral and unjust for someone to go into a bankruptcy court and ask to be declared bankrupt, hurt shareholders, hurt employees, hurt investors in pension plans, and assets behind, if they, in fact, can pay, then fair enough.

But my amendment says, if we are talking about justice and high moral standards, should they not be held to a high moral standard? Should they not be held to the standard of justice? Sadly, this bill does not do it.

When a corporation files for bankruptcy, their workers are left standing at the back of the line behind all the other creditors. Many of them lose their retirement savings, health care benefits and opportunities to get back to work and back on their feet. Are these workers who, at the expense of their own health, went to work every day, played by the rules, paid into their own, in most circumstances, are carved out by the rules, going into a bankruptcy court. Ninety-nine percent of this bill relates to corporations at all. Ninety-nine percent relates to individuals and families who, through no fault of their own, in most circumstances, are wronged by debtors and go into bankruptcy court. Ninety-nine percent of this bill relates to bankruptcies of people who have a medical diagnosis they never anticipated and end up in treatment incurring medical expenses that their health insurance does not cover. That is almost half of the cases in bankruptcy court.

So this bill is designed to make the bankruptcy process more difficult for those individuals and families to get bankrupt and lessen debt bailouts. What this is about. So that at the end of the day, when we pass this legislation—and surely we will—the credit card companies and the banks will end up keeping people in debt longer. So that people who we said is bad and done, will not be able to walk out of that court, having been declared bankrupt, and start their lives again. That is what this bill addresses.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, this is the bankruptcy reform bill. It is about 500 pages long. If I went to Illinois and asked the people I represent what they think we should do when it comes to bankruptcy, I am virtually certain that the first thing they would say to me is, you have to do something about these horrible corporate bankruptcies, Enron, WorldCom, and the list goes on. When a corporation files for bankruptcy, their workers are left standing at the back of the line behind all the other creditors. Many of them lose their retirement savings, health care benefits and opportunities to get back to work and back on their feet. Are these workers who, at the expense of their own health, went to work every day, played by the rules, paid into their own, in most circumstances, are carved out by the rules, going into a bankruptcy court.
left unprotected. They lost their pension. They lost their benefits. They have nothing.

The problem is not limited to just steel companies. WorldCom, a telecommunications company; Adelphia, a cable company; Enron, an energy company; and Conseco, an insurance company; Financial Corporation of America and HomeFed, banks; United Airlines, U.S. Airways, TWA, all in the transportation business; Texaco, K-Mart, Polaroid, household names. These are just the once great corporate giants that ended up in bankruptcy. They employed hundreds of thousands of Americans, but once the companies filed for bankruptcy, their employees were left with nowhere to turn.

This bankruptcy bill does not even talk about those bankruptcies and those employees and the problems that they face.

Many of the companies that filed for bankruptcy over the past few years are also associated with world-class scandals: Global Crossing, WorldCom, Adelphia, and, of course, the granddaddy of them all, Enron. Those corporate giant names are synonymous with corruption, malfeasance, and greed; they are synonymous, from my point of view, with immoral corporate conduct and unjust treatment of their shareholders, workers, and retirees. It is even more painful to think that while the employees and retirees of these scandal-tainted companies were left with little more than their dignity, the corporate executives and the insiders escaped with their treasures.

When companies are headed for bankruptcy, the corporate insiders know it is going to happen long before the worker out in the plant, and that is especially true when those same insiders are cooking the books. They know where the corporate loot is hidden, and they are going to get their hands on it when the time comes.

One might say that as soon as he saw the tip of the iceberg far ahead of the ship, the captain of the Titanic sneaked out on the deck, jumped in the lifeboat, went overboard with food, water, and life-vests, and left everybody else behind. That is what happened. Bon Voyage!

Let me describe a case study of the worst: Enron. This is the poster child for corporate corruption.

Enron of Houston, TX. During the 1990s, Enron was the envy of every executive in corporate America: creative, aggressive, growing fast, money coming in hand over fist, Fortune 500’s top 10 list of assets with close to $100 billion, and doling out business in far-flung reaches of commerce.

By the year 2000, Enron stock had increased in value by 1,700 percent since its first shares were issued in the 1980s. It had 21,000 employees in the United States and all around the world. But not everything was coming up roses for Enron. Behind the glass walls of the corporate skyscraper in Houston, something very opaque was going on.

Listen to these famous names: Ken Lay, Jeff Skilling, Andrew Fastow. The company’s top three executives obviously realized their astronomical success was not based on reality or truth. It was based on hype, speculation, and deceit. It was all smoke and mirrors.

Wall Street analysts later were forced to admit that they made out-of-control valuations of this company based on the puffery of these corporate bandits. All the while, these executives cooked up ingenious schemes to move assets on and off the books, create phony partnerships, offshore accounts, and so-called ‘special purpose entities.

These were just corporate accounting tools designed to move around assets on paper. Why would they do that if they had nothing to hide? Ken Lay, Jeff others at Enron were undeniably the masters of manipulation.

We talk in this bankruptcy bill about what we are going to do with people who are using the bankruptcy court. This bill addresses the progress with a second part-time job who is a single mother raising a couple of children who just was diagnosed with breast cancer and ends up with medical treatment and bills she cannot pay. She is forced finally to go to bankruptcy court.

This bill says, we are going to take care of her. In this bill we will give her a long list of things to do to prove that she is not taking advantage of the bankruptcy court.

But when it comes to these smoothies—Ken Lay, Jeff Skilling, and Andrew Fastow at Enron, and other corporations—this bill is silent. We are not for morality when it comes to working families. Obviously, we are not for morality when it comes to these corporate cheats.

They kept the perception up at Enron that they were doing well. They even when they were not, but eventually it fell apart.

On October 16, 2001, Enron reported a third-quarter loss of $618 million and shareholder equity loss of $1.2 billion. The date October 16, 2001, is important. A week later, on October 22, the Securities and Exchange Commission announced an inquiry into the company.

On November 8, 2001, Enron filed an amendment to its financial report revising its income tax provisions for 1997, 4 years of lies, it turns out, once they were caught. They came forward and disclosed $356 million in losses, and obviously investor confidence and their stock values cratered.

The last Ken Lay entered into a deal with Dynegy Corp. to sell Enron for $10 billion, in a desperate attempt to keep that company afloat. A week later he was forced to admit that Enron was not worth the amount he wanted for it.

Naturally the deal with Dynegy was called off, and on December 2, 2001, Enron filed for bankruptcy.

Let me tell you what happened to two groups of Enron employees during the last few weeks of the company’s solvency.

Here is Mr. Lay. Everybody knows his face now. CEO Ken Lay is the man who made over $200 million from Enron stock, and $19 million in bonuses. Other executives in the Enron Corporation received bonuses as high as $5 million. While that was going on, while the company was heading toward a bankruptcy, there were thousands of Enron employees who lost their jobs and thousands more who lost millions in retirement savings.

Our bill goes after the employees who lost their jobs. Our bill goes after the employees who lost their health care. Our bill goes after retirees who ended up penniless and were forced into bankruptcy court. We are going to get real tough on them.

But how about Mr. Lay? What price is he going to pay for his misconduct? In this bill, no price at all. Everyone knows about Ken Lay’s extravagance.

I won’t venture to assert whether Ken Lay had any insight or knowledge which he took advantage of insider information as he made sales of stock he held in Enron. Those are decisions for a judge and jury.

But what is certain is that Ken Lay pocketed $81.5 million in loan advances from his company while Enron was cascading toward bankruptcy—$81.5 million for this man who couldn’t run his company correctly. All told, he received over $320 million in Enron stock and $19 million in bonuses.

During the same time Jeff Skilling raked in $66.9 million.

The board of directors was sharing in these good times as well. Sixteen members of the corporate board made a combined total of $164 million, just on selling shares they had in the company. If you add all the other corporate insiders and executives at Enron with the corporate directors and all the other people who they pilfered from the company from 1998 to 2001, the grand total comes to well over $1 billion.

Now let’s see how the employees at Enron fared.

There is an old country song by Jerry Reed called, “She Got the Goldmine, I Got the Shaft.” It could be the theme song for Enron workers.

Of the 21,000 people worldwide who worked for Enron, 12,200 were enrolled in their company pension. Ten percent of the assets in the plan invested in Enron stock and all of Enron’s matching contributions went into company stock as well. But the Enron stock, which once sold as high as $90 during its heyday, became worthless. The workers’ pensions were gravitated during the course of the weeks when they were locked out of the pension plans and could not even sell the stock as the value of the stock was cratering.

Under Federal law, companies are not allowed to let their employees withdraw their investment while the company switches pension plan administrators. And wouldn’t you know it, Enron chose to switch their plan administrator on October 16, 2001.

Remember that date? That’s the very same date I mentioned earlier, when they announced they were writing off more than $1 billion in charges to their books. This meant that thousands of employees who earned their pay hopelessly and watched their retirement plan literally disappear before their eyes.

On October 18, 2001, while Enron workers were frozen out of amending their pension plan, the stock price was down to $32 a share. By the time the hurricane blew over and they finally could get to their funds, Enron stock value plummeted to 26 cents per share. Needless to say, the company went into bankruptcy. The employees at Enron could do nothing but sit by and watch their savings melt away during that time.

Thousands of these employees lost their jobs as a result of the Enron bankruptcy. Hundreds, perhaps thousands, were forced into bankruptcy themselves. But during the months and years that led up to this disaster, 29 Enron insiders and top execs walked away with over $1 billion.

I have talked to some of these Enron executives. There is no good explanation. Sadly, this legislation on bankruptcy we are discussing today will not hold them accountable.

Let me give another case study: Polaroid. This is a company that many of the people in Congress from Massachusetts know all about. It filed for chapter 11 protection on October 12, 2001, just a couple of months before Enron did.

Let me show you the chart on Polaroid. CEO Gary DiCamillo ran the company into the ground but received $1.7 million. Over 6,000 employees lost health and life insurance, and thousands lost severance pay. Forced to invest 8 percent of their money in company at a time they lost their retirement savings, too.

So these corporate insiders—whether Enron or Polaroid or WorldCom or others—were lining their own pockets, taking money out of the company destined for bankruptcy, and the ultimate losers were the employees and the retirees.

The amendment which I sent to the Senate to level the playing field for employees, pensioners, and other company beneficiaries who were wiped out of bankruptcy is almost the same as the one the former employee told me he hit bankruptcy court. This gives them a place in line for pensions.

There are two provisions in this amendment to protect employees of bankrupt companies:

First, my amendment would address fraudulent transfers made by corporate insiders, all those huge payouts and loans and bonuses and transactions that went to these corporate executives as the company was headed to bankruptcy. These are payouts that exceeded the value of what is reasonable compensation. Under my amendment, those payouts will have to be scrutinized by the bankruptcy court.

Think about that for a minute. These executives were being rewarded with millions, sometimes hundreds of millions of dollars out of corporations headed for bankruptcy.

Most of the time, you are rewarded with the stock of the company. They are not being rewarded, their company is heading into debt and eventually disbanding. So they know what is going on. They are grabbing the money before they hit bankruptcy court. The money they grab out of the corporation is in the form of loans to the company, especially at the expense of their workers and retirees.

They end up taking the money that otherwise would have gone into the pension funds and putting it in their own pockets.

My amendment gives the bankruptcy court the tools to investigate and treat these fishy, self-serving deals to get the assets of the Enron executives. The amendment determines the value of a company executive’s pension plan. This gives them a fair claim for the fair value of his contributions.

It includes a fair and workable formula for what the court can determine might be excessive.

It also extends the period of time a bankruptcy court can go back and recapture the assets of these executives, 4 years as opposed to the 1 year allowed under current law.

As I described in the Enron example, some of the most outrageous transactions by the Enron executives took place 3 or 4 years before the company filed bankruptcy, so this bill would not even touch them.

This bill lets those corporate insiders end up in their own pockets. This bill makes it tough for them.

This is inspired by our feeling that we need more morality and justice in our bankruptcy courts. But wouldn’t you start at the top? Wouldn’t you start with the biggest thieves in the business—the people who broke a record when it comes to bankruptcy and raiding these corporations?

These insiders knew what they were doing. They saw their companies going down, and they grabbed everything they could get their hands on. They canceled their workers’ pension plans and benefits.

My amendment says we would go back 4 years before the bankruptcy to recover that money and put it in the hands of creditors, employees, and retirees.

The second part of my amendment directly helps employees of these companies with some relief in bankruptcy court. This gives them a place in line as creditors that they currently don’t have.

The amendment gives them a priority unsecured claim in bankruptcy for the value of company stock which was held for their benefit in an employee pension plan, unless the plan beneficiary had the option to invest those assets in some other way.

Under current law, these retirees who ended up with the short end of the stick in these retirement plans have nowhere to turn. They are not even in line for priority claims in bankruptcy court. This gives them a place in line as creditors that they currently don’t have.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, these groups and their members know what happened with these companies. I am troubled by the fact that the Senate has spent this entire week talking about bankruptcy abuse and making it tough for families to pay medical bills, making this process more difficult for the guardsmen and reservists who were activated to go overseas to serve our country only to lose their business at home and face bankruptcy when they return.

There is nothing in this bill to help them. There is nothing in this bill to help them with medical bills.

Senator KENNEDY was here on the floor yesterday. He had a grand suggestion, a radical idea. Senator KENNEDY said, if you lose everything because of medical bills, we are going to protect your little home—$150,000 worth of your home—so that when it is all said and done, as sick as you may be, you will at least have a home. But that proposal was rejected. I am not sure of the vote on that amendment, 58-39, somewhere in that range but a partisan vote. Everyone on this side—virtually everyone—voted against it.

According to that vote, we can’t help those people. They have to face the reality. They have to face up to the fact they won’t have a home to go to when it is all over.

But what about the mansions these CEOs go to, the millions of dollars they have drained out of these corporations for their own personal benefit to buy mansions, to buy golf courses, to create a lifestyle with $30,000 shower curtains to buy mansions, to buy golf courses, to create a lifestyle with $30,000 shower curtains, to buy mansions, to buy golf courses, to create a lifestyle with $30,000 shower curtains, to buy mansions, to buy golf courses, to create a lifestyle with $30,000 shower curtains, to buy mansions, to buy golf courses, to create a lifestyle with $30,000 shower curtains, to buy mansions, to buy golf courses, to create a lifestyle with $30,000 shower curtains, to buy mansions, to buy golf courses, to create a lifestyle with $30,000 shower curtains. Can you work up a little bit of discomfort over these accommodations of the major corporations? Can you bring yourselves to say maybe we will hold them accountable, too, for their misconduct?

It would be a new day in this Senate, a grand departure from the debate as it has gone down at this point. We have never come close to this yet. I haven’t heard a word yet from the other side—not a word on this floor by the supporters of this bankruptcy bill about these corporate bankruptcies and what they have done to hundreds of thousands, if not millions, of unsuspecting investors, workers, and retirees.
The Durbin amendment will give my colleagues a chance to do something about it. I urge my colleagues to support it. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Jersey.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent I be permitted to speak as in morning business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. DeMINT). The Senator from Massachusetts is recognized.

AMENDMENT NO. 49

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, this legislation that we have before us cracks down unfairly on large numbers of hard-working families that are in dire financial straits because of a sudden serious illness or because their loved ones are fighting in Iraq. Yet, this bill disproportionately ignores the real abuses in our bankruptcy laws: the corporate abuses that have become epidemic in recent years. It is the worst corporate misconduct since before the Great Depression.

Some of these companies were brought down by outright criminal activities. Many more of them were driven into bankruptcy by the greed and mismanagement of a small group of reckless insiders who ignored their responsibilities to their employees and their stockholders alike.

Current law on corporate bankruptcy is grossly inadequate in dealing with these problems. Often, the very insiders whose misconduct brought the company down do very well in bankruptcy.

The people who suffer the most are the retirees. The people who suffer the most are the innocent victims, the employees, the retirees.

Increasingly, the bankruptcy court has become a place where corporate executives are given permission to take their own pockets and break their promise to their workers and retirees. That kind of abuse is terribly wrong, and it is our responsibility to prevent it.

Instead, we are considering a 500-page bankruptcy bill that virtually ignores this issue. It does nothing to address the corporate looting by high-level insiders. It does nothing to protect a company’s workforce from losing their jobs, their health care, and their pension. This bill should not move forward until those glaring omissions are corrected, and the Durbin amendment is the way to do it.

Take a close look at the examples of executives in some of America’s largest corporations, and see how lavishly they benefited while their companies went into bankruptcy. Top executives made sure they were well provided for at the company’s expense. Yet, loyal employees and retirees were left to struggle on their own.

A major corporation in Massachusetts, Polaroid, filed for bankruptcy in 2001. In the months leading up to the company’s filing, $1.7 million in incentive payments were made to its chief executive officer on top of his $840,000 salary. The company also received the approval of the bankruptcy court to make $5 million in payments to senior managers on the board. And these managers collectively received an additional $3 million when the company’s assets were sold.

Yet, just days before Polaroid filed for bankruptcy, it canceled the health and life insurance for more than 6,000 retirees. It also canceled the health insurance coverage for workers with long-term disabilities, and halted the severance benefits for thousands of workers who had recently been laid off.

Polaroid employees had been required to contribute to the company’s Employee Stock Ownership Plan. When the company failed, their retirement savings were virtually all wiped out.

The loss was devastating for workers like Katie Kelly, a senior engineer, who had worked in Massachusetts for more than 30 years. He had been required, as had other Polaroid employees, to pay 8 percent of his pay into the company’s Employee Stock Ownership Plan. At its peak, this stock was worth over $200,000. But after the company declared bankruptcy the stock was worthless. And he also lost his severance pay and medical benefits.

Or take Betty Moss of Smyrna, GA. Betty and her husband retired and were traveling across the country in their camper when they learned that Polaroid had stopped her severance pay and that they had lost her health insurance and life insurance. Because of the fall in Polaroid stock, her retirement savings plunged from $160,000 to only a few hundred dollars.

The loss of health insurance and life insurance benefits was particularly devastating for long-term disabled workers. With their disabilities, they cannot go back to work, and they have no way to obtain other insurance coverage.

Sally Ferrari of Saugus, MA, was diagnosed with Alzheimer’s disease after working for Polaroid for 20 years. In recent years, she required round-the-clock care. Yet, Polaroid cut off her health care benefits in bankruptcy, which meant that her husband had to stay at work full time until he recently passed away in order to provide medical coverage for his wife.

I also have letters from other employees.

This letter is from David Maniscalco. He was injured while working for Polaroid. Now he is unable to work, and his medical bills are consuming his family’s savings, and his retirement because Polaroid took away total health care coverage. He points out:

After Polaroid declared bankruptcy, they terminated all the people’s long term disability, and terminated all of our Medical, Life and Dental Insurance. I wear a fiber-glass back brace and sleep in a hospital bed and am not able to do any work changed job in order to have medical insurance for herself. And I am on Medicare and a secondary insurance. The cost to us is $895.00 a month for medical insurance alone. The problem is, we’re using our retirement money to help with the cost of our medical insurance.

Here you have the corporate officials well taken care of, and the loyal employees were notified with less than 24 hours. And this is how they end up. How? Because they go to bankruptcy court. Does this bill do anything about protecting those individuals? Absolutely zero. Absolutely nothing. Abso-lutely nothing.

We have here a letter from Elaine Johnson. She lives in Georgia. When Polaroid went into bankruptcy, she lost her health insurance, too. She writes:

When Polaroid declared bankruptcy, I lost my life insurance, medical and dental insurance. Because of my disability, I am unable to get other insurance and another job.

Once you have these serious illnesses, it is virtually impossible to ever get your health insurance again. I have a family member who worked for Polaroid for more than 30 years. He, as an individual—he is 43 years old—cannot get a health insurance policy today no matter what he is prepared to pay for it, unless he goes into some kind of group. Why? Because he has cancer at one point, a cancer.

Here you have individuals who have disabilities who are tied into their company’s program. The company has made a commitment to them. And then what happens? At the time they go into bankruptcy court, the first things that happens is the corporate officials free themselves from the obligations to pay the employees’ health insurance, and they are left out in the cold.

The list goes on. Polaroid employees, like Betty Williams of Waltham, MA, were financially devastated by the loss of medical and health care benefits. Betty was with Polaroid for 28 years, and she thought, well, down with lupus, her company’s disability, health and life insurance would cover her. She writes:

When I received an unsigned letter from Polaroid Corporation in July of 2002 stating that along with other employees on Long Term Disability would be terminated by the company and my medical, dental and life insurance benefits would end, I was shocked and dismayed. Unable to work because of my disabilities, my husband (who is also disabled) and I are forced to pay approximately $125/month for a Medicare health plan and $50/month for a dental plan—$650 per month for insurance—draining our savings, and we now have two mortgages; our groceries are bought with a credit card; and we are holding on financially by a thread.

There is that. That is the person who is going to get burned with this bill. That is the person who is going to be marched in. That is the person who is going to be required to pay $10, $15, $20 a week, $80 a month on into the future under this bill. But do we do anything about the corporate executives? Absolutely nothing.

And the list goes on. These are hard-working people who were crushed when...
Poland cut their benefits. Yet, while they suffered, Poles extracted from their pockets to overflowing

When the chief financial officer left, she got a $600,000 pension. Recently, she received $1 million in severance pay from Royal Dutch/Shell. Even though she left under a cloud of scandal. And Poland’s former president is now the president and CEO of one of the country’s largest staff outsourcing companies. He plans to take the company public soon and will reap huge bonuses.

Erkon, as my friend and colleague, the Senator from Illinois, pointed out, is another flagrant example of massive company looting while employees lost everything. Erkon executives cashed out more than $1 billion of company stock when they knew the company was in trouble. And just before the company declared bankruptcy, its top executives were paid bonuses as high as $5 million each to stay on.

Employees, however, were forced to hold their company stock until the age of 50. They were subject to black-out periods that executives were not.

They lost a total of $1 billion in retirement savings. Thousands of them lost their jobs, thousands lost their health insurance. Thousands of them will be dragged into bankruptcy court under this particular legislation.

Yet we have WorldCom, another shameful case. Bernard Ebbers is on trial for corporate fraud. I don’t know how many Americans read the newspapers yesterday, but Bernie Ebbers is on trial. He received millions of dollars in personal loans from the company and trial. He received millions of dollars in many Americans read the newspapers under this particular legislation.

Yet we have WorldCom, another shameful case. Bernard Ebbers is on trial for corporate fraud. I don’t know how many Americans read the newspapers yesterday, but Bernie Ebbers is on trial. He received millions of dollars in personal loans from the company and was originally granted a pension worth $1.5 million a year. This week he denied knowing anything about the biggest accounting fraud in history. ‘I don’t know about technology. I don’t know about financing. I don’t know about accounting,” he claimed.

What about the people I just mentioned who worked for Polaroid all their lives and because of the bankruptcy lost their health insurance, do you think they will be able to give those kinds of answers? Not under this bill.

Ordinary Americans will not have this defense when they are facing bankruptcy. Countless WorldCom employees who honestly knew nothing about the fraud wound up losing their jobs and their retirement.

Another example is the popular retailer Kmart. As Kmart was teetering on the edge of bankruptcy, the company bought two new corporate jets. Once it finally went into bankruptcy, CEO Chuck Conaway was given a $9 million golden parachute. Meanwhile 57,000 Kmart workers lost their jobs, and the company closed 600 stores.

Abuses like these have made the headlines, but this bankruptcy bill doesn’t deal with them. It comes down hard on those families who have critical health bills, families who are touched by cancer and heart and stroke, families who have children with disabilities. It comes down hard on those individuals and lets these people off free. And we call that fair? Take away their homes if they live in 40-odd States, but let them keep millionaire homes in Texas and Florida. And they can get away with it, the proponents of this bill, nothing. Call that fair? Call this bill fair?

We know what it is. It is making the various bankruptcy courts the collection agencies for the credit card companies. Mr. President, you are going to be paying for more bankruptcy judges and staff and buildings because there are going to be so many more people who are going to be thrown into bankruptcy. The fastest growing group of bankruptcy filers is the elderly, individuals fifty-five and older, who are being hit with increased medical costs. As I mentioned the other day, they are seeing increased premiums on Medicare—wait until they get their new prescription drug program and start paying the costs for that, which is an inadequate program that has special provisions in it that have giveaways to the HMOs and to the prescription drug companies. They are just going to end up paying more and more. They are going to support these courts of bankruptcy, and they are going to squeeze our fellow citizens out all the more. Meanwhile other people are getting $9 million golden parachutes.

Senator Durbin’s amendment will stop the travesty of high-level corporate insiders walking away with millions of dollars in bankruptcy while workers and retirees are left empty-handed. This amendment will strengthen the ability of bankruptcy courts to invalidate fraudulent transfers by corporate insiders. The current legislation does zero, nothing. The proponents of this legislation have opposed this effort by the Senator from Illinois. This amendment will strengthen the ability of bankruptcy courts to invalidate fraudulent transfers. Currently the court can only compel the return of money improperly taken out of the company in the preceding year. In many instances the looting has taken place over a number of years, and the court has no authority to go after those lost assets. This amendment will allow bankruptcy judges to reach back as far as 4 years to recover corporate assets.

It also empowers the court to review and set aside the excess benefit transfers made to corporate management while the company was insolvent or which contributed to the company’s insolvency. These sweetheart deals often take the form of huge bonuses, golden parachutes, and other payments to corporate executives before the public learns that the company is in trouble. Such payments violate the most basic principle of fiduciary duty, and the law allows the court to have the power to correct these wrongs. Every dollar recovered from these outrageous inside deals is another dollar that will be there to compensate workers, retirees, and other creditors.

Finally, our amendment—I welcome the opportunity to cosponsor it with the Senator from Illinois—will give a priority claim in bankruptcy to employees who are forced to take the company public soon and will reap huge bonuses.

Poland workers lost their retirement because they were required to invest 8 percent of their pay in their company as a condition of holding their jobs. Workers at Enron were also forced to keep their company stock until the age of 50 and subject to black-out periods during which they couldn’t sell their stock, but the company executives could. Under current bankruptcy law, workers have no way to recover from these losses. They deserve a chance to recover some of what they lost. This amendment will provide it.

The issue is simple fairness. We learned even yesterday about the new loophole, about trusts that are going to be created so those individuals who may go into bankruptcy and who have resources can go out and hire a lawyer and shelter their income from any kind of bankruptcy court. The average worker can’t do that. The average worker out there working a lifetime for a company and then dismissed, the company then goes into bankruptcy, can’t do that.

They can’t hold onto their homes like so many of the wealthiest individuals in our country. In Florida they will be able to do it, but they won’t be able to do it in most of the other States. In Texas they may do it, but not in most of the other States. Yet here on the floor of the U.S. Senate, the Senate refused, absolutely refused to show any consideration to home ownership for people who have worked hard and had their lives, just having $150,000 in equity.

This issue is about fairness. If a corporation has gone into bankruptcy, those who ran the ship aground certainly should be not be enriched at the expense of those workers for their livelihood are driven into poverty. Yet that is what happens all too often in corporate bankruptcy today. Any bankruptcy bill which fails to address these critical issues is a cruel hoax on the American people.

I urge my colleagues to support the Durbin amendment, recognizing that bankruptcy reform has to apply to corporations, too.

I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, I rise in support of my amendment No. 42 and will call for the yeas and nays on my amendment at the appropriate time.
Mr. President, I rise to speak to my amendment to the Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act to close an ugly loophole that protects millions, while at the same time this bill will punish, among others, veterans’ families and sick people with medical bills.

The front page of yesterday’s business section in the New York Times ran a story on a shocking loophole in bankruptcy law that is a windfall for the wealthy, called the millionaire’s loophole. Let me read to you a little bit about it. I am going to read from the New York Times here. The headline is:

Proposed law in bankruptcy has loophole; wealthy could shield many assets in trust.

The bankruptcy legislation being debated by the Senate is intended to make it harder for people to walk away from their credit card and other debts. But legal specialists say the proposed law leaves open an increasingly popular loophole that lets wealthy people protect substantial assets from creditors, even after declaring bankruptcy.

Here is the problem. In five States—Alaska, Delaware, Nevada, Rhode Island and Utah—millionaires and even billionaires can stash away their assets—whether it be a mansion, racing car, or any kind of financial asset or investment, or even a suitcase filled with cash—in a special kind of trust, so that they can hold on to that windfall even after filing for bankruptcy. When they file for bankruptcy, these wealthy people, creditors would not be able to reach anything in those trusts. So here you have wealthy people filing for bankruptcy and yet having huge amounts of assets protected in a little trust hidden away.

The trial to address the infamous homestead exemption by attaching a $125,000 ceiling to it. But it doesn’t matter. A millionaire doesn’t need a home to protect his or her assets. All they need is a good lawyer, a pencil, paper and trusts.

As one legal expert said: With this loophole, the wealthy won’t need to buy houses in Florida or Texas to keep their millions. So if anyone is manipulating the system, it is these guys. By the way, you don’t have to be in these five States. All you have to do is file the trust in one of these States. My great State of New York, I am happy to say, is blessed with many millionaires. We hope there are more of them. But we should not be allowed to file in Delaware, or Utah, or Alaska a trust that allows them to declare bankruptcy and yet keep their assets. It is a basic way for wealthy people to not pay their debts.

We have heard a lot in this bill about people who gamble profligately and waste their money and declare bankruptcy. That is an abuse that the bill does it; it is in the law. But as we continue to allow it to remain in the law? It is not this bill that is the problem; it is these financial advisors who close those methods of using bankruptcy abusively, how can we leave this one open? This “million dollar bankruptcy baby” deserves an Oscar for the best legal loophole for the wealthy. This millionaire’s loophole is so bad that it must be knocked out before this fight is over. There is no question that, without this amendment, the bankruptcy laws will continue to make it easier for these rich people to keep their millions than for poor people to simply stay afloat.

I hope my colleagues on the other side of the aisle will join me in that amendment to be some kind of edict that you cannot vote for any amendment. Can we please make an exception for this one? I am sure just about everybody agrees with us. I am joined in this amendment by my colleagues Senators BINGAMAN, DURBIN, FEINSTEIN, and CLINTON; they have cosponsored the amendment. This amendment closes this millionaire’s loophole by forcing those who seek to use these trusts to cheat. It only allows them to protect as much as $125,000 in assets in a homestead, not a penny more. In other words, it makes it analogous to what we do for homes in the homestead exemption in this bill.

Again, if we don’t want wealthy people to be able to hide their assets in these trusts and escape the rigors of the bankruptcy law, why would we allow them to do that in trusts? To clarify, the amendment doesn’t adversely affect retirees who have saved for a lifetime to build a retirement nest egg. The solution is straightforward. It is written in the spirit of the bill. In fact, when looking at statements made by some of this bill’s greatest champions, you would think they would have no problem accepting this amendment in the bill.

The bill’s sponsor is a good man. I am now on his committee. He is known as having a great deal of integrity. Well, here is what Senator GRASSLEY said about the bill. This was in one of his statements: Filing for chapter 7 bankruptcy, he said, was not intended to be a convenient financial planning tool where deadbeats can get out of paying their debts scot-free, while honest Americans who play by the rules have to foot the bill. I agree with that statement. This amendment fits the words of Senator GRASSLEY exactly. Why would we not include this amendment in the bill? That is the essence of the amendment we have. Deadbeats exist in all tax brackets. There are some middle-class deadbeats. There are some poor deadbeats, of course. What about the wealthy deadbeats? Why are they treated differently than everybody else?

I hope my friends on the other side of the aisle, because of this grand edict “don’t vote for any amendment,” don’t end up protecting wealthy deadbeats from the same punishment they are doling out to those who are not so financially fortunate.

I have listened to my Republican friends and their concerns about the abuse of our bankruptcy system by gamblers, hustlers, and cheaters. I have listened for a number of years, and I share those concerns. But I hope my colleagues will come to the floor to vote for this amendment that will end the egregious millionaire’s loophole. Make no mistake about it, I am not attacking the middle class. I think it is great when an American achieves success and makes a lot of money. But don’t declare bankruptcy and hide your assets and shed your debts. The people who should least be able to do this are the wealthy.

I hope my colleagues will vote for this amendment, which will end the egregious millionaire’s loophole. We cannot let a few bad apple millionaires evade the system by cutting and running on their debts. This bill, I am afraid, of course, doesn’t go after just the bad apples. That is an issue my colleague from Massachusetts has been ably taking up on the floor, as have many other of my colleagues. It actually labels the whole bushel of bankruptcy fliers rotten.

I wish the bill made more of a distinction between those who are abusive, who gamble, or who are profligate and try to shake off their debt, and those who have run into real hardship because they are in the military or because they have health care problems. The bill makes no distinction between those two groups and that is wrong. We need to make sure the bill targets the Nation’s cheats and not its cheated. I urge my colleagues to close the millionaire’s loophole by voting for this amendment.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, I rise today to join my colleague from New York, Senator SCHUMER, in offering an amendment which would address a serious loophole in the bankruptcy bill that we are now considering, it allows rich debtors to unfairly shield assets from their creditors.

In recent years a number of financial and bankruptcy planners have taken advantage of the law of a few States to create what is called an “asset protection trust.” These trusts are basically mechanisms for rich people to keep money despite declaring bankruptcy. They are unfair, and violate the basic principle of this underlying legislation that bankruptcy should be used judiciously to deal with the economic reality that sometimes people cannot pay their debts, but to prevent abuse of the system.

This loophole is an example of where the law, if not changed, permits, or even encourages, such abuse. The amendment is simple: It sets an upper limit on the amount of money that can be shielded in these asset protection trusts, capping the amount at $125,000. This amount parallels the limit placed on the similar “homestead exemption” elsewhere in the bill. The homestead exemption allows some assets to be protected from creditors in bankruptcy where they are in the form of a residential home.
The line bottom: Wealthy people will be able to preserve only $125,000 in an asset protection trust. This amount, $125,000, is not a small sum. It is more than enough to ensure that the debtor is not left destitute. But it is also a reasonable amount. It is deliberately based on a now-accepted $125,000 limit for the homestead exemption, which will also remain available to a debtor.

Yesterday the New York Times, in an article entitled Proposed Law on Bankruptcy Has Loophole detailed the potential problem in this bill. The article quotes Professor Elena Marty-Nelson, a law professor at Nova Southeastern University in Florida, who states: "If the bankruptcy legislation currently before the Senate gets enacted, debtors won't need to buy houses in Florida and Texas to keep their millions. They may have a loophole that lets wealthy people protect substantial assets from creditors even after filing for bankruptcy. The loophole involves the use of so-called asset protection trusts. For years, wealthy people who hope to avoid having their money out of the reach of domestic creditors have set up trusts in Delaware. But since 1997, when the laws in five states—Alaska, Delaware, Nevada, South Dakota and Utah—have made the legislation exempting assets held domestically in such trusts from the federal bankruptcy code. People who want to establish trusts do not have to reside in the five states: they need only set their trust up through an institution in one of them."

"If the bankruptcy legislation currently is being rushed through the Senate, enacted, debtors won't need to buy houses in Florida or Texas to keep their millions," said Representative Bill Posey, a law professor at Nova Southeastern University in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., referring to generous homestead exemptions in those states. "The millionaires' loophole that is the result of these trusts needs to be closed."

Professor Elizabeth Warren of Harvard Law School is also quoted in the article. She notes that: "This is just a way for rich folks to be able to slip through the noose on bankruptcy and, of course, the irony here is that the proponents of this bill keep pressing it as necessary because bankruptcy law now allows 'applicable nonbankruptcy law.' Intended to preserve rights to property under state law, the exemption makes it difficult for creditors to get hold of assets if they would not be able to seize through a nonbankruptcy proceeding in state court. Asset protection trusts have become increasingly popular in recent years among physicians, who fear large medical malpractice awards, and corporate executives, whose assets are at greater peril now because of new laws. The law, for example, requires chief executives and chief financial officers to certify that their companies' financial statements are accurate; anyone who knowingly certifies false numbers can be fined up to $5 million. In addition, under Sarbanes-Oxley, executives may have to reimburse their companies for bonuses or other incentive compensation they received if their company's financial reports have to be restated in later years. "Given all the notoriety of what we're seeing today, from WorldCom, there is probably more of an impetus for executives to consider going this route," said Scott E. Blakeley, a lawyer at Blakeley & Prince in Miami, who has worked in the bankruptcy bill, this topic is not touched."

While it is difficult to quantify how much money is sitting in domestic asset protection trusts, their popularity is undeniable, bankruptcy specialists said. "I've heard figures for foreign asset protection trusts and those trusts aren't even legal," said Adam J. Hirsch, a law professor at Florida State University. "I haven't seen any figures for domestic asset protection trusts, but they could be much higher."

Current federal bankruptcy law protects assets held in a type of trust, known as a spendthrift trust, traditionally set up by one family member to benefit another. But current law does not protect the assets of people who set up spendthrift trusts to benefit themselves. And the law limits the purposes of the trusts that qualify for exemption. Retirement planning or paying for education are two approved purposes for such trusts. By contrast, domestic asset protection trusts are meant to benefit the very people who plan to benefit from them. In addition, there are no caps on the dollar amount of assets they can hold and no restrictions on their purposes. Current constitutional limitation is that the trusts cannot be set up by people who are already insolvent.

The Senate bill is favored by banks, credit card companies and retailers, who say it is now too easy for consumers to erase their debts through bankruptcy. It is almost identical to legislation that has been introduced in Congress, unsuccessfully, since 1996. Perhaps because the current bill was written so long ago, some legal authorities are concerned that the current law limits the purpose of trust that have allowed asset protection trusts to flourish.

"In some ways, asset protection trusts are similar to the homestead exemption that keeps homes in Florida, Texas and other states out of the reach of creditors. But the bankruptcy law now allows the states to impose limits on that exemption to $125,000 for those who purchased the home within 40 months of their bankruptcy filing or for those who have committed securities fraud."

Ms. Marty-Nelson said the bankruptcy bill should at least apply such a cap to domestic asset protection trusts. Better yet, she said, the bill should exclude these trusts from the federal exemption altogether. "Congress can and should close this huge loophole," she said.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, the most disturbing thing about this supposed ‘bankruptcy reform’ is the utter lack of fairness and compassion. It is just such a loophole. I hope that my colleagues will join me and Senator SCHUMER in closing this one.

However, the authors of this legislation look the other way when it comes to closing millionaire loopholes and ending corporate abuse. The bill fails to deal effectively with the unlimited homestead exemptions in a few States which allow the rich to hold on to their multi-million dollar mansions while middle class families in other States lose their modest homes. And, the bill totally fails to address the shocking abuse of millionaire hiding their assets in so-called ‘asset protection trusts,’ placing them completely beyond the reach of creditors. They can hold on to their wealth merely by signing a paper placing title their bank accounts, stocks, bonds, and other holdings in the name of a trust. The wealthy debtors don’t even have to change their residences or put all of their property in a country estate in Florida or Texas. All they need to do is file a trust document in one of the five States that allow this subterfuge. They do not have to relinquish control over their property and it can continue to be used to support their extravagant lifestyle. Unfortunately, average families facing bankruptcy don’t have large bank accounts and stock portfolios so they cannot take advantage of this loophole. Most couldn’t even afford to hire a lawyer to set up the trust. However, that’s all right because the asset protection trust scam was not designed for them. It was designed to protect millionaires and deadbeats, people who ran their companies into the ground leaving their creditors and their former employees holding the bag. It was designed to protect those who took the money and ran.

Somehow the authors of this bill, after eight years of studying the bankruptcy code in search of ways to tighten the law so that more people would be held accountable for their debts—somehow they overlooked this loophole. I wonder how they could have missed this one. I guess they were just too busy finding ways to make working families pay a few more dollars to the credit card companies.

Fortunately, the New York Times did expose this outrageous loophole and Senator SCHUMER has offered an amendment to close it. It will empower the bankruptcy court to reach out and pull the assets in these abusive trusts back into the bankruptcy, using those assets to help pay creditors. The vote on this amendment will be a real test of the sincerity of those who say their goal is to hold debtors more accountable for the money they owe. I would hope that same desire to enforce personal responsibility applies to the millionaire deadbeat who hides his assets as well as the working family struggling to survive.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I oppose the Schumer amendment. This is an issue that just needs more time for us to determine whether there is an abuse that needs to be addressed. We need to make sure that this amendment doesn’t have unintended consequences. For instance, it doesn’t define the term “asset protection trust” and therefore we aren’t even sure what we are being asked to vote on. Further, it not only covers asset protection trusts, but also covers “similar trusts.” Until we have had time to really understand whether this is a loophole, and if it is, how to close it in a way that doesn’t harm innocent third parties.

In addition, this issue is even more complex because it implicates 50 different State laws. We don’t know enough at this point about how it works. This would override at least some state laws, like the homestead cap. I think it is important to look at this issue, have a hearing and consult with senators whose states might be uniquely affected. Be sure, however, that my opposition to this amendment doesn’t mean that I will not ultimately find that this issue needs to be addressed at some future date. I think that all the work we have done on this bill, the compromises we have reached should not be disrupted by this last-minute proposal that has not been well thought out.

I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

I encourage the support of my colleagues.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, the great union leader, John L. Lewis, spoke of those who sup at labor’s table and who have been sheltered in labor’s house.

This is the West Virginia, where children are raised to believe that the fruits of their labor ought to yield a decent wage and comfortable living. Many work long hours, concerned less about titles and honors than providing for their families in the present and securing their retirement in old age.

They devote themselves to their labor and take pride in their work and their employer. These workers are committed, hard-working individuals who contribute much and ask for nothing more than simple fairness. And so imagine how they are made to feel—the anguish, frustration, and betrayal they are made to feel—when they learn the pension they worked for, the health benefits they labored for, the security they toiled for, has vanished.

That is what is happening in West Virginia to an alarming degree. Special Metals, Horizon Natural Resources, Weirton Steel, Wheeling-Plitt, Kaiser Aluminum—all have filed for bankruptcy, endangering the health and pension benefits of workers and retirees.

I scold those who have sought to protect their employees but those sources who have used bankruptcy to abandon their obligations.

It is shattering to those workers and retirees affected. It cripples their faith in the moral values of an honest day’s work for an honest day’s pay. It is terrifying for retirees who cannot begin new careers. These independent, proud men and women fear becoming a burden to their children and grandchildren.

I understand how they are made to feel, and I seek to help them, as I always have sought to help them. I support the Rockefeller amendment, and I commend my colleague for his endeavors in this regard.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Utah.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, this amendment would provide a nearly fourfold increase in claim amounts and strike the time period. That means it would be much harder to confirm a plan under Chapter 11. It will cost us $2.3 billion in loans for a golf course—driving the companies into bankruptcy at the expense of the stockholders, employees, and retirees. This amendment reaches back and brings that money to the people who need it. It also gives a claim in bankruptcy for the pension rights that are extinguished in bankruptcy. I ask for Members’ support.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Utah.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, this is an important matter, but this amendment is too. I ask Members to vote no on the amendment.

AMENDMENT NO. 49

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Illinois.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, pursuant to unanimous consent, on the next amendment you should keep in mind Kenneth Lay who, on the road to bankruptcy, took $200 million out of Enron. The Senator from Nevada [Mr. REID], for Mr. BAUCUS, proposes an amendment numbered 50.

Mr. REID. I ask unanimous consent the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To amend section 524(g)(1) of title 11, United States Code, to predicate the discharge of debts in bankruptcy by any vermiculite mining company meeting certain criteria on the establishment of a health care trust fund for certain individuals suffering from an asbestos related disease)

On page 47, strike lines 12 through 14, and insert the following:

SEC. 202. EFFECT OF DISCHARGE.

Section 524 of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(i) in subsection (g)(1), by adding at the end the following:

‘‘(ii) the vermiculite ore mined and milled in Libby, Montana, was contaminated by high levels of asbestos, particularly tremolite asbestos;

‘‘(iii) the vermiculite mining and milling processes released thousands of pounds of asbestos-contaminated dust into the air around Libby, Montana, every day, exposing mine workers and Libby residents to high levels of asbestos over a prolonged period of time;

‘‘(iv) the responsible party has known for over 50 years that there are severe health risks associated with prolonged exposure to asbestos, including higher incidences of asbestos related disease such as asbestosis, lung cancer, and mesothelioma;

‘‘(v) the responsible party was aware of accumulating asbestos pollution in Libby, Montana, but failed to take any corrective action for decades, and once corrective action was taken, it was inadequate to protect workers and residents and asbestos-contaminated vermiculite dust continued to be released into the air in and around Libby, Montana, until the early 1990s when the vermiculite mining and milling process was finally halted;

‘‘(v) current and former residents of Libby, Montana, and former vermiculite mine workers from the Libby mine suffer from asbestos related diseases at a rate 40 to 60 times older than a viable and a rate they suffer from the rare and deadly asbestos-caused cancer, mesothelioma, at a rate 100 times the national average;

‘‘(vi) the State of Montana and the town of Libby, Montana, face an immediate and severe health care crisis because—

‘‘(aa) many sick current and former residents and workers have been diagnosed with asbestos-related exposures or disease cannot access private health insurance;

‘‘(bb) the costs to the community and State government related to providing health care coverage for uninsured sick residents and former mine workers are creating significant pressures on the State’s medical program and threaten the viability of other community businesses;

‘‘(cc) asbestos-related disease can have a long latency period; and ‘‘(dd) the only significant responsible party available to address health care costs caused by decades of asbestos pollution in Libby, Montana.

(ii) In this subparagraph—

‘‘(I) the term ‘asbestos related disease or illness’ means a malignant or non-malignant respiratory disease or illness related to tremolite asbestos exposure;

‘‘(II) the term ‘medical expense’ means an expense related to services for the diagnosis or treatment of an asbestos-related disease or illness, including expenses incurred for hospitalization, prescription drugs, outpatient services, home oxygen, respiratory therapy, nursing visits, or diagnostic evaluations;

‘‘(III) the term ‘responsible party’ means a corporation—

‘‘(aa) that has engaged in mining vermiculite that was contaminated by tremolite asbestos;

‘‘(bb) whose officers or directors have been indicted for knowingly releasing into the ambient air a hazardous air contaminant, namely asbestos, and knowingly endangering the residents of Libby, Montana and the surrounding communities; and

‘‘(cc) for which the Department of Justice has intervened in a bankruptcy proceeding; and

‘‘(v) the term ‘Trust Fund’ means the health care trust fund established pursuant to clause (ii).

‘‘(ii) A court may not enter an order confirming a plan of reorganization under chapter 11 involving a responsible party or issue an injunction in connection with such order unless the responsible party—

‘‘(I) has established a health care trust fund for the benefit of individuals suffering from an asbestos related disease or illness; and ‘‘(II) has deposited not less than $250,000,000 into the Trust Fund.

‘‘(ii) An individual shall be eligible for medical benefit payments, from the Trust Fund if the individual—

‘‘(I) has an asbestos related disease or illness;

‘‘(II) has an eligible medical expense; and

‘‘(III) is a worker at the vermiculite mining and milling facility in Libby, Montana;

‘‘(bb) lived, worked, or played in Libby, Montana for at least 6 consecutive months before December 31, 2004; and

(ii) by adding at the end the following:

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, Senator Sessions, on the floor yesterday, criticized Elizabeth Warren’s study on bankruptcy cases, and the high percentage of bankruptcy filers who file because of significant debt related to illness and medical costs, uses.

Senator Sessions cited a U.S. Trustee Program “survey” from 2002 that looked into medical costs as a factor in bankruptcy. He argued that “only slightly more than 5 percent of unsecured debt reported in those cases was medically related” “54 percent of the cases listed no medical debts whatsoever. I wish to repeat that,” he said.

He also said that “at least 90 percent of the cases that did have medical debts reported debts of less than $5,000.”

Elizabeth Warren sent a letter to the Judiciary Committee last month which pointed out many of the problems with this U.S. Trustee Program “survey”:

The survey underreported both the breadth and impact of medical bankruptcies because of the way it was conducted.

U.S. trustee’s sample was limited only to chapter 7 cases and omitted chapter 13 cases. Families filing for bankruptcy under chapter 7 have an annual median income of $19,000.

Therefore, the average medical debt filed by the trustee’s average is $5,000 for those with medical debt—is quite substantial for those families trying to cope with medical problems. Mr. President, $5,000 in medical debt is more than 25 percent of the annual income for that family.

The petition data used by the Office of the U.S. Trustee does not include any medically related debts charged onto credit cards such as prescription medications, doctors visits, rehabilitations treatments, medical supplies, hospital bills, or even second mortgages that people have put on their homes to pay off hospital bills and other medical expenses, or cash advances, bank overdrafts or payday loans that people have incurred to pay for medical services when they are delivered or to pay medical bills that are outstanding. If any of these bills were paid by being charged on a credit card, then the trustee’s survey would not include them in its figures.

For these and other reasons, the petition data gathered by the U.S. Trustee Program provides very little information about medical bankruptcy. This is why it is so important to survey the debtors themselves in order to collect accurate data, the way the Harvard study actually did. I suggest the absence of a quorum. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll. The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum be dispensed with. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that there now be a period of morning business with Senators permitted to speak for up to 10 minutes each. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

TRIBUTE TO FORMER CONGRESSWOMAN TILLIE FOWLER

Mrs. DOLE. Mr. President, I rise today with a very heavy heart. And I know the devastation and deep sadness I feel for many in this Capitólo in Washington, and throughout America. For with the passing of former Congresswoman Tillie Fowler, America has lost one of her most accomplished and dedicated public servants, and I have lost one of my most precious friends.

Tillie’s remarkable record of public service is well known to many of my colleagues. It began over three decades ago, when she worked as a legislative staff member here on Capitol Hill. Her talents soon attracted the attention of Virginia Knauer, Special Assistant to the President for Consumer Affairs. It was there that Tillie and I worked side by side and bonded as lifelong friends. Porigraphie, she and her beloved husband, Buck, moved to Florida, where they would raise two wonderful daughters—Tillie Anne, and my goddaughter, Elizabeth. Tillie also devotated her talents and her enormous energy to her community as a volunteer serving in numerous leadership positions. She was President of the Jacksonville City Council—the first woman ever to hold that position, and the first Republican to preside over the council in more than a century. This, despite the fact that the Council consisted of 16 Democrats and only 3 Republicans. Clearly, Tillie’s intelligence, integrity, and leadership skills were respected across party lines.

In 1992, Tillie ran for the United States House of Representatives. Her popularity was so great that the incumbent Congressman decided to retire rather than run against her.

As those who served with her know, Tillie quickly earned a reputation as one of the hardest working and most effective Members of Congress. She was recognized as one of the 1 most thoughtful and visionary members of the House Armed Services Committee, and the 8 years she spent in the halls of the Capitol were full of accomplishments.

She became the highest ranking woman on either side of Capitol Hill, when her colleagues selected her as Vice Chair of the Republican Conference.

Term-limiting herself, she retired from Congress, but not from public service. Time and again she was called on by our Nation’s leaders to serve in important and sensitive assignments. Defense Policy Board, and named her the first female Chair—the first female Chair—of the Defense Policy Board Advisory Committee, and he appointed her to lead the seven member panel created by Congress to review misconduct allegations at the Air Force Academy. She turned to her again for a blue-ribbon panel to provide independent professional advice on Iraq’s Abu Ghraib prison.

Tillie Fowler was a role model of what a servant of the public should be. And she was the finest friend that one could have. Loyal and caring, she was like a sister to me—always there, always reaching out, always searching for ways in which she could help.

Poet Robert Frost wrote: “Nothing gold can stay.” Tillie was pure gold. She will live forever in my heart.

Bob and I send our strongest support, our love, our prayers to Tillie’s family. Mr. MARTINEZ. Mr. President, I rise today to join my colleague from North Carolina to speak about our great loss, the passing of Congresswoman Tillie Fowler of Jacksonville. Tillie was taken from us suddenly yesterday, passing from this Earth to a better life, and we are sad and shocked by this terrific loss that the State and the Nation has suffered. In every way, Tillie was a great lady. She had such a unique combination of strength and beauty that has been referred to as a “steel magnolia.” She was ever gracious and kind and a gentle soul, but at the same time she was firm in her convictions. Even though Tillie had left the House of Representatives, people in the highest levels of Government, as pointed out by my colleague from North Carolina, continually sought her advice and counsel.

Most recently she had served on the Defense Policy Board Advisory Committee, which provides counsel to Secretary of Defense Rumsfeld on policy and strategy.

I relied often on her sound judgment and advice. Most recently we were talking about the Mayport Naval Base in Florida and the USS Kennedy, and what the Florida delegation should do in order to ensure the long-term viability of Mayport. She was an instrumental adviser to Governor Jeb Bush on the BRAC and BRAC process.

Tillie was a great friend and personal counselor to me about this time a year ago that she and I were standing near the St. John’s River in Jacksonville and she announced her support for my candidacy for the Senate. I am so grateful for her support, and so proud to have had the faith of Tillie Fowler in my candidacy. Her wisdom will be missed, but her legacy is firmly in place.

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, I am saddened by the passing of Tillie Fowler. My wife and I had the privilege of traveling with her overseas, and I found her to be a wonderful person.
Tillie Fowler had a sparkle in her eye, and she had a warm way about her. We enjoyed her company. I think everybody who dealt with her respected Tillie Fowler’s intelligence, her compassion, and her serious interest in making good policy for the country. I requested her contribution to her State and to our country. My wife and I commented many times after that trip what a delightful time we had with Tillie Fowler. We express our condolences to the family as well.

Mr. CHAMBLISS. Mr. President, I join my colleague from North Carolina in expressing my condolences to the family, and express how much I respected Tillie Fowler.

I had an opportunity to say hello to her a little over a week ago. She was so happy and vibrant. Her sudden passing was very much a shock to me. It reminds all of us just how fragile life can be.

I had an opportunity to get to know Tillie Fowler when I served in the U.S. House of Representatives with her. She was a wonderful person and highly respected in the House of Representatives. I do not recall one person in the whole body, whether they opposed or supported, who had cross words to say to Tillie Fowler. She was always well prepared, always courteous, and always somebody you admired when you served with her and got to know her.

I worked closely with her on a number of defense issues because that was her life’s love. I had a chance to get to know her more closely when we had an issue in Colorado with the Air Force Academy. As you may recall, when we set up a commission, which she chaired, it was called the Fowler Commission.

I reflect on the type of respect she garnered from everybody who was around her. When we put her on that commission, we knew she would do a good job. We named the commission after her because of the respect we had for her. It was a difficult task. She did it with honor. She was very hard working and pursued it vigorously. She did a great job.

I join my colleagues in expressing my condolences to the family, and express how much we all loved her. We will miss her. May God bless.

Mr. CHAMBLISS. Mr. President, I know how the Presiding Officer in the shock and sadness that exists because of the loss of Tillie Fowler.

Tillie was a friend of mine long before I ever got involved in politics. I have lived in Georgia for 37 years. You can’t live in Georgia without knowing the Kidd family. Tillie grew up in Milledgeville, GA. Her dad, Culver Kidd, was a long-time State senator, known as “the silver fox.” He was quite a gentleman and quite a legend in his own time in Georgia politics.

Tillie was a great mentor to me during my 8 years in the House, as I know she was to the Presiding Officer. As I told her husband Buck last night, I fought many battles with her. Of all the people I was associated with in the House and in this body, there was nobody I would rather have had in that foxhole with me when I was fighting a battle than Tillie Fowler. She was a true friend, a confidante, someone that is good about the Congress, and she will be dearly missed.

I yield the floor.

MINORITY RIGHTS

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, on Tuesday morning just past, we had our usual Democratic Senate caucus lunch. We discuss lots of things at those lunch meetings. But we were all struck by an appeal from our dearly beloved colleague Senator Robert C. Byrd, whom I consider a dear friend of long standing. I have been here over 20 years. When he rose to encourage all of us to resist the current Senate rules to bypass an important process which permitted the minority in the Senate to challenge the Senate Republican majority to run roughshod over the rights of the minority, to exercise longstanding rules that permitted the minority to play a meaningful role in legislation before us, not as a Democrat, not as a partisan, but as citizens and Senators, to fight to preserve the rights of a minority by being able to use a tactic called a filibuster as a means of protection for the people I was associated with in the Senate.

We have to remember that in the recent elections for President, 57 million people voted for John Kerry, and they were a minority. This Senate decides to ignore those voices and concerns of a minority of that size.

The Senators who voted against cloture recently represented 19 million more constituents than the majority. Can that be constructed as a tyranny of the minority when the Senators who were against cloture represented 19 million people more than the majority who wanted cloture? Tyranny of the minority. Outrageous.

Senator Byrd pleaded with Members to remind our Republican colleagues that such a rules change could once be at their expense, that their constituents could be deprived of their appropriate rights to a voice in legislative or executive matters.

I offer these comments as a prelude to remarks I will make later. We have seen some ugly personal attacks recently by the Republican Party against our Senate Democratic leader, Harry Reid. He was called an obstructionist. He was referred to in sarcastic and insulting terms, as well as our former Majority Leader, Senator Robert Byrd.

I am also proud of my Jewish heritage and that I serve my country with form and that I serve my country with when I wore a uniform. I am proud of my America. I am proud of my citizenship and the duty I served my country with when I wore a uniform and that I serve my country with now. I am also proud of my Jewish heritage and that I serve my country with now. I am also proud of my Jewish heritage and that I serve my country with now.

Senators Byrd is known by everyone in this Chamber and people who have long standing Senate rules with this notoriety.

Minority voices are to be heard. We say it in our Constitution. We say it in our courthouses. It does not matter where.

Senator Byrd’s words warned came in the form of a lesson of history. He simply said that when you change the rules, you change the laws to suit your convenience, you are changing the rules. As the saying goes, those who cannot remember the past are condemned to repeat it.

Senator Byrd talked about how a threatened filibuster in this Senate defeated PDR’s plan to pack the Supreme Court. We are talking about a Democratic President. That was an option that was available according to the rules that the minority could use. Senator Byrd reminded the Senate that we are the heirs of Hitler. We twisted the Reichstag to pass his enabling act, the act that removed the obstructions that were blocking Hitler’s plans. It was a historical lesson we should pay attention to. But now, Senator Byrd’s words are being twisted by this group.

To show some of the shameless tactics they are using, look at this picture. It shows masked men, obviously suicide bombers, with a child strapped with explosives and suggesting that we are responsible for this kind of a condition. It is an outrage. We will not stand silent when the Republican National Committee encourages this kind of behavior. That is how they beat Max Cleland, and that is how they beat Senator Daschle. We are not going to let them win without telling the American people this is a shameful kind of tactic. They have no scruples when they do something like this.

No one suggesting the Republicans are a disloyal party or that they have a particular hate design to their association. But when any group associated with the party suggests that suicide bombers are something that Democrats encourage, incite, or associate with the loss of life that occurred in Israel, and now we see it in Baghdad—how do we feel about our soldiers serving so bravely and gallantly in Iraq, losing their lives? How do we feel about the Iraqis who lost over 100 of their citizens in one day in a suicide bomb attack? We feel terrible.

As a consequence, when something like this, something as scurrilous as this is used, we will condemn it. We are proud of Senator Byrd. He has served over 100 of their citizens in one day in Arkansas.

TRIBUTE TO MAX M. FISHER

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, it was with a great deal of sadness that I learned today that one of the great patriots in America, a man from Illinois, Max Fisher, passed away.

Max Fisher has been a great American statesman, a patriot, a public servant, an entrepreneur, and community leader. He lived in Michigan. He has some Illinois roots also. He was born in 1908 to humble beginnings. He was quite well known in the this country and he was often found as a participant on many occasions. That is what our responsibility is, to disagree when we think something is wrong.

I hope this group will not continue this insinuation that Democrats are disloyal, that Democrats would stand for suicide bombers who kill not only Israelis, who kill our soldiers. Is that what they want to say about Democrats? I think it is important for people at the top of the administration to examine their own military service and see if they were there to protect the rights of our people.

Use a tactic like this? It cannot work, it shouldn’t work, and it won’t work.

HONORING OUR ARMED FORCES

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I rise today to honor a hero who has fallen in service to his country in Iraq. SSG Eric Steffeney of the 8th Ordnance Company died on the 23rd of February near Tuz, Iraq, when an undetected explosive detonated while he cleared the roadside of IEDs. He was 28 years old. He married a young woman, and is survived by her, his family, Annette, his father, Gary, his wife, Theresa, and their three children, Benjamin, Caitlin, and Dennis.

Staff Sergeant Steffeney grew up in Waterloo, IA, where he attended West High School. He graduated from high school early and enlisted in the Army when he was 17 years old. Initially serving as a para trooper, Staff Sergeant Steffeney eventually joined the Army’s bomb squad because he thought it would be more challenging. He was finishing his second tour of duty when he was killed.

Staff Sergeant Steffeney was described as a quiet, loyal, and responsible man who was a good soldier and an all-American boy. Indeed, it is the dedicated and courageous people such as SSG Eric Steffeney who embody the ideals of this great country best and, through the way they lived and gave their lives, keep their people standing proud and strong. I ask all of my colleagues to remember with pride and appreciation this soldier. I give my condolences to the family and friends of Staff Sergeant Steffeney who have felt this loss most deeply. I offer my most sincere gratitude and respect to SSG Eric Steffeney. This country is forever indebted to him and his colleagues for the sacrifices they have made to uphold the ideals which we treasure most as Americans.

Last fall, SSG Robbins took his military leave and was able to return home for a short time. It was a much-needed reprieve from the dangers of Iraq and allowed him the opportunity to return to the place he called home and spend time with the people he cared for most.

It also offered him the opportunity to explain to Tristan, who was simply too young to fully understand, why her father had been away and when he would be back. For good. And when he did, he explained to her the circumstances of his absence and even the possibility that he may not return. He was once a young man with a parent in the military and could relate to the lack of comprehension children often have in these situations. Relying on this perspective, as well as the natural gift he had always shown in relating to children, Tristan’s father was able to provide her with some much needed comfort and understanding.

Along with many of the soldiers from the 39th, SSG Robbins’ mission was soon coming to an end and he was to scheduled to return to Arkansas in late March or April. Upon his return, he was looking forward to a new job with the Arkansas National Guard at Camp Robinson’s Regional Training Institute in North Little Rock. Even more so, he was looking forward to being reunited with his family. When he spoke with Kimberly, he reminded her how much he loved her and couldn’t wait to come home. When he spoke with Tristan, he asked her how she would be feeling forward to seeing her again so he could take her in his arms and swing her like an airplane.
Tragically, he passed away on February 10 from a gunshot wound at his home base at Camp Taji. While the loss for Kimberly and her family will be felt deeply, they have found some solace knowing that his last days were spent doing what he wanted to do, helping people. In the days following his death, it was clear to his family the impact he had on each of their lives. It was also quickly apparent that although he was no longer with them, his presence would always be felt; whether it was the devotion and thoughtfulness evident in the basket of chocolates and Valentine’s Day card he sent Kimberly just before his death, the spirit embodied in the eyes of Abigail who turned 1 year old on February 23, or the courage that Tristan, thanks to her father, has shown in trying to understand what has happened. They are lasting examples of not only the remarkable way he led his life, but more importantly, are a testament to the kind of man he was.

My thoughts and prayers go out to the family and friends of William Robbins, and to all those who knew and loved him. His 31 years with us were far too short, but his legacy of love and service to his Nation will remain with us forever.

LOCAL LAW ENFORCEMENT ENHANCEMENT ACT OF 2005

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, I rise today to speak about the need for hate crimes legislation. Each Congress, Senator KENNEDY and I introduce hate crimes legislation that would add new categories to current hate crimes law, sending a signal that violence of any kind is unacceptable in our society. Likewise, each Congress I have come to the floor to highlight a separate hate crime that has occurred in our country.

On October 2, 2004, Daniel Fetty was brutally beaten to death. Fetta, a 39-year-old deaf and gay man, was allegedly struck repeatedly with bricks and boards by three men in his home town of Waverly, OH. His body was stripped of all clothing and thrown into a dumpster. It is believed that the motivation behind this brutal attack was the sexual orientation of the victim.

I believe that the Government’s first duty is to defend its citizens, to defend them against the harm that comes out of hate. The Local Law Enforcement Enhancement Act is a symbol that can become substance. I believe that by passing this legislation and changing current law, we can change hearts and minds as well.

NATIONAL PEACE CORPS WEEK

Mr. COLEMAN. Mr. President, this week is National Peace Corps Week. It is with great pleasure that I send my congratulations to the Peace Corps volunteers serving throughout the world as we celebrate the Peace Corps’ 44th year of service.

Currently, more than 7,700 volunteers are answering the call to serve in 72 countries around the world. It is a list that is growing. In an historic agreement focused on science and technology, the Peace Corps entered Mexico last year. And over 20 other countries have expressed interest in establishing a partnership with the Peace Corps.

Peace Corps volunteers have made a 27-month commitment to serve overseas typically in undeveloped or rural areas. Volunteer projects need the assistance of many day-to-day necessities such as sanitation, transportation, and electricity. They work to achieve the first goal of the Peace Corps: training and educating people around the world. Volunteers are serving as teachers, business advisors, information technology consultants, agricultural workers, and as HIV/AIDS educators. Today over 3,100 Peace Corps volunteers are helping to implement President Bush’s Emergency Plan for AIDS Relief.

Even as they work on their projects to help those in the countries they serve, Peace Corps volunteers become America’s unofficial “ambassadors” of goodwill, fulfilling the Peace Corps’ second goal of helping to promote a better understanding of America. In the words of former U.S. Ambassador Tibor Nagy: “During my long overseas service, I consistently met two categories of people who were highly favorable toward our country: those who had close contact with Peace Corps volunteers, and those who had studied in the U.S.” These kinds of public diplomacy efforts are more important today than ever.

What’s more, Peace Corps volunteers’ unofficial “ambassador” duties do not conclude when they return home to the United States. Rather, they set about completing the third goal of the Peace Corps by promoting a better understanding of the United States around the world. In this way, Peace Corps volunteers give back much to their communities here at home.

As chairman of the Subcommittee on Western Hemisphere, Peace Corps, and Narcotics Affairs, it is my desire to continue to assist in the growth of Peace Corps, and the well-being of its volunteers. As the Peace Corps continues to expand, I believe it is necessary to provide this agency the resources it needs to ensure volunteer safety, productivity, and satisfaction. And I applaud efforts by the Peace Corps to further diversity our volunteers.

It is my pleasure to recognize 223 Minnesota volunteers who right now are serving our Nation around the globe in countries from Albania to Uzbekistan. I would also like to recognize the over 5,000 returned Peace Corps volunteers who have already represented Minnesota and the United States. Finally, I am happy to join with all past and present Peace Corps volunteers as we celebrate Peace Corps Week 2005, February 28—March 6.

Mr. KOHL. Mr. President, I rise today to recognize the accomplishments of the Peace Corps during National Peace Corps Week—February 28 through March 6.

For 44 years, the Peace Corps has engaged in meaningful work and made innumerable contributions to both America and the countries served by Corps members. Today, more than 2,700 Peace Corps volunteers are working to train men and women in 72 countries to provide for their own needs, as well as to promote mutual understanding between Americans and other cultures.

It gives me great pride to know that the Peace Corps and the people of Wisconsin have a strong relationship. Right now, there are 289 Peace Corps volunteers from Wisconsin, including 137 volunteers from the University of Wisconsin-Madison—more volunteers than any other university in the Nation. The State of Wisconsin can also be proud that the university served as a training ground for many groups bound for service in the early years of the Peace Corps.

To better illustrate the work that Wisconsinites do for the Peace Corps, I would like to share this story of great inspiration.

In August 2004, for the first time, the Peace Corps honored returned volunteers with an award recognizing efforts to promote a better understanding of Americans of other cultures. This award was presented to the Returned Peace Corps Volunteers of the University of Wisconsin-Madison. Since 1987, the group has raised money by selling calendars with pictures of Peace Corps experiences from around the world. The money is used to promote grassroots projects in countries where the volunteers served. The group also works to raise awareness about the Peace Corps and participates in charity events.

This story is both an inspiration and a call to further service. The $98,000 this year from the Returned Peace Corps Volunteers of Wisconsin-Madison donated over a 2-year period to the Peace Corps Partnership Program is a wonderful and meaningful achievement. It is my hope that other people in Wisconsin and throughout the United States will view these returned volunteers as role models.

In closing, I wish to thank the 171,000 Americans who have served in the Peace Corps since 1961 and extend special recognition to the 4,409 Wisconsinites counted among that number. The work of the Peace Corps has made an extraordinarily valuable difference to so many people throughout the world.

CELEBRATING WOMEN IN SCIENCE WEEK

Mr. JOHNSON. Mr. President, it is with great honor that I rise today to publicly recognize South Dakota’s Women in Science Conference that is taking place March 7–11, 2005.

Hosted by the National Weather Service, this conference introduces... junior and senior high school females to the multitude of opportunities available to women in science- and math-related occupations. Studies indicate that, while females thrive in science and mathematics in grade school, far too frequently female students lose interest in these subjects by the time they reach graduation. As Kristine Thompson, a geologist and curator of the Mammoth Site’s In-Situ Bonebed notes, “In the past, many girls and young women with an interest in science and math often were redirected to other fields. Although women account for half of the work force, they constitute less than 20 percent of scientists.

Consequently, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration’s, NOAA, National Weather Service forecast offices in Aberdeen, Rapid City, and Sioux Falls, in conjunction with local and State agencies, schools, and businesses, are cohosting Women in Science symposiums throughout South Dakota. These symposiums, created 5 years ago by the Aberdeen National Weather Service, are designed to foster personal connections between accomplished professional women scientists and female students. The Women in Science Conference creates a unique forum where successful female scholars and professionals meet and hopefully inspire young women to continue developing and cultivating their interests in the natural and physical sciences.

To demonstrate the significance of these events, Governor Mike Rounds, by Executive Proclamation, declared this week “Women in Science Week in South Dakota.”

Among the notable guests featured throughout the week is keynote speaker Karen Stoo, Karen is a native of Hoven, SD, and is currently a biologist at the Genetics and Molecular Biology Branch of the National Human Genome Research Institute in Bethesda, MD. Other lecturers or sessions that span the fields of geology, animal science, engineering, medicine, and metrology. Additionally, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, the National Weather Service, and the Girl Scouts will have exhibits and representatives in attendance. More than 1,000 seventh through twelfth-grade students and teachers are already registered to attend.

I am proud to have the opportunity to share with my colleagues this exciting and significant series of events, and I am very pleased that the conference’s efforts are being publicly honored and celebrated. I strongly commend the hard work and dedication of the National Weather Service and all of the sponsors of the Women in Science Conference, as their contributions will positively impact the lives of so many young women in South Dakota.

COMMENDING IFES

Mr. SALAZAR. Mr. President, we are all very impressed by the results of the Iraqi elections in January. The results exceeded our expectations, and I am hopeful it is evidence that Iraq is moving toward democracy. I wanted to add my voice to the letter sent by Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice and the work of IFES, these historic elections would not have happened. I ask unanimous consent that the letter from Secretary Rice to IFES President Richard Soudriette dated February 28, 2005, be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE SECRETARY OF STATE, Washington, DC, February 28, 2005,

Mr. Richard Soudriette,
President, International Foundation for Election Systems

DEAR MR. Soudriette: On behalf of the Department of State, I would like to offer my thanks and appreciation for IFES’s role in supporting the January elections in Iraq. On January 30 we saw millions of Iraqis bravely intimidation and make an indelible mark on Iraq’s democratic road forward. Without the tremendous work of our troops who provided security at over 10,000 polling places around Iraq and the work of IFES, these historic elections would not have happened. I ask unanimous consent that the letter from Secretary Rice to IFES President Richard Soudriette dated February 28, 2005, be printed in the RECORD.

The success of the first step in Iraq’s transition to democracy is due in no small part to your organization’s diligence and the dedication of our highly skilled staff. IFES’s guidance on election regulations and operations, complaints adjudication, and public information not only helped to ensure transparency but also served to buoy the country’s confidence that these historic elections were indeed credible and transparent. Additionally, IFES’s continuing role in building the Independent Electoral Commission of Iraq’s capacity for future electoral events will buttress Iraq’s evolving democratic institutions.

Thank you again for your great contributions to maintaining Iraq’s evolving democratic institutions.

Sincerely,

CONDOLEEZZA RICE

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

CASUALTIES IN IRAQ

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, 1,500 American service men and women have been killed in Iraq, and more than 11,000 have been wounded. We were all moved by the Iraqi elections last month, and all Americans support the creation of a legitimate, functioning Iraqi Government that guarantees the rights of all Iraqis. We all want democracy in Iraq to take root firmly and irrevocably.

But we also want to know when we will have achieved our mission in Iraq and when 150,000 soldiers will be able to return home with dignity and honor. At a March 1 hearing in the Senate Armed Services Committee, General Abizaid, the leader of the Central Command, gave the clearest indication so far about when our mission might end. General Abizaid said, “I believe that in 2005, the most important statement that we should be able to make is that in the majority of the country, Iraqi security forces will take the lead in fighting the counterinsurgency. That is our goal.”

About the capabilities of the Iraqi security forces, General Abizaid expects, “I think in 2005 they’ll take on the majority of the tasks necessary to be done.”

If the Iraqis make the significant progress this year that General Abizaid expects, it is perfectly logical to expect that a large number of American troops will be able to return home.

Our troops are clearly still needed to deal with the insurgency. But there is widespread agreement that the presence of American troops is also fueling the insurgency and making it more difficult to defeat.

After the election, the administration announced that 15,000 American troops added to provide security for the area of the Iraqi government, and additional troops should be able to return this year. Doing so would clearly help take the American face off the occupation and send a clearer signal to the Iraqi people that we have no long-term desire to be there.

In the February 28 edition of US News and World Report, General Abizaid emphasized this basic point. He said an overbearing presence, or a larger than acceptable footprint in the region, works against you . . . The first thing you say to yourself is that you have to have the local people help themselves.

During his testimony Secretary Wolfowitz made the same point in a hearing at the Senate Armed Services Committee on February 3. He said, “I have talked to some of our commanders in the area. They believe that over the course of the next six months you will see whole areas of the country, if not the whole country, turn over to the Iraqi army and Iraqi police.”

Before the election, the administration repeatedly stated that 14 of the 18 provinces in Iraq are safe. We heard a similar view in a briefing from Ambassador Negroponte.

If some areas can be turned over to the Iraqis in the next 6 months, as Secretary Wolfowitz indicated, it should be done. It would be a powerful signal to the Iraqi people that the United States is not planning a permanent occupation of their country. If entire areas are being turned over to the Iraqis, we should be able to bring many American troops home.

However, I understand that leading our troops ahead of the pace in the area will be difficult because the violence is far from ended. Sixty-six Americans soldiers have been killed in the 31 days since the election an average of two a day. But the election has produced a new hope, and the Iraqi people are looking forward to a transitional Government that will write a new constitution for the country and hold elections next December for the permanent new government that will lead their new democracy.

We all hope for a safer Iraq, and appropriate withdrawals of our forces can clearly be an important factor in achieving that success.
The President’s commitment to keeping American troops in Iraq as long as it takes and not a day longer is not enough for our soldiers and their loved ones. They deserve a clearer indication of what lies ahead, and so do the American people. General Abizaid has begun to provide clarification of that very important issue, and I hope the President will as well.●

HARLEY-DAVIDSON KANSAS CITY ASSEMBLY PLANT

● Mr. TALENT. Mr. President, I rise today to pay tribute to the workers at Harley-Davidson’s Kansas City Assembly Plant for their hard work and to salute Harley-Davidson for all of the great things they have done for the State of Missouri since locating the plant here just a few years ago.

Harley-Davidson is the oldest and largest motorcycle manufacturer in the U.S. The Kansas City plant, one of only two Harley-Davidson final assembly plants in the country, produces the Sportster, the Dyna Glide, and the V-Rod, these motorcycles travel all over the world. The plant, which employs over 900 people, opened in 1998, and has achieved its intended goal of significantly increasing Harley-Davidson’s production capacity and productivity.

Every September, the plant hosts an open house for Platte County residents and Harley enthusiasts from across the country to tour the plant and learn about how motorcycles are made. Best of all, anyone with a motorcycle license can take the opportunity to test ride a brand new Harley.

Harley-Davidson’s contributions to the Kansas City area are important to job creation and sustaining economic growth, and Missourians are proud to have such an iconic symbol of the American spirit located in our State. I am honored to share their accomplishments with you today, and I wish the workers at the Kansas City Plant success in their future endeavors.●

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS

The following petitions and memorials were laid before the Senate and were referred or ordered to lie on the table as indicated:

POM-28. A resolution adopted by the Legislative Research Commission of the Commonwealth of Kentucky relating to tobacco growers selling their excess 2004 crop; to the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry.

RESOLUTION

Whereas on October 22, 2004, the President signed into law the Fair and Equitable Tobacco Reform Act of 2004; and

Whereas the tobacco quota buyout legislation represents the most significant change in the tobacco production program since the 1930s; and

Whereas the buyout means there will be no constraints on who can produce tobacco, where it is grown, how much can be marketed, and what the price may be; and

Whereas the tobacco production system will shift to contracting directly with tobacco companies; and

Whereas many quota owners and growers may decide to quit tobacco production altogether; and

Whereas some growers may have excess tobacco remaining from their 2004 crop, but, because of federal laws and regulations, cannot sell it; and

Whereas at least one large tobacco company has indicated it will not accept carryover tobacco, or tobacco produced and harvested in a prior crop year; and

Whereas it is important that tobacco growers be able to sell all their 2004 leaf crop: Now, therefore, be it resolved by the House Agriculture and Forestry Committee of the Kentucky General Assembly:

Section 1. The Agriculture and Small Business Committee strongly urges the United States Congress and the United States Department of Agriculture take the necessary steps to allow tobacco producers to sell the excess tobacco from their 2004 crop.

Section 2. Copies of this resolution shall be transmitted to the President of the United States Senate, the Speaker of the United States House of Representatives, to each member of the Congressional Delegation to the Congress of the United States, and to the Secretary of the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

POM-29. A resolution adopted by the Senate of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania relative to the Medal of Honor; to the Committee on Armed Services.

SENATE RESOLUTION 5
Whereas United States Army and Department of Defense officials are reviewing a recommendation for a congressional Distinguished Service Cross to the Medal of Honor; and
Whereas Major Winters was originally nominated for the Medal of Honor by Colonel Robert F. Sink, commander of the 506th Regiment, for heroic actions on June 6, 1944, during the Allied invasion of Normandy, France, as 1st Lieutenant, Acting Commanding Officer of Company 2, 2nd Battalion, 506th Infantry Regiment, 101st Airborne Division, VII corps; and
Whereas Major Winters’ extraordinary planning, fighting and commandeering on that day 60 years ago in Nazi-occupied Normandy, during his regiment’s first combat operation saved countless lives and expedited the Allied inland advance; and
Whereas With his company outnumbered by German soldiers, Major Winters destroyed German guns at Brecourt Manor and secured causeways for troops coming off Utah Beach; and
Whereas Major Winters’ battle plan for a small, American infantry company has been taught at the United States Military Academy at West Point; and
Whereas Major Winters accomplished a hazardous mission with valor; inspired his service colleagues through example and effectively organized his company into support and achieved the dawn of liberation in this campaign for European liberation during World War II; Therefore, be it
Resolved, That the Senate of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, urge the Congress of the United States to award the Medal of Honor to Major Richard D. Winters without further delay; and be it further Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be transmitted to the presiding officers of each house of Congress and to each member of Congress from Pennsylvania.

SENATE RESOLUTION 20
Whereas the nation’s air quality has improved significantly since the early 1970’s, pollutants such as sulfur dioxide, nitrogen oxide, and mercury continue at levels that pose serious health and public safety concerns. Because of these concerns, the United States Environmental Protection Agency has established stricter National Ambient Air Quality Standards, most recently for ozone and particulate matter; and
Whereas currently, 474 counties, including 33 in Ohio, are in nonattainment with the ozone standard and 224 counties, including 32 in Ohio, are in nonattainment with the particulate matter standard. Nonattainment designations place a significant burden on state and local governments, which must develop plans to reduce emissions and come into compliance with the standards; and
Whereas in order to ensure that the states have the most effective means of attaining the new standards, the Clean Skies Act of 2005 (S. 191) has been introduced in the United States Senate. This legislation not only is based on the successful Acid Rain Programs, it also incorporates a multi-pollutant approach, one that tackles environmental, energy, and economic needs. For example, it requires power plants to reduce emissions of sulfur dioxide, nitrogen oxide, and mercury—three criteria pollutants—and allows the nation to continue burning coal, our most abundant and low-cost energy source, while improving our nation’s air quality: Now, therefore be it
Resolved, That we, the members of the Senate of the 126th General Assembly of the State of Ohio, urge the Congress of the United States to enact the Clear Skies Act of 2005 in order for our nation’s air quality and ensure our nation’s economic stability; and be it further Resolved, That the Clerk of the Senate transmit duly authenticated copies of this resolution to the President of the United States, the President Pro Tempore and Secretary of the United States Senate, the Speaker of the House of Representatives, the Chairmen of the United States House of Representatives, the members of the Ohio Congressional delegation, and the news media of Ohio.

POM-31. A resolution adopted by the Senate of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania relative to the Republic of Poland; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

SENATE RESOLUTION 25
Whereas the Republic of Poland is a free, democratic and independent nation; and
Whereas in 1989 the United States and the Republic of Poland became formal allies when Poland was granted membership in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization; and
Whereas Poland has proven to be an indispensable ally in the global campaign against terrorism; and
Whereas the Republic of Poland has actively participated in Operation Iraqi Freedom and the Iraqi reconstruction, shedding blood along with American soldiers; and
Whereas the United States and other high-ranking officials have described the Republic of Poland as “one of our closest friends”; and
Whereas on 15, 1991, the Republic of Poland unilaterally repealed the visa obligation to United States citizens traveling to Poland; and
Whereas the United States Department of State Visa Waiver Program currently allows approximately 23 million citizens from 27 countries to travel to the United States for tourism or business for up to 90 days without having to obtain visas for entry; and
Whereas the countries that currently participate in the Visa Waiver Program include Andorra, Australia, Austria, Belgium, Brunei, Denmark, Finland, France, Germany, Iceland, Liechtenstein, Luxembourg, Monaco, the Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Portugal, San Marino, Singapore, Slovenia, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland and Andorra; and
Whereas it is appropriate that the Republic of Poland be made eligible for the United States Department of State Visa Waiver Program; Therefore be it
Resolved, That the Senate of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania urge the President of the United States Department of State Visa Waiver Program to make the Republic of Poland eligible for the United States Department of State Visa Waiver Program; and be it further Resolved, That copies of this resolution be transmitted to the President of the United States, the Senate of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania; to the Committee on Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs; to the Committee on the Judiciary, Environment and Public Works, and to the Committee on Education and Labor.

STATEMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Ms. COLLINS (for herself, Mrs. LANDRIEU, Mrs. DOLE, Ms. MIKULSKI, Mrs. HUTCHISON, Mrs. BOXER, Ms. SNOWE, Ms. CANTWELL, Ms. MURkowski, Mrs. CLINTON, Mrs. FEINSTEIN, Mrs. LINCOLN, Mrs. MURRAY, Ms. STABENOW, Mr. VOINOvICH, Mr. AKAKA, Mr. BENNETT, Mr. DURBIN, Mr. LAWFORD, Mr. SARBANES, and Mr. PRYOR):

S. 501. A bill to provide a site for the National Women’s History Museum in the District of Columbia; to the Committee on Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs.

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, today I am introducing the National Women’s History Museum Act of 2005. I appreciate the support of my colleagues who have helped in this important effort and who have agreed to be cosponsors, including Senators LANDRIEU, DOLE, MIKULSKI, HUTCHISON, BOXER, SNOWE, CANTWELL, MURkowski, CLINTON, FEINSTEIN, LINCOLN, MURRAY, STABENOW, VOINOvICH, AKAKA, BENNETT, DURBIN, LUTENBERG, SARBANES, and PRYOR. I introduced this bill last Congress, and it passed the Senate unanimously.

The need to establish a museum recognizing the contributions of American women is clear. There is currently no national museum in Washington, D.C. area that is dedicated to the legacy of women’s contributions throughout our country’s history. Sadly, fewer than 5 percent of the Nation’s 2,200 National Historic Landmarks are dedicated to women, a given reflecting the significant contributions of women throughout our Nation’s history.

The proposed legislation would direct the General Services Administration (GSA) to negotiate and enter into an occupancy agreement with the National Women’s History Museum, Inc. (NWHM) to establish a museum in the currently vacant Pavilion Annex of the Old Post Office building in Washington, D.C. The NWHM is a nonprofit, nonpartisan, educational institution in the District of Columbia that was created to research and present the historic contributions that women have made to our Nation in their various roles in family, the economy, and society. In 1999, the President’s Commission on the Celebrating of Women in American History concluded that “efforts to implement an appropriate celebration of women’s history in the next millennium should include, the designation of a focal point for women’s history in our Nation’s capital,” citing the efforts of the NWHM to implement this goal.

The proposed legislation would serve two important purposes: Creating, as the President’s Commission recommended, a national women’s museum in the District of Columbia and, by designating the Pavilion Annex, utilizing a currently vacant space on Pennsylvania Avenue considered “America’s Main Street.”

I would note that, last Congress the Government Accountability Office and are trailblazers such as Sandra Day O'Connor, who was the first woman to serve on the Supreme Court; Harriet Tubman, who led slaves to freedom; and Rosa Parks, who sparked a movement for civil rights. There are similar needs in communities to address very critical aspects of our history and culture, so that travelers can learn about our past, but also be inspired to make history of our own.

I urge that my colleagues support this important piece of legislation.

By Mr. COLEMAN (for himself, Mr. PRYOR, Mr. DEWINE, and Mr. GRAHAM):

S. 502. A bill to revitalize rural America and rebuild main street, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. COLEMAN. Mr. President, traveling throughout rural Minnesota, I see a very real need for the revitalization and rebuilding of Main Streets, and this is why today I am introducing the Rural Renaissance Act with my good friend Senator PRYOR of Arkansas, Senator GRAHAM of South Carolina, and Senator DEWINE of Ohio. This legislation acknowledges that rural America needs significant infrastructure improvements to grow and thrive as the rest of the Nation in an economic recovery, and our bill proposes to apply $50 billion toward this end.

Many Minnesota cities and towns need help with updating or expanding their drinking water supply systems or their wastewater treatment systems. The West Central Initiative and the USDA both estimate that there is a $1.5 billion gap between available local, State, and Federal resources and the amount needed by Minnesota communities. There are similar needs in communities throughout the rest of the Nation. Decaying physical infrastructure needs to be addressed because it impacts more than just health and quality of life. It also impacts the ability of a city or town to build housing, provide services, ensure access to information, and grow jobs. Throughout rural America, progress is being made in many areas, but in others, a lack of funding is impacting the ability of communities to address very critical albeit basic needs. Here is an example of the physical infrastructure challenges facing rural America: The Environmental Protection Agency estimates that communities will need an estimated $300 billion to $1 trillion over the next 20 years to repair, replace, or upgrade drinking water and wastewater facilities, accommodate a growing population, and meet water quality standards.

Current residents and businesses of rural communities face a challenge when it comes to accessing the Internet. This reality means that these cities and towns are on the back when it comes to attracting new residents and businesses. While the number of broadband subscribers has risen dramatically in recent years, studies conducted by the FCC, DOC, and USDA all suggest that urban and high-income areas are far outpacing deployment in rural and low-income areas. As a result of these disparities, rural America suffers adverse economic and social consequences. The USDA has reported that in 2006, less than five percent of towns with populations of 10,000 or less had access to broadband. Likewise, the Commerce Department has found that 21.2 percent of Internet users in urban areas have access to high-speed connections, while only 12.2 percent of Internet users in rural areas have this technology.

Housing is essential if communities want to keep the businesses they have or attract new ones. Employers need to know that employees will be able to find housing that they can afford in or near the community. Housing efforts must emphasize new construction and rehabilitation alike. Communities need new units to attract new families and they must have the ability to help residents remodel and renovate existing housing. Housing in rural America is clearly an economic development issue. It is clear that these physical infrastructure needs have substantial financial implications for rural America. For example, in 1990, 1.8 million homes and apartments were moderately or severely substandard. Our Rural Renaissance Act addresses these needs. The impact of doing nothing poses great risks for the future of rural cities and towns.

As you can see, the need for a rural renaissance is clear. Greater Minnesota alone needs almost $7 billion over the next 20 years to modernize infrastructure, accommodate the increasing population, and meet current water quality standards. The USDA estimates that bringing high-speed Internet access to the rest of rural America is estimated at about $10.9 billion. These are just a couple of examples but the most vivid, I think, are just the closed stores you see up and down our Main Streets. We'd like to turn these towns around like we did in St. Paul, and we can.

Our Rural Renaissance Act will fund these infrastructure improvements—and also provide for community facilities and farmer-owned and value-added projects—by sending $50 billion out to rural America in one to three years at a cost of about $15 billion over 10 years. It can be done through Federal bonds.
just as we helped pay for the costs of World War II and as State and locals pay for many infrastructure developments. The key, however, is that these monies will be made available to States and locals, as well as farmer-owned coops and other eligible entities, in the form of grants and low interest loans.

We have seen tremendous support from groups back home and across the country who share a commitment to revitalizing rural America and rebuilding our Main Streets. Those supporting this bill include, the Association of Minnesota Counties, the League of Minnesota Cities, the Minnesota Rural Water Association, the Independent Community Bankers of Minnesota, the Minnesota Rural Electric Association, the University of Minnesota, the Rural Broadband Coalition, the National Council of Farmer Cooperatives, the Telecommunications Industry Association, the American Sugarbeet Growers Association, the Minnesota Barley Growers Association, the AgCountry Farm Credit Services, the AgStar Financial Services, the Farm Credit Services of Grand Forks, the Farm Credit Services of Minnesota Valley, AgriBank, the Minnesota Association of Wheat Growers, the Minnesota Association of Cooperatives, the Wisconsin Federation of Cooperatives, the Minnesota Barley Growers Association, the Minnesota Soybean Growers Association, the Minnesota Nursery and Landscape Association, the America Soybean Association, the Minnesota Association of Townships, the Minnesota Chapter of the National Association of Housing and Redevelopment Officials, and the Red River Valley Sugarbeet Growers Association.

These groups and many others agree with us when we say that we need the Rural Renaissance Act.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of the Rural Renaissance Act be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 502

Parents as Teachers has worked in Missouri. It is a program which involves training and assistance for parents of children from birth to 3 years of What began as an experiment in Missouri has expanded to more than 3,000 sites in all 50 states, and seven foreign countries. Communities all over the world are investing in PAT because the results are positive and the cost is low. And I can tell you that parents in PAT know that it is a tremendous benefit to them and their children.

The scientifically sound research shows that: All are 3 PAT children are more advanced in language, social development, problem solving and other cognitive abilities. PAT children score higher on kindergarten readiness tests. Children who participate in PAT score higher on measures of reading, math and language in first through fourth grades, parents who participate in PAT are more confident about their parenting and are more involved in their children’s schooling—a key component of a child’s success in school.

Recognizing that all parents need and deserve support in laying a strong foundation for their child’s success I will be introducing the Education Begins at Home Act. To date over 2 million families nationwide have received the education and support they need through PAT. While this is a tremendous accomplishment, there are more families that can be reached by this exceptional program.

The Education Begins at Home Act makes a bold federal investment in parents by establishing the first, dedicated federal funding stream to support the expansion of Parents as Teachers—other home visitation programs—at the state and local level. The $500 million in federal funds over 3 years included in this bill will expand services to over 2.7 million families nationwide.

Ten times more families will be served by PAT under this legislation. This bill will: provide $400 million over 3 years to states to expand access to PAT; provide $50 million over 3 years to fund innovative ideas and partnerships at the local level to expand access to PAT in communities; and provide $50 million over 3 years to reach more military families by expanding access to PAT in schools and community organizations that serve military families.

All babies are born to learn and a parent is a child’s first and most important teacher. Parents as Teachers better prepares children for success in school and life and helps parents become more active participants in their child’s education.

The expansion of Parents as Teachers is a sound investment in the future of our children and families.

By Mr. KYL (for himself and Mr. McCAIN):
S. 505. A bill to amend the Yuma Crossing National Heritage Area Act of 2000 to adjust the boundary of the Yuma Crossing National Heritage Area; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

Mr. KYL. Mr. President, I am pleased to join today with Senator McCAIN to introduce the Yuma Crossing National Heritage Area Boundary Adjustment Act. This legislation would amend the Yuma Crossing National Heritage Act of 2000, Public Law 106-319, to reduce the size of the heritage area to conform to the area set forth in the Heritage Area Management Plan revised by the Secretary of the Interior in 2002.

The Yuma Crossing Heritage Area was designated in October 2000. It sprung from a preliminary concept plan completed in 1999 by the Heritage Area Task Force. The boundaries proposed in that plan included approximately 22 square miles, extending from the Colorado River on the north and west to the Avenue 7E alignment on the east and the 12th street alignment on the south. These boundaries represented the task force’s “best guess” as to the cultural landscape warranting inclusion in the heritage area. This “best guess” was incorporated into the legislation designating the Yuma Crossing National Heritage Area. During the development of the final Heritage Area Management Plan, which was subject to comprehensive community involvement, it became apparent that the area’s boundaries were too large and should be more constricted along the Colorado River and in historic downtown.

Rather than simply leave the boundaries as they were set in the 2000 legislation, we have heard from the community in Yuma that it is important that we conform the boundaries to those in the agreed-upon Management Plan. Doing so will provide certainty to the heritage area and those private landowners who live within its current boundaries. It will allow the heritage area to meet its management goals and responsibilities without the worry that private property rights may be affected in the future.

This is a non-controversial, straightforward correction. I hope my colleagues will work with me to pass it quickly this year.

By Mr. HAGEL (for himself, Mr. DURBIN, Ms. CANTWELL, Mr. LAUTENBERG, and Mrs. MURRAY):
S. 506. A bill to amend the Public Health Service Act to establish a scholarship and loan repayment program for public health preparedness workforce development to eliminate critical public health preparedness workforce shortages in Federal, State, local, and tribal public health agencies; to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions.

Mr. HAGEL. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce an amendment to an act signed by the President on January 25, 2006, which was my bill to authorize the Public Health Preparedness Workforce Development Act of 2005. This legislation aims to increase the pipeline of qualified public health workers at the Federal, State, local and tribal levels by offering scholarships to students going into the public health field. It also encourages current professionals to stay in the public health field by providing loan repayment for a commitment of a designated number of years of service in public health.

The average age of lab technicians, epidemiologists, environmental health experts, microbiologists, IT specialists, public health administrators and others who make up the public health workforce is 47, seven years older than the average age of the Nation’s workforce. Over the next five years, my State of Nebraska will have more public health workers who are eligible for retirement than any other state in the Nation.

To encourage young people to enter the public health field, this legislation authorizes $35 million per year for scholarship and loan repayment programs. Eighty percent of the funds would be dedicated for state and local public health workers, with bonus payments available to those who agree to be placed in under-served areas.

There are critical public health workforce shortages. We cannot afford to lose so many experienced workers just when our public health workforce should be expanding to meet increasing health needs. The ability of the public health system to respond to emerging infectious diseases like West Nile Virus, food-borne illnesses, or bioterrorism relies on a well-trained, adequately staffed public health network at all levels. It is important that we address this problem before it becomes a crisis.

I urge my colleagues to support this legislation.

By Mr. DeWINE (for himself, Mr. Levin, Ms. Stabenow, Mr. Reed, and Mr. Voinovich):
S. 507. A bill to establish the National Invasive Species Council, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

Mr. DeWINE. Mr. President, today I am pleased to join with Senators Levin, Stabenow, Reed, and Voinovich to introduce the National Invasive Species Council Act—a bill to permanently establish the National Invasive Species Council. I would like to thank my colleagues for their hard work on this legislation.

Recognizing the need for better coordination to combat the economic, ecological, and health threats posed by invasive species, the federal government established the National Invasive Species Council by Executive Order in 1999. Today, the Council continues to operate and develop invasive species management plans. However, the Council is not sufficiently funded.

The GAO reported that implementing these management plans is difficult because the Council does not have a comprehensive mandate to act. GAO further reported that most of the agencies that have responsibilities under the National Invasive Species Management Plan have not been completing activities by established due dates and that these lack back coordination. These are significant problems that must be addressed.

Invasive species are a national threat that we cannot afford to ignore. Many states are trying to combat these species that threaten our local and environments. Examples of such plants and animals include the emerald ash borer, which has been particularly troublesome in my home state of Ohio; the Chinese mitten crab; and hydrlida, considered to be one of the most problematic aquatic plants in the United States. If left unchecked, these and other invasive species pose dangerous environmental, health, and economic threats. Estimates of the annual economic damages caused by invasive species in this nation are as high as $137 billion. It is clear that more must be done.

To combat the serious threats posed by invasive species, need federal coordination and planning. Our bill would provide just that and on a permanent basis. Under this legislation, the Secretaries of State, Commerce, Transportation, Agriculture, Health and Human Services, Interior, Defense, and Treasury, along with the Administrators of EPA and USAID, would continue to work together through the National Invasive Species Council to develop a National Invasive Species Management Plan.

The duties of the Council are generally to coordinate federal activities in an effective, complementary, cost-efficient manner; update the National Invasive Species Management Plan; ensure that federal agencies implement the Management Plan; and develop recommendations for international cooperation. Additionally, if recommendations are not implemented, agencies would have to report to the Council. The Council would be expected to develop guidance for federal agencies on prevention, control, and eradication of invasive species so that federal programs and actions do not increase the risk of invasive species entering non-indigenous species. And, finally, the bill would establish an Invasive Species Advisory Committee to the Council.

The National Invasive Species Council could enhance its effectiveness and better protect communities from invasive species with a congressional mandate. I urge my colleagues to co-sponsor this measure so that the Federal Government can better respond to the threat posed by invasive species.

By Mr. DeWINE (for himself, Mr. Levin, Ms. Stabenow, Mr. Lugar, Mr. Bayh, Mr. Dayton, and Mr. Kohl):
S. 508. A bill to provide for the environmental restoration of the Great Lakes; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

Mr. DeWINE. Mr. President, today I am proud to introduce the Great Lakes Environmental Restoration Act with my colleague, Senator Levin. I would like to thank him for all of his hard work on this legislation.

For those who have been one of the five Great Lakes, it is not difficult to understand their importance. Covering more than 94,000 square miles and draining more than twice as much land as all these freshwaters, these freshwaters estimate six quadrillion gallons of water—or one-fifth of the world’s surface freshwater. The Great Lakes ecosystem includes such diverse elements as northern evergreen and deciduous forests, lake plain prairies, and coastal wetlands. Over 30 of the basin’s biological communities and over 100 species are globally rare or found only in the Great Lakes basin. The 637 State parks in the region accommodate more than 60 million visitors each year, and the Great Lakes basin is home to more than 33 million people—or one-tenth of the U.S. population.

As co-chairs of the Senate Great Lakes Task Force, Senator Levin and I have worked together on legislation and other initiatives to protect this natural resource. We secured funding from the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA) for water level gauges, a replacement ice-breaking vessel, and funding for the Great Lakes Fishery Commission for sea lamprey control. Additionally, Senator Levin and I met with the U.S. Trade Representative Office in an effort to prevent Great Lakes fish from being diverted abroad. We worked to authorize the Great Lakes Basin Soil Erosion and Sediment Control Program in the 2002 Farm Bill, and three years ago, we joined our colleagues in the House to pass the Great Lakes Legacy Act. This legislation provides up to $50 million per year to the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) to remove contaminated sediments at Areas of Concern.

These steps are positive, but we are not keeping pace with the problems facing the Great Lakes—the Federal Government simply is not providing the funding to protect them. An April 2005 Government Accountability Office (GAO) report found that the Federal Government spent roughly $745 million over the last ten years on Great Lakes restoration programs. Now consider that the GAO reported that the eight Great Lakes States spent $956 million during that same ten-year period.

There is ample evidence that this current level of commitment is simply not enough to address the challenges. In 2001, there were approximately 600 beach closings as a result of bacteria. Further, State and local health authorities issued approximately 1,400 fish consumption advisories in the Great Lakes. In 1978, the United States and Canada amended the Great Lakes Water Quality Agreement to give priority attention to 43 designated Areas of Concern. Since the signing, the Federal Government has not been able to remove any U.S. sites from the Areas of Concern list. Invasive species are one of the largest threats to the ecosystem and the $4.5 billion Great Lakes fishing industry. There are now over 160 aquatic invasive species threatening the Great Lakes. It is imperative that we fix these problems.

For several years, I have been calling for a plan to restore the Lakes. I have been urging the governors, mayors, the environmental community, and other regional interests to agree on a vision for the future of the Great Lakes—not just for the short-term, but for the long-term. It is time for us to come together to develop a plan and put it in place.

The bill we are introducing today builds upon the efforts by those in the Great Lakes states who are working with the congressional delegation and federal officials on the Great Lakes Regional Collaboration group. It provides the funding needed to implement their recommendations.

This legislation would provide the tools needed for the long-term future of the Great Lakes. First, our bill creates a $6 billion Great Lakes Restoration Grant Program to augment existing federal efforts to clean, protect, and restore the Great Lakes. An additional $800 million in annual funding will be appropriated through the EPA’s Great Lakes National Program Office. The Program Office will provide grants to the Great Lakes States, municipalities, and other applicants in coordination with the Great Lakes Environmental Restoration Advisory Board. This funding will provide the extra resources that existing programs do not have.

While the Great Lakes are a national resource, leaders in the region, not Washington bureaucrats, should set priorities and guide restoration efforts. That is why our bill requires close coordination between the EPA and state and regional interests before grants are released. The Great Lakes Environmental Restoration Advisory Board, led by the Great Lakes governors, will include mayors, federal agencies, Native American tribes, environmentalists, industry representatives, and Canadian observers. This Advisory Board will prioritize restoration projects, such as invasive species control and prevention, wetlands restoration, contaminated sites, and water quality improvements. Additionally, this Advisory Board will provide recommendations on which grant applications to fund. The input from the Advisory Board ensures that regional leaders will be critical in determining the long-term future of the Great Lakes.

As the April 2003 GAO study reported, environmental restoration activities in the Great Lakes suffer from lack of coordination. The second goal of this legislation is the coordination of the Great Lakes Interagency Task Force to coordinate Federal activities in the Great Lakes region. The EPA’s Great Lakes National Program Office would serve as the council leader, and participants would include key federal agencies involved in Great Lakes restoration efforts. The council would ensure that the efforts of federal agencies are coordinated, effective, and cost-efficient. Lastly, this bill would help address a GAO recommendation that a monitoring system and environmental indicators be developed to measure progress on new and existing restoration programs in the Great Lakes.

Our bill is in the right direction. I would again like to thank my colleague, Senator LEVIN, for his dedication to the Great Lakes and to their restoration. We need to continue to refocus and improve our efforts in order to reverse the trend of additional degradation of the Great Lakes. They are a unique natural resource for Ohio and the entire region—a resource that must be protected for future generations. I ask my colleagues to join me in support of this bill and in our efforts to help preserve and protect the long-term viability of our Great Lakes.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 508

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE. This Act may be cited as the “Great Lakes Environmental Restoration Act”.

SEC. 2. FINDINGS. Congress finds that—

(1) the Great Lakes and the connecting channels of the Great Lakes form the largest freshwater system in the world, holding ⅙ of the fresh surface water supply of the world and ⅙ of the total surface water supply of the United States;

(2) 30 years after the date of enactment of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act (33 U.S.C. 1321 et seq.) water quality in the Great Lakes has improved, but the Great Lakes remain in a degraded state;

(3) evidence of the degraded environment of the Great Lakes includes—

(A) a record 599 closings of Great Lakes beaches in 2001;

(B) an increase to 20 percent in the percentage of Great Lakes shoreline that contains polluted sediments; and

(C) the issuance by State and local authorities of 1,400 fish consumption advisories relating to toxins in fish;

(4) the Great Lakes are sources of drinking water for approximately 40,000,000 people in the United States and Canada;

(5) in this Act, the Great Lakes Water Quality Agreement was signed and the United States and Canada agreed to “restore and maintain the chemical, physical, and biological integrity of the waters of the Great Lakes Basin and give priority attention to the 43 designated Areas of Concern”, no sites have been restored in the United States;

(6) it is the responsibility of the Federal Government and State and local governments to ensure that the Great Lakes remain a clean and safe source of water for drinking, fishing, and recreation;

(7) while the total quantity of resources needed to restore the Great Lakes is unknown, additional funding is needed now to augment existing efforts to address the known threats facing the Great Lakes.

By Mrs. FEINSTEIN (for herself, Mr. LEVIN, Mr. WyDEN, Mr. HARKIN, and Ms. CANTWELL).

S. 509. A bill to improve the operation of energy markets; to the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, in light of the most recent evidence uncovered about Enron's participation in the Western Energy Crisis, I rise today to introduce the Energy Market Oversight Bill with Senators LEVIN, HARKIN, CANTWELL and WyDEN.

This bill would—

(A) Improve Price Transparency in Wholesale Electricity Markets. The bill directs the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission to establish an electronic system to provide information about the price and availability of wholesale electricity to buyers, and sellers, and the public.

Prohibit Round Trip Electricity Trades. The bill prohibits the simultaneous buying and selling of the same quantity of electricity at the same price in the same location with no financial gain or loss. These so-called 'wash trades' are essentially bogus trades whereby no electricity changes hands, but the profit from the trades enriches the bottom-line of a company's financial report.

Prohibit Manipulation in Electricity Markets. Manipulation is prohibited in the wholesale electricity markets and FERC is given discretionary authority to revoke market-based rates for violations. Strangely enough, manipulation of energy markets is not specifically prohibited. This would add language to Part II of the Federal Power Act.

Repeal the 'Enron exemption'. Repeals the Commodities Future Modernization Act exemption for large traders in energy commodities and applies the anti-manipulation and anti-fraud provisions of the Commodities Exchange Act to all Over The Counter trades in energy commodities and derivatives. In my view, when Congress exempted energy from the Commodities Futures Modernization Act of 2000, it created the playing field for the Western Energy Crisis of 2000 and 2001, and cost millions of people millions of dollars.

Provide CFTC the Tools to Monitor OTC Energy Markets. For Over The Counter trades in energy commodities and derivatives that perform a significant price discovery function, including trades on electronic trading facilities, the bill requires large sophisticated traders to keep records and report large trades to the CFTC. This does not change the law, only applies the law that exists for futures contracts to the counter trades in the energy markets.

Limit on Use of Data. Requires the Commodity Futures Trading Commission to seek information that is necessary for the limited purposes of detecting and preventing fraud in the futures and over the counter markets for energy; to keep proprietary trade and business data confidential except when used for law enforcement purposes. This does not require the real-time publication of proprietary data.

No Effect on Non-Energy Commodities or Derivatives. The bill would not alter or affect the regulation of futures markets, financial derivatives, or metals. We have specifically stated on page 20 the following: 'The amendments made by this title have no effect on the regulation of excluded commodities under the Commodity Exchange Act.'

In addition, the amendment made by this title have no effect on the regulation of metals under the Commodity Exchange Act.'

The Western Energy Crisis of 2000-2001 has still not been resolved. Meanwhile more and more information about Enron's role in the crisis emerges. On February 3, 2005, the Snohomish Public Utility District released transcripts of tapes showing that on January 17, 2001, Enron traders concocted false repairs for a Las Vegas power plant—making power unavailable that would have been delivered to California—on the very same day that supplies were so tight that Northern California experienced a Stage 3 power emergency and rolling blackouts hit as many as 2 million consumers.

By taking the plant offline, Enron was also in direct violation of an Emergency Power Order by U.S. Energy Secretary Bill Richardson that required power generators to make power available to California.

Telephone transcripts between Enron and the Las Vegas plant confirming the effort to falsify repairs read as follows:

BILL: Rich: Ah, we want you guys to get a little creative.
RICH: OK.
BILL: And come up with a reason to go down.
RICH: OK.
BILL: Anything you want to do over there, any—
RICH: Ah—
BILL: Cleaning, anything like that?
RICH: Yeah. Yeah. There's some stuff we could do.

Enron knew exactly what it was doing when it manipulated the Western Energy markets. Enron traders tested gaming techniques in the California market as early as May 1998, creating imbalances in the California market as a result of loopholes it discovered in the system.

The schemes the company used in 2000-2001 had already been rehearsed in Canada. “Project Stanley” was one such technique—Enron traders inflated energy prices in Alberta, Canada by colluding with other energy marketers. Enron advocated for “de-regulation” of California’s energy markets while drafting language that was full of loopholes and a “lockbox.” Similarly, the company was the main force behind a provision that exempted it from federal oversight. This exemption, known as the “Enron loophole,” was created in 2000 when Congress passed the Commodity Futures Modernization Act.

The loophole exempted energy trading from regulatory oversight and excluded it completely if the trade was done electronically.

We must close this loophole in order to prohibit fraud and price manipulation in all over-the-counter energy commodity transactions, and provide the Commodity Futures Trading Commission the authority it needs to investigate and prosecute allegations of fraud and manipulation.

We need to give the CFTC this authority because we learned during the Western Energy Crisis that there was pervasive manipulation and fraud in energy markets, and that FERC and the CFTC were unable or unwilling to use the authority they had to intervene.

We need to give the CFTC this authority because we need regulators to protect consumers and make sure they’re not taken advantage of.

We need to give the CFTC this authority because when there are inadequate regulations, consumers are ripped off.

The Western Energy Crisis cost California about $40 billion. California has been asking for $9 billion in refunds. However, given the fact that Enron is in bankruptcy, it would be a miracle if we receive even minimis or no financial gain or loss.

Yet there is nothing preventing another energy crisis from happening again, in my State or elsewhere.

Therefore, we need Federal oversight of our energy markets.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

E. Wyden (for himself and Mr. Inhofe). S. 510. A bill to reduce and eliminate electronic waste through recycling; to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. WYDEN. Mr. President, the pace of technological innovation offers American consumers an eye-catching array of electronic gadgets. But for every new laptop top or HDTV that goes home from the store with a consumer, an old computer or TV gets moved to the garbage or shoved into the back of a closet. What to do with the growing mountain of trash from the digital economy is a question that Senator TALENT and I believe must be addressed before our landfill is full and foreign countries close their ports to ships loaded down with old US computers. Today we are introducing bipartisan legislation to jumpstart a nationwide electronic waste recycling initiative.

When I was a member of the Commerce Committee, I helped write the Congressional Record — Senate
March 3, 2005

S2018

VerDate jul 14 2003 04:31 Mar 04, 2005 Jkt 039060 PO 00000 Frm 00060 Fmt 0624 Sfmt 0634 E:\CR\FM\G03MR6.057 S03PT1

Talent and I are introducing today, and retailers end up paying for e-trash fees. No one yet has looked at the applicability of e-waste in the same way we went about solving the Y-2K problem: putting policies in place to help all stakeholders deal with it before it overtakes us. Some communities across the country have begun to talk about how to deal with the accumulation of electronic waste. A few States, like California and Maine, recently passed laws to get recycling programs going. Several other States, including my own State of Oregon, will likely consider legislation this year. Among the options, some States favor an upfront fee, tacked onto the price of electronics, intended to help pay for the cost of recycling. Others are looking at end-of-life fees. No one yet has looked at the approach Senator Talent and I are proposing. My own sense is that slapping a fee on consumers for the purchase of a new computer is unnecessarily the best way to encourage them to drag those old 80-pound computers and TVs out of the basement and get them to a recycling facility. Someone who needs a new one may just pay the fee but leave their old computers and TVs at home. End-of-life fees mean that today’s manufacturers and retailers end up paying for e-trash left over from manufacturers that have gone out of business or from off-shore companies.

The bipartisan legislation Senator Talent and I are introducing today, the Electronic Waste Recycling Promotion and Consumer Protection Act, takes a novel approach to the problem. First, to get consumers motivated to move their old computers or televisions out of the garage and to a recycling facility, the bill would give them a one-time tax credit based on showing they gave their old computers or televisions to a qualified recycler. Second, to build up the recycling infrastructure nationwide, the legislation would give manufacturers, retailers and qualified recyclers tax credits over a 3-year period, based on showing that they had recycled a certain amount of e-waste each year and done it in a way that is safe and environmentally sound. Third, the bill would give the Environmental Protection Agency a year to come up with options for a nationwide e-waste recycling program that would, if approved by Congress, preempt State plans. Manufacturers, retailers and recyclers are increasingly difficult to deal with a crazy quilt of 50 different State e-waste recycling laws. These are the incentives, but incentives without teeth won’t work. So at the end of 3 years of tax credits, if EPA determines that there are enough recyclers in place, no one who operates a municipal solid waste facility could knowingly accept any computer, computer monitor or television unless the e-waste is to be recycled.

The bill would also ask EPA to consider the benefits of requiring manufacturers who sell computers and TVs to take them back for recycling. And, to make sure we’re keeping our own house in order, the legislation would require the federal government to properly recycle its computers. The goal here is to provide incentives to build a nationwide e-waste recycling infrastructure. EPA estimates that electronic waste already constitutes 40 percent of the lead and 70 percent of the heavy metals found in landfills today. If this waste is not handled properly, there is a real risk that toxins from the lead, mercury and cadmium will leach into the air, soil and water. The health effects of these toxins are well known and include an increased risk of cancer as well as harm to kidneys, the brain and the nervous system. As one who has worked so hard to foster the digital economy, I believe there is also a duty to assure that e-waste is handled responsibly. Consumers need to know that potentially harmful e-waste is being handled properly and I can’t find a reason to add millions of tons of new toxic waste to our environment. I also believe that the United States, as the leading innovator and consumer of electronic products in the world, has a duty to deal with e-waste responsibly. Training ships full of e-junk that contains harmful lead, mercury and cadmium to poor countries overseas is not my idea of responsible.

Senator Talent and I have worked with a group of folks that normally don’t see eye to eye on such issues. Through many hours of negotiation they have helped us produce a bill that represents a solid first step toward solving this problem. I am pleased that we have support for the approach taken in our legislation from environmental groups, ranging from manufacturers like HP and Intel to retailers and solid waste recyclers, like Waste Management. We are committed to continuing to work with them to move the legislation through Congress.

In closing, electronic waste is not going away. It’s time to put bipartisan policies in place that will jumpstart the consumption of a nationwide e-waste recycling infrastructure so that consumers have access to recycling facilities and get in the habit of recycling these items. I’ve talked to manufacturers, retailers, recyclers, environmental protection groups and they tell me that this issue must be addressed now by a national rather than state-by-state approach. This bill is a commonsense, first step that will help us get a handle on the growing problem of electronic waste. I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the Record.

By Mr. DE MINT (for himself, Mr. ALLEN, Mr. BROWNBACK, Mr. COBURN, Mr. ENSIGN, Mr. ENZI, Mr. INHOFE, Mr. SANTORUM, and Mr. VITTER):

S. 511. A bill to provide that the approval of RU-486 and direct the GAO to conduct an independent review of the process used by the FDA to approve the drug.

Holly’s Law is named in memory of Holly Patterson, an 18-year old woman who was killed by a drug commonly known as RU-486. RU-486 has killed three women in the United States and many more have been hospitalized with a severe bacterial infection known as septic shock.

RU-486 was approved by the FDA in September of 2000. The FDA approved RU-486 under a special “restricted distribution” approval process known as “Subpart H,” reserved only for drugs that treat “severe or life-threatening illnesses,” like cancer and AIDS.

Subpart H allows an expedited approval of certain drugs by not subjecting them to the testing and review standards required of all other new drugs. These are important tests necessary to determine the safety and long-term effects of a drug. Clearly, the fact that these tests were not done on RU-486 was a damaging omission considering the death and illness associated with use of the drug.

Due to the serious threat RU-486 poses to women’s health, we are asking that Congress suspend FDA’s approval of RU-486 until the GAO can provide a report on whether RU-486 should have been deemed “safe and effective” by the FDA.

I am grateful to Senators ALLEN, BROWNBACK, COBURN, ENSIGN, ENZI, INHOFE, SANTORUM and VITTER who have joined me as original cosponsors of this bill. They understand that RU-486 is a dangerous drug that cannot remain on the market while more women die. I urge my colleagues to support Holly’s Law to take RU-486 off the market before more women are harmed by it.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

(b) Review and Report by Government Accountability Office.—

(1) In General.—The Comptroller General of the United States shall review the process by which the Food and Drug Administration approved mifepristone under section 505 of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act (21 U.S.C. 355) and shall determine whether such approval was provided in accordance with such section. The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall ensure that the Comptroller General has full access to all information possessed by the Department of Health and Human Services that relates to such review.

(2) Report.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Comptroller General of the United States shall submit a report under paragraph (1) and submit to Congress and the Secretary of Health and Human Services a report that provides the findings of the review.

Effective upon the expiration of 30 days after such publication, subsection (a) shall cease to have any legal effect.

By Mr. SANTORUM (for himself, Mr. ROCKEFELLER, and Mr. RUHLE):

S. 512. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to classify automatic fire sprinkler systems as 5-year property for purposes of depreciation; to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. SANTORUM. I rise today to introduce with Senator ROCKEFELLER the bipartisan Fire Sprinkler Incentive Act of 2005. Passage of this Act would serve greatly to help reduce the tremendous annual economic and human losses that fire puts in the United States in its destruction of life.

In the United States, fire departments responded to approximately 1.7 million fires in 2002. Annually, over 500,000 of these fires were structural causing approximately 3,400 deaths, around 100 of which are firefighters. Fire also caused some 18.5 million civilian injuries and $10.3 billion in direct property loss. The indirect cost of fire in the United States annually exceeded $80 billion. These losses are staggering. All of this translates to the fact that fire departments respond to a fire every 18 seconds. Every 60 seconds a fire breaks out in a structure, and in a residential structure every 80 seconds.

There are literally thousands of high-rise buildings built under older codes that lack adequate fire protection. Billions of dollars were spent to make these and other buildings handicapped accessible, but people with disabilities now occupying these buildings are not adequately protected from fire. At recent code hearings, representatives of the health care industry testified that there are approximately 4,200 nursing homes that need to be retrofitted with fire sprinklers. They further testified that the billion dollar cost of protecting these buildings with fire sprinklers would have to be raised through corresponding increases in Medicare and Medicaid. In addition to the alarming number of nursing homes lacking fire sprinkler protection, there are literally thousands of assisted living facilities housing older Americans and people with disabilities that lack fire sprinkler protection.

The solution resides in automatic sprinkler systems that are usually triggered by the rise of ignition when the temperature rises above 120 degrees. The National Fire Protection Association (NFPA) has no record of a fire killing more than two people in a public assembly, educational, institutional, or residential building that has fully operational sprinklers. Furthermore, sprinklers are responsible for dramatically reducing property loss, from as low as 42 percent to as high as 70 percent depending on the structure. Building codes do not argue with fire authorities over the logic of protecting their building with fire sprinklers. The issue is cost. This bill would drastically reduce the staggering annual economic toll of fire in America and would improve the quality of life for everyone involved.

This legislation provides a tax incentive for businesses to install sprinklers through the use of a 5-year depreciation period, currently 27.5 or 39-year period for installations in residential rental and non-residential real property respectively. While only a start, this bill will help eliminate the massive losses seen in nursing homes, nightclubs, office buildings, apartment buildings, manufacturing facilities, and other for-profit entities.

This bill enjoys support from a variety of organizations. They include: the American Insurance Association, the Fire Underwriter's Association, the California Department of Forestry and Fire Protection, Campus Firewatch, Congressional Fire Services Institute, Independent Insurance Agents & Brokers of America, International Fire Protection Engineers, the International Association of Fire Chiefs, International Fire Service Training Association, National Fire Protection Association, National Fire Sprinkler Association, National Volunteer Fire Council, National Association of Fire Protection Engineers, and the Mechanical Contractors Association of America.

The Fire Sprinkler Incentive Act of 2005 provides long-needed safety incentives for building owners that will help fire departments across the country save lives. I ask my colleagues for their support of this important piece of legislation.

By Mr. GREGG (for himself, Mr. KENNEDY, Ms. MIKULSKI, Mr. HARKIN, Mr. BINGHAMAN, Mr. REED, Mrs. MURRAY, Mrs. LINCOLN, Mr. KERRY, and Mr. DURBAN):

S. 513. A bill to provide collective bargaining rights for public safety officers employed by States or their political subdivisions; to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, today I am pleased to be joined by Senators KENNEDY, MIKULSKI, HARKIN, BINGHAMAN, REED, MURRAY, LINCOLN, KERRY and myself in introducing the Public Safety Employee-employer Cooperation Act of 2005. This legislation would extend to firefighters and police officers the right to discuss workplace issues with their employers.

With the enactment of the Congressional Accountability Act, State and local government employees remain the only sizable segment of workers left in America who do not have the basic right to enter into collective bargaining agreements with their employers. While most States provide some collective bargaining rights for their public employees, others do not.

Studies have shown that communities which promote such cooperation enjoy much more effective and efficient delivery of emergency services. Such cooperation, however, is not possible in the States that do not provide public safety employees with the fundamental right to bargain with their employers.

The legislation I am introducing today is balanced in its recognition of the unique situation and obligation of public safety officers. The bill requires States, within 2 years, to guarantee the right of public safety officers to form and voluntarily join a union to bargain collectively over hours, wages and conditions of employment. The bill protects the right of public safety officers to form, join, or assist any labor organization or to refrain from any activity, free of penalty or reprisal. In addition, the legislation prohibits the use of strikes, lockouts, sickouts, work slowdowns or any other action that is designed to compel an employer, officer or labor organization to agree to the terms of a proposed contract and that will necessarily disrupt the delivery of services.

Under this legislation, States would continue to be able to enforce right-to-work laws which prohibit employers and labor organizations from negotiating labor agreements that require union membership or payment of union fees as a condition of employment. The legislation also preserves the right of management to not bargain over issues traditionally reserved for management-level decisions. All States with a State bargaining law for public safety officers that grants rights equal to or greater than the rights provided under this bill would be exempt. The bill also gives States the option to exempt from coverage subdivisions with populations of less than 5,000 or fewer than 25 full-time employees.

Labor-management partnerships, which are built upon bargaining relationships, are critical to improving public safety. Employer-employee cooperation contains the promise of saving the taxpayer money by enabling workers to offer input as to the most efficient way to provide services. In fact, studies have shown that States that give firefighters the right to discuss workplace issues actually have lower fire department budgets than States without those laws.

The Public Safety Employer-Employee Relations Act of 2005 will put firefighters and law enforcement officers on equal footing with other employees and provide them with the fundamental right to negotiate with employers over such basic issues as hours, wages, and working conditions. I urge its adoption and ask unanimous consent that the text of this bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

(b) Compliance.—No State shall preempt laws or ordinances of any of its political subdivisions that provide for shared responsibility for public safety officers that are equal to or greater than the rights provided under this Act.

SEC. 9. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

There are authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this Act.

By Mr. BYRD—

S. 514. A bill to complete construction of the 13-State Appalachian development highway system, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works:

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, today I am, again, introducing legislation designed to fulfill an important promise made by the Federal Government to the people of my State and my region some 40 years ago. That promise, building and completing a network of highways through the Appalachian region is known today as the Appalachian Development Highway System or ADHS. I look forward to working with my fellow Senators to have my legislation included in the reauthorization of the Federal-aid Highway Program, a program at the core of Federal infrastructure investment.

As part of the course of the 108th Congress, we failed to reauthorize this program. That legislation should have been enacted into law prior to beginning fiscal year 2004. We are now more than one third of the way through fiscal year 2005 and the 109th Congress must initiate new bills to get the job done. I know I speak for many Senators in stressing the need to complete this job during this session of Congress. We must authorize a bill that addresses deteriorating rural roads and bridges, and is not squeezed by the artificial funding ceiling that the administration wants.

The administration’s own Conditions and Performance Report again reminds us of a great investment in our infrastructure is essential to prevent the further deterioration of our nation’s highways and bridges.

At a September 30, 2002 hearing of the Senate Environment and Public Works Committee, Administrator Mary Peters testified that, despite the historic funding increase accomplished through TEA-21, congestion on our roads continues to worsen. Funding for highway infrastructure by all levels of government will have to increase by more than 65 percent or $42.2 billion per year to actually improve the condition of our Nation’s highways. A funding increase of more than 17 percent or $11.5 billion is necessary to simply maintain the current condition of our highway network, where more than one in four of our Nation’s bridges are classified as deficient.

At the end of 2002, I worked doggedly to ensure that the Senate prevailed in the conference with the House on the omnibus appropriations bill for fiscal year 2003 and rejected every penny of the $8.6 billion cut in highway funding proposed by President Bush. In 2003, I was pleased to join with Senators BOND and REID, the respective chairman and ranking member of the Surface Transportation Subcommittee in sponsoring a bipartisan amendment to the budget resolution for fiscal year 2004 boosting funding for our Federal-aid Highway Program by several billion dollars. That amendment commanded 79 votes on the Senate floor.

Mr. President, I am one of only two members still serving in the Congress that had the privilege of casting a vote in favor of establishing the Interstate Highway System and did so as a Member of the other body back in 1956. Of equal if not greater importance to the transport needs of my region, however, were the findings of the first Appalachian Regional Commission in 1964, that while the Interstate Highway System was slated to provide historic economic benefits to most of our Nation, the system would bypass the Appalachian region, because of the extreme cost of building highways through Appalachia’s rugged topography.

In 1965, the Congress adopted the Appalachian Regional Development Act that put in place a network of modern highways to connect the Appalachian region to the rest of the Nation’s highway network and, even more importantly, the rest of the Nation’s economy. Absent the Appalachian Development Highway System, my region of the country would have been left with a transportation network of dangerous, narrow, winding roads following the path of river valleys and stream beds between mountains.

One of the observations contained in Administrator Peters’ testimony back in September of 2002 was that in the condition of higher-order roads, such as interstates, has improved considerably since 1993 while the condition on the Appalachian region has deteriorated.” The pattern of road conditions mirrors the distribution of wealth in our country. The rich are getting richer while the poor get poorer. That observation becomes especially pertinent when the Congress looks at the challenges of completing the Appalachian Development Highway System.

We have virtually completed the construction of the Interstate Highway System and have moved on to other important transportation goals. However, the people of my region still wait for the Federal Government to make good on its 40-year-old promise to complete the ADHS. The system is still less than 60 percent complete. My home of Virginia is below the average for the entire Appalachian region with only 72 percent of its mileage complete and open to traffic.

Unfortunately, there are still children in Appalachia who lack decent transportation routes to school; and there are still pregnant mothers, elderly citizens and others who lack road access to area hospitals. There are thousands upon thousands of people who cannot obtain sustainable well-paying jobs in the poor roads. The entire status of the Appalachian Development Highway System is laid out in great detail in the Cost to Complete Report for 2002 completed by the Appalachian Regional Commission. This is the most comprehensive report on the status of the Appalachian Development Highway System to date, and I commend the staff of the Appalachian Regional Commission for their hard work on this report. The last report was completed in 1997 just prior to Congressional consideration of TEA-21.

The enactment of TEA-21 signaled a new day in the advancement of the Appalachian Development Highway System. Through the work of the Committee on Environment and Public Works, the House Transportation and Infrastructure Committee, and the administration, we took a great leap forward by authorizing direct contract authority from the Highway Trust Fund to the States for the completion of the ADHS. Up until that point, funding for the Appalachian Development Highway System was limited to uncertain general fund appropriations. By providing the States of the Appalachian region with the authority to use general funds to complete ADHS segments, TEA-21 reinvigorated efforts to keep the promise made to the people of the Appalachian region.

This initiative has been a great success. States are making progress toward the completion of the system. Since the last Cost to Complete Report, 183 miles of the system have been opened to traffic and, the cost to complete the system has been reduced by roughly $1.6 billion in Federal funds.

I am pleased to report that the 13 States, to date, have succeeded in obligating just under 90 percent of the obligation authority that has been granted to them for the completion of the system. Taxes collected on these obligations compare quite favorably to some of the other transportation programs through which the States were granted multiple years to obligate their funds.

According to the ARC’s Cost to Complete Report, the Federal funds needed to complete the ADHS as the system was defined at the time that report was completed are now estimated to be $4.467 billion. When adjusted for inflation over the life of the next highway bill, using the standard inflation calculation for highway projects, a total of $5.04 billion will need to be authorized to complete the system. That is a lot of money and I believe that figure deserves some explanation.

The considerable cost of completing the last 20 percent of the ADHS is explained by the fact that the easiest segments of the system to build have already been built. Much of the costs associated with completing the most difficult unfinished segments are driven by the requirement to comply with other Federal laws, especially the laws requiring environmental mitigation measures when building new highways in the face of our current $5.04 billion figure may seem large to some of my colleagues. I would remind them that the last highway bill authorized more than $21 billion in Federal infrastructure investment over 6 years. It is my sincere hope and expectation that the next highway bill will authorize an even greater amount.

Of critical importance to this debate is the fact that the unfinished segments of the ADHS represent some of most dangerous and most deficient roadways in our Nation. Often lost in our debate over the necessity to invest in our highways is the issue of safety. The Federal Highway Administration has published reports indicating that substandard road conditions are a factor in 30 percent of all fatal highway accidents. I am quite certain that the percentage is a great deal higher in the Appalachian region.

The Federal Highway Administration found that upgrading two-lane roads to four-lane divided highways decreased fatal car accidents by 71 percent and that the widening of traffic lanes has served to reduce fatalities by 21 percent. These are precisely the kind of road improvements that are funded through the ADHS. In my state, the largest segment of unfinished Appalachian Highway, if completed, will replace the second most dangerous segment of roadway in West Virginia. So, even those who would question the wisdom of completing these highways in the name of economic development should take a hard look at the fact that the people of rural Appalachia are taking their lives in their hands every day as they drive on dangerous roads. It is time for this Congress, in concert with the administration, to take the last great leap forward and authorize sufficient contract authority to finally complete the Appalachian Development Highway System.

The enactment of TEA-21 will provide sufficient contract authority to complete the system. Importantly, it will guarantee that the states of the Appalachian Region do not pay a penalty, either through the distribution of minimum allocation funds, or the distribution of obligation limitation, for receiving sufficient funds to complete the Appalachian System.

I am very pleased that this administration has taken on the goal of completing the ADHS. In her letter accompanying the Cost to Complete Report, Administrator Peters said “the completion of the ADHS is an important part of the mission of the Federal Highway Administration. We consider the accessibility, mobility and economic stimulation provided by the ADHS to be entirely consistent with the goals of the congress.” She further stated that the Appalachian Regional Commission’s 2002 Cost to Complete Report, “provides a sound basis for apportioning future funding to complete the system.” I thank Mary Peters and the entire Federal Highway Administration for their leadership on this issue and I look forward to working with Ms. Peters and her agency to ensure that this commitment is borne out in the transportation reauthorization legislation that is developed by the Congress.

Completion of a new highway bill will be an enormous task for this Congress—one that is now more than 2 years overdue. As I look back over the many years of my public career, one of the accomplishments of which I am most proud was my amendment providing an additional $8 billion in funding to break the logjam during the debate on the Surface Transportation Efficiency Act in 1991. Another was my sponsorship of the Byrd-Gramm-Baucus-Warner Amendment during the Senate debate of TERA in 1998. That effort resulted in some $26 billion in funding being added to that bill and a path to historic funding increases for our nation's highway infrastructure. I look forward again to working with my fellow Senators on completion of a bill that makes the necessary investments in our nation's highways, not just in the Appalachian region but across our entire country.

By Mr. BYRD:
S. 515. A bill to amend title 32, United States Code, to increase the maximum Federal share of the costs of State programs under the National Guard Youth Challenge Program, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Armed Services.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, in recent years, the public profile of the National Guard has changed considerably. Known mainly for the contributions of citizen-soldiers to their States and communities, today the men and women of the National Guard are serving on the front lines in Iraq and Afghanistan, enduring hardships in two of the world’s most dangerous places.

In spite of the long deployments, far away from the small towns and big cities that these citizen-soldiers call home, the National Guard continues its work for our States and the American people. Today, I introduce legislation to support a most successful program that has helped the National Guard change the lives of tens of thousands of young Americans.

In 1991, I provided the first funding to establish a pilot program known as the National Guard Civilian Youth Opportunities Program. Over the years, this program has expanded in size and scope and is now known as the National Guard Youth Challenge Program.

The Youth Challenge Program gives high school dropouts the skills they need to turn their lives around. The advantages of the National Guard provide a structured environment for these students has been confirmed in studies by the Defense Science Board in 2000, the White House Task Force on Disadvantaged Children in 2003, and the Department of Defense in 2004.

The program now operates 27 academies in 24 States, including West Virginia, Alabama, Alaska, Hawaii, Georgia, Louisiana, Virginia, Michigan, Florida, Texas, North Carolina, and South Carolina. Over 5,000 cadets are now in training, and more than 5,000 have graduated from the program since 1993. Fully three-quarters of the Youth Challenge graduates have earned their high school diplomas in the program, but the program is at the mercy of shrinking state budgets.

In March 2004, the Department of Defense recommended an increase in Federal support for the program in order to prevent a sudden cutback in funding increases for our nation’s highway infrastructure. I look forward again to working with my fellow Senators on completion of a bill that makes the necessary investments in our nation’s highways, not just in the Appalachian region but across our entire country.

By Mr. SESSIONS (for himself, Mr. DURBAN, Mr. KENNEDY, and Mr. DODD):

S. 518. A bill to provide for the establishment of a controlled substance monitoring program in each State; to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, it is a privilege to join Senator SESSIONS, Senator DURBAN and Senator DODD in introducing the “National All Schedules Prescription Electronic Reporting Act.” Our goal is to help States establish electronic databases to monitor the use of prescription drugs and deal more effectively with the growing national problem of prescription drug abuse.

Over 6 million Americans currently use prescription drugs for non-medical purposes. 31 million say they’ve abused such drugs at least once in their lifetime. Since 1992, the number of young adults who abuse prescription pain relievers and other addictive drugs has more than tripled. Prescription drug abuse among youths 12 to 17 has soared tenfold.

State programs to monitor addictive medications can help curb this abuse. Currently, 20 States have such programs in place, including Massachusetts, but they vary greatly in the collection and analysis of data, and in the methods for using the databases.

The information contained in these databases is important, because it can be used to identify physicians and patients who encourage the non-medical use of prescription drugs. It can also be used to reduce the diversion of prescription drugs for illegal use.

Our bill authorizes the Secretary of HHS to make grants to States to establish monitoring programs. For States with existing programs, the grants can be used to improve their systems and standardize the data collected to allow easy sharing of the information between the States.

Any such program, however, must include strong safeguards for medical privacy, and make certain that the database cannot be used to put improper pressure on physicians to avoid prescribing essential drugs. The problem is immense. For example, it is an enormous medical challenge, but this essential care will be much more difficult if patients fear that their prescription histories will not be protected, or if physicians begin to look over their shoulder every time they prescribe pain medication.

We all share the goal of reaching the right balance between the interests of patients, physicians, and law enforcement. This legislation does that. It requires that in grant applications, States must propose security standards for the electronic databases, including appropriate encryption or other information technology.

States must also standardize for using the database and obtaining the information, including certifications to be sure that requests for information are legitimate. The bill requires the Secretary to provide a follow-up analysis of the privacy protections within two years after enactment.

The national problem of prescription drug abuse worsens every year. Physicians want to treat pain without contributing to addiction. Law enforcement officials want to stop the flow of prescription drugs from pharmacies to the streets. A national prescription drug monitoring program will provide a valuable resource to achieve these goals. I commend Senator SESSIONS for his leadership on this important health issue, and I urge my colleagues to join us in this effort to fight prescription drug abuse.

By Mrs. HUTCHISON:

S. 519. A bill to amend the Lower Rio Grande Valley Water Resources Conservation and Improvement Act of 2000 to authorize additional projects and activities under that Act, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, I rise today to offer a bill that is vital for water conservation in my home State of Texas. This legislation would amend The Lower Rio Grande Valley Water Resources and Conservation Improvement Act of 2000 to authorize additional projects and activities under that Act, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

Improving water conveyance infrastructure is the top priority for enhancing water conservation in the Lower Rio Grande Valley. Currently, 97% of water sources rely on canal systems subject to seepage, spills, and evaporation. Improving irrigation systems and updating this 100-year-old water distribution system will provide Texans with a sufficient supply of one of nature’s most valuable resources. Rather than waiting for the unpredictability of Mother Nature to increase water resources through rainstorms, these communities can rely on more effective water systems.

By enacting this legislation, 19 additional water districts will enhance their ability to conserve their resources. Residents in the Lower Rio Grande Valley will not be forced to rely on canal systems subject to seepage and evaporation. Improving irrigation systems and updating this 100-year-old water distribution system will provide citizens in South Texas with a sufficient supply of one of nature’s most valuable resources. Rather than waiting for the unpredictability of Mother Nature to increase water resources through rainstorms, these communities can rely on more effective water systems.

I am forward to working with my colleagues to pass this measure to help the citizens of the Lower Rio Grande Valley better conserve their water resources. I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the Record.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

By Mrs. HUTCHISON (for herself, Mr. KENNEDY, Mr. CORNYN, and Mr. SCHUMER):

S. 521. A bill to amend the Public Health Service Act to direct the Secretary of Health and Human Services to establish, promote, and support a comprehensive prevention, research, and medical management referral program for hepatitis C virus infection; to add a new title to the Public Health Service Act to establish, promote, and support a comprehensive prevention, research, and medical management referral program for hepatitis C virus infection; and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the ‘‘Hepatitis C Epidemic Control and Prevention Act’’.

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

Congress makes the following findings:

(1) Approximately 5,000,000 Americans are infected with the hepatitis C virus (referred to in this section as ‘‘HCV’’), and more than 3,000,000 Americans are chronically infected, making HCV the Nation’s most common chronic blood borne virus infection.

(2) Nearly 2 percent of the population of the United States have been infected with HCV.

(3) Conservative estimates indicate that approximately 30,000 Americans are newly infected with HCV each year, and that number has been growing since 2001.

(4) HCV infection, in the United States, is the most common cause of chronic liver disease, liver cirrhosis, and liver cancer, the most common indicator for liver transplant, and the leading cause of death in people with HIV/AIDS. In the United States there may be links between HCV and certain other diseases, given that a high number of people infected with HCV also suffer from type 2 diabetes, heart disease, kidney disorders, and autoimmune disease.

(5) The majority of individuals infected with HCV are unaware of their infection. Infections are, therefore, widely regarded as a source of transmission to others and, since few individuals are aware they are infected, they are unlikely to take precautions to prevent the spread or exacerbation of their infection.

(6) There is no vaccine available to prevent HCV infection.

(7) Interventions are available that can eradicate the disease in approximately 50 percent of those who are treated, and behavioral changes can slow the progression of the disease.

(8) Conservative estimates place the costs of direct medical expenses for HCV at more than $1,000,000,000 in the United States annually, and such costs will undoubtedly increase in the absence of expanded prevention and treatment efforts.

(9) To combat the HCV epidemic in the United States, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention developed Recommendations for Prevention and Control of Hepatitis C Virus (HCV) Infection and HCV-Related Chronic Liver Disease and the National Institutes of Health convened....
Consensus Development Conferences on the Management of Hepatitis C in 1997 and 2002. These recommendations and guidelines provide a framework for HCV prevention, control, research, and medical management referral programs.

(10) The Department of Veterans Affairs (referred to in this paragraph as the "VA"), which cares for more people infected with HCV than any other health care system, is the Nation's leader in HCV screening, testing, and treatment. Since 1998, it has been the VA policy to screen for HCV risk factors all veterans receiving VA health care, and the VA currently recommends testing for all those found to be "at risk" for HCV and all others whose HCV status is to be tested. In fiscal year 2004, over 98 percent of VA patients had been screened for HCV risk factors, and over 90 percent of those "at risk" were tested. The VA also conducts a comprehensive program to assist State and local prevention and containment efforts that may be derived from clinical, laboratory, and epidemiological research and disease detection, prevention, and surveillance outcomes) and addressing gaps in coverage or effectiveness of the plan.

(2) Publication of notice of assessment and findings of the first even numbered year beginning after the date of enactment of the Hepatitis C Epidemic Control and Prevention Act, and October 1 of each even numbered year thereafter, the Secretary shall publish in the Federal Register a notice of the results of the assessments conducted under paragraph (1). Such notice shall include—

(A) a description of any revisions to the plan developed under subsection (a) as a result of the assessment; and

(B) an explanation of the basis for any such revisions, including the ways in which such revisions can reasonably be expected to further promote the original goals and objectives of the plan; and

(C) in the case of a determination by the Secretary that the plan does not need revision, an explanation of the basis for such determination.

SEC. 399BB. ELEMENTS OF THE FEDERAL PLAN FOR THE PREVENTION, CONTROL, AND MEDICAL MANAGEMENT OF HEPATITIS C.

(a) EDUCATION AND TRAINING.—The Secretary, acting through the Director of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, shall implement programs to increase awareness and enhance knowledge and understanding of HCV. Such programs shall include—

(1) the conduct of health education, public awareness campaigns, and community outreach activities to promote public awareness and knowledge about risk factors, the transmission and prevention of infection with HCV, the value of screening for the early detection and treatment of HCV infection, and options available for the treatment of chronic HCV;

(2) the training of healthcare professionals regarding the prevention, detection, and medical management of the hepatitis A virus and HBV; and

(3) the development and distribution of curricula (including information relating to hepatitis A, HBV, and other viral diseases, as appropriate) that may be at increased risk; and

(b) ORGANIZATIONAL RESOURCES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall provide the following:

(A) VOLUNTARY TESTING PROGRAMS.

(i) the counseling of such individuals regarding hepatitis A, HBV, and other viral hepatitis.

“Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, it is a privilege to join Senators HUTCHINSON, SCHUMER, and CORNYN in introducing the Hepatitis C Epidemic Control and Prevention Act. Our goal is to provide for the prevention, control, and treatment of Hepatitis C, a viral infection through education, surveillance, early detection, and research.

“Hepatitis C is the most common, chronic, blood-borne infection in the United States. An estimated 5 million Americans are now infected with the Hepatitis C virus, more than 6,000 are infected every year. The rate of infection continues to rise—between 1990 and 2015, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention project a 4-fold increase in the number of persons with chronic infection of the virus.

“Persons infected with the Hepatitis C virus come from all walks of life, but those at greatest risk include health workers, emergency service personnel, and people who inject drugs. Unfortunately, over 75 percent of infected individuals are unaware of their infection, and nearly one in three infected individuals is unaware of their infection, and are not receiving treatment, and are sources of transmission of the virus to others.

“Hepatitis C infection with the Hepatitis C virus has serious health effects. It can cause liver disease, including cirrhosis and liver cancer, and is the leading indicator for liver transplants. The illnesses are often life-threatening—up to 10,000 Americans die yearly from Hepatitis C complications, and it is the 7th leading cause of death for men between the ages of 25 and 64. In addition to the human costs, the disease has massive financial implications. Direct costs associated with care are expected to exceed $50 billion dollars. Without intervention, the epidemic is projected to result in costs of over $54 billion by the year 2019.

“Greater Federal investment will have a critical role in reversing this silent epidemic. Our Hepatitis C bill will increase public awareness of the dangers of Hepatitis C, and make testing widely available. For those already infected, it will provide counseling, referrals, and vaccination against Hepatitis A and B, and other infectious diseases. It will also support research to develop a vaccine against Hepatitis C, just as we now have for Hepatitis A and B. It will create a multiagency Liver Disease Research Advisory Board and mandate a study of programs used by the Veteran’s Administration, in order to provide important lessons and models of care for the nation. The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention will increase surveillance activities, and provide Hepatitis C coordinators to provide technical assistance and training to state public health agencies.

“This bill will have a major impact on the lives of millions of Americans who are infected by Hepatitis C, and the families and loved ones who care for them. I look forward to working closely with my colleagues to act quickly to pass this needed legislation. I especially commend the impressive work of the students at Robinson Secondary School in Fairfax, VA, for their continued dedication year by year. I work with members of Congress about this important issue and bringing national attention to it.

“By Mr. SALAZAR.

“S. 523. A bill to amend title 10, United States Code, to rename the death gratuity payable for deaths of members of the Armed Forces as fallen hero compensation, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Armed Services.

“Mr. SALAZAR. Mr. President, I rise to introduce a simple piece of legislation. The idea underlying this bill is... simple: words matter. How we characterize what we do sends a message, and nowhere is that more clear than in the question of survivor benefits for survivors of military fatalities.

The Senate this year is considering major increases in survivor benefits for military families. That is as it should be, and I am proud to support two specific proposals to increase that assistance.

We also have an opportunity to allow full concurrent receipt of the DoD’s Survivor Benefit Plan and the VA’s Dependency & Indemnity Compensation.

We also have the opportunity to improve the help that military survivors get in navigating the bureaucracies of the VA and the DoD to get the benefits they deserve.

And finally we have the opportunity to protect military families from predatory companies. All of these reforms are needed, and all are within our reach this year.

As I studied this issue, I was struck by the term “Death Gratuity.” That is the name for the assistance that taxpayers make available to military survivors. The term gratuity means gift. I believe that not one of the widows, widowers, or children left behind think of that money as a gift. These families and the heroes they honor—those who have given the gift to us. They are the ones who have given the ultimate sacrifice.

I know that the name of the assistance is not as important as the assistance itself, but I am sure that hearing the term gratuity is a bitter pill for survivors who have just received the worst news of their lives.

For one refuse the term “Death Gratuity,” and I am introducing legislation today to change it to “Fallen Hero Compensation.”

This is a simple change, but it more properly reflects the sacrifices military survivors have made and more properly expresses the gratitude and dignity we owe these families. I ask unanimous consent that the text of this legislation be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, and Mr. SESSIONS:

S. 524. A bill to strengthen the consequences of the fraudulent use of United States or foreign passports and other travel documents; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, Senator SESSIONS and I are introducing legislation to combat the use of fraudulent immigration documents, particularly passports and other travel documents.

The need to prevent and prosecute passport and travel document fraud is clear, and this bill would increase penalties for the use of fraudulent travel documents.

We know that the threat of terrorism against the United States is real and as the 9/11 Commission Report states, “For terrorists, travel documents are as important as weapons.” In order to minimize the threat of terrorism to the United States, we must make every effort to limit the use of fraudulent immigration documents.

The bill SESSIONS and I are introducing would make the use of fraudulent travel documents—such as passports, Border Crossing Cards, Canadian driver’s licenses or identification cards, transportation letters for parolees, military identification cards or green cards—an aggravated felony which will mandate detention and increase the likelihood of prosecution.

Today, this is not the case. Instead, fraudulent documents are routinely returned to the offender and individuals are allowed to enter the United States without suffering any consequences from their attempts to circumvent our immigration laws.

Why is this a problem? Firstly, admission to the United States is a privilege and not a right. We should not tolerate fraud and deception at our ports of entry, particularly because it should be apparent to law enforcement officers sophisticated as Al Qaeda that we are well aware of our current procedures and can be expected to take full advantage of them.

Secondly, the 9/11 Commission found that as many as 15 of the 19 hijackers on September 11, 2001 had been intercepted by border officials, based in part on their travel documents. In fact, all but one of the September 11 hijackers acquired some form of U.S. identification document and some of those documents were acquired by fraud. All of the hijackers opened bank accounts in their names and used passports and other identification documents that appeared valid on their face.

Even before September 11, 2001, the use of fraudulent immigration documents to enter the United States was a threat that we did not sufficiently heed.

Let me give you some known examples of terrorists who have entered, or attempted to enter the United States, with fraudulent travel documents: Ahmed Ajaj and Ramzi Yousef attempted to enter the United States with fraudulent passports. Both were later implicated or convicted in the first World Trade Center bombing in February of 1993.

Ahmed Ressam used a fraudulently obtained Canadian passport, and, in 1999 attempted to cross the border from Canada at Port Angeles in Washington State. A border inspector felt Mr. Ressam looked nervous, and a search of his car turned up a trunk full of bombs. There is some debate about the exact target(s) of the attack; however, it seems likely that Los Angeles International Airport and perhaps the millennium celebrations in Seattle were the intended targets.

It is no secret that: as the 9/11 Commission Report makes clear, Al Qaeda has established a complex international travel network that allowed, and presumably still allows, its operatives to legally travel worldwide to train, conduct reconnaissance or otherwise prepare for an attack. This network included, and presumably still includes, the use of altered and counterfeit passports and travel documents.

Many countries, including France, Portugal and Saudi Arabia, have reported tens of thousands of passports and travel documents stolen. When these are stolen in large numbers, they are sold on the black market to others.

The 9/11 Commission found that had the immigration system set a higher bar for determining whether individuals are who they claim to be—and ensured consequences for any violations—it could potentially have denied entry, deportation or contact with the terrorists that were involved in the September 11, 2001 attack on the United States.
The purpose of this bill is twofold: first, to give the Department of Justice the incentive to vigorously prosecute all cases involving passport and travel document fraud, as well as certain other egregious cases of immigration document fraud. Second, by encouraging policies that make these cases a priority for prosecution, it will require that Department of Homeland Security officials not return fraudulent documents to travelers, but instead turn them over to the Department of Justice so that they can institute criminal proceedings.

Unfortunately, the prosecution of immigration document fraud is not a high priority for the Department of Justice, because, although current penalties allow for a sentence of up to 25 years, typically most alien’s convicted of travel document fraud serve less than one year in prison.

Also, the immigration consequences of document fraud are relatively minor. Low sentences, coupled with minimal immigration consequences, do not provide much incentive for U.S. Attorneys nationwide to consider the prosecution of immigration document cases a priority nor can they be seen as anything but a slap on the wrists of the offenders.

Senator Sessions and I pose a solution to this problem by toughening penalties so that we instill in those seeking to use fraudulent travel and immigration documents a real sense of fear that they will be caught and prosecuted to the fullest extent possible under our laws.

In any kind of meaningful border protection plan, one must have a good sense of who is entering and exiting the country. That simply cannot be known with assurance unless we maintain a good security check.

Since we do not have in place a fully operational entry and exit program, specifically an exit system, we have no real way of knowing if millions of travelers enter the United States each year from 27 countries, without a visa—meaning they enter without a thorough background and security check.

So far, the Department of Homeland Security has left as required.

Law enforcement officials state that lost and stolen passports are the greatest single problem associated with the Visa Waiver Program.

And now that I’ve mentioned the Visa Waiver Program, let me say a few things about this program.

I believe the Visa Waiver Program is the Achilles heel in our immigration system. This program allows roughly 13 million individuals to enter the United States every year from 27 countries, without a visa—meaning they enter without a thorough background and security check.

Since we do not have in place a fully operational entry and exit program, specifically an exit system, we have no real way of knowing if millions of travelers enter the United States each year from 27 countries, without a visa—meaning they enter without a thorough background and security check.

So far, the Department of Homeland Security has left as required.

Last year, Congress extended the deadline for one year for countries participating in the Visa Waiver Program to include biometric indicators in passports to verify the identity of bearers at the request of the Administration.

It is likely this deadline will again need to be extended.

I believe that granting another extension is another opportunity for terrorists, organized crime rings, petty crooks, counterfeiters, and forgers to continue entering the United States virtually unnoticed because we won’t be able to confirm that they are who they say they are.

The bottom line is that we must crack down on document fraud if we are to protect our borders. There are thousands, even millions, of lost, stolen and fraudulent international passports, travel documents, driver’s licenses, and other identity documents in circulation, and we must now allow those to compromise our homeland security.
A family of four, which is a typical size for eligible families in Tennessee, is eligible for child care support when their median income is no more than 60 percent of the State’s median income. That means that families making $33,000 or less are eligible for some assistance, although they may be required to make a co-payment. For example, a family of four making $32,000 would be required to pay $56 per week for the first child and $42 per week for the second child.

This year we are making the CCDBG program even better with four key improvements.

First, the act increases the quality set-aside from 4 percent, current law, to 6 percent. Eighty percent of parents report that their child care is poor to mediocre, so we need to take steps to improve overall quality of care. The quality set-aside is used to offer training and professional development to child care workers. States can also use quality set-aside to provide technical assistance to child care facilities to help them enhance learning opportunities for pre-school or school-aged children while in care. Of course, States could choose to do even more, and I am happy that my own state of Tennessee spends at least 12 percent on quality improvements.

Second, the act requires States to use at least 70 percent of funds for direct services. This will ensure that more of the money gets into the hands of parents rather than State bureaucracies. Under current law, States vary greatly in what percentage they use for direct services since current language simply specifies that a “significant” portion be used for services.

Third, the legislation emphasizes the importance of school preparedness by adding a new goal: development of pre-reading, prenumeracy, math and language skills for children in care. Research has proven that a child’s brain doubles in size between birth and age 3. These are formative years for both physical and cognitive development.

Fourth, the bill establishes a temporary small business competitive grant program to encourage small businesses to work together to provide child care services for employees. Senator Roberts developed this innovative $30 million grant program, and I am glad it could be included in the bill.

The CCDBG program is important for supporting parents raising children across the country. One such parent is Tameka Payton. Tameka was ninth grade when she had her first child, Javonta. When she became pregnant, Tameka was a ward of the State. She had grown up with an abusive mother who was addicted to drugs. After being removed from the care of her mother, she was placed in the care of her aunt who also proved abusive. Tameka ran away, and was placed in the foster care system. She later had two more children, Jayla and Michael, before finding a family resource center at the Salvation Army that connected her and her children to Tennessee’s Family First program.

The Family First program and the child care certificates she receives through this program enabled Tameka to find work and become a better mother. She is currently working 40 hours a week while working on her GED. She is about to take the test. Everyday she brings her children 4, 2, and 1 to the McNeilly Center. Tameka feels confident that not only are her children safe, but also she knows learning how to be a better mother. Her children’s teachers are receptive and answer all of her questions. She has learned to spend time reading to her children so she can contribute to their education, too.

The Federal CCDBG program funds the child care certificates Tameka receives. Without them, Tameka, and her children, would be in a very different place today.

Tameka’s dream is to get her GED and attend Tennessee State University. The support she receives has given her the chance to realize that dream, and make a better life for herself and her children. I expect her hard work to pay off.

Another Tennessee parent who has benefited from the program is Renee Prigmore. Renee is currently a toddler teacher at the McNeilly Center in Nashville. But she first found McNeilly as a parent, not as a teacher. As a single parent of three, she used her child care certificates at McNeilly to leave her kids in quality care while she attended community college.

Renee has attained her degree as a Child Development Associate, CDA. Her children are now 10, 6, and 4 and she is exiting out of the child care program because she is able to provide for her three kids. The child care certificates she received enabled her to take the time to get that degree and provide for her family.

People like Tameka Payton and Renee Prigmore have used the CCDBG program to build a new and better life for their families. With the introduction of the Caring for Children Act, we can make the program even stronger, so that parents raising children are able to build a better future for their families. I ask my colleagues to join with me in this important endeavor.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

Mr. ENZI, Mr. President, today I am pleased to introduce Senators KENNEDY, ALEXANDER and DODD in introducing the ‘‘Caring for Children Act of 2005’’ which reauthorizes the Child Care and Development Block Grant (CCDBG). This legislation is essential to continued success with welfare reform because it helps low-income parents find and pay for affordable child care so that they can work.

As members of the Senate, we know, child care providers provided to parents by States using CCDBG funds greatly facilitate the expansion of child care subsidies and promote parental choice by allowing eligible parents to select their preferred type of care setting and provider. Including faith-based providers.

Current law provides States with flexibility in determining how to address the child care needs of low-income families and children, including establishing the eligibility requirements for participation.

The legislation we are introducing today adds even greater flexibility by proposing to eliminate the arbitrary Federal ceiling for eligibility. Removal of this ceiling, previously set at 85 percent of the State’s median income, eliminates any Federal income-based restriction on State determination of who receives benefits. However States must continue to prioritize families based on need.

States provide child care assistance to both TANF and non-TANF families. For the first time the Caring for Children Act requires States and territories to show they are spending at least 70 percent of their mandatory child care monies for child care. For TANF families, families transitioning off TANF, and families at risk of becoming dependent on public assistance an assurance of the State’s commitment to providing significant funds for direct assistance is critical.

The bill we are introducing today also addresses factors that in the past made finding care difficult for parents. We have specifically required States to make all child care funds available to States who have children with special needs, parents who work non-traditional hours, or parents who need child care for infants and toddlers. Additionally, the legislation streamlines and reduces unnecessary paperwork by allowing States to provide assistance to eligible families for six months before re-determining eligibility.

The bill also supports the needs of small business owners and operators, by providing an incentive for small businesses to join together to provide child care for their employees. This will be of great help for rural areas, where small businesses provide most of the employment opportunities.

Last, but most importantly, the bill responds to, in significant ways, the very disturbing reports about the lack of quality in child care and the lack of tangible results from current investments in quality. The bill before us increases the quality set-aside from 4 to 6 percent of child care quality funds toward activities that can really make a difference. Under this bill, States would develop child care quality targets and would be held accountable to reach those targets. Quality funds would be available for States to: develop and implement voluntary guidelines on pre-reading and language skills and pre-numeracy and math skills and activities for children, that is; provide support activities and provide technical assistance to enhance early learning and school preparedness in Federal, State and local child care settings; offer training, professional development and educational opportunities for child care providers that relate to scientifically based curricula and teaching strategies through several means including distance learning; offer incentives for child care providers that meet or exceed State child care services guidelines; evaluate and assess the quality and effectiveness of child care programs and services offered in the State to young children on improving overall school preparedness; and other activities that can be shown to improve child safety, child well-being, or school preparedness.

The improvements made to the program by this legislation and the resources it provides will continue to help provide quality child care in my home State of Wyoming and other rural States. Many families in Wyoming reside in very isolated areas, and by helping to support child care centers in those rural areas, this legislation will help provide high quality child care; a service that many in those communities might otherwise be forced to do without.

This legislation represents a truly bipartisan effort and I look forward to having it signed into law this year. The Caring for Children Act includes some very important changes in our nation’s premier child care program that provide families with the assistance they need to work and access to child care that best meets their children’s needs.

By Mr. REED (for himself, Mr. DODD, Mr. KENNEDY, and Mrs. MURRAY):

S. 526. A bill to amend the Child Care and Development Block Grant Act of 1990 to provide incentive grants to improve the quality of child care; to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I am pleased to introduce today by Senators DODD, KENNEDY, and MURRAY in once again introducing the Child Care Quality Incentive Act, which seeks to redouble our child care efforts and renew the child care partnership with the States by providing incentive funding to increase payment rates.

This legislation seeks to put high-quality child care within the reach of more working families. As things stand, States too often fund only a fraction of prevailing child care costs. Under the Child Care Development Block Grant (CCDBG), States are required to perform market rate surveys every two years. Yet many States disregard them when it comes time to setting their payment rates, the level at which States reimburse child care providers who care for low-income children who receive a child care subsidy. As a result, States are unable to meet the laws of providing the same access to child care services as non-eligible families.

At stake are safe, supportive, and educationally enriching environments for children during the formative years that set the stage for future performance in school and beyond. When payment rates are set too low, child care centers that serve low-income children struggle to survive and may have to close. If they close, they may close on short notice, thus depriving the limited ability of families to pay, the tradeoffs directly impact the quality of care. Such tradeoffs include smaller staffs, underpaid employees with few or no benefits, and limited employment educational materials, and community services like health screenings. Those centers that avoid this route may turn low-income children away or be forced out of business.

Under welfare reform we expect the neediest parents to hold jobs to sustain their families. We must also afford them responsible choices to protect their children while they pursue their economic future.

Our legislation creates a new mandatory funding pool under the Child Care and Development Block Grant to help States increase payment rates, while requiring States to set payment rates in line with the updated market realities that set the stage for future performance in school and beyond. This year, Congress is slated to reauthorize the Child Care and Development Block Grant. I urge my colleagues to join Senators Dorn, Kennedy, Murray, and me in this endeavor to improve the quality of child care by cosponsoring the Child Care Quality Incentive Act and working to include its provisions in the CCDBG reauthorization. The time to bring payment rates in line with market realities is now. Only then will the commitment to offer equal access to quality child care ring true.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of this legislation be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

SEC. 1. SHORT TITLE.
This Act may be cited as the “Child Care Quality Incentive Act of 2005”.

SEC. 2. FINDINGS AND PURPOSES.
(a) Findings.—Congress makes the following findings:
(1) Recent research on early brain development reveals that much of a child’s growth is determined during the first five years.
(2) Each year an estimated 13,000,000 children, including 6,000,000 infants and toddlers, spend some part of their day in child care. However, a study in 4 States that found that only 1 in 7 child care centers provide care that promotes healthy development, while 1 in 8 child care centers provide care that threatens the safety and health of children.
(3) Full-day child care can cost $4,000 to $12,000 per year.
(4) Although Federal assistance is available for child care, funding is severely limited. Even with Federal subsidies, many families cannot afford child care. For families with young children and a monthly income under $1,200, the cost of child care typically consumes 25 percent of their income.
(5) Payment (or reimbursement) rates, which determine the maximum the State will reimburse a child care provider for the care of a child who receives a subsidy, are too low to ensure that quality care is accessible to all families.
(6) Low payment rates directly affect the kind of care children get and whether families can find quality child care in their communities. In many instances, low payment rates force child care providers serving low-income children to make cutbacks in ways that impact the quality of care for the children, including reducing the number of staff, eliminating professional development opportunities, and cutting enriching educational activities and services.
(7) Children in low-quality child care are more likely to have delayed reading and language skills, and display more aggression toward other children and adults.
(8) Increased payment rates lead to higher quality child care as child care providers are able to attract and retain qualified staff; provide salary increases and professional training, maintain a safe and healthy environment, and purchase basic supplies. Children in higher quality child care perform better and make more appropriate educational materials.
(b) Purpose.—The purpose of this Act is to improve the quality of, and access to, child care by increasing child care payment rates.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I am pleased to join my colleagues in introducing the Caring for Children Act of 2005. We were able to work together on both sides of the aisle to prepare this bill to reauthorize the Child Care and Development Block Grant program. The Caring for Children Act reflects our common goals to expand access and improve the quality of child care for families and children throughout the Nation.

Child care is a key issue in both welfare reform and education reform. The success of our welfare system rests on our ability to provide dependable and consistent child care support for low-income families, so that they can work and provide for their families. Improving the quality of child care and the environment in which our children develop is an essential tool in preparing our society as a whole, and this legislation can be an important part of our effort in Congress to meet that responsibility.

Today, 65 percent of parents with young children and 79 percent of parents with school age children are in America’s workforce. During the working day, 14 million children are cared for by someone other than a parent.

For low-income families and single mothers, child care assistance is a life-line. Low-income mothers who receive child care assistance are 40 percent more likely to remain employed after 2 years, compared to those who do not receive such support. Yet child care is still unaffordable for too many families—full-day care can easily cost thousands of dollars a year and become an impossible expense for millions of families.

The Caring for Children Act will explore access to child care and do more to deliver the support that working parents need to obtain effective child care. The bill supports activities to help parents find quality care through State Resource and Referral Services, that the greatest information and outreach to parents will be available.

Child care is a vital support for working parents, and it is also an essential link in preparing young children for school. Research shows that the early environments in which children learn and develop have a profound impact on their later development and on their success in school. Unfortunately, much remains to be done to improve the quality of child care. Nearly half of all kindergarten teachers report that the majority of children in each entering class has specific problems, including difficulty in following directions, lack of even the most basic academic skills, troubled situations at home, or difficulty in relating to other children.

The Caring for Children Act seeks to improve the quality of child care available to low-income children and their families through the Child Care and Development Block Grant. The bill will raise the amount of dollars states must dedicate to quality activities from 4 to 6 percent.

Most important, the Act will promote better child care by focusing on activities that make children ready to learn, and encouraging States to improve child safety and well-being. Funds will be used to provide greater training and support for child care workers, establish voluntary guidelines for school preparedness, and enhance the early learning of young children.

Investments in the child care workforce are also essential to improve the quality of care. Today, only one in seven child care centers provides a level of quality adequate for child development. Thirty states have no preschool training requirements for child care workers. Our bill supports professional development and education opportunities for child care providers to upgrade their skills and to better prepare them to meet the needs of working parents and young children.

We must also do more to ensure that states provide timely and adequate payments for high quality care. The Caring for Children Act will improve reimbursement rates for care in the states, and more effectively use the market survey required under current law to establish payment rates. I commend Senator REED for his leadership on those provisions.

Finally, the Caring for Children Act creates a national commitment to serve children in need, including families with infants and toddlers, children with disabilities, and families that require special care during non-traditional work hours. Thanks to Senator HARKIN’s leadership, the needs of infants and toddlers will continue to be addressed in this bill.

The Caring for Children Act builds on effective practices already underway in many states, but we still have a long way to go to see that all children have access to good child care. More resources are clearly required, and the need is urgent.

In nearly half the states, eligible children are being placed on waiting lists or being turned away altogether. In Massachusetts, over 16,000 low-income children are on waiting lists.

Instead of responding to this need, the President’s budget for Fiscal Year 2006 freezes funding for the Child Care and Development Block Grant. Under the Administration’s own calculations, 300,000 fewer low-income children will have access to child care assistance by 2010. Surely, we can do better.

It makes no sense to cut back on child care for low-income children. We need to serve as many needy children as possible. I look forward very much to working with our colleagues on the Finance Committee to make that goal a reality as the reauthorization of the Temporary Assistance for Needy Families Block Grant moves forward this year.

I commend Senators ENZI, ALEXANDER, and DODD for their impressive work on this bill. I urge all of my colleagues in the Senate to support this important legislation and to use our authority to provide the support for quality child care that low-income families throughout America need and deserve.

By Mr. LAUTENBERG (for himself, Mr. CORZINE, Mr. SCHUMER, and Mrs. CLINTON):

S. 527. A bill to protect the Nation’s law enforcement officers by banning the Five-seven Pistol and 5.7 x 28mm SS190 and SS192 cartridges, testing handguns and ammunition for capability to penetrate body armor, and prohibiting the manufacture, importation, sale, or purchase of such handguns or ammunition by civilians; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, the tragic attacks of September 11, 2001 reminded us that police are heroes who risk their lives to protect us.

That’s why it’s so outrageous that a gun manufacturer would design and market a “cop killer” weapon.

Today on the streets of our cities there is a handgun, called the Five-seven, that was specifically designed to pierce bulletproof vests like the ones worn by police.

The web site for this gun actually brags that it can pierce protective armor—that it is a potential cop killer.

One of these weapons was recently confiscated by police officer in Camden, N.J., from a suspect charged with trafficking in large amounts of narcotics.

If there had been a gunfight, the police would have been outgunned.

Who knows how many cop-killer guns are on the streets of my State—or yours?

Police across the nation are alarmed by this weapon. The police chief of Jersey City, Robert Troy, recently pleaded with Congress to ban this gun.

That’s why I have introduced the Protect Law Enforcement Armor (PLEA) Act to take “cop-killer guns” off the streets. And, I am pleased Senators CORZINE, SCHUMER and CLINTON are co-sponsors of this legislation.

There might be a place for this gun on a battlefield ... but not near a playground.

Not on our streets.

The cop-killer gun isn’t good for hunting. The last time I checked, deer didn’t wear bulletproof vests.

It isn’t for target shooting. It isn’t even a practical weapon for protection against home intruders.

The cop-killer gun was designed for one thing—piercing the protective armor worn by police officers.

This is a weapon a terrorist or criminal would love: light and easily concealed, yet so powerful that it can penetrate a bullet-proof vest from a distance of more than two football fields. Any handgun armed with armor piercing bullets are already illegal, but the cop-killer gun has slipped through a loophole in the law.

Simply put, this gun skirts the law by delivering ammunition with unusual velocity, turning otherwise legal bullets into “cop killers.”

We can’t sit by. We must protect our police.

We must ban the cop-killer gun and close the loophole on cop-killer bullets.

Our police officers risk their lives to protect us. We should reduce that risk as much as possible.

Let’s get cop-killer guns off our streets.

Let’s pass the PLEA Act.

The PLEA Act is simple. It would ban the Five-seven assault pistol, ban the special armor piercing FN 5.7 x 28mm S 192 ammunition, expand the federal definition of armor piercing ammunition, and require the Attorney General to test any ammunition that is capable of penetrating body armor.

The PLEA Act does not apply to the military and law enforcement. In fact, it specifically exempts sale of armor piercing ammunition to the military and law enforcement.

I encourage my colleagues to support it.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 527
Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled.

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the “Protect Law Enforcement Armor Act” or the “PLEA Act”.

SEC. 2. FINDINGS AND PURPOSE.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds the following:

(1) Law enforcement is facing a new threat from handguns and accompanying ammunition, which are designed to penetrate police body armor, being marketed and sold to civilians.

(2) A Five-seven Pistol and accompanying ammunition, manufactured by FN Herstal of Belgium as the “5.7 x 28mm SS192” has recently been recovered by law enforcement on the streets. The Five-seven Pistol and 5.7 x 28mm SS192 cartridges are legally available for purchase by civilians under current law.

(3) The Five-seven Pistol and 5.7 x 28mm SS192 cartridges are capable of penetrating level III A armor. The manufacturer advertises that ammunition fired from the Five-seven will perforate 48 layers of Kevlar up to 200 meters and that the ammunition travels at 900 feet per second.

(b) PURPOSE.—The purpose of this Act is to protect the Nation’s law enforcement officers by:

(1) testing handguns and ammunition for capability to penetrate body armor; and

(2) prohibiting the manufacture, importation, sale, or purchase by civilians of the Five-seven Pistol, ammunition for such pistol, or any other handgun that uses ammunition found to be capable of penetrating body armor.

SEC. 3. ARMOR PIERCING AMMUNITION.

(a) EXPANSION OF DEFINITION OF ARMOR PIERCING AMMUNITION.—Section 921(a)(17)(B) of title 18, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in clause (i), by striking “or” at the end;

(2) in clause (ii), by striking the period at the end and inserting “; and”; and

(3) by adding at the end the following:—

“(III) a projectile that—“(I) may be used in a handgun; and

“(II) the Attorney General determines, pursuant to section 926(d), to be capable of penetrating body armor.”;

(b) DETERMINATION OF CAPACITY TO PIERCE ARMOR.—Section 926 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:—

(6) In this section, the term “armor piercing” means a cartridge or ammunition that is capable of piercing body armor.

(7) In this section, the term “body armor” includes any armor worn by police officers that is capable of stopping a handgun bullet and the bulletproof vest worn by military personnel.
government would follow the person with a disability from an institution into the community. This legislation provides 100 percent Federal reimbursement for the community services that an individual needs during the first year that he or she moves out of an institution. By fully reimbursing the states, it gives them some additional resources to allow people with disabilities to choose to live in the community.

President Bush first proposed the Money Follows the Person Rebalancing Initiative in his FY '04 budget and indicated that the demonstration project would provide full Federal reimbursement for community services for the first year that an individual moves out of an institution or nursing home. Senator SMITH and I have worked with the disability community and others in drafting this legislation, and we look forward to working with the Administration and our colleagues to enact the Money Follows the Person concept into law.

We have a Medicaid system in this country that is spending approximately two-thirds of its dollars on institutional care and approximately one-third on community services. This bill is an important step toward switching those numbers around. It is shameful that our federal dollars are being spent to segregate people, not integrate them. It has been 15 years since we were promised with the ADA that no one should be segregated. But our Medicaid program says "yes" and we need to change it. This is the next civil rights battle. If we really meant what we said in the ADA in 1990, we should enact this legislation.

The civil right of a person with a disability to be integrated into his or her community should not depend on his or her address. In Olmstead v. LC, the Supreme Court ruled that "institutionalization is a form of discrimination under the Americans with Disabilities Act. We in Congress have a responsibility to help States meet their obligations under Olmstead. An individual should not be asked to move to another state in order to avoid needless segregation. They also should not be moved away from family and friends because their only choice is an institution.

Federal Medicaid policy should reflect the consensus reached in the ADA that Americans with disabilities should have equal opportunity to contribute to our communities and participate in our society as full citizens. That means no one has to sacrifice their full participation in society because they need help getting out of the house in the morning or assistance with personal care or some other basic service. This bill will open the door to full participation by people with disabilities in our communities, our workplaces, and our American Dream, and I urge all my colleagues to support us on this issue. I want to thank Senator SMITH for his commitment to improving access for people with disabilities.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of this bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 528

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Money Follows the Person Act of 2005."

SEC. 2. MONEY FOLLOWS THE PERSON REBALANCING DEMONSTRATION.

(a) PROGRAM PURPOSE AND AUTHORITY.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services (in this section referred to as the "Secretary") is authorized to award, on a competitive basis, grants to States in accordance with this section for demonstration projects (each in this section referred to as a "MFP demonstration project") designed to achieve the following objectives with respect to institutional and community-based long-term care services under State Medicaid programs:

(1) REBALANCING.—Increase the use of home and community-based long-term care services over institutional, long-term care services.

(2) MONEY FOLLOWS THE PERSON.—Eliminate barriers or mechanisms, whether in the law, the State Medicaid plan, the State budget, or otherwise, that prevent or restrict the flexible use of Medicaid funds to enable Medicaid-eligible individuals to receive support for appropriate and necessary long-term services in the settings of their choice.

(3) CONTINUITY OF SERVICE.—Increase the ability of the State Medicaid programs to assure continued provision of home and community-based long-term care services to eligible individuals who choose to transition from an institutional to a community setting.

(4) QUALITY ASSURANCE AND QUALITY IMPROVEMENT.—Ensure that procedures are in place (at least comparable to those required under the qualified HCB program) to provide quality assurance for eligible individuals receiving Medicaid home and community-based long-term care services and to provide for continuous quality improvement in such services.

(b) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section:

(1) HOME AND COMMUNITY-BASED LONG-TERM CARE SERVICES.—The term "home and community-based long-term care services" means, with respect to a State Medicaid program, home and community-based services (including home health and personal care services) that are provided under the State's qualified HCB program or that could be provided under such a program but are otherwise provided under the Medicaid program.

(2) ELIGIBLE INDIVIDUAL.—The term "eligible individual" means, with respect to an MFP demonstration project of a State, an individual in the State—

(i) resides (and has resided, for a period of not less than six months, or for a longer minimum period, not to exceed 2 years, as may be specified by the State) in an institutional facility; and

(ii) is receiving Medicaid benefits for inpatient services furnished by such inpatient facility; and

"(d)(1) Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this subsection, the Attorney General shall promulgate standards for the uniform testing of projectile firearms and ammunition, including piercing ammunition.

"(2) The standards promulgated pursuant to paragraph (1) shall take into account, among other factors, variations in performance associated with the type and caliber of ammunition used, the length of the barrel of the handgun, the amount and kind of powder used to propel the projectile, and the design of the projectile.

"(3) As used in paragraph (1), the term 'Body Armor Exemplar' means body armor that the Attorney General determines meets minimum standards for the protection of law enforcement officers.''

SEC. 4. ARMOR PIERCING HANDGUNS AND AMMUNITION.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 922 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding after subsection (y):

"(z) Arms and ammunition

"(Z) Five-seveN pistol;

"(AA) any firearm or armor piercing ammunition manufactured for, and sold exclusively to, military, law enforcement, or intelligence agencies of the United States; and

"(BB) any firearm or armor piercing ammunition by a licensed manufacturer, or any person acting pursuant to a contract with a licensed manufacturer, for the purpose of examining and testing such firearm or ammunition to determine whether paragraph (1) applies to such firearm.''

"(b) PENALTIES.—Section 924(a)(1)(B) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by striking "(q)" and inserting "(q), or (e)"

By Mr. HARKIN (for himself and Mr. SMITH):

S. 528—To authorize the Secretary of Health and Human Services to provide grants to States to conduct demonstration projects that are designed to enable Medicaid-eligible individuals to receive support for appropriate and necessary long-term services in the settings of their choice; to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, today I, along with Senator SMITH, introduce the Money Follows the Person Act of 2005. This legislation is needed to bring people with disabilities into the mainstream of society and provide equal opportunity for employment and community activities.

In order to work or live in their own homes, Americans with disabilities need access to community-based services and supports. Unfortunately, under current Federal Medicaid policy, the deck is stacked in favor of living in an institution. The purpose of this bill is to level the playing field and give eligible individuals equal access to community-based services and supports.

Under our legislation, the Medicaid money paid by states and the Federal with whom a determination has been made that, but for the provision of home and community-based long-term care services, the individual would continue to require such care provided in an inpatient facility; and

(B) who resides in a qualified residence beginning on the initial date of participation in the demonstration project.

(3) INPATIENT FACILITY.—The term "inpatient facility" means a hospital, nursing facility, or intermediate care facility for the mentally retarded. By Mr. GRASSLEY (for himself, Mr. BIDEN, Mr. MCCAIN, and Mr. STEVENS):

S. 529. A bill to designate a United States Anti-Doping Agency; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, America is a nation of sports fans and sports players. In fact, it is hard to imagine something more influential in today’s society than athletics. As children, we grow up emulating our favorte players in the backyard. Year in and year out we watch and hope that this is the year our favorite team makes it to the Super Bowl, the World Series, or the Big Dance. And every 4 years we watch in pride and tally the medals as American athletes compete in the Olympic games.

Every day millions of young people from across the country share the same dream of one day playing in the big leagues. But the reality is that most will never get the chance. In an average year, there are approximately 2 million high school boys playing football, baseball, and basketball. Another 68,000 men are playing the sports in college and 2,500 are participating at the national level. Yet, short only 1 in 736, or 0.14 percent will ever play professional sports.

With that kind of competition, comounded by the lure of fame, endorsements and multi-million dollar contracts, an increasing number of young athletes are giving in to the seduction of performance enhancing drugs hoping to gain an edge on their peers. And what can you expect when some of the biggest superstars in sports have been found using steroids as a way to improve their performance. But, unlike better athletic gear, better nutrition, and better training, injecting and ingesting performance enhancing drugs as a shortcut to the big leagues jeopdarizes the health and safety of young athletes and cheapens the legitimacy of competition.

In an effort to combat the use of performance enhancing drugs at the youth and amateur sports level, I am pleased to be joined by my colleagues Senator BIDEN, Senator MCCAIN and Senator STEVENS in introducing legislation to authorize continued Federal funding for the United States Anti-Doping Agency. As the anti-doping agency for the United States Olympic movement since 2000. USAUSA is responsible for ensuring that U.S. athletes participating in Olympic competition do not use performance enhancing drugs. Through its efforts, USAUSA is expected to set the standard for ama-tur athletic competition. This is achieved through testing, research, education, and adjudication.

USAUSA conducts nearly 60,000 random drug tests on athletes annually and has made anti-doping presentations to over

3,000 athletes and coaches last year alone. Over the last 2 years, USAUSA has worked to prevent U.S. Olympic athletes who have used banned substances from participating in the Olympic Games. But for the efforts of USAUSA, it is possible that more than a dozen elite U.S. athletes would have participated in the Athens Games last Summer and potentially embarrassed the U.S. on their drug use was exposed. USAUSA also works to fund research, including more than $3 million in grants for anti-doping research over the past 2 years, which is more than any other anti-doping agency in the country.

The anti-doping and testing standards serve as models for other amateur athletic associations who wish to protect the health of their athletes and the fair competition of sport.

To date, the Federal Government has provided approximately 60 percent of USAUSA’s operational budget, with the remainder of the agency’s budget provided by the U.S. Olympic Committee and private funding sources. With continued support and proper funding,

USAUSA could expand and improve upon the programs for anti-doping that already exist and continue to enhance the credibility of U.S. athletes in the eyes of the international sports community.

While the issue of anabolic steroids has received a great deal of national and international attention in the context of professional sports, the importance of stopping steroid abuse extends far beyond baseball diamond, or football field. Instead our focus should be on the health and future of our children. I encourage my colleagues to join in support of this legislation to set the standard for free and fair competition.

Mr. President. I ask unanimous consent that the text of this bill be printed in the Record.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

SUBMITTED RESOLUTIONS

SENATE RESOLUTION 69—EX-

PRESSING THE SENSE OF THE SENATE ABOUT THE ACTIONS

OF RUSSIA REGARDING GEORGIA

AND MOLDOVA

Mr. LUGAR submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations:

S. Res. 69

Whereas the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe (OSCE) evolved from the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe (CSCE), which was established in 1975, and the official change of its name from CSCE to OSCE became effective on January 1, 1995; and

Whereas the OSCE is the largest regional security organization in the world with 55 participating States from Europe, Central Asia, and North America; and

Whereas the 1975 Helsinki Final Act, the 1990 Charter of Paris, and the 1999 Charter for an European Security adopted in Istanbul, are the principle documents of OSCE, defining a steadily evolving and maturing set of Moldova have been met. And we stand ready with ratification of the Adapted CFE agreement to the stationing of forces. The duration of the Russian military presence to monitor objectively the Russian presence at the Akhalkalaki and Batumi bases;

Whereas Russia completed the withdrawal from Moldova of its declared military equipment limited by the CFE Treaty, but has yet to withdraw all its military forces from Moldova, as Russia committed to do at the 1999 OSCE Summit in Istanbul;

Whereas Russia made virtually no progress in 2004 toward its commitment to withdraw its military forces from Moldova;

Whereas Russia started shutting down on January 1, 2005, and is currently scheduled to be completed by May 2005;

Whereas the United States Ambassador to the United States Mission to the OSCE, Stephen M. Minikes, said in a statement to the OSCE Permanent Council in Vienna on January 19, 2005:

Resolved, That it is the sense of the Senate that the United States should—

(1) urge Russia to live up to its commitments at the 1999 Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe (OSCE) Summit in Istanbul to withdraw all its military forces from Moldova;

(2) urge Russia to live up to its commitments to withdraw all its military forces from Moldova; and

(3) request that the United States submit a resolution expressing the United States Senate’s concern about Russian actions in Georgia and Moldova.

At the Organization for Security & Cooperation in Europe’s (OSCE) 1999 conference in Istanbul, Russia signed commitments to withdraw troops from the Georgian territories of South Ossetia and Abkhazia and from the Russian republics of Chechnya, Dagestan, and Ingushetia.

Whereas the staff of the BMO is now dismantling facilities and is not performing its mission;

Whereas the shutdown of the BMO will become irreversible by the end of March 2005;

Whereas Russian footvoll of the BMO is now dismantling facilities and is not performing its mission;

Whereas the United States Senate is active in early warning, conflict prevention, crisis management, and political-hydrodiation;

Whereas Russia and Georgia agreed at the 1999 OSCE Summit in Istanbul on specific steps regarding the withdrawal of Russian forces, including military equipment limited by the Treaty on Conventional Armed Forces in Europe (CFE), and committed to resolve other key issues relating to the status and duration of the Russian military presence in Georgia;

Whereas Russia has completed some of the withdrawal of Russian military equipment limited by the CFE Treaty in excess of agreed levels, but has yet to agree with Georgia on the status of Russian forces at the Batumi bases and the duration of the Russian presence at the Akhalkalaki and Batumi bases;

Whereas United States Senator McKintosh, in a statement to the OSCE Permanent Council in Sofia, Bulgaria, that “Russia’s commitments to withdraw its military forces from Moldova and to agree with Georgia on the status of Russian military presence there, remain unfulfilled. A core principle of the CFE Treaty is that country agreement to the stationing of forces. The United States remains committed to moving ahead with ratification of the Adapted CFE Treaty, but we will do so only after the Istanbul commitments on Georgia and Moldova have been met. And we stand ready to assist with reasonable costs associated with the implementation of these commitments.”;

Whereas since June 2004, Russia has called for the closure of the OSCE Border Monitoring Operation (BMO), the sole source of objective reporting on border crossings across the border between Georgia and with the Russian republics of Chechnya, Dagestan, and Ingushetia;

Whereas OSCE border monitors took up their mission in Georgia in May 2000, and prior to the failure to extend the mandate for the BMO in December 2004, OSCE border monitors were unarmed, were deployed at nine locations along that border;

Whereas the current rotation of the BMO includes 65 border monitors from 23 countries, including the United States, Russia, Ukraine, the United Kingdom, and the United States;

Whereas at the December 2004 OSCE Ministerial, Russia blocked renewal of the mandate for the BMO in Georgia;

Whereas Russia has stated that the BMO has accomplished nothing, but it has in fact accomplished a great deal, including observing 746 unarmed and 61 armed border crossings in 2004 and serving as a counterweight to inflammatory press reports;

Whereas Russian complaints about the cost-effectiveness of the BMO, the OSCE agreed in December 2004 to cut the number of monitors and thereby reduce the cost of the BMO by almost half;

But if the BMO is not revived, my resolution calls upon the United States and its European allies to seek an international presence to monitor objectionable crossings along Georgia’s border.

I am concerned that if Russia does not fulfill its commitment to withdraw troops from Georgia and Moldova, and if the Border Monitoring Operation in Georgia shuts down, the security situation in the region could further deteriorate. The United States must provide strong leadership on these issues. I ask my colleagues to support this resolution.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the resolution.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the resolution be agreed to, the preamble agreed to, and the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, tomorrow the Senate will continue consideration of the bankruptcy bill. We have had a very, very productive week considering a number of amendments and had a number of rollcall votes. In addition, we have reached an agreement that we will be voting shortly on the unanimous consent request, that will allow us to vote on both the Kennedy and Santorum minimum wage amendments Monday afternoon. Those two votes will occur at 5:30 and Senators should plan to be here for those important votes.

We will be in session tomorrow, as I mentioned. There will be no rollcall votes during tomorrow’s session. Senators who wish to speak on the bill are encouraged to come to the floor tomorrow morning.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, we have had relatively short days because of some things which happened in the evening. We have done pretty well this week. I think we have close to 15 amendments total. The bankruptcy debate was interrupted as a result of legislation that Senator Nickles and I produced some time ago to take a look at regulations promulgated by the government only be used three times but was used in the mad cow situation. That took up a big chunk of time today.

I think we have done quite well. There are a number of Senators coming here tomorrow to offer amendments on bankruptcy.

It is in contemplation, after having conferred with the Republican leader, that we are going to try to resolve a time to finish the clinic violence amendment. We are trying to do that early next week. I certainly hope we can do that as early as we can.

This week we have really been legislators. It has been very nice.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I concur with the Democratic leader. It has been a productive week, and we are governing with meaningful solutions, and we look forward to completing this bill next week.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent, in addition to the Kennedy amendment regarding minimum wage, that it be in order for Senator SANTORUM to offer a first-degree amendment related to the minimum wage issue; provided further that on Monday, March 7, there be 3 hours of debate equally divided between Senators Santorum and Kennedy, or their designees; provided further that at 5:30 on Monday the Senate proceed to a vote on the Kennedy amendment to be followed by a vote on the Santorum amendment with no amendments in order to either amendment, and no further intervening action or debate.

I further ask unanimous consent that if either amendment does not receive 60 votes, the affirmative vote on the Senate action on the amendment be vitiated and the amendment be immediately withdrawn.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, if there is no further business to come before the Senate, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate stand in adjournment under the previous order.

There being no objection, the Senate, at 7:15 p.m., adjourned until Friday, March 4, 2005, at 9:30 a.m.
EXTENSIONS OF REMARKS

TRIBUTE TO VIRGINIA R. SAUNDERS’ 60 YEARS OF FEDERAL SERVICE

HON. STENY H. HOYER OF MARYLAND
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, March 3, 2005
Mr. HOYER. Mr. Speaker, I rise in tribute to Virginia Saunders, Program Operations and Evaluation Specialist for Congressional Documents, in the Office of Congressional Publishing Services at the Government Printing Office, as she approaches her 60th anniversary of dedicated Federal service, May 26, 2005.

Mr. Speaker, this is becoming a habit: Ten years ago, on the occasion of Ms. Saunders’ 50th anniversary of Federal service, I rose to recognize Ms. Saunders’ achievements, and I expect to do so again ten years from now. Born Virginia R. Frisbie in Darlington, Maryland, on October 11, 1926, Ms. Saunders spent her entire career in service to her fellow Americans. After working briefly at the Federal Bureau of Investigation, she came to the Government Printing Office on February 4, 1946, as a war service junior clerk-typist in the division of public documents, stock section. Two years later, she was promoted to the division of public documents reference section. In February 1951, Ms. Saunders was promoted to indexing clerk and earned subsequent promotions in the same classification. In July 1958, she was promoted to library technician. Becoming a congressional documents specialist in April 1970, she was then promoted to supervisor of the congressional documents section in July 1974. In October 1983, Ms. Saunders assumed the position of congressional documents specialist in the congressional printing management division, customer services, and in September 2004 she was promoted to her current position.

As I pointed out ten years ago, although one may not yet recognize the name of this outstanding GPO employee, the end product of her dedicated efforts is certainly familiar. Ms. Saunders has primary responsibility for the Congressional Serial Set, which is a compilation of all the House and Senate documents and reports issued for each session of Congress. Dummy volumes establishing the format for each edition are prepared and assigned a serial number following each session of Congress. The actual books are produced by GPO’s binding division, often as many as 100 volumes per set for each session of Congress. As a chronicle of work of the Congress over the years, the Congressional Serial Set is rivaled only by the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD. While the Serial Set records behind-the-scenes legislative activities for the United States, the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD reflects the “in-session” proceedings. Distributed to the House and Senate libraries, the Archives, the Library of Congress, and depository libraries, the Congressional Serial Set joins the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD in offering students and historians a rich insight into the American system of government. Virginia Saunders makes all that possible.

In late 1989, Ms. Saunders recognized the importance of the depositary library program in informing the Nation, and drew upon her then-43 years of GPO experience to submit an employee suggestion regarding the appendix to the Iran-Contra Report to Congress. She suggested that this 40-volume publication, which was printed as both a Senate and House report, be bound once for the serial set volumes of House and Senate reports that are sent to depository libraries. She further suggested that the Schedule of Volumes, a listing of the bound volumes, contain a notation explaining the missing serial number volumes. The implementation of this suggestion resulted in a reduction of 13,740 book volumes to be bound, saving the Government over $600,000. In recognition of these efforts, she received GPO’s top monetary Suggestion Award for that year. In ceremonies held on January 9, 1991, Ms. Saunders received a Presidential letter of commendation under the Quality and Management Improvement Award Program. In his letter to Ms. Saunders, President George H.W. Bush noted, “You have demonstrated to an exceptional degree my belief that Federal employees have the knowledge, ability, and desire to make a difference.” As one with the privilege of representing tens of thousands of Marylanders in Federal service, I know this to be true.

In tribute to her work on the Congressional Serial Set, in 1999 Ms. Saunders received the James Bennett Childs Award from the Government Documents Roundtable of the American Library Association. The ALA honored Ms. Saunders’ “distinguished contribution to documents librarianship,” and paid “grateful recognition” of a lifetime of exceptional achievements in this important field of endeavor.

I know my colleagues and Ms. Saunders’ family, friends, and co-workers join me in congratulating her on 60 years of exemplary Federal service. See you in 10 years, Virginia!

RECOGNIZING THE ACHIEVEMENTS OF UNITED INDEPENDENT SCHOOL DISTRICT BOARD MEMBER PAT CAMPOS

HON. HENRY CUELLAR
OF TEXAS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, March 3, 2005
Mr. CUELLAR. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor the important achievements of United Independent School District Board Member Pat Campos in Laredo, TX in my Congressional District.

Pat Campos was elected to the United I.S.D. Board of Trustees, District 3 seat in May 2003. Campos is the Case Management Director at the Webb County Juvenile Department. She has worked with children and young adults for nearly 25 years.

Campos says her main reason for running for the U.I.S.D. Board of Trustees is to ensure safety in our schools. “As a member of the law enforcement community specializing in juvenile law, I deal on a daily basis with the troubled youth of our community, many of whom come from U.I.S.D. It is time to seriously address violence in our schools,” says Campos.

Campos says she hopes to ensure that all students receive the best quality education to prepare them for the future. She says this can only happen when schools are fully staffed with well-qualified and motivated teachers, “I am working to see that teachers and staff have the facilities, supplies, and administrative support necessary to do their job.”

Campos says she will use her numerous years of juvenile justice expertise to “promote an environment that is free of drugs, violence, and gang activity in our schools.” She adds, “I do not want today’s youth to become my clients tomorrow.”

In 1982, Campos was named Detention Officer of the Year and in 1990, the Webb County Juvenile Board honored her with a resolution for introducing the first “Operation Kick-It” program to schools in United and Laredo Independent School Districts.

Pat Campos is a member of the Texas Gang Investigators Association, Texas Probation Association, Juvenile Justice Association of Texas, Texas Corrections Association, National Association of Female Executives, and the American Association of University Women, Community Action Agency Board, National Association of Latino Elected Officials, and Webb County Appraisal District Board of Directors, one of two representatives from the U.I.S.D. Campos also serves on the school district’s Student Expulsion Appeals Committee and is chairperson of the U.I.S.D. Instructional Committee.

Her community service activities include serving as a member of the U.I.S.D. Blue Ribbon Committee, a member of the U.I.S.D. Communications Advisory Committee, a member of the Laredo Safe School Coalition and a member of the Laredo Job Corps Advisory Board.

In years past, Campos has served as a Daisy Girl Scout Leader, Brownie Girl Scout Assistant Leader, and Youth Minister. She has also performed missionary work in Mexico and has served as a Board of Directors for the Diocese of Laredo Catholic Social Services.

Campos has a Bachelor of Science degree in Criminal Justice from Laredo State University and a Paralegal Certificate from Texas A & M International University.

Mr. Speaker, I am proud to have this opportunity to recognize contributions of United Independent School District Board Member Pat Campos.
to the United States and Illinois students from six different communities in Pennsylvania on the occasion of its 50th Anniversary. This construction on the school continued throughout the summer and into the next year. On September 9, 1955, the Conestoga High School opened with a student enrollment of 549 and a faculty of 35. As the school continued to grow and flourish, along came the need for additional space to accommodate the students. In 1959, just four years after the original school was completed, 19 rooms were added to the building. After the completion of the new wing, student enrollment was at an all-time high of 1036.

During the next forty years, Conestoga High School would undergo many changes. In 1967, 20 additional rooms were added to the main building and, in 1981, the school’s library was enlarged and named for Karl Zettelmoyer in recognition of his years as principal from 1957 to 1971. Conestoga continued this tradition of recognizing those who had served the school when a new gymnasium was constructed and named for Principal John C. Rittenmeyer.

Just recently, Conestoga has added fourteen general all-purpose classrooms and ten new science labs. The cafeteria was enlarged and modernized to meet the needs of the student body and the entire music area was reconfigured to house the growing interest in the Conestoga High School choir. In the family and consumer sciences lab, the kitchens were completely renovated and reconfigured and a new welcoming and spacious main lobby was built.

Mr. Speaker, I ask that my colleagues join me today in honoring Conestoga High School. Throughout the last 50 years, the school has provided an invaluable exemplary educational service to its students and has contributed greatly to the community. Conestoga High School should be commended for its exceptional record of positive development of the moral, physical and emotional well-being of the young men and women who have attended the school over the past 50 years.

Mr. Speaker, I also want to pay tribute to my good friend Andras Simonyi. He has been an outstanding representative of Hungary in the United States and has personally made an important contribution to the relations between our two countries.

Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the letter of Ambassador Simonyi be placed in the RECORD, and I urge my colleagues to read it.

Honor. H. Tom Lantos, Rayburn House Office Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR CONGRESSMAN LANTOS: As I am sure that you might be interested, allow me to summarize for you the extent possible Hungary’s contribution to the Iraqi stabilization process so far. As you well know, Hungary was among the first to support Coalition efforts in Iraq, including by training the Free Iraqi Forces (FIF) in Tazár, Hungary in Fall 2002 and by deploying a 300-strong transportation battalion to Iraq who served in Al-Hilla. Recently the Hungarian government decided to send 165 troops to the NATO Training and Implementation Mission in Iraq. Hungary donated 77 T72 tanks to the Iraqi Army. 14 high ranking officers are in Iraq to train Iraqi officers in command and control.

In March 2004 the Hungarian government sent an aid supply of medical equipment to Basra, total value of approx. 300,000.00 USD.

Donation of 80 cardio-equipment to the Iraqi Ministry of Health in March 2004 for a total value of 1,000,000.00 USD and a training program for experts in 2005.

In October 2004 training of 20 experts in drink-water purification, waste-water and waste management.

Training program for the Iraqi Police for 2004-2005 for a value of 500,000.00 USD.

Training program for 25 Iraqi diplomats starting from March 2005 at Corvinus University.

Training program for Iraqi conductors starting from the first quarter of 2005 to foster experts in the well-known Hungarian method to help the development of handicapped children.

Training program for 20 civil servants in Hungary for a period of 10 days in the field of privatization, small business promotion, and banking system in the first quarter of 2005.

50 day training program in Hungary for 20 Iraqi experts in the field of fresh-water fish farming.

Four-week training program for 10 Iraqi veterinaries in Hungary starting in the first semester of 2005.

Water management training for 10 Iraqi experts starting from the first semester of 2005.

Financial aid for the Iraqi elections.

Sincerely yours,

András Simonyi.
CONGRATULATIONS TO CORY ZEBIAN FOR BEING SELECTED AS CHIEF PETTY OFFICER OF THE UNITED STATES NAVAL SEA CADET CORPS

HON. KENNY MARCHANT OF TEXAS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, March 3, 2005

Mr. MARCHANT. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to recognize Cadet Cory Zebian, a Colleyville, Texas, resident, for his appointment to Chief Petty Officer of the United States Naval Sea Cadet Corps. This honor follows years of work and dedication to this youth program, including the completion of regulation U.S. Navy courses, from Basic Military Regulations through Chief Petty Officer. CPO Zebian has shown superior qualities of leadership, patriotism, and expertise that have allowed him to achieve this accomplishment, which is awarded to less than 1⁄2 of 1% of the approximately 10,000 Naval Sea Cadets. I congratulate CPO Zebian on his significant feat.

CHINA’S ANTI-SECESSION LAW

HON. SCOTT GARRETT OF NEW JERSEY
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, March 3, 2005

Mr. GARRETT of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, it is expected that the People’s Republic of China will enact its “anti-secession” law this March. Aimed at eventual reunification with Taiwan, this law will give China a legal basis to invade Taiwan. Clearly, this is a highly provocative law and will change the status quo in the Taiwan Strait.

With the enactment of this law China claims jurisdiction over Taiwan and threatens to use force against Taiwan if Taiwan is found not actively working toward eventual unification with China. China will be Taiwan’s sole arbiter of any dispute between the two.

Mr. Speaker, by enacting this law, China is also challenging the letter and spirit of the Taiwan Relations Act, which says that “any effort to determine the future of Taiwan by other than peaceful means” is “of grave concern to the United States.” Indeed, any unilateral effort by the PRC to determine the future of Taiwan challenges America’s will to defend the Taiwan Relations Act. We must let the Chinese know that our commitment to the Taiwan Relations Act is total and unwavering. We will not allow China to change the status quo in the Taiwan Strait.

By imposing its form of government on the 23 million people of Taiwan, China tramples on the Taiwanese people’s human rights and democratic ideals. Once again, we must not allow this to happen. In the Taiwan Relations Act we read, the “preservation and enhancement of the human rights of all the people on Taiwan are . . . reaffirmed as objectives of the United States.” We must let China know that we take human rights and democratic ideals seriously.

It is vitally important that the Bush administration, the U.S. Congress and the international community voice opposition to China’s proposed “anti-secession” law. It is a violation of law that will adversely affect Taiwan and the Pacific region. It will upset peace and stability in the Taiwan Strait and bring economic ruin to the whole area.

Mr. Speaker, I join my colleagues in voicing my strong opposition to China’s proposed “anti-secession” law.

HON. HENRY CUELLAR
OF TEXAS

We look out for the best opportunities for kids.” Molina says United ISD has seen numerous changes in the last few years. “We’ve seen better curriculum, an improvement in our bilingual education program, and lower dropout and teen pregnancy rates.” Molina says the schools in his area are good facilities that are well built. “We help the school to educateourmany schools.” He adds, “UISD is doing a great job of educating our children.” He is particularly proud of the many accomplishments made by the schools in the south, especially all the great things happening at United South Magnet School. Molina, “I will continue to work for the children and taxpayers of United ISD. Nothing is too good for the kids. I wish I could do more.”

INTRODUCTION OF THE ADVANCE DEMOCRACY ACT OF 2005

HON. TOM LANTOS
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, March 3, 2005

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, earlier today, my good friend and co-chairman of the Congressional Human Rights Caucus, FRANK WOLF, introduced the Advance Democratic Values, Address Nondemocratic Countries, and Enhance (ADVANCE) Democracy Act of 2005. I am delighted to be the Democratic cosponsor of this bill. This landmark legislation, which we have been working on for more than a year, was developed in response to ideas that have emerged from outside the government, especially the thoughts and writings of Mark Palmer, who was the U.S. Ambassador to Hungary from 1986 to 1989 during that country’s amazing swift transition from totalitarianism to freedom.

Mr. Speaker, Hungary, where I was born, faced the twin scourges of fascism and communism in the 20th century. Somewhat I survived both of these soul-killing political systems and came to the United States, which was then a beacon of hope for those of us living in the darkness of Stalinist-controlled Central Europe.

As a Member of Congress in the intervening years, and as founding co-chair of the Congressional Human Rights Caucus, I have dedicated myself to the cause of human rights, working to eliminate the threats posed by the vestiges of fascism and the encroachment of totalitarianism in this world. It has been my privilege to help promote democracy around the globe—a tradition started by President Wilson at the beginning of the last century and enshrined as a central tenet of U.S. foreign policy since the Carter administration.

In the last few years, we have seen all too clearly how the lack of democracy can create safe havens for nihilistic forces that do not value human life, and this lack of democracy can help extremism flourish.

But recently we also have been given fresh reason for optimism. Who would have predicted in the summer of 2004 that the rule of law would prevail in Ukraine and “Orange Revolution” would force the creeping influence of authoritarianism to retreat to the East? And just last month, who would have predicted that Syria would begin to lose its grip so quickly on the people of Lebanon?

We must do more to show that the United States is on the side of those who want peaceful change toward democracy and fundamental freedoms, and we must devise new ways to work with our friends around the globe to fan the embers of freedom.

That is what our new bill seeks to do. We are starting by proposing reforms to the State Department and other parts of the U.S. Government so that promoting democracy and fundamental freedoms, both here and abroad, is a fundamental and central component of our foreign policy. This legislation declares that it is the policy of the United States to promote freedom and democracy as a fundamental component of U.S. foreign policy, to see an end to dictatorial and other nondemocratic forms of government, and to strengthen alliances with other democratic countries to better promote and defend shared values and ideals.

Establishes in statute the Under Secretary for Global Affairs with a strong mandate to promote democracy and fundamental freedoms, expands the duties of the Assistant Secretary for Democracy, Human Rights and Labor to specifically include democracy promotion; and enhances the Human Rights and Democracy Fund controlled by that Bureau.

Establishes a new Office of Democracy Movements and Transitions and separate Regional Democracy Hubs to be points of contact for democracy movements and to promote democratic transitions and democratic consolidation, and creates a Democracy Promotion Advisory Board to provide outside expertise to the Department on democracy promotion and to conduct a study on the efficiency and effectiveness of current U.S. democracy assistance.

Requires the Secretary of State to prepare an annual report on democracy that will include a specific action plan, developed in consultation with local organizations, individuals and movements, to promote and achieve transition to democracy in non-democratic countries.

Provides for U.S. embassies to be State-supported Amtrak service in California.

Provides training for State Department personnel on democracy promotion and links promotion and performance awards to effective advocacy and promotion of democracy, particularly in non-democratic countries.

Establishes a Congressional Democracy Award to U.S. government officials who have made an extraordinary effort to promote democracy.

Provides for increased efforts to work with other democratic countries to promote democracy including bilaterally, with the UN and related international institutions, the Community of Democracies, and the new Democracy Transition Center being established by European countries in Hungary.

Requires translation of the annual report on democracy, the country reports on human rights practices, the Annual Report on International Religious Freedom, and the Trafficking in Persons Report, and requires the creation of a democracy and human rights Internet web site collecting these and other materials related to the promotion of democracy and human rights.

Let me be clear—there are many fine members of the Foreign Service at the Department of State and many dedicated civil servants that are relentless on issues of promoting democracy and human rights, but we can do better. We hope that this legislation will change the Department’s culture into one that focuses on freedom, not feel good relationships, and will give a framework and direction to our diplomats as they pursue the promotion of democracy around the world.

Mr. Speaker, in 1956, Hungary was in the midst of a national uprising. The Hungarian people had a real hope of freedom from the yoke of Soviet-installed communism. Then the West stood by while the Soviet Union invaded and extinguished the sparks of revolution in one aggressive wave.

In 1989, we did not make that mistake. The United States and our democratic friends and allies stood with the Hungarian people and helped them and others confront their communist masters and achieve freedom.

The central question of today is whether we will stand with the reformers, as we did in 1989, or stand by as the oppressors take action against them. This legislation will help ensure that we make the right choice and stand with the reformers.

Make no mistake, the achievement of universal democracy is not an easy task, and we have no illusions about that. But as the only remaining superpower and the beacon of hope for so many people around the globe, we cannot stand by as the oppressors take action.

The United States must find a way to promote democracy in this complex world. It is in our own interest, it is consistent with our principles and our history, and it is the right thing to do.

RECOGNIZING THE CONTRIBUTIONS OF SAN MARCOS MAYOR SUSAN NARVAIZ

HON. HENRY CUELLAR OF TEXAS IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES Thursday, March 3, 2005

Mr. CUELLAR. Mr. Speaker, I want to recognize the San Marcos Mayor Susan Narvaiz has made to her community. Since she moved to San Marcos in 1995 she has worked for the strengthening of the community in a countless number of ways.

Susan Narvaiz has been very involved in the advancement of the workforce in San Marcos starting with her first major accomplishment to the community through her business Core Strategies, Inc. which provides employment and training to the people along Interstate 35. On February 3rd, 2005, the company launched a similar business Sedona Staffing Industrial Development Center which offers free-of-charge training to citizens so they can find work. Both of these services helped a countless number of people receive the necessary training to successfully compete in the modern work force.

Mayor Narvaiz contends for beyond the employment issues she has tackled; she is also an active participant in such organizations as the American Cancer Society and United Way of Hays County. It is also not out of the ordinary to find her supporting the San Marcos High School Basketball and Baseball Boosters Club at a high school function.

There is one role that San Marcos Mayor Susan Narvaiz plays in the community that trumps everything; she is married to Mr. Mike Narvaiz and the mother to six beautiful children. For all the ways she serves San Marcos, I would like to thank Mayor Narvaiz for committing her time and energy to the better of San Marcos.

INTRODUCTION OF THE DETENTION OF ENEMY COMBATANTS ACT

HON. ADAM B. SCHIFF OF CALIFORNIA IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES Thursday, March 3, 2005

Mr. SCHIFF. Mr. Speaker, today I am reintroducing the Detention of Enemy Combatants Act. This legislation authorizes the detainment of “enemy combatants” in the war on terrorism while guaranteeing that they are granted timely access to legal counsel and judicial review.

Earlier this week, a federal judge in South Carolina ruled that the Administration lacks statutory authority to indefinitely imprison without criminal charges a U.S. citizen designated as an “enemy combatant.” Last month, another federal judge ruled that holding individuals indefinitely as “enemy combatants” unconstitutionally violates their right to due process and that some foreign terror suspects held in Guantanamo Bay can challenge their confinement in U.S. courts. That ruling came some eight months after the U.S. Supreme Court held in Hamdi that while the President has the authority to detain “enemy combatants” captured in the battlefield, detainees are entitled to lawyers and the chance to challenge their imprisonment.

The Court, however, left a host of unanswered questions that Congress should seek to resolve. Justice Scalia, in his dissent, called on Congress to act, noting: “I frankly do not know whether these tools are sufficient to meet the Government’s security needs, including the need to obtain intelligence through interrogation. It is far beyond my competence, or the Court’s competence, to determine that. But it is not beyond Congress’s.”

The Supreme Court also side-stepped the case of Jose Padilla and will likely be forced to speak again on these issues should a vacuum still exist due to congressional inaction.

Until then, enemy combatant law will continue to be written in a piecemeal fashion through a series of conflicting lower court decisions.

I believe that the federal government must have the authority to detain terrorists as “enemy combatants” to protect the public, our intelligence and safeguard national security. But we must also ensure that the accused are afforded the due-process rights guaranteed under the Constitution. I am particularly concerned with the detention of U.S. citizens and lawful residents.

In the last Congress, I introduced the Detention of Enemy Combatants Act to authorize the government to detain suspected members or associates of al Qaeda, but requiring that U.S. citizen detainees be granted access to legal counsel and due-process hearings. The bill called for standards to be set for such detentions that distinguish these cases from other Americans held for trial on criminal charges.

While we must grant broad latitude to our armed forces when it comes to protecting national security, American citizens should not be held indefinitely upon the sole determination of one branch of government without access to counsel or proper judicial review of these determinations.

These same concerns have even been echoed by Michael Chertoff, the newly-confirmed Secretary of the Department of Homeland Security and former head of the Criminal Division at the Department of Justice, who has suggested that policymakers now “may need to think more systematically and universally about the issue of combatants” and to “debate a long-term and sustainable architecture for the process of determining when, why, and for how long someone may be an enemy combatant, and what judicial review should be available.”

In addition, Viet Dinh, former head of the Justice Department’s Office of Legal Policy has called “unsustainable” the government’s current insistence on detentions without meaningful oversight or any sort of due process.

I am currently examining ways to heed this invitation for congressional action and hope to introduce a piece of legislation in the near future that establishes specific standards and procedures under which terrorism suspects may be detained as enemy combatants and provided due process.

In the interim, I am reintroducing this piece of legislation in the hope that Congress and the Administration will finally work together to create a workable framework to deal with these matters of significant constitutional import. In addition, I have renewed my call for congressional hearings to examine proposals for congressional action in this area. After the shameful internment of Japanese Americans during World War II, we must be vigilant to protect against the government’s decision to detain, perhaps indefinitely, any American without adequate review of the basis of its decision.

TRIBUTE TO YOLANDA GARCIA

HON. JOSE E. SERRANO OF NEW YORK IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES Thursday, March 3, 2005

Mr. SERRANO. Mr. Speaker, it is with deep sympathy that I rise today to give a final farewell to an outstanding woman and a dear friend. Ms. Yolanda Garcia passed away on February 17, 2005 at the age of 53. She was an inspiring person who gave so much of herself for the benefit of others. Words can’t explain how much she will be missed by all who knew her.

Yolanda was a co-founder of “We Stay/Nos Quedamos” Committee, Inc., a community based organization located in the South Bronx. “Nos Quedamos” was founded as a response to New York City’s Melrose Commons Urban Renewal plan which would have displaced some 6,000 people from their residences and businesses. In order to save not only her own home and business but those of her neighbors as well, Yolanda organized tenants, homeowners, property owners, local non-profits, and business people to deliver the message “We Stay/Nos Quedamos.” The group fought so that those affected would become equal partners with the city of New York in planning for the community’s redevelopment. Through “Nos Quedamos”, Yolanda coordinated a collaborative, community-based planning process resulting in the creation of a more environmentally sound plan that created new affordable housing without displacing people from the community.

Yolanda, who lost a son to asthma, struggled mightily to ensure that other families would not have to suffer such a tragedy. She became a leader in the South Bronx environmental movement which has blossomed in recent years. Her organization joined the Organization of Waterfront Neighborhoods to fight the expansion and proliferation of waste transfer stations in the South Bronx and teamed up with the South Bronx Clean Air Coalition to shut down a medical waste incinerator that had fouled the air for ten years. In 2000, as a tireless leader in the fight to keep New York City’s children safe from asthma, Yolanda established a multi-year partnership with New York University and local nonprofits to conduct research and community education about the causes of the asthma crisis.

No city, state or nation could exist without our public health. The assistance of Ms. Yolanda Garcia will be missed. She knew her.

HON. LOIS CAPPS
OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, March 3, 2005

Mrs. CAPPS. Mr. Speaker, today I rise to pay tribute to the UCSC Men’s soccer team, following a spectacular 2004 season where they placed 2nd in the NCAA.

The Gauchos’ Men’s soccer team finished their remarkable season with a 21–3–1 record. In addition, four players were honored on the 2004 NCAA Men’s Soccer College Cup All–Tournament Team. Their season, as well as their performance in the NCAA Championship match, gives all UCSC students, faculty and Alumni something to be very proud of. During the final home matches, community members and students alike flocked to UCSC to support the Gauchos. The talent of this team has certainly brought UCSC to the forefront of Men’s soccer, proving again that UCSC should be known not only for its academics and physical beauty, but also for its many outstanding athletic programs.

Mr. Speaker, raw talent and the ability to beat virtually any opponent are not the only attributes of this team, however. The Gauchos are also community volunteers, setting a positive example for their peers and for younger players in the Santa Barbara community. They recently participated in a fitness day at Santa Barbara City College, aimed at encouraging kids and adults alike to maintain healthy lifestyles. Many young people in the Santa Barbara community love to play soccer and being able to interact with the UCSC players is a wonderful opportunity. As a nurse, I understand firsthand the importance of encouraging our youth to get physically active.

INTRODUCTION OF PITKIN COUNTY LAND EXCHANGE LEGISLATION

HON. MARK UDALL OF COLORADO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, March 3, 2005

Mr. UDALL of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I am today introducing a bill to provide for completion of a land exchange that involves Pitkin County, Colorado, on one hand and two federal agencies—the Forest Service and BLM—on the other.

The bill would direct a land exchange under which the county would transfer two items to the Forest Service: A 35-acre tract (known as the “Ryan property”) near the ghost town of Ashcroft, and 18.2 acres (patented mining claims) on Smuggler Mountain near Aspen, Colorado.

In return, the Federal government would transfer to the county 3 items: A 5.5 acre tract south of Aspen known as the “Wildwood” parcel, which the county will convey to private ownership after reserving a permanent public easement for a trail; 5.92 acres in 12 scattered locations on Smuggler Mountain that abut or are near lands now owned by the county; a 40-acre tract of BLM land along the Crystal River, which will be subject to a permanent conservation easement limiting future use to recreational, fish and wildlife, and open space purposes.

The bill requires strict appraisals of all properties involved. If the lands going to the county are worth less than the county is giving to the federal government, the county will waive additional payment. On the other hand, if the lands provided by the county are worth less than those the county is to receive, the county will either pay cash to equalize or will convey an additional tract (160 acres in the Sellers’ Meadow area near Hagerman Pass) to make up the difference.

The bill is fair, balanced, and not controversial. A similar measure (S. 100) has been introduced by Colorado’s senior Senator, Wayne Allard, with the cosponsorship of Senator Ken Salazar.

For the information of our colleagues, here is a summary of the legislation and a list of groups that have expressed their support for its enactment.

SUMMARY OF PROPOSED PITKIN COUNTY (RYAN PROPERTY) LAND EXCHANGE

UNITED STATES GETS
35 acre Ryan Property in the White River National Forest near Ashcroft and Aspen, Colorado. Forest Service acquisition of property will complete the Ashcroft Preservation Project, which was initiated by the Forest Service in 1980 to consolidate National Forest land ownership in and around the historic Ashcroft Townsite. The Ryan Property and surrounding lands are: (1) an extremely popular sightseeing and recreation destination; (2) heavily used for Nordic skiing on public and private trails associated with the Ashcroft touring center; (3) abut the popular Cathedral Lake Trail and Trailhead; and (4) contain historic structures associated with the World War II 10th Mountain Division.

18.2 acre Grand Turk and Pontiac patented mining claims on Smuggler Mountain directly above Aspen. Smuggler Mountain is a heavily used recreation area where the Forest Service is trying to consolidate its ownership, where feasible.

PITKIN COUNTY GETS
5.5 acre “Wildwood” parcel south of Aspen, which will be re-conveyed by the County into private ownership. Conveyance will be subject to a permanent public easement for the East of Aspen Trail.

5.92 acres in 12 scattered mining claim remnants on Smuggler Mountain. The 12 parcels (ranging from 1.5 to 0.02 acres in size) abut or are near existing County owned lands.

40 acre BLM parcel (Parcel 79) along the Crystal River near Carbondale, Colorado. Pitkin County must grant BLM a permanent conservation easement on the parcel for continued public access, and limiting future use to recreational, fish and wildlife and open space purposes only. Easement requirement will not reduce parcel’s exchange value.

ADDITIONAL EXCHANGE PROVISIONS

Exchange values will be deemed equal if Forest Service appraiser determines approximate equal value. If the appraiser determines the County to be owed Pitkin County, the County will additionally convey to the Forest Service the 160 acre Sellar Park property,
Mr. COSTA. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor the memory of Don DeMers of Fresno, California. Mr. DeMers, Fresno County Transportation Authority Executive Director, recently lost his battle against cancer.

Mr. DeMers had a long list of work experience in various places. Prior to becoming Administrator of the Fresno County Transportation Authority, Don was the Manager of Transportation Planning and Implementation in Anchorage, Alaska. He served as the Executive Director of the Bi-State Planning Agency in Minnesota, and as a stockbroker for Shearson Lehman in Minnesota. Don even spent time in Washington, DC, as a law clerk to a U.S. Attorney.

He was a Phi Beta Kappa graduate of University of North Dakota. Don holds a PhD in Political Science, and a Master’s in Political Science/Public Administration. After his education in North Dakota, he attended Georgetown Law School in Washington, DC, and the New York Institute of Finance in New York.

Mr. DeMers is survived by his wife, Debrah; sons Robert and wife Dawn, and Tony and wife Teena; daughters Barbarah and husband Michael Livorsi and Tressa and Crystal DeMers; his “pride and joys,” eight grandchildren, Nicholas, Alexis, Brogen, Tyler, Lauren, Destany, Kaitlyn and one on the way; and his brothers Jim, Denny and Mike.

Don had a zest for life and a smile and sense of humor that made everybody laugh. He liked skiing, dancing, reading and biking, but most of all, golf with Deborah. All who knew and loved him will miss Don greatly.

Ms. KAPTUR. Mr. Speaker, I am honored to recognize an historic anniversary in my district in Northern Ohio. St. Vincent Mercy Medical Center celebrates 150 years of service. On Wednesday, February 23, 2005, the hospital will mark this sesquicentennial with a dedication and blessing of its Historic Donor Wall and Marguerite d’Youville Sanctuary.

In 1737 Marguerite d’Youville and three friends dedicated their lives to serving the poor. They established a Hospital General, a hostel for the destitute. Because the hospital only admitted men at first, Marguerite took poor women into her home. In 1747, Marguerite and her companions took over the administration of the Hospital General, restored the buildings and provided a combination veterans’ hospital, nursing home, orphanage, mental asylum, VD clinic, reformatory for prostitutes, and overflow ward in case of epidemics. The religious order Marguerite thus established was the Grey Nuns. Their successors continue her work.

In 1855 four courageous and idealistic Grey Nuns took their lead from their foundress and... traveled from Montreal with a mission to care for the sick and needy in Toledo, Ohio. St. Vincent’s hospital was summarily established. The nuns’ mission was soon broadened to include the education of health care professionals, patients and families. One hundred and fifty years later, St. Vincent Mercy Medical Center still holds fast to the ideals of Sr. Marguerite d’Youville in its unwavering mission to provide dignified and quality medical care to those in need.

Today, St. Vincent’s is a member of the Mercy Health Partners system, a faith-based consortium of six hospitals in Northwest Ohio and Southeast Michigan. St. Vincent’s is a Level I certified trauma center, Life Flight air ambulance base, home of the Mercy Children’s Hospital and state of the art acute care hospital. With 3,500 employees including almost 1,000 physicians on staff, it is one of our region’s primary employers. Nearly 500 volunteers augment the staff.

St. Vincent’s has not only taken its hospital mission to heart, but also its role as a community leader. The hospital has transformed the near-downtown corridor on which it is located and maintains an influential and benevolent partnership with the neighborhood in which it is situated.

St. Vincent Mercy Medical Center celebrates 150 years caring for the poor and sick by living Christ’s teaching that “Whatever you do to the least among you, that you do unto Me,” as the recent photo of Sister Lucius in the hospital atrium, and the scholarship foundation in her name, attest. Onward!

PUBLIC TRANSPORTATION SYSTEMS VULNERABILITY AND REDUCTION ACT OF 2005

HON. JUANITA MILLENDER-McDONALD
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, March 3, 2005

Ms. MILLENDER-McDONALD. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to introduce the Public Transportation Systems Vulnerability and Reduction Act of 2005.

Securing our Nation’s public transportation system has been a top priority of mine. For years, governments around the world have recognized that public transportation is a major terrorist target. Until 9/11 the United States has been largely spared the kinds of terrorist campaigns waged against public surface transportation. However, we cannot wait for a tragedy to happen before we address our vulnerabilities.

An October 2001 study released by the Metra Institute, Protecting Public Surface Transportation Against Terrorism and Serious Crime: An Executive Overview cites that between 1920 and 2000 there have been approximately 900 terrorist attacks and other significant criminal incidents involving public surface transportation systems.

However, all but 14 of these attacks occurred after 1970, the year that marks the beginning of modern terrorism.

Attacks against transportation and transportation infrastructures accounted for 42 percent of all international terrorist attacks, according to the most recent statistics provided by the USDOT Office of Intelligence and Security in 1998.

These statistics play out before our eyes on CNN. Last year alone, we witnessed attacks on public transportation systems in Madrid and Moscow, not to mention the ongoing attacks in the Middle East.

My legislation, The Public Transportation Systems Vulnerability and Reduction Act of 2005 will provide our Nation’s transportation systems and workers with the training and funding to help protect our homeland. This legislation will provide funding for:

- Ongoing vulnerability assessments which will build continuously on information collected, allowing for easier implementation of new technologies that will assist in averting terrorist attacks on all modes of public transportation.
- Training programs for frontline transit employees, ensuring that employees, who are the eyes and ears of transportation systems, are prepared to respond to emergency situations.
- Development and implementation of local and regional emergency preparedness plans that fully utilize a community’s transportation resources.

Provides $25 million a year, $100 million over 4 years for emergency preparedness and response training.

I ask my colleagues to join me in working to provide our Nation’s transportation systems and employees the resources to protect our communities.

I urge you to support the Public Transportation Systems Vulnerability and Reduction Act of 2005.

AMERICA’S MISLEADING GAS MILEAGE STICKERS

HON. NANCY L. JOHNSON OF CONNECTICUT
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, March 3, 2005

Mrs. JOHNSON of Connecticut. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to address an issue that should trouble America’s consumers. Seventeen million new cars were sold in 2004 and not one had accurate gas mileage rates posted on the window stickers.

Unbeknownst to America’s drivers, the gas mileage stickers on their cars are wrong, inflating fuel economy figures by up to 300 percent. Worse, the EPA has known their tests are to blame. The tests used by the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) to measure fuel economy are 30 years old and are based on car technology from the late 1970s and 1980s.

The bogus tests results mislead consumers into thinking they are getting better mileage on the road, and a better deal at the gas pump—than they really are. This year alone, American consumers will spend about $20 billion more on gasoline than they expect because of the misleading gas mileage stickers.

Talk about a pocket-book issue.

Because changing these tests requires a change in the law, I am proud to introduce the “Fuel Efficiency Truth-in-Advertising Act” with my colleague Congressman RUSH Holt. My legislation requires the EPA to update its fuel economy testing procedures to reflect today’s “real life” circumstances and the use of “real world” gasoline. If the legislation is enacted, when it says 35 miles-per-gallon on the sticker, drivers will get 35 miles-per-gallon on the road.

An example of a flaw in EPA’s current method is underestimating highway speeds. The EPA highway cycle assumes an average speed of 48 mph and a top speed of 60 mph. Many State highway speed limits are set at or above 65 mph and government data indicates fuel economy can drop by 17 percent for modern vehicles that drive at 70 mph instead of 55 mph.

Another flaw is in the type of fuel used for engine certification. Fuels used for engine certification tests are artificial. The EPA uses high-refined fuel, not what we consume in our cars every day. Using these artificial fuels may be fine from a laboratory standpoint, but they don’t help drivers when they overstate actual fuel economy.

There’s more. The tests assume acceleration and braking rates that don’t match reality. They overstated trip lengths. They underestimate increased idling and stop-and-go traffic in our expanding urban areas. They keep the air conditioner off, while flipping on the A/C reduces gas mileage by 2.5 miles-per-gallon.

We would not tolerate 30-year-old tests for anything—so why do we allow it for gas mileage? Make no mistake, this is a pocketbook issue for Americans who are pinched by the high price of gasoline. The easy and commonsense steps this bill calls for will give every future owner the truth about how their car will perform, and the truth about how much they’re going to spend on gasoline every year.

AAA, the Nation’s largest auto club with 47 million members, supports this bill. So does the Union of Concerned Scientists, the Sierra Club and a host of consumer, scientific, and environmental groups.

This broad-based and diverse coalition believes, as I do, that Americans deserve better than the results of a 30-year-old test. We recognize that buying a car is a huge investment in most Americans’ lives, and the government should be helping consumers make smart choices, not misleading them.

And so I ask my colleagues to join with me in supporting the Fuel Efficiency Truth in Advertising Act. Do it for the hundreds of thousands of car owners in your districts who deserve the truth—not bogus test results.

INTRODUCTION OF RESOLUTION OF INQUIRY REGARDING “JEFF GANNON”

HON. JOHN CONYERS, JR.
OF MICHIGAN
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, March 3, 2005

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, I introduce this resolution to inquire whether the Justice and Homeland Security Departments were abused in favoring Mr. Guckert, a fake reporter from a fake news organization. I had hoped that the half dozen congressional and Senate requests for information would have been sufficient. However, the lack of cooperation from the White House and its agencies have not even merited a response from the White House or its agencies.

For nearly 3 years, the White House has been granting Mr. Guckert, a right-wing activist with no press credentials, access to the White House briefing room and presidential press conferences. This appears to violate long standing practices of carefully screening contacts with the President.
Mr. Speaker, we should all speak out against China’s proposed law. It is a bad law that we must attend to for the benefit of all Americans, allowing both to reach for the highest rung on the economic ladder and provide for a family.

According to the U.S. Department of Education, those with limited English proficiency are less likely to be employed, less likely to be employed continuously, tend to work in the least desirable sectors and earn less than those who speak English. Annual earnings by limited English proficient adults were approximately half of the earnings of the total population surveyed.

Few doubt this reality. In a 1995 poll by the Luntz Research firm, more than 80 percent of immigrants supported making English the official language of the United States. They are joined by 86 percent of all Americans who agree with English as the official language of the United States.

Similar English legislation in the 104th Congress (H.R. 123) drew 197 bipartisan House cosponsors and won a bipartisan vote on August 1, 1996. That spirited effort, led by our late colleague Bill Emerson, is unfinished business that we must attend to for the benefit of all Americans.

I urge my colleagues to co-sponsor The English Language Unity Act of 2005 in the House of Representatives.

ENGLISH LANGUAGE UNITY ACT OF 2005

HON. STEVE KING OF IOWA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, March 3, 2005

Mr. KING of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, I have introduced legislation to make English the official language of the United States Government.
RECOGNIZING NATIONAL KIDNEY MONTH

HON. MARK STEVEN KIRK
OF ILLINOIS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, March 3, 2005

Mr. KIRK. Mr. Speaker, as co-Chairman of the Congressional Kidney Caucus, I would like to recognize that March is National Kidney Month. The Kidney Caucus partners with groups such as the National Kidney Foundation to increase public awareness of risk factors for chronic kidney disease and emphasize the importance of early detection. Anyone with high blood pressure, diabetes or a family history of kidney disease is at risk.

This March, the National Kidney Foundation is urging all those at risk to undergo a kidney screening. Simple urine and blood tests during a routine doctor’s visit can show the earliest signs of kidney damage. According to the National Kidney Foundation, more than 20 million Americans—that’s one in nine adults—have chronic kidney disease. More than 25 million more are at increased risk for developing the disease. Nearly half of all Americans with chronic kidney disease are unaware of their condition.

Early detection and intervention can halt the progression of the disease before it reaches kidney failure, at which point there are no other alternatives but dialysis or transplantation. Catching kidney disease at an early stage saves patient’s lives and saves the taxpayer tremendous sums otherwise spent on costly dialysis and transplant procedures. Please help me honor National Kidney Month by urging those at risk for kidney disease to take this threat seriously and undergo a screening.

LETTER FROM THE MENTAL HEALTH LIAISON GROUP

HON. TED STRICKLAND
OF OHIO
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, March 3, 2005

Mr. STRICKLAND. Mr. Speaker, I would like to submit the following letter for the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD:

DEAR REPRESENTATIVES STRICKLAND AND MURPHY:

The undersigned organizations in the Mental Health Liaison Group, representing patients, health professionals and family members, are pleased to support your legislation, the Medicare Mental Health Co-payment Equity Act. Under your legislation, Medicare’s historic discriminatory 50 percent coinsurance for outpatient mental health care would be reduced over six years to 20 percent, bringing the coinsurance into line with that required of Medicare beneficiaries for other Part B services.

Simply put, current law discriminates against Medicare beneficiaries who seek treatment for mental illness. This affects elderly and non-elderly Medicare beneficiaries alike when they seek mental health care. According to the 1999 U.S. Surgeon General’s report on mental health, almost 20 percent of elderly individuals have some type of mental disorder uncommon in typical aging. In addition, elderly individuals have the highest rate of depression in the U.S., often the result of depression. The Surgeon General’s report states, “Late-life depression is particularly costly because of the excess disability that it causes and its deleterious interaction with physical health. Older primary care patients with depression visit the doctor and emergency rooms more often, use more medications, incur higher outpatient charges, and stay longer at the hospital.”

The 50 percent coinsurance requirement also is unfair to the non-elderly disabled Medicare population. Because many of these individuals have severe mental illnesses combined with low incomes and high medical expenses, a 50 percent coinsurance obligation is a serious patient burden. For elderly and non-elderly Medicare beneficiaries alike, Medicare is a critical source of care. Your legislation to ensure that Medicare beneficiaries needing mental health care incur only the same cost-sharing obligations as required of all other Medicare patients would end the statutory discrimination against Medicare beneficiaries seeking treatment for mental disorders.

Thank you for your leadership in addressing this important issue for the nation’s 40 million Medicare patients.

Mr. CLEAVER. Mr. Speaker, on Wednesday March 2, 2005, I was unable to cast my vote on H.R. 27, the Job Training Improvement Act. HONORING THE ACHIEVEMENTS OF WEBB COUNTY COMMISSIONER JUDITH GUTIERREZ

HON. HENRY CUELLAR
OF TEXAS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, March 3, 2005

Mr. CUELLAR. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor the important achievements of Judith G. Gutierrez in Laredo, TX in my Congressional District.

Judith G. Gutierrez (Pct.2) was elected in 1991 and she held the office for two consecutive terms. Re-elected in 1999 and again in 2002, she will begin her fourth term of office in January 2003. Throughout her tenure, Gutierrez has taken a hands-on approach to colonia issues.

Former Attorney General Dan Morales appointed Commissioner Gutierrez to the state’s Colonia Task Force. Former Governor Ann Richards selected Gutierrez to chair the Regional Review Committee for for the federally funded projects such as Community Development Block Grants (CDBG) and colonia set-aside funds. She served in this capacity for four years.

Commissioner Gutierrez worked with State legislators in 1989 to pass Senate Bill 2, which created the first colonia legislation, implementing rules to limit haphazard development. Senate Bill 2 also authorized the mechanism needed to provide funding for water and sewer improvements. To ensure regulatory enforcement at the local level, she created the Webb County’s first Planning Department. This department has been recognized by the Texas Attorney General’s office under Generals Morales and Cornyn as the model for colony regulation and enforcement.

Total grant funds for projects initiated in Webb County during Gutierrez’s term in office exceeds $100 million. Since 1992, Commissioner Gutierrez has secured more than $25 million in colonia improvement funds for her precinct alone. Projects have ranged from infrastructure—water, storm drainage, and community centers to educational and health initiatives.

In 1994, Commissioner Gutierrez was Governor Ann Richards’ appointee to the South Texas Regional Prosperity Plan and also served on the Environmental Transition Team organized to consolidate the Texas Air Quality Control Board, the Water Commission and selected divisions of the Texas Health Department. In 2003 Governor Rick Perry appointed Commissioner Judith Gutierrez to the South Texas Regional Review Committee.
TRIBUTE TO AM 1490 WMBM, SOUTH FLORIDA’S FIRST BLACK-OWNED AND OPERATED RADIO STATION—NEW BIRTH BROADCAST CORPORATION CELEBRATES 10 YEARS IN RADIO

HON. KENDRICK B. MEEK OF FLORIDA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, March 3, 2005

Mr. MEEK of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to extend my congratulations to Bishop Victor T. Curry, D.D., Min, President and CEO, and to everyone at the New Birth Broadcasting Corporation as they celebrate their 10th year in radio.

Celebratory events will begin with a community worship service at 7 p.m. on March 9th and will feature Pastor Jeffrey A. Johnson, Sr. of the Eastern Star Church of Indianapolis, Indiana.

Since the purchase of AM 1490 WMBM, the landscape of gospel radio has changed dramatically. WMBM has received local as well as national recognition for its contribution to our local community, for it not only plays the best in gospel music, but it also provides its listeners with late-breaking news and inspirational, life-changing programming. WMBM, the first black-owned and operated station in South Florida, is one of the first radio stations to stream its broadcast via the internet.

WMBM also publishes a quarterly nationally distributed magazine and an annual directory of black-owned and supported businesses.

I want to extend my warmest congratulations to Bishop Curry and his staff for doing such an important job so well, and my best wishes for another outstanding decade in broadcasting.

JOB TRAINING IMPROVEMENT ACT OF 2005

SPEECH OF
HON. ROBERT C. SCOTT OF VIRGINIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, March 2, 2005

The House in Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union, having under consideration the bill (H.R. 27) to enhance the workforce investment system of the Nation by strengthening one-stop career centers, providing for more effective governance arrangements, promoting access to a more comprehensive array of employment, training, and related services, establishing a targeted approach to serving youth, and improving performance accountability, and for other purposes:

Mr. SCOTT of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I submit the following information regarding H.R. 27 for the RECORD.

March 2, 2005.

THE REAL DEMOCRATIC RECORD ON CHARITABLE CHOICE,

DEAR COLLEAGUE: I wanted to be sure you had a copy of the Real Democratic Record on Charitable Choice. This is helpful as we debate H.R. 27, containing a vast expansion of Charitable Choice to federally-funded job training programs for the first time since 1965.

THE 200 DEMOCRATIC PLATFORM

“We honor the central place of faith in the lives of our people. Like our Founders, we believe that our nation, our communities, and our lives are made vastly stronger and richer by faith and the countless acts of justice and mercy it inspires. We will strengthen the role of faith-based organizations in meeting challenges like homelessness, youth violence, and other social problems. At the same time, we will honor First Amendment protections and not act in a manner to be used to proselytize or discriminate. Throughout history, communities of faith have brought comfort to the afflicted and shaped movements for progress. We believe they will continue to do so, and we will always protect all Americans’ freedom to worship.”

THE CLINTON ADMINISTRATION RECORD ON CHARITABLE CHOICE

1996—The Clinton Administration submitted amendments as part of its technical corrections package to Congress regarding concerns over the constitutionality of Charitable Choice provisions contained in Welfare Reform. They filed the following comments with the amendment: “[P]rovisions of sec. 104 and its legislative history could be read to be inconsistent with the constitutional limits. . . . We recommend amending sec. 104 to clarify that it does not compel or allow States to provide TANF benefits through pervasively sectarian organizations and as permitting Federal, State, and local governments to disburse CSBG funds to take into account the structure and operations of a religious organization in determining whether such an organization is pervasively sectarian.”

2000—The Clinton Administration issued a signing statement placing limitations on the Charitable Choice provisions contained in the Community Services Block Grant: “The Department of Justice advises, however, that the provision that allows religiously affiliated organizations to be providers under CSBG would be unconstitutional if and to the extent it were construed to permit governmental funding of organizations that do not or cannot separate their religious functions from their secular functions. Accordingly, I construe the Act as forbidding the funding of pervasively sectarian organizations as defined by the courts. . . .”

Very truly yours,

ROBERT C. “BOBBY” SCOTT,
Member of Congress.
H.R. 27 fails to make meaningful improvements to the Workforce Investment Act (WIA) that would enhance the training and career opportunities of unemployed workers. Instead, the law would eliminate the dislocated worker training program, undermine state rapid response systems, end the federal-state labor exchange system, roll back protections against religious discrimination in hiring by job training providers, and potentially undermine the stability of other important programs.

In particular, we are concerned about the following provisions in H.R. 27:

NEW BLOCK GRANT

H.R. 27 consolidates into a single block grant the WIA funds associated with worker programs with the Wagner-Peyser employment service program and reemployment services for unemployment insurance recipients. In doing so, it will eliminate training assistance specifically targeted to workers dislocated by off-shoring and other economic changes, pit different types of workers against each other, and lead to further funding reductions. The block grant also eliminates the statewide job service, which provides a uniform statewide system for matching employers, workers, and unemployed workers. Eliminating the employment service, which is financed with revenue from the unemployment insurance (UI) trust fund, breaks the connection between the unemployment program and undermines the UI “work test,” which ensures that UI recipients return to work as quickly as possible.

INFRASTRUCTURE AND CORE SERVICES FUNDING

A principal criticism of WIA has been the substantial decline in actual training compared to its predecessor, the Job Training Partnership Act. While there are various reasons for the reduction in training, including the sequence of services requirement in current law, the use of WIA resources by local boards and operators to build new one-stop facilities, without any limitation, has contributed substantially to the decline in training. This is despite the fact that many WIA partner programs also contribute operating funds to one-stop operations.

H.R. 27 gives governors even broader discretion to transfer additional resources from the WIA system to pay for WIA infrastructure and core services costs—without any assurance that more training would result. These programs include the vocational rehabilitation program, veterans employment programs, adult education, the Perkins post-secondary career and technical education programs, unemployment insurance, trade adjustment assistance, Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TANF), and, if they are partners, employment and training programs including the proposed state and local market demonstration and宗教就业的歧视。(PRA) demonstrations even though the Department of Labor recently initiated a PRA demonstration without strong interest among states. Although none of these states would have participated, only seven are doing so. Since this demonstration already is in process, we see no justification for this provision and can only surmise that it is an attempt to implement PRAs more broadly, despite a lack of Congressional support for a full-scale program in the past.

Unlike current WIA training programs, the PRAs would limit the cost of training that an unemployment insurance recipient can receive and would bar individual from WIA training services for a year after the PRA account is established. This is the wrong way to go. With longterm unemployment at historic levels, there is far greater need for continued unemployment benefits for the long-term unemployed who have found it so difficult to become reemployed.

RELIGIOUS-BASED EMPLOYMENT DISCRIMINATION

H.R. 27 repeals longstanding civil rights protections that prohibit religious-based employment discrimination by job training providers. These protections have been included in job training programs, which received bipartisan support, since 1982. At no time have the civil rights provisions prohibited religious organizations from effective participation in federal job training programs. This rollback of civil rights protections is especially incongruous in a program designed to provide employment and career opportunities in an evenhanded manner and should be rejected.

WIA PLUS PROPOSAL

The Administration has proposed giving Governors authority to merge five additional programs into the WIA block grant. The proposal would eliminate specialized assistance for unemployed jobseekers and homeless veterans, critical job training services for workers under the Trade Adjustment Assistance Act whose jobs have been outsourced or lost due to foreign competition, and specialized counseling and customized help for people with disabilities through state vocational rehabilitation agencies. These individuals would have to compete with each other for a declining share of resources without the protection and requirements under current law. Furthermore, the proposal abrogates accountability for the expenditures of federal taxpayer dollars by eliminating program reporting requirements. We strongly urge you to oppose any effort to adopt this misguided plan.

In summary, H.R. 27 strays far from the appropriate mission for federal job training programs of enhancing training opportunities for workers and providing services for employers. We strongly urge you to oppose this legislation unless amendments are adopted to delete the block grant, PRA demonstration and religious-based discrimination provisions and to modify the infrastructure provisions as recommended.

Dear Representative: On behalf of the American Humanist Association, the oldest and largest organization in the nation, I write in opposition to the Job Training Improvement Act (H.R. 27). The Act is included in legislation reauthorizing the Workforce Investment Act of 1998, which created the main job training program in the United States.

The Job Training Improvement Act eliminates the nondiscrimination provision included in the Job Training Partnership Act of 1982 that was signed into law by President Ronald Reagan in 1982 under the Job Training Partnership Act of 1982, these job training programs have in-

For these reasons, OMB Watch encourages you to vote “YES” on the Scott Amendment and “NO” on final passage if the Scott Amendment fails. VOTE “NO” ON WIA REAUTHORIZATION UNLESS SCOTT AMENDMENT PASSES! PROTECT CIVIL RIGHTS—STOP FEDERAELY FUNDED RELIGIOUS DISCRIMINATION.

Re Scott Amendment to H.R. 27, the Jobs Training Improvement Act.

Dear Representative: OMB Watch strongly urges you to support the Scott Amendment to the Jobs Training Improvement Act. The Scott Amendment will restore civil rights protections to people wishing to be employed by religious organizations participating in federally funded programs.

The need for the Scott Amendment is underscored by a decision made by the Supreme Court in Chief Justice Rehnquist’s majority opinion in Bowen v. Kendrick, 487 U.S. 589 (1988). The Court stated that although the Constitution does not bar religious organizations from participating in federal programs, it requires (1) that no one participating in a federal program can “discriminate on the basis of religion” and (2) that all federal programs must be carried out in a “lawful, secular manner.” Id. at 609, 612.

H.R. 27 seeks to codify discrimination in hiring for federally funded positions by religious organizations to provide essential government services while maintaining a commitment to protecting civil rights and religious liberty.

VOTE “YES” ON THE SCOTT AMENDMENT; VOTE “NO” ON FINAL PASSAGE IF THE SCOTT AMENDMENT FAILS.

Although religious employers have the right under Title VII to apply religious tests to employees, the Constitution requires that the direct receipt and administration of federal funds remove that exemption. In addition, the federal government has constitutional obligations reinforced by Bowen v. Kendrick to refrain from religious discrimination. The Scott Amendment will restore the civil rights provisions into H.R. 27.

In addition, the federal government has constitutional obligations reinforced by Bowen v. Kendrick to refrain from religious discrimination. Maintaining the separation between church and state is fundamental to maintaining the religious freedoms of all Americans. However, this can not be accomplished when organizations receiving federal funds are allowed to deny employment opportunities based upon an individual’s religious beliefs.

There is no need to exempt religious organizations from anti-discrimination laws in order to protect the religious identity of that organization. Provisions already exist that allow an organization that is the recipient of federal funds to separate its religious content from the provision of services through the creation of an independent 501(c)(3) organization. This allows the religious organization to maintain its religious identity without government interference, while also providing needed services in the community.

Any exemption for religious organizations receiving federal funds should not be permitted for it would undermine a half-century of public policy aimed at protecting individuals from discrimination in the workplace, and further erode the fundamental protections against discrimination based on religious affiliation that are absolutely central to our democracy.

We ask that you uphold the religious liberties of all Americans and not allow federal funding of employment discrimination under H.R. 27. Therefore, we strongly urge you to support the Scott amendment, which may be offered on the floor, to restore current law and consolidate federal civil rights protections within the Job Training Improvement Act. Furthermore, we ask that you vote no on the final passage of H.R. 27 if this amendment is not adopted. Thank you.

Sincerely,

RALPH G. NEAS,

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH (USA),

DEAR REPRESENTATIVE: As you consider H.R. 27 and the issue of Faith-Based Hiring, I would like to alert you that the official policy of the Presbyterian Church (USA) is to oppose the kind of discrimination that could arise in the name of religion through the passage of this bill. Religious freedom and liberty has been a key component of the beliefs held by members of this historic denomination.

On Charitable Choice/Faith Based Initiatives—The 1988 General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (USA) “has recognized for many years that, apart from question of constitutionality, the church faces serious issues related to its own liberty of faith and action when it receives government funds.” The 1989 General Assembly noted the distinction between “church-controlled” and “church-related” and urged that “temporary or permanent community agencies qualified to receive funds be established as a church initiative to maintain such programs,” and “if church control was temporarily necessary for start up or experimental programs, that any permanent program resulting . . . be removed from church control and put under the control of independent community-based bodies.” Holding that “in the compact of social services church agencies should accept necessary and proper governmental regulation and supervision . . .” (Minutes, 1988, p. 559).

Also, General Assembly policy has consistently stated that governmental agencies have the primary responsibility for caring for the poor, along with the private sector: The 1997 General Assembly stated (and the 1999 General Assembly reaffirmed), “that while the church, voluntary organizations, business, and government must work cooperatively for the good, persons and communities, the government must assume the primary role for providing direct assistance for the poor” (Minutes, 1997, pp. 550). The General Assembly has noted that the government is “clothing religion for the needy on its own.” The 1996 General Assembly asserted that “churches and charities, including many Presbyterian congregations and related organizations, have responded generously to growing hunger but do not have the capacity to replace public programs” (Minutes, 1996, p. 784).

As with all organizations, there will be those who may hold a differing view from that of the parent body. Congress may receive letters from organizations that may cause confusion about where the official policy of the Church is on this issue.

The General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church is the highest governing body of the 215 year denomination. There are approximately 1.1 million members. Please contact me if you have further questions.

RELIGIOUS ACTION CENTER OF REFORM JUDAISM,
Washington, DC, February 24, 2005.

DEAR REPRESENTATIVE: On behalf of the Union for Reform Judaism, whose 900 congregations across North America encompass 1.5 million Reform Jews, and the Central Conference of American Rabbis (CCAR) whose membership includes over 1800 Reform rabbis, I strongly urge you to oppose the Job Training and Improvement Act of 2005 (H.R. 27). H.R. 27 does not meet the job training needs of either job seekers or employers and would repeal civil rights laws by permitting government-funded faith-based job training programs to practice religious discrimination in employment.

H.R. 27 fails to make meaningful improvements to the Workforce Investment Act of 1998 and would weaken the federal government’s investment in job training programs. H.R. 27 consolidates several worker training programs into a single block grant and gives states broader discretion in their use of funds. Experience with this type of program has shown that this wider discretionary power is a precursor to federal funding cuts. Under WIA, states and local governments have also been allowed more discretion in the use of job training funding, and states have used this discretion to fund new job training facilities rather than focus on providing new services.

The Job Training and Investment Act would also allow civil rights laws by permitting government funded faith-based job training programs to engage in religious discrimination when making employment decisions. This program contained the very language which has traditionally protected people of faith and goodwill from religious employment discrimination. The bill states, “shall not apply to a recipient of financial assistance under this title that is a religious corporation, association, educational institution, or society, with respect to the employment of individuals of a particular religion . . .

This provision represents a dramatic shift in federal employment policy as it repeals longstanding civil rights protections which have traditionally protected people of faith and goodwill from religious employment discrimination. Since its inception in 1982, when it was called the Job Training Partnership Act (JTPA), this program has been the largest Federal employment training program in the nation, serving dislocated workers, homeless individuals, economically disadvantaged adults, youths and older workers. When signed into law by President Ronald Reagan, this program contained the very language protecting against religious discrimination that H.R. 27 seeks to repeal.

As an organization comprised of 150,000 people of faith and goodwill spanning over 70 faith traditions, I urge you to support the Scott amendment to the Job Training Improvement Act/H.R. 27 that would restore civil rights protections. If an amendment like this fails, I urge you to oppose the Job Training Improvement Act/H.R. 27 because it is an unjustified assault on religious liberty and civil rights protections.

Section 127, entitled “Non-Discrimination” exempts religious organizations that receive Federal funds from the prohibition of discrimination that is standard practice for all other organizations that contract with the federal government. Specifically, under the subsections entitled “Exemptions,” “Discrimination Regarding Participation, Benefits and Employment,” and “Exemption for Religious Organizations,” the bill states, that standard nondiscrimination policies ‘shall not apply to a recipient of financial assistance under this title that is a religious corporation, association, educational institution, or society,’ with respect to the employment of individuals of a particular religion.

DEAR MEMBERS OF CONGRESS: I write to you today as the president of The Interfaith Alliance, a nonpartisan, national grassroots organization dedicated to the positive and healing role of religion in public life, to urge you to support the amendment, offered by Representative Bobby Scott (D-VA), to the Job Training Improvement Act/H.R. 27 that would restore civil rights protections. If an amendment like this fails, I urge you to oppose the Job Training Improvement Act/H.R. 27 because it is an unjustified assault on religious liberty and civil rights protections.

UNITARIAN UNIVERSALIST ASSOCIATION OF CONGREGATIONS, WASHINGTON OFFICE FOR ADVOCACY, Washington, DC.

To: Members of the House of Representatives,

DEAR REPRESENTATIVE: I write on behalf of over 1,000 congregations that make up the Unitarian Universalist Association of Congregations (UUA). Unitarian Universalists have a long and proud history of opposing the convergence of religion and state in ways that compromise both entities. I write today to urge you to oppose provisions in H.R. 27, the Job Training Improvement Act that would do just that.

We ask you to oppose religious discrimination in employment procedures included in Section 128 of H.R. 27. If Section 128 were included as written, the Jobs Improvement Act would allow religious organizations receiving government funds to discriminate on the basis of religion when hiring employees for taxpayer-funded positions. This would jeopardize both civil rights and religious freedom. We urge you to support the amendment filed by Representative Scott that would restore protections contained in current law that guard the freedom of religious belief and expression to all people seeking employment of federally funded positions.

While the Unitarian Universalist Association affirms the critical role of faith as a source of strength in our society, we firmly believe that all legally qualified social service providers should be considered for employment without the imposition of religious tests that would require accepting government funds, houses of worship, and should remain subject to government oversight, as well as government regulation, including compliance reviews, audits, and upholding the protections against civil rights violations such as religious discrimination.

If an amendment restoring current law by requiring federally funded religious organizations to comply with civil rights protections is not passed on the floor, we urge you to oppose H.R. 27, the Job Training Improvement Act of 2005. The protection of the religious expression of people of all faiths is the responsibility all Americans, including religious organizations such as ours and legislators such as yourself. We ask for your vote against religious discrimination in the workplace in order to protect the civil rights and religious freedom of all people and remain true to one of the core principles of our nation’s commitment to liberty for all.

Sincerely,

Rob Keithan, Director,

MEMBERS, House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

Re Support the Scott Amendment to H.R. 27, the Job Training Improvement Act of 2005, which would restore protections against discrimination in current law.

DEAR REPRESENTATIVE: On behalf of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP), the nation’s oldest, largest, and most widely recognized civil rights organization, I urge you, in the strongest terms possible to support the amendment being offered by Congressman Bobby Scott to H.R. 27 that would retain the civil rights protections when using federal funds in the current law. If the bill’s existing language becomes the law, protections that have been in place for decades will be eliminated and the result will be federally funded discrimination. Given the importance of this issue to the NAACP and our membership, I would also urge you to vote against final passage of the bill should the Scott amendment fail.

Because of our Nation’ssorry history of bigotry, for decades it has been illegal to discriminate in employment and make hiring decisions based on race or religion. The only exception in our lifetimes are organizations that are exempted from anti-discrimination provisions in programs using their own money; although until now they had to adhere to basic civil rights laws when using federal monies to support a program.

There should be no question that Faith Based institutions should, like all other recipients of federal funds, adhere to basic civil rights laws when using federal funds. It is a fundamental American principle that no citizen should have to pass someone else’s racial, ethnic or religious test to qualify for a taxpayer-funded job and has been the law since 1962 when our federally-funded national job training programs were consolidated under the Job Training Partnership Act. H.R. 27 would eliminate the protections and advancements in the current law, provisions which have been in place for decades.

Congressman Scott’s amendment would restore protections against religious discrimination in hiring for jobs funded through the Job Training Partnership Act. This amendment is consistent with the civil rights laws passed of the mid-1960’s and with the basic principles of our Constitution and would re-establish traditional employment rights, civil rights and anti-discrimination protections.

Make no mistake, the amendment of this provision will not make it easier for faith-based organizations to get federal contracts; they still need to apply, compete, and are subject to audit. Any program that can get funded under this bill can get funded anyway: Faith based organizations must simply comply with decades-old civil rights laws; they must not discriminate.

While there can be no question as to the invaluable role that faith-based organizations have played and continue to play in meeting many of the needs facing our nation today, it is also true that there are a few organizations which may, unfortunately, use religious discrimination as a shield for racial or gender discrimination. Thus I urge you, again in the strongest terms possible, to support Congressman Scott’s amendment and ensure that tax dollars are not being used to support discrimination.

Should you have any questions or comments on the NAACP position, I hope that you will feel free to contact me at (301) 469–2909. The NAACP considers this to be a very important civil rights vote, and your position will be relayed to our national membership.

Sincerely,

Hilary Shelton, Director,

DEAR REPRESENTATIVE: I am writing on behalf of the 1.4 million members of the American Federation of State, County, and Municipal Employees (AFSCME) to urge you to vote against H.R. 27, the “Job Training Improvement Act of 2005” and to oppose any effort to expand the block grant authority in the bill along the lines of the Administration’s “WIA Plus” proposal.

H.R. 27 fails to make improvements necessary to enhance the training and career opportunities of unemployed workers. Instead, this legislation contemplates that the dislocated worker training program, undermines state rapid response systems, ends the federal-state labor exchange system, rolls back protections against religious discrimination in hiring by job training providers, and potentially undermines the stability of other important related programs. It also threatens the unique employment service partnership that has served the nation well for over 70 years.

I especially caution that H.R. 27 terminates the U.S. Employment Service (ES) system by folding it into a block grant with the WIA dislocated worker and adult training programs. Funds from the federal Unemployment Insurance Trust Fund, the ES has been a key part of the unemployment insurance (UI) system since its inception.

Through state employment service agencies, the ES has administered the UI “work test” to determine whether UI claimants are actively working in order to be eligible for UI benefits.

It is highly doubtful that local one-stop centers with multiple mandates could administer re-employment services, claimants and the mandates of the UI law effectively. In addition, shifting the UI work test to state centers, where private companies can operate, would privatize an important eligibility function for the UI program and set the stage for privatizing the administration of UI benefits. This is especially troubling in light of the importance of preserving the confidentiality of employer wage records.

Eliminating the Employment Service also advances a major objective of the Administration: the devolution of the federal unemployment insurance to the states, in effect ending this critical countercyclical program as a national system. Legislation to reduce the Federal Unemployment Tax (FUTA) by 75% would undermine the insurance (UI) system since its inception.

By relying on funding transfers from these programs to guarantee resources for WIA partner programs, H.R. 27 will disrupt and weaken services provided by these non-WIA programs, which also will face substantial pressures for funding reductions in the next few years.

The infrastructure and related provisions begin the crumbling of funds from these non-WIA programs available for future block granting of these programs.

Any doubts that this is the long term objective should be dispelled by the Administration’s request to modify H.R. 27 to give governors authority to add up to five additional “partner programs” to the block... grant created in the legislation (“WIA Plus”). These programs include vocational rehabilitation, trade adjustment assistance, veterans employment and training programs, adult education and food stamp employment and training programs.

In addition to the block grant strategy in the legislation, H.R. 27 includes demonstration authority for the Department of Labor to operate “personal reemployment account” (PRA) demonstrations. The PRAs would be experiments in training that unemploy- ment insurance recipients can receive and bar them from receiving free WIA services for a year after the PRA account is es- tablished. In addition, a further restric- tion in the assistance the federal govern- ment provides workers, and, since the Labor Department already is running an experi- ment in seven states, they are entirely un- necessary.

Finally, the proposed PRAs or vouchers are complemented by the repeal of long- standing civil rights protections that pro- hibit religious-based employment discrimi- nation by job training providers. This roll- back of civil rights protections, designed to advance direct government funding of perva- sively religious institutions, overturns dec- ades of consensus on the need for non- discrimination in job training programs and should be rejected. We understand that Rep. Bobby Scott intends to offer an amendment that would restore to the bill the existing civil rights protections. We urge you to support this amendment.

In summary, H.R. 27 is a radical and par- tisan departure from previous workforce pol- icy. It transforms the original one-size-fits-all idea of a better-coordinated workforce system into a mechanism for reducing resources and block granting programs in the future. It would undermine the role of Congress in na- tional workforce policy, erode accountable- ability for the expenditure of workforce funds, and retreat from important civil rights protections that have enjoyed bipar- tisan support for over 25 years. AFSCME strongly urges you to vote against H.R. 27.

Sincerely,

CHARLES M. LOVELLES,
Director of Legislation.

AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR AND CONGRESS OF INDUSTRIAL OR-GANIZATIONS,

Washington, DC, February 17, 2005.

Honorable JOHN BOEHNER, Chairman, House Committee on Education and the Workforce, Washington, DC.

DEAR CHAIRMAN BOEHNER: On Thursday, February 17, the House Education and Work- force Committee will consider H.R. 27 to au- thorize the Workforce Investment Act. The AFL-CIO urges you to vote against this legislation, because it is a step backward in securing needed training and employment programs for our nation’s unemployed and disadvantaged workers.

Good job training programs support families are the foundation of a strong economy and a strong nation, and creating and sustaining good jobs is the first priority for these families. Effective and meaningful job training programs and income support for jobless workers combined with job search assistance are key components of a comprehensive job strategies. In the case of H.R. 27, we believe the direction it would take is the wrong way to go. We urge you to vote against H.R. 27.

ELIMINATION OF THE EMPLOYMENT SERVICE

The AFL-CIO opposes repeal of the Wag- ner-Peyser Act, called for under H.R. 27. Re- pealing the Wagner-Peyser Act eliminates the 68-year-old United States Employment Service (ES), a federal-state partnership that maintains a nationwide, free, publicly ad- ministered infrastructure to help unemployed and reemployed workers find jobs with seekers and employers. It is also the first step toward dismantling the critical and his- toric federal role in the nation’s unemploy- ment insurance system. It is time to move it over entirely to the states. Repealing the Wagner- Peyser Act and block granting ES funds will reduce, privatize and voucherize free public labor exchange services.

WIA BLOCK GRANT

H.R. 27 consolidates into a single block grant the WIA adult and displaced worker programs with the Wagner-Peyser Employ- ment Service program and reemployment services for unemployment insurance recipi- ents. In doing so, it destroys both the dis- located worker program, which has provided assistance to experienced workers perma- nently dislocated from their jobs, and the statewide job service, which provides a uni- form statewide system for matching employ- ers and jobseekers. The block grant will pit different types of workers against each other for assistance and lead to future funding re- ductions.

INFRASTRUCTURE FUNDING

H.R. 27 gives Governors broad discretion to transfer additional resources from the WIA partner programs to pay for WIA infrastruc- ture. This practice is without any assur- ance that more training would result. By relying on funding transfers from these programs, H.R. 27, guarantees WIA no funding that is contingent on a state’s performance in training activities and weakening services provided by these non-WIA programs. A more effective and simple solution to ensuring adequate train- ing services would be to require that a cer- tain percentage of WIA funds be used for training programs in the future. This would result in all of the long-term unemployed receiving training services that are funded at a consistent level.

PERSONAL REEMPLOYMENT ACCOUNTS

H.R. 27 includes a demonstration program for the Secretary to conduct “Personal Re- employment Account” (PRA) demonstra- tions even though the Department of Labor recently initiated a PRA demonstration without strong interest among the states. Unlike current WIA programs, the PRAs would limit the cost of training that an unemployment insurance recipient can receive and would bar the individual from WIA training an entire year after the PRA account is established. This is the wrong way to go. With long-term unemploy- ment at historically high levels, there is a much greater need for continued unemploy- ment benefits for the long-term unemployed who have found it so difficult to become re- employed.

RELIGIOUS-BASED EMPLOYMENT DISCRIMINATION

We are particularly concerned that this legislation would remove key civil rights protections for religious discrimination in publicly-funded programs. H.R. 27 repeals longstanding civil rights protections that prohibit religious-based employment discrimi- nation by job training providers.

Since taking office, President Bush has made real cuts in job training and assistance programs to help unemployed and under- employed workers, including Workforce In- vestment Act programs for adults and dis- located workers and the Employment Serv- ice. In inflation-adjusted dollars, these pro- posed cuts were in the 1998 Omnibus Approp-riations Act and the 1999 Omnibus Approp- riations Act, which included this nondiscrimination provision, received strong bipartisan support from both the House and Senate at the time of its passage. The 1998 Omnibus Approp- riations Act included its in- clusion in the 1992 JTPA, it has enjoyed bi- partisan support. This twenty-one year old

BAPTIST JOINT COMMITTEE

DEAR REPRESENTATIVE: This week you will be asked to consider the Job Training and Improvement Act (H.R. 27). We write to re-emphasize our support for this important legislation, to correct critical civil rights protections that have been proposed for a number of years. The 1980s-1990s proposal was not enacted. Since its inclusion in the 1998 Jobs Bill, the bill has been expanded.

The House to make the same decision to oppose Federal taxpayer support for religious discrimination by federally-funded employers.

H.R. 27 would reverse the government’s long-standing protection against federally funded discrimination

H.R. 27 attacks the very core of civil rights protections historically supported by the federal government for 60 years. One of the first success of the modern civil rights movement was a decision by President Franklin Roosevelt to bar federal contractors from discriminating on the basis of race, religion, or national origin. From that first presidential decision through the Supreme Court’s decision allowing the Federal government to give federal funds to Bob Jones University, which claimed a religious right to retain the tax benefits while pursuing racist practices, the Federal government has made the eradication of federal aid funded discrimination among its highest priorities.

In Bob Jones Univ. v. United States, 461 U.S. 574 (1983), the Supreme Court held that Federal government could deny a religiously-run university tax benefits because the university imposed a racially discriminatory requirement on students, at 604. The Court decided that the Federal government’s compelling interest in eradicating racial discrimination in education superceded any burden on the religiously-motivated ban on students interracial dating, id. at 604. H.R. 27 would allow a religious organization, such as Bob Jones University, that discriminates based on religion, to participate in Federal job training programs. In a disarming recent case, Bob Jones University could be denied tax benefits because of its racist policies toward its students, but could receive Federal job training money under H.R. 27 to discriminate against employees working in the Federal job training program simply because the employees do not meet Bob Jones University’s religious tests. Moreover, in the many religious organizations in which the employer invokes the Title VII exemption after receipt of government funds is insufficient to protect the university imposed a racially discriminatory requirement on students. H.R. 27 is inconsistent with the leading Supreme Court case on the use of federal funds by religious organizations that discriminate.

There is no meaningful difference between the government prohibiting tax benefits to organizations that discriminate based on race and the Workforce Investment Act’s statutory prohibition on discrimination based on religion in Federal job training programs. H.R. 27 is inconsistent with the leading Supreme Court case on the use of federal funds by religious organizations that discriminate.

There is little support for the anti-civil rights provision in the Senate

In the 108th Congress, the Senate passed its version of the bill that, in a bipartisan initiative, after stripping out any provisions that could have created any special advantages for federally-funded religious organizations. The sponsors of the legislation realized that a majority of the Senate supported the eradication of religious discrimination in federally-funded employment positions—and did not want to roll back any civil rights and religious freedom provisions that the Senate had supported.

The civil rights community joins a significant portion of the religious community in urging persons, a close nexus between the government and the private person’s activity can result in the courts treating the private person as a state actor. Rendell-Baker v. Kohn, 457 U.S. 830 (1982).

It is beyond question that the government itself cannot prefer members of a particular religion to work in a federally-funded program. The Equal Protection Clause subjects government action to an intentionality discrimination on the basis of religion to strict scrutiny. E.g., United States v. Batchelder, 442 U.S. 114, 125 n.9 (1979); City of New Orleans v. Dukes, 426 U.S. 259, 260 (1976). No government could itself engage in the religious discrimination in employment accommodated and encouraged by the proposed rule’s employment provision.

Thus, the government would be in violation of the Free Exercise Clause and the Equal Protection Clause for knowingly funding religious discrimination.

Of course, a private organization is not subject to the requirements of the Free Exercise Clause and the Equal Protection Clause unless the organization is considered a state actor, a specific purpose, West v. Atkins, 487 U.S. 42, 52 (1988). The Supreme Court recently outlined the conditions necessary to establish that there is a sufficient nexus between the State and the private person to find that the private person is a state actor for purposes of compliance with constitutional requirements on certain decisions made by participants in the government program.

[S]tate action may be found if, though only if, there is such a close nexus between the State and the challenged action that seemingly private behavior ‘may be fairly treated as of that State itself.’ . . . We have, for example, held that a challenged activity may be state action when it results from the State’s coercive power, where the State provides ‘significant encouragement, either overt or covert,’ or when a private actor operates as a ‘willful participant in joint activity with the State or its agents’ . . .

The Advisory Commission’s role that the current Administration—and the sponsors of H.R. 27—have taken in accommodating, fostering, and encouraging religious organizations to discriminate based on religion when hiring for federally-funded programs creates the nexus for constitutional duties to be imposed on the provider, in addition to the requirements already placed on government itself. The clear intent of the change in the civil rights provision in the Workforce Investment Act is to encourage certain providers based on religion and religious liberty, and must be opposed.

The text of this proposed law was not made public, but there can be no doubt about its intent. It is intended to create in China’s national law the legal justification for a military attack against Taiwan.

The law would spell out a range of activities which, if taken by the Taiwanese people and their democratically elected leaders, would legally constitute secession. Many of these activities, such as Constitutional reform and popular referenda, are the mainstay of any democracy. Yet the Chinese government use these as a legal excuse for a military attack.

Mr. Speaker, this proposed “anti-secession” legislation which the National People’s Congress plans to take up in March, is a significant and dangerous development. It goes far beyond the usual bellicose verbal threats of Chinese leaders. It would use Chinese national law as a rationale for military aggression against its democratic neighbor.

The United States, for more than 25 years since the passage of the Taiwan Relations Act, has made clear its determination that the future of Taiwan must be decided only by peaceful means, not by force of arms, and that any final determination must be in accord with the wishes of the people of Taiwan.

These are the fundamental building blocks upon which the future of the Taiwan Strait must rest: peace, and mutual consent between both sides. I urge the leadership of the PRC to put aside this ill-considered law as inimical to both peace and goodwill.
ADMINISTRATION’S BUDGET CUTS TO AMTRAK

HON. NICK J. RAHALL OF WEST VIRGINIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, March 3, 2005

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I wish to discuss the Administration’s proposed budget cuts to Amtrak.

I want to be clear from the very beginning: if the Administration’s proposed cuts go into effect, Amtrak will not survive. And, in many cases, the millions of people who depend on Amtrak’s services will be left with no reliable means of rail transportation. This would result in a serious problem for rail passengers, and represents a tremendous misjudgment by this Administration.

The Administration has made clear its position on Amtrak. The result of their cuts to Amtrak would “lead to the elimination of operations.” I am concerned that the “elimination of operations” would result in a significant hardship for the people of southern West Virginia, and Amtrak riders everywhere.

Practically speaking, the millions of passengers who depend on Amtrak’s services would be stranded. Those who can afford a car or plane ticket would descend on our already heavily congested roads and airports. Those without the means to purchase an airline ticket or pay for the ever-increasing price of gasoline—and those in rural communities without direct access to airline or highway travel—would be left twisting in the wind.

In West Virginia alone, Amtrak served nearly 51,000 passengers in 2004. Two of the largest cities in the 3rd Congressional District, Huntington and Hinton, represent nearly half that total with nearly 24,000 riders. In addition, Amtrak pumped $3.7 million into the state’s economy—which helped foster job creation and economic development opportunities for West Virginians. The economic impact of Amtrak on my state, and states throughout the West, cannot be overlooked.

Importantly, Amtrak is making great strides to improve itself from within. Capital investment is up substantially; a new and detailed five-year plan has been developed; unprofitable services have been eliminated; and significant maintenance operations have been undertaken. And Amtrak’s ridership has, and continues to, increase.

I urge this House, this Congress and this Administration to recognize the improvements Amtrak is making, the need Amtrak fills for millions of Americans and the importance of Amtrak on America’s transportation infrastructure.

IN MEMORY OF MAGDALENO DUENAS

HON. NANCY PELOSI
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, March 3, 2005

Ms. PELOSI. Mr. Speaker, I rise to pay tribute to the life of Magdalesno Duenas, a World War II military service and the sacrifices he made for our nation, as well as his lifelong struggle on behalf of Filipino veterans of World War II. His life is a symbol of the struggle for total recognition of Filipino veterans and a sad reminder of a shameful page in the history of our nation.

Born and raised in the Philippines, Mr. Duenas joined the 101st Infantry in 1941. In 1943, he joined the guerilla forces in the mountains and was captured by the Japanese while procuring food for American soldiers. Under questioning, Mr. Duenas denied any knowledge of the whereabouts of the American soldiers. He escaped, and helped 10 U.S. soldiers escape the Japanese POW camp.

Mr. Duenas came to the United States to claim his U.S. citizenship and military benefits, and fell into the hands of an abusive landlord in Richmond, Calif. He and 16 other veterans were held in captivity, beaten, chained and fed dog food, while their landlord kept their monthly government checks.

After being rescued, his experience received news coverage. It brought public attention to the plight of elderly Filipino veterans who came to America expecting to receive previously promised veterans’ pensions for their honorable U.S. military service, but instead learned that Congress had stripped them of those benefits and recognition.

Thousands of Filipino veterans came to the U.S. seeking equality and have waited 60 years for the promise to be honored. After fighting for more than half a century for their right to U.S. citizenship, other issues related to their health and recognition remain to be addressed. Many live alone in poverty. It is a national tragedy to see our veterans suffer from neglect, despair and hopelessness.

Mr. Duenas moved to San Francisco’s Tenderloin district in 1993, where he was vibrant member of our community. This diminutive, gentle man worked tirelessly to improve the experience of Filipino Veterans in the Bay Area.

All these years, he waited for the recognition of the U.S. Government for the services he rendered during WWII. He was featured in two documentaries: Tears of Old and Second Ten- ders. He died still waiting for the full equity bill to be passed by the U.S. Congress.

We will not rest until the equity bill becomes law.

Mr. Speaker, we will never forget his struggle on the frontlines of the battlefield and on the frontlines of the fight for equity for Filipino veterans. Mr. Duenas’ courage and resolve moves all of us to continue the fight for justice in our country for all people.

We will never forget the sacrifices Mr. Duenas and other Filipino veterans made for our freedom. We must dedicate ourselves as a nation to ensure that America fulfills her moral obligation to those who paid the high price for our freedom.

HONORING THE CONTRIBUTIONS OF MUNICIPAL COURT JUDGE JESUS GARZA

HON. HENRY CUELLAR
OF TEXAS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, March 3, 2005

Mr. CUELLAR. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor the important contributions of Judge Jesus Garza in Laredo, TX in my Congressional District.

Judge Jesus Garza was born and raised in Laredo. He is a product of LISD and graduated from J.W. Nixon High School in 1977. Upon graduation he enrolled at the University of Texas and earned a Bachelor of Journalism in 1981. In 1984 he received his Doctorate of Jurisprudence from the Thurgood Marshall School of Law in Houston and was licensed to practice law in the State of Texas in 1985.

Judge Garza was appointed Associate Municipal Court Judge in 1984 and served until 1985 at which time he decided to run for Justice of the Peace. He ran a successful campaign and took office in 1986 and served for 6 years.

In 1993 Judge Garza, “Chuy” as he is known to his friends, was voted into the newly created Webb County County Court at Law #2 and is presently presiding over his second term.

In 1994 Mayor Saul Ramirez appointed Judge Garza to the Economic Advisory Council and selected Co-Chairman by its members. Mr. Speaker, I am proud to have this opportunity to recognize County Court of Law Judge Jesus Garza.

IN HONOR OF MARIA PLASENSIA

HON. SUSAN A. DAVIS
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, March 3, 2005

Mrs. DAVIS of California. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor the life of Maria Plasencia, a beloved San Diego activist. Maria passed away on February 1, 2005. She is survived by her parents, Alma and Jesse Plasencia of Crown Point, Indiana, and brother, Jesse Jr. of Schererville, Indiana.

If an issue involved equality and social justice, Maria was among the first to rally her fellow feminists. Last April, as an official and activist in the San Diego Democratic Club, she organized a 500-member San Diego delegation that joined the March for Women’s Lives in Washington, D.C. After organizing San Diego’s effort in the March of Women’s Lives—which drew about a million people to Washington—Maria was elected to NOW’s national board.

To those who knew her, bringing hundreds of San Diegans for the march in Washington, D.C. exemplified her uncompromising beliefs and her ability to galvanize grass-roots support. Her colleagues describe Maria as energetic and passionate about her beliefs. A diabetic, Maria did not let her condition stand in the way of pursuing her interests or from leading an active life.

In her role as an activist and in her job as an auditor for General Electric Commercial Finance, Maria traveled extensively. She enjoyed meeting new people and seeing the country. Cities and small towns alike fascinated Maria, delighting in each one’s population and character.

Maria grew up in Crown Point, Indiana. Her father, a steel mill worker, had come to the United States from Mexico as a young man. Maria became the first member of her family to attend college and graduated with a degree in accounting from the University of Dayton. Her career brought her to San Diego more than a decade ago. A longtime feminist and
Mr. Speaker, I would like to express my deepest sympathy to Maria Plasencia’s family by celebrating her life and contributions to the San Diego community. Maria was admired by so many for her dedication to women’s issues and the friendly and effective manner she brought to activities. She will be greatly missed.

IN SUPPORT OF PASSENGER RAIL

HON. MICHAEL N. CASTLE OF DELAWARE

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, March 3, 2005

Mr. CASTLE. Mr. Speaker, I rise to disagree with the President’s proposal to eliminate federal funding for passenger rail. On February 7, President Bush presented a budget proposal to Congress that contained no funding for Amtrak. As explanation, the provision states: “With no subsidies, Amtrak would quickly enter bankruptcy, which would likely lead to the elimination of inefficient operations and the reorganization of the railroad through bankruptcy procedures. Ultimately, a more rational trak. As explanation, the provision states: “With no subsidies, Amtrak would quickly enter bankruptcy, which would likely lead to the elimination of inefficient operations and the reorganization of the railroad through bankruptcy procedures. Ultimately, a more rational passenger rail system would emerge, with

Mr. Speaker, while the President’s plan undoubtedly includes some recommendations worth considering, the facts are clear: Amtrak needs federal support to survive, just like highways, ports, and airlines. I am one of many Republicans in Congress eager to improve the safety, efficiency, and ridership of passenger rail. Putting Amtrak on the chopping block directly contradicts this goal. Dozens of reform proposals exist without jeopardizing the viability of Amtrak and they should be openly debated in Congress.

H.R. 1042, THE NET WORTH AMENDMENT FOR CREDIT UNION ACT

HON. SPENCER BACHUS OF ALABAMA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, March 3, 2005

Mr. BACHUS. Mr. Speaker, earlier today, I, along with 15 of my colleagues introduced H.R. 1042, the Net Worth Amendment For Credit Unions Act. This amendment to Section 216 of the Federal Credit Union Act (12 USC 1790d(0)(2)(A)) redefines the term “net worth” for PCA purposes so that a credit union is not unfairly penalized and its net worth diminished merely because of an antiquated definition contained in the Federal Credit Union Act. It is with this in mind that I have introduced H.R. 1042 today. I hope that we will be able to move this important legislation for credit unions through the Financial Services Committee and this body in a timely fashion.

HONORING THE CONTRIBUTIONS OF LAREDO CITY COUNCILMAN ALFREDO AGREDAO

HON. HENRY CUERLAR
OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, March 3, 2005

Mr. CUELLAR. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor the important contribution of Council Member District 1 Alfredo Agredano in Laredo, TX. Alfredo Agredano was born on August 28, 1948 in Grafton, North Dakota. He was the second of 9 children born to migrant workers Norberto and Francisca Agredano. After attending elementary schools in Corpus Christi, TX, Mr. Agredano and his family moved back to Laredo, TX at the age of thirteen. From there he attended L.J. Christen Jr. High School and graduated from Martin High School in 1968. The following year he went on to join the United States Marine Corps. During his stay, he became a Viet-Nam veteran and received an Honorable Discharge from the Marine Corps with the rank of sergeant. Not only did Mr. Agredano serve his country proudly, he supporter of NOW, she jumped wholeheartedly into local politics. Through her volunteering, Maria developed contacts that brought her into the San Diego Democratic Club. Called “a staple of the work crew,” Maria quickly distinguished herself through her participation. She was elected Chairwoman of the Women’s Caucus in 1999 and Executive Vice President in 2001.

Maria has left behind a legacy. The President of the San Diego Democratic Club had the following to say: “As we do things within our club—increasing its diversity, making it more woman-friendly—it will be in no small part due to the memory of Maria. “

Mr. Speaker, while the President’s plan undoubtedly includes some recommendations worth considering, the facts are clear: Amtrak needs federal support to survive, just like highways, ports, and airlines. I am one of many Republicans in Congress eager to improve the safety, efficiency, and ridership of passenger rail. Putting Amtrak on the chopping block directly contradicts this goal. EXPRESSING SYMPATHY TO JUDGE JOAN HUMPHREY LEFKOW AND FAMILY

HON. RAHM EMANUEL OF ILLINOIS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, March 3, 2005

Mr. EMANUEL. Mr. Speaker, I rise to express my sincere sympathy to Judge Joan Humphrey Lefkow and her entire family after the tragic death of her husband, Michael F. Lefkow, and her mother, Donna Grace Humphrey.

The city of Chicago and the entire nation have been shaken by these horrific murders. While we watched the headlines every day this week, we ask ourselves how such terrible crimes could have taken place, and we hope those answers come sooner than later.

Michael Lefkow spent his life fighting to protect civil rights for all Americans—marching with Martin Luther King, Jr., arguing cases before the Supreme Court, and representing the poor and underserved in his law practice. To all who knew and loved him, Michael was a dedicated family man and an active member of his church who used his time and his expertise to make life better for so many others.

I want to particularly express sympathy to Michael Lefkow’s daughter and Donna Humphrey’s granddaughter, Laura, who attended high school on the northwest side of Chicago, won my district’s entry in the Congressional Arts Contest in 2003, and volunteered in my Washington office during the summer of 2004.

Mr. Speaker, my prayers and thoughts are with Judge Lefkow, Laura, and the entire Lefkow family in this difficult hour.

AMTRAK FUNDING

HON. STEPHANIE TUBBS JONES
OF OHIO
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, March 3, 2005

Mrs. JONES of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I rise to express concern with the President’s Fiscal Year 2006 budget that zeroes out funding for Amtrak, eliminates funding for high-speed rail, and provides $360 million to the Surface Transportation Board to maintain existing commuter operations should Amtrak shut down.

The shutdown of Amtrak would cause wide disruption and hardship. Millions of passengers—many of whom can’t afford a car or a plane ticket—would be stranded. Millions of travelers would be added to already congested roads and airports.

Residents of 106 U.S. cities, which have no air service and are well over 25 miles away from the nearest airport, would have to find new transportation alternatives.

Amtrak’s 2002 AMTRAK Act would be out on the streets looking for new jobs. Local economies and businesses that have benefited from Amtrak’s service would suffer.

During Fiscal Year 2004 Amtrak served the following Ohio locations:

- City and ridership: Akron—7,930; Alliance—2,324; Bryan—6,204; Cincinnati—11,632; Cleveland—35,394; Elyria—2,651; Fostoria—1,935; Hamilton—1,483; Sandusky—4,098; Toledo—59,661, and Youngstown—4,417.

Total Ohio Ridership: 137,729 Amtrak expended $9,567,180 for goods and services in Ohio in Fiscal Year 2004. Much of this money was spent in the following locations:

- Cleveland, $2,458,778; and Columbus $1,546,264.

During fiscal year 2004, Amtrak employed 88 Ohio residents. Total wages of Amtrak employees living in Ohio were $4,609,915 during this period.

The Railroad Retirement and Unemployment programs, which cover employees of all railroads, freight and passenger, would be depleted. According to the Railroad Retirement Board, without the participation of Amtrak, employer and employee payroll taxes would need to be increased from the current 16 percent to 27 percent in 2027. Those tax increases, how would jeopardize the viability, much like Wolf wrote about the Bororo Indians, a primitive jungle tribe who live along the Vermelho River in the Amazon Jungles of Brazil.

In the 21st century, we now face the prospect of a world in which all of us—not just someone in the midst of scandal—will be forced to live without a private self: with the entire “village” able to obtain access to some of the most personal aspects of our lives.

In the emerging surveillance society of the 21st century, the data mining and information brokerage firms, much like Wolf’s Bororo Indians, believe that there is no such thing as a private self. These companies are collecting and selling a vast array of personal information about the American public. For a fee, these companies will tell you someone’s Social Security number, their address, phone number, driver’s license number, driving record, any criminal record information, court records, insurance claims, divorce records, and even credit and financial information.

Recent press reports indicate that ChoicePoint, an information broker and data mining firm, had allowed a group of Nigerian con artists to get access to names, Social Security numbers, and other personal information about 140,000 Americans, including roughly 1,100 Massachusetts residents. Apparently this is the first time that the identity thief has been forced to live without a private self: with the entire “village” able to obtain access to some of the most personal aspects of our lives.

Unchecked, these companies take advantage of the most valuable possessions that Americans have: their personal identities. Companies like ChoicePoint are playing Russian roulette with the personal information and identities of millions of Americans. If we don’t take steps to protect America’s consumers soon, it is not a question of whether or not more Americans will be victimized. It is a question of when the next ID theft scandal will hit. We must take immediate action to protect consumers from more information breaches.

HONORING THE LIFE OF RAY MCKENNA
OF CONNECTICUT
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, March 3, 2005

Mr. LARSON of Connecticut. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to Ray McKenna of East Hartford, a community sports leader, champion, and friend, who passed away Tuesday, March 1, 2005.

A hometown hero, Ray defined integrity, commitment, and generosity of spirit and vision of the East Hartford community. For kids like me growing up in East Hartford, the man from Burnside-Ray McKenna was a legend. At East Hartford High, Ray demonstrated his competitive nature in athletics and excelled at basketball, football and baseball. In 1939, he was the instrumental cog in East Hartford's first Connecticut state basketball championship. With a sense of duty to his country, Ray enlisted in the U.S. Navy during World War II and was stationed in the Philippines and the Aleutian Islands. Upon his return, Ray organized a local fast-pitch softball team, the legendary Burnside Doxellettes in 1947. For 30 years, he lead the Dovellettes to the top of the semi-pro league with a record of 1,831–339. While employed by the East Hartford Post Office, Ray formed the Marco Polo Explorers basketball team and coached them to 13 New England Basketball Association titles. In 35 years, the semi-pro team held an unparalleled record of 1,123 to 245. Ray also founded and directed the annual Tap-Off Club Hall of Fame dinner to honor East Hartford athletes for 28 years. Although Ray retired from the Post Office in 1985, his long interest in sports continued and he became Sports Editor for the East Hartford Gazette—the most widely read column in the town.

The impact Ray has had on the town of East Hartford is inspirational. In 1984, East Hartford honored Ray's devotion to athletics by dedicating a local sports field in his name. For over two decades, Ray McKenna Field has been the home for baseball teams of all ages, including the Hartford Hawks. In 1985, Ray was presented with the Gold Key, the most prestigious sports award in the state of Connecticut. The Gold Key is awarded by the Connecticut Sports Writer's Alliance to those like Ray, who have made noteworthy contributions to athletics in Connecticut. Representing one of Connecticut's finest, Ray was also inducted into the New England Basketball Hall of Fame at the University of Rhode Island in 2002.

With all his good works and awards of recognition, Ray will most be remembered for his honest love of the game. He lived everyday giving back to his community and inspired the best in all of us. To Ray, true victory was the result of hard work, confidence, and heart. His giving nature, generous laugh and Irish wit will be missed by all those who knew him. For my family and myself, we will forever treasure and value this wonderful man who so loved the game, the competition, and the camaraderie of sports and made it the centerpiece of his life in East Hartford, the state of Connecticut and throughout the Nation.

Our hearts go out to the entire McKenna family, especially his beloved wife Josephine,
Mr. CUELLAR. Mr. Speaker, I rise to recognize State Representative Patrick M. Rose for a lifetime of distinguished public service.

State Representative Patrick Rose is serving his second term as a member of the Texas House of Representatives and currently holds the position of Vice Chair of the House Committee on Civil Practices and is also a member of the Higher Education Committee and the Calendars committee.

He represents the House 45th district which covers Blanco, Caldwell and Hay’s Counties. He is working on various state issues such as insurance reform, ethics reform and the public education system. He is a member of the higher Education Committee and works closely with Texas State University on issues such as college affordability and creating scholarships.

His efforts on behalf of his constituents were recognized when he was featured in Texas Monthly as “Rookie of the Year” during his freshman session. He was also honored with the “2003 Civil Justice Leadership Award,” the “Texas Medicine’s Best” and the “Young Professional of the Year Award.” Patrick Rose is a credit to his community and a tremendous resource to his county.

Mr. Speaker, I am honored to have had this opportunity to recognize the many achievements of State Representative Patrick Rose.
