PROCEEDINGS AND DEBATES OF THE 109th CONGRESS, FIRST SESSION

Vol. 151

WASHINGTON, TUESDAY, MARCH 8, 2005

No. 26

House of Representatives

The House met at 12:30 p.m.

MORNING HOUR DEBATES

The SPEAKER. Pursuant to the order of the House of January 4, 2005, the Chair will now recognize Members from lists submitted by the majority and minority leaders for morning hour debates. The Chair will alternate recognition between the parties, with each party limited to not to exceed 30 minutes, and each Member except the majority leader, the minority leader or the minority whip limited to not to exceed 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Florida (Mr. STEARNS) for 5 minutes.

IN DEFENSE OF THE POSTING OF THE TEN COMMANDMENTS

Mr. STEARNS. Mr. Speaker, last week a few of us had the opportunity to attend the opening arguments at the United States Supreme Court for two cases about the public display of the Ten Commandments.

These cases are very interesting because not only are they specifically about the Ten Commandments, but in a larger sense, they are about the long-running dispute over the so-called separation of church and state. I say so-called, because there is not one word in the Constitution that mentions this alleged separation of church and state.

And for over 150 years, the Supreme Court barely referenced this infamous phrase at all. The establishment clause of the first amendment provides that "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion." For over 150 years, this was commonly understood to mean that the Federal Government cannot establish a national religion as the English did with the Anglican Church.

But ever since cases like Everson in 1947; Engel, 1961; Lemon, 1971; and Wiseman in 1992, a handful of judges have interpreted the first amendment's establishment clause, misinterpreted, I might add in my view, to exclude more and more expressions of religion from the public square.

Now we are at the point where children are not allowed to pray in public schools. The mildest nonsectarian invocations are forbidden at public events, the Boy Scouts are ostracized for mentioning God in their oath, and even the words "under God" in the Pledge of Allegiance are under fire.

Perhaps these Ten Commandments cases will be the turning point in the legal war against religion. We need to have a commonsense approach towards the relationship between religion and the State. That is why I was particularly interested to hear Justice Scalia's take on this case.

He was his usual straightforward and honest self in his questions. He asked the ACLU lawyer, "If a legislature can open its session with the public present with a prayer, why can it not, in the same building, post the Ten Commandments?" He also called the Ten Commandments "a symbol of the fact that Government derives its authority from God, which seems to me an appropriate symbol to put on Government grounds."

Justice Scalia also logically noted that those who oppose the Ten Commandments on public grounds would "also think that Thanksgiving proclamations are also unconstitutional, which were recommended by the very first Congress, the same Congress that proposed the first amendments."

Mr. Speaker, this is an issue that the American people care about deeply. In fact, according to a recent AP poll, 76 percent of Americans support these religious displays, which Justice Scalia alluded to when he said the Ten Commandments send "a profoundly religious message, but it is a profoundly religious message believed in by a vast majority of the American people."

The irony of the Supreme Court hearing on these cases last week and of the outright hostility that the Court has displayed against religion in recent years is that above the head of the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court is a concrete display of the Ten Commandments.

And close to these commandments is a marble sculptured relief of Moses himself, the great lawgiver. And let us not forget that at the beginning of each session at the Court, the crier opens with the proclamation: "God save the United States and this Honorable Court."

I agree with Justice Scalia and with the vast majority of the American people. In fact, to quote former Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas: "We are a religious people whose institutions presuppose a supreme being." That is why I have introduced legislation to display the Ten Commandments in the Capitol.

Mr. Speaker, the fact of the matter is that the Ten Commandments are a historical document that contains moral, ethical, and legal truisms that any person of any religion or even an atheist can recognize and appreciate. They present a concise set of values that represent the moral background of this Nation and our common view on right and wrong.

I believe that they promote a commitment to decency, which is why I have them hanging in my office. We start off every day with prayer and the Pledge of Allegiance. Over the Speaker's rostrum it is posted, "In God we Trust."

There are statues and representations of religious figures scattered throughout the Capitol and House buildings. Posting the Ten Commandments would fit right in and would merely serve to remind Members that we have the responsibility as lawmakers to be as fair and just as possible. Certainly a reminder of God's law would be appropriate as we consider the Nation's laws.

SUPPORT FOR FREEDOM AND HUMAN RIGHTS

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. PENCE). Pursuant to the order of the House of January 4, 2005, the gentleman from Oregon (Mr. BLUMENAUER) is recognized during morning hour debates for 5 minutes.

Mr. BLUMENAUER. Mr. Speaker, we come to the floor to speak to the American public. Sometimes we come to speak to one another.

It is in that spirit of speaking to my fellow Members of Congress that I rise today. Like you, I was horrified when the pictures at the Abu Ghraib prison first came forward, and then the additional admission of abuse, mistreatment, indeed, torture at the hands of people that we were responsible for.

And it seems, Mr. Speaker, that this is not an isolated set of circumstances. Indeed, there are more stories coming out of torture and death of detainees, and of extraordinary rendition, where people the United States is concerned with, we allow them to be transported to other dictatorships where we know that they will be abused.

I have been horrified as the stories start to come out, broadly reported in the press; and from Amnesty International, and the Red Cross. I, like you, my fellow Members of Congress, am horrified that the United States would be lumped into the same categories as countries that we are trying to encourage to honor human rights. Syria, Egypt, Morocco, Saudi Arabia look to be countries where we have allowed people or sent them to be tortured.

This took on a decidedly local flavor for me as press accounts came out that a shadow, perhaps illegal dummy, front company, Bayard Foreign Marketing, LLC, in my home town of Portland, Oregon, was used to transport these people.

It appears to have been this company, organized in violation of Oregon law, to hide the true nature and breadth of this extraordinary rendition program. It is important for us as Members of Congress to be clear. Torture is morally wrong. It is not just a quaint idea that some people feel that it is morally wrong, but it is immoral.

Additionally, torture is a bad idea for intelligence purposes. The experts tell us that if you attempt to drown, beat, shock, freeze people, deprive them of sleep long enough, they will admit to almost anything you want them to admit to, but it is not the soundest basis upon which to base our intelligence decisions.

Furthermore, when prisoners are tortured, it taints the case against them; makes it impossible to bring them to justice in a court of law; and, sadly, it puts Americans at risk. The reason that we obey these quaint notions against torture is not just because it is morally wrong but tactically it puts Americans at risk in uniform and not.

Mr. Speaker, I am concerned about how Congress can sit on the sidelines and let the press and human rights groups do our job. Well, actually, they can only do part of our job. They can get the truth out, and that ought to be something that each Member of Congress ought to be concerned about. But being able to fix abuses, to hold responsible parties accountable for violation of human rights, a United States policy and perhaps law, that is our job.

Mr. Speaker, in the history of this country perhaps a half billion Americans have lived; only 11,571 Americans have been privileged to be Members of Congress. Who do we represent in this matter? Yes, we listen to special interests, those with strong political voices. We listen to the voters. We listen to the press. But at the end of the day, the things that matter most to us, I am convinced, are our family, our friends, the outstanding men and women who work for us here on Capitol Hill, who are almost like family. How can we look them in the eye when such a cloud hangs over America's honor?

I strongly urge each of my colleagues to look deep into their hearts and think about what they are going to do to provide the answer to their friends, their family, their neighbors, their staff about what we are doing to protect America's honor and to protect the abuse of human rights wherever it may be.

INTERNATIONAL WOMEN'S DAY

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Tennessee (Mrs. BLACKBURN) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mrs. BLACKBURN. Mr. Speaker, today is International Women's Day, and I come before the body this morning to salute our Iraqi women friends. I have with me a group of e-mails that I have received the past couple of days from the Iraqi women that we have been working with; and they are expressing their thanks to our military men and women who have fought so diligently and have worked right alongside with them and with their country to help their country go through successful elections, to recognize the freedom that they have sought and that they have fought for and longed for for 30 years. So it is with great excitement today that they are communicating with us as a free people and as free women.

Not only are they grateful to our military, Mr. Speaker, they are grateful to those of us in the Congressional Iraqi Women's Caucus, from both sides of the aisle here in this body, a group that has come together to walk with them as they walk toward opportunity and hope and freedom.

I would like to express my thanks for the leadership in that caucus to our former colleague, Ms. Dunn, who put a tremendous amount of leadership in this, and to the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. GRANGER) and the gentleman from Nebraska (Mr. OSBORNE), who are continuing to work and lead this group as we seek to help the Iraqi women.

I would like to share with the body some of the e-mails and some of the communication that has been expressed from these women as women and as free people to speak on International Women's Day.

This e-mail says: this is the second year Iraqi women have contributed to this important international gathering as free and independent people. They had a goal of 25 percent representation rights for women in the National Assembly in Iraq. Iraqi women have reached a target beyond that, with 31 percent representation. Spectacular. Spectacular.

Another, "Iraqi women are now in the future that we all dreamed of. Iraqi women are heroes. They deserve to be leaders. They deserve to participate in building the bright future for their children. We owe our brave brothers and partners their support and understanding. Together, we all celebrate the International Women's Day."

And another, "This day, March 8, is a sign of civilization and democracy. Let us celebrate together."

Another, "Your voice is reaching other countries in the Middle East. Our sisters in Saudi Arabia, Bahrain, and Kuwait are also rising. People are speaking out and enjoying democracy. Congratulations to all, celebrating the spirit and courage and contributions of Iraqi women who have added to the vitality, the richness, and the diversity of Iraqi life. In this amazing transformation to democracy in our country, we must recognize women's historic accomplishments and always honor those who have left us behind to carry through."

Mr. Speaker, I am so encouraged by the voices of freedom that we hear in this budding democracy. I stand today to salute the Iraqi women and to encourage them as they continue to work toward freedom, hope and opportunity in their country.

NO PLAN FOR SOCIAL SECURITY SOLVENCY

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. PENCE). Pursuant to the order of the House of January 4, 2005, the gentleman from Oregon (Mr. DEFAZIO) is recognized during morning hour debates for 5 minutes.

Mr. DEFAZIO. Mr. Speaker, the President of the United States, despite confusion in the press, does not have a plan to ensure the long-term financial solvency of Social Security. His privatization plan would actually reduce Social Security's income and accelerate its financial problems. His privatization commission, which met a few years ago, did have some solutions to the financial solvency of Social Security. Generally, their preferred solution was to dramatically reduce future benefits, to change from wage indexing to price indexing, which means a young person who retires in 40 years would see generally a Social Security benefit reduced by 40 percent, far in excess of the predicted possible shortfalls that Social Security might have if we did nothing.

Now the President says he has not recommended that. He has not recommended dramatic reductions in benefits; it is just on the table. He has also said increasing the retirement age is on the table, and it is already programmed to go up to 67 by 2020. We are going to have people 70 years old logging in the Oregon forests and working other back-breaking jobs across America. But he says that is just on the table. He has not recommended that yet.

He did, in an encouraging manner, leave open the door a tiny bit to a fair solution, which would be lifting the cap on wages. Only people who earn less than $90,000 a year pay Social Security taxes on all their income. He left that door open.

In fact, I have introduced a plan in the last 30 Congresses which would fully ensure the future of Social Security by lifting the cap, reducing taxes for those who earn less than $94,000, and people who earn more than $94,000 pay more in taxes. But that door was promptly slammed by the Republican leaders in Congress. No, they are not going to do that. That would benefit working people too much.

So we are back to the point where the Republicans do not have a plan to ensure the financial security of Social Security. They do have a plan to make it worse, to carve out resources, to redirect income from Social Security into a privatization plan.

Some people get excited when they hear privatization. They think: It is my money; I can do what I want with it. No. Here are the details. They are detailed in this proposal, very detailed. Wage earners can divert 4 percent, two-thirds of their contribution. They can divert it into government-chosen conservative, as the President says, index funds that will be managed by a company chosen by the government. You could not touch your money, could not borrow against it, like people in 401(k)s, or withdraw it early. The government would control the money until retirement, and then the government would compute a bill, and the bill would be how much your taxes would have earned in the Social Security trust fund plus inflation plus management fees, and they give you that bill.

If investments did not do well, the wage earners might end up writing a check to the Federal Government when they retired. No privatization account for them. Other people who did pretty well will see they have to pay that money back to the government, and then the government will say your Social Security benefits are really low. This is the President's so-called privatization plan. The government would force, force people retiring to buy an annuity, to bring their Social Security benefit for their predicted lifetime up to the predicted poverty level. It would force people to do that. What a boon for the private insurance industry. Of course, these would not be guaranteed by anybody. You buy one of those plans. That insurance company goes broke. Sorry, you just lost everything.

So instead of an assured benefit under Social Security, taxpayers would be purchasing a very expensive annuity that does not have survivor's benefits, is not indexed for inflation, unlike Social Security, but then very few people maybe, according to a Wall Street Journal article a couple of weeks ago, none of the people in all probability, but maybe a few would do even better, and they could keep that extra money.

So we would undermine the guaranteed benefit indexed for cost of living with survivor's and disabilities benefits for all working Americans so maybe a few could do better, but the insurance companies could do a lot better. The brokers who manage the accounts could do a lot better, but other people would be left in the cold.

And what about survivor and disabilities benefits? They cannot talk about that, because it is impossible. You are 18 years old. You go into the so-called optional account. You save every penny you are allowed to invest. At 24, you are tragically hurt in an accident. You are not capable of working for the rest of your life, and you can withdraw your $8,000 in your Social Security private account and live on that. No, you cannot.

We need to deal with disability benefits, survivor's benefits and financial problems of Social Security, and the President has not done that with his so-called privatization plan.

INCAPACITATED PERSONS LEGAL PROTECTION ACT

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the order of the House of January 4, 2005, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. WELDON) is recognized during morning hour debates for 5 minutes.

Mr. WELDON of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I rise to speak on the legislation I have just introduced, the Incapacitated Persons Legal Protection Act, enrolled as H.R. 1151. This legislation's immediate intent is to deal with the issues surrounding Terry Schiavo.

I practiced medicine for 15 years prior to my election to the House of Representatives. I still see patients once a month, and I was involved in numerous cases involving situations like this.

Terry has been described in the press as being in a vegetative state, and I believe that she is not, absolutely that she is not. The correct term to describe Terry Schiavo is brain-damaged, severely brain-damaged, but you can see her on videos. Now the judge will not let people such as myself go in there to see her even though the family would like me to be able to examine her. But according to the family, she is the same way. She is responsive. She will look at you, attempt to vocalize. She will attempt to kiss her parents.

The judge in the case, Judge Greer, has tried to dismiss these obvious behaviors indicating that she does have a higher level of functioning and she should not be described as vegetative, as primitive reflexes. And I would assert as a physician that it is extremely dangerous to walk down that kind of a path, where you have somebody with mental retardation, disability or any type of brain injury and you start ascribing obvious human-like behavior on the part of these individuals as being primitive reflexes and that these people are expendable.

Terry is under a court order to withdraw food and water. This is unprecedented in our legal history. Previous cases that received national notoriety, like the Karen Ann Quinlan case, involved family and physicians mutually recognizing that this person did not have a chance of surviving and wanting to withdraw, in the case of the Quinlan case, a respirator, and the court going along with it because the clinicians involved did not want to be prosecuted for manslaughter or murder.

In this case, there is a dispute. The husband wants to terminate food and water, and the family, in the form of the mother and father, vehemently being opposed to it.

The judge has stepped in, and I think he has made some clinical judgments that are not really founded in good clinical science. I am certain if doctors put an EEG on her, we would see extensive brain waves indicating activity in the visual cortex and in the speech centers, and she should not be defined as vegetative.

My bill, H.R. 1151, Incapacitated Persons Legal Protection Act, would simply extend to Terry Schiavo the same benefits currently afforded death row inmates, and she is under a death warrant, death by essential dehydration. It would allow her to receive legal representation, the same kind of legal representation that death row inmates receive. Currently, she does not have her own attorney. Her parents have an attorney. Her attorney has an attorney. Under this bill, she would get legal representation. It would allow for a more detailed review of the case.

As a clinician, she has gotten, to my knowledge, according to the family I have spoken to, no therapy since 1993. I know from having worked with stroke victims and therapists, you can sometimes give these people thicken liquids, and they are able to swallow. Evidently, Terry, prior to the termination of her therapy, was working with a speech therapist and was able to say a few words. She may be able to survive without a tube.

Another important point I want to make here, there was a $1.56 million medical malpractice settlement that was provided for her care. Much of that has been spent on legal fees trying to end her life. This is not a case where the State is spending a lot of money. The resources are there to take care of her needs in the future. Her parents do not want to see her dying of starvation and thirst. I think it is fully appropriate for us to step in, for her to have a right, the same right a death row inmate gets, and to allow, hopefully, review in front of a Federal judge reviewing all of the facts in this case. When doctors really look at the facts, I think it is very, very hard to justify ending her life in such a way.

So I would encourage all of my colleagues to sign on and support the bill and, most importantly, for our leadership on both sides of the aisle to allow expedited review. If not, her tube is scheduled to come out March 18.

THE VALUES OF DEMOCRACY

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the order of the House of January 4, 2005, the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. BROWN) is recognized during morning hour debates for 5 minutes.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, something terribly wrong has happened in the House of Representatives. I am not talking about, from a partisan standpoint, the Republican takeover in 1995, I am not even talking about the ascension of Newt Gingrich to the Speakership. What I am talking about is the ascension of a new kind of House leaders who have run this institution even as former Speaker Gingrich has said, not in the fairest possible way, basically in an unprecedented way. We have seen things in the House of Representatives in the last couple of years that we have literally never seen.

I want to tell a story and spell out what I mean by this one example. Beginning a couple of years ago, at 2:54 a.m. on a Friday in March, the House of Representatives cut veterans' benefits by three votes.

At 2:39 a.m. on a Friday in April, the House slashed education and health care benefits by five votes.

At 1:56 a.m. on a Friday in May, the House passed the Leave No Millionaire Behind tax-cut bill by a handful of votes.

At 2:33 a.m. on a Friday in June, the House passed the first round of the Medicare privatization bill by one vote.

At 12:57 a.m. on a Friday in July, the House eviscerated Head Start by one vote.

After returning from summer recess, at 12:12 a.m. on a Friday in October, the House voted $87 billion for Iraq.

□ 1300

Always on a Thursday night, Friday morning, always in the middle of the night, always after the public has turned their TV sets off and gone to bed and after most of the media which sits up there has left. As I said, always on a Thursday night, because if it gets in the paper at all, it would appear then in the Saturday paper, the paper that is the least read paper of the week.

That was just the beginning. Then came the Medicare vote. The final round of the Medicare vote took place in November. The debate began at midnight on a Friday night in November. The debate took 3 hours. The vote began at 3 a.m. Members of Congress are given this card, which we stick in a little black box on the House floor to vote. The votes as we all know are then recorded electronically. Almost all of us went down and cast our votes. Pretty soon after the vote was called at 3 o'clock in the morning, the privatization of Medicare, the most important piece of domestic legislation that probably anybody in this body had ever voted on, at 3 o'clock in the morning the vote began, as I said. We are normally given 15 minutes, an extra 5 minutes sometimes, to cast our votes. Normally not much more than that.

At 3:30 the vote was still on. At 4 o'clock, an hour after the vote had begun, an hour after most of us voted, the vote was 216 "yes" and 218 "no." At about 4:15, the Republican leadership, the Speaker of the House, the majority leader, the chairman of the committee that the gentleman from New Jersey and I are on that wrote the bill began to go around to recalcitrant Members of their party, Republican Members who had voted "no," trying to get them to change their vote. It is now 4:30. They woke up the President of the United States who from his living quarters at the White House got on the phone and began to try to lobby the 26 or 27 Members of the Republican side who had voted "no" on Medicare. They all stood their ground.

At about 4:45, the Republican leaders surrounded Nick Smith, a Republican from Michigan, who told his story on the radio the next day. He had already announced his retirement. His son was running for his seat. He was told that if he changed his vote, they would come up with $100,000 for his son's campaign. When he said no, they said, if you do not change your vote, we will come up with $100,000 for your son's opponent's campaign.

Congressman SMITH, under great duress with great courage, said, Nothing doing. Incidentally, his son later lost the primary. Finally, it is 5 o'clock. It is 216-218. It is 5:30. It is 216-218. It is 5:45 in the morning. It is still 216 "yes," 218 "no." Two hours and 55 minutes after the vote was called, two Republicans, one from Idaho and one from Arizona, came out of the cloakroom, walked down here, picked up one of these green cards, you cannot use the plastic electronic card that late in the voting, marked the card, changed their vote, sheepishly handed it to the House Clerk, the Speaker then gavelled the vote closed, and that is how Medicare privatization passed.

We have seen in this body a new legacy of one-party rule, legislative strong-arming and abuses of power never before seen under leaders of either party in this House of Representatives, hiding votes from the American public under the cover of darkness. We spend plenty of time, Mr. Speaker, passing votes on naming post offices in the middle of the day and doing important controversial votes at night.

Mr. Speaker, this abuse of power has to stop.

SOCIAL SECURITY

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. PENCE). Pursuant to the order of the House of January 4, 2005, the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. PALLONE) is recognized during morning hour debates for 5 minutes.

Mr. PALLONE. Mr. Speaker, last Friday, President Bush quickly stopped in on Westfield, New Jersey, to talk to a bunch of his supporters about his Social Security privatization proposal. The Westfield, New Jersey, stop was part of a 6-week push to convince Americans that the Social Security program faces an immediate crisis. The President did not do as well as he wanted, and so now he has hired a couple of public relations experts to run a war room at the Social Security Administration. The administration is also beginning a 60-day push to convince voters that his privatization plan is the best thing for both seniors today and young people tomorrow.

Mr. Speaker, President Bush has failed in convincing Americans that his plan is the way to go because he has even admitted that privatization does nothing to fix the solvency problem Social Security faces in the year 2052. As the President goes around the country pitching his privatization plan, he continues to exaggerate Social Security's current fiscal state. Last Friday in Westfield, he claimed, "The safety net has a hole in it," and he continues to say that the whole system goes broke in 2042.

That is simply not true. Based on the most current estimates from the non-partisan Congressional Budget Office, Social Security is fully solvent until 2052, meaning that every benefit that has been promised to seniors, the disabled, and survivors can be paid through that year. Imagine that. There is no other government program that is fully funded for the next 47 years. And President Bush calls this a crisis?

The President is also wrong when he says the program goes broke in 2042, because, as I stated, it is not only fully solvent another decade after that, but what exactly happens in 2052? When President Bush says Social Security goes broke, most would believe there is no money left after 2052 in Social Security. After all, if you look at Webster's Dictionary, it defines "broke" simply as "penniless." Again, this is another fabrication because even after 2052, the Social Security system would still have enough money to be able to pay out 80 percent of all guaranteed benefits. That does not sound broke to me: 100 percent to 2052, 80 percent after that. How is that a crisis? How is that broke?

Again, the President exaggerates the solvency of Social Security. But what has he proposed that will extend that solvency beyond 2052? The answer is, nothing, as of today. Last Friday in New Jersey, the President said, "We've got to make sure we save the safety net for future generations." But even the President has admitted that his privatization plan does nothing to extend the solvency of Social Security. In fact, because the President's plan would take money out of the Social Security trust fund to pay for these private accounts, Social Security would actually become insolvent more than 20 years earlier under President Bush's plan.

Mr. Speaker, for 70 years, Social Security has improved the lives of millions of Americans. Nearly 47 million people receive Social Security benefits, including more than 32 million retired workers. Of those, two-thirds receive more than half of their retirement income from Social Security, meaning that without the guaranteed benefit of Social Security, more than two-thirds of today's seniors would be living in extreme poverty.

Social Security gave our parents and our grandparents independence. Democrats, Mr. Speaker, are willing to work with the President in a bipartisan fashion to address Social Security's future, but we simply refuse to support the President's privatization proposal because it dismantles the independent Social Security program. Our seniors now have a guaranteed benefit. They would not have one if we adopt the President's plan. And it does nothing to solve the Social Security solvency problem, again, in 2052.

I think our seniors deserve better. We deserve a President that tells us the truth about what is going on. There is no crisis. Let us sit down together on a bipartisan basis and see what we can do to come up with a solution other than privatization.

RECESS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 12(a) of rule I, the Chair declares the House in recess until 2 p.m. today.

Accordingly (at 1 o'clock and 8 minutes p.m.), the House stood in recess until 2 p.m.

□ 1400

AFTER RECESS

The recess having expired, the House was called to order by the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. BOOZMAN) at 2 p.m.

PRAYER

The Reverend E. Terri LaVelle, Program Director, The Faith & Politics Institute, Washington, D.C., offered the following prayer:

God of compassion, grace, mercy, reconciliation, we are coming boldly to the throne of grace to obtain mercy and find grace to help in the time of need. Thank You for these, my brothers and sisters elected to serve the common good of all humanity. Give divine guidance and wisdom individually and collectively as they carry out their sworn duties.

Give them ears to hear, and hearts to discern what the needs are, and boldly meet the challenges even when it involves making hard and uncomfortable choices.

God, Your word states that You have not given us a spirit of fear but of love, power, and a sound mind. Empower this congressional body to operate in love, Godly power, and with sound minds. Your word says that we have been given the word and ministry of reconciliation.

Let these, Your servants called Congresswomen and Congressmen, be servants of reconciliation domestically and globally. In the name that is above every name, Amen.

THE JOURNAL

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair has examined the Journal of the last day's proceedings and announces to the House his approval thereof.

Pursuant to clause 1, rule I, the Journal stands approved.

Mr. PRICE of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, pursuant to clause 1, rule I, I demand a vote on agreeing to the Speaker's approval of the Journal.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the Speaker's approval of the Journal.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. PRICE of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 8, rule XX, further proceedings on this question will be postponed.

The point of no quorum is considered withdrawn.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Will the gentleman from Texas (Mr. BURGESS) come forward and lead the House in the Pledge of Allegiance.

Mr. BURGESS led the Pledge of Allegiance as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

SOCIAL SECURITY IS NOT SECURE

(Mr. PRICE of Georgia asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. PRICE of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, you know Social Security is quickly becoming social insecurity for millions of Americans approaching retirement. Let us take a step back for a moment and take the politics and the pundits and rhetoric out of the debate, and let us examine the most overlooked aspect of what has been discussed thus far, the facts.

Fact: Social Security is safe for today's seniors, but is in serious danger for our children and our grandchildren. Fact: since the 1950s, the number of retirees has been rising faster than the number of workers. And fact: without reforms, Social Security is not sustainable in the long run.

Mr. Speaker, the system is not in crisis; the system is not in limbo. The system which worked well for many, many years is now broken.

Payroll taxes have been raised 20 times since the 1930s to keep the system functioning, and that is no longer an option. Soon Social Security will be paying out more than it takes in. No matter which side of the aisle you are on, if things continue the way they are, there will be no security for our children and our grandchildren.

RAISE THE MINIMUM WAGE

(Mr. PALLONE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. PALLONE. Mr. Speaker, Republicans in the Senate yesterday showed that they have no interest in helping millions of working families who clock 40 hours a week at their jobs for the minimum wage. Today, millions of hard-working Americans are working harder for less and less money.

Since the minimum wage has not increased in 8 years, these workers' paychecks are simply not increasing as the cost of living increases every year. Because congressional Republicans refuse to act, the real value of the minimum wage is not worth nearly as much as past minimum wages.

Consider that if a minimum wage this year provided the same wage to workers today, including cost-of-living adjustments, as it provided to workers in 1968, the minimum wage today would be $3.88 per hour, rather than $5.15 per hour. That is a big difference, and I believe working families living on the minimum wage feel the pinch every day.

Raising the minimum wage also raises the wages of all low-income workers, not just those below the poverty line. Mr. Speaker, Americans who work 40 hours a week should not be living in poverty. It is time congressional Republicans in both Houses join us in supporting an increase in the minimum wage.

STRENGTHENING SOCIAL SECURITY NOW

(Mr. WILSON of South Carolina asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. WILSON of South Carolina. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in appreciation of President Bush seeking to strengthen our Social Security system.

When Social Security was conceived in the mid-1930s, the average age of life expectancy in the United States was 60. Today the average American's life expectancy is over 77.

Americans are now receiving benefits over longer periods of time because we are so grateful they are living longer. Our current Social Security system is financially broken, outdated, and unable to meet the retirement needs of our children and grandchildren.

If we fail to act now, we will burden further generations with dramatically higher taxes, massive new borrowing, or sudden and severe cuts to Social Security benefits or other government programs. In 1998, President Bill Clinton said, "My fellow baby boomers, let me say that none of us wants our own retirement to be a burden to our children and to their efforts to raise our grandchildren."

Seven years later, we still have not solved the problems facing Social Security.

Congress must act soon to provide younger Americans with retirement choices and strengthen benefits for today's retirees. We need to fix the system now, once and for all.

In conclusion, God bless our troops, and we will never forget September 11.

REFORMING MEDICAL LIABILITY

(Mr. BURGESS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BURGESS. Mr. Speaker, 2 years ago this month, this House passed a meaningful bill to reform medical liability in this country. Since that time, of course, the other body has failed to even have a vote on this important piece of legislation, so now we are going to see this legislation again in this Congress.

But in the 2 years that have intervened, in my home State of Texas, we passed a bill and a constitutional amendment that allowed caps on noneconomic damages within the State of Texas. I think it would behoove this House to examine what has happened in the State of Texas since that time.

Since then, medical liability insurers have returned to the State. We had fallen from 17 insurers to two, and now we stand at 14, with several insurers having come back into the State with rates that were flat or, in fact, lower. In fact, Texas Medical Liability Trust, my old insurer of record, has dropped rates from 12 percent right after the constitutional amendment passed and another 5 percent this year, for a total of 17 percent.

But most importantly, Mr. Speaker, the Cristus Health Care System in south Texas, a self-insured hospital system, realized a $12 million savings in the first 9 months of this legislation, money that was put back into nurses' salaries, capital expansion, the types of things that we want hospitals to be doing, not paying for noneconomic damages.

THERE THEY GO AGAIN

(Mr. PITTS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. PITTS. Mr. Speaker, Howard Dean, the new duly elected chairman of the Democratic Party, had quite a kick-off tour recently. He started off by making racially insensitive remarks about African Americans and Republicans. Then he said he "hates Republicans and everything they stand for." Next he told a group of activists in Kansas that Republicans are evil. The battle between Democrats and Republicans, he said, is a "struggle between good and evil, and we are the good."

It would be easy to write this off as just another Dean rant. But a woman in the audience, and remember, this is Kansas, hardly a left-wing bastion, said Dean did not go far enough. He was too conservative, she said.

Mr. Dean is the leader of a major political party. Even if his demagoguery is too timid for some activists, he represents the Democratic Party and its views, and his comments are yet further confirmation that the rhetoric of the left is eroding our political discourse.

PAYING TRIBUTE TO SAMUEL FRANCIS, A BRILLIANT AND BRAVE WRITER

(Mr. DUNCAN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DUNCAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to a fellow Tennessean, but a man whom I never had the privilege of meeting. Samuel Francis was a nationally syndicated newspaper columnist and a leading voice of traditional conservatism. He passed away several days ago, just after the Congress had gone into recess, at the too-young age of 57 from complications after heart surgery.

No two people, not even husbands and wives or best friends, agree on everything; and I did not always agree with Sam Francis. But I admired his courage. He was politically incorrect on almost everything, which made him right on most things, but also very controversial. He was a leading critic of neo-conservatives, Big Government conservatives who really are not very conservative at all.

Raised in Chattanooga, Tennessee, Dr. Francis had a bachelor's degree from Johns Hopkins and master's and Ph.D. degrees from the University of North Carolina.

Sam Francis did not believe in world government and multiculturalism. He was a patriotic American who put his own country first and was a brilliant and brave writer.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 8 of rule XX, the Chair will postpone further proceedings today on motions to suspend the rules on which a recorded vote or the yeas and nays are ordered, or on which the vote is objected to under clause 6 of rule XX.

Record votes on postponed questions will be taken after 6:30 p.m. today.

PROVIDING AMOUNTS FOR CONTINUING EXPENSES OF STANDING AND SELECT COMMITTEES OF THE HOUSE FROM APRIL 1, 2005 THROUGH APRIL 30, 2005

Mr. NEY. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and agree to the resolution (H. Res. 133) providing amounts from the applicable accounts of the House of Representatives for continuing expenses of standing and select committees of the House from April 1, 2005, through April 30, 2005, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

H. RES. 133

Resolved, That there shall be available from the applicable accounts of the House of Representatives such amounts as may be necessary for continuing expenses of standing and select committees of the House for the period beginning on April 1, 2005, and ending on April 30, 2005, on the same terms and conditions as amounts were available to such committees for the period beginning at noon on January 3, 2005, and ending at midnight on March 31, 2005, pursuant to clause 7 of rule X of the Rules of the House of Representatives (or, in the case of the Committee on Homeland Security, on the same terms and conditions as amounts were available to such Committee for such period pursuant to House Resolution 10, agreed to January 4, 2005).

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. NEY) and the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. HOLT) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. NEY).

Mr. NEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of House Resolution 133. It is a pleasure to be here today with the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. HOLT); and I also want to mention our ranking member, the gentlewoman from California (Ms. MILLENDER-MCDONALD). As we go through the process here, it is going to be a privilege and a pleasure to work with her and all the Democrats and Republicans on the committee to provide for the funding resolution.

Mr. Speaker, today I rise in support of House Resolution 133, which provides interim funding for the standing select committees of the House from April 1, 2005, through April 30, 2005. The rules of the House provide interim funding for committees until March 31 of 2005. This resolution will extend that funding for an additional month, thereby allowing the Committee on House Administration the time needed to put together the committee funding resolution that will, once passed, fund the committees for the duration of the 109th Congress.

This is nothing unusual. We have done this in the past. The committee chairmen and ranking members will appear Thursday of this week and the following Wednesday to present their budget requests to the committee, and that will be all the committee Chairs.

As the House will be out of session for the final 2 weeks of March for the Easter district work period, floor consideration of the committee funding resolution really will not be practical or possible, therefore, before March 31; and, therefore, it necessitates passage of this interim funding resolution. That is why we are here today. I therefore urge my colleagues to support resolution 133; it is needed.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. HOLT. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I join the distinguished gentleman from Ohio in supporting House Resolution 133, providing interim funding for standing and select committees of the House through April 30, 2005.

As most chairmen and ranking members know, funding for House committees would expire March 31 without this resolution.

□ 1415

I would like to thank the chairman for ensuring the committees will have the resources to continue operating while the Committee on House Administration processes their funding requests for the 109th Congress.

President Woodrow Wilson from my home State of New Jersey said it well when he said here on the floor, "Congress in session is Congress on public exhibition, whilst Congress in its committee rooms is Congress at work."

Yes, we have to keep the committees going, and I support the chairman in this effort. The Committee on House Administration's ranking member, the gentlewoman from California (Ms. MILLENDER-MCDONALD), who is returning from her district, has asked me to stand in for her and asked me to specifically relay that she is looking forward to working with the chairman on hearings this week and next week. She is especially keen to ensure that in this Congress committee minorities will receive at least one-third of all committee resources.

Now, I, speaking as a member of the Commission on Congressional Mailing Standards, which is commonly known as the Franking Commission, am concerned about problems with the increased abuse of the frank by one or more committee chairs for blatantly, I would have to say, blatantly political purposes. And I am hopeful that the Committee on House Administration will address this issue through the upcoming Committee Funding Resolution and take appropriate action to stop any such abuses.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. NEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the gentleman for supporting this resolution today and also look forward to working with the Congresswoman and ranking member.

When the gentleman from California (Mr. THOMAS) chaired the Committee on House Administration, he pushed towards the one-third and always provided one-third at that time to the ranking member, the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. HOYER). We have kept in that tradition, together with the gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. LARSON) and also with the current ranking member, the gentlewoman from California (Ms. MILLENDER-MCDONALD). I am very happy to say that last session, with the gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. LARSON), we achieved the two-thirds/one-third, and we need to continue to do that. And I think that is the only fair way, and we need to evaluate how the two-thirds and one-third is split.

Again, with the gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. LARSON), we did that. It was a great achievement that was started by the gentleman from California (Mr. THOMAS).

As far as the issue of the committees, although I do not see any abuse that has occurred, as far as retooling the rules and regs of the House, we are always willing to sit and talk about that.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. HOLT. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I would say many Americans wonder why the resources for the committees are not divided one-half/one-half. Well, they should understand that it is traditional, now that the majority party would have most of the committee staff, most of the committee resources, and so two-thirds/one-third division has become traditional and that is what the gentlewoman from California (Ms. MILLENDER-MCDONALD) is hoping to achieve. I thank the chairman for his consideration.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. NEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BOOZMAN). The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. NEY) that the House suspend the rules and agree to the resolution, H. Res. 133, as amended.

The question was taken.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. In the opinion of the Chair, two-thirds of those present have voted in the affirmative.

Mr. NEY. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 8 of rule XX and the Chair's prior announcement, further proceedings on this motion will be postponed.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. NEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material on H. Res. 133.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

SUPPORTING THE DESIGNATION OF A YEAR OF LANGUAGES

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and agree to the resolution (H. Res. 122) expressing the sense of the House of Representatives regarding the study of languages and supporting the designation of a Year of Languages.

The Clerk read as follows:

H. RES. 122

Whereas the people of the United States have growing social, cultural, and economic ties to the international community that present new challenges as the United States seeks to communicate with and understand international partners from different language and cultural backgrounds;

Whereas communities across the United States are welcoming many new neighbors, friends, employees, and citizens from many countries throughout the world;

Whereas increased language learning is a critical national interest and is necessary to maintain the economic edge the United States has in the worldwide marketplace;

Whereas developing a workforce that is skilled in languages and cultural understanding is vital for conducting international commerce;

Whereas both the 2000 Cox Commission and the National Intelligence Council have reported that a shortfall of experts in foreign languages, particularly the languages of Asia and the Middle East, has seriously hampered information gathering and analysis within the intelligence community of the United States;

Whereas studying other languages has been shown to contribute to increased cognitive skills, better academic performance, and a greater understanding of others, while also providing life-long learning opportunities;

Whereas language education in the 21st century includes a commitment to the study of long sequences of world languages, beginning in early grades and continuing throughout the academic career of an individual, in order to develop the levels of proficiency needed to effectively communicate with people from other cultures at home and abroad; and

Whereas the American Council on the Teaching of Foreign Languages, along with its affiliate organizations, is urging the public to support increased language education for students, which will expand the cultural and literary horizons of adult learners and strengthen the position and security of the United States throughout the world: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That it is the sense of the House of Representatives that—

(1) the study of languages contributes to the intellectual and social development of a student and the economy and security of the United States;

(2) there should be a Year of Languages in the United States, during which language study is promoted and expanded in elementary schools, secondary schools, institutions of higher education, businesses, and government programs; and

(3) the President should issue a proclamation calling upon the people of the United States to—

(A) encourage and support initiatives to promote and expand the study of languages; and

(B) observe a Year of Languages with appropriate ceremonies, programs, and other activities.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Nevada (Mr. PORTER) and the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. HOLT) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Nevada (Mr. PORTER).

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks on H. Res. 122.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Nevada?

There was no objection.

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 122. This resolution expresses the importance of foreign language study and supports the designation of a Year of Languages. Increased language learning is a critical national interest and is necessary to maintain the economic edge of the United States as well as serving to better secure our national interest abroad.

Currently, 9.3 percent of Americans speak their native language and another language fluently, compared to 52.7 percent of Europeans.

Foreign language education has long been determined to increase a student's cognitive and critical thinking abilities. The Elementary and Secondary Education Act names foreign language study as a part of a core curriculum, and the Higher Education Act denotes that foreign language study is vital to secure the future economic welfare of the United States. Therefore, language education in our Nation's schools should begin in early grades and continue throughout the student's entire academic career.

By designating a Year of Languages, this Congress highlights the importance of foreign languages and cultural understanding in our schools, our workforces and our society. The celebration of languages will serve as a look to the future for Americans who will be entering the workforce at a time when international understanding, cross-cultural awareness and linguistic capacity are increasingly important for their success in the world.

In light of the attacks of September 11, 2001, the American intelligence community stresses that individuals with proper foreign language expertise are greatly needed to work on important national security and foreign policy issues. As we enter into a time that requires an increased understanding of world cultures, foreign language study and requisite knowledge in languages is vital for meeting 21st century security challenges properly, effectively and efficiently.

Mr. Chairman, I urge my colleagues to support this resolution.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. HOLT. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to speak at some length about this because it is really so important to our country. I would like to thank the leadership for allowing us to bring up this resolution which expresses the sense of the House of Representatives regarding the study of languages and supporting the designation of a Year of Languages. I would like to thank the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. TIBERI) for co-sponsoring the resolution.

Under the guidance and guardianship of the American Council on the Teaching of Foreign Languages, 2005 will be celebrated as the Year of Languages in the United States. These celebrations will take place in a variety of settings including elementary and secondary schools and post-secondary institutions as well as at events at local and State and national levels across America. It is an opportunity to focus on America's need to focus our attention on the social and economic benefits of studying other languages and cultures around the world and on the importance of these studies to our national security.

This initiative will seek to influence the full range of language programs in the United States schools and communities, and I think the campaign plan will capture the attention and, I hope, the interest of all Americans with the involvement and assistance of teachers, administrators and local officials. If the United States is going to continue to play an important role in the global economy and in the business world and to be the leader politically, and I would say militarily, we must be able to understand and communicate with other cultures around the world.

According to a 2002 survey from Healthy Companies International, the average number of languages spoken by American business executives is less than one and a half, compared with say 3.9 languages spoken on average by business executives in the Netherlands.

The goals of the Year of Languages are four: To expand the public's understanding of the role of language in all aspects of people's lives, in society and in the future of human and international relations; to promote the importance of language learning and language proficiency, urging every American to commit to learning other languages; to build awareness of the diversity of languages that now play an integral part of everyday life in our country; and to promote the formation of a national task force to study and strengthen national policy on language learning and teaching and to make recommendations to strengthen U.S. policy.

Some members of the public and the media might question why, with our unparalleled military and economic power, Americans need to learn languages of the world. Does not everyone speak English anyway? So they say.

Well, the reasons to launch a government-wide effort to build a pipeline of professionals with advanced foreign language capabilities, I think, should be self-evident to Americans. Let me quote a statement. "The United States today carries new responsibilities in many quarters of the globe, and we are at a serious disadvantage because of the difficulty of finding persons who can deal with the foreign language problems."

Those are not my words. Those are the words of former U.S. Secretary of State John Foster Dulles, spoken in 1953. What was true in the post-World War II world of 1953 is even more true in the post-9/11 world of 2004 and 2005.

Our national deficiency in the languages and cultures of critical areas around the world is compromising American security interests. And in addition to diminishing our opportunities economically and culturally, the deficiency is making our troops overseas more vulnerable and, I would argue, the American people less safer.

A few years after John Foster Dulles spoke these words, Russia launched a small beeping sphere above the Earth known as Sputnik. Americans were shocked, even fearful, and Congress, saying America would never be caught flat-footed again, passed the National Defense Education Act in 1958 that did much to overhaul the teaching of science and math and also provided some assistance for the study of languages.

September 11, 2001, was also a wake-up call for us. If we fail to address one of the most serious problems facing our Nation, we will not have risen to the challenge of September 11, 2001. The 9/11 joint inquiry reported a year and a half ago that our intelligence community is at 30 percent readiness in languages critical to national security. A State Department commissioned report from a year ago found that our government has only 54, or at that time, only 54 genuine Arabic speakers working in the entire Foreign Service.

A year or so ago, I asked David Kay, the former head of the Iraq Survey Group, how many on his 1,400 member team spoke Arabic and understood the technology of weapons of mass destruction. Well, he said he could count on the fingers of one hand.

I posed similar questions to some members of the special forces who had been combing the mountains of Afghanistan looking for Osama bin Laden. I asked how many of them spoke Pushtu. Well, they responded, they had picked some up during the year they had been there. Although our special forces represent some of the best trained forces in the world, we are clearly not giving them the skills they need. If Osama bin Laden is truly American public enemy number one, how do we expect to track him down if we cannot speak the languages of the people who are hiding him?

As Dr. David Chu, the U.S. Undersecretary of Defense, said in his opening remarks at the National Language Conference last June, we need “a permanent change in our approach to the peoples and cultures of the rest of the world.”

Our need to understand the world is a prime national security concern.

He went on, “National security concerns have taken us from the streets of Manhattan to the mountains of Afghanistan and to the resort cities of Bali. Our economy has brought workers here to America and sent jobs to 100 countries around the world. Our health is affected by conditions and events in China, Britain, Africa and South America. Criminal cartels and corrupt officials hundreds of miles beyond our borders have an immediate impact on our streets, in our schools and our homes. Within one generation, we have become integrated into the world as never before.” Those are the words of the Undersecretary of Defense Dr. Chu.

While the Defense Department, the State Department and our intelligence agencies have recently turned their attention to the language problem, their approach remains focused on immediate needs. They are stepping up recruitment efforts, and they are expanding the language education programs in Monterey, here in Washington and elsewhere, and these are promising and necessary changes, but they only scratch the surface.

They do not deal with the problem of the pool. From what pool will they be recruiting the linguists for the Defense Department, the State Department, our intelligence agencies?

The root of the problem, I think, is in our schools. If we are to address adequately the language shortage in the Federal Government, we have to look past the issues of immediate recruitment and foreign language training. Federal language schools are building on a poor language foundation. We must design and implement a Federal language strategy that begins at the earliest years of education and continues through college.

Mr. Speaker, consider the following facts: Al Qaeda and similar terrorist elements operate in over 75 countries where hundreds of languages and dialects are spoken. However, 99 percent of American high school, college and university programs concentrate on a few, mostly European, languages. According to figures from a couple of years ago, 2002, more college students study Ancient Greek than Arabic, Korean, Persian, Pashto and a number of other languages put together. Nothing against Ancient Greek, but certainly it is an important area of study, but the shortage of training in Arabic, Korean, Persian, Pashto and a long list of others should be cause for concern.

Out of 1.3 million graduates at America's colleges and universities, 17, two years ago, earned a bachelor's or advanced degree in Arabic, according to the Department of Education, 17. In Chinese, the language spoken by billions of people, 217 degrees were granted, according to the Department of Education. That is compared with almost 3,000 in French, more than 8,000 in Spanish. We need to improve not just the number of degrees but the quality of education throughout the educational years.

In addition to the resolution before us today, I have introduced the National Security Language Act, legislation that would expand the Federal investment in education in foreign languages of critical need. It would provide Federal incentives for high school students to study languages in college. It would give universities resources to expand language programs overseas, and it would identify Americans with preexisting language abilities for recruitment.

The bill would create an international flagship language initiative that would provide Federal grants to specific universities and colleges to establish high-quality, intensive, in-country language study programs in countries around the world. It would establish a science and technology advanced language grant program for institutions of higher education to establish programs that encourage students to develop foreign language proficiency as they study science, engineering and other technologies.

The bill would provide loan forgiveness of up to $10,000 for undergraduate students in foreign languages. It would encourage early northern language studies by establishing grants for foreign language partnerships between local districts and foreign language departments at institutes of higher education.

It would create a commission of national study of foreign language heritage and a Federal marketing campaign to identify heritage communities with native speakers of critical foreign languages and market to them the need to pursue the study of languages.

I believe the next step then would be to increase the supply line of students who have strong language skills, and this can only be done through the K-through-12 system. The Council for Basic Education recently released a study. Foreign language instruction experienced decreases in instruction time as reported by principals, particularly in high minority schools. Whereas in low minority schools, 9 percent of the principals reported a decrease in time spent studying languages; 11 percent reported an increase. But in minority schools, schools with a high proportion of minority students, there was a 23 percent decline in instructional time, with only 9 percent of the principals reporting an increase. In other words, this is also a matter of our educational divide in this country.

In addition to developing a lifelong ability to communicate with people from other countries and backgrounds, other benefits include improved overall school performance and improved problem solving skills. Students of foreign languages tend to score higher on standardized tests. And results from the Scholastic Aptitude Test show that students who had studied a foreign language for 4 or more years outscored other students on the verbal and math portions of the test. This is according to the college board SAT as reported in 2003.

Knowledge of a second language also seems to coincide with high academic achievement. It is not just whether a school has a rigorous program, although certainly that helps, but time spent in studying foreign languages means that students earn better grades in college and are less likely to drop out.

There are all sorts of reasons to study foreign languages, and studying the language, learning a language at any age is beneficial. Some studies have shown that the brain is more open to linguistic development in the early years. I have certainly seen that in my own grandchildren and children. When children have an early start to a long sequence of language instruction that continues through high school and college, they will be, studies have shown, able to achieve levels of fluency in that and to pick up other languages. Nevertheless, older children and adults can still be successful at learning a second or third or fourth language. Although the level of attainment is a little more predictable for us older learners, it is still worth doing.

In 1958, as I said, Congress responded to Sputnik by passing the National Defense Education Act. It focused on science and engineering and, to some extent, on languages. Immediately after September 11, Americans found themselves once again facing a Sputnik moment. Americans realized that we were caught flatfooted and unprepared to deal with not just hatred around the world but hatred that was turned into vicious attacks.

We need a national commitment to languages on a scale of the NDEA, the National Defense Education Act, and Mr. Speaker, I think today's resolution that will, among other things, recognize 2005 as the year of languages is a start toward making that commitment.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. HOLT. Mr. Speaker, may I ask the time remaining on each side?

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BOOZMAN). The gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. HOLT) has 3½ minutes remaining.

Mr. HOLT. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentlewoman from California (Mrs. DAVIS), my colleague.

(Mrs. DAVIS of California asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Mrs. DAVIS of California. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of House Resolution 122.

For years, we have known that, to be competitive in the world, Americans must acquire the language capacity to speak with our counterparts. Personally, for myself, when my husband was stationed in Japan during the Vietnam War, we lived in a Japanese community, and with my toddler and baby there, I learned some minimal Japanese so that I could speak with and spend time with my neighbors in a way that was really meaningful to both of us. We became friends, and the importance of language study became so real to me in those days.

In San Diego, we are keenly aware that so many of our residents are bilingual. Indeed, in our schools, students come from homes where English is not spoken. Over a hundred languages are represented in our schools.

As a school board member, I have worked hard to develop better training of foreign language instructors and to bring in more initiatives that recognize the diverse languages in our schools, but I must say that that issue really did not progress nearly as much as I would like, and in fact, today, we still have issues around certifying teachers in many different languages.

Critically, we are also so aware that our service members must be equipped with even the basic ability to speak with the citizens of Iraq and with the citizens of Afghanistan. So I am proud that our service personnel in Camp Pendleton are now being given that very introductory language instruction from our higher education institutions.

It is clearly appropriate that we establish a year of languages to focus on the importance of developing proficiency in a language other than English, and it must be a strong initiative that we bring forward. It will only be meaningful, however, if we only move forward and we develop a kind of strategic plan so that we find the resources, and more than anything, we find the will to make foreign language development an integral part of our daily lives.

I salute my colleague for bringing this forward. I thank him very much because I think it has to be the kind of initiative that goes beyond many of our dreams for this area. It must have the kind of applicability that says this is important to us; this is important to our country.

Mr. HOLT. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume, and I am delighted to hear that my colleague has studied Japanese.

Mr. Speaker, I ask that my colleagues pass this resolution and work with me on other language projects to see that we address this Sputnik moment that this country faces and that we work hard to address our poor, I would use that word, language proficiency here in the United States, for reasons of culture, for reasons of economics and for reasons of national security.

I urge the passage of H. Res. 122.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Nevada (Mr. PORTER) that the House suspend the rules and agree to the resolution, H. Res. 122.

The question was taken.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. In the opinion of the Chair, two-thirds of those present have voted in the affirmative.

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

SMART SECURITY AND INTERNATIONAL WOMEN'S DAY 2005

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from California (Ms. WOOLSEY) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Ms. WOOLSEY. Mr. Speaker, earlier this week, the United Nations High-Level Panel on Threats, Challenges and Change released a report to correspond with International Women's Day 2005, which is today, March 8, 2005.

Since March is also Women's History Month, it is important to discuss the proven link between gender equality and global security and development. There is an important link here, but it is one that we seldom discuss.

The UN's comprehensive report addresses the inter-connectedness of gender equality and the threats that most affect our world: International security, extreme poverty, environmental degradation and diseases such as HIV/AIDS, malaria and tuberculosis.

Because women constitute a greater proportion than men of the world's poorest people, women stand to gain the most from the alleviation of extreme poverty. And because women around the world experience higher illiteracy rates than men, they also stand to gain more from education programs, particularly in the world's poorest countries where opportunities to receive quality instruction are extremely scarce.

The link between poverty and illiteracy and global insecurity is clear. The bipartisan 9/11 Commission that addressed the terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001 acknowledged that poverty, illiteracy and despair do not cause terrorism, but they do breed conditions in which terrorism is created.

That is why any attempt to address international security must include a discussion about high poverty and illiteracy rates. And because women are burdened disproportionately by poverty and illiteracy, any attempt to address those plights must begin by addressing the excessive degree to which women are affected.

Even in America, women who work full-time year-round earn only 76 cents for every $1 that their male counterparts earn. And every day, in nearly every country in the world, women are beaten, raped and killed. This crisis of violence against women has reached the most dire magnitude in countries like Sudan and Congo and Angola, where rape and brutality towards women is used as a political tool and an act of war.

The international trafficking of women and girls is also a huge problem. Trafficking, the process by which women are sold into sexual slavery, is particularly rampant in Africa and in Southeast Asia.

For those who do not believe there to be an issue of concern for the United States, think again. The trafficking of women reinforces the vicious cycle that continually prevents women from earning a decent living wage, keeping them in slavery and keeping them from receiving the same quality of education as men. This in turn reinforces the root cause of global instability that often gives rise to terrorism.

Fortunately, there is a way to address this crisis. It is called SMART security for the 21st century. SMART is a Sensible Multilateral American Response to Terrorism. SMART security addresses the security of women by urging educational opportunities for women and girls. Studies have proven that the more girls that are enrolled in schools in developing countries, the more the population of that country stabilizes. And the more stable the country, the more violence decreases. In fact, domestic violence lessens and crime levels decrease in line with educational opportunities.

We must prevent future acts of the terrorism, and SMART security is a way to do it. Instead of trying to spread democracy through the barrel of a gun, like we have been in Iraq, let us spread it through books, by increasing educational opportunities for women and girls. Today, International Women's Day, let us make it a priority to ensure that women in the poorest countries receive the educational opportunities they need and deserve.

Just as important, women need to be encouraged and allowed to participate in the political process in every country if we are to see a more secure world. And above all else, we must remember that if international security efforts fail to include women, then they are excluding more than half of the world's population. Let us include all of the world's population and let us secure our world for the 21st century.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. GOHMERT). Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. GUTKNECHT) is recognized for 5 minutes.

(Mr. GUTKNECHT addressed the House. His remarks will appear hereafter in the Extensions of Remarks.)

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. EMANUEL) is recognized for 5 minutes.

(Mr. EMANUEL addressed the House. His remarks will appear hereafter in the Extensions of Remarks.)

EXCHANGE OF SPECIAL ORDER TIME

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to claim the time of the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. EMANUEL).

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

SUPPORTING NATIONAL MANUFACTURING WEEK

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. BROWN) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, we all support American manufacturers; every Member of Congress should. But feel-good resolutions such as the one we are voting on this week will do little to cure our manufacturing ills.

We are running record trade deficits each year. When I first ran for Congress in 1992, the U.S. trade deficit, as you can see on this chart, was $38 billion. The trade deficit last year, after 12 years of misplaced trade policy, 12 years of misplaced tax policy and 4 years of a Bush administration that has totally ignored manufacturing, we now see a trade deficit of $617 billion. From $38 billion to $617 billion in a space of only 13 years.

The U.S. has become the world's largest debtor nation, over $2.5 trillion in 2002. The dollar continues to lose value in world markets.

Last year, we had the opportunity to pass Crane/Rangel, a bipartisan bill to help the American manufacturing industry by encouraging them to produce goods in the United States. But instead, we passed an alternative that, as usual, gave handouts to multinational corporations and did little to nothing for our family-owned manufacturing facilities.

My State of Ohio has lost more than 170,000 manufacturing jobs since 2001, and the remaining small manufacturing businesses are struggling to keep the doors open. The manufacturing extension program, MEP, is an important resource that helps small manufacturers in Ohio and across the country to help improve efficiency, increase competitiveness and stay in business. Despite this success, the President is asking in his budget to eviscerate MEP.

In 2003, when MEP was funded at $111 million, Ohio, although only receiving a small fraction of that funding, that modest investment produced impressive results. MEP helped more than 2,700 Ohio businesses to create or retain more than 1,100 jobs, increase sales by $20 million, cut costs by $47 million, increase investments by $58 million. That is exactly the sort of helping hand Ohio and the Nation's small manufacturers need.

Then the President proposed an MEP funding cut of 88 percent, ended up signing a law a couple of years ago that cut it almost that much. Not surprisingly, services to Ohio businesses dropped significantly. This year, the President's budget request asked for a funding cut of another 50 percent. Less than $1 million per State will be left for MEP. We should be supporting a funding level five times that amount because it would mean more tax revenue, more jobs, more success for U.S. manufacturers.

Ohio's Republican governors urge the President to change his position on MEP. Working men and women from my State and across the Nation understand that our economic future is at stake. We should pass a bill this week ensuring increased MEP funds over the President's request, but this body probably will not do it.

To support our Nation's manufacturing, we should pass a bill to stop China from manipulating its currency by artificially pegging it below the dollar. China starts out with a 40 percent advantage over American manufacturers by this illegal act, not to mention having no minimum wage and forced labor camps and child labor and all the other advantages, artificial advantages if you will, in a free marketplace that China has. But I do not think that legislation to deal with currency manipulating will be on the House floor this week.

To support our Nation's manufacturers, we should pass such a bill making sure China plays fair and meets its World Trade Organization obligations, but I do not see a bill on the floor this week to do that.

To support our Nation's manufacturing, we should pass the bill of the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. CARDIN), the Foreign Debt Ceiling Act of 2005, that would create an emergency trade review group at the U.S. Trade Representative's Office to develop a plan of action if the trade deficit is above 5 percent of U.S. GDP or if foreign debt climbs above 25 percent of GDP. But that is not being considered this week either.

The manufacturing industry is the backbone of our country. This industry, these workers, these communities built America. And when these industries suffer, our communities suffer, our families suffer, our schools suffer, our Nation is hurt. Yet many in Congress continue to support measures that move these jobs overseas. Let us be clear about whom we should support.

Congratulate manufacturers, is what the resolution on the floor will do and nothing else this week, who have remained in the U.S. and refrained from sending manufacturing jobs overseas. But it is not just about keeping our middle class strong; we should be concerned about national security. Without a strong manufacturing base, there can be no strong reliable national security in this country.

Mr. Speaker, I hope that we, finally, in this Congress adopt a manufacturing policy.

ORDER OF BUSINESS

Mr. BURGESS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to speak out of order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. GOHMERT). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

SOCIAL SECURITY

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. BURGESS) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. BURGESS. Mr. Speaker, the American people are hearing a lot of information about our Social Security system, and I am sure they have got legitimate questions: Is there a crisis or not? If there is a crisis, then is there a trust fund or not? If there is not a trust fund, where did it go, who took it and when?

There are, of course, those who say that there is no crisis, that we have a system that is awash in cash and can fund all future benefits but it needs minor tweaking to ensure solvency.

Perhaps crisis is the wrong word. Captive may be a better selection because certainly we are held captive by our demographics. If our current system is to work and work well, we need large numbers of young people to pay into the system, and we need retirees to live relatively short intervals after their retirement; but in fact, neither of these situations reflects reality.

Birth rates are down in this country, although not to the degree as seen in some Western European countries, still resulting in a smaller pool of younger workers to support retirees. Life expectancy is up, largely because of the unbelievable advances in medical care that have occurred in the last 70 years since 1935. Both situations are arguably good news, but they do portend a serious situation for our Social Security system.

For example, in the country of Japan there are now four retirees to be supported by every new job that is created. It becomes extremely difficult to remain competitive in such an environment. Raising taxes to deal with the Social Security shortfall arguably has been done several times in the past 70 years; but, unfortunately, that makes the problem even worse. The old axiom states that you tax what you do not want, but surely we want jobs for tomorrow's Americans, but increasing the payroll tax may mean ultimately there are fewer such jobs.

In 1937, the Supreme Court ruled that excess Social Security funds were to be placed in the general revenue fund. Mr. Speaker, that is what happened to the trust fund. In fact, nonnegotiable government instruments housed in a metal filing cabinet in West Virginia represent the surplus in Social Security, and that surplus has been spent over the last several decades by Congress. Congress spent the money, Congress wrote out an IOU for the money, and we continue to write IOUs for the interest.

Mr. Speaker, where is the fairness in a system that holds captive 12 percent of the country's payroll and pays no interest on the money? This, I think, is the heart of the problem. What Albert Einstein described as the miracle of compound interest is denied to American workers.

What are the solutions that might be there for us to help with Social Security? We could cut benefits. I did not come to Congress to do that. We could raise taxes. Not this guy.

There are, of course, those who feel that growth in the economy will help those two workers that are going to have to support every retiree into the future; and I will tell my colleagues, Mr. Speaker, I will bet on the American economy every time, but I am not sure if we can improve productivity to that degree.

Mr. Speaker, what we can do is take those excess funds being paid into Social Security and place them into individual accounts that would not be accessible to government spenders and not be accessible to congressional appropriators. Allow these accounts to earn interest by following a conservative investment strategy, and now perhaps we begin to see the opportunity to preserve Social Security and ensure its solvency well into the future.

The question is always asked how to pay for this transition. I have already excluded a tax increase or benefit cut as a viable mechanism. The money to finance the transition would have to be borrowed; and in fact, this does not represent new debt because the obligation has already been incurred. The borrowing is only to refinance an obligation that already exists, a situation analogous to refinancing a mortgage.

Mr. Speaker, we should always be for good government. The principle of good government would suggest that the current obligation is present, but we are not acknowledging its presence. By financing the transition, we can convert an unknown obligation into bonded indebtedness. It becomes a marketable instrument; and that, in fact, would be a commitment to good government.

Financial markets are not known for their courage. They do not like uncertainty; and, clearly, the uncertainty of monetizing the Social Security debt in the future is one that they will deal with fairly severely. But by making that a known obligation, we are giving the markets more comfort into what our intentions are with regard to the unfunded Social Security liability.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to close with a quotation that was delivered in this House some years ago: "Voluntary contributory annuities by which individual initiative can increase the annual amounts received in old age. It is proposed that the Federal Government assume one-half of the cost of the old-age pension plan, which ought ultimately to be supplanted by self-supporting annuity plans."

These words were spoken in this Chamber 70 years ago by Franklin Delano Roosevelt, the father of Social Security.

Mr. Speaker, it is our obligation to deal with this problem this year. I applaud the President for pushing it on the national agenda, and I look forward to the debate.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. PALLONE) is recognized for 5 minutes.

(Mr. PALLONE addressed the House. His remarks will appear hereafter in the Extensions of Remarks.)

ORDER OF BUSINESS

Mr. KIND. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to speak out of order for 5 minutes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Wisconsin?

There was no objection.

THE DREAM LIVES ON

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. KIND) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. KIND. Mr. Speaker, 40 years ago yesterday on March 7, 1965, events in Selma, Alabama, became a seminal moment for the advancement of civil rights in our country. Last weekend, I had the privilege to join one of my heroes, the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. LEWIS), who was also one of the leaders of the nonviolent civil rights movement, to retrace his steps across the Edmund Pettus Bridge where America's long march to freedom met a roadblock of violent resistance. The day became known as Bloody Sunday.

By 1965, the cause of equality and human dignity had already seen much progress and setbacks: the Supreme Court decision of Brown v. Board of Education, Rosa Parks's defiance on a bus in Montgomery, the breaking of a color barrier at Ole Miss, the historic March on Washington, the assassinations of Medgar Evers and President Kennedy, the bombing deaths of four little girls at the 16th Street Baptist Church in Birmingham, Alabama, the Mississippi freedom summer, the passage of the Civil Rights Act of 1964.

But on this Bloody Sunday, about 600 people, young and old, put their lives on the line and met the unbridled force of racism for the most basic American right, the right to vote and be full participants in our democracy. The Alabama State Patrol was waiting for them at the other side of the Pettus Bridge and attacked them with clubs, tear gas, and dogs.

The gentleman from Georgia (Mr. LEWIS) was beaten so badly he believed he was going to die. The images were captured on TV. When the movie "Judgment at Nuremberg" was interrupted with the news, many people watching the movie first thought that it was a continuation of the movie depicting brutal Nazi oppression, until they realized that this was happening in America, right now. People's shock moved the political world.

One week after Bloody Sunday, President Johnson spoke to the Nation. In inspiring words, he said: "At times, history and fate meet in a single time and a single place to shape a turning point in man's unending search for freedom. So it was at Lexington and Concord. So it was a century ago at Appomattox. So it was last week in Selma. Their cause must be our cause."

Two weeks after Bloody Sunday, Dr. Martin Luther King and the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. LEWIS) led 4,000 people across the Pettus Bridge on their 54-mile march to Montgomery. Six months later, President Johnson signed the Voting Rights Act, proclaiming that the right to vote is the most powerful instrument ever devised for breaking down injustice and destroying the terrible walls which imprison all people merely because they are different from each other.

Soon the Voting Rights Act will be up again before Congress for reauthorization. We should do it sooner rather than later. We should make it permanent, rather than for short periods, so we do not have to revisit the issue and debate its provisions. Surely there is enough common interest and bipartisan support to accomplish this.

Their cause 40 years ago this week still must be our cause to overcome today. For as long as the power of America's diversity is diminished by acts of discrimination and violence against people just because they are black, Hispanic, Asian, Jewish, Muslim or gay, we still must overcome.

As long as the gap between rich and poor continues to spread in our Nation, with some and not all having access to health care, we still must overcome.

As long as children of color are more likely to live in poverty, die sooner, and less likely to graduate high school and go on to college, we still must overcome.

As President Bush stated during his recent trip to Europe: "We cannot carry the message of freedom and the baggage of bigotry at the same time.

All our nations must work to integrate minorities into the mainstream of society, and to teach the value of tolerance to each new generation."

President Clinton pointed out 5 years ago at the Pettus Bridge that these challenges already have existing bridges waiting to be crossed. He said: "These bridges stand on the strong foundations of our Constitution. They were built by our forebears through silent tears and weary years. They are waiting to take us to higher ground."

But there is still much work to be done. In the words of Martin Luther King, Jr.: "Human progress never rolls on the wheels of inevitability. It comes through the tireless efforts of people willing to be co-workers with God."

We remember the event of 40 years ago this week not only to honor the courage, sacrifice and accomplishments by those like the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. LEWIS) and so many more, but also to rededicate ourselves to their unfinished work: the pursuit of justice, love, tolerance and human rights, in our country and throughout the world.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. WELDON) is recognized for 5 minutes.

(Mr. WELDON of Florida addressed the House. His remarks will appear hereafter in the Extensions of Remarks.)

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from New York (Mrs. MCCARTHY) is recognized for 5 minutes.

(Mrs. MCCARTHY addressed the House. Her remarks will appear hereafter in the Extensions of Remarks.)

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. MICA) is recognized for 5 minutes.

(Mr. MICA addressed the House. His remarks will appear hereafter in the Extensions of Remarks.)

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Florida (Ms. CORRINE BROWN) is recognized for 5 minutes.

(Ms. CORRINE BROWN of Florida addressed the House. Her remarks will appear hereafter in the Extensions of Remarks.)

HONORING INTERNATIONAL WOMEN'S DAY

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. POE) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. POE. Mr. Speaker, today is International Women's Day, a day we honor women and their contributions to the American way of life. American women, from the frontier era to the space age, have steadily blazed the trails and stayed the course to bring recognition of the accomplishments of women not only in the United States but across the world and across the seas.

Each of us can identify at least one woman who forever marked our life in a positive way. My grandmother lived to her late nineties and was always the most influential person in my life. In the 1950s, after my grandfather was killed by a drunk driver, she went to work as a clerk in the ladies' ready-to-wear section of a department store; and while she would have continued to work there, they forced her to quit at the age of 75.

She taught me the values of public service, and this is why I have dedicated my life to public service. She was the most influential woman in my life. All of us have people like that, women who have influenced us in a positive way. Those American women, they are a rare breed.

In other countries, like Iraq, where I recently traveled on a fact-finding mission, women recount the decades of torture and execution and oppression they experienced under the tyrant and dictator Saddam Hussein. For most women it has only been since our toppling of that vicious and murderous tyrant that they have been allowed to pursue opportunities that we take for granted, like employment. On the historic election day, which I was privileged to observe this year, for many Iraqi women this was their first chance to ever vote.

Yet as encouraging as these illustrations are, millions of women are victims to a destructive force known as domestic violence. In fact, in the United States alone, according to the National Domestic Violence Hotline, nearly one-third of American women report being physically or sexually abused by a boyfriend or a husband at some point in their life. Moreover, the Department of Justice's statistics show that in 2003 alone 9 percent of all murder victims were killed by their spouse or their partners. Eighty percent of those victims were females.

Mr. Speaker, this is a serious problem, not just for our Nation's women but also for our Nation's families. It is a serious problem for children, children that live in those homes with all of that serious, serious turmoil.

Domestic abuse scars children through the images of violence and fighting; the ramifications if they try to intervene; the emotional anguish they suffer for years. Domestic abuse in some cases results in withdrawal or unhealthy perfectionism, and in other cases they act it out.

The American Psychological Association Presidential Task Force on Violence and the Family concluded in 1996 that a child's exposure to the father abusing the mother is the strongest risk factor for transmitting violent behavior from one generation to the next. In addition, the American Medical Association has calculated that family violence costs taxpayers in the range of $5 billion to $10 billion a year in medical expenses.

It is not only a family problem and a criminal problem; it is a health issue. Domestic violence costs us in police and court costs, shelters, foster care, sick leave, and nonproductivity.

As a former judge and founder of the Congressional Victims' Rights Caucus, this epidemic is of great alarm to me. I believe we must work to eliminate this domestic abuse while protecting the victims that have already resulted from this trend.

Mr. Speaker, I hope that all of us on this day, as we recognize the worth of women, are determined to make sure that they live in a safe environment in their homes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. GOHMERT). Under a previous order of the House, the gentlewoman from New York (Mrs. MALONEY) is recognized for 5 minutes.

(Mrs. MALONEY addressed the House. Her remarks will appear hereafter in the Extensions of Remarks.)

IN HONOR OF TILLIE FOWLER, FORMER MEMBER OF CONGRESS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 4, 2005, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. CRENSHAW) is recognized for 60 minutes as the designee of the majority leader.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. CRENSHAW. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks on the subject of this Special Order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Florida?

There was no objection.

Mr. CRENSHAW. Mr. Speaker, last Wednesday we announced on the floor of this House that our former colleague, Tillie Fowler, had passed away that day. She suffered a stroke on Monday and went to the hospital and never recovered from that. It was a sad day for all of us, and there were so many Members that served with Tillie that wanted to honor her life and her achievements that we asked for this time tonight to celebrate her life, to celebrate the contributions that she made not only to her community, not only to the State of Florida, but to the Nation as a whole; and so that is why we are here tonight.

Tillie Fowler was one of those unique individuals that could balance so many things in her life. I never had the chance to actually serve with Tillie because we were from the same hometown and while she served on the city council at the local level, I was serving in the State government; and when she left the Congress in 2000, I ran to take her seat. But I knew her as a friend for 35 years, and I watched her involve herself in the community, and I watched her get involved in local politics; I watched her become a United States House of Representative representative from the Fourth Congressional District. Through all of that, I saw the way that she loved her children, the way that she loved her husband, Buck, and the way that she loved her community.

I can remember so many times, as we would come back, because she was in Washington working with a large law firm, that we would ride a plane here and ride a plane back to Jacksonville and her husband, Buck, was always there at the airport to greet her and give her a big hug. So I just think there are so many people here that cared so much about her, because not only was she tough in what she tried to do but, more than anything, she just liked people. She cared about people, whether they were important people or just people she would see on the street. She had a way of making everybody feel at ease.

So, Mr. Speaker, I am saddened by her death, but I am proud of the legacy that she leaves behind her; and I know that Members here tonight share in that.

Mr. CRENSHAW. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to join with my colleagues in celebrating the life and accomplishments of former Congresswoman Tillie Kidd Fowler. Ms. Fowler passed away suddenly last week but leaves a proud legacy of achievement and integrity.

Tillie Fowler was born in 1942 and grew up in Milledgeville, Georgia. Her father, state Senator Culver Kidd, was a legendary Democratic political figure in the Georgia Legislature for over 40 years and her mother, Katherine, was active in the community. She received both her bachelor's degree and law degree from Emory University.

After law school, she moved to Washington, DC and worked as a congressional staffer for Representative Robert Stephens (D-GA) and later as Counsel in the White House Office of Consumer Affairs under President Richard Nixon. In 1968, she married attorney L. Buck Fowler and in 1971 moved to Jacksonville, Florida. Shortly thereafter, she put her professional career on hold to raise her daughters, Tillie Anne and Elizabeth. During this time she served as the President of the Junior League of Jacksonville (1982-83), chaired the Florida Humanities Council (1989-91) and was active in a number of other charitable organizations, including the American Red Cross and Volunteer Jacksonville.

She returned to political public service when she was elected to the Jacksonville City Council in 1985. She became that body's first Republican and first woman President.

Tillie Fowler was elected to Congress in 1992, winning a seat that had been held by a Democrat for 42 years. She secured an appointment to the House Armed Services committee, the only Republican woman on that committee at the time. Her subcommittee assignments included Readiness, Personnel and Military Construction. In 1997, she was appointed by the Speaker of the House to a task force created to investigate allegations of sexual harassment and abuse at U.S. military training bases.

She also served on the Transportation & Infrastructure Committee, and in the 106th Congress she was named Chairman of the newly created Subcommittee on Oversight, Investigations and Emergency Management.

In 1998, she was chosen by her Republican colleagues to be the Vice Chairman of the Republican Conference, making her the highest-ranking woman in the U.S. Congress when she retired. She also served for six years as a Deputy Majority Whip.

A year and a half before the terrible events of September 11, 2001, she drafted the Preparedness Against Terrorism Act of 2000 (H.R. 4210). Her bill would have centralized the Federal government's anti-terrorism efforts by creating the President's Council on Domestic Terrorism Preparedness within the White House. Many of her proposed reforms were enacted in the legislation creating the Department of Homeland Security.

Her reputation as a knowledgeable and articulate U.S. Representative resulted in her appointment to several boards outside of her committee responsibilities: U.S. Naval Academy Board of Visitors; Stennis Center for Public Service Board of Trustees, Vice Chairman; Defense Department's Centers for Security Studies Board of Visitors; and the House Page Board, Chairman.

Upon her departure from Congress, Representative Fowler's extraordinary efforts to ensure a strong United States military were recognized by the Secretary of the Navy and the Secretary of Defense. She received the Navy's Distinguished Public Service Award and the Department of Defense Medal for Distinguished Public Service. These are the highest civilian awards given by the Navy and the Department of Defense.

Shortly after leaving Congress, she was appointed by the Speaker of the House to the Commission on the Future of the Aerospace Industry which was created by Congress to assess the aerospace industry in the global economy, particularly in relationship to the national security of the United States. The Center for Strategic & International Studies also named her to its Distinguished Congressional Fellows panel.

She was appointed to the Defense Policy Board Advisory Committee by Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld in 2001. In May of 2003, the Secretary named her as Chairman of the prestigious board which advises the Secretary of Defense on issues central to strategic planning for the department. She is the first woman to serve as Chairman of the Defense Policy Board in its 20-year history. She also serves on the Chief of Naval Operations' Executive Panel whose purpose is to advise the CNO on questions related to national seapower.

In the spring of 2003, she was appointed by the Secretary of Defense to lead the seven-member panel created by Congress to review sexual misconduct allegations at the U.S. Air Force Academy. The panel conducted a 90-day study of the policies, management, organizational practices and cultural elements of the Academy that may have been conducive to alleged sexual misconduct. The panel's final report was delivered to the Secretary of Defense and the Congress on September 22, 2003.

When allegations of prisoner abuse by U.S. military personnel at Abu Ghraib prison in Iraq surfaced in May 2004, the Secretary of Defense again turned to Representative Fowler. The Secretary appointed her along with two former Secretaries of Defense and a retired four-star general, to a blue-ribbon panel charged with providing the Secretary with independent, professional advice on issues related to the allegations of prisoner mistreatment.

And finally, Mr. Speaker, this House was a better place for Tillie Fowler's service. She was a remarkable woman with a rare combination of passionate drive and dedication for what she believed and a caring spirit for the people around her. She made people feel at ease and she always did anything she could to help others. During lifetime of service she exhibited a striking presence of personality, integrity and intellect that will be sorely missed.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to yield to our conference chairman, the gentlewoman from Ohio (Ms. PRYCE).

Ms. PRYCE of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Florida for yielding to me and for hosting this Special Order honoring Tillie's life and her legacy. It is a wonderful tribute that Tillie deserved. The outpouring of emotion and praise here tonight, in Jacksonville, and all over the Nation proves how special a person Tillie Fowler was.

Universally respected and trusted, Tillie was a model public servant. She was also a model parent, a model spouse, and most importantly to me, a model friend. Lucky enough to have found her calling at an early age, Tillie became an aide to Congressman Robert Stephens from Georgia shortly after earning her law degree from Emory University. Her talents were quickly recognized, and she soon found herself in the Office of Consumer Affairs in the Nixon White House. There she met her good lifelong friend, now Senator ELIZABETH DOLE.

Following her public service early in life, Tillie and her husband moved to Florida and began their family. They raised two lovely daughters, Tillie Anne and Elizabeth. While in Florida, Tillie mastered one of the most important skills for a woman in politics: balancing her family and her desire to serve. Tillie always put her family first and, at the same time, found the energy to serve her community, first in the Jacksonville City Council and then as its chair.

In 1993, Tillie came to Washington as a Member of Congress, the same year I did; and we became fast friends. As my classmate, she was more than a colleague. Together we entered what was then, and still now to some extent, a man's world. We relied on each other for strength and for guidance, and shared the experience of being freshmen women together, two of only three in our Republican class that year.

From those first days in Congress, I recognized Tillie as a savvy politician but also as a selfless soul. She followed her convictions with tenacity and with courage. More than just a Member of Congress, Tillie Fowler was a patriotic legislator who let her conscience guide her through the most treacherous halls of Congress oftentimes. She earned respect from her colleagues, both men and women, Democrat and Republican; and she had no enemies that I ever knew of.

As Vice Chair of the House Republican Conference, Tillie set the standard for women in our leadership. She worked tirelessly on issues that affected the entire Nation. She was an active proponent of a strong military, and even went on to advise the Defense Department. She knew her stuff and she was never shy about speaking her mind, confident that her insight was valuable, and it was.

Tillie had the ability to disagree with you with a smile on her face all the while. She showed America that women legislators need not be relegated solely to women's issues; that we care about the same issues that men do, but with just a little different perspective. And today, International Women's Day, it is truly appropriate that we honor and celebrate the life of one of our Nation's finest.

Tillie was a friend to me, a great friend in times of sadness and in times of joy. I will miss her friendship and her guidance and know that there are countless others among us to whom she meant so much. Our prayers continue to be with Tillie's family, her two wonderful daughters and her husband, Buck; but her loved ones should know that Tillie left them, our country, and all who had the very, very good fortune to know her a wonderful and lasting legacy.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back to the gentleman from Florida.

Mr. CRENSHAW. Mr. Speaker, I yield now to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. DELAY), the distinguished majority leader of the House.

Mr. DELAY. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Florida for taking this Special Order in memory of Tillie Fowler.

Mr. Speaker, I rise to remember a warrior, Tillie Kidd Fowler, wife, mother, friend and patriot, died 6 days ago and left behind her a legacy of service all will admire but few will match.

She was as good a friend as she was a politician and was superb in both roles because no matter what hat she was wearing, it was still the same Tillie underneath. When word reached Washington last week that Tillie had left us, we all remembered the same things: we remembered her courage, her tenacity, and we remembered her leadership.

There was no national security issue about which she was not an expert. There was not a branch of our military that did not seek her guidance and help in promoting the policies that keep our Nation safe. And there was not a serviceman or -woman in uniform who did not have a loyal and caring friend in the gentlewoman from Jacksonville.

Her retirement from Congress, as anyone who knew Tillie could have guessed, did not in any way signal her retirement from public service. In the years after she left us, she helped lead public investigations into sexual misconduct at the Air Force Academy and prison abuse in Iraq. The wrongdoers in those cases up and down the chains of command, like her political opponents over the years, learned the hard way why Representative Fowler earned the nickname "Steel Magnolia."

She had also served since 2001 on the Pentagon's Defense Policy Board, advising Secretary Rumsfeld on strategy and policy during the tumultuous last 4 years.

Whatever the situation, Tillie Fowler's motivation was service: service to her family, to her community, to her country. For that reason, far more than for her many career and legislative achievements, last week this country lost a hero.

Decades from now, Mr. Speaker, when we too have left this building and, indeed, this world; when the controversies of our age are largely forgotten, the service and integrity that defined Tillie Fowler's life will still be remembered. She was a woman, good and true, who said things worth saying, did things worth doing, and served causes worth serving.

When you think about it, what more can you say about anyone? Tillie Fowler was always admired, Mr. Speaker, and now she will be missed.

Mr. CRENSHAW. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Florida (Mr. FOLEY).

Mr. FOLEY. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Florida (Mr. CRENSHAW) for arranging this Special Order.

As all of my colleagues probably know, as we remember Tillie it is always easy to remember the great, wonderful stories of an incredible life. When she left Congress, I knew how proud she was of the gentleman from Florida (Mr. CRENSHAW) replacing her, if you can replace anyone in this world. She knew the important things for her community, for her Nation were to be able to lead in a strong collective voice on national security. In that effort, she was the most incredible of spokespersons.

She was an incredibly strong voice for Jacksonville, a stronger voice for women, a role model for any person striving to serve in public life, and an incredible friend to all who knew her. There was not a day that went by that she did not mention Buck or her children, Elizabeth or Tillie, Jr. Whether it was just a casual comment; that she was heading back to see them at home this weekend; that they had just bought a condo at the beach; that they were getting ready to embark on another adventure; or that Tillie, Jr. had got a job, it was always about her family that she shared the joys of her life in service here.

I know Buck, Elizabeth, and Tillie, Jr. that your hearts ache, but they certainly do not ache alone. I will always remember her generosity of spirit and the time she took for a new Member of this Congress. Her first question whenever she saw you, in that gorgeous Southern accent, was "How are you, dear?" "How is your day?" "How can I help?"

She had a little ceremonial leather chair that was a beautiful antique. And when she was leaving Congress, she rolled it down to my office and said, "You always admired this chair. I want you to have it." I hope the office of the Capitol architect does not come looking for it, but I do have Tillie's chair.

When I ran for the Senate, I remember her coming from across town, sitting in my office and asking me if I really wanted to do this and if I knew what I was getting into. I told her I thought I did. And she said, well, if you are ready for the challenge, I am ready to saddle up and ride alongside you. And she never, never wavered in her support.

When I would go to Jacksonville and meet new friends, they would first ask me, what does Tillie think; what does Tillie think of your chances; does Tillie support you; and if Tillie supports you, that is good enough for me.

This business of politics, it is incredible when that universal voice of a community would always first ask, regardless of party, what does Tillie think?

As we honor her memory and pray for her soul, we thank God that he gave us a chance to get to know her. And those that did not, you missed an incredibly vivacious, talented and smart woman. We honor her commitment to this Nation and the legacy she leaves behind. And we pray for Buck and her kids, as they struggle through these dark days and as they reflect on her life, they know, yes, she was larger than life, but she was simply and modestly just Tillie. That is how she would want to be remembered, and we remember her in that way, a hero among us, a great patriot, a loving mother and wife, a superb human being. We pray for her soul.

Mr. CRENSHAW. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Florida (Mr. SHAW).

Mr. SHAW. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, it is difficult to express in words the feeling that we have outpouring here this evening for Tillie and our remembrance of her. She was always strong but gentle, brilliant yet reasonable. She had all of the types of things that we really need to look for in our leaders.

Emily, my wife, and I had a very unique relationship with Tillie. When married Members come to Congress, they are assigned by the congressional spouses what we call a little brother or little sister. And Emily loved to remind Buck that he was her little brother. We had a friendship that went beyond being just colleagues; it went outside of this Chamber, outside of this Capitol. The friendship that evolved is one that I will always remember.

We had a service down in Jacksonville just a few days ago. Two plane loads came down to be at that service from both the Pentagon as well as from this great body here. The outpouring that we saw in that community was really beautiful. The military was there. Both sides of the church were flanked by soldiers from all of the services, and the service ended up with a flyover, which I am sure Tillie would have loved. I remember the preacher in that small church. The church was absolutely full. People were standing in the front yard of the church just to hear the service and be near those so close to Tillie. The preacher talked about one of the greatest gifts man has is your memory. Tillie will always live in our memory. We love her, and we really just absolutely will never forget how wonderful she was and what a great influence she was and how she left her mark permanently on this body, her community and her country.

Mr. CRENSHAW. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Florida (Mr. STEARNS).

Mr. STEARNS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I represent the western part of Jacksonville and flew down for the funeral for Tillie Fowler and was quite moved. We lost a great leader. For Florida, she was a strong advocate, and we will miss Tillie quite a bit.

For 8 years, I had the privilege and honor of working with her in Congress on behalf of the people of Jacksonville. I feel a great deal of sympathy and extend prayers for her husband, Buck, and her two daughters, Tillie Ann and Elizabeth. Tillie and I worked on the Cecil Field Navy Master Jet Base when it showed up on the base closure. Many a night we were working together shoulder to shoulder trying to figure out how we could prevent the Navy from closing this important Navy jet base. Unfortunately, we did not succeed, but I learned a lot from her.

She combined humility with ambition. She had dedication, but she had grace. She was a woman of many talents. What the remarkable thing about Tillie was, you would talk to her and say, Tillie, I do not want to do that. She could get other people to do what they did not want to do, and in the end, they liked doing it somehow because of her leadership. It is a remarkable trait. She had a profound impact on all of the people she worked with, and she touched all of us.

Jacksonville used to be a small town. It is a much larger town, and that is largely attributable, I think, to Tillie Fowler's activities. It has 1 million people. The city is recognized as a growing urban center. It hosted the Super Bowl recently, a feat very few cities have had the opportunity to claim. Jacksonville maintains a strong commitment to armed services, and has two major Naval facilities there.

The successful transformation of Jacksonville over the past two decades owes much to Tillie Fowler. She worked on behalf of the area as a volunteer and as an elected official at the local and Federal level. This dedication to public service is really a family trait.

While making a run for Congress in 1992, she offered to limit herself to four terms. All of us went up to her after she was in the midst of trying to decide to tell her, I think your constituents would be very happy if you continue serving, but she was quite principled, and she said she was going to leave Congress and honor her four terms. In fact, I believe the leadership asked her to stay. She accomplished many of the goals she set out to achieve.

Mr. Speaker, we have lost more than an experienced lawmaker, public servant; we lost a good friend. She was a good friend to the people of Florida and to all of the men and women of our armed services. God bless Tillie Fowler.

Mr. Speaker, last week our nation lost a great leader and Florida lost a strong advocate with the death of Tillie Fowler. For eight years, I had the privilege and honor of working with her in Congress on behalf of the people of Jacksonville. I miss my former colleague and my friend, and my prayers are with her husband Buck and their two daughters, Tillie Ann and Elizabeth.

We worked together on the Brae commission when they had Cecil Field Navy master jet base on the closure list. We worked many nights together.

She combined humility with ambition, and dedication with grace. As a woman of many talents, she could get other people to do what they didn't want to do and to like it. She had a profound impact on all of the lives she touched throughout her life.

Not so long ago, Jacksonville was looked upon as a small city supporting paper mills, a commercial port, and military bases. Today, the Jacksonville area numbers one million people and the city is recognized as a vibrant, growing urban center. Most recently it hosted the Super Bowl, a feat only a few cities can claim. Although it has shed some of its past, Jacksonville maintains its strong commitment to our armed services as the host to major military facilities.

The successful transformation of Jacksonville over the past two decades owes much to Tillie Fowler. She worked on behalf of the area as a volunteer, and as an elected official at the local and federal levels. This dedication to public service is a family trait.

Tillie's father, Culver Kidd, served for 42 years in the Georgia legislature, and her mother, Katherine Kidd, was a community leader. Tillie learned about civic and local involvement in Milledgeville, Georgia. I should point out that Milledgeville has contributed a great deal to this nation. It was also the home of the distinguished writer Flannery O'Connor and the long-time Chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, Carl Vinson.

From her small hometown, Tillie pursued her education at Emory University in Atlanta earning a B.A. in political science and later a J.D. Armed with her law degree, Tillie came here to Washington, D.C., and worked on the staff of Congressman Robert Stephens of Georgia. Her strong talents were soon recognized and she was brought to the White House as a counsel in the Nixon Administration.

During this period, Tillie not only expanded her professional horizons, she met and married a fellow attorney, L. Buck Fowler. In 1971, she moved with her husband to Jacksonville, Florida, where she set about the important job of raising a family. Although she put her career on hold, Tillie did not ease up on public service. She volunteered her efforts as the President of the Junior League of Jacksonville, with the American Red Cross, and other charitable groups.

In 1985, she returned to the political scene with her election to the City Council and served on the council from 1985 through 1992. In 1989, she became President of the Jacksonville City Council, the first Republican and the first woman to hold that position. Although she retired from the council in 1992, her political career was just changing direction; she then successfully ran for Congress.

Congresswoman Fowler returned to Washington with an ambitious agenda. She vowed to make Mayport Naval Station a top priority, and she succeeded. Through her position on the Armed Services Committee, she built a reputation as an advocate of a strong national defense. She improved the nation's commitment to military personnel and facilities in her district, throughout the nation, and around the world. Although a woman with a petite figure, she cast a giant shadow in support of our armed services: generals and admirals always knew her by her first name.

While making her first run for Congress in 1992, Mrs. Fowler offered to limit herself to four terms. Although she was asked by her leadership and her colleagues to reconsider, Tillie is stepping down after four terms. After all, she had accomplished the goals she set out to achieve.

We have lost more than an experienced lawmaker and public servant; we have lost a good friend. In fact, Mrs. Fowler was a good friend to the people of Florida, and perhaps more importantly, to the men and women of our armed services.

Mr. CRENSHAW. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentlewoman from Florida (Ms. CORRINE BROWN) who also represents part of Jacksonville.

Ms. CORRINE BROWN of Florida. Mr. Speaker, my favorite hymn is "Let the Work I Have Done Speak For Me." I think that more than anything explains our friend and former colleague, Tillie Fowler. My prayers and deepest regret goes out to her immediate family, Buck and their two girls, Tillie Ann and Elizabeth.

Tillie and I shared a lot. We were in the great class of 1992. We said that was the class, the year of the woman. One distinguished objective to describe Tillie was she was a tremendous fighter. She struggled for what she believed in and for the betterment of the people in the region she served. Above all, Tillie loved her country, and she fought hard to protect it. She distinguished herself in the area of military and, in particular, fighting for women's rights in the military.

I also served with Tillie on the Committee on Transportation and the Infrastructure, and we crossed party lines numerous times to work together to do what was best for the city of Jacksonville and North Florida. I almost said Georgia because I know that my colleague is here, and he is going to speak from Georgia, but her roots came from Georgia. She came from a political family. One could tell she was a lady, a southern lady.

We all must pass this way, but, hopefully, when we do, we can look back on all of the things that Tillie Fowler has done, not just for the community but for the entire country, to make this place a better place because Tillie Fowler has passed here. When you are born, you get a birth certificate. And when you die, you get a death certificate. And the only thing that really matters is that dash on your tombstone in between. Tillie, let the work she has done speak for her because she has done a great job for our community.

I was deeply saddened to hear of the sudden passing of my former colleague, Tillie Fowler. My prayers and deepest regrets go out to her and her immediate family, Buck, and her two girls, Tillie Ann and Elizabeth.

Tillie and I shared a lot in common. In fact, in 1992, we came up to Washington together as members of the same class of elected representatives. This class was so dynamic, and filled with so many new and soon to be influential women members, that it was referred to as "The Year of the Woman."

One distinct adjective to describe Tillie is that she was a tremendous fighter. She struggled hard for what she believed in, and for the betterment of the people and the region she served. Above all, Tillie loved her country, and fought hard to protect the freedoms we enjoy—even the freedom to disagree. Tillie was a woman of great distinction, highly respected, and was always extremely active in her community. She served our country well, particularly in her strong support of the military, specializing in issues concerning women's roles and rights within the military. She was also a woman with strong leadership qualities and one who believed in the value of volunteerism and community service.

I also served with Tillie on the Transportation Committee, and we crossed party lines numerous times to work together to do what was best for the city of Jacksonville and North Florida as a whole.

In closing, my heart and prayers go out to Tillie's dear family during this difficult time.

Mr. CRENSHAW. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from California (Mr. COX).

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, Tillie Fowler was a giant in this Congress. Though she served only four terms, 100 percent faithful to her pledge to limit her service in this House, she rose to our elected leadership, and she kept us focused on national security as our highest priority. She was called the Steel Magnolia because she was a hybrid of a southern belle and a marine drill sergeant. She was best known for her roles on the Committee on Armed Services and in the House leadership where she consistently was the voice of the military, calling for a defense budget and defense resources always sufficient to keep America strong.

It was Tillie's intellect and her willingness to work across the aisle that advanced her to a preeminent position as vice chairwoman of the House Republican Conference and as a deputy minority whip for 6 years. I worked with Tillie in our House leadership and on the House Policy Committee and on such special projects as the Speaker's Working Group on Russia.

Today, as the chairman of the Committee on Homeland Security, I miss Tillie Fowler more than ever because nowhere was her national leadership more in evidence than in her work toward terrorism preparedness. As a member of the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure, her top priority was the country's preparedness for a domestic terror attack. She found overlap inadequacies among the Federal agencies, the many agencies that were responsible in those days for terrorism preparedness, and she tried to fix it.

A year and a half before 9/11, she drafted the Preparedness Against Terrorism Act of 2000. If we had followed her farsighted advice, the Congress would have placed top priority on elevating and consolidating the Federal Government's anti-terrorism efforts by creating a Presidential Council on Domestic Terrorism Preparedness. Tillie's legislation was not passed in the 106th Congress, but we soon came to realize through the tragic events of 9/11 that her focus and her proposed reforms were vitally necessary. As a result, many of her recommended reforms are included in what is now law, the Homeland Security Act.

She was truly the guardian angel of our national security. Tillie Fowler, our friend and colleague, dedicated her life to her community and our Nation. It was an honor to serve with her, and it will be an honor to carry on her work to ensure that America is always prepared so we may be always free. Our prayers are with her husband, Buck; with her daughters, Tillie Ann and Elizabeth; and with her entire family.

I had the wonderful opportunity to serve with Tillie in the elected Leadership, on the House Policy Committee, and on such vital national security projects as the Speaker's Advisory Group on Russia.

Today, as the Chairman of the Homeland Security Committee, I miss Tillie Fowler more than ever, because nowhere was her national leadership more in evidence than in her work toward terrorism preparedness.

As a member of the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure, her top priority was the country's preparedness for a domestic terrorist attack. She found overlap and inadequacies among the several federal agencies with jurisdiction over terrorism preparedness, and she tried to fix it.

A year and a half before 9/11, she drafted the "Preparedness Against Terrorism Act of 2000." If we had followed her far sighted advice, the Congress would have placed top priority on elevating and consolidating the federal government's anti-terrorism efforts by creating a Presidential Council on Domestic Terrorism Preparedness.

Mr. CRENSHAW. I yield to the gentlewoman from California (Mrs. CAPPS).

Mrs. CAPPS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I rise to add my thoughts in remembrance of our dear friend and colleague, Tillie Fowler. I pay tribute to her, her service here, the events in her life that made her who she was with respect to her family and her community. I knew her here in this place.

I first got to know Tillie through her friendship with my late husband, Congressman Walter Capps. Walter and Tillie served only 10 months together before his death in 1997, and it might have appeared that they did not have much in common, but, in fact, they did. Tillie had been elected to a district that had been represented by a Democrat for 42 years. Walter's district had been represented by Republicans for 50 years. Both Tillie and Walter understood that it was more important to try to reach bipartisan solutions than to engage in partisan politics.

Even as she rose through the ranks of her party's leadership, and that has been attested to this evening, a strong and loyal leader within the Republican Conference, Tillie always tried to work across the aisle on issues that were important to her. One such issue where again she worked closely with my husband, Walter, was her support for the humanities. Like Walter, Tillie had once served as her State's humanities chair. And back in the days when funding for the National Endowment for the Humanities was in the crosshairs of congressional budget cutters, Tillie stood up to protect that program. The fact that support for the NEH is now stronger than ever in Congress is due in no small part to all of Tillie's efforts a few years ago.

She also helped to pioneer the bipartisan nature of the Congressional Caucus on Women's Issues. Here again, she tried to bring Members of both parties together to address the serious issues affecting American women, and she bravely challenged her own party leaders to moderate their relentless focus on reproductive rights.

After leaving the House, Tillie combined her military expertise with her support for women's rights when she headed up the panel to review sexual misconduct at the Air Force Academy. She also served on the panel charged with investigating prisoner abuse at Abu Ghraib. These difficult assignments demonstrated Tillie's belief that we can best support our military by uncovering the truth and ensuring that these horrible scandals never be allowed to repeat themselves.

Tillie Fowler was a very proud Republican, and her party can be honored and proud of her. But she did not put her party over her principles. During one particularly tough election that I was engaged in, my opponent announced that Tillie had endorsed and would campaign for him. But she came up to me on the floor one day and told me that it was not true. As Eleanor Clift just wrote in her heartfelt Newsweek obituary, Tillie always said, "I can't sit next to them one day and campaign against them the next. If I'm your friend, then I'm your friend."

We will all dearly miss our friend Tillie and we mourn today that there simply are not enough people like her. She will be missed, and she will always be remembered with great honor.

Mr. CRENSHAW. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the right honorable gentlewoman from Florida (Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN).

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. Mr. Speaker, as so many of the viewers of CSPAN know by now, we are here today in great sadness but also in great joy that we celebrate a wonderful life exemplified by Tillie Fowler. We came together last week when we announced the unexpected death of Tillie Fowler, who passed away at the age of 62; but she made such a strong imprint on the lives of so many and on the lives of this House.

Tillie, as we have heard, was a fiercely loyal, dedicated public servant from our home State of Florida, a true crusader for the citizens of our State and especially for all who served in our Armed Forces, the men and women in uniform. She fought hard, especially for the women serving in the military so that they would be treated fairly, so that they would be free from sexual harassment, so they would be free from discrimination. During her four terms in Congress, Tillie became the highest-ranking woman in the House leadership.

She possessed a quiet tenacity. She had the grace and the strength to rise above partisan differences and to continuously reach across the aisle in a true spirit of unity, as we just heard from my good friend from California (Mrs. CAPPS) who really showed that in a very clear way. Tillie was an outstanding member of our Florida team. She was a true asset to our community. I feel blessed to have had the opportunity to have served in the House of Representatives with her.

I think it is most appropriate, Mr. Speaker, as we commemorate this week, which is the Stop Violence Against Women Week, that we celebrate Tillie's life and Tillie's work here in Congress, because through her tireless efforts, she worked to protect women from all types of injustices. During her short tenure in Congress, she and I worked together on a number of important women's issues, such as breast cancer research, the protection of our environment, the security of our women, so many issues that we were involved with.

All of us in the House extend our heartfelt condolences to Tillie's beloved husband, Buck; to their two beautiful daughters, Tillie and Elizabeth; and to the rest of her loving family. Our thoughts and our prayers are with all of you during this difficult time.

Thank you, Tillie, for your gentle leadership. You were a true friend to me, to our Florida community, to all whose lives you touched. You will be greatly missed. Our country is safer today because of Tillie's hard work, and the women who are serving in the U.S. Armed Forces are better protected because of your efforts, Tillie. Tillie leaves a strong legacy of service with honor, and it was my honor to call her my friend.

Mr. CRENSHAW. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the honorable gentleman from Georgia (Mr. BISHOP).

Mr. BISHOP of Georgia. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, it is with deep sadness that we accept the loss of our good friend Tillie Kidd Fowler. Shakespeare wrote: "All the world's a stage and all the men and women are merely players. Each has an entrance and an exit. One in her time may play many parts."

So it was with Tillie. Tillie was the daughter of Senator and Mrs. Culver Kidd. She was, of course, sister to Rusty. She had another sibling who now lives in Macon, Georgia. Tillie grew up in Milledgeville, and she had politics in her DNA. Her father, Culver Kidd, a Yellow Dog Democrat, served under the gold dome in Atlanta for more than 3 decades. I had the good fortune of calling Culver friend and mentor; and when I was elected to Congress in 1992, Culver called to congratulate me, but he said, "I want you to meet my daughter. She was elected, also." As soon as I got here, I had the good fortune to meet Tillie, and we became friends. Although we were on different sides of the aisle, when I had a difficult election, Tillie came over and said, how can I help? And she did help. She was very, very, very savvy, just as her father and her brother were; and she has been a true public servant.

Tillie and I shared the fact that both of us attended Emory University Law School. Both of us were selected to be among that distinguished group called the Distinguished Alumni. She and I join others who are blessed to have had our portraits hanging in the law school. Each year, about this time, we cohosted a reception for the newly elected students from the Washington, D.C. area to the Emory Law School. That reception is coming up soon.

But most importantly, Tillie was a friend to me and that friendship was because of my friendship with her father and her brother. Just a couple of weeks ago when I was in Atlanta, I ran into her brother and I inquired about Tillie, and he told me she was doing fine. Little did we know that we would be coming here tonight to say these wonderful things about Tillie because she had gone.

All the world is a stage and all the men and women are players. Tillie served in so many capacities. She was wife to Buck and mother to Tillie and Elizabeth. But through all of that, she touched our lives in so many ways. We are sad and only one who has worn the garment of bereavement can truly understand the pain that comes when one has been taken from the midst. Yet as we reflect prayerfully, our pain must turn into joy because truly all of us have been blessed to know, love and to have shared this life with such a wonderful woman as Tillie Kidd Fowler.

Mr. CRENSHAW. I yield to the honorable gentleman from Virginia (Mr. GOODLATTE).

(Mr. GOODLATTE asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GOODLATTE. Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank the gentleman from Jacksonville for leading this session in memory of our dear friend Tillie Fowler. I had the opportunity to first meet Tillie after I was elected to the House in 1992, the same year that she was. I found her to be a wonderful woman with a kind heart, but also a firm conviction who stood up strongly for her beliefs.

We found that we had many things in common. It turned out that we had a number of friends that we shared that we did not know anything about until we found each other here. My niece and her husband were dorm parents at Choate School in Connecticut where Tillie's children attended, and we shared many a story about that. She had friends in my congressional district in Lynchburg, Virginia, who were very dear to her and I found that I had friends in Florida that she knew as well.

One day I was driving through a car wash in my hometown of Roanoke, Virginia, and the car in front of me had a Tillie Fowler for Congress bumper sticker. This was right after the election in 1992. I had to stop the lady and tell her that I had just met Tillie and knew her. It turned out this was a very, very close friend of Tillie's who had moved to my district.

So it is with much sadness that I join my colleagues this evening in paying tribute to former Congresswoman Fowler, a devoted mother and wife, a public servant, a dear friend, and a woman of impeccable virtue and integrity, a truly remarkable woman. It seems as though Tillie succeeded in everything she attempted. She attended and graduated from Emory University and then Emory University Law School. After graduation she came to work as a congressional aide and then went on to serve as general counsel in the White House Office of Consumer Affairs from 1970 to 1971, after which she returned home to focus on her new family and volunteer activities. She was elected to the Jacksonville City Council in 1985 and served until 1992 when she successfully ran for Congress and served for 8 years.

In Congress, Tillie was the fifth-ranking Republican in the House of Representatives and served 6 years as the deputy conference chair. She also served on the House Committee on Armed Services where she was a strong advocate of the Navy. After serving in Congress, she continued her service to the country and served as a leader in Washington as an attorney with the Washington office of Holland & Knight.

Tillie and I both came to Congress in 1993, and we shared many stories all through the years that we served together. My sincerest sympathies are extended to Tillie's family. I hope that it comforts you to know that Tillie lived her life to the fullest and she did so with graciousness and integrity. She had, as I said, a kind heart and a firm conviction. She represented her constituents with dedication, tenacity, and fairness. For that reason, she earned the respect of her colleagues on both sides of the aisle, and she will be sincerely missed. It is my prayer that her family and the deep loss that they are suffering now will overcome that and have many, many, many fond memories of a wonderful and delightful woman who blessed all who ever knew her.

Mr. CRENSHAW. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the honorable gentleman from Indiana (Mr. BUYER).

Mr. BUYER. Mr. Speaker, I join my colleagues here tonight because we are all deeply saddened by the loss of our former colleague and dear friend, Tillie Fowler. I first met Tillie in December of 1992. We were both of the newly elected class of the 103rd Congress. It was during that incoming freshman class that we met for the first time. We were to meet in this big room. As I came through that door, I was 32 years old. I did not even know where the bathrooms were. The first person I see is this lady who is very gracious with these very large glasses with the most beautiful smile, and I knew that this had to be a Southern belle. Boy, was I right. I went over, immediately attracted to that smile, and we started talking. Then somebody called the meeting to order and Tillie and I sat down next to each other.

And what a beginning of a great relationship. Ironically, we were then appointed both to the House Armed Services Committee and were assigned committee seats then right next to each other.

During our tenure on the Armed Services Committee, I came to know and appreciate and respect the loyalty, dedication and hard work of Tillie. Although Tillie never served in the military, she understood and subscribed to the very same core values that I had been inculcated with and advocated by all members of the uniformed services.

To that end, we shared the same values and beliefs: Duty, honor, courage, commitment to God, country, family, and our fellow human beings. And for that, the Armed Services reciprocated in their love toward her.

In short, Tillie Fowler's values reflected a common theme of unswerving devotion and honorable service. As members of the Committee on Armed Services, we are faced with very difficult issues that would have and that in fact had a significant impact on military readiness.

JANE HARMAN, Tillie Fowler and I worked together on the Speaker's Task Force on Gender Training, a commission that reviewed the politically sensitive issues of coed training in the military services and the issues of sexual harassment in the military and sexual assaults.

Tillie and I fought hard together in order to try to prevent the closure of the Department of the Navy's live-fire trying range in Vieques in Puerto Rico. I also supported Tillie in her belief of a second port for CVNs to replace the carrier John F. Kennedy in Jacksonville.

And when it came to developing the TRICARE for life program for the over 65 military retirees, it was Tillie that I turned to who quietly assisted me in gaining the support of the Speaker and other Congressional leaders in this program.

Through it all, Tillie repeatedly distinguished herself with a sense of justice and always sound judgment. Her resolve and tenacity were always focused on ensuring that our military forces were physically, mentally and operationally prepared for war. She was known for her superior knowledge, her ethics and both physical and moral courage.

Above else, she was a woman of integrity and great dignity. It is individuals like Tillie that give the American system of Government, indeed this legislative body, honor and respect.

My friend will be remembered in history as one of the world's iron ladies, like Margaret Thatcher, Golda Meir, Tillie Fowler and others. As a colleague, she was a confidant and a true inspiration, someone that you could always turn to in a very difficult moment.

And Tillie always seemed to say the right words. She was like a human sponge. She would soak up and be such a great listener, and then she would always convey the right words, and you would walk by feeling good about yourself that you now have a direction, and she would do that in such warm personal leadership.

I am grateful for the time that we spent together in this chamber and thankful for the memories that she will leave with me. I am a better person for having known her, and the country is a better place through her efforts.

To her husband, Buck, and her daughters, Tillie and Elizabeth, I extend my heartfelt sympathy. To my friend Tillie, I know you are in heaven; vouch for me, my dear friend, so I may see you again.

Mr. CRENSHAW. I yield now to the gentlewoman from California (Ms. MILLENDER-MCDONALD).

Ms. MILLENDER-MCDONALD. Mr. Speaker, I, too, rise today to share a few remarks about my friend, our friend, the Honorable Tillie Fowler, who served with honor and distinction in this House. I shall remember her as someone with enormous capacity, inclusive and fiercely loyal to her friends on both sides of the aisle. Her sacred belief while serving in Congress was, I cannot sit next to them one day and campaign against them the next.

What a lady. If I am your friend, then I am your friend. As the politics around her grew more partisan and unkind through her tenure here, Tillie held her ground. She knew that, in order to get things done, she had to do away with partisan rancor. She was never reluctant to embrace an idea she felt strongly about.

She had a tiny frame, but a great heart and a giant heart. She was a good soul. Tillie wanted more women to get involved in politics and championed the issues women care so much about. She challenged us all of the time with a question: Does it matter whether women are involved in politics? Her career exemplifies that answer.

Upon entering Congress in 1992, Tillie was elected co-chairwoman of the Freshman Republican Task Force on Reform. And in her second term, she became a deputy whip for the Republicans. She was elected vice chairwoman of the House Republican Conference on the vow that she would serve no longer than 2 years in the Republican leadership.

When she left Congress in 2001, she was number five in the House leadership. Tillie served with distinction on the Armed Services Committee, which led the former Speaker, Newt Gingrich, to give her and Representative JANE HARMAN the tough assignment of investigating sexual harassment in the Army.

Her experience on defense matters was not limited to gender issues. And she earned respect as an authority on a range of essential military issues. In 1998, it was indeed my privilege to ask Tillie Fowler to join me, as we would have the first memorial wreath-laying ceremony at Arlington National Cemetery honoring women in military service from the American Revolutionary Army until the present.

In subsequent years, Tillie never missed the annual occasion to stand with us women of the House at Arlington to honor current and past service-women. For all of us who will gather together again this May in Arlington, Tillie's absence will be felt and regretted. But she stands among the greatest of women of this country.

I think Tillie Fowler's career is a reminder of what we need to be about, a shining example for all women, civilian or in the military, seeking opportunities to become the best that one can be, to their families, to their Nation. Tillie Fowler was that lady. She will be sorely missed. My condolences go to her husband, Buck, and her two daughters.

Mr. CRENSHAW. I yield now to the gentlewoman from Florida (Ms. HARRIS).

(Ms. HARRIS asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. HARRIS. Mr. Speaker, I wish to thank the gentleman from Jacksonville for hosting such an honorable memory to Tillie Fowler.

Mr. Speaker, America lost a remarkable leader last week. The people of Florida lost a passionate and effective ally, and our brave men and women in uniform lost a stellar advocate. I lost a dear friend.

Congresswoman Tillie Fowler was much more than a role model for women who followed her into public service. Though her trail-blazing example and her indomitable spirit will always inspire us, she was much more than northwest Florida's greatest promoter. Through her service, her dedication to the people will always guide us.

She was much more than a trusted colleague, to members of both parties, and her unimpeachable standard of honor and integrity will always instruct us.

In fact, today, I was even speaking with one of her colleagues at Holland & Knight, and we said, you know, we feel like she is still here, we can still see her smile, we can still see those big glasses, we can still hear her laughter. Not often does someone leave you and you still feel them so strongly.

Tillie Fowler's contributions as a public servant, as an attorney, as a civic volunteer and, most important, as a beloved wife and mother were routinely extraordinary. Why? Because at every stage of her life, she had the courage to follow common sense and uncommon dreams.

Whether she was graduating as one of five women at Emory University Law School's class of 1967, or successfully challenging a political establishment dominated by male Democrats, Tillie Fowler never met a barrier that she could not shatter.

Yet, while fighting relentlessly for her principles for Florida and for America, she never lost her love of humanity, her charity or her grace.

Mr. Speaker, as we offer our prayers and condolences to her husband of 37 years, Buck, and her two lovely daughters, Tillie and Elizabeth, let us honor Congresswoman Tillie Fowler's memory by elevating our purpose as well as the means we choose to achieve it.

Mr. CRENSHAW. I yield now to the gentleman from Florida (Mr. DAVIS).

Mr. DAVIS of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I, too, as a fellow Floridian would like to pay tribute tonight to my friend, Tillie Fowler.

Tillie was a role model, not just for the women who followed in her footsteps, but for all of us who attempt to represent our communities and our Nation with dignity and respect.

Through hard work and perseverance, Tillie was a true trail-blazer, one of five women in her class of 106 from Emory University's law school. She was the first female president of the Jacksonville City Council. As we recounted here tonight, in her 8 years in Congress, Tillie rose to the highest rungs of power in the United States Congress in the Republican Caucus.

But, in my opinion, what made Tillie so powerful and so special was not the positions that she held, it was the fact that she never lost sight of who she was here to serve. She never forgot where she came from. She relentlessly fought for the people she represented. She served the country. She served her community.

It was not just Tillie's resume that was impressive; it was her firm stance on the issues. When Tillie dug in, she dug in. She stood her ground. But she always treated everybody with respect. Regardless of whether they agreed with her or not, she always listened. She treated folks at home that way. She treated everybody that way, including Members of Congress.

And Tillie always kept her word. Probably one of the most difficult tests for Tillie was her decision to honor her 8-year term limit pledge. She was a person of her word. Regrettably, this Congress lost her much too soon. We have lost her much too soon on this earth.

Tip O'Neill once said, the sign of a successful politician is, from the time they start to when they finish their career, they have the same spouse, same home, same set of friends. He could have been talking about Tillie Fowler. Tillie was the same person from the day she was an adult to the day she left Congress. She never forgot who she was.

Tillie was also one of those rare Members of Congress whose service to the country and to the world only grew after she left the United States Congress. As has been recounted here tonight, she served on the Defense Policy Board Advisory Committee. She took charge of some very serious investigations about potential sexual abuse, about sexual misconduct, about prisoner abuse.

Tillie has been called, by many people here tonight and in the past and she will continue to be referred to as truly a steel magnolia. She was a powerful, delicate balance of grace and strength. She was fair in pursuing her goals, but always friendly, always warm, always caring, always time for a gentle word to a friend or colleague.

For these reasons, Floridians will always treasure, we will always appreciate, we will never forget the legacy of Tillie Fowler.

On behalf of my community, the Tampa Bay area, Tillie, thanks for your service. Thanks for being who you were. Thanks for the power of your example.

And to your husband, Buck, and to your daughters, thank you for sharing a precious amount of the too short life of your mother and your wife here with us in the United States Congress.

Mr. CRENSHAW. I yield now to the gentleman from Florida (Mr. PUTNAM).

Mr. PUTNAM. I thank my friend and colleague from Jacksonville and the successor to Tillie Fowler's great 4th District in Florida. And I appreciate the opportunity that you have given us all to share our feelings and our remembrances of this lovely woman.

And I think how sad it is that we so often save our kindest words for those that we love and care so deeply for until it is too late.

It is an honor to pay tribute today to a great Floridian, a woman who touched so many lives, including my own, and dedicated herself to making our State and our Nation a better place.

Congresswoman Tillie Fowler was a remarkable woman. She was an inspiration to us all, and she sought to bring out the very best in each and every American. Her optimism was contagious, as she brought a sunny disposition to the greatest of tasks and backed it up with a steel will.

Tillie was a public servant, in the truest sense of the word, who not only served her community in the Sunshine State but also her Nation. In the 8 years she spent in the halls of Congress, she earned a reputation as one of the hardest-working and most effective Members of this House.

After leaving this House, her service continued. In fact, I think it is a testimony to her abilities that some of her greatest challenges were given to her after she had retired from the House, as through her service she continued to support a strong and modern military through her chairmanship of the Defense Policy Board and every other difficult task that the Secretary could pass her way.

We all mourn the loss of Tillie Fowler. Her distinguished leadership and grace will be dearly missed and her accomplishments and her legacy will be with us always. Tillie blessed our Nation through her hard work and her generous nature. My thoughts and prayers are with her family, her husband, Buck, and her two daughters, Tillie and Elizabeth.

May we all be worthy of the honor that she bestowed upon this House, and may we all work hard to maintain and to follow that blazing trail which she cut through for us.

Mr. CRENSHAW. Mr. Speaker, reclaiming my time, it is clear from what we have heard tonight the great esteem in which Tillie Fowler was held in this House. We have heard about her service in the community, we have heard about her service in local politics, and we have heard about her service here in the United States House of Representatives, as well as when she left this place. So I would simply say in closing that we all loved Tillie, we all will miss Tillie.

One of the things was, in spite of all the honors and accomplishments that came about in her short life, she was always just a great friend. As I said, I never had a chance to serve in this body with her because I took her place when she left, but knowing her for 35 years and watching her in the community, seeing how hard she worked, observing all the things that people have talked about tonight, it is just so clear the legacy that she leaves behind.

I can remember just a couple of occasions, once when she came to see me when she was going to run for the city council. She said, What do you think? I lived in that particular district; my brother had represented that area. I said, Tillie, it would just be magnificent if you would do that. You have been involved in the community; you have done so much. What a great service you would be. I said, You are going to be a star, I can just tell. I know you.

She became one of the first women to serve on our city council, the first Republican president of the city council, the first woman to be president of the city council. Then she went on to serve in this body. I think most people know she left in 2000 after serving for 8 years, not because she would not have been reelected overwhelmingly, but because she made a promise to the people in her district that she would only serve for four terms. It would have been very easy for her to decide that people needed her. She would have won overwhelmingly. But, true to who she was, she made a commitment and she kept it. It was as simple as that.

When I decided to run in 2000, I will never forget the night that I called Tillie to say, in a strange set of circumstances all this kind of came about, I said, I have decided to run in the seat that you are going to vacate. You could feel this sense of excitement and enthusiasm over the telephone, that somebody that she had known for 35 years, and I am honored to say she believed in me, not only just helped me in the campaign, but paved the way for me in this body, to bring me up, introduce me to her friends, her colleagues, many whom you have heard tonight, just went out of her way to go above and beyond. That is just the kind of person she was.

She did everything wholeheartedly. She came to see me the last Friday, the following Monday is when she had the stroke, but true to form, she came to see me just to visit, to talk about things. She was almost like another Representative from the fourth district. She never stopped serving the people. We talked about issues that were important, and how she could help and "here are some ideas." Always, always on the go.

So, tonight we are sad. We will miss her. She will be missed. She will be missed not only by her family, she will be missed not only by her friends, not only by the people of Florida, but she will be missed by the people of this Nation whom she so proudly served.

Mr. HASTER. Mr. Speaker, America has lost a great public servant and a gracious lady.

When I became Speaker, Tillie Fowler was there with me at the leadership table, serving as the Republican Conference Vice-Chair.

But despite the burden of her many responsibilities, she always had time to be a friend.

She was an effective legislator because she always kept her word to her colleagues and constituents.

She rose within the Republican leadership and became one of the most powerful women in Congress. Despite her influence—she kept her word and honored her term limits pledge because she had promised her constituents she would serve no more than four terms.

After leaving Congress, she continued to devote herself to public service by serving on critical commissions related to her area of expertise in national defense.

Her selflessness and service to her community and family are the legacies she leaves behind.

The House is a better institution because of people like Tillie Fowler. We will miss her greatly.

Our thoughts and prayers go out to her husband Buck and her two daughters Elizabeth and Tillie.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, it is with great sadness that I discuss the life of the late Congresswoman Tillie Fowler. I knew Tillie during the eight years she served in the House of Representatives and remember vividly her strong work as a member of the House Transportation Committee. I join my colleagues in mourning her loss.

Tillie Fowler was born into a family with a tradition of leadership and service. Her father was a member of the Georgia legislature for 44 years. He urged her to go to law school because he had seen widowed women during the Depression unable to get a job and earn a decent living.

Following her graduation from law school, she worked as a House aide and as a general counsel in the White House Office of Consumer Affairs.

As Vice Chairwoman of the House Republican Conference—number 5 in House leadership—she represented her constituents well and with distinction. She was a tireless advocate for a strong national defense, which was natural for her because her district was in the midst of several naval installations. Out of Congress she sustained her interest in the Armed Forces by serving on several influential panels. As always, she brought passion and professionalism to these difficult tasks.

I had occasion to work with her as a member of the Transportation Committee. I remember her as cordial and gracious, but always intensely passionate about the needs of her constituents. These traits helped her get the nickname "Steel Magnolia."

I join my colleagues in mourning the death of Tillie Fowler. She was a strong leader and good friend to all of us. On behalf of the people of the Third District of West Virginia, I extend condolences to her husband Buck and two daughters, Tillie and Elizabeth.

Mr. MILLER of Florida. Mr. Speaker, we are here to honor the memory of a woman whose life may not have been rich in the years that we all hope and pray for, but who enriched the lives of so many. Tillie Fowler's career was filled with accomplishments, and hear calling was to serve all: her family, her hometown, her state, her country, and her God.

Many glowing words have been used to describe Tillie's attributes this past week: bright, charismatic, determined, gracious, thoughtful, kind, unrelenting. Every one of them is true. There have been few political careers quite like hers, but thanks to her pioneering spirit, many paths have been charted to follow.

Tillie was a woman of deep conviction. No issue mattered more greatly to her than the security of our nation. She cared deeply about our servicemembers, and she acted on that concern during her tenure of service on the House Armed Services Committee. Tillie's trademark steadfastness could be seen in her unfailing support for a well-trained and well-equipped military. One small part of her legacy can be seen in this time of challenge for our country, when we are calling upon the skill and bravery of our people in uniform. We're realizing the quality force that Tillie Fowler helped to build. All Americans are grateful to our military, and I know that all branches of the service are grateful to their faithful and advocate from the Sunshine State.

I don't believe that Tillie ever once took her office or her constituents for granted. She was sincerely grateful for the chance to serve, and we saw that gratitude every day in her work ethic. Rarely has this body seen a Member who studies so tirelessly that with which she was responsible. Legislative Council once told her staff that they'd never seen a Member pore so intently over draft bill text! But this was indicative of the life of steady, consistent, and unfailing effort that she led on behalf of Jacksonville and the state of Florida. She was the embodiment of the Teddy Roosevelt quote that she favored repeating: "Far and away the best prize that life offers is the chance to work hard at work worth doing."

And to watch Tillie serve her fellow man, from her days in the Nixon White House to the halls of Congress, between and beyond, one might have thought she found even the smallest task worth doing, and that she believed she'd won that prize. Yes, she was a lady of firsts; first woman to serve as President of the Jacksonville City Council; amongst the first handful of female colleagues on the Armed Services Committee; the highest ranking woman in Congress within just six years of arriving—in this institution built on seniority and tenure of service. And her groundbreaking achievements continued as she accepted and executed great responsibility at the behest of Secretary Rumsfeld. But as Tillie Fowler walked with giants, she never lost the common touch.

That may perhaps be her greatest legacy to us all. Even as she balanced her many duties, Tillie found the time to pay tribute to our Pages from the House floor. Because of the deep, personal interest she took in the lives of her staff, they remained extremely loyal, staying with her for many years.

It's evident that her attention to detail transcended paper and pencil; Tillie offered tremendous attention to the details of people's lives. Last week's Jacksonville Times-Union guestbook is a testament; everyone from Secretary of the Navy Gordon England, to those who checked her out at the supermarket, remembered Tillie's humaneness and genuine interest. One Jacksonville resident said, "Mrs. Fowler . . . obtained information on my father's WWII service for which I will always be grateful. When she left office she made sure that the process was completed by her successor. While she impacted this nation in so many positive ways, her attention to the details of one small request gives her a special place in the hearts of my family."

We can take a lesson from this. And our contribution to Tillie's legacy should be to continue her work here in Congress. Her remarks at the 1995 National Prayer breakfast can guide us:

For a Member of Congress, Washington can be a dangerous place, not because of crime, although that exists, but because every day we face the possibility of losing our perspective, of becoming tangled in the snares of business, partisanship and self-importance that lie all around us and which distract us from remembering why we are here. . . . In the mist of all the sound and fury it is very easy and very human to get carried away by some personal or partisan agenda and forget about the importance of actually accomplishing something constructive on behalf of the people who sent us to Washington.

It is statements like this that reflect why Tillie will be remembered not just as a conscientious public servant, but also as a human being who was unfailingly courteous and had a kind word for everyone she ever met. Regardless of party or point of view, we will always remember her with fondness and respect.

Tillie Fowler managed to fit an extraordinary amount of living and human impact in sixty-two years. She was a beloved wife, mother, sister, friend, and American patriot. Her name will live on in American history, and in the memory of all who were privileged to know her. While we mourn her passing, we take comfort in knowing that another chapter has just begun, and that this chapter will be far longer than the days she spent on this Earth.

Mr. WILSON of South Carolina. Mr. Speaker, I am honored to participate in the tributes in memory of former Congresswoman Tillie Fowler. Although she retired before I entered Congress, I was fortunate to work with her while campaigning for my predecessor, former Congressman Floyd Spence. As Spence Campaign Manager in 1998, I learned firsthand of Tillie's warm and convincing personality. Her enthusiastic endorsement of Congressman Spence made her a hero of the Second District of South Carolina and propelled Congressman Spence to tremendous victory.

Tillie was a gracious friend and diligent public servant. She once remarked that she tried to live by her father's guidance "don't try to be popular. Just do the right thing." In following his advice, she became one of the most well respected and effective members of Congress. Through her quiet tenacity and steady leadership, Tillie solved difficult problems and achieved tremendous successes. She was committed to protecting Florida's bases, helping America's military families, and enabling our men and women in uniform to successfully defend our country. As we fight the War on Terrorism today, Tillie's accomplishments are more relevant than ever.

True to her word, Tillie retired after eight years of service in the House of Representatives. She continued to serve her country as Chairman of the Defense Policy Board Advisory Committee. She was awarded the Navy's Distinguished Public Service Award and the Department of Defense Medal for Distinguished Public Service, the highest civilian awards given by the Navy and the Department of Defense.

Tillie also possessed an extraordinary sense of purpose and a profound understanding of what matters most in life. Her dedication to her family and her friends was possibly her most admirable quality. She will be greatly missed. My thoughts and prayers go out to Buck and her daughters, Elizabeth and Tillie.

Mrs. MYRICK. Mr. Speaker, I would like to honor the memory of a dear colleague. I first met Tillie Fowler when I came to Congress in 1995. Tillie always stood out as someone Members could admire. The more we worked together, the more I grew to admire her. She always took time to give advice—no matter how busy she was.

Tillie would stick to her convictions regardless of who disagreed with her. Yet, at the same time, she was also very warm and friendly. Due to these characteristics Tillie earned the nickname "Steel Magnolia," which I thought really suited her.

Tillie was a staunch supporter of strengthening the defense of our country. She was also a strong conservative who wanted government to stop interfering in people's lives. Due to her strong stances and warm personality, Tillie was chosen as one of our top Republican Leaders; a position she filled with grace and wisdom.

To those of us who knew Tillie, simple words or speeches cannot describe her. Nor can they speak enough about the woman she was. I will always remember Tillie as more than just a colleague during my years here. I will remember her as a good friend.

May God bless Tillie and her family, and may we not forget the contributions she has made to our country.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. Speaker, when former U.S. Representative Tillie Fowler passed away last week, we lost an inspiration, a mentor, a patriot, and a friend. From the time she first came to Congress, Tillie Fowler was committed above all else to serving the American people. Her warm manner, unmistakable intelligence, clear understanding of defense policy, and obvious love for her country helped her quickly rise to a position of influence within the party. Despite her great responsibilities, Congresswoman Fowler remained deeply rooted in her community, and committed to those individuals she was elected to represent.

Tillie Fowler demonstrated to us all what a noble calling public service can be; and she still serves as an inspiration to many of us today, myself included. With the passing of Tillie Fowler, we truly lost one of the brightest stars the Sunshine State ever had to offer. Her legacy and influence will not be forgotten, for we are forever indebted to her for all that she was able to accomplish.

Ms. ESHOO. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to place into the RECORD a tribute to honor former Representative Tillie Kidd Fowler, who passed away unexpectedly on March 2, 2005.

Tillie was not only an extraordinary leader and a dedicated public servant, she was also a dear and loyal friend.

Tillie and I came to the Congress together in 1993, and worked together on many issues during the eight years she served her constituents in the communities of Jacksonville, Florida. Tillie was kind, intelligent and thoughtful. She put aside partisanship and politics for the good of the American people. Too few today speak with courtesy and respect when in disagreement with a colleague on important issues, but Tillie always did. These attributes earned her enormous respect among Republicans and Democrats alike, and undoubtedly played a role in her rise to Chairwoman of the House Republican Conference, placing her fifth in the Republican leadership hierarchy.

As a member of the Armed Services Committee, Tillie was a champion of a strong national defense and worked tirelessly to improve military culture in the U.S. and abroad. She continued this good work after her retirement from Congress in 2001, serving on the Defense Policy Board Advisory Committee where she aided the Secretary of Defense on strategy and policy matters. She also served on several panels to investigate allegations of discrimination and sexual misconduct at the U.S. Air Force Academy, as well as prisoner abuse in Iraq. Her work to improve our nation's military is second to none and she will be remembered for her role in eliminating intimidation, discrimination, harassment and assault from the culture of our military.

The State of Florida, our nation and those of us who are Members of Congress have lost a true friend and wonderful leader.

Mr. Speaker, I ask my colleagues to join me in honoring the extraordinary life of Tillie Fowler and in extending our deepest sympathies to her beloved husband Buck, their daughters Tillie and Elizabeth, and their entire family.

Mr. ORTIZ. Mr. Speaker, I join my colleagues today in paying special tribute to a unique patriot and a great American. Tillie Fowler was known as a "Steel Magnolia" because she was a grand class act with enormous strength of character.

Tillie and I worked together on a host of defense-related issues, including the Depot Caucus which I co-chair. In a world of Republicans and Democrats who often see only the worst in each other, Tillie stood out as a hard-nosed realist and a reliable partner for any Member of Congress who stood with her on an issue.

She didn't see party affiliation as the most important aspect of a colleague; she judged each of us individually, by how we worked on issues important to Florida, the district she represented, and to the nation.

We served together on the House Armed Services Committee, and we traveled together on behalf of the House of Representatives. She cared deeply about the national security of the United States and about her constituents in Florida.

She was a remarkable public servant; she broke the mold, becoming the first woman and first Republican to serve as council President of the Jacksonville City Council in 1985. She was a woman of her word—here in Congress and with the people she represented so well here.

When she first ran, she pledged to only serve here for 6 years. Very few members who make such a pledge actually keep it in the end. But Tillie did. She was as good as her word on any matter. She made the most of her service here, becoming the 5th ranking Republican in the House by 2000.

After she left the House, she remained actively engaged in matters of national defense. In 2001 she was appointed to the Defense Policy Advisory Board by Secretary of Defense Donald Rumsfeld. She also continued to be involved in local civic and business affairs.

She always took on the hard issues, investigating sexual assaults at our military academies and torture at prisons in Iraq . . . both difficult and thankless jobs. Tillie was a rare breed—a class act and a scrappy fighter.

Tillie was the picture of grace and compassion. Public service was genetic for her; her father was former Georgia State Sen. Culver Kidd.

I will miss my friend; I fully expected to be working with her in the upcoming BRAC deliberations this year. She was tenacious, she was gracious and she was a beautiful soul. Her family—her husband, Buck, and their daughters—will be in my thoughts and prayers.

Ms. CORRINE BROWN of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I was deeply saddened to hear of the sudden passing of my former colleague, Tillie Fowler. My prayers and deepest regrets go out to her and her immediate family, Buck, and her two girls, Tillie Ann and Elizabeth.

Tillie and I shared a lot in common. In fact, in 1992, we came up to Washington together as members of the same class of elected representatives. This class was so dynamic, and filled with so many new and soon to be influential women members, that it was referred to as "The Year of the Woman."

One distinct adjective to describe Tillie is that she was a tremendous fighter. She struggled hard for what she believed in, and for the betterment of the people and the region she served. Above all, Tillie loved her country, and fought hard to protect the freedoms we enjoy—even the freedom to disagree. Tillie was a woman of great distinction, highly respected, and was always extremely active in her community. She served our country well, particularly in her strong support of the military, specializing in issues concerning women's roles and rights within the military. She was also a woman with strong leadership qualities and one who believed in the value of volunteerism and community service.

Even though Tillie worked on the opposite end of the political spectrum, I recognize tremendous contributions Tillie made, and influence she had within the Republican Party. In 1998 in fact, she was chosen by her colleagues within the Republican Party to be the Vice Chairman (or Chairwoman) of the Republican Conference. This honor made her the highest ranking woman in the U.S. Congress at the time she retired, in 2000. She also served for 6 years as Deputy Majority Whip in the Party, paving the way for future women to move up the political ranks here on Capitol Hill.

Moreover, when she obtained a seat on the House Armed Services Committee, she was the only Republican woman at that time on the committee. Given the tremendous influence the military plays in the city of Jacksonville, her appointment to this committee was more than critical. Upon leaving Congress, Tillie worked hard to ensure a strong U.S. military was recognized by the Secretary of the Navy and the Secretary of Defense. She went on to receive the Navy's Distinguished Public Service Award and the Department of Defense Medal for Distinguished Public Service, both of which was the highest civilian awards given by the Navy and DOD.

Additionally, I served with Tillie on the T & I committee, and crossed party lines numerous times to work together and do what was best for the city of Jacksonville and North Florida as a whole.

My heart and prayers go out to Tillie's dear family during this difficult time. They will remain in my thoughts and prayers.

Mr. BILIRAKIS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor Congresswoman Tillie Fowler, our friend and former colleague who recently passed away.

Tillie Fowler was a unique individual. She was tough. She was smart. She was determined. She was gracious. She was an effective advocate for her Jacksonville-area constituents. She also was a loving wife and devoted mother, as well as a friend of mine.

Born in Georgia as the daughter of a politician, Tillie quickly distinguished herself as a force with which to be reckoned. She earned a law degree from Emory University. She became a congressional aide and White House staffer. She was elected President of the Jacksonville City Council.

Tillie won election to Congress in 1992 and did such a good job that she was unopposed in her three subsequent elections. She became the most powerful woman in Congress during her time here, rising to become Vice Chair of the House Republican Conference. She willingly retired from Congress after serving eight years, though her public service continued until the day she died. Those who knew her remember her wisdom, common sense, fairness, and gentle disposition that could disarm even the most hardened opponent.

Mr. Speaker, Tillie once said that "I'd rather have people's respect than have them like me." I think I speak for all of us when I say that she gained our love, admiration, and respect. I join our colleagues in mourning Congresswoman Tillie Fowler's passing and celebrating her life. I extend my thoughts and prayers to her husband, Buck, and her daughters, Tillie and Elizabeth.

Mr. CUNNINGHAM. Mr. Speaker, with the passing of Tillie Fowler, America has lost a great American, dedicated public servant, and friend to many.

Ms. Fowler's distinguished career in public service started as a legislative assistant to Representative Robert J. Stephens, Jr. For the next 37 years, Ms. Fowler served our Nation in many different capacities culminating in her election as a Republican representative in Congress. I had the honor of serving with Ms. Fowler on the Armed Service Committee. I have not known a stronger supporter of national defense, those who serve in the military, and their families.

After leaving Congress, Ms. Fowler remained dedicated to our country. She has done extraordinary work helping lead the commission reviewing sexual harassment at our Nation's military academies. I am pleased that we were able to continue our professional working relationship when Tillie left Congress, and that we were still in touch this year working on mutual issues of interest for the San Diego Airport Authority.

Tillie K. Fowler was not just a colleague, she was a friend. She will truly be missed, by me and a grateful Nation.

Mr. WOLF. Mr. Speaker, I join with my colleagues today in this special order tribute to the life and achievements of our former colleague, Congresswoman Tillie Fowler, who passed away suddenly last week.

I had the privilege of serving with Tillie. She was a good person—a woman of honesty and integrity—and a remarkable public servant. She had a distinguished eight-year tenure in the House of Representatives. When she retired in 2001 after a self-imposed four-term limit, she was the highest-ranking woman in the House leadership, serving as the vice chairman of the Republican Conference. She also served for six years as a deputy majority whip.

Representing the area around Jacksonville, Florida, Tillie quickly made a mark in the House after her election in 1992. She obtained a seat on the House Armed Services Committee, the only Republican woman on the committee at that time, enabling her to represent well the military and naval installations in her northern Florida district.

She also served on the Transportation and Infrastructure Committee and chaired the Subcommittee on Oversight, Investigations and Emergency Management, from which she led an investigation of the nation's preparedness for a domestic terrorist attack. Eighteen months before 9/11, she authored legislation that would have centralized federal anti-terrorism efforts. After the 2001 terrorists attacks, many of the reforms she proposed were enacted in the creation of Department of Homeland Security.

She gained a reputation as a knowledgeable and articulate advocate for a strong U.S. military and when she retired from Congress, she received the highest civilian awards given by the U.S. Navy and the Department of Defense—the Navy's Distinguished Public Service Award and the Defense Department's Medal for Distinguished Public Service.

An attorney by profession, Tillie became a Washington-based partner in the Holland & Knight law firm after leaving Congress, but also continued her public service work. She served on the Defense Policy Advisory Committee, later chairing the panel—the first woman to head the board in its 20-year history—which advises the secretary of Defense on strategic planning matters. She also led a panel created by Congress in 2003 to investigate allegations of sexual misconduct at the U.S. Air Force Academy, and was a member of a blue-ribbon panel which advised the Defense secretary last year on issues related to the allegations of prisoner abuse by U.S. military personnel at Abu Ghraib prison in Iraq.

Tillie Fowler was a wonderful person, the beloved wife of Buck Fowler of Jacksonville and devoted mother of two daughters, Tillie Fowler of Washington, D.C., and Elizabeth Fowler of San Francisco.

We mourn her sudden passing and offer our deepest sympathies to the Fowler family and the many, many friends and colleagues in both the public and private sectors whose lives were touched and enriched by Tillie Fowler.

DEFENDING SOCIAL SECURITY

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. GOHMERT). Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 4, 2005, the gentlewoman from Wisconsin (Ms. BALDWIN) is recognized for 60 minutes as the designee of the minority leader.

Ms. BALDWIN. Mr. Speaker, I rise this evening to draw attention to some of the hundreds of letters that I receive every week from constituents who are outraged or frightened by the President's plan to privatize Social Security. Americans of all ages know that the President's private accounts are a risky change that will do nothing to alleviate Social Security's long-term financial pressures. As more details of this plan trickle out of the White House, Americans are not communicating a mandate; they are expressing outrage and fear.

Social Security is the single most successful anti-poverty program in our country's and government's history. I intend to do all that I can to make sure that this program survives this current attack, and I know that millions of Americans are joining in this effort.

I hear from those that I have the honor of representing in Wisconsin's Second Congressional District every day. They write to tell me about their profound concern with this plan, and they also write to tell me about the profound difference that Social Security has made in their lives. They write to share their fears about how privatization could jeopardize their retirement. They write to express frustration that our President has proposed a scheme that would dismantle Social Security, not strengthen it for future generations.

I have come to the floor tonight to share portions of these letters that I receive on a daily basis, and I hope that those who seek to privatize and to dismantle Social Security are listening this evening. I will also be joined by colleagues tonight who wish to share the words and stories of the constituents that they represent with the American public.

I would like to start this evening with excerpts from a few letters concerning the general importance of the Social Security program.

Ann, from Madison, writes: "I am appalled at the changes suggested for Social Security. If you have known anyone living on it entirely, the monthly amount cannot be cut at all without leaving the retiree or the disabled person in utter poverty. Private plans have been tried and failed in a number of other countries. You only have to look at the last several years to see what could happen to someone reaching retirement age in the wrong time or period. If the administration wants to experiment, let the government do it and take the risks. If this fails, are we really going to let that frail, 80-year-old for whom work is no longer an option, starve sitting on the curb?"

Mary, also from Madison, writes: "I stand behind you in your fight against privatization of Social Security. I do not believe that privatization is a good idea at all. From everything I have learned about this issue, Social Security privatization would reduce benefits because of increased overhead costs and would also transfer the risk from the government to the individual. Also that move is likely to reduce benefits."

Mary continues: "I am 31 years old, so I am a person who supposedly would be helped by the privatization of Social Security. But I don't believe it. And even if I were personally helped, I do not believe the financial risk to my fellow Americans that they would incur is worth any possible benefit I would receive."

Doug writes: "Among many other things that concern me deeply in regards to the Bush administration, it is this whole Social Security business that is going on. Inherent in the definition of the name 'security' and the principle of Social Security is the fact that it is secure and guaranteed. That fundamental right, that we pay in, that we will get out, is essential to the whole idea of the plan and the system. I think it would set a very bad precedent if that whole idea were struck down."

Marcie, from Madison, writes: "I find the changes Bush proposes for Social Security to be very scary at best. There is already an ever-growing gap between the haves and the have-nots in this country, and this will only make the situation worse. The haves already know about investing or can afford to hire someone to advise them. How many of the have-nots know much about investing or have the time or the ability to learn? If the changes go through, I hope they will at least change the name. There will be no social, all citizens contributing to the well-being of others in our society, and no security. There will no longer be a safety net for those retiring and those who are disabled."

And Marcie brings up a very important point: "Seniors are not the only people who rely on Social Security benefits. People receiving survivor benefits and disability benefits make up 31 percent of the Social Security program. Social Security is insurance, a safety net that we can all expect to benefit from when we retire, but it is also an insurance or safety net that you could benefit from before you retire. None of us aspire to benefit from the survivor or disability portions of Social Security, but they are there for all of us, just in case we need them."

Before I read some additional letter excerpts from those who have received Social Security for disability or as survivors, I would like to yield to my colleague who I thank for helping to co-organize this evening's Special Order on Social Security, my friend, the gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. LARSON).

Mr. LARSON of Connecticut. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman, and I commend the gentlewoman from Wisconsin for truly putting this together and taking the time to make sure that all of America gets to hear what has got to be a mosaic of concern all across this country, because, like the gentlewoman and myself, several others have conducted town hall meetings and forums and have received letters of concern from our constituents all across this great country of ours. It is quite compelling when you both read the mail and you listen to the citizens of this great country speak their minds.

I was particularly struck by a gentleman from Windsor, Connecticut, who wrote me and said: "I would like to encourage you to oppose President Bush's Social Security personal accounts with every resource possible. I turned 54 this year, missing the cutoff for retaining my full promised benefit by 7 months. I am not a spend-thrift who has wasted his money over the years. In fact, I have placed at least 10 percent of my earnings in retirement savings plans since 1978. I fully fund my 401(k) and my Roth. But I have no pension, and my wife is not even eligible for a 401(k) or equivalent since she works for the Manchester School District as a tutor."

"Despite all my efforts to save, I will not have enough to retire on without the guarantee of Social Security. Why? Because I worked for five companies between 1984 and 2000 that all went out of business or left Connecticut: Heublein, Ames, Shawmut, Northeast Savings and International Paper. Each time I was forced to find another job, I lost a year of contribution to my 401(k) and another year of employer match, through no fault of my own. That adds up to quite a bit of savings that have been lost. I am putting one child through college and I have another yet to go. I have no more to save. I have always supported my family and paid my own way. I am relying on the Social Security system my employers and I have already contributed about $200,000 to, to live up to its promises. If the government of the United States can turn its back on its promises to its own citizens, of what value is it?"

"Please, help me and every other person in my shoes."

It is this kind of poignant response that we have heard from our citizens all across the country that screams out for this Congress to take action.

One little woman in my district, part of the golden girls, her name is Gracie Vigneau, stood up and said, I understand that there are three legs to this stool. I understand the importance, having lived through the Great Depression, having fought and persevered through the Second World War, having come home and rebuilt this Nation, but I always felt that we had this special contract, that guarantee from our government, that third leg of the stool, if you will, that was the Social Security guarantee. It provided the floor, the safety net from which nobody could fall through. That was the contract that came out of the, well, the Great Depression and its aftermath, and what it did to so many people and how it ruined their lives. Yet, today, we see the problems that exist both in pensions and personal savings, which are in far greater crisis than Social Security."

And so she asks, "Why would we place any element of risk in the program that is there for our guarantee?" She said, "I will be long gone." She said, "I am concerned about my children and their children and their children's children."

This has been the most successful program in the history of this country, and it has kept so many people out of the depths of poverty. Just last week we talked about the impact that this program has had on women and how they are disproportionately disadvantaged and how crippled they would become if the so-called Bush plan were ever to go into effect.

So I commend the gentlewoman. I have other things, other letters to read as well in this dialogue that we have here this evening, this important dialogue with the American public, that they have with us placed their trust, and where we have sworn to give our very best.

I know that we are joined by the gentleman from New Jersey, and I will yield back to the gentlewoman from Wisconsin so that she may recognize another outstanding member of this caucus.

Ms. BALDWIN. Madam Speaker, I yield to the distinguished gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. HOLT), my friend and colleague.

Mr. HOLT. Madam Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman from Wisconsin and the gentleman from Connecticut for arranging this discussion.

Madam Speaker, America is all abuzz about this discussion on Social Security, and that is because it is recognized from coast to coast, from every little village to every city, as very important. It is recognized, I would say, as one of the great accomplishments of America in the past century.

One of my constituents wrote me saying, "Representative HOLT, please remind the Members of the House of Representatives how important Social Security has become for American families."

And she tells an important story that brings up a part of Social Security that we sometimes forget. The discussion often concerns retirement. But she tells the story of how her mother was widowed, and she and her two brothers were left without their father when he died in 1931. This was before Social Security was passed. "We had to return," she said, "to my mother's family home where we were reminded constantly how fortunate we were that we were from a family willing to take us in." She grew up feeling like a charity case.

But the story goes on. A couple of decades later, when her brother died young at age 38, his five children received Social Security survivor benefits until they were able to care for themselves. They stayed in their own home, went to the same school and never had to feel like charity cases.

Social Security survivor benefits, just as Social Security retirement benefits, bring with them not just money but dignity. This story, I think, highlights one of the important aspects of Social Security.

Another constituent wrote to me and said, "The President claims that placing Social Security savings into mutual funds will yield a positive result. Mutual funds still have risk. They go up and down. I have lost capital in several mutual funds. The average person is not an investment sophisticate."

Another resident of Central New Jersey writes to his representative, "It is bad enough that corporate America is trying to take away employee retirement and benefits. Now the President is talking about taking away Social Security."

Madam Speaker, they see this as taking it away something that they have earned, something they are entitled to.

Anyway, he says, "I don't want to save Social Security just for my generation, but for all generations. I believe it is the best and most needed program the government ever came up with. I believe Senator DOLE said it best when he headed a committee a couple of decades ago dealing with Social Security. When large corporations or even the State of California wanted to drop out, the Senator said, Social Security is not a tax; it is a Federal retirement plan that everyone has to be in for it to work."

I am sure my colleague from Wisconsin has had a similar situation, has had similar experiences. When I go before a group of Social Security recipients, I ask: Is there anyone here ashamed to take Social Security? And they all chuckle and say, of course not, because we have earned it, because Social Security is for everyone. And everyone knows that it is for everyone. It is not for the ones who are clever in the market. It is not for the ones who are welfare cases. It is an earned benefit that brings with it dignity in the non-wage-earning years, those years of retirement or years after the family breadwinner has died or those years when disability makes it impossible to earn wages. It brings income and dignity in all of those cases. And like my colleague, I have heard it now from thousands, and I am not exaggerating, of my constituents.

I thank the gentlewoman for arranging this discussion.

Ms. BALDWIN. Madam Speaker, I thank the gentleman for his words and also for the spotlight he has put on the words of his constituents.

I was mentioning, as the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. HOLT) just did, about the 31 percent of all Social Security beneficiaries who are not retirees but are, in fact, disabled workers or survivors. I would like to have my colleagues hear from some additional constituents of mine who fit in that category and are advocating in that manner.

Martha from Madison writes, "I can speak to the power of Social Security professionally as well as personally. I work for an agency that assists adults with developmental disabilities. For these individuals, much, if not all, of their livelihood comes from monthly Social Security checks. Few of us could live on $58.77 a month. Their lifestyle is not extravagant, but it is possible. More personally, my family has seen the effects of Social Security."

Martha writes, "My husband became unable to work just as he was entering the prime of his life. How would a privatized plan secure my family as we raise our three children? How would a privatized plan continue to address my family's needs over the next 40 years as we age and retire? My greatest fear is that those who are most removed from poverty are in the decision-making positions. It is perhaps too easy for the President and those like him to assume that all Americans have the means to weather life's most unexpected storms."

Kathy from McFarland, Wisconsin, wrote, "I lost my daughter in July. She was 31 and left two children, ages 12 and 8. It is Social Security that is providing a safety net for my grandchildren. My daughter paid for this. My husband and I paid for this. And my son, who served in Iraq, paid for this."

Stephanie from Madison writes, "I am writing to encourage you to reject President Bush's plan to partially privatize Social Security. When my father died in 1958, my sister and I were 9 and 15 years old. My mother had never graduated from high school, so she was only able to get low-paying jobs. If it hadn't been for our survivor benefits, I don't know what we would have done. As it was, my mom's budget was very tight. People need to realize that Social Security isn't just for seniors; it also pays out survivor benefits as well as disability benefits. All of us are simply one accident or disease away from needing Social Security."

Before proceeding to other letters from my constituents, I would like to yield time to my distinguished colleague from the State of Michigan, a leader on this issue, a champion on this issue on the Committee on Ways and Means, to the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. LEVIN).

Mr. LEVIN. Madam Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman, and congratulate her on doing this. What we are doing here tonight, I say to my colleague from Connecticut and, later on, from California, and my good colleague from New Jersey, is to read some of the letters that we have been receiving from constituents. There are so many, I thought I would read just three of them, and then let others carry on. I hope we will continue to do this, because it brings home to Washington what we hear at home and what comes from home, what comes from home.

The first letter comes from a constituent in Clinton Township, Michigan. She wrote to a colleague of mine, and under our procedures, it was transferred to our office. And it reads, "The Bush administration has placed Social Security on the top of the domestic priority list, but should it be? The 'crisis', and that is in her quotes, 'they are trying to fix has been taking in more money than it has paid out since the 1980s. If left untouched, our current system would be capable of paying full benefits until 2042 and 75 percent after that.'"

"If this administration wants to fix a crisis, they should begin with the national debt that" and there is a word left out I think, "that have created over the past 4 years. Increasing the deficit each year has weakened our country tremendously. Furthermore, allowing Social Security reform would cost the government between $1 trillion and $2 trillion. We live in an economy of job loss, underfunded schools, costly health care, and debt. The problems of today still need to be confronted, so why is this their focus in 2042? Reducing benefits would deprive citizens of the stability they deserve during retirement. The Bush administration is attempting to undermine the very concept of Social Security by doing so. If we allow this reform, the future of numerous citizens would be placed in jeopardy. This need to privatize Social Security is fiction, but the national debt is not." This is a wise constituent. All our constituents are wise; this is one who may be especially wise.

"Our government should be working to strengthen stability within our country, not weaken it. My suggestion to the Bush administration is this: Fix the problems you have created before addressing those of 2042. Continuing to ignore the issues of today will not ensure a better future for tomorrow."

It was sent, and we checked with this constituent to make sure we could use her name, Colleen Szeliga.

Let me just read a second letter that is much briefer. I think the gentlewoman from Wisconsin (Ms. BALDWIN) mentioned a letter from someone who had worked in the system. This is a brief letter from Jeanne Polisei who says the following in a letter to me: "I worked for SSA for 18 years. I know," and it is underlined, "what a great program it is. I know it has done wonders for people who would otherwise be poor. Please do all you can to keep this program as it is. Wall Street is not dependable but SSA is."

If I may take a minute to read an excerpt from a letter. I will just read an excerpt because we did not have a chance to reach this constituent, so I will not mention the name or place this fully in the RECORD. Just the heart of this letter that was written November 10, 2004. This is her handwritten letter and I will read it exactly as it is: "My daughter is on childhood benefits on her dad's work record and this is the only source of income, just as I am on widows benefits. We are both on Social Security. This has made" and I think the word me is left out "so sick with worry. What Bush wants to do is 'privatize' Social Security."

And then she goes on to say: "The late President Roosevelt set this up as a trust fund for families and their children and the disabled. This is not his money." And then I finish with this: "My husband worked hard for this money and died before his time. I pay the mortgage, the utilities, and food on the table. It is a daily struggle just to make ends meet from month to month."

So this letter and the others and the ones other Members have read and those that will be coming express so directly and poignantly what this struggle is all about. It is to indeed to save and strengthen Social Security. We are willing to step up to the plate as we were 20 years ago. What we do not want to do is to weaken and dismantle it. And these letters express why this is so important for the people of our Nation.

So carry on with more letters. We are going to keep reading the letters to get this message across as to what the diversion of monies from Social Security to private accounts would really mean for the people of this country. And I think another time we will be reading letters from younger people because they have so much at stake and would be hurt so badly by the effort of the President to take monies out of Social Security, put them into private accounts, making the shortfall worse, not less, and undercutting a program that has meant so much in terms of independence for those on Social Security and will mean so much for my children and my grandchildren.

I thank the gentlewoman very much for giving me this opportunity.

Mr. LARSON of Connecticut. Madam Speaker, I wanted to ask the leading Democrat on Social Security on the Committee on Ways and Means, the gentlewoman from Wisconsin (Ms. BALDWIN) discussed very eloquently and poignantly, as the gentlewoman pointed out in her letters, the number of people outside of the retirement benefits, but survivors benefits and also those on disability, what are the statistics on that?

Mr. LEVIN. About 30 percent of Social Security benefits go to those who are disabled and those who are family members. And the President said, if I might take another 30 seconds, that they would not be affected, the disabled. But that does not work out because what he has called a good blueprint provides for major benefits cut. And the plan, the second plan of the commission that is part of that good blueprint does affect the disabled. And if you were to have these massive cuts over time, especially hurting younger workers, for retirees and not for the disabled, it would mean deeper cuts yet for younger workers who are going to retire.

Mr. LARSON of Connecticut. So when the gentleman says the President's good blueprint will in fact weaken Social Security, that is exactly what it is doing?

Mr. LEVIN. It would not only weaken it; but one last point, it would in the end shrivel it next to nothing and mean its demise because of the cuts in benefits and what is called the clawback which would be an offset against your Social Security of what is in your private accounts and that would be for younger workers, about 70 percent of what was left in your Social Security benefits. So in the end the younger worker in most cases would end up less in both, end up with less in both than if Social Security had not been destroyed. And the Social Security part of it would be so small that it would no longer be sustainable. And that is why this privatization by diversion of Social Security monies is essentially a path to the dismantling of Social Security.

Mr. LARSON of Connecticut. Has the administration now admitted that that will not in any way, shape, manner or form close the gap that exists?

Mr. LEVIN. The privatization proposal does nothing to address the shortfall and, indeed, makes it worse.

Mr. LARSON of Connecticut. I thank the gentleman for clarifying that.

Ms. BALDWIN. I thank the gentleman for his tireless leadership on protecting our Social Security system and amplifying the voices of your constituents' very powerful letters. I would like to yield to my distinguished colleague from the State of California (Ms. WATSON).

Ms. WATSON. Madam Speaker, we held two public forums in the 33rd Congressional District in Los Angeles, California; and I would like to just quote from three of the speakers that participated.

This one is from Miss Nina Diamante Vera, and she is worried that the proposal for private accounts would put her hard-earned retirement savings at the mercy of the stock market. She was compelled to write me a letter to warn me of the perils of private investment. And she said: "I lost $90,000 in the stock market. The privatization program will only make stockbrokers richer. It is the stupidest thing that President Bush has done." That is the quote.

The stock market is a fluctuating vehicle for savings. It goes up, but it also goes down. The administration should be working with Congress to promote personal wealth and savings through investment but not at the cost of Social Security.

Then Ms. Verdine F. Alston. Ms. Alston is an 89-year-old widow. She is concerned about the Republican proposals for Social Security. This is an American that has contributed to society for most of the 20th century. And she states: "Please stop President Bush from privatizing Social Security. I have paid into Social Security since it started and before I was to vote. I am now 89 years old and a widow. My husband has been deceased for 10 years, and his pension just expired. I am dependent solely on Social Security."

Now, it is unacceptable to pull the rug out from under our senior citizens. A proud American, Ms. Alston stressed the wisdom of a past President and said, "The very first time I voted was for President Roosevelt when I was 21 years old. Social Security is not welfare."

And according to the National Partnership For Women and Families, Social Security provides 90 percent or more of the total income for 44 percent of nonmarried women 65 and older, 66 percent of nonmarried Hispanic women 65 and older, 74 percent of nonmarried African American women 65 and over, and 35 percent of all nonmarried men 65 and older.

Now, Marvin Tavlin, who is a 90-year-old legislative chairperson for the Westside Chapter Alliance of Retired Americans, said it is important to remember that our country is made up of compassionate Americans, many of whom study the history of our great country. And during the town hall meeting that I just held in February, Mr. Tavlin asked if he could share his modern Gettysburg Address with us, and it goes like this:

"Three score and 10 years ago our fathers brought forth to this Nation a new idea, a compact between the government and the people to promote the general welfare and for the first time in our history to guarantee the Social Security of our senior citizens. We are now engaged in a great political battle testing whether the new concept can truly endure. The dedicated men and women, living and dead, who fought so long to achieve this worthy goal inspired us to carry on their tradition. It is now up to us, the living, to rededicate ourselves to the great task remaining before us, to guarantee that this renowned social program for the American people who have worked and struggled so long and so hard for their families, their communities and their country; yes, that this great social program shall never perish from the land."

We gave him great applause because I think he spoke for most Americans.

Ms. BALDWIN. Madam Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman for sharing with America the powerful words and stories of those who she proudly represents.

I am now delighted to yield to one of our new colleagues who we are so proud has joined us from the State of Missouri. We know that this gentleman has been home in his district listening to his constituents actively providing them an opportunity to speak to him and tonight to America through him. I am honored to recognize the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. CARNAHAN).

Mr. CARNAHAN. Madam Speaker, I am pleased to join in tonight and share some of my experiences over the last few weeks.

Like many of our fellow Members here in the Congress, my office has been flooded with letters about Social Security and what it has meant to people across this country by many people in my district in the St. Louis area of Missouri. I have received in my office alone over 1,000 letters from people concerned about these privatization schemes that have been talked about in Washington. I scheduled, based on those meetings, two town hall meetings. Each one had over 200 people that attended.

It was not just seniors. We had people there that were baby-boomers and my generation. We had young people there. We had people that were not just retirees, but people who had been survivors and people who had disabilities. They all had been beneficiaries in some way from this vital American program.

We talked about what it has meant to our country, to their families. We also talked about the success of the program, how it has been studied and mentioned as one of the most efficient programs in our government's history, only having 1.5 percent overhead. So it is a great model to look at in terms of efficiency and delivering vital services to our country.

People are very concerned about their Social Security, the real bedrock foundation of their retirement security being subjected to benefit cuts, being subjected to broker fees, being subjected to the risk of the stock market.

One of my constituents in particular stood up and shared her own personal story. She knew too well the potential risk of depending on the stock market for a guaranteed source of income. She was a 70-year-old grandmother from Arnold, Missouri, and she shared her story in front of about 200 people.

In 1999, a stockbroker had encouraged her to transfer $155,000 from a mature CD and invest it with the broker's local firm. The broker put her money into an aggressive investment account that, at her age, would not have been highly advised. Her investments now were worth only $85,000. She says that if it were not for her monthly Social Security checks she and her husband would be under great financial strain. For people like her, privatization would be a disaster.

Social Security beneficiaries, including survivors, children and those who are disabled, stand to lose the most under President Bush's plan. His proposed changes will not help preserve benefits for those who depend on them the most.

Let us strengthen Social Security, the very foundation of retirement security in this country, and if we are going to have discussions about private accounts, let us talk about those in addition to and on top of this solid foundation of Social Security.

Ms. BALDWIN. Madam Speaker, I thank the Congressman and I am very pleased that he brought up the issue of the risk that Social Security would be subject to if these private accounts were allowed to occur, and I have just a couple of letters on that point too that I wish to share.

Jack from Fort Atkinson, Wisconsin, writes me, "Tammy, thanks for your hard work to keep the promise of Social Security. This privatization plan is about the dumbest thing that Bush has come up with besides the war in Iraq. We have a privatization deal now via IRAs, and let me tell you, my wife and I lost over half of our investment in our IRA accounts after 2000. The only people that will make money in this deal are the brokers."

Another one here, Cheryl, from Madison, writes, "I have deep concerns with President Bush's proposal. By privatizing a portion of Social Security, you have added an element of risk. Some people may come out ahead, others may not. The safety net is gone. For many people Social Security will only be a small part of their retirement. These people can invest their disposable income in the many options available, IRAs, 401(k)s, et cetera. Those that are not as well off and are not able to put much away on their own should be able to count on a known amount from Social Security."

Before continuing, I would like to yield to the gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. LARSON), my colleague, who is a member of the Committee on Ways and Means and has really tackled this threat to Social Security with great vigor, and I appreciate his organizing this evening's Special Order with me.

Mr. LARSON of Connecticut. Madam Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman from Wisconsin again for her diligence and hard work in this effort and deeply appreciate the opportunity to be here this evening.

I honestly believe that Congress should do more of this. I hope that people all across this country are listening to these heartfelt responses from our constituents, and in so many ways, they are often more eloquent than any Member of the United States Congress because their needs and concerns are so heartfelt and real, and this is what I think makes this such a special evening for this Special Order.

I would just like to read one more letter that I have, with the gentlewoman's permission, and this is from a woman in Newington in my district who writes, I am very concerned about what Mr. Bush is doing to the country. I have been working for 37 years, and I have been at my current position for 28 years. From day one, I was told that I would be given a pension at the end of my tenure. Over the years, the company has changed hands and, in fact, changed leaders. Now, the pension has been changed to a cash balance. Because of this change, I will be getting about one-quarter of what I would have been getting in my pension, and now, Mr. Bush claims that under his privatization plan, Social Security benefits would go up. Yet the Congressional Budget Office says Bush's privatization plan will cut benefits by 45 percent or more for seniors. The Bush plan will reduce benefits for all seniors, even those who choose not to invest in private accounts. I am too old to build up a substantial plan and account. Have we not been traumatized enough under this man? I do not want you to vote on this plan or make such a drastic change to the system. If the politicians put a lock on it, like Mr. Gore wanted to, we most likely would not be in this situation. Mr. Bush should stop spending the money. We have the money for Iraq but not for our seniors in this country. I am asking you, please, not to vote for this.

She, like so many others we have heard tonight, I think speaks to what is their concern. Some of our colleagues on the other side have said that these are fear tactics. Hardly.

Grace Vigneau again points out that we were a strong generation that persevered through the Great Depression, a Second World War, the Korean and Vietnam Wars. We raised families, rebuilt these countries. We do not scare easy. What we want is the truth. What we need, I think, is for all of us to come together with an understanding, and it is my sincere hope that our colleagues on the other side of the aisle are listening, as well as the President.

President Roosevelt said it best. He said he was concerned that they had become frozen in the ice of their own indifference. Frozen in the ice of their own indifference towards collapsing pensions and shriveled up savings that, for the most part, have to go for the care of your health. Indifference to the 45 million people in this country that are uninsured, indifference to the women and minorities whose drops off in benefits will be so dramatic.

That is why the voices of these citizens need to be heard and why this Congress needs to act in a responsible and bipartisan manner in order to continue to strengthen and preserve the most successful social program and governmental program in the history of this country.

Again, I thank the gentlewoman for providing us the opportunity to discuss these letters and the concern of our constituents.

Ms. BALDWIN. Madam Speaker, the gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. LARSON) mentioned the fear tactics that are being used.

The President, in advocating for his privatization, has made the case or attempted to that Social Security faces an impending crisis, and I just want to let the administration know I think the American public sees through this fear tactic, this scare tactic.

I just want to read one quick letter on that point from Robert from Madison in my district. As he writes, "Bush has in recent weeks been repeatedly inflating the significance of 2018 and 2042, especially the early date, so as to imply that Social Security is in imminent danger of bankruptcy and must be overhauled very soon. The sheer urgency of Bush's tone is unsettlingly consistent with his demonstrated tendency to conjure up a crisis where none exists, as he did during the run-up to the war with Iraq."

"The overblown nature of Bush's alarms over Social Security is reflected in the Social Security trustee's estimate that, even if nothing drastic is done between now and 2042, Social Security will still be able to pay retirees" almost 75 percent "of the promised amount" and "this timeline hardly suggests any crisis that necessitates pounding away at a need to overhaul Social Security" or dismantle it "now."

I would like to yield to the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. HOLT), my colleague.

Mr. HOLT. Madam Speaker, the gentlewoman from Wisconsin raises this approach of fear tactics, and of course, it leads to the question, well, why? Why does the President, why do some of our colleagues, why are people trying to change this program that our constituents tell us over and over again has meant the difference between dignity and destitution for them? Why do they want to change a program that works so well?

The spokesman from the White House and the President himself have said that privatization is not likely to help the finances of Social Security, but then they have gone on to say, well, even if it does not, it is the right thing to do. Then we have these youngsters at some of the President's road shows around the country chanting, "Hey, hey, ho, ho, Social Security has got to go."

We begin to understand what this is about. It is to overturn a program that they find ideologically unacceptable.

Leslie from Milltown, New Jersey, says, I think we have evidence that the motivation of these politicians for proposing individualized private accounts is driven by ideology, not by a real concern for strengthening and preserving Social Security.

That ideology I think is best summed up with the phrase, you are on your own. You are on your own and you will do well in the market. You are smarter than the market and you will be fine.

Let me tell my colleagues, my constituents say over and over again, we have tried private accounts. Before 1935 you were entitled to invest as much as you wanted in private accounts to prepare for your retirement, and you know what, a majority of the elderly lived below the poverty line. That is why we have Social Security. It is a program that is, I think, one of the most successful we have had in America.

Let me just finish by saying we have had testimonials from so many of our constituents. Let me give a personal one.

My father died when I was six, without insurance, without a pension. My sister and mother and I received Social Security survivor benefits. She was teaching at a junior college on a small teacher's salary. That made an enormous difference.

When I talk about Pat from Lincroft who said Social Security for her brother's children brought dignity, whereas when her father had died before Social Security came into place, they had to live as charity cases, I know what she is talking about.

Social Security binds this country together in a way that no other program that has come out of this body has, and we should not throw it out just because of some ideological whim which is what is happening right now. That is why the country is so upset, why we are getting so much mail.

Mr. LARSON of Connecticut. Madam Speaker, if the gentlewoman would yield, on that point, we heard the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. LEVIN) discuss that earlier, that even the President's so-called privatization plan does nothing to close the gap or the shortfalls that potentially exist in Social Security if we do not act on a bipartisan basis.

So to the gentleman's point, this is all about ideology and politics and not substantively about doing what is in the best interest of the American public. I think that is what has citizens so outraged, that this seems to be from the very get-go, from whether you go back to Hoover and Landon and Friedman and Stockman, who said we must starve the beast, that beast being Social Security, that is what has American citizens outraged at this proposal. That is what has them writing thousands of letters to each and every one of us because of their deep-seated concern of where this administration is taking us, to a "me" society versus "us."

The gentleman said it very eloquently and passionately, and again, I want to thank the gentlewoman for arranging this dialogue and these letters which I hope we continue to come to the floor and discuss.

Ms. BALDWIN. Madam Speaker, I thank the gentleman for his comments, and I would like to thank all of my colleagues who joined me here tonight in giving voice to these very real, very human stories. These are real letters from real people, and privatization would have a real and ultimately negative effect on their lives.

I know that those who seek to dismantle the Social Security System must receive similar letters, and I sincerely hope that they pause and consider what Social Security means to Americans. It is not an arbitrary government program. Social Security is a support system, it is an insurance program, and, in many instances, Social Security is the difference between a comfortable life and a life of poverty. We must do all that we can to protect this vital safety net, this lifeline.

SCHEDULE

Mr. FRIST. Madam President, this morning the Senate will resume debate on the bankruptcy legislation. Under the order, at 10:15 this morning we will begin 2 hours of debate on Senator SCHUMER's amendment related to abortion clinics. That vote will, therefore, occur at 12:15 today. Following that vote, the Senate will recess until 2:15 for our weekly policy luncheons to meet. When we return to session at 2:15, the Senate will proceed to vote on invoking cloture on the underlying bankruptcy bill. I hope and expect the Senate will be able to invoke cloture this afternoon so that we will be able to vote on passage this week. We will have germane amendments to consider postcloture and, therefore, additional votes can be expected.

BANKRUPTCY REFORM

Mr. FRIST. Madam President, we have made tremendous progress on the bankruptcy bill over the last 2 weeks. Republicans and Democrats have stood together to support a bankruptcy reform package that the House will pass and the President will sign into law. The Senate has resisted attempts to renegotiate hard-fought compromises and legislate on unrelated issues. I do thank my colleagues, our colleagues, for staying focused on the bankruptcy bill.

There have been many attempts to sidetrack the Senate on this bill. But let me just take a moment to reiterate why we need bankruptcy reform and what this bill really does.

The bill before us establishes a means test based on a simple, fair principle: those who have the means should repay their debts. Personal bankruptcies are skyrocketing, and wealthy debtors are walking away from debts that they had the ability to repay. Opportunistic debtors who have the means to repay use the law to evade personal responsibility.

This abuse does not hurt the creditor only, it hurts all who pay higher fees and prices as a result. Every bill that you and I pay, that our families pay, includes a "bankruptcy tax" of about $400 a year per household. That tax is figured into every bill, every phone bill, every electric bill, every mortgage payment, every furniture purchase or car loan we pay. Interest rates are higher, downpayment requirements are larger, grace periods become shorter, late payment penalties become astronomical—all because some people are shirking their debt obligations.

This legislation is targeted to ensure that wealthy debtors who can pay their debts do so. It specifically exempts anyone who earns less than the median income in their State, and it also allows every consumer to show special circumstances if they cannot handle a repayment plan.

We know that one reason people file for bankruptcy is because of unexpected medical emergencies. Consequently, this legislation allows every filer to deduct 100 percent of their medical costs. We also know that education is a big outlay for many families. Under bankruptcy reform, parents can deduct private school tuition to protect their children's educational opportunities.

In addition, the bankruptcy bill strengthens protections for child support and alimony payments. It protects patient privacy and care during bankruptcy proceedings that involve health care facilities. It protects consumers from deceptive credit practice that can lead to financial distress, and it protects the system that allows America to be one of the most generous countries when it comes to bankruptcy.

There remain, however, some misconceptions about this bill that should be dispelled. The first regards our protections for Active-Duty military personnel and veterans. Some opponents of the bill charge that we do not adequately address the needs of our combat men and women who suffer financially.

Madam President, it should go without saying that the Senate and the American people deeply honor our men and women in uniform. Every day, these young soldiers sacrifice to protect us and to defend the freedom we enjoy. We are indebted to them for the dangers they face on the field, and we are indebted to their families they leave in order to fight for that freedom.

That is why last Tuesday we passed the Sessions amendment to help clarify protections for our military and others under a safe harbor in the bill. This provision, which passed with 63 votes, makes explicitly clear that Active-Duty military and low-income veterans are protected by the safe harbor. In addition, it also protects debtors with serious medical conditions.

On this issue, the other side has created a red herring designed to score political points and shift the debate away from bankruptcy abuse. Another red herring is the charge that the bankruptcy bill sacrifices consumers to benefit credit card companies. The truth is that the bill before us includes several carefully negotiated amendments that expressly protect credit card holders.

Among its beefed-up consumer protections are increased disclosure requirements for credit card statements and mandates that credit card companies assist borrowers in determining how long it will take to pay off their credit card balances, additional disclosures to borrowers buying and refinancing their homes, and additional disclosures regarding credit card introductory rates and new disclosures related to credit card late fees.

These protections are the result of lengthy and careful negotiation. Additional measures should be properly addressed in the Banking Committee. As Senator SESSIONS has pointed out, we are debating a bankruptcy bill designed to create a fair and commonsense process in the Federal courts.

Moreover, the bill before us has passed this body three times, with overwhelming bipartisan support. In the 105th Congress, it passed by a vote of 97 to 1. In the 106th Congress, it passed 83 to 14. And again in the 107th Congress, it passed by a vote of 82 to 16.

It is time to take action on this much needed reform that is supported by both sides of the aisle.

I am confident that by working together we can get this done in this Congress, this week, and see bankruptcy reform signed into law. I encourage our Members, this afternoon, to vote for cloture so we can bring this bill to fruition, to make it the reality we know the American people deserve.

It is long past time to stop the abuses of the Bankruptcy Code. The legislation before us is thoughtful. It is built on common sense. It offers the opportunity to give the system, and the people it is designed to help, a fresh start. In short, it promises to deliver meaningful solutions that will keep America moving forward.

Madam President, I yield the floor.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KENNEDY. Madam President, I understand that at 10:15, the Senator from New York is to be recognized to offer an amendment?

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. That is correct.

Mr. KENNEDY. Madam President, this bankruptcy bill is mean-spirited and unfair. In anything like its present form, it should and will be an embarrassment to anyone who votes for it. It is a bonanza for the credit card companies, which made $30 billion in profits last year, and a nightmare for the poorest of the poor and the weakest of the weak.

It favors the credit card companies, the giant banks, and the big car loan companies at every turn. It favors the worst of the credit industry—the interest rate gougers, the payday lenders, and the abusive collection agencies. It hurts real people who lose their savings because of a medical crisis or lose their jobs because of outsourcing or suffer major loss of income because they were called up for duty in Iraq or Afghanistan.

It protects corporate interests at the expense of the needs of real people. It does absolutely nothing about the glaring abuses of the bankruptcy system by the executives of giant companies such as Enron, WorldCom, and Polaroid, who lined their own pockets but left thousands of employees and retirees out in the cold.

It favors companies like MBNA, a top credit card issuer, with over $80 billion in loans, which has contributed $7 million to Federal candidates, a half a million dollars to President Bush alone, and spent over $20 million in lobbying, since 1997, when their lobbyists wrote this bill.

On the other side are people like special ed teacher Fatemeh Hosseini on the front page of Sunday's Washington Post. She fell on hard times when her husband left her and their three children. After her credit card debt reached $25,000, she stopped using the cards and took a second job to try to pay down that debt. She paid $2,000 a month but was hit with very high interest rates, which were raised even higher because of missed payments, heavy late fees, and over-limit penalties.

She made no new purchases, but by last June her $25,000 debt had nearly doubled to almost $50,000. The longer she tried to pay what her statements told her were her minimum payments, the more her debt went up. When all of her salary was going for payments, she had no choice: she was forced into bankruptcy, in the hope of getting the "fresh start" the Nation has long provided to its working people when they hit bottom.

This bill says to companies like MBNA: We'll help you scare that teacher out of going into bankruptcy by making the bankruptcy process expensive and burdensome to people like her. If we can't scare her away, we will help you squeeze your high interest rates out of her for a few years longer, even though she can't possibly pay off the amount she owes. We will take sides with companies like you and against people like her.

That is what this bill says. We all know that is wrong. How could the Senate possibly do something so immoral and unreasonable and unfair to our constituents when they are most in need of our help? Where are the vaunted values our colleagues talk about so much? Why didn't the Judiciary Committee do something about this travesty before it reached the floor? Why haven't we fixed it on the floor after more than a week of debate?

This bill was bulldozed through the committee on the pretense that we should not deal with its serious problems there but should wait until it reached the full Senate for serious negotiations and basic improvements. We were assured that there would be good-faith discussions and compromises and that all reasonable amendments would be given fair consideration.

But now there has been no good faith at all—no meaningful discussions, no negotiation, no real consideration of any of the very reasonable amendments that have been proposed to give this bill some shred of balance and fairness. On the contrary, the Republican leadership has invoked the strictest possible party discipline. When individual Republicans say they want to support or offer constructive amendments, they are ordered not to do so. Even when a Republican identifies a serious gap in the bill, such as the very basic jurisdiction outrage pointed out by Senator CORNYN, an outrage that has prejudiced workers and retirees in almost every State, the Republican leadership said no and refused to let the amendment be called up.

The excuse for this bad faith and breach of promise is itself bizarre. The Republican leaders say they cannot upset the delicate compromise reached two Congresses ago, but the only real compromise was the one that had the Schumer amendment in it, and this year's bill doesn't have that amendment in it. In committee Senator SCHUMER discussed his amendment, but I didn't see the other side jumping up to adopt it in order to restore and preserve the so-called compromise. The floor leaders have not indicated that they plan to accept this amendment to restore and preserve the supposed compromise.

Let's be clear—any pretense of protecting a previous compromise disappeared when the bill's sponsors unilaterally took the Schumer amendment out of the bill before introducing it this year. So there is no compromise before us in the first place. What's more, even the 2001 bill is now totally obsolete.

A great deal has happened in the past 4 years that helps us understand the real issues in this bill and shows that abuse of the system by consumers is not the real problem. We have now felt the full impact of the Bush economic decline, the broad record levels of sustained unemployment.

We have seen an explosion of medical costs, prescription drug costs, and health insurance costs. We have seen job after job eliminated or downgraded or outsourced.

A half million guardsmen and reservists have been called to active duty in Afghanistan or Iraq, leaving their families and their jobs and their small businesses behind to suffer the economic consequences, but this Senate said no to the Durbin amendment.

We have seen the enormous harm caused to employees and retirees by corporate mismanagement and fraud at major companies like Enron and WorldCom and Polaroid, which abused the bankruptcy laws to avoid their obligation to their own loyal workers. We have seen credit card rates go higher and higher and higher, as high as 30 percent or more, plus fees and penalties and charges, raising credit card profits by another $10 billion, even as general interest rates remain low.

We have seen the credit card companies use a self-help remedy for the problems they create by their own indiscriminate and predatory marketing practices. They charge still higher risk-based rates to the very same people who can't even afford the lower bait-and-switch rates.

We now know a lot more about the abuse of bankruptcy this bill was supposedly designed to address. Four years ago we were told we were a nation of bankruptcy abusers. But now, thanks to the careful study of actual bankruptcy case files, we know the truth. We know that 50 percent of the families who go bankrupt have suffered from serious medical problems and have exhausted their savings. Most of those families had paid for health insurance, but it still left them with no financial protection from serious illness or accidents.

If the family is impacted by cancer, you know right at the outset, even if they have health insurance, they are going to have a $35,000 bill. If it is the heart or stroke, it may be $20,000. If they have a child, spina bifida, autism, other kinds of serious children's diseases, it is going to be $15,000 to $20,000. We know that right at the start. And in too many instances, that is just enough to throw hard-working Americans into the bankruptcy system and the harsh provisions of this legislation. Most of these families tried in every possible way to avoid bankruptcy for years. They gave up food and medicine and utilities and other necessities of life and even transferred their elderly parents into less adequate nursing homes in order to try and avoid bankruptcy. But facts like these don't bother the sponsors of this bill. They just make it up as they go along.

In the past week, for example, some of us offered amendments that would exempt people from the burdensome procedures in this bill if their finances were devastated by medical problems or because they were called up for military duty, and they were voted down. Instead the bill's sponsors introduced and adopted a devious amendment that they said would do what our amendment did. But, of course, it did nothing of the kind. It simply added some words about medical costs and military callups in a way that did not change the real substance of the committee's bill.

The sponsors also said our amendments exempting those below the median income from the means test were unnecessary because low-income filers were already exempt. If they really mean what they say about no means testing for people below the median income, then they should not be refusing to accept our amendment which makes that exemption absolutely clear.

Another Democratic amendment would have placed a generous limit of 30 percent on the interest rates any credit card company could charge. It very carefully stated that it would not change the status quo in States which already had lower limits. That didn't stop the bill's supporters from claiming that the bill would be an intrusion on States rights because it would lift the limit in States with a lower limit.

And perhaps the most outrageous claim of all, one which I thought was dead and buried after it was dragged out in 2001, was dragged out again—a big blue chart and all—and further inflated in their debate. The sponsors repeated the old chestnut that every American family is paying $400 a year in a hidden bankruptcy tax for abuses that this bill would stop. Only now they say this mysterious tax has risen to $550 per person per year.

How is the original $400 number calculated? The debts discharged from all consumer bankruptcies each year are about $40 billion. There are 100 million families in the United States. Therefore, those consumer bankruptcies must be costing each family $400 per family. But this phony math assumes that every dollar discharged in bankruptcy, 100 percent, could have been collected in full, if not for the massive abuse of the system by every consumer who goes bankrupt.

It assumes that the credit card companies and payday lenders and other lenders who collect this debt under the bill would somehow distribute it to all 100 million American families instead of keeping it for themselves. Obviously, neither of these assumptions is true. Even the bill's supporters have long ago conceded that the maximum conceivable amount recoverable from the consumer bankruptcies is about 10 percent of the total. Other estimates conclude that the real number is a small fraction of that.

We don't have to guess what a responsible lender's loss from bankruptcy abuse might be. The lead-off pro-bill witness at our hearing on the bill was the head of the Wisconsin community credit union, testifying for the national credit union lobby. He told us in the last 9 years his credit union has had an average of 10 bankruptcies a year from 11,000 members. He estimated that the 9-year loss from abusive cases was $15,000 to $75,000, with the higher figure based on an unlikely assumption of 15 percent abuse. His credit union's loss from possible abuse spread across its entire membership was 15 to 74 cents a year per member—not per every family in his county or state, but just his members. Yes, a real 15 cents instead of the mythical $400 dollars we have heard about for years on this floor.

Why is that lender's loss from abuse so low? Because that credit union cares about its members, who are also its owners. It gives them a credit level appropriate to their finances, and does not promote across-the-board increases in credit limits. It routinely monitors credit card debt for signs of trouble. When members hit hard times, the credit union does not pounce on them. It looks for ways to help them out. In short, it is a careful and responsible lender, not a predatory lender.

Hello? Could this tell us something about the real problem here? Perhaps the credit card companies who are really pushing this bill should think again about having solicitation desks every fifty feet in the airport, offering gifts to anyone who signs up for a card. Perhaps they should think twice about offering multiple cards to young college students. Perhaps they should not encourage people to raise their card limits recklessly or send them pre-printed checks against their accounts in junk mailings. Perhaps they should not send monthly statements urging their customers to pay only the monthly minimum and pile up their debt.

This bill does nothing to prevent the enticements that the credit card companies use to run up their profits. It does nothing to prevent the real abuses of the system by those who use unlimited homestead exemptions or "protective" trusts to hide tens of millions of dollars from the bankruptcy process.

We still have time for common sense amendments on all of these issues, but unless there is a change in direction, Republican party discipline will be invoked to defeat them.

In fact, the present bankruptcy system has an effective way of dealing with real abusers. Bankruptcy judges can and do deny the petitions of those who have defrauded or abused the bankruptcy process. The corporate sponsors of this bill know that, but their real motivation is only partly to squeeze millions more dollars from the people who do get into the bankruptcy system.

The more insidious purpose of this bill is to frighten people away from the system altogether, by making it so burdensome and expensive, that they delay filing for bankruptcy or never file. That way, the predatory lenders can continue to collect excessive interest and fees and penalties month after month from people who cannot afford to pay them.

What this bill does to catch the very small number of potential abusers—most of whom can be caught and screened out under the existing system—is to impose huge new paperwork and filing and counseling and other barriers on all those who seek to enter the system, whether they are above or below the median income level, and whether or not there is the slightest indication that they are trying to game the system.

Why else would the bill place such strict and intolerable personal liability on the bankruptcy lawyer for mistakes made in the detailed information provided by the client? In Boston and throughout the country, pro-bono lawyers from leading firms now lend a hand with bankruptcy filings to people down on their luck. The sponsors know that if this bill passes, those firms will not let their lawyers do that public interest work, because the risk will be too high.

There is so much wrong with this bill that we must take the time to get it right. That is why we must have a serious discussion and negotiation and amendment process.

That is why we must defeat tomorrow's cloture vote and continue to seek a bill that is not an embarrassment to the Senate and the fundamental principle of fairness and simple justice for all. It's wrong, deeply wrong, for the Senate to rubber-stamp the greed of the credit card industry.

In a few moments, the Senator from New York will be recognized. I wanted to add a word of support for his amendment. His amendment is not about abortion. It is about violence. Those who promote the culture of life should not be encouraging acts of violence against any members of our society. There is no legitimate reason to oppose this amendment. Those who break the law through violence and intimidation should not have bankruptcy as a shield.

Finally, in a vote later this afternoon, the Senate will declare its true loyalties. Do we stand with low- and middle-income families who fall on hard times, or do we stand with the credit card companies looking for higher and higher profits at any cost? If we are true to our values, we will stand with America's families and defeat this bill because above all else, America stands for freedom and fairness and opportunity. There is nothing fair about a single parent struggling to make ends meet only to be gouged by credit card companies with double-digit rates. There is no freedom in falling ill with cancer and facing a mountain of medical bills only to be hounded by credit card companies to pay them first.

And what is fair when an average American who has done everything right still has to go alone into bankruptcy court and stand up against the big credit card companies and all their might and try to make a fresh start?

I am reminded of the words of Leviticus in the 25th chapter which reads: If one of your brethren becomes poor and falls into poverty among you, then you shall help him, like a stranger or a sojourner, that he may live with you. Take no usury or interest from him, but fear your God that your brother may live with you. You shall not lend him your money for usury nor lend him your food at a profit.

One glance at the story of Fatemeh Hosseini shows that even when you try your hardest to repay your debts, you are met by the cold, cruel world of the credit card companies. With our vote this afternoon, we have an opportunity to live up to the words of Leviticus and our basic values as Americans and vote against this bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. VITTER). The Senator from Illinois is recognized.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Massachusetts for his leadership on this legislation. The bill we are considering today, S. 256, is the bankruptcy reform bill. For American families who have been absolutely devastated by medical bills, by loss of jobs from outsourcing of jobs overseas, by family circumstances beyond their control, this bill makes it more difficult to go to bankruptcy court to put whatever they have on the table and to try to start anew. It was written by the financial industry, by credit card companies, and big banks in an effort to make certain that people in debt never get out of debt. They want to make certain that debt will hound you and trail you for a lifetime.

When Senator KENNEDY offers an amendment and says should we not at least say to people who have been devastated by a medical crisis in their family and go through bankruptcy that they will have a roof over their heads, that we will protect their home for $150,000 worth of value, the Republicans on this side of the aisle said no. They should put that home up, lose it if necessary, if they want to file for bankruptcy.

I offered an amendment that said what about the Guard and Reserve units, men and women who are serving overseas leaving behind businesses that go bankrupt? Should we not give them some consideration in this bill? Should not the harshest aspects of this bill not apply to men and women in uniform serving our country? The Republican side of the aisle said no; apply the law as harshly as possible to these soldiers as you would to everyone else.

Time and again, as we have offered amendments to try to stand up for those who were struggling in America to get by in a tough economy, in difficult times, facing family disasters, the Republican side of the aisle said it is more important that the credit card companies get another dollar from those families. It is more important that the banks prevail. Even if the loans they offered in the first place are illegal, we have to stand by the credit industry.

The credit industry will win this battle. American families, American soldiers, and those struggling with medical bills will be the losers.

I hope before this bill is completed that a few basic amendments that show common decency and common sense will prevail.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the hour of 10:15 a.m. having arrived, the Senate will proceed to the consideration of amendment No. 47 to be offered by the Senator from New York. The time until 12:15 p.m. will be equally divided for debate.

Does the Senator offer the amendment?

AMENDMENT NO. 47

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, I offer the amendment, and I ask unanimous consent that Senator FEINSTEIN be added as a cosponsor to the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from New York [Mr. SCHUMER], for himself, Mr. REID, Mr. LEAHY, Mrs. MURRAY, and Mrs. FEINSTEIN, proposes an amendment numbered 47.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To prohibit the discharge, in bankruptcy, of a debt resulting from the debtor's unlawful interference with the provision of lawful goods or services or damage to property used to provide lawful goods or services)

On page 205, between lines 16 and 17, insert the following:

SEC. 332. NONDISCHARGEABILITY OF DEBTS INCURRED THROUGH VIOLATIONS OF LAWS RELATING TO THE PROVISION OF LAWFUL GOODS AND SERVICES.

Section 523(a) of title 11, United States Code, as amended by this Act, is further amended—

(1) in paragraph (18), by striking “or” at the end;

(2) in paragraph (19), by striking the period at the end and inserting “; or”; and

(3) by inserting after paragraph (19) the following:

“(20) that results from any judgment, order, consent order, or decree entered in any Federal or State court, or contained in any settlement agreement entered into by the debtor, including any court ordered damages, fine, penalty, citation, or attorney fee or cost owed by the debtor, arising from—

“(A) an action alleging the violation of any Federal, State, or local statute, including but not limited to a violation of section 247 or 248 of title 18, that results from the debtor's—

“(i) harassment of, intimidation of, interference with, obstruction of, injury to, threat to, or violence against, any person—

“(I) because that person provides, or has provided, lawful goods or services;

“(II) because that person is, or has been, obtaining lawful goods or services; or

“(III) to deter that person, any other person, or a class of persons, from obtaining or providing lawful goods or services; or

“(ii) damage to, or destruction of, property of a facility providing lawful goods or services; or

“(B) a violation of a court order or injunction that protects access to—

“(i) a facility that provides lawful goods or services; or “(ii) the provision of lawful goods or services.

Nothing in paragraph (20) shall be construed to affect any expressive conduct (including peaceful picketing or other peaceful demonstration) protected from legal prohibition by the first amendment to the Constitution of the United States.”.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, I hope everybody will pay attention to this debate, which has been going on intermittently in the Chamber for the last 4 or 5 years. Not much has changed, except the votes of some of my colleagues, if you can believe the press reports.

Let me start by saying I believe in bankruptcy reform. It is very wrong for people to abuse the code. But reform should be across the board, it should be applied fairly. It should not be just for some interests. When some interests are abused, we legislate on that, but when other interests are abused, we do not. It should not sweep under the rug people who have real needs, as the amendments of some of my colleagues—the Senator from Massachusetts and the Senator from Illinois—have tried to address. A reform bill should not contain a trove of treats for some supposed victims of the system, such as banks and credit card companies, but leave others shivering in the cold.

For this reason, the bankruptcy bill before us today does not do the trick. It has many deficiencies and, to my mind, a glaring, gaping hole. While the bill supporters give lip service to fairness, they have carved out a loophole for those who use violence, for those who seek to use bankruptcy for a purpose it was never intended. It is a loophole that I cannot live with, and, once upon a time, in a different world, the vast majority of Senators agreed with me and voted to close this loophole.

Most of you are already familiar with this provision. After all, most of you have voted for it before. Indeed, this is identical language; there is not a single word change in this amendment, the Schumer-Reid amendment, from the amendment that was added to the bill a few years ago. This identical language was contained in the compromise bill we have heard so much about this past week.

Along with Senator REID, I am reintroducing the provision that would close this loophole once and for all. I am pleased that Senators LEAHY, FEINSTEIN, and MURRAY are also cosponsors of the amendment.

Put simply, the Schumer-Reid amendment would end the ability of violent extremists to hide behind bankruptcy laws to escape court-imposed debts. The amendment is very simple: If you use violence or the threat of violence to achieve a goal, a political goal, and you are successfully sued—as you should be—by the person or persons you have used violence against, you cannot then go back home to a bankruptcy court and say, protect me. Has anyone who ever envisioned the bankruptcy law felt that it should be used to protect those who use violence or threats of violence? I doubt it.

There is talk by some of “peaceful protests.” As I will talk about later, the bill explicitly protects peaceful protests but not violence or the threat of violence. It doesn't matter if you are an extremist in the pro-life movement or the animal rights movement or any other movement; if you believe you are so right that you have the ability to take the law into your own hands and threaten others and do violence to others because your knowledge and feelings are superior to everybody else's, you are wrong. That is not American. Again, you should not be allowed to use the Bankruptcy Code to protect yourself from a rightfully imposed civil remedy.

This amendment could really be called the Schumer-Reid-Hatch amendment because in 2001 Senator HATCH sat down with me and together we worked out this compromise. We worked out this precise language in a bipartisan fashion over 4 years ago. There is only one difference—that since we worked out this compromise, which a large number of colleagues on the other side of the aisle supported, including those who disagree with me on the issue of choice, we have found that a small group in the House has been able to block the bill if it had this amendment in it. There is no reconsideration of the merits of the amendment. There is no argument made against the amendment that hasn't been made before and rejected overwhelmingly by this body. It is simply allowing a small few in the other body to dictate what we are doing here.

If reason and logic prevail, this amendment would be considered among the least controversial and most sensible fixes to the current bill. If bipartisanship and consistency were the order of the day, this provision, which was unceremoniously stripped from the current bill, would pass again overwhelmingly. The bill is intended to curb abuses of the Bankruptcy Code. But why are we curbing abuses when the victim is a credit card company or a bank but not anybody else? Why not also when the victim is a woman pursuing her constitutional rights? Does that woman have any less rights than a bank or credit card company, or a doctor pursuing a living, doing what he believes is right and what is allowed by law, according to the Supreme Court and enshrined in the Constitution, and this doctor tries to prevent people from hounding his children, from threatening them with violence, and then you say, no, we are going to protect the credit card companies and the banks but not that doctor, not that woman; is that fair? Is this bill fair and balanced?

We want to reform bankruptcy; there are abuses. But why are we only reforming the abuses that affect some and not others? Why are we only reforming the abuses that affect some of the most powerful interests and not those who are weaker or more helpless?

In the current climate, I am sad to say that there appears to be an edict from the leadership on the other side to vote down every amendment, no matter what its wisdom for efficacy. That is not what the Senate is about, that is not what America is all about, and that is not what our constituents sent us here to do. It would be a tragedy if that sort of marching-in-lock-step attitude affected the Schumer-Reid amendment.

Let me take a minute to describe the history of this amendment, to refresh the recollection of many of my colleagues who may have forgotten it. Let me tell you what happened. Of course, Roe v. Wade was passed by the Supreme Court in 1973. Many opposed Roe v. Wade; they felt it was against their religious beliefs. I respect those religious beliefs. A large movement of protests developed, the vast majority of which was peaceful. The former bishop in my home of Brooklyn would stand in front of a clinic every week and pray the rosary. That is an American thing to do. That is a peaceful protest. But there were some—an extreme few—who decided that they were so right, that what they heard from God prevailed over what anybody else heard from God, and that they should take the issue into their own hands. Some used the methods of blockade, passive resistance. Others went further. They would put acid on clinics that would render them useless—a destruction of personal and private property, if there ever was. They would threaten doctors. They would follow their children going home from school and harass them. Inhumane. They would even encourage people to kill doctors. We know doctors who were killed.

This protest movement was largely successful. It shut down about 80 percent of the clinics in America. There were some States and many counties where a woman who was seeking her own right to choose would not get that right, and, as a result, a number of us worked on a law—I was a sponsor in the House, and I believe Senator BOXER was a sponsor in the Senate—that would give the clinics that offered people a way to effect their right to choose some help. The law made it a Federal crime to use violence or the threat of violence against clinics. That was necessary because you had large jurisdictions where the elected sheriff said, I will not enforce the law, taking matters into his own hands.

As we were discussing what to do with this bill, I remember a meeting in New York, and a young woman from one of the defense funds that represent women said: Why don't you include the right to sue, so if the Federal Government is unwilling or slow and cumbersome in protecting this Federal right, the clinic could sue. We put it in the bill as an afterthought, but it really proved to be the hope and the salvation of the clinics because they began to sue those who would blockade them when police forces would not enforce the law.

There was Dobbs Ferry in New York, where they wanted to enforce the law. They had a police force of three, and hundreds of people were protesting violently and blockading—not peacefully—and the police force was overwhelmed. But the right to sue opened up these clinics and, once again, the constitutional right, available voluntarily to women.

No woman is forced to avail herself of this right; it is choice. That is what it is all about—choice. Your beliefs may be different from mine, but I respect yours; I hope you respect mine. I am not imposing mine on you, and you should not impose yours on me, particularly when they are deeply held religious beliefs. That is America.

So the clinics were open again. Many of these violent protesters sort of faded away. They realized the legislatures were going to keep the Roe v. Wade law, that they could not succeed in overturning it. If you believe the polls, over 60 percent of Americans support the right to choose. They had turned to violence and threats of violence, and now the FACE law had stymied them in that decidedly un-American way to enforce your views or effect your views. So we offered an amendment.

I skipped one point. Some of the more militant of these groups—the militant of the militant—came up with a new way to avoid these civil suits that the FACE law allowed. They said: Go back and declare bankruptcy once you are sued, and then they cannot pursue the money judgment used against you. This was made particularly difficult because most of the groups that used violence or threats of violence were not indigenous. They were not from the local community. There were a lot of people against the clinics in the legal community, but they, like most Americans, effected their views peacefully. But these were sort of roving bands of groups from across the country. They would be sued successfully, and then they would each go back to their home jurisdiction and file for bankruptcy.

It was impossible for these clinics, most of which were small and not terribly well funded, to then file after they won the first suit—a burden enough to them. They should not have had to do it. It should have been the Federal Government or the local government enforcing the law. But they went back home, declared bankruptcy, and the clinics were not able to pursue each of those suits in their home States.

An example is that of the notorious Nuremberg files case that took place in Portland, OR. The defendants created, in that case, a Web site that collected personal information about providers of abortion, clinic staff, law enforcement officials, judges, and even Senators. The site listed the names of those wounded in gray type and for those who had been killed—including Dr. Barnett Slepian in my State who was murdered in front of his family in 1998—they crossed out the names, as if they had achieved something good.

Doctors and their families targeted by this Web site had to wear bullet-proof vests, install security systems, and take other precautions. As one witness testified before the Judiciary Committee, speaking of the targeted doctors:

They are not secure in their homes or in their offices. They do not sit by windows in restaurants, and they even refrain from hugging their children in front of open windows.

Can you imagine? Under the FACE law, the victimized doctors sued these violent radicals who would threaten them. Judges and juries sided with the victims and issued verdicts. For example, there was a $109 million verdict against the Nuremberg defendants. In another case, Operation Rescue President Randall Terry ran up $1.6 million in fines on account of his acts of clinic violence. But did these violent extremists pay up? No. They instead filed for bankruptcy to avoid responsibility for their heinous acts. In fact, many of these public defendants publicly bragged about being judgment proof and thumbed their noses at their victims, forcing years of protracted litigation.

Randall Terry, for example, blithely filed for bankruptcy to avoid paying his debts. And the Nuremberg file defendants forced bankruptcy litigation for years in six different jurisdictions to avoid their debts. Some of the extremist groups even recruited people and had as a criteria for admission to the group that you make yourself judgment proof. One radical group, for instance, the American Coalition of Life Activists, drafted its Constitution to state that members of the organization "must have their assets protected from possible civil lawsuits (judgment proof)."

As one can imagine, with these tactics, it took years to enforce the judgments against these violent radicals, and victimized doctors, families, and clinics could not get the justice they deserved. We all know that the wheels of justice are sometimes too slow, but tactics such as this made a mockery of our system.

So when the bankruptcy bill came before the Senate back in 1999, I offered an amendment to stop this awful abuse of the system. It made sense. It was not adding a new issue to the bill. The bill was supposed to deal with abuses of bankruptcy, and if there was ever an abuse of bankruptcy, what these violent extremists did was an abuse of the bankruptcy law. No one, when they wrote the bankruptcy law, thought the Randall Terrys of the world deserved protection.

When I offered the amendment, Senator HATCH and others—some pro-choice, some pro-life—came to me and said: Why are we singling out pro-life activists who engage in violence and take the law into their own hands? What about other extremists who abuse the Bankruptcy Code by using violence or the threat of violence?

They were right. So we sat down. We had a fruitful discussion. From this, Senator HATCH and I worked out a compromise with which everyone could live. We hammered out an amendment that was not particular to the issue of the clinics but dealt with anybody who would use violence or the threat of violence in the same way—blockades, arson, whatever. They, too, if they had a judgment against them, could not go to bankruptcy court and successfully ask for protection.

The amendment we have does not mention the word "abortion" or "choice." It simply talks about anyone who uses violence. It would be applied with equal force and vigor to animal rights activists, to the environmental extremists in the ELF movement. It only affects, frankly, those on the far right or the far left who believe they are so morally superior to all of us that they can avoid this constitutional democracy and, with violence, take actions into their own hands. Anyone who violently or misguidedly blocks access to services, whether in the name of the pro-life movement, the animal rights movement, the environmental movement, or any other movement, would lose the ability to hide behind the Bankruptcy Code.

It would apply equally. It did apply equally to pro-life extremists and ecoterrorists, one on the far right and one on the far left. Indeed, if militants in the pro-choice movement should block a facility that was pushing abstinence, it would apply to them, too. If violent atheists blocked access or burned down a church, it would apply to them. It applies to anybody who uses violence and then seeks protection of the Bankruptcy Code.

This amendment is not about abortion, as its critics attack it. It did have its origins there because that is where violence was used, but now, after the Schumer-Hatch compromise, it is an amendment simply about the rule of law, something everyone of any political party, of any political belief who is an American—when you swear your loyalty to the Constitution of the United States, you are basically swearing loyalty to the rule of law.

Let me underscore this: It does no harm, none, not 2-percent harm, not 1-percent harm, not .1-percent harm; it does zero harm to legitimate protesters who do not engage in violence or threats of violence. The amendment expressly states that "nothing in this provision shall be construed to affect any expressive conduct, including peaceful picketing or peaceful demonstration, protected from legal prohibition by the first amendment to the Constitution of the United States." If you protest peacefully, you are protected. If you use violence or the threat of violence, you are not. That is the American way, and we made it clear.

People who are against this amendment say it stands in the way of peaceful protests. I ask them to cite me a single example where that has happened. It has not.

This was a fair amendment. It applied to anyone who used violence to effect their means and, in overwhelming numbers, Democrats and Republicans supported it. Virtually all of my Republican colleagues now on the Judiciary Committee, including some leading pro-life Senators, supported it—Senators HATCH, GRASSLEY, KYL, and SESSIONS. I take off my hat to them. They were being fair. I am sure they received a little pressure: Don't do this. Maybe there were some winks: Hey, maybe this violence is OK because we feel so passionately about an issue. But they stood up. To their credit, these Senators, even though they are staunchly pro-life, were reasonable and sensible about the issue.

Then on March 15, 2001, a bankruptcy bill, largely identical to the one before us today, except that it had the Schumer-Reid-Hatch language in it, passed in the Senate by a vote of 83 to 15. Only two Republicans voted against it, and that was for reasons other than this amendment.

Then, of course, the bill was sent to the House. It looked like as if would pass. I supported the bill with this amendment in it. I have always said I will be for the bill with this amendment because I think this amendment is so important, even though I am not happy with other provisions in the bill. I am, frankly, less happy today with the other provisions in the bill.

The bill was sent to the other body, and a fight ensued within the Republican caucus. A large number, probably a majority of the Republican caucus, wanted to support the bill, but a small number who were the most fervent in their pro-life beliefs said no bill. The Republican leadership in the House said since this divides our caucus, even though a vast majority of the House would have supported the legislation, in my judgment, they pulled the bill.

So now we are back to where we are today. We have basically the same compromise as last year but without the Schumer-Hatch compromise. All I am doing today is adding that compromise word for word. Again, not a comma, jot, or tittle has been changed in the bill.

I have watched while amendment after amendment offered by Democratic Senators to end abuses and close loopholes has been beaten back because of an edict that this "negotiated compromise"—not negotiated certainly with many of us on this side—should be delivered pristine to the House.

Republicans defeated an amendment to protect veterans because it was not part of the compromise. That was offered by the Senator from Illinois, Mr. DURBIN. For example, a National Guard man or woman, a reservist sent overseas does not make the same money they made before, and maybe they have to go into bankruptcy. Do we want to come down like a hammer on these people the same as we would come down on somebody who squandered whatever money they had in Las Vegas gambling? Absolutely not. But the amendment was defeated.

There was an amendment that was defeated to protect victims of identity theft. I believe that was done by my colleague from Florida, Senator NELSON, because it was not part of the compromise.

Senator KENNEDY has eloquently spoken of those who have to go into bankruptcy because they do not have adequate health insurance or any health insurance, and they are putting their every last nickel to save their husband or their wife or their mother or their father or their child. Again, no protection.

An amendment I offered which said millionaires could not abuse the code by setting up a trust and putting all their assets in this trust and then declaring bankruptcy and shedding themselves of debt also was not allowed because of the compromise.

Mr. President, do you know what was part of the original compromise? The Schumer-Reid amendment or, more correctly, the Schumer-Reid-Hatch amendment. Yet this provision was stripped from the current bankruptcy bill.

If Senator HATCH continues to suggest we should honor the grand compromise from last time and not change it, then let's do it for everybody. Let's not just take out this provision.

What, I ask, has changed since the bill of this language passed by a vote of 85 to 13? Absolutely nothing. It was a good law then, it is a good law now. On what basis can my colleagues now oppose the Schumer-Reid amendment because it targets, among others, those who take the law into their own hands to oppose a woman's right to choose? That is nonsense. Senator REID is the lead cosponsor of the amendment, and he is pro-life. And as I have said, the language is not particular to abortion.

Let me ask my Republican colleagues a question. I hope they are listening: Would my Republican colleagues oppose a broadly worded murder statute because, among other things, prosecutors could bring charges against someone who killed a doctor who would provide abortion services? Would they oppose a neutrally drafted arson statute because men and women who burn down health clinics might come under its ambit?

There is no moral reason, no legal reason, no logical reason, for Senators who once overwhelmingly supported this language to now oppose the Schumer-Reid amendment. Some of my colleagues have said they are still in favor of this amendment but do not want the entire bankruptcy bill to be held up because of it. My purpose is not to hold up the bankruptcy bill, and I think my colleagues on the other side who worked with me over the years on this bill understand that. My purpose is to preserve the rights of those who seek to do constitutionally protected acts in the face of violence.

So I ask my colleagues to please think about what they are doing. If they vote against this amendment, they are voting against the rule of law. If they vote against this amendment, they are voting against the fundamental way we do things in America. If they vote against this amendment, many of my colleagues are voting exactly the opposite of what they did a few years ago. I ask my colleagues not to change their vote because of political expediency. If my colleagues turn their back on this amendment now, it will be a turnaround, an about-face, on fairness, on reform, and on bipartisanship.

As I have said, this is not pro-choice or pro-life. It is pro rule of law and it is antiviolenence. No matter how strongly people feel—and I respect people's passions; I respect their passions whether they come from religion or politics or anything else—the greatest danger our Republic faces is apathy, so people who feel passionately are good. Because someone feels passionately, they should not be allowed to take the law into their own hands and then hide like a coward behind the bankruptcy law.

Just as we are trying to end the abuses of the bankruptcy law when it affects banks, we should also end abuses of that law when it affects victims of violence. It is vital that we make the law perfectly clear that debts incurred by violent extremists who take the law into their own hands are nondischargeable, and that is all this amendment does, no more or no less. If we do not, individuals and organizations seeking to shut down public facilities, whether they be clinics, powerplants or animal laboratories, will continue to force victims of clinics and other violence into a world of perpetual litigation by using the Bankruptcy Code as it was never intended.

I ask my colleagues to support this amendment. Most of them did once and they should do so again.

I reserve the remainder of my time, and I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, my colleague from Alabama is in the Chamber. I was going to ask that the time be equally divided as we were in the quorum call and not charged to myself, but if my colleague from Alabama is taking the time, then that is moot.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alabama is recognized.

Mr. SESSIONS. I thank the Senator from New York. As someone who has worked hard on this bankruptcy legislation for the 8 years I have been in the Senate, I have learned a political lesson that no matter how much bipartisan support a bill has, how much momentum it has, how needed it is, things can go awry.

In the last passage of this bill, Senator SCHUMER offered, and aggressively argued, for the amendment that we are debating today. The leadership on this side of the aisle said, OK, we will accept it. I realized that it was problematic for a number of reasons. I opposed the amendment, but it passed, and without a whole lot of objection, I suppose, from this side. The truth is it then became the single factor in the House's rejection of the bankruptcy bill, a bill that passed this body by a vote of 83 to 15. It was really a remarkable sort of event.

Let me just say a few things about the bankruptcy procedure. It has long been a fundamental principle of bankruptcy that while a bankrupt individual may bankrupt against their lawful debts, wipe them all out, and pay none of those debts, it has always been the law that a bankrupt may not discharge, may not wipe out, erase the debts that they incur as a result of intentional or willful misconduct.

If a debtor lists debts that arise from an intentional wrong against someone, the trustee in bankruptcy or a creditor or any of the creditors can object to that discharge, and they would note that it should not be wiped out, it should not be discharged, because it is a debt that arises from a willful, wrongful act.

The court then considers that and determines whether or not the debt should be wiped out and whether or not it was a debt that arose from a nondischargeable reason like willfulness.

Senator SCHUMER's amendment says that willful violators of abortion clinic protest prohibitions, and really a lot of other protestors, it appears to me—maybe unions, civil rights, environmental, I think he has said that they are covered here—he says that if willful violators of abortion clinics and these others included in his bill are sued and a judgment is rendered against this protestor under Federal law, then automatically those judgments are not subject to discharge; the court does not review it; they remain a debt of the protestor for their life, and they can be pursued by collection attempts for as long as that debt exists, and it can be for some time.

What we do know is this: Abortion clinic protestors have been sued for misbehavior at abortion clinics under the FACE Act. Some of these people have been relentless in their actions and have acted repeatedly in violation of law, and they have been sued. Judgments have been rendered against them. Most of them do not violate the law. As the Senator has said, the archbishop prays the rosary and conducts lawful acts, demonstrating his concern over the taking of what I consider to be life by the abortion act, and this is a free country and they are allowed to do that. But there are certain things that one cannot do in that protest, and a number of people in the past, a lot more than is currently happening, frankly, violated those prohibitions of the FACE Act. They have been sued and judgments have been rendered against them.

We also know that some of those protestors who had judgments rendered against them went to bankruptcy court and sought to wipe out their debts and not pay these debts for their protests, to discharge them from bankruptcy.

Finally, we know that under the current law, and under the law that is in the bankruptcy bill that is moving forward today, it has not changed on this point. That law prohibits the discharge of debts arising from willful acts. In every single case that the courts have considered petitions for discharge, in these abortion FACE Act violation cases, the bankruptcy court has refused to discharge the debt. They say, no, it was a willful act and you cannot discharge it; you still owe it. And the abortion clinic plaintiff or doctors or whoever is victimized can continue to pursue collection wherever they go. They can file garnishments against people's wages, file judgments against their property and pursue them aggressively and steadfastly to collect that debt. That is what the law has said every single time, and there is not much dispute about that. I do not think the Senator from New York would dispute that.

By his amendment, the Senator from New York, because of his concern over these very few cases, frankly, but he is concerned about it and has raised the issue a number of times, has managed, as a result of his successful passing of that amendment on this Senate floor 2 years ago, to cause the bankruptcy bill and all of its important parts to actually die and not become law because the House refused to accept it. Because of his concern, I know he has offered this again.

What he would want to say, and what his amendment says, I think fairly stated, is that a protestor and not just abortion clinics but any number of protestors who are sued under Federal law, and a judgment is rendered against them, Senator SCHUMER would want to make that judgment automatically not dischargeable, automatically without review by the court or any examination of the facts of the situation, to say it should not be discharged and will remain a permanent debt of the protestor.

I know the Senator said we all voted for this and there was some sort of agreement. I really do not think there was an agreement about this. As I recall, it came up in the Judiciary Committee. Chairman HATCH was trying to move the bill forward, as he frequently does, and allowed it to become accepted by a voice vote without any big to-do. It came up to the floor and was debated again, and a decision was made that we would just allow it to pass. It was not that big a deal as people saw it at the time.

I opposed it. I did not feel good about targeting these kinds of cases. I thought that the current law was acceptable and we should not go in this direction, but it passed and I voted for final passage of the overall bankruptcy bill. So I think that is why the Senator says I and others voted for it. A lot of people voted for the bill on final passage that may not have voted for the amendment on the floor.

Regardless of that, the question is, now what should we do? I would just note that there are a number of reasons why I think this should not be a part of the bill. First, as I have noted, these protestors have lost every single case in which they have sought to discharge debts arising from judgments under the FACE Act. The current bankruptcy law and this bill will say flatly that such debts are not dischargeable if the injury is the result of a willful, malicious act, as these violations for the most part are.

So, first, it is not necessary, and I would again note that the bill covers more than just abortion protestors. There could be any number of protestors. I think about the situation where maybe somebody from Alabama goes up to the southern district of New York and gets sued up there and a big judgment is rendered against them for taking a position unpopular in New York or maybe, as has happened in the past, people from New York have come down to Alabama and have been involved in protests and could have judgments rendered against them in local courts. So the Senator would say that under no circumstances, when that judgment were to appear on a discharge petition in bankruptcy court, would the court have any authority to look behind it. This Federal bankruptcy judge would have no authority to look behind this judgment to see if it was willful or intentional as the current law and the law has always been in bankruptcy, to my recollection, pretty much from the history of bankruptcy law. He would not look behind it and he would decide automatically it is a judgment not dischargeable. I am not sure that is good policy. I am not sure we want to do that. As a matter of fact, I do not think it is. I think the current law works. We should not do this. The Schumer amendment is bad policy. I disagree with it. I do not think it is the biggest deal in the entire world, but I think under the legal system and the principles of this bill, we would be better off allowing the bankruptcy court to consider these debts and examine them to make sure they meet the standards of discharge.

There is a big practical reason. This bill has passed the Senate four times by an overwhelming vote. One time I think it was 97 to 1. It has been marked up in the Senate Judiciary Committee four times, and it has not been lightly considered on the floor of the Senate. It has been the subject of hours and hours and days of debate. We are already into the second week on this bill. After all the debate and all the hoopla we have had, and so many other issues, we continue to pound away at this legislation for reasons that I am unable to fathom. But we are moving forward. I believe we will pass it again.

What is the practical reason? The House of Representatives rejected this bill the last time for the sole reason of the Schumer amendment. It is unbelievable. As much as we had in this bill, all the pages of this legislation, one little amendment killed this legislation, an amendment that I believe is bad policy, certainly not necessary, and I submit could result in killing this legislation again if we move it forward.

So let's not do it. Let's not do this. Let's not go beyond the bill that we have now, that came out of the Judiciary Committee with a bipartisan vote, an overwhelming vote out of the Judiciary Committee to come to the floor without the Schumer amendment in it. Let's not add this amendment and jeopardize the passage of the bill.

Let's not add this amendment and perhaps take a step, I submit with all seriousness, that could curtail protests and freedom of expression in America. Sure the protestors have lost every time. I believe they should have lost every time under the law. But there may be some times, under some of these provisions of Federal law, that could result in judgments that legitimate protestors were simply standing up under hostile circumstances in a hostile jurisdiction for what they truly believe in, and then the bankruptcy judge has no ability whatsoever to prohibit this judgment from sticking against them perhaps for the rest of their lives.

I don't know.

I don't think the law is failing in this regard, and I do not think the law is being abused in this regard. I think it is being handled well. We do not need this amendment for the reasons I stated, and for other reasons, frankly, that I will not state at this time.

I urge the rejection of the Schumer amendment and note with pleasure that Senator HATCH, the former chairman of the Judiciary Committee, now a senior Republican member of it who has worked on this legislation since the beginning, is on the Senate floor. I am pleased to yield to him.

Mr. HATCH. I thank my colleague.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. SUNUNU). The Senator from Utah.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I appreciate the remarks of my colleague. As usual, he has done a very good job in outlining what is involved in this bankruptcy bill, and I believe he deserves a lot of credit for the hard work he has done on the floor.

Mr. President, comes now the Schumer amendment or, should I say, comes again the Schumer amendment. I rise to speak in opposition to this amendment. Been there. Done that. In fact, I have been there and done that a few times.

I have been around here long enough to know a poison pill when I see one. And make no mistake about it, this has become a classic poison pill amendment.

I have worked in good faith for several years to attempt to neutralize the counterproductive effects of this amendment. But no matter how we try to adjust the language, we cannot overcome the basic flaw in the amendment: The Schumer amendment is a solution in search of a problem.

I oppose this amendment. It is no secret that I am genuinely fond of the senior Senator from New York. While I frequently disagree with him on issues, I respect enormously his political skills.

Even when from my perspective he is wrong—such as the leadership role he has played in organizing the first permanent filibusters of majority-supported judicial nominations—I know that he always tries to act in a heartfelt manner that advances his political agenda.

We have been able to achieve compromises on many issues over the years. Senator SCHUMER and I have worked together on many crime issues. For example, we have worked on language pertaining to the designation of high-intensity drug trafficking areas.

Over a period of years we have tried to work together on the subject matter of the pending amendment to the bankruptcy bill. I have always been willing to work with him and others in the interest of passing the bankruptcy reform bill.

From the beginning of this debate, many others and I have long contended that his amendment is unnecessary on its own merits. The amendment which we consider today appears to seek to guarantee the collection of civil and criminal penalties arising from criminal violations of the 1994 Freedom of Access to Clinic Entrances Act. The purpose of the Schumer amendment is to make clear that those who are fined due to attacks on abortion clinics are prevented from being able to discharge these fines and civil judgments resulting from such attacks through bankruptcy proceedings.

My friend from New York has pushed a hot button. He must know that. Injecting the polarizing politics of abortion into the bankruptcy bill, most would have to agree, does not appear to be calculated to help the passage of the bankruptcy bill. Quite the opposite, the Schumer amendment has become a wedge issue that has stopped the bill in the past and, today, can threaten the passage of this important bipartisan bill that enjoys broad bicameral support.

I urge my colleagues to vote against the Schumer amendment. Let me first explain my substantive objections and then I will describe my procedural, pragmatic, and political concerns with the Schumer amendment.

At the outset, it should be understood that in its best light the Schumer amendment is a belts-and-suspenders proposition that attempts to solve a problem which, as far as I can tell, has never actually occurred.

We have been debating this bill for 8 years, and I am still unaware of any actual case in which a person who has been fined for harming a person or property in connection with any unlawful protests against, or attacks on, abortion clinics, has had any subsequent fines or financial penalties discharged through bankruptcy. At our markup of this legislation in February of 2001—more than 4 years ago, Senator Schumer said in justification of the amendment:

... this is a vital amendment. I am not going into all the details ... I will not catalogue them except to tell you that when Maria Vullo testified and anyone else did, they said without the Schumer Amendment we would go back to the days before 1994 when the clinics were closed by some who had felt ... that they were more moral than the rest of us. ...

Certainly that prophesy has not come to pass in the 4 years subsequent to the time that Senator SCHUMER made that statement back in 2001.

I am unaware of a systemic shutdown of the network of abortion clinics in this country over the past four years. Nor am I aware of any evidence of the use of the bankruptcy code as a mechanism of escaping financial responsibility for acts of violence against abortion clinics or their personnel, or for that matter, any other criminal enterprise.

The reason for this outcome is simple: Current law prevents such an outcome. Section 523(a)(6) of the bankruptcy code already prohibits the discharge of debts through willful or malicious injury to a person or property, and section 523(a)(12) makes restitution orders resulting from a criminal conviction nondischargeable through bankruptcy.

Nothing in this bill changes these provisions in the law. Moreover, a growing body of case law confirms the adequacy of these provisions when it comes to enforcing judgments arising from FACE Act violations.

In Behn v. Buffalo GYN Womenservices, a 1999 decision in Federal bankruptcy court in Senator SCHUMER's home State, the court rejected an attempt to discharge a civil award debt resulting from an abortion protest.

So it was rejected.

In Bray v. Planned Parenthood of Columbia/Willamette, decided in 2000, a bankruptcy court in Maryland rejected the attempt to discharge debts resulting from an Oregon case in which a Web site produced by anti-abortion extremists threatened the lives of those working in these clinics. The 2001 Treshman decision in a Maryland bankruptcy court confirmed that such actions will not be tolerated by permitting discharge of restitution or judgment through bankruptcy.

Randall Terry, the founder of Operation Rescue, is living proof of the adequacy of these laws. His Web site now solicits contributions after he was completely bankrupted as a result of actions found to be violative of the FACE Act.

From a purely legal perspective, it seems fair to say that what we have here is a solution in search of a problem. This is actually confirmed by the most recent testimony of my colleague from New York's star witness on this subject, Maria Vullo.

Way back when this amendment was first suggested back in 1998 or 1999, several cases were still pending. But now these cases have been resolved. And in every instance, the courts have refused a discharge of these debts.

In answer to a question of Chairman SPECTER in connection with the Judiciary Committee's last hearing on bankruptcy reform, held only 3 weeks ago, Ms. Maria Vullo acknowledged that she was ultimately successful under current law in all six bankruptcy courts where she acted to help prevent such improper bankruptcy discharges of abortion clinic-related fines.

There you have it. The primary litigator in these cases testified that she has won in all of her cases under existing law. This should help lead us to the conclusion that there is no compelling legal reason to change the law. There is an old saying: If it ain't broke, don't fix it.

We are not talking just belts and suspenders, we are talking belts, suspenders, and an elastic waist band. Discharges related to FACE Act violations have not been permitted under current law.

Our laws are clear. We discourage, prevent, and punish abusive filings, including those related to those offenses that occur in connection with abortion clinics. Again, to my knowledge, there is a complete absence of cases demonstrating the problem that this amendment seeks to address. This is not surprising.

Our bankruptcy laws already act to prevent, have prevented, and will act in the future to prevent precisely the problem that Senator SCHUMER is worried about, but cannot, it appears, document. The truth of the matter is that, on the merits, this is just an unnecessary amendment. Yet this amendment has already scuttled bankruptcy reform on two occasions.

In 2000 essentially the same bankruptcy bill passed this body with 83 votes and then 70 votes. It was vetoed by President Clinton in the waning days of his second term for failing to include this amendment. Then in the 107th Congress, the House of Representatives rejected even a twice-amended—and moderated—Schumer amendment.

Now that it is clear that the courts will not discharge these debts, the proponents of this amendment have slightly but subtly changed their tune. Now the alleged issue of concern is that some will nevertheless continue to attempt to discharge such fines and penalties—that is, sometime, some place, someone will try to use the bankruptcy code to shield illicit acts involving attacks on abortion clinics.

Some argue the amendment is justified on the supposed need to codify the general prohibition of section 523(a)(6) against discharging debts accrued in connection with willful or malicious injury to a person or property with a special provision of law geared solely toward abortion clinic-related violence. The fact is, however, current bankruptcy law, along with the ever growing body of precedents on this subject, make it clear that attorneys will not be inclined to make these frivolous and abusive filings in the future.

Rule 9011 of the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure already allows sanctions against attorneys who participate in submissions to delay proceedings and needlessly increase the cost of litigation. It says a frivolous action without evidentiary support can be punished. I guess it is true that particular bankruptcy courts may sometime in the future eventually be faced with a filing by someone asking for improper discharge of debts, but that is just the nature of litigation within the bankruptcy system and the American system of justice.

Having the right to bring a claim in our system is very different from winning that claim. For each case that goes to trial, there is a winner and a loser. Trying to get around the bankruptcy code and case law precedents in the manner feared by supporters of the Schumer amendment is a losing case under current law.

Courts decide cases on the basis of the law and the particular facts in front of them. That bankruptcy courts will have to undertake their normal and traditional role of reviewing all relevant aspects of individual filings that may, or may not, include these improper and unsustainable claims related to abortion clinic damages is hardly a grave injustice.

And for what it is worth, the success of the FACE Act and the decisions of bankruptcy courts that hold those debtors to account appears to have resulted in an ever dwindling number of judgments that must be litigated.

This is an issue that is being overhyped.

The current statutes are clear.

The case law is clear.

The paucity of evidence of such claims for abortion clinic-related violence and injuries being routinely, or even infrequently, made in bankruptcy proceedings, reflects the fact that the word is out that the statutes and case law already prevent the problem that the Schumer amendment allegedly solves.

Moreover, I would like to add that section 319 of this bill expresses the sense of the Senate that all signed and unsigned documents submitted to a bankruptcy court must be preceded by a reasonable inquiry to verify that this information is well grounded in fact and warranted by existing law or based on a good faith argument for an extension, modification, or reversal of existing law.

I am hopeful that this sense-of-the-Senate provision will help spread the word even further.

When the Schumer amendment burst upon the floor in 2000, I worked in good faith to make this questionably meritorious issue more palatable to Members on my side of the aisle.

In particular, I wanted to help alleviate the concerns of those who, as I, hold strong pro-life views. We are sensitive to the fact that the original Schumer amendment could reasonably be interpreted as affecting first amendment rights to protest against what we believe is the unjustifiable practice of abortion.

It is my recollection that the original Schumer language back in 2000 also addressed attempted or alleged harassment, interference, and obstruction. Many believed that this language was way too broad and could have potentially implicated the actions of peaceful anti-abortion protestors who were simply exercising their freedom of speech.

Nevertheless, for a variety of reasons, mostly political rather than legal or policy, the Schumer amendment was accepted. One of the key factors was that it appeared to some at the time that the amendment was offered in part to give then-Vice President Gore an opportunity to possibly cast a tie breaking abortion vote during the Presidential election year of 2000.

I cannot say for certain that this was the case. But if it was, it probably would not have been the first time that Presidential politics played out on the floor of the Senate.

Before the February 2, 2000, vote on the Schumer amendment, I said the following on the Senate floor:

Although I believe this amendment to be tremendously flawed, the majority leader, Senator Grassley, and I recommend that Members on both sides vote for this amendment. We will, in good faith, in conference correct the amendment and resolve these problems at that time. With this amendment accepted, nobody will be able to demagogue this issue politically in the context of true bankruptcy reform. We pledge to work with our friends on both sides of the aisle who are interested in this issue during conference to make sure the law is clear, that the due respect for the first amendment, and debts arising from violent acts cannot be discharged in bankruptcy.

This is hardly a ringing endorsement and certainly nothing near an absolute commitment to retain this language at any cost or contingency.

Nevertheless, in the 106th Congress the bankruptcy bill, with this flawed language, passed the Senate with 83 votes.

Eventually during the House-Senate conference committee the Schumer abortion clinic-specific amendment was not contained in the conference report. The bankruptcy legislation, without the Schumer language still passed the Senate with a strong bipartisan 70 votes.

Unfortunately, President Clinton then pocket vetoed the bill passed by both the House and Senate.

Early in the 107th Congress, I worked with Senator SCHUMER on compromise language that moved away from the incendiary abortion clinics-specific language to a more general and neutrally-phrased provision related to "lawful good and services." This provision was adopted by a unanimous voice vote of the Judiciary Committee on February 28, 2001.

I would note for the record that despite this compromise, Senator SCHUMER voted against the bill on final approval in the Judiciary Committee.

On July 17, 2001, this bill passed the Senate by a vote of 82-16.

The House-passed version of the bankruptcy bill in the 107th Congress once again did not contain comparable language. I might add that the House passed its bill by a strong bipartisan vote of 306-108 on February 26, 2001.

At this point Senator SCHUMER and I worked with Representatives HENRY HYDE and JOHN CONYERS and others to fashion an acceptable compromise.

This compromise was rejected.

Frankly, at the time, I would have preferred that the compromise be accepted and this already overdue bill be signed into law.

However, I can well understand the frustration of many of my colleagues in the House being asked to adopt a watered-down version of an amendment without meaningful legal effect derived from the inflammatory original version of the Schumer amendment that addresses a problem that apparently does not exist in the first place.

Rather than go down this fruitless road again, I ask my colleagues to vote down the Schumer amendment for once and all.

Not only is it unlikely that the House will accept it, the Senate should not accept it either.

One important difference from the situation of 3 and 4 years ago is that we now have, as I discussed earlier, a more definitive picture of how the courts will interpret the application of section 523(a)(6) in the context of abortion-clinic related claims.

In short, the courts have not and will not allow fines or judgments stemming from the willful or malicious injury to a person or property to be discharged in bankruptcy whether they arise out of illicit actions against abortion clinics that violate the FACE Act, or, for that matter, any other of the literally dozens of other injuries that can be conjured up relating to willful or malicious injury to a person or property.

No one would, or should, take seriously any amendment that purported to state explicitly that fines or judgments incurred from yelling fire in a crowded theater could not be discharged through bankruptcy.

Nor should we support the Schumer amendment when we know it is both unnecessary and divisive.

You do not have to be pro-life to be against the Schumer amendment. You just have to conclude that 8 years is enough time to have worked on one bill that has repeatedly engendered broad bipartisan support.

And to hold up this legislation once again over an incendiary, extraneous, redundant poison pill amendment is just not right.

I always try to seek a compromise or accommodation with my colleagues whenever it is productive to do so and consistent with my principles.

In this case it is simply not possible to do so in a productive manner absent any sign from the House that its Members are receptive to such a compromise.

Having worked on this issue for several years, I have reached the conclusion that the inherent volatility of the subject matter of the original Schumer amendment has made it nearly impossible to arrive at a neutral language resolution to this undocumented problem at this time.

Moreover, the well-known by now impasse over the acceptability of compromise language is compounded by the simple fact that there is, to my knowledge, no compelling evidence that there is a problem requiring a legislative fix.

To a certain extent, this is an exercise that demonstrates why it can be harder to fix a hypothetical problem than a real problem.

Frankly, that we would even be considering an amendment based on the 2001 Judiciary Committee markup language, rather than the revised 2001 conference report language, hardly seems like a step in the right direction. To use an expression that my friend from New York sometimes uses himself, reverting to the earlier language may seem to some a bit like a poke in the eye.

I suspect that this is unintentional on the part of my friend from New York. I wish we could have worked this out, and I thought we did work it out.

But as I look at all the facts and circumstances, including the developments in the actual cases brought and decided over the last few years, I can only conclude that there is even stronger evidence today than there was in 2000 and 2001 that this amendment is simply unnecessary.

While I attempted in good faith to resolve this problem 4 years ago, time seems to have proven that those I who looked askance at this compromise in the first place were correct in their assessment of the lack of necessity for this amendment.

I ask my colleagues to oppose the amendment of my distinguished friend from New York for these reasons. It is important that we get this bankruptcy bill finished. It is extremely important that we get it done. If this amendment is added, it isn't going to get done again, and we will be in the ninth year next year, frankly, probably 2 years from now because we will never get what really has to be done in the best interests of bankruptcy reform.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New York is recognized.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, I would like to ask my colleague a question, but, first, I will make a couple of points.

First of all, nothing has changed since we all supported the Schumer-Reid-Hatch amendment of a few years ago. The basic purpose then was not to make sure that cases in bankruptcy court did not come out on the side of those who were victims of violence. It was just impossible to pursue the claims of bankruptcy.

My good friend from Utah cites Maria Vullo. She is a successful lawyer in New York who donated her own time which she estimated at one of our hearings to be worth over $1 million. She believed passionately that those who used violence should be stopped. Not every clinic has it. And, of course, if you go through the bankruptcy proceedings, you will win. Clinics don't have the ability to do that; first, to fight in court on the issue of violence and then to go back to the bankruptcy court.

I say in all due respect to my good friend from Utah, he knew that then, and he knows it now. It is the same issue. The very issue that he says we don't need this law was brought up in 2000 and 2001. My good colleague was then good enough to admit we did need the law even though we couldn't find cases, and even though there were no cases in bankruptcy court where the Randall Terrys of the world prevailed. You would never have the successful suit.

That is why these fanatical groups are insisting that bankruptcy be used.

I make another point to my colleague. If the amendment is unnecessary now, why wasn't it unnecessary then?

I make this point to my colleagues: The merits have not changed. Exactly the situation that prevailed in 2000 and 2001 prevails in 2005.

What has happened is people have done a 180-degree about-face because of a small group in the House who do not represent the mainstream views of the House or of even the Republican Party in the House but who have insisted on not going forward with a bill with this worthy amendment in it. An amendment that was praised, a compromise that was hailed a few years ago is every bit as valid today as it was then.

I know it is difficult and awkward for people to say, well, never mind, but we cannot let this issue just die. The rule of law is too important. Fairness is too important. What is good and beautiful about America is too important.

We will ask our colleagues to stick with their convictions that they have had over the last few years and not do an about-face simply because a small group of industry leaders says we must have this bill no matter what.

Senator HATCH spoke for a long period of time. I wanted to rebut him. He did not want to do it on his time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New York does control time. The Senator can yield time to the Senator from California, but in doing so the Senator will lose his right to the floor.

Mr. SCHUMER. I yield 10 minutes to my friend and colleague from California, and cosponsor of this legislation, Senator FEINSTEIN.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, I thank the distinguished Senator from New York.

We are both members of the Judiciary Committee. We had an opportunity to discuss and debate this amendment in the Judiciary Committee.

Senator SCHUMER's amendment is a critical amendment. Essentially, when this body in 1994 passed the Freedom of Access to Clinic Entrances Act, we said that individuals should be able to go into clinics without being obstructed. The law was very clear.

The law also has led to successful criminal and civil judgments against groups that use intimidation and outright violence to prevent people from obtaining or providing reproductive health services.

This law would be seriously damaged if we do not close this loophole that has allowed some antiabortion extremists to use bankruptcy to shield their assets. The Senator from New York mentioned the founder of Operation Rescue, Randall Terry, who said in 1998 after filing for bankruptcy:

I have filed a chapter 7 petition to discharge my debts to those who would use my money to promote the killing of the unborn.

In my home State of California there was a similar incident involving a man by the name of John Stoos and several other people in 1989 who were sued by the operators of a Sacramento abortion clinic for allegedly blocking the clinic's entrance and harassing patients. A judge ordered Stoos and others to pay nearly $100,000 in attorney's fees incurred by the clinic. As a result, Stoos filed for personal bankruptcy, listing that debt among many he could not pay. These actions are clear evidence of abuse of the bankruptcy system. This bankruptcy bill should stop them.

I hope the Schumer amendment would be accepted by this Senate.

Let me use this time to speak a bit more generally about this bill. I voted for this bill when it left committee. I have decided to vote against this bill in the Senate. I want to say why. In committee, we were asked to withhold all amendments to the floor. We knew the bill was not a perfect bill. We have seen it improved over the years. We knew it was better than the House bill. And with all complicated, difficult bills, the tradition of the Senate has always been the floor debate and discussion. In a majority of times as a product of floor debate and discussion, problems in the bill can be remedied.

We knew there were problems in the bill. For example, I have an amendment which I have withdrawn which says that the credit card companies should, in fact, notify a minimum payer how long it would take that payer of a credit card, if he only paid the minimum amount of interest, to pay off the debt. Senator AKAKA had a similar amendment. It was summarily defeated. I had an amendment; I had two Republican cosponsors. I learned it would also be summarily defeated. Thanks to Senator SHELBY and Senator SARBANES, the Banking Committee has taken an interest in this and in the future and will take a look at it.

Nonetheless, the fact of the matter is this bill is all for the credit card companies. I know there is credit card fraud. I know that has to be met. I felt the bill was important to pass. However, I also felt the bill should be balanced and that we should see that the consumer is also protected in this process, protected with notice of what a minimum payment means, and also, frankly, protected against high interest rates.

Senator DAYTON moved an amendment which would limit interest rates on credit cards to 30 percent. The amendment was summarily defeated. The fact is with penalties, with other charges, with high interest rates—and many companies have interest rates, believe it or not, well in excess of 30 percent—a minimum payer cannot ever pay the full debt because the interest on the debt, if combined with certain penalties and/or fixed payments, becomes such that it overwhelms the principal. Many people do not know that.

The fact is 40 percent of credit card holders pay off their debt every month; 40 percent make only the minimum payment; and 20 percent are kind of 50/50 in that category. For those 60 percent who are generally people who are not as informed, not as able to pay back their bill, who may have one, two, three, four, five, six different credit cards, because this is a credit economy, credit card companies have been able, with very little interest to the payer of the debt, to solicit huge fees, penalties, and interest rates. This is plain wrong.

If we are unable to correct it, which I had hoped would be corrected by these amendments that have been presented, I cannot vote for this bill as long as these gross injustices remain.

Let's for a moment look at the 30-percent interest rate. It is very high. Inflation is about 2 percent. The interest rate on 3-month Treasury bills is 2.75 percent. The national average lending rate on a 30-year mortgage is 5.59 percent. Yet an amendment to limit interest rates on credit cards to 30 percent went down dramatically.

I mention there are companies that are charging high annual interest rates. Some charge 384 percent, 535 percent. Amazingly, one Delaware-based company has charged 1,095 percent, according to the Minnesota chapter of the National Association of Consumer Bankruptcy Attorneys.

The Washington Post, the Los Angeles Times, other major newspapers have pointed out where fees, rates, and charges have buried debtors. They have pointed out a multitude of cases. A special education teacher from my home State worked a second job to keep up with $2,000 in monthly payments. She collectively went to five banks to try to pay $25,000 in credit card debt. Even though she did not use her cards to buy anything else, her debt doubled to $49,574 by the time she filed for bankruptcy last June. Effectively, interest payments are half of the debt. She will never be able to pay that off.

To push people like this from chapter 7 into chapter 13, when what is the problem is interest rates and penalty fees that truly do victimize an unsuspecting individual—how could this Senate do that, if someone is going to charge a 100-percent interest rate?

One of my own staff members found that simply getting a credit card cash advance resulted in an immediate 3 percent fee which was simply added to the interest rate.

The result is even the most careful credit card users find themselves often swamped, particularly those who can only afford to make a minimum payment, and the fees, charges, and interests pile up, making it virtually impossible to ever pay off the debt.

This amendment would have been a meaningful addition to the bill. It certainly would have added fairness. It certainly would have sent a signal to credit card companies that the sky is not the limit. Yet it was defeated.

Senator SCHUMER's asset protection trust, of which I was a cosponsor, was another indication of where wealthy people could shelter assets and not have to pay back in chapter 13. These are some of the inequities.

In recent years a number of financial and bankruptcy planners have taken advantage of the law of a few States to create what is called an "asset protection trust." These trusts are basically mechanisms for rich people to keep money despite declaring bankruptcy.

They are unfair, and violate the basic principle of this underlying legislation—that bankruptcy should be used judiciously to deal with the economic reality that sometimes people cannot pay their debts, but to prevent abuse of the system.

This loophole is an example of where the law, if not changed, permits, or even encourages, such abuse.

The amendment was simple. It set an upper limit on the amount of money that could be shielded in these asset protection trusts, capping the amount at $125,000.

The bottom line: Without this amendment, wealthy people will be able to preserve significant sums of money in an asset protection trust, effectively retaining their assets while wiping away their debts.

The proposed cap amount, $125,000, is not a small sum. It is more than enough to ensure that the debtor is not left destitute. I believe it is a reasonable amount—it is deliberately based on the now-accepted $125,000 limit for the homestead exemption, which will also remain available to a debtor.

I would also like to say a few words about my concerns about what appears to be a new policy in the Senate.

It appears that the Republican leadership has decided that rather than honoring the 200 plus year tradition of the Senate as a deliberative body, the Senate should be run like the House of Representatives. There appears to be a new process being implemented in which the Senate should no longer seriously consider amendments on the floor to improve bills.

We are now in the middle of the second major piece of legislation where the majority has decided that amendments by the minority will be rejected wholesale regardless of the merits.

It appears that even when serious problems in the underlying legislation are raised and even when the Republican leadership agrees that the problem exists, amendments offered by the minority will be rejected.

In fact, when the Judiciary Committee was marking up the bill, Senators were asked not to offer amendments and instead offer them on the floor. Statements were made by the Acting-Chairman like, "I know we are going to go through this on the floor and I don't see any reason to keep us here all day and all night"; and, "[You will] have every opportunity to present these amendments on the floor."

Yet, upon reaching the floor, Senators have found that their amendments are not being considered on the merits.

It is the Senate's job to carefully debate, carefully consider, and pass the very best laws we can. But now the Senate is being asked to simply pass legislation as drafted, regardless of its content.

This lack consideration and care does a disservice to the Senate and to the Senators who work hard to reach compromises and find common ground. But more importantly, it does a disservice to the American people.

We are here to develop the best policy we can, not to simply play political games and jam through legislation for the sake of expediency.

As I began, I want to be clear. I support bankruptcy reform legislation, and I support many of the provisions in the underlying bill. However, throughout this process many important issues have been raised that identify serious problems that must be addressed. The Senate has been and should remain a deliberative body that seeks to draft the best legislation we can. Unfortunately, that is not what we are doing.

And unfortunately, based on these concerns, I regret that I am no longer able to support the bankruptcy legislation. I do not believe the bill before us is balanced. There remain many serious problems that must be addressed before I am ready to support the legislation. I have decided because of the summary disposition of amendments by the other side, this Democrat Member is going to vote "no" in the Senate.

Thank you, Mr. President, and I yield the floor.

I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, I ask the time be charged equally on both sides during the quorum call.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the time during the quorum call will be charged evenly to both sides.

The Senator from Kansas.

Mr. BROWBACK. Mr. President, I yield myself as much time as I may consume from the Republican side of the agenda.

I thank my colleagues for this good debate on an important issue that does not belong on this bill. There are several key reasons, clear reasons why this amendment of the Senator from New York should be rejected. This is an important piece of legislation, the bankruptcy legislation. This amendment brings the most difficult social issue we have of our day into this debate. It does not belong here. It is not the right place to do this. We have plenty of pro-life issues to come before this Senate, and not to tie the bankruptcy bill up would be an important thing to do.

The membership opposes this amendment because, as we learned in previous Congresses, it is a poison pill.

The amendment is meant to kill the overall bankruptcy reform bill. I would hope that is not what the author's intent is. But that is the effect of this amendment. It kills the bill.

If the author of this amendment wants bankruptcy reform to move forward, it is something that needs to move forward. I have voted against bankruptcy reform in the past because I didn't think it was proper. I thought particularly we have problems on homestead provisions that we have been able to get worked out over the years we have been considering this legislation. Now we have that worked out as many other pieces have been refined over the 6 years this has been considered.

Now is not the time to add this most contentious issue into the debate. It is not the proper place, and it is time that we move the bill forward, move it to the House and to the President for signature.

Bankruptcy reform is an important matter. It would be my desire for my colleague not to offer the amendment so that we can focus on the particular critical issue facing our Nation in the form of the need for fundamental bankruptcy reform.

Aside from the abortion issue, I am deeply concerned about what I believe to be a lack of fairness and justice embodied in this amendment. There is a fundamental fairness issue involved with this amendment. No one in this Chamber condones violent crime. I am certain that everyone believes violent crime should be prosecuted to the fullest extent of the law. While the pending amendment is presented as a way to address violent crime, it would primarily and inappropriately intimidate and harm peaceful protesters. In fact, were the Schumer amendment to become law, no crime would even be necessary to trigger its sanctions. Merely violating a Federal or State civil statute, such as a minor trespass, would be enough to place a violator in financial jeopardy.

Historically this legislative body has fashioned criminal and bankruptcy penalties in a manner proportional to the gravity of the offense and the degree of injury and culpability. If enacted, this amendment would be a radical break with this tradition of prudence and fairness. For example, under current law, there are only a few extreme cases where a debtor is prevented from seeking discharge of his or her debts through bankruptcy protection. For example, instances in which discharge of debt is prohibited include intentional financial wrongdoing, such as fraud and embezzlement, or cases where the debtor has created a grave unjustifiable risk to human life, such as injury caused by drunk driving. Those are appropriate.

The Schumer amendment would put a peaceful pro-life protester who, in the course of exercising his or her first amendment rights, simply steps in the wrong place—trespassing—on a par with embezzlers or drunk drivers. Should the price of constitutional freedom be the risk of financial ruin? Amazingly, this amendment says yes. The amendment says that people who protest and who do no physical harm, have no malicious intent should be singled out for harsh treatment.

While I make no excuse for violations of the law, I have to ask again: Should not the gravity of the punishment correspond with the offense? I don't think that is at all the case in this particular amendment.

A literal reading of the Schumer amendment would strip a peaceful protester of bankruptcy protection should he or she simply step in the wrong place while leafleting or even praying the rosary. Whether the fine involved is $10 or $1 million, we are talking about a peaceful individual and families with young children who should not be forced to risk paying this price simply for doing what the Constitution permits.

Fairness and the great tradition of our first amendment freedoms counsel against the adoption of this amendment.

I urge my colleagues to vote against it. It kills the bankruptcy bill. It is against fundamental fairness and freedom for people to exercise their right of free speech.

I suggest the absence of a quorum and ask unanimous consent that the time be equally divided.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, I rise to support the Schumer amendment to the bankruptcy legislation presently before the Senate.

The amendment provides that debts or judgments arising from acts of violence and threats of violence cannot be discharged in bankruptcy proceedings. While this provision was drafted in previous Congresses to specifically apply to reproductive health service providers and abortion clinics, it has been expanded this year with the help of some of our Republican colleagues.

The amendment now addresses violence and intimidation aimed at blocking access to any type of lawful good or service. The Schumer amendment now applies to anyone who threatens, intimidates, or harms another person in the course of a lawful practice in places like houses of worship, the workplace and restaurants.

Supporters of the bankruptcy bill argue that this amendment should be defeated because any amendment to so-called compromise bankruptcy legislation would upset the apple cart, causing the House of Representatives to reject it.

I cannot understand how this Senate could fail to pass an amendment that would simply prevent perpetrators of violence from hiding behind our bankruptcy laws. Where is the justice in permitting such a practice?

For the past week, supporters of the bankruptcy legislation have consistently talked about personal responsibility and the need to prevent people from abusing the bankruptcy process.

In fact, the centerpiece of this legislation is a means test that presumes chapter 7 filers are abusing the bankruptcy laws because their monthly income increases by as little as $100.

The Schumer amendment is intended to prevent extremists and fanatics from abusing our bankruptcy laws to shield themselves from paying fines and fees imposed by a court of law after they have endangered someone's livelihood.

These attacks are more common than one might imagine. Since 1977, there have been 7 murders, 17 attempted murders, 41 bombings, 171 arsons, 100 butyric acid attacks, and 655 threats targeting abortion providers alone.

In total, there have been more than 4,000 cases of stalking, burglaries, kidnappings, assaults, anthrax threats, invasions, attempting bombing and acts of vandalism, perpetrated against people who were performing or offering a legal procedure. And in case after case, after the perpetrators of these acts of intimidation and violence are brought to justice, they hide behind the bankruptcy code to shield themselves from assuming responsibility for their actions.

As Senator SCHUMER has said, this issue is neither pro-choice nor pro-life; it is "pro-rule-of-law and anti-violence."

While we have a right to disagree with the law in this country, and a right to try to change the law, no person has the right to take the law into his own hands.

I have followed this issue for a long time. The first blockade of an abortion clinic occurred in Cherry Hill, NJ, in 1987.

The first murder of an abortion provider occurred 12 years ago, on March 10, 1993, when Dr. David Gunn was slain during an antiabortion protest at a Pensacola, FL clinic. Since then, there have been six more murders.

In 1994, responding to a rash of violence against abortion providers around the country, I asked the United States attorney to convene a task force to ensure that all appropriate measures were being taken to protect women and doctors and to prosecute those who threatened them with violence.

Later that year, Congress enacted the Freedom of Access to Clinic Entrances, FACE, Act, which established Federal criminal and financial penalties for those who employ violence and intimidation to prevent persons from obtaining or providing reproductive health services.

Unfortunately, the perpetrators of violence have used our bankruptcy laws to evade responsibility and escape the financial penalties that were part of the FACE Act. For example, former Operation Rescue president Randall Terry has filed for bankruptcy to avoid paying more than $1.6 million in fines and fees that he owes as a result of his illegal actions.

We must not allow those who would take the law into their own hands and commit acts of violence against their fellow citizens to hide behind our laws when it suits their purposes. We must not allow our bankruptcy laws to be abused as a shield for violence.

I encourage my colleagues to support the Schumer amendment.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, we have 11 minutes on our side. How much time remains left on the other side?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BURR). There is 10 minutes remaining on the minority side and 15 minutes on the majority side.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the last 5 minutes be reserved for me and the previous 5 minutes to whoever wants to speak for the other side.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, 5 minutes will be reserved on each side to be allocated from that side's time remaining.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, it is my understanding there is 6½ minutes on the Democratic side.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

Mr. REID. I will use a minute and a half of that now.

Mr. President, I am happy today to rise as a cosponsor of the Schumer amendment. This amendment would ensure that debts arising from unlawful acts of violence cannot be discharged from bankruptcy.

America is a nation of laws. One might not always agree with the law or how it is interpreted, but that does not entitle you to willfully violate the law. The right to express disagreement is to seek change through peaceful means. It is never appropriate to resort to violence or intimidation in violation of the law. Here in the Senate we express policy differences through civil discourse and resolve them through the political process, not through violence. We debate in this body passionately but in a manner of respect and civility in an attempt to persuade others of the merits of our position, and that is the purpose of the debate. Those who resort to violence are violating not only our laws but our American principles and values. They are violating what we call the rule of law on which this country was founded.

Unfortunately, some who break the law are using a loophole in the Bankruptcy Code to avoid paying the fines and penalties assessed against them as a result of their illegal activities. This amendment will ensure that individuals who engage in such acts of violence, intimidation, or threats, cannot hide in bankruptcy from the penalties imposed on them from violating the law.

I emphasize that this amendment is not about the right to abortion, nor does it single out anti-abortion protestors. This amendment applies to anyone who violates a law related to the provision of lawful goods and services. It applies to any extremist who will turn to violence to protest lawful activities.

For example, this amendment would apply to animal rights activists who engage in illegal tactics to shut down a lawful animal research center. There are many people who think that using animals for medical research is immoral and wrong, but this does not entitle those people to come in and trash one of those facilities, as has been happening. It would apply to an ecoterrorist who engages in illegal tactics to intimidate car dealerships or timber companies from doing business with people they think they should not do business with. It would apply to an arsonist who starts a fire at a church to deprive worshippers of the right to practice their religion. All of these extremists must be held accountable for their actions, and none should be permitted to discharge their debts in bankruptcy.

It is true that some of the worst abuses of this kind have been anti-abortion extremists who have terrorized reproductive health care workers. They have directed thousands of acts of violence against abortion providers, including bombings, arson, death threats, kidnappings, assaults, and murders. When a man by the name of Barnett Slepian, who was a father of four, a husband, was a victim, I was the first person to come to the Senate floor and say that is wrong. When violence occurred at a Planned Parenthood clinic—I believe that is where it was—someplace in the South, I came to the floor immediately to say that one cannot violate the law because they disagree with what a lawful business is doing.

Dr. Slepian was an obstetrician/gynecologist. He provided health care to women and delivered babies and, on occasion, he performed abortions. He was at a downtown clinic, and he worked there specifically because he believed it was important he give his expert advice to people who were poor. Because of this, one night he was in his living room, and someone with a high-powered rifle shot and killed him while he was there with his family.

I did not know this doctor, but I learned after his death that he was an uncle of a woman who worked for me. The woman was from Reno. She was a good employee. Of course, she was heartbroken over the fact that her uncle had been murdered. The person who did this was not only a murderer but should be seen as a terrorist.

What is going on in Iraq today? We have these extremists, these terrorists, who do not like what is going on there, and so they are committing these criminal acts. They are taking the law into their own hands.

The man responsible for killing Dr. Slepian was extradited from France a few years ago where he had fled. His name was James Kopp. Kopp was part of an organized network of violent extremists, including a group that called itself the Army of God. The group and others similar to it have engaged in a long campaign of violence.

In 1994, we passed the Freedom of Access to Clinic Entrances, called FACE, which established Federal criminal and financial penalties for those who employed violence to prevent persons from obtaining or providing reproductive health services. The FACE Act is essential to protecting the lives of women and health care providers.

Unfortunately, some of the people charged under this act are filing for bankruptcy to avoid accountability for their illegal acts of terrorism. As an example, defendants in the so-called Nuremberg files case have tried to nullify years of court proceedings by filing a chapter 7 proceedings.

What are the Nuremberg files? Listen to this one: They posted on a Web site the names, addresses, and license plate numbers of people who worked in these health care facilities. They even posted pictures of their target's families, all members, and they would list them—father, son, mother, brother, whatever it might be—and places where their children waited for the school bus. Doctors who still worked appeared in plain text on the Web site, a person who had been wounded was grayed out; and those who had been murdered, including Dr. Slepian, had a line through their names.

It is intolerable that the groups which incite these heinous acts of violence can discharge their civil penalties in bankruptcy, but that is exactly what happened. If we want to prevent future acts of violence, including clinic violence, it seems to me that we need to have a specific provision in the bankruptcy law to prevent discharge of violence-related debts. That is what this amendment is all about.

I do not support abortion, but this amendment is not about abortion. It is about holding responsible those who commit illegal acts and believe that they are above the law. This amendment is about preserving the rule of law.

I cannot imagine how this amendment is causing a concern or a problem. Are we now to believe that there are people who are telling members of the majority, do not do this, we want to go and commit acts of violence, we want to commit crimes, and do not vote against us because you will prevent us from filing bankruptcy? That is what this is all about. Should not we as a body say that if one goes out and does these terrible acts, where they kill people, they maim people—one of their latest tricks is they figured out this acid which is some kind of a chemical compound, and they walk into these facilities and they throw it all over. It cannot be washed out. It cannot be steamed out. The only thing one can do is tear the facility down. Should they not be held responsible?

I cannot believe we are going to have a bill as important as this bankruptcy bill jeopardized because of the terrorists who are out there waiting to file bankruptcy. That is what this is all about. People are out there wanting to commit crimes, waiting to commit crimes, saying, do not pass this because if you pass it I will not be able to file bankruptcy. I just think it is beyond my ability to comprehend that people who know they are violating the law, they are killing people, they have this Web site that they are soliciting murder.

And we are going to condone this activity under the guise that this is a choice, this is a pro-life/pro-choice issue and we cannot get involved. This is not about abortion. It is about maintaining the law.

I am so disappointed that the majority is going to go along with the ability of people to commit crimes and terror and discharge them in bankruptcy.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time? The Senator from New York.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, what is the status of the time on both sides?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority has 11 minutes remaining. The Senator from New York has the last 5 minutes.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I rise in strong opposition to the Schumer amendment which would make debts incurred in connection with violations of the Freedom of Access to Clinic Entrances Act nondischargeable in bankruptcy. This amendment has been a poison pill to enactment of the bankruptcy bill and must be defeated.

On two previous occasions, CRS performed research for us and told us that FACE debts had never been discharged in bankruptcy. Just recently, I asked CRS to perform an updated search on reported decisions considering the dischargeability of liability incurred in connection with violence at reproductive health clinics by abortion protesters. CRS confirmed that this amendment is not necessary. The CRS memo identified only one reported case, which found the debt to be nondischargeable under the bankruptcy law's discharge exception for willful and malicious injury. So this amendment is not necessary. Even Senator SCHUMER's own witness at the Senate Judiciary Committee hearing on the bankruptcy bill testified that in all the cases that she had litigated, the court had always found that the debts incurred under the FACE Act were nondischargeable in bankruptcy.

My colleagues make a big deal out of the fact that some of us on this side have supported amendments similar to this one before. The truth is, when the Schumer abortion amendment was offered in 1999 to the comprehensive bankruptcy bill, Vice President Gore was campaigning for the Democrat nomination. His opponent, Senator Bradley, was alleging that Vice President Gore was not sufficiently pro-choice. Vice President Gore's allies in the Senate were maneuvering to create a tie vote on the Schumer amendment so Gore could "break the tie" to improve his political standing.

To avoid this, most Republicans voted in favor for the Schumer amendment. Thus, that vote in the 106th Congress was not a vote on the merits of the Schumer amendment.

The Schumer amendment was included in the 107th Congress bankruptcy bill. But the fact is that in the 107th Congress, the Schumer amendment killed the bankruptcy conference report because the House would not take it. Thus, the Schumer amendment is a poison pill and must be defeated.

Let me reiterate that in two previous memos, CRS concluded that the Schumer amendment is unnecessary because abortion protester debts are already not dischargeable in bankruptcy.

We have just updated this research and CRS has confirmed that FACE Act violations are not dischargeable in bankruptcy. The proponent's own witness testified before the Judiciary Committee that none of these debts have ever been discharged in bankruptcy. The reality is that the Schumer amendment is just a political ploy designed to generate opposition to the bankruptcy bill. The Schumer amendment is a poison pill which will kill the bankruptcy bill. This amendment must be defeated, and I urge my colleagues to oppose it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Iowa ask unanimous consent to yield back the remaining time?

Mr. GRASSLEY. Yes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New York is recognized for his final 5 minutes.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, in conclusion, I would like to rebut some of the comments of my colleague from Utah who said this amendment was not necessary, and he talked about Maria Vullo, the lawyer who represented the clinic in the Nuremberg files case.

Here is the major point. She did not collect any money in that case. Despite spending $1 million of her own money, pro bono, despite relitigating in six bankruptcy courts, she was unable to collect any dollars. This is the point we are making. Perhaps at the end of the day you will get a nominal victory if you go all around the country chasing these fanatics in bankruptcy court, but you cannot collect. That is why the American Coalition of Life Activists, a violent fringe anti-choice group, actually requires its leaders to be judgment proof.

Here is the bottom line: This amendment, which was supported by so many on the other side, is being dropped, not because it is wrong but for expediency, so there will not have to be a bloody battle in the House between those who are on the Republican side, between those who are more probusiness and those who are vehemently opposed to this amendment. I will not denigrate the pro-life movement by labeling them that way because the pro-life movement cannot be for these violent groups.

This amendment is for the rule of law. This amendment says you cannot use violence against any group to achieve a political end and then, when you are sued civilly, use the bankruptcy courts for protection. That has never been what the bankruptcy courts were intended to be. It is neutral on terms of what issue. Yes, it might be extremists who are against abortion. It also might be extremists on the left side, on the environmental side who burn buildings or houses or cars. Are we going to, as a society, condone that type of activity?

I will tell you, if we defeat this amendment, that is what we are doing. Make no mistake about it, make no mistake about any of the subterfuges. To me, this amendment and the rule of law and the American way of life that this amendment stands for are more important than the rest of the bankruptcy bill.

The bankruptcy bill, whether you are for it or not, twists the dials a little bit with regard to the balance between creditors and debtors. I assure you that was not on the Founding Fathers' minds when they wrote the Constitution and created the Republic.

What this amendment does goes right to the heart of what America is all about. It says those who use violence to achieve their political goals cannot get a benefit, in this case bankruptcy. It, in my judgment, as I said, is more important than the rest of the bill.

So I ask my colleagues on the other side to rise to the occasion. Do not let arguments of expediency persuade you. That is the slow road to oblivion. That is the tortured path to undoing step by step, bit by bit, as the river creates a canyon, the way of life that we love. No matter how strongly one feels about something, their job is to persuade others to their viewpoint, not to take the law into their own hands and use violence. And if they do, they should not be allowed to use the Bankruptcy Code or anything else to prevent just civil or criminal action against them.

I ask my colleagues to look into their hearts, to examine what this amendment does, and to have the same courage—courage of conviction and courage of a fair compromise—that we showed a few years ago. I urge support of this amendment.

I yield the floor.

Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There appears to be a sufficient second.

The question is on agreeing to amendment No. 47 offered by the Senator from New York. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. DURBIN. I announce that the Senator from New Jersey (Mr. CORZINE) is necessarily absent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

NOT VOTING—1

Corzine

The amendment (No. 47) was rejected.

Mr. MCCONNELL. I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. REID. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, in a few hours we will be voting on cloture for this bill. I would just like to take a minute or two and remind everyone why it is time to end the debate on this bill.

It has been 8 long years of consideration on this legislation. We have all compromised a great deal. Not everyone got their preferred language or amendments. Not everyone is happy with the current legislation.

But I think everyone would have to agree that we have given thoughtful consideration and fair opportunity to all suggestions on the bill throughout the years of debate.

Over the years, we modified the homestead exemption.

We modified the means test.

We provided for sanctioning attorneys who file abusive claims.

And we hindered creditors who would try to collect through predatory lending practices.

All of these changes, among scores of others, came from my Democratic colleagues.

After all this, just 2 weeks ago, we took 5 more Democratic amendments in the Judiciary Committee markup.

And yet almost everyone of the pending amendments today touches upon the areas where we have previously compromised.

At a certain point, the time comes to move forward with what we have. Given how far we have come on this bill already over the last 8 years, and considering all the compromises that have been made, we may get no bankruptcy bill at all if we try to take more amendments.

The lopsided votes in favor of this bill in the past—with 70, 83, and even 97 votes in this Chamber—reveal that we are left with only a small minority of opposition. The fact is that a large majority of this body recognizes that we are not doing anything radical in this bill.

We simply ask that higher-income filers who can pay their bills, should pay their bills. It is as simple as that. There is no reason to ask the vast majority of bill-paying consumers to pick up the tab when those with means do not repay their obligations.

After 8 long years, we have compromised every which way we can. The remaining amendments being proposed are just further adjustments of adjustments to adjustments that were already made during this process.

There is simply no reason to continue to holdup this bill through the amendment process. The longer we delay, the greater the chances for mischief. The more we stall this measure, the more likely we open it to political, message amendments that can only act to stall work on this bill.

A time comes when you just have to say enough is enough. Eight years should be long enough to pass one bill.

I urge my colleagues to join me in voting for cloture.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I want to explain my decision to oppose closure on the Bankruptcy bill. I have offered an amendment to this bill modeled on legislation I have introduced to set up a permanent health care trust fund for current and former Libby residents, and former workers at the W.R. Grace vermiculite mine in Libby, MT. The trust fund will help pay for medical costs associated with treating asbestos-related disease or illness caused by exposure to deadly tremolite asbestos and other fibers released by Grace's mining operations.

I offered this amendment to this bill because it presented an opportunity to make whole the people of Libby, who have suffered, while preventing a company like W.R. Grace, which has filed for bankruptcy, from emerging from that bankruptcy without setting up a health-care trust fund for its victims.

I have worked very hard to make sure the people of Libby, MT, are protected in any asbestos legislation to come before Congress; to include special provisions in an asbestos bill for Libby residents that take into account the unique kind of health impacts associated with exposure to the deadly asbestos fibers from the W.R. Grace vermiculite mine.

For years, I have been committed to securing a common sense solution for the residents of Libby. I strongly believe that too many people have suffered, and they deserve fair compensation. I will do everything in my power to help Libby make their community whole again and to make sure their long-term health care needs are met. Passing bankruptcy legislation, with consideration of my asbestos amendment is essential. I will fight to get additional protections for Libby residents and then work to pass the bill.

Unfortunately, we have not had an opportunity to vote on this amendment, and it has been judged to be non-germane. The bankruptcy bill is all about responsibility and accountability. This amendment tries to hold W.R. Grace accountable for its actions.

Because we were not able to vote on this amendment, I can not support liming debate on this bill.

some embarrassment, people then went to bankruptcy court and said: I have no place to turn. I just can't do it.

A court says: What do you owe? Give us all our assets. What do you have in checking and savings? How much is your home and your car worth? Furniture, everything—what is it all worth? Where are your debts? We will let you walk out of bankruptcy court with very little left, but your debts will be gone.

That happens to people. More often than not, medical bills drive them there.

There are other reasons. You lose your job. How many people have you met in their fifties in America—I have met many in Illinois—who had a great career and a great job and lost it, then went out looking for a comparable job only to learn they were “too old for the market”? There they sat, taking a job that paid less, trying to maintain a family and household that was basically financed with a higher salary not that long ago. In desperation, they try to keep things together, and it starts to fall apart. The debts they incurred when they had a good job they cannot handle anymore.

What else happens to people? Some people live on the margins already. Some single mothers trying to raise kids are in a situation where finally something happens to them—a medical bill, an unforeseen circumstance—and they are stuck in bankruptcy court.

The credit industry comes in and says: We have to do something about these payments. We have to make it more difficult for them to walk out of that bankruptcy court having given up their assets with their debts basically behind them. So the law is changed here in this 500-page bill written by the credit card industry, written by the financial industry, to make it more difficult for a person to walk out of court with their debts behind them. They make sure in this bill that it is more likely for many that they will walk out of court still paying, on and on. As little as $165 a month is enough to say that you will never be forgiven in bankruptcy. You will just keep paying and paying. The creditors will keep calling and calling. That is what the credit industry wanted. They worked hard for 9 years. They are going to win this battle.

We came to the Senate floor and said, at least let us carve out some people who really should be treated differently. I am sorry that the marines who were here earlier didn't stick around. I wish they could have, I wish they could have heard the debate on the floor of the Senate when I offered an amendment and said: If you activate a guardsman or a reservist for a year or a year and a half and they go over to serve their country as they promised, leaving behind a restaurant or a small business which falls into bankruptcy while they are gone—and it has happened—shouldn't we give them a break in bankruptcy court? For goodness' sakes, these people aren't morally deficient; they are our best, and they are serving our country. They are protecting you, me, and everyone else.

I put in an amendment that said, at least for the men and women in the military who face this kind of bankruptcy—and it happens—let us give them a break in this bill. Let us not put them through the harshest parts of this bill. I lost the amendment 58 to 38. Many of the Senators who go back home and cheer the troops and how much we love them and how much we want to stand behind them couldn't wait to vote with Visa and MasterCard and against the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, Air Force, and Coast Guard. That is what it came to. We lost that amendment.

Senator KENNEDY came to the Senate floor and said: If you get swamped with a medical crisis in your family and go into bankruptcy court trying to get out from under something you will never pay off, shouldn't you, when it is all over, at least be able to go home? Shouldn't you have a roof over your head when it is all over if it is medical bills that put you in bankruptcy court? He offered an amendment and said: Let us at least protect $150,000 in equity in your home that you can go back to after bankruptcy.

Think about that. What will $150,000 buy you? In Springfield, IL, it buys you a nice little house. What does it buy you in Washington, Boston, New York, and California? Not much. But when we offered that amendment, only 40 Senators voted for it and 58 or 59 voted against it.

The argument behind this bill originally was that too many people went to bankruptcy court because of their moral failure. They didn't understand that they can't game the system, they can't use it in a way that is fundamentally unjust and immoral by going to bankruptcy court when you shouldn't go. But in the two examples I have given you, does that argument apply? Is there something fundamentally wrong with the values of men and women in uniform serving our country who can't keep that business afloat back home? Of course not. Is there something fundamentally wrong with a person who feels as if he is on top of the world, goes in for a diagnosis at the doctor, and ends up with a life-threatening disease which costs hundreds of thousands of dollars where his health insurance fails him? Is that a moral failure? It is a failing of Congress. It is a failing of your Government to deal with the realities of the challenges of life, whether it is health care or service in the military.

We went in and argued: What if you were the victim of an identity theft? And it happens; it happened to me. What if someone steals your identity and runs up bills in your name? It can happen to anyone listening to this debate. Senator BILL NELSON of Florida said, in that situation; if all the bills that have swamped you are not even bills of your creation, shouldn't we give you a break under this tough new bankruptcy bill? Overwhelmingly, on a partisan rollcall, the answer was, no. No. Ultimately you shouldn't be discharged from bankruptcy even if those weren't your debts.

We said: What if the people lending the money to you break the law while they are lending it to you? What if they take—and you know this story; it happens in every community. What if they take advantage of an elderly widow or widower living in that little home they have always had? They knock on the door: Boy, you sure could use a new roof, Ma'am. Luckily, I have a company out here that will do it if you just sign a few papers.

The next thing you know, you have one of these phony, predatory lenders coming in with a subprime mortgage with a balloon clause, and grandma's little house disappears. He looked so trustworthy. He seemed like such a nice man. He told me this was a standard contract. Yes, I signed it. I should have called you, but I just signed it.

What about those people? Should they be able to take away her home; go to bankruptcy court and stand in line with all the other creditors and say, Treat me like another legal creditor? I didn't think so.

So I offered an amendment saying those people should not have the advantage of going to court if they have broken the law in the way they make the loan. I didn't have a chance on that amendment. Those who are supporting this bill did not want to talk about that. One Republican Senator supported me. Just one.

Time and again, whether we are talking about victims of bankruptcy who deserve a little help, or whether we are talking about those gaming the system from the creditor's side, we found this stone wall that separates this Chamber. The Republican side does not want to consider any changes to this bill. The credit card industry has written it, and they are sticking with it.

The only perfect laws ever written were written by God and Moses, as far as I am concerned. All of the rest are amendable. All the rest can be improved. Here we assume that if it was generated by the largest credit card companies in America, we cannot argue with them.

One of the best arguments that has been made is, this bill does not apply to people who make less than the median income. That has been a point made over and over and over again during the course of this debate. Why is it important? Because this new law imposes a brandnew set of requirements in bankruptcy court for those who are above the median income. At least that is the argument.

Let me show this listing of all the documents that now have to be filed in bankruptcy court. It is pretty long. I used to practice law. I know it takes time to fill these out. You sit down with your client. You say: Get your income tax returns. Get all the checks you can find. Let's sit down. This will take some time. This is the current requirement under the law. So it is not as if you walk into bankruptcy court, sign your name, and wave and leave out the other door. It is a long process.

During the course of the process, your creditors and the trustee in bankruptcy decide whether you are telling the truth. If you aren't, they will throw you out of court on your ear. That is the way it ought to be.

Now comes this bill which says these papers are not enough. Here we have the new means test. This is an example of what you have to do in addition to all the current requirements to file bankruptcy. This is the means test in this bill. It not only adds to the complexity of this process, it adds to the cost. So here you are without enough money to pay your bills, trying to figure out how to come up with a filing fee of $200, how to pay that lawyer who is going to represent you in bankruptcy, and along comes this bill which says let me give you some more paperwork to fill out before you can qualify for bankruptcy.

The argument has been made over and over again in the Senate that people below the median income do not have to go through this. My amendment will clarify that, amendment No. 110. We want to make it clear that if you have below the median income, you do not have to go through the means test. In other words, on the first line up here, "current monthly income," if you have proof your current monthly income is in the lower income categories, supposedly protected from this bill, that ought to be the end of the story.

It is not now. I want to clarify that. I want to make sure that Members of the Senate who have come to the Senate and said people below a median income could not have to worry about this bill, really mean what they say. I emphasize and underscore my amendment does not in any way relieve those filing for bankruptcy from meeting all the other requisite steps. They still need to complete a lot of forms and schedules outlining assets and liability. We add language that makes it abundantly clear that a court may not dismiss a case based on any formal means testing if the current monthly income of the debtor falls at or below the median family income of the applicable State. The language I offered merely reinforces what Members of the Senate on both sides of the aisle, particularly on the Republican side of the aisle, have said over and over and over again from the beginning of the debate.

Let's look at the statement of my friend and colleague, Senator ORRIN HATCH. Here is what Senator HATCH said in the Senate:

It is possible that during this debate some may falsely suggest that this bill unfairly treats low-income persons. Let me tell you at the outset that the poor are not affected by the means test. The legislation provides a safe harbor for those who fall below the median income, so they are not subjected to the means test at all.

But they are. Under the current language of this bill, it is not clear that they are exempt from the means test, as Senator HATCH has argued.

Now, let's take a statement from Senator FRIST, the Republican leader of the Senate. Senator FRIST, on March 1, last week, said:

It [the Bankruptcy Reform Act] establishes a means test that is based on fair principle, a simple principle, and that is this, that those who have a means should repay their debts. A simple principle: Those who have the means should repay their debts. It specifically exempts anyone who earns less than the median income in their State.

That is what my amendment says. If you earn less than the median income, finish the forms that are already provided in bankruptcy court, the new law does not affect you. But if you earn over the median income, you have to fill out more forms. So it means the lower income people, just as Senator HATCH and Senator FRIST have said, will not have to go through the extra expense and the extra time of going through mountains of paperwork.

Let me also take a quote from Senator SESSIONS from Alabama who has been on the Senate floor in support of this bill. Here is what he said:

Chairman Sensenbrenner pointed out that the means-based test only applies to people with incomes above the median state average. Anyone below the state median income does not qualify on the means-based test and their bankruptcy petition cannot be tossed out of chapter 7 and put into chapter 13 where some debts are paid back.

That is as clear as can be. Senator SESSIONS told us that. Now we have another statement from Senator SESSIONS:

I remind all of my colleagues that people who are economically distressed and if the income is below the median income already will be exempt from the means test.

So my challenge to all those who made those statements is, prove it. Prove it by voting for this amendment. Prove it that if you establish that you have an income below the median income in your area, that you do not have to go through this means test. They have all said it. Now they will have a chance to vote on it.

Let me speak to one of my other amendments. I tried earlier in my first amendment to protect the soldiers activated and fighting overseas who lost their businesses. I failed, 58 to 38. I was surprised by that rollcall, but I watched what happens. Virtually every amendment has failed. As I said, some view this as holy writ. I just view it as a product of the credit industry, their best hope of something they want to pass in the Senate.

So I will offer amendment No. 111 to exempt certain veterans and current members of the Armed Forces from the onerous administrative burdens resulting from the means test. We say in this amendment it applies to members and spouses of members of the Armed Forces on active duty performing a homeland defense activity under title 32, veterans or their spouses whose indebtedness occurred primarily during a 6-month or longer period of active duty or performance of a homeland defense, reservists of the Armed Forces or their spouses, same situation, surviving spouses of those who died while serving as a member of the Armed Forces.

We take a category of Americans to whom we all owe such a great debt of gratitude and say if their debts overwhelm them because they are serving our country, we are going to give them a break, a chance to avoid this lengthy, expensive means test in this bill. I hope my colleagues will reconsider their earlier vote against this amendment. This is a much more compact, succinct, and limited break for those who are serving.

The last amendment I will offer, amendment No. 112, is if I fail on the previous amendment. Let me tell you what it says. It provides an exemption from the means test only for disabled veterans who incurred their indebtedness primarily during a period of service. It covers service on active duty or during a National Guard homeland security operation. Certainly we can give something of a break to these Americans who have given so much to us.

I go out to Walter Reed Hospital. Many of the men and women who have been injured are amputees. I remember one in particular. I said: How are you?

He said: My rehab is coming along just fine. I think I will be great. I have my new leg. I am learning how to walk on it. I would like to go back to my unit, but I am going to go back home. I am a little bit concerned. I had a job back home. I was an automobile mechanic. I don't know if I will be able to return to that job.

That situation for that man and for so many others reflects this change in their life. Yes, they will receive disability payments, but some of them, because of the serious injuries they have faced—head injuries, the loss of both hands, the loss of both legs—will not be able to return to the life they had before. Some of them may find they can't keep up with the debts that have been incurred while they have served our country. Is it possible the Members of the Senate, for disabled veterans, would give them a break if they are forced into bankruptcy because of debts incurred while they served our country? That is my last amendment.

I hope it doesn't reach that point. I hope all of us who come to the floor to give important speeches in tribute to the men and women in uniform will cast important votes on behalf of those men and women.

The credit card industry is important to America. I think they can do a better job in the business in which they are involved. They ought to take care, with the flood of credit cards that they send to everybody under the sun—the 3-and-a-half-year-old little boy of an attorney on my staff, a 9-month-old daughter of a friend of mine, all receiving credit card applications. They are throwing them at America. Many Americans, without thinking twice, are signing up, going more deeply in debt than they should.

The monthly statement from the credit card company—I am telling you this as a lawyer—flip that over and try to read the fine print. Senator AKAKA of Hawaii said: Shouldn't they tell you at least if you make a minimum monthly payment how much it is going to cost you over the period of time it will take to pay it off? Simple enough. The credit card industry opposed it. It was defeated on the floor. The idea of giving Americans more information so they can make the right credit decisions was defeated on the floor.

You have to believe the industry that opposed providing that information is an industry that doesn't care if you go head over heels in debt. They think they are going to win. They are certainly going to win if this bill passes because that credit card debt is going to hang on for a lifetime. You won't be able to shake it. When we hear the stories of people who are going to be victimized, I hope we will think twice about the wisdom of this legislation.

The trustees in bankruptcy were asked to take a look at what percentage of people filing for bankruptcy were fraudulent, had no business in court. They came up with the number 3 percent, 3 out of 100 are fraudulent and should not be in court. Most of them are discovered. The credit card industry said, no, it is much larger. It is 10 percent, 1 out of 10. This bill doesn't apply to the 10 percent of fraudulent filers. This bill applies to every filer in bankruptcy. That is why many of us think it is fundamentally unfair.

I can read the votes. I have been around Congress to know this is going to pass. I certainly hope with these three amendments that my colleagues will take some time and consider whether they want to live up to what they have said. If they want to exempt lower income families from the means test, my amendment lets them do it. If they do believe we owe something to the men and women in uniform, my amendment gives them a chance to vote that way. And if for no other reason they want to show some sympathy and concern for disabled veterans who have given so much to our country, they will have a chance with amendment No. 112.

I hope the solid wall of opposition to every single amendment will break down. I hope my colleagues will take the time to read and consider these amendments. It will be a lot easier to face the people back home if we at least give some flexibility to this bill when it comes to these important exceptions.

I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, I am proud of the bipartisan bankruptcy bill moving forward. We were excited over the strong vote for cloture to bring this debate to an end, 66 or more votes for cloture. That was a tremendous bipartisan show of support. I know my friend, the Senator from Illinois, opposes the bill. He has offered a lot of amendments. Fundamentally he doesn't like the bankruptcy bill. At one point he did. At one point he was a sponsor of it. For whatever reason he is now not supporting the bill. That is all right.

Our goal with regard to the bankruptcy bill was to continue the historic privilege that Americans can wipe out debts and have a fresh start. However, since the new bankruptcy bill was passed in 1978—that is the new one we are now under, a big bankruptcy reform—then we had about 200,000 filers in bankruptcy. Now there are 1.6 million filers in bankruptcy. A lot of people are using bankruptcy as a way to avoid paying their just debts. We wrestled with that. There was a lot of concern that something is out of sync, that the classic American moral value that you ought to pay your debts if you can ought to be honored.

At the same time we ought to create a circumstance in which people can start over. As many Americans have learned, if they fall behind in payment of debts, creditors call. You can have lawsuits filed against you. Families get embarrassed. Court orders get issued. Those kinds of things can be upsetting to a family. Sometimes you get so far behind there is no way you can get out of it. That is what bankruptcy is for. So we looked at it and tried to figure how we could reach the right balance.

How do we crack down on those who want to get off scot-free, not pay their debts, when they have the money to pay them, and do we protect those who need a fresh start? First, let me tell you the power of bankruptcy. A person making $200,000 a year, who owes maybe $150,000 in various debts, can go into bankruptcy court and file bankruptcy today and get all those debts discharged, when he or she could easily have paid back most of them. That is the way the system works. You read one of those ads and call one of those guys or ladies who advertises in the free newspaper at the checkout counter, and they tell you to call your bankruptcy lawyer and wipe out your debts. People do it—sometimes only after talking to that lawyer who only gets paid, frankly, if the client retains him to file a bankruptcy. They may have other alternatives to get out of that financial difficulty and they may not understand that.

What I want to emphasize is that we decided to create a bright line, a rule that would apply easily across the country in bankruptcy court, and that is what we are doing—amending the law of bankruptcy court, which is a Federal court, under Federal law. All bankruptcies are done in Federal bankruptcy court, so it is our responsibility to deal with the problems in that court. So we created a bright line rule.

If you make below median income and you owe debts, you can wipe them out, as you always have. You don't have to pay your doctor, your hospital, the automobile mechanic down the street who fixed your car, your brother-in-law back for his loan, the credit card company, or anybody else you owe—the bank, the credit union, wipe them out. So if you make below median income, the law is basically still the same for the debtor; he wipes it out. We had expert testimony in the Judiciary Committee, of which I am a member, that said 80 percent of the people who file bankruptcy make below median income, only 20 percent above. We said what about people who make above median income, but they might have special circumstances? Maybe they have a child who has a high monthly expense. Maybe the debtor himself is disabled, with extraordinary medical expenses, or things of that nature. We said we would make an exception for those people who have extraordinary expenses, and the estimates show that would add another 7 to 10 percent who would be able to automatically file under the median income and, therefore, would not have to pay any of their debts back under this other provision of bankruptcy law, chapter 13. So we agreed on that.

That is the bill that passed. That means test philosophy passed this Senate, one time, 97 to 1. It passed three times in this body. The last time we voted on it, it was 83 to 15 to pass the bankruptcy bill. We had the Schumer amendment on it—which we voted down recently—at that time, and the House of Representatives refused to take the bill and pass it. It died because of the Schumer amendment, which was a maddening thing for those of us who had been working on it for 4 years. I thought it was unbelievable that such a small but poison pill could kill the legislation. I have heard a lot of times about how a poison pill can kill a piece of legislation. Since I have been in the Senate, I have never seen a more perfect example of a poison pill. It came back up. Senator SCHUMER offered it and we voted it down earlier today.

This bill will not have the poison pill in it. We sent it over there with bipartisan support every time and, for one reason or another, it didn't become law. The House supports it. I am confident if we pass this legislation, without the Schumer amendment, it will pass the House of Representatives and go to the President for signature. I emphasize all this to say there is nothing wrong with the means test. People who make high incomes—lawyers, doctors and accountants are examples—and file bankruptcy, wiping out all their debts, who don't care who got hurt by their failure to pay and they care only about themselves, this will crack down on those people who are abusing this system. I don't think there is anything wrong with it. I believe it is the right thing to do.

As a matter of fact, I hear even those who oppose the bill say they don't oppose the bill, but they have spent all the time trying to confuse this, suggesting that poor people are going to have to pay something back. The chances are, if they are poor and are making below median income in America, they won't have to pay back anything. What if they make above median income? Perhaps they will have to pay back a portion of their debts. The bankruptcy judge, under certain circumstances, may order that they pay back a certain percentage. They can be made to pay a certain percentage of those debts back through the court, and it is distributed on a fair basis to the creditors who have claims against the debtor for a period not to exceed 5 years. That is what is commonly and legally known as chapter 13.

A lot of people all over America choose chapter 13 and agree to pay back their debts because they think it is the right thing to do, and it has some personal advantages. A lot of people find it hard to believe, but in my home State of Alabama, about one-half of the filers in bankruptcy court choose to file under chapter 13. What happens when you go into chapter 13? All the phone calls have to stop. You cannot be sued. If a lawyer tries to execute a judgment against your property after you filed in bankruptcy under either chapter 7 or 13, they are in contempt of court immediately. The family gets to calm down. The court helps set up a repayment schedule for a part of the debts the debtor owes, and their paycheck may go to the bankruptcy court and they parcel it out to the various creditors, and the debtor gets to keep a certain amount to live on, whatever he or she needs. That is the way chapter 13 works. It is not oppression to go into chapter 13. Almost half of the people in my State who file bankruptcy choose to file under chapter 13.

Well, Senator DURBIN quoted me. I was impressed that out of all those out here, he quoted me. I suppose he quoted me correctly, but maybe he was a little bit incorrect in interpreting what I had to say, or perhaps I spoke in a way he did not understand. I thought I was clear. I said in my remarks that if you make below median income, you are not subject to the means test. I guess that technically may be a misspeaking. What I meant was you are not required to pay anything back under chapter 13. He said, well, why fill out the forms? Well, you fill out the forms to see whether your income falls below the median income in America; that is why you fill out the forms. Surely, people would expect you, if you want to ask a U.S. bankruptcy court in whatever State in America you are in and you want to ask them to discharge your debts, and you want them to order that you do not owe anybody you have been owing for the last 10 years, and your debts are built up and you don't want to pay any of them a dime, surely it is not too much to ask somebody to show what their income is, to bring in a payroll stub to see what your paycheck is, and bring in an income tax return to see what you have been showing on your income tax. What is wrong with that? They say, oh, we have all these documents. I am telling you, I don't think we ought to be shocked that before a court wipes out maybe hundreds of thousands or tens of thousands of dollars in debt, they at least find out how much income the guy has and how much property. What if they own 500 acres of land out in the country? Should they not have to declare their assets?

Why should they keep property, stocks, bonds, or anything else of value and not pay the people they solemnly committed to pay? If they have assets, let's find out what they are. That is all we are talking about.

How are you going to tell whether a person qualifies for a means test if you do not have them produce some information about their income? I do not think that is oppression, and I do not think people are being oppressed if a credit card company lets them have $5,000 and they do not pay a dime of it back. I do not think a person is being oppressed. This is not some sort of anti-capitalist body. People get money all the time. They borrow money. They promise to pay it back. If nobody pays back their debts, everybody who uses a credit card will find their costs going up. Every bank loan will go up; every housing loan will go up. We have to have integrity, but we are going to give people—1.6 million of them a year last I heard—the ability to wipe out their debts. For probably 90 percent of them, they can wipe out all of them if they choose, and for the remaining 10 percent, they may have to pay some back. Some of those people absolutely ought to be paying back some of their debts.

We are all just victims here. It is so discouraging to me to hear skilled Members of this body talk about the American people as if they are just victims and pawns. I have seen the polls. Overwhelmingly, the American people believe you ought to pay your credit card debt back rather than pay other things because they know their interest rates are higher there. Frankly, I think everybody ought to reduce their credit card debt. They ought to chop them up and throw them away.

I was glad that my children—my two daughters and son—when they were off at college had a credit card. I told them not to use it unless they had to, but if they were out on the road and the car broke down, or something happened, I trusted them to use that credit card. What a wonderful thing. Anywhere in America—actually anywhere in the world—you can stick that card in a machine and out pops money. And if you pay it on time, you hardly pay any interest.

I am not here to condemn the credit card companies, and I reject and am offended by the repeated suggestion that this bill is supposed to do nothing but protect credit card companies. That is false. It demeans the integrity of the Members of this Senate, in my view, who have worked hard on a bipartisan basis, 85 to 15, the last time we passed this legislation. I guess that is all they have to say when they complain about the bill.

We talked about the military, and I am concerned about our military. I offered—and I was pleased that the President made part of his supplemental appropriations bill—an amendment to increase the death benefits of our soldiers, raising the basic death benefit from $12,000 to $100,000 and increasing the SGLI, Servicemen's Group Life Insurance, to $400,000 from $250,000, retroactive to the beginning of the war on terrorism. It will help all those families.

I, like other Senators, visited soldiers in the hospital at Walter Reed. I visited them in Germany. I have been in Iraq three times. I have talked with all the families from Alabama who have lost soldiers in the war. I served in the Army Reserve for 10 years, missing by several years being activated in the first Gulf War. Some of my best friends are still in the Army Reserve. I understand what they are going through. I talked with them in Iraq in January of this year. Some have suffered financial difficulties as a result. We know that.

I offered the amendment that would make clear and explicit that a service man or service woman who has been activated and is not able to pay their debts would, in fact, be a special circumstance that could keep them from having to pay back their debts under chapter 13, and they would be able to wipe out all their debts. No matter what their debts are, if their income is below median income, they get to wipe them out anyway. It is just in that top 20 percent, they may need special circumstances.

I defined it, and we passed—at the same time, Senator DURBIN's amendment was voted down—to give them that special protection. I think that was the right way to do it. Senator DURBIN had an automatic guaranteed set-aside for them in a way that I think was not as appropriate as the route the Senate chose to take. But he got a vote on his amendment and I got a vote on my amendment.

I also recall, for those who are listening, that we do have a powerful Soldiers and Sailors Relief Act that has been updated. That is the new title. The old, classical Soldiers and Sailors Relief Act says if you are off on active duty serving your country, you cannot be sued, they cannot take a judgment against you, they cannot foreclose on your home, and there are a host of other protections for them.

They have those protections. Plus, when you come back, you can bankrupt against any of the debts you may have. If you make above median income, the judge can consider and should consider military service as a special circumstance. I think that is the right way to do it. I believe we did the right thing on that issue.

It really hurts me to hear people suggest, because they are unhappy with this bill and they filed an amendment that was not adopted exactly like they wanted it, that we who adopted the amendment to deal with this issue are insensitive to military men and women serving America.

Those are some of my thoughts, Mr. President. I think the bill does a lot of good. There are some things about which we have not talked. We had the critics dominate the debate and point out everything they think is wrong and offer amendments. Senator FEINGOLD has 15 amendments. Remember now, this is the fourth time this bill has been on this floor. The last time, we debated over 2 weeks on the legislation with amendment after amendment. This time we are going to be 2 weeks on it. I think we debated 2 weeks the other two times. There has been extensive debate. We have had debate and amendments offered in the Judiciary Committee likewise on these issues where Senator FEINGOLD, Senator DURBIN, and others serve.

We have tried to be fair and open. Everybody has had a chance to raise their concerns, but it is time to vote and get this bill in the barn and move on to other issues.

I want to mention a couple points that are so important for people in America who are having a hard time. Women and children who are victims of divorce and separation, deadbeat dads—what about that issue?

In the course of our deliberations, we made a bipartisan commitment to raise the top debts that arise from alimony or child support to the highest level of a bankruptcy court. In other words, when there is a limited amount of money, the bankruptcy judge decides who gets paid first. In the past, they have always paid the lawyers and the court fees, and then they had some other things, and then women and children came along. We raised women and children to the top of the list. Of course, that is one reason they are unhappy with the bill—trust me. We also put some other provisions in it to reduce some of the litigation that goes on in bankruptcy court.

We raised women and children to the top of the list. The National Child Support Group and the National District Attorneys Association that handles child support issues said it is absolutely a fact that women and children have a substantial benefit under this act. One person said it is a veritable wish list for helping women and children who are owed child support and alimony to collect those debts. And they get paid even above so many other people.

Also, I note that secured creditors are next, and the unsecured creditors, such as the credit card people, and those with personal notes and bills, such as your local gas station. Those debts come in as unsecured debts, and they are further down the list.

We do not raise credit cards above people. We actually raised women and children up to the highest group. So I think there are a lot of good things in it, including a requirement that people who want to pay their debts, cannot handle their money and manage it well, must attend a financial management course before being discharged from bankruptcy. We want to see people manage their money well, get rid of those credit cards, contain their spending and manage their money wisely. That is what we would like to see them do. That is what the bill requires.

It also says a person at least ought to talk with a credit counselor. These exist all over America. Many times they can help people manage their money. They get the whole family around the table, they talk honestly about what their financial situation is, what their debts are, and how they would have to be paid back. They have the ability to call the bank, the credit card company, or the mortgage company and say: We believe this client could file bankruptcy, but if you will allow them to reduce their payment to you for the next year and pay down some of these critical debts they owe, we will get back to you in full speed. We will help them achieve that. We will work out a budget with them.

Many creditors agree to extend—some even forgive a part of their debts in order to help debtors so they do not have to file bankruptcy, and they learn something in the process. They do not have to go into credit counseling. They can go straight to the lawyers and file bankruptcy in the traditional way. I think some may decide that maybe this is the better alternative for them.

If they go in response to one of those late night ads on television, or one of those newspaper ads to the bankruptcy mill, they are not going to get that information in most instances, although some lawyers, I am sure, do give them advice.

Mr. DURBIN. Will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. SESSIONS. Yes.

Mr. DURBIN. We are having an exchange, and maybe since we are both in the Chamber we can at least come to an agreement on our disagreement. And I will yield some of my own time if it reaches the point where the Senator thinks it is taking advantage of his time.

Mr. SESSIONS. I was about to yield the floor, but, please, go ahead.

Mr. DURBIN. If the Senator would stay for a few moments, I would like to see if we can get to an agreement on our disagreement.

Right now, under current law, when I go into chapter 7 filing for bankruptcy, I am bound by the requirements of the Bankruptcy Code under section 521 to file a list of my creditors, unless the court orders otherwise, a schedule of assets, liability, current income, current expenditures, and statement of debtor's financial affairs and more when it comes to consumer debt currently. That is what happens when one goes into bankruptcy court—and that is this sheath of paper—they have to fill these things out. These are the documents that get one into court.

Mr. SESSIONS. I would just add, one has to list those debts, and if they do not list them they are not discharged and they can still be liable for them. So the debtor has to list his or her debts.

Mr. DURBIN. So one has to be careful. They better put all of their debts down if they want to have them discharged.

Mr. SESSIONS. Right.

Mr. DURBIN. In comes the new law, and the new law says if one is below median income, that is the end of the story. They continue as currently required under chapter 7. They do not have to go through and prepare and file this means test which is required here because they are not required to.

Page 18 of the bill, no one can challenge a person if in the case of a debtor in a household of one person, the median family income of the applicable State is applicable. So this is the point that has been made over and over, again that having filed the basic documents in bankruptcy, if it is then established that one is below the median income, end of the story. This bill does not apply. That is the way I understood it.

My amendment is trying to clarify it to make sure that is the way the Senator understands it. In other words, if I have done all of the basic filing and I disclose my monthly income and I am below median income, then I do not have to fill out the forms for the means test; it does not apply to me.

I quoted the Senator earlier, Senator FRIST, and Senator HATCH, who have all said that on the Senate floor. My amendment clarifies that and says that unequivocally, after someone has filed their basic documents, if they demonstrate their monthly income is below the median income, they do not have to fill out the forms for the means test as to what they can pay over the next 10 years. They are not covered by that.

Is that the Senator's understanding of what this law says?

Mr. SESSIONS. I think that is my understanding of it.

Mr. DURBIN. Well, my amendment is only trying to clarify that. That is all it is doing. What I just described to the Senator is to say unequivocally, if someone files the initial documents currently required under chapter 7 and demonstrates to the court that their monthly income is below a median income, they do not have to fill out all of the additional paperwork required in the means test, which is substantial and expensive. If the Senator feels as I do, that that is what the law says or should say, I hope the Senator will look at my amendment. It is not a trick amendment. It is just trying to clarify that point.

Mr. SESSIONS. I would be glad to review the amendment. It would appear clear to me that one does need to meet certain basic filing requirements.

Mr. DURBIN. Absolutely.

Mr. SESSIONS. So the income can be determined, and we did step that requirement up to require more in connection with income tax return filings and things of that nature.

I know the Senator is a member of the Judiciary Committee and has worked hard on this bill, so I respect his concern over this issue. I am not one who believes we have a problem, but I will be willing to look at it.

Mr. DURBIN. If the Senator would be kind enough to review my amendment, I would appreciate it very much.

I yield to the Senator.

Mr. SESSIONS. I yield the floor.

Mr. DURBIN. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. MARTINEZ). The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 89

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I call up amendment No. 89 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendment is once again pending.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that Senator KERRY, who is the ranking member of the Small Business Committee, be added as a cosponsor to the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, we have spent a great deal of time debating and trying to improve provisions of this bill that affect consumer bankruptcies. Most of my colleagues may not even be aware that this bill actually contains provisions that make significant changes to portions of the Bankruptcy Code that relate to small businesses. They may not realize it, but it does. Subtitle B of title IV of the bill is entitled "Small Business Bankruptcy Provisions," and I doubt more than a handful of people in this body have any idea what is in the subtitle.

The subtitle includes a number of new restrictions and requirements for small businesses that want to reorganize under chapter 11. That is right, these are requirements and restrictions for small businesses that do not apply to large companies. I was shocked when this came to my attention, but there it is in black and white, subtitle B, "Small Business Bankruptcy Provisions."

These are not provisions to help small businesses, as one might expect from a bill that is going through the Senate. No, these provisions penalize small businesses. They make it harder for small businesses to reorganize in order to survive.

Here is an example. Section 434 would require regular reports on the small business's profitability. They will have to report all kinds of things: profitability, cash receipts and disbursement, requirements to be in compliance with postpetition requirements, timely filing of tax returns, and "such other matters as are in the best interests of the debtor and creditors."

This is a mountain of information. Mom-and-pop operations will have to spend a great deal of time pulling these reports together, and the reports probably will not even be useful. Creditors and judges examining a debtor's profitability rely on cash disbursements and receipts, not self-reporting, because they are more informative and less subject to manipulation. It seems to me these reports will not be of much use to anyone, but they will be quite burdensome for a small business to produce on a regular basis.

What is the penalty for failure to jump through this bureaucratic hoop? Dismissal. Again, not for large corporations, mind you, which have armies of accountants to handle paperwork like this, but for the small entrepreneurs who could be spending that time keeping their businesses afloat instead of producing these piles of paper for some government file which basically no one will ever use.

I do not want to have to go back to Wisconsin and have to explain to a grocery store owner who is already working late into the night, trying to pull her business through a financial crisis, that the Federal Government has decided to keep her even longer to put together a report that nobody even plans to read. I am very concerned, almost ashamed of this Chamber to think I would have to tell her that if she were a big corporation, if she were the big chain of huge grocery stores, then the law would not require this of her. It would not treat her this way.

Professor Elizabeth Warren wrote, when the same language was proposed during the 107th Congress:

A decision by Congress in 2001 that small businesses should bear greater costs, face shorter deadlines, file more papers and lose any flexibility that a supervising judge might provide is a decision to shut down small businesses simply because they are small.

That is what Professor Warren wrote.

I can see no justification for imposing burdens on small business in the bankruptcy code that will not be imposed on large corporations. It has always been our responsibility as legislators to protect small businesses. My amendment calls on us to fulfill that responsibility in a very significant way. It would simply strike a number of the provisions in title IV, subtitle B of the bill.

Small businesses are the backbone of the American economy. According to the Small Business Administration, small firms represent 99.7 percent of all employers and pay 44 percent of the total U.S. private payroll. Small businesses have generated from 60 to 80 percent of the net new jobs created annually over the last decade. I can't figure out why, for the life of me, we are trying to make life harder for small businesses.

What is particularly puzzling is that I have heard a number of my colleagues complain about the burdens that they believe federal regulations impose on small businesses. The head of the Small Business Administration recently testified before the Small Business Committee that "[s]ome of the heaviest burdens borne by small business in America are the result of unnecessary federal regulation and red tape." If my colleagues share that belief—and even if they don't—why would we want to impose further Federal regulations and red tape on small business chapter 11 bankruptcies?

The worst thing about this attack on small business is that it is utterly unprovoked. Another provision of this bill would impose harsh deadlines on small businesses seeking to reorganize under chapter 11, but these deadlines are apparently designed to solve a problem that doesn't exist. The bill's drafters perhaps believed, back in 1998, that chapter 11 offers a shelter for failing small businesses, allowing them to delay the inevitable and die a lingering death to the detriment of their creditors. But this is just not the case.

The bill would impose an arbitrary 300-day hard deadline for a small business to file its reorganization plan. But a recent study of small business bankruptcy cases by Professor Douglas Baird of the University of Chicago Law School and Professor Edward Morrison of Columbia Law School shows that this deadline is completely counterproductive. According to this study, more than half of small business chapter 11 cases that fail—in other words, those that are dismissed, or converted to chapter 7 liquidations—are terminated within 4 months of filing. Over 70 percent are terminated within 6 months. By 300 days more than 90 percent have already left the system. In other words, the 300-day deadline imposed by this bill will affect a very small percentage of small business plans that are actually bound for failure. It constrains the discretion of bankruptcy judges, without any apparent justification for doing so, since reorganization cases without merit are already being terminated in a timely manner.

Instead of protecting the system against abuse by small businesses doomed to eventual failure, this bill will punish primarily small businesses that would otherwise succeed. Professors Baird and Morrison found that of the small businesses that successfully reorganize under chapter 11, nearly 40 percent need more than 300 days to do so. In other words, the facts show that by 300 days, most failing small businesses have already failed but many viable small businesses are still struggling. We should be helping them, not terminating them. Forcing small businesses capable of successfully reorganizing into chapter 7 liquidation proceedings is bad for their creditors, and tragic for the entrepreneurs who will see their livelihoods and their hard work over years or even generations needlessly destroyed.

Compare the hard deadline in the bill to what happens in the bankruptcies of large corporations. United Airlines filed for chapter 11 protection in December 2002. That is over 2 years ago. And the court has continually allowed the effort to come up with a reorganization plan that the creditors can accept to continue rather than force the airline to liquidate. We still don't know what will happen in that case, but clearly it is worth trying to save that company, with all its employees and devoted customers. Why don't we want to allow the courts to exercise the same flexibility for small businesses? Are they just not as important as the big corporations like United? Is that the message the Senate is trying to send with this bill? I can hardly believe that my colleagues want to send that message. But this could have a big impact on the ability of small businesses across the country to survive, so I urge my colleagues to take a close look at this amendment.

These new burdens on small businesses are simply wrong. Congress simply should not be in the business of forcing viable small businesses into liquidation. And why are large corporations seeking to reorganize not similarly burdened? Do the bill's drafters think that large businesses are more important than small businesses, so we should give them extra time to reorganize?

There is an additional irony here when you compare the requirements we put on large and small businesses in bankruptcy that my colleagues should consider. Large companies are often subject to a variety of reporting requirements by the federal securities laws that are not applicable to small businesses. But the SEC often exempts companies in chapter 11 from those requirements. At the same time that large companies are often excused from onerous reporting because of their bankruptcy, this bill puts additional reporting requirements on small businesses. Where is the fairness in that?

If there is a crisis with small business bankruptcies, I am not aware of it. Professor Warren, one of the country's leading bankruptcy experts, was one of the authors of a 1999 Small Business Administration study. That study found that one-third of bankrupt businesses had less than $100,000 in debts and almost four out of five had less than half a million dollars in debts. What is more, almost half—45 percent—of the small businesses had one or no employees when they filed for bankruptcy. These numbers don't give me any reason to think that small business bankruptcies are such a serious problem that we need to enact special provisions targeting them.

Bankruptcy experts tell me that these small business provisions are just crazy. But they have been in the bill forever, and most of the focus is on the consumer provisions when we debate this bill. Someone needs to stand up and say, "Wait a second. Why are we discriminating against small businesses in the bankruptcy laws?" I can't think of a single bill in my entire time in the Congress—over 12 years—where a single law on the books treats small businesses worse than big corporations. That is the opposite of what we usually do in this body. We always protect small businesses. Why is this bill any different?

When I offered this amendment in the Judiciary Committee, I heard two arguments against it. The first was that the provisions were recommended by the National Bankruptcy Commission. This is a very odd argument, coming from the same people who completely ignored the commission's work on consumer bankruptcy issues and drafted a bill largely in response to the credit industry's recommendations. But more importantly, I have been told that the commission provisions were created by certain commissioners who wanted to reform chapter 11 for all companies, large and small. The big companies came in and said: "No, don't do that to us. Those deadlines are too restrictive." Here is what happened. The recommendation was amended to apply only to small businesses. There was no showing that there are more abuses in small business bankruptcies than in chapter 11 filings for large companies. Small businesses apparently just didn't have the right lobbyists watching the process. So they got stung by these wrongheaded provisions that live on year after year in this bill without anyone coming forward to explain why they are necessary or useful.

The second argument that came up in the committee was that small businesses support this bill. That is true, at least for some small businesses. But they don't necessarily support the particular provisions that I am talking about. They may not even know about these provisions. Small businesses, like large businesses, support the bill because it makes it harder for consumers to file for bankruptcy. But I doubt very much that they want the law changed to make it harder for struggling small businesses to reorganize under chapter 11.

This is an important example of how this bill fails to reflect lessons we have learned in the years since it was first proposed. Given the recent history of large-scale corporate bankruptcies and scandals, the way this bill cracks down on small businesses is not only misguided, it is shocking. We should be focusing our energies on the real problem, not penalizing small businesses.

I urge adoption of this amendment, and I hope that small businesses all across this country will be watching this debate. Those people who think the Senate is devoted to the interests of small businesses may be in for a rude awakening if this amendment is not agreed to.

I yield the floor.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

AMENDMENT NO. 67

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I call up amendment No. 67.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That amendment is pending.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, this amendment—we have checked with the Parliamentarian—is a germane amendment to the bill. It was filed prior to the appropriate time, at the hour of 2:30 p.m. yesterday. Let me explain what this amendment does and why I am offering it this afternoon.

I am offering this amendment to enable parents to meet the needs of their children. We just heard our good friend and colleague from Ohio talk about Mothers Against Drunk Driving and the problems that occur with underage drinking. It is appropriate, after that discussion, that I offer this amendment because it is not unrelated, we know the difficulty of single parenthood, of how hard it is for single parents, the overwhelming majority of whom are women, to try to raise children on their own, all of the pressures of holding down jobs and managing a family. It will not come as any great surprise to my colleagues to know that a significant percentage of underage drinking and children who have problems with the juvenile justice system and other related issues come from broken homes, unfortunately. The tremendous pressures of a single head of household holding down a job and keeping their family together is not easy.

This amendment I am offering today on this bankruptcy bill relates to these familial circumstances, and it comes in several parts. I am going to take a few minutes and explain this amendment and why I believe it is important.

Very simply, during the financial crisis of living through a bankruptcy, children should be protected to the maximum extent possible. That is my strong belief. I believe it is the belief of all of us. Regardless of one's politics or ideology, I think we all understand that when a family is going through bankruptcy, we ought to do what we can to protect the innocent. Whatever one's feelings may have been about the parents, about their responsibility or irresponsibility, children should not be penalized because of the sins or the faults of their parents. This amendment is designed to at least attempt, under those trying circumstances of a family going through bankruptcy, to protect those who are innocent—the children—to the maximum extent possible.

About 39 percent of those filing bankruptcy in the United States are single women raising children, almost 40 percent. About 29 percent, almost 30 percent of those filing for bankruptcy are men, and 32 percent of households filing for bankruptcy are married couples. So we are talking about 70 percent of those who are filing fall into the area of single parents and their problems related to it. While there may be some people who are trying to scam the system—and there certainly are, and I do not argue with that point at all—I believe most people do not file bankruptcy lightly. It is a highly emotional time and one of financial crisis.

The most common reasons for 90 percent of women filing for bankruptcy include medical emergencies, job loss, and divorce. Women are especially vulnerable because they tend to have lower incomes and fewer assets and are more likely to be caring for children on their own.

If my colleagues truly cared, and I believe they do, about protecting mothers and the innocent children who are caught up in the tremendously disruptive time of bankruptcy, I think they will end up supporting this amendment. At least I hope they do. If our colleagues truly care about marriage and strengthening marriages, they also would support this amendment. I cannot think of many more things more stressful on a marriage than filing bankruptcy.

My amendment covers four main areas to protect children during this turbulent and emotional time. The amendment would modify the means test to provide greater flexibility and reasonableness when calculating a debtor's ability to pay. Allowable expenses are broadened to ensure that parents, whether married or divorced, can still support their children as they live through a bankruptcy.

For example, the amendment would allow a single mother, recently deserted by her husband, raising children who has filed for bankruptcy to continue paying education expenses for her child. Let us say that the mother, being a religious person and from a family that had used parochial schools for generations, is struggling to keep her child in one of these parochial schools. In this case, her 10 year old son has gone to a parochial school since kindergarten. It is where his friends go. After being fairly shy and withdrawn, he has begun to thrive there, has developed close relationships with several of his teachers. The mother was able to obtain a hardship reduction in tuition from the archdiocese, reducing the tuition to $3,500 a year.

Under the means test in the pending legislation, under our bankruptcy bill, this mother could not file chapter 7 or chapter 13 if she continued to send her son to parochial school. The means test allows only $1,500 for tuition and any other education expenses—not enough for any religious school. We are not talking about some fancy prep school or boarding school; we are talking about a basic parochial school education, which in many areas of the country costs around $5,000 per year, sometimes even slightly more. One of my neighbors told me that the parochial high school his son attends costs roughly $8,000 a year.

The child did not file for bankruptcy. Why during this turbulent time should the child be ripped away from his circle of friends and moral mentors? This should be a time when the child needs his friends and trusted teachers the most, his circle of security, particularly during a time of separation by parents and a bankruptcy.

The amendment would allow expenses associated with employment, such as child care, and it would allow alimony and child support to be used as intended to cover the needs of children in the household. Particularly with children, there are emergency expenses that arise, and any means test ought to reflect that reality.

Second, this amendment would ensure that support payments and other funds, such as refunds from the earned income tax credit or child tax credit, intended for the current needs of children do not become the property of the bankruptcy estate with the corollary potential of being distributed to creditors. Money intended to support children and their needs should go to children who need it, not creditors, in my view. Why should the earned income tax credit or the refundable child credit be yanked away from supporting children so that the depth of poverty in which they may live becomes even greater?

Thirdly, the amendment enables debtors going through bankruptcy to keep personal property normally found in or around the home, excluding automobiles. This would ensure that in bankruptcy situations, families with children are able to keep, without fear of repossession, household goods that typically have no resale value.

Fourth, the amendment would ensure that debtors are not forced into bankruptcy court to seek to prove that some of these items have any value for resale and would necessarily have to be added, forced into bankruptcy court to prove these items were not luxury goods.

This amendment, which I had hoped the managers of the bill would agree to, it is more technical than anything else. I am sorry it is not being accepted, because it goes to the very heart of what many of us have talked about and tried to accomplish over the years since bankruptcy laws were first modernized and adopted over a century ago in 1903. This amendment deals with families and spouses, with child support issues and where they come into context of priorities when it comes to discharging responsibilities under the Bankruptcy Act.

In 2003, as much as $95 billion in child support payments remained uncollected in the United States. It is a staggering sum of money and makes a huge difference to children growing up under adverse circumstances. It is estimated that one out of every other child living in poverty could be taken out of poverty if we were able to collect child support. Forget about appropriations or tax provisions we may adopt, if we could just collect the $95 billion in unpaid child support, we could virtually eliminate poverty in one out of every two children growing up under those circumstances in the United States.

The bankruptcy bill before us is going to make it more difficult in many ways for those families out trying to find those spouses who owe this child support to make it available. Thus, I believe we are going to exacerbate the problem of children who rely on child support and families who rely on alimony being able to get those resources to minimize the effects that a divorce and separation can cause.

When one excludes the ability to receive the financial support necessary to make ends meet, the problem becomes, obviously, even more pronounced, and children bear the price. Again, I repeat, whatever one may feel about the parents and their irresponsibility, putting themselves and their families in jeopardy, we ought to be highly sensitive to what happens to children. It is not their fault that their parents are filing bankruptcy. I do not believe necessarily it is the parents' fault either in many instances, with medical expenses, with divorce and job loss being the reason a large percentage of bankruptcies occur.

Putting aside that for a moment, whether one agrees with those numbers, I do not know of a single person in this Chamber who would disagree with what I am about to say. Children should not have to pay the price of their parents' mistakes, and yet that is what we are going to do with this bill if we do not take some steps to try to correct the situation.

Since 1903, our Nation's bankruptcy laws have been guided by the firm principle that women and children must be first in the distribution line of available assets during a bankruptcy proceeding. For over a century, debt owed to children and families has been non-dischargeable. Thus, if a head of a household fails financially, whatever remaining assets he has could be used to spare his spouse or ex-spouse and his children from impoverishment. We do this because those who are most vulnerable in our society deserve the most protection.

Today's bill, the Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act, would fundamentally alter this delicate balance achieved after a century of jurisprudence. We are altering the bankruptcy landscape for the benefit of credit card industry without understanding or recognizing what the consequences for families will be. Women and children will be disproportionately affected by this legislation unless it is amended, which is what I am trying to do with the amendment now before us.

Whether as debtors filing for bankruptcy themselves or as creditors, three-quarters of a million women will be affected this year by the bankruptcy system, and it is estimated that as many as 1 million women will be affected in the coming year. I agree with those of my colleagues who think the bankruptcy law needs to be reformed and tightened. I do not disagree at all with that. But in my view it is possible to enact legislation that tightens the laws without depriving debtors and their families of reasonably necessary living expenses to care for their children.

As this legislation is currently drafted, however, the credit card industry is protected, more protected than they have ever been. Unfortunately, families are not, in my view. This bill could turn the lives of children and families literally upside-down.

I think it is enough of an emotional roller coaster for a parent to file bankruptcy, but I think to elevate the needs of the credit card companies over the needs of children is simply wrong. I am greatly concerned about the means test, which requires the trustee in bankruptcy to review all chapter 7 cases for ability to pay debts under a rigid IRS formula devised originally for delinquent taxpayers, now to be applied to bankruptcies. These standards neither take into consideration differences in the cost of living from region to region, nor do they ascribe rational expenses for the use of individual families. In my view, these rigid standards will deprive children and families of reasonably necessary living expenses.

While moving child support to a first priority among unsecured creditors in chapter 7 sounds good, it is virtually meaningless, however.

Listen to this. Fewer than 4 percent of chapter 7 debtors have anything to distribute to unsecured creditors. Listen to that again. Fewer than 4 percent of chapter 7 debtors have anything to distribute to unsecured creditors. That is to say 96 percent of these debtors have nothing to give out. So saying under chapter 7, "you are first in line," means absolutely nothing except to 4 percent of those debtors. First in line when there is nothing means nothing. This is not a protection for women and families. It sounds good, but it is totally hollow when it comes to seeing to these children and these families whom, for 100 years, we have done a better job of protecting.

Additionally, because the means test increases the potential for dismissing chapter 7 cases, this bill channels many debtors into the 5-year, chapter 13 repayment plans, even though we know for a fact that two-thirds of such plans fail today. What will families live on during this time? What are proponents of this legislation going to do, go back to the time of Charles Dickens or debtors prisons?

Under chapter 13, the bill would require that larger payments be made to credit card companies. As a result, payments of past-due child support would be made in smaller amounts and over a longer period of time, thus increasing the risk that children will not receive the support they need and the full debt would never be paid.

Mothers and children would be in direct competition with credit card companies employing well-financed collection departments. How do you think mothers and children will fare when it comes down to competing? It is hard enough under the present system for these people to collect the $95 billion they are owed in one single year in child support, when they now are going to also have to compete, under chapter 13, with credit card companies who are well heeled and in a far better position financially, with teams of lawyers, to go after these debtors. I do not believe anybody could rationally conclude that a mother raising two or three children on her own, with limited resources, is going to be able to hire the lawyers to compete with the credit card companies going after the debtor husbands in these cases.

Those are the practical realities. So for children and families, this bill makes life a lot worse because of exactly what I have explained: we are moving people out of chapter 7, where there was nothing much to give anyway, into chapter 13, where it becomes far easier for larger amounts of these resources, larger payments, to be made to the credit card companies.

I am very concerned about the provisions of the legislation that make certain credit card debt nondischargeable. While the family support provisions added to this legislation are positive improvements, they have not cured the problems caused by the other provisions of the bill. In fact, they are negated by them, in my view. These are provisions that give far greater collection rights to the credit card lenders and fewer, in my view, to families and children.

This bill elevates credit card debt to a presumed nondischargeable status. If a debtor purchases items or services on credit from a single creditor within 90 days of bankruptcy, and such items exceed $500 in value, these items would be presumed luxuries.

Listen to that again. Within 90 days, if you make purchases from a single creditor exceeding $500, they are presumed luxuries—in 90 days—3 months.

Again, if you are a single parent with two or three kids, over 90 days $500 is not a huge amount when you are talking about groceries or other essentials. Over a 3-month period—stretch it out and do the math—$500 over 90 days is really, in 21st century dollars, even if you go to the best discount stores, not going to be enough to make it. Current law allows up to $1,225 to be discharged within 60 days of bankruptcy. The bill as reported would limit it to $500 within 90 days, as I have said. The amendment I will offer when the time comes to vote on it will allow not $500 but less than $1,200 to $1,000 within 70 days. So it is less than 90, a bit more than 60. It is less than $1,200 under current law but certainly more than $500 to get you to $1,000.

Again, I don't think this is any great luxury. You are trying to meet the needs of your family. To declare them to be luxuries—it doesn't seem a lot to me. Over a 90-day period it is not that hard to spend $501 at Wal-Mart to meet kids' needs. Most would agree such purchases are not luxuries. In 90 days alone, a family with children could exceed $500 on other expenses that arise with children.

My amendment requires creditors to prove at a hearing that such items were not reasonably necessary for the maintenance and support of the debtor and her dependents, shifting the burden to creditors rather than the parents. If the creditor wants to make the case, let them do it, but don't lay the burden for $501 on a single mother with young kids to hire lawyers to go in and make the case these are not luxury items. I shift the burden over to the creditors. If they want to make the case, they can do so.

I don't know what the proponents of this legislation are intending here, other than to protect the credit card companies at the expense of children. If you have $501 of food, medicine, and clothing expenses, and it is incurred within the last 90 days, then you have to go to court and spend money to prove these are not luxuries—food, medicine, and clothing. This point is one I find stunning in its potential implications. By the very fact that you are in bankruptcy court, how are you going to hire a lawyer to go in and prove that $501 was for necessities and not luxuries? We need to be far more practical than that, it seems. To go to Wal-Mart and buy food and clothes for your children, necessities they may need, that is considered a luxury if it is more than $500.

If you are a single woman as a creditor, then you must wait until your ex-husband tries, or does not try, to defend a similar purchase. If he is unsuccessful, there will be less money for him to pay child support.

So on either side of the equation, if you are the woman raising children on your own, either as a debtor or a creditor, this places tremendous burdens on your family. If this section is sustained in the bill, then I urge the President to veto it, which I am told he would not do, but I hope he would. This legislation, regardless of what else is here, I think putting credit card debt ahead of kids is just wrong.

I think all my colleagues are probably familiar with the popular TV ad where a father takes his son to a baseball game, they rack up maybe $100 in costs—tickets, parking, hot dogs, sodas, maybe a popcorn to share and a small souvenir. The tag line in the commercial says: "Cost of the memory—priceless."

What the commercial doesn't tell you about is the memory may be priceless, but if the next day that dad is unlucky enough to lose his job, have a heart attack, incur enormous hospital expenses without health insurance, and can't make his minimum payments on time, the credit card companies are only too happy to turn priceless into pricey. Unfortunately, pricey for the family with finance charges, overcharges, penalty fees, and other means, can turn a dream into a nightmare.

This bill allows families to take a backseat to lenders, if lenders say their claims are secured by the debtors' property. For the first time in over 100 years, we have allowed these heretofore unsecured creditors to get into the bankruptcy courthouse. Currently, child and family support, taxes, and student loans are not dischargeable debts. For the first time in a century, the proposed legislation before us would bring into this unique category these other creditors—i.e., credit card companies—which will make the competition for scarce assets that much more fierce. These creditors have historically been unsecured because they have received the benefit of high interest and finance charges. Now they are becoming effectively secured creditors.

With all of these concerns in mind, the amendment I am offering this afternoon seeks to address some of these problems. I hope these efforts will win broad bipartisan support. I have been terribly disappointed that there has been no willingness to even talk about some of these amendments. I don't know why we can't do this. This is not the end of the session. We are only in the month of March.

This is an important bill. I understand that. But it is going to have huge implications for years to come if we don't sit down and listen to each other carefully to try to work out some of these matters so we can put a bill together. Yes, it may require a conference; it may require some negotiation. But isn't that a wiser course to follow than to rubberstamp a proposal because the other body doesn't want to sit down in conference on the bankruptcy bill, particularly when we are talking again about the most vulnerable in our society; that is, our children?

Again, I emphasize what I said at the outset. We are talking about the innocents here. I don't want them to fall prey to the claim that people taking bankruptcy are guilty of something somehow.

Again, if you accept the notion that most people who file bankruptcy are not doing so lightly, I don't know of anyone who likes to admit they are so messed up in every way possible that they put themselves in that situation. Are there people who take advantage? Yes. I know that is true. As we try to cure that problem, let us not create more problems for those who through no fault of their own find themselves in that situation; and, even worse yet, those who are completely innocent who find themselves so disadvantaged that the ability of parents—particularly single women raising children—to find it harder and harder to collect those child support payments they desperately need to lift these children out of poverty, to make ends meet in the 21st century, with companies going bankrupt every day. We must see to it that those families who are already going through an awful lot don't find themselves going through even more.

This amendment is a modest attempt to readjust this section of the bill, to inject some practicalities, to say that as we consider the rights of credit card companies we are not going to forget the rights of children, so we will put some reasonable ceiling in here to make it possible for everyone to be a winner, so people can go to bankruptcy court to get themselves out of debt, get on their feet again, see to it that creditors are going to have an opportunity to collect the obligations that are owed them, and not penalize those who ought not be a part of this debate in any consideration.

I urge my colleagues to think about these amendments. I know it means changing the bill. I know it may mean going to a conference for a day or two. But I urge my colleagues to at least look at these proposals. If they make some sense, as some of them do, can't we sit down and try to resolve some before we go ahead and pass a bill that I think many may regret down the road when we consider the implications for those who are going to be adversely affected by this legislation?

I also would like to add as part of the RECORD a couple of pieces of correspondence that speak to these particular issues. One is from the National Women's Law Center, a letter dated February 23, 2005. I will not read the whole letter. Let me read a couple of paragraphs, because they go to the heart of what I am talking about here.

The letter reads:

S. 256 would make it harder for women to access the bankruptcy system because the means test requires additional paperwork of even the poorest filers, harder for women to save their homes, cars and essential household items through the bankruptcy process and harder for women to meet their children's needs after bankruptcy because many more debts would survive. The bill also would put women owed child or spousal support who are bankruptcy creditors at a disadvantage by increasing the rights of many other creditors, including credit card companies, finance companies, auto lenders and others. The bill would set up an intense competition for scarce resources between mothers and children owed support and these commercial creditors during and after bankruptcy.

The letter goes on.

I ask unanimous consent that the letter from the National Women's Law Center be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

NATIONAL WOMEN'S LAW CENTER,
Washington, DC, February 23, 2005.

Re oppose S. 256, the Bankruptcy Act of 2005.

DEAR SENATOR: The National Women's Law Center is writing to urge you to oppose S. 256, a bankruptcy bill that is harsh on economically vulnerable women and their families, but that fails to address serious abuses of the bankruptcy system by perpetrators of violence against patients and health care professionals at women's health care clinics.

This bill would inflict additional hardship on over one million economically vulnerable women and families who are affected by the bankruptcy system each year: those forced into bankruptcy because of job loss, medical emergency, or family breakup—factors which account for nine out of ten filings—and women who are owed child or spousal support by men who file for bankruptcy. Contrary to the claims of some proponents of the bill, low- and moderate-income filers—who are disproportionately women—are not protected from most of its harsh provisions, and mothers owed child or spousal support are not protected from increased competition from credit card companies and other commercial creditors during and after bankruptcy that will make it harder for them to collect support.

The bill would make it more difficult for women facing financial crises to regain their economic stability through the bankruptcy process. S. 256 would make it harder for women to access the bankruptcy system, because the means test requires additional paperwork of even the poorest filers; harder for women to save their homes, cars, and essential household items through the bankruptcy process; and harder for women to meet their children's needs after bankruptcy because many more debts would survive.

The bill also would put women owed child or spousal support who are bankruptcy creditors at a disadvantage. By increasing the rights of many other creditors, including credit card companies, finance companies, auto lenders and others, the bill would set up an intensified competition for scarce resources between mothers and children owed support and these commercial creditors during and after bankruptcy. The domestic support provisions in the bill may have been intended to protect the interests of mothers and children; unfortunately, they fail to do so.

Moving child support to first priority among unsecured creditors in Chapter 7 sounds good, but is virtually meaningless; even today, with no means test limiting access to Chapter 7, fewer than four percent of Chapter 7 debtors have anything to distribute to unsecured creditors. In Chapter 13, the bill would require that larger payments be made to many commercial creditors; as a result, payments of past-due child support would have to be made in smaller amounts and over a longer period of time, increasing the risk that child support debts will not be paid in full. And, when the bankruptcy process is over, women and children owed support would face increased competition from commercial creditors. Under current law, child and spousal support are among the few debts that survive bankruptcy; under this bill, many additional debts would survive. But once the bankruptcy process is over, the priorities that apply during bankruptcy have no meaning or effect. Women and children owed support would be in direct competition with the sophisticated collection departments of commercial creditors whose surviving claims would be increased.

At the same time, the bill fails to address real abuses of the bankruptcy system. Perpetrators of violence against patients and health care professionals at women's health clinics have engaged in concerted efforts to use the bankruptcy system to evade responsibility for their illegal actions. This bill does nothing to curb this abuse.

The bill is profoundly unfair and unbalanced. Unless there are major changes to S. 256, we urge you to oppose it.

Very truly yours,

NANCY DUFF CAMPBELL,
Co-President.

MARCIA GREENBERGER,
Co-President.

JOAN ENTMACHER,
Vice President and Director, Family Economic Security.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I want to quote a letter from the Children's Defense Fund, again expressing their concern about these sections of the bill. I will read from this letter as well.

The Children's Defense Fund is writing to urge you to oppose S. 256, the bankruptcy bill, that would hurt many Americans facing financial problems through job loss, divorce, child rearing, lack of medical insurance, or predatory lending practices. This bill would inflict hardship on more than 1 million economically vulnerable women and families who are affected by the bankruptcy system each year. Medical emergency, job loss and family breakup are important factors which account for nine out of ten filing for bankruptcy. The bill would also hurt women who are owed child or spousal support by men who file bankruptcy. The bill would make it far more difficult for women to collect support because credit card companies and other commercial creditors will have greater claims to the debtor's resources during and after bankruptcy. Being first among unsecured creditors in chapter 7 bankruptcy is meaningless when over 95 percent of debtors have no resources to pay unsecured creditors.

In chapter 13, the bill would require larger payments to be made to many commercial creditors resulting in smaller payments to past-due child support over longer periods of time increasing the risk that child support debts will not be paid in full. And after the bankruptcy is over, more and more debts owed to commercial creditors will survive, and mothers and children owed support are not a match for the collection departments of the commercial credit industry.

S. 256 contains a number of provisions which would have a severe impact on families trying to regain their economic stability through the bankruptcy process.

The letter goes on. Those are pertinent paragraphs when it comes to the amendment which I am offering here today.

I ask unanimous consent that this letter be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

CHILDREN'S DEFENSE FUND,

March 3, 2005

Re Oppose S. 256, The Bankruptcy Act of 2005.

DEAR SENATORS: The Children's Defense Fund is writing to urge you to oppose S. 256, a bankruptcy bill that would hurt many Americans facing financial problems due to job loss, divorce, child-rearing, lack of medical insurance, or predatory lending practices. This bill would inflict hardship on more than one million economically vulnerable women and families who are affected by the bankruptcy system each year. Medical emergency, job loss or family breakups are factors which account for nine out of ten filings.

The bill would also hurt women who are owed child or spousal support by men who file for bankruptcy. The bill would make it more difficult for mothers to collect support because credit card companies and other commercial creditors will have greater claims to the debtor's resources during and after bankruptcy. Being first among unsecured creditors in Chapter 7 bankruptcy is meaningless when over 95 percent of debtors have no resources to pay unsecured creditors. In Chapter 13, the bill would require larger payments to be made to many commercial creditors, resulting in smaller payments of past-due child support over a longer period of time, increasing the risk that child support debts will not be paid in full. And after the bankruptcy is over, more more debts owed to commercial creditors will survive—and mothers and children owed support are not a match for the collection departments of the commercial credit industry.

S. 256 contains a number of provisions which would have a severe impact on families trying to regain their economic stability through the bankruptcy process. S. 256 would make it harder for women to access the bankruptcy system. Low and moderate income families are not protected from many of the bill's harsh provisions. Parents who desperately need to preserve their homes from foreclosure or prevent their families from being evicted, or keep a car to get a work, would find it more difficult to do so. And, when the bankruptcy process was over, parents already facing economic disadvantage would find it harder to focus their income on reasonable and necessary support for dependent children because many more debts would survive.

Passage of the bankruptcy bill would make it harder for families struck by financial misfortune to get back on track. It would benefit the very profitable credit card industry at the expense of the modest-income families who represent the great majority of these who declare bankruptcy. Congress should not enact reform that puts women and children at greater risk. The bill is profoundly unfair and unbalanced. Unless there are major changes to S. 256, we urge you to oppose it.

Very truly yours,

DEBORAH CUTLER ORTIZ,

Director of Family Income and Jobs.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, the Association for Children for Enforcement of Support is supporting this amendment and opposes the legislation. The American Association of University Women, American Medical Women's Association, the Business and Professional Women of the United States, the Center for Law and Social Policy, the Center for the Childcare Workforce, Child Welfare League of America, the National Council of Jewish Women, the National Organization for Women, the National Partnership for Women and Families, the YWCA of the United States—all are groups which support the amendment and oppose this legislation.

Again, I realize the hour is late. We are getting closer to passage of this bill. I don't think it is so late, however, not to try to make some modest changes in this legislation that I think would go a long way to providing some relief for families.

Again, this is one of the areas of law that is written into our Constitution. Article I, section 8 of the U.S. Constitution, drafted back in the 18th century, specifically provided and called upon the Congress of the United States to enact bankruptcy laws. To understand why they did so, go back and look at the Federalist Papers. They talked about doing it as an opportunity for people to get back on their feet again. That was the idea—to see to it that creditors could be compensated to the maximum extent possible, but that also those filing for bankruptcy would begin a new chapter in their lives, to get on their feet again.

It seems to me we ought to be trying to do that with this legislation, not only helping the creditors collect what is due them, but simultaneously making it possible for good people to get a fresh start.

If in the process of helping the creditors get paid we make it more difficult for people to get on their feet again, we are lacking the balance which I think we ought to be striking with this bill.

I urge my colleagues not to necessarily rely on what I have said here today, but to review these sections of the bill and ask yourself realistically whether in this day and age the kind of caps we are putting on, kind of forcing people into the chapter 13 category, if we are not exactly undoing what we have done for 100 years to modern bankruptcy laws.

The modern bankruptcy laws put not only families first but they also left them alone. If you were dealing with child support and alimony, once you paid those, or set up a payment schedule, whatever is left over, you dispensed to your creditors, you were not only the first in line, you were the only one in line. This changes that. You can be first in line under this bill, but you are not the only one in line, and other people in line have far more resources and strength to be able to compete for those debtors' funds to compensate these creditors. It puts families at a disadvantage.

There are a lot of other reasons to be concerned about this bill. I know my colleagues care about children. I know they care about families. They want to see these innocents have a chance for a decent life. This bankruptcy bill, if not amended, will make it far more difficult to achieve those goals.

I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ALEXANDER). The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, I ask consent that at 5:45 today the Senate proceed to a vote on or in relation to the Feingold amendment No. 89, with the time equally divided in the usual form until the vote; provided further that no amendments be in order to the amendment prior to the vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. MCCONNELL. I ask the action we just took be vitiated. I will wait until Senator DURBIN gets to the floor and I will reoffer the consent agreement.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that at 5:45 today the Senate proceed to a vote on or in relation to Feingold amendment No. 89, with the time equally divided in the usual form until the vote; provided further that no amendments be in order to the amendment prior to the vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DURBIN. If the majority whip would yield for a question, I have three germane amendments pending. I think others are in the same position, including Senator FEINGOLD. It is my hope to move as quickly as possible to a quick, limited debate, for just very short periods of time, and then to vote on these amendments in an effort to keep the bill moving forward. I ask the Republican whip whether or not there are plans to call any other votes today or early tomorrow.

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, I might say to my friend from Illinois, we have been reviewing amendments. I am hopeful we can have some discussion between now and the vote about how we proceed from here.

Mr. DURBIN. I thank the Senator.

Mr. MCCONNELL. I yield the floor.

Mr. DURBIN. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 89

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There appears to be a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. CRAIG. I ask unanimous consent that Senator FEINGOLD have 2 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. FEINGOLD. I thank the Senator from Idaho.

Mr. President, we are about to vote on an amendment that will tell this Nation's small businesses whether we stand with them. This bill includes a number of new restrictions and requirements for small businesses that want to reorganize under chapter 11. These requirements and restrictions for small businesses don't apply to large companies. I was shocked when this came to my attention, but there it is in black and white: Subtitle B, Small Business Bankruptcy Provisions. And these are not provisions to help small businesses as one might expect from a bill that is going through the United States Senate. No, these provisions penalize small businesses. They make it harder to reorganize in order to survive.

These new provisions are entirely unnecessary. There is no crisis in small business bankruptcies. And a new study shows that most failed attempts at chapter 11 reorganization are concluded within 300 days, which is the hard deadline in the bill. But 40 percent of reorganizations that succeed take longer than 300 days. That means that this bill is going to make some small businesses fail that don't have to. That is an absurd result. Remember the United Air Lines Chapter 11 reorganization is over two years old and it is still going on. Why shouldn't small businesses get that kind of leeway if there is a chance they can pull through?

These provisions haven't received nearly the attention in this body that the portions of the bill that deal with consumer bankruptcies have received. We need to take these provisions out. Doing so won't have any effect on the core provisions of this bill. But it will prevent a real injustice from being done to small businesses. Forcing a small business to liquidate rather than reorganize is bad for creditors, bad for consumers, and bad for small businesses. I urge the adoption of the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Idaho.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, Chairman GRASSLEY would ask for a no vote, as would Senator HATCH.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the Feingold amendment No. 89.

The yeas and nays have been ordered.

The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk called the roll.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ISAKSON.) Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

Tomorrow morning we will, after discussion on both sides of the aisle with the managers, have a series of stacked rollcall votes in the morning in order to not have rollcall votes tonight. But we are on the bill. The clock will continue to run, and debate should continue. There will be no rollcall votes tonight, stacked votes tomorrow. We would expect to finish this bill in all likelihood sometime tomorrow, late tomorrow.

I yield the floor.

Mrs. BOXER addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the pending amendments be set aside so I may call up amendment No. 62, and then I will ask it be laid aside.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. SESSIONS addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, will the Senator restate her request?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will suspend. The clerk will report the amendment.

The bill clerk read as follows:

The Senator from California (Mrs. BOXER) proposes an amendment numbered 62.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, reserving the right to object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alabama.

Mr. SESSIONS. Would the Senator propound her unanimous consent request again?

Mrs. BOXER. I think it has already been agreed to.

Mr. SESSIONS. I sought recognition.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair did not hear the Senator originally; however, precedent allows the Senator to reserve the right to object at this time.

Mr. SESSIONS. Will the Senator restate her unanimous consent? There was noise on the floor, and I just did not hear it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will suspend a moment.

Will the Senator from California restate her request.

Mrs. BOXER. I ask unanimous consent the pending amendment be set aside so I may call up amendment No. 62. It would then be my intent to ask it be laid aside. I believe we have an agreement that I be given 10 minutes in the morning, followed by a vote at a time both sides can agree to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Senator from Alabama.

Mr. SESSIONS. I object at this time, but I would check with our colleagues, and if that is acceptable—I could check that, but I would object at this time.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I will suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that when the Senate resumes the bankruptcy bill tomorrow morning, the Senate begin 10 minutes of debate equally divided on each of the following amendments in the order mentioned below; provided further that following that debate the Senate begin a series of votes on or in relation to the amendments in that same order; provided that no amendment be in order to the amendments prior to the ordered votes. I further ask that there be 2 minutes equally divided for debate between the votes after the first vote and, lastly, that all votes in this sequence after the first vote be limited to 10 minutes in length.

The amendments are Durbin, No. 110; Harkin, No. 66; Boxer, No. 62; Dodd, No. 67.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, my amendment, cosponsored by my friend and colleague, Senator CANTWELL, would greatly assist the many victims of domestic violence whose physical well-being or whose children's physical well-being would be threatened by summary eviction as a result of filing or bankruptcy. I ask unanimous consent that the text of our amendment be printed in the RECORD after my remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(See exhibit 1.)

Mr. LEAHY. The connection between domestic violence, economic abuse, and housing is overwhelming. Women and children who are fleeing domestic violence make up a significant portion of the homeless population. According to the United States Conference of Mayors, 57 percent of cities surveyed identified domestic violence as a primary cause of homelessness.

These women and children are homeless because in their desperate attempt to leave their abusers they find themselves with few, if any, funds with which they can support themselves. Victims of domestic violence have a tough time finding room at emergency homeless or domestic violence shelters, and often fail to find adequate housing because affordable, long-term housing is not available in so many communities. If housing is available there are often long waiting lists. Victims face unique causes of their financial hardships due to the fact that batterers frequently harass their victims at work, and survivors are often fired or cannot maintain steady employment resulting in losing the ability to pay for housing. Faced with the lack of stable housing, finances and services, victims must choose between life with an abusive partner and life on the streets.

Our amendment would provide leniency for women and children who are affected by domestic violence and would, in fact, help victims to move forward and start new lives. Without the threat of losing their housing, women and children who are survivors of domestic violence will not be forced to a situation where they are homeless or returning to their abuser.

This amendment would modify the bankruptcy code to ensure better protection for victims of domestic violence by granting them relief from summary eviction from their rental housing. Relief may be granted only under the condition that the debtors certify under penalty of perjury that they are victims of domestic violence whose physical well-being or whose children's physical well-being would be threatened through eviction. Our amendment would not allow families to take advantage of the system, but it will be a life-saver for those who would face danger if they lost their homes.

This amendment is supported by the National Coalition Against Domestic Violence, the National Network To End Domestic Violence and the Family Violence Prevention Fund. I ask unanimous consent to print in the RECORD letters from those groups voicing that support.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

MARCH 7, 2005.

DEAR SENATOR: As national organizations working to address the varied needs of victims of domestic violence, we urge you to support Senator Leahy's proposed amendment to the Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005, S. 256. This provision is essential for the many victims of domestic violence whose physical well-being or whose children's physical well-being would be threatened by summary eviction as a result of filing for bankruptcy.

Economic abuse is an integral part of domestic violence. Abusers often assert economic control by forbidding their victims from working, giving them little or no access to family finances, or destroying their credit. Many battered women have current or former partners who actively interfere with their efforts to work, harass them at work, threaten them and their children, withhold transportation or childcare, or beat them so severely that they cannot work. These victims are sometimes pushed into filing for bankruptcy as a result of this abuse.

Evicting these victims from their homes not only exacerbates an already difficult situation, but also puts many families in direct danger. On average, it takes six to ten months to secure housing. During this time, victims would be forced to stay at emergency homeless or domestic violence shelters. Unfortunately, those shelters are often full; in 2003, 32% of the requests for shelter by homeless families went unmet due to the lack of emergency shelter beds available. Even when space is available, most shelters limit the length of stay to 30 days.

Faced with this lack of housing and services, victims must choose between life with an abusive partner or life on the streets. Studies indicate that victims of domestic violence often return to their abusers because they cannot find long-term or transitional housing. At the other extreme, more than 50% of homeless women and children are homeless because they are fleeing domestic violence. Once homeless, women are at high risk for experiencing further violence. Many studies have found that 90-100% of homeless women have been physically or sexually assaulted.

The tremendously negative impact of such evictions becomes greater when victims with children are forced out of their homes. Children without a home are in fair or poor health twice as often as other children, and have higher rates of asthma, ear infections, stomach problems, and speech problems. Homeless children are also more likely to experience mental health problems, such as anxiety, depression, and withdrawal. They are twice as likely to experience hunger, and four times as likely to have delayed development. School-age homeless children face barriers to enrolling and attending school, including transportation problems, residency requirements, inability to obtain previous school records, and lack of clothing and school supplies.

Individuals claiming relief under this provision would be required to testify, under penalty of perjury, that they were victims of domestic violence and that they or their children would be in physical jeopardy if they were evicted. Thus, this amendment will not allow families to take advantage of the system, but will be life-saving for those who would be in danger if they lost their homes.

We urge you to support Senator Leahy's amendment and provide this much needed assistance to domestic violence victims.

Sincerely,

ALLISON RANDALL,

End Domestic Violence.*

NATIONAL COALITION AGAINST DOMESTIC VIOLENCE,
February 28, 2005

Senator PATRICK LEAHY,
Russell Senate Office Building,
Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR LEAHY: It is with great support that I write to you on behalf of the National Coalition Against Domestic Violence and the more than 3,000 local shelter programs that we represent to thank you for your efforts to assist those individuals that are or have been impacted by the vast epidemic of domestic violence.

Women fleeing domestic violence make up a significant portion of the homeless population. According to The United States Conference of Mayors (December, 1999) 57 percent of cities surveyed identified domestic violence as a primary cause of homelessness. Therefore, amending the bankruptcy code, as proposed in S. 256, with a provision that provides leniency on persons who are affected by domestic violence would, in fact, help victims to move forward and start new lives. Without the threat of losing their housing victims will not be forced to a situation where they are homeless or returning to their abuser.

Victims of domestic violence often cannot find adequate housing. One very important reason is that affordable, long term housing is not available in their communities. If housing is available there are often long waiting lists or the abuser is able to quickly locate and begin abusing the survivor at her new residence. Secondly, due to the fact that batterers frequently harass their victims at work, survivors are often fired or cannot maintain steady employment resulting in loss ability to pay for housing. Lastly victims of domestic violence are forced to remain in abusive relationships because of financial dependency and the lack of stable housing. The amendment to S. 256 recognizes that victims of domestic violence are in a dangerous situation and should not be forced from housing due their financial difficulties.

We commend you on your efforts to ensure that those who are affected by domestic violence are taken into consideration when the Senate reviews this legislation.

Sincerely,

JILL MORRIS,
Public Policy Director.

Mr. LEAHY. Congress must recognize that victims of domestic violence face dangerous situations and should not be forced from housing due to their financial difficulties. We cannot force women and children who have endured domestic violence from safe spaces that provide the stability needed to make a new life.

EXHIBIT 1

(Purpose: To protect victims of domestic violence who file for bankruptcy from summary eviction if their physical well-being is threatened)

On page 156, line 18, insert “, unless the debtor certifies under penalty of perjury that the debtor is a victim of domestic violence whose physical well-being or whose children's physical well-being would be threatened if relief from the stay is granted” before the semicolon.

REGULATING CREDIT CARDS

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. I appreciate the willingness of the chairman and ranking member of the Banking Committee to work with Senators KYL, BROWNBACK, and me on this important issue. And I understand that the Banking Committee has an interest in regulating credit cards.

I would like to state here, for the record, the key points of the agreement that we have arrived at:

Senators SHELBY and SARBANES have agreed to hold a hearing within 6 months on the substance of the amendment to the Bankruptcy Bill that Senator KYL, BROWNBACK, and I offered, on increasing notice to credit card holders who pay only their minimum monthly payments. I understand that this hearing will address a set of issues relating to credit cards and consumer rights. However, I also understand that Senators SHELBY and SARBANES will ensure that the substance of agreement, will be directly considered, and will be an area of focus, during that hearing, and that I will be afforded the opportunity to testify.

I understand that Senators SHELBY and SARBANES will work with me, with Senator KYL, and with members of the Banking Committee to ensure that this issue and my bill are carefully considered. My bill would give those consumers who make only the minimum required payments for 6 months detailed notice about the interest and length of time that it will take them to pay their own individual debt and interest.

Because the chairman and ranking member of the Banking Committee agree to take these actions, I will agree to withdraw my amendment. Do Senators SHELBY and SARBANES agree?

Mr. SHELBY. I absolutely agree with Senator FEINSTEIN and look forward to working with the Senator.

I say to Senator SARBANES, through the course of the debate on the bankruptcy bill it has become clear that there are many Senators who have concerns about numerous aspects of the credit card industry.

I want to indicate for the record that I share many of these concerns. Furthermore, I want to point out that I am aware of his particular concerns as well as those of Senators KYL and FEINSTEIN.

Mr. SARBANES. I thank Chairman SHELBY and Senator FEINSTEIN. I appreciate their interest in this matter and believe these are serious issues that merit further attention.

Mr. SHELBY. I fully agree and therefore I am willing to commit to holding a hearing in the Banking Committee to examine the practices within the credit card industry. I believe it is our responsibility to develop a complete record on these matters so that we can make informed judgments as to whether we need to take any specific actions.

I look forward to obtaining input from Senator SARBANES and from Senators KYL and FEINSTEIN in putting together this hearing.

Mr. SARBANES. I thank Chairman SHELBY for his leadership on this issue. I look forward to working with the Senator on developing a hearing at which the Banking Committee will receive testimony on credit card disclosures and other practices. A number of Senators have raised significant issues regarding the credit card industry and I appreciate the Senator's willingness to examine them and hear all interested Senators.

Mr. SHELBY. I agree.

Mr. SARBANES. I will support the Chairman's efforts.

MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that there now be a period for the transaction of morning business, with Senators permitted to speak for up to 10 minutes each.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

COMMEMORATING THE 60TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE BATTLE OF IWO JIMA

Mrs. DOLE. Mr. President; this month marks the 60th anniversary of the victory at Iwo Jima. That battle is remembered as one of the bloodiest in Marine Corps history. Approximately 70,000 American and 22,000 Japanese troops engaged in a month long battle for the Pacific Island that was critical to the air bombardment of mainland Japan. The heroic achievements of our nation's warriors throughout this treacherous battle attest to the courage and character not only of the brave men who fought there, but of our nation as a whole.

The island of Iwo Jima consists of coarse volcanic sand that impeded the movement of men and machines as they struggled up the beach. Unable to dig fighting holes, the Marines were sitting ducks for the Japanese gunners hiding in a network of caves. Suribachi, the 550-foot volcanic mountain at the island's southern end, allowed Japanese gunners to zero in on every inch of the landing beach. Blockhouses and pillboxes flanked the landing areas, leading historians to describe the attack as "throwing human flesh against reinforced concrete." The 36-day assault on Iwo Jima resulted in more than 23,200 Americans wounded, and another 6,800 who paid the ultimate price.

The battle, which involved the largest number of Marines committed to a single operation during World War II, featured superior service cooperation. The Navy-Marine Corps team functioned as a model of efficiency. To make victory possible, more than 450 ships massed in the surrounding waters. Among those ships was the aircraft carrier USS Saratoga, and on board that ship was my brother, John Hanford. Having graduated from Duke University and joined the Navy at 19, he became an aviation supply officer. John's battle station was a 20 millimeter gun battery, where he led a 15-man team. Tasked with laying an impenetrable curtain of anti-aircraft fire, the 20 millimeter batteries provided the ship's last line of defense from attacking Japanese Zeros and kamikazes.

The Saratoga was part of the legendary Task Force 58, commanded by the superb strategist, Vice Admiral Marc Mitscher, who executed a diversionary air bombardment of Japan on the initial days of the Iwo Jima assault. On February 21st, the Saratoga and three destroyers moved south, to provide direct air support for the Marines on Iwo Jima. Although the 20 millimeter batteries were effective out to a mile, the low cloud layer that day as the Saratoga came on station, forced my brother and the rest of the crew to mount a desperate, close-in defense of the ship.

In full view of Mt. Suribachi, the Saratoga was subjected to two waves of Japanese air attacks. During the first wave, her radar picked up a large threat, estimated at 20 to 25 planes. Despite the deadly anti-aircraft fire, within 3 minutes three bombs plunged into the Saratoga, immediately followed by four kamikaze hits.

Her crew fought fires blazing in the hangar deck, and her planes were directed to land on the nearby escort carriers. Roughly 2 hours later, five kamikazes targeted her again. Four were shot down but one dropped a bomb, which exploded over her flight deck before the plane itself bounced over the side. During the air attacks, the crew could see the USS Bismarck being struck by a kamikaze and minutes later sinking with a crew of 218 aboard. The Saratoga's losses were 192 sailors and Marines wounded, 123 killed or missing. And, as a youngster growing up in Salisbury, NC, I well remember my revered big brother coming home on what was called "survivor's leave."

Though extremely costly, the ability to launch and recover aircraft on Iwo Jima was critical to the strategic bombing campaign and ultimately to the American victory in the Japanese theater. The island's capture served to increase the operating range, payload, and survival rate of the big bombers. While the monthly tonnage of high explosives dropped on Imperial Japan increased eleven-fold during March alone, the greatest value of Iwo Jima was to serve as an emergency landing field for crippled B-29s returning from bombing runs. By war's end, a total of 2,400 bombers carrying over 27,000 crewmen made forced landings on the island. Without control of Iwo Jima, many of these men would have been lost at sea. Noted one B-29 pilot, "whenever I landed on the island, I thanked God for the men who fought for it."

One of the many heroes of the fierce land battle was PFC Jack Lucas, born and raised in North Carolina. He is the Nation's youngest Medal of Honor recipient of the 20th century and the youngest Marine ever to receive that award. Anxious to fight for his country, this son of a tobacco farmer forged his mother's signature and enlisted in the Marine Corps at age 14. Frustrated with an assignment to a training command, he stowed away on a ship bound for Iwo Jima. Six days after his 17th birthday, he and three other men were attacked by grenades. The men jumped into a shallow hole; as a grenade landed next to them, Private Lucas threw his body over it. When another grenade landed close by, Private Lucas pulled it under him and absorbed the blasts of both grenades with his body, saving his fellow Marines from certain injury and possible death. Miraculously, he survived. Bob and I have had the privilege of several visits with Jack and his wonderful wife.

Private Lucas is a representative of what has been hailed as "The Greatest Generation." As evidenced by America's triumphs in numerous conflicts since World War II, the traits, the spirit of the Greatest Generation have certainly been passed on. Today, approximately 14,000 Marines of the Second Marine Expeditionary Force, based in North Carolina, are in the process of deploying to Iraq to continue fighting for freedom. I am very proud to recognize 41 Marine lieutenants who are sitting in the gallery today. These young men and women are the newest bearers of the torch of freedom so proudly carried by the Iwo Jima veterans. This platoon of recently commissioned officers is about to finish training, and in a few short months many of them will find themselves in direct combat supporting the global war against terrorism.

I applaud their selfless act, volunteering to serve our Nation during this time of war; they represent our Nation's best. I have no doubt that these young officers will have the privilege of leading many men and women who possess the same qualities of tenacity and valor displayed by Private Lucas.

I could not agree more with Jack Lucas who recently said, "I am so proud of the people who serve today, whether in peacetime or in war. You can't do anything better than serve America . . . I love our government and our military and I think it's the most honorable thing a man or woman can do".

The battle of Iwo Jima resulted in 27 Medals of Honor being awarded to Marines and sailors, many posthumously, more than awarded for any other operation during World War II. Commander of the Pacific Fleet, ADM Chester Nimitz, immortalized the spirit of the battle noting that "among the Americans who served on Iwo Island, uncommon valor was a common virtue." The Marines present here today, as well as all of our military members serving around the globe, are continuously making sacrifices to protect our freedoms. I am certain that they, too, possess the uncommon valor which has made our Nation so strong in the past, and will keep her strong well into the future.

Mr. DURBIN. Will the Senator yield for a question?

Mrs. DOLE. Yes.

Mr. DURBIN. At the outset, I thank my colleague from North Carolina for coming to the floor and reminding us of this wonderful chapter in American history, where the men who were on Iwo Jima and all the men and women who fought in World War II demonstrated such uncommon valor that inspires us even to this day. The story the Senator has told us of Mr. Lucas is nothing short of incredible: This 14-year-old boy performed feats of courage which are almost unparalleled. In fact, as the Senator noted, he is the youngest recipient of the Congressional Medal of Honor, which I am sure is a great source of pride.

The first job I ever had as a college intern in the Senate was for Senator Paul Douglas of Illinois, who enlisted in the Marine Corps at the age of 50 and went through training at Parris Island, fought in Okinawa and was injured, as Senator Bob Dole was injured, with a serious injury to his left arm.

I have always had a special spot in my heart for the men and women who serve in the Marine Corps, and I just want to join the Senator from North Carolina in making certain that this is bipartisan and nonpartisan in our salute to the Marine Corps, all the men and women in uniform, and particularly the great veterans of World War II and Iowa Germany.

Mrs. DOLE. I thank the Senator for his comments.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Rhode Island.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I, too, want to commend Senator DOLE for her stirring comments about the valiant Marines on Iwo Jima. My brother was a Marine officer. I followed not in the Marine Corps but to West Point, so one of us was right.

SOCIAL SECURITY REFORM

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I rise today to express my deep concern about the direction that the President is taking the country in terms of our Nation's commitment to providing retirement security to the elderly and income security to the disabled, widows, and survivors. I am speaking, of course, about the President's plan for privatizing Social Security.

President Bush writes in his recently released Economic Report of the President, "The greatest fiscal challenges we face arise from the aging of our society." Yet his annual Economic Report devotes little more than a page and a half to this important subject.

As his Economic Report reveals, the President has no real plan to address the fiscal challenges arising from the retirement of the baby boom generation, let alone a plan to fix Social Security. All the President has is an unaffordable plan to create private retirement accounts, with few specifics and many unanswered questions.

That is not stopping the President from barnstorming the country telling the American people that Social Security is a sinking ship and private accounts are the lifeboats into which we should jump. But the administration is manufacturing a crisis that does not exist in order to dismantle Social Security.

Despite the administration's claims, Social Security will remain solvent for nearly 50 more years. Even after that, Social Security would still be able to pay 70 to 80 percent of benefits. Modest changes to the system would enable Social Security to pay full benefits well beyond the next 50 years.

No other retirement system or Fortune 500 company in the United States can make that same claim. In fact, the weakness of traditional pensions makes Social Security look like the most secure part of our retirement system right now.

To put the problem into perspective, making the Bush administration's four enacted tax cuts permanent would cost three to five times more than the Social Security shortfall over the next 75 years.

For over 60 years, Social Security has provided a dependable and predictable stream of income to retired or disabled workers, their dependents and their survivors. Forty-eight million men, women, and children rely on Social Security benefits each month to help them live with dignity. The benefits are protected from inflation and one cannot outlive them.

Social Security is an insurance program, not an investment plan, and private accounts would destroy much of the insurance value of the program. More than one-quarter of Social Security benefits go to survivors and disabled workers and their families, and these benefits would be at risk under the President's proposal.

We all acknowledge the long-term fiscal imbalance of the Social Security trust fund. However, it is equally critical to recognize that the President's private accounts do absolutely nothing to address this imbalance, as a senior administration official recently acknowledged. In fact, diverting payroll tax revenues exacerbates insolvency and accelerates the date of trust fund imbalance.

For obvious reasons, the President has not mentioned this or other facts that are so critical to the Social Security trust fund. His privatization scheme requires cutting benefits by more than 40 percent, even for those who choose not to invest in privatized accounts.

Those choosing a private account could be hit with an additional "privatization tax" of 70 percent or more of the value of their account, which would be deducted from their Social Security benefits upon retirement.

President Bush has urged Congress to fix Social Security for younger workers and not pass on the problem to future generations. However, the President's plan for private accounts would place a huge burden on our children and grandchildren by increasing Federal debt by over $750 billion in just the next 10 years. This debt would rise to nearly $5 trillion over the first 20 years that the plan is in place.

The President's private accounts would cut Social Security's funding, weaken the program, and make its financial problems worse, not better. In short, private accounts pose a serious threat to the future economic security of all Americans, particularly the most vulnerable members of our society.

This is why last week I joined 41 of my fellow Democratic senators in calling on the President to publicly and unambiguously abandon his support for private accounts funded with Social Security dollars or cuts in guaranteed benefits.

At a time when our country is saving so little and fewer employers are offering traditional pension plans, Social Security's predictable, inflation-protected benefits that can't be outlived occupy a critical role in ensuring our retirement security.

Before we can roll up our sleeves and delve into the very serious question of shoring up Social Security for all, we must set aside ideology and acknowledge the demographic and fiscal challenges facing this bedrock retirement security program.

I want to work with President Bush to promote personal wealth and saving through investment, but not at the cost of Social Security. I urge the President to take private accounts off the table so that we might achieve bipartisan agreement to strengthen Social Security for the long-term and enhance the retirement security of all Americans.

I yield the floor.

"MADD AT GM" CAMPAIGN

Mr. DEWINE. Mr. President, I come to the Senate this afternoon in disbelief and sadness and a little anger. I am angry, sad, at the blatant disregard for common sense in a new ad campaign being promoted by a prominent trade association.

The American Beverage Licensees, or ABL, has launched a campaign entitled "MADD at GM"—MADD referencing Mothers Against Driving Drunk, with the aim of stopping the charitable donations General Motors gives to Mothers Against Drunk Driving.

ABL claims that MADD has a "neoprohibitionist agenda." Yes, the neoprohibitionist agenda is what they claim.

They claim that MADD "wants to criminalize social drinking by preventing designated drivers from drinking before they get behind the wheel." Apparently in their world, designated drivers ought to be able to have a few drinks before getting on the road. In most people's world, that defies all common sense.

In honor of MADD's 20th anniversary in 2000, General Motors made a commitment to contribute $2.5 million over 5 years to MADD to combat underage drinking, for underage drinking prevention, and drunk driving victim assistance, a very laudable goal. I applaud General Motors for doing this. But what has happened is, with General Motors' funding commitment now expired, ABL has seen this as the perfect opportunity to attack General Motors. They are attacking a noble cause, and their attack makes no sense.

ABL's smear campaign against General Motors and MADD has taken many forms—an Internet Web site, print advertisements, TV ads during NASCAR events, and through promotional materials distributed at bars, restaurants, and other ABL member locations throughout the country. I have brought two of these ads with me to the Senate floor this afternoon. Let me show the first ad.

This first advertisement plays off the well-known board game Monopoly. It explicitly states that by purchasing a General Motors car, any American is funding his or her own arrest. How absurd. It suggests that because General Motors supports MADD and MADD is against drinking and driving that somehow General Motors is to blame if you get arrested for being over the legal drinking limit. But last time I checked, in this country we arrest people who have broken the law. And in this case that is drinking too much before you get behind the wheel.

Let me show the second ad, just as outrageous. This advertisement, again from the MADD at GM campaign, contradicts common sense as much as the first one did. As you can see here, the man in the ad is posing for his mug shot. But instead of holding his arrest number, he is holding a sign stating that his arrest was sponsored by General Motors. That is what it says.

General Motors didn't get this man arrested. Drinking and driving did. The ad further states that General Motors supports the arrest of social drinkers through its charitable donations to MADD. But that isn't the case at all. The simple fact is that if you drink too much and you get in a car and drive, you break the law. It doesn't matter if you label it as social drinking or not; what is wrong is wrong.

This ad says that "MADD spends millions provided by GM to fund their roadblock promotion campaign. They're using your money to arrest you."

That roadblock campaign is a program I strongly support and I know many Members of the Senate support as well. It is also a program that the Traffic Safety and Law Enforcement Campaign bill that Senator LAUTENBERG and I are introducing today would help fund.

Let me show a third ad. This ad, however, is from MADD. In it you can see a note from LT Carl McDonald about his daughter Carlie. It reads:

This is my precious little girl, Carlie. I always told her, "I will love you as long as there are stars in the sky." She would always smile, look up at me and say, "I love you more than there are stars in the universe." These words are now inscribed on her tombstone. At the tender age of five she was killed by a drunk driver—her mother. If you think it can't happen to you—think again. Please don't drink and drive.

This was an ad brought to us by MADD.

The ad has more teeth in it than the other two ads combined. We all know the truth; that is, drinking and driving is deadly. MADD is doing all it can do to help save lives and get drunk drivers off the road.

I think what is so alarming and irritating and makes us all so mad is this campaign that is targeted against MADD, Mothers Against Drunk Drivers, an organization that has done so much good in this country in all 50 States.

I first came in contact with MADD when I was a State senator back in the early 1980s. We had a little boy, a 7-year-old boy by the name of Justin Beason, who was tragically killed by a drunken driver in my home county. As a result, I introduced a bill in our State legislature, a tough drunk-driving bill. I can truthfully say it was through the support of MADD and MADD's members who went to the legislature, lobbied the legislature, testified in front of the State legislature, wrote letters—if it wasn't for MADD, that bill would not have become law.

It is an organization that reminds us every day of the horrible tragedies and about people like Carlie—little children who lose their lives on highways every week because of drivers who were drinking. This organization has been so viciously attacked by this trade organization. It is an organization made up of many parents who have lost children, and many times husbands who have lost wives, and wives who have lost husbands—all to drunk drivers. It is a good organization. It is an organization we should all support. It is an organization of which we should all be proud. Anyone who attacks it, I just don't understand.

Here are some statistics to think about: 69 percent of our youth died in alcohol-related fatalities in the year 2000 involved young drinking drivers. Of the 42,000 people killed in all of the traffic accidents in 2003, 40 percent—well over one-third—were due to alcohol. Further, since MADD's founding in 1980, drunk-driving deaths have dramatically decreased from 26,179 in 1982 to 17,013 in the year 2003. Clearly, MADD and other anti-drunk-driving campaigns are having an impact. We have begun to change the culture in this country. In part, we have corporations such as General Motors to thank having helped MADD in their cause. While deaths due to drunk driving have decreased in large part through the great work of MADD, the job is certainly not finished. As long as people are put into danger because someone got behind the wheel after drinking alcohol, we have work to do. General Motors and MADD are not criminalizing social drinkers, they are working together to simply save lives.

Today, I am introducing six transportation safety bills. I introduced them last year and am doing so again because I want to see them get passed and signed into law and see lives saved. They are commonsense bills that will, in fact, save lives. I think all of us care about keeping our roads safe. That is also why I again commend MADD and General Motors. I also commend the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration for its efforts to keep drunk drivers off the road and its prosafety agenda. They are all doing what is right and what needs to be done to protect our children and our families when they get into a car and get on the road.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, before my colleague goes, I want to once again say to my good friend from Ohio how much I appreciate his leadership. I am a principal cosponsor with my colleague on this very important bill dealing with underage drinking. We have wonderful sponsors in the House as well, in a bipartisan way, to try to make a difference.

The Senator has laid out very categorically what the facts are, which is that this is a massive problem in this country, and a growing one, unfortunately, with the age of people who are becoming regular users of alcohol dropping all the time. While certainly parents have to do more at the local level, more efforts need to be made. We also think it is incumbent upon us at a national level to be supportive of those efforts, to help provide resources and guidance to try to reverse this trend.

I didn't want my friend to leave the floor without expressing to him my deep sense of gratitude—not only on this issue but on countless other issues affecting families and children. MIKE DEWINE of Ohio has been as good a champion as this body has seen in a long time on these issues. There are very few issues that have given me as much pleasure to work on as issues with children. On behalf of all of us in this country—he represents Ohio well, but in this regard he is making a difference all across the country. On their behalf, I thank him.

Mr. DEWINE. Mr. President, I thank my colleague for the very kind remarks. Senator DODD has been a real partner on so many issues affecting children. He and I have worked together. Whenever we want to find someone to advocate for children, CHRIS DODD is there. My colleague is always a great champion for children.

On the issue of drinking and driving, underage drinking and highway safety, Senator DODD has been a true champion. I thank my colleague for coming to the floor. Again, I look forward to continuing to work with him in the years ahead.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, I join my colleague from Ohio, Senator DEWINE, and call attention to an unseemly lobbying effort to discredit one of our Nation's most revered public safety organizations, the Mothers Against Drunk Driving, MADD, and one of our Nation's largest automakers, General Motors.

Each year, General Motors donates money to MADD to support its campaign against drunk driving. In response to this, the alcohol special interest lobby is spending $10 million to finance a lobbying campaign—or as some might call it, a smear campaign.

This campaign is aimed at scaring and intimidating corporate donors like GM so they will stop giving money to safety organizations like MADD. Apparently the alcohol lobby thinks it is bad for its business to crack down on drunk driving, which kills 17,000 Americans each year and injures over 500,000.

Ten million dollars is not an insignificant amount of money. After all, the Federal Government only spends $30 million each year on public law enforcement campaigns to educate people on drunk driving awareness and prevention.

What a shame. Imagine if the alcohol lobby would spend $10 million to educate people and prevent drunk driving, instead of bullying GM. Many of the customers they lose each year to drunk driving crashes could probably be saved, along with thousands of innocent Americans. That sounds like a much better investment than financing a smear campaign that will cost lives.

I am one of the most ardent opponents of drunk driving in the Senate, and I see the results of the good work we do here to help save the lives of our constituents from the scourge of drunk driving. Over the years, I have battled against the alcohol lobby to pass effective laws to reduce drunk driving.

In 1986 I authored legislation and worked with Senator ELIZABETH DOLE, who was Secretary of the Department of Transportation at the time, to raise the minimum drinking age from 18 to 21. President Reagan signed my bill into law, and MADD officials were there with us. In 2000 Senator DEWINE and I teamed up to get a bill passed establishing .08 blood alcohol concentration level as the nationwide threshold for drunk driving.

These are the kind of smart, common-sense initiatives that MADD supports. And these are the kind of initiatives that save lives. Combined, these two measures are estimated to save some 1,500 lives a year.

Federal public awareness campaigns against drunk driving are also having a tangible impact. We need to step up these program, which is why Senator DEWINE and I will soon introduce a bill to increase funding for this effort. What we don't need is a $10 million misinformation program from the alcohol industry.

Drunk driving is no joke. It kills and maims thousands of people in American each year, and costs $9 billion in additional health care and other costs. MADD is trying to stanch the flow of blood on our highways, and they are doing a good job of it. GM, to its credit, supports MADD. They deserve our encouragement, and they deserve for us to stand up against this vicious smear campaign.

I intend to work with Senator DEWINE to let Americans know the truth about the alcohol lobby's smear campaign, to counter the alcohol lobby's lies with the truth, and to fight for legislation that reduces drunk driving and saves lives across our country.

ATTACHMENT A—FURNITURE, ACCESSORIES AND SPECIAL ALLOWANCES POLICY FOR SENATE OFFICE BUILDINGS

(Approved September 27, 1989)

(Amended June 29, 1994)

(Amended February 28, 2004)

1. Pursuant to 40 U.S.C. 174c, furnishings for offices in the Senate Office Buildings are supplied and maintained by the Architect of the Capitol through his representative, the Superintendent of the Senate Office Buildings. Matters of general policy are subject to the approval of the Senate Committee on Rules and Administration.

2. Effective on the date of adoption of this policy by the Senate Committee on Rules and Administration, the Superintendent of the Senate Office Buildings shall undertake to survey the physical quality of all furnishings presently assigned to offices. Thereafter, a survey will be conducted on an annual basis. Office heads, as defined in the Senate Equipment Regulations, should work with the Superintendent's Office to identify furnishings that do not meet an acceptable level of quality.

3. When the survey is completed, all items on the Standard Furniture and Accessories list that are in disrepair will be declared "surplus" and/or repaired. This does not preclude repairs as needed irrespective of survey timing. No furnishings will be delivered to an office unless they are functional and in quality condition.

4. The Superintendent's Office will maintain a full inventory of all furnishings assigned to designated suites, including documentation of furnishings provided from the Standard Furniture and Accessories list, and items purchased from the Senators' special furniture and accessory allowance.

5. Senators with suites in the Russell or Dirksen Buildings shall have the option of using traditional or modular furniture to create an effective office environment. [However, once modular is chosen for a suite, it shall remain a part of that suite regardless of which Senator occupies the space.] A Senator electing to use modular furniture in Russell or Dirksen shall use the modular system in the suite except for the Senator's personal office, reception room, and conference room.

[A.] Modular furniture will be offered to Senators in Russell and Dirksen based upon the availability and the order in which the request is received. [of funding for this program.]

[B.] Modular furniture will be offered to Senators with suites in the Russell and Dirksen Buildings on a seniority basis until all Senators have had the opportunity to elect to use modular furniture.

[C.] Senators not electing initially to use modular furniture in Russell or Dirksen must wait until all other Senators on the current list have been offered modular furniture and have elected to accept or have declined. The updated seniority list shall apply after Senate moves.]

6. Senators in the Hart Building shall utilize modular furniture as the basic system of furnishing. The actual system of furniture in place in a suite in the Hart Building shall remain in the same suite regardless of which Senator occupies the space.

In the Hart Building, traditional furniture may be chosen for the Senator's personal office, the Chief of Staff's office, the reception area and the conference room.

[7. Modular panels shall not be provided in any private offices.]

8. Only a Senator or the designated office head of each Senate office will have the authority to request furniture and furnishings in an office. Such requests may be made by submitting a "Request for Service", letter or through the Senate Furniture web system. Written confirmation of a telephone request to the Superintendent of the Senate Office Buildings also will be accepted. Office heads should be designated in writing and a file of these names will be maintained by the Superintendent's Office.

The transfer of furniture from one official office inventory to another may be authorized based upon the following:

A. All furniture items to be transferred from one Senate office or Committee to another Senate office or Committee must be authorized by the Committee on Rules and Administration prior to the transfer. [to be transferred to the intended office.]

B. The Senator, Committee Chairman or designated office head must agree to the release of the furniture on a Request for Furniture form providing for the removal of those items from their office inventory. Additional furniture intended to replace the furniture proposed for transfer shall be requested simultaneously on a Request for Furniture form.

C. The Senator, Committee Chairman or designated office head receiving the transferred furniture must agree to its receipt on a Request for Furniture form so that the furniture can be incorporated into their office inventory.

The Superintendent shall adjust the official office inventories based upon completion of the issuance or return of furniture items.

10. A Special Furniture and Accessory Allowance will be authorized to the Architect of the Capitol for the purpose of furnishing a Senator's personal office, reception room and conference room when a Senator is elected/re-elected for a term of office. This will be in addition to the furnishings requested from the Standard Furniture and Accessories list and only will be authorized during the first year of each Senator's new term of office. Such amount will be determined by the Senate Committee on Rules and Administration as a recommendation for appropriation to the Architect of the Capitol to become available for the Senator's term of office. Provisions will be made for Senators to purchase through this special allowance furniture and accessory items which are unique to their offices and/or home state. All acquisitions from this allowance will be made by the Architect of the Capitol in consultation with the office head.

11. A "Request for Service" or other written request for furnishings will be acknowledged within five working days reflecting appropriate disposition of the request. If requests are made for items critical to the function of the office which are not on the Standard Furniture and Accessory list or are out of stock, and delivery/restock is not anticipated for three months or greater, an office head may submit a request in writing to the Chairman of the Senate Committee on Rules and Administration. If requests are made for special items, as part of the Special Furniture and Accessory Allowance, appropriate information should be attached from a commercial supplier or a catalogue from which the items are available. If favorably acted upon by the Rules Committee, an approval to purchase will be forwarded to the Architect's Office.

12. Certain furniture and accessory items may be built to published plans, including typewriter racks and table platforms for computer work stations, open shelves and sorting racks for desks and tables, and bookshelves, in accordance with a standard catalogue provided by the Superintendent. An office head may submit a written request for an item by identifying it from the Superintendent's catalogue of sketches.

13. Office heads may submit to the Senate Committee on Rules and Administration at any time a request to add items to the Standard Furniture and Accessory list. The Committee, in consultation with the Architect of the Capitol, will review the list annually to ensure that items continue to meet the needs of Senate offices acknowledging changing technology and staff environments.

14. Furnishings secured through the Architect of the Capitol from the Senators' Special Furniture and Accessory Allowance may be returned at the request of the office head to the Architect's inventory. They then may be purchased at a depreciated price with a Senator's personal funds or as a charge to the Special Furniture and Accessory Allowance. All returns will be made without credit to the original purchaser's Special Furniture and Accessory Allowance.

15. The Committee on Rules and Administration, in consultation with the Architect of the Capitol, will monitor requests for non-standard items to preserve the architectural conformity of the Senate Office Buildings.

16. Furniture is not authorized by statute to be purchased through a Senator's Official Personnel and Office Expense Account. However, T.V. stands and V.C.R. stands are considered accessories to equipment and may be purchased in a manner consistent with the statutes and regulations governing the purchase of standard and non-standard equipment.

17. All furniture and accessories, whether chosen from the Standard list or purchased from the Senators' Special Furniture and Accessory Allowance, remain the property of the Architect of the Capitol. Senators will be responsible for any furniture stolen, lost, or otherwise unaccounted for, and reimbursement for all losses will be made in an amount equal to the fair market value of such furniture after applying an appropriate depreciation.

Ranking Member.
TRENT LOTT,
Chairman.

Attachment B

II. TRANSPORTATION EXPENSES

(A) COMMON CARRIER TRANSPORTATION AND ACCOMMODATIONS

Transportation includes all necessary official travel on railroads, airlines, helicopters, steamboats, buses, streetcars, taxicabs, and other usual means of conveyance. Transportation may include fares and such expenses incidental to transportation such as baggage transfer; official telegraph, telephone, radio, and cable messages in connection with items classed as transportation; steamer chairs, steamer cushions, and steamer rugs at customary rates actually charged; staterooms on steamers.

1. TRAIN ACCOMMODATIONS

(a) Sleeping-car accommodations: The lowest first class sleeping accommodations available shall be allowed when night travel is involved. When practicable, through sleeping accommodations should be obtained in all cases where more economical to the Senate.

(b) Parlor-car and coach accommodations: One seat in a sleeping or parlor car will be allowed. Where adequate coach accommodations are available, coach accommodations should be used to the maximum extent possible, on the basis of advantage to the Senate, suitability and convenience to the traveler, and nature of the business involved.

2. STEAMER ACCOMMODATIONS

Staterooms: First-class accommodation will be allowed when stateroom is included in cost of passage or is a separate charge.

3. AIRPLANE ACCOMMODATIONS

(a) First-class and air-coach accommodations: It is the policy of the Senate that persons who use commercial air carriers for transportation on official business shall use less than first-class accommodations instead of those designated first-class with due regard to efficient conduct of Senate business and the travelers' convenience, safety, and comfort.

(b) Use of United States-flag air carriers: All official air travel shall be performed on United States-flag air carriers except where travel on other aircraft (1) is essential to the official business concerned, or (2) is necessary to avoid unreasonable delay, expense, or inconvenience.

When a traveler finds he/she will not use accommodations which have been reserved for him/her, he/she must release them within the time limits specified by the carriers. Likewise, where transportation service furnished is inferior to that called for by a ticket or where a journey is terminated short of the destination specified, the traveler must report such facts to the proper official. Failure of travelers to take such action may subject them to liability for any resulting losses. "No show" charges, if incurred by Members or staff personnel in connection with official Senate travel, shall not be considered payable or reimbursable from the contingent fund of the Senate. Senate travelers exercising proper prudence can make timely cancellations when necessary in order to avoid "no show" assessments. Service fees for preparation or mailing of passenger coupons shall not be reimbursable.

In the event that a Senate traveler is denied passage on a flight for which he/she held a reservation and this results in a payment of any rebate, this payment shall not be considered as a personal receipt by the traveler, but rather as a payment to the Senate, the agency for which and at whose expense the travel is being performed. Such payments shall be submitted to the appropriate individual for the proper disposition when the traveler submits his/her expense account. Through fares, special fares, commutation fares, excursion, and reduced-rate round trip fares should be used for official travel when it can be determined prior to the start of a trip that any such type of service is practical and economical to the Senate. Round-trip tickets should be secured only when, on the basis of the journey as planned, it is known or can be reasonably anticipated that such tickets will be utilized.

Each Chairman, Senator, or Officer of the Senate may, at his/her discretion, authorize in extenuating circumstances the reimbursement of penalty fees associated with the cancellation of through fares, special fares, commutation fares, excursion, and reduced-rate round trip fares.

[Discount coupons, frequent flyer mileage, or other evidence of reduced fares, obtained on official travel, shall be turned in to the office for which the travel was performed so that they may be utilized for future official travel. "Any travel award that accrues by reason of official travel of a Member, officer, or employee of the Senate shall be considered the property of the office for which the travel was performed and may not be converted to personal use (2 U.S.C. 1436(a), as amended)." However, this shall not apply to any travel awards relating to air transportation for a Member of the Senate, or their spouse, son, or daughter, between the Washington metropolitan area and the Home State of that Member. It should be noted that any fees assessed in connection with the use of travel awards for a spouse, son, or daughter of a Member, shall be considered a personal expense of the traveler and shall not be reimbursed from official funds.

[It is the traveler's responsibility to turn in to the appropriate individual all promotional materials which would provide free or reduced costs for future travel. These should be integrated into the office's plans for future official travel. Even in those instances when the coupons are non-transferable or carry an impending expiration date, and it appears that the office will not be able to use them, they are still Senate property and should not be converted to personal use, except in the case of separating Members, Officers and employees as provided in Appendix A. The administrator of each office shall account for all bonuses acquired for travel from official appropriated funds.]

Travel promotional awards (e.g. free travel, travel discounts, upgrade certificates, coupons, frequent flyer miles, access to carrier club facilities, and other similar travel promotional items ("Travel Awards")) obtained by a Member, officer or employee of the Senate while on official travel may be utilized for personal use at the discretion of the Member or officer pursuant to this section. Travel Awards may be retained and used at the sole discretion of the Member or officer only if the Travel Awards are obtained under the same terms and conditions as those offered to the general public and no favorable treatment is extended on the basis of the Member, officer or employee's position with the Federal Government. Members, officers and employees may only retain Travel Awards for personal use when such Travel Awards have been obtained at no additional cost to the Federal Government. It should be noted that any fees assessed in connection with the use of Travel Awards shall be considered a personal expense of the Member, officer or employee and under no circumstances shall be paid for or reimbursed from official funds. Although this paragraph permits Members, officers and employees of the Senate to use Travel Awards at the discretion of the Member or officer, the Committee encourages the use of such Travel Awards (whenever practicable) to offset the cost of future official travel.

In case a person, for his/her own convenience, travels by an indirect route or interrupts travel by direct route, the extra expense will be borne by the traveler. Reimbursement for expenses shall be allowed only on such charges as would have been incurred by the official direct route.

Transportation by bus, streetcar, subway, or taxicab, when used in connection with official travel, will be allowed as an official transportation expense.

[APPENDIX A

[PURCHASE OF BONUS AIRLINE MILEAGE BY SEPARATING MEMBERS, OFFICERS AND EMPLOYEES OF THE SENATE

[In Opinion B-24607, the General Counsel of the General Accounting Office made the following determination:

[“Frequent flyer points are usually non-transferable and of no value to the government after the departure of the Member or staff person. Therefore, if the Senate determines as a matter of sound administration that its travel regulations should provide for disposing of frequent flyer mileage in exchange for payment of a reasonable sum of money from a departing Member or staff person, we see no objection to such a regulation."

Although Senate Travel Regulations prohibit the personal use of bonus mileage accrued at government expense, the Senate also recognizes that when Members, Officers, and employees separate from Senate service, any frequent flyer mileage remaining in their name is no longer of any value to the Senate. However, the Government would recoup at least some of the value of the lost bonus mileage if separating Members, Officers, and employees are permitted to purchase such mileage upon their separation from Senate service. Permitting such an exception to the general prohibition on use of frequent flyer mileage would make good administrative sense.

Therefore, Members, Officers, and employees, upon their separation from Senate service, may obtain permission from the Committee on Rules and Administration to convert to personal use any remaining airline bonus mileage accrued in their name at Senate expense, provided that the separating Member, Officer, or employee reimburses the Senate a reasonable sum of money for all mileage they wish to use. For purposes of this provision, a "reasonable sum of money" shall be determined by the Committee based upon: (1) the number of tickets which may be obtained from the unused mileage; and (2) valuation of such tickets at the applicable government rate. The determination of the Committee regarding reasonable reimbursement shall be final. Any funds received under this policy shall be deposited in the United States Treasury—Miscellaneous receipts account.]

SEC. 2. AUTHORITY.

The Tax Reform Act of 1986, as amended by the Transportation Equity Act for the 21st Century [(P.L. 105-78)] (P.L. 105-178) allows employers to give employees as a tax free

"de minimis fringe benefit" transit fare media of a value not exceeding [$100] $105 per month. The Fiscal Year 1991 Treasury-Postal Appropriations Act (Pub. L. 101-509) allows Federal agencies to participate in state or local government transit programs that encourage employees to use public transportation.

SEC. 3. DEFINITIONS.

(a) Public Mass Transportation—A transportation system operated by a State or local government, e.g. bus or rail transit system.

(b) Fare Media—A ticket, pass, or other device, other than cash, used to pay for transportation on a public mass transit system.

(c) Office—Refers to a Senate employee's appointing authority, that is, the Senator, committee chairman, elected officer, or an official of the Senate who appointed the employee. For purposes of these regulations, an employee in the Office of the President pro tempore, Deputy President pro tempore, Majority Leader, Minority Leader, Majority Whip, Minority Whip, Secretary of the Conference of the Majority, or Secretary of the Conference of the Minority shall be considered to be an employee, whose appointing authority is the Senator holding such position.

(d) Qualified Employee—An individual employed in a Senate office whose salary is disbursed by the Secretary of the Senate, whose salary is within the limit set by his or her appointing authority for participation in a transit program under these regulations, and who is not a member of a car pool or the holder of any Senate parking privilege.

(e) Qualified program Refers to the program of a public mass transportation system that encourages employees to use public transportation in accordance with the requirements of Pub. L. 101-509 whose participation in the Senate program in accordance with these regulations has been approved by the Committee on Rules and Administration.

SEC. 4. PROGRAM REQUIREMENTS.

(a) Each office within the Senate is authorized to provide to qualified employees under its supervision a de minimis fringe employment benefit of transit fare media of a value not to exceed the amount authorized by statute currently not to exceed [$100] $105 per month.

(b) Each appointing authority may establish a salary limit for participation in this program by his or her employees. If such salary limit is established, all staff paid at or below that limit, and who meet the other criteria established in these regulations, must be permitted to participate in this program.

(c) For purposes of these regulations, an individual employed for a partial month in an office shall be considered employed for the full month in that office.

(d) The fare media purchased by participating offices under this program shall only be used by qualified employees for travel to and from their official duty station.

(e) Any fare media purchased under this program may not be sold or exchanged although exchanges of Metro Card Media for transportation on the Virginia Railway Express (VRE) or the Maryland Transit Administration's MARC trains are permissible.

(f) In addition to any criminal liability, any person misusing, selling, exchanging or obtaining or using a fare media in violation of these regulations shall be required to reimburse the office for the full amount of the fare media involved and may be disqualified from further participation in this program.

SEC. 5. OFFICE ADMINISTRATION OF PROGRAM.

Each office electing to participate in this program shall be responsible for its administration in accordance with these regulations, shall designate an individual to manage its program, and may adopt rules for its participation consistent with these regulations.

An employee who wishes to participate in this program shall make application with his or her office on a form which shall include a certification that such person is not a member of a motor pool, does not have any Senate parking privilege (or has relinquished same as a condition of participation), will use the fare media personally for traveling to and from his or her duty station, and will not exchange or sell the fare media provided under this program. The application shall include the following statement:

This certification concerns a matter within the jurisdiction of an agency of the United States and making a false, fictitious, or fraudulent certification may render the maker subject to criminal prosecution under 18 U.S.C. §1001.

Safekeeping and distribution of fare media purchased for an office is the responsibility of the program manager in that office. Participating offices may not refund or replace any damaged, misplaced, lost, or stolen fare media.

SEC. 6. SENATE STATIONERY ROOM RESPONSIBILITIES.

The only program currently available in the Washington, D.C. metropolitan area at this time is Metro Pool, a program established through Metro by the District of Columbia. Transit benefits will be provided through Metro Pool for participating offices in the Washington, D.C. area. The Committee on Rules and Administration shall enter into an agreement with Metro Pool for purchase of fare media by the Senate Stationery Room as required by participating offices on a monthly basis.

A participating office shall purchase the fare media with its authorized appropriated funds from the Senate Stationery Room through its stationery account pursuant to 2 U.S.C. §119.

Each office shall present to the Senate Stationery Room [two copies of] the certification referred to in section 7 of these regulations. A new certification shall be submitted when an [employer] employee is added to or deleted from the program. The Stationery Room shall make available to the Senate Rules Committee Audit Section a monthly summary of office participation in this program. In addition, the Stationery Room may not refund or replace any damaged, misplaced, lost, or stolen fare media that has been purchased through the office's stationery account.

SEC. 7. CERTIFICATION.

The certification required by section 6 shall be approved by the appointing authority and shall include the name, and social security number of each participating employee within that office, and the following statements:

(a) Each person included on the list is currently a qualified employee as defined in Section 3.

(b) No person included on the list has any current Senate parking privilege and that no parking privileges will be restored to any person on the list during the period for which the fare media is purchased.

(c) That each month's fare media for each participating employee does not exceed the maximum dollar amount specified in statute (currently $100 $105).

SEC. 8. OTHER PARTICIPATING PROGRAMS.

Section 6 provides for procedures for participation by Washington offices in the Metro Pool program established through Metro by the District of Columbia. Additional programs in the Washington, D.C. metropolitan area, or programs offered in other locations where Members have offices that meet the requirements of the law and these regulations, may be used for qualified employees, subject to the following requirements:

(A) Authorization

The public transit system shall submit information to the Committee on Rules and Administration that it participates in an established state or local government program to encourage the use of public transportation for employees in accordance with the provisions of Pub. L. 101-509 and these regulations. If the program meets the requirements of the statute and these regulations and is approved by the Committee on Rules and Administration, any Senate office served by such transit system may provide benefits to its employees pursuant to these regulations.

(B) Procedures

(1) A qualified program operating in the Washington, D.C. metropolitan area that permits purchase arrangements similar to those provided by the Metro Pool program shall participate in the Senate program in accordance with the procedures set forth in Section 6.

(2) A qualified program operating in the Washington, D.C. metropolitan area that does not have purchase arrangements similar to Metro Pool, or a qualified program located outside that metropolitan area, that permits purchases directly by an office, may make arrangements for purchase of media directly with a participating office. Such an office may provide for direct payment to that system and shall submit the certification in accordance with Section 7.

(3) In the case of a qualified program that does not permit purchase arrangements as provided in paragraphs (1) or (2) above, an office may provide for reimbursement to a qualified employee and shall submit a certification in accordance with Section 7.

(C) Documentation

The following documentation must accompany a voucher submitted under paragraph 8(B)(2) or (3):

(1) A copy of the Rules Committee approval, in accordance with section 8(A), with the first voucher submitted for that transit program, provided subsequent vouchers identify the transit program.

(2) The certification.

(3) Proof of purchase of the fare media.

(D) Voucher Guidance

In the case of a Senator's state office, reimbursement for payment to either a qualified transit system, or a qualified employee shall be from the Senators' Official Personnel and Office Expense Account (SOP & OEA) as a home state office expense on a seven part voucher.

In the Washington, D.C. metropolitan area, reimbursement for payment to either a qualified transit system, or a qualified employee shall be as follows:

(1) in the case of a Senator's office from the SOP & OEA as an "other official expense" (discretionary expense).

(2) in the case of a Senate committee or administrative office as an "Other" expense.

SEC. 9. SPECIAL CIRCUMSTANCES.

Any circumstances not covered under these regulations shall be considered on application to the Committee on Rules and Administration.

SEC. 10. EFFECTIVE DATE.

These regulations shall take effect on the first day of the month following date of approval.

REVEREND WILLIAM WEBB

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I rise today to recognize Rev. William Webb, a strong and compassionate leader in the Reno-Sparks community.

Throughout his life, Reverend Webb has demonstrated tremendous perseverance, dedication, and generosity. Born and raised in a small, poor town in southern Arkansas, he was the only student in his eighth grade class to continue on to high school. Despite facing racism and segregation, Reverend Webb remained strongly committed to his education, attending Philander Smith College and receiving his master's degree at Virginia Union University.

Reverend Webb first came to Reno-Sparks area 40 years ago to serve as a minister at Second Baptist Church. His strong and energetic leadership has helped grow Second Baptist Church from a congregation of fifty church members to more than three hundred. Reverend Webb has also challenged his ministry and his community to serve those in need, organizing food drives and other charitable activities throughout his time in Northern Nevada. He has also served as president of the Nevada-California Interstate Missionary Baptist Convention for 22 years.

I am pleased to say that the City of Reno recently honored Reverend Webb's contributions to the community by renaming the roundabout at Clear Acre and Wedekin Road, William C. Webb Circle. Reverend Webb has led a distinguished life and career, and please join me in thanking him for his tremendous service to the Reno-Sparks community.

SPARKS, NV

Mr. REID. Mr. President, it gives me great pleasure to celebrate the founding of Sparks, NV 100 years ago this week.

In 1904, the Southern Pacific Railroad wanted to straighten its route through northern Nevada. This required them to move from their switching yard at Wadsworth to another location, a hamlet originally known as Harriman. Many residents moved with the railroad, and they brought most of Wadsworth's buildings with them.

Shortly thereafter, the city changed its name to Sparks, in honor of John Sparks, who served as Nevada governor from 1903 to 1908 and who owned a ranch near the city.

Unlike many cities of the day, Sparks was a planned community with wide streets, ample parks, and impressive buildings. As the railroad's power waned in the 1950s, these traits allowed Sparks to become a picturesque, residential community.

Ground was broken for the first hotel in Sparks in 1903. The building was named after its first owner, Charles Walstab, and was the only hotel in Sparks until 1911. In 1920, the hotel was purchased by Frank Gardella and Frank Pasutti who changed the hotel's name to the Lincoln. People came from far and wide for the Lincoln's home-style meals, including chicken and ravioli. Many old-time patrons remember when it served free lunches and beer cost only a nickel. The building still stands on Victorian Avenue, and today is home to several small businesses.

The Soroptimist Club International was founded in Sparks in 1958. The Sparks' Soroptimist club was formed to make a difference for women, focusing their extensive efforts on volunteer service in the community. They sponsored the Miss Nevada Pageant and Nevada Girl's State. Additionally, the Soroptimists awarded scholarships to young women graduating from Sparks High School, raised money for books at the Sparks Library, and donated to the Gray Ladies Indigent Fund for the State Hospital.

However, no history of Sparks would be complete without mentioning John Ascuaga, a developer and entrepreneur who built Sparks' first casino: the Nugget. In May of 1958, the Nugget's ambassador became a part of the town's fabric. The "Tall Cowboy" appropriately arrived on the railroad, in pieces. When assembled, Last Chance Joe, stood thirty-two feet tall at the entrance to the Nugget.

I would also like to recognize Tony Armstrong, the former mayor of Sparks who died in January of this year. Tony's personality, his vision for the city, his management skills, and his deep humanity made him a terrific mayor and an outstanding man. It was Tony who first contacted me about the Sparks' centennial. I miss Tony and it is fitting to recognize him on this day, which he would have enjoyed so much. I wish his successor, Gino Martini, all the best and look forward to working with him on projects important to Sparks.

Finally, it is remarkable that Sparks has retained its Victorian architecture and charm. The city beckons to us as a relic of a gentler and more beautiful time. It is truly one of the jewels of northern Nevada.

A century has passed since the City of Sparks was founded. I hope you will join me in celebrating this lovely Nevada community's centennial.

LOCAL LAW ENFORCEMENT ENHANCEMENT ACT OF 2005

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, I rise today to speak about the need for hate crimes legislation. Each Congress, Senator KENNEDY and I introduce hate crimes legislation that would add new categories to current hate crimes law, sending a signal that violence of any kind is unacceptable in our society. Likewise, each Congress I have come to the floor to highlight a separate hate crime that has occurred in our country.

According to the San Francisco Chronicle, a participant in a Davis, CA, gay-pride parade was assaulted last summer. The apparent motivation for the attack was the sexual orientation of the victim.

I believe that the Government's first duty is to defend its citizens, to defend them against the harms that come out of hate. The Local Law Enforcement Enhancement Act is a symbol that can become substance. I believe that by passing this legislation and changing current law, we can change hearts and minds as well.

NOPEC

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I, again, join in the introduction of our NOPEC bill. I am sincerely sorry that this bill has not yet become law, and I hope that the situation we face as a nation will lead the Senate to recognize the toll that the OPEC producers are exacting from the American people. As gasoline prices continue to skyrocket, exceeding $2 a gallon in many communities, we must have a real correction. As heating oil prices have soared, the President needs to take notice. Without correction and containment, consumers across the nation will continue to suffer.

The relentless increases in gasoline prices are not the result of natural supply issues. Rather, they are largely due to market manipulation by OPEC, a cartel of those controlling production and supply of oil from the Middle East. When the Antitrust Subcommittee of the Committee on the Judiciary held its hearing on gas prices last year, experts from several fields, both in and out of government, confirmed for us what we already suspected: The higher prices are due to the OPEC cartel that sets production quotas for its members and prevents the free market from setting crude oil prices. The testimony at that hearing revealed that most of the gasoline price increase can be explained by OPEC's unfair production quotas.

The artificial pricing scheme enforced by OPEC affects all of us, not the least of whom are hardworking Vermont farmers. As USDA's Cooperative Extension Office in New Hampshire recently found, the increasing energy costs may add $5,000 or more to the total costs of operating a 100-head dairy operation in the Northeast. In addition, soaring prices have affected a variety of industries across the United States, and will likely force many Americans to make tough choices about family travel.

Over the last year, I have expressed concern that gasoline prices would simply continue to rise. I have hardly been alone in that belief, and I am sorry to say that my prediction has borne fruit. Sadly, that fruit is bitter for those forced to pay ever higher prices to go about their daily lives. This week, the average price for regular gasoline reached $2.00 per gallon. Our economy, our farmers, and our families need relief now. They also need good policy. In the absence of White House leadership, Congress should provide law enforcement the tools needed to fight anti-competitive practices.

If OPEC were simply a foreign business engaged in this type of behavior, it would already be subject to American antitrust law. It is wrong to let OPEC producers off the hook just because their anticompetitive practices come with the seal of approval of the member nations. I urge the Senate to support this bill and to say "No" to OPEC.

SAVING THE IRRAWADDY DOLPHIN

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I rise today to discuss an issue which, while not one that you would likely read about on the front page of the newspapers, is important nonetheless. It concerns the alarming rate of deterioration of the habitat of the Irrawaddy Dolphin in Southeast Asia. Recent statistics indicate that there are fewer than 100 Irrawaddy left in the world.

The International Union for the Conservation of Nature has placed the Irrawaddy Dolphin on its list of critically endangered species. The primary reasons for this sharp decline include destructive fishing practices, such as the use of dynamite or electric current, and mercury runoff from gold mines. These practices are leading to the extinction of an entire species.

Why should we care? Perhaps a quote from President John Kennedy provides the best answers to this question. In a 1963 address at American University, President Kennedy said "... in the final analysis, our most basic common link, is that we all inhabit this small planet, we all breathe the same air, we all cherish our children's futures, and we are all mortal."

I know every Member of the Senate wants to make the world a better place for our children and grandchildren. I am almost as certain that ensuring the survival of the Irrawaddy dolphin, an extraordinary species, would be something that we could do to help achieve this goal.

Congress has spoken on this issue. In the Senate report that accompanied last year's Foreign Operations Appropriations Act, Congress directed the U.S. Agency for International Development, USAID, to devise a strategy to help reverse the habitat decline of the Irrawaddy dolphin.

Some important nongovernmental organizations are already working on this issue, including the Wildlife Conservation Society and the Bronx Zoo in their Species Survival Program partnership. I hope USAID's strategy, which is due shortly, will be a first step in forming a public-private partnership that will prevent the Irrawaddy dolphin from going the way of the dodo and the passenger pigeon.

Once a species is gone, it is gone forever. We need to be sure this does not happen.

MANHATTAN PROJECT NATIONAL HISTORICAL PARK STUDY ACT

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, I briefly would like to say how pleased I am that the Manhattan Project National Historical Park Study Act was enacted in the last Congress. That Act, Public Law 108-340, directs the Secretary of the Interior to conduct a special resource study to assess the national significance, suitability, and feasibility of designating one or more of the historically significant sites associated with the Manhattan Project as a unit of the National Park System. The significance of the Manhattan Project to this Nation—and indeed the world—would be difficult to overstate, and I believe that passing this bill was an important step in fulfilling our responsibility to ensure that society neither forgets nor misunderstands it.

Mr. DEWINE. Mr. President, I thank my distinguished colleague, Senator BINGAMAN, for sponsoring that measure, and I appreciated the support of Senator DOMENICI and our colleagues from Tennessee and Washington.

The Manhattan Project stands as one of the great technological achievements of the 20th century. Therefore, it is appropriate to recognize the historical importance of the sites most closely associated with the development of the atomic bomb. This legislation has begun a process for the Secretary of the Interior to provide that recognition.

I want to call attention to the critical contributions made in Dayton, OH, toward the Manhattan Project, under what became known as the "Dayton Project." Because the Dayton Project was shrouded in secrecy, its contribution has long been overlooked. Yet, the technological achievements of the Dayton Project were among the most important to the completion of the Manhattan Project. It was in Dayton that scientists discovered how to trigger the chain reaction that unleashed the power of the atom. To continue that effort, the Atomic Energy Commission established the Mound Laboratory in Miamisburg, just southeast of Dayton.

As my colleague explained, the act directs the Secretary of the Interior to study three specifically named sites associated with the history of the Manhattan Project. I would like to ask the distinguished Senator if there is the opportunity for sites associated with the Dayton Project to be recognized?

Mr. BINGAMAN. The legislation directs the Secretary to include within the study the "historically significant sites associated with the Manhattan Project." While the bill lists three of those sites, it does not limit the study to only those sites. Additional sites may be included, and it leaves that decision to the discretion of the Secretary, in consultation with the Secretary of Energy and other interested Federal, State, tribal, and local officials, representatives of organizations, and members of the public. So, by those terms, there certainly is the opportunity for sites such as the Dayton Project to be included in the study.

Mr. DEWINE. I thank the Senator from New Mexico.

INTERNATIONAL WOMEN'S DAY

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I am pleased to commemorate International Women's Day, celebrated on March 8. International Women's Day gives us all an opportunity to reflect on women's accomplishments around the world and to reaffirm our commitment to continuing the vitally important work of securing and advancing women's rights, particularly their health, education, and security.

Today, we can all marvel at the outstanding contributions that women make every day to their communities, their countries, and the entire world. We can reflect on the work of Wangari Maathai, the Kenyan Nobel Peace Prize winner, whose brave and insistent voice on behalf of human rights and environmental protection found an audience not just on the global stage, and not just among elites in government, but among the women of her country, who have made the Green Belt Movement a success. We can celebrate the bravery of Afghan women, who have participated in elections even as the memory of the Taliban's brutal repression of their rights remains so fresh. Women accounted for 41 percent of the October 2004 vote in Afghanistan, and women hold 102 seats of Afghanistan's Constitutional Loya Jirga. We can reflect on the wonderful welcome that Dora Bakoyiannis, the mayor of Athens, extended to the world during this year's Olympic ceremonies.

But in too many parts of the world, the basic human rights of women are violated with impunity. Human rights groups continue to report rampant violence, abuse, and rape of tens of thousands of women and children by militants in Eastern Congo who are rarely, if ever, brought to justice. The murders of more than 370 women in the Chihuahua state of Mexico since 1993 remain unsolved. Thirty more women have been killed there since 2004 and the lack of progress in these cases of brutal violence and sexual assault against women from the cities of Juárez and Chihuahua is deeply disturbing. The internally displaced women of Darfur, Sudan, too often are confronted with a horrible choice—collect firewood and risk being raped by jinjaweit militia, or watch their children go hungry. I have authored or co-sponsored legislative initiatives to address each of these crises, but I know that solutions will require hard work over the long term. I also support the U.S. ratification of the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination Against Women, CEDAW. Ratification of the treaty would send an important message to the international community about our commitment to the rights of women and girls.

The global, rapid progression of HIV/AIDS infection, especially in women, is undeniable. More than 40 million adults and children are infected with HIV/AIDS and over 20 million are women. UNAIDS reports that women and girls in sub-Saharan Africa make up 57 percent of HIV-positive persons in this region. Sub-Saharan Africa is the only region in which women are infected with the virus at a higher rate than men. In sub-Saharan Africa, between the ages of 15 to 24, there are on average 36 women testing positive for HIV for every 10 males. As the ranking member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee's Subcommittee on African Affairs, I have had the opportunity to travel to numerous countries in Africa and see firsthand the devastating toll that HIV/AIDS and other infectious diseases are taking on the people of this continent. We must find concrete ways to address the special vulnerabilities of women and girls in our HIV/AIDS prevention and treatment programs.

Nearly 100 million children worldwide are not receiving an education, nearly two-thirds of them female. In countries such as Uganda and Nigeria, some teachers are expected to instruct anywhere from 175 to 215 students, single-handedly. The education of girls regularly takes a back seat to that of their male siblings and to the needs of the family in many parts of the world. In order to combat global diseases, halt violence against women, and enhance women's rights, ensuring girls are educated must be a global community priority.

In short, while there are shining examples of progress in women's rights, we have much more to do. I urge my colleagues to join me in supporting the efforts I have described and others to improve the lives of women.

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

REMEMBERING MAX FISHER

• Mr. SANTORUM. Mr. President, today I would like to reflect on the passing of Max Fisher. On March 3, 2005, Max Fisher passed away at his home in Franklin, MI. The Fisher family has suffered a tremendous loss, and I offer them my condolences and deepest sympathy during this difficult time.

Max Fisher was born in my hometown of Pittsburgh, PA. He was a quiet leader who led mostly by example. He inspired his neighbors through his love for and dedication to this country. As the head of several Jewish-American organizations including the United Jewish Appeal, the Council of Jewish Federations, the National Jewish Coalition, and the American Jewish Committee, Max Fisher was able to influence policy with regard to Israeli-American relations and lead an international campaign for Israel after the Arab-Israeli War in 1967.

Max Fisher was a respected friend and adviser to many Republican Presidents and Secretaries, as they sought Max's wisdom in Middle East affairs.

Max not only leaves behind a legacy in the Jewish community and the world of politics, but also a wonderful family. My thoughts and prayers are with the Fisher family during the days and months ahead. •

TRIBUTE TO SAMUEL T. DANIELS

• Mr. SARBANES. Mr. President, With the death on January 6th, 2005, at the age of 82 of Samuel Thornton Daniels, Sr., my city of Baltimore and the State of Maryland lost a distinguished citizen, a courageous and far-sighted leader, a source of inspiration and, especially, a beloved friend.

Sam Daniels, the Grand Master, was known to his fellow members of the Prince Hall Masons simply as "The Grand," and grand he was. A Baltimorean through and through, he was born in the city and educated at Douglass High School and Coppin State College. He married his beloved wife Gladys, a fellow student at Coppin, and together for more than 60 years they went on to raise a new generation of Baltimoreans. Sam made our community a better place for all its people.

Service to others came naturally to Sam Daniels. He interrupted his college studies to serve in the Army in World War II, returning to Coppin State to receive his degree in 1948. When the Korean War conflict broke out 2 years later, Sam returned to military service, and reached the rank of captain before receiving his honorable discharge. Soon thereafter he joined Gladys as a teacher in the Baltimore public school system.

In the mid-1950s, Sam Daniels set out on the path that was to shape his life's work. It was not just that he joined the civil rights movement; rather, in innumerable ways he shaped it and he led it. His professional commitments tell part of the story: Maryland Commission on Interracial Problems and Relations; Baltimore Community Relations Commission; Baltimore Equal Employment Opportunity Commission; and then, starting in 1967 and continuing for more than two decades, the Baltimore Council for Equal Business Opportunity, or CEBO. During the 1960s, in addition to his other commitments, Sam also worked for the AFSCME local unions representing Baltimore's municipal workers. In 1968 he was named to the city's school board by then-Mayor D'Alessandro, where his intelligence, his principles, his clear vision, and his wise and generous temperament all combined to make him, as the mayor was to observe, "a calming influence on the board during an unsettling time." Sam balanced his professional commitments with his role in The Prince Hall Masons, whose Grand Master he was to become and who knew and loved him as "The Grand." Under his leadership The Prince Hall Masons grew to have 5,000 members and to play a major role in the historic movement toward civil rights. When Dr. King came to Baltimore in October 1964, Sam Daniels stood among the leaders who welcomed him to the Prince Hall Masons Lodge. In everything he did he challenged us to make our Nation live up to its ideals.

Of all his many accomplishments, Sam Daniels considered CEBO the most important. It began modestly enough with a grant from the Ford Foundation, but over more than two decades under Sam Daniels' leadership CEBO became one of the first business development organizations in the country, helping to create opportunities for entrepreneurship and business where precious few existed for Baltimore's African-American community and along with those opportunities, new hopes, new plans, and new dreams. Sam Daniels has been described as a "giant" and an "icon," and surely these words reflect the critical role he played in expanding the opportunities for African American entrepreneurship and wealth-building, which has meant so much to the city that he served in so many different ways.

Sam Daniels was a giant and an icon in other ways as well in character and temperament. Mayor D'Alessandro, who nearly 40 years ago appointed him to the school board, remembers him as "an absolutely decent human being," and his pastor, the Reverend Marion C. Bascom, calls him "the most giving human being this city has ever known." In the words of George L. Russell, the former city solicitor and judge, "he was a temperate person who conveyed a great deal of wisdom." He was a great man and a great citizen, and he has left us all a magnificent legacy. We will miss him, and our thoughts are with his wife Gladys, his children, and his grandchildren.

The Baltimore Sun paid tribute to Sam Daniels in an obituary published on January 8, 2005. I ask that it be printed in the RECORD.

The material follows.

[From the Baltimore Sun, Jan. 8, 2005]
 SAMUEL T. DANIELS, 82, LEADER IN LOCAL CIVIL RIGHTS STRUGGLE
 (By Jacques Kelly)

Samuel T. Daniels, a local leader in the civil rights movement who championed African-American business enterprise and led the Prince Hall Masons for nearly four decades, died Thursday at Levindale Hebrew Geriatric Center of complications from a fall and a brain illness. The Northwest Baltimore resident was 82.

Mr. Daniels had retired in 1989 after more than 20 years as executive director of the Baltimore Council for Equal Business Opportunity, a private organization that encouraged black participation in business. He was also a past grand master of the 5,000-member Prince Hall Lodge, an African-American Masonic organization.

"He was an absolutely decent human being and an integral part of the Baltimore civil rights movement in the 1960s," said former Mayor Thomas J. D'Alesandro III, who named Mr. Daniels to the city school board in December 1968. "He was tough, decent, orderly and competent. He was an articulate spokesman for the black community."

"He was the most giving human being this city has ever known," said the Rev. Marion C. Bascom, Mr. Daniels' pastor and friend. "Samuel outstretched his hand to just about everyone I've ever known."

Born in Baltimore and raised on Druid Hill Avenue, he was a 1940 graduate of Frederick Douglass High School and earned a bachelor's degree in education from what is now Coppin State University. He served in the Army in World War II and the Korean War, attaining the rank of captain.

For eight years, he taught in city public schools, including the old Henry H. Garnet School at Division and Lanvale streets.

In 1958, he was named executive secretary of the Baltimore Community Relations Commission and simultaneously worked for Baltimore Municipal Employees Local 44 of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees. In 1961, he attended the Harvard Business School's trade union program.

Mr. Daniels was a school board member from 1969 to 1971. "He was a calming influence on the board during an unsettling time," said Mr. D'Alessandro.

Mr. Daniels became head of the Prince Hall Masons in the early 1960s and was among the leaders who welcomed the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. to Baltimore on Oct. 31, 1964. Dr. King's visit, including an appearance at the lodge's temple on Eutaw Place, was on behalf of President Lyndon B. Johnson's election campaign.

In a 1999 article in The Sun, Mr. Daniels recalled that day and how Baltimore was becoming aggressive in its pursuit of civil rights. The rally filled the temple.

"They became friends after that visit," said Mr. Daniels' wife of more than 60 years, the former Gladys Eva Wise.

Friends said that Mr. Daniels paid travel expenses so that young civil rights advocates could attend the 1965 marches in Selma, Ala.

"He had been central to the advancement of black people in Baltimore," said George L. Russell Jr., a lawyer and former city solicitor and judge. "He was a man who carried a great deal of dignity. He was a temperate person who conveyed a great deal of wisdom."

In 1967, Mr. Daniels became director of CEBO, an organization initially supported by the Ford Foundation. A decade later, Mr. Daniels told The Sun that his most important accomplishment had been helping African-American business owners establish relationships with large commercial banks.

He also pointed to many black-owned businesses, including the Super Pride grocery chain, as proof that his council was working.

In 1982, Mr. Daniels called for voter mobilization in black communities.

"Legislation, more than anything else, influences our lives daily, monthly, weekly and eternally," he said at a meeting reported in The Evening Sun. "If we are not a voting people, those in office are not going to care about us."

Mr. Daniels was the recipient of many community honors and testimonials. A room has been named after him at Coppin, and Morgan State University awarded him an honorary degree in 2000.

Mr. Daniels was a longtime member of Douglas Memorial Church.

HONORING CLIFF MANLEY

• Mr. JOHNSON. Mr. President, the Vermillion High School class of 1965, of which I am a member, will be celebrating its 40th reunion this summer in Vermillion, SD and will be paying tribute to former VHS Principal Cliff Manley with the unveiling of a handsome plaque in his honor.

Ms. Michelle Rydell, the editor of the Vermillion High School newspaper, "The Vermillionaire," recently wrote an excellent column in that newspaper about the class of 1965 and the extraordinary career of Cliff Manley. I ask that this article be printed in the RECORD.

The article follows:

[From the Vermillionaire]
CLASS OF 1965 PAYS TRIBUTE
(By Michelle Rydell)

"When we were young and green, you tried to bend us in the right direction. Now that we are old and bent, we look at the path you lit and say, 'Thank you, Mr. Manley, for helping us set our course. You made a difference.'"

It is with fond remembrance that the class of 1965 dedicates these words to former Vermillion High School principal, Clifford Manley. Manley was not simply an authoritative figure—he was a friend to all students. VHS alumni remember him as someone with a firm hand yet a soft heart. According to former students, he had a sense of humor that shone through even when he had to be firm with one of his students. He was very personable with both his peers and those under him. According to one class member, "Mr. Manley loved all of his students. Of course, there was still a degree of fear when we had to go to the principal's office. But he loved kids—he was a great man."

They also remember him as someone who was always present for extra-curricular activities and who loved watching sports. A former coach himself, Manley made it an objective to support not only the school but his students as well. It is perhaps for his dedication that he is most well-known. As principal, Manley did everything from teaching to coaching, and most importantly, serving as a mentor and role model for his students.

Manley's service and dedication is the reason the class of 1965 (which, incidentally, was the last class to graduate from the old Vermillion High School) has dedicated a plaque in remembrance of its gracious spirit. The plaque, featuring a picture of Manley set against a picture of the old high school and decorated with red birds to signify the class' ever-present Tanager pride, will be hung in the high school in the coming month.

The plaque had recently been hanging in the Sioux Valley Dakota Gardens, where Manley's wife Helen now lives. The plaque was displayed at the Dakota Gardens in order that Helen's children and friends might get the opportunity to see it during Christmas, but now that the holidays are over Helen is giving the plaque to the high school to display. The plaque will stay in the school as a lasting tribute to the man who not only taught his students as a biology teacher and principal, but a man who inspired them on a personal level as well.

VHS students will be some of the first people to see the plaque. The plaque is designated to be revealed at the class of 1965's 40th reunion, which will be occurring this coming summer. The reunion, therefore, will be not only be a time of fellowship for former students to rediscover their classmates, but it will also be a time for students to remember the principal who had such an impact on so many students' lives and take a moment to reflect on their appreciation for his service.

It is hard to find those special people in life who make such an impression that after forty years they are still considered memorable and special. Yet many agree that Manley was such a person. His dedication to Vermillion High School has been remembered and appreciated throughout the decades, and despite the fact that he has since passed away, he is not forgotten. His works live on through the school and through the lives of the many he has touched. It's not always easy to be a disciplinarian and friend, yet Manley managed to do both. As a result, he is remembered not only as a loving husband, father and grandfather, but also as a beloved principal, mentor and friend.●

PROFESSOR RON SHAFFER

● Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, it is with great sadness that I note the recent passing of Professor Ron Shaffer, a man who dedicated his career to helping communities discuss and plan their economic development.

Ron joined the faculty of the University of Wisconsin-Madison in 1972, the same year he received a doctorate in agricultural economics, and he soon became a pillar of that great institution. For three decades, until his retirement from UW in 2001, Ron was one of the State's—if not the country's—leading experts on community economics and he wrote extensively on the subject. But, throughout his many years in academia, Ron always remained focused on the real world applications of his teaching. Economic development was not an abstract concept for him—it was a way to help people live better, happier, more productive lives. Particularly in the decade he spent as director of the University of Wisconsin Center for Community Economic Development, Ron devoted himself to bolstering the many and varied rural communities that are the backbone of Wisconsin.

Ron won many honors and accolades throughout his career. His work attracted international attention, and he was called upon by governments from Australia to Norway to advise on local economic development policies. In a particularly fitting move, the year he retired from UW, the National Rural Development Partnership established the Ron Shaffer Award, to be given annually for outstanding collaboration in rural America.

But I suspect that none of the honors he won mattered as much to Ron as the love and companionship of his family and friends. They loved his decency, his compassion, and his willingness to lead a patient ear. They admired him for the courage with which he handled his diagnosis of ALS, or Lou Gehrig's Disease. It was typical of Ron that he used his illness as an opportunity to advocate for others afflicted with this terrible disease—after all, he spent his life helping others. He will be sorely missed as a husband, a father, a friend, and a deeply good and giving man.●

By Mr. THOMAS (for himself and Mr. KYL):

By Mr. THOMAS (for himself and Mr. KYL):

S. 547. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to provide for employer retirement savings accounts, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President, today I rise to introduce the Savings Account Vehicle Enhancement, or "SAVE," initiative, comprised of three separate bills to create, respectively, Lifetime Savings Accounts, Retirement Savings Accounts, and Employer Retirement Savings Accounts.

Much attention has been focused lately on the retirement security of Americans, but the focus thus far has centered primarily on Social Security. It is imperative that we remember that Social Security was never intended as a primary income source for retirees, but rather as a safety net and a supplement to private savings. The bills I introduce today focus on private savings, for both pre-retirement expenses and retirement security.

My reasons for introducing these bills are threefold. First of all, it is important that we address the appallingly-low personal savings rate in this country. Personal savings rates in the United States since 1960 have reached a new low at less than 2 percent. These bills will encourage additional savings and reduce the temptation for individuals to tap into retirement savings for other, pre-retirement purposes.

Secondly, our tax code is entirely too complex and contributes to lack of participation in the tax-preferred vehicles that already exist. These bills, by allowing individuals to accumulate tax-free interest and by streamlining current savings vehicles, represent an important step toward fundamental tax reform.

Finally, as the Social Security system strains under increasing pressure, it is even more important that we provide a better, more responsive, simpler system for Americans to accumulate personal savings for retirement.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bills be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bills were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

SECTION 1. EMPLOYER RETIREMENT SAVINGS ACCOUNTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subpart A of part 1 of subchapter D of chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 is amended by inserting after section 401 the following new section:

"SEC. 401A. EMPLOYER RETIREMENT SAVINGS ACCOUNTS.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—A defined contribution plan shall not fail to meet the requirements of section 401(a) merely because the plan includes an employer retirement savings account arrangement.

"(b) EMPLOYER RETIREMENT SAVINGS ACCOUNT ARRANGEMENT.—An employer retirement savings account arrangement is any arrangement which is part of a plan which meets the requirements of section 401(a)—

"(1) under which a covered employee may elect to have the employer make payments as contributions to a trust under the plan on behalf of the employee, or to the employee directly in cash,

"(2) under which amounts held by the trust which are attributable to employer contributions made pursuant to the employee's election—

"(A) may not be distributable to participants or other beneficiaries earlier than—

"(i) severance from employment, death, or disability,

"(ii) an event described in subsection (g),

"(iii) the attainment of age 59½, or

"(iv) upon hardship of the employee, and

"(B) will not be distributable merely by reason of the completion of a stated period of participation or the lapse of a fixed number of years,

"(3) which provides that an employee's right to the employee's accrued benefit derived from employer contributions made to the trust pursuant to the employee's election is nonforfeitable, and

"(4) which does not require, as a condition of participation in the arrangement, that an employee complete a period of service with the employer (or employers) maintaining the plan extending beyond the period permitted under section 410(a)(1) (determined without regard to subparagraph (B)(i) thereof).

"(c) APPLICATION OF NONDISCRIMINATION STANDARDS.—

"(1) CONTRIBUTION PERCENTAGE REQUIREMENT.—An arrangement shall not be treated as an employer retirement savings account arrangement for any plan year unless—

"(A) the contribution percentage for eligible highly compensated employees for the plan year does not exceed 200 percent of such percentage for all other eligible employees for the preceding plan year, or

"(B) the contribution percentage of nonhighly compensated employees for the preceding plan year exceeded 6 percent.

"(2) ALTERNATIVE METHODS OF MEETING NONDISCRIMINATION REQUIREMENTS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—An arrangement shall be treated as meeting the requirements of paragraph (1)(A) if such arrangement—

"(i) meets the contribution requirements of subparagraph (B), and

"(ii) meets the notice requirements of subparagraph (D).

"(B) CONTRIBUTION REQUIREMENT.—The requirements of this subparagraph are met if, under the arrangement, the employer is required to make contributions to a defined contribution plan on behalf of each eligible employee who is not a highly compensated employee in an amount equal to at least 3 percent of the employee's compensation. For purposes of this subparagraph, elective deferrals and employee contributions shall not be taken into account in determining the amount of contributions the employer makes to the plan.

"(C) SPECIAL RULES FOR MATCHING CONTRIBUTIONS.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—If an employer takes matching contributions into account for purposes of subparagraph (B), the requirements of such subparagraph shall be treated as met only if the matching contributions on behalf of each employee who is not a highly compensated employee are equal to 50 percent of the elective deferrals of the employee to the extent that such elective deferrals do not exceed 6 percent of the employee's compensation.

"(ii) ALTERNATIVE PLAN DESIGNS.—If the rate of any matching contribution with respect to any rate of elective deferral is not equal to the percentage required under clause (i), an arrangement shall not be treated as failing to meet the requirements of clause (i) if—

"(I) the rate of an employer's matching contribution does not increase as an employee's rate of elective contributions increases, and

"(II) the aggregate amount of matching contributions at such rate of elective contribution is at least equal to the aggregate amount of matching contributions which would be made if matching contributions were made on the basis of the percentages described in clause (i).

"(iii) RATE FOR HIGHLY COMPENSATED EMPLOYEES.—The requirements of this subparagraph are not met if, under the arrangement, the rate of matching contribution with respect to any elective deferral of a highly compensated employee at any rate of elective deferral is greater than that with respect to an employee who is not a highly compensated employee.

"(D) NOTICE REQUIREMENT.—An arrangement meets the requirements of this subparagraph if, under the arrangement, each employee eligible to participate is, within a reasonable period before any year, given written notice of the employee's rights and obligations under the arrangement which—

"(i) is sufficiently accurate and comprehensive to apprise the employee of such rights and obligations, and

"(ii) is written in a manner calculated to be understood by the average employee eligible to participate.

"(E) OTHER REQUIREMENTS.—

"(i) WITHDRAWAL AND VESTING RESTRICTIONS.—An arrangement shall not be treated as meeting the requirements of subparagraph (B) unless the requirements of paragraphs (2) and (3) of subsection (b) are met with respect to all employer contributions (including matching contributions) taken into account in determining whether the requirements of subparagraph (B) are met.

"(ii) SOCIAL SECURITY AND SIMILAR CONTRIBUTIONS NOT TAKEN INTO ACCOUNT.—An arrangement shall not be treated as meeting the requirements of subparagraph (B) unless such requirements are met without regard to section 401(l), and, for purposes of section 401(l), employer contributions under subparagraph (B) shall not be taken into account.

"(F) OTHER PLANS.—An arrangement shall be treated as meeting the requirements of subparagraph (B) if any other plan maintained by the employer meets such requirements with respect to employees eligible under the arrangement.

"(3) CONTRIBUTION PERCENTAGE.—For purposes of paragraph (1), the contribution percentage for an eligible employee for a specified group of employees for a plan year shall be the average of the ratios (calculated separately for each employee in such group) of—

"(A) the sum of the elective deferrals, matching contributions, employee contributions, and qualified nonelective contributions paid under the plan on behalf of each such employee for such plan year, to

"(B) the employee's compensation for such plan year.

"(4) SPECIAL RULES.—For purposes of this subsection—

"(A) MULTIPLE ARRANGEMENTS.—If 2 or more plans which include employer retirement savings account arrangements are considered as 1 plan for purposes of section 401(a)(4) or 410(b), all such arrangements included in such plans shall be treated as 1 arrangement.

"(B) EMPLOYEES IN MORE THAN 1 ARRANGEMENT.—If any highly compensated employee is a participant under 2 or more employer retirement savings account arrangements of the employer, for purposes of determining the contribution percentage with respect to such employee, all such arrangements shall be treated as 1 arrangement.

"(C) USE OF CURRENT YEAR.—An employer may elect to apply paragraph (1) (A) or (B) by using the plan year rather than the preceding plan year. An employer may change such an election only with the consent of the Secretary.

"(D) 1ST PLAN YEAR.—In the case of the first plan year of any plan (other than a successor plan), the amount taken into account as the contribution percentage of nonhighly compensated employees for the preceding plan year shall be—“(ii) if the employer makes an election under this clause, the contribution percentage of nonhighly compensated employees determined for such first plan year.

“(i) 3 percent, or

“(E) SPECIAL RULE FOR EARLY PARTICIPATION.—If an employer elects to apply section 410(b)(4)(B) in determining whether an employer retirement savings account arrangement meets the requirements of section 410(b)(1), the employer may, in determining whether the arrangement meets the requirements of this subsection, exclude from consideration all eligible employees (other than highly compensated employees) who have not met the minimum age and service requirements of section 410(a)(1)(A).

“(5) EXCEPTIONS.—

“(A) GOVERNMENTAL PLANS.—A governmental plan (within the meaning of section 414(d)) maintained by a State or local government or political subdivision thereof (or agency or instrumentality thereof) shall be treated as meeting the requirements of this subsection.

“(i) IN GENERAL.—A plan not described in subparagraph (A) which is maintained by an organization described in section 501(c)(3) shall be treated as meeting the requirements of this subsection for any plan year if the plan provides that all employees of such organization may elect to have the employer make contributions of more than $200 pursuant to a salary reduction agreement if any employee of the organization may elect to have the organization make contributions pursuant to such agreement.

“(ii) EXCEPTION.—Clause (i) shall not apply to any plan if under the plan—

“(I) matching contributions may be made on behalf of any employee, or “(II) an employee may make contributions other than elective deferrals.

“(iii) EXCLUSION.—For purposes of clause (i), there may be excluded any employee who is—

“(I) a participant in another employer retirement savings account arrangement of the organization, “(II) a nonresident alien described in section 410(b)(3)(C), or “(III) subject to the conditions applicable under section 410(b)(4), a student performing services described in section 3121(b)(10) or an employee who normally works less than 20 hours per week.

“(6) COORDINATION WITH SUBSECTION (a)(4).—A cash or deferred arrangement shall be treated as meeting the requirements of subsection (a)(4) with respect to contributions if the requirements of paragraph (1) are met.

“(d) OTHER REQUIREMENTS.—For purposes of this section—

“(1) BENEFITS (OTHER THAN MATCHING CONTRIBUTIONS) MUST NOT BE CONTINGENT ON ELECTION TO DEFER.—An employer retirement savings account arrangement of any employer shall not be treated as such an arrangement if any other benefit is conditioned (directly or indirectly) on the employee electing to have the employer make or not make contributions under the arrangement in lieu of receiving cash. The preceding sentence shall not apply to any matching contribution made by reason of such an election.

“(2) COORDINATION WITH OTHER PLANS.—Any employer contribution made pursuant to an employee's election under an employer retirement savings account arrangement shall not be taken into account for purposes of determining whether any other plan meets the requirements of section 401(a) or 410(b). “(6) COMPENSATION.—The term ‘compensation’ has the meaning given such term by section 414(s).

“(f) ARRANGEMENT NOT DISQUALIFIED IF EXCESS CONTRIBUTIONS DISTRIBUTED.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—An employer retirement savings account arrangement shall not be treated as failing to meet the requirements of subsection (c)(1)(A) for any plan year if, before the close of the following plan year—

“(A) the amount of the excess contributions for such plan year (and any income allocable to such contributions) is distributed, or

“(B) to the extent provided in regulations, the employee elects to treat the amount of the excess contributions as an amount distributed to the employee and then contributed by the employee to the plan.

Any distribution of excess contributions (and income) may be made without regard to any other provision of law.

“(2) EXCESS CONTRIBUTIONS.—For purposes of paragraph (1), the term ‘excess contributions’ means, with respect to any plan year, the excess of—

“(6) CROSS REFERENCE.—For excise tax on certain excess contributions, see section 4979.

“(g) DISTRIBUTIONS UPON TERMINATION OF PLAN.—

S. 550. A bill to amend the Public Health Service Act with respect to facilitating the development of microbicides for preventing transmission of HIV and other diseases, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions.

Mr. CORZINE. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce legislation, the Microbicides Development Act of 2005. I am very pleased to be introducing this bipartisan bill along with my colleagues, Senators SNOWE, OBAMA, BINGAMAN, CANTWELL, CLINTON, DODD, DURBIN, FEINSTEIN, KENNEDY, LAUTENBERG, LEAHY, MIKULSKI, MURRAY, SCHUMER, and SMITH. I thank my colleagues for their support of this important legislation, which we believe is vital to the pursuit of combating the global HIV/AIDS crisis.

Today we are celebrating International Women’s Day. Not only should we celebrate the achievements of women nationally and globally today, but we should also promise to redouble our efforts to improve the lives of women around the globe. I can’t think of an issue more deserving of our attention in the United States Senate than that of the toll that HIV/AIDS is having on women and their children around the world.

Today, nearly half of the 37 million adults now living with HIV worldwide are women. The U.N.’s new Epidemic Update released in late 2004 shows that women and girls are increasingly affected by the disease in each region of the world and the epidemic continues to worsen. Women are the new face of AIDS. Approximately 7,000 women are infected with HIV everyday. The biggest rise in HIV/AIDS among women is occurring in East Asia, which has seen a 56 percent infection rate increase, followed by the region of Eastern Europe and Central Asia.

Notably, these are areas of the world that are not currently included in the President’s AIDS initiative (PEPFAR). I would like to note that later this week I will be introducing legislation to make India eligible for PEPFAR assistance. It is estimated that by 2010, India could have 20 million HIV infected individuals up from five million currently and women are at the center of the rapid growth of the disease.

I would like to quote from a recent news article in USA Today, which discusses the HIV/AIDS vulnerabilities that women confront.

“In this male-dominated society, ironclad traditions surrounding marriage leave women little say over their sexual or reproductive lives. So many married men bring HIV home to their wives that married women are one of India’s highest-risk groups. Nearly half of all new HIV infections occur in women, and studies indicate that 90 percent of women with HIV were virgins when they married and remained faithful to their husbands.”

This statement describes the plight of women in so many societies and countries where women simply do not have the economic or political power to insist that their husbands use condoms or abstain from having sex outside of marriage. The typical woman who gets infected with HIV has only one partner—her husband. This trend devastates families and puts children at risk.

This astounding reality bears restating: The single greatest risk factor for a woman in the developing world of contracting the HIV virus is being married.

Women need HIV-prevention tools that they can control to safeguard their health and that of their families and communities. Unfortunately, there exists absolutely no HIV or STD prevention method that is within a woman's personal control. Condom use must be negotiated with a partner. We are all aware that for too many women, particularly low-income women in the developing world and many in our own country who rely upon a male partner for economic support, there is no power of negotiation. We know these women are at risk—yet, we expect them to protect themselves without any tools.

Today we have the opportunity to invest in groundbreaking research that can produce these tools, and ultimately, empower women. Microbicides are self-administered products that women could use to prevent transmission of STDs, including HIV/AIDS. I say “could”, because due to insufficient research investments, no microbicides have been brought to market. This legislation would expand Federal investments for microbicide research at the National Institutes for Health (NIH), the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), and the United States Agency for International Development (USAID).

In addition to encouraging new investments in microbicide research, the Microbicides Development Act will expedite the implementation of the NIH's five-year strategic plan for microbicide research, as well as expand coordination among federal agencies already involved in this research, including NIH, CDC, and the United States Agency on International Development (USAID).

Perhaps most importantly, the legislation calls for the establishment of a Microbicide Research and Development Branch within the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases.

The National Institutes of Health, principally through the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases (NIAID), spends the majority of Federal dollars in this area. However, microbicide research at NIH is currently conducted with no single line of administrative accountability or specific funding coordination. In addition, other Federal agencies such as CDC and USAID undertake microbicides research and development activities. Because there is no Federal coordination, however, there is the risk that inefficiencies and duplication of effort could result. Through a variety of committees Congress has requested that NIH and its Office of AIDS Research provide Congress with a “Federal coordination plan” for research and development in this area, but formal submission of this plan has been repeatedly delayed.

A unit dedicated to microbicide research and development at the NIH is essential to providing the appropriate staff and funding for the coordination of these activities at the NIH and across agencies.

Microbicides may not be a magic bullet, but they are essential to addressing the HIV/AIDS crisis. With leading scientists concluding that a vaccine is likely to be at least 10 years away, we need to make a strong commitment to developing complementary prevention tools such as microbicides.

Microbicides are a public health good for which the social benefits are high but economic incentives to private investment are low. Despite the potential market size, neither pharmaceutical nor major biotech companies have made large investments in the field because development is costly and the likelihood of finding an effective product is unknown. Like other public health goods, such as vaccines, public funding must fill the gap left by market failure.

The cost of developing the existing pipeline of microbicide candidate products has been estimated at $775 million over five years. This investment should generate a number of safe, effective microbicides by 2010. Currently, however, U.S. Federal funding for microbicides is only about $88.8 million annually and is spread across all areas of microbicide research, not just product development.

As for any pharmaceutical or health care product, the key to developing safe, effective, affordable and accessible microbicides is sufficient investment. If we are to realize the promise of microbicides and the lifesaving properties they may provide, then additional public funding must be made available for research and development. The Microbicide Development Act of 2005 will help us achieve this goal.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of my legislation be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 550

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the “Microbicide Development Act”.

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

Congress makes the following findings:

(1) Women and girls are the new face of HIV/AIDS, and are increasingly affected by the disease in each region of the world. Women account for nearly ½ of the 37,000,000 adults living with HIV and AIDS worldwide as of 2005. Approximately 7,000 women are newly infected with HIV each day.

(2) Because of their social and biological vulnerabilities, young women are particularly at risk. In Sub-Saharan Africa, 76 percent of the young people (between ages 15 and 24) with HIV are girls under 20.

(3) When women become infected with HIV, they can pass along the infection to their children during pregnancy, labor and delivery, or breast-feeding. The most effective way to halt mother-to-child transmission is to ensure that mothers are not infected in the first place.

(4) An increasing number of women who become infected with HIV have only 1 sexual partner, their husband. Unfortunately, marriage is not necessarily effective protection against HIV, because to protect themselves from HIV, women have to rely on their male partners to be faithful or to use condoms. Many women in the developing world are unable to insist on mutual monogamy or negotiate condom use, especially in long-term relationships.

(5) Scientists are working on a promising new prevention tool that could slow down the spread of the HIV/AIDS epidemic, microbicides. Formulated as gels, creams, or rings, microbicides inactivate, block, or otherwise interfere with the transmission of the pathogens that cause AIDS and other sexually transmitted diseases (“STD”s). Microbicides could allow a woman to protect herself from disease.

(6) Married couples need a method of HIV protection that will allow them to conceive a child and start a family. No existing HIV prevention method also allows conception. Microbicides are being developed to allow women to both conceive children and protect themselves from HIV.

(7) Households in developing countries often dissolve when a mother dies. In the hardest hit countries, the number of children who are orphaned by AIDS is increasing dramatically.

(8) Women in the United States also need HIV prevention tools like microbicides. AIDS is now the number 1 cause of death among African-American women between the ages of 25 and 34.

(9) In addition to HIV, other STDs continue to be a major health threat in the United States. The United States has the highest rates of sexually transmitted diseases of any industrialized nation. Nineteen million STD infections occur every year. It is estimated that by age 25, ½ of all sexually active people in the United States can expect to be infected with an STD.

(10) HIV and AIDS represent a threat to national security and economic well being, with direct medical costs of up to $15,500,000,000 per year. The pandemic undermines armies, foments unrest, and burdens the United States military.

(11) As the Nation's largest single provider of HIV/AIDS care, the Veterans Affairs health care system spent $359,000,000 to provide care to more than 20,000 American veterans with HIV/AIDS in fiscal year 2004.

(12) The microbicide field has achieved an extraordinary amount of scientific momentum, with several first-generation candidates now in large scale human trials around the world. At same time, new products, based upon recent advances in HIV treatment, have advanced into early safety trials.

(13) Microbicides are a classic public health good for which the social benefits are high but the economic incentive to private investment is low. Like other public health goods, such as vaccines, public funding must fill the gap. Microbicide research depends in large part on Government leadership and investment.

(14) The Federal Government needs to make a strong commitment to microbicide research and development. Three agencies—the National Institutes of Health (“NIH”), the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (“CDC”), and the United States Agency of International Development (“USAID”)—have played important roles in the progress to date, but further strong, well-coordinated, and visible public sector leadership will be essential for the promise of microbicides to be realized.

(15) As of 2005, microbicide research at NIH is conducted under several institutes with no single line of administrative accountability, no specific funding coordination, and highly variable levels of interest and commitment across institute leadership. Only a few NIH staff can claim microbicides as their sole focus.

(16) The President's Emergency Plan for AIDS Relief ("PEPFAR") recognizes the urgency of developing safe and effective microbicides to prevent HIV. In addition, NIH documents state that "the US government is firmly committed to accelerating the development of safe and effective microbicides to prevent HIV," recognizing that microbicides may provide "one of the most promising preventative interventions given that could be inexpensive, readily available, and widely acceptable". But as of 2005, NIH spends barely 2 percent of its HIV/AIDS research budget on microbicides. As more microbicide candidates are advanced into later-stage clinical trials and development costs rise correspondingly, 2005 funding levels are simply inadequate.

(17) USAID and the CDC have expanded their microbicide portfolios, but without overall Federal coordination, costly inefficiencies and unproductive duplication of effort may result. USAID sustains strong partnerships with public and private organizations working on microbicide research, importantly including clinical trials in developing countries where its experience is extensive. USAID is well positioned to facilitate the introduction of microbicides once they are available. The CDC also engages in critical microbicide research and clinical testing, and has a long history of conducting field trials in developing countries.

(18) HIV prevention options available as of 2005 are not enough. HIV prevention strategies must recognize women's needs and vulnerabilities. If women are to have a genuine opportunity to protect themselves, their best option is the rapid development of new HIV-prevention technologies like microbicides, which women can initiate and control.

By Mr. AKAKA:

S. 552. A bill to make technical corrections to the Veterans Benefits Improvement Act of 2004; to the Committee on Veterans' Affairs.

Mr. AKAKA. Mr. President, today I introduce a bill that would provide a technical correction to the Veterans Benefits Improvements Act of 2004.

Last session, the law that allowed severely disabled members of the Armed Forces to receive specially adapted housing grants from the Department of Veterans Affairs (VA), while still on active duty, was inadvertently repealed. This was an oversight that occurred when the law was changed that authorized the Secretary of Veterans Affairs to provide specially adapted housing for veterans whose disability is the result of the loss, or loss of use, of both upper arms above the elbow.

Currently, only veterans are statutorily eligible for adapted housing grants. Congress originally intended eligibility for both disabled veterans and servicemembers, as was the case before the change in law last Session.

The correcting language in my bill would again provide the adapted housing benefit to disabled servicemembers in need of accommodations as they return to their homes. The adapted housing benefit is essential for providing an adequate standard of living for our disabled servicemembers. The benefit provides necessary modifications to servicemembers' homes to accommodate their disabilities.

I ask that we continue to make every effort to ensure that those servicemembers who have sacrificed to defend Freedom receive the benefits that they deserve. We owe it to these great men and women to pass this legislation.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 552

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. TECHNICAL CORRECTIONS TO VETERANS BENEFITS IMPROVEMENT ACT OF 2004.

Section 2101 of title 38, United States Code, as amended by section 401 of the Veterans Benefits Improvement Act of 2004 (Public Law 108-454), is further amended—

(1) by redesignating subsection (c) as subsection (d);

(2) by inserting after subsection (b) a new subsection (c) consisting of the text of subsection (c) of such section 2101 as in effect immediately before the enactment of such Act, modified—

(A) by inserting after “(c)” the following: “ASSISTANCE TO MEMBERS OF THE ARMED FORCES.—”;

(B) in paragraph (1)—

(i) in the first sentence, by striking “paragraph (1), (2), or (3)” and inserting “subparagraph (A), (B), (C), or (D) of paragraph (2)”; and

(ii) in the second sentence, by striking “the second sentence” and inserting “paragraph (3)”; and

(C) in paragraph (2)—

(i) in the first sentence, by striking “paragraph (1)” and inserting “paragraph (2)”; and

(ii) in the second sentence, by striking “paragraph (2)” and inserting “paragraph (3)”; and

(3) in subsection (a)(3), by striking “subsection (c)” in the matter preceding subparagraph (A) and inserting “subsection (d)”.

SEC. 2. EFFECTIVE DATE.

The amendments made by section 1 shall take effect immediately after the enactment of the Veterans Benefits Improvement Act of 2004 (Public Law 108-454).

By Mrs. FEINSTEIN (for herself and Mr. ALLEN):

S. 553. A bill to amend title 23, United States Code, to provide for HOV-lane exemptions for low-emission and hybrid vehicles; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce a bill with Senator ALLEN that would allow hybrids to access High Occupancy Vehicle (HOV) lanes.

California and other States, such as Arizona, Colorado, and Georgia, do not want to risk losing their Federal highway dollars by acting without a waiver from the Department of Transportation to implement laws permitting hybrid vehicles to use HOV lanes.

Virginia has decided to take that risk because the benefit of having more fuel efficient cars on the roads is greater.

This bill would allow the Department of Transportation to grant such a waiver to States.

The purpose of this bill is to encourage Americans to buy and drive hybrids, which provide an innovative solution to help reduce our thirst for gasoline.

Allowing hybrids into HOV lanes is a low-cost and quick incentive to promote the use of hybrids.

Hybrid vehicles are more fuel efficient than cars powered by internal combustion engines and they emit fewer greenhouse gases that lead to global warming.

Burning less gas can also help us to gain independence from foreign sources of energy.

The cost of hybrid technology will decrease by bringing more hybrids into the market.

And, people can make smarter, more fuel efficient, less polluting choices while getting to and from work faster.

Several States, including my State of California, have acted on their own to permit hybrid vehicles to use HOV lanes.

Current Federal law, however, only grants States the flexibility to allow electric or natural gas powered vehicles to drive in the HOV lanes with a single passenger.

Right now, there are approximately 20,000 high-mileage hybrid car owners in California waiting to take advantage of a State law that went into effect on January 1, 2005. This State law, sponsored by assemblywoman Fran Pavley, allows hybrid vehicles that get 45 miles-per-gallon or better to use diamond or HOV lanes until 2008.

As California has 40 percent of the Nation's carpool lanes, high-mileage hybrid owners stand to gain a significant benefit for driving these cars.

Some critics have expressed concerns that HOV lanes will get overloaded, but each State can stop the program if congestion becomes a problem.

Hybrids only account for a fraction of the cars sold today—43,435 hybrids out of a total of 16.7 million vehicles were sold in 2003!

If States want to act to encourage their citizens to drive more fuel efficient, less polluting vehicles, we need to give them the tools to do so.

It is my hope that Congress will pass this bill quickly so that hybrid drivers in California, Georgia, Colorado and elsewhere can take advantage of the HOV lanes.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 553

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

By Mr. DEWINE (for himself, Mr. KOHL, Mr. LEAHY, Mr. GRASSLEY, Mr. FEINGOLD, Ms. SNOWE, Mr. SCHUMER, Mr. DURBIN, Mr. LEVIN, Mrs. BOXER, Mr. WYDEN, Mr. CORZINE, and Mr. DAYTON):

S. 555. A bill to amend the Sherman Act to make oil-producing and exporting cartels illegal; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. DEWINE. Mr. President, I rise today, along with my colleagues—Senators KOHL, LEAHY, GRASSLEY, FEINGOLD, SNOWE, SCHUMER, DURBIN, LEVIN, BOXER, WYDEN, CORZINE, and DAYTON—to introduce the No Oil Producing and Exporting Cartels Act of 2005 (NOPEC). This legislation would give the Department of Justice and Federal Trade Commission legal authority to bring an antitrust case against the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC).

Every consumer in America knows that gasoline prices have reached record highs recently. Likewise, the price of home heating oil has dramatically increased. These price increases have been acutely painful to people in my home State of Ohio.

Moreover, the rise in jet fuel prices is crippling our already weak airline industry. One of the main reasons that many U.S. airlines have not been able to make a profit has been due to skyrocketing jet fuel costs. For example, in the fourth quarter of 2004, Continental Airlines' jet fuel costs were $453 million, which was a 48 percent increase compared to last year, and Delta's jet fuel costs were $385 million, which was 76 percent increase compared to last year. No wonder so many U.S. airlines are teetering on the edge of bankruptcy or are already in bankruptcy.

What is the cause of these high gas and fuel prices? There are a number of factors at play, but there is clear agreement among industry experts about the primary cause of high gas and fuel prices—and that is the increase in imported crude oil prices. Who sets crude oil prices? OPEC does. The unacceptably high price of imported crude oil is a direct result of price fixing by the OPEC nations to keep the price of oil unnaturally high.

OPEC's hunger for ill-gotten gains is astounding. It seems its appetite can never be satisfied. For example, despite the fact that oil prices recently hit the historic high of $55 a barrel, OPEC members met in December 2004 and decided to cut the output of oil by another 1 million barrels. When demand is high and supplies are cut, that means prices will increase. Nonetheless, OPEC cut production. This is an outrage.

OPEC is probably the most notorious example of an illegal cartel in the world today. It is an affront to the principle that markets should be free. Nation after nation has adopted antitrust laws that make it illegal to fix prices. In 1998, the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development, then composed of 29 member nations, issued a formal recommendation denouncing price fixing. OPEC's continued actions, in ongoing defiance of American and international antitrust norms, should not be tolerated.

Until now, however, OPEC has effectively received a “free pass” from prosecution under U.S. antitrust laws. For over two decades, enforcement has been constrained by two related court opinions. In 1979, a Federal district court found that OPEC's price-setting decisions were “governmental” acts. As a result, they were given sovereign status and protected by the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act. Subsequently, in 1981, a Federal court of appeals declined to consider the appeal of that antitrust case based on the so-called “act of state” doctrine, which holds that a court will not consider a case regarding the legality of the acts of a foreign nation.

Our bill would effectively reverse these decisions. It makes it clear that OPEC's activities are not protected by sovereign immunity and that the Federal courts should not decline to hear a case against OPEC based on the “act of state” doctrine. As a result, under NOPEC, the Department of Justice and the Federal Trade Commission could bring an antitrust enforcement action against OPEC's member nations. This bill would force OPEC to begin pricing in a competitive, free-market manner or face the possibility of civil or criminal antitrust prosecution.

Senator KOHL and I have introduced this bill three times before—in 2000, 2001, and 2004. We intend to keep fighting for American consumers and businesses so that they will not be fleeced by OPEC in the future.

NOPEC says to OPEC: When you want to do business with America, you must abide by our antitrust laws and the rules of the free market. And when OPEC, one day, abides by the rules of the free market, we will all see lower oil and gas prices.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 555

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the “No Oil Producing and Exporting Cartels Act of 2005” or “NOPEC”.

SEC. 2. SHERMAN ACT.

The Sherman Act (15 U.S.C. 1 et seq.) is amended by adding after section 7 the following:

“SEC. 7A. OIL PRODUCING CARTELS.

“(a) IN GENERAL.—It shall be illegal and a violation of this Act for any foreign state, or any instrumentality or agent of any foreign state, to act collectively or in combination with any other foreign state, any instrumentality or agent of any other foreign state, or any other person, whether by cartel or any other association or form of cooperation or joint action—

“(1) to limit the production or distribution of oil, natural gas, or any other petroleum product;

“(2) to set or maintain the price of oil, natural gas, or any petroleum product; or

“(3) to otherwise take any action in restraint of trade for oil, natural gas, or any petroleum product;

when such action, combination, or collective action has a direct, substantial, and reasonably foreseeable effect on the market, supply, price, or distribution of oil, natural gas, or other petroleum product in the United States.

“(b) SOVEREIGN IMMUNITY.—A foreign state engaged in conduct in violation of subsection (a) shall not be immune under the doctrine of sovereign immunity from the jurisdiction or judgments of the courts of the United States in any action brought to enforce this section.

“(c) INAPPLICABILITY OF ACT OF STATE DOCTRINE.—No court of the United States shall decline, based on the act of state doctrine, to make a determination on the merits in an action brought under this section.

“(d) ENFORCEMENT.—The Attorney General of the United States and the Federal Trade Commission may bring an action to enforce this section in any district court of the United States as provided under the antitrust laws.”.

SEC. 3. SOVEREIGN IMMUNITY.

Section 1605(a) of title 28, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in paragraph (6), by striking “or” after the semicolon;

(2) in paragraph (7), by striking the period and inserting “; or”; and

(3) by adding at the end the following:

“(8) in which the action is brought under section 7A of the Sherman Act.”.

Mr. KOHL. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce, with Senator DEWINE and 11 co-sponsors, of the No Oil Producing and Exporting Cartels Act of 2005 (“NOPEC”). It is time for the U.S. government to fight back on the price of oil and hold OPEC accountable when it acts illegally. This bill will hold OPEC member nations to account under U.S. antitrust law when they agree to limit supply or fix price in violation of the most basic principles of free competition.

Our bill will authorize the Attorney General and Federal Trade Commission to file suit against nations or other entities that participate in a conspiracy to limit the supply, or fix the price, of oil. In addition, it will expressly specify that the doctrines of sovereign immunity and act of state do not exempt nations that participate in oil cartels from basic antitrust law. Senator DEWINE and I have introduced this bill in each of the last three Congresses. This legislation was the subject of an extensive hearing at the Antitrust Subcommittee last year, and subsequently passed the Judiciary Committee without dissent. It is now time, in this new Congress, to finally pass this legislation into law and give our nation a long needed tool to counteract this pernicious and anti-consumer conspiracy.

Throughout the last year, consumers all across the Nation have watched gas prices rise to previously unimagined levels. As crude oil prices exceeded $40, then $50 and then $55 per barrel, retail prices of gasoline over $2.00 per gallon became commonplace. While prices temporarily receded for short periods, the general trend was significantly upwards, and rising even today. We now hear predictions that the price of crude oil may soon break the $60 barrier, and oil industry analysts even say $80 per barrel is not unthinkable. And one fact has remained consistent—any move downwards in price would end as soon as OPEC decided to cut production. The price of crude oil danced to the tune set by OPEC members. Such blatantly anti-competitive conduct by the oil cartel violates the most basic principles of fair competition and free markets and should not be tolerated.

Real people suffer real consequences every day in our nation because of OPEC's actions. Rising gas prices are a silent tax that takes hard-earned money away from Americans every time they visit the gas pump. Higher oil prices drive up the cost of transportation, harming thousands of companies throughout the economy from trucking to aviation. And those costs are passed on to consumers in the form of higher prices for manufactured goods. Higher oil prices mean higher heating oil and electricity costs. Anyone who has gone through a Midwest winter can tell you about the tremendous personal costs associated with higher home heating bills.

We have all heard many explanations offered for rising energy prices. Some say that the oil companies are gouging consumers. Some blame disruptions in supply. Others point to the EPA requirement mandating use of a new and more expensive type of “reformulated” gas in the Midwest or other “boutique” fuels around the country. Some even claim that refiners and distributors have illegally fixed prices. On this issue, Senator DEWINE and I have repeatedly asked the Federal Trade Commission to investigate these allegations. As a result of our requests, the FTC has put a task force in place to find out if those allegations were true. While we continue to urge the FTC to be vigilant, the FTC has to date found no evidence of illegal domestic price fixing as a cause of higher gas prices. And we conducted our own inquiry in the Antitrust Subcommittee last year which found no basis to challenge the FTC's conclusions.

But one cause of these escalating prices is indisputable: the price fixing conspiracy of the OPEC nations. For years, this conspiracy has unfairly driven up the cost of imported crude oil to satisfy the greed of the oil exporters. We have long decried OPEC, but, sadly, no one in government has yet tried to take any action. Our bill will, for the first time, establish clearly and plainly that when a group of competing oil producers like the OPEC nations act together to restrict supply or set prices, they are violating U.S. law. The bill will not authorize private lawsuits, but it will authorize the Attorney General or FTC to file suit under the antitrust laws for redress. Our bill will also make plain that the nations of OPEC cannot hide behind the doctrines of “Sovereign Immunity” or “Act of State” to escape the reach of American justice. In so doing, our bill will overrule one twenty-year old lower court decision which incorrectly failed to recognize that the actions of OPEC member nations was commercial activity exempt from the protections of sovereign immunity.

The most fundamental principle of a free market is that competitors cannot be permitted to conspire to limit supply or fix price. There can be no free market without this foundation. And we should not permit any nation to flout this fundamental principle.

Some critics of this legislation have argued that suing OPEC will not work or that threatening suit will hurt more than help. I disagree. Our NOPEC legislation will, for the first time, enable our antitrust authorities to take legal action to combat the illegitimate price-fixing conspiracy of the oil cartel. It will, at a minimum, have a real deterrent effect on nations that seek to join forces to fix oil prices to the detriment of consumers. This legislation will be the first real weapon the U.S. government has ever had to deter OPEC from its seemingly endless cycle of price increases. There is nothing remarkable about applying U.S. antitrust law overseas. Our government has not hesitated to do so when faced with clear evidence of anti-competitive conduct that harms American consumers. A few years ago, for example, the Justice Department secured record fines totaling $725 million against German and Swiss companies engaged in a price fixing conspiracy to raise and fix the price of vitamins sold in the United States and elsewhere. Their behavior harmed consumers by raising the prices consumers paid for vitamins every day and plainly needed to be addressed. As this and other cases show, the mere fact that the conspirators are foreign nations is no basis to shield them from violating these most basic standards of fair economic behavior.

Even under current law, there is no doubt that the actions of the international oil cartel would be in gross violation of antitrust law if engaged in by private companies. If OPEC were a group of international private companies rather than foreign governments, their actions would be nothing more than an illegal price fixing scheme. But OPEC members have used the shield of “sovereign immunity” to escape accountability for their price-fixing. The Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act, though, already recognizes that the “commercial” activity of nations is not protected by sovereign immunity. And it is hard to imagine an activity that is more obviously commercial than selling oil for profit, as the OPEC nations do. Our legislation will establish that the sovereign immunity doctrine will not divest a U.S. court from jurisdiction to hear a lawsuit alleging that members of the oil cartel are violating antitrust law.

The suffering of consumers across the Nation in the last year has made me more certain than ever that this legislation is necessary. Between OPEC's repeated decisions to cut oil production and the FTC's conclusion for the last several years that there is no illegal conduct by domestic companies responsible for rising gas prices, I am convinced that we need to take action, and take action now, before the damage spreads too far.

I urge my colleagues to support our legislation so that our Nation will finally have an effective means to combat this price-fixing conspiracy of oil-rich nations.

By Mr. MCCAIN:

S. 556. A bill to direct the Secretary of the Interior and the Secretary of Agriculture to jointly conduct a study of certain land adjacent to the Walnut Canyon National Monument in the State of Arizona; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, I am pleased to be joined today by my colleague in the House of Representatives, Congressman RICK RENZI, in introducing legislation to authorize a special resources and land management study for the Walnut Canyon National Monument in Arizona. The study is intended to evaluate a range of management options for public lands adjacent to the monument to ensure adequate protection of the canyon's cultural and natural resources.

For several years, local communities adjacent to the Walnut Canyon National Monument have debated whether the land surrounding the monument would be best protected from future development under management of the U.S. Forest Service or the National Park Service. The Coconino County Board and the Flagstaff City Council have passed resolutions concluding that the preferred method to determine what is best for the land surrounding Walnut Canyon National Monument is by having a Federal study conducted. The recommendations from such a study would help to resolve the question of future management and whether expanding the monument's boundaries could compliment current public and multiple-use needs.

The legislation also would direct the Secretary of the Interior and the Secretary of Agriculture to provide recommendations for management options for maintenance of the public uses and protection of resources of the study area.

Mr. President, this legislation would provide a mechanism for determining the management options for one of Arizona's high uses scenic areas and protect the natural and cultural resources of this incredibly beautiful monument. I urge my colleagues to support its passage.

By Mr. REID (for himself, Mr. BIDEN, Ms. MIKULSKI, Mrs. MURRAY, Mr. NELSON of Florida, Mrs. BOXER, Mr. JOHNSON, Mr. SALAZAR, Mr. BINGAMAN, Ms. LANDRIEU, Mr. JEFFORDS, Mr. KENNEDY, Mrs. LINCOLN, Mrs. CLINTON, Mr. LIEBERMAN, and Mr. DURBIN):

S. 558. A bill to amend title 10, United States Code, to permit certain additional retired members of the Armed Forces who have a service-connected disability to receive both disability compensation from the Department of Veterans Affairs for their disability and either retired pay by reason of their years of military service or Combat-Related Special compensation and to eliminate the phase-in period under current law with respect to such concurrent receipt; to the Committee on Armed Services.

Mr. President, I rise today to again introduce a bill along with my colleagues Mr. BIDEN, Ms. MIKULSKI, Mrs. MURRAY, Mr. NELSON of Florida, Mrs. BOXER, Mr. JOHNSON, Mr. SALAZAR, Mr. BINGAMAN, Ms. LANDRIEU, Mr. JEFFORDS, Mr. KENNEDY, Mrs. LINCOLN, Mrs. CLINTON, Mr. LIEBERMAN, and Mr. DURBIN.

Nothing is more important than keeping America safe. The key to our security is a professional, well-trained military. And in order to attract the dedicated soldiers we need, we must honor our commitment to America's veterans. Most everyone in the Senate knows about the ban on concurrent receipt . . . and our veterans certainly know about the hardship it causes.

This is the outdated and unfair policy that prevents disabled veterans from collecting both their military retirement pay and disability compensation at the same time. Under current law, a retired disabled veteran must deduct from his retirement pay, dollar for dollar, the amount of any disability compensation he receives.

In many cases, this totally wipes out the veteran's retirement pay. The end result is that the disabled military retiree loses all of the value of his 20 or more years of service to our Nation. We don't subject any other Federal retiree to this kind of offset, only our disabled military retirees. So this policy amounts to a special tax on our disabled veterans . . . men and women who have already sacrificed so much for our Nation.

When this situation was first brought to my attention a few years ago by a veteran from Nevada, I could hardly believe it. It seemed too outrageous to be true. And to this day, I can't understand why it has taken so long to correct the problem. Because to me, it just goes without saying that we should treat our disabled veteran with honor . . . with dignity . . . and with respect.

The members of this Senate share my feelings. For the past years, the Senate has passed measures to end the ban on concurrent receipt. I want to especially thank Senators LEVIN and WARNER for their support of this issue, year after year. Thanks to their strong leadership we have made some progress each year.

In 2003 we passed a measure to allow concurrent receipt for those who are 100 percent disabled. Last year we made that change immediate, instead of being phased in over 10 years. This will benefit as many as 50,000 severely disabled veterans. But there are still hundreds of thousands of disabled veterans who need our help.

We would not dream of leaving a soldier behind on the battlefield. And we should not walk away from our disabled veterans now, when they need our help. Frankly, I can't understand why the administration is even debating whether this policy should be changed for veterans whose disabilities make them unemployable. The fact is, many veterans with a disability rated at less than 100 percent cannot get or hold a job because of their disabilities.

And a 10-year phase-in simply isn't fair for these veterans, because many of them will never live to see the benefits. They deserve immediate help. We have to take care of these veterans—now. If the administration doesn't want to do it, then Congress will be forced to legislate the necessary changes. Taking care of veterans is the right thing to do because we must never forget the sacrifices they made to protect our freedom.

Taking care of our veterans is also a key to winning the war on terror. In our all-volunteer military, it is critical to attract and retain professional, dedicated soldiers.

These people serve because they love America. They don't expect to get rich in the military but they do expect that we will honor our commitments to provide health care and other benefits for them and their families.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of this legislation be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 558

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Retired Pay Restoration Act of 2005".

SEC. 2. FINDINGS AND SENSE OF CONGRESS.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds the following:

(1) For more than 100 years before 1999, all disabled military retirees were required to fund their own veterans' disability compensation by forfeiting one dollar of earned retired pay for each dollar received in veterans' disability compensation.

(2) Since 1999, Congress has enacted legislation every year to progressively expand eligibility criteria for relief of the retired pay disability offset and further reduce the burden of financial sacrifice on disabled military retirees.

(3) Absent adequate funding to eliminate the sacrifice for all disabled retirees, Congress has given initial priority to easing financial inequities for the most severely disabled and for combat-disabled retirees.

(4) In the interest of maximizing eligibility within cost constraints, Congress effectively has authorized full concurrent receipt for all qualifying retirees with 100-percent disability ratings and all with combat-related disability ratings, while phasing out the disability offset to retired pay over 10 years for retired members with noncombat-related, service-connected disability ratings of 50 percent to 90 percent.

(5) In pursuing these good-faith efforts, Congress acknowledges the regrettable necessity of creating new thresholds of eligibility that understandably are disappointing to disabled retirees who fall short of meeting those new thresholds.

(6) Congress is not content with the status quo.

(b) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that military retired pay earned by service and sacrifice in defending the Nation should not be reduced because a military retiree is also eligible for veterans' disability compensation awarded for service-connected disability.

SEC. 3. ELIGIBILITY FOR PAYMENT OF BOTH RETIRED PAY AND VETERANS' DISABILITY COMPENSATION FOR CERTAIN ADDITIONAL MILITARY RETIREES WITH COMPENSABLE SERVICE-CONNECTED DISABILITIES.

(a) EXTENSION OF CONCURRENT RECEIPT AUTHORITY TO RETIREES WITH SERVICE-CONNECTED DISABILITIES RATED LESS THAN 50 PERCENT.—Section 1414 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by striking paragraph (2) of subsection (a).

(1) in subsection (a), by striking the final sentence of paragraph (1);

(2) by striking subsection (c) and redesignating subsections (d) and (e) as subsections (c) and (d), respectively; and

(3) in subsection (d) (as so redesignated), by striking subparagraph (4).

(c) CLERICAL AMENDMENTS.—

(1) The heading for section 1414 of such title is amended to read as follows:

“§ 1414. Members eligible for retired pay who are also eligible for veterans' disability compensation: concurrent payment of retired pay and disability compensation”.

(2) The item relating to such section in the table of sections at the beginning of chapter 71 of such title is amended to read as follows:

“1414. Members eligible for retired pay who are also eligible for veterans' disability compensation: concurrent payment of retired pay and disability compensation.”.

(d) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall take effect as of January 1, 2006, and shall apply to payments for months beginning on or after that date.

“(2) has a combat-related disability”.

(b) AMENDMENTS TO STANDARDIZE SIMILAR PROVISIONS.—

(1) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The heading for paragraph (3) of section 1413a(b) of such title is amended by striking “RULES” and inserting “RULE”.

(2) SPECIFICATION OF QUALIFIED RETIREES FOR CONCURRENT RECEIPT PURPOSES.—Subsection (a) of section 1414 of such title, as amended by section 2(a), is amended—

(A) by striking “a member or” and all that follows through “retiree”)” and inserting “an individual who is a qualified retiree for any month”;

(B) by inserting “retired pay and veterans' disability compensation” after “both”; and

(C) by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

“(A) is entitled to retired pay, other than in the case of a member retired under chapter 61 of this title with less than 20 years of service creditable under section 1405 of this title and less than 20 years of service computed under section 12732 of this title; and

“(B) is also entitled for that month to veterans' disability compensation.”.

(3) STANDARDIZATION WITH CRSC RULE FOR CHAPTER 61 RETIREES.—Subsection (b) of section 1414 of such title is amended—

(A) by striking “SPECIAL RULES” in the subsection heading and all that follows through “is subject to” in paragraph (1) and inserting “SPECIAL RULE FOR CHAPTER 61 DISABILITY RETIREES.—In the case of a qualified retiree who is retired under chapter 61 of this title, the retired pay of the member is subject to”; and

(B) by striking paragraph (2).

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall take effect as of January 1, 2006, and shall apply to payments for months beginning on or after that date.

By Mr. BIDEN (for himself and Mr. LUGAR):

S. 559. A bill to make the protection of vulnerable populations, especially women and children, who are affected by a humanitarian emergency a priority of the United States Government, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, as we stand here today women and children are suffering the ravages and privations of war and natural disasters. They are suffering food shortages and lack the most basic necessities in so many nations around the world. Five million people have been affected by the tsunami. Of that 5 million, 1.5 million are children, many alone and parentless, vulnerable to human trafficking, forced recruitment into military service or worse.

We can help. We can do our share by making sure U.S. programs do their share.

Today, I am introducing—along with Senator LUGAR—the Protection of Vulnerable Populations During Humanitarian Emergencies Act of 2005, to make vulnerable people, especially women and children, an absolute priority of our foreign assistance programs. As a Nation, as a people, we probably should do more, but we certainly can do no less than to ensure the international community has a system in place to prevent the exploitation of so many lost, vulnerable, suffering women and children who are struggling to survive the most God-awful conditions imaginable.

Over the past fifty years the nature of war has changed dramatically. In today's world, 90 percent of the casualties in any war are civilians, most of them women and children. Since 1990, more than 2 million children have been killed, and 6 million maimed or injured as a result of a war somewhere in this world.

It is extraordinary to think that, in what we believe is the most sophisticated, technologically advanced period in world history, rape has become a routine weapon of war used at will by bands of marauding military forces—some of them young boys—everywhere from Burma to Bosnia, and from Sierra Leone to Sudan.

Forced displacement of civilians, rather than being one of the unfortunate results of war is now a deliberate tactic of war.

Look at Darfur in the last 18 months.

Civilians have been targeted by Khartoum in one of the most horrific genocides we have seen in recent years. Homes have been bombed, and villages attacked. Government sponsored militia are destroying crops and have fouled the water supply. They're burning homes, leaving mothers no choice but to flee for their lives and their children's lives.

Civilians forced to flee during war find their way to camps, but instead of relative safety what do they find? They find more suffering. The camps become virtual prisons. Women and girls are beaten and raped if they venture outside the camps for firewood.

When I recently read a report by a United Nations investigatory team which states that a number of U.N. peacekeepers—U.N. peacekeepers, mind you—deployed to protect civilians from ethnic violence in the eastern Democratic Republic of Congo were sexually exploiting girls as young as 13 years old, it reinforced my belief that we cannot stand by any longer. Something must be done and this bill only begins to do it. Let me read you what that report said:

Interviews with Congolese women and girls confirmed that sexual contact with peacekeepers occurred with regularity, usually in exchange for food or small sums of money

... “Many of the contacts involved girls under the age of 18.”

What's more horrifying to me: the investigators found that the abuse was going on while they were there, on the ground, conducting the investigation. These incidents as well as allegations of sexual exploitation by camp residents and humanitarian workers in refugee camps in West Africa and Nepal in 2002 are incredible, real life examples of the sad fact that women and children remain vulnerable even in the very places they flee for safety.

This bill seeks to do something about it.

It enhances the U.S. government's ability to see that women and children are protected before, during, and after a complex humanitarian emergency. It directs the Secretary of State to designate a special coordinator for protection issues who will be charged with making sure our embassies and consular posts are made aware of the warning signs that an emergency which may put the lives and safety of women and children at risk is imminent.

It directs the coordinator to compile a watch list of such countries and regions so that the Agency for International Development can plan to meet potential need. It prohibits U.S. funding for relief agencies that do not sign a code of conduct that outlaws improper exploitative relationships between aid workers and recipients.

It expresses the Sense of Congress that the U.N. Department of Peacekeeping Operations should improve its mechanism to prevent and respond to allegations of sexual exploitation and abuse by peacekeepers.

It establishes a fellowship with the AID for someone with expertise and skills in preventing and responding to violence and exploitation of those made vulnerable by war.

It calls upon the United States Executive Director of the International Bank of Reconstruction and Development to try to make sure World Bank demobilization, disarmament, and reintegration programs extend the same benefits that ex-combatants receive to women and children who were associated with them.

As it now stands, women and children who were used as cooks and porters and so called “wives,” a euphemism for women who were kidnaped to serve as sexual slaves, may well not be given a single thing through these programs—nothing with which to rebuild their lives despite the fact that they were not there by choice. Yet the very people who forced them into such conditions receive assistance with no qualms or reservations.

Finally, it amends the Foreign Assistance Act to authorize programs and activities specifically aimed at making people—especially women and children—who are affected by humanitarian emergencies safer from further exploitation and abuse.

This bill is by no means a panacea, but it is a decent beginning. It is the least we can do to mitigate the extraordinary violence against women and children in times of war and natural disasters the results of which we see all too often in a world that seems to have gone mad.

To do nothing in the face of it would be sinful, inhumane, and wrong.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

SEC. 4. FINDINGS.

Congress makes the following findings:

(1) The nature of war has changed dramatically in recent decades, putting civilians, especially women and children, at greater risk of death, disease, displacement, and exploitation.

(2) In the last decade alone, more than 2,000,000 children have been killed during wars, while more than 4,000,000 have survived physical mutilation, and more than 1,000,000 have been orphaned or separated from their families as a result of war.

(3) The use of rape, particularly against women and girls, is an increasingly common tactic in modern war.

(4) Civilians, particularly women and children, account for the vast majority of those adversely affected by humanitarian emergencies, including as refugees and internally displaced persons, and increasingly are targeted by combatants and armed elements for murder, abduction, forced military conscription, involuntary servitude, displacement, sexual abuse and slavery, mutilation, and loss of freedom.

(5) Large-scale natural disasters, such as the tsunami that struck South East Asia, South Asia, and East Africa on December 26, 2004, and claimed over 200,000 lives, are particularly threatening to children, who are often orphaned or separated from their families.

(6) Traditionally, the response to such humanitarian emergencies has focused on providing food, medical care, and shelter needs, and has placed less emphasis on the safety and security of those affected by a humanitarian emergency.

(7) Refugee women and girls face particular threats because of power inequities, including being forced to exchange sex for food and humanitarian supplies, and being at increased risk of rape and sexual exploitation and abuse due to poor security in refugee camps.

(8) In some circumstances, humanitarian agencies have failed to make individuals affected by a humanitarian emergency, especially women and children, aware of their rights to protection and assistance, to give them access to effective channels of redress, and to make humanitarian workers aware of their duty to respect these rights and provide adequate assistance.

(9) Refugee and displaced women face heightened risks of developing complications during pregnancy, suffering a miscarriage, dying, being injured during childbirth, becoming infected with HIV or another sexually transmitted infection, or suffering from posttraumatic stress disorder.

(10) Despite the heightened risks for women during a humanitarian emergency, women's needs for specialized health services have often been overlooked by donors and relief organizations, which are focused on providing food, water, and shelter.

(11) There is a substantial need for the protection of civilians, especially women and children, to be given a high priority during all humanitarian emergencies.

Mr. LUGAR. Mr. President, I rise to comment on International Women's Day and to join Senator BIDEN in introducing the Protection of Vulnerable Populations During Humanitarian Emergencies Act of 2005.

Today is International Women's Day, a day on which we celebrate the progress of women and rededicate ourselves to overcoming the inequities facing women around the globe. In many places in the world, discrimination continues to deny women and girls full political and economic equality. The lives and health of women and girls continue to be endangered by violence that is directed at them simply because they are female. In recognition of these issues, I co-sponsored a Resolution with Senators BIDEN and CLINTON commemorating International Women's Day and reaffirming the Senate's commitment to improving the status of women worldwide.

In addition, I am co-sponsoring with Senator BIDEN the Protection of Vulnerable Populations During Humanitarian Emergencies Act of 2005, which the Committee on Foreign Relations supported as an amendment to our Foreign Affairs Authorization Act for fiscal years 2006 and 2007. During humanitarian emergencies, women and children become more vulnerable to a range of abuses including sexual exploitation, trafficking and gender-based violence. Our bill seeks to ensure that U.S. foreign assistance programs are a force for protecting women, children, and other vulnerable populations in the wake of military conflict and natural disasters.

The recent tsunami tragedy in the Indian Ocean region has highlighted this important issue. Tens of thousands of children have lost family members and friends and are coping with unspeakable trauma. Nearly 35,000 children have been orphaned, and many more have been separated from their families. These children face the imminent threats of hunger, disease, and diarrhea. Beyond these dangers, children are vulnerable to being trafficked for sexual exploitation, forced labor, or conscription. Without their families, the children orphaned by the tsunami lack protection from predators who would profit from their tragedy.

During many of the humanitarian crises that we have witnessed over the last decade, including Rwanda, Bosnia, and Sudan, we have learned that women and children are uniquely vulnerable to sexual violence and exploitation. Over the course of the past year, the world has heard accounts of rape at the camps in Darfur in Western Sudan. Our bill aims to improve the ability of the United States to protect women and children, like those in the tsunami-affected region and in Darfur, from the additional dangers they face during a humanitarian emergency. Our bill calls for a coordinator for protection issues and a strategy to improve our ability to protect and respond to the needs of women and children in such crises. Our bill authorizes funding for the specific health care needs of women during an emergency, the establishment of registries and clearing-houses to trace relatives and help children find their families, and legal services for survivors of sexual exploitation and abuse. In addition, the bill requires that any organization receiving U.S. funds to assist in a humanitarian emergency have in place a code of conduct forbidding its employees from sexually abusing the victims of the crisis. Finally, our bill urges the United Nations to strengthen its policies concerning sexual abuse and exploitation by UN personnel involved in UN peacekeeping operations. I am hopeful that Senators will join me in backing this legislation.

Mr. DEWINE. Mr. President, the number one killer of those between the ages of 4 and 34 in this country today is auto fatalities. If you look at those between the ages of 16 and 25, the figures are even more exaggerated. We all know that in this country over 42,000 Americans lose their lives every year in auto accidents. That figure stays fairly constant. The last year we have figures for is 2003, and in that year, 42,643 of our fellow citizens lost their lives.

In fact, in the next 12 minutes, to be precise, at least one person will be killed in an automobile accident in this country, while nearly six people will be injured in just the next 60 seconds.

This is a tragedy that we as a society are much too willing to tolerate. If a foreign enemy were doing this to us, we would not tolerate it. We would be up in arms. Someone said it is the equivalent of a 747 airplane going down every two days in this country. If that were happening, of course, it would be on CNN; we would be demanding an explanation. Yet, these auto fatalities that occur, hour-by-hour, day-by-day, just go on, and for some reason, we have become immune to it, hardened to it. They just continue.

I come to the Floor today to discuss five bills—five bills that my staff and I have been working on for a few years now—five bills that I will be introducing, but hope will be incorporated in the transportation bill we will be considering in the next several weeks. These bills are commonsense, practical ways to save lives. Each bill is built on solid evidence of what will, in fact, make a difference. These are bills that will, in fact, save lives.

Last year, the Senate passed each of these bills as a part of the SAFE-TEA transportation bill. I want to thank Senators INHOFE, JEFFORDS, BOND, REID, and MCCAIN for their assistance in making that happen. Our former colleague Senator HOLLINGS was also instrumental in clearing these bills. So, what I'm talking about today is a set of bills that has already enjoyed the support of the Senate, and I believe we ought to pass each and every one of them again this year as a part of the transportation reauthorization. In particular, I look forward to working with Senators STEVENS, LOTT, and INOUE on the Commerce Committee portion of my transportation safety package.

I am thankful for the support and assistance of Senator ROCKEFELLER as the lead co-sponsor on the first several bills—the vehicle safety bills—as well as Senator LAUTENBERG's leadership as my chief co-sponsor on the drunk driving prevention campaign bill. Both Senators are great leaders on highway safety, and I'm pleased to be working with them this year in an effort to get these bills signed into law.

The first bill we call "Stars on Cars." While its name is cute, its focus is quite serious. When you go to buy a new car, there is a large label in the window detailing the price, features, gas mileage, and other information about the vehicle. This label is referred to in the auto industry as the "Monroney Label" after a former member of this body, Senator MONRONEY from Oklahoma. We all know what the sticker looks like.

But, what we may not know is that most of the content on that sticker is mandated by the Federal Government. The mileage per gallon has been on there for a number of years. The Federal government says that your city mileage has to be on there and your highway mileage has to be on there. It has to tell you whether the vehicle has air-conditioning. It has to tell you whether it has a stereo. It has to tell you a whole bunch of other stuff.

One piece of information is not on there—and that is the vehicle's safety rating.

The funny thing is that in the vast majority of cases, you have already paid to have the Federal Government—specifically the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA)—spend millions of dollars to test that very car and others like it. In fact, the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration has put that information up on the Internet. Nonetheless, the basic fact is that when you go in to buy that car, that information is not available to you. It is not available to the American consumer in the one place where it would make a difference—where you buy the car, at the dealership.

Doing this right wouldn't cost the taxpayers another dime. The car companies are already printing the labels. Under this legislation, we would add a new section to the label titled "Government Safety Information." The new section would clearly lay out information from each of the government crash tests—frontal crash impact, side impact, and rollover resistance. For vehicles that haven't been tested yet, the label will say so. We would show the ratings pure and simple, as graphical star ratings on the label, just like many automakers do in their commercials.

The bill requires that this be done in a manner that can be clearly understood by your average car buyer, with short explanations as to what each rating means.

What impact would this have? I happen to believe the consumer is better off with more information than less information on whatever we are talking about. The consumer ought to know what the Government does. The consumer ought to know that type of information. The consumer would make better choices. Consumers care about safety. They will make better choices, and in all likelihood, they are going to choose safer vehicles and more lives will, in fact, be saved.

It just makes good common sense to do this. We have worked hard to fashion a bill that gets this life-saving information to consumers in a way that is sensitive to the concerns of automakers, as well as the NHTSA. We've reached out to a broad coalition to craft our bill for 2005, and I look forward to working with interested parties to continue to improve and shape the language contained in it. In the end, this bill is my number one safety priority for passage into law this year.

The second bill we call "Safe Kids and Cars." Cars, unfortunately, are involved in child deaths at unbelievable rates. According to NHTSA data, automobile accidents happen to be the leading cause of death in the United States for children age 4 and up, and are right among the top causes for those ages 0 to 3.

More than cancer, more than homicide, more than fire, more than drowning, more than anything else, auto accidents are the source of child fatalities. We have a problem. And, while I congratulate auto manufacturers, safety groups, and NHTSA for working hard on this issue, there's more work to be done. Anything we can do to make a car safer for our kids, we should be doing it. Complacency is not an option.

The focus of this bill is to improve data collection and vehicle testing with regard to some specific dangers that small children face. NHTSA has done an excellent job in terms of working from solid data, and this is one area where unfortunately we just don't have enough data to move forward. Likewise, we need the tools to perform effective vehicle tests once we have those numbers, and my bill contains measures to see to it that we develop these tools.

In terms of testing, child-size dummies are an area where NHTSA needs to review its testing and look for areas where increased use of these dummies would lead to increased safety, or a better understanding of how crash forces impact small children. My bill directs NHTSA to conduct a full review of test procedures and incorporate these child dummies when and where suitable. We also ask the agency to give a status update on the extremely important Hybrid-III 10-year-old child test dummy.

The rest of the bill focuses on an emerging danger for small children often referred to as “non-traffic, non-crash” accident situations. These are incidents in which interaction between an automobile and a child leads to injury or death when the vehicle is not on the road, or where no actual crash has occurred. Instead, these are incidents that happen in parked cars, driveways, parking lots, and other very common situations. Unfortunately, these common situations can be deadly under the wrong circumstances.

A prime example of “non-traffic, non-crash” dangers to small children has to do with dangerous power window switches. In many cases, children are left alone in a vehicle and manage to inadvertently activate a power window switch—a situation which can lead to the window moving up and crushing a limb or other part of the child’s body. Some children are killed almost instantaneously by the force of the rising window. These incidents are not terribly frequent, but they are preventable at almost no cost to consumers and manufacturers.

Power windows are an area where NHTSA has taken action since I last introduced the child safety bill, and I want to pause to thank Dr. Jeffrey Runge, NHTSA Administrator; Janette Fennel, President of the safety advocacy group Kids and Cars; and several other groups for their work to make the new power window safety rule possible. The new rule, which I helped announce in Columbus late last year, will lead to the elimination of unsafe power window switches—switches that can be accidentally tripped by children with ease—in every car and light truck sold in the United States. It is clearly a step in the right direction, and it will save lives.

Unsafe power window switches show one kind of “non-traffic, non-crash” danger children face today. Were it not for a one-time study of death certificates by NHTSA, we would have no government data whatsoever on how widespread this problem happens to be. We would not know much about other types of “non-traffic, non-crash” dangers, such as backover incidents and heat exhaustion in closed vehicles. These are areas where there is a clear need for better data collection and testing. My bill tackles each head-on.

The “Safe Kids and Cars” bill directs NHTSA to continue pushing forward on “non-traffic, non-crash” incidents by instituting, for the first time, regular collection of data on these kinds of accidents. With time and some solid data, we may be able to tackle other kinds of “non-traffic, non-crash” problems in the future. Understanding the problem is the first step.

A third bill has to do with dangerous road intersections. Every State has them. Most States, fortunately, rank these roads. They keep a list of the bad ones. But, amazingly, there are many States that keep this information secret and don’t tell the public.

Again, citizens have a right to know this information. What would you do with the information? As a parent, I might tell my 16-year-old not to go that way to the movie. At least I have the right to have that information and would be able to say go another way. It might take another 10 minutes, but go that way. Don’t go by that intersection. Don’t go on that curvy road. State Departments of Transportation already have that information.

Each State should provide that information to the public. They already know it, and they should provide it. Policymakers need to know that to make decisions about how to spend money in that state and what roads to fix.

I would like to briefly talk about a woman by the name of Sandy Johnson and her mother Jacqueline. On October 5, 2002, Sandy and Jacqueline were killed in a car crash at a dangerous intersection near Columbus.

What they did not know as they drove into that intersection—and what countless other area residents who used the roads that cross through it did not know at the time—was that this particular intersection was known at that time by the Ohio Department of Transportation to be a very dangerous area. In fact, ODOT had indeed known that information for quite some time. Perhaps if Sandy Johnson had known that she would have taken a different route that day. We will never know.

Following the tragic death of his wife and his mother-in-law, Dean Johnson initiated a campaign to tackle the issue of dangerous roads and dangerous intersections, not just in Ohio, but across the country. He has tried with varying results from state to state to get information on dangerous roads and intersection locations out to the public so tragedies like the one involving his wife could be prevented.

As I have in the past, I would like to thank Dean Johnson for his dedication to this very important public safety issue and for the progress he has made in my home State of Ohio and elsewhere in terms of getting critical life-saving information out to citizens through the Sandy Johnson Foundation. His assistance has been an asset in crafting this legislation, and I look forward to working with him in the future.

My bill requires that safety information be disclosed to the public as an eligibility requirement for a new Federal safety funding program—the Highway Safety Improvement Program. States seeking additional Federal dollars for safety construction projects will have to take the quick and easy step of identifying their danger spots, ranking them according to severity, and then disclosing them to the public. I believe this is the least we can ask from States in exchange for large chunks of federal aid.

In some cases, States would like to release the data but fear the legal ramifications of doing so. My bill contains a fix for this that provides the same kind of protection States already enjoy for other types of highway safety data. In other words, no legal harm could come to a State for releasing lists of dangerous locations under this bill.

Further, States need to find ways to get safety experts, law enforcement, engineers, transportation officials, and the general public working together to identify and correct dangerous locations. I’ve borrowed language in my bill from last year’s Senate-passed SAFE-TEA bill—excellent language drafted and passed by Senator INHOFE and the Environment and Public Works Committee that creates incentives for States to foster this kind of collaboration. Collaboration between these entities is essential to finding quick, effective solutions to fatalities arising from dangerous intersections, as well as long stretches of roadway that account for high crash rates. I am including the Committee’s language on Highway Safety Improvement Programs in my bill because I strongly believe that it is a step in the right direction.

The fourth bill I am introducing has to do with driver education. Teen driving is an area where fatality rates are extremely high and unfortunately where programs across the country are not getting the job done.

Above average crash and fatality rates may be inevitable for teenage drivers, but they can certainly be reduced substantially from present-day levels. The Federal Government cannot run driver education. It is clearly a State responsibility. But it can play a small, productive role.

For decades, our attempt to address this problem—standard classroom-based driver education—has been ineffective or worse, inspiring false confidence in students and parents alike that graduates are ready to drive safely. Fortunately, we’ve started to move in a new direction as a nation, with 41 States adding innovative graduated driver licensing (GDL) laws to their ongoing driver education efforts. These new laws have been proven to be effective in reducing accident and fatality rates. While my bill contains language to raise the bar on GDL laws and make them more effective, its real emphasis is on finding a better way with respect to driver education.

Revitalized driver education needs to be data-driven and cognizant of the limitations associated with classroom-based instruction. It must utilize new ways of inculcating young drivers with the knowledge and skills they need to avoid unnecessary high-risk situations, particularly in the first six months behind the wheel. Integration of driver education with the graduated driver licensing process to maximize the safety value of both programs also must be addressed.

Past failures in our Nation's history with regard to driver education are not a reason to abandon these programs. They are a reason to go back to the drawing board to re-invent more effective means of promoting safe driving.

A recent study by the National Institutes for Health sheds some light on the problem. The study suggests that due to their unique brain development, risk tolerance, and other tendencies—teen drivers are naturally inclined toward increased danger on the roads. Clearly, some methods used in driver education today aren't getting the message through, and in some areas, the message may never get through independent of who does the teaching.

NHTSA and its research partners must find ways to tailor the content and delivery of driver education so that it recognizes these realities and focuses on areas where novice drivers can learn the skills necessary to be safer drivers. A NHTSA pilot program is currently under way with several states to test out updated "best practices" driver education models—not mandates, not national standards, but just best practices.

My bill responds to the call for national leadership in driver education and licensing made at a recent National Transportation Safety Board forum by creating a Driver Education and Licensing Improvement Program within NHTSA. The new Improvement Program will provide NHTSA with the resources and time it needs to run the pilot program and then evaluate the results to see what works and what doesn't.

Once this pilot program has run its course, my bill provides a modest amount of grant funding to supply states with the resources and technical expertise necessary to implement the "best practices" model in a way that fits their specific needs and circumstances. The grants will be competitively awarded, and also will be available for fulfillment of several other state needs with regard to novice driver education and licensing. This grant program is 100 percent voluntary, and my bill has been crafted carefully to ensure that the prerogatives of States are protected in every manner.

The areas ripe for improvement are numerous: instructor certification, curriculum improvement, outreach to increase parental involvement, enforcement of graduated driver licensing laws, and follow-up testing to ensure program effectiveness. These are just a few examples. By creating a National Driver Education and Licensing Improvement Program within NHTSA, and tasking that program to come up with best practices, we can help States interested in improving their programs do so without having to expend the time and resources necessary to "re-invent the wheel" on their own.

I have worked for over a year with NHTSA, the American Driver Training and Safety Education Association, the Governors' Highway Safety Association, the American Motor Vehicle Administrators' Association, AAA, the Driving School Association of America, Advocates for Auto and Highway Safety, and several other groups to come up with the bill that will be introduced today. Its contents are a compromise that reflects significant input from each of these fine organizations, and I believe we are now at a point where the road ahead toward safer, more effective driver education and licensing programs is clear. The goals set by this bill are clear, and the means to achieve them are provided for in full. The time has come to take serious action on driver education and licensing in this country.

Lastly, I'd like to introduce the Safe Intersections Act of 2005. This bill would criminalize the unauthorized sale or use of mobile infrared transmitters, also known as "MIRTs."

A MIRT is a remote control for changing traffic signals. These devices have been used for years by ambulances, police cars, and fire trucks, and maintenance crews, allowing them to reach emergencies faster. As an ambulance approaches an intersection where the light is red, the driver engages the transmitter. That transmitter then sends a signal to a receiver on the traffic light, which changes to green within a few seconds. This is a very useful tool when properly used in emergency situations.

In a 2002 survey, the U.S. Department of Transportation found that in the top 78 metropolitan areas, there are 24,683 traffic lights equipped with the sensors. In Ohio, there is a joint pilot project underway by the Washington Township Fire Department and the Dublin Police Department to install these devices. Other areas in Ohio where they are in use include Mentor, Twinsburg, Willoughby, and Westerville. Here in the District of Columbia, emergency services across the country, law enforcement officers, fire departments, and paramedics utilize this technology to make communities safer.

However, recently it has come to light that this technology may be sold to unauthorized individuals—individuals who want to use this technology to bypass red lights during their commute or during their everyday driving. MIRT was never intended for this use. MIRT technology—in the hands of unauthorized users—could result in traffic problems, like gridlock, or even worse, accidents in which people are injured or killed.

Let me quote from an ad that was posted on the Internet auction site, eBay:

"Tired of sitting at endless red lights? Frustrated by lights that turn from green to red too quickly, trapping you in traffic? The MIRT light changer used by police and other emergency vehicles Change the Traffic Signal Red to Green [for] only $499.00. Traffic Signal Changing Devices—it's every motorist's fantasy to be able to make a red traffic light turn green without so much as easing off the accelerator. The very technology that has for years allowed fire trucks, ambulances, and police cars to get to emergencies faster—a remote control that changes traffic signals—is now much cheaper and potentially accessible."

This ad demonstrates the extent to which the potential widespread sale and possession of MIRT technology by drivers would be a hazard to public safety and must be stopped before it starts. The Congressional Fire Service Institute, Ohio Fire Alliance, and several other organizations have come out in support of this measure. I look forward to working with my colleagues to ensure that it becomes law.

The sixth bill I am introducing today is a bi-partisan bill aimed at reducing the number of drinking and driving deaths and injuries on our roads. Tragically, our Nation has experienced increases in alcohol-related traffic fatalities three of the past four years. In 2003—the last year for which full statistics are available—17,013 Americans died in alcohol-related incidents. This total represents 40 percent of the 42,643 people killed in traffic incidents.

The bill I am introducing today along with Senator LAUTENBERG—the Traffic Safety Law Enforcement Campaign Act—would require states to conduct a combined media/law enforcement campaign aimed at reducing drunk driving fatalities. Specifically, the law enforcement portion consists of sobriety checkpoints in the District of Columbia and in the 39 States that allow them and saturation patrols in those states that do not. The Centers for Disease Control estimate that the sobriety checkpoints proposed in the underlying bill may reduce alcohol related crashes by as much as 20 percent. Law enforcement officials from across the United States underscored this point in a recent conference sponsored by MADD, making high visibility enforcement campaigns a top priority. More than 75 percent of the public has indicated in NHTSA polls their support for sobriety checkpoints. In fact, NHTSA has concluded that 62 percent of Americans want sobriety checkpoints to be used more often.

These six bills will go a long way. They are common sense. They will make a difference. This is something I have been interested in for many years, going back to my time in the Ohio Legislature 20 years ago when I introduced the drunk driving bill, and we were able to pass a tough drunk driving bill in the Ohio Legislature. I worked for .08. It was very controversial in the Senate, but we were able to pass .08. Senator LAUTENBERG and I worked on that.

Anytime you lose 42,643 Americans every year, highway safety is something we all have to be concerned about.

I know the SAFE-TEA highway bill is not on the Floor yet, but I have seen it, and of course was pleased to support it on the Floor last year. As passed by the Senate in 2004, the bill goes farther than any highway bill regard to safety. This year's bill from the Environment and Public Works Committee will enable the same great progress on highway safety. I congratulate the authors.

In the weeks ahead, I look forward to working with the respective committees and outside organizations on the bills I have described above as amendments to the 2005 SAFE-TEA bill. But, I want to make it very clear that these bills and amendments are not in any way critical of the underlying bill. In fact, I hope they will be complementary and simply add to a good product that is already a good product and will help to improve it.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bills be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bills were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

By Mr. ROCKEFELLER (for himself, Mr. KENNEDY, Mr. CORZINE, and Mr. LAUTENBERG):

S. 566. A bill to continue State coverage of medicaid prescription drug coverage to medicare dual eligible beneficiaries for 6 months while still allowing the medicare part D benefit to be implemented as scheduled; to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. ROCKEFELLER. Mr. President, millions of seniors and disabled Americans are facing a major disruption in their health care when the Medicare prescription drug law goes into effect on January 1, 2006. On that singular date, 6.4 million dual eligibles—individuals who are eligible for both Medicare and full Medicaid benefits—will lose their Medicaid prescription drug coverage regardless of whether they have obtained coverage through a Medicare Part D prescription drug plan and regardless of whether their Part D plan’s coverage is as broad as their State’s Medicaid coverage. Such a short transition period leaves no time to address the inevitable problems that will occur with a transition of this magnitude.

Dual eligibles should have as smooth a transition as possible to Medicare prescription drug coverage. Unfortunately, a smooth transition is not what will happen under current law. The Medicare prescription drug law only requires a six-week transition period for dual eligibles, from November 15, 2005, to January 1, 2006. This is the largest transition of individuals from one insurance program to another, public or private, and it is unrealistic to believe that such a huge transition can take place in the span of six weeks.

Moving a large number of seniors and people with disabilities to an entirely new system for prescription drug coverage is a major undertaking. Dual eligibles will require adequate outreach, education, and time to adjust to a change of this magnitude. The stakes are extremely high for this population. Over half are limited in activities of daily living. Many live alone or in nursing homes. And, in comparison to other Medicare beneficiaries, dual eligibles are much more likely to have heart disease, pulmonary disease, diabetes, or Alzheimer’s. Therefore, it is absolutely critical that we get this transition right the first time.

The Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services (CMS) has taken several steps to improve the transition of the dual eligibles from Medicaid to Medicare. However, I fear these steps do not go far enough. Automatic enrollment does not guarantee that beneficiaries will know that they have been enrolled in a new Medicare drug plan or know how to access necessary prescription drugs using that drug plan. Once beneficiaries are enrolled, they are likely to experience ongoing confusion about covered drugs, authorized pharmacies, and the Medicare appeals process.

In its June 2004 report to Congress, the Medicare Payment Advisory Commission (MedPAC) suggested that even large, private employers need at least six months to transition their employees’ drug coverage from one pharmacy benefit manager to another. The two large employers that MedPAC studied had 25,000 and 75,000 employees, respectively. The states and the federal government are taking on a far more complex task with 6.4 million dual eligibles, and should have at least six months to transition the duals to Medicare in order to prevent major disruptions in access to prescription drugs.

I am pleased to be joined today by my distinguished colleagues in the Senate, Senators KENNEDY, CORZINE, and LAUTENBERG, as well as my distinguished co-sponsor in the House of Representatives, Congressman TOM ALLEN of Maine, in introducing the Medicare Dual Eligible Prescription Drug Coverage Act of 2005. This important legislation would extend the dual eligible transition period to six months in order to achieve the best possible health outcomes for some of our Nation’s most vulnerable citizens. An extended timeframe would give states enough time to carry out comprehensive education and outreach initiatives. It would also give seniors and individuals with disabilities time to explore their options and gradually transition to Medicare Part D.

Specifically, the Medicare Dual Eligible Prescription Drug Coverage Act of 2005 would extend the availability of Medicaid prescription drug coverage for six months while still allowing the Part D benefit to be implemented as scheduled. Since states would be temporarily supplementing Medicare Part D, they would be fully relieved of any “clawback” responsibilities during the six-month transition. This legislation would also provide dedicated resources for education and outreach to the dual eligibles, including additional resources for State Health Insurance Assistance Programs (SHIPs). Finally, the Medicare Dual Eligible Prescription Drug Coverage Act would require CMS to share drug utilization data with state Medicaid programs so that states can appropriately coordinate non-prescription drug coverage for the duals.

This is an issue of fundamental fairness. The Medicare law provides Medicare beneficiaries who are not dually eligible for Medicaid six months to transition to Medicare prescription drug coverage. Dual eligibles should not be treated any differently. Medicare's universality is something I fought hard for during the Medicare debate. I strongly believe low-income seniors and disabled individuals should not be excluded from Medicare benefits because of their income levels. The Medicare law should not merely support the principle of universality in statute. It must also support universality in fact, and that means Medicare beneficiaries who are dually eligible for Medicaid must also be given enough time to make a smooth transition to Medicare.

I look forward to working with my colleagues to pass this important legislation. I ask that the full text of this bill, be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 566

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Medicare Dual Eligible Prescription Drug Coverage Act of 2005".

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

The Senate finds the following:

(1) Individuals who are dually eligible for benefits under the medicare program and full benefits under the medicaid program—

(A) are among the most vulnerable populations in our society; and

(B) require adequate outreach, education, and timing in order to adjust to changes in our health care delivery system.

(2) The transition of 6,400,000 dual eligibles from prescription drug coverage under the medicaid program to prescription drug coverage under part D of the medicare program is the largest transition ever of individuals from one insurance program to another.

(3) In its June 2004 report to Congress, the Medicare Payment Advisory Commission (MedPAC) suggested that large, private employers with 75,000 employees or less need at least 6 months to transition their employees' drug coverage from one pharmacy benefit management company to another such company. The States and the Federal Government are taking on a far more complex task with 6,400,000 dual eligibles having to make the transition described in paragraph (2).

(4) Timely access to prescription drugs leads to higher quality of life and prevents avoidable emergency room visits, hospitalizations, and premature nursing home placements.

(5) Since even a short-term gap in prescription drug coverage could have serious health consequences for dual eligibles, Congress must work to guarantee as smooth a transition as possible for dual eligibles so that no dual eligible is without prescription drug coverage even for one day.

SEC. 3. CONTINUING STATE COVERAGE OF MEDICAID PRESCRIPTION DRUG COVERAGE TO MEDICARE DUAL ELIGIBLE BENEFICIARIES FOR 6 MONTHS.

(a) SIX-MONTH TRANSITION.—For prescriptions filled during the period beginning on January 1, 2006, and ending on June 30, 2006, section 1935(d) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1396u-5(d)) shall not apply and, notwithstanding any other provision of law, a State (as defined for purposes of title XIX of such Act) shall continue to provide (and receive Federal financial participation for) medical assistance under such title with respect to prescription drugs as if such section 1935(d) had not been enacted.

(b) APPLICATION.—

(1) MEDICARE AS PRIMARY PAYER.—Nothing in subsection (a) shall be construed as changing or affecting the primary payer status of a prescription drug plan or an MA-PD plan under part D of title XVIII of the Social Security Act with respect to prescription drugs furnished to any full-benefit dual eligible individual (as defined in section 1935(c)(6) of such Act (42 U.S.C. 1396u-5(c)(6))) during the 6-month period described in such subsection.

(2) THIRD PARTY LIABILITY.—Nothing in subsection (a) shall be construed as limiting the authority or responsibility of a State under section 1902(a)(25) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1396a(a)(25)) to seek reimbursement from a prescription drug plan, an MA-PD plan, or any other third party, of the costs incurred by the State in providing prescription drug coverage described in such subsection.

SEC. 4. DELAY IN IMPLEMENTATION OF MEDICAID CLAWBACK PAYMENTS.

Notwithstanding section 1935(c) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1396u-5(c)), a State or the District of Columbia shall not be required to provide for a payment under such section to the Secretary of Health and Human Services for any month prior to July 1, 2006.

By Mr. LUGAR:

S. 567. A bill to provide immunity for nonprofit athletic organizations in lawsuits arising from claims of ordinary negligence relating to the passage, adoption, or failure to adopt rules of play for athletic competitions and practices; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. LUGAR. Mr. President. Today I rise to introduce the Nonprofit Athletic Organization Protection Act of 2005. I am pleased to join with my good friend and colleague, Representative MARK SOUDER, in introducing this measure. This legislation is based on a bill that was introduced in the last legislative session.

I believe that this legislation is very important to encouraging health promotion in our country. The United States has invested a tremendous number of resources in providing our children with the ability to promote fitness through sports. In every town in America, you will find boys and girls playing America's most popular sports: baseball, soccer, football, and, of course, basketball. A recent study by the Sporting Goods Manufacturers Association showed that in 2000 at least 36 million American children played on at least one team sport. Of those 36 million, 26 million children between the ages of 6 and 17, played on an organized team in an organized league. A study by Statistical Research, Inc. for the Amateur Athletic Foundation and ESPN found that 94 percent American children play some sport during the year.

The ability for children to participate in sporting events provides our society many benefits that government cannot provide. Studies have shown that these benefits include betterment to a child's health, academic performance, social development and safety. The most obvious benefit of organized sports is physical fitness. The National Institute of Health Care Maintenance has identified physical activity such as sports as a key factor in the maintenance of a healthy body. Lack of physical activity, along with unhealthy eating habits, has been identified as the leading cause of obesity in children. The center notes: "Physical activity provides numerous mental and physical benefits to health, including reduction in the risk of premature mortality, cardiovascular diseases, hypertension, diabetes, depression, and cancers." A Cooper Institute for Aerobics Research study indicated, "Low fitness outranks fatness as a risk factor for mortality." By encouraging our children to participate in organized sports, we increase physical fitness and fight obesity.

A second benefit in the participation of organized sports is an increase in academic performance. The National Institute of Health Care Maintenance has highlighted "a recent large-scale analysis reported by the California Department of Education [has shown] that the level of physical fitness attained by students was directly related to their performance on standardized achievement measures." When we encourage our children to participate in organized sports, we increase the ability for them to achieve academically.

A third benefit for young people who participate in organized sports is that they learn positive social development. Organized sports teach values of teamwork, fair play, and friendly competition. Success in organized sports is also a vital self-esteem builder in many children.

These three benefits have been widely discussed on the floor of the Senate and we have acted to implement several programs designed to reduce obesity and increase fitness, educational standards and the social well-being of our children.

The fourth benefit to participation in organized youth sports, providing a safe place to play, is a topic that has not received as much attention as the first three. Nonetheless, it is no less important. Fewer kids are simply going outside to play, due to the attraction of TV, video games, and the Internet, combined with parents' safety concerns about letting children run around outside unsupervised. As a result, organized sports teams are an increasingly important source of safe physical activity in children. The American Academy of Pediatrics has stated, "In contrast to unstructured or free play, participation in organized sports provides a greater opportunity to develop rules specifically designed for health and safety."

One primary reason why organized sports provide such an opportunity for safe play is that non-profit, volunteer organizations establish rules to provide a safe place to play. These organizations are made up of professional people who are in the business of providing children a fun and safe avenue for athletic exercise. Organizations like the Boys and Girls Club, the National Council of Youth Sports, the National Federation of State High School Associations and others exist largely to establish rules in order to minimize the risk of injury our children face while participating in sports. No matter how well these organizations perform their work, however, boys and girls will be injured.

Over the last several years, more and more of these rule making bodies have become targets for lawsuits seeking to prove that the rule maker was negligent in making the rules of play. These lawsuits claim that had a different rule been in place, the injury would not have happened. Indeed, these suits place rule makers into a Catch-22. A child can be injured in almost any situation no matter how a rule is written. The result has been to have more and more lawsuits.

As a consequence, the insurance premiums of these organizations have risen dramatically over the past several years. In his testimony before the House Judiciary Committee last year, Robert Kanaby the Executive Director of the National Federation of State High School Associations testified that:

"Over the last three years, the annual liability insurance premiums for the National High School Federation have increased three-fold to about $1,000,000. We have been advised by experts that given our claims experience and the reluctance of insurers to offer such coverage to an organization 'serving 7,000,000 potential claimants,' the premiums will likely increase significantly in years to come. Since we operate on a total budget of about $9,000,000, such an increase would be, to put it mildly, problematical."

The costs have increased to the point where it is possible that these organizations will cease from providing age appropriate rules and the safety of youth sports will decline.

Because of this problem, I join, once again, with Representative MARK SOUDER in introducing the Nonprofit Athletic Organization Protection Act of 2005. This legislation will eliminate lawsuits based on claims that a nonprofit rulemaking body is liable for the physical injury when the rules were made by a properly licensed rulemaking body that has acted within the scope of its authority. Lawsuits may be maintained if the rule maker was grossly negligent or engaged in criminal or reckless misconduct. This reasonable legislation will help sports rule makers to do their job. If we do not pass this legislation, it is likely that rule makers will eventually close their doors since they will be unable to afford the insurance needed to provide a safe sporting environment.

No one who has participated in the debate surrounding this problem has disagreed that the current lawsuit culture needs reform. Instead, concerns have arisen that the remedy was overly broad preventing lawsuits against rule makers on other issue.

To remedy these concerns, the legislation introduced today contains a provision that explicitly says that lawsuits involving "antitrust, labor, environmental, defamation, tortious interference of contract law or civil rights law, or any other federal, state, or local law providing protection from discrimination" are not barred by this bill. This provision was worked out between the civil rights groups, including the National Women's Law Center and the National Federation of State High School Associations, in an effort to alleviate this concern.

As many of my colleagues know, I am a runner. I enjoy the activity and the positive effect that running and athletics have played in my life. I would hope that my nine grandchildren will be able to have an opportunity to participate in organized sports and that lawsuits against rule makers for allegedly faulty rules will not prevent these organizations from functioning properly. I look forward to the consideration and passage of the Nonprofit Athletic Organization Protection Act of 2005 during the 109th Congress.

By Ms. SNOWE (for herself, Ms. MIKULSKI, Mr. HARKIN, Mr. CORZINE, and Mrs. BOXER):

S. 569. A bill to improve the health of women through the establishment of Offices of Women's Health within the Department of Health and Human Services, to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions.

Ms. SNOWE. Mr. President, I rise today, on International Women's Day, to introduce the Women's Health Office Act with my colleague, Senator BARBARA MIKULSKI.

Historically, women's health care needs have been ignored or poorly understood, and women have been systematically excluded from important health research. We heard just this week about a landmark example. One federally-funded study examined the ability of aspirin to prevent heart attacks in 20,000 medical doctors, all of whom were men, despite the fact that heart disease is the leading cause of death among women. When a benefit was found in men, many physicians assumed that the same protective effect applied to women. Just this week, after research on women was finally conducted, we learned that the effect of aspirin on women appear to be quite different. We are simply not protected in the same way men are protected. It is tragic that so much of our medicine has been based on such assumptions.

Today we recognize that both genders should benefit equally from medical research and health care services. Yet equity does not yet exist in health care, and we have a long way to go.

Knowledge about differences in women—in symptoms of disease, and in appropriate measures for prevention and treatment—frequently lags far behind our knowledge of men's health.

We must also recognize that some diseases—such as ovarian cancer and endometriosis—affect only women. Other diseases affect women disproportionately—such as osteoporosis. We also see differences in health care access between men and women. These simply must be reflected in our health policy.

It is for these reasons that we are again introducing the Women's Health Office Act. This legislation provides permanent authorization for offices of women's health in five federal agencies: the Department of Health and Human Services; the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, the Agency for Healthcare Research and Quality; the Health Resources and Services Administration; and the Food and Drug Administration. Currently only two women's health offices in the Federal Government have statutory authorization; the Office of Research on Women's Health at the National Institutes of Health and the Office for Women's Services within the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration.

With some offices established, but not authorized, the needs of women could be compromised without the consent of Congress. We must create statutory authority for these offices, to ensure that health policy flows from fact, not assumption. Improving the health of American women requires a far greater understanding of women's health needs and conditions, and ongoing evaluation in the areas of research, education, prevention, treatment and the delivery of services—and this bill will ensure that.

I must also note today, on International Women's Day, that of all the disease threats to women, few rival the threat of AIDS. Increasingly, the face of the individual with HIV-infection is a woman's. Tragically, it is often the woman's husband who places her at risk, yet in many societies, the status of women makes her use of prevention difficult. One promising way to counter the risk of HIV infection is the development of an effective microbicide—a typical product which women could use to reduce their risk of contracting HIV. A number of scientists are working to develop such a product. If successful, this could prevent millions of infections, and would be a practical means of prevention in much of the world where options for women are so few. For this reason I again join Senator CORZINE today in introducing the Microbicides Development Act. This legislation will establish a coordination of this development at the NIH to reduce the toll of AIDS. Just today we read of a promising new microbicide which appears to show great promise. We must ensure that the promise of microbicides become reality for millions of women. This research is spread over multiple Institutes at NIH, and definitely will benefit from the coordination and integration which this Act will instill.

Today, on a day when we recognize both the achievements and contributions of women, it is fitting, that we provide the support and opportunity to facilitate the continued progress of women. I call on my colleagues to join me in supporting this legislation, which will ensure better health for our mothers, our sisters, our daughters, both here and abroad.

Ms. MIKULSKI. I rise to introduce the Women's Health Office Act with my colleague, Senator OLYMPIA SNOWE. The Women's Health Office Act authorizes and strengthens women's health offices or officers at Federal health agencies in the Department of Health and Human Services. This legislation will make sure that men and women get equal benefit from Federal investments in medical research and health care services.

Today, doctors, scientists, Members of Congress, and the American public know that women and men have different bodies and different health care needs. Diseases like ovarian cancer and endometriosis affect only women. Women are four times more likely to develop osteoporosis than men and according to some estimates, half of all women over 50 will fracture a bone because of osteoporosis in her lifetime.

Despite these differences, men's health needs have set the standard for our health care system and our health care research agenda. Women have been systematically excluded from medical research because decision-makers said that our hormone cycles complicated the results. One study on heart disease risk factors was conducted on 13,000 men—and not one women. But the results of studies like these were applied to both men and women. This neglect puts women's health and lives at risk.

That's why my colleagues and I took action. More than a decade ago, I worked with OLYMPIA SNOWE, TED KENNEDY, TOM HARKIN, and other women in the House to get an Office of Research on Women's Health at the National Institutes of Health, NIH. In 1993, I worked with these same women and Galahads in Congress to make sure that the women's health office would stay at NIH by putting it into law.

This office at NIH has made a real difference in how women are treated for certain illnesses. We now know that men and women often have different symptoms before a heart attack. Women's symptoms are more subtle, like nausea and back pain. Knowing these symptoms means women can get to the hospital sooner and can be treated earlier. That's turning women's health research into life-saving information.

I am proud that there are now women's health offices or officers at nearly every federal health agency at the Department of Health and Human Services. Like the one at NIH, women's health offices mean that women's health needs are always at the table. These offices at the Food and Drug Administration, FDA, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, CDC, and the Health Resources and Services Administration, HRSA, make sure women are included in clinical drug trials, reach out to low-income and minority women to make sure they are getting vaccines and cancer screenings, and work with health care providers to put research on women's health into practice. Recent questions about the risks and benefits of mammography and hormone replacement therapy remind us that women's health offices are as important as ever.

Right now, many of these offices—and the important work they do—could be eliminated or cut back without the consent of Congress. That is why this bill is so important. This bill would put women's health offices into our nation's lawbooks.

The Women's Health Office Act does more than protect the status quo. It keeps us moving forward on women's health. It gives women's health offices a clear, consistent framework throughout the department. By writing them into law, it gives women's health offices the stature they need to be strong, effective advocates for women's health within the Federal Government. This legislation coordinates women's health activities within each agency, to identify needs and set goals. The Women's Health Office Act centralizes overall coordination throughout the Department of Health and Human Services, to clarify lines of accountability and chart a clear course on women's health. Finally, it authorizes funding for these women's health offices or officers, to make sure that we put our nation's priorities in the federal checkbook as well as the Federal lawbooks.

I would like to thank Senator OLYMPIA SNOWE for leading the way on this important legislation. As Dean of the Senate women, I will continue to fight to get this bill signed into law and to make progress to improve the health of American women.

Mr. BIDEN submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary:

S. RES. 73

Whereas Enrique "Kiki" Camarena, a Special Agent of the Drug Enforcement Administration for 11 years, was abducted and brutally murdered by drug barons in 1985;

Whereas Enrique Camarena dedicated his life to serving the law enforcement community and the Nation as a whole and was the devoted husband of Geneva Alvarado and loving father of Enrique, Daniel, and Eric;

Whereas Enrique Camarena received 2 Sustained Superior Performance Awards and a Special Achievement Award while serving the Drug Enforcement Administration;

Whereas Enrique Camarena's dedication to reducing the scourge of drugs eventually cost him his life;

Whereas "Camarena Clubs" to combat drug abuse have been created in high schools across the Nation to honor his memory;

Whereas Enrique Camarena is honored each year during National Red Ribbon Week; and

Whereas the 20th Anniversary of Enrique Camarena's death will be specially honored on March 9, 2005, at the Drug Enforcement Administration headquarters: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate—

(1) mourns the loss of Enrique "Kiki" Camarena;

(2) recognizes the contributions of Enrique Camarena to our National efforts to combat drug abuse;

(3) admires the courage and dedication of Enrique Camarena in his work as a Special Agent of the Drug Enforcement Administration;

(4) expresses gratitude for the legacy left by Enrique Camarena; and

(5) directs the Secretary of the Senate to transmit an enrolled copy of this resolution to the family of Enrique Camarena.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, I rise today to submit a resolution to commemorate the outstanding life and tragic but courageous death of Enrique "Kiki" Camarena, a Special Agent of the Drug Enforcement Administration.

Enrique grew from a boy in the small town of Mexicali in Baja California, Mexico to a man as a United States Marine. During his two year tour as a Legal Clerk with the Marine Corps in San Diego, Enrique received the National Defense Service Medal. It was during this time that Enrique first demonstrated his dedication to the United States.

Following his honorable discharge from the Marine Corps in 1970, Enrique demonstrated his courage as a fireman for the City of Calexico while demonstrating his intelligence as a student at Imperial Valley College, where he earned an Associates degree in 1972. It was also in 1970 that Enrique Camarena first showed his interest in law enforcement by joining the Calexico, CA Police Department. In May 1973, he began what would be his life-long fight against drug abuse when he was assigned to El Centro, CA, where he served for 13 months as a Narcotics Investigator for Imperial County.

Those 13 months as a Narcotics Investigator proved to be a life-altering time for Enrique. In June 1974, he took his determination to dismantle drug organizations to the Federal level, as a Special Agent of the Drug Enforcement Administration. During his time with DEA, Special Agent Camarena returned to his hometown in California for several years prior to his assignment in Guadalajara, Mexico, which began in July 1981.

During his 11 years with DEA, Special Agent Enrique Camarena received two Sustained Superior Performance Awards and a Special Achievement Award. Each award recognized Enrique's dedication to the fight against drug abuse and determination to scourge our country of illegal drugs.

His frustration with the drug trade was perhaps most evident by a statement that would later prove to be prophetic: He asked, "What's gonna have to happen? Does somebody have to die before anything is done? Is somebody going to have to get killed?"

On Thursday, February 7, 1985, at 2:00 p.m., Special Agent Camarena left the American Consulate in Guadalajara to meet his wife for lunch. Having come dangerously close to unlocking a multi-billion drug pipeline, Enrique was awaiting a reassignment, which was just three weeks away. Enrique never met his wife for lunch that day and he never received his reassignment.

As he neared his truck that afternoon, five men approached him and shoved him into a car. By February 10, DEA Administrator Francis "Bud" Mullen had flown to Guadalajara and to help begin the search for Enrique.

On March 5, Enrique's body was found on a ranch outside of the town of Zamora, Mexico, approximately 60 miles outside of Guadalajara. Autopsy reports indicated that Special Agent Camarena had been tortured and beaten. Three days after his body was discovered, twenty years ago today, he was returned to the United States for burial.

Following the death of Special Agent Enrique Camarena and the press attention that the killing generated, "Camarena Clubs" started throughout the El Cajon, CA area. These "Camarena Clubs" were formed to create a united front against drug abuse among students, teachers and others in the community.

The summer of 1985 saw a surge in national interest in Enrique's memory and the problems of drug abuse. The Virginia Federation of Parents and the Illinois Drug Education Alliance called on every American to wear red ribbons to symbolize their commitment to help reduce the demand for drugs in their communities. Since then, the Red Ribbon campaign has taken on national significance.

Red Ribbon Week is celebrated annually in cities across the country. The DEA and many other drug abuse prevention organizations around America help to sponsor this annual event. In Delaware, the Substance Abuse Awareness Committee sponsors Red Ribbon Week each October to take a visible stand against drugs through the symbol of the Red Ribbon.

Special Agent Enrique Camarena was a devoted husband to Geneva "Mika" Alvarado and a loving father to three sons, Enrique, Daniel and Eric. Today, I ask that the United States Senate formally recognize the life and death of Kiki, as his family lovingly calls him, to place official emphasis on the impact he made on America.

SENATE RESOLUTION 74—DESIGNATING MARCH 8, 2005, AS “INTERNATIONAL WOMEN’S DAY”

Mr. BIDEN (for himself, Mrs. CLINTON, Mr. LUGAR, Mr. KOHL, Mrs. MURRAY, Mr. LAUTENBERG, Ms. STABENOW, Mrs. BOXER, Mr. BAYH, Ms. LANDRIEU, Mr. JOHNSON, Mr. JEFFORDS, Mr. LEVIN, Mr. FEINGOLD, Mr. DODD, Mr. SARBANES, Mr. CORZINE, Mr. KERRY, Mr. OBAMA, Mr. SALAZAR, Mr. KENNEDY, Ms. MIKULSKI, Mrs. LINCOLN, Mr. HATCH, Mrs. FEINSTEIN, and Mr. REID) submitted the following resolution; which was considered and agreed to:

S. RES. 74

Whereas all over the world, women are contributing to the growth of economies, participating in the world of diplomacy and politics, and improving the quality of the lives of their families, communities, and nations;

Whereas discrimination continues to deny women full political and economic equality and is often the basis for violations of women’s basic human rights;

Whereas worldwide, the lives and health of women and girls continue to be endangered by violence that is directed at them simply because they are female;

Whereas worldwide, violence against women includes rape, genital mutilation, sexual assault, domestic violence, dating violence, honor killings, human trafficking, dowry-related violence, female infanticide, sex-selection abortion, forced pregnancy, forced sterilization, and forced abortion;

Whereas the World Health Organization asserts that domestic violence causes more deaths and disability among women aged 15 to 44 than cancer, malaria, traffic accidents, and war;

Whereas worldwide, 130,000,000 girls and young women have been subjected to female genital mutilation;

Whereas worldwide, at least 1 in 3 females has been beaten or sexually abused in her lifetime;

Whereas worldwide, 20 to 50 percent of women experience some degree of domestic violence during marriage;

Whereas 1 in 4 women in the United States have been raped or physically assaulted by an intimate partner at some point in their lives;

Whereas somewhere in the United States, a woman is battered, usually by her partner, every 15 seconds;

Whereas more than 3 women are murdered by their husbands or boyfriends in the United States every day;

Whereas battering is the leading cause of injury to women aged 15 to 44 in the United States;

Whereas it is estimated that 1 in 5 adolescent girls in the United States becomes a victim of physical or sexual abuse, or both, in a dating relationship;

Whereas worldwide, women account for 1/2 of all cases of HIV/AIDS, and in Africa, young women are 3 times more likely to contract the virus than men;

Whereas worldwide, sexual violence, including marital rape, has been denounced as a major cause of the rapid spread of HIV/AIDS among women;

Whereas between 75 and 80 percent of the world’s millions of refugees are women and children;

Whereas illegal trafficking worldwide for forced labor, domestic servitude, and sexual exploitation involves between 1,000,000 and 2,000,000 women and children each year, of whom approximately 50,000 are transported to the United States;

Whereas 2/3 of the world’s nearly 1,000,000,000 illiterate individuals are women;

Whereas 2/3 of the children denied primary education are girls;

Whereas these educational failures have serious consequences for the global economy and the United States national security, as well as for tens of millions of girls who are losing the chance to discover their worth and importance as global citizens;

Whereas girls who are educated are more likely to have healthy and stable families, lower mortality rates, higher nutrition levels, and delayed sexual activity, and have less chance of contracting HIV/AIDS or having unwanted pregnancies;

Whereas in most countries, women work approximately 2 times more unpaid time than men do;

Whereas women work 2/3 of the world’s working hours and produce 1/2 of the world’s food, yet earn only 10 percent of the world’s income and own less than 1 percent of the world’s property;

Whereas 3 in 10 households are maintained by women with no husband present;

Whereas rural women produce more than 55 percent of all food grown in developing countries;

Whereas it is estimated that women and girls make up more than 70 percent of the poorest people in the world;

Whereas worldwide, women earn less, own less property, and have less access to education, employment, and health care than do men;

Whereas microcredit is a stunningly simple, inexpensive tool that can forever alter the economic landscape for the better;

Whereas women now make up 80 percent of the world’s 70,000,000 microcredit borrowers, and from India to Nicaragua to South Africa to Costa Rica, women are proving that small loans can transform individual lives, families, and entire communities;

Whereas nations should take steps to ensure the full participation and representation of women in political conferences, committees, plenaries, and parliaments;

Whereas social investment, particularly investments in women and girls, should be an integral part of foreign policy;

Whereas despite extraordinary advances, women still comprise the majority of the world’s poor, illiterate, and uneducated, remain under-compensated for the work they do, still do not have adequate access to medical care in too many countries, are under-represented in leadership positions in government and business, and continue to be targeted for unspeakable atrocities in war and conflict;

Whereas March 8 has become known as International Women’s Day for the last century, and is a day on which people, who are often divided by ethnicity, language, culture, and income, come together to celebrate a common struggle for women’s equality, justice, and peace;

Whereas the dedication and successes of those working all over the world to end violence against women and girls and fighting for equality should be recognized; and

Whereas the people of the United States should be encouraged to participate in International Women’s Day: Now, therefore be it

Resolved, That the Senate—

(1) designates March 8, 2005, as International Women’s Day;

(2) reaffirms its commitment to—

(A) improve women’s access to quality health care, including HIV/AIDS prevention and treatment;

(B) end and prevent violence against women, including the trafficking of women and girls worldwide, and ensure that the criminals who engage in these activities are brought to justice;

(C) end discrimination and increase the participation of women in decisionmaking positions in government and the private sector;

(D) extend full economic opportunities to women, including access to microfinance and microenterprise; and

(E) strengthen the role of women as agents of peace because women are among the best emissaries for easing religious, racial, and ethnic tensions, crossing cultural divides, and reducing violence in areas of war and conflict; and

(3) encourages the people of the United States to observe “International Women’s Day” with appropriate programs and activities.

SENATE RESOLUTION 75—DESIGNATING MARCH 25, 2005, AS “GREEK INDEPENDENCE DAY: A NATIONAL DAY OF CELEBRATION OF GREEK AND AMERICAN DEMOCRACY”

Mr. SPECTER (for himself, Mr. SARBANES, Mr. ALLEN, Mr. BENNETT, Mr. BIDEN, Mr. BINGAMAN, Mrs. BOXER, Mr. CARPER, Mr. CHAFEE, Mr. CHAMBLISS, Mrs. CLINTON, Mr. COBURN, Mr. COCHRAN, Mr. CORZINE, Mr. CRAIG, Mr. DEWINE, Mr. DODD, Mr. DOMENICI, Mr. DORGAN, Mr. DURBIN, Mr. FEINGOLD, Mrs. FEINSTEIN, Mr. GRASSLEY, Mr. GREGG, Mr. HAGEL, Mr. INHOFE, Mr. JOHNSON, Mr. KENNEDY, Mr. KERRY, Mr. KOHL, Ms. LANDRIEU, Mr. LAUTENBERG, Mr. LEVIN, Mr. LIEBERMAN, Mr. LOTT, Mr. LUGAR, Ms. MIKULSKI, Ms. MURKOWSKI, Mrs. MURRAY, Mr. NELSON of Florida, Mr. OBAMA, Mr. REED, Mr. REID, Mr. ROCKEFELLER, Mr. SALAZAR, Mr. SANTORUM, Mr. SCHUMER, Mr. SMITH, Ms. SNOWE, Ms. STABENOW, Mr. STEVENS, Mr. SUNUNU, Mr. THOMAS, Mr. VOINOVICH, and Mr. WYDEN) submitted the following resolution; which was considered and agreed to:

S. RES. 75

Whereas the ancient Greeks developed the concept of democracy, in which the supreme power to govern was vested in the people;

Whereas the Founding Fathers of the United States drew heavily on the political experience and philosophy of ancient Greece in forming our representative democracy;

Whereas Greek Commander in Chief Petros Mavromichalis, a founder of the modern Greek state, said to the citizens of the United States in 1821, “it is in your land that liberty has fixed her abode and . . . in imitating you, we shall imitate our ancestors and be thought worthy of them if we succeed in resembling you”;

Whereas Greece played a major role in the World War II struggle to protect freedom and democracy through such bravery as was shown in the historic Battle of Crete that presented the Axis land war with its first major setback, setting off a chain of events that significantly affected the outcome of World War II;

Whereas the price for Greece in holding our common values in their region was high, as hundreds of thousands of civilians were killed in Greece during the World War II period;

Whereas, throughout the 20th century, Greece was 1 of only 3 nations in the world, beyond the former British Empire, that was allied with the United States in every major international conflict;

Whereas President George W. Bush, in recognizing Greek Independence Day, said, "Greece and America have been firm allies in the great struggles for liberty. Americans will always remember Greek heroism and Greek sacrifice for the sake of freedom . . . [and] as the 21st Century dawns, Greece and America once again stand united; this time in the fight against terrorism. The United States deeply appreciates the role Greece is playing in the war against terror. . . . America and Greece are strong allies, and we're strategic partners.";

Whereas Greece is a stabilizing force by virtue of its political and economic power in the volatile Balkan region and is one of the fastest growing economies in Europe;

Whereas Greece, through excellent work and cooperation with United States and international law enforcement agencies, arrested and convicted key members of the November 17 terrorist organization;

Whereas President Bush stated that Greece's successful "law enforcement operations against a terrorist organization [November 17] responsible for three decades of terrorist attacks underscore the important contributions Greece is making to the global war on terrorism";

Whereas Greece was extraordinarily responsive to United States requests during the war with Iraq, as Greece immediately granted unlimited access to its airspace and the base in Souda Bay, and many United States ships delivering troops, cargo, and supplies to Iraq were refueled in Greece;

Whereas the Olympic Games came home in August 2004 to Athens, Greece, the land of their ancient birthplace 2,500 years ago and the city of their modern revival in 1896;

Whereas Greece received world-wide praise for its extraordinary handling of over 14,000 athletes from 202 countries and over 2,000,000 spectators and journalists and did so efficiently, securely, and with its famous Greek hospitality;

Whereas the unprecedented Olympic security effort in Greece for the first post-9/11 Olympics included a record-setting expenditure of over $1,390,000,000 and assignment of over 70,000 security personnel, as well as the utilization of an 8-country Olympic Security Advisory Group which included the United States;

Whereas Greece, geographically located in a region where Christianity meets Islam and Judaism, maintains excellent relations with Muslim nations and Israel;

Whereas Greece has had extraordinary success in recent years in furthering cross-cultural understanding and reducing tensions between Greece and Turkey;

Whereas Greece and the United States are at the forefront of the effort for freedom, democracy, peace, stability, and human rights;

Whereas those and other ideals have forged a close bond between our 2 nations and their peoples;

Whereas March 25, 2005, marks the 184th anniversary of the beginning of the revolution that freed the Greek people from the Ottoman Empire; and

Whereas it is proper and desirable to celebrate with the Greek people and to reaffirm the democratic principles from which our 2 great nations were born: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate—

(1) designates March 25, 2005, as "Greek Independence Day: A National Day of Celebration of Greek and American Democracy"; and

(2) encourages the people of the United States to observe the day with appropriate ceremonies and activities.

SENATE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION 15—ENCOURAGING ALL AMERICANS TO INCREASE THEIR CHARITABLE GIVING, WITH THE GOAL OF INCREASING THE ANNUAL AMOUNT OF CHARITABLE GIVING IN THE UNITED STATES BY 1 PERCENT

Mr. SANTORUM submitted the following concurrent resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Finance:

S. CON. RES. 15

Whereas individual charitable giving rates among Americans have stagnated at 1.5 to 2.2 percent of aggregate individual income for the past 50 years;

Whereas a 1 percent increase (from 2 percent to 3 percent) in charitable giving will generate over $90,000,000,000 to charity;

Whereas charitable giving is a significant source of funding for health, education, and welfare programs; and

Whereas a 1 percent increase in charitable giving may reduce the Federal deficit, reduce the call for tax increases, and provide funds to benefit our national health, education, and welfare goals: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That Congress encourages all Americans to increase their charitable giving, with the goal of increasing the annual amount of charitable giving in the United States by 1 percent.

Mr. SANTORUM. Mr. President, I rise today to submit a resolution that encourages all Americans to increase their charitable giving with the goal of increasing charitable giving in the United States by 1 percent.

I am proud to be a citizen of such a charitable nation. However, individual charitable giving rates among Americans have stagnated over the past 50 years. On average, Americans donate 2 percent of their aggregate income to charitable causes. A 1-percent increase to 3 percent could generate up to $90 billion annually. Further, a 1-percent increase in charitable giving has the potential to reduce the Federal deficit, reduce the call for tax increases, and provide our national health, education, and welfare programs with much needed assistance in performing their duties.

I also realize the Government's role to make it easier for Americans to be charitable. As legislators, we must provide incentives for charitable giving, opportunities for low-income families to build individual assets, and support faith-based and secular organizations as they provide charitable social services. I remain committed to promoting increased opportunities for the less fortunate to obtain help through faith-based and community organizations.

There are people all around the country waiting to give more to charity—they just need a little push. The CARE Act gives that in the form of a series of targeted tax incentives. The bill provides $2 billion in food-donation incentives that would allow farmers, restaurants and corporations to give more of their surplus food to local food banks and soup kitchens. America's Second Harvest estimates this provision translates into an additional 878 million meals for the hungry over the next 10 years.

In addition, the CARE Act removes the tax penalties that are preventing larger-dollar donors from rolling over their IRA account funds to assist a wide range of charities, including foundations, colleges and universities. If the CARE Act passes, individuals will be able to give 30 percent more in tax-free IRA contributions than would otherwise be possible.

The spirit of giving is part of what makes America great. I submit this resolution to remind us all that more can be done to assist the needy. I encourage my colleagues to support this resolution.

INTERNATIONAL WOMEN'S DAY

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the resolution by title.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A resolution (S. Res. 74) designating March 8, 2005, as "International Women's Day."

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the resolution.

Mr. DURBIN. Today, March 8, is International Women's Day. This day provides a special opportunity for us to reflect on the status of women throughout the world and to think about what we can do to improve the health and well-being of some of the world's most vulnerable women.

Today, I would like us to think about Uganda, where I sat on a porch with mothers who were HIV-positive. These mothers were gathering scrapbooks, photos, notes, and little memorabilia of their lives to leave to their children. Their children, playing in the yard, had already lost one parent, and were now about to lose a second.

I would like us to think about South Africa, where I saw women waiting for hours on wooden benches, inside a clinic made from old rail cars, in the hope that they might be sick enough to qualify for antiretroviral treatment for HIV.

And, I would like us to think about Bangladesh, where I saw women who had known nothing but poverty, but who, thanks to a tiny loan, had become entrepreneurs. They were offering cell phone service to their villages, made possible by their ownership of a single, solar-powered cell phone.

The stories of women like these from around the world are often stories of great sadness, but also stories of hope. The health and economic well-being of these women and their families are deeply intertwined. If we can improve one, we may be able to improve the other as well.

The connection between health and economic well-being is clearly apparent in two areas of international assistance: fighting HIV/AIDS, and providing family planning.

Women are now the face of AIDS in many parts of the world. In sub-Saharan Africa, 57 percent of those infected with HIV are women. Younger women are at particular risk. They are three times more likely than young men to be infected. This striking statistic, according to Stephen Lewis, the United Nations Secretary General's Special Envoy for HIV/AIDS in Africa, "is unprecedented in the history of the pandemic and . . . perhaps the most ominous warning of what is yet to come."

HIV/AIDS exploits and widens the inequities that make women more vulnerable. Women may have fewer economic opportunities, making them dependent on others for simple survival. When a family's resources are limited, any available money may go first for care and treatment for the men. Where women do not have rights to property, a husband's death can leave a widow and her children with literally nothing except infection with HIV. Women are also too often at risk for sexual violence and coercion.

The list of problems is long. It is clear that to win the fight against HIV/AIDS, we must address the many and wide-ranging impacts of the disease on women. Our strategies to fight HIV/AIDS should include approaches such as microcredit programs that provide women with small loans. These loans, often as small as $10, enable women to start businesses to sustain themselves and their families. We should also support efforts to keep girls in school, using education's effectiveness as a "social vaccine" against HIV infection. We should work to make prevention, care, and treatment accessible to women. We must address the problem of gender-based violence and intimidation.

And, as part of our strategy, we should also support promising women-centered technologies such as microbicides. This is why I am a cosponsor of the Microbicides Development Act being introduced today. This bill calls on the Federal Government to accelerate and coordinate research and development of microbicides.

Family planning is another area that can have important benefits for women's health and economic well being. The World Bank has called family planning "a development success story" because it contributes so greatly not just to women's health and opportunities, but also to the social and economic development of entire societies. Family planning improves economie and educational opportunities for women and their families. It also has a direct effect on health.

Worldwide, over half a million women die each year from pregnancy or delivery. Family planning makes pregnancy safer by reducing unintended pregnancies and by allowing couples to space births, giving mothers' bodies more time to recover between pregnancies. Spacing births 3 to 5 years apart can prevent the deaths of women and children. It decreases a mother's risk of dying from childbirth by 2.5 times, and also decreases by 2.5 times the baby's risk of dying before the age of five.

Unfortunately, many couples still lack access to family planning care. Worldwide, an estimated 200 million women want to delay the birth of their next child or stop childbearing altogether, but lack access to effective contraceptive methods.

Fully funding this unmet need for contraceptives could reduce abortions by 22 million, infant deaths by 1.4 million, and pregnancy-related deaths by 142,000. Improving access to family planning care is also a wise economic investment. Studies from Mexico, Thailand, Egypt, and Vietnam have found that every dollar spent on family planning saves $8 to $31 in government expenditures.

The United States has been a leading supporter of family planning programs since the 1960s. For family planning's many benefits to women's health and lives, I hope we will continue our leadership in this area.

Today, on International Women's Day, we have an opportunity to recognize the progress that has been made in advancing the health and economic well-being of women. We also have an obligation to renew our commitment to providing the care that is needed to help some of the world's most vulnerable women and their families.

When we face challenges, we must not be deterred. When we experience success, we ought not to become complacent. Winston Churchill reminds us, "Success is not final, failure is not fatal: it is the courage to continue that counts." The women that I have met in Uganda, South Africa, and Bangladesh have all had the courage to continue. We too must continue our efforts to improve the health and lives of women around the world.

Mrs. CLINTON. Mr. President, today we commemorate International Women's Day. Discussions that will take place this week in celebration of International Women's Day allow women leaders, policy makers and experts from governments around the world to take stock of our progress and recommend concrete steps for future action.

I commend U.N. Secretary General Kofi Annan for using his platform at the United Nations to advocate on behalf of women's rights. More than most, the Secretary General knows firsthand that global progress depends on securing the rights of women worldwide. I am grateful to him for raising his voice on behalf of women and for the pivotal role the U.N. continues to play in advancing women's rights on every continent.

About 2 weeks ago, I had the privilege of traveling to Iraq, Afghanistan and Pakistan with some of my colleagues on the Senate Armed Services Committee. I visited U.S. troops and had a chance to see the extraordinary work these dedicated men and women are doing under extremely trying circumstances.

I also spent a few very valuable moments with Iraqi and Afghan women, just as I had done on a previous visit to Iraq and Afghanistan during Thanksgiving in 2003. What I saw, and what I heard from these women, was both inspiring and unnerving. In many ways the experiences of Iraqi women, and their counterparts in Afghanistan, underscore the opportunities unfolding for women all over the globe. But they also represent an enduring truth—that no matter how far we have come and how much hope is on the horizon, women must continue to work, struggle, and fight for every ounce of progress we make. Even then there are no guarantees.

Ten years ago, women from 189 countries came together for the United Nations Fourth World Conference on Women in Beijing. It was a gathering that lasted only a few days, but it changed the world.

We were women of all colors, races, ethnicities, languages, and religious backgrounds. Yet we knew that, as women, we shared common aspirations and dreams, as well as concerns and worries about the futures of our families and our communities.

In Beijing, after years, decades, indeed centuries, we broke our silence. Together we spoke up and we spoke out.

We spoke out on behalf of women and their daughters, mothers and sisters; women who were underpaid, under-educated and undervalued; women who were deprived of the right to go to school, earn a living, see a doctor, own property, get a loan, cast a vote or run for office; women who were persecuted, abused, violated, even killed because there were no laws to protect them or no enforcement of the laws that were supposed to protect them.

Although some governments and officials doubted that a United Nations conference on women would have an impact, what transpired in Beijing was the beginning of a global movement. It was a global movement focusing attention on the issues that matter most in the lives of women and their families: access to education, health care, jobs and credit, and the opportunity to enjoy the full range of political, legal and human rights.

We called on governments around the world to promote and protect women's rights unequivocally and to act on the ideal that "women's rights are human rights and human rights are women's rights."

We made our case that global progress depends on the progress of women; that democratic institutions cannot thrive and survive without the participation of women; that market economies cannot grow and prosper without the inclusion of women; that societies are not truly free and just without legal protections and rights for women; that a nation cannot advance into the 21st century and in the Information Age without educated, literate women.

Today, as we face new and daunting enemies—from stateless terrorism to the global pandemic of HIV/AIDS to the scourge of human trafficking—we are learning that our Nation and our world cannot be secure or at peace if women are denied the right to fulfill their God-given potential at home, at school, at work, at the ballot box, in the courthouse and in the board room.

The Beijing Conference got us going. Governments, working with NGOs, used the Beijing Platform for Action as a road map. In the 10 years since, many have taken significant steps in the right direction.

From Mongolia to Indonesia to Tajikistan, we are seeing more equitable laws protecting women from discrimination, abuse and violence. From Gambia to Chile more women are getting elected or appointed to leadership roles in government. Our global movement is having a profound impact around the world.

Turkey recently passed sweeping legislative reforms to protect the rights of women with regard to rape and honor killings.

In Ethiopia, a center funded by the U.S. Agency for International Development opened last summer to offer medical assistance and counseling to women and girls who are victims of human trafficking.

Morocco instituted new family law that gives women equal rights to make decisions about marriage, divorce custody and alimony.

In Afghanistan, for the first time, a woman, Dr. Masooda Jalal, ran for the presidency. And Habiba Sarobi was just appointed governor of one of Afghanistan's central provinces. She is the first woman to hold a provincial government post in Afghanistan.

In Mexico, Amalia Garcia became the third woman ever to be elected governor of a state in her country.

In Iran, Dr. Shirin Ebadi, a woman lawyer, judge, and human rights activist, was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize in 2003.

The following year in Kenya, Wangari Maathai, the deputy minister of the environment, won the Nobel Peace prize for her efforts to protect the environment and advance opportunities for poor women.

In the United States, the Clinton administration launched the Vital Voices democracy initiative to help women around the globe build democratic institutions and market economies in their own countries. During my husband's administration, I was honorary chair of the President's Interagency Council on Women, whose job was to follow up on Beijing and make sure that policies and programs relating to women and girls were a priority in every federal agency.

President Clinton's administration was the first ever to understand that social investment particularly investments in women and girls should be an integral part of foreign policy. Secretary Madeleine Albright led the charge, and I am grateful for her energy and vision.

These achievements might not have been possible without the galvanizing effects of Beijing. We should all be very proud of the work we have done here in the United States, as well as around the world, to advance the Beijing agenda and ensure that we continue to make progress on all of these fronts.

But where do we go from here?

Despite our advances, women still comprise the majority of the world's poor, illiterate and uneducated. Women remain undercompensated for the work they do in every country on Earth. Women in too many countries still do not have adequate access to medical care or the fundamental right to plan their own families. Women are underrepresented in leadership positions in government and business. Women continue to be targeted for unspeakable atrocities in war and conflict.

At this very moment, women and girls in some parts of the world are being forced into marriages they do not want. They are dying of HIV/AIDS in disproportionate numbers. They are getting trapped in the bondage of international trafficking rings. They are being subjected to rape, mutilation and murder as a tactic or prize of war. They are left diseased, destitute and dying in refugee camps.

In too many instances, the march to globalization has also meant the marginalization of women and girls. That has to change.

This week's events offer an opportunity not just to assess our progress and pat ourselves on the back. We also must reaffirm the goals laid out in the Beijing platform for action and adopt our strategies to meet the new and complex challenges of the 21st century.

Specifically:

One, we must continue to improve access to quality health care, including reproductive and sexual health and HIV/AIDS prevention and treatment.

When women and girls are healthy, we all benefit from lower rates of maternal and child mortality, improved public health, a decline in population growth, a more productive work force and more stable families.

Among the most serious health crises facing women today is HIV/AIDS. About half of those infected worldwide are women. In Africa, young women are three times more likely to contract the virus than men. A vicious cycle of poverty, inadequate health care, illiteracy, sexual coercion and gender-based violence make this a daunting problem with implications well beyond the developing world.

That is why Senator BOXER and I proposed an amendment to the Global AIDS bill that would provide assistance to foreign countries to combat HIV/AIDS, tuberculosis and malaria.

We also have to ensure that women enjoy the fundamental right to plan their own families and that they have access to family planning services.

This is not an easy issue. There are people with equally strong passions and convictions on both sides. But we should all be able to agree that we want every child born in this country and around the world to be wanted, cherished and loved. And the best way to achieve that is to educate the public about reproductive health and how to prevent unsafe and unwanted pregnancies.

Research shows that the primary reason that teenage girls abstain is because of their religious and moral values. We should embrace this and support programs that reinforce the idea that abstinence at a young age is not just the smart thing to do; it is the right thing to do. But we should also recognize what works and what does not work and the jury is still out on the effectiveness of abstinence-only programs. I do not think this debate should be about ideology, it should be about facts. We have to deal with the choices young people make and not only the choices we want them to make. We should use all the resources at our disposal to ensure teens are getting the information they need to make the right decisions.

Today, roughly 20 million women worldwide risk unsafe abortions every year. About 68,000, most of them in developing countries, die in the process. Many more suffer horrific injuries. The World Health Organization estimates that about 600,000 women die each year from pregnancy-related causes. Many times that number suffer grievous injury. Many of these deaths could be prevented by providing women with the information and means to choose the size and spacing of their families.

Yet, the Bush administration is making it more difficult for women in these situations to receive safe medical care. Under the global gag rule, none of our foreign aid dollars can go to foreign NGOs that provide abortions beyond cases of rape, incest or endangerment to the mother. Or provide abortion counseling or advocate the legalization of abortion in their countries.

In places such as Nepal and Afghanistan, which suffer from some of the highest maternal mortality rates in the world, clinics funded by our government provided a full range of health services to women and girls. But with the Bush administration's reinstatement of the global gag rule, those funds have dried up; the doors to the clinics are closed. When I visited Afghanistan two years ago and recently, Afghan women asked that the U.S. renew women's health assistance for that country.

Practically speaking, making it harder for women to get information, counseling and family planning services is a counterproductive policy. It does nothing to reduce abortion; in fact, it may do quite the opposite. Without access to contraception and family planning services, there will be more unwanted pregnancies. Without access to adequate medical care, many pregnant women will die undergoing unsafe abortions.

There is no reason why governments cannot help educate women and assist girls and women with their health care needs. It is the most effective way to reduce abortions and improve the health and well-being of women and their families.

Two, we must prevent violence against women, and that includes the trafficking of women and girls worldwide, and we must make sure that the criminals who engage in these activities are brought to justice and not allowed to go free.

For all the benefits of globalization, modern technology and instant communications, there are dark sides. One of the most insidious is the crime and heinous human rights violation of human trafficking.

As many as 800,000 men, women and children are trafficked across international borders each year, lured by the promise of jobs or a better life, only to find themselves trapped in prostitution, forced labor and debt bondage.

I will never forget visiting a school in northern Thailand that took in young girls whose lives were ruined by prostitution and taught them vocational skills. Many of the girls had contracted HIV/AIDS. I remember crouching in front of a teenage girl in a wheelchair who was so ill that she could barely raise her hands to greet me. The girl had been sold into prostitution by her family because they were desperate for money. She had escaped her brothel, returned home, and was sold again. She died a few days after my visit.

I also met with women leaders from Eastern and Central Europe and our government launched campaigns in Lviv, Ukraine, and in Istanbul to combat trafficking. I am proud that in March of 1998, President Clinton condemned human trafficking as a violation of human rights and outlined the prevention, protection and prosecution framework and strategy which led to the first anti-trafficking bill, which he signed into law in 2000.

Now the Senate must ratify the Protocol to Prevent, Suppress, and Punish Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children. Our government played a major role in developing this Protocol that has led many countries around the world to enact new antitrafficking legislation and we and other member states must ratify it. So far 79 countries have ratified it and I believe that it is past time for our country to provide clearer leadership to other countries who have not yet ratified this landmark instrument of international cooperation.

But more is needed. I am heartened that since we initially helped bring global attention to this issue that our work continues to grow. But I am equally concerned that current efforts have not yet achieved the concrete results desperately needed by the victims of trafficking like the girls I visited whose lives were ravaged by their servitude. We have a deep responsibility to all of trafficking's victims to do better and I am committed to continue to work on their behalf.

In a related area, the U.S. and other nations must, for moral and economic reasons, support efforts to curb all forms of violence against women, be it mass rapes in Bosnia and Darfur or battered women suffering in the silence of their own homes in America.

Three, we must continue to increase participation of women in decision-making positions in government and the private sector.

Women are on the front lines when it comes to issues involving their children, their families and their communities. But too often their voices are not part of the political dialogue. We need to make sure that women have every opportunity to make their voices heard, to be part of civic life and to contribute to the formation of policies and programs that will affect their lives and the lives of those around them.

NGOs have been a critical element of promoting women's human rights. They were the voice for women in Afghanistan during the dark days of the Taliban. Thanks to organizations such as the Vital Voices Global Partnership, more and more women around the world are learning the skills necessary to run political organizations and campaigns, build political networks and win elective office. As more women enter the political arena, research shows that their presence raises the standards of ethical behavior, lowers corruption and makes political institutions more responsive to constituents.

We have seen women in Rwanda win nearly half the seats in their parliament during the 2003 elections. Their active participation makes Rwanda stronger.

We have seen Afghan women refuse to sell their voter registration cards to tribal warlords and defy expectations by voting. Their active participation makes Afghanistan stronger.

We just saw Iraqi women refuse to run away from polling stations in January despite the enormous risk and sometimes flying bullets. Their active participation will make Iraq stronger.

We were all moved by photos of women and men on Election Day in Iraq holding up their ink-stained fingers, showing their courage and determination to vote freely in their country's first democratic elections. We were encouraged that a significant number of women were candidates and won.

The wide participation in this election gives us good reason to be cautiously optimistic that Iraq is on the path to building a stable and secure democratic government. But there are also troubling signs: Women have been targeted for retribution, with tragic consequences. Women have been attacked for wearing Western dress or promoting progressive ideas. I have been told that fear of violence has kept some women confined to their homes.

And so it is important that we recognize and applaud the progress that has been made, and that we remain vigilant for the future. We cannot become complacent and see women freed from one tyranny only to be imprisoned by another: the tyranny of violence or of extremism.

Decisions are being considered right now in Iraq that will determine the role that women have in governance, under the law and in society.

To ensure that Iraqi women are not marginalized under their new government, their rights must be ensured, their personal security guaranteed and their access to opportunity protected.

Four, we must extend full economic opportunities to women, including access to microfinance and microenterprise.

It seems obvious that, with women making up more than half of the world's population, global prosperity depends on women having the right to education, jobs, property ownership and credit. Yet it is only relatively recently that this fact became more widely accepted. Over the past several decades we have seen the enormous benefits accrued when women are given even a small slice of the economic pie.

Microcredit is one of those stunningly simple, inexpensive tools that can forever alter the economic landscape for the better. Women now make up 80 percent of the world's 70 million microcredit borrowers. From India to Nicaragua to South Africa to Costa Rica, women are proving that small loans can transform individual lives, families and entire communities.

Five, we must ensure that the doors of primary education are open to every girl—and boy—in every country and on every continent.

If there is a domino effect at work here, it begins with primary education. Today, 55 percent of girls in sub-Saharan Africa do not complete primary school. This failure has real consequences for our global economy and our national security, not to mention for tens of millions of children with limitless potential who are losing the chance to discover their worth and importance as global citizens.

Girls who are educated are more likely to have healthy and stable families, lower mortality rates, higher nutrition levels, delayed sexual activity and less chance of contracting HIV/AIDS or having unwanted pregnancies. Educated children also correlate to increases in the GDP.

Equally important today, the education of children in the developing world is one of our best weapons against terror. We cannot just win the military battles; we have to win the hearts and minds of hundreds of millions of people around the world, many of them between the ages of 15 and 24. We have to educate them, and we have to engage them in discussions about our future.

I am pleased to have introduced the Education For All Act last year, which calls for a clear, global strategy to achieve universal global education by 2015. By dramatically increasing our investment in global education, the legislation would make educating children, including girls, a top priority of U.S. foreign policy.

No country can do this alone. We need other reform-minded countries to step up to the plate. We need to leverage the strength and resources of private voluntary organizations. We have to work together to achieve this goal.

Six, we must strengthen the role of women as agents of peace because we know that women are among our best emissaries when it comes to easing religious, racial and ethnic tensions, crossing cultural divides, and reducing violence in areas of war and conflict.

War and conflict disproportionately impact women, yet women are rarely included in peace negotiations or the peace process. Too many societies continue to view women's roles narrowly, thus losing the chance to benefit from the special wisdom and insights that women offer.

In Rwanda, Sierra Leone and Colombia, women have formed groups to support orphans and widows left in the wake of genocide and have advocated for peace.

The 2004 U.N. Report of the High Level Panel on Threats, Challenges and Change recommends that in order to more capably resolve conflicts between states, the U.N. should engage in greater consultation with important voices from civil society, especially those of women, who are often neglected during peace talks.

The report goes on to say that in order to protect civilians, the Security Council, U.N. agencies and Member States should fully implement Resolution 1325 on women, peace and security, which passed unanimously in 2000; it is the first resolution ever passed by the Security Council that specifically addresses the impact of war on women, and women's contributions to conflict resolution and sustainable peace.

From my own experiences, I know that women can serve as tremendously courageous and effective peace brokers. I have listened to women from Central America talk about combating domestic violence after helping end real combat in deadly civil war. I have seen Catholic and Protestant women meet over tea, finding common ground amidst the conflict of Northern Ireland. I have seen Bosnian, Croat, and Serbian women bridge their differences by working together, eating together and learning side by side.

Finally, it is time to ensure that women have equal opportunity for meaningful representation in all areas of decision-making. Not just token positions. We need to be partners in developing budgets, writing laws, serving in security forces, dispensing justice, conducting business and serving in government.

Doing all of these things is not just the right thing to do. It is the smart thing to do. Stronger, healthier, fulfilled and productive women are the key to building stronger societies.

Ten years after Beijing, politicians and policymakers around the globe have become increasingly sophisticated at talking about gender equality and the important role women play in society. Political speeches, election outreach and advertisements all suggest a growing acceptance of women's rights. But listen carefully to the words, match them to their deeds and you will see that we still have a lot of work to do.

It is not enough to enshrine equal rights in a constitution. It is a critical first step, but nations have to interpret and actively enforce equal rights for women. We are working with women in Iraq to make sure this happens and that their rights are not eroded under a new government.

It is not enough to say women deserve a voice in politics. Nations have to take steps to ensure the full participation and representation of women in their conferences and committees, their plenaries and parliaments. Our sisters in Nigeria are struggling with this as we speak. Although the constitution guarantees equal rights, Nigerian women have been virtually excluded from the political process.

It is not enough to say we want to educate our girls and give women economic opportunities. Women must be able to safely conduct business, have access to loans and participate fully in economic activities. They must have a say in how society allocates its resources.

It is not enough to say violence targeted against women is wrong. Nor is it acceptable to excuse violence against women as a cultural norm. Violence against women is not cultural. It is criminal, and laws must be written and enforced to punish perpetrators of any and all forms of violence against women.

During this week, women on all continents, who are often divided by national boundaries and by ethnic, linguistic, cultural, economic and political differences, come together to celebrate International Women's Day. It is a time to reflect on our commitment to the ideals of equality, justice, peace and development for women around the world.

Let us use this occasion to redouble our efforts on behalf of the hundreds of millions of women worldwide who rely on us to speak up and speak out for them because they cannot speak up for themselves.

Let us keep women's rights on the world's agenda. Let us continue to mobilize and galvanize until every woman and every girl is able to exercise her human rights and achieve her full potential.

Women represent our best hope for democracy, stability, prosperity, peace and security as we look forward into this new century.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, gender equality is critical to peace and prosperity around the world. As we become more interconnected, it is crucial that the rights of women are recognized by all countries as fundamental human rights because countries which value women's rights are more stable, freer, and more prosperous. Therefore, it is befitting that I rise today to commemorate, March 8, 2005, International Women's Day.

The genesis of International Women's Day comes from a number of provocative moments in history. On March 8, 1857, women working in the textile and clothing industry in New York City staged a protest demanding better working conditions and higher wages. More than 50 years later on March 8, 1908, 15,000 women marched through New York City in support of voting rights, shorter work hours, and an end to child labor.

It is because of these strong and courageous women that we recognize today as International Women's Day. They lit the torch for gender equality and passed it down through the generations to us. We have a duty and a responsibility to continue their noble work and I am ready to do so by ensuring that the voices of women from around the world are heard loud and clear.

Mohandas K. Gandhi once said, "There is no occasion for women to consider themselves subordinate to men." Yet, even today, there are places around the world where this is not the case. If the United States aims to be a great champion of the rights of women and girls for the rest of the world, we must do more to promote respect for women as well as increase their participation in every aspect of a country's civic, political, and economic life. Today, I would like to highlight several issues related to women that require decisive leadership: the role of women in Iraq and Afghanistan, international family planning programs, and the Convention to Eliminate All Forms of Discrimination Against Women.

We all know that Iraq can only complete a peaceful transition to a country based on the rule of law, human rights, and democracy with the full participation of women. One year ago today, the United States sought to assist Iraq on this path when the Department of State established the Iraqi Women's Democracy Initiative along with the U.S. Iraqi Women's Network. Through these grants, the U.S. reached out to Iraqi women and informed them of the importance of their vote and role in the new Iraq.

On January 30, 2005, the world watched as 58 percent of Iraqi voters turned out for an election in which 25 percent of the candidates running were women. In the months following the elections, special training will focus on constitution drafting, legal reform, and the legislative process, so that women may ensure their rights are enshrined in the new constitution. While I am encouraged by recent positive events, we must remain vigilant and encourage our Iraqi friends to put the active and meaningful participation of women in the new Iraq at the top of their agenda.

Last year, Women for Women International commissioned a survey of Iraqi women and found that despite ethnic educational, religious, and economic differences, an overwhelming majority of women in Iraq support a strong role for themselves in the new Iraq. Of the women surveyed, 94 percent want to secure legal rights for women, 84 percent want the right to vote on the final Constitution, and 95 percent think there should be no restrictions on education. It is the duty of the United States to assist Iraqi women in realizing these goals and I encourage my colleagues to continue to support funding for women's initiatives in Iraq.

One of the great success stories of our campaign against terrorism is the liberation of the women and girls of Afghanistan from the brutal oppression of the Taliban regime. Under the Taliban, women in public were forced to cloak themselves in shroud-like burkas while being accompanied by a male relative or else risk being beaten mercilessly. Most Afghan women were restricted by the Taliban from working, receiving an education, from visiting doctors, and from receiving humanitarian aid.

The women of Afghanistan have the opportunity to build a better life for themselves and their families. More and more women in Afghanistan are getting an education, earning a living, receiving medical attention, and participating in public life.

In fact, I was pleased to hear that Hamid Karzai made history last week when he appointed Habiba Sarabi as Afghanistan's first female provincial governor.

During the Taliban regime, Ms. Sarabi fled from Kabul to Pakistan. Following the removal of the Taliban from power in 2001, she was selected for Mr. Karzai's cabinet and instantly became a hero not just for women and girls, but for all Afghans. Her story is truly a testament to the remarkable turnaround taking place in Afghanistan.

Nevertheless, obstacles still remain that prevent women and girls from reaching their full potential.

A recent U.N. report from UN Secretary General Kofi Annan to the Economics and Social Council's Commission on the Status of Women states:

while the status of women and girls has improved, overall progress has been uneven. The volatile security situation and traditional social and cultural norms continue to limit women's and girls' role in public life and deny them the full enjoyment of their rights. The massive needs in terms of reconstruction of infrastructure and strengthening of human capacity, including in the fields of education and health care, will require the sustained attention and support of national actors and the international community for many years to come.

Our victory in Afghanistan will be lost if women and girls are not afforded basic human rights and equal opportunity. The United States must not forget our commitment to provide a better future for Afghan women of all ages, and I urge my colleagues to stay the course and support additional assistance for education, health care, and democracy training for women and girls in the years ahead.

Once again, as we commemorate International Women's Day, I regret to point out that the Senate has still not acted on the Convention to Eliminate All Forms of Discrimination Against Women. The Convention, which was adopted by the UN General Assembly in 1979, has been ratified by 179 countries to date, including every other democracy in the world.

By ratifying the Convention, states commit themselves to take appropriate steps to eliminate discrimination against women in political and public life, law, education, employment, health care, commercial transactions, and domestic relations.

I am shocked and disappointed that the United States has failed to ratify this Convention. Every year we fail to ratify this important Convention, we compromise our ability to lead the world as the torchbearer for women's rights. Not only would signing the Convention reaffirm our Nation's leadership role on these issues, it would bring us closer with our friends and allies who have already ratified the pact. I urge the Senate to act on the Convention this year.

The United Nations Population Fund UNFPA is the single largest global source for maternal health and family planning programs, working in over 140 countries.

Nevertheless, since 2002, the Bush administration has withheld over $90 million in vital U.S. contributions to UNFPA because of its perceived ties with China's family planning program and policies. The administration has taken these actions despite a report from a State Department fact finding team that the UNFPA in no way supported or was involved in coercive abortions or involuntary sterilization. As a result of administration actions, millions of poor women and families have been deprived of desperately needed care.

The work of UNFPA benefits women in need around the world. In the wake of the horrific tsunami that struck

South Asia, UNFPA has been working to ensure that women and girls in this area are receiving the care they need. UNFPA's priorities are reproductive health, including safe childbirth, prevention of violence against women and girls, and psychosocial counseling for those affected by the 26 December tsunami.

In early January, UNFPA asked for $28 million to support its tsunami-related work in Indonesia, Sri Lanka, and Maldives as part of the United Nations interagency Flash Appeal. A month later, over 70 per cent of the requested funding had been received or pledged from various donors, including Germany, Japan, the Netherlands, China, Norway, and New Zealand. The United States is absent from this list.

No woman should be prevented from receiving the assistance she deserves to plan and care for healthy families. We need to ensure that women have access to the educational and medical resources they need to control their reproductive destinies and their health so they will be able to better their own lives and the lives of their families.

Women are the backbone of our global society. They are our mothers, our sisters, our daughters, and our grandmothers. They nurture us and teach us the lessons of life and how to be a better person. As such, I am proud to commemorate March 8, 2005, as International Women's Day.

There are many great issues facing women and the United States. However, I am confident and optimistic we can address problems such as family planning, the burgeoning roles of women in Iraq and Afghanistan, and eliminating all forms of discrimination against women.

As a United States Senator, I truly believe it is our duty as the leader of the free world to address and seek workable solutions to every problem that women face around the world. We can—and we must.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the resolution and preamble be agreed to, en bloc, the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table, and that any statements relating to the resolution be printed in the RECORD, without intervening action or debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The resolution (S. Res. 74) was agreed to.

The preamble was agreed to.

The resolution, with its preamble, reads as follows:

S. RES. 74

Whereas all over the world, women are contributing to the growth of economies, participating in the world of diplomacy and politics, and improving the quality of the lives of their families, communities, and nations;

Whereas discrimination continues to deny women full political and economic equality and is often the basis for violations of women's basic human rights;

Whereas worldwide, the lives and health of women and girls continue to be endangered by violence that is directed at them simply because they are female;

Whereas worldwide, violence against women includes rape, genital mutilation, sexual assault, domestic violence, dating violence, honor killings, human trafficking, dowry-related violence, female infanticide, sex-selection abortion, forced pregnancy, forced sterilization, and forced abortion;

Whereas the World Health Organization asserts that domestic violence causes more deaths and disability among women aged 15 to 44 than cancer, malaria, traffic accidents, and war;

Whereas worldwide, 130,000,000 girls and young women have been subjected to female genital mutilation;

Whereas worldwide, at least 1 in 3 females has been beaten or sexually abused in her lifetime;

Whereas worldwide, 20 to 50 percent of women experience some degree of domestic violence during marriage;

Whereas 1 in 4 women in the United States have been raped or physically assaulted by an intimate partner at some point in their lives;

Whereas somewhere in the United States, a woman is battered, usually by her partner, every 15 seconds;

Whereas more than 3 women are murdered by their husbands or boyfriends in the United States every day;

Whereas battering is the leading cause of injury to women aged 15 to 44 in the United States;

Whereas it is estimated that 1 in 5 adolescent girls in the United States becomes a victim of physical or sexual abuse, or both, in a dating relationship;

Whereas worldwide, women account for 1/2 of all cases of HIV/AIDS, and in Africa, young women are 3 times more likely to contract the virus than men;

Whereas worldwide, sexual violence, including marital rape, has been denounced as a major cause of the rapid spread of HIV/AIDS among women;

Whereas between 75 and 80 percent of the world's millions of refugees are women and children;

Whereas illegal trafficking worldwide for forced labor, domestic servitude, and sexual exploitation involves between 1,000,000 and 2,000,000 women and children each year, of whom approximately 50,000 are transported to the United States;

Whereas 2/3 of the world's nearly 1,000,000,000 illiterate individuals are women;

Whereas 2/3 of the children denied primary education are girls;

Whereas these educational failures have serious consequences for the global economy and the United States national security, as well as for tens of millions of girls who are losing the chance to discover their worth and importance as global citizens;

Whereas girls who are educated are more likely to have healthy and stable families, lower mortality rates, higher nutrition levels, and delayed sexual activity, and have less chance of contracting HIV/AIDS or having unwanted pregnancies;

Whereas in most countries, women work approximately 2 times more unpaid time than men do;

Whereas women work 2/3 of the world's working hours and produce 1/2 of the world's food, yet earn only 10 percent of the world's income and own less than 1 percent of the world's property;

Whereas 3 in 10 households are maintained by women with no husband present;

Whereas rural women produce more than 55 percent of all food grown in developing countries;

Whereas it is estimated that women and girls make up more than 70 percent of the poorest people in the world;

Whereas worldwide, women earn less, own less property, and have less access to education, employment, and health care than do men;

Whereas microcredit is a stunningly simple, inexpensive tool that can forever alter the economic landscape for the better;

Whereas women now make up 80 percent of the world's 70,000,000 microcredit borrowers, and from India to Nicaragua to South Africa to Costa Rica, women are proving that small loans can transform individual lives, families, and entire communities;

Whereas nations should take steps to ensure the full participation and representation of women in political conferences, committees, plenaries, and parliaments;

Whereas social investment, particularly investments in women and girls, should be an integral part of foreign policy;

Whereas despite extraordinary advances, women still comprise the majority of the world's poor, illiterate, and uneducated, remain under-compensated for the work they do, still do not have adequate access to medical care in too many countries, are under-represented in leadership positions in government and business, and continue to be targeted for unspeakable atrocities in war and conflict;

Whereas March 8 has become known as International Women's Day for the last century, and is a day on which people, who are often divided by ethnicity, language, culture, and income, come together to celebrate a common struggle for women's equality, justice, and peace;

Whereas the dedication and successes of those working all over the world to end violence against women and girls and fighting for equality should be recognized; and

Whereas the people of the United States should be encouraged to participate in International Women's Day: Now, therefore be it Resolved, That the Senate—

(1) designates March 8, 2005, as International Women's Day;

(2) reaffirms its commitment to—

(A) improve women's access to quality health care, including HIV/AIDS prevention and treatment;

(B) end and prevent violence against women, including the trafficking of women and girls worldwide, and ensure that the criminals who engage in these activities are brought to justice;

(C) end discrimination and increase the participation of women in decisionmaking positions in government and the private sector;

(D) extend full economic opportunities to women, including access to microfinance and microenterprise; and

(E) strengthen the role of women as agents of peace because women are among the best emissaries for easing religious, racial, and ethnic tensions, crossing cultural divides, and reducing violence in areas of war and conflict; and

(3) encourages the people of the United States to observe "International Women's Day" with appropriate programs and activities.

GREEK INDEPENDENCE DAY

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate now proceed to the consideration of S. Res. 75, which was submitted earlier today.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the resolution by title.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A resolution (S. Res. 75) designating March 25, 2005, as "Greek Independence Day: A National Day of Celebration of Greek and American Democracy."

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the resolution.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the resolution be agreed to, the preamble be agreed to, and the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The resolution (S. Res. 75) was agreed to.

The preamble was agreed to.

The resolution, with its preamble, reads as follows:

S. RES. 75

Whereas the ancient Greeks developed the concept of democracy, in which the supreme power to govern was vested in the people;

Whereas the Founding Fathers of the United States drew heavily on the political experience and philosophy of ancient Greece in forming our representative democracy;

Whereas Greek Commander in Chief Petros Mavromichalis, a founder of the modern Greek state, said to the citizens of the United States in 1821, "it is in your land that liberty has fixed her abode and . . . in imitating you, we shall imitate our ancestors and be thought worthy of them if we succeed in resembling you";

Whereas Greece played a major role in the World War II struggle to protect freedom and democracy through such bravery as was shown in the historic Battle of Crete that presented the Axis land war with its first major setback, setting off a chain of events that significantly affected the outcome of World War II;

Whereas the price for Greece in holding our common values in their region was high, as hundreds of thousands of civilians were killed in Greece during the World War II period;

Whereas, throughout the 20th century, Greece was 1 of only 3 nations in the world, beyond the former British Empire, that was allied with the United States in every major international conflict;

Whereas President George W. Bush, in recognizing Greek Independence Day, said, "Greece and America have been firm allies in the great struggles for liberty. Americans will always remember Greek heroism and Greek sacrifice for the sake of freedom . . . [and] as the 21st Century dawns, Greece and America once again stand united; this time in the fight against terrorism. The United States deeply appreciates the role Greece is playing in the war against terror. . . . America and Greece are strong allies, and we're strategic partners.";

Whereas Greece is a stabilizing force by virtue of its political and economic power in the volatile Balkan region and is one of the fastest growing economies in Europe;

Whereas Greece, through excellent work and cooperation with United States and international law enforcement agencies, arrested and convicted key members of the November 17 terrorist organization;

Whereas President Bush stated that Greece's successful "law enforcement operations against a terrorist organization [November 17] responsible for three decades of terrorist attacks underscore the important contributions Greece is making to the global war on terrorism";

Whereas Greece was extraordinarily responsive to United States requests during the war with Iraq, as Greece immediately granted unlimited access to its airspace and the base in Souda Bay, and many United States ships delivering troops, cargo, and supplies to Iraq were refueled in Greece;

Whereas the Olympic Games came home in August 2004 to Athens, Greece, the land of their ancient birthplace 2,500 years ago and the city of their modern revival in 1896;

Whereas Greece received world-wide praise for its extraordinary handling of over 14,000 athletes from 202 countries and over 2,000,000 spectators and journalists and did so efficiently, securely, and with its famous Greek hospitality;

Whereas the unprecedented Olympic security effort in Greece for the first post-9/11 Olympics included a record-setting expenditure of over $1,390,000,000 and assignment of over 70,000 security personnel, as well as the utilization of an 8-country Olympic Security Advisory Group which included the United States;

Whereas Greece, geographically located in a region where Christianity meets Islam and Judaism, maintains excellent relations with Muslim nations and Israel;

Whereas Greece has had extraordinary success in recent years in furthering cross-cultural understanding and reducing tensions between Greece and Turkey;

Whereas Greece and the United States are at the forefront of the effort for freedom, democracy, peace, stability, and human rights;

Whereas those and other ideals have forged a close bond between our 2 nations and their peoples;

Whereas March 25, 2005, marks the 184th anniversary of the beginning of the revolution that freed the Greek people from the Ottoman Empire; and

Whereas it is proper and desirable to celebrate with the Greek people and to reaffirm the democratic principles from which our 2 great nations were born: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate—

(1) designates March 25, 2005, as “Greek Independence Day: A National Day of Celebration of Greek and American Democracy”; and

(2) encourages the people of the United States to observe the day with appropriate ceremonies and activities.

ORDERS FOR WEDNESDAY, MARCH 9, 2005

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that when the Senate completes its business today, the Senate adjourn until 9:30 a.m. on Wednesday, March 9. I further ask that following the prayer and the pledge, the morning hour be deemed expired, the Journal of proceedings be approved to date, the time for the two leaders be reserved and the Senate then begin a period of morning business for up to 60 minutes, with the first 30 minutes under the control of the majority leader or his designee and the second 30 minutes under the control of the Democratic leader or his designee; provided that following morning business the Senate resume consideration of S. 256, the Bankruptcy Reform Act, as provided under the previous order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

PROGRAM

Mr. GRASSLEY. Tomorrow, following morning business, the Senate will continue its consideration of the bankruptcy bill. Under the agreement reached tonight, we will have up to 40 minutes of debate on a series of amendments, which will be followed by four stacked rollcall votes. That will be on these amendments. The first vote will be in relation to the Durbin paperwork amendment, and that vote will begin at approximately 11:30 tomorrow morning. For the remainder of the day, we will continue working through the amendments to the bankruptcy bill. There are a number of amendments pending, and it is my hope that most of them will not require rollcall votes.

Earlier today, cloture was invoked on the bill by an overwhelming margin. It is the leadership's intention to complete action on the bill during Wednesday's session.

ADJOURNMENT UNTIL 9:30 A.M. TOMORROW

Mr. GRASSLEY. If there is no further business to come before the Senate, I ask that the Senate stand in adjournment under the previous order.

There being no objection, the Senate, at 7:18 p.m., adjourned until Wednesday, March 9, 2005, at 9:30 a.m.

EXTENSIONS OF REMARKS

TRIBUTE TO MARY MCCLYMONT OF INTERACTION

HON. TOM LANTOS

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, March 8, 2005

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I invite my colleagues to join me today in paying tribute to Ms. Mary E. McClymont, the current President and CEO of InterAction, the largest alliance of U.S.-based, international development and humanitarian nongovernmental organizations. InterAction's members range from large organizations like CARE, Save the Children, Catholic Relief Services, and World Vision, to smaller organizations such as the International Medical Corps which is based in my own home state of California.

After four years of tireless service to the humanitarian community, Mary is relinquishing the helm of InterAction. She will be deeply missed not only by the many NGOs that InterAction serves but also by many of us in Congress who have come to rely on her and InterAction as advocates of humanitarian, human rights, and development concerns. Her knowledge, commitment, and professionalism have established InterAction as a leading resource of information and expertise on a myriad of issues ranging from Iraq and Afghanistan to the Millennium Challenge Account.

InterAction also has grown tremendously under Mary's leadership, nearly doubling its operating budget and expanding its membership. Additionally, Mary launched the Global Partnership for Effective Assistance—a multiyear advocacy campaign to help save lives and build self-sufficiency in poor countries by increasing the amount of development and humanitarian assistance, improving the effectiveness of foreign aid, and fostering international partnerships.

Leading an organization as large and diverse as InterAction during these tumultuous times requires an individual of tremendous fortitude, integrity, and dedication. Mary undoubtedly has excelled in meeting that challenge.

Mr. Speaker, it has been a great pleasure for me and the Democratic staff of the International Relations Committee to work closely on a wide range of issues with InterAction and with Mary. I want to commend her for her outstanding service and commitment to improving the effectiveness of our nation's humanitarian and development assistance. And I want to extend our best wishes to her as she leaves the presidency of InterAction.

CELEBRATING THE 90TH BIRTHDAY OF HORACE H. HEYMANN

HON. GARY L. ACKERMAN

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, March 8, 2005

Mr. ACKERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to celebrate the 90th birthday of Horace H. Heymann.

Horace was born a citizen of Germany in 1915, and grew up beneath the rising specter of Nazism. Fearing that they would become victims of the Holocaust, he and his family separated in 1932 and fled from their native country. Horace made the journey to the United States, where he found his family safe in their adopted nation.

Horace served his new homeland with fierce loyalty, enlisting in the Navy upon the United States' entry into World War II. After serving honorably in the Sea Bees Battalion, he returned to his Hollis Hills, Queens County, New York home and began his most significant work, that of raising a family.

At the age of 90, Horace is a proud father, grandfather, and United States veteran. His life is a shining example of the emblematic vision of hope that America inspires in the persecuted, and of the powerful influence a loving father has on his children and his children's children.

Mr. Speaker, on behalf of three generations of Americans, I ask my colleagues in the House of Representatives to please join me in honoring Horace H. Heymann as he celebrates his 90th birthday.

IN HONOR OF GRACIA MOLINA DE PICK ON HER 75TH BIRTHDAY

HON. SUSAN A. DAVIS

OF CALIFORNIA

Tuesday, March 8, 2005

Mrs. DAVIS of California. Mr. Speaker, it is with great pleasure that I rise today to congratulate Gracia Molina de Pick. Gracia celebrates her 75th birthday on March 28, 2005. I am honored to have this opportunity to pay tribute to an exceptional community leader. Gracia is a mother, a daughter, a leader, and most of all, a beloved friend.

San Diegans will honor Gracia at the Centro Cultural de la Raza's International Women's Day. Her friends, family, and supporters will join together to salute her for her selfless and steady dedication to advancing women's causes and improving our community.

Her life story is a great adventure where she fought historic socio-political battles. She battled for obtaining women's suffrage in Mexico. In the United States, she fought for women's equality and acceptance in the workplace. She worked to promote the participation of women and people of color in the democratic process.

Gracia is the people's activist. She has dedicated countless hours to improving the quality of life for women and people of color. Many leaders in San Diego will tell you that she leads by example and is quick to take people under her wing. Gracia is a proud founder of the first Chicano and Chicana studies program at Mesa Community College. In 2002, she was inducted into the San Diego Women's Hall of Fame. She is a mentor, advocate, grassroots activist, and teacher.

I have always appreciated the kind advice she has provided me over the years.

I wish to congratulate Gracia Molina de Pick for her untiring work on behalf of women, minorities, and our community at-large.

I AM AN AMERICAN STEEL MILL

I was born over 100 years ago.

I am a true American.

I survived the depression.

I have lived through wars.

I sweated.

I poured ton after ton out for you.

When called upon I answered.

At wartime I served my country.

I served it true.

I worked 24 hours a day 7 days a week for you.

Never stopping, never slowing down.

Never asking for anything in return.

I have supplied you with the materials to build

Planes, trains, ships, cars, and whatever you asked of me.

I have helped make you the super power that you are.

I have made you feel proud, safe, secure, and superior to other nations.

I have given people their way of life.

I have taken away life from people.

Do You Know Who I Am?

I Am An American Steel Mill

I have helped you when called upon.

I have supported you through good times

And bad times.

Now I am asking you this great country of ours

Think what life would be like if I die

Think how safe, proud, secure you would feel if I die.

The cries for help are all across the country.

The same country I helped build.

The same country I helped become strong.

Please don't let me die.

Serve me as I have served you.

Maria Theresa, Sister Isabella, and Sister Esther administrated at the new school which then had its first class of 81 students. The first school building was completed on November 2, 1955. The first class of students graduated in 1959. By 1960, the number of students swelled to 495. The staff continued to grow and formed a young, enthusiastic group who worked tirelessly to attain the highest standards, not only in the academic field, but also in athletics, music and other extracurricular activities. Identifying the need for values-based education for all young people, Providence began welcoming young men, as well as women, to the school in 1974.

Sr. Lucille Dean became the school's principal in 1986. Providence continued in the next few years to build on the tradition of excellence. Providence High School has received recognition throughout its history for its academic achievement. It was designated a Blue Ribbon School in 1997 and received accreditation from the Western Association of Schools and Colleges in 1996. In 2001, the school opened the Fritz B. Burns Student Activity Center featuring a state-of-the-art gymnasium, weight room, exercise room, boys and girls locker rooms, and conference center. Providence has a proud history of carrying out its unique mission of education. The school continually strives for academic excellence and the total development of the individual.

I ask all Members of Congress to join me today in congratulating Providence High School for 50 years of exemplary public service, and for its immense commitment to educating young people of all cultural and economic backgrounds for academic achievement, compassionate service, ethical standards, Christian leadership, global awareness, and life-long learning.

FREEDOM FOR JOSÉ DANIEL FERRER GARCÍA

HON. LINCOLN DIAZ-BALART

OF FLORIDA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, March 8, 2005

Mr. LINCOLN DIAZ-BALART of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to speak about José Daniel Ferrer García, a political prisoner in totalitarian Cuba.

Mr. Ferrer García is the regional coordinator for the Christian Liberation Movement in the province of Santiago. He is a peaceful pro-democracy activist who believes in the cause of freedom for the men and women of Cuba. Because of his steadfast belief in human liberty, and his constant work to bring freedom to an island enslaved by the nightmare that is the Castro regime, Mr. Ferrer García has been a constant target of the dictatorship.

According to Amnesty International, Mr. Ferrer García has been harassed and detained numerous times for his pro-democracy activism. In January 2002, he was forced from a bus and beaten by the tyrant's thugs because of his activities and ideals. In March 2003, as part of Castro's heinous crackdown on peaceful pro-democracy activists, Mr. Ferrer García was arrested. Subsequently, in a sham trial, he was sentenced to 25 years in the totalitarian gulag.

While confined in the inhuman horror of Castro's gulag, Mr. Ferrer García has been the constant target of abuse. According to the Department of State's Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 2004:

On January 1, José Daniel Ferrer García reported serving 45 days in a punishment cell for protesting the suspension of correspondence and the delivery of food and medical supplies from his family. He did not receive food or water during the first 3 days of his confinement and slept on a cement floor. Authorities confiscated his Bible and prohibited any contact with other prisoners.

The same Country Report describes the true horrors of a punishment cell: "Prisoners sometimes were held in 'punishment cells,' which usually were located in the basement of a prison, with continuous semi dark conditions, no available water, and a hole for a toilet." This is in addition to the grotesque depravity of the gulag that also includes beatings, isolation, denial of medical treatment to detainees and sexual abuse.

Mr. Ferrer García is a brilliant example of the heroism of the Cuban people. No matter how intense the repression, no matter how horrifically brutal the consequences of a dignified struggle for liberty, the totalitarian gulags are full of men and women of all backgrounds and ages who represent the best of the Cuban nation. Thousands languish in the gulag because, like Mr. Ferrer García, they refuse to accept the tyrannical dictatorship in Cuba today.

Mr. Speaker, we must speak out and act against this abominable disregard for human rights, human dignity, and human freedom just 90 miles from our shore. My Colleagues, we must demand the immediate and unconditional release of José Daniel Ferrer García and every political prisoner in totalitarian Cuba.

100th ANNIVERSARY OF THE CITY OF WEST BRANCH

HON. BART STUPAK

OF MICHIGAN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, March 8, 2005

Mr. STUPAK. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor a community in my district that is celebrating its 100th anniversary as a city. Tomorrow, the residents of West Branch, Michigan celebrate this great milestone.

The land that is now West Branch began as a timber town in 1875, blessed with a mixture of soft and hardwoods. As many timber towns dissolved with the depleting timber supply, the early community leaders of West Branch had the foresight to replenish the forests through a conservation plan funded through a timely oil boom that contributed greatly to the economy.

Located on the Michigan's largest railroad line, West Branch is roughly halfway between the southern State line and the Mackinac Bridge. Three old Native American Chippewa Trails that convened in West Branch transformed into what is now known as highways, M-76, M-30 and M-55 making that area a major hub for the increasing transportation.

It was in 1905 that the State of Michigan recognized West Branch for 30 years of solid growth by granting them incorporation as a City. The State further noted that the area's escalating commerce in the farm industry also attributed to the cause for incorporation. Agriculture, still today, remains the area's largest economic resource.

Through the years, the community has dramatically evolved. In the 1930s and 40s West Branch grew its recreational attractions by establishing Trout Festivals and Alpine Ski facilities as well as promoting its suitability for hunting, fishing and agriculture. In the 1950s and 60s the City focused on highway and land development that brought the most famous highway in the state, I-75, directly through their emerging community. During the 70s, 80s and 90s the city experienced an economic boom and acquired two industrial parks. One of the parks was bestowed a "smiley-face" water tower, which is now the trademark of the City. The other, eventually became home to Tolfree Memorial Hospital, West Branch Regional Medical Center and the state-of-the art Seaton Cancer Center.

The West Branch of today, with a population of 1,924, serves as the County seat for Ogemaw County. This fast growing community's expanding commerce, with its own Community Airport and bustling outdoor shopping mall contrasts the Victorian downtown that embraced its rich history during their recent streetscape enhancement.

Mr. Speaker, I can personally attest to the broadly shared opinion that West Branch is a warm and welcoming community. When the city was added to my new district after the 2000 census I held an open house for my district office there in order to get to know my new constituents. I was impressed by the thoughtful questions of the people who attended and was touched by their welcome to me as their new Representative.

Since then, I've held a healthcare forum in West Branch, visited with the West Branch Area Business and Professional Women's Club and even had the honor of throwing the first pitch at the West Branch Little League games. I continue to be very proud to represent the fine community of West Branch in Congress.

Mr. Speaker, I ask the United States House of Representatives to join me in congratulating the City of West Branch and its residents on their first 100 years and in wishing them well through the next century.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

HON. LEE TERRY

OF NEBRASKA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, March 8, 2005

Mr. TERRY. Mr. Speaker, on Thursday, March 3, 2005, I missed the vote on final passage of H.R. 841, the Continuity in Representation Act, rollcall 52. Because it was announced earlier that this vote would be conducted as a voice vote, I immediately left the House floor following the vote on the motion to recommit, so that I could make a flight to my District. Later in the day, I learned Ms. MILLENDER-MCDONALD demanded a recorded vote on the question of passage of the bill.

Had I been present, I would have voted "aye" on the final passage of H.R. 841.

EXPRESSING CONCERN ABOUT CHINA'S PROPOSED ANTI-SECESSION LAW

HON. JAMES R. LANGEVIN

OF RHODE ISLAND

Tuesday, March 8, 2005

Mr. LANGEVIN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to express my concern about reports of China's intention to pass an anti-secession law, which appears to permit China to punish Taiwan for what it perceives to be movements toward independence or separatist sentiments. At a time when we should be encouraging greater cross-strait cooperation, this effort by the Chinese could further heighten tensions and possibly move the region toward armed conflict.

When I traveled to Taiwan last year, I saw a vibrant democracy, a strong economy, and citizens appreciative of their high standard of living and ability to enjoy basic human rights. Most importantly, I met people who want to engage in the world community. Yet, the anti-secession law would permit China to decide for itself what constitutes an independence movement in Taiwan. Such carte blanche authority would be chilling in Taiwan, which has supported civil liberties and free speech rights.

I hope that Chinese leaders will use their better judgment and abandon this ill-conceived plan. We, as Americans, must do what we can to promote peace and cooperation across the Taiwan Strait. Despite our commitments in Iraq and elsewhere, we must remain engaged in this matter. Our silence could be interpreted as tacit permission for China to escalate its rhetoric and possibly initiate action against Taiwan, with whom the U.S. has a strong relationship. We must encourage our friends in Beijing to build on their history of cooperative efforts with Taiwan, economically and culturally, to enhance their relationship. I know the people of Taiwan look forward to greater engagement with the mainland and a peaceful coexistence with their Chinese brothers and sisters.

CELEBRATING NATIONAL PEACE CORPS WEEK

HON. GARY L. ACKERMAN

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, March 8, 2005

Mr. ACKERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to commemorate the 44th anniversary of the Peace Corps and to celebrate National Peace Corps Week, which ran from February 28 to March 6, 2005.

Last week, we honored Peace Corps Volunteers for their dedicated work in promoting world peace and friendship across the globe. In an era where global interdependence and camaraderie has become increasingly important, the Peace Corps plays an integral role in connecting individuals from different countries, races, and creeds.

Since the inception of the Peace Corps on March 1, 1961, over 178,000 volunteers have served in 138 countries. Currently, there are more than 7,700 Peace Corps volunteers serving in 72 countries around the world—the highest number of volunteers in the field in the past 29 years. Peace Corps volunteers are quite a diverse group, serving as teachers, information technology consultants, youth and agriculture workers, health and HIV/AIDS educators, and business advisors.

I am proud to say that the 5th Congressional District of New York currently has 12 of its own as Peace Corps volunteers. They are, in alphabetical order and followed by the countries in which they serve: Kimberly A. Beers, Dominican Republic; Ling-Yun Chen, Turkmenistan; Michael E. Garriss, Armenia; Seth B. Gazes, El Salvador; Melissa Gonzalez, Costa Rica; Orlando Gonzalez, Costa Rica; Amy Y. Han, Uzbekistan; Grace E. Lee, Madagascar; Pei-Zei Lin, Burkina Faso; Erin C. McNally, Turkmenistan; Richard Z. Mo, Paraguay; Debbie Nip, Moldova.

Mr. Speaker, I ask my colleagues in the House of Representatives to please join me in honoring all of the past and present Peace Corps volunteers who selflessly serve abroad, empowering individuals in developing countries and spreading their message of world peace and friendship. These fine men and women have committed years of their lives to helping total strangers and to making our world a better and friendlier place. We salute your unselfish acts.

Mr. BACA. Mr. Speaker, I would like to give recognition to Dr. Donald F. His leadership, commitment, loyalty, integrity, and merits all made him a perfect candidate deserving of such a great honor. The people of San Bernardino County and of the State of California thank him for his continued service.

IN HONOR AND REMEMBRANCE OF
JAMES J. FLANNERY

HON. DENNIS J. KUCINICH

OF OHIO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, March 8, 2005

Mr. KUCINICH. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in honor and remembrance of James J. Flannery, devoted family man, community leader, public servant, and friend and mentor to many.

As a former member of the Ohio House of Representatives from 1967 through 1972, Mr. Flannery served his constituents of Cleveland's Near West Side with commitment, integrity and energy. As a certified public accountant, he was instrumental in garnering statewide approval for the graduated income tax, implemented in 1971.

Mr. Flannery's life-long commitment of service to others, and dedication to the Democratic Party was handed down to him from his parents and grandparents. His father served on the Council for the City of Cleveland. For many years, Mr. Flannery's grandfather served as a Precinct Committeeman. And in 1947, Mr. Flannery's grandmother was elected as a delegate to the Democratic National Convention. They also instilled within him an unwavering work ethic. He was raised in Cleveland, graduated from St. Ed's, then enrolled at the University of Notre Dame, where he graduated in 1960. He volunteered his time and efforts on behalf of numerous causes and organizations, including St. Ed's High School and the Notre Dame Club of Cleveland, where he served as past president and trustee. In 1991, the Club honored him as their Man of the Year.

Mr. Speaker and Colleagues, please join me in honor and remembrance of James J. Flannery, beloved husband, father, grandfather, brother and friend. I offer my deepest condolences to Mr. Flannery's wife of 45 years, Judith; his children, Jim, Dan, Kelly, Mary Lou, Michele, Bryan, Judi Lynn and Eric; his sons and daughters in law, Maureen, Caroline, Rolly, Attila, Brian, Renee, Dan and Lori; his granddaughters and grandsons, and his extended family and many friends. Mr. Flannery will be deeply missed by all who knew and loved him well, yet his legacy of concern for others, generous spirit, and kind heart uplifted the lives of countless individuals and families, including my own—and his life and his legacy, framed by love of family and community, will be remembered always.

PETER GILES HONORED FOR HIS ESTEEMED SERVICE TO THE CORPORATE, NONPROFIT AND HIGH-TECHNOLOGY COMMU-NITIES IN SILICON VALLEY

HON. ZOE LOFGREN

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, March 8, 2005

Ms. ZOE LOFGREN of California. Mr. Speaker, I rise to recognize the achievements of Peter Giles, the retiring President and CEO of The Tech Museum of Innovation headquartered in San Jose, California.

Among Mr. Giles impressive accomplishments is his strong commitment to education and provocative methods that garner greater levels of understanding to those who do not have a collegiate engineering degree.

Under his leadership, The Tech has empowered 1 million educators and youth through teacher training institutes, web-based resources, field trips and various community partnerships with area schools and youth groups. His museum can also boast of the development of a signature learning approach called, "Design in Mind Learning," which provides professional development to educators and enhances curricula throughout the United States.

Mr. Giles has also committed himself to the sustainability of The Tech and the community it serves. The opening of the Tech Museum was funded by $113 million, including an unprecedented $32 million of in-kind contributions from the industry; in addition, his endowment fundraising totals $14 million currently.

The Tech is one of the top tourist attractions for anyone visiting Silicon Valley. It has earned this reputation because of the unique mix of art, culture, education, and of course, technology. In addition, The Tech has subtly, but firmly espoused its core belief that science, engineering and technology are fun—and must remain to be fun in order for our country to thrive.

The tremendous success of this jewel is due in great part to Mr. Giles' visionary leadership. During Mr. Giles' 18 years of service at The Tech, he fostered a spirit of collaboration and innovation that is the keystone of what makes Silicon Valley a truly unique locale.

Peter Giles is an amazing person. The former President of the Silicon Valley Manufacturing Group he had other, possibly more financially rewarding, career paths than the Tech. But Peter, who is a techie, a father and a visionary, has never been interested in his own aggrandizement so much as he is interested in the public good. Not only did he develop the Tech from a mere idea, he made sure that idea included our entire community. Let me give you just one example: To protect her privacy I'll just refer to "Az". This young woman started working for the Tech while in high school. Neither of her parents were college or high school grads, but Peter understood that reaching out to a community that had not been steeped in education was the Tech's most important mission. From Peter's own life, he understands how families reinforce each other.

Now "Az" has completed college and is embarked on teaching. Understanding the reach of families, her little brother is a math major at MIT.

Although Peter Giles is retiring, his legacy and contributions to Silicon Valley will remain in the hearts and minds of The Tech's supporters, contributors and patrons for many years to come; and even more importantly, in the living rooms of the homes of ordinary families, things have changed for the better.

IN MEMORY OF ROSEMARY KENNEDY

HON. ROY BLUNT

OF MISSOURI

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, March 8, 2005

Mr. BLUNT. Mr. Speaker, I rise to say a few words about the remarkable life of Rosemary Kennedy, who passed away at age 86 on January 7.

She was not the most famous member of her family. Hers was a more private life than those of her siblings. But it was not a life without public consequences and enormous benefit to those around her.

The example of her perseverance and her dignity helped to raise awareness about people living with mental disabilities—not just about their problems, but about their potential. That example inspired her sister, Eunice Kennedy Shriver, to establish the Special Olympics. It has been going strong now for 37 years. Last year, it was my honor to co-author an historic Congressional authorization for Special Olympics with my good friend STENY HOYER. It is our hope that the authorization will help this successful program to grow even more.

I am pleased that the United States Congress is now counted among those who enthusiastically support Special Olympics and recognize its unique importance in improving the lives of people with intellectual disabilities. Through the Special Olympics, Rosemary Kennedy has brought hope to millions of people around the world who either have disabilities or love someone who does.

In her eulogy for her sister, Eunice Kennedy Shriver said, "Today, in villages and cities all over the world, Rosemary's name may be little known, but her love is making a huge difference—to a mother of a special child, she is a success story. To a person struggling against misunderstanding and prejudice, she is a model of courage. To a family wondering how to stay hopeful, she is a symbol of the ultimate gift that sustains us all: love itself."

Timothy Shriver, Rosemary Kennedy's nephew and the chairman of Special Olympics, said, "All of the Shriver's and all of the Special Olympics family around the world will miss Rosemary's love and her influence on the world. Her life and her example will continue to be our daily inspiration."

That's a sentiment that I believe all of us can second.

CHINESE ANTI-SECESSION LAW

HON. CONNIE MACK

OF FLORIDA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, March 8, 2005

Mr. MACK. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to express my strong opposition to China's proposed anti-secession law—a highly provocative measure which will further increase tensions across the Taiwan Strait.

Earlier this week, Premier Wen Jiabao spoke to the about 3000 delegates from all across China at the Great Hall of the People in Beijing. In Premier Wen's speech, he said the law reflects the "strong determination of the Chinese people to . . . never allow secessionist forces working for Taiwan independence to separate from China." The proposed law ignores reality and assumes that China and Taiwan are now unified.

The law authorizes an attack if Taiwan moves toward formal independence. Simply put, it would give China the legal authority that China has been seeking to push for reunification of Taiwan by force, if necessary. The majority of the 23 million people of Taiwan view this proposed law as hostile and unnecessary. China already has hundreds of missiles pointed at Taiwan. Passage of this law will only further already tense relations across the Strait.

The people of Taiwan live in a vibrant democracy and enjoy one of the highest standards of living in the world. Taiwan is a beacon of freedom and an engine of prosperity in eastern Asia.

Mr. Speaker, I strongly support the right of the Taiwanese people to live in a free and democratic society. This proposed law threatens Taiwan's freedom, its security, and its prosperity. During President George W. Bush's address earlier this year, he said "when you stand for liberty, we will stand with you." I urge my colleagues to stand for freedom and liberty and to stand with the people of Taiwan in its opposition to the Chinese anti-secession law.

HONORING THE 44TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE PEACE CORPS

HON. FRANK R. WOLF

OF VIRGINIA

Tuesday, March 8, 2005

Mr. WOLF. Mr. Speaker, I am proud today to honor the 44th anniversary of the Peace Corps, as we concluded the celebration of National Peace Corps Week on Sunday. The Peace Corps has made great contributions over the past 44 years with 178,000 volunteers that have served in 138 countries.

I would like to thank all those who have served and recognize their service and contributions they have given to the world.

I would also like to honor those colleagues who have served in the Peace Corps. Among them are former Ohio Congressman Tony Hall, who is now U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations Food and Agriculture agencies in Rome and who served in the Peace Corps in Thailand from 1966–67. Senator CHRISTOPHER DODD from Connecticut also served as a Peace Corps volunteer from 1966–68 in the Dominican Republic.

I hope all Americans will join me in recognizing the valuable service of those who have served in the Peace Corps and their hard work in helping to portray a positive image of the United States throughout the world.

HONORING THE CONTRIBUTIONS OF COMAL COUNTY COMMISSIONER JAY MILLIKIN

HON. HENRY CUELLAR

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, March 8, 2005

Mr. CUELLAR. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize the accomplishments of Comal County Commissioner Jay Millikin.

His patriotism stems from a lifetime of service to both town and country. Jay Millikin served for 24 years in the United States Air Force before becoming a City Councilman, and the eventual Mayor, of the City of Garden Ridge.

Commissioner Jay Millikin's commitment to the community is exemplified through his membership and involvement with countless environmental, transportation, and development councils and committees. His diligent efforts have served the citizens of Comal County with distinction since 1999.

Commissioner Millikin is a man that understands community needs and the value of hard work and dedication. It is important to recognize the accomplishments of Comal County Commissioners such as Jay Millikin, because they are an inspiration to many others in the community. They are the backbone of positive action in our local counties and communities.

Mr. Speaker, it is a pleasure to recognize the accomplishments of Comal County Commissioner Jay Millikin.

TEXAS INDEPENDENCE DAY

HON. MICHAEL T. McCAUL

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, March 8, 2005

Mr. McCAUL. Mr. Speaker, March 2 marks a historic day for my home state of Texas and specifically for the people of my district living in Washington and Austin Counties. Today, Mr. Speaker we celebrate the birth of Texas and the place where our great state was born because right along the banks of the Brazos River, Texas declared its independence.

Texas Independence day marks a time when Texans and Americans of today honor and celebrate the work and sacrifices of Texans generations ago, people who valiantly claimed their freedom from Mexico and sought out their own destiny governed by the laws of a true democracy, a constitution written by the people and the colors of their flag waving over what would become the free and independent nation of Texas. And I am proud to say this historic story of freedom, independence and democracy took place in two important places in the Tenth Congressional District of Texas, the district I am proud to say I represent.

It's a history that started long before that early March day in 1836.

Between 1820 and 1836 the Mexican Government offered Americans the opportunity to live and work in what was then the land of Texas under Mexican Rule. But these Americans, living under Mexico's government quickly found the spirit of freedom lacking. Mexican leaders, at that time, presumed they could dictate economic, social, even religious life for those living in Texas. They allowed the military to interfere in civil issues, trade even legal proceedings.

The inspiring story of how the battle against this, then, anti-democratic government began in what was then, the Stephen F. Austin Colony, the first colony of Texas, now known as Austin County, Texas. It was there that the first sparks of freedom flew from the spirits of men, tired of living under an intrusive and burdensome Mexican government. It was in the Austin Colony in 1835 that Texans first established a provisional government, with the intention of writing a declaration of independence soon after. With the Mexican Army intent on destroying any move towards Texas independence, the Consultation of 1835, as it was known, adjourned without the organization needed to continue the cause for freedom.

But the want for independence from Mexico did not die in that colony. Less than a year later, many of the same delegates present at the Consultation of 1835 arrived along the Brazos River, in the Village of Washington, just north of the Austin Colony.

By the spring of 1836 the encroachments on basic freedoms had reached a point of action for many living in Mexico controlled Texas.

They were simply fed up with such unnecessary and uncontrolled interference from a greedy government. The time for action was upon them.

On March 1, 1836, 59 delegates hailing from all corners of Texas arrived at the then relatively unknown village of Washington right alongside the Brazos River.

They met inside an unfinished frame building to decide the principals they would invoke in claiming their freedom from Mexico. And as these brave men began to construct the language which would declare their independence from Mexico, they were in fact constructing a document which very well may have served as their death warrants. For while their declaration of independence shouted freedom for the Texans, it also declared Mexico unfit to govern and the Mexican Army immediately began seeking retribution for this act of defiance.

But like so many brave heroes before and after them, these 59 delegates were willing to pay the ultimate price for freedom.

It was a bloody and dramatic time for Texas. While the men along the Brazos River fought for the right words and ideals with which to claim Texas' independence, their fellow statesmen and warriors fought for their lives and freedom. For as the delegates along the Brazos River put pen to paper in writing Texas' declaration of independence men like Davey Crockett, James Bowie and William Travis fought to their deaths in fighting for Texas freedom at the Alamo.

Despite the defeat at the Alamo, the revolution continued. In 1842 Texas president, Sam Houston moved the nation's capital from Austin to the birthplace of Texas, Washington on the Brazos River.

Three years later, by an act of Congress, the United States made Texas part of the American Union, and Texas became the 28th state of the United States of America.

There can be no argument about the Lone Star State's contribution to American history, nor can there be any debate about that history's importance.

We must always remember where that history began for Texas. Just like so many Americans travel to Philadelphia to witness the buildings and symbols involved in America's Declaration of Independence, thousands of people every year make the journey to Washington on the Brazos to understand the depth of history and events involved in Texas' Independence.

For many Americans, this place has become a phrase acknowledging an event in Texas history long forgotten. But tonight we must remember Washington on the Brazos and Austin County as the places where the proud nation of Texas found life with a want for freedom and spirit for democracy.

Texas will always have a long and storied history, which we can never forget. We must continue to remember the commitment of those men who started a new book in Texas history as they wrote the nation of Texas into independence.

INTRODUCTION OF THE INSULAR
AREAS SMALL BUSINESS DEVELOPMENT ACTHON. MADELEINE Z. BORDALLO

OF GUAM

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, March 8, 2005

Ms. BORDALLO. Mr. Speaker, today I am introducing legislation that would provide greater access to an important tool for the development and growth of small businesses in Guam, American Samoa, the United States Virgin Islands, and the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands (CNMI). My legislation would expand the areas currently designated by the Small Business Administration (SBA) as Historically Underutilized Business Zones (HUBZones) to cover the insular areas in their entirety. Not only would this legislation provide an important tool for small business growth in these economically disadvantaged areas, it would correct issues of implementation related to the current one-size-fits all criteria for designating HUBZones. This criteria disadvantages small businesses in the insular areas.

Currently, only those zones in the insular areas designated by the United States Department of Housing and Urban Development as "qualified census tracts," are recognized by the SBA as HUBZones. Many additional zones in the insular areas would also be designated HUBZones under the program's "qualified 'non-metropolitan county'" criteria, as is the case in the 50 States, the District of Columbia and the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, if not for technical issues of implementation. A principal factor of eligibility under the "qualified 'non-metropolitan county'" criteria is a high level of unemployment in a given county. The insular areas do not subdivide into counties, nor does the Bureau of Labor Statistics collect Local Area Unemployment Statistics for Guam. Therefore, firms located in a number of financially distressed areas in these jurisdictions are deprived of the opportunity to participate in the HUBZone program, as no alternative formula is used for the "qualified 'non-metropolitan county'" criteria in the insular areas.

The purpose of this legislation is to support economic self-sufficiency in Guam and the insular areas by helping small businesses located in these jurisdictions to effectively compete for federal contract work. Over the past several years, the SBA's HUBZone program has been one of the most successful vehicles for directing federal contracts and subcontracting dollars to locally-owned small businesses. I am confident that the expertise exists among small businesses in the insular areas to successfully meet federal contracting needs, particularly for local projects. Universal HUBZone designation throughout the insular areas would provide incentives for federal agencies to utilize local firms. Considering the relative geographic isolation and unique economic challenges encountered in these areas, and the problems associated with implementing all provisions of the law in the insular areas, it makes sense to designate the entirety of these jurisdictions as HUBZones.

I look forward to working with Mr. MANZULLO and Ms. Velázquez on this legislation.

DENTON'S LINK BUS SYSTEM
NAMED OUTSTANDINGHON. MICHAEL C. BURGESS

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, March 8, 2005

Mr. BURGESS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to commend Denton's Link bus system, located in the 26th Congressional District of Texas, for its recognition as an "Outstanding Metropolitan Transit System" for 2004 by the Texas Transportation Association.

Denton's Link won the award for increasing its ridership by more than fourfold from 2003 to 2004. With better routes and an influx of new riders from the local universities—Texas Woman's University and University of North Texas—Link has helped limit congestion on our streets. The "Outstanding Metropolitan Transit Award" is given for designing and implementing programs that demonstrate innovative concepts or effect problem-solving techniques. But a company must not only initiate these programs but also successfully implement the techniques. The Texas Transportation Association also awards transit systems that enhance safety measures, make their operating systems more efficient and improve customer service.

Denton's Link sets a wonderful model for other Texas public transit systems looking to make improvements. I am proud of the Denton public transportation system and citizens of Denton who continued to better their community through the use of Denton's Link.

HONORING THE CONTRIBUTIONS OF GUADALUPE COUNTY COMMISSIONER JUDY COPEHON. HENRY CUELLAR

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, March 8, 2005

Mr. CUELLAR. Mr. Speaker, I rise to recognize the dedication of Guadalupe County Commissioner Judy Cope for her civic service.

Judy Cope graduated from MacArthur High in San Antonio, and went on to attend the College of the Mainland, receiving a degree in criminal justice. She has put her training to work as a special investigator, compliance officer, gang issues coordinator, and concealed handgun instructor.

Commissioner Cope's experience has not been limited to law enforcement; she has held positions in various different fields. Early in her career she worked as an accountant, owned a feed and tack store, assisted with operations at her husband's construction company, and held a state real estate license for 21 years.

She now puts this tremendous diversity of experience to work for the citizens of Guadalupe County. She is a strong believer in government transparency and accountability, and she has worked hard to help the public be more involved in county government.

Mr. Speaker, Guadalupe County Commissioner Judy Cope's efforts to enforce the law, forge community ties, and open government to the public are worthy of praise, and I am proud to have this opportunity to recognize her work publicly.

RECOGNITION OF ARMY
SPECIALIST JACOB PALMATIERHON. JOHN SHIMKUS

OF ILLINOIS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, March 8, 2005

Mr. SHIMKUS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize the life of Army Specialist Jacob Palmatier who was recently killed in action fighting for freedom in Iraq.

Palmatier was a 29-year-old from Springfield, Illinois who served as an Army Specialist assigned to the 1st Battalion, 30th Infantry Regiment, 3rd Brigade, 3rd Infantry Division based at Fort Benning, GA. Palmatier went to Springfield's Lutheran High School and later entered Illinois College, where he graduated magna cum laude with a degree in English. He excelled in languages, learning to speak fluent Japanese as well as some Norwegian, Russian and French. He had been in Iraq for less than a month when he was killed outside of Baghdad by a roadside bomb.

Palmatier is survived by his wife Bridget of Rochester whom he married in 2003 and his parents David and Margaret Palmatier of Springfield. I am proud of the service this young man gave to our country and the service his fellow troops perform every day. Not enough can be said about Army Spc Palmatier. It is troops like him that are risking their lives day in and day out to ensure our freedom here at home and to others throughout the rest of the world. I salute him and my best wishes go out to his family and all the troops fighting to ensure freedom and democracy.

A SPECIAL TRIBUTE TO JOHN
KAUFFMAN ON THE OCCASION OF HIS RETIREMENTHON. PAUL E. GILLMOR

OF OHIO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, March 8, 2005

Mr. GILLMOR. Mr. Speaker, it is my great pleasure to pay special tribute to Mr. John Kauffman, upon his retirement as the Managing Editor of the Advertiser-Tribune Newspaper in Tiffin, Ohio.

John Kauffman, like many young Americans, entered his adulthood by proudly serving his country as a member of the United States Navy. After John's enlistment, he attended and graduated from The Ohio State University where he was an integral part of the student newspaper, The Lantern.

Upon graduation, John embarked on his journalistic career at the Ypsilanti Press in Michigan and later served as Editor of the Kenton Times. Then in 1981, John accepted his current position as Managing Editor of the Advertiser-Tribune where he has provided constant leadership.

Drawing upon his past experiences, John has brought stability and journalistic integrity to a newspaper which has seen tremendous changes. As Managing Editor, John remained cognizant of the Advertiser-Tribune's rich history which can be traced to 1832 with the beginnings of the Seneca Advertiser and its predecessor, the Seneca Patriot. With this rich history in mind, John has displayed great leadership by effectively communicating the mission at hand and adapting to the ever changing world around him.

Through John's drive and leadership, the Advertiser-Tribune instituted a Sunday edition in 1989, daily publishing in 1990 and converted to a morning publishing cycle in 1992. After 23 years of distinguished service to the residents of Tiffin and Seneca County, John leaves behind the legacy of a paper inspired by dedication and compassion.

In addition to John Kauffman's commitment to the Advertiser-Tribune, he has shown an unwavering desire to be an active participant in his community. Whether it is his activity in his local church, or his participation in the League of Women Voters' candidates' night, John has continued to lead by example.

Mr. Speaker, I ask my colleagues to join me in paying special tribute to Mr. John Kauffman. Our communities are well served by having such honorable and giving citizens, like John, who care about their well being and stability. We wish John and his family all the best as we pay tribute to one of Ohio's finest citizens.

HONORING THE ACHIEVEMENTS OF GUADALUPE COUNTY JUDGE DONALD SCHRAUB

HON. HENRY CUELLAR

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, March 8, 2005

Mr. CUELLAR. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor County Judge Donald L. Schraub for his years of contribution to the Guadalupe County community as an educator, business professional and county judge.

Born in LaVernia, Texas, Judge Schraub graduated from LaVernia High School. He attended the University of Texas at Austin and earned a Bachelors Degree in Zoology and a Teaching Certificate.

Before becoming an elected official, Schraub committed years in education and business. Judge Schraub started as a biology teacher in Midland, Texas before returning to the Seguin Independent School District to teach Earth Science. After getting a Master's degree in Education, Schraub continued to serve the school district by becoming a school counselor.

Schraub then worked 12 years for the Wholesale Beverage Distribution Company. Following his retirement from business, Schraub returned to be a school counselor in the Nixon Independent School District.

As the current Guadalupe County Judge, Schraub has aimed to provide a stable, well balanced fiscal base for the county while insuring the needs of the taxpayer are met. In the Alamo Area Council of Governments, Judge Schraub serves on the Housing Finance, Planning and Program Development, and Rural Area Judges Committees.

In his spare time, Judge Schraub likes to hunt, fish, and go camping. Married to his wife Gloria for 16 years, Schraub and his family also enjoy attending the local Christ Lutheran Church. His family has attended the same Christ Lutheran Church for four generations.

Mr. Speaker, I am honored to have this opportunity to recognize Judge Donald L. Schraub, and to thank him for his years of public service and positive influence on both the young and old of our community.

RECOGNIZING JESSICA POPE'S APPOINTMENT TO THE DISTRIBUTIVE EDUCATIONAL CLUBS OF AMERICA'S INTERNATIONAL TEAM

HON. MICHAEL C. BURGESS

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, March 8, 2005

Mr. BURGESS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to commend Jessica Pope of Little Elm High School, located in the 26th Congressional District of Texas, for her win of the Distributive Education Clubs of America's (DECA) state competition. Winning this competition puts her on DECA's International Team competing in Anaheim, California later this spring.

I congratulate Jessica Pope for this outstanding achievement. Jessica first had to qualify for the state competition through a series of tests and district competitions. At the state competition, Jessica excelled past the 100-question test plus a role-playing event, which Jessica completed in front of a panel of judges. Out of about 150 contestants in Jessica's event, she was named one of the top nine.

Jessica's teacher, Diana Reynolds, also deserves recognition because she urged Jessica to compete at the Distributive Education Clubs of America events. Teachers, like Ms. Reynolds, encourage our youth to perform at their highest potential helping to build a better America.

I am proud of the education system in Texas, especially our involved parents and teachers at Little Elm High School, who commit their lives and time to fostering growth in their students. Jessica is a stellar example of how our combined efforts are paying off. Congratulations to Jessica, her parents, Diana Reynolds and Little Elm High School.

INTRODUCING THE AMERICAN SOVEREIGNTY RESTORATION ACT OF 2005

HON. RON PAUL

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, March 8, 2005

Mr. PAUL. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to reintroduce the American Sovereignty Restoration Act. I submitted this bill, which would end United States membership in the United Nations, in the 106th, 107th, and 108th Congresses and if anything, conditions have made its relevance and importance more evident now than ever. The United Nations assault on the sovereignty of the United States proceeds apace; it shows no signs of slowing. Mr. Speaker, since I last introduced this measure, the United Nations has been embroiled in scandal after scandal, from the Oil for Food Scandal to several recent particularly appalling sex scandals.

The United States has wasted more than 30 billion taxpayer dollars on the United Nations and has received in return only contempt from an organization that scoffs at traditional notions of limited government and sovereignty.

Indeed, even though the United States pays the lion's share of the UN budget, UN bureaucrats are still not satisfied. They want direct access to U.S. taxpayer money with out the U.S. government middleman. A current example of this determination to tax American citizens is the Law of the Sea Treaty. The "International Seabed Authority" created by the Law of the Sea Treaty would have the authority to—for the first time in history—impose taxes on American businesses and citizens. This treaty may be ratified at any time by the U.S. Senate and UN taxation of Americans will become a reality.

This legislation would represent a comprehensive and complete U.S. withdrawal from the United Nations. It repeals the United Nations Participation Act of 1945 and other related laws. It directs the President to terminate U.S. participation in the United Nations, including any organ, specialized agency, commission, or other affiliated body. It requires closure of the U.S. Mission to the UN.

The legislation also prohibits the authorization of funds for the U.S. assessed or voluntary contribution to the UN; the authorization of funds for any U.S. contribution to any UN military operation; and the expenditure of funds to support the participation of U.S. armed forces as part of any UN military or peacekeeping operation. Finally, this legislation bars U.S. armed forces from serving under UN command.

The U.S. Congress, by passing H.R. 1146, and the U.S. President, by signing H.R. 1146, will heed the wise counsel of our first President, George Washington, when he advised his countrymen to "steer clear of permanent alliances with any portion of the foreign world," lest the nation's security and liberties be compromised by endless and overriding international commitments. I urge my colleagues to support this measure and I hope for its quick consideration.

In considering the recent United Nations meetings and the United States' relation to that organization and its affront to U.S. sovereignty, we would all do well to again read carefully Professor Herbert W. Titus' paper on the United Nations from which I have provided this excerpt:

It is commonly assumed that the Charter of the United Nations is a treaty. It is not. Instead, the Charter of the United Nations is a constitution. As such, it is illegitimate, having created a supranational government, deriving its powers not from the consent of the governed (the people of the United States of America and peoples of other member nations) but from the consent of the peoples' government officials who have no authority to bind either the American people nor any other nation's people to any terms of the Charter of the United Nations.

By definition, a treaty is a contract between or among independent and sovereign nations, obligatory on the signatories only when made by competent governing authorities in accordance with the powers constitutionally conferred upon them. I Kent, Commentaries on American Law 163 (1826); Burdick, The Law of the American Constitution section 34 (1922). Even the United Nations Treaty Collection states that a treaty is (1) a binding instrument creating legal rights and duties; (2) concluded by states or international organizations with treaty-making power; (3) governed by international law.

By contrast, a charter is a constitution creating a civil government for a unified nation or nations and establishing the authority of that government. Although the United Nations Treaty Collection defines a "charter" as a "constituent treaty," leading international political authorities state that— "[t]he use of the word 'Charter' [in reference to the founding document of the United Nations] . . . emphasizes the constitutional nature of this instrument." Thus, the preamble to the Charter of the United Nations declares "that the Peoples of the United Nations have resolved to combine their efforts to accomplish certain aims by certain means." The Charter of the United Nations: A Commentary 46 (B. Simma, ed.) (Oxford Univ. Press, NY: 1995) (Hereinafter U.N. Charter Commentary). Consistent with this view, leading international legal authorities declare that the law of the Charter of the United Nations which governs the authority of the United Nations General Assembly and the United Nations Security Council is "similar . . . to national constitutional law," proclaiming that "because of its status as a constitution for the world community," the Charter of the United Nations must be construed broadly, making way for "implied powers" to carry out the United Nations' "comprehensive scope of duties, especially the maintenance of international peace and security and its orientation towards international public welfare." Id. at 27.

The United Nations Treaty Collection confirms the appropriateness of this "constitutional interpretive" approach to the Charter of the United Nations with its statement that the charter may be traced "back to the Magna Carta (the Great Charter) of 1215," a national constitutional document. As a constitutional document, the Magna Carta not only bound the original signatories, the English barons and the king, but all subsequent English rulers, including Parliament, conferring upon all Englishmen certain rights that five hundred years later were claimed and exercised by the English people who had colonized America.

A charter, then, is a covenant of the people and the civil rulers of a nation in perpetuity. Sources of Our Liberties 1-10 (R. Perry, ed.) (American Bar Foundation: 1978). As Article 1 of Magna Carta, puts it:

We have granted moreover to all free men of our kingdom for us and our heirs forever all liberties written below, to be had and holden by themselves and their heirs from us and our heirs.

In like manner, the Charter of the United Nations is considered to be a permanent "constitution for the universal society," and consequently, to be construed in accordance with its broad and unchanging ends but in such a way as to meet changing times and changing relations among the nations and peoples of the world. U.N. Charter Commentary at 28-44.

According to the American political and legal tradition and the universal principles of constitution making, a perpetual civil covenant or constitution, obligatory on the people "and their rulers throughout the generations, must, first, be proposed in the name of the people and, thereafter, ratified by the people's representatives elected and assembled for the sole purpose of passing on the terms of a proposed covenant. See 4 The Founders' Constitution 647-58 (P. Kurland and R. Lerner, eds.) (Univ. Chicago Press: 1985). Thus, the preamble of the Constitution of the United States of America begins with "We the People of the United States" and Article VII provides for ratification by state conventions composed of representatives of the people elected solely for that purpose. Sources of Our Liberties 408, 416, 418-21 (R. Perry, ed.) (ABA Foundation, Chicago: 1978).

Taking advantage of the universal appeal of the American constitutional tradition, the preamble of the Charter of the United Nations opens with "We the peoples of the United Nations." But, unlike the Constitution of the United States of America, the Charter of the United Nations does not call for ratification by conventions of the elected representatives of the people of the signatory nations. Rather, Article 110 of the Charter of the United Nations provides for ratification "by the signatory states in accordance with their respective constitutional processes." Such a ratification process would have been politically and legally appropriate if the charter were a mere treaty. But the Charter of the United Nations is not a treaty; it is a constitution.

First of all, Charter of the United Nations, executed as an agreement in the name of the people, legally and politically displaced previously binding agreements upon the signatory nations. Article 103 provides that "[i]n the event of a conflict between the obligations of the Members of the United Nations under the present Charter and their obligations under any other international agreement, their obligations under the present Charter shall prevail." Because the 1787 Constitution of the United States of America would displace the previously adopted Articles of Confederation under which the United States was being governed, the drafters recognized that only if the elected representatives of the people at a constitutional convention ratified the proposed constitution, could it be lawfully adopted as a constitution. Otherwise, the Constitution of the United States of America would be, legally and politically, a treaty which could be altered by any state's legislature as it saw fit. The Founders' Constitution, supra, at 648-52.

Second, an agreement made in the name of the people creates a perpetual union, subject to dissolution only upon proof of breach of covenant by the governing authorities whereupon the people are entitled to reconstitute a new government on such terms and for such duration as the people see fit. By contrast, an agreement made in the name of nations creates only a contractual obligation, subject to change when any signatory nation decides that the obligation is no longer advantageous or suitable. Thus, a treaty may be altered by valid statute enacted by a signatory nation, but a constitution may be altered only by a special amendment process provided for in that document. Id. at 652.

Article V of the Constitution of the United States of America spells out that amendment process, providing two methods for adopting constitutional changes, neither of which requires unanimous consent of the states of the Union. Had the Constitution of the United States of America been a treaty, such unanimous consent would have been required. Similarly, the Charter of the United Nations may be amended without the unanimous consent of its member states. According to Article 108 of the Charter of the United Nations, amendments may be proposed by a vote of two-thirds of the United Nations General Assembly and may become effective upon ratification by a vote of two-thirds of the members of the United Nations, including all the permanent members of the United Nations Security Council. According to Article 109 of the Charter of the United Nations, a special conference of members of the United Nations may be called "for the purpose of reviewing the present Charter" and any changes proposed by the conference may "take effect when ratified by two-thirds of the Members of the United Nations including all the permanent members of the Security Council." Once an amendment to the Charter of the United Nations is adopted then that amendment "shall come into force for all Members of the United Nations," even those nations who did not ratify the amendment, just as an amendment to the Constitution of the United States of America is effective in all of the states, even though the legislature of a state or a convention of a state refused to ratify. Such an amendment process is totally foreign to a treaty. See Id., at 575-84.

Third, the authority to enter into an agreement made in the name of the people cannot be politically or legally limited by any preexisting constitution, treaty, alliance, or instructions. An agreement made in the name of a nation, however, may not contradict the authority granted to the governing powers and, thus, is so limited. For example, the people ratified the Constitution of the United States of America notwithstanding the fact that the constitutional proposal had been made in disregard to specific instructions to amend the Articles of Confederation, not to displace them. See Sources of Our Liberties 399-403 (R. Perry ed.) (American Bar Foundation: 1972). As George Mason observed at the Constitutional Convention in 1787, "Legislatures have no power to ratify" a plan changing the form of government, only "the people" have such power. 4 The Founders' Constitution, supra, at 651.

As a direct consequence of this original power of the people to constitute a new government, the Congress under the new constitution was authorized to admit new states to join the original 13 states without submitting the admission of each state to the 13 original states. In like manner, the Charter of the United Nations, forged in the name of the "peoples" of those nations, established a new international government with independent powers to admit to membership whichever nations the United Nations governing authorities chose without submitting such admissions to each individual member nation for ratification. See Charter of the United Nations, Article 4, Section 2. No treaty could legitimately confer upon the United Nations General Assembly such powers and remain within the legal and political definition of a treaty.

By invoking the name of the "peoples of the United Nations," then, the Charter of the United Nations envisioned a new constitution creating a new civil order capable of not only imposing obligations upon the subscribing nations, but also imposing obligations directly upon the peoples of those nations. In his special contribution to the United Nations Human Development Report 2000, United Nations Secretary-General Annan made this claim crystal clear:

Even though we are an organization of Member States, the rights and ideals the United Nations exists to protect are those of the peoples. No government has the right to hide behind national sovereignty in order to violate the human rights or fundamental freedoms of its peoples. Human Development Report 2000 31 (July 2000) [Emphasis added.]

While no previous United Nations' secretary general has been so bold, Annan's proclamation of universal jurisdiction over "human rights and fundamental freedoms" simply reflects the preamble of the Charter of the United Nations which contemplated a future in which the United Nations operates in perpetuity "to save succeeding generations from the scourge of war . . . to reaffirm faith in fundamental human rights . . . to establish conditions under which justice . . . can be maintained, and to promote social progress and between standards of life in larger freedom." Such lofty goals and objectives are comparable to those found in the preamble to the Constitution of the United States of America: "to . . . establish Justice, insure domestic tranquility, provide for the common defense, promote the general welfare and secure the Blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity . . ."

There is, however, one difference that must not be overlooked. The Constitution of the United States of America is a legitimate constitution, having been submitted directly to the people for ratification by their representatives elected and assembled solely for the purpose of passing on the terms of that document. The Charter of the United Nations, on the other hand, is an illegitimate constitution, having only been submitted to the United States Senate for ratification as a treaty. Thus, the Charter of the United Nations, not being a treaty, cannot be made the supreme law of our land by compliance with Article II, Section 2 of Constitution of the United States of America. Therefore, the Charter of the United Nations is neither politically nor legally binding upon the United States of America or upon its people.

OF COMAL COUNTY COMMISSIONER
JAN KENNADY

HON. HENRY CUELLAR

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, March 8, 2005

Mr. CUELLAR. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize Jan Kennady for a lifetime of dedicated public service.

Jan Kennady served on the New Braunfels City Council from 1993–1996, and as Mayor of New Braunfels from 1996–1999. Her energy and organizational skill were a tremendous boon to New Braunfels, and she was honored by the Texas State Legislature with a resolution expressing the State's appreciation.

She has also worked for years as a volunteer leader and organizer, and has been honored with multiple awards, including 1995 Citizen of the Year, the Chamber of Commerce President's Award, the Women of Distinction Award, and the 10 Outstanding Republican Women Award. In 1998, Governor Bush appointed her to a three-year term on the Texas Commission on Volunteer and Community Service. Her work on education, senior health, and other issues has earned her the thanks of a grateful community.

Jan Kennady is a model of initiative, commitment, and talent. She has made her city, her State, and her party stronger by her service. Today, she continues to serve her fellow Texans as Comal County Commissioner. I am honored to have this opportunity to recognize Jan Kennady, and to thank her for all she has done for those people whose lives she has touched.

Mr. Speaker, I am honored to have had this opportunity to recognize the many achievements of Comal County Commissioner Jan Kennady.

THE UNACCOMPANIED ALIEN
CHILD PROTECTION ACT OF 2003

HON. ZOE LOFGREN

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, March 8, 2005

Ms. ZOE LOFGREN of California. Mr. Speaker, no child should be left to fend for herself in a complex immigration system that even you and I would fear. This is why today I am again introducing the Unaccompanied Alien Child Protection Act.

It is true that in 2002 Congress transferred the care, custody, and placement of unaccompanied alien children from the Department of Justice to the Department of Health and Human Services to improve the treatment children receive when encountered at our borders. This is certainly a big step in the right direction and I commend the Department of Health and Human Services for taking important steps to improve the care and custody of these vulnerable children. But these positive actions did not end the plethora of problems unaccompanied children experience when they come into contact with our immigration authorities.

Health and Human Services inherited a system that relied upon a variety of detention facilities to house children and was given little legislative direction to implement their new responsibilities. As a result, some children from repressive regimes or abusive families continue to fend for themselves in a complex legal and sometimes punitive system, without knowledge of the English language, with no adult guidance, and with no legal counsel. Some unaccompanied children are treated in a manner that our country usually reserves for criminals, not helpless victims.

The Unaccompanied Alien Child Protection Act would not change the ultimate decision on what happens to the quest by children for permanent safe haven in America. It would ensure that while the decision-making process is underway, children are housed in a humane and civil way and that those deciding are accurately informed about the facts of each case and the law.

Consider the compelling story of Esther, a nine-year-old victim of abuse, neglect and abandonment by her parents. She escaped to the U.S. with relatives who later turned her over to immigration authorities at the age of fourteen. Esther was detained for over six months in a juvenile jail and represented by an unscrupulous attorney who failed to appear at her immigration hearing, leaving her defenseless. The immigration judge ordered Esther to leave the United States.

Well after the Homeland Security Act transferred the care and custody of unaccompanied alien children to Health and Human Services, the Associated Press reported on a ten-year-old boy from Ghana who "immigration officials, unsure of where the boy's parents were or how he boarded the plane without travel documents, sent him to a detention center . . . while they figured out what to do with him. Three years later, he [was] still in custody."

Another child, Malik Jarno, was detained in various adult and juvenile detention facilities for almost three years. It took several letters from over 50 members of Congress before Malik was released to a home for refugees as he continued proceedings to determine his immigration status.

It is the time to complete the positive steps we have already taken to more fully protect children who arrive in the U.S. with no parents or guardians to watch over them. The Unaccompanied Alien Child Protection Act will ensure minimum standards for the care and custody of unaccompanied children and require a smooth transfer of minors from the Department of Homeland Security to the Department of Health and Human Services. It will also ensure that children receive adult and legal guidance as they navigate through our complex immigration system. I urge this body to swiftly consider and pass the Unaccompanied Alien Child Protection Act.

IN MEMORY OF DR. DONALD ARTHUR BROOKS

HON. MICHAEL C. BURGESS

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, March 8, 2005

Mr. BURGESS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to give tribute to Dr. Donald Arthur Brooks, from the 26th Congressional District of Texas, for his lifelong contributions to his community and to his fellow citizens. Dr. Brooks was the first African-American general surgeon in Ft. Worth and the first to be a board-certified surgeon in Texas. Dr. Brooks died on March 4th at the age of 83.

I would like to recognize and celebrate Dr. Brooks' life today. Dr. Brooks set high standard by which all American citizens should strive. Born into a financially disadvantaged family, Dr. Brooks proved himself as an exceptional student graduating near the top of his class. After receiving his Bachelor of Science at Prairie View A&M in 1941, he then served two years in the United States Army. Upon returning from active duty, Dr. Brooks saved his money and went back to school to receive his Medical Degree at Howard College of Medicine.

Dr. Brooks returned to Ft. Worth in 1957 to become the first African-American to practice general surgery. He and his brother worked side-by-side and quickly became among the best-known health care providers for the African-American community. Later, Dr. Brooks would be named Chief of Surgery at St. Joseph's Hospital. He continued to practice and was distinguished as a pioneer of his community.

When he retired from surgery in 1993, Dr. Brooks continued to provide medical service to the community by becoming a staff physician at Tarrant County Jail. Dr. Brooks became the patriarch of medical dynasty which resulted in a family tree of six doctors.

It was my honor to represent Dr. Brooks. My extend sympathies to his family and friends. May the example of this "Southern Gentleman" be a lesson to us all, that our deeds should represent us well.

RECOGNIZING THE ACHIEVEMENTS OF GUADALUPE COUNTY COMMISSIONER
ROGER BAENZIGER

HON. HENRY CUELLAR

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, March 8, 2005

Mr. CUELLAR. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize the work of Guadalupe County Commissioner Roger Baenziger.

Roger Baenziger is one of Guadalupe County's most loyal and accomplished native sons. He was born and raised in Seguin, attended Seguin High School and received an accounting degree from Texas Lutheran University. He returned to the community to join his father's business, Model Market, which he helped his father run for the last 30 years.

As a lifelong small businessman, Roger is uniquely aware of the importance of small business to the health of his community. He works to promote enterprise and innovation as a member of the Chamber of Commerce and the Farm Bureau, and continues to operate his own small ranch.

Roger is committed to using his position as Guadalupe County Commissioner to promote orderly growth and fiscal responsibility. As a public servant and a volunteer, he has given an enormous amount back to the community in which he was born and raised. I am proud to have this opportunity to honor his service, and to thank him for all he has done for the people of Guadalupe County.

Mr. Speaker, I am honored to have had this opportunity to recognize the many achievements of Guadalupe County Commissioner Roger Baenziger.

JOINT STATEMENT BY LEADERS OF PROTESTANT DENOMINATIONS

HON. ROSA L. DeLAURO

OF CONNECTICUT

Tuesday, March 8, 2005

Ms. DeLAURO. Mr. Speaker, Budgets are moral documents, which reflect the values and priorities of our nation. Drawing from my own faith, the Catholic Bishops have stated, "The obligation to provide justice for all means that the poor have the single most urgent economic claim on the conscience of the nation." The more I hear this Administration's justification for the harsh decisions within their budget, the more I believe that there is no justification. This budget simply reflects the wrong values and priorities. That is why I would like to enter for today's RECORD a joint statement by the leaders of five mainline Protestant denominations representing over 20 million followers in the United States. These religious leaders today called President Bush's 2006 federal budget "unjust."

The statement is signed by: the Most Reverend Frank Griswold, Presiding Bishop of the Episcopal Church USA, the Right Reverend Mark Hanson, Presiding Bishop of the Evangelical Lutheran Church of America, the Reverend Dr. Clifton Kirkpatrick, Stated Clerk of the General Assembly, Presbyterian Church (USA), United Church of Christ General Minister and President John H. Thomas, and James Winkler, General Secretary of the General Board of Church and Society of the United Methodist Church.

JOINT STATEMENT

WASHINGTON, DC, Mar. 8, 2005.—We are preachers, and so, in explaining our opposition to the 2006 Federal Budget that President Bush has sent to Congress, it seems only fitting that we should begin with Scripture.

There was a rich man who was dressed in purple and fine linen and who feasted sumptuously every day. And at his gate lay a poor man named Lazarus, covered with sores, who longed to satisfy his hunger with what fell from the rich man's table; even the dogs would come and lick his sores. The poor man died and was carried away by the angels to be with Abraham. The rich man also died and was buried. In Hades, where he was being tormented, he looked up and saw Abraham far away with Lazarus by his side. He called out, "Father Abraham, have mercy on me, and send Lazarus to dip the tip of his finger in water and cool my tongue; for I am in agony in these flames."

The passage comes from 16th chapter of the Gospel according to Luke, and it contains a warning that should deeply trouble those of us who live in a wealthy nation. As the story continues, the rich man implores Abraham to raise Lazarus from the dead and send him to the house of his brothers so that they may be spared his torment.

"They have Moses and the prophets," Abraham replies. "They should listen to them." The rich man says, "No, father Abraham; but if someone goes to them from the dead, they will repent." And Abraham answers, "If they do not listen to Moses and the prophets, neither will they be convinced even if someone rises from the dead."

In telling this story, Jesus makes clear that perpetrating economic injustice is among the gravest of sins. Yet self-interest is so deeply ingrained in each one of us, he says, that we will not renounce it, even should someone rise from the dead. Jesus was right about that. It was he who rose from the dead to save us from greed and myriad other sins. Yet those who have much continue feasting, even as those who have little remain at their gates.

Like many Americans, we read our daily newspaper through the lens of faith, and when we see injustice, it is our duty to say so. The 2006 Federal Budget that President Bush has sent to Capitol Hill is unjust. It has much for the rich man and little for Lazarus. According to the White House's own numbers, this budget would move 300,000 people off food stamps in the next five years. It would cut the funds that allow 300,000 children to receive day care. It would reduce funding for Medicaid by $45 billion over the next ten years, and this at a time when 45 million Americans—the highest level on record—are already without health insurance.

These cuts would be alarming in any circumstances, but in the context of the 2006 budget, they are especially troubling. For even as it reduces aid to those in poverty, this budget showers presents on the rich. If passed in its current form, it would make permanent tax cuts that have bestowed nearly three quarters of the "relief" on one-fifth of the country. If passed in its current form, it would include whopping new cuts that would benefit, almost exclusively, those with household incomes of more than $200,000 per year. If passed in its current form, it would take Jesus' teaching on economic justice and stands it on its head.

Some contend that these cuts will stimulate the economy and improve life for all Americans, but we believe that stocking the rich man's larder is a peculiar strategy for getting Lazarus more food. Not only does this policy rest on dubious economic assumptions, but it asks the poor to pay the cost for a prosperity in which they may never share.

Some contend that works of mercy are not the business of the government but of private citizens. But in what other area of our national life do we formulate policies uninformed by our deepest values?

Some contend that with the proper support faith-based charities will step forward to fill the gap created by the government's retreat. But this flies in the face of the lessons that we, as religious leaders, have learned first hand. Our churches operate thousands of charities from the parochial to the international. Believe us when we tell you that neither we, nor our Evangelical brothers and sisters, nor our friends of other faiths have anywhere near the resources to turn back the rising tide of poverty in this country. We know that programs, whether governmental or non-profit, can change people's lives for the better. New situations challenge us to respond to new conditions and to support those who are in transition out of poverty. Sadly, the 2006 budget will send more people searching for food in cupboards that, quite frequently, are bare.

Our churches will continue their ameliorative ministries. But it is not enough for us as a Church or a society to be merciful. We must remember the admonition of the prophet Micah. "And what does the Lord require of you but to do justice, and to love mercy and to walk humbly with your God?" Micah's choice of verbs is instructive. We are not to love justice or preach justice, we are to do justice—to act, and, when necessary, to struggle.

We urge the members of our churches, of other churches and other faiths, and all whose conscience compels them to do justice to join us in opposing this budget. Write to your representatives. Write to your local newspaper. Join the organizations working to obtain justice for the 36 million Americans living below the poverty line, the 45 million without health insurance and the unknown millions struggling to keep their families from slipping into these ever increasing ranks. Together, let us pledge ourselves to creating a nation in which economic policies are infused with the spirit of the man who began his public ministry almost 2,000 years ago by proclaiming that God had anointed him "to bring good news to the poor."

JOB TRAINING IMPROVEMENT ACT OF 2005

SPEECH OF

HON. BETTY McCOLLUM

OF MINNESOTA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, March 2, 2005

The House in Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union had under consideration the bill (H.R. 27) to enhance the workforce investment system of the Nation by strengthening one-stop career centers, providing for more effective governance arrangements, promoting access to a more comprehensive array of employment, training, and related services, establishing a targeted approach to serving youth, and improving performance accountability, and for other purposes:

Ms. McCOLLUM of Minnesota. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to H.R. 27, the so-called Job Training Improvement Act of 2005.

Millions of Americans are unemployed today and finding it harder to get a job. According to the Minnesota Department of Employment and Economic Development, job seekers in Minnesota still out-number unfilled jobs by two-to-one.

Unfortunately, H.R. 27 does nothing to put people back to work. It doesn't shorten the lists of people waiting to use the resources at my one stops. It won't meet the needs of the approximately 8,000 Minnesota youth who can't get WIA job-related services every year. Instead, this bill unravels the very programs that ensure these workers have the skills and training they need to find high paying, long-term jobs.

H.R. 27 eliminates targeted programs designed to help both dislocated workers and unemployed adults find a job. It block grants dedicated assistance forcing low-income workers and welfare recipients to compete with dislocated workers for the same limited federal resources.

This bill eliminates dedicated funding for job search services, like Minnesota's Job Bank, which assists thousands of Minnesotans. This funding supports a rapid response system that meets the immediate needs of workers affected by mass layoffs. These changes threaten to break apart Minnesota's statewide workforce development system at the very time when these services are needed most to help unemployed workers find jobs.

In addition, H.R. 27 does nothing to ensure that these limited funds are used for training. It allows governors to take money away from adult education and veterans' job programs and use it to cover bureaucratic costs. Sadly, it also restricts youth funding to out-of-school youth. This will devastate the Building Lives Program, which Ramsey County uses to provide job training services to troubled teens during school hours.

Most concerning, however, is that this bill repeals basic civil rights protections for employees of job training programs by allowing organizations that receive Federal job-training funds to discriminate on the basis of religion.

I speak as a person who was brought up by a Lutheran mother and a Catholic father. I remember when my mother went to church to see her little girl receive her first communion and wasn't made to feel welcome. I don't want to go back to those days. I don't want the children I represent to know how it feels to be kept from fulfilling their dreams or meet their potential because someone doesn't like the church, mosque or synagogue you attend. Yet, this bill leads our country in that direction.

Mr. Chairman, I strongly believe that we must strengthen our workforce investment system to help Minnesotans get back to work. H.R. 27, however, fails to meet that goal and at the same time encourages rolling back civil rights protections. I urge my colleagues to reject this bill today.

RECOGNIZING THE ACHIEVEMENTS OF COMAL COUNTY COMMISSIONER JACK DAWSON

HON. HENRY CUELLAR

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, March 8, 2005

Mr. CUELLAR. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize the accomplishments of Commissioner Jack Dawson. Commissioner Dawson is a life-long resident of Texas and a pillar of the Comal County community.

From his first career as a computer programmer for Shell Oil to his current seat as a Comal County Commissioner, Jack Dawson has served his community with distinction.

Jack Dawson opened what is now Dawson Realty with his wife Bonnie, and he has also founded the local subdivisions first homeowners association.

Commissioner Dawson has spent his life in the service of the public. As the Board President of Canyon Lake Volunteer Fire Department, he helped to form new fire and emergency services districts for the community. He has consistently worked to improve the local communities of Comal County and the State of Texas.

Commissioner Jack Dawson has lived with his wife Bonnie Dawson in Comal County since 1976.

He is a man that understands community needs and the value of hard work.

Mr. Speaker, it is a pleasure to recognize the accomplishments of Comal County Commissioner Jack Dawson.

RECOGNIZING CORPORAL BARRON SMITH AND HIS ENDLESS COM- MUNITY SERVICE

HON. MICHAEL C. BURGESS

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, March 8, 2005

Mr. BURGESS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to commend Corporal Barron Smith of the Flower Mound Police Department, located in the 26th Congressional District of Texas, for his heroism in saving another man's life.

Corporal Smith, without regard to his own life, quickly leapt into a local lake after seeing a man beginning to drown. In the summer of 2004, Corporal Smith and his wife were camping at Grapevine Lake when they noticed a group of people having difficulty swimming in the lake. As two men began to go under, Corporal Smith decided to jump in with a life vest in an attempt to rescue the individuals. One man was able to swim to a buoy just as Corporal Smith reached the second man and helped him to shore.

Corporal Smith's act of bravery represents the best of "Texas' Finest." Officers like Corporal Smith are exemplary and are ideal citizens. His continuing service to his community, on-and-off duty, makes our community safer.

I am proud of the Flower Mound Police Department and especially our attentive citizens, like Corporal Smith, who commit their lives and time to protect and serve our community at any time, anywhere.

HONORING THE CONTRIBUTIONS OF GUADALUPE COUNTY COM- MISSIONER JIM WOLVERTON

HON. HENRY CUELLAR

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, March 8, 2005

Mr. CUELLAR. Mr. Speaker, I rise to recognize Guadalupe County Commissioner Jim

Wolverton for the important contributions he has made to his community.

Jim Wolverton is the son of a military family, and was born in Frankfurt, Germany. He moved to Texas at the age of two, and attended Samuel Clemens High School and San Antonio Junior College.

For nine years, Jim owned an electrical contracting business, and learned important lessons about leadership and organization. He has now put those lessons to work for the citizens of Guadalupe County, to great effect.

Under his supervision, Guadalupe County has passed legislation which greatly increased the amount of money available for health care for the indigent. He increased county services such as Fire, MES, and Libraries, and supervised the construction of a new, fourteen million dollar jail facility. He has worked with the municipalities in his district to establish quality, long-term business growth, and has worked with organizations outside the county government to ensure an adequate water supply for the residents of Guadalupe County. Jim Wolverton is an intelligent and committed public servant, and the citizens of Guadalupe County are better off as a result of his work.

Mr. Speaker, I am proud to have had this opportunity to honor the contributions of Guadalupe County Commissioner Jim Wolverton.

YEAR TWO OF CASTRO'S BRUTAL CRACKDOWN IN CUBA

HON. CHRISTOPHER H. SMITH

OF NEW JERSEY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, March 8, 2005

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of democratic reformers in Cuba, on the second anniversary of Castro's brutal crackdown of pro-democracy advocates.

Two years ago, with the world's attention riveted on Iraq, Fidel Castro ordered his feared State Security apparatus to round up at least 75 of Cuba's bravest and brightest, prominent and lesser-known dissidents. Among these are 28 independent journalists and 40 Varela project workers. With sickening speed, these men and women were paraded before kangaroo courts and given prison sentences ranging from 6 to 28 years. 61 remain in jail.

When the Committee on International Relations met April 16, 2003 to decry this vile abrogation of justice, I stated at that time: "Even some of the most outspoken leftists, who once saw in Fidel Castro something to admire, now admit that Castro's unbridled cruelty, thirst for blood and extreme paranoia are indefensible."

I regret to report that Castro has given me no cause to reassess that statement.

What were the so-called crimes of these brave men and women? Advocating democracy . . . writing as independent journalists . . . being men and women of faith . . .

Their real offense was to dare to question the authority of a single man, Mr. Castro. The Cuban Revolution is really about Castro's vanity and pursuit of personal power. From the beginning, Castro has shot and jailed anyone—even his close friends—who has dared get in the way of his personal ambition.

Dictatorships, reflecting the whims of a despot, always subject their people to deprivations and absurdities. The Castro regime recently let a handful of its political prisoners out on "parole," citing health reasons. The regime's callousness towards ailing political prisoners is well documented.

Now, independent Cuban journalists are reporting that Cuba's prisons have been virtually emptied of medical personnel. Why? Mr. Castro decided to send them to Venezuela and other places to advance his personal expansionist agenda.

Writing in the Spanish newspaper, El Pais, Nobel prize winner Jose Saramo, a Portuguese communist and close friend of Castro commented, "Cuba has won no heroic victory by executing these three men, but it has lost my confidence, damaged my hopes and robbed me of illusions."

Without anything that resembles due process, three alleged ferry hijackers were killed by firing squad in Cuba, while others got long jail terms.

Illusions, as Castro lover Jose Saramo has only now begun to acknowledge, often persist despite overwhelming evidence to the contrary.

Nowhere has this been more evident than in the case of Castro's Cuba.

Despite decades of credible reports of widespread egregious violations of human rights, including the pervasive use of torture and vicious beatings of political prisoners by the Cuban government, some have clung to indefensibly foolish illusions of Castro's revolution.

Despite the fact that the Cuban government systematically denies its people the freedoms of speech, press, assembly, and association, and severely restricts workers' rights, including the right to form independent trade unions, some have, nevertheless, clung to illusion.

Despite the fact that Castro maintains an unimaginably vast network of surveillance by the thugs in his secret police and Committees for the Defense of the Revolution (CDRs)—neighbors spying on neighbors—some continue to embrace bogus perceptions—illusions about Cuba.

In his book, "Against All Hope, a Memoir of Life in Castro's Gulags" Armando Valladares, a courageous and amazing man who spent 22 years in Cuban prisons wrote:

"The government of Cuba and defenders of the Cuban Revolution denied that incidents that I recount (in the book) ever happened. Castro sympathizers, who were more subtle, said the incidents I described were exaggerations. And there were others, well meaning, who simply could not bring themselves to believe that such horrors, crimes and torture existed in the political prisons of Cuba."

"My response to those who still try to justify Castro's tyranny with the excuse that he has built schools and hospitals is this: Stalin, Hitler and Pinochet also built schools and hospitals, and like Castro, they also tortured and assassinated opponents. They built concentration and extermination camps and eradicated all liberties, committing the worst crimes against humanity."

"Unbelievably, while many non-governmental organizations like Amnesty International and America's Watch have denounced the human rights situation in Cuba, there has been a continuing love affair on the part of the media and many intellectuals with Fidel Castro."

That love affair—that illusion—seemed to crash and burn with the onset of the current crackdown on dissidents. The EU took action in June 2003 by limiting high-level EU governmental visits and inviting Cuban dissidents to national day celebrations. But their memories are short. In January of this year, at the initiative of the Spanish government, the EU temporarily suspended these measures for a six-month period.

Let me mention a few of the ones who were summarily sentenced and remain in prison. Omar Rodriguez Saludes, an independent journalist known to ride his bicycle to news conferences: 27 years. Hector Palacios, one of the key figures promoting the Varela Project: 25 years. Oscar Espinosa Chepe, who wrote critical articles about the Cuban economy for the Internet: 25 years. The President of the Independent United Confederation of Cuban Workers (CUTC), Pedro Pablo Alvarez, 25 years. Journalist Raul Rivero and Ricardo Gonzalez Afonso, an editor at "De Cuba" magazine, each got 20 years. The list goes on and on.

It was a true honor to hear from Economist Morta Beatriz Rogue today, who was sentenced to 20 years in prison and released for health reasons in 2004. We salute her courage to continue the fight on behalf of those who are still in prison today.

For its part, the Bush Administration has made its deep and abiding concern for the political prisoners and the protection of elemental human rights in Cuba abundantly clear. At the time of the crackdown, former Secretary of State Colin Powell declared:

"In recent days the Cuban government has undertaken the most significant act of political repression in decades. We call on Castro to end this despicable repression and free these prisoners of conscience. The United States and the international community will be unrelenting in our insistence that Cubans who seek peaceful change be permitted to do so."

In like manner, the Congress has consistently demanded the immediate release of all the prisoners and support of the right of the Cuban people to exercise fundamental political and civil liberties. H. Res. 179, a resolution offered by Congresswoman ROS-LEHTINEN in April 2003, passed by a vote of 414-0, 11 present. In April of 2001, I sponsored a resolution, H. Res. 91, calling on the UN Human Rights Commission in Geneva to condemn Cuba's human rights abuse and appoint a Special Rapporteur for Cuba. While it passed, there were a disturbing number of negative votes. That vote was 347-44 with 22 voting present. We have another opportunity today to move forward a resolution offered by my Colleague, Mr. MENENDEZ, to show that these prisoners are not forgotten.

Fidel Castro, his brother Raul, and numerous leaders of Cuba's dictatorship, are directly responsible for crimes against humanity past—and present. Someday these oppressors will be held to account and the people of Cuba will live in freedom.

Note on the Varela Project: Named after a 19th century anti-slavery, pro-independence priest, Felix Varela, the Varela Project was a petition to the National Assembly seeking a nationwide referendum calling for basic human rights, an amnesty for political prisoners, private enterprise and election law reform to facilitate free and fair elections. On May 10th of 2002, more than 11,000 signatures were initially submitted—easily exceeding the constitutionally prescribed 10,000. Castro, however, responded by orchestrating his own petition drive that said Cuba's socialist system could not be changed, leading the rubber stamp National Assembly to declare Cuba's socialist system "irrevocable".

UNITED NATIONS ORGANIZATION MISSION IN THE DEMOCRATIC REPUBLIC OF CONGO: A CASE FOR PEACEKEEPING REFORM

HON. CHRISTOPHER H. SMITH

OF NEW JERSEY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, March 8, 2005

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I rise to address the recent U.N. Peacekeeping scandal in the Democratic Republic of Congo.

We know that there have been disturbing allegations of sexual misconduct and exploitation of refugees by U.N. peacekeepers and civilian personnel assigned to the U.N. peacekeeping mission in the Democratic Republic of Congo. Human rights groups and the U.N.'s own internal investigations have uncovered over 150 allegations against Mission personnel. These allegations typically involve peacekeepers' sexual contact with Congolese women and girls, usually in exchange for food or small sums of money. According to the U.N., these contacts occurred with regularity, and many involved girls under the age of 18, with some as young as 11-14. Even more troubling are allegations of rape, forced prostitution, and demands of sex for jobs by U.N. civilian personnel.

Some in our audience might be thinking that apart from the more serious allegations of rape and other sexual abuse, prostitution is the world's oldest profession and that it is unrealistic to ask soldiers away from their families to abstain from sex. This attitude of "boys will be boys" is indeed common. In fact, the U.N. reported that it encountered significant and widespread resistance to its investigation, and that numerous U.N. personnel were unwilling to identify perpetrators.

The reality, however, is that this state of affairs is not just a private matter involving only the personal moral choices of the peacekeepers. Hundreds of vulnerable women and children are being re-victimized; the reputation of the United Nations is being badly damaged; and lack of internal discipline is compromising security and effectiveness of the peacekeeping operations. From any perspective, this situation is deplorable.

Let me expand on a few of these points. First, United Nations forces conducting operations under United Nations command and control are tasked with upholding international humanitarian law and have a particular duty to protect women and children from sexual assault or exploitation. Peacekeepers have a responsibility to protect the most vulnerable members of Congolese society. When the peacekeepers become the exploiters, something is dreadfully wrong.

Second, the civilian population is especially vulnerable. There are frequent outbreaks of armed violence in the eastern half of the Congo, especially in the provinces of North Kivu, South Kivu and Ituri, as the country emerges from its second war in the last ten years. The civilian population in these areas has experienced systematic acts of rape, torture, murder, and other abuse. Many of the Congolese women and girls in the camps which the peacekeepers are protecting have been orphaned and/or are victims of rape which occurred during the conflicts. Investigators found that they have experienced significant trauma which continues to affect them today.

Poverty and hunger are also significant factors contributing to the abuse. Children driven by hunger approach the peacekeepers seeking food or the smallest sums of money. Many families are cut off from their farmlands because of fear of attacks from militia, and few alternate employment options exist. According to the U.N.'s own investigation, food supplies in some camps are reportedly inadequate.

Third, the continued toleration of sexual exploitation and abuse by U.N. leaders is severely damaging the reputation and the effectiveness of the organization. All troop-contributing nations recognize the Code of Personal Conduct for Blue Helmets as binding. This Code explicitly bans any exchange of money, employment, goods or services for sex, and renders the perpetrators liable to disciplinary action for serious misconduct. In fact, the U.N. has promulgated at least five U.N. codes of conduct prohibiting sexual activity with children (persons under 18 years of age) in the Congo, and yet the practice continues unabated.

This activity is prohibited under rule four of the Code of Conduct for Blue Helmets, the MONUC code of conduct, the Secretary-General's bulletin on special measures for protection from sexual exploitation and sexual abuse of 2003 (ST/SGB/2003/13), section seven of the Secretary-General's bulletin on observance by United Nations forces of international humanitarian law of 1999 (ST/SGB/1999/13), and new "non-fraternisation" regulations promulgated by U.N. Secretary General Kofi Annan in a letter to the U.N. Security Council on February 9th. That the abuse continues and is characterized by internal U.N. reports as "significant, widespread and on-going" appears to indicate there is rather a state of "zero-compliance with zero-tolerance" throughout the mission.

In the words of Dr. Sarah Mendelson, Senior Fellow at the Center for Strategic and International Studies, who testified in a joint issue forum before the House Armed Services Committee and the Helsinki Committee last fall, "Military misconduct is a threat to any mission. When that misconduct involves human rights abuses, it affects the credibility and reputation of peacekeepers and can enrage local populations. When those implicated are also responsible for force protection, they can compromise their main military mission. . . . Those peacekeepers who serve with honor are being tainted by the minority who purchase sex with these women and girls and by the even smaller minority who actively engage in the grave human rights abuse of trafficking."

The U.N. has struggled with similar allegations regarding peacekeeper misconduct and sexual exploitation in the past ten years in Sierra Leone, Liberia, and Guinea, as well as on the European continent in Kosovo and Bosnia. Some of the underlying issues are complex, such as how to ensure perpetrators are held accountable when no effective U.N. mechanism exists, and Member states are unwilling to prosecute. Yet other simple fixes also exist, such as the creation of an offender database, holding commanders accountable for the conduct of their troops, and banning nations from peacekeeping missions which refuse to take disciplinary action. The seeming reluctance of the U.N. to act on some of these seemingly obvious solutions raises questions about the willingness of leadership to undertake reform, and raises questions about the ability of the U.N. to police itself.

Furthermore, the United States Congress has a fiduciary obligation to do so. The United States is the world's largest donor to the peacekeeping mission in the Congo, contributing over $200 million annually, and contributes almost over a quarter of the entire peacekeeping budget of the United Nations. The Administration has asked the Congress for an additional $780 million for peacekeeping operations in the supplemental budget request.

We hope that continual Congressional efforts will spur needed change, not only in the Congo, but in the standard operating practices of U.N. peacekeeping around the world.

OPPOSITION TO CLASS ACTION FAIRNESS BILL

SPEECH OF

HON. BETTY McCOLLUM

OF MINNESOTA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, February 17, 2005

Ms. McCOLLUM. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the so-called class action fairness bill. This legislation will close the courthouse doors to thousands seeking justice.

The bill we are considering today pushes almost all class actions into the federal courts and away from state jurisdiction. It is no secret that federal courts are generally less willing to consider complex civil litigation than state courts. They face incredible backlogs with hundreds of criminal drug cases and immigration cases. Federalizing class actions causes delays in getting relief for injured consumers.

Instead of fixing the current system, this legislation is only making it more difficult and time-consuming for Americans with legitimate complaints to have their day in court. Class actions are a critical way for people, particularly those without the resources to battle large corporations, to seek redress from companies for fraudulent behavior, defective products and employment discrimination. A strong class-action system is particularly important given the emergence of evidence proving corporate wrongdoing in recent years. This bill will give banks, credit card companies, insurers, HMOs, drug manufacturers and other big businesses a green light to defraud and deceive consumers without fear of being held accountable. Most troubling, this bill deprives Americans of an important forum—in many cases their only forum—for remedying genuine wrongs.

I support strengthening our class action system and reducing fraud, which is why I voted for a substitute bill. This legislation would ensure that people injured or discriminated against could still get the justice they deserve while making adjustments needed to reduce abuse in the class action system. The substitute puts an end to “coupon settlements” and court shopping. It keeps our class action system accessible and effective by carving out civil rights and worker rights cases. It protects cases brought by state attorney’s general. Lastly, it asks the Administrative Office of the U.S. Courts to report back to Congress on how the new law is working. The substitute is a real improvement in our legal system that will ensure the protection and justice promised to individuals, families and businesses by our Constitution.

FOSTER CARE MENTORING ACT OF 2005

HON. JUANITA MILLENDER-McDONALD

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, March 8, 2005

Ms. MILLENDER-McDONALD. Mr. Speaker, tonight I’d like to talk about legislation that I recently introduced—The Foster Care Mentoring Act of 2005 (HR 822).

Adopting a child is a life long responsibility, but let me be frank, the way we care for our children, especially children in foster care is a direct reflection of who we are as a society.

The Administration has boldly stated that they will “Leave No Child Behind.” I want to take them up on this pronouncement and extend this idea to the 523,000 children who are in foster care programs throughout this country.

These children cannot be left behind and must be given every opportunity to succeed.

The Foster Care Mentoring Act of 2005, will support the establishment, expansion and operation of programs using a network of public and private community entities to provide mentoring for children in foster care.

Specifically The Foster Care Mentoring Act of 2005, does the following:

Provides $15 million in grants to States to develop or expand statewide academic mentoring programs for children in foster care.

Authorizes States to use this funding to help recruit, support and train volunteers to serve as a foster youth’s academic and personal advisers.

Authorizes $4 million to fund a national coordination and media campaign aimed at raising public awareness of the need to get involved in the life of a child waiting for foster care placement.

Engages college and graduate students by making them eligible to have their student loans discharged up to $2,000 for every 200 hours they serve as mentors to children living in foster care. A total of $20,000 in student loans incurred by participating college or graduate students would qualify for forgiveness.

My legislation is a good first step in approaching how we can better transition children into loving, supportive homes. But we must do more.

As I stated earlier, there are over 523,000 children in foster care. One in three of these children has been in care for over 5 years. Of the 25,000 children who leave the foster care system each year, they do so without ever having the promise of a permanent family fulfilled.

This is shameful! We must do better. Children in this country need to have a stable adult they can rely on and turn to for support while growing up. Mentoring is an excellent way to meet some of these children most basic needs.

The life experiences of children in foster care put them in a precarious and vulnerable situation. Children in foster care are more susceptible to; drug addiction, depression, delinquency, and pregnancy.

What’s more, the constant turnover in placements for children in foster care makes it difficult for these young people to succeed in school.

Mentoring can make a difference in the life of young people in foster care and provide a lifeline to academic success and better life skills.

Traditional mentoring programs often do not include the type of training and recruitment necessary to equip mentors with the tools they need to most effectively serve the needs of these young people. Those that do yield amazing results:

Current statistics show that for young people who are mentored; 45 percent are less likely to begin using illicit drugs; 59 percent do better academically, and 73 percent set and attain higher life achievement goals.

The need for mentors for children in foster care is clear, however, few states have programs aimed at serving the special needs of this vulnerable population. I ask my colleagues to support H.R. 822 ‘The Foster Care Mentoring Act of 2005.’
