APPOINTMENT OF ACTING PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will please read a communication to the Senate from the President pro tempore (Mr. STEVENS).

The assistant legislative clerk read the following letter:

U.S. SENATE,
PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE,
Washington, DC, October 5, 2005.

To the Senate:

Under the provisions of rule I, paragraph 3, of the Standing Rules of the Senate, I hereby appoint the Honorable DAVID VITTER, a Senator from the State of Louisiana, to perform the duties of the Chair.

TED STEVENS,
President pro tempore.

Mr. VITTER thereupon assumed the chair as Acting President pro tempore.

Mr. MCCAIN. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. FRIST. I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

RECOGNITION OF THE MAJORITY LEADER

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The majority leader is recognized.

SCHEDULE

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, shortly we will resume debate on the Defense appropriations bill. We began consideration on that bill last Thursday. Since that time, Members have had Thursday night, Friday, and all day Monday. We were here all day Monday, all day yesterday, Tuesday, to offer amendments. We will continue with the amendment process through today.

As I have announced previously, we will stack votes beginning at sometime around 7:30 this evening to accommodate observance of the Jewish holiday. As I have said from the outset, our intentions are we will finish the Department of Defense appropriations bill this week prior to going out on our week-long recess. It is a critically important bill, something we will finish this week.

Last night, I did file cloture on the bill. I filed in order to ensure we finish the bill this week in an orderly way. Everyone has had the opportunity for the last 3 or 4 days to come forward and offer amendments. We will vote on those amendments tonight, and then we would have the cloture vote tomorrow morning.

Again, I encourage, as I have every day for the last several days, Members to come to the Senate and offer those amendments so we can vote on them. We have had more than 100 amendments filed. It is imperative that the Senators who are serious about their amendments and want them considered come forward and work with the managers over the course of this morning and not wait until tonight. We will finish the bill this week.

As a reminder, we will recess from 12:30 until 2:15 for the weekly party luncheons.

Let me turn to the Democratic leader on anything on the schedule before I make a very brief statement.

RECOGNITION OF THE MINORITY LEADER

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The minority leader is recognized.

AMBASSADOR NEGROPONTE

Mr. REID. Mr. President, my staff received a telephone call this morning, less than an hour ago, indicating Ambassador Negroponte would not be coming today because the leader or his people indicated he shouldn’t come.

We have these very important elections taking place in Iraq on October 15. This is an opportunity for Members to visit with Ambassador Negroponte, who is, if not the expert on what is going on in Iraq, certainly one of the two or three top people in the world to tell Members what is going on there. This briefing is open to all Senators, Democrats and Republicans. There certainly is no reason we should not be able to do this. It is an important oversight responsibility we have.

I hope the distinguished Republican leader has not been part of telling Negroponte and his people not to come up here for this briefing at 3 to 4 o’clock. I had a meeting this morning at 9 o’clock. I invited all Senators to come who were with me. We are going to have good attendance at that meeting. This is not a meeting in any way to do with anything other than find out what is going on. We have a responsibility to find out what is going on. I would like to have the Ambassador come often. I don’t know why we can’t go ahead with this briefing.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, with regard to a briefing which was initiated on a bipartisan basis by the other side of the aisle in spite of their knowledge that we do have an all-Senate briefing that is bipartisan in the tradition—we have had over 20 different briefings, including one very useful one last week, one the week prior to that. On a partisan basis, an all-Senate briefing was scheduled; a counteroffer was made. We already have a meeting scheduled with the Ambassador here in 2 to 3 weeks.

I will continue to work with the Democratic leader coming back and forth. These all-Senator briefings we have, which are on a classified basis, have proven to be a very useful vehicle for all Senators to participate, to be able to ask questions of various representatives, and is a very good model.

I will continue to work with the Democratic leader. As he knows, Ambassador Negroponte is coming in about 2½ or 3 weeks—I don’t know exactly what that date is for that particular all-Senate briefing initiated on a bipartisan, not on a partisan basis, which this last meeting was.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I know the distinguished Republican leader has a statement to make, but just on this subject, on a more personal basis, the Republican leader and I had a number of meetings the last several weeks, certainly the last few days, and this issue has never been raised.

I don’t see why we can’t have too many briefings on what is going on in Iraq. Negroponte has simply not been here. I have the greatest respect for him, but in a briefing—in 2 or 3 weeks, the elections will have been over in Iraq. That is one of the reasons people are losing faith in Iraq because we do not have the information to convey to the people. The administration says just stay the course. We want information.

Negroponte, if he is told by the Republican leader not to come, he is not going to come. It is too bad. It is a perfect day for this. The Jewish holiday is still on. Most Members would have the opportunity to come here. Senator Lieberman and a couple of others said they would want to come but we already have on my side about 20 Senators willing and wanting to come.

I am disappointed this will now have to become a political issue. It shouldn’t. I like Negroponte. He is good. He is a great choice he made to lead this new intelligence agency.

There is no need to belabor the point other than to say I am terribly disappointed that others—and anyone else on the other side of the aisle—want to make this a political issue. It is an important part of the same struggle our troops are going to be unable to have this briefing. That is too bad.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I am a bit offended when the Democratic leader knows last week we had defense, we had Generals Myers, Abizaid, and Casey brief Members extensively in a bipartisan way in a tradition we have set up that is working very well. We have the Secretary of State, which he knows, coming on October 19 to have a very similar briefing, addressing issues in Iraq, in Afghanistan. And Negroponte is coming, as I said, the following week.

So we will work together. I do want to make it clear their invitation was initiated in a bipartisan way, with a letter I was not a part of, not asked to be a part of, in the letter itself, the initial letter. I think we need to continue to work together to continue these briefings, which are very important, as we go forward.

ROSH HASHANAH

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I would like to comment on the Jewish holiday at this juncture, if I might.

I would like to take a moment to recognize the Jewish holiday of Rosh Hashanah and to reflect on the importance of the Jewish people and the United States.

Rosh Hashanah, also called the Jewish New Year, began Monday evening.

Jews all across the globe flocked to their synagogues, prepared ceremonial meals, and set aside special time with family to mark the occasion.

Rosh Hashanah celebrates the anniversary of the creation of the world. It is a time for contemplation and prayer. It is a time to look back on the year ahead, to reflect on past deeds, and to ask for God’s forgiveness.

Rosh Hashanah is followed by Yom Kippur, the most solemn occasion on the Jewish calendar. Beginning on the 10th day of Tishri—October 12—the Jewish people will observe a day of fasting, of prayer, and reflection. And as with every year, they will end the annual rite with the words: “Next Year in Jerusalem.”

Israel, and the city of Jerusalem, a city that both major parties recognize as its capital, is the birthplace to three of the world’s great religions. It is rich in tradition, history, and culture, all of which truly touches the soul.

And so I want to take a moment to mention the Golan to the port of Eilat, Israel’s natural beauty is as diverse as the religions that share its golden city of Jerusalem.

A land of economic and scientific innovation, the mysticism of the past unites with technology of the future.

Perhaps most significantly, Israel is a symbol of the survival of the Jewish people. It shines as a beacon of hope to Jews all over the world, even as it stands surrounded by a sea of tyrannies.

And to the United States, this small and besieged country is a vital partner in the war on terror. The struggle it fights every day against terrorist forces, within and without its borders, is part of the same struggle our troops fight every day in Iraq and Afghanistan—the same struggle that rocked the island of Bali on Saturday.

Reasonable people can and should debate Israel’s policies. Serious, thoughtful debate is crucial to devising effective and correct solutions. It is the cornerstone of democracy.

But we must always distinguish between those who raise legitimate questions about the specific policies of a democratic state and those who use criticism of Israel as a disguise for attacks on the Jewish people.

I urge all of my colleagues to reflect on the longstanding relationship, friendship, between the United States and Israel; to wish our ally peace and prosperity in the year ahead; and to work to strengthen, deepen, and improve our bond as defenders of freedom.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The minority leader is recognized.

RETIREMENT OF TIMOTHY SCOTT WINEMAN

Mr. REID. Mr. President, Timothy Wineman has worked for the Senate for 35 years. On September 28, the Senate noted the outstanding service of Tim by adopting S. Res. 258.
He has spent his entire 35 years of Senate service working in the Disbursing Office. That in itself is a commendable feat.

In 1970, Tim began his career as a payroll clerk and was promoted to payroll supervisor. His early years were spent as a clerk. He continued to receive promotions and in 1998 became the Senate’s financial clerk. Tim’s career in the Disbursing Office has been stellar. You could always count on him and his staff for top-notch service and to accommodate Members and staff.

Tim and his wife Pat met in high school, got married, and have two children, Matthew and Lory. Matt and Lory have provided Tim and Pat with four grandchildren—two boys and two girls.

Tim plans to spend the first 6 months trying to get his sea legs, enjoying some “downtime” with his family and playing a little golf. He and Pat then plan to do some traveling. They want to go to Alaska to see what is happening there.

I salute Tim on his service to the Senate and congratulate him on job well done. He truly was part of the Senate family and always will be. I hope he enjoys his retirement.

IRAQ AND THE DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE AUTHORIZATION BILL

Mr. REID. Mr. President, let me say this. Ambassador Negroponte came to the Senate the last time this past May. Did he talk anything about what was going on with intelligence in Iraq or what was going on in Iraq, period? No. He talked about international terrorism. It is not as if we have been bothering the Ambassador having him come here all the time.

But I am disappointed to have to report to the American people this is what is going on with this administration: You never get to what the issue is. Put it off. Do not talk about it. Stay the course.

In Iraq we have some problems: almost 2,000 dead Americans; 15,000, 16,000 wounded, many of them very badly.

I in no way say this to disparage the managers of this bill, one of whom is a winner of the Congressional Medal of Honor, Senator DAN INOUYE; the other served valiantly in World War II as a financial clerk.

Mr. McCAIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The Acting President pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: Relating to persons under the detention, custody, or control of the United States Government)

At the appropriate place, insert the following:

SEC. ___. UNIFORM STANDARDS FOR THE INTERROGATION OF PERSONS UNDER THE DETENTION OF THE DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE

(a) In General.—No person in the custody or under the effective control of the Department of Defense or under detention in a Department of Defense facility shall be subject to any treatment or technique of interrogation not authorized by and listed in the United States Army Field Manual on Intelligence Interrogation.

(b) Construction.—Subsection (a) shall not apply to with respect to any person in the custody or under the effective control of the Department of Defense or under detention in a Department of Defense facility either in the United States or under the effective control of the United States.

(c) Limitation on Supersede.—The provisions of this section shall not be superseded, except by a provision of law enacted after the date of the enactment of this Act which specifically repeals, modifies, or supersedes this section.

(d) Cruel, Inhuman, or Degrading Treatment or Punishment Defined.—In this section, the term “cruel, inhuman, or degrading treatment or punishment” means the cruel, unusual, and inhumane treatment or punishment prohibited by the Fifth, Eighth, and Fourteenth Amendments to the Constitution of the United States, as defined in the United States Reservations, Declarations and Understandings to the United Nations Convention Against Torture and Other Forms of Cruel, Inhuman, or Degrading Treatment or Punishment done at New York, December 10, 1984.

Mr. McCAIN. Mr. President, this amendment would do two things: one, establish the Army Field Manual as the uniform standard for the interrogation of Department of Defense detainees; and, two, prohibit cruel, inhumane, and degrading treatment of prisoners in the detention of the Government. It is pretty simple and straightforward.

Mr. President, I regret, of course, as all my colleagues do, that this amendment has to be brought up on an appropriations bill. We are only doing so because so far we have been unable to get sufficient agreement to bring up the Defense authorization bill. I have made it very clear, over a long period of time, my feeling about how important it is to take up and complete the authorization bill is subject for another day. I know good faith efforts are being made on both sides to try to get the authorization bill up. But that has not happened so, therefore, we are addressing this issue.

By way of background, I offered a preliminary ruling that this amendment is germane because there is reference made to it in the House version of the appropriations bill.

The Senate has an obligation to address the authorizing legislation, as it has an obligation to deal with the issue that apparently led to the bill being pulled from the floor, which is America’s treatment of its detainees.

Several weeks ago, I received a letter from CPT Ian Fishback, a member of the 82nd Airborne Division at Fort Bragg, and a veteran of combat in Afghanistan and Iraq, and a West Point graduate. Over 17 months, he struggled to get answers from his chain of command about what standards apply to the treatment of enemy detainees? But he found no answers.

In his remarkable letter, he pleads with Congress, asking us to take action to establish standards to clear up the confusion and trepidation of the terrorists but for the good of our soldiers and our country. Captain Fishback closes his letter by saying:

I strongly urge you to do justice to your men and women in uniform. Give them clear standards of conduct that reflect the ideals they risk their lives for.

This comes from a young captain in the U.S. Army who has served his country both in Iraq and Afghanistan and who says it in a far more eloquent fashion than I have ever been able to. By the way, I thank God every day that we have men and women the caliber of Captain Fishback serving in our military. I believe the Congress has a responsibility to answer this call, a call that has come not just from this one brave soldier but from so many of our men and women in uniform. We owe it to them. We sent them to fight for us in Afghanistan and Iraq. We placed extraordinary pressure on them to extract information. And then we threw out the rules that our soldiers had trained on and replaced them with a confusing and constantly changing array of standards. We demanded intelligence without ever clearly telling our troops what was permitted and what was forbidden. And when things went wrong, we blamed them, and we punished them. I believe we have to do better than that.

I can understand why some administration lawyers might have wanted ambiguously, without the pretense that the legal opinion is theoretically open, even those the President has said he does not want to exercise. But war doesn’t occur in theory, and our troops are not served by ambiguity. They are crying out for clarity. The Congress cannot shrink from this duty. We cannot hide our heads, pulling bills from the floor and avoiding votes. We owe to our soldiers during this time of war to take a stand. So while I would prefer to offer this amendment to the DOD authorization bill, I am left with no choice but to offer it to this appropriations measure. I would note that I am offering this amendment in simple language in the options afforded under rule XVI of the Standing Rules of the Senate.

The amendment I am offering combines the two amendments I previously filed to the authorizing measure. To fight terrorism, we need intelligence. That much is obvious. What should also be obvious is that the intelligence we collect must be reliable and acquired humanely, under clear standards understood by all our fighting men and women. To do differently would not only offend our values as Americans but undermine our war effort, because abuse of prisoners harms, not helps, in the war, in the way it matters.

First, subjecting prisoners to abuse leads to bad intelligence, because under torture, a detainee will tell his interrogator anything to make the pain stop. Second, mistreatment of our prisoners endangers U.S. troops, who might be captured by the enemy—if not in this war, then in the next. And third, prisoner abuses exact on us a terrible toll in the war of ideas, because inevitably comes into public. When they do, the cruel actions of a few darken the reputation of our country in the eyes of millions. American values should win against all others in any war of ideas, and we can’t let prisoner abuse tarnish our image. Yet reports of detainee deaths continue to emerge, in large part, I believe, because of confusion in the field as to what is permitted and what is not. This amendment will go a long way toward clearing up this confusion.

The first part of this amendment would establish the Army Field Manual as the uniform standard for the interrogation of Department of Defense detainees. The Army Field Manual and its various editions have served America well through wars against both regular and irregular foes. It embodies the values Americans have embraced for generations, while preserving the ability of our interrogators to extract critical intelligence from foes. Never has this been more important than today in the midst of the war on terror. The Army Field Manual authorizes interrogation techniques that have proven effective in extracting life-saving information from most hardened enemy prisoners. It is consistent with our laws and, most importantly, our values. Let’s not forget that al-Qaeda sought not only to destroy American lives on September 11, but our American values, our way of life, and all we cherish.

We fight not just to preserve our lives and liberties, but also American
There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

DEAR SENATOR MCCAIN: We strongly support your proposal to the Defense Department Authorization bill concerning detainee policy, including requiring all interrogations of detainees in DOD custody be covered by the Army’s Field Manual on Intelligence Interrogation (FM 34-52), and prohibiting the use of torture and cruel, inhuman and degrading treatment by any U.S. government official.

The abuse of prisoners hurts America’s cause in the war on terror, endangers U.S. forces, and is anathema to the values Americans have held dear for generations. For many years, those values have been embodied in the Army Field Manual. The manual applies the wisdom and experience gained by military interrogators in conflicts against both regular and irregular foes. It authorizes techniques that have proven effective in extracting life-saving information from the most hardened enemy prisoners. It also recognizes that torture and cruel treatment are ineffective methods, because they induce prisoners to say what their interrogators want to hear, even if it is not true, while bringing discredit upon the United States.

It is now apparent that the abuse of prisoners in Abu Ghraib, Guantanamo and elsewhere took place in part because our men and women in uniform were given ambiguous instructions, which in some cases authorized treatment that went beyond what was allowed by the Army Field Manual. Administrators are right in declaring that U.S. personnel are not bound by longstanding prohibitions of cruel treatment when interrogating non-U.S. citizens on foreign soil. As a result, we suddenly had one set of rules for interrogating prisoners of war, and another for “enemy combatants,” one set for Guantanamo, and another for Iraq; one set for our military, and another for the CIA. Our service members were denied clear guidance, and left to take the blame when things went wrong. They deserve better than that.

The United States should have one standard for interrogating enemy prisoners that is effective, lawful, and consistent from now on. Our nation’s ability to fight the war on terror. They reflect the experience and highest traditions of the United States military. We urge the Congress to support this effort.

Sincerely,

Mr. MCCAIN. The second part of this amendment should not be objectionable to anyone since I am actually not proposing anything new. The prohibition against cruel, inhuman, and degrading treatment has been a longstanding principle of U.S. policy in the United States. Before I get into why the amendment is necessary, let me first review the history.

The Universal Declaration of Human Rights, adopted in 1948, states simply: ‘ ‘The Universal Declaration of Human Rights, adopted in 1948, states simply: ‘ ‘The Universal Declaration of Human Rights, adopted in 1948, states simply: “Everyone is entitled to respect for his or her person.” Article 5 states that “no one shall be subjected to torture or cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment.”

The International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, to which the United States is a signatory, states the same. The binding Convention Against Torture, negotiated by the Reagan administration and ratified by this body, prohibits cruel, inhuman, and degrading treatment. On last year’s DOD authorization bill, the Senate passed a bipartisan amendment reaffirming that no detainee in U.S. custody can be subject to torture or cruel treatment, as the U.S. has long defined those terms. All of this seems to be common sense, in accordance with American values. But since last year’s DOD bill, a strange legal determination was made that the prohibition in the Convention Against Torture against cruel, inhuman, or degrading treatment does not legally apply to foreigners held outside the United States. They can apparently be treated inhumanely. This is the administration’s position, even though Judge Abe Soafer, who negotiated the Convention Against Torture for President Reagan, said in a recent letter that the Reagan administration never intended the prohibition against cruel, inhuman, or degrading treatment to apply only on U.S. soil.

What all this means is that America is the only country in the world that asserts a legal right to engage in cruel and inhuman treatment. But the crazy thing is, it is not even necessary because the administration said it will not engage in cruel, inhuman, or degrading treatment as a matter of policy. What this also means is that confusion about the rules becomes rampant again. We have so many different legal loopholes that our lawyers and generals are confused. Just imagine our troops serving in prison in the field.
The amendment I am offering simply codifies what is current policy and reaffirms what was assumed to be existing law for years. In light of the administration’s stated commitment, it should require no change in our current and detestable practices. What it would do is restore clarity on a simple and fundamental question: Does America treat people inhumanely? My answer is no. And from all I have seen, America’s answer has always been no.

I travel a lot around the world, usually at taxpayers’ expense. Everywhere I go, I encounter this issue of the treatment of prisoners and the photos of Abu Ghraib and what is perceived in the world to be mistreatment of prisoners. It is harming our image in the world terribly. We have to clarify that that is not what the United States is all about. That is what makes us different. That is what makes us different from our enemies, if we are to exist. The most important thing about it is not our image abroad but our respect for ourselves at home.

Let me close by noting that I hold no brief for the prisoners. I do hold a brief for the reputation of the United States of America. We are Americans. We hold ourselves to humane standards of treatment of people, no matter how evil or terrible they may be. To do otherwise undermines our security, but it also undermines our greatness as a nation. We are not simply any other country. We stand for something more in the world, a moral mission, one of freedom and democracy and human rights. We see the suicide bombings and we see our enemies. We see the people who are inflicting terrible damage from Indonesia, the Philippines, to all throughout the Central Command, and we have teams out trying to find these people.

Of course, the most important job is to interrogate anyone they capture to try to see if we can find out where the rest of them are and how they are functioning. If this amendment passes, the United States will not have effective control and it will be impossible to interrogate under the systems we have used in the past because we cannot list in a field manual all of the interrogation techniques that will be used. It takes thousands of pages anyway. But the techniques vary upon the circumstances and the physical location of the people involved.

I have some memory from World War II in China when I witnessed some of our people—I was just a pilot, but I was conveying people from lonely places to place who had been tortured, and I can tell you they were brutally treated by the Chinese when we were taking these people from place to place and they had prisoners. Some of them were not Chinese. They were prisoners obviously of Japan. We had freed some of them, and they were—I have memory that those who were freed were still the responsibility of the United States.

But as a practical matter, what do you do with regard to a law that says that all of the techniques must be listed in the field manual; regardless of nationality or physical location, if an individual is in the custody or physical control of the United States, they shall be subject to only the means of interrogation listed in the field manual.

I appreciate very much what the Senator is trying to do. I think most of us have gone down to Guantanamo to satisfy ourselves that what is happening down there is consistent with our concepts. Those people are totally under the custody of the United States, and certainly from my point of view what we saw when we were down there, we were convinced they were receiving the kind of treatment and the interrogations were not such that they would be affected by this amendment.

It is the people in the field, not people really handling prisoners or handling interrogation of those persons who are seized by our forces and brought to a camp or brought to a place, a jail such as we all know has gone wrong in Iraq—but I am talking about the people in the world, multinational teams, and their job is to find out what these people who are captured know in order to prevent further acts of terrorism. It is a very toughy thing to deal with, I know, to really talk about it.

The administration has told us that they are complying with all the constitutional, statutory, treaty obligations that apply to U.S. interrogation practices. They are telling us that they know the Convention Against Torture requires the United States to ensure that torture is a crime whether committed anywhere by a U.S. national or to prevent any of the entities that are under the control of the United States from any acts of cruel, inhumane, or degrading treatment or punishment. We totally agree with the efforts of the Senator from Arizona in that regard, and the President has directed the Armed Forces to treat any detainee humanely and comply with the appropriate and consistent military procedures that are consistent with the Geneva Conventions.

That is a given. But this amendment goes further. This amendment will cover those entities with multiple nationalities, multiple agencies, and because of the circumstances our people in the past have taken control of these, and some of the activities of the other nationalities involved would not be consistent with this amendment. I say this because I know the Convention Against Torture was not even signed by the United States. It is those circumstances, the new type of entities we use to combat terrorism that worries the administration. So I can say—and I know the Senator from Arizona understands—it is the position of the administration that this amendment goes too far.

We will not make a point of order. There is no point of order that I know will apply to it anyway. But I do believe it is a matter that ought to be approached with caution. What does a multinational team do if they pick up a prisoner who they believe can give them information as to the location of terrorists who have committed severe acts of terrorism? The decision will be made, I am sure, that we not take custody. The custody will go to other nationalities involved. We will have no control. I believe the amendment of the Senator from Arizona is going to carry, but I believe we have to give serious consideration to the implications I have just mentioned, and I hope the Senate will keep that in mind. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. McCANN). The Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. GRAHAM. Mr. President, No. 1, I would like to recognize that Senator STEVENS, who has so honorably served our country, is genuinely concerned about the extent of this amendment. For those of you who are listening, Senator STEVENS was a World War II pilot. He has gone in harm's way in defending his country. We have in the Chamber his counterpart on the Appropriations Committee, Senator ISOYE, a Medal of Honor winner, and the Senator occupying the chair is a former POW. The food chain is going down when I am speaking. But what I want to try to discuss today is from a lawyer's point of view and really from a citizen's point of view.

I have had the honor for the last 20-some years to be a member of the Judge Advocate General's Corps of the Air Force, a prosecutor, a defense counsel, and now a Reserve military judge. That experience has been a wonderful experience. I have received more out of it than given. Wearing the uniform in any capacity is quite an honor, and to be a military lawyer has been one of the highlights of my life. I have never felt it at. I had some clients who probably wanted to kill me. But other than that, I do understand this debate pretty well. To me, it is not much of a debate. We have as a nation adopted the position that Senator MCCAIN described when it comes to how you handle people in your care and custody.

One thing I would respond to Senator STEVENS is that the Army Field Manual has sort of been the bible for interrogation for decades. If you are worried, and I think it is a fair question, is there anything in the Army Field Manual that would unfairly restrict the ability of the United States to gain good information and defend ourselves from a bunch of rogue thugs murderers, the answer is no. You don't have to trust me there. Go to Gitmo and ask the question of the people who are doing the interrogation of these terrorists: Is there anything in the Army Field Manual that would prevent you from getting that information that would impede your ability to gather good information? And the answer they told me was no.

So what is the value of having it? The value of having standardization when it comes to interrogation, detention, and prosecution is of immeasurable benefit to the force because, as Senator McCAIN indicated, a lot of the people implementing these policies when it comes to interrogation, detention, and prosecution are in harm's way. That is one of the things we have learned in this whole war on terror is that this Nation needs to have effective interrogation techniques, effective detention policies, and effective prosecution tools to hold the terrorists responsible because you have two audiences.

No. 1, you have the terrorist community. I want every terrorist to know, if you are going to be on the battlefield and you are captured, things are going to happen to you. You are going to be interrogated aggressively, but we are going to treat you humanely, not because we worry about your sensitivities but because we don't want to be the people who are interrogating. So we are going to keep that in place.

The President has said whether the Geneva Convention applies or not we are going to treat everybody in our charge humanely, not because of them but because of us. And the debate here is what happens when somebody in your charge is not covered by the Geneva Conventions. It is easy when someone is a legal combatant. We have that in the Army Field Manual. We know the Geneva Conventions. We have been a signatory for 60 years. The Army Field Manual covers that situation. The war on terror is different. Vietnam was different. We had people who were lawful, whom we were able to interrogate, detain, and prosecute without changing who we were.

The Army Field Manual as a one-stop shop to guide the way we handle lawful combatants and enemy combatants is absolutely necessary if for no other reason than to protect our own troops. That is why we are doing this. That is one of the main reasons—to make sure that your own troops don't get in trouble because they are confused.

I have been a military lawyer for 20 years. We have confused people about as much as you can possibly confuse them. And this all started with the Army Field Manual says no. You have the terrorist community. I want every terrorist to know, if you are going to be on the battlefield and you are captured, things are going to happen to you. You are going to be interrogated aggressively, but we are going to treat you humanely, not because we worry about your sensitivities but because we don't want to be the people who are interrogating. So we are going to keep that in place.

The Army Field Manual as a one-stop shop to guide the way we handle lawful combatants and enemy combatants is absolutely necessary if for no other reason than to protect our own troops. That is why we are doing this. That is one of the main reasons—to make sure that your own troops don't get in trouble because they are confused.

I have been a military lawyer for 20 years. We have confused people about as much as you can possibly confuse them. And this all started with the Army Field Manual says no. You have the terrorist community. I want every terrorist to know, if you are going to be on the battlefield and you are captured, things are going to happen to you. You are going to be interrogated aggressively, but we are going to treat you humanely, not because we worry about your sensitivities but because we don't want to be the people who are interrogating. So we are going to keep that in place.

interrogation, detention, and prosecution, and we have done it in a way that weakens our Nation. We are the strongest when all three branches are on the same sheet of music. It is important, if we are going to win this war on terror, not to give the moral high ground to your enemy, to unbelievably run our country. That every branch of Government understands and the people implementing these laws are not confused and they will not get in trouble by following what we have said. Congress has been AWOL. We have law that says we have laws, but no one is speaking. And the administration does not have laws that have been passed. That is exactly what we are doing.

I asked Judge Roberts, during the confirmation process, about this whole line of questioning. I said:

Do you believe that the Geneva Convention, as a body of law, that it has been good for America to be part of that convention?

ROBERTS: I urge my colleagues to please adopt this amendment overwhelmingly. It will do a great service to future Presidents. It will be a great turning point in the war on terror. It is needed. It is a simple amendment. It uses the Army Field Manual as the bible for interrogation for lawful combatants and enemy combatants. You can write it in the way you need to. It does not lock us into a position that would be undermining our efforts to get good intelligence. It simply will be a document that covers how we behave in every known situation from Guantanamo Bay to the battlefield in Afghanistan. It will be something that will help our troops understand what they can and cannot do. It will make us stronger as a nation.

The second part of the amendment is the most important. It says that we as a nation will do what the President said: We will treat everybody in our charge humanely whether they deserve it or not because, as Senator McCains said, it is about us, it is not about them. And it is now time for Congress to speak. It will help us in court. When the courts understand that the Congress has come up with a plan in support of the administration to interrogate detainees, they will give great deference to that situation. When Congress is absent, they are going to be confused, and they are going to do some things they really do not want to do.
to give them the armor they need to protect themselves from a terrible enemy. We are trying to give them the intelligence they need to get ahead of the enemy. The best thing we can do is give them the guidance they need to make sure we can win this war on terror and never lose the moral high ground.

I urge every person to think long and hard about this amendment. To vote no on this amendment, in my opinion, dramatically weakens us as a nation. To vote yes on this amendment is to protect our values and provide good guidance to make sure we get good intelligence, and protects our own people from being prosecuted.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Tennessee is recognized.

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. President, it is an honor to serve in the same body with the Senator from Hawaii, a Congressional Medal of Honor winner, and with the Senator from Arizona because of his distinguished service in Vietnam.

Whenever the Senator from Arizona, a pilot in World War II, who devoted most of his career here to understanding our defense policies, urge caution, I try to listen and pay attention. So I support this amendment by the Senator from Arizona to the Defense appropriations bill, and I ask unanimous consent to be added as a cosponsor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. GRAHAM). Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. President, I have listened carefully to the debate about whether it is appropriate for Congress to set the rules on the treatment of detainees. I have listened carefully, but for me the question isn’t even close.

The people, through their elected representatives, should set the rules for how detainees and prisoners under U.S. control are treated and interrogated. In the short term, the President can set the rules, but the war on terror is now 4 years old. We do not want judges making up the rules. We Republicans often say we don’t like to see judges legislating from the bench. So for the longer term, the people should set the rules. That is why we have an independent Congress. That is our job.

In fact, the Constitution says quite clearly that is what Congress should do. And the Constitution says Congress and Congress alone shall have the power to make “Rules concerning Captures on Land and Water.” So Congress, as the Senator from South Carolina said, has a responsibility to set clear rules here.

But the thrust of this amendment is really one that I still hope the White House will decide to embrace. In essence, as has been pointed out, the amendment codifies military procedures, the rules—procedures—for detainees in the Army Field Manual and procedures regarding compliance with the Convention Against Torture signed by President Reagan. These amendments uphold or codify policies and procedures the administration says we are following today and intend to follow moving forward.

As the Senator from Arizona pointed out, his amendment would do two things: One, prohibit cruel, inhumane, or degrading treatment or punishment of detainees. It is in specific compliance with the Convention Against Torture that was signed by President Reagan. The administration says we are already upholding that standard and it is treatment of detainees, so this should not be a problem.

Secondly, the McCain amendment states simply that the interrogation techniques used by the military on detainees shall be those specified by the Army Field Manual on Intelligence Interrogation. The military, not Congress, writes that manual. We are told that the technique specified in the manual will do the job. Further, it is under revision, as has been pointed out, to include techniques related to unlawful combatants, including classified portions that will continue to give the President and the military a great deal of flexibility.

If the President of the United States thinks these are the wrong rules, I would hope he would submit new rules to Congress so that we can debate them and pass them. I made this same suggestion in July, but no alternative rule has been suggested so far. I am one Senator who would give great weight to the President’s views on this matter.

This has been a gray area for the courts over time. In this gray area, the question is, Who should set the rules? In the short term, surely the President can. In the longer term, the people should, through their elected representatives. We are their elected representatives. It is time for us to act. It is time for us to set the rules. We do not want to give judges the ability to legislate from the bench and writing the rules. That leaves us to do our job.

In summary, it is time for Congress, which represents the people, to clarify and set the rules for detention and interrogation of our enemies. If the White House would prefer different rules, I hope the President will tell us what rules and procedures he needs to succeed in the war on terror.

If the argument is whether it is appropriate for Congress to set clear standards, I think Congress should act. Congress should set standards and will vote to support the amendment of the Senator from Arizona.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. SUNUNU. Mr. President, I rise in support of the McCain amendment. There has been a lot of discussion about the new challenges we face in dealing with organized terrorist cells around the world. The complexity and the nature of those terrorist threats require us to engage in more combat activity that is nonconventional.

We want to make sure we do what we can to secure transportation and infrastructure, that we do what we can to deploy technology, that we improve our preparedness. But it does not change the fact that in dealing with terrorism our greatest asset or our greatest leverage is an intelligence gathering. Intelligence gathering will require direct engagement with and interrogation of suspects, trying to gather information that can help us disrupt these networks.

I think this calls out for a process that is more clear and better defined: interrogation tools, techniques, and procedures that we can be sure are appropriate, and that moral high ground.

I think this calls out for a process that is more clear and better defined: interrogation tools, techniques, and procedures that we can be sure are appropriate, and that moral high ground.

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. President, I yield to the Senator from Arizona.

Mr. HAMPTON. Mr. President, I feel very strongly about this. As the Senator from Arizona pointed out, this amendment is to protect our values as a nation. We want to make sure we do what we can to secure transportation and infrastructure, that we do what we can to deploy technology, that we improve our preparedness. But it does not change the fact that in dealing with terrorism our greatest asset or our greatest leverage is an intelligence gathering.

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. President, we have a fundamental obligation to support this amendment or at least some approach to clarify these processes, standards, and procedures used for interrogation.

I think this calls out for a process that is more clear and better defined: interrogation tools, techniques, and procedures that we can be sure are appropriate, and that moral high ground.

I do not know, not having the experience of some of my colleagues, whether this is the perfect standard, whether the requirements and the precise language in this amendment are ideal, but I think this is a fair-minded approach that allows the military itself, through its commander of the intelligence gathering that we are attempting to facilitate, to establish the classified annex to deal with covert operations, deal with the most sensitive of captives and the most sensitive of interrogations so that we are not undermining the intelligence gathering that we are attempting to facilitate.

In fact, the approach that has been taken has been endorsed, as was indicated by the Senator from Arizona, by many who have had very close and intimate experience with this type of interrogation. In the letter that Senator McCain entered into the RECORD there were two particular points that were made that I want to underscore, and that is, first, that torture is illegal. Twice the amendments were stricken from the bill at the insistence of Senator McCain, the former Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, who was then-Secretary of State, objected strenuously to Attorney General Gonzales' conclusion. He argued that we could effectively fight the war on terrorism and we could live by the Geneva Conventions, which have been the law of the land in America for over half a century.

Unfortunately, the President rejected Secretary Powell's lawful counsel and instead accepted Attorney General Gonzales' recommendations. In February of 2002, he issued a memo determining that the Geneva Conventions would not apply to the war on terrorism. Then the administration unilaterally created new policies on the use of torture. I am referring to, among other things, the well-known Bybee memo of August 1, 2002, which has been publicly disclosed. They have claimed that the President has the right to set aside the law that makes torture a crime. They have narrowly defined torture as limited only to abuse that causes pain equivalent to organ failure or death. They claim that it is legal to subject detainees to cruel, inhuman, and degrading treatment even though Congress has ratified the torture convention, which explicitly prohibits cruel, inhuman, and degrading treatment. This fact was verified by Attorney General nominee Gonzales during confirmation hearings before the Senate Judiciary Committee, in response to a question which I asked him directly.

While all of this, the administration continues to insist that their policy is not to treat detainees inhumanely. What does this mean? Recently, I asked Timothy Flanigan this question. He was the Deputy to White House Counsel Alberto Gonzales. Mr. Flanigan has been nominated to be the Deputy Attorney General, the second highest law enforcement official in the Nation. Mr. Flanigan said inhumane treatment is "not susceptible to a succinct definition." I asked him whether the White House had provided any guidance to our troops on the meaning of inhumane treatment. He acknowledged that they had not.

I asked Mr. Flanigan about specific abuses. I asked him: would it be inhumane to beat prisoners or subject them to mock executions? He said, "It depends on the facts and circumstances." I cannot imagine facts and circumstances in which it would be humane to subject a detainee to a mock...
That our soldiers are trained in and understand. To replace them with vague directives to treat detainees humanely fails to provide basic guidance that our troops desperately need.

Listen to what Captain Fishback also wrote:

I can remember as a cadet at West Point, resolving to ensure that my men would never commit a dishonorable act, that I would protect them from all types of rendition. It absolutely breaks my heart that I failed some of them in this regard.

It breaks my heart to think that this soldier, risking his life for America in Afghanistan and Iraq, is now reaching out to the bad guys to provide him with guidance. I am thankful that Senator MCCAIN has stepped forward, along with you, Mr. President, and many others in this Chamber, to give him that guidance.

Captain Fishback is an honorable man. Like the overwhelming majority of the fine men and women who serve our country, he has not failed. We have failed—to give him clear direction in his conduct and treatment of detainees.

The administration has failed to set clear rules for the treatment of detainees. We need to step in and clarify these with the amendment offered by Senator MCCAIN. Cruel, inhuman, and degrading treatment are prohibited. The Army Field Manual governs the treatment of detainees. Senator MCCAIN’s amendment will make that clear.

In the past, the administration has opposed amendments that affirm that cruel, inhuman, or degrading treatment is illegal because they “would have provided legal protections to foreign prisoners to which they are not now entitled.” But the administration is not correct in this assertion. Cruel, inhuman, or degrading treatment is already prohibited by the torture convention.

Their reasoning is revealing, however. They do not seem to understand the moral and legal obligation to treat all prisoners, regardless of status, as we would want the enemy to treat our own. Our courageous men and women deserve nothing less.

Let me close finally by a quote from Captain Fishback’s letter:

Some argue that since our actions are not as horrifying as Al-Qaeda’s, we should not be concerned. When did Al Qaeda become any type of standard by which we measure the morality of the United States? We are America, and our actions should be held to a higher standard, the ideals expressed in documents such as the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution. . . . If we abandon our ideals in the face of adversity and aggression, then those ideals were never really true to our country. I rather die fighting than give up even the smallest part of the idea that is “America.”

We are so fortunate to have men of his dedication and character serving our country in uniform. We owe it to them, we owe it to the hundreds of thousands of men and women who serve us every single day and risk their lives, to set clear rules so they know how to treat detainees in custody.

I urge my colleagues to support the amendment of Senator MCCAIN. I yield the floor.

Mr. OBAMA. Mr. President, I support the amendment offered by the senior Senator from Arizona. I commend Senator MCCAIN for his leadership on this important issue. This amendment prohibits the cruel, inhuman, or degrading treatment or punishment of persons under custody or control of the U.S. Government. In other words, it outlaws the torture of prisoners by agents of the United States, regardless of their geographic location.

I am, and always have been, opposed to the use of torture. I believe that our brave men and women serving in the Armed Forces share this view. Now more than ever, we must make it absolutely clear to our allies and our enemies that the United States does not and will not condone this practice. This amendment does that in no uncertain terms. It acknowledges and confirms existing laws under our own Constitution and the United Nations Convention Against Torture.

Let me be clear on another point. I am committed to fighting terrorism and protecting our citizens and troops abroad. I have the utmost respect, gratitude and admiration for our troops who are fighting on the frontlines of the War on Terror, and I have no intention of undermining the important job that they do. But the use of torture does not enhance our national security. In fact, senior U.S. military officers have argued that practicing torture can place
U.S. troops in grave danger—especially if they are taken prisoner. In working to keep our Nation and troops safe, we must not lose sight of this critical truth.

The United States should set an example for the international community. Senator McCaIN’s amendment affirms a fundamental value of the American people—that torture is morally reprehensible and has no place in American society.

This administration has steadfastly refused to address the black mark on our Nation caused by its interrogation policies and the resulting abuse of detainees. Congress needs to take action. Our reputation as a world leader in human rights suffers from our unwillingness to openly address the flaws in our system. More importantly, the failure to provide clear guidance and oversight of interrogations puts our own troops at risk and undermines their efforts in Afghanistan and Iraq. I commend my colleagues across the aisle who are attempting to address this problem, despite resistance from members of their own party and the strong opposition of the White House. The President has threatened to veto any legislation that would regulate the treatment of detainees, claiming that it would impinge on his Commander-in-Chief authority to see how and where the remaining humane treatment of detainees—the same treatment the President claims they now receive—would impinge on his authority in any way.

It is Congress’s right under the Constitution to make regulations governing the armed forces. This was something I asked Chief Justice Roberts at his confirmation hearings, and he agreed “that Congress can make rules that may impinge upon the President’s functions.” He answered, “Certainly . . . the Constitution vests pertinent authority in [this] area in both branches. The President is the Commander-in-Chief . . . On the other hand; Congress has the authority to issue regulations governing the armed forces, another express provision in the Constitution.”

Senator Graham said on the floor this morning that, “Congress has been AWOL when it comes to the war on terror in terms of interrogation, detention and prosecution, and we’ve done it in a way to weaken our Nation.” I agree with my friend, the Senator from South Carolina. Without congressional action, the魔兽 of prisoner abuse will continue to fester.

We continue to learn of abuses from press reports and the court-ordered release of government documents in response to FOIA, litigation. Documents that were recently made public by the FOIA case demonstrate why Senator McCaIN’s amendment is necessary.

These documents reveal a troubling pattern of abuses that occurred because soldiers did not know what was acceptable under this administration’s vague detention and interrogation policies. Several of the documents are transcripts of interrogations of military personnel in Iraq that show a systematic failure of the Pentagon to properly train soldiers on how to treat detainees. One report describes soldiers who, because of a lack of guidance and training from their command, engaged in acts of interrogation using techniques they literally remembered from movies.” Another document describes the shooting of an Iraqi detainee in U.S. custody. The report concludes that “this incident could have been prevented if [the soldier] had better training.”

Another report, released last week by Human Rights Watch and based on firsthand accounts of soldiers in the 82nd Airborne Division, details the widespread abuse of Iraqi detainees by U.S. soldiers at Abu Ghraib, a forward operating base near Falluja, Iraq. The report states that detainees were severely beaten and mistreated from 2003 through 2004, even after the photos from Abu Ghraib became public. The report noted that detainees were abused at the request of military intelligence personnel as part of the interrogation process, but also claim that the abuse occurred simply as a way for troops to “relieve stress.” One soldier allegedly broke a detainee’s leg with a baseball bat. In another incident, detainees were stacked into human pyramids and denied food and water. It is time for this administration to finally acknowledge that such incidents were not the isolated acts of a few bad apples. These horrific acts were not isolated incidents on the night shift at Abu Ghraib. Unfortunately, similar acts occurred at locations throughout Iraq and Afghanistan.

A group of military officers, including General John Shalikashvili, recently wrote to Senator McCaIN in support of his amendments addressing detainee treatment. That letter stated, “The abuse of prisoners hurts America’s cause in the war on terror, endangers U.S. servicemembers who might be captured by the enemy, and is anathema to the values Americans have held dear for generations. Our servicemembers were denied clear guidance, and left to take the blame when things went wrong. They deserve better than that.” I hope the President will consider these words before he vetoes a bill that contains Senator McCaIN’s amendment.

Mr. HAGEL. Mr. President, I rise in support of Senator McCaIN’s amendment No. 1977 regarding the treatment of individuals who are in the custody or control of the United States.

I cosponsored this amendment because the men and women making sacrifices to defend the United States need clear standards for the treatment of detainees under U.S. control. It is the responsibility of both the Executive and Congress to provide clear guidance and leadership that will direct the actions of our troops.

We have failed to meet this obligation. Soldiers continue to report that the lack of clear guidance has created a climate of confusion and uncertainty around the world. Our failure to confront this issue puts our troops at greater risk of abuse and mistreatment and undermines our credibility.

This amendment will strengthen our ability to fight those who threaten the United States and codifies into law that the U.S. will not subject detainees to cruel, inhumane and degrading treatment.

This is a commonsense amendment that protects our troops and upholds the standards that this country has held to since the beginning of our Republic.

I urge my colleagues to vote in support of this amendment.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, I rise in support of amendment No. 1977, offered by my colleague, Senator McCaIN. This amendment would bring much-needed clarity to the rules governing how Americans treat captured prisoners and detainees. It will make clear that the Geneva Conventions apply to all people held in the custody of the Department of Defense.

It provides a workable definition of “cruel and inhumane,” based on the rules which govern how we treat criminals in the United States, and based firmly in the constitutional prohibitions of cruel and unusual punishment. It most importantly, it sets rules that are clear, simple and in accord with basic American values.

First, let me make clear my view that in this modern world of asymmetric warfare, non-state actors, and unconventional threat, there is an absolute necessity to have a program to securely hold prisoners and effectively interrogate them to provide timely intelligence.

But in my judgment, the current system is not working. Over the course of the past 4 years, there has been a great deal of confusion over the policies and practices of the United States towards individuals the Government has taken into custody. This confusion has been evident at the highest levels of decisionmaking at the Pentagon, with memoranda authorizing this technique or that technique being issued and rescinded within weeks of one another.

The confusion has been noted here in the Senate. I sit on two committees with jurisdiction, and have sat through hours and hours of hearings and briefings—our Nation’s policy with respect to detainees and prisoners of war is still unclear to me.

Frankly, the administration’s repeated statements about “wherever... possible adhering to law” are confusing and unhelpful.

And the confusion has filtered down to the front lines.

Seventeen months ago, enlisted members of the 82d Airborne Infantry Division—honorable men risking their lives in Iraq—ordered their commanding officer what the rules were for the treatment of prisoners.

For 17 months, their commander,
CPT Ian Fishback, diligently searched for the answer up and down his chain of command. Here is what he has found, and I quote:

“We’ve got people with different views of what “humane” means and there’s no Army statement that says “this is the standard for humanity treatment for prisoners to Army officers.” Army officers are left to come up with their own definition of humane treatment.

Captain Fishback and his men have a right to clear guidance. Their sacrifices entitle them to be allowed to do their job. An infantryman should not be required to make these kinds of mixed messages?

It is incumbent on Congress to provide clarity.

In fact, we have a constitutional mandate to do it.

What this amendment does is to provide clarity.

It is incumbent on Congress to provide this clarity. In fact, we have a constitutional mandate to do it.

Article VII, section 8 of the Constitution states that Congress shall have the power to “make Rules concerning Captures on Land and Water,” and also “To make Rules for the Government and Regulation of the land and naval Forces.”

Our men and women in combat badly need this legislation. But there is more at stake here than immediate military necessity.

Our soldiers and our Nation have a long and honorable tradition of ethical behavior. For more than 200 years we have prided ourselves on being different from our adversaries in war.

Simply put, there are some things that Americans do not do, not because it is illegal, or some lawyer says we cannot, but because it is wrong.

The laws of war, codified in the Geneva Conventions, represent a bare minimum of acceptable behavior toward captives. The United States has consistently championed the Geneva Conventions for over a century, knowing that our behavior is a beacon to the world, and that our adherence to principles, well as projecting American values—saves American lives.

I am not naive. I do not expect our current enemy to respect the Geneva Conventions. Our captured troops cannot expect humane treatment at the hands of al-Qaeda. But make no mistake—the eyes of the world are still on us, and our policies have real consequences.

Even now, millions of young Muslims around the world are evaluating the United States. They are deciding whether to take up arms against us, or whether to work with us towards a peaceful resolution with liberty and justice for all. We must show them, clearly, emphatically, that the rhetoric of democracy and freedom is not empty.
We must show them that we are a government of laws, clearly written, oppenly promulgated and fairly enforced.

Captures and interrogations are part of war and, no less than other tools of war, must be wielded intelligently, humanely, and within a set of rules for warfare that govern all who serve in uniform—whether privates or generals, seamen or admirals.

Our men and women in uniform, serving in Afghanistan, Iraq and at Guantanamo Bay, have the right to clear, direct and lawful leadership.

This amendment is good policy, is just, and is long overdue.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arizona.

Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senator from Illinois, Mr. DURBIN, be added as a

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, first I thank my friend and colleague from South Carolina for his comments in support of this amendment. He does occupy a key role in this body, having served 20 years—6½ years on active duty as an Air Force lawyer and member of the JAG Corps, and remains in the Reserves to this day. He obviously brings a perspective to this issue which is very important.

I think the Senator from South Carolina described the confusion that existed over a period of time about this whole issue of treatment of prisoners.

There was a set of instructions issued which were in effect for a couple of months, which were strongly objected to by the unified legal corps in the Pentagon. Yet their concerns were overridden.

The Senator from South Carolina quoted one of them. Another one was by RADM Michael Lohr, the Navy’s Judge Advocate General. He said the situation at the American prison in Guantanamo, Cuba, might be so legalistically unique that the Geneva Conventions and even the Constitution did not necessarily apply. But, he asked,
Will the American people find we have missed the forest for the trees by condoning practices that, while technically legal, are inconsistent with our most fundamental values?

General Rives said if the White House permitted abusive interrogations at Guantanamo Bay, it would not be able to restrict them to that single prison.

He argued that soldiers elsewhere would conclude that their commanders were condoning illegal behavior. And that is precisely what happened at Abu Ghraiib after the general who organized the abuse of prisoners at Guantanamo went to Iraq to toughen up the interrogation of prisoners.

I think the Senator from Arizona clearly expressed that the White House ignored these military lawyers’ advice a couple of years ago. We now have, thanks to the yearlong effort of the Senator from South Carolina, those communications of deep concern to every uniformed JAG in the Department of Defense, about the issuance of instructions which basically violated our commitment to the Geneva Conventions.

Mr. President, I ask to have the record complete, particularly concerning the Army Field Manual.

The Army Field Manual has a classified section which would not be available to anyone except for those who have a need to know. The Army Field Manual has been in use for decades. The Army Field Manual is being revised as we speak to try to meet the new chalenges we face. But the Army Field Manual, I am confident, will be in keeping with the fundamental commitments we have made.

All my career I have supported the rights and prerogatives of the Commander in Chief. We need a strong President, and in wartime this is more important than ever. I understand the administration would want to preserve the President’s flexibility and wartime powers, and I do not believe that we can afford to have 535 Secretaries of State, Secretaries of Defense, or even Presidents of the United States.

I would like to point out the Congress not only has the right but the obligation to act. Article I, section 8 of the Constitution of the United States, clause 11:

To declare War, grant Letters of Marque and Reprisal, and make rules concerning Captures on Land and Water[.]

I repeat:

. . . make rules concerning Captures on Land and Water[.]

Someone is going to come down to the floor and say that applied back in the time of the Founding fathers of the Constitution; it didn’t apply to today.
At least from my point of view, unless there is an overriding need to change
the Constitution of the United States—
if that clause of the Constitution no longer applies, that lets us amend the Constitution and remove it; otherwise, lets live by it.

The Congress has the responsibilitv:
To declare War, grant Letters of Marque and Reprisal, and make Rules concerning Captures on Land and Water.[]

I do not see how anyone could view this as an unwarranted intervention in an issue as complex as this. The country and, indeed, the Senate from South Carolina pointed out so well, are asking us—that well-known liberal judge, Justice Scalia, has said we need the Congress of the United States involved in this issue. We, the courts, cannot do it ourselves.

As the Senator from South Carolina pointed out, if we do not fulfill our constitutional role, we are negligent. We owe it to our troops and our country to speak on this issue.

I very much respect my friend, the Vice President of the United States, Vice President CHENEY. He and I have been friends for many years. I respect the way that he carefully guards the prerogatives of the President. But on this issue, I hope he and others would understand that we are dutybound to take action.

I would like, again, to refer back to Captain Fishback. He is what I view as the real enemy that exists in the military today. They know how important this war on terror is. They are the ones who are fighting it. Captain Fishback served in Afghanistan and in Iraq, and the ones I hear from are men and women in the military who have a very strong commitment to winning the war on terror. They have laid their lives on the line to win it. But they want clear, unequivocal guidelines as to how to treat prisoners of war.

I would like to believe that this is the last war in which the United States will ever be involved. I would like to believe that from now on, after we win this war on terror, we will have peace and the United States will never send its men and women in harm’s way again.

History shows me otherwise. What happens in the next conflict when American military personnel are held captive by the enemy that exists in the argument, with some validity, that we have violated the rules of war? What happens to our men and women in the military then?

There are some who will say they wouldn’t respect the rules of war, anyway. If they are not sure they are going to win, as the Germans weren’t in World War II, they might treat our prisoners according to certain standards if we insist upon those standards.

I think we owe it to the people, these brave young Americans such as Captain Fishback and others, a clarification in the way they can carry out their responsibilities and duties as they travel into harm’s way.

I thank the Senator from New Hampshire, the Senator from Tennessee, the Senator from Illinois, and my friend from South Carolina for their eloquent statements on this issue.

I ask for the yeas and nays on this amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second. The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, this Senator doesn’t agree with anything that has been said about the applicability of this provision to anyone in the military uniform. Most of the speakers have talked about men and women in the armed services. The amendment goes much further than that.

But first, the problem is it requires the field manual to list every type and means of interrogation. Hundreds of pages will hopefully be prosecuted in military courts if they don’t know every single one of them, if they are not sure they are going to win.

This idea of listing all of the possible ways to interrogate a person is impossible. I say that should be changed. Maybe they could issue from time to time additional items to go in the field manual. But to require that no one can use a means of interrogation not listed in advance when we are involved in a war on terror and we are dealing with terrorists is wrong.

Beyond that, this deals with any person—not any military person. The Geneva Conventions were originally intended to deal with military prisoners. This is dealing with anyone who is intercepted now anywhere in the world who, regardless of nationality or physical location, is in custody or physical control of the United States because a person who is American happens to be there.

Again, I mention these teams I have met with, and I respect multinational teams. This, in effect, says that an American is responsible for anything done by any member of that team. That, to me, is wrong.

What is more, I think it is wrong to presume there is no place in this country or in the operation of this country to deal with terrorists on their own ground.

These are vicious people, suicidal people. I do not think they should be accorded the rank and treatment of men and women in uniform from other nations. That is what this amendment does. I shall oppose it. I may be all alone, but I shall oppose it because I think there is a place in our operations against individuals involved in the war on terrorism where we deal with them as they deal with us.

These are not military people. They may not even be American nationals who are working for us in an undercover way, but this says we are responsible for treating all these people according to the Geneva Conventions and according to processes listed in the U.S. Army Field Manual. That is wrong. That is all simply wrong, and I shall oppose the amendment.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. (Ms. MURKOWSKI.) The clerk will call the roll.

The Journal clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GRAHAM. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GRAHAM. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent to set aside the pending amendment.

Amendment No. 204

Mr. GRAHAM. Madam President, I call up my amendment which is at the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from South Carolina [Mr. GRAHAM], for himself and Mr. MCCAIN, proposes an amendment numbered 204.

Mr. GRAHAM. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment which follows:

(Purpose: To authorize the President to utilize the Combatant Status Review Tribunals and Administrative Review Board to determine the status of detainees held at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba.)

At the appropriate place, insert the following:

Section 1020. (a) Authority To Utilize Combatant Status Review Tribunals and Administrative Review Board To Determine Status of Detainees at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba.—The President is authorized to utilize the Combatant Status Review Tribunals and a noticed Administrative Review Board, and the procedures thereof as specified in subsection (b), currently in operation at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, in order to determine the status of the detainees held at Guantanamo Bay, including whether any such detainee is a lawful enemy combatant or an unlawful enemy combatant.

(b) Procedures.—

(1) In General.—Except as provided in paragraph (2), the procedures specified in subsection are the procedures that were in effect in the Department of Defense for the conduct of the Combatant Status Review Tribunal and the Administrative Review Board on July 1, 2005.

(2) Exception.—The exceptions provided in this paragraph for the procedures specified in paragraph (1) are as follows:

(A) To the extent practicable, the Combatant Status Review Tribunal shall determine, by a preponderance of the evidence, whether statements derived from persons held in foreign custody were obtained without undue coercion.

(B) The Designated Civilian shall be an officer of the United States Government whose appointment was made by the President, by and with the advise and consent of the Senate.

(3) Modification of Procedures.—The President may modify the procedures and requirements set forth under paragraphs (1) and (2). Any modification of such procedures
Mr. GRAHAM. Madam President, I thank Senator STEVENS for allowing me to do this. I appreciate that we have a busy day.

I totally understand where he is coming from about the interrogation amendment. It is sound policy for the country. This amendment deals with the combat status review procedure at Guantanamo Bay. I think it is very necessary. I think it strengthens what the administration is trying to do when it comes to enemy combatants. I think this amendment is legitimizing the process we are blessing in court and is good policy for the country.

No. 1, I totally agree with the President that a member of al-Qaida should not be given Geneva Conventions status. I understand from Senator MCCAIN’s amendment that Senator McCaIN’s amendment doesn’t confer Geneva Conventions status on enemy combatants. It standardizes the interrogation techniques. The Army Field Manual has a section for lawful combatants, those covered under the Geneva Conventions, and it will have a provision for unlawful combatants. Al-Qaida should not be given Geneva Conventions status. The Geneva Conventions and the signatories to the convention determined the rules for the conduct of war. An unlawful enemy combatant is someone who goes around the battlefield without a uniform, doesn’t represent a nation—a terrorist, for lack of a better word. They do not deserve the protection of the Geneva Conventions because they are cheating. But they do, in my opinion, deserve what the President said—not so much because they deserve it but because it is about who we are.

This amendment, like even enemy combatants—members of al-Qaida—will be treated humanely. When we capture somebody on the battlefield—throughout the world because the whole world is the battlefield in the war on terror—most of the people we are dealing with are not part of the uniformed force, not like the Iraqi Army.

The President said early on these people will be humanely treated but they will not be given Geneva Convention status. He is absolutely right. When we catch someone, say, in Afghanistan, who is a member of al-Qaida or some other terrorist network, certain people, once screened, go to Guantanamo Bay. The people at Guantanamo Bay have been participating in the allegations, or they have been participating in terrorist activities, supporting terrorist organizations as an unlawful enemy combatant. They are not uniformly blinding.

We are reviewing everyone that comes to Guantanamo Bay to see if they deserve the status “enemy combatant.” The term “enemy combatant” came out of World War II when we had a Supreme Court case recognizing that term for the first time, to determine whether or not they should be classified as enemy combatants because if they are classified as enemy combatants, they can be detained indefinitely and taken off the battlefield. The due process rights afforded an enemy combatant have been up to the Supreme Court, and the Supreme Court, for the most part, has blessed the procedure. There have been some concerns expressed by the Court.

My amendment, one, legitimizes what the administration has created at Guantanamo Bay in terms of a review process to determine who is an enemy combatant and who is not. We made two small changes. We have learned in the past that sometimes people have been because of a single statement made, while in the hands of a foreign agency, a foreign country, that was given under duress. The amendment says that if a civilian is to be given enemy combatant status in a statement from a foreign interrogation, you have to prove that the statement was not unnecessarily coerced. Most Americans, I think, agree with that, and the people at Guantanamo Bay agree with it now, and he is a Presidential appointee. That continues the trend. I think it would be good to have the Senate involved.

Second, they deserve to be prosecuted in some instances. There are three things we are trying to accomplish. We are trying to standardize interrogation techniques to protect our own troops and have a one-stop shop for taking enemy combatants out of circulation. It would be good to be able to say, as a nation, that all three branches of Government—the executive branch, the judicial branch and the legislative branch—all have agreed on procedures to take enemy combatants of al-Qaida, and give those people who are suspected of being enemy combatants due process rights consistent with whom we are as a people and give enough flexibility to the military to make sure these people do not go back to the fight.

The truth is, several hundred have been captured and released. The process is working very well at Guantanamo Bay. I compliment the administration for setting up a combat status review process that has been changed a couple of times. It is eminently fair. This amendment blessed that process. It has two small changes. It would strengthen the process, and it would end this never-ending court debate about what to do.

The courts have been telling us, Congress, if you got involved, it would help us figure out what we should be doing. Justice Scalia, as Senator MCCAIN indicated, screamed out, in a dissenting opinion granting habeas corpus rights to enemy combatants, that the courts are ill-equipped to run this war. Now, with this amendment, the Congress will bless what the administration has put in place, making small changes which will strengthen the administration’s hands in the court. The courts will feel more comfortable ratifying this process, and we will be a united nation, a united front in all three branches of Government when it comes to dealing with enemy combatants.

It is very important that anyone who engages in unlawful enemy combatant activities against this Nation be taken off the battlefield and kept off the battlefield as long as necessary to make us safe. They deserve a certain amount of process because whom we are as a people and the process we are blessing gives them very adequate due process rights.

This amendment strengthens those rights. They deserve to be taken off the battlefield, and people engaging in unlawful enemy combatant activities should be taken off the battlefield as long as necessary to protect our country.

to say we are not torturing people, we are not going to treat people inhumanely because that weakens us. The bottom line, it is not the right way to get good information and weakens us. The more standardization the better.

When it comes time to keep people off the battlefield, with this amendment we are stronger as a nation because Congress will have blessed what the administration has done.

In regard, I offer this amendment as a way to bring clarity to a situation that is very important in the war on terror. We need to keep enemy combatants, once they have been lawfully determined to be an enemy combatant, off the battlefield as long as it takes to secure this Nation. This amendment helps to do that.

I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. STEVENS. Madam President, I am in a rare objection from Members of the Committee on Armed Services to this amendment. I urge them to come over and defend their position.

This Senator was prepared to accept the amendment. It may be subject to a point of order. I am not sure. I do believe there are detainee items in the House-passed bills that would be germane under the circumstances, but it is another example, I might say, of the problems we get into when items that pertain to legislation end up on appropriations bills.

We are not really prepared to debate the amendment. I urge Members of the Committee on Armed Services who wish to do so to debate this amendment.

My only question is—I know the Senator is an extremely good attorney—has the phrase “unlawful enemy combatant” been used in any other portion of our laws of the Geneva Conventions?

Mr. GRAHAM. Yes. It is in the Geneva Conventions. There is a section about unlawful enemy combatant, illegal enemy combatant.

The conventions are set up to confer status on signatories and to make sure that people who engage in unlawful activity are not covered. The people who wear civilian clothes that go in the population and engage in terrorist activity have never been covered under the Geneva Conventions.

Mr. GRAHAM. It is in the Geneva Conventions.

Mr. STEVENS. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. GRAHAM. The legal status of military commissions and the combat status of the process are in legal limbo unnecessarily.

If you read these opinions, they are a hodgepodge of different dissenting and concurring opinions. The one common theme is the courts are suggesting to Congress we get involved.

When it comes to combat status review, I am totally convinced, after talking with now Chief Justice Roberts, that would be the courts would welcome congressional involvement. He said to me in the hearings that the President or the executive branch is at its strongest when they have the implied or express support of the Congress.

In the purpose of this amendment, if I may say very briefly, is for Congress to legitimize what is going on at Guantanamo Bay about determining enemy combatant status, legitimizing that review process by making some changes. If we would do that, I am convinced the courts would welcome that involvement and a lot of this litigation would end overnight.

Mr. STEVENS. If the Senator will yield, has this matter been discussed in the Committee on Armed Services?

Mr. GRAHAM. I have discussed it with one of the cosponsors of the amendment, Senator WARNER, yes. I have been to Guantanamo Bay with Senator WARNER and others, where we have talked about this. Yes, sir, I am very sure that the chairman knows about this because he is a cosponsor of the amendment.

Mr. STEVENS. I say to the Senator, that is another question. We were prepared to accept the amendment because—I don’t claim expertise in this area; it is not within our jurisdiction. It is legislation on an appropriations bill, but I don’t intend to raise an objection to it.

Has this been discussed, on a bipartisan basis, in the committee?

Mr. GRAHAM. I was under the assumption the amendment was going to be accepted, as you were, and now I have been told there are some concerns from the minority in the committee. I have talked extensively about these series of amendments. They all work in conjunction with each other. Senator McCain’s amendment standardized interrogation techniques and what we as a people want to live by—we do not want to torture people. We are not going to torture people.

My amendment standardizes and makes small changes to the determination of who is an enemy combatant and who is not, because a keep people at Guantanamo Bay indefinitely under this procedure. It needs to be blessed by Congress. The third thing we do, later on, is deal with military commissions, actually how you try these people.

So I was under the understanding, I say to the Senator, that not only was Senator WARNER a cosponsor of these two amendments, but that everybody was on board. The point here is to give the courts some guidance to bring about legal certainty where there is a legal mass, as Senator McCain indicated. So I don’t know why anybody is objecting.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alaska.

Mr. STEVENS. Madam President, I believe the Senator’s amendment has real merit. I find no objection to it. It has been conveyed to me by the administration. We still have a very small difference—it sounds like a big difference—on the McCain amendment. But we have no difference on this amendment. We are prepared to accept it, unless someone comes over here and finds a way to articulate an objection.

Mr. MCCAIN. Madam President, who has the floor?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alaska has the floor.

Mr. STEVENS. Madam President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arizona.

Mr. MCCAIN. Madam President, first, I thank the Senator from Alaska for his cooperation. I thank the Senator from Arizona for his unique and very important perspective on this issue. But I also point out it is very unfortunate—very unfortunate—the Senator from South Carolina has to put this on an appropriations bill, I do not want it on an appropriations bill, but there is something wrong with our process here that I have to, for my amendment, find some narrow germinateness in order to get around my commitment to not authorize on an appropriations bill. Technically, I am not authorized to put this on an appropriations bill. It is very unfortunate the Senator from South Carolina has to authorize on an appropriations bill. There may be some objection from someone in the minority. There may be some question. That is because we are not going through an orderly process. This should have been as an amendment on the authorization bill, and that should have been taken up. If someone did not like it, they could have voted to take it out. Now we are in a process where the Senator from South Carolina has to put it in.

Our system here is broken, and we need to properly authorize. I certainly am not blaming the Senator from Alaska. He has his responsibility to get the appropriations bill done. But there is something wrong when we are in a war—in a war; Americans’ lives are on the line as we speak—and somehow we do not have room in our agenda to authorize on appropriations bills. It is very unfortunate that the Senator from South Carolina has to authorize on an appropriations bill. There may be some objection from someone in the minority. There may be some question. That is because we are not going through an orderly process. This should have been as an amendment on the authorization bill, and that should have been taken up. If someone did not like it, they could have voted to take it out. Now we are in a process where the Senator from South Carolina has to put it in.

Mr. MCCAIN. Madam President, I yield the floor.

Mr. MCCAIN. Madam President, now is time for action. That is why I rise to speak in strong support of the McCain amendment and urge our colleagues to understand it and to give it strong support as well.

As we know, nearly 2 years ago, American soldiers at Abu Ghraib were struggling to figure out how to handle the hundreds of detainees who were pouring into that facility. They had no guidance. They had no directions to follow. In the absence of that guidance, their treatment of detainees deteriorated into cruel and inhumane and degrading treatment.

They documented their cruelty, and the images are still horrifying—an Iraqi prisoner in a dark hood and cape, standing on a cardboard box with electrodes attached to his body; naked men forced to simulate sex acts on each other; the corpse of a man who had been beaten to death, lying in ice, next to a sign giving a “thumbs up” sign; a pool of blood from the wounds of a naked, defenseless prisoner attacked by a military dog. The reports of widespread abuse by U.S. personnel was initially met with disbelief and then incomprehension. But the reports are too numerous to ignore. We had reports of detainees in Afghanistan shackled to the floor, left out in the elements to freeze to death. We had reports of detainees in Guantanamo who were subjected to sexual humiliation.

Human Rights Watch recently released a report based on the statements of three soldiers, one officer and two noncommissioned officers, in the 82nd Airborne who described how their battalions routinely used physical and mental torture as means of intelligence gathering and stress relief—torture as a sport.

They stand in sharp contrast to the values America has always stood for: our belief in the dignity and worth of all people, our unequivocal stance against torture and abuse, our commitment to the rule of law. The images horrified us and severely damaged our reputation in the Middle East and around the world.

Instead of taking responsibility for what happened, the generals and senior administration officials tried to minimize the abuse. They falsely claimed that it was the work of “a few bad apples”—all conveniently lower rank soldiers—in a desperate effort to emphasize the role of senior military officials in exposing the scandal and inculcate the civilian leadership with responsibility for changing the culture.

It is clear what the results of those changes were. CPT Ian Fishback, a West Point graduate and officer in the 82nd Airborne, wrote: Despite my efforts, I have been unable to get clear, consistent answers from my leadership about what constitutes lawful and humane treatment of detainees. I am certain that this confusion contributed to a wide range of abuses including death threats, beatings, broken bones, murder, exposure to elements, extreme forms of physical exertion, hospitalizing, torture, stripping, sleep deprivation and degrading treatment.

For nearly 2 1⁄2 years—from August 2002 until December 2004—the executive branch of our Government operated under the assumption that it was not bound by the law that prohibits torture. The Office of Legal Counsel promulgated an official opinion stating that the President and everyone acting under his Commander-in-Chief authority was free to ignore this law. It states:

Any effort to apply [the anti-torture statute] in a manner that interferes with the . . . detention and interrogation of enemy combatants . . . would be unconstitutional.

This opinion was adopted and implemented by the CIA and the Department of Defense. Effectively, what it was saying was that for anybody who was operating under the DO, if the purpose of their torture was to get information, then it was basically all right. If the purpose of the torture was to bring harm, then it would be illegal. But that decision by the Office of Legal Counsel in the Department of Justice effectively said: The school is out. People can do anything they want to with any detainee. And that was the rule for 2 1⁄2 years. It is called the Bybee memorandum. We have had extensive hearings on that in both the Armed Services Committee and the Judiciary Committee.

This opinion was adopted and implemented by the CIA and the Department of Defense. Harold Koh, a leading scholar of international law and dean of Yale Law School, who served in both the Reagan and Clinton administrations, called it “the most clearly legally erroneous opinion” he has ever read. That is in reference to the Bybee memorandum that was requested by the CIA and the Department of Defense, through the Attorney General, and it was stated that it was to give them a memorandum to effectively permit wholesale torture. They received that memo, and they used it to gut our long-standing laws. That Bybee memo was the law of the land, effectively, in the CIA and the Department of Defense for 2 1/2 years. We saw what the results were. The McCain amendment would make sure that will not happen again.

Our political leaders made deliberate decisions to throw out the well-established legal framework that has long made America the gold standard for human rights throughout the world. The administration left our soldiers, case officers, and intelligence agents in a fog of ambiguity. They were told “take the gloves off” without knowing what the limits were, and the consequences were foreseeable.

In rewriting our human rights laws, the administration consistently overruled the objections of experienced military personnel and diplomats. The Secretary of State, Colin Powell, warned the White House:

Dear Senator McCain: I am a graduate of West Point currently serving as a captain in the U.S. Army, I served two combat tours with the 82nd Airborne Division, one each in Afghanistan and Iraq. While I served in the Global War on Terror, the actions and my leadership led me to believe that United States policy did not require application of the Geneva Conventions in Afghanistan or Iraq. On 7 May 2004, Secretary of Defense Rumsfeld’s testimony that the United States followed the Geneva Conventions in Iraq and the “spirit” of the Geneva Conventions in Afghanistan prompted me to begin an approach for clarification. For 17 months, I tried to determine what specific standards governed the treatment of detainees by consulting my chain of command, multiple JAG lawyers, multiple Democrat and Republican Congressmen and their aides, the Ft. Bragg Inspector General’s office, the Department of Defense, the Secretary of the Army and multiple general officers, a professional interrogator at Guantanamo Bay, the deputy head of the department at West Point responsible for teaching Just War Theory and Law of Land Warfare, and numerous peers who I regard as honorable and intelligent men.

The President is not an emperor or a king. His administration is not above the law or our country, and he is certainly not infallible.

The single greatest criticism of this administration’s detention and interrogation policies is that it failed to respect history, the collective wisdom of our career military and State Department officials, and that it holds far too expansive a view of executive authority. In short, the White House suffers from the arrogance of thinking they knew best and abandoning the longstanding rules.

As Captain Fishback wrote:

We owe our soldiers better than this. Give them a clear standard that is in accordance with the bedrock principles of our nation.

The McCann amendment takes a strong position toward giving our troops that standard. I hope it is supported. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that Captain Fishback’s letter, which was published in the Washington Post, be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

DEAR SENATOR MCCAIN: I am a graduate of West Point currently serving as a captain in the U.S. Army. I served two combat tours with the 82nd Airborne Division, one each in Afghanistan and Iraq. While I served in the Global War on Terror, the actions and my leadership led me to believe that United States policy did not require application of the Geneva Conventions in Afghanistan or Iraq. On 7 May 2004, Secretary of Defense Rumsfeld’s testimony that the United States followed the Geneva Conventions in Iraq and the “spirit” of the Geneva Conventions in Afghanistan prompted me to begin an approach for clarification.

Instead of clarifying, the approach for clarification process leaves me deeply troubled. Despite my efforts, I have been unable to get clear, consistent answers to my questions about what constitutes lawful and humane treatment of detainees. I certainly that this confusion contributed to a wide range of abuses including death threats, beatings, broken bones, murder, exposure to elements, extreme forced physical exertion, hostage-taking, stripping, sleep deprivation and other degrading treatment. Under my command witnessed some of these abuses in both Afghanistan and Iraq.

This is a tragedy. I can remember, as a cadet at West Point, resolving to ensure that my men would never commit a dishonorable act; that I would protect them from that type of burden. It shames my heart that I have failed some of them in this regard.

That is in the past and there is nothing we can do about it now. But, we can learn from our mistakes and ensure that this does not happen again. Take a major step in that direction: eliminate the confusion. My approach is simple and rests on the clear evidence that confusion over standards was a major contributor to the prisoner abuse. We owe our soldiers better than this. Give them a clear standard that is in accordance with the bedrock principles of our nation.

Some do not see the need for this work. Some argue that stronger actions are not as horrifying as Al Qaeda’s, we should not be concerned. When did Al Qaeda become any type of standard by which we measure the morality of the United States? The Geneva Conventions in Iraq and Afghanistan, and our actions should be held to a higher standard, the ideals expressed in documents such as the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution.

Others argue that clear standards will limit the President’s ability to wage the War on Terror. Since clear standards on interrogation techniques, it is reasonable for me to assume that supporters of this argument desire to use coercion to acquire information from detainees. If we abandon our ideals in order to preserve our ideals, or will our courage and commitment to individual rights wither at the prospect of sacrifice? My response is simple. If we fail in the face of adversity and aggression, then those ideals were never really in our possession. I would rather die fighting than give up even the smallest part of the idea that is America... Once again, I strongly urge you to do justice to your men and women in uniform. Give them clear standards of conduct that reflect the ideals they risk their lives for.

With the Utmost Respect,

CAPT. IAN FISHBACK,
82nd Airborne Division,

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from West Virginia.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the pending amendment be set aside temporarily so that I may offer an amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, more than 2,000 years have passed since Cicero said, “Endless money forms the sinews of war.”

Let me repeat what I have said. More than 2,000 years have passed since Cicero, a great Roman senator, said, “Endless money forms the sinews of war.”

How astute he was to point that out and how little the times have changed. Today, the United States is engaged not just in one war but two wars. The first of the two wars began 4 years ago today in our country. Our country was attacked by 19 hijackers sent on their deadly mission by Osama bin Laden. That war continues today in Afghanistan. That is a war that was thrust upon us. That was a war in which the United States was invaded by 19 hijackers, not one of whom was from Iraq—not one. That war, as I say, was thrust upon us. The United States was invaded. The United States was attacked and thousands of Americans lost their lives. That is the war that I support. That is the war that I supported from the beginning.

But there is also another war, a war which the United States started, a war in which the United States was the attacker. We didn’t wait to be attacked; we attacked another nation. We invaded, the United States invaded another nation that did not pose a threat, a direct and immediate threat to our national security. We, the United States, invaded another country that did not act to provoke our invasion.

Since March 19, 2003, our troops, Americans troops, have been sent into the breach in Iraq, a country which had no connection—none—no connection to the September 11 attacks on our country. I was against our policy with reference to the invasion of that country, Iraq. I was against that. That country did not pose an immediate threat to our national security, no. I said so then and I said then it was right. No weapons of mass destruction were found. No weapons of mass destruction have been found to this day there in Iraq.

I hold no brief for Saddam Hussein, but we acted under the unconstitutional doctrine of first strike. The first strike doctrine, that is the doctrine that we followed. That is the doctrine that got us into Iraq. It is unconstitutional on its face. Why? Because the Constitution says Congress shall have power to declare war. Can it be constitutional if a President, one man, Republican or Democrat or independent or whatever, can declare war if Congress has nothing to say about it, if Congress has no opportunity to debate it? I do not question the inherent power of any President to defend our country. Congress may be out of town. Congress may be in recess. If we are invaded, of course, he has the power to act. But that was not the case here.

I and 22 other Senators voted against shifting that power to declare war, that constitutional power to declare war from the Congress to a President, and that law is still on the books. It has not been repealed.

We can talk about that at another time, but let me say today, these two wars have cost the lives of many Americans. In the first war, the one being fought in Afghanistan and against Osama bin Laden, 243 American troops have given their lives in the line of duty. I support our efforts in that war. I have done so from the beginning.

In the second war, the war in Iraq, 1,934 young men and women have perished. I disagree with the policy that sent our troops to Iraq, but I join with all other patriotic Americans in supporting the men and the women who have served, and will serve, in that policy that sent them there, but I support those men and women. They went, they heeded the call, they did their duty, and they are still doing their duty. Of course I support them. I join with all other Americans in supporting them and honoring those men and women who have paid the ultimate price in service to the United States.

In addition to lives lost, these wars have also cost our country a fortune, a colossal fortune in our national wealth. According to the Congressional Research Service, the Congress has already appropriated $310 billion to pay for these two wars. The Defense Appropriations Committee bill being debated now in the Senate adds another $50 billion to that figure. Most observers believe that tens of billions more dollars will be required in a matter of months.

Who knows, before it is all over, we may find that the ultimate cost in Treasury may amount to $1 trillion. Who knows, when we think of all the things that must be done. We have to replenish the equipment that has worn out, that has rusted, that has been destroyed—the military equipment. Our own Congress may have their requests in this year, next year and the next year, and the next year, for money to replace that equipment.

Could we fight another war if we should be invaded today? Would we be prepared to fight another war? Could we?

If these estimates are accurate, the cost of the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan could easily exceed $400 billion by early next year—$400 billion. That is $400 for every minute since Jesus Christ was born. That is a lot of money, isn’t it?

Once again, “Endless money forms the soul of war.” That is simply the visible part of the cost of the war. We are slowly, slowly but surely, coming to realize that there are financial costs to the war that are buried deep within the Government’s ledger. Dr. John Lehman, former Secretary of the Navy and Veterans Affairs admitted to a major shortfall in its budget. Working together with Senator Craig and Senator Murray, I supported an amendment to add $1.5 billion in emergency funds to the veterans health care budget. My colleagues and I then worked to add $1,977,000,000 to the VA budget for the fiscal year 2006.

Why? Why? Why is the VA running short of funds?

Part of the reason lies in the fact that the administration did not budget enough funds to take care of troops coming home from these wars with severe injuries. And the debate over whether our injured veterans have earned compensation from the VA for their wounds.

According to the Defense Department, more than 15,000 troops have been wounded in Iraq and Afghanistan. Congress is yet to see a full estimate of the costs of these veterans’ benefits.

There is also the matter of revenue that the Government coffers will never see because of the deployment of our troops to these wars. Troops serving in combat zones are exempt from income taxes. National Guardsmen and reservists often must do without higher civilian pay during their deployment. No one would argue that wounded veterans should not receive compensation from the Government in war zones, but they are not on the hook to pay taxes while they are risking their lives for our country. But the American people are not being told about these hidden costs of these wars.

Why? Why is this so?

The fact is, the administration has never provided the Congress with a budget estimate of what the war is costing the American taxpayers. Some may argue that the budget resolution passed in Congress, the thinnest of marginals included $50 billion for the cost of the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan. That is true. That money is in there. The $50 billion also appears in this appropriations bill. But that estimate is just a number made out of whole cloth. The President did not request a single dime for the wars in his budget estimate submitted to Congress in February—not one thin dime, not even one copper penny. Instead, Congress picked a number out of thin air—$50 billion—and stuck it in the budget resolution.

That number is not backed up by any number crunching, any careful analysis, or any budgetary data. It doesn’t even match up with the numbers prepared by the Congressional Budget Office, which estimates that $85 billion will be required to fight these wars next year, nor is that $50 billion paid for. This $50 billion is simply added to our national debt, a debt that will have to be paid by our children and our children’s children.

I say one more time, “Endless money forms the sins of war.” I am quoting Cicero, of course.

The administration needs to budget for the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan. It should not be sufficient for Congress to pick a number out of a hat, appropriate funds to match that number, and hope that our troops will be taken care of. The administration needs to step up to the plate and tell Congress and the American people what it expects to spend on the war, what the money will be used for, and how our Nation is going to foot the bill. It may be easier said than done, but we ought to do our best.

To some observers, the importance of budgeting for the war may seem like a furor over how much paper should be pushed around in Washington, DC. Although the terms at stake are arcane—how many people outside the beltway know anything, or much at least, about emergency supplements, the budget process, or outlays and budget authority—the principles are vitally important to our country. There is an impetus in the belief that a country must share the burdens of war among its citizens. Think back to World War II and what was asked of the American people in that conflict: victory gardens, daylight savings, gasoline rationing, and on and on. We do not see anything like that today. Quite the opposite. For the first time in American history, our Nation has cut taxes during a time of war.

The wars in Iraq and Afghanistan have forced great sacrifice. Let me say that again.

These wars—the war in Afghanistan, which I support, the war in Iraq, which I have never thought we should engage in—have forced great sacrifice among those who serve our country, and their families as well. Our troops risk life and limb while their spouses, their parents, and their children pray for their safety and for their return home. It is these troops and their families who have had to bear the brunt of this. We have not been recompensed for their sacrifices. These families have not been rewarded for their sacrifice. Why? Why is the Defense Department bureaucracy so slow to implement this law? Why? Why is the Defense Department bureaucracy so slow to implement this law? It ought to be a priority to help these Americans who have done so much to help our troops.

The sacrifices demanded by the two wars in Iraq and Afghanistan are falling disproportionately on the few. The President has said our Nation is at war. Not our Nation is at war, but our military is at war. Yes. The National Guard, the men and women in the military, they are at war but not the Nation. We scarcely hear much about it.

Our troops are shedding their blood, and their families are doing so much to support them. Meanwhile, the average American goes about his day-to-day business with little interruption, only to pause in solemn reflection upon the occasional news report about the tragic death of another soldier from his country in the combat.
the cost may be, we shall fight on the beaches, we shall fight on the landing grounds, we shall fight in the fields and in the streets.”

It was a call not just to English soldiers to fight but for the country to share some of the struggle.

What a stark contrast to the wars we are in today in which so little is asked of the American people compared to what is demanded of our military personnel. In light of the incredible toll of these wars on our country, it is time to rethink that unfair balance of sacrifice.

Three times before, the Senate has voted to urge the administration to budget for the cost of the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan and three times that call has not been honored, it has been dismissed. The enormous cost of keeping hundreds of thousands of troops fighting in two wars, each of them half a world away, continues to be a black hole in the President’s budget.

Could be the American people keep hearing the same old line: The administration cannot budget for the cost of the war because the true cost is unknowable. The Secretary of Defense, Mr. Rumsfeld, when he was asked about the cost, said it is unknowable. Of course, he is right. It is unknowable, but surely the administration has some estimate somewhere.

Surely the Defense Department has some estimate, and it has had some estimate—some estimate of what the war was going to cost.

We have heard that the cost is unknowable. We have heard that many times before, But it strains one’s belief to argue that the Secretary of Defense, with legions of bureaucrats and accountants at his disposal, cannot make an estimate of how much it will take to support our troops for the fiscal year that began last week. With 18,000 American troops in Afghanistan and 149,000 troops in Iraq who are risking their lives each and every day, one would think that the Pentagon could muster the courage to estimate how much money it will take to support our fighting men and women. We are talking about money.

The amendment that I offer to the Defense appropriations bill again states the sense of the Senate that the President should budget for the war. We have been at these two wars a long time now. I could understand how he might not be able to budget for the first few months of a war, but we have been at these wars a long time and we still see no budget for them. Still the American people do not know. Whatever is requested of the Congress, the administration should provide it with supplemental appropriations bills. There are not very thorough hearings on supplemental appropriations bills. They say they spent this much and we have to appropriate.

The American people do not realize the cost of these wars. So let me say again, the amendment I offer to the Defense appropriations bill states it is the sense of the Senate that the President should budget for these wars. President Roosevelt did it for World War II, President Johnson did it for Vietnam, President Clinton did it for Bosnia, President Bush did it for Kosovo and it is time to do it for Iraq and Afghanistan.

Let the American people know how much of their hard-earned tax dollars will be needed for these wars. Let Congress debate how these costs must be borne. Let our Government take a responsible approach on how we pay for our troops in the field.

I urge my colleagues to once again support the President, support my amendment, and urge the President to budget for this war.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that Senator Feinstein may have his name added as a cosponsor of the amendment.

AMENDMENT NO. 1992

(D) funds for operations in Southwest Asia, beginning in the budget request of President Clinton for fiscal year 1997;
(E) funds for operations in Vietnam, beginning in the budget request of President Johnson for fiscal year 1966; and
(F) funds for World War II, beginning in the budget request of President Roosevelt for fiscal year 1943.

(4) In section 1024(b) of Emergency Supplemental Appropriations Act for Defense, the Global War on Terror, and Tsunami Relief, 2005 (119 Stat. 252), the Senate requested that the President submit to Congress, not later than September 1, 2005, an amendment to the budget of the President for fiscal year 2006 setting forth detailed cost estimates for ongoing military operations overseas during such fiscal year.

(5) The President has yet to submit such an amendment.

(6) The Department of Defense Appropriations Act, 2006, as reported to the Senate by the Committee on Appropriations of the Senate on September 28, 2005, contains a bridge fund of $50,000,000,000 for overseas contingency operations, but the determination of that amount could not take into account any Administration estimate on the projected cost of such operations in fiscal year 2006.

(7) In February 2005, the Congressional Budget Office estimated that fiscal year 2006 cost of ongoing military operations in Iraq and Afghanistan could total $85,000,000,000.

The Senate makes the following findings:

(A) funds for Operation Noble Eagle, beginning in the budget request of President George W. Bush for fiscal year 2005;
(B) funds for operations in Kosovo, beginning in the budget request of President George W. Bush for fiscal year 2001;
(C) funds for operations in Bosnia, beginning in the budget request of President Clinton for fiscal year 1997;
(D) funds for operations in Southwest Asia, beginning in the budget request of President Clinton for fiscal year 1997;
(E) funds for operations in Vietnam, beginning in the budget request of President Johnson for fiscal year 1966; and
(F) funds for World War II, beginning in the budget request of President Roosevelt for fiscal year 1943.

It is the sense of the Senate that—

(1) any request for funds for a fiscal year after fiscal year 2006 for an ongoing military operation overseas, including operations in Afghanistan and Iraq, should be included in the annual budget of the President for such fiscal year as submitted to Congress under section 1105(a) of title 31, United States Code;

(2) the amendment to the budget of the President for fiscal year 2006, requested by the Senate to be submitted to Congress not later than September 1, 2005, by section 1024(b) of Emergency Supplemental Appropriations Act for Defense, the Global War on Terror, and Tsunami Relief, 2005, is necessary to describe the anticipated use of the $50,000,000,000 bridge fund appropriated in this Act and set forth all additional appropriations that will be required for the fiscal year, and

(3) any funds provided for a fiscal year for ongoing military operations should be provided in appropriations Acts for such fiscal year through appropriations to specific accounts set forth in such appropriations Acts;

Mr. BYRD. I have indicated the purpose of the amendment and the intent of the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, did the manager of the bill have something?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alaska is recognized.

Mr. STEVENS. It would be the intent of the manager of the bill to indicate to Senator BYRD that we would be pleased to accept that amendment when the time comes. We will leave up...
October 5, 2005

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I thank the distinguished Senator from Massachusetts for his observations, for his loyalty to his country, for his service to his country, and for the costs to his human self. For that great service, I thank him. And I thank him for the statement he has just made.

Mr. KERRY. I thank the Senator. The amendment (No. 1992) was agreed to.

Mr. STEVENS. I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. INOUYE. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The amendment (No. 1992) was agreed to.

Mr. STEVENS. This is similar to an amendment we have carried in the bill before. We appreciate the Senator’s position. It is the position of the Senate. The President has decided otherwise, but we hope next year the regular Defense bill will include the monies for the ongoing war on terrorism.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I thank the very distinguished Senator from the great State of Alaska for his statement. I thank the very great Senator from the State of Alaska for his statement and his support. I also thank my colleague on this side of the aisle, the other manager of the bill, Senator INOUYE, for his support.

Incidentally, may I say I am the only remaining person in Congress who voted for the entry of both Alaska and Hawaii into the Union. Praise God, I did that in each case. These are two fine Senators, two of the greatest.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts is recognized.

Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, let me begin by paying my respects to Senator from West Virginia, Mr. BYRD, who has served for several years now on the subject of Iraq been perhaps the most forceful, eloquent and persistent Member of the Senate with respect to the events there. He has been consistent. He has been strong. All Members in the Senate are enormously respectful of his voice and his leadership on this issue.

I know for the Senator from West Virginia, the years I have been here, there has been no more stalwart, dedicated, reliable defender of America’s interests anywhere in the world. There has been no one who has stood up more for our men and women in uniform. I know this journey he has taken with respect to his feelings about the war were not easy, and they were contrary in some ways to that long record on the surface. But it is when you get below the surface and look at some of the continuity of his thinking about the Constitution, about our obligations as Senators, and about the fundamental reasons why you send young men and women to fight anywhere that you see that, indeed, what he is fighting for is consistent with what he has fought for throughout his record and career in the Senate. I thank him for that and pay my respect to him.
percent of families sacrificed medical care last year in order to be able to meet those prices, 24 percent failed to make rent or meet mortgage payments, and 20 percent went without food for at least a day. We have a whole bunch of America in America living in America just giving up food or rent or medical care in order to be able to pay for the home heating oil.

Hurricane Katrina is a stark reminder of precisely what happens when the Government does not prepare ahead of time for disaster. We have an opportunity now to prepare ahead of time. If we do not act now, families are going to be forced to choose between medical care and heat during the winter. That is just around the corner. In November, it begins to get cold in a lot of States. The fact is, having to choose between a warm house or a full stomach for your children is not a choice anyone in America, the wealthiest nation on the face of the planet, wealthiest industrial nation, ought to welcome.

The number of households receiving what is known as the LIHEAP assistance increased from about 4 million in fiscal year 2002 to more than 5 million this year, which is the highest in 10 years. LIHEAP applications are expected to increase very significantly this winter. Yet the funding levels for LIHEAP are not keeping pace. LIHEAP’s buying power is significantly less than when it was established. According to the Government’s Consumer Price Index, what cost $100 in 1982 cost just shy of $200 in 2004. Using the CPI calculation for inflation, that means that a $1.8 billion appropriation for LIHEAP in 1982 should have been a $3.7 billion appropriation in 2004. LIHEAP currently serves less than 15 percent of those people who are eligible in the country.

I understand this amendment can be blocked procedurally. I know that. I hope that will not happen. It is a bipartisan amendment. It is not my preference to attach it to this bill, but it is our only option with the recess coming up in a few days. After the comments of the Secretary of Energy this week that the administration has no plans of addressing, that the Department of Energy this week up in a few days. After the comments of the Secretary of Energy this week, I hope that the American public pays attention to the system I am getting ready to describe because why too many things in the Federal Government are bought this way.

The goal of the Defense Travel System was a worthy goal. It said: We travel so much, we ought to have a system that gets us the best fare and can do that on a routine basis so we can save money when Defense Department employees travel. They contracted with a firm to develop that system. It was not necessarily a competitive bid contract either.

What this amendment does is prohibit money from being spent on operations and further development of the system because, quite frankly, it does not work. It works less well than any private travel system that is out there now. It works less well than the GSA’s travel system.

We are now close to $500 million being spent with one contractor to develop a system that does not work. The system did not work at the first development stage, which cost $47.3 million, and the Defense Department bailed them out. It did not work. It has never met the requirements or the efficiency or the savings that it was supposed to meet.

It is kind of similar to one of those things you get into and you keep hopping on it will work, keep hoping it will work, and then it does not work. Well, the American taxpayers are now on the hook for almost $500 million.

The Defense Department does not even own this program. That was recently changed so the contracting law could be avoided, in terms of going after this contractor on it, because it was not competitively bid, because it was not managed properly.

When you review the DTS system, in 2000 the DOD Inspector General said it should be shut down unless a cost-benefit analysis was prepared that showed the worthiness of its continuation. No analysis has ever been conducted. That was in 2002, and we had only spent about $100 million on it. We are now at $500 million. A cost-benefit analysis was done. Every Defense Department employee can travel cheaper following some other system than this system. We do not own it. We keep paying for it. We keep paying for the development of it.

The American taxpayers are getting hooked, and yet when we are finished with it, we are still not going to have a system that is as good as what is in the private sector. It is a boondoggle, at best.

Program Assessment and Evaluation testified they were unable to complete an analysis because the DTS office had not even kept enough documentation of their own expenditures to make a reliable assessment.

We have big contracting problems in the Defense Department, and this is the best example I know of that ought to be eliminated tomorrow.

At the end of the seventh year of an 8-year contract, the cumulative total of 370,000 travelers had utilized DTS out of 5.6 million annual DOD travelers. So for $500 million, over the 7 years, we have had 370,000 travelers. It has cost us $1,500 per ticket, not counting the price of the air fare.

There is not anybody in America who would look at this, with any common sense, and say we ought to continue this boondoggle.

The utilization rate for the current calendar year under the Defense Travel System is at 15 percent. That means only one in eight employees of DOD uses this system to buy a ticket. And then they do not always get the best price.

In order to break even with the costs of DTS annualized—in other words, its annual cost—90 percent of DOD employees would have to use it. They are not using it. DTS costs $40 to $50 million per year in operations and maintenance and Orbitz does not use it. The GSA accounting system does not come close to it. None of them come close to it. Yet we are continuing to spend $50 million of the American people’s taxpayer dollars before we get the first ticket. So it is a system that does not work. It is broken. The contracting mechanism is broken. Yet we still have people who are coming to come to the floor to defend a system that is broken.

Travel executive Robert Lansfield testified at the hearing that DTS performs less effectively than any—any—civilian e-travel system. We have $500 million in it, and it is unending on what we are going to have, and it still... works worse than any private e-travel system. We have spent half a billion dollars.

The Federal Government has also spent this money on a system that is not even reliable. It might work one day and does not work the next, it might get you the best fare, it might not.

Unlike DTS, GSA e-travel contracts do not pay operations and maintenance for the programs. They only pay a per-transaction fee.

So for what was a good idea that turned sour, we continue to pour unspoiled milk on soured milk, and it becomes soured milk. So we continue to spend money on it.

The Government still does not own DTS, as I said. It is an intellectual property—computer software and source codes. Last year, Judge George Miller of the Federal Court of Claims decided he would not even look into allegations of violations of the Competition in Contracting Act because the software and source codes are owned by the contractor. So if the contract were opened for bidding and another bidder was awarded the contract, the Government would have nothing left but a $500 million loss.

But last week, before the hearing, the contractor promised to transfer ownership of this intellectual property to the Defense Department at the end of the contract, if requested. The reason for this, obviously, is to maintain the fiction that the open bidding on the contract in 2006 is on the level. It is not. There is no open bidding. It violates the very laws that were put on the books to try to maintain competition in contracting. Ownership of DTS bounces around to wherever it is most convenient for avoiding serious scrutiny.

One of the secret changes in the contract that was alleged to have violated the Competition in Contracting Act was the shift from a fee per transaction, as we do with all the civilian e-travel systems, to a cost plus guaranteed profit for the contractor. That has proven they are inept at developing a system. So now we have even changed the contract. Now that we spent $500 million on it, we are now going to change it. We are not going to hold them accountable. We are going to guarantee them a profit for incompetency and inefficiency. It is fair to have Defense contractors reimbursed on the same terms as civilian contractors and agency contractors who are doing the same thing. My amendment will permit that, and only that, a cost per service.

Another secret contract change was an agreement by the Government to pay $43.7 million that had been spent in development costs by the original contractor. We got absolutely nothing for that money. It just covered the losses suffered by the contractor in trying to do something they were not capable of doing, and they are still not capable of doing, rather than to go into the private sector and buy one that was already developed.

This is money the Government was not obliged to pay under the original contract, but we paid it anyway. We paid it anyway—$47 million. We are not even getting a dollar back.

We are trying to fund the war in Iraq. We have a $500 million boondoggle that does not work, and we will have people defend that on the Senate floor. The fact is, they can’t compete. That is what the testimony of everybody is. They do not even compete. And now they are only at a 15-percent utilization rate.

Failure carries no negative consequences when doing this way. When we contract this way, we violate our oaths as the defender of the taxpayers of this country to spend their money wisely. I know I am up against a powerful defense contractor as I attack this process. I want to support our defense contractors. I want to make sure they are there to help us fight and win and defend our freedoms, both here and abroad. But this is the kind of garbage that needs to come out of the contracting system. It is the kind of thing that we need to expose the contractor and say: Defend this. Defend it. You cannot defend it. It is indefensible that we would spend a half a billion dollars trying to get an e-travel system, when they are out there working nine times better than anything this program has developed.

I am hopeful the Members of this body, and the American public, more importantly, will call this body, will secure this body’s attention on issues just like that. If we are going to not steal from our granddaughters, then we have to be about cleaning up the contracting process in the Pentagon. This is a good first step in doing that.

With that, I yield and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The absence of a quorum has been suggested. Does the Senator withhold?

MR. COBURN. I withdraw my request.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Illinois is recognized.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, I salute the Senator from Oklahoma. We have been in Iraq for over 3 years. We have been asking for investigations of these no-bid contracts to these large companies. We have to have Congress accept its responsibility with oversight hearings. More oversight hearings have been held by the Senate than by actual committees looking at these same companies we think are profiteering and ripping off taxpayers.

Congress has a responsibility, too, not just the Department of Defense. We have a responsibility in the Senate. We ought to bring this message to both of them.

I salute the Senator from Oklahoma. It is a delicate subject. He has the courage to bring it before us.
photos. You have seen the people, crushed with grief—the mothers, the friends, and fathers, standing next to the mutilated corpses of these victims. These bombs that were detonated recently were staggered to explode at different times, killing as many innocent people as possible. This is a tactic we have seen over and over again in Israel. Now it has come to pass in Iraq on a regular basis. It is despicable, it is depraved conduct. It is an example of inhumane and inhuman cruelty.

These attacks on American soldiers and on the innocent Iraqis underline the importance of our mission there and the need for us to be prepared to bring this to the right conclusion. We need to have better training and equipment of the Iraqi security forces and Iraqi police. They must not only have the capability to defend themselves, they must have the will to defend themselves.

Last week, General Abizaid, Commander of the Central Command, and General Casey, Commander of United States and coalition forces in Iraq, testified before Congress. They disclosed a piece of information that had been classified for a long period of time, but they disclosed it on the floor, to the American people, and we can speak to it on the floor. It is a piece of information we have known from our classified briefings for some time, and it is this: Over 100 battalions of Iraqi Army forces today, exactly 1 battalion is ready to fight independently—1 out of over 100. That is an incredible number. Billions of dollars that we put in there, promises to the American people, and we can speak to it on the floor.

I respectfully suggest the President ought to address four issues: First, how many Iraqi forces must be capable of operating on their own before we can start bringing American soldiers back home, and how soon will we reach those goals? Second, what specific measures will the Bush administration take before and after the October 15 constitutional referendum to forge the necessary political consensus and reconcile the growing sectarian and religious differences?

Three, what efforts has President Bush made or will he make to bring in broader support? The coalition of the willing has been shrinking ever since the invasion of Iraq. It is American soldiers and some British soldiers and a few others willing to stand and fight and secure this country. What is this administration doing, if anything, to bring in Muslim forces so we can blunt the criticism that we are somehow a force of occupation, unwelcome in this Muslim country?

Fourth, how should the American people be reassured the progress in reconstructing Iraq? What are the tangible results of the billions of dollars American taxpayers have provided for Iraq? How is this money being accounted for?

I made the point earlier to the Senator from Oklahoma that we have yet to have a serious oversight hearing about the no-bid contracts in Iraq, Haliburton, all of the names we have heard over and over again, multimillion and billion-dollar contracts, and we don’t even ask the hard question to whether we are being well spent. We are shirking our responsibility, our congressional oversight responsibility.

I hope the President goes beyond generalities in his speech. Let’s get down to specifics. Let’s say to the American people and the soldiers they love: This is our plan for bringing our troops home from Iraq. This speech is an announcement that we have a new strategy, a strategy for success, a strategy for our soldiers to come home. Staying the course is not a new strategy. I hope on Thursday the President speaks truth to the American people, tells them the hard truth about the American taxpayers have provided for Iraq, the reconstruction of America after Hurricane Katrina. But we put the $18 billion in place.

Yet, if the press accounts of the average families in Iraq today, they tell you that life is so much worse than it was a few years ago—no electricity, no sewage, no regular water, no security on the streets, fears that their children will be kidnapped on the way to school. They are trying to leave if they can find a way out. That is the real situation in Iraq on the ground today despite the heroic efforts of our men and women in uniform. Our men and women in uniform have not failed; the political leaders have failed—failed to come up with a plan which said after Saddam Hussein is gone, this is how we will end this war. Sadly, we were not prepared to answer that question, and our soldiers have paid the price.

I am told this week will be giving a speech to America about Iraq. It is time for some answers, specific answers, and it is time for accountability. Let’s get beyond the generalities. We are talking about real human beings—our sons and daughters—and we need specific answers.

It is hard to believe this is going to result in what we hope for, but I pray it will. A stable Iraq, moving forward, controlling its own destiny, is the best thing for that country and the best thing for America.

I am told that when we take a look at the militias and forces in Iraq, we find they are basically split into different factions. Only one battalion combines the others. Some are Kurdish battalions and Shia battalions and Sunni battalions. It does not give a positive feeling about this nation moving forward toward one common country. I hope we can see the changes that are being proposed in this constitution result in its passage and support by all of the different forces that can make Iraq a nation on its own feet.

Secretary of State Colin Powell told President Bush before the war: You break it, you buy it. That is not entirely true. We may well have broken Iraq from what it once was, but we cannot and do not own it. We are unwelcome tenants at this moment in that country. I want to start thinking about when we will return, and we need to have the hope and the aspirations of the people of Iraq in our minds and be prepared to accept them.

President Bush has a chance tomorrow to tell us that there is a new course, a course that will stop the killing of innocent American soldiers, a course which will avoid those who are wounded and suffering as a result of this war in Iraq, and a course which will bring to an end quickly the insurgency which kills so many innocent Iraqis.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Coburn). The Senator from Alaska.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that at 7:30 today, the Senate proceed to votes in relation to the following amendments in the order listed, provided further that no second-degree amendments be in order to the amendments prior to the votes. The first is the Warner amendment No. 1970, provided for under subsection (d) and (e), the Secretary of Defense shall reimburse a member of the Armed Forces, or a person or entity referred to in paragraph (2), for the cost (including shipping cost) of any protective, safety, or health equipment that was purchased by such member, or such person or entity on behalf of such member, before entering the deployment of such member in Operation Noble Eagle, Operation Enduring Freedom, or Operation Iraqi Freedom for the use of such member in connection with such operation. The unit commander of such member certifies that such equipment was critical to the protection, safety, or health of such member.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The amendment is as follows:

SEC. 6. (a) REIMBURSEMENT FOR PROTECTIVE, SAFETY, AND HEALTH EQUIPMENT PURCHASED BY OR FOR MEMBERS OF THE ARMED FORCES FOR DEPLOYMENT IN OPERATIONS IN IRAQ AND CENTRAL ASIA.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I follow my distinguished colleague from Illinois.

Mr. WARNER. Did we understand that the Senator from Illinois wants another 15 minutes?

Mr. DODD. I ask unanimous consent that I follow my distinguished colleague from Illinois.

Mr. WARNER. That is the understanding of the Chair.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

Mr. WARNER. That is the understanding of the Chair.

Mr. WARNER. Did we understand that the Senator from Illinois wants another 15 minutes?

Mr. DODD. I would say to my colleague. I hope maybe it is 15 minutes or so. Depending upon the reaction of the chair and the ranking member of the committee, maybe even less time than that. I will try to be brief because I know the Senator from Virginia and the Senator from Michigan are interested in having a colloquy.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Illinois.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I thank my colleague from Illinois for his graciousness. I thank my colleague from Virginia as well for his consideration, and I will try to be brief. I call up amendment No. 1970 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the pending amendment is set aside.

The clerk will report. The legislative clerk read as follows:

The amendment is as follows:

AMENDMENT NO. 1970

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I thank my colleague from Illinois for his graciousness. I thank my colleague from Virginia as well for his consideration, and I will try to be brief. I call up amendment No. 1970 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the pending amendment is set aside.

The clerk will report. The legislative clerk read as follows:

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The amendment is as follows:

(2) EXCEPTION.—Amounts authorized to be appropriated by this Act and available for the procurement of equipment for members of the Armed Forces deployed, or to be deployed, to Iraq or Afghanistan may not be utilized for reimbursements under subsection (a).

(f) REPEAL OF SUPERSEDED AUTHORITY.—

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, this is old business in the sense of what I am bringing up was a matter considered a little bit on similar legislation. I regret that I have to come back again this year. My colleagues voted unanimously a year ago to adopt this amendment or an amendment very much like it. The other body as well agreed to this amendment during conference between the two bodies. It became the law of the land.

The amendment basically said that for those men and women in uniform serving in Iraq and Afghanistan who purchased or had family members, neighbors, or others—essential equipment that they needed in their role as service men and women, it would be reimbursed up to a maximum amount of $1,100 over a relatively limited period of time. The amendment was straightforward, clear-cut, and enjoyed the strong support, I might add, of the Armed Services Committee, Senator Warner, as well as others who believed this was the right thing to do.

At the time, the Pentagon objected to the amendment, offered talking points against it, and said it was unmanageable to have a reimbursement program for equipment that our service men and women were having to either buy themselves or have available for them by family members or others.

Over the last year and almost a half, I have had some 15 or 16 exchanges and correspondence with the leadership of the Pentagon. Up until today, and I mean literally this afternoon, this amendment had been almost no response to this requirement of law. As of today—and I will get to this in a minute—they have decided to issue some regulations. It is not a coincidence that they are offering those proposed regulations the very day I am offering the amendment again on the floor. There is an old expression, “I was born at night but last night,” and I would love to believe that this is a coincidence of his own making, but I am concerned that basically there is still a resistance to the idea that our service men and women ought to be receiving the kind of equipment they need, particularly in a war zone.

As we all know, I am stating the obvious, we are at war. The safety and protection of our troops in the field could not be a more serious issue for every single one of us. So why is it that the Pentagon has repeatedly failed to adequately equip these men and women? As far back as June of 2003, the military was regularly reporting that up to a quarter of the troops deployed to Iraq were short of critical body armor needed to protect themselves from shrapnel and AK–47 fire.

Just this last June, the Marine Corps Inspector General estimated that 30,000 marines in Iraq needed twice as many heavy machine guns, more fully protected armored vehicles, and more personal protection equipment to perform their operations successfully than they were getting. Let me repeat: 30,000 marines in Iraq need twice as much heavy equipment in some areas as they are getting.

The Army has had so many troubles mass-producing body armor that it eventually lost as many as 10,000 armored plates as reported by the Army Inspector General’s Office.

Most frustrating of all is that as casualties mounted due to roadside bombs or, in DOD parlance, the improvised explosive devices, IEDs, we found that the Pentagon had gravely underestimated the necessary armor needed to protect Army and Marine ground vehicles.

At a Senate Armed Services Committee hearing in March of 2004, Acting Army Secretary Les Brownlee—a good friend of mine, I might add—testified that the Army had not made fortifications of humvees a priority, saying:

We simply were not prepared for that kind of counterinsurgency that attacked our convoys.

As a result of all of these failures, our soldiers, our sailors, our airmen and marines, were forced to take matters into their own hands in far too many cases.

As early as 2003, the Army’s own Soldier Systems Command reported that soldiers, particularly infantrymen, were paying an average of $400 each out of their own pockets for their equipment that their civilian leaders had failed to provide them. Again, the Soldier Systems Command reported those statistics and that the figure did not even include personal body armor that many soldiers, after losing parts they saw the Pentagon failing our troops, servicemembers and their families have all pitched in to pay for protective gear, even vehicle armor, so they did not have to see their own people going off to war without the equipment they need to keep safe.

Things seemed to come to a head when in December of 2004 a soldier asked Secretary Rumsfeld about having to sift through garbage dumps for scrap metal for Army vehicle armor. The Defense Secretary cavalierly replied:

You have to go to war with the Army you have, not the Army you want.

Of course, we all recall the reaction of the public to that statement. It was very negative, to put it mildly.

Two weeks ago, my office received a call from a constituent I will call Gordon, his first name. Gordon is a good American. He is a former mayor of a small town in Connecticut and a Vietnam veteran. He asked that he be identified only by his first name because he is purchasing retirement in the United States. He just wants his son to be safe. That is why last month he contacted the online store Diamond Back Tactical and ordered combat gear for his son totalling $1,130. His purchase included lower back double-plated body armor, CAT NAPP body armor for the lower torso and pelvis area. He willingly paid for the order in full, as would any parent, I suggest. But why is it that this family had to place a purchase order on their own? And how can we bear to let good Americans such as Gordon pay this price when there should be regulations on the books providing reimbursements for these kinds of purchases if we are going to make them on behalf of these young men and women ourselves?

Last week, I met another marine, Sgt. Todd Bowers, now a reservist attending George Washington University, who has already pulled two tours in Iraq. On his last deployment, Sergeant Bowers said he was fired on by a sniper. It was not the gear provided by the Marine Corps that saved his life but, rather, a $600 rifle scope that his father had just purchased at a gun show in Arizona and a pair of goggles he himself bought for $100. The bullet from the insurgent’s gun lodged into Sergeant Bowers’ scope rather than his skull, and his goggles spared his eyes from scattering shrapnel. Thank goodness Sergeant Bowers’ father made these purchases. But why is it these concerned parents had to make these purchases on their own? And what about the thousands of military families without the resources to buy these items? Are we going to allow these sons and daughters, husbands and wives in uniform to go without the battlefield equipment that is essential for their safety?

This is not a new issue. In fact, we have been sounding the alarm to Secretary Rumsfeld and the Pentagon's leadership for several years now. To address inadequate equipment supplies, in 2003, I proposed an amendment to the emergency supplemental appropriations bill to resolve $322 million in shortfalls in critical health and safety gear; identified by the Army itself, including combat and utility helmets, and combat boots. Unfortunately, the administration opposed this legislation, and the amendment was defeated along party lines.

Last week, I offered a different approach—requiring the Pentagon to reimburse military personnel, their families, and charities that bought equipment for military servicemen in Iraq and Afghanistan. Fortunately, in June of 2004, despite ardent objections, I might add, of the Department of Defense, this body approved that amendment 91 to 0.

On October 9, 2004, this body approved the final version of that bill, and the President signed it into law, including language for the Secretary of Defense to implement a reimbursement program by February 25 of this year. It is now October 5, 2005, nearly a year after this provision became the law of the land, over 7 months after the Defense Department was required by law to set up a system for the troops to receive compensation for the protective gear they purchase for use in combat, equipment they bought because the Government failed to provide it. All of this time has passed and the administration has failed to comply with the law.

My office has made dozens of contacts to the Pentagon, both in phone calls and in letters, and still we heard nothing back and still little action has been taken. Maybe they thought they could just ignore the law or that I might just go away. Instead, under pressure from renewed press interest on this issue, the Defense Department finally issued its guidelines in August of last year—after the reimbursement program just over 7 months late.

The regulations are incomplete, with provisions for reimbursement for only a select few items. If one needs any proof that DOD is once again coming up short, all one needs to do is look at the list of reimbursement items. It does not include the gun scope that saved Todd Bowers’ life. It does not include the body armor that Gordon bought for his son. It does not even include items that were purchased in an attempt to protect humvees with what has been called “hillbilly armor,” as depicted by this New York Times story in May of 2004.

In this story, a community in New Jersey went out as a community and bought a lot of this body armor to use on the floor of humvees to protect the young men and women from their own State from these problems, such as bombs going off that were taking so many lives. This goes back to that date. They would not be included in the list provided by the Pentagon.

As I understand it, there are still no plans for each of the military services to actually enforce these regulations. The Pentagon’s leadership has done everything in its power, unfortunately, to stop this measure from being implemented, either by circulating talking points against my amendment last year or merely failing to implement the statute as it was enacted a year ago. Why should they stop now, I ask?

In their time to Congress last year, the Department of Defense actually said that it “set an unmanageable precedent,” and that it would actually “encourage servicemembers and their loved ones to purchase equipment on their own.”

Such arguments seem absolutely appalling to me. It is the Pentagon’s failure to equip our soldiers that is causing servicemembers to go out and buy equipment, not legislation promoting or guaranteeing to them that it should have been provided anyway. If only the Defense Department’s leadership had kept its commitment to protect our troops, I would not be taking the measures I am taking today.

I regret to say I am telling only part of the story. It seems not only the Pentagon miscalculated what the needs are of our troops, but it also underestimated the need to fix the problem in short order. When I originally introduced my amendment, in June of 2004, the Pentagon leadership pledged they would have all the equipment needs addressed by July 31, 2004. All troops deployed in Iraq and Afghanistan would have adequate protective gear, they claimed. All appropriate vehicles would have the necessary body armor, they said. And according to the Pentagon, all our deployed soldiers, sailors, airmen, and marines could rest assured that their equipment needs would be met. We therefore crafted our amendment to reimburse troops for purchases only made between September 11, 2001, and July 31, 2004.

But, as members and their family members such as Gordon or Todd Bowers will tell you, private purchases of critical gear are still occurring every day. We owe it to our troops to do the right thing and to pass this measure. This legislation has already received the endorsement of several national military organizations, including the Veterans of Foreign Wars, the Military Officers Association of America, National Guard Association of the States, and the Enlisted Association of the National Guard.

I particularly thank retired Brigadier General Green for his strong endorsement of this bill, along with retired Master Sergeant Kline of the Enlisted Association of the National Guard for their strong endorsement. They appeared with me a few days ago at a Pentagon conference, which I announced I was going to offer this amendment and gave very strong statements in support of this effort. Again, I do not want to take up a lot of time. We have already adopted this amendment a year ago, virtually the same amendment. I regret I am back again more than a year later urging similar action. But, again, I point out it has taken far too long for some response to this. Again, if the problem is with, if the Pentagon did not comply with last year’s law but, as I testified, we have problems every single day in this area. The Pentagon needs to get to business on this.

Today they have all of a sudden come up with a proposed set of regulations, but I point out no gun scopes, no humvee protection, no GPS receivers, no radios. These and other items that are being purchased by our troops are included on our list. It is a step in the right direction but occurring on the very day I am offering the amendment.
That enables some period of time within which we have an understanding of what was involved in the expenditures. We, in the legislative body, call that a sunset provision. It is not found in the pending amendment.

Having had another service myself, as a sailor and as a forth, inconsequential though that be, I know a little bit about the life of a service person. The modern GI, this generation, I guess as great as any generation we have ever witnessed in the history of the country—believe me toION and they can figure out a lot of things that presumably are better than provided by the military.

The Senator pretty well restricted himself to those essential things with which I agree. But if we leave this open, we enable these young men and women, proudly wearing the uniform today, to buy a whole lot of things. Next thing you know we are going to have an open door for a lot of things to be purchased.

A wrong, in my judgment, was done in the early procurement system of this equipment, failure to have it, failure to deliver it in a timely way to some of our troops, and you have made that clear. Did have other Senators on the floor. But I say, I do believe consideration should be given to some terminal date—maybe through 2006—in which to give the military the chance to make certain that everything that can protect the life is there, and there is no requirement for these young people to go out and purchase it on their own.

Mr. DODD. If my colleague will yield. Mr. WARNER. Yes. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. DODD. I thank my friend, the chairman of the Armed Services Committee, for his support. You were tremendously helpful. At a time when the Pentagon was resistant, the chairmen of the committee and others stood up and said we should do this—regrettably, we should be doing this.

We have done two things a little differently in this amendment. The chairman pointed it out. One, we removed the decision from the Pentagon to the field commander to make a decision on what is reimbursable or not, on the theory, as a squadron leader or platoon leader, field commander, they are in a better position to decide whether or not an item a soldier may purchase should be reimbursable, rather than someone at the Pentagon who would not have a firsthand knowledge of the kind of equipment.

Second, we limit the amount that can be collected. This is not an unlimited amount. Some of these items would be in excess of the limitations we put in the amendment. That is what we had last year.

Third, I am willing to consider some outdated items. The reason we limited it last year was because of the assurances we had been given that, in fact, the problem no longer existed. In fact, it still exists. I am prepared to accept an appropriate time, 2006 or something. I hope we do not have to come back to this amendment, but the idea of having some outside date as a parameter, I am willing to accept that.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, if I could regain the floor?

Mr. WARNER. I urge the adoption of the amendment in hopes that the distinguished colleague from Connecticut, with two extra veterans of military life, can sit down and work this out in a mutually satisfactory manner.

Mr. President, under the unanimous consent agreement, we have been recognized, the Senator from Virginia and the Senator from Michigan, to conduct a colloquy?

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, we would like to dispose of this amendment if it is possible.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Virginia yield?

Mr. WARNER. We yield for the parliamentary desire.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alaska is recognized.

Mr. STEVENS. I am constrained to say that even back in World War II we bought some of our own stuff and thought the Government should pay for it. No one did. The question is, How much should we be able to spend? We will work it out. I urge the Senator to allow us to adopt this now by voice vote so it will not be involved in the cloture process tomorrow.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate on the amendment? If not, the question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 1970) was agreed to.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. DODD. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Virginia is recognized.

AMENDMENT NO. 1955

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I note the presence on the floor of my distinguished colleague, the ranking member of the Armed Services Committee.

During the course of yesterday, the distinguished chairman of the subcommittee on appropriations, Mr. Stevens, and myself participated in a parliamentary situation, whereby the Senator from Virginia sent an amendment to the desk. It was actually filed. I asked it be called up and it was.

At that time, there was an objection interposed by the Senator from Alaska, referring to the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of today, at page S10967.

We went through the parliamentary situation, whereby I desired to have the amendment considered. The Senator from Alaska objected. Whereupon, I raised the question of germaneness to the amendment, and it was referred to the Parlimentarian.
I would like to read exactly what the Parliamentarian stated on this occasion. I stated: “the Parliamentarians have advised,” and I stress that word “advised”—“the Parliamentarians have advised” that in the Parliamentarians’ opinion “there is sufficient language in the House bill to permit Senator WARNER to assert the defense of germaneness with respect to his amendment numbered 1955.”

I ask, at this moment in time, a parliamentary inquiry. Has the Senator from Virginia correctly stated what was put forth to the Senate through the Chair? And, if so, what is the nature of the vote that is now before the Senate?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has adequately stated the statement that was made with respect to that issue.

The Senate will vote whether or not the amendment is germane under the provisions of rule XVI.

Mr. WARNER. Could that be as requested by the Senator from Alaska?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is correct.

Mr. WARNER. I thank the Presiding Officer. Thank God, I think the Parliamentarian took this action, frankly, on behalf of the men and women in the Armed Forces. Our Nation is engaged in war—a war on terror with two very major engagements, one in Afghanistan and the other of larger proportions in Iraq.

We have men and women in harm’s way all over the world, men and women on the high seas, men and women back here training, and the men and women of the Armed Forces and their families look to the Congress of the United States to provide for their needs. That is clearly set forth as our responsibility in the Constitution.

The Committee on the Armed Services was established by this body for the purpose of examining the President’s budget, examining a wide range of other issues that come before us, and preparing each year a bill known as the authorization bill. That bill was taken up by this body and debated for a series of days. Some 30 amendments by colleagues were accepted. They are part of the amendment that is now pending and is the subject of this evening.

There came a time when it was the judgment of the majority leader and the Democratic leader that this bill would be taken down to give a higher priority to appropriations bills. That is a leadership decision. Thereafter, Senator LEVIN and I worked with our leadership in an effort to get our bill back at a specific place on the calendar so that it could be considered by the Senate. It had been our hope that that opportunity would have been given to us prior to this. The Appropriations bills of us who have been privileged to work on these bills through the years—this is the 27th year in which I have been privileged to work. The same number of years of my colleague—recognize the value of the authorization bill being passed prior to the enactment of the appropriations bill.

Given that situation, realities are such that we are able to get it up. We are now faced with the need to exercise every option under the rules to get our bill considered. Although it is an extraordinary procedure and it has only been done once in 1986, I think we are at this juncture the indefinite time in which our bill could be taken up, and the short period in which, presumably, the Congress is going to remain in session, have to seize this opportunity at this time to have our bill considered in conjunction with the appropriations bill.

For that purpose, I filed the amendment, amended it to take out section B which relates to the Department of Energy, and section C which relates to Defense spending, A which is those provisions which dovetail and support many provisions of this appropriations bill which is pending here today.

I have heard the distinguished managers of the appropriations bill time and time again in previous years, as in this year, explain the desirability of having the authorization bill acted upon prior to the appropriations bill.

I readily acknowledge to the managers of the appropriations bill the essential requirement to get passed as quickly as possible—hopefully, before this recess—the requirements for the ongoing financial needs of the Department of Defense. They are critical.

I have not put this on to that bill as a dilatory measure. And to expedite consideration of the authorization bill, I carefully selected a series of amendments, and filed them at the desk in two managers’ amendments, the purpose of which was to say to our colleagues they are your amendments. Senator LEVIN and I have reconciled such differences as existed such that we both now agree—the Senator from Michigan and the Senator from Virginia—that they are ready for enactment on our bill through the vehicle traditionally used of a managers’ amendment requiring just one single vote, if necessary. We can incorporate them into the underlying bill—but one vote on these packages.

Given the changes in circumstances of germaneness necessary for the Senator from Virginia to prepare a third amendment, which I will now file with the clerk. It is permissible under the unanimous consent, and I send to the desk about 100 amendments, which, in the judgment of myself and others, are germane to the bill. Therefore, I send that to the desk.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, I am not sure that is in order. I would like to reserve the right to object to this when the Senator is finished.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, at this point in time, parliamentary inquiry: Does not the standing unanimous consent allow a Senator to file an amendment in the second degree?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendments in the second degree may be filed. They are not subject to—

Mr. STEVENS. Parliamentary inquiry: I thought we had an understanding that there would be no amendments filed after a specific time. This is a second-degree amendment. We did not permit second-degree amendments at that time.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I have to say in fairness that I have checked with the Parliamentarian each step of my procedure yesterday and today. I have checked, and it was the interpretation given to me, as frequently given to Members of this body by the Parliamentarians, that the unanimous consent did not prohibit, as the Chair just announced, the filing of second-degree amendments.

Mr. STEVENS. That was not my understanding.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair advises that the transcript will be reviewed, and the Chair also advises that he is not aware of a prohibition of filing second-degree amendments at this time.

Mr. WARNER. Could the Chair repeat that a little louder, please?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair advises the Senator from Virginia that the transcript will be reviewed, and the Chair also advises that he is not aware of a prohibition of filing second-degree amendments at this moment, prior to reviewing that, is unaware of the prohibition on second-degree amendments.

Mr. WARNER. I thank the Presiding Officer.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Against the filing of second-degree amendments.

Mr. WARNER. Yes. That is precisely what I asked the Presiding Officer to accept, and I think your ruling is consistent with the request of the Senator from Virginia.

We can proceed.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. WARNER. Yes.

Mr. LEVIN. In terms of the content of the package.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Michigan is recognized.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I yield for a question.

Mr. LEVIN. Without losing his right to the floor, I want to see if I can clarify what I understand to be in the package which was sent to the desk. My understanding is on the underlying amendment which the Senator filed and which I cosponsored that the sections of our defense authorization bill relating to energy and to military construction have been removed.

Mr. WARNER. That is correct.

Mr. LEVIN. And that the purpose of this package is to remove any amendments relating to those two subjects from the managers’ package.

Mr. WARNER. The Senator is correct. I would add that it was for the
I am trying to do object. Other set of amendments that amendment. Now he has filed an-amendments. He then filed a separate package of authorization bill as an amendment.

I yield the floor.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for an inquiry without losing his right to the floor?

Mr. WARNER. Yes. I yield for a question.

Mr. LEVIN. I wonder if I could inquire—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Virginia is still recognized.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, that is the request of the Senator from Virginia. The PRESIDING OFFICER.

Mr. LEVIN. If the Senator will yield for a question without losing his right to the floor, my understanding of the amendments which have just been printed is those amendments to the Senator from Virginia's amendment to the bill.

Mr. WARNER. I beg your pardon?

Mr. LEVIN. Is my understanding cor-correct? If the amendment was sent to the desk to be printed are amendments to Senator Warner's amendment, not amendments to the bill itself?

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, that is correct. In the event the Senate concurs in the position of both of us with regard to the forthcoming vote and the Senate agrees as to germaneness, it is my intention to call up my amendment, which is the 2006 armed services bill, and at that time to put on it a managers' amendment—jointly, the two of us—which is the third pending amendment at the desk. We will discard the other two amendments because this third amendment has been carefully drawn to have those amendments, as the Senator from Michigan said, those amendments relative to part A, which constitutes the amendment at the desk at this time. It will be the subject of a vote, and not parts B and C.

Mr. STEVENS. Parliamentary inquiry: Are not these amendments that related to the Energy and MILCON bills. The effort of this printed package is to make sure the proposed amendments to your amendment comply with your representation.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, that is correct. The third filing consists of amendments that parallel 1 and 2 that this modification complies with the understanding that the Senator from Alaska and the Senator from Virginia had; is that correct?

I would not use the word "understanding."

Mr. LEVIN. I apologize for that statement.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, the statement is correct.

In all fairness, this Nation is at war.

Mr. LEVIN. To try to clarify this, with the Senator from Virginia calls part 3 is a skinned-down version of 1 and 2, eliminating from 1 and 2 those provisions which might violate the understanding which existed that there would not be any provisions in this package that relates to the energy piece and to the MILCON piece. The effort being made by the Senator from Virginia, as I understand it, is not to add something into this part in violation of an understanding, but is to ensure that part 3, which is the Amendment to the bill. I believe this is a very odd procedure. Now the two Senators are saying they are the managers of the bill and they are going to accept 108 amendments to our bill. We haven't even read them. We don't know what they are. We don't know how many more amendments will likely come to the Senate amendments.

I yield the floor.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for an inquiry without losing his right to the floor?

Mr. WARNER. Yes. I yield for a question.

Mr. LEVIN. I wonder if I could inquire—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Virginia has a perfect right to submit amendments to be printed. They have not been called up. Therefore, they are not in order at this time to be offered, but they may be submitted for printing.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, that is the request of the Senator from Virginia. The PRESIDING OFFICER.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, the Senator yield for a question without losing his right to the floor, my understanding of the amendments which have just been printed is those amendments to the Senator from Virginia's amendment to the bill.

In all fairness, this Nation is at war.

The men and women of the Armed Forces are watching ever so carefully what the Congress is doing. I am fearful if we do not avail ourselves of this opportunity to put our bill on—which has been done once before—and hopefully add those amendments which are very important to many Senators, that this could be misconstrued not only at home, not only abroad by the men and women of the Armed Forces, but indeed there could be some puzzlement throughout the world as to where is the Congress in supporting the men and women of the Armed Forces.

This is critical time. We must do it. I say to my good friend, it is not an effort in any way to undermine the Senator’s efforts to get this appropriations bill through. By the incorporation of these 100 amendments, together with the 70-some amendments which have already been adopted by the Senate the previous time we had this bill on the floor, there will not be forthcoming a massive number of amendments which in the end could result in a further drawing out of the time needed to have this body exercise its judgment on the appropriations bill.

I plead with my colleagues to have an understanding of the imperative nature to act upon this bill promptly. It underlies much of what the Senator is trying to do in the appropriations bill. It is needed authorization language. I see my colleague who has joined me in this, if the Senator wishes to go ahead. Does the Senator have a question?

Mr. WARNER. That is what we have, a colloquy.

Mr. STEVENS. How long will the colloquy go on? It has been going on 30 minutes—20 minutes, anyway.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. No time has been offered.

Mr. LEVIN. I assure the Senator from Alaska I will be brief. I simply join in the plea.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Virginia yield the floor?

Mr. WARNER. Yes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Michigan is recognized.

Mr. WARNER. The Senator from Virginia in making a plea to our appropriators here, the managers on the bill, to understand the situation in which we find ourselves. That is, we had a bill in the Senate which the Republican leader decided for reasons which were very clear at the time that the bill would be pulled down. It was left in limbo. And the request is whether we will now have an opportunity to vote on a bill which does so much for the men and women in the military. We cannot think of any other way we can bring up the authorization except by offering it as an amendment to the appropriations bill, which is pending.

It has met the threshold of germane- ness, we are assured. The Senate will decide whether it is germane. But the Parliamentarian has advised the Senator from Virginia that it meets the threshold.

So now with the provisions in this bill—that pay provisions, the special pay provisions, the longevity, the increased life insurance, the health care provisions, the TRICARE provisions—we could go on and on—there are critically important provisions in this bill to the men and women in the military.

We have men and women in the military with their lives at risk in Iraq and Afghanistan and now we have an additional responsibility is done for the Gulf. We have so much at stake. Usually appropriators and the authorizers have been able to work together. I hope that will continue now. Somehow or other I hope we will be able to figure out a way to—Mr. STEVENS. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. LEVIN. If I can finish the sentence.

I hope we can find a way consistent with the wonderful relationship which has existed between appropriators and authorizers in the defense area, that we can find a way to get this authorization bill before the Senate. We have tried to get it freestanding, without success. This is an opportunity to bring this bill to the Senate.

As the Senator from Virginia said, we have over 100 items which have been cleared. That is not done for any sinister reason. It is done for a very simple way to expedite this bill so that the appropriators are not confronted with 100 amendments. The appropriators should not be confronted with an authorization bill where there are 150 amendments pending.

The Senator from Virginia and this Senate have tried very hard to accommodate Senators on both sides of the aisle so we could help the appropriators, so we could represent to the appropriators that we would not be confronted with 100 or 150 amendments, but that a managers’ package would be able to resolve most of those amendments. That has been done. It has been done in good faith.

I hope that somehow or other the managers of this bill can find a way to help us bring this bill to the floor. There will not be more than perhaps a dozen amendments that would be offered to this bill, we think, because we believe we have resolved most of the other amendments. That is my plea to the appropriators and to our good friends, the Senators from Alaska and Hawaii.

Mr. WARNER. I will be glad to yield for a question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Michigan maintains the floor.

Mr. LEVIN. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Virginia.

Mr. WARNER. I thank my colleague.

We have worked these many years together and we have tried to work in the spirit of what is best, as our managers of the appropriations bill, for the men and women of the Armed Forces. I plead, give not just the managers a chance, but give the Senate, I say to our managers, the chance to show that they are not going to come up here and say, ‘I will have more amendments to drag this appropriations bill down, trying to attach those amendments to our amendments.’

We have worked hard for weeks to compile this list of 100 amendments. We do not know of any others out there—there are some, but not massive numbers—that are going to come in and literally capsize this appropriations bill. Give it a chance. After a day or two, if the Senate actuate the fact that the Senate is taking steps, and is within their right to try and put second degrees on, and that is an impediment to finishing the bill by Friday, I am sure we can sit down with the two leaders and work out a solution. I simply say, give us not just a chance but give the Senate as a body a chance to show responsibility to enact the annual authorization bill.

AMENDMENT NO. 395.

Mr. President, I endorse strongly the McCain amendment. I have been a co-sponsor from the beginning. I have looked into this situation. At one time when I was privileged to be Secretary of the Navy when the war in Vietnam came to an end, I knew very intimately with the prisoner issue and their families in that tragic era of our history. I have had some insight into this situation which enables me to give the strongest possible endorsement to this amendment by the Senator from Arizona, a very respected Member of this Senate and a man with an extraordinary record in the armed services of the United States.

The McCain amendment provides us with the opportunity to ensure that our Nation’s military does not repeat the errors, faults and misdeeds we have seen occur at military detention facilities overseas as we fight this war on global terrorism.

As General Abizaid told us last week this will be a long war against terrorists and our Armed Forces must have clear and understandable standards.

The McCain amendment has two parts of equal vital importance, both critical. The first establishes very clear rules for the conduct of our soldiers, sailors, airman, and marines, our allies, and the rest of the world that the cruel, inhuman, and degrading treatment or punishment are degrading treatment or punishment are degrading treatment or punishment.

The first establishes very clear rules for the conduct of our soldiers, sailors, airman, and marines, our allies, and the rest of the world that the cruel, inhuman, and degrading treatment or punishment are degrading treatment or punishment.
Our standards against cruel, inhuman, and degrading treatment or punishment are deeply rooted in our Bill of Rights. Ultimately it is our uniquely American character that must be embedded in our American way or war.

Mr. LEVIN. I ask unanimous consent that I be the co-sponsor of the McCain amendment relative to the treatment of detainees.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I support the McCain amendment on interrogation standards because it protects our troops. Major General Fay, in his investigation into the role of military intelligence in the prisoner abuses at Abu Ghraib, found that DoD’s development of multiple policies on interrogation operations for use in different theaters or operations confused Army and civilian interrogators at Abu Ghraib. This confusion over what standards applied contributed to the horrific abuses of detainees. That is why, in my opinion, the McCain amendment is necessary.

The Parliamentary has now advised the Senator from Virginia has a pending amendment. The amendment is relative to the treatment to this amendment for the purpose of putting pressure on the majority leader to make an arrangement to call up this bill. I urged him not to do that, as a matter of fact. We met off the floor and he said he was going to do it. He indicated he was going to delete a portion of that amendment. I informed him that the reason for that deletion was because the Senator from Virginia had advised him that the bill would be subject to a point of order on the basis of germaneness if he did it. So he eliminated the two provisions of the bill that made the McCain amendment. The Senator from Virginia has a right to raise the defense of Germaneness and the Senate will vote on that at 7:30.

Beyond that, the concept now of bringing in 108 amendments to the bill when there are still amendments outside—I ask unanimous consent that we adopt the amendments offered by the Senator from Virginia and that no further amendments from the Appropriations Committee in full, already approved the 108 amendments that have been added to the bill for Iraq and the war on terror and Afghanistan. Those items must be approved by the President no later than November 15.

We had a supplemental for the past fiscal year, 2005. This is the supplemental for 2006, and supplemental for 2006 started October 1. We have a continuing resolution we are operating on for the basic operations of the Defense Department, but there is no continuing operation for the supplemental for Iraq and Afghanistan and the war on terror. This must be passed. The Committee on Armed Services knows this. The Senator from Virginia, I must correct. Mr. STEVENS. That proves it. The Senators do not know how many of the other 200 amendments are going to take up our time and time again this bill must be passed and sent to conference before we leave this week. We will not leave this week until we finish this bill. I have told the Senate time and time again that this amendment is attached to this bill for Iraq and the war on terror and Afghanistan. Those items must be approved by the President no later than November 15.

We have taken the authorization bill twice during my time for the appropriations Committee in full, already agreed to by the committee, and taken it to the floor. We accepted a portion of a Defense authorization bill and left it open to amendment. Why? The Senate can see right now why. The managers have not reached an agreement on their bill. The committee has not reached an agreement on their bill. The bill is subject to amendment, and there are over 200 amendments at the desk now that were filed against the armed services bill. They have picked out 108 of them, and they have approved them. They never consulted with us on what they did, but they have approved them and offered them now as an amendment. As they offer the amendment, there are other amendments that come in now because of the circumstance of how many they have picked out and the ones they have not picked out.

Does the Senator believe Senators would put their other amendments to this bill and it was brought down.

Mr. LEVIN said there may be some out there, 10 or 12. Well, how long are 10 or 12 amendments going to take when you are on the authorization Committee and you are not handling that bill; they are.

I think the Senate has to realize the procedure we are in now. If we start down this road, then every time there is a Defense appropriations bill someone who has not gotten a bill passed in terms of another 1 of the 12 subcommittees—there are 13 on appropriations—is going to come in and say: We want to put our bill on your bill, but, by the way, it will be subject to amendment. You can call up your bill. We can’t call up our bill because it is not ready to be called up.

Now, an armed services bill, when it comes here, is a great bill. It takes a long time. We know how long it takes. Never before in history has a bill been passed in 10 or 12 amendments. It took 3 hours. Most years it takes less than a day. Why? Because we are a bipartisan subcommittee. When this bill came out of the subcommittees, it came out unanimously. Not one Senator voted against it. When it came out of the full committee, it was unanimous. Not one Senator voted against it.

The two of us have run a bipartisan team now since 1981. This is the first year that this has been done. I hope the Senate says: We do not want to do it this way because this is opening the door to an entirely new process of using a bill that must be passed as a vehicle to take on a bill that cannot be passed. If they could pass their bill, they could have done it. They would have proved to the majority leader they had amendments, and they could have agreed to them.

That is not our problem. That should not be the appropriators’ problem. We have a timeframe. We have 13 bills. We are supposed to get them all done once each year. We have had years where we did not even have an authorization bill, and we survived it. We have had many years where they passed their bill months after we passed the Defense appropriations bill, and we survived it.

But this year—this year—because we are at war, this is absolutely wrong, absolutely wrong. I hope the Senate listens to me. We have to pass this bill before we leave to go home for this recess. Five days to go. If we do not, we do not have the ability, once we get back, to pass it and then get to conference and then get it to the President in time for the money to be available to use to support our people in the field.

Now, people say: Well, wait a minute, you can reprogram money. We are in a period of a continuing resolution.
There is no money that can be reprogrammed. You cannot reprogram money now. We do not have 2006 money to reprogram. There is no emergency money to reprogram. The emergency money is in part of this bill that has to be passed.

Now, I am getting a little mad. I do not mean to be too mad, but I mean to be very angry and disturbed at the process. The Senator from Virginia and the Senator from Michigan know better than to do this. You know a lot better than to do this. It is time for us to realize we have soldiers and sailors, marines, the Coast Guard in the field now. The money to support them is running out. The reason it has not run out is because we did reprogram some money before September 30 we had available then. There is no more money to reprogram to take care of this war.

Now, I do not know how I can express it any more bluntly than that. I hope the Senate will listen to us and vote against this bill. There are no more amendments to this bill. That is the understanding to start with:

There is no more money to reprogram. The emergency money is in part of this bill that has to be passed.

Now, I will be pleased to take this, if there are no more amendments. That was the understanding to start with. But this is not the authorization bill; this is one bill. This is a bill for the appropriations for the Department of Defense for the fiscal year 2006, plus the emergency supplemental funding for the war in Iraq, Afghanistan, and the other far-circumstances. I am appalled that the two Senators would proceed this way. And I tell the Senator from Virginia, our friendship is very close to the brink—very close to the brink—because I believe my job is to get this bill passed, and get it passed as a bill we know we can go to conference on, and get it done and be ready when we get back.

If we were to take this portion of this bill, the Defense bill, to conference, we would not finish this legislative session, and there will be a future time with parts B and C, when they will be able to bring forth such additional amendments as they believe are necessary to be enacted in the 2006 armed services bill; that is, sections B and C would be the means by which those amendments could be affixed.

So I say to my good friend, I have acted as I feel duty calls. You have stated very clearly the facts. And now I entrust the Senate to make the decision that is right for the country. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alaska.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, my last word on this, before we come on the 6 minutes before the vote at 7:30, will be this: There are two packages of amendments before the desk. Under any normal procedure, Senator INOUYE and I would review those amendments. We have not seen them. We have not been given a copy, normally we would have had a copy of them, at least. But we do not know how many of those are in conflict with our own bill.

The two Senators have acted as managers of a part of our bill because they offered their bill as an amendment. What procedure is this? How can we assure the Senate what is in this bill? How can we even be prepared to go to conference on this bill when we do not know what is in those two packages? How can we possibly pass our three portions? We do not know what is in the part A, which was part of the authorization bill, but these amendments, we don't know what they are. We may have already accepted some of them. I do not know.

But I think it is really a strange procedure that anyone would suggest, by offering an amendment, that control over the bill go to members from other committees and, in doing so, they clear amendments that we will have to defend in conference, theoretically, as Managers of the Senate. We do not know what is in them. No one knows what is in them. Normally, a package like that, if they had their bill out here, the Defense authorization bill, they would have a bill in front of us, wouldn’t they? As a matter of fact, I think the rules require it. But now there are amendments offered at the desk, and I do not think they have given anyone a copy of the amendments.

I think this procedure violates the rules of the Senate. I am not going to get into the problem of that yet because we are going to vote on germaneness. Germaneness does not eliminate the process of a bill we may have against those amendments later. But as a practical matter, this is a really odd procedure, and one that is bound to, as the Senator from Hawaii said, lead to processes in the future that will be totally unmanageable.

I urge the Senate to think about this as we approach the vote at 7:30 p.m.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Virginia is recognized.

Mr. WARNER. Parliamentary inquiry: Did not the Senator from Virginia on Monday file an amendment in the nature of a managers’ amendment with 60 amendments and they have been at the desk since that period of time?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That would be a matter of public record. The Chair does not keep a record.

Mr. WARNER. A matter of public record. Then yesterday I filed a second amendment with about 18 in the nature of a managers’ amendment, and they were in the public record.

I say to my good friends, the amendment I filed today, the third one, is nothing more than taking from each package only those amendments which have been at the desk, filed, and consolidating them in a third package.

I say to my friend, I am in no way trying to be devious at all. Those amendments have been a matter of public record Monday, Tuesday, and today’s amendment simply is a consolidation of all of those that have been at the desk in that period of time.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arizona is recognized.

Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, I know the Senator from Rhode Island is waiting, and I will be very brief. First, it is not a happy day for this body when we are in this kind of imbroglio where we are unable to accept as an amendment on an appropriations bill the authorization for the men and women who are fighting in our Nation’s defense around the world. It seems to me the least we can do, however this is sorted out, is to have the distinguished leaders—Senators STEVENS, INOUYE, LEVIN, and WARNER—sit down and see if there is a way to work this out. It may require the participation of the respective leaders. But we should not be in a situation where the best option is to attach an entire authorization bill as an amendment to an appropriations bill. It is a sad commentary on the way we do business.

Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, if I can ask the indulgence of my friend from Rhode Island for 1 minute, I would like to read a statement into the RECORD.

It reads:

GEN COLIN L. POWELL, USA (Retired), Alexandria, VA, October 5, 2005.

Dear Senator MCCAIN: I have read your proposed amendment to the Defense Authorization Bill in the using of the Army Field Manual as the definitive guidance for the conduct of our troops with respect to detainees. I have also studied your impressive statement introducing the amendment.

I fully support this amendment. Further, I align myself with the letter written to you by General Shalikashvili and by a distinguished group of senior officers in support of the amendment.

Our troops need to hear from the Congress, which has an obligation to speak to such matters under Article I, Section 8 of the Constitution. I also believe the world will note that America is making a clear statement with respect to the expected future behavior of our soldiers. Such a reaction will help deal with the terrible public diplomacy crisis created by Abu Ghraib.

Sincerely,

COLIN POWELL.

I hope my colleagues will pay very careful attention to our former Secretary of State and Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. I do not have to tell any of my colleagues of his outstanding and superb record of service to this Nation and the depth of his knowledge as it pertains to this and many other national security issues.

I am very much forward with this statement, and I hope my colleagues will pay attention to it.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Rhode Island is recognized.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, the Senator will yield, I want to commend my long-time friend, Senator MCCAIN, for the initiative he has taken. It has been a privilege for me and many others to join in this effort. I think what he stated here should be taken into consideration by every Senator tonight as they cast his or her vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Rhode Island.

AMENDMENT NO. 2033

Mr. REED. Mr. President, rising energy prices could financially wipe out working-class families and seniors this winter. We are about to see an extraordinary runup in prices that imperil the ability of many families simply to keep their homes warm during this coming winter.

In New England, the average cost for a family using heating oil is projected to hit $1,666 during the upcoming winter. This represents an increase of $403 over last winter’s prices and $714 over the winter heating season of 2003–2004. That is an extraordinary increase in the cost families have to spend to heat their homes.

For a family using natural gas in the Midwest, prices are projected to hit $1,568, representing an increase of $611 over last year’s prices and $643 over the price of the 2003–2004 heating season.

The Mortgage Bankers Association, looking at this data, expects steep energy costs could increase the number of missed payments and lost homes this year. So we have observers who are fearful that this huge energy shock could cause families to, indeed, lose their homes.

In America, no family should be forced to choose between heating their home or putting food on the table for their children. No senior citizen should have to decide to either buy lifesaving pharmaceuticals or pay their electric bill. But, unfortunately, low-income working Americans are facing these decisions this winter.

In some respects, this is a tidal wave, not of rising water but of rising energy prices which is a consequence of Hurricane Katrina and Rita.

For this reason, Senator KENNEDY, Senator KERRY, and I offered an amendment to an appropriations bill to provide $3.1 billion in emergency funds for the Low-Income Home Energy Assistance Program, known as LIHEAP. This funding will provide our Nation’s most vulnerable—low-income families and disabled individuals—with affordable energy this winter. Again, we saw and were shocked as a nation to see rising waters imperil the most vulnerable in our society on the gulf coast. Well, these rising energy prices will do the same thing by threatening the most vulnerable people through the Northeast, through the Midwest, through every area of the country that anticipates cold weather this winter.

I urge my colleagues to join us to secure $3.1 billion in additional LIHEAP funding.

In September, I, along with over 20 of my colleagues, both Republicans and Democrats, sent a letter to the President urging that he include additional funding for LIHEAP in a supplemental appropriations bill for Hurricane Katrina. We sensed, as he sensed, that one of the consequences of Katrina was a severe shock to the energy sector, with complementary increases in prices. So I believe it is appropriate to deal with this issue now. We are waiting not only for the supplemental for Katrina, but also dealing with it on this particular appropriations bill.

On Monday, I was dismayed to learn that President Bush currently does not have plans to request additional LIHEAP funds this year. States are being hit for a crisis created by a lack of affordable energy, and this funding will ensure low-income families and seniors will have safe, warm homes this winter.

President Bush, I strongly urge that you reconsider. The warning has been issued. Will you once again ignore a looming crisis facing America?

In addition to LIHEAP funding, there are other steps that Congress and the Administration must take to address our Nation’s high energy costs. First, we need to pass Senator CANTWELL’s Energy Emergency Consumer Protection Act to ban price gouging at the gas pump in the wake of natural disasters such as Hurricane Katrina.

Second, we need to pass Senator Dorgan’s Windfall Profits Rebate Act which imposes a temporary windfall profits tax on big oil companies and uses the proceeds to provide a rebate to American consumers to help offset the higher cost of oil and gasoline products.

Total energy spending for the Nation this year will approach $1 trillion, 24 percent higher than in 2004. Energy will claim the biggest share of U.S. output since the end of the oil crisis 20 years ago. Oil and natural gas companies are making record profits, while energy prices are increasing and over-taking workers’ salary increases. This is wrong.

We also must fix those bankrupt energy policies that provide oil and gas companies with billions of dollars from the Federal Treasury for production. These tax breaks should be repealed to pay for billions of dollars in conservation programs that help American energy consumers, not big business.

The Federal Government must lead by example also. The President called on Americans to reduce their energy consumption and conserve oil. I know American families are up to this challenge and will respond. But Americans have the right to expect that their President and their Government will also make sacrifices.

The President should implement a Federal savings target to demonstrate a serious commitment to improving our Nation’s energy security. He should set a 40-percent savings target for Federal agencies by 2020. Over the past few years, the Federal Government has reduced its petroleum consumption by less than 1 percent. We can and we must do better.

As a nation, we must step back and evaluate our priorities. Now is not the time for big spending for social programs such as LIHEAP, Medicaid, and food stamps that support working families and seniors while the President and Members of the Senate continue to push for irresponsible tax breaks. We must prioritize, and the most vulnerable among us must be considered first.

Millions of Americans are struggling each day to make ends meet. They deserve our support. I hope the President and this Congress will heed this warning and provide an energy safety net for all Americans.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Martinez). The Senator from Hawaii.

Mr. INOUYE. Mr. President, I ask that the pending amendment be set aside.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Ms. LANDRIEU. Mr. President, as we consider many important amendments to this underlying bill, I will take just a moment to speak about this amendment which I offer that will call the attention of my colleagues to the important investments that we should be making in interoperability and communicaions.

As my colleagues know, we have had a very recent disaster along the gulf coast that has made quite apparent the lack of a communications system that is adequate to handle natural disasters of this magnitude and even mammade disasters that we could contemplate.

So this is quite serious. I know there are some members of the Senate and the House that are working very hard on this issue right now.

Since Katrina and Rita and even before these terrible hurricanes and the subsequent flooding of this region, which were devastating, we have known for some time that we have to come to better system of communication.
Our military has some interesting and very promising initiatives underway that could truly help us at this time.
That is basically what this $30 million amendment will do, is dedicate or allocate $30 million to U.S. Northern Command for the purposes of implementing IMT–2000 3G Communications Capabities. The IMT–2000 3G Standards will be used for the Gulf States and key entities within the Northern Command Area of Responsibility, AOR.

We have many needs that have shown themselves out of this storm and out of the subsequent disaster. It would be hard for even the Senator from the State that was most directly hit to have to list them in an order of priority because they are overwhelming and they are so great: water, food, electricity, housing, direct help to our local governments. We will debate that as these days unfold, and we will debate that as these weeks and months unfold.

One thing I am positively sure of is that the communications system we had in the country did not work well in 9/11. It did not work well for the hurricanes that hit the Presiding Officer’s State in such a devastating way only a year or two ago, and it did not work well for Louisiana, Mississippi, and Alabama, which experienced one of the worst natural disasters in the history of the country.

To address the devastating problems caused by the lack of communication,$30 million is a small investment. I offer this amendment and ask, as we move through the next four days of consideration of this Defense bill, if we would please take a very careful look at the importance of this amendment.

I submit the amendment for the Senate’s consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without
objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, I have an amendment pending which I would like to speak to. I will not call up this amendment at this time.

Mr. INHOFE. Reserving the right to object.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, military personnel are under tremendous pressure to be physically fit. The conditions under which they work and train are often extreme, making physical strength and endurance essential.

This pressure makes dietary supplements particularly attractive to members of our Armed Services, especially products marketed for weight loss and performance enhancement.

Finding these products on base is easy. A 2004 report on dietary supplements in the journal Military Medicine notes that a newly deployed U.S.
Air Force base had eight different dietary supplements on its shelves that were marketed for weightlifting and energy enhancement just 5 months after it opened. Six of these products contained the notorious supplement ephedra.

This article appeared in Exchange and Commissary News last month. It describes a store where the “supplement category is located on the main display at the front of the store, indicative of its importance to our customers.”

Thermogenic’s Extreme Thermo
Rush is one of the most popular items. Extreme Thermo Rush contains 200 mg of caffeine. That is the equivalent caffeine in five cans of Coca-Cola. In addition, this drink contains 200 mg of Citrus Aurantium, which is an ephedra-substitute that was found by a group of University of California scientists to increase heart rate among healthy people. It is a stimulant. These scientists released a report in April saying that products containing Citrus Aurantium could have some of the same adverse health effects associated with ephedra products.
So if, in fact, it is a dangerous product, it is removed from the shelf.

Then let’s go back to the beginning. In order to put a product on the shelf like a prescription drug, they have to be tested in advance by the Food and Drug Administration for two things: safety and efficacy. In other words, if you take the normal dosage, would the normal person be safe in taking it? I think we want to know that. And second, the company must show that they can achieve. Here you have a whole category of dietary supplements without testing as to their safety, without testing to make sure they actually do what they say they are going to do. Where’s the enforcement? All over America, in every drugstore you walk into, and some gas stations. If you go into a convenience store or gas station, don’t be surprised to see dietary supplements on the counter. I bet you think as a consumer, you cannot buy this ephedra over the counter. I bet you think as a consumer, they are safe. There is no requirement for them to be safe. There is no requirement they be tested.

So you think, I guess if somebody ever got sick, they would be reported to the Government, and the Government would take them off the shelf. There is no requirement in the law to report, even if a person drops dead from taking a dietary supplement. It is in fact, the biggest gamble a consumer can take for many of these dietary supplements. There has been no testing. There are very few, if any, quality standards to certify what they say on the label happens to be what is inside the bottle. There is no testing to determine if it is effective. There is no report if it turns out it is harmful.

I referred several times in this statement to ephedra, supplements containing the military stimulant. The United States took ephedra off its shelf at the end of 2002 because between 1997 and 2001 at least 30 Active-Duty personnel died after taking it. Ephedra is something most people are aware of. Ephedra was this dietary supplement, this naturally occurring substance similar to the drug ephedrine, which people took and which was a stimulant. Over the years, we found out it was dangerous to a lot of people. Thirty Active-Duty personnel died. Many others did as well. It turns out that ephedra was then banned in Canada. You cannot buy it in Canada.

The American Medical Association suggested we ban it here in the United States, too, because it is too dangerous to be sold as a dietary supplement. But the industry that makes these products is extremely powerful. As I recount to you what happened with ephedrine, you will find out.

After 7 years of effort, the FDA finally banned ephedra in 2004. At that time, 150 deaths were linked to that product. But one Federal court in Utah this past May went into question the FDA procedure, and marketers of these products have hit the street with advertising: Ephedra Is Back. Look at this. Natural Life Nutrition Center in Cincinnati, OH, days after this court decision in Utah: “Ephedra Is Back.” You can buy your ephedra products again. They put up the sign to try to lure customers back. The court in Utah said the FDA had failed to justify its rule banning ephedra, particularly at lower doses, particularly 10 milligrams or less per day.

The FDA has said it will continue to enforce its ban except for doses 10 milligrams or lower, but less than 2 weeks after the ruling, just to show you how toothless the Food and Drug Administration is when they consider dietary supplements. I had one of my staffers get on the Internet and see if we could buy some ephedra in larger doses. This staffer bought 30 pills containing 200 milligrams each from a company with a post office box in Missoula, MT.

The Federal Drug Administration, after this Utah court decision, said: OK, we will let you sell ephedra, but it can’t be in doses in excess of 10 milligrams. It turns out that there is no enforcement whatsoever. You can continue to buy this ephedra over the Internet in 200-milligram doses, which could be very dangerous, if not lethal.

The FDA has announced it is appealing this ruling on ephedra, but clearly the agency is not a decider. That is why we need to step in. Congress needs to address this problem. We may not solve it with this bill, but we can do something to protect our men and women in uniform. We should be protecting everyone in America, but this bill addresses our men and women in uniform, and that is what my amendment addresses.

The intent of my amendment is to protect American soldiers from dietary supplements containing stimulants that have unknown adverse effects. This amendment will disallow funds from being used by military stores to sell dietary supplements containing stimulants in cases where it is made known to the Department of Defense that there is a potential for their serious adverse events to the FDA’s Special Nutritional Adverse Event Monitoring System.

We know this happens. Manufacturers often fail to inform, and we know it because of this infamous Metabolife case. You may remember the Metabolife brand. It was all over television, magazines, newspapers, selling Metabolife. It was something that was going to make you healthier and thinner and give you more energy.

About 5 years ago, Metabolife, a dietary supplement company specializing in products containing ephedra, told Congress it had received no reports of people taking their products who experienced serious injury or death. Guess what. They lied. After the company was sued, it was revealed that Metabolife had actually received over 16,500 adverse events of Metabolife with ephedra. Many reports were serious. They knew that more than 100 people had died from their product. They misled Congress. They told us they had not received any information of people taking their product and experiencing serious injury or death. Finally, when they were sued, the information came out.

The FDA collects that kind of information on prescription drugs and over-the-counter drugs. If they learned that something was being sold in America that killed 100 people or injured 16,000 people, they clearly would take action. They would do everything they can in Washington that they can conceal this information. They will not share it unless they are forced in a lawsuit.

You think to yourself, Why hasn’t Congress risen to its responsibility of protecting consumers? Why don’t we at a minimum require these companies to report it when these dietary supplements harm people seriously or kill them?

Frankly, this Congress is in the thrall of this industry, and it has shown for many years. I went to the floor, this floor, last year to address the same issue. Some of my colleagues came to the floor and said: Oh, we can’t wait to join you. This is a great idea, adverse-event reporting. Here we are again a year later and nothing has happened. The same Senators who said, “We can’t wait to work with you” can answer phone calls when it comes to this issue.

My challenge to them is this: If you truly want to keep dangerous products off the market, if you happen to believe that America is a healthy country, don’t hurt anybody, why are you afraid of adverse-event reporting? If it is good enough for the major pharmaceutical companies, why isn’t it good for the nutritional supplement industry?

I hope my colleagues will come to the Chamber and understand that we are putting our men and women in uniform at risk by selling these dietary supplements which are being used by so many men and women in uniform and are dangerous to them.

The Institute of Medicine issued a report last year recommending that adverse-event reporting become mandatory for dietary supplement manufacturers—the Institute of Medicine. Here is what they said:

While spontaneous adverse event reports have recognized limitations, they have consistently identified the potential warning signals of problems requiring attention, making monitoring by the FDA worthwhile.
The Institute of Medicine recommended that Congress amend the 1994 supplement act, DSHEA, to require manufacturers of supplements to report to the FDA in a timely manner any serious adverse event associated with the use of their products.

The supporters of the amendment which I offer include the American Dietetic Association, the American Osteopathic Association, Consumers Union, Center for Science in the Public Interest, the American Society for Clinical Pharmacology and Therapeutics, and the American Society of Pharmacology and Experimental Therapeutics.

It is tragic that a starting pitcher for the Baltimore Orioles dropped dead. He was a man trying to lose some weight taking the ephedra stimulant, and obviously it cost him his life.

The same thing happened in my part of the world in central Illinois, where a 16-year-old boy getting ready for a softball game wanted to have performance enhancement and goes down to the local gas station and buys over the counter an ephedra product, takes it and washes it down with a Mountain Dew and ends up dying from a heart attack—a healthy 16-year-old boy.

Now we have our men and women in uniform all across the United States walking into these base exchanges wanting to make sure they are at peak physical condition to serve this country and buying these dietary supplements which claim to enhance performance and give them new energy or perhaps lose some weight not realizing they are risking their lives every time because the shoddy manufacturers who sell these products do not report to the Government when people get sick and die because of these dietary supplements.

How long is it going to take us? How many Americans have to die before we accept responsibility for the consumers of this country? They trust us. They expect it. Food and Drug Administration to be there, when it is needed, to report on these dangerous supplements. But we have let them down for more than 10 years since it was passed. We should be making decisions down when it comes to this bill. Let us start by protecting our men and women in uniform. Let us start by not letting them be in danger by buying the products on the shelves in these PXs or commissaries that are not good for them. That is, I think, the least we can do, and then let us not stop there. Let us move across America to say we are going to stand behind consumers; that we are going to stand behind children and families so that when they buy something in a drugstore in America that is supposed to be good for their health, they know their Government has at least the interest and has taken the time to see that it is safe.

This is not some wild, crazy idea I have. It is an idea backed up by the leading medical organizations in America, and it is one that reflects the reality of the problems of these products.

I invite my colleagues to support amendment No. 2035, which I have introduced, when it comes up for consideration at a latter point in this bill. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Wyoming.

Mr. ENZI. Mr. President, I rise today with mixed feelings on what I heard because this was brought up under the Defense authorization bill. I talked to the Senator from Illinois, and we agreed that we would work on something that would actually do something. We have been doing that, but with a slight interruption from Katrina. Now it is being offered again.

And in the same way, I have mixed emotions mostly to suggest to the Senator from Alaska to take this amendment because it will not achieve anything. We have an opportunity to do something and to achieve something. But this amendment will not do that.

Of course, it brings some attention to the fact that there may be some adverse reaction to dietary supplements. That is important. The discussion is important. But I think for discussion, we ought to have a lot of discussion on it, but we don't have a lot of time. I will try to keep my remarks brief on this.

This amendment would withhold funding from any store on a military installation or a commissary store—most of those are on military installations as well—that sells any dietary supplement containing a stimulant unless the manufacturer of the supplement submits reports on serious adverse events associated with the supplement. If they don't, we shut down the action on the base. But that is definitely not the only place you can buy dietary supplements. What we merely do is invite military people to go off base to get their dietary supplements and they will.

It is important that we get reporting done so people say if something is having an adverse effect on their health.

I recognize the Senator from Illinois has strong concerns about adverse reporting of supplements, and so do several other Senators. Senator HATCH and Senator HARKIN have been working diligently on this. Both of them are on the Health, Education, Labor and Pensions Committee, and that is within their jurisdiction on this particular issue.

We have been working on it. I should be clear on the issue. It is important that we maintain the safety of dietary supplements that benefit so many Americans. I mention this isn't the first time this has been offered.

I hope he will withdraw his amendment, and we may move on without having to go through the difficulty of a vote.

As I said, I question the effectiveness of achieving such reporting by withholding legal products only from men and women in uniform all across the United States. I think we might do better by working with the HELP Committee through regular order.

I respectfully ask the Senator from Illinois to withdraw his amendment and work with the HELP Committee on this issue. If not, I will have to oppose the amendment. I think it will take up unnecessary time when we can do it considerably more effectively and without punishing in a big way the servicemembers in uniform while we allow the civilian population to do whatever they want.

Mr. DURBIN. Last year when I offered this amendment, Senator HATCH came to the floor. Senator HARKIN joined afterwards. They conceded that they thought it was not a bad idea, if you will, to dietary supplements in America, and somebody is harmed, seriously injured or dies as a result, that the manufacturer of that dietary supplement should report that event to the FDA so that they can see if there is a problem, if it is something that might lead to a decision to take something off the market.

I would like to ask the Senator from Wyoming: Does he agree with that?
Does he think that is a reasonable standard to ask the dietary supplement manufacturers to report truly adverse events such as is required of the pharmaceutical companies today?

Mr. ENZI. I said before that I think it is important for us to work with a piece of legislation that does that on and off military bases, so there is a reporting of adverse events so that FDA can take action when it is affecting people, and have enough information to be able to tell whether they are acting properly or not. We do have an agency that is designed to do that. It is not the Department of Defense.

Mr. DURBIN. If the Senator will yield for another question, I agree with the Senator. This is not the way to address it. I thought it was the only way to bring the subject up before the Senate. I wish to ask the Senator from Wyoming, whom I respect and I have worked with and have been able to work out some very serious difficulties in the past with the Senator, if he wants to reach solutions, can the Senator from Wyoming give me his assurance that this is a priority, that he will be ready in the prioritization of the committee. We are handling the emergencies first.

I apologize for the 2-week delay we had while we are working on Katrina. Staff is working on this one, along with the other Senator from Illinois. We will do it.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, at this point, I ask unanimous consent to withdraw my amendment No. 2035.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. President, I call upon my amendment which is at the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk reads as follows:

The Senator from Michigan [Ms. STABENOW], for herself, Mr. JOHNSON, Mr. THUNE, Mr. AKAKA, Mrs. MURRAY, Mr. DAYTON, Mr. NELSON of Florida, Mr. LAUTENBERG, Mr. SALAZAR, Mrs. LINCOLN, Mr. CORZINE, Mr. BACUS, Ms. LANDRIEU, Mr. JEFFORDS, Mr. BINGAMAN, proposes an amendment numbered 1937.

Ms. STABENOW. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To ensure that future funding for health care for former members of the Armed Forces takes into account changes in population size and inflation.

At the appropriate place, insert the following:

SEC. 320. Funding for veterans health care to address changes in population and inflation.

(a) By the enactment of this section, Congress and the President intend to ensure access to health care for all veterans. Upon the enactment of this section, funding for the programs, functions, and activities of the Veterans Health Administration specified in subsection (d) shall be provided through a combination of discretionary and mandatory funds. The discretionary amount should be equal to the fiscal year 2005 discretionary funding for such programs, functions, and activities, and should remain unchanged each fiscal year thereafter. The annual level of mandatory amount shall be adjusted according to the formula specified in subsection (c).

(b) On the first day of each fiscal year, the Secretary of Veterans Affairs shall adjust the estimate of the amount determined under subsection (c) with respect to that fiscal year. Each such amount is available, without fiscal year limitation, for the programs, functions, and activities of the Veterans Health Administration, as specified in subsection (d), and is hereby appropriated for the purposes specified for section (d) for fiscal year 2005:

(1) The amount applicable to fiscal year 2006 under this subsection is the amount equal to—

(A) 130 percent of the amount obligated by the Department during fiscal year 2004 for the purposes specified in subsection (d), minus

(B) the amount appropriated for those purposes for fiscal year 2005.

(2) The amount applicable to any fiscal year after fiscal year 2005 under this subsection is the amount equal to the product of the following, minus any amounts necessary to implement this section:

(A) The sum of

(i) the number of veterans enrolled in the Department health care system under section 1705 of this title as of July 1 preceding the beginning of such fiscal year; and

(ii) the number of persons eligible for health care under chapter 17 of this title who are not covered by clause (i) and who were previously enrolled in the Department health care system under section 1705 of this title as of September 30, 2001.

(B) The per capita baseline amount, as increased from time to time pursuant to paragraph (3).

(3) For purposes of paragraph (2), the term ‘‘per capita baseline amount’’ means the amount equal to—

(i) the Consumer Price Index (all Urban Consumers, United States City Average, Hospital and related services, Seasonally Adjusted, published monthly) as of the beginning of fiscal year 2005;

(ii) such Consumer Price Index for the 12-month period preceding the June 30 preceding the beginning of the fiscal year for which the increase is made, exceeds

(iii) the Consumer Price Index for the 12-month period preceding the 12-month period described in clause (i).

(d) There is hereby appropriated, out of any sums in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the amount determined under subsection (c) for the purposes specified for subsection (d) for fiscal year 2005:

(A) The amount applicable to fiscal year 2006 under this subsection is the amount equal to—

(1) the amount obligated by the Department during fiscal year 2005 for the purposes specified in subsection (d), divided by

(ii) the number of veterans enrolled in the Department health care system under section 1705 of this title as of July 1 preceding such fiscal year.

(B) The per capita baseline amount, as increased from time to time pursuant to paragraph (3).

(3) For purposes of paragraph (2), the term ‘‘per capita baseline amount’’ means the amount equal to—

(iv) the Consumer Price Index (all Urban Consumers, United States City Average, Hospital and related services, Seasonally Adjusted, published monthly) as of the beginning of fiscal year 2005;

(v) such Consumer Price Index for the 12-month period preceding the June 30 preceding the beginning of the fiscal year for which the increase is made, exceeds

(vi) the Consumer Price Index for the 12-month period preceding the 12-month period described in clause (i).

(4) Except as provided in paragraph (2), the purposes for which amounts made available pursuant to subsection (b) shall be all programs, functions, and activities of the Veterans Health Administration.

(2) Amounts made available pursuant to subsection (b) are not available for—

(a) construction, acquisition, or alteration of medical facilities as provided in subchapter I of chapter 81 of this title (other than for such repairs as were provided for before enactment of this section and through the Medical Care appropriation for the Department); or
We owe these men and women our continued support so that they can recover from their injuries and lead productive lives.

Today's soldiers are tomorrow's veterans—and America has made a promise to these brave men and women to provide them the care they deserve. They deserve the respect and support of a grateful nation when they return home.

We also owe it to the men and women who have fought in America's prior conflicts to maintain a place for them in the VA system so they can receive the care they need, as well. We need to keep our promise to our veterans, young and old.

Together we can do better for our men and women who have served our country. We must consider the ongoing costs of medical care for America's veterans as part of the continuing cost of our national defense. The long-term legacy of the wars we fight today is the care of the men and women who have worn the uniform and are willing to pay the ultimate price for their nation. Senator John McCain and I are offering an amendment today to provide full funding for VA health care to ensure the VA has the resources necessary to provide quality health care in a timely manner to our Nation's disabled veterans. The Stabenow-Johnson-Thune amendment provides guaranteed funding for America's veterans from two sources.

First, the amendment provides an annual discretionary amendment that will be locked in for future years at the 2005 funding level. Second, in the future, the VA receives a sum of mandatory funding that is adjusted year to year based on changes in demand from the VA health system and the rate of health care inflation.

This funding mechanism will ensure that the VA has the resources it needs to provide a steady and reliable stream of resources to care for America's veterans. It will also ensure that Congress will continue to be responsible for the oversight of the VA health system as it does with other Federal programs funded directly from the U.S. Treasury.

This amendment is designed to ensure funding for veterans health care into line with almost 90 percent of Federal health care spending which is mandatory rather than discretionary. One of our greatest accomplishments as a nation is that every American knows when they enter their 65th year, when they reach 65 or if they are disabled, they receive the health care they need. Medicare is a universal and comprehensive system that benefits a person for their life's work. Our veterans deserve the same service for them by ensuring that their service is repaid with reliable health care benefits.

I thank the cosponsors of this amendment for their support: Senators Johnson, Thune, Akaka, Dayton, Nelson, Lautenberg, Salazar, Lincoln, Corzine, Baucus, Landrieu, Jeffords, Bayh, Bingaman, Murray, Kerry, Kennedy, and Biden.

In July, I offered this amendment to the 2006 Defense authorization bill. Unfortunately, the Defense authorization bill was pulled from the Senate at that time. While we are working out whether this will be included in this particular bill, it is important to offer my amendment again at this time. The amendment has been endorsed by the Partnership for Veterans Health Care Budget Reform, a group of major veterans service organizations that has been working to provide a reliable stream of health care for America's veterans for the past year. It includes the American Legion, the AMVETS, the Blinded Veterans Association, Disabled American Veterans, Jewish War Veterans of the United States, Paralyzed Veterans of America, and the Veterans of Foreign Wars, all of whom together as long as we get to see our veterans.

The problem we face today is that resources for veterans health care are falling behind demand. We have more veterans being created, more men and women coming home from the wars. Yet the funding is falling behind.

Shortly after coming into office, the President created the task force to improve health care delivery for our Nation's veterans. The task force found historically there has been a gap between the demand for VA care and the resources to meet the needs of our veterans. The task force also found that:

It includes the American Legion, the AMVETS, the Blinded Veterans Association, Disabled American Veterans, Jewish War Veterans of the United States, Paralyzed Veterans of America, and the Veterans of Foreign Wars, all of whom together as long as we get to see our veterans.

The problem we face today is that resources for veterans health care are falling behind demand. We have more veterans being created, more men and women coming home from the wars. Yet the funding is falling behind. Shortly after coming into office, the President created the task force to improve health care delivery for our Nation's veterans. The task force found historically there has been a gap between the demand for VA care and the resources to meet the needs of our veterans. The task force also found that:

This funding mechanism will ensure that the VA has the resources it needs to provide a steady and reliable stream of resources to care for America's veterans. It will also ensure that Congress will continue to be responsible for the oversight of the VA health system as it does with other Federal programs funded directly from the U.S. Treasury.

I thank the cosponsors of this amendment for their support: Senators Johnson, Thune, Akaka, Dayton, Nelson, Lautenberg, Salazar, Lincoln, Corzine, Baucus, Landrieu, Jeffords, Bayh, Bingaman, Murray, Kerry, Kennedy, and Biden.

In July, I offered this amendment to the 2006 Defense authorization bill. Unfortunately, the Defense authorization bill was pulled from the Senate at that time. While we are working out whether this will be included in this particular bill, it is important to offer my amendment again at this time. The amendment has been endorsed by the Partnership for Veterans Health Care Budget Reform, a group of major veterans service organizations that has been working to provide a reliable stream of health care for America's veterans for the past year. It includes the American Legion, the AMVETS, the Blinded Veterans Association, Disabled American Veterans, Jewish War Veterans of the United States, Paralyzed Veterans of America, and the Veterans of Foreign Wars, all of whom together as long as we get to see our veterans.

final amount Congress provided to the VA for health care was $1.2 billion over the President’s request, but it was still not enough to meet their immediate needs.

In April of this year I cosponsored an amendment with Senator MURRAY to the fiscal year 2005 supplemental appropriations bill for Iraq and Afghanistan to provide $1.9 billion for veterans medical care, especially for those soldiers returning from Iraq and Afghanistan. During the debate on the amendment Senator MURRAY told the Vice President’s budget was sufficient but, in fact, on April 5, Secretary of Veterans Affairs Jim Nicholson sent a letter to the Senate that said:

I can assure you that the VA does not need supplemental funds for FY2006 to continue to provide timely, quality service that is always our goal.

I was proud to cosponsor an amendment in June, however, to provide an additional $1.5 billion for veterans health care, since they finally admitted there was a gap in funding for this year. Finally, they admitted, in fact, the veterans health care system was not adequately funded this year. I was pleased we were able to add dollars under the spending caps, to be able to fill the gap this year.

As it turned out, we received more bad news from the administration on July 14, when the administration requested another $300 million for this year’s budget and another $1.7 billion for next year. The total shortfall for this year and next was nearly $3 billion, 3 billion short of where we should be in adequately funding health care for our veterans.

At the end of July, I was pleased to support the conference report for the Interior appropriations which included the $1.5 billion this year that the Senate has twice unanimously supported. Further, in September, I supported the Senate’s Military Construction and Veterans Affairs appropriations bill which provided a total of $33 billion for veterans health care. This is $1.1 billion more than the administration requested and $2.5 billion more than the House version of the legislation for veterans health care.

I tell this to make two points: First, it is clear that the demand for veterans health care is increasing, and a good portion of this increase can be attributed to women seeking care after they are returning from Iraq and Afghanistan. The second is to show despite the best intentions of the VA and Congress, the VA does not have a reliable and dependable stream of funding to provide for veterans health care needs. We should not have to pass an emergency funding bill to give our veterans the health care they need and deserve.

In 1963, there were about 2.5 million American veterans from the VA health care system. Today there are more than 7 million veterans enrolled in the system, over half of which receive care on a regular basis. Despite the increase in patients, the VA has received on average a 5-percent increase in appropriations over the last 8 years. My amendment will fix this problem and ensure that each year we provide the funding necessary to care for our veterans in a timely manner that is separate from the uncertain budget insertions and downs of the congressional calendar.

At last count, at least 86,000 men and women have returned from Iraq and have sought health care from the VA. We can safely assume that this number will rise by the hundreds of thousands. This bill provides the resources our troops need to prepare and defend our country in Iraq. We must not forget about them when they return home and put on a veteran’s cap. We must ensure that we keep our promises to them when they come home as veterans. Let’s stop this up-and-down roller coaster of emergency spending measures, of budgets that do not match with need year to year. We owe our veterans better than that. Together, we can do better than that.

I urge the support of my colleagues for this very important amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alaska is recognized.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I regret to do this, but as we have examined this amendment of the Senator, we find this requires this spending to become a part of the mandatory process of expenditures. It requires funds to supplement this section, and in effect it becomes a matter that we believe is subject to a point of order under section 302(f) of the Congressional Budget Act that provides spending in excess of the subcommittee’s 302(b) allocation under the fiscal year 2006 concurrent resolution of the budget. I make that point of order.

Ms. STABENOW. I move to waive the applicable sections of the Congressional Budget Act as a provision of considering my amendment, and I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, we will have a request for votes to commence at 7:30, but first I offer a managers’ package, as we call it, with modifications.

Mr. STEVENS. I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. INOUYE. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 1979

Mr. CHAMBLIS. Mr. President, I rise today in support of my amendment, No. 1979, as modified, to H.R. 2963.

Camp Wheeler, near Macon, GA, was a World War II Army facility which has a proud history of training American soldiers. Unfortunately, and like many formerly used defense sites in the United States, there is unexploded ordnance on the former Camp Wheeler site that, today, threatens the safety of people who live in the vicinity. This amendment would earmark $600,000 to clean up Camp Wheeler.

The unexploded ordnance at Camp Wheeler was found during an inspection sponsored by the Savannah District of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers. The Corps has indicated that cleanup of Ordnance Operable Unit No. 1 at Camp Wheeler, which is in a neighborhood in Twiggs County, GA, is the No. 1 munitions cleanup program in the State of Georgia.

I have worked with the Corps over the past several months on this project, and my staff has received briefings and updates from the Corps on a regular basis.

Since filing my amendment, the Corps has announced that $1.5 million in fiscal year 2005 funds will be used to conduct cleanup at Camp Wheeler. Additionally, the Corps of Engineers has assured me that there are funds available in their budget to work toward completion of cleanup of Ordnance Operable Unit No. 1 at Camp Wheeler in the fiscal year 2006 budget.

This amendment will ensure that the necessary funds are spent on this project and that the Camp Wheeler cleanup is completed as the Corps of Engineers has promised.

I ask my colleagues to support the amendment.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, it is my understanding that at 7:30 we will start with the vote on Senator WARNER’s submission of the Defense authorization bill as an amendment. Is that correct?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

Mr. STEVENS. We already have an agreement to have 3 minutes on each side on that amendment, Senator BAYH’s amendment No. 1933, and Senator MCCAIN’s amendment No. 1977, is that correct?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

Mr. STEVENS. We are working on a modification to Senator REED’s amendment. We then also have Senator MCCAIN’s amendment, which is amendment No. 1978. And we have Senator GRAHAM’s amendment, which is 2004.

I say to the Senator: are you prepared to accept that amendment now?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. It is pending.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I withdraw that request.

AMENDMENT NO. 2033

Mr. President, is it in order for me, as manager of the bill, to move to table Senator KERRY’s amendment No. 2033 at this time?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment is now pending.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I move to table Senator KERRY’s amendment which deals with LIHEAP and ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There appears to be.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that be put into the schedule to be developed by the leadership as to the time at which that vote will occur.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, as to the amendment offered by Ms. STABENOW, I have made the point of order. At what time would that vote occur?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time for the vote has not yet been scheduled.

Mr. STEVENS. Would it be all right with the Senator if we ask for it to be scheduled according to the leadership in this process this evening?

Ms. STABENOW. Yes. That is fine.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that amendment be added to the list for a vote this evening.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I yield the floor to the Senator from West Virginia.

I suggest the absence of a quorum first.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. OBAMA. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Alabama is recognized.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, I see the chairman. I suppose we are ready to proceed. Does the chairman have anything he needs to say at this time?

Mr. STEVENS. I say to the Senator, Mr. President, if I may respond to his question, we are waiting for Senator BYRD to make a statement. But he is not ready at this time, so the Senator may proceed. He should be ready in about 5 or 10 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alabama is recognized.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, I see the chairman. I suppose we are ready to proceed. Does the chairman have anything he needs to say at this time?

Mr. STEVENS. I say to the Senator, Mr. President, if I may respond to his question, we are waiting for Senator BYRD to make a statement. But he is not ready at this time, so the Senator may proceed. He should be ready in about 5 or 10 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alabama is recognized.

Mr. SESSIONS. I thank the Chair. Mr. President, we have the highest standards of conduct in our legal system, and our military has the highest standards of behavior as they deal with prisoners with whom they come in contact.

Has that occurred? Yes, they have. Has that occurred in every war we have ever been involved in, that any nation has ever been involved in? Un fortunately so.

But I want to take a few minutes now to express my deep feeling that we do not have a program of systematic abuse of prisoners going on by our U.S. military; that they are maintaining the discipline of our troops; and that they are, day after day, subjecting themselves to personal risk—not firing randomly or rapidly but hesitating to make sure innocents are not injured, and have complied with the most extensive of requirements dealing with prisoners. But any nation, any army, has ever had in the history of the world. Our military has taken disciplinary action time and time and time again if anybody violates those standards.

We should all remember that event that made a good bit of news when a fine Army colonel was in a combat area taking fire and captured an enemy, and to save the lives of his troops, as his soldiers later testified, he fired a gun beside the head of a captured prisoner in order to frighten him and see if he would provide information that might be of value in saving the lives of the American soldiers he commanded. He was kicked out of the Army for it. The news media did not discover this occurrence. The military did and acted upon it.

We all heard about Abu Ghraib, and the sick and unacceptable behavior that went on in that prison. But I remember distinctly that within one day of the release of the pictures being brought to the world that there was an investigation. A military investigation was commencing. Within 3 days, they had made a public announcement to the world that there had been allegations of abuse in Abu Ghraib and that an investigation was under way.

And it was months—2 or 3 months—that later those pictures came out. Why do I say that? I say that because the military took the allegations seriously from the beginning. They were not reacting to the release of pictures that embarrassed them. Rather, they immediately initiated the investigation about what happened on this midnight shift by these soldiers who lost discipline in Abu Ghraib and abused prisoners in a way that is unacceptable to us.

Those guards, have all been tried and convicted. The Wall Street Journal, just a couple of days ago, published an op-ed entitled “The Torture Narrative Unravels.” It noted that the trial and conviction of PFC Lynndie England, who was sentenced as the “leash girl” for her activities there, “was relegated to the innards of newspapers.” That did not stop the Army—the Army’s proper response to a lack of discipline.

The op-ed goes on to note that “by one of the greatest leaps of logic ever seriously entertained in our national discourse, those memos—that were written by the Department of Justice in analyzing what the President’s proper powers were with regard to the detaining of enemy soldiers, who are not lawful combatants—that it was “one of the greatest leaps of logic ever seriously entertained in our national discourse” to say that memos as part of a discussion in the Department of Justice of the United States had anything to do with those soldiers in Iraq carrying out that abuse.

But that is what was alleged. It was during a campaign season, I understand, and it resulted in calls for the resignation of Secretary Rumsfeld and, I guess, to call for the removal of the President of the United States before the election.

We had one Senator, whose name is known all over the world, say: “Saddam’s torture chambers reopened under new management, U.S. management.”

I submit that was a slander on our troops and our soldiers who are in harm’s way because we sent them there. We asked them to go there to defend the legitimate national interests of our country. We put them at risk, and when we say things about them that are not true, to suggest to the world that we have systemic abuse in our military. Those charges place them at greater risk. It makes it harder for us to negotiate treaties with people who are suspicious of us. They believe these things.

When we have Members of the House and the Senate and political leaders in our country making irresponsible and unfounded charges against the military, that they are systematically abusing prisoners, it is wrong. It ought to stop, and I feel strongly about that.

Oh, we remember those comments, when all the pictures of the abuses were leaked and were made available. They said higher-ups were involved, it went all the way to the Secretary of Defense, and that these people were using interrogation techniques according to some memo written somewhere, and that it was all part of poor leadership and mismanagement, and our military discipline was not being maintained.

Remember those comments? It could not be just the lower-ranking soldiers; “why don’t you prosecute the higher ups?” We called Senators saying that time and again.

It just was not so. This is what the Wall Street Journal article said. They quote the judge when PFC Lynndie England was before the court. The judge asked her this: “You feel that by doing these things you were setting conditions for interrogations?”

Remember that allegation, that the abuses of these prisoners were carried out to set them up, to prime them to be interrogated by the Army interrogators or other interrogators, and that this was part of a systemic plan to soften up the prisoners so they could be interrogated? So the judge asked her under oath—she could use this as a defense:

You feel that by doing these things you were setting conditions for interrogations?

Her answer:

Yes, sir.

Or consider the testimony of SP Jeremy C. Sivits. He pled guilty, too, as I recall. This is what Sivits said about their behavior in that prison:

Our command would have slammed us. They would have kicked us out of the Army. They would have prosecuted—and they have an excuse or defense, don’t they say it? They say: It wasn’t my fault; they told me to do it; I was following orders.

Yes, sir.

I will say right now, every one of these Senators who has been complaining that this misbehavior in the prison was a direct result of some sort of approved interrogation techniques by the Secretary of Defense or the President or the Department of Justice, and they were overruling JAG officers somewhere in doing these things, is not so.

I was a prosecutor for quite a long time. I am telling you, when you have somebody being prosecuted and you are accusing them of a crime—I know the chairman has been a prosecutor—and they have an excuse or defense, don’t they say it? They say: It wasn’t my fault; they told me to do it; I was following orders. These people did not say that. They took their medicine, they were tried and convicted for criminality, and many are serving a very long sentence in jail for that misbehavior.

It embarrassed the soldiers. I had soldiers tell me: This is an embarrassment to us. We worked our hearts out to make Iraq a better place, and this was an embarrassment to us. It undermined our ability to do our job.

They were angry with these people who misbehaved. They were glad to see them prosecuted. It galls me that we have people suggesting this was the policy of our Army. It is not correct.

We had the complaints about Guantanam Bay, that there were systematic abuses going on down there. By the way, we have had over 25 hearings in this Senate and in the House dealing with prisoner abuse. We have had more hearings on this issue than we have had on how to win the war. In addition to that we have had 20 major or major reviews, assessments, inspections, and investigations. I mean major reviews. We had those generals and admirals who conducted the reviews before our committees. We interviewed them, and we made them explain their reports. Mr. President. 16,000 pages of documents have been delivered to the Congress, and 1,700 different interviews were conducted. Detentions, operations, enhancement, oversight—training—all these issues were brought up. There are 390 criminal investigations completed or ongoing.

People who are responsible for misbehavior are being held to account. If I thought our military was not responding, I would have said higher-ups were involved. I have seen law officers involved with a bad criminal, and that person runs and they chase him and have to wrestle him down. They are so pumped up sometimes they do more to that person who has been arrested than they should. Maybe they beat them. You have to contain the felon, but sometimes you go too far. I have seen abuse cases filed against them. It breaks your heart sometimes because you know the police officers lost control in tough conditions and went too far, but they have to be disciplined because we do not allow that in our country. There is no room for our soldiers. It is easy for us to talk about what it is like being out in combat, having your life at risk. Some of us might lose some of our discipline, too. We don’t excuse it. We understand it.

The activities at Guantanamo have been proven to involve only two or three incidents that have been indefensible, and action has been taken concerning those.

Also, we have had tremendous evidence of how good the conditions are there, how well they are being fed, their full rights to conduct their religious expression openly and freely, and the other things that have gone on.

Now we have a letter pop up from a Captain Fishback who has made allegations concerning the 82nd Airborne. I don’t know the full details of it. I will quote a small portion. We heard all these complaints that say that he has submitted proof of systemic abuses in the prisons. This is a New York Times article that the New York Times has made a full-time effort to try to root out and expose and publicize any misbehavior that has occurred there. They have gone too far, sometimes, in my opinion. But this is what the New York Times article says:

Captain Fishback said he had seen at least one interrogation where prisoners were being abused.

I don’t know what “abused” means. I am a former prosecutor. What does “abused” mean? Did they shake him? Did they respond to being spit on by prisoners, as many of our guards have been? Did they injure him in some way? I think if they were beaten, he would have said they were beaten. He didn’t say that. He used a far more general term, that they were “abused.”

Then he goes on to say that he was told about other ill-treatment of detainees by his sergeant. “Ill-treatment,” what is that? He didn’t say they were beaten, shot, killed, wounded, or tortured.

An investigation is being undertaken of these allegations. It is odd, though, when asked to name the sergeants and the people who conducted the activity so they could follow up and investigate and make sure people who did wrong were disciplined, Captain Fishback refused to disclose the names of the sergeants, one who left the Army and the other who has been reassigned because he did not want to reveal his identity.

It is hard for the Army to investigate if the guy making the complaint, telling Human Rights Watch and the New York Times all these points, will not allow that in our country.

I am dubious, for complex technical reasons, of the amendment that has been offered today and which we will vote on later tonight because I am not sure it makes good legal sense to have a law that is a moving law, it seems to me, that complies with the Army regulations. Army regulation is going to change, and you have a law and the law is going to change while the regulation changes? A statute is supposed to be permanent. As a lawyer, I am troubled by that.

I am not going to vote for the amendment for that reason and a number of other complex reasons.

I thank the Chair and yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is now honored to recognize the Senator from West Virginia.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senator from Illinois be recognized for 7 or 8 minutes, but as my esteemed colleague from West Virginia knows, I am happy to defer to him if we do not have enough time.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senator from Illinois be recognized for not to exceed 10 minutes and then the Senator from West Virginia be recognized for not to exceed 15 minutes, and then I will recognize following the Senator from West Virginia.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Illinois is recognized.

(The remarks of Mr. OBAMA pertaining to the introduction of S. 1821 are located in today’s RECORD under “Statements on Introduced Bills and Joint Resolutions.”)

The PRESIDING OFFICER. (Mr. THUNE). The Senator from Arizona is recognized but should be aware of the unanimous consent agreement.

Mr. McCAIN. I understand. I rise in an attempt to modify the unanimous consent agreement, with the agreement of the Senator from West Virginia.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The Senator is recognized.

Mr. McCAIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to be recognized for not longer than 4 minutes, to be immediately followed by the Senator from West Virginia.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. McCAIN. Mr. President, I have had to come to this Chamber many times and have had the privilege of doing so since 1987 when I entered this body. I never thought I would have to come to the Senate floor to defend the integrity of the Senate from the smear of a brave young American who has put his life on the line for his country defending the freedom of Afghan and Iraqi people.

The remarks of the Senator from Alabama concerning his allegations of abuse and his disparagement of his word and his conduct is unacceptable. This young man, Captain Fishback, served in Afghanistan and Iraq, is a member of the 82nd Airborne, was highly decorated, and had the courage to come forward because of his deep-seated dedication to this Nation and his desire to see that we do the right thing in the treatment of prisoners of war.

He says very eloquently:

The same is true for our soldiers. It is necessary action. I don’t intend to vote for the amendment for that reason and a number of other complex reasons.

I thank the Chair and yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from West Virginia is recognized.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, the Senate will vote within the next few minutes on a procedural motion relating to the amendment offered by Senator WARNER and Senator LEVIN. This amendment proposes to add much of the Defense authorization bill to the Defense appropriations bill. The Defense authorization bill is most complex legislation. The bill deals with a broad array of policy matters, ranging from providing for increased pay and benefits for our troops to changing laws relating to nuclear nonproliferation programs to authorizing military construction projects and so on.

The committee report that accompanies this bill is 494 pages in length. It is legislation that deserves close scrutiny, full and open debate, and an opportunity to freely amend. If this motion carries and the amendment is adopted, the Senate will only have a b老太太 debated of just a few hours on this very important bill.

I am a member of the Senate Armed Services Committee as well as the Appropriations Committee. I attended a portion of the markup of the Defense authorization bill which lasted several full days. Senator WARNER and Senator LEVIN conducted the markup in an exemplary bipartisan manner, and I commend them for their outstanding efforts. They are always fair and very considerate of others and always courteous to every other Senator.

The bill was reported from the committee on May 12 of this year, and it was brought to the floor on July 20. For reasons which have been widely discussed, the Defense authorization bill was pulled from the floor on July 27, after only five votes on amendments to the authorization bill within a matter of 2 or 3 days or perhaps a week, if necessary.
if the leadership had not pulled it from the floor.

This was a precipitous act, and because of this precipitous action most Senators have had no opportunity to offer amendments and no opportunity to review their votes on amendments. That is not the way the Senate is supposed to operate. That is not the way the Senate used to operate. We used to have full and open debates on this floor, take a week perhaps or 2 weeks on a bill this size. As I have stated, here is the history of this important legislation.

The matter before the Senate is whether to allow the Defense authorization bill to be added to the Defense appropriations bill as an amendment. What a way for the Senate to operate. What a way to conduct this important business of the people. This is not the way the Senate is supposed to conduct its business. This is a forum for free, open, and unlimited debate. This is how this country was built, so different from other upper bodies throughout the world today. This is why the Senate is such an incredibly powerful and important forum of free debate, open debate, unlimited debate, the full airing of legislative questions, time to answer questions, time to explain, explore, deliberate, and time to offer amendments. What a travesty.

The Senate is an institution sui generis, one of its kind in this country, a forum where free speech can be freely expressed, unlimited debate, freedom of debate, freedom of speech. So the Senate is an institution where freedom of speech, freedom of debate, and the freedom to amend reign.

Attaching such a massive bill, the Defense authorization bill, to another important bill, the Defense appropriations bill, will mean that the Senate will never have an opportunity to focus its undivided attention on the important matters of the Defense authorization bill. This is a travesty on freedom of debate. It is a travesty that strikes at the heart of the Senate: freedom of speech, freedom of debate, and freedom to amend reign.

Freedom of speech has its roots buried in antiquity. Henry the Fourth in 1407 said that the members of commons would have freedom of speech. They could say whatever was on their minds about the king, if necessary. Freedom of speech was in the English Declaration of Rights, February 3, 1689. And there it was, in the English Bill of Rights, placed there on December 6, 1689: Freedom of speech. The freedom of commons to speak on any subject, not to be questioned elsewhere in the English House of Commons, and that freedom of speech is enshrined in the American Constitution.

Here we are putting a limitation and we are self-imposing it—on ourselves. I am a member of both the Armed Services Committee and the Appropriations Committee, and I believe there is a great importance to allowing the Senate to consider the authorization bill and the appropriations bills separately. Debate about funding our military should take place on the appropriations bill and debate about defense policy should take place particularly on the authorization bill. They are both important bills, and they should be considered separately.

The Defense authorization bill should be brought to the floor of the Senate for debate and amendment as a free-standing bill, not as a massive rider to another, the appropriations bill. There ought to be an end run about some of the important matters addressed by the Defense authorization bill. Let there be amendments and let there be votes about such important matters as health care benefits for National Guardsmen and about the war in Iraq.

The immediate question before the Senate is procedural in nature, but the heart of the matter is whether the Senate will allow parliamentary maneuvers to conduct an end run around how important matters have been considered on the floor of the Senate.

If the Defense authorization bill is attached to the Defense Appropriations Committee bill, these important and controversial matters will not have a full hearing by the Senate. If the Defense authorization bill is attached, these important and controversial matters will not have a full hearing by the Senate. In 3 days instead, any changes that may be made to the Defense authorization bill will only occur behind closed doors in a large, unwieldy conference committee. That is not the right place for debate on the most important issues. These issues should first be debated on the floor of the Senate as they were on the floor of the House many months ago, but even more so because this is the forum for free speech—freedom of debate. The Senate should not be cutting corners but a bed-check vote anymore, and then Wednesday and Thursday. What a shame.

What is happening to the Senate? What is happening to this forum, this forum of freedom of debate, freedom of speech, freedom to amend—what is happening to this Senate, and why?

I am sorry that the Senate is going in this direction. What is happening? This institution has built its distinguished reputation, its distinguished character on the principle of freedom to debate—freedom of debate, freedom of speech, freedom to amend. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I may proceed for another 5 minutes?

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I would say to the Senator, we are scheduled to start at 7:30, and 6 minutes before that was equally divided between the Senator from Virginia and myself. So the Senator has probably about 3 minutes that he could proceed. Mr. BYRD. Yes, if I could have 3 more minutes.

Mr. STEVENS. Three more minutes to the Senator.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BYRD. But the Senate has begun to fall short on those important constitutional principles. We have just a handful of votes each week and then the rush is on to get out that door, out that door, out this door here—get out. Then rush to get up business on an artificial timetable.

So what has happened to the Senate? The American people need to know.
Why can’t the Senate take the time for important debates on the important issues before our Nation. Our troops are at war in Iraq and Afghanistan. They are doing an outstanding service for our country. The Senate ought to give its undivided attention to each of the bills that relate to our troops. If the members of the National Guard are able to put their lives on hold to go fight for our country overseas, then the Senate ought to be able to surely spare whatever time it takes to debate the Defense appropriations bill and the Defense authorization bill as freestanding measures. America deserves that. Our troops deserve that.

The Defense authorization bill ought to be brought up as a freestanding measure so that the Senate may work its will on that legislation. It should be open to debate and amendment. That is why I oppose the motion on the defense of Germaneness for the Warner-Levin amendment. The Senate should not cut corners in the legislative process.

Therefore, I shall vote no on the motion on the defense of Germaneness, and I urge my colleagues to join me in voting no.

Let’s stand up for freedom of speech in the House of Representatives, freedom to offer amendments. Let’s do right by the American people.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alaska.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I thought I had a unanimous consent to do a series of modifications in the managers’ package. I ask unanimous consent I be able to proceed now for 10 minutes, to take care of this managers’ package.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, I ask if I might be given, as a matter of personal privilege, 2 minutes to respond to the statement of Senator Mccain?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? Does the Senator from Alabama have the floor?

Mr. STEVENS. With the understanding that the Senator has 2 minutes, I then have 10 minutes, and then the 6 minutes starts before the 7:30 vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? Without objection, it is so ordered. The Senator from Alabama.

Mr. McCaIN. Mr. President, the Senator from Arizona has asked that I apologize for disparaging Captain Fishback in my earlier remarks. I do not believe I did so in any way. The Captain has a distinguished record in the military. Nobody questions that. I did note, however, that his allegations contained in the New York Times article said that he had: . . . seen at least one interrogation where prisoners were being abused and was told about a ill treatment of detainees by his sergeants.

In my statement I simply raised the question of what ‘abuse’ meant precisely, and whether, by implication, if this was a basis for a charge, as the newspapers were making and others were, that there was systematic abuse of prisoners—which I do not believe to be the case.

I did note that, when asked to name the individual sergeants who admitted they had participated in torturing or that had activities had occurred, he refused to give those names.

If something is in error about that—I simply quoted from the New York Times—I would be pleased to apologize.

But I think those in this Senate who have accused the up-and-down members of the chain of command of the U.S. Army, the U.S. Marines, and Department of Defense of promoting policies to abuse prisoners, they ought to think about whether they should apologize. I believe that accusation is false.

I thank the chairman and I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alaska.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I have managers’ package No. 3 before the Senate. This includes . . . a Grassley amendment No. 2002 for the multipurpose utility vehicle; a Voinovich amendment No. 1986 for the Millennium Gun System, as modified; a Graham amendment No. 2028 for moldable armor; a Feingold amendment No. 2008 for an Akaka amendment No. 1899, transition assistance programs, which contains a modification; a Cantwell amendment No. 2008 for infrared countermeasures improvement.

I ask the Chair lay those amendments before the Senate for consideration en bloc.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the Senate will proceed to the amendments en bloc.

Mr. STEVENS. I ask for their consideration, please.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate?

Mr. Mccain. Reserving the right to object, I will not object. I do not know if I have seen that amendment.

Mr. STEVENS. I thought the Senator had.

Mr. McCaIN. I do not object. I think we have already seen that. Thank you.

Mr. STEVENS. I ask unanimous consent that the amendments be agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, our military is first in the world, because of the quality and training of our personnel and because of the technological sophistication of our equipment and weaponry. A large portion of the best civilian scientific minds in the Defense Department are nearing retirement age.

I rise to thank my colleagues for their support and adoption of the amendment Senator COLLINS and I offered to ensure that the Department maintains the workforce that it needs to stay globally competitive and invests in crucial research and development efforts.

Our amendment includes $10 million to double the committee’s funding for the Department’s current SMART Scholars program, which is essentially an ROTC program for the agency’s civilian scientists. This represents a $17.5 million increase over the $2.5 million in funding level provided last year—the program’s first year in existence.

It increases by $30 million the Department’s funding of basic research in science and technology, to ensure that its investment in this field is maintained and our military technology remains the best in the world.

Our amendment provides sufficient funding for the full cost of college scholarships and graduate fellowships for approximately 100 science, technology, engineering, and math students. It increases basic research in the Army, Navy, Air Force, DARPA, and National Defense Education Program. It is supported by more than 60 of the most prestigious institutions of higher education in America.

Defense Department-sponsored research has resulted in stunningly sophisticated spy satellites, precision-guided munitions, stealth equipment, and advanced radar. The research has also generated new applications in the civilian economy. The best known example is the Internet, originally a DARPA project.

Advances in military technology often have their source in the work of civilian scientists in Department of Defense laboratories. Unfortunately, a large percentage of these scientists are nearing retirement. Today, nearly one in three DOD civilian science, technical, engineering, and mathematical employment is eligible to retire. In 7 years, 70 percent will be of retirement age.

Another distressing fact is that the number of new scientists being produced by our major universities at the doctoral level each year has declined by 4 percent over the last decade. Many of those who do graduate are ineligible to work on sensitive defense matters, since more than a third of all science and engineering doctorates degrees awarded at American universities go to foreign students.

It is unlikely that retiring DOD scientists will be replaced by current private industry employees. According to the National Defense Industrial Association, over 5,000 science and engineering positions are unfilled in private industry in defense-related fields.

The Nation confronts a major math and science challenge in elementary and secondary education and in higher education as well. We are tied with Latvia for 28th in the industrialized world today in math education, and that is far from good enough. We have fallen from 3rd in the world to 15th in producing scientists and engineers. Clearly, we need a new National Defense Education Act of the size and scope passed nearly 50 years ago.

At the very least, however, the legislation before us needs to do more than merely affirm our natural advantage. Last year, over 100 “highly rated” SMART Scholar applications were turned down because of insufficient funding. Our amendment has sufficient funds to support every one of those talented young people who want to pursue and serve in the military.

It also increases the investment in basic research in science and technology. Investments by DOD in science and technology through the 1980s helped the United States win the cold war. But funding for basic research in the physical sciences, math and engineering has not kept pace with research in other areas. Federal funding for life sciences has risen fourfold since the 1980s. Over the same period, appropriations for the physical sciences, engineering, and mathematics have remained essentially flat. Funding for basic research fell from fiscal year 1993 to fiscal year 2004 by more than 10 percent in real terms.

The Defense Science Board has recommended that funding for Science and Technology reach 3 percent of total defense spending, and the administration and Congress have adopted this goal in the past. The board also recommended that 2 percent of that amount be dedicated to basic research. We must do better, and our amendment makes progress on this issue.

I thank my colleagues for recognizing the importance of this amendment and for their support in its adoption. I hope that we will continue to see similar increases in these programs in the future.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alaska.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, let me begin by saying, very succinctly, a vote against this issue of germaneness is not a vote against defense. This is the Defense authorization bill. It is meant to carry the money to the Department of Defense and all of those involved in defense. It is not meant to carry the authorization. That is what rule XVI is all about. What we are looking at now is the Defense authorization bill being brought up as part of the whole. This is not just part A; B and C were left out.

This is not going to finish debate on the authorization bill. It will only take up a part of it. There are a whole series of amendments that have been offered to the authorization bill, and, as a matter of fact, Senator WARNER has offered now two packages of amendments that have been approved by himself and Senator LEVIN. But they have not been considered, as far as we are concerned, as amendments to the appropriations bill. But that is what they want. They want us to accept their portion of the bill plus their amendments to the bill without any consideration for anybody. And this is the way this 98 amendments, plus. We do that in the ordinary process. We do that every year on the authorization bill on the floor of the Senate and, as a matter of fact, Senator WARNER has offered now two packages of amendments that have been approved by himself and Senator LEVIN. But they have not been considered, as far as we are concerned, as amendments to the appropriations bill. But that is what they want. They want us to accept their portion of the bill plus their amendments to the bill without any consideration for anybody. And this is the way this 98 amendments, plus. We do that in the ordinary process. We do that every year on the authorization bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Michigan.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, the only way we are going to be able to consider the Defense authorization bill, apparently, this year is if we offer this as an amendment and then amend it. You heard from the Senator from Alaska earlier today that this would open up the bill, the appropriations bill, to amendments, that they would be unlimited. We heard the opposite argument from our dear friend from West Virginia that this would restrict amendments on the authorization. The only way we are going to be able to have debate on amendments on the authorization bill is if we consider the authorization bill now.

The leader, in his wisdom, pulled down the authorization bill when it was pending. As far as I know, there is not a decision on his part to bring that authorization bill back to the floor. How I dearly wish we could have a separate authorization bill. But we are not going to get it, except in this process. It is amendable. I assure my friend from West Virginia that the only way we are going to debate the authorization bill on the floor of the Senate and offer amendments is if we follow this process, because I fully believe, as I do with the Appropriations Committee, that the only way we can debate this bill in part. This is the Defense authorization bill to the appropriations bill and offered and then subject to amendment.

Often, we have taken whole bills at times and taken them to conference. Even that has been objected to by some. But normally we have taken omnibus bills. The authorizers are trying to make this an omnibus bill. There are also other bills sitting in the wings that haven’t been heard. What are we going to do with them if this process is to be followed?

But again, I want to note that a vote to find that this is germane—and I think I understand the question of what Senator WARNER said about what the Parliamentarians have done.

I make a parliamentary inquiry: Has the Parliamentarian ruled that this amendment is germane or just that it is subject to being found germane by the Senate?

Mr. STEVENS. What we have here is a situation where it is critical that we finish this bill this week. Let me tell you why.

This bill is the supplemental appropriations bill for Defense for activities in Iraq and Afghanistan and the war on terrorism that we are in at this resolution period. There is no money in the continuing resolution for that part. I hope the Senate will understand that this authorization bill has no place in this bill as a bill to become amended through this process of the Senate in the future.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority leader.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I ask to speak on leader time.

We will in a very few minutes be coming to a vote on the question of germaneness on the Warner amendment. I want to take a few minutes to comment on two issues. One is what we have been talking about over the last 30 or 45 minutes; that is, the Defense authorization bill. And secondly, I want to make a quick comment on the germaneness issue.

We heard the distinguished Senator from West Virginia argue very strongly to have a freestanding Defense authorization bill come to the floor, and that is the most appropriate way to handle that bill. I agree to that. In fact, we have tried to do that in the past. We spent about 4 days on the floor, and at that time, because we had well over 100 amendments, took it off the floor to be addressed at some point in the future.

We heard from the Senator from Michigan saying the only way that we believe we can deal with this is by offering it as an amendment, which has been done to the appropriations bill. I want to make it very clear I disagree with that.

First, Defense appropriations: I think the appropriate way of dealing with this very important bill is to have it as a freestanding piece of legislation. As I mentioned, we have attempted to do that in the past, and I have been trying very hard to do that over the last couple of weeks. We had an offer on the floor that both the Democratic leadership and the chairman and ranking member are well aware of, as most Members in our caucus are; that is, we would bring the Defense authorization bill to the floor as a freestanding bill, with 12 amendments to either side with second-degree amendments allowed under a time agreement.

Those amendments we have asked to be related or within the jurisdiction of those particular amendments is what we have been working with. We have been waiting and working all day. We have for the last about 8 or 9 days been waiting for a response from the other side of the aisle. I understand the other side of the aisle cannot agree with that unanimous request. I do propound it, in large part, to let all of our colleagues know we have been working on it, and we feel strongly there is a way to bring this Defense authorization bill up freestanding with appropriate amendments.

With that, I will, at this point in time, propound that unanimous consent to make this clear. I ask consent, when the Senate commences the consideration of its deliberations, to be divided to the extent of the time of the consideration of the Senate on S. 1042, the Defense authorization bill, it be considered under the following limitations. All of the pending amendments be withdrawn and the bill be considered as follows: The only first-degree amendments in order be 12 amendments offered, the leaders or their designees; provided further that the amendments be within the jurisdiction of the Committee on Armed Services and that these amendments be subject to second degrees, which are to be relevant to the amendment to which they have offered; provided further that the first-degree amendments be limited to 1 hour of debate equally divided in the usual form, with any second degrees limited to 30 minutes. Post-monthly available at the conclusion of the previous amendment, then the amendment no longer be in order.

Finally, I ask consent, at the expiration of that time and the disposition of the amendments, the bill be read the third time and the Senate proceed to a vote on the passage of the bill as amended, if amended, with no intervening action or debate.

Mr. REID. Of course, I am going to object, but I want to use some of my leader time to talk about the travesty before the Senate at this time.

The Committee on Armed Services completed their work on this bill around the 1st of May, give or take a day or two. Post-monthly, we have been trying to get this bill to the floor. For Members to cry crocodile tears that this might take an extra day or 2 or 3 or 4 or 5, we need only look at the history of the Senate.

I heard the remarks of the Senator from West Virginia. I agree with him. Can anyone imagine the Senate not having time to do the Defense authorization bill? We have men and women, as we speak, being shot at driving down roads and market streets in Iraq not knowing if they will make it home because of a roadside bomb—home to their billet for that evening.

We have almost 2,000 men and women who have been killed in Iraq. We have had 15 to 20,000 wounded. Shouldn’t we take a little time to talk about the work done by the duly constituted committee of the Senate, the Committee on Armed Services, take a look at what we need to do on a policy basis?

I am a proud member of the Committee on Appropriations. I have been on this committee since the day I got here. I am proud of it. It is the best committee in the Senate. But the Senate Committee on Appropriations does not run everything around here. Other committees work as hard as we do and have the right to have the matters they work on in committee heard.

We have devoted basically one day to this bill. It was pulled because of gun liability.

Now, in years past, we have worked our way through this. It has not been easy, but we have done it. The 10-year average: in 1997, we averaged 133 amendments, and we have averaged 14 rollcalls per bill. Why? Because we have had the same managers for a long time. They know how to work through these amendments. There is some give-and-take and some unhappy people, but we respect those two men. We work our way through it. That is the way it has been for 10 years.

The average for hours of debate on this bill is 47½ hours. We have spent as many as 110 hours. We can do that? Last year. We spent 88 hours on this bill last year. We had 196 amendments.

The point I make is that the real issue here—my two dear friends, the senior Senator from Virginia and the junior Senator from Mich., to think it is defense matters. It is not. It is Katrina. That is what it is about. We want to have a vote on an independent bipartisan commission to figure out what went wrong down in the gulf and in Katrina. But we cannot have that in a bill the majority leader is not willing to let pass. The only way we can do it is have a bill of substance, not one on an appropriations bill, so we can offer the amendment.

So this is a system that works just fine. The Senate was not set up to be convenient. It was not set up to have short periods of time to work. It was set up to do the business of this country. It has worked pretty well for more than 200 years.

One of the things we have traditionally done in time of war or peace is the Defense authorization bill. So here it is, I have been to this floor I don’t know how many times, but many, many times since last May, saying, let’s do a defense authorization bill. I can remember talking about one of my trips to the hospital and seeing the people in bed and how I felt I owed them something to come here and ask for those facilities. For they have views as to what is good and bad in Iraq. I have been here many times. I have added up weeks with the ranking member trying to get some way to the floor. And here at this time of night, as we are winding things down, we get a unanimous consent request, the every-one knows is going to be objected to.

The Senator from West Virginia pretty well knows how to express himself. He may come from coal-mining families. He may have been orphaned. But he knows how to talk. He explained in very good detail why we cannot have the Senate run similar to the House of Representatives.

I want the record to reflect that the Defense authorization bill should have been debated a long time ago. We are ready to debate it any time. We are willing to enter into time agreements on amendments, but to come here tonight and say we are going to do 12 amendments, that is the perfect what I should have done is not object and have that side of the aisle watch them go to the ceiling. They would not like it either.

I am standing here and saying, I not only object, I object 1,000 times until we get back to being Senators and doing things the way we have done.

The number of amendments, 196 last year. We spent 16 days on it; in 2003, 5 days, 75 amendments; back in 1997, 8 days, 120 amendments, 44 hours. Couldn’t we spend a little bit of time on this bill?

The answer is, no, we are going to do the appropriations bill.

I know appropriations. As I have said, I have been on the committee for a long time. But as much as I love my committee assignment—it is the only committee I have anymore; I gave them all up with this job, but I love the Committee on Appropriations. I repeat, the other committees that are as important as the Committee on Appropriations. The problem is, we have strict rules of how appropriations bills are handled, for obvious reasons.

I want the record to reflect I do my best, and sometimes that is not good enough, to be a partner with my friend, the majority leader. I don’t want this statement I make to reflect on him personally. I am talking about the process that comes about as a result of him being a leader. I don’t like the process. I think we could have done it better. I think we should have done this bill. I could be wrong, but I say to my chair and my distinguished friend, I think the only amendment we have this is one dealing with Boy Scouts—four others—and that was offered by the distinguished majority leader. I know it is well-intentioned, but I don’t think it had much to do with the Defense authorization bill.

Let’s let the record reflect I object. I object. I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority leader.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, the objection we heard was to a unanimous consent request.

Mr. REID. I have a unanimous consent request that I should have made, that we resume consideration of Defense authorization upon disposition of the Defense appropriations bill.

Mr. FRIST. I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The objection is heard.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, the unanimous consent I propounded that was objected to by the other side is exactly what we have been working on the last couple of weeks. It did say we would have a freestanding bill to bring a very important bill to the floor. We have spent several days, I believe 4 days, on that bill in the past. I had 24 amendments, 12 to either side, plus second-degree amendments, of which there is no limit for. But it was objected to.

We will continue to work in that regard because I believe at some point we will be able to address that bill. What we were trying to do, hopefully in a couple of minutes, is the germaneness of the Warner amendment, the authorization bill. The real challenge is if this bill is ruled germane, it will bog down what we are trying to do. There can be an endless number of amendments that are attached if it is germane; 130 have been filed. There would be unlimited second-degree amendments that could be applied toward the Warner amendment if that is found to be germane.

The appropriate way to deal with the Warner amendment is as a freestanding authorization bill. I agree with Senator WARNER. We need to do that, and we will work toward that in the future. I am disappointed the other side will not allow us to do it as a freestanding bill. Institutionally, if we start taking the huge authorization bills and start dumping them into the appropriations bill, the appropriations process, which is already difficult enough, is going do come to a grinding halt.

Therefore, I ask my colleagues to vote that the Warner amendment be not germane, joining the chairman and the ranking Member of the bill as well as Senator BYRD, that this is not germane, and if it is not germane, it will allow us to continue on with the Defense appropriations bill in a disciplined way to complete, hopefully, by the end of Friday.

Mr. WARNER. Have the yeas and nays been ordered?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. They have not.

Mr. WARNER. I ask for the yeas and nays.

Mr. THUNE. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The yeas were ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair, under Senate rule XVI, now submits to the Senate the question raised by the Senator from Virginia, Mr. WARNER: Namely, is his amendment No. 1935 germane or relevant to any legislative language already in the House-passed bill?

The yeas and nays have been ordered.

The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. DURBIN. I announce that the Senator from New Jersey (Mr. CORZINE) is necessarily absent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. COLEMAN). Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

NOT VOTING—1

Corzine

The PRESIDING OFFICIAL. On this vote, the yeas are 49, the nays are 50. The Senate has voted the amendment not germane, and it falls for that reason.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. DOMENICI. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 1933

The PRESIDING OFFICIAL. There are now 6 minutes evenly divided on the vote with respect to the Bayh amendment. Who yields time?

Mr. STEVENS. What is the pending business?

The PRESIDING OFFICIAL. Amendment No. 1933 offered by the Senator from Indiana. There will be 6 minutes evenly divided.

The Senator from Alaska.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I make a point of order under section 302(f) of the Congressional Budget Act that the amendment pending on entry of the subcommittee’s 302(b) allocation under the fiscal year 2006 concurrent resolution on the budget.

The PRESIDING OFFICIAL. The Senator from Indiana.

Mr. BAYH. Mr. President, pursuant to section 904 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974, I move to waive the applicable sections of that act for purpose of the pending amendment, and I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICIAL. Is there a sufficient second?

There appears to be a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, under the previous order, this is a 10-minute vote; is that correct?

The PRESIDING OFFICIAL. The Senator is correct.

The Senator from Indiana.

Mr. BAYH. Mr. President, I thank our colleague, Senator KENNEDY, for his steadfast support of this amendment. I thank our colleague, Senator STEVENS, both for his courtesy at this moment and also because while we may have a substantive disagreement about this amendment, I know his heart is in the right place.

The amendment ensures that our troops in Iraq and Afghanistan will have the equipment they need to accomplish their mission while keeping them out of harm’s way. In deciding how to vote, I ask my colleagues to consider three things. First, the lesson of Katrina and regrettably the lesson of Iraq is that our Nation, when lives are at stake, must always plan for the worst, even as we hope for the best. Unfortunately, this has not happened in Iraq. On the contrary, our Armed Forces have consistently underestimated the need for armored vehicles in that theater of war. Nine times they have underestimated the need. They are no longer entitled to the benefit of the doubt. Regrettably, Walter Reed Army Hospital and other military hospitals are filled with the consequences of these errors. Let us not make that mistake again.

I ask my colleagues to recall the image of that brave soldier who stood up in a conversation with our Secretary of Defense, complaining about what he referred to as “hillbilly” armor, talking about our brave troops having to search through garbage dumps for the ability to defend themselves from hostile fire. We owe them better than that. Better than that is exactly what this amendment will provide. I ask for Senators’ favorable consideration.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I am delighted to join my colleague once again, Senator BAYH, in sponsoring this amendment, No. 1933, which increases funding for the procurement of armored Tactical Wheeled Vehicles for the Army.

Together, Senator BAYH and I have worked very hard together to make sure our soldiers have what they need. In April of this year, the Senate added $150 million for additional armored vehicles in the Iraq Supplemental.

Now we want to work together to keep our troops in the field properly equipped and also make sure they have the proper equipment on hand at home to train with prior to going overseas. The money in this amendment will ensure that the Army’s pre-positioned stocks are reconstituted after over 2% years at war.

There are also funds for the Joint Readiness Training Center at Fort Polk, LA. The Joint Readiness Training Center provides advance level joint training for the Army’s Active and Reserve Component, Air Force and Navy forces. The training they receive simulates what they will face when deployed to Iraq and Afghanistan.

This issue has been divisive for far too long. All of us support our troops. We obviously want to do all we can to see that they have proper equipment.
The GAO report specifically states that Pentagon decision-makers set the rate at which both up-armored Humvees and armor kits would be produced, and did not tell Congress about the total available production capacity. GAO was unable to determine what criteria were used to set the rate of production. In both cases, additional production capacity was available, particularly for the kits.

The delay was unconscionable. Without this amendment, the production rate of Up-armored humvees could drop off again later this year. We need to guarantee that we are doing everything possible to get the protection to our troops as soon as possible. We owe it to them, to their families here at home and to the American people. We need to make sure our troops overseas have the best equipment available to protect them in combat. They also need to have the same equipment to train with at the Joint Readiness Center and the money in this amendment accomplishes that.

The amendment contributes significantly to this goal, and I urge my colleagues to support it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alaska.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, on a recent trip to Iraq, we saw the up-armoring taking place in country. They are doing it now in specially created circumstances there. But beyond that, we have funded the capacity of the plants in the United States to produce up-armor. We have done everything we can. If we can find additional capacity, we have another supplemental coming in the spring, we will join the Senate in urging more money. But we have used every dollar we can for up-armoring in the plants and in facilities. You should see the Oshkosh plant over there. They are up-armoring trucks and all sorts of vehicles now in country.

I urge the Senate to understand this amendment is duplicative. We already provided the maximum amount before us that we can possibly spend with the existing capacity of the system now, $240 million for humvees, $150 million for the Army tactical wheeled vehicle. In addition to that, we are sending strikers now. We visited strikers in the Mosul area. They are enormous systems, they are already armored. They don’t have to be up-armored. We need more strikers, more armored vehicles, but we are doing the best we can. And we are using every bit of capacity the system has. This amendment will be duplicative of that funding.

I oppose the Senator’s amendment despite my admiration for him and insistence that we do the maximum possible in arming our vehicles.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from West Virginia.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that my name be added as a co-sponsor of the amendment offered by Senator BAYH.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BYRD. I thank my colleague.

Mr. BAYH. I thank my colleague from West Virginia.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is all time yielded back?

Mr. STEVENS. I yield back my time.

Mr. BAYH. I yield back my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion to waive the Budget Act with respect to amendment No. 1933.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, have the yeas and nays been ordered?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. They have been ordered. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk called the roll.

NOT VOTING—1

Corzine

The PRESIDING OFFICER. On this vote, the yeas are 56, the nays are 43. Three-fifths of the Senators duly chosen and sworn not having voted in the affirmative, the motion is rejected. The point of order is sustained and the amendment falls.

Mr. BAYH. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. STEVENS. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alaska.
Mr. STEVENS. What is now the pending business?

AMENDMENT NO. 1977

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There are now 6 minutes evenly divided before a vote with respect to the McCain amendment No. 1977. Who speaks for the amendment?

The Senator from Arizona.

Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, war is an awful enterprise and I know that. I do not think I am naive about how severe are the consequences of war and how terrible are the things that must be done to wage it successfully. It is a grim, big business, and no matter how noble the cause for which it is fought, no matter how valued their service, many veterans spend much of their subsequent lives trying to forget not only what was done to them and their comrades but some of what had to be done by their hand to prevail.

I do not mourn the loss of any terrorist’s life, nor do I care if in the course of serving their noble cause they suffered great harm. They have pledged their lives to the intentional destruction of innocent lives, and they have earned their terrible punishment in this life and the next.

What I do regret is what I do mourn, and what I do care very much about is what we lose, what we, the American service man and woman, and the great nation they defend at the risk of their lives, when by official policy or by official who allows, confuse or encourage our soldiers to forget that the best sense of ourselves, that which is our greatest strength, that we are different and better than our enemies, that we fight for an idea, not a tribe, not a land, not a king, not a twisted interpretation of an ancient religion but for an idea that all men are created equal and endowed by their Creator with inalienable rights.

I have been asked where did the brave men I was privileged to serve with in Vietnam draw the strength to withstand the violence, chaos, and heartache of war, through deprivation and cruelty and loss, they are always Americans, and different, better, and stronger than those who would destroy us. God bless them as He has blessed us with their service.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

The majority leader.

Mr. Frist. Mr. President, I rise to speak on leader time. I thank Senator McCain for his efforts on this very important issue that we have been debating, talking about, and focusing upon for a long period of time. It is an important matter that affects both our American reputation abroad and the conduct of our military personnel in this global war on terrorism.

It is important to state that the performance of American servicemen and women in Afghanistan and elsewhere around the globe has been outstanding, has been inspiring, and truly representative of the best our Nation has to offer. This amendment strives to establish uniform standards for the interrogation of prisoners and detainees as a means for helping ensure our service men and women are well trained, well briefed, knowledgeable of their legal, professional, and moral duties and obligations. Therefore, I fully support the purpose and intent of this amendment, and although I understand it may require some fine-tuning to prevent any unintended consequences, I do intend to vote for it with that in mind.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CHAFEE). The Senator from Alaska.

Mr. STEVENS. I am compelled to speak in opposition to this amendment, although I wholeheartedly agree with what the Senator from Arizona has said. It was a marvelous statement made by a man who has every reason to say what he said. I support what the majority leader has said, but there is a classified annex to the Army Field Manual that is not spelled out in this amendment, and there are people who are not in uniform who may not even be citizens of the United States who represent us in very strange and dangerous places, whose lives may be put in jeopardy by the process that is spelled out in part of this amendment. I vote for them.

I honor all service men and women, and I really believe they should absolutely follow the lifestyle of the Senator from Arizona, as well as his statement tonight. But as the leader has said, there are some changes that have to be made if we are to be faithful to those people who live in the classified world and will be covered by the classified annex that, if one reads the amendment, is not covered here.

I have to do my best to make sure that when we get to conference people understand that there is that problem. Therefore, I shall oppose the amendment and try to straighten it out in conference. I know it would pass.

I yield back the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. All time is yielded back. The yeas and nays have been ordered. The question is on agreement to amendment No. 1977.

NOT VOTING—1

Corzine

The amendment (No. 1977) was agreed to.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time is evenly divided before a vote with respect to amendment No. 1978.

The Senator from Alaska.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, if I could have a minute, I want to warn the Senate that we may be here all night. We may have to have our cloture vote after adjournment at about 11:55. We would vote about 12:55 or 1:05 on cloture. Because if we are to have 30 hours and by the time some people want to leave on Friday, it has to start at that time or else we have to get unanimous consent to shorten the time. If we vote tomorrow morning at 10, we will be here until 6 o’clock or 7 o’clock Friday afternoon. Just a warning—not yet. We are still trying to work it out.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time on the amendment? The Senator from Arizona controls the time and the Senator from Alaska controls the opposition.

Mr. McCAIN. Mr. President, this amendment would prohibit, for 1 year, the transfer of $23 million in cash to the Government of Uzbekistan.

Just this year, the government of President Islam Karimov has taken a number of actions so alarming, that one would think this body would be considering sanctions, not how to transfer millions of taxpayer dollars to this government.

In May, the government massacred up to 1,000 people, mostly unarmed men, women, and children protesting the government’s corruption, lack of opportunity, and continued oppression. The government has rejected all calls for an independent international inquiry and blamed a foreign conspiracy for the protest. It even placed blame on the United States for the events, saying that rebels received money from the U.S. embassy in Tashkent.

The Uzbek government launched a campaign of anti-American propaganda after its massacre, staging rallies to denounce the United States. President Karimov suggested that the U.S. was behind not just the event in Andijan but also served as the “scriptwriters and directors” of the “colored revolutions” in other countries.

In July, Karimov’s government announced that the U.S. will no longer have access to the K2 base in Uzbekistan, and evicted all U.S. troops from the country. In addition, his government has terminated counterterrorism cooperation with the United States.

This week the EU announced that it will impose sanctions against Uzbekistan. But the Pentagon wants to send $23 million to pay past bills. Paying our bills is important. But more important is America standing up for itself; avoiding the misimpression that we overlook massacres; and avoiding cash transfers to a dictator just months after he permanently evicts American soldiers from his country.

We should postpone the cash payment to the Government of Uzbekistan for 1 year, at which point the Congress can decide whether to renew the prohibition or make the payment. If it had not been authorization, I would have said until a complete and thorough investigation of the massacre was conducted.

Mr. STEVENS. May I ask the Senator from Arizona, would he allow us to adopt this by voice vote?

Mr. McCAIN. I would be pleased. Mr. STEVENS. I ask the Senate proceed to consider this by voice vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to expediting the yeas and nays?

Without objection, the yeas and nays are expeditious. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 1978) was agreed to.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. CRAIG. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. STEVENS. What is the pending business.
people. Minorities, the elderly, and the disabled, and many others are forced to make painful choices between heating their homes and paying for food, healthcare, and rent. The good news is that a highly successful Federal program is available to prevent the poorest of poor from making impossible tradeoffs. LIHEAP grants money to low-income families who can’t afford the steep cost of energy. The number of American households receiving LIHEAP assistance has increased from over 4 million in 2002 to 5 million this year, the highest level in 10 years.

Ninety-four percent of LIHEAP recipients have at least one member who is elderly, disabled, or a child under age of 18, or is a single parent with a young child. Seventy-seven percent of LIHEAP recipients report an annual income at or below $20,000 and 61 percent of recipients have annual incomes at or below the Federal poverty line.

The bad news is that these fortunate recipients comprise only 18 percent of the eligible population. In Massachusetts, the participation rate is 22 percent, which is still unacceptably low. Last year in Worcester, the city’s Community Action Council provided fuel assistance to 9,660 households, but it processed applications for almost 11,000 households before the funds ran out. Many of the unserved households were made up of the working poor, the elderly, the disabled, and children.

In Franklin and Hampshire counties in Massachusetts over 6,000 LIHEAP applications were processed. The Franklin Community Action Corporation reported that emergency applications and payment requests increased this past winter. They told me that this was by far their most stressful year.

Across the United States, families are suffering from high energy prices. There are far too many stories of families unable to pay their electric bill. These are the LIHEAP, but didn’t because the money just wasn’t there. Here are just a few examples.

A single father just lost his job on June 1. He has three children. Their electric bill was $117.33, but he is unable to pay it because he isn’t receiving unemployment compensation, or any other income. He is looking for work every day. Even if he is hired soon, his electricity may be turned off before he gets his first paycheck.

A grandmother taking care of three grandkids, ages 14, 11, 5 had an electric bill for $195. Her monthly income is $604. The house is totally electric, so the bills will probably be higher. The grandmother also has extra medical expenses, but she too was turned away.

It is wrong to let people like this suffer. So why does the Republican leadership in Congress respond? By cutting or freezing funds for essential low income programs.

Hurricanes Katrina and Rita upended the lives of millions of citizens in the Gulf region, and the administration was right to release emergency energy funds for the areas that were devastated. But, their response to the looming energy crisis is far less. The administration and the House of Representatives closed their eyes to the needs of the poor. The House sent the Senate a continuing resolution which froze funding for the LIHEAP program. The current funding obviously isn’t enough. Nineteen percent of current LIHEAP recipients say they keep their home at a temperature they feel is unsafe or unhealthy. Eight percent of recipients report that their electricity or gas was shut off in the past year for nonpayment.

The continuing resolution also cut the Community Services Block Grant by 50 percent. These funds are used by many community action agencies to administer the LIHEAP program. According to ABCD, a community action agency in Massachusetts, since the outreach and application process for LIHEAP is handled through the ABCD neighborhood network, funding cuts will mean that access to this critical survival resource will shrink by more than 50 percent. Up to 10,500 households—out of a current total of 15,000 recipients—may not get their benefits.

Those in Congress who care about this issue sent an urgent request to the President to increase the funds, but our request has gone unanswered. In a news conference earlier this week, a reporter asked Energy Secretary Bodman if the administration plans to ask Congress for more funds for assistance to low-income families and seniors. Secretary Bodman replied, “At least at this point in time, that’s not on the agenda. The administration may not think the needs of the poor deserve to be on their agenda, but the States do. They are trying to do their part. In Massachusetts, the State legislators want to add $20 million in State funds to LIHEAP, to supplement the Federal funds. Governors are stepping forward to acknowledge the problem. A bipartisan group of 28 Governors, led by Jennifer Granholm of Michigan, and Mitt Romney of Massachusetts, recently sent a letter to Congress urging additional emergency funds for LIHEAP. They know the importance of this issue first hand, and so should we.

The Congress needs to fund for the millions of Americans struggling to make ends meet. We have the ability to tell the elderly, and the disabled, and many others that we have heard them, and that we won’t leave them shivering in the cold this winter. LIHEAP provides a critical service to desperate families who have nowhere else to turn for basic energy help, and LIHEAP is indispensable in filling that need. I strongly support this amendment to increase emergency funds. We can’t shortchange LIHEAP and all the people who need our help the most. I urge my colleagues to support this amendment.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, because of the amendments that were made, the time agreement, as I understand it, now we will be faced with two votes. Does the Senator wish to have two votes on this amendment?

Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, I am happy to change the order to serve the purposes of the Senate.

Pursuant to section 402 of H. Con. Res. 95, which is the concurrent resolution on the budget, I move to waive section 402 for the purposes of the pending amendment, and I ask for the yeas and nays.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that we vitiolate the vote to table and that we proceed on the motion to waive the point of order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. STEVENS. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second? There is a sufficient second.

The question is on agreeing to the motion. The yeas and nays have been ordered. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. DURBIN. I announce that the Senator from New Jersey (Mr. CORZINE) is necessarily absent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

The yeas and nays resulted—yeas 50, nays 49, as follows:

(Rollcall Vote No. 250 Leg.)

The PRESIDING OFFICER. On this question, the yeas are 50, the nays are 49. Three-fifths of the Senators duly chosen and sworn not having voted in the affirmative, the motions is rejected. The point of order is sustained.

Mr. STEVENS. I move to reconsider the vote.
Mr. HATCH. I move to lay that motion on the table. The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. FRIST. I ask unanimous consent, notwithstanding rule XXII, the vote on the motion to invoke cloture occurs following the last scheduled vote in this sequence, with the mandatory quorum waived.

Mr. REID. Reserving the right to object, I want the record spread with my appreciation to the Senator from Louisiana for allowing the Senate to move forward. We were going to work through the night and early in the morning to come up with something that would help satisfy their tremendous needs. I appreciate their cooperation so we do not have to be here at 1 o’clock in the morning.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. FRIST. For the information of our colleagues, this means we will vote on the Stabenow amendment next. Immediately following that, we will go to the cloture vote. Following that, there will be no more rollcall votes tonight.

Throughout tomorrow we will have plenty of opportunity for discussion, for debate. We will be voting throughout tomorrow and tonight. There will be no more rollcall votes after the Stabenow vote and cloture vote tonight which will immediately follow the Stabenow vote.

Mr. STEVENS. I announce we will have a managers’ package. We will consider amendments that might be taken by voice vote after this last scheduled vote.

I have already made the point of order against the Stabenow amendment. To be sure the record is clear, I make the point of order against the Kerry amendment and I ask it be agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The emergency designation has been stricken from the amendment.

Mr. STEVENS. Is the record clear I made the point of order on the Stabenow amendment?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair would inform the Senator an emergency point of order has been stricken from—we are still on the Kerry amendment.

Mr. STEVENS. And I asked it be dropped now.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The point of order is sustained under the Budget Act.

AMENDMENT NO. 1987

Mr. STEVENS. Now, is the record clear about my making a point of order to the Stabenow amendment? If not, I renew the point of order under 302(c) of the Congressional Budget Act. The amendment requires spending in excess of the committee’s 302(b) allocation for the fiscal year concurrent resolution of the Budget, and I ask for the yeas and nays.

Ms. STabenow. Pursuant to section 904 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974, I move to waive the applicable sections of that act for the purpose of the pending amendment, and I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second. The yeas and nays were ordered.

Ms. STABENOW. Mr. President, I ask colleagues to support the Stabenow-Johnson-Thune amendment that guarantees health care for our veterans for health care. It takes it out of the annual appropriations process where every year we are wrestling with whether the funding is available. This year alone already we have had one emergency designation of $1.5 billion because the veterans health care budget was underfunded this year. We know there are concerns about next year.

This amendment would do two things: first, it provides an annual discretionary amount that would be locked in for future years at the 2005 funding level. Then in the future, the VA would receive a sum of mandatory funding that would be adjusted year to year based on changes in demand from the VA health care system as well as rate of inflation.

This is incredibly important. We should not be arbitrarily picking numbers in terms of funding veterans health care. It should be based on the brave men and women who have served who come home and put on a veteran’s cap. We have more and more coming home from Afghanistan and Iraq every day. Each and every one of them has been provided health care. The way to guarantee we keep our promise is to pass this amendment.

I urge agreement.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, our veterans deserve a grateful nation can give them. Over the last 6 years we have increased the Veterans budget by over $3 billion a year. Although the Senator from Michigan is right about the dustup this year, we still did it because America is grateful for those who serve in harm’s way.

While all veterans are entitled, should we start a new entitlement program, one that is now out of control, that we cannot monitor on a yearly basis as we do through the appropriating process and the authorizing process? The Senator is proposing a new entitlement program. But she is also saying something else. She is not saying those who served is the baseline of the future. She is saying those who are entitled. And there is a very real difference between those who are entitled and eligible versus those who seek service because of need. We pay for those who seek service based on their eligibility. We do not create a new entitlement program.

I ask yourselves, do you want to create a new entitlement program or do you want to do what we are doing now, providing the necessary resources on an annual basis to meet the needs of America’s veterans?

I ask Members to vote no. Do not waive the Budget Act. Do not create a new entitlement program and basically take it out of the hands of the Congress and put it in the hands of the VA. That is not what I think our veterans would want us to do.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion to waive the Budget Act. The yeas and nays have been ordered. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll. Mr. DURBIN. I announce that the Senator from New Jersey (Mr. CORZINE) is necessarily absent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 48, nays 51, as follows:

(3) to be an unlawful enemy combatant.

(b) MODIFICATION OF PROCEDURES.—The President shall submit to Congress any modifications to the procedures submitted under subsection (a) no less than 30 days before the date on which such modifications go into effect.

(c) MODIFICATION OF PROCEDURES.—The President shall submit to Congress any modifications to the procedures submitted under subsection (a) no less than 30 days before the date on which such modifications go into effect.

(d) PROVIDING FOR PAY AND ALLOWANCES TO DETAINERS.—The Secretary of the Air Force may, subject to the terms and conditions of law, lawfully in effect, pay and allow any such member returning from such operation and day of national celebration, if established by Presidential proclamation, for service as a member of the Armed Forces of the United States, a veteran of any such operation, a member of the Reserve component under the Secretary, or a member of the National Guard and Reserve service members as well.

Supplemental Security Income is a Federal income supplement program, funded by tax revenues, designed to provide cash to meet basic needs for elderly, blind, and disabled people.

Under current law, section 1612(a) of the Social Security Act, only military basic pay is counted as earned income for the purposes of determining SSI eligibility. This benefit amount is limited to a certain amount. Special pay and allowances are counted as earned income. As a result, a disabled child or spouse of a service member can lose SSI eligibility or have a benefit reduction due to the way military compensation is currently counted.

Because a significant portion of a service member’s compensation includes special pay and allowances, Military compensation generally results in more countable income for SSI purposes than comparable wages earned by a civilian. Accordingly, a child or spouse of a service member could be ineligible for SSI while the child or spouse of a civilian worker could be eligible for SSI based on comparable gross wages.

The problem is particularly acute when a member of the National Guard or Reserves is called to active duty and begins full military pay, including special pay and allowances. In some cases, the military pay alone is sufficient to cause a reduction of SSI benefits or a loss of eligibility for the disabled dependent. This means that at the critical point when the service member is called away from his or her family in the service of our country, SSI benefits may be reduced or stopped.

In consideration of the special hardships facing military families in a time of war, considering our financial security for these families, I have offered an amendment that proposes a statutory exclusion for all types of special pay and allowances received by service members serving on active duty or in the reserves. At a time when military service members and their families are making such a huge sacrifice for our country, it is vital that this step be taken to protect SSI eligibility for these families.

Under proposed statutory change, only basic pay, earned income, would be used to determine SSI eligibility for a disabled child or spouse of the service member. All compensation provided by special pay and allowances, including the basic allowance for housing, BAH, would be excluded. Excluding all special pay and allowances would eliminate the disadvantageous income counting that results from treating a substantial portion of military compensation as earned income.

Mr. STEVENS. I agree with the Senator from Nebraska. The provisions of the Social Security Act need to be addressed in order to ensure Supplemental Security Income eligibility and benefits are not inadvertently taken away from those in the armed services when they need them most.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, for the information of Senators, we will resume consideration of this bill tomorrow morning. The opening of the Senate at 9:30 a.m. as soon as possible. It will be my intention to ask that any votes that are to be taken on this bill be stacked until approximately noon or 12:30 in order that the committees may meet in the morning. There has been a specific request for that to happen. It is my understanding that there will be a request later that the time consumed for cloture be consumed during the period of temporary recess this evening on into tomorrow morning; is that the understanding proposed?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That unanimous consent request has not yet been propounded or agreed to.

Mr. STEVENS. I am assured that will be the case.

Mr. INOUYE. Mr. President, like all proud Americans, I share my colleagues’ concern for the safety and well being of our troops. IED attacks are a very real threat to our troops and it is our responsibility as Members of Congress to help protect our brave men and women fighting in Iraq. I will work in conference to ensure that we can maintain the Senate’s funding level to purchase CROWS for our troops.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I thank my colleagues from Colorado and Hawaii for their work on this issue. They are right. We will continue to support these systems that provide service members with the force protection they need.

Mr. SALAZAR. Mr. President, I thank the chairman and the ranking member for their leadership on this issue—and for their careers of service to and sacrifice for this country.

MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that there now be a period for the transaction of morning business, with Senators allowed to speak therein.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

RETIREMENT OF SENATE FINANCIAL CLERK, TIM WINEMAN

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I have often spoken of the importance of the Senate staff and the Senate’s various support services for the effective workings of this great institution. These are the people and the offices that are rarely mentioned in the newspapers or the history books but who are essential to the effective workings of this institution. They are the people and the offices who make the jobs of the 100 Members of this Chamber more pleasant and more productive.

I cannot even imagine how this institution could function without the Senate Disbursing Office. In addition to serving as the finance office of the Senate, this office maintains our retirement, health insurance, life insurance, and other human resource programs. For the past 7 years, this most important Senate office has been headed by the Senate’s highly capable Financial Officer, Mr. Tim Wineman.

Unfortunately, Mr. Wineman will soon be leaving us. He is retiring on October 14. Therefore, I want to take a few minutes of the Senate’s time to thank Mr. Wineman for his service, to express my appreciation for his outstanding work, and to say that we will miss him.

Mr. Wineman was born and raised in the Washington, DC, metropolitan area, graduating from Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School. On October 19, 1970, he married and worked as a clerk in the Senate Disbursing Office; he remained in this office for the next 35 years. In September, 1976, Mr.
Wineman was promoted to payroll supervisor. Four years later, in August, 1980, he was promoted to the position of assistant financial clerk. On May 1, 1998, he became the Financial Clerk of the U.S. Senate Disbursing Office, that is, the Senate’s Financial Officer.

His extraordinary career, during which he has earned the praise of those who work under and with him in the Disbursing Office, and the respect of other Senate staffers and Members of this Chamber. During his service, he has served in financial leadership positions for the past two decades, Mr. Wineman has overseen the technological renovation of the Senate’s financial affairs and has had a hand both in the Senate budget process and the Senate appropriation’s process. And he proved himself to be an invaluable resource to Senate leadership on both sides of the aisle. He will be missed and will be very difficult to replace.

I want to congratulate and thank Mr. Wineman for his extraordinary dedication to the work and traditions of the Senate. And I want extend to him and Pat, his wife of 36 years, my fondest wishes, and ask the Lord’s blessings as they embark upon this new phase of their lives.

I understand that after relaxing and enjoying a stress-free environment for the next 6 months, Tim plans to spend his retirement playing golf and traveling. I urge him to do it. He deserves it. He has earned it.

THE PASSING OF COLONEL CLARENCE LEE TURNIPSEED, JR.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, last month, COL Clarence Lee Turnipseed, Jr., passed away. He was the father of my good friend, and one of the Senate’s best and most indispensable workers, Mrs. Dot Svendson, who works in the Office of the Secretary of the Senate. With the death of Colonel Turnipseed, the State of Alabama has lost an outstanding citizen, and our Nation has lost a true patriot.

Born September 18, 1914, in Union Springs, AL, Clarence Turnipseed graduated from Auburn University in 1935. That same year he was commissioned as a second lieutenant in the U.S. Army and began a remarkable and important military career. During World War II, he served as a battery commander and assistant staff officer of the 42nd Field Artillery Battalion of the Fourth Infantry. On June 6, 1944, Captain Turnipseed participated in the momentous D-Day landing on Utah Beach in Normandy. A few months later, he participated in the Battle of the Bulge. He was eventually promoted to the rank of colonel, served as commander of the 87th Maneuver Area Detachment in Birmingham, AL, and was an instructor at the Command and General Staff College in Fort Leavenworth, KS.

A grateful Nation recognized Colonel Turnipseed’s long and productive military career by presenting him with a number of awards and honors. Those included the Bronze Star, the Army Commendation Medal, the American Defense Service Medal, the American Campaign Medal, and the European-African-Middle Eastern Campaign Medal.

Colonel Turnipseed also had an important and productive civilian career in banking. He had worked in a number of banks and financial institutions in Alabama. In 1968, he became president and chief executive officer of the First National Bank in Brewton. He eventually held a number of offices in the Alabama and American Bankers Associations, including president of the Alabama Bankers Association and vice president of the American Bankers Association. In 1973, he became director of the Birmingham Branch of the Federal Reserve Bank in Atlanta, and 3 years later was named Alabama’s Small Business Advocate.

I extend Erma’s and my most heartfelt condolences to Mrs. Svendson and to her brother, Clarence Lee, and to her sisters, Rebecca and Margaret.

FIRST CHRISTIAN CHURCH OF WEIRTON, WEST VIRGINIA

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, on July 30 and 31, the First Christian Church of Weirton, WV celebrated its 175th anniversary. I wish to take a few minutes of the Senate’s time to extend to this house of worship, which came into existence in 1830, 33 years before West Virginia was even a State, my heartfelt, but sincere and heartfelt congratulations.

For 175 years, the First Christian Church of Weirton has served our Lord and ministered to the needs of the region by providing comfort and support to those in need. It has provided a place of faith and hope for all.

I regret that I was not able to participate in what I am sure was a most glorious celebration, but I do want to recognize and thank the First Christian Church of Weirton for its wonder.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, I rise today to speak about the need for hate crimes legislation. Each Congress, Senator KENNEDY and I introduce hate crimes legislation that would add new categories to current hate crimes law, sending a signal that violence of any kind is unacceptable in our society. Likewise, each Congress I have come to the floor to highlight a separate hate crime that has occurred in our country.

On August 18, 2003, in Washington, DC, Elivig Augusto Perez Morales who lived and dressed as a woman, was allegedly killed. According to police, he was allegedly killed by Antonie Jacobs who had paid for sex under the impression he was dealing with a woman. Upon learning that he was really a man, the customer returned and allegedly shot the prostitute.

I believe that the Government’s first duty is to defend its citizens, to defend them against the harms that come out of hate. The Local Law Enforcement Enhancement Act is a symbol that can become substance. I believe that by passing this legislation and changing current law, we can change hearts and minds as well.

VIOLENCE AGAINST WOMEN ACT

S. 1197

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I am pleased that the full Senate has finally taken up, considered and passed the reauthorization of the Violence Against Women Act, S. 1197, bipartisan legislation that will further our goal of ending domestic violence, dating violence, sexual assault, and stalking. The enactment of the original Violence Against Women Act over a decade ago marked an important national commitment to survivors of domestic violence and sexual assault. I am proud to join Senators BIDEN, HATCH, SPECTER, and others as an original cosponsor of this important measure, which currently has 58 cosponsors in total. I want to especially recognize Senator BIDEN for his commitment to ending violence against women and children.

Earlier in my career as a prosecutor in Vermont, I witnessed the devastating effects of domestic violence. Violence and abuse affect people of all walks of life every day and regardless of gender, race, culture, age, class or sexuality. Such violence is a crime and it is always wrong, whether the abuser is a family member, someone the victim is dating, a current or past spouse, boyfriend, or girlfriend, an acquaintance or a stranger.

The National Crime Victimization Survey estimates there were 691,710 nonfatal, violent incidents committed against victims by current and former spouses, boyfriends or girlfriends—also known as intimate partners—during 2001. Of those incidents, 85 percent were against women. The rate of nonfatal intimate partner violence against women has fallen steadily since 1993, when the rate was 9.8 percent per 1,000 people. The number fell to 5.0 percent per 1,000 people in 1999, nearly a 50-percent reduction but still unacceptably high. Tragically, however, the survey found that 1,600 women were killed in 1996 by a current or former spouse or boyfriend, while in 2000 some 1,247 women were killed by their intimate partners.

According to the annual Vermont Crime Report, the number of forcible rapes reported in Vermont increased in 2004 to the highest level in 7 years, while the amount of violent crime remained unchanged and overall crime fell by about 5 percent from 2003. Reported incidents of rape rose by 58 percent, from 117 in 2003 to 185 in 2004. The average age of the victim was 21, 47 percent were younger than 18 years old, in 74 percent of the cases the perpetrator was an acquaintance of the victim, and in a quarter of the cases the defendant was a family member or intimate partner of the victim. In one out of the cases the perpetrator was a stranger. These figures cause me great concern because violent crime has declined nationwide during that same time period. Numbers like these are why reauthorizing VAWA is so vital.

Our Nation has made remarkable progress over the past 25 years in recognizing that domestic violence and sexual assault are crimes. We have responded with better laws, social support, and coordinated community responses. Millions of women, men, children and families, however, continue to be traumatized by abuse, leading to increased rates of crime, violence and suffering.

The Violence Against Women Act has provided aid to law enforcement officers and prosecutors, helped stem domestic violence and child abuse, established training programs for victim advocates and counselors, and trained probation and parole officers who work with released sex offenders. Now we on the Judiciary Committee and then the rest of our colleagues in Congress have the opportunity to reauthorize VAWA and make improvements to vital core programs; criminal penalties against domestic abusers, and create new solutions to other crucial aspects of domestic violence and sexual assault. This is an opportunity to help treat children victims of violence, augment health care for rape victims, hold repeat offenders and Internet stalkers accountable, and help domestic violence victims keep their jobs.

Included in VAWA 2005 are reauthorizations of two programs that I initially sponsored that are vital to helping rural communities battle domestic violence in a setting in which isolation can make it more difficult for both victims and law enforcement. In a small, rural State such as Vermont, our country and local law enforcement agencies rely heavily on cooperative, inter-agency efforts to combat and solve significant problems. That is why I sought to include the rural domestic violence and child victimization enforcement grant program, part of the original VAWA. This program helps make services available to rural victims and children by encouraging community involvement in developing a coordinated response to combat domestic violence, dating violence and child abuse. Adequate resources combined with sustained commitment will bring about significant improvements in rural areas to the lives of those victimized by domestic and sexual violence.

The rural grants program section of VAWA 2005 reauthorizes and expands the existing education, training and services grant programs that address violence against women in rural areas. This program, which became law as part of the PROTECT Act of 2003, authorizes $55,000,000 annually for 2006 through 2010, which is an increase of $15 million per year.

The second grant program initiative on which I have focused is the transitional housing assistance grants for victims of domestic violence, dating violence, sexual assault or stalking. This program, which became law as part of the PROTECT Act of 2003, authorizes grants for transitional and related services for people fleeing domestic violence, sexual assault or stalkers. At a time when the availability of affordable housing has sunk to record lows, transitional housing for victims of domestic violence is especially needed. Today more than 50 percent of homeless individuals are women and children fleeing domestic violence. We have a clear problem that is in dire need of a solution. This program is part of the solution.

Transitional housing allows women to bridge the gap between leaving violence in their homes and becoming self-sufficient. Our bill, VAWA 2005, amends the existing transitional housing program by expanding the current direct assistance grants to include funds for operational, capital and renovation costs. Other changes include providing services to victims of dating violence, sexual assault and stalking; extending the length of time for receipt of benefits to match that used by Housing and Urban Development transitional housing programs; and updating the existing program to reflect the concerns of the service provision community. The provision would increase the authorized funding for the grant from $30,000,000 to $40,000,000.

Regrettably, this important bill was saddled in committee with an extraneous and ill-considered amendment, offered by Senator Kyl, relating to the national DNA database. Current law permits States to collect DNA samples from arrested individuals and to include arrestee information in State DNA databases. In addition, States may use arrestee information to search the national DNA database for a possible hit. The only thing that States may not do is upload arrestee information into the national database before a person has been formally charged with a crime.

Under the Kyl amendment, arrestee information can go into the national database immediately upon arrest, before formal charges are filed, and even if no charges are ever brought. This adds little or no value for law enforcement, while intruding on the privacy rights of people who are, in our system, presumed innocent. It could also provide an incentive for pretextual and racially biased stops against the purpose of DNA sampling. Congress rejected this very proposal less than a year ago, after extended negotiations and consultation with the Department of Justice.

The Kyl amendment would also make it harder for innocent people to have their DNA expunged from the national database. Under current law, if a State chooses to enter a person’s DNA profile into its database before the person is convicted of a crime, then the State must automatically expunge that information in the event that no conviction is obtained. Under the new language, even a person who is arrested in error and released without charge would need to obtain a court order before his DNA information could be removed from the database.

Databases are important tools to solving crime, but there are limits to what should be included in databases. The Kyl amendment raises serious privacy concerns that cannot be justified by any legitimate law enforcement need. I opposed it in committee, I continue to oppose it in its current form, and I will press for its exclusion in conference.

VAWA 2005 is an important part of our efforts to increase awareness of the problem of violence, to save the lives of battered women, rape victims, and children who grow up with violence and to continue progress against the devastating tragedy of domestic violence. I look forward to working with Senators SPECTER and BIDEN, Congressmen SENSENBERNENNER and CONYERS and other members of the upcoming conference to reauthorize the Violence Against Women Act and thus strengthen the provision would increase the authorized funding for the grant from $30,000,000 to $40,000,000.
Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, last night, the Senate passed by unanimous consent the Biden-Hatch—Specter Violence Against Women Act of 2005, S. 1197. It is a testament to the underlying goals of this legislation that this legislative step was unanimously supported and garnered 57 cosponsors from both sides of the aisle. I would like to thank Chairman SPITERI for his unyielding efforts to get this bill passed, and I would like to thank Senator HATCH for his longstanding support for this effort. The act expired on September 30. The House has passed its legislation, so it is imperative that we get the Violence Against Women Act of 2005 to conference and to the President’s desk immediately.

The Violence Against Women Act of 2005 makes many critical improvements to the original act that we passed over 10 years ago. Many in this Chamber are well aware that I consider the Violence Against Women Act the single most significant legislation that I have crafted during my 32-year tenure in the Senate. Indeed, the enactment of the Violence Against Women Act in 1994 was the beginning of a historic commitment to women and children victimized by domestic violence and sexual assault. Our Nation has been rewarded for this commitment. Since the act’s passage in 1994, domestic violence has dropped by almost 50 percent, incidents of rape down by 60 percent, and homicide for a woman caused by an abusive husband or boyfriend is down by 22 percent. Today, more than half of all rape victims are stepping forward to report the crime. And since we passed the act in 1994 over a million women have found justice in our courtrooms and obtained domestic violence protective orders.

“This is a dramatic change from 10 years ago. Back then, violence in the household was treated as a ‘family matter’ and not a criminal offense. It is a criminal offense. The criminal justice system is much better equipped to handle domestic violence, and it is treated for what it is, criminal. The goal of the legislation passed is to usher the Violence Against Women Act into the 21st century. With this legislation we attempt to look beyond the immediate crisis and take long-term steps to not only punish offenders, but to also do more to help victims get their lives back on track and prevent domestic violence and sexual assault from occurring in the first place.

This bill is truly a cooperative effort. As Senator HATCH, Senator SPITERI and I drafted this bill, we listened closely to suggestions from both sides of the aisle, and we listened carefully to the input from those with wide ranging opinions on how to combat this problem. In particular, we listened to those who are on the front lines fighting to end violence, such as police officers, nurses, attorneys, advocates, shelter directors, and prosecutors. Based upon these discussions, we made targeted improvements to existing grant programs and we tightened up the criminal laws.

The groups that assisted with drafting this bill included the National Coalition Against Domestic Violence, the National Network to End Domestic Violence, the National Coalition to End Sexual and Domestic Violence, the National Audubon Society, the National Organization for Women, the National Center on Elder Abuse, Legal Momentum, the National Alliance to End Sexual Violence, the National Center for Victims of Crime, the American Bar Association, the National District Attorneys Association, the National Council on Family Violence and Juvenile Court Judges, the National Association of Chiefs of Police, the National Sheriffs’ Association and many others. I would personally like to thank them for the work that they do each and every day to make our Nation a better, safer place for its citizens.

No doubt, the bill that we have passed today is ambitious. We have made tremendous strides in treating domestic violence and sexual assaults over the past 10 years. We have helped ensure that offenders were held accountable, and we created coordinated community responses to help victims. The Violence Against Women Act of 2005 will help us look beyond the immediate crisis and provide long-term solutions for victims, and we will redouble our prevention efforts. This is why we included important efforts to ease the housing crisis for victims fleeing their homes, included efforts to engage boys and men to prevent domestic violence from occurring in the first place, enlisted the healthcare community in identifying and treating victims, and to help stop the cycle of abuse suffered by immigrant women and provided tough new regulations for international marriage brokers to ensure that they provide foreign brides with information related to the background of their potential husband and their rights if they are abused.

Despite all of the strong points of this legislation, it could be made better. In particular, I had hoped that provisions from Senator MURRAY’s Security and Financial Empowerment Act, SAFE, would have remained in the bill. This amendment would provide some fundamental economic protections for victims of domestic violence and sexual assault. Just as the Family Medical Leave Act protects individuals caring for a sick loved one, the SAFE Act public crimes for 10 years, to take time off from work to appear in court cases and other judicial proceedings without jeopardizing their employment at a time they need it the most. The SAFE Act is important legislation, and I believe that there is bipartisan support for it. Unfortunately, we were not able to reach a consensus on this amendment and, as a result, it is not part of this final bill. It is my hope that the Senate will revisit this issue soon, and I look forward to working with Senator MURRAY in this effort.

One of the primary concerns expressed about the bill is that it simply costs too much. This is certainly understandable given our Nation’s financial situation right now, but I have always said that the safety of the American people is the single most important responsibility for Federal, State, and local governments. And while money doesn’t solve every problem, there are very few, if any, efforts related to preventing violence and fighting crime that can be solved without money. As such, it is simply a fact that we will continue to spend. But I would argue that the results over the past 10 years show that this has been money well spent, and I hope that the Congress will continue to fund these efforts. In fact, there is evidence that we have received a net return on this investment. A 2002 university study found that money spent to reduce domestic violence saved nearly ten times the potential costs through the years of 1995 and 2000. During that time, the Federal Government spent $1.6 billion for the act’s programs and, as a result, we avoided spending an estimated $14.8 billion on medical, legal and other victimization costs that arise from domestic violence. On an individual level, the SAFE Act would allow domestic violence victims to take time off from work to attend to the needs of a sick loved one, the SAFE Act protects individuals caring for a sick loved one, the SAFE Act provides tough new regulations for international marriage brokers to ensure that they provide foreign brides with information related to the background of their potential husband and their rights if they are abused.

The Senate action today demonstrates that eradicating violence against women is truly a shared goal, one that is held by Democrats and Republicans, one that is upheld by men and women, and one that is desired by both Government and by the private sector. I would like to thank my colleagues on the Senate support of this important legislation. In particular, I want to thank Senator HATCH, a long-standing champion on this issue. Since 1990, Senator HATCH and I have worked together to end family violence in this country, so it is no great surprise that once again we worked side-by-side with us to craft today’s bill. I am also deeply indebted to Senator KENNEDY for his unwavering commitment to battered immigrant women and his work on the bill’s immigration provisions. I also want to thank Senator LEAHY, who has long supported the Violence Against Women Act and, in particular, has worked on the rural programs and transitional housing provisions. Finally, I want to thank my very good friend from PENNSYLVANIA for his commitment and leadership on this bill. It is a pleasure to work with Senator SPITERI, and I want to thank him for expeditiously moving this legislation through the Judiciary Committee and through today’s action by the Senate, we look forward to the future with all of my colleagues to ensure that we continue to strive to the important goals of the Violence Against Women Act of 2005.
Against Women Act of 2005. This effort will require a bi-partisan commitment. Again, I am thankful to Senators Reid and Feinstein for their work on seeing that this bill is passed and to all of my colleagues who unanimously supported the Violence Against Women Act of 2005.

Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, last evening, S. 1197, the Violence Against Women Act, was passed out of the Senate. I commend the Judiciary Committee for including Title 9, Safety for Indian Women, in its bill to reauthorize the act. Title 9 focuses on the needs of Indian tribes to enable them to reduce and treat incidents of domestic violence in Indian country. Among other things, it would authorize the creation of tribal criminal history databases to document domestic violence convictions and protection orders and it creates a new Federal criminal offense authorizing Federal prosecutors to charge repeat domestic violence offenders who wanted to hurt women overseas to kill someone. S. 1197 also would authorize the Bureau of Indian Affairs police and certain tribal officers to make arrests for domestic violence assaults committed outside of their presence.

Since 1992, the Department of Justice has issued various studies showing that Indian women experience the highest rates of domestic violence compared to all other groups in the United States. These reports indicate that one out of every three Indian women are victims of sexual assault; that from 1979 to 1992, homicide was the third leading cause of death of Indian females between the ages of 15 to 34; and that 75 percent of those deaths were committed by a family member or acquaintance. What we don’t know, however, is the impact of these violent acts on law enforcement, judicial, mental or medical services in Indian country. I am, therefore, pleased to see that this bill makes 20 a comprehensive study of domestic violence in Indian Country to gauge the impact of these acts to Indian tribes and their resources. The findings of such a study will help the Congress and the administration to better focus resources to areas with the greatest need.

Earlier this Congress, Senator DonGAN and I introduced the Restoring Safety to Indian Women Act. We worked closely with the Senate Judiciary Committee to ensure that the provisions of this bill, some of which I mention here, were given due consideration. Throughout the more comprehensive S. 1197, Indian tribes would be eligible for various grants to enhance their victim services, judicial function, and law enforcement service capacity to the same extent as State and local governments are eligible.

Domestic violence is a national problem and not one that is unique to Indian country. Yet, due to the unique status of Indian tribes, there are obstacles faced by Indian tribal police, Federal investigators, tribal and Federal prosecutors and courts that impede their ability to respond to domestic violence in Indian country. Title 9 of this bill goes a long way toward removing these obstacles at all levels and to enhance the ability of each agency to respond to acts of domestic violence when these crimes occur. These critical changes to the current law will greatly curb violence against Indian women, and perhaps even save lives.

Again, I thank the members of the Senate Judiciary Committee for their thoughtful consideration in drafting a bill that not only addresses one segment of our population, the Nation’s Indian tribes.

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

CONGRATULATING ASHLEY JEFFERS

• Mr. BUNNING. Mr. President, today I wish to congratulate Ashley Jeffers of Alvaton, KY. Ashley was recently awarded a $15,000 college scholarship as part of the Girls Incorporated National Scholars Program.

Ashley experience at Girls Inc. of Bowling Green, KY is a testament to her impressive work ethic, initiative, and leadership skills. She joined Girls Inc. at the age of 14, and was hired shortly after to help teach classes. Eager to expand the center, Ashley learned about other Girls Inc. national programs and incorporated new classes into the existing program at Bowling Green. Inspired by her experience working with other young women at Girls Inc., Ashley has decided to pursue a career in social work following her studies at Western Kentucky University.

The Girls Inc. National Scholars Program was created in 1992 by a $6.1 million gift from Lucille Miller Wright, a volunteer pilot during World War II, who wanted everyone with the means to become financial barriers to attending college. Since 1992, the National Scholars Program has awarded over $1.8 million to 304 girls.

By inspiring other young women to become strong, smart, and bold, Ashley Jeffers does justice to the legacy of Lucille Miller Wright. She is an example of how young Americans can have a positive influence on their communities by participating in mentorship activities such as Girls Inc. I congratulate Ashley on this achievement. She is an inspiration to the citizens of Kentucky. I look forward to seeing all that she will accomplish in the future.

TRIBUTE TO AUGUST WILSON

• Mr. COLEMAN. Mr. President, I want to pause in the Senate’s business today to recognize the passing of a great American who we in Minnesota were proud to call our own: Pulitzer Prize winning poet and playwright August Wilson. He died yesterday at the age of 60.

August Wilson spent a good part of his adult life in Saint Paul, MN, which is my home. He worked for a time at the Science Museum of Minnesota, writing educational scripts. As his work became recognized and his fame spread, he continued to be seen around Saint Paul, working on plays and other such places, sketching out ideas on the backs of napkins.

In his many plays, Mr. Wilson brought his audiences back time and again to the neighborhood where he grew up, in the Hill District of Pittsburgh, PA. Through a series of 10 plays, he traced the African-American experience through the ten decades of the 20th century. The first, “Jitney,” about a city taxi station, was written in Saint Paul.

Decades ago, the poet T.S. Elliot wrote that, “Poetry is not an assertion of the truth, but making that truth more fully real to us.” America struggles with deep divisions on matters of race, place, and the tragic gulf we haven’t brought that home to us. How desperately we need the kind of expression of the truth that August Wilson brought to a large audience.

Facts are important, but we have all experienced the frustration of not seeing our set of facts “carry the day.” Psychologists have even determined that we use one part of our brain to process the ideas of political candidates we support and a different part of our brain when we are listening to the views of one we don’t. Jerry Garcia of the Grateful Dead wrote a line I like: “People ain’t gonna learn what they don’t wanna know.”

But we hold out the hope the art can find a way through our defenses and make truth fully real to us. When Abraham Lincoln met Harriet Beecher Stowe, author of “Uncle Tom’s Cabin,” legend has it that he said, “So this is the little woman who started this big war.”

It is a special honor that August Wilson will have a theater on New York’s Broadway named in his honor. The Minnesota connection in that is the theater has previously born the name of Virginia Binger, the late wife of Jim Binger, one of Minnesota’s great citizens. The eight Wilson plays that made it to Broadway were nominated for more than 50 Tony awards.

Talking about the blues in a way that could just as well have been applied to his own writing, he said: “You don’t sing to feel better. You sing ‘cause that’s a way of understanding life.”

We recognize the history and forces which shaped the life of August Wilson and we honor his life long effort to make the truth real.

A FRIEND TO IDAHO ARTS

• Mr. CRAPO. Mr. President, I would like to recognize an Idahoan, who through his lifelong love and support of the arts, has gained national recognition. Dan Harpole, executive director Concealing the intrinsic and overt value to society of a thriving arts community at all levels, Mr. Johnson. Mr. President, it is great enthusiasm, and a man of deep faith. Shanley is a man of great intellect, and concern that has always been the hallmark of Providence College. And, importantly with their character.

For public schools such as Alcester-Hudson Elementary and Corsica Elementary to qualify for blue ribbon status, the standards private schools are required to meet in order to achieve blue ribbon status are more rigorous, as students must place in the top 10 percent on both the State test and on the national level.

While test scores play a significant role in determining whether a school fits the blue ribbon standard, O’Gorman also submitted in its application a 24-page report detailing the school’s various attributes. The statement highlighted students’ high participation in the performing arts, the school’s many sports championships, the 13,000 hours students devoted to volunteering and community service last year, as well as O’Gorman’s emphasis on foreign language, math and theology studies.

Earning this distinction under No Child Left Behind is certainly an achievement for all these outstanding schools; however, O’Gorman was also a blue ribbon school under the Federal Government’s former recognition program that began in 1982. Like the previous Blue Ribbon Schools Program, this distinction is one that never expires unless the program is replaced. I am proud to have this opportunity to honor these three exceptional schools. It is a privilege for me to share with my colleagues the exemplary leadership and tireless commitment to education O’Gorman High School, Alcester-Hudson Elementary, and Corsica Elementary provide to their students. I strongly commend the hard work and dedication all the faculty, administrators, and staff devote to these three institutions, and I am very pleased that their dedication and the students’ substantial efforts are being publicly honored and celebrated. On behalf of all South Dakotans, I would like to congratulate these three extraordinary schools and wish them all the best.

The Tribes of the Great Sioux Nation are a uniquely family-oriented culture that has always placed great emphasis on the importance of relationships with family and friends. Worthy of note, is the Indian way of life that means when you walk into their home, you never leave hungry. Their hospitality is legendary. They are kind and generous to each other, even to the stranger. They embrace their spirituality as a part of who they are and they respect and honor their Creator.

Their desire to continue their language and traditions is very dear to their hearts. For many years, the language was spoken only in the home. Nakota was in danger of being lost. But in the last 30 to 40 years, it has begun to flourish and is being restored, thanks to those educators, elders and all who recognize its beauty and significance in our time. The coming generations will be a testimony of the importance of this legacy.

I would like to take this opportunity to give special recognition to the He Sapa Wacipi Pow-Wo Association and all the volunteers who selflessly give of their time and effort to bring this event together every year. It is a lot of work, but the end result is a spectacle of beauty and pageantry every year. They showed all of us their efforts and I officially acknowledge and honor them for their dedication.

STATEMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Mr. Inhofe (for himself and Mr. Coburn):

S. 1868 — A bill to designate the facility of the United States Postal Service located at 6110 East 51st Place in Tulsa, Oklahoma, as the “Dewey F. Bartlett Post Office”; to the Committee on Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs.

By Mr. Inhofe, Mr. President, I rise today along with my colleague, Tom Coburn, to proudly introduce legislation to designate the facility of the United States Postal Service located at 6110 East 51st Place in Tulsa, OK, as the "Dewey F. Bartlett Post Office".

Dewey Follett Bartlett, former Governor and distinguished alumnus of this Senate body, emulated the Oklahoma spirit of innovative leadership, hard work, and public service. In his honor, I proudly seek to name a post office in his hometown of Tulsa, OK. We commemorate an outstanding public servant so that posterity will be challenged by his example, just as we have been.

Although he was not actually born in Oklahoma, Dewey Bartlett naturalized as fast as he could. While studying at Princeton University, he came home during summers to work in Oklahoma oil fields just as I did. He moved to my hometown, Tulsa, in 1945 to assume a managing role in his family's business after his military service during World War II. Dewey Bartlett shared my dedication to a strong national defense. As a member of the armed services, including a combat dive-bomber pilot, he championed the military during his service in the Senate.

During his tenure in the Senate, Bartlett was more than once deemed the most conservative member of the Senate. He was awarded the Air Medal for his distinguished efforts in the Pacific Theater during World War II. Not only did he serve in the U.S. Marine Corps as a combat dive-bomber pilot, he championed the military during his service in the Senate.

Sen. Feingold of the Centers for Disease Control put it: "...many influenza experts, including those at CDC, consider the threat of a serious influenza pandemic to the United States to be high. Although the timing and impact of an influenza pandemic is unpredictable, the occurrence is inevitable and potentially devastating."

The devastation caused by Hurricane Katrina would pale in comparison to the potential consequences of a global pandemic. A respected U.S. health expert has concluded that 170 million Americans would die in the first year alone of an outbreak. A pandemic flu outbreak in the Untied States today could cost our economy hundreds of billions of dollars due to death, lost productivity and disruptions to commerce and society.

Perhaps the only thing more troubling than contemplating the possible consequences of an avian flu pandemic is recognizing that neither this Nation nor the world are prepared to deal with it.

Our National Pandemic Plan is still in draft stages. We lack the capacity to rapidly manufacture vaccines in mass we may develop more efficient methods of producing vaccines. Our bill would enhance our vaccine production capacity by creating a guaranteed market for seasonal flu vaccine through a federal buyback program for a portion of unsold doses. And among other provisions, our bill will improve access to vaccinations during a pandemic by enhancing annual flu vaccination coverage for uninsured and underinsured adults and children.

Our legislation will ensure that we have enough antivirals, vaccines and other essential medications and supplies in the Strategic National Stockpile. Specifically, our bill requires that we procure enough antiviral medication to cover a minimum of 50 percent of the population for the Strategic National Stockpile. This legislation will protect Americans from the price gouging of medications during a pandemic, and establishes a mass tracking and distribution system for vaccines and antiviral medications so that we can direct medications and vaccines to where they are needed the most.

The Pandemic Preparedness and Response Act will also improve our surge capacity so that the American people can be assured there will be an adequate supply of health care providers and institutions to care for them in the event of a pandemic. Our bill will also ensure that public education and awareness campaigns targeted to businesses, health care providers and the American public about pandemic preparedness are conducted. And finally, the Pandemic Preparedness and Response Act will ensure that adequate resources are available to address this looming threat.

I hope that my colleagues will join me in supporting this legislation so we may ensure that we do everything possible to prepare and protect Americans from the threat of a global flu pandemic.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 1821

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE. This Act may be cited as the “Pandemic Preparedness and Response Act”.

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

Congress makes the following findings:

(a) The Department of Health and Human Services reports that an influenza pandemic has a greater potential to cause rapid increases in death and illness than virtually any other natural health threat.

(b) Three pandemics occurred during the 20th century: the Spanish flu pandemic in 1918, the Asian flu pandemic in 1957, and the Hong Kong flu pandemic in 1968, and the Hong Kong flu pandemic was the most severe, causing over 500,000 deaths in the United States and more than 20,000,000 deaths worldwide.

(c) The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention has estimated conservatively that up to 207,000 Americans would die, and up to 734,000 would be hospitalized, during the next pandemic. The costs of the pandemic, including the total direct costs associated with medical care and indirect costs of reduced productivity, was estimated at between $71,000,000,000 and $166,500,000,000.

These costs do not include the economic effects of pandemic on commerce and society.

(7) The best defense against influenza pandemics is a heightened global surveillance system. In many of the nations where avian flu (H5N1) have become endemic the early detection capabilities are severely lacking, as is the transparency in the health systems.

(10) In addition to surveillance, pandemic preparedness requires domestic and international coordination and cooperation to ensure an adequate medical response, including communication and information networks, public health measures to prevent spread, use of vaccination and antivirals, provision of health outpatient and inpatient services, and maintenance of core public functions.

To the maximum extent practicable, the Secretary shall develop and maintain a plan for the response to potential shortfalls in supplies of influenza vaccines that would constitute public health emergencies. The plan shall include provisions with respect to communication among relevant entities, distribution of available supplies of the influenza vaccine involved, the designation of populations to be given the influenza vaccine to increase the rate of immunizations in populations potentially exacerbated by exposure to pandemic influenza. There are authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 2006 through 2010.

Mr. OBAMA. Mr. President, I rise today to talk about a critical issue—the possibility of an avian influenza pandemic.

When I started talking about this 7 months ago, not too many folks paid attention. Perhaps because the short-hand for this looming crisis is the ‘‘flu’’—people assume it is just going to get birds and animals sick.

In reality, however, what is at stake here is the potential of a pandemic that we have not seen in the United States since 1918. As has been stated, our top scientists and medical personnel, including the heads of the NIH, CDC, and the Department of Health and Human Services, all agree that it is almost inevitable that an avian flu pandemic will occur.

The key question is the extent of the damage, especially in terms of lives lost. The answer to this question will, in large measure, depend on our level of preparedness and the amount of resources we are willing to immediately commit to deal with this looming crisis.
After Katrina, I hope we all learned a lesson about the critical value of preparedness.

I rise today to introduce, along with Senators REID, BAYH, and KENNEDY, S. 1821, legislation that dramatically enhances the preparedness of the United States and international community to prevent and respond to an avian flu pandemic.

The bill we are introducing today—the Pandemic Preparedness and Response Act—PPRA—incorporates much of my AVIAN Act, and has a number of new and important provisions, that will protect Americans from pandemic flu.

The PPRA establishes leadership at the very top level by requiring the President to name a national director for Pandemic Preparedness and Response, who will sit in the executive office. This director will be in charge of all preparedness and response activities at the national level, including coordinating budgets and programs of each Federal agency.

It is not enough for the Department of Health and Human Services and Department of Homeland Security to be ready; we must have a commerce plan, a transportation plan, a diplomatic plan aimed at our foreign partners, and a plan for our military personnel and veterans.

We have asked this director to procure enough antivirals to cover 40 percent of the population, and sufficient vaccines and other supplies we need for the Strategic National Stockpile. The director will also create a national tracking and distribution system to ensure the fair and equitable allocation of drugs and vaccines when the pandemic strikes.

On the State level, we have asked the Director of the CDC and HRSA to work with States and give them the help they need to make sure they are ready to respond as well. Our success in preventing or containing an outbreak of avian flu will depend on the preparedness of our State and local partners.

Understanding that international collaboration and cooperation is key to surveillance and quick response, we have created an international pandemic fund, and requested the Secretary of State develop and implement a diplomatic policy aimed at the Southeast and East Asian countries. Senator LEAGUE and I have been hard at work on this last point for months.

Finally, we recognize that this Nation will never have enough vaccines, or the ability to produce sufficient vaccines, if we don’t create the incentives for more drug manufacturers to get into the vaccine business. We just have three domestic flu vaccine manufacturers, and that is unacceptable. This bill authorizes the Secretary to enhance vaccine production capacity by creating a guaranteed market for seasonal flu vaccine. It also creates a Federal stock program for unsold doses of seasonal flu vaccine. It also increases public education and outreach activities for Americans, to stimulate demand for the seasonal flu vaccine.

An outbreak of the avian flu could occur in a year, 5 years, 10 years, or if we were incredibly lucky not happen at all. But the one good thing about investing in measures to deal with this looming crisis is—and I will end on this point—if we spend the money now, it will pay dividends, even if this particular strain of the avian flu outbreak does not occur.

Why is this the case? This is not—no pun intended—a case of Chicken Little.

The risk of some sort of pandemic, and the mutations of flu for which we have no immunity, is almost inevitable. The H5N1 strain may not be the strain that leads to a full blown pandemic. But, another strain could easily come along and cause serious damage in the future.

My point is this: undertaking these measures is going to be a wise investment that will help protect the lives of millions of people here in the United States and across the globe. This legislation gets at the heart of this issue.

By Mrs. MURRAY (for herself and Ms. CANTWELL):

S. 1821. A bill to amend titles XVIII and XIX of the Security Act to make improvements to the implementation of the medicare prescription drug benefit; to the Committee on Finance.

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, today I am introducing legislation to protect low-income beneficiaries from being penalized under the new Medicare Modernization Act. My legislation also gives all seniors and the disabled more time to make the right choice in selecting a drug plan.

My bill is called the MedicareHEALS Act, which stands for Help for Every beneficiary and Low Income Seniors. I am pleased to be joined today by Senator CANTWELL in introducing this new bill.

My goal is to protect very low-income seniors who today are covered by both Medicare and Medicaid. The new drug law will impose new co-payments and premiums on these vulnerable patients, while—at the same time—covering fewer prescription drugs.

Worst of all, the law prohibits States from providing additional coverage, known as wrap-around coverage, to seniors, the disabled and low-income beneficiaries. I believe seniors deserve better, I believe working families deserve better, and that’s why I’ve written this bill.

The new drug law will force painful changes on low income patients, and my bill will help protect our most vulnerable from the negative impacts of the drug law.

Let’s start by looking at how low-income beneficiaries are covered today versus how they will be covered under the new law. Today, very low income seniors who earn less than $15,000 a year under both state Medicaid programs and the Federal Medicare program, so they are often referred to as “dual eligibles.” Today, their prescription drugs are covered by State Medicaid programs, and they are a good deal. For many seniors and the disabled, State Medicaid drug coverage involves limited co-payments, no premiums, and coverage for a broad range of medically-necessary drugs.

Once the new Medicare drug program is implemented, these vulnerable patients will lose their State Medicaid coverage. They will be shifted into the Federal Medicare program, which will impose higher co-payments, premiums and fewer covered drugs. It’s a bad deal for low-income seniors and to make matters worse, it’s incredibly complicated to figure out which private drug plan meets their needs.

I am concerned that these individuals will be unable to afford co-payments or tiered co-payments that will be part of many MMA plans.

I am concerned that these individuals will also be denied the most medically-necessary treatments due to restrictions imposed by the plans or additional financial burdens that plans will use to drive down drug utilization costs.

In addition, I am not convinced that we have done enough to fully educate and prepare beneficiaries to the choices and implications of these choices that they face today.

Another problem with the Medicare drug law is that it will penalize anyone who wants to wait a few more days to make a decision about which plan to choose or whether or not to join the program. For a new system that is as complex as this new drug law, it’s unfair to force people to make a decision quickly and to penalize those who need extra time to make the right choice.

To solve these problems and to protect our most vulnerable, my legislation would repeal the prohibition included in MMA on the use of Medicaid funds to provide wrap around coverage for dualy eligible.

While I still believe that additional delay is warranted in switching this population to private plans under Medicare, I do believe we need to ensure that States facing a huge backlash from this population can respond accordingly.

I have joined in support of legislation aimed at providing a 6-month transition period for dual eligibles to give the Medicare who needs extra time to make a decision about which plan to join. I support the new bills that would provide wrap around coverage for dualy eligible.

not think it is fair to penalize States for trying to do the right thing.

Finally, my legislation would delay the late penalty enrollment from May 15, 2006 until January 1, 2008, for all beneficiaries. This will give all Medicare beneficiaries the time to fully evaluate the plans. The extension will provide beneficiaries with one full benefit year and the open enrollment period to determine if these plans offer them a good value or provide the kind of security we all expect from Medicare.

This extension is of particular importance to those seniors who may be eligible for assistance but have not yet applied. We know that full dual eligibles will be automatically enrolled in a plan if they fail to select one. However, those with incomes from 135 percent to 150 percent of the Federal poverty level could also qualify for assistance but will not be automatically enrolled.

Early estimates from the Social Security Administration and the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services (CMS) indicate that a number of seniors have failed to even apply for eligibility determination. I have been told from CMS that 18 to 19 million beneficiaries who qualified for the low income subsidy are not enrolled. The task is made much more difficult when CMS announces that materials already mailed to beneficiaries are incorrect.

My office received notice this week from CMS that the area specific 2006 version of the "Medicare and You Handbook" already mailed to beneficiaries contains a rather large error. The error occurs in the comparison charts listing the Medicare Prescription Drug Plans (PDPs). In the last column of the comparison table entitled "If I qualify for Extra Help, will my full premium be covered?"

For each plan listed, the column should say yes if the plan's premium is at or below the regional benchmark, and a beneficiary who qualifies for the low income subsidy would pay no premium for this plan.

The column should show no if the plan's premium is above the regional benchmark and a beneficiary who qualifies for the low income subsidy would pay the difference between the regional benchmark and the plan's premium.

Due to an error, this column lists yes for every plan. Even if one could figure out what the regional benchmark is and the difference in the premium, they are still getting bad information.

How can anyone determine the value of a plan or benefit when the initial information is wrong?

There are other examples of information being provided by CMS that is incorrect or inconsistent. I think this has happened in part because this administration is in a race against time to enroll, enroll, enroll. This kind of pressure will only lead to more confusion and distrust.

As we saw with the temporary discount drug card, seniors simply refused to participate. Even those who would have qualified for $600 did not bother to enroll. The largest enrollment was done by States and private plans for those who qualified for the subsidy, but far more simply did not bother. The choices were too complex, there were too many rules or restrictions, and there was no way for beneficiaries to measure the value of these cards.

My legislation does not address every problem and every coverage gap, but it is a small step to protect the most vulnerable. I urge my colleagues to join me in making these necessary corrections today before beneficiaries lose their coverage and lose access to affordable life saving drugs.

I know that this administration has resisted any effort to fix this program, but I said the President would veto any legislation that delays implementation or changes the structure of the benefit. But, I am convinced we will be back making changes to this program over the next 2 years because seniors will demand action.

Maybe before all confidence in this program is gone and seniors are calling for repeal, the administration would look at small, humane fixes today, and that is the Medicare HEALS Act offers.

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD — SENATE S11141

but rather they reverberate across the country.

The country’s immigration system is long overdue for a comprehensive overhaul, and I commend the efforts being made by a number of my colleagues to generate support for the need for comprehensive immigration reform ideas. These are being proposed to improve avenues for legal immigration, enhance enforcement capabilities, and address the growing presence of illegal immigrants with nationalities other than Mexican. While I applaud these proposals and eagerly await our opportunity to discuss them, I believe it is essential that we recognize the role our State and local communities can have in addressing illegal immigration, particularly when it comes to the area of enforcement. As such, I am introducing legislation today to solidify the right and opportunity of our State and local governments to enforce the law—immigration law.

Historically, the authority for State and local law enforcement officials to enforce immigration law has been limited to the criminal provisions of the Immigration and Nationality Act; these include acts such as physically crossing the border illegally. But, in contrast, the enforcement of the act’s civil provisions, which include apprehension and removal of deportable aliens already in the country, has been strictly a Federal responsibility, with States playing an incidental supporting role. This view was recently reinforced when a community in New Hampshire attempted to prosecute illegal immigrants for criminal trespass but was thwarted when a judge ruled it was constitutionally impermissible, stating that Congress has exclusive jurisdiction on civil immigration issues.

Enforcing the laws of our country should not be confined to Federal authorities when the illegal behavior specified in the State and local communities. Just as State and local officials can arrest, detain, and prosecute for illicit drug violations, so they should be able to for illegal immigration violations. The legislation I propose today would enable State and local officials to arrest, detain, and prosecute illegal immigrants for all Federal immigration violations, both civil and criminal, and would authorize States to create immigration enforcement programs in accordance with Federal immigration law. My proposal preserves the Federal Government’s constitutionally delegated authority to determine immigration status, a determination to which the States would defer. Allowing communities to take enforcement actions based on their own needs, while working within limits set under Federal law, is sound, appropriate policy.

Further, in order to strengthen border security and to improve the efficiency in local and Federal border officials, my bill allows the Secretary of Homeland Security to create a Volunteer Border Marshal Program. The program will assist the Department in securing our borders by using trained, State-licensed peace officers in a volunteer capacity. These volunteers would be assigned to the Border Patrol on temporary missions to identify and control illegal immigration, as well as human and drug trafficking.

In order to properly tackle the problem of illegal immigration, Federal, State, and local authorities must work as partners. Our communities must have the tools necessary to fight it effectively. My legislation will empower the States and communities with a new weapon to combat illegal immigration and thereby reinforce our legal naturalization process. I encourage my colleagues to support this sensible approach to addressing this serious problem. I ask unanimous consent that the text of my bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 1829

By Mr. KERRY (for himself and Mr. SCHUMER):

S. 1824. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to strengthen the earned income tax credit; to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, today I am introducing the Strengthen the Earned Income Tax Credit Act of 2005. Since 1975, the EITC has been an important credit that helps low-income working families. President Reagan referred to the EITC as “the best antipoverty, the best pro-family, the best job creation measure to come out of Congress.” According to the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities, the EITC lifts more children out of poverty than any other government program.

It is time for us to reexamine the EITC and determine where we can strengthen it. Census data released in August and the events of Hurricane Katrina reiterated the fact that there is a group of Americans that are not benefiting from the economic recovery. These dubious data show the number of people who work, but live in poverty increased by 563,000. Four million more people were poor in 2004 than in 2001, when the economy hit bottom. The poverty rate in 2004 remains higher than the rate in 2001, the year of the recession.

Hurricane Katrina affected many individuals who were already faced with difficult economic situations. Mississippi, Louisiana, and Alabama are the first, second, and eighth poorest States in the Nation. The income of the typical household in these three States is well below the national average. In the hardest hit counties, 18.6 percent of the population is poor and the national average is 12.4 percent.

Time after time, the Republican controlled Congress has passed tax cuts which are skewed towards those with the highest incomes. The Urban Institute’s Tax Policy Center reports that households with incomes of more than $1 million a year—the richest two-tenths of the population—receive tax cuts of an average of $108,000 a year. These individuals do not have to worry about how they will have to pay for a roof over their heads or enough gas to fill the tank. We should not be focused on tax cuts which help those who do not have to worry about living paycheck to paycheck.

We need to help the low-income workers who struggle day after day trying to make ends meet. They have been left behind in the economic policies of the last 4 years. We need to begin a discussion on how to help those that have been left behind. The Earned Income Tax Credit is the perfect place to start.

To strengthen the Earned Income Tax Credit Act of 2005 strengthens the EITC by making the following four changes: Reduce marriage penalty; increase the credit for families with income to 25 percent, with a phase-out for families with income over $40,000; phase out the 10 percent tax credit for working families; and phase-in the tax credit for families with income below the poverty level.
three or more children; slow down the phase-out for individuals with no children; and permanently extend the provision which allows members of the armed forces to include combat pay as income for EITC computations. By making these changes, more individuals and families would benefit from the EITC.

First, the legislation increases marriage penalty relief and makes it permanent. In the way that the EITC is currently structured, many single individuals who marry find themselves faced with a reduction in their EITC once they are married. The tax code should not penalize individuals who marry.

Second, the legislation increases the credit for families with three or more children. This proposal would make the credit more generous for families with 3 or more children. Increasing the credit rate results in an increase in the phase-out range. More families would be able to benefit from the EITC. The poverty level for an adult living with three children is $20,293. Under current law, an adult living with three children and eligible for the maximum EITC with income equivalent to the phase-out income level would still have income below the poverty level. This provision would lift this family above the poverty level. Some 36 percent of all children live in families with at least three children and more than half of poor children live in such families.

Third, the legislation would slow down the phase-out rate for individuals without children. It would result in more individuals without children eligible for the credit. For 2005, an individual with earnings above $11,750 would not be eligible for the EITC. Under the proposal, an individual with earned income above $16,950 would not be eligible for the EITC. The EITC for individuals with no children only offsets a portion of federal taxes. Giving more individuals the EITC would help provide an incentive to work.

Fourth, the Working Families Tax Relief Act of 2004 included a provision which would treat combat pay as earned income for purposes of computing the child credit. This provision expires at the end of the year. This legislation makes this provision permanent. There is no reason why a member of the armed services should lose their EITC when they are mobilized and serving their country.

This legislation will help those who most need our help. It will put more money in their pay check. We need to invest in our families and help individuals who want to make a living by working. We are all aware of our fiscal situation and we should legislate in a responsible manner. It is a time for shared sacrifice. We do not need to extend by law higher tax cuts, to go forward that only benefit those earning over $200,000. We cannot keep adding to the deficit.

Thank you for your consideration.

The resolution, with its preamble, reads as follows:

S. Res. 266

Whereas it is the family, striving for a future of opportunity and hope, that reflects our Nation’s belief in community, stability, and love;

Whereas the family remains an institution of pride, resilience, and encouragement;

Whereas we look to the family as an unwavering symbol of constancy that will help us discover a future of prosperity, promise, and potential;

Whereas within our Nation’s libraries and archives lie the treasured records that detail the history of our Nation, our States, our communities, and our citizens;

Whereas individuals from across our Nation and across the world have embarked on a genealogical journey by discovering who their ancestors were and how various forces shaped their past;

Whereas an ever-growing number of people in our Nation, and in other nations, are collecting and sharing genealogies, personal documents, and memorabilia that detail the life and times of families around the world;

Whereas approximately 60 percent of Americans have expressed an interest in tracing their family history;

Whereas the study of family history gives individuals a sense of their heritage and a sense of responsibility in carrying out a legacy that their ancestors began;

Whereas as individuals learn about their ancestors who worked so hard and sacrificed so much, their commitment to honor the memory of their ancestors by doing good is increased;

Whereas interest in our personal family history transcends all cultural and religious affiliations;

Whereas to encourage family history research, education, and the sharing of knowledge is to renew the commitment to the concept of home and family; and

Whereas the involvement of national, State, and local officials in promoting genealogy and in facilitating access to family history records in archives and libraries are important factors in the successful perception of nationwide camaraderie, support, and participation: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate—

(1) designates the month of October 2005, as ‘‘Family History Month’’; and

(2) calls upon the people of the United States to observe the month with appropriate ceremonies and activities.

AUTHORIZATION OF TESTIMONY, DOCUMENT PRODUCTION AND LEGAL REPRESENTATION

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate now proceed to the consideration of S. Res. 267, which was submitted earlier today.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the resolution by title.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A resolution (S. Res. 267) to authorize testimony, document production, and legal representation by Carol Carpenter and other employees of Senator Gregg’s office in connection with the testimony and document production authorized in section one of this resolution.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the resolution.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, this resolution concerns a request for testimony, documents, and representation in related criminal trespass actions in Concord District Court in the State of New Hampshire. In these actions, 6 defendants have been charged with criminally trespassing on the premises of Senator Judd Gregg’s Concord, NH, office on June 2, 2005, for refusing repeated requests to leave Senator Gregg’s office at the end of the business day in order to allow the office to close. Trials on the charge of trespass are scheduled to commence or about October 18, 2005. The State has subpoenaed a member of the Senator’s staff who witnessed the defendants’ conduct. The崩察委员会 would authorize that staff member, and any other employees of Senator Gregg’s office from whom evidence may be required, to testify and produce documents in connection with these actions.

Mr. FRIST. I ask unanimous consent that the resolution be agreed to, the preamble be agreed to and the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

PROGRAM

Mr. FRIST. The Senate has made tremendous progress on the bill today. It has been a very long day. The chairman and ranking member have done a superb job working with other chairmen and other ranking members throughout the course of the day to bring us to this point. I do want to congratulate Senator Stevens and Senator Byrd for their work. We will finish this bill before we leave on Friday, as we set out to do now about 7 or 8 days ago. We will have a very long session tomorrow. We have a lot of work to do. We are in this postcloture period. There are a lot of amendments to be processed and to be voted upon.

We are still working toward an agreement on the pensions bill. I hope to have progress to report on that front tomorrow. Aggressively, people have been working to bring legislation to that bill, and I am confident we will be able to do that but do not yet know the timing on that.
ORDER FOR ADJOURNMENT
Mr. FRIST. If there is no further business to come before the Senate, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate stand in adjournment under the previous order, following the remarks of Senator LANDRIEU.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

DISASTER RELIEF
Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, I rise to say a few words about the issue that the Senator from Louisiana is going to talk about, but I do not want to take any of her time away from her. I know it is late in the evening but if I could, I will say a few words before leaving the floor. I hope that my Senate colleagues who are following this debate and conversation, as well as those who are viewing these proceedings, understand what my colleague from Louisiana, Senator MARY LANDRIEU, and her friends Senator VITTER have been through.

They have faced a disaster virtually unprecedented in modern American history. Having been through a few minor disasters and floods in my area, I can only imagine the stress that they have been under to serve the public, which is their responsibility in the Senate. Though I do not know Senator VITTER as well, nor have I known him as long, I can certainly attest to his concern for the people of Louisiana. I can speak personally about the concern of Senator LANDRIEU.

From the moment I got her on the telephone—and it was not an easy task—while she was still fighting flood waters in her hometown of New Orleans, until this moment today, she has been consumed with one focused objective, what she can do to spare the suffering of the people she represents and to rebuild and recover from this terrible disaster.

I visited New Orleans a few weeks ago with a bipartisan delegation, met with her as well as Commander Allen, who is heading up the FEMA effort now, as well as Governor Blanco and Mayor Nagin, many of them local officials. It is clear now that they have faced challenges that most public servants do not dream of. The reason we are here tonight is because she is adrift. Senator LANDRIEU has been under to serve the public, which is their responsibility in the Senate. Though I do not know Senator VITTER as well, nor have I known him as long, I can certainly attest to his concern for the people of Louisiana. I can speak personally about the concern of Senator LANDRIEU.

The administration says it is going to cut the wages for construction workers who are going back to work to rebuild in Louisiana, Mississippi, and Alabama, exactly the opposite of what these families need to get back on their feet.

The administration has refused to come forward with the emergency housing that is needed for so many of these people who are literally at their wits’ end, trying to keep their families together living in the most extreme circumstances.

This Senator from Louisiana has been on the floor repeatedly, appealing to both sides of the aisle, but particularly to the majority, for help with health care for the people who have been displaced. Someone lucky enough to have health insurance when Hurricane Katrina hit may have lost not only their home but also their job and their health insurance, and now they are adrift. Senator LANDRIEU has been working with Senator THURSDAY, a Republican, and Senator BAUCUS, a Democrat, to make certain they have health care coverage. It is not enough to say if they show up in an emergency room, somebody will probably take care of them. We need to make sure you and your medical future to be for you and your family? That is not what Senator LANDRIEU wants and that is what she is fighting to change.

We have also seen the suggestion we cut back on cash payments to people who have no job, may not even have access to the unemployment checks or whatever they are entitled to at this moment.

I think one of the worst and crowning blows is this notion that somehow every penny we put into rebuilding America, rebuilding the Gulf Coast States—New Orleans, Louisiana, Mississippi, and Alabama—has to be paid for by cutting other programs that may help poor people. Today the Agriculture Committee is considering cuts in food stamps, $500 million or $600 million in cuts in food stamps so we can provide help to Hurricane Katrina victims. So we will literally take food from the mouths of babies and mothers and families across America to give them to the babies and mothers and families of Hurricane Katrina? Is that what it has come to in America?

The suggestion we would cut Medicaid for the poor and elderly and disabled in America, so we can provide that same Medicaid, that same health insurance for the poor and elderly and disabled and dislocated in Hurricane Katrina, is that what it has come to in America?

I think what troubles me the most is the situation here where there is an insistence by some of my colleagues that every penny we spend investing in rebuilding the Gulf Coast States has to be met by a cut in spending for the most vulnerable people in America. None of these people who are insisting on this match of cut for spending said that when we were talking about rebuilding Iraq—$18 billion, without a single dollar of it set off against any cut in spending. Not one of them brought up this idea of cutting spending to give tax breaks to the wealthiest people in America. But when it comes to the most vulnerable, those helpless victims of this hurricane, those states, they are demanding this setoff that, frankly, will make life more painful and difficult for vulnerable people all across America.

This is a real test of who we are and what we stand for. If we are truly in this together, if we are going to be unified as a nation and react as a community and as a family, we can do better. America can do better. I salute the Senator from Louisiana. I will turn the floor over to her, thank her for her leadership, and say this Senator and many others will fight with you to the bitter end to make sure the people you represent understand that they do not stand alone.

I yield the floor.

Ms. LANDRIEU. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Illinois, who has been such a champion for people in need, for people who need their Government to step up and to be with them in this time of difficulty. That is what governments are all about.

We appreciate the self-sufficiency of people. We appreciate the value of upward mobility. We appreciate the value of family that Illinois and Louisiana treasure, about moving forward. But we also understand when life throws you a curve ball, when you are hit by a monster storm, when the home you have worked for all your life and might in fact have paid for is literally washed away before your eyes; when the business that your father or your mother handed down to you and you built up to be something to be proud of, to turn over to your children, is gone in the flickering of an eye; when your child is hit by a monster storm and it was unexpected and the health insurance doesn’t pay for it and you have a child now who is in great need—you would think we would have a government that would not question whether we should be there to help.

We would say: Of course. This is America. This is what we do. We help each other through difficult times.

That is the way the country used to be. That is the country I grew up in. But I am standing here now on the floor at a quarter to 11 on Wednesday night. We are getting ready to pass a very important bill. We, the other Senator from Louisiana, Senator VITTER, and I, have been patient—persistent but patient over the 31 days since this first hurricane hit Louisiana and devastated our largest city and rocked the whole southern part of our State back on its heels. We have been to countless meetings, countless conferences, countless telephone conversations, countless visits from shelters to briefing rooms. We have outlined what we need. I have to stand here now at a quarter to 11 on... a Wednesday night with the idea that Congress is basically prepared to go home and do nothing other than what we have done, which is give $62 billion to an agency that does not work.

That is where we are. Thirty-one days after the worst natural disaster in the history of the country, the subsequent breaking of a levee system that is primarily the fault of the Federal Government—not only but primarily the fault of the Federal Government from decades of neglect and disinvestment, disengagement, and disinterest—and I have to go tell my constituents that people in Congress needed a break and we had to go home, and the only thing we could do is give $62 billion to the agency about which the only thing we all seem to agree, Republican and Democrat, House and Senate, is that it doesn’t work.

I sent a letter—I have sent many, but this is another letter—to the leadership, to say:

Although a month has passed since Hurricane Katrina destroyed the lives and livelihoods of hundreds of thousands of Americans, after the worst natural disaster in the history of the country, the subsequent breaking of a levee system that is primarily the fault of the Federal Government—not only but primarily the fault of the Federal Government from decades of neglect and disinvestment, disengagement, and disinterest—and I have to go tell my constituents that people in Congress needed a break and we had to go home, and the only thing we could do is give $62 billion to the agency about which the only thing we all seem to agree, Republican and Democrat, House and Senate, is that it doesn’t work.

In order to provide immediate relief to millions of Americans, I am suggesting that part of the FEMA money to millions of Americans, I am suggesting. If people it could help, we may do nothing.

strange schools. Children have been doing beautifully though, showing up to a brand new school, sometimes without any of their friends with them. I have been through the shelters. I have seen the children leave, I have seen them come back. They are doing a great job.

The only people not doing very well are the Members of Congress on the House side and the administration that can’t seem to find $3 billion to let the States know that those children’s tuition will be paid for. Maybe public schools can survive this. Maybe public schools just know: I am a public school and I know I am going to get our money. But what about the parochial schools?

Let me also remind you that these schools are employers. They employ teachers and support staff. Maybe they can wait until January, but since the administration has said we want to give help—$4,000 a child or up to $7,500 per child, we hope the States of Mississippi, Louisiana, Alabama, and Texas are whole—we should allow the schools that have taken in these children to be compensated at some great expense to the schools that were already full.

Let’s take the State of Arkansas. They took 75,000 people; maybe they have 25,000 children or maybe only 20,000 children. Those children have gone to schools in Arkansas. They have taken them in. Those schools have not received one penny for those children and are not quite sure if they will. They have taken them in anyway, though. The parents do not know if their children are going to be paid for or if they will have to pick up a second tuition. Some of them have already paid tuition for the school they were in before the hurricane hit.

I am wondering, why is this complicated? the National Geographic article. So not only do we have to get this right for the gulf coast, which has been hit hard and knocked down—but not knocked out—we have to fix this so it does not happen again, and if it does, the people of Florida, too, to some extent. Anyway, the way the people of Louisiana and Mississippi have had to suffer; so the people of New York would not have to go through what we went through.

But I do not know if I have hope about how any of these graphic they remind us of something that I knew of as a kid. Everybody in Louisiana knows about it. It was Hurricane Betsy—the largest natural disaster in the history of the country. There is a hurricane that all the old-timers know about that hit in 1965, Hurricane Betsy. It flooded a great area of the metropolitan area, Plaquemines Parish, Saint Bernard Parish, and the Lower Nine, which was also terribly affected by Katrina.

As a result of Betsy, the Federal Government did the same thing. President Lyndon Johnson came down at the request actually of Senator Russell Long from Louisiana who said: Please come, see what has happened, and help us.

President, I am proud to say, came down and seemed to do more than we are doing now. I have a memo that I got from the Lyndon Baines Johnson Library today, as he happened to Congress what needed to be done. Maybe this would inspire us to do more. Anyway, that hurricane occurred. We set out to build a levee system, a bold, aggressive plan for a levee system. But somewhere along the way that plan fell by the wayside. Congress got distracted. Other priorities came up. Even though our delegation, decade after decade, Republican and Democrat, pleaded, begged, and used our own political chits to add money to the executive budget every year for levees and flood protection and important dredging projects, it was never a promise that was fulfilled.

So we find ourselves, 40 years after Betsy, having basically a collapse of a levee system. I would like to be optimistic, but I am not sure I can be, because in 1927 the great flood before Betsy did the same thing. The picture I have now is eerily the same, except there is no overpass. This first picture was taken in 1927. This other one was taken in 2005. You would think that a sophisticated country such as ours—sophisticated government—such as ours—would understand that every now and then you have to make smart investments and smart decisions about levee protection and about growth.

So I am hoping, since we had this once in 1927, we flourished again in the 1960s, and now in 2005, we could learn some lessons about how to prevent this because it is preventable. We are not the only people in the world who live below sea level. There are examples all over the Earth of people who have to live close to the water for trade and commerce purposes who have managed to discipline themselves, restrain themselves, wisely spend their money, and invest it in the protections that their homeowners and their businesses and their people need to have a long and prosperous and safe existence.

But we did not learn it in 1927 sufficiently. We did not learn it in 1965. And I am hoping today we can learn it in 2005.

Before we build the levee system, though, we have to face the immediate issues, which is why we sent this letter to the leadership, which I have said: Let's not go home until we take some money from FEMA, which has $43 billion and is not spending it very well. And everyone agrees with that. There is not a person in Congress who is most-just 31 days, we said: is distributing this money. It is not because they do not have some people at FEMA. I have met many of them. They are caring and compassionate individuals.

But FEMA is not organized to manage this crisis, and they are the agency that should be coordinating it. They are not resourced. They are not staffed. They are not organized because they were put in the Department of Homeland Security, stripped of much of their independence. Their budget was slashed. Most of the people who knew how to run disasters either left or were asked to leave. So they have a group of people who have not experienced, not as well organized, and not prepared.

As a result, our people in Louisiana, Mississippi, and Alabama are suffering. So instead of complaining more about it, which we have done ad nauseam almost daily, say: Oh, let's move on here. Let's take some of the money that is not being used and direct it immediately to things that would really make a difference in people's lives and, most importantly, would send the positive signal that help is on the way.

So I do not know why we are not able to do this, which is why I have called this up this bill, the Grassley-Baucus bill, why I am going to push and insist and really make a difference in people's lives and, most importantly, would send the positive signal that help is on the way.

So I do not know why we are not able to do this, which is why I have called this up this bill, the Grassley-Baucus bill, why I am going to push and insist and use all the power I have as a Senator from this State of Louisiana, with anyone else, Republican or Democrat, who will help to try to get this message to the White House, to the House leadership, please do not abandon the people of Louisiana again, and the people of Mississippi again, and the people of Alabama again by leaving before we do something to help them in a direct and concrete manner.

Now, that there have been a lot of press releases issued. I will submit those for the RECORD. There are lots of messages that people give out, that people are asked to say—things like: The President has called on all Americans to help those in need; the President has asked for this; So and so has asked for this; please tell people they are not alone.

We have programs such as the opportunity zones, urban homesteading. I think there is some merit in some of this that has been proposed. I am not opposed to exploring options for anything to encourage home ownership.

But right now there is something we also is going to matter because there will not be a city to do it in, or there will not be a county that is functioning when the schools manage to get rebuilt, when any businesses decide to take advantage of the tax credits we have given them to open, there will not be a city to move into.

We are trying to get some of our neighborhoods back in New Orleans, and the mayor and Federal officials and the Governor have been working through a complicated plan that is not universally supported. But I can understand why we have to go neighborhood by neighborhood, because some neighborhoods are totally uninhabitable. You want to bring some people back in, and either of moving people back into Algiers, which is where we want to move them on the west bank, or back into the CBD, if the mayor has to let 3,000 people off this week and 3,000 people off next week?

difficulty. Because of their sheer determination to do so, they stayed open. As a result, Ochsner can’t qualify for insurance because they never closed their doors. But if we don’t give them some immediate help, this well-respected institution may not be able to keep their doors open. They are one of the largest employers, most respected institutions. What are we going to do, say, sorry, come back in a month? They may not be here in a month.

We don’t need to do on this list our universities. The University of New Orleans, Southern University, Dillard University, Xavier University, Tulane University, Loyola University, and our largest community college, Delgado, which had five feet of water around it. These are not only the brainpower that is going to help us rebuild a city greater and better, higher and stronger and smarter, these are employers who employ thousands of the professionals who make up the heart of our region. We don’t need to do their list on that. They were on the front page of the New York Times, on CNN last night, saying: Does anybody know we are out here? We are not able to make payroll. Why don’t they be able to make payroll? They have students in their university. So what does the president of the university tell his faculty: Go to Atlanta and come back in 2 years? And if Xavier is not functioning, and Dillard is not functioning, and the University of New Orleans isn’t operating, and Tulane can’t get completely back up, and Loyola, who do the small businesses we are trying to give tax credits to, who do they sell their products to if there are no large businesses that have survived?

Let me talk about one other employer, the Catholic Church. There are people in this Congress who have this idea that in a storm such as this or in a hurricane or disaster, let’s have faith-based initiatives. Churches do beautiful work. The synagogues do beautiful work. People of faith have done so many things that I want to say thank you to everyone who has helped in every way. But in my city, as a Catholic city predominantly, the Catholic Church not only runs schools and senior centers and feeding centers and homeless shelters, they don’t think of themselves as a business. They think of themselves as a ministry. They, in fact, are the largest employers in our region and have been since before the Government actually existed in the way we know it today. In other words, the Ursuline nuns, the nuns of the Holy Sisters, the Sisters of the Poor, the Jesuits came to the city before we even had an American Government and helped to stand the city up. That is how long they have been there. They have helped decade after decade, through every tragedy, the nuns, the priests, the teachers have been there.

Now their schools are ruined. Their hospitals are ruined. They come to ask the Government for some help. We act like, go ask a faith-based institution. Whom should they go ask? They have to let off maybe 1,500 people. Why would we want our largest employer to let go people so these people who are trained to deliver services, who are the social workers of the city, the psychologists of the city, the counselors of the city, the teachers of the city could go to Atlanta or Houston or Michigan or Dallas and come back here? We need them to stay there and help us build the city and community.

I am sure that is true in Waveland. I am sure it is true throughout the gulf coast of Mississippi. Instead we get: Go ask a faith-based institution for help. Go ask a church. They are the church. They can’t even save their own employees so how are they going to help everyone else? I don’t know what has happened to this church that makes me frightened to think about how far we have come as a nation that we don’t understand the role of the Federal Government at a time such as this, that we are so focused on tax cuts, on other priorities, that when hard-working Americans, hard-working American citizens, who have done nothing but work hard all their lives to build some equity, to get to a place not of luxury but of peace and comfort, lose everything in the blink of an eye, we have to come up here to the Federal Government and beg on their behalf, instead of the Federal Government saying: This is why we are here. That is what being part of a nation is all about. If one State is hurting, the other 48 can lift them up. Or if two States are hurting, the other 48 can lift them up.

Instead, we have to listen to editorial after editorial saying: Why can’t Louisiana be more self-reliant? The State needs to demonstrate self-reliance. The Budget Director of Louisiana reported to our legislature that their revenues will be short $1 billion out of a budget of approximately $14 billion. But the State needs to be self-reliant; the people in Louisiana are not self-reliant.

I want to show a picture of a woman who I think is self-reliant. She is not on a wagon train out West, but this is what I think about self-reliance. She has her baby in her arms. She is doing the best she can in a very tough situation. I want to show some other pictures of self-reliance.

This is a woman for whom no one came. She probably has no car, but she has the two babies that she can carry, and I am sure if she had a third, she would have managed to put a third one in her arms and wade through 5 feet of water to try to get these children to safety. This is what Senator LANDRUM thinks is being self-reliant.

The picture that is on this page here is in this magazine of some people in a boat. There is a picture in this magazine of about 10 people in a boat. The boat does not have the Coast Guard emblem—and let me thank the Coast Guard. They saved 32,000 people in the course of 3 and 4 days; 32,000 the Coast Guard alone saved out of houses, off porches, off roofs. That is not counting the thousands of people who were saved by Water and Fish, and let been agreed to by Republicans and Democrats alike before we leave so we can give hope to people.

I am going to stand here on this floor all day tomorrow and use every pressure point I can to see that some agreement can be reached to do something before we leave and when we come back, to agree to up-or-down votes on some critical bills on which we need action now. We don’t get action on them, anything we do in January or February or March or April, in large measure, will be for nought because the counties, cities, parishes, police departments, and fire departments that we are trying to help may not make it that long. Without them, it is very hard, if not impossible, to build our communities and build our cities.

In conclusion, people want to come home. Some people may not be able to. But as a Senator from Louisiana, I want people to know from our State that everyone is welcome home. All people are welcome, and we want everyone back. We are doing the very best we can to try to provide and prioritize what we need to do first, second, and third in order to get people back and get our communities started again.

Not only is New Orleans a great city, but the region is pretty spectacular and special. The whole gulf coast is a place that when you grow up in New Orleans, you know about Waveland, Pass Christian, places that are very special to people along that gulf coast. Generation after generation of families have vacationed together and lived together and worshipped together and gone to school together, and it is gone.

We would like the help of this Nation to build it back higher, stronger, and better. We don’t want to waste a penny, but we need this help now. Let us act when we come back early in the morning to get some of this done and to work with our colleagues to see that we can get help to the people who are desperately in need of help.

I yield the floor.
