The House met at noon and was called to order by the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. Price of Georgia).

DESIGNATION OF THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE
The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following communication from the Speaker:
WASHINGTON, DC, December 12, 2005.
I hereby appoint the Honorable Tom Price to act as Speaker pro tempore on this day.
J. DENNIS HASTERT
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE
The SPEAKER pro tempore. Will the gentlewoman from California (Ms. Pelosi) come forward and lead the House in the Pledge of Allegiance.
Ms. PELOSI led the Pledge of Allegiance as follows:
I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

COMMUNICATION FROM THE OFFICE OF THE CHIEF ADMINISTRATIVE OFFICER
The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following communication from John Hodges, Manager, Office Supply Service, U.S. House of Representatives:
Hon. J. DENNIS HASTERT,
Speaker, House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. SPEAKER: This is to notify you formally, pursuant to Rule VIII of the Rules of the House of Representatives, that I have been served with a criminal subpoena, issued by the Superior Court of the District of Columbia, for testimony.
After consultation with the Office of General Counsel, I have determined that compliance with the subpoena is consistent with the precedents and privileges of the House.
Sincerely,
JOHN HODGES,
Manager, Office Supply Service U.S. House of Representatives.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS
(Ms. Pelosi asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)
Ms. PELOSI, Mr. Speaker, as we enter what may be the last week of this session of Congress, I rise to once again state the need for this Congress not to adjourn until we have addressed some of the pressing needs of the American people. Three of them loom large.

One is as we go into this holiday season, America’s families across the country are receiving high bills for their home heating oil. I believe that this Congress should not adjourn until we resolve some of the huge subsidies that this Congress gave to oil companies at a time when they are receiving record and historic profits. These bills will hit home at a time when families can least afford it. Congress should act before we leave.

Secondly, as seniors are bewildered and befuddled by the prescription drug bill that has been foisted upon them by this Congress, I urge Congress not to leave until we extend the time needed for seniors to fully address that bill, also to address in it the prospect of giving the U.S. Government negotiating power for lower prices, and address the reimportation issue as well to lower the cost of prescription drugs for America’s seniors. It is clear that this legislation has done nothing to lower the cost of prescription drugs for America’s middle-income seniors.

Third, all of America mourned the loss of life in the gulf States. We have seen destruction in that area of biblical magnitude. And here we are over 100 days since Katrina and there are so many emergency needs unmet, housing needs unmet, education needs unmet, I do not believe that it is fair for this Congress to adjourn until we address some of the immediate needs of the victims of Katrina, most particularly the housing needs of the survivors of Katrina.

With that, Mr. Speaker, I urge the Speaker of the House to keep us here in session until we address the issue of home heating oil for America’s families, until we address the needs of America's seniors in the prescription drug bill, and until we address the needs of the victims of Katrina.

It is made even more urgent, this staying in session, by the fact that rumor has it that Congress will not be coming back until January 31. That would be six down weeks of no action on the part of this Congress at a time when America's families are feeling severe pain.

Again, I urge this Congress to stay in session until we get our job done for the American people.

Adjournment

Ms. PELOSI. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 12 o'clock and 8 minutes p.m.), under its previous order, the House adjourned until tomorrow, Tuesday, December 13, 2005, at 12:30 p.m., for morning hour debate.

PRAYER
The Chaplain, Dr. Barry C. Black, offered the following prayer:

Let us pray.

O God, You reveal Yourself in the glory of the heavens and in the whisper of conscience. Make us aware of Your presence as this day unfolds. Grant that this knowledge of Your involvement in our day will influence our thoughts, words, and deeds. Help us to focus on serving and pleasing You, as You lift us above suspicions and fears. Sustain our lawmakers in their important work. Remind them that to do something well usually requires the patience to not hurry the process. Remove perplexities and give them Your peace. Open their minds to the counsels of Your eternal wisdom. Increase in us all a hunger and thirst for righteousness.

We pray in Your Holy Name. Amen.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

RECOGNITION OF THE MAJORITY LEADER
The President pro tempore. The majority leader is recognized.

SCHEDULE
Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, today we are returning to session in order to conclude our work for the first session of the 109th Congress. I want to welcome everybody back after a couple of weeks where people have been with constituents and people have been working very hard to bring to conclusion many of the issues that were left unfinished a couple of weeks ago. Real progress has been made over the course of the last 2 weeks. Over the course of this past weekend, a lot of work has been done. As I mentioned prior to Thanksgiving, we will be working today and tomorrow on a number of issues. However, the first rollover vote will be on Wednesday morning.

Many of our colleagues have asked about the schedule for this week, this weekend, as well as next week. As things unfold and as my discussions with the Democratic leader continue, we will be forthcoming to let people know exactly what we expect. We would like to finish up our work as quickly as possible prior to the Christmas holiday. However, everyone does need to be prepared to stay as long as necessary to finish the work that is before us.

Today, we expect to reach an agreement on several motions to instruct the conference on the deficit reduction bill that is at the desk. We would have those motions debated tomorrow, on Tuesday, and on Wednesday, with votes to occur or begin to occur Wednesday morning.

We also expect to debate the Bahrain Free Trade Agreement during tomorrow’s session under a short-time agreement.

The PATRIOT Act conference report will arrive in the Senate sometime this week, and we will proceed to that conference report when it is available.

Chairman WARNER has completed work on the Defense authorization conference report, and that may also be around here midweek. We also need to complete the appropriations process by taking up and taking action on the final 2 conference reports. This week we need to act on the Labor-HHS appropriations as well as the Defense Appropriations Committee reports.

I mentioned reconciliation. A lot of work has been done over the course of the last several weeks among the various committees. I want to continue to encourage all chairmen to aggressively work with their House counterparts on this important reconciliation bill. Clearly, a lot of work remains, but with the cooperation and patience of all Members, I believe we can get our work done and adjourn in a timely way. It is going to be up to each and every one of us to decide when we will be able to finish our business and adjourn this session. Senators will need to keep their schedules flexible over the course of this week and I believe we can finish everything this week. If not, we would have to continue into next week—or this week and this weekend, and if not, we would have to continue into the early part of next week, but we should be able to complete everything this week. Again, everybody, please keep your schedules flexible.

I do want to thank all Senators in advance for their help as we schedule these final days.

I yield the floor.

FILIBUSTERING
Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, will the distinguished majority leader yield?
Mr. FRIST. I am happy to.
Mr. BYRD. I want to congratulate the majority leader on helping to get these appropriations bills all passed. We discussed this, he and I, several times during the last several weeks among the various committees. I want to continue to encourage all chairmen to aggressively work with their House counterparts on this important reconciliation bill. Clearly, a lot of work remains, but with the cooperation and patience of all Members, I believe we can get our work done and adjourn in a timely way. It is going to be up to each and every one of us to decide when we will be able to finish our business and adjourn this session. Senators will need to keep their schedules flexible over the course of this week and I believe we can finish everything this week. If not, we would have to continue into next week—or this week and this weekend, and if not, we would have to continue into the early part of next week, but we should be able to complete everything this week. Again, everybody, please keep your schedules flexible.

I do want to thank all Senators in advance for their help as we schedule these final days.

I yield the floor.
months ago. It was my hope then that the leader would help to get all the bills passed so that we would not have an omnibus bill. He indicated he was going to try to do that, and he has tried and I want to congratulate him. I want to congratulate Senator Frist.

I think we ought to always pass these appropriations bills. The distinguished Presiding Officer, when he was chairman, got all the bills out of the committee; Senator Stevens got all the appropriations bills out of the committee. He was the chairman of the committee, I believe, at that point, the Appropriations Committee. I was the ranking member. I complimented him then. I compliment the distinguished majority leader and Senator Thad Cochran on getting this done. I compliment him.

While I am complimenting the Senator, I want to ask the Senator a question, and I do it with great respect. I respect the Senator from Tennessee. He is a great physician. And every night I pray to the Great Physician and the Senator from Tennessee is following in the footsteps of that Great Physician.

But I have a question. I saw something which concerned me in the paper this morning. The Washington Post. The Washington Post had the good judgment to place this in a very visible place in the Post. It is a great newspaper. Page A5. Here are the headlines that bothered me:

Frist Cautions Senators Against Stalling Alito Vote.

And then the subheadline: Democrats Don’t Plan Filibuster.

The first paragraph says:

The Senator is right. It says, ‘Frist cautions Senators against stalling Alito vote.’

I am a Democrat, and it has never been my desire to strip Republicans of their power. I was here—I believe the first election I cast a vote in was 1936. I think I was old enough to vote then. I would have been 20 years old in that session of Congress, which met in January 1937. I believe there were only 16 Republicans in the Senate at that time. The Senate only had 96 Members then. It didn’t have 100 but 96 Members. There were only 16 Republicans and there were 4 independents—former and later, et cetera—and 76 Democrats. Can you imagine that? Yet there was never any threat on the part of the Democrats in 1936. I think that was the first time I cast a vote, and I was proud of that Democratic Congress. I don’t think there was any threat on the part of Republicans to kill the filibuster, to kill the provisions in Senate rule XXII that allowed freedom of speech in the Senate. When I saw this a few months back, we had this wave of insaneness. That swept over the Senate. We were talking about the nuclear option, so-called constitutional option. There is nothing in the Constitution about it. It is an unconstitutional option.

I was sorry to see that my friend, Senator Frist, this fine Senator from Tennessee, the majority leader of the Senate and a great physician, was threatening—this is what the newspaper said—‘threatened yesterday to strip Democrats of the power to filibuster if they block the vote on Supreme Court nominee Samuel A. Alito, Jr.’

That nominee came in to see me a while back. I had a nice talk with him. I was much impressed by Judge Alito. I was not yet minded yet. But I liked what he said when he was in my office, and I might vote for him. I don’t know yet.

But I have not heard a Democrat use the word ‘filibuster’ in connection with this nomination. I haven’t heard anybody use that word ‘filibuster.’ It was news to me that the distinguished majority leader was talking about a threat of stripping Democrats of the power to filibuster if they block the vote on Supreme Court nominee Samuel A. Alito, Jr.

Just one more minute, and then I will yield to the distinguished leader. This is my 47th year in the Senate. I will finish the 47th year this month. And I never dreamed that during my tenure in the Senate—I didn’t know how long the tenure would be at that time—there would be any effort to undermine, or to terminate, or to threaten the freedom of speech in the Senate. That is a freedom that goes back to the Magna Carta in 1215, and then in the reign of Henry IV. He reigned in England during the years 1399 to 1413. And during his tenure he proclaimed that the members of the House of Commons had a perfect right to speak their minds. So there was freedom of speech in the English House of Commons under Henry IV.

Then when the Declaration of Rights came along in 1689, before the Constitution, I was here—William and Mary, as King and Queen in England, they exacted from those two individuals a promise that they would honor the rights of Englishmen, the rights of people in the House of Commons, to speak their minds. That was on February 13, 1689. Then on December 16, 1689, they wrote that into the law. That became a statute in the Bill of Rights.

In the United States, our forefathers drew those provisions from the English Bill of Rights into our own Bill of Rights 100 years later, in 1789.

So I am greatly disturbed when any majority leader, a Senator as powerful as the distinguished Senator from Tennessee—as I have been majority leader, I know the power of a majority leader—but I would never, I say this with respect to the distinguished Senator—and when we were in power, the Democrats, as I say, when Republicans only had 16 Members here, the Democrats controlled the Senate and allowed freedom of speech in the Senate and not allowed the Republicans to filibuster. But there was never any thought of it.

That is not a great idea. It didn’t take a fellow to fall off a turnip truck to think of that. There is nothing brilliant about saying if there is a filibuster, all we need is the might and power of the majority to vote the rules and ignore them differently. And it could be done; no doubt about it. We could do that. But the Democrats never—and no party in history, Republicans or Democrats—threatened to deny freedom of speech to members of the minority. I dare say a lot of Members on that side of the aisle, the Republican side of the aisle, don’t like that idea. I don’t think they would agree with that because they have a right to filibuster, too. The Republicans do. I respect that right.

I am sorry I read that by the Senator. I will read it once more. Senate majority leader Bill Frist, Republican of Tennessee, threatened yesterday to strip Democrats of the power to filibuster if they block the vote on Supreme Court nominee Samuel A. Alito, Jr.

I haven’t heard any Democrat talk about that. As a matter of fact, I think we are going to have a vote on him. We will debate it. We certainly have a right to debate. I joined the group of 14 so there wouldn’t be filibusters against these judgships, except in extreme cases when I might join a filibuster, too. But may I say most respectfully to the distinguished leader, I hope we will quit talk about this so-called ‘nuclear option.’ That is a threat to the freedom of speech, freedom of speech, freedom of speech, here in the Senate.

I yield to the distinguished Senator, the leader whom I do respect. The President pro tempore. The majority leader is recognized.

Mr. Frist. Thank you, Mr. President.

Let me take a look at the article. I haven’t read the Washington Post today. But I appreciate my good friend and colleague bringing this to my attention.

The Senator is right. It says, ‘Frist cautions Senators against stalling Alito vote.’

It is pretty accurate. And I guess the Senator’s followup statement is that no Democrat is talking about filibuster, and here you have the majority leader of this body saying if there is a filibuster he is going to ask for an up-or-down vote consistent with giving advice and consent. But I know the distinguished colleague from West Virginia has been focused on lots of things going on.

But let me better inform him about what the other headlines have been saying about what Democrats are thinking and doing—the allegation that no Democrats are thinking about filibuster, citing headlines.

It is a pretty accurate article, actually, as I glance through it. Associated Press, November 1, 2005. These are just some other headlines that are out there. Republicans Enthusiastic About Alito While Democrats Are Wondering Whether To Filibuster.
That is November 1.

Headline in the Bergen County, New Jersey Record: “Democrats Mull Possible Filibuster,” November 21.

The Hill, which we all see several times a week, November 1: “Dems Hint At Filibuster.”

And the International Herald Tribune, other headlines: “Democrats Don’t Rule Out Filibuster To Block Nominee.”

These are some of the other headlines that at least cause the leader on this side of the aisle to say—not just this majority leader, not just Chris Wallace. He asked the question, if a filibuster is conducted, you can see all around the country—whether it is up in New Jersey, in Boston, MA, or right here on the Hill—there must be some Democrats thinking, at least thinking, contemplating, how we can use a tool we use.

I would argue, and I know there is a difference of opinion, unfairly, against not just one nominee or two or three but four, five, six, seven, eight, nine, 10 times in the last 3 years Presidential nominees who had gone through commit- tee, come to the Senate, filibustered again and again and again—used as a regular tool. That is wrong.

Therefore, I believe in the principle of an up-or-down vote. If someone is nominated by the President and has the highest qualifications according to the American Bar Association, with advice and consent under the Constitution, they have gone through the committee, come from the committee and were recommended to this Senate, I believe in that principle of an up-or-down vote.

Those are the various headlines. The response would be, but those are the headlines and headlines are like these headlines in here, some headline writer response would be, but those are the headlines and headlines are like these headlines in here, some headline writer thinking about it. My distinguished colleague is not aware of these, but that comes to me.

Senator Dick Durbin to CBC’s Jan Crawford Greenberg:

Are you refusing to rule that filibuster out now? Do you think that’s still likely or is it just highly unlikely?

Senator Durbin responds:

Let’s complete the hearing in January, then make a decision whether we should go forward with the nomination of Judge Alito. That was November 6.

Senator Biden on November 17, from the Congress Daily AM:

As Democrats stepped up questioning of Samuel Alito’s Supreme Court nomination, Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., warned the nominee Wednesday he might need Biden’s vote on a potential filibuster if the judge is not confirmed. . . . I told him you probably don’t need my vote to get on the bench, Biden continues, but if you are disingenuous in the hearings, you may need my vote there.

Senator Russ Feingold—again, to show it is not just one or two or three or four, said it was perfectly fine to use a filibuster. Those are Senator Fein- gold’s words on ABC’s This Week.

I think it’s perfectly fine to use a filibuster if somebody is clearly unacceptable. That is an option we have. It has almost never been used with regard to a Supreme Court justice, so it takes an extreme case, but I was the one Democrat who was unhappy publically with the sort of deal that was made earlier in the year that kind of let certain judges go through that shouldn’t have gone through.

The right to filibuster is part of our role in the Senate, and we should reserve the right but use it only very sparingly.

After meeting with Judge Alito, Senator Tim Johnson basically refused to rule out supporting a filibuster. I will leave all those options on the table. I continue with Reid spokesman Jim Manley on Alito:

All procedural options are on the table.

Our colleague, Charles Schumer, from New York: Nothing is on the table, and nothing is off the table.

Senator Barbara Boxer from California: The filibuster’s on the table.

These are all quotations, from Republicans enthusiastic about Alito and Democrats wonder whether to fili- buster.

The Associated Press, November 1, Senator Boxer:

The filibuster’s on the table.

Senator Tom Harkin not only believes there will be a filibuster but relishes the prospect—that is not a quotation; this is sort of a point taken from the quotation from an article in the Baltimore Sun November 2.

Senator Tom Harkin, Iowa, Democrat said:

I believe Democrats will filibuster this nominee on the basis that he’s way too ideological to the right. We need a moderate on the court, not an avowed right winger like him that would upset the balance.

These are from your side of the aisle. I know my distinguished colleague is not aware of these, but that comes to me.

My response in large part is there is a lot of talk about filibuster out there. If the filibuster is going to be threat- ening, Democrats such as Judge Alito who does have that modest temperament, who has been confirmed by this body two times, who has been involved with 2,500 cases before, has written 250 opinions, who my distinguished colleagues have had the chance to meet with, I have had the chance to meet with, has the sort of temperament where he will not be legislating from the bench, he deserves a vote in the Senate. Vote him up, vote him down. If that is the way Members feel, but he deserves a vote in the Senate.

I don’t think it will come to a fili- buster. I don’t want it to come to a fil- buster. I haven’t even brought the fili- busters up except in response to a ques- tion on television on one of the Sunday shows, but I did make it clear at the Republican conference that I strongly believe a man of the quality of Sam Alito simply deserves the respect, the dignity of having a vote in this Senate. Everyone can vote the way they want to. Again, it will be overwhelming by the time we finish this process. That will be, I believe, before January 20, at some point.

I do not want to posture on this. This is not a Democratic or Republican issue. This is an American issue. It is an issue that reflects on this Senate because it is our unique responsibility.

I am absolutely confident in large part because of the challenges we have gone through for the last 2 1/2 years in talking about filibuster and having it not used very rarely. We are not talking about filibustering legislation where you can come in and modify and go to conference and have all these procedural tools. We are talking about the dignity of giving up-or-down votes in the Senate. It has been tough. As the distinguished former majority leader knows, it has been very tough the last 3 years we’ve gone through this process, where for 214 years, for judi- cial nominees coming from the executive branch, coming from the President of the United States, coming here is the tool of a filibuster being used rou- tinely, 10 times—10 times—in the last 3 years, where for the 214 years before that, rare, rare, rare, rare.

So I feel we are back on course today. I do not think we will see a filibuster. I do not think people really want a fili- bust, I think there is a lot of pos- turing there. But I will do everything I possibly can. If your side chooses, if the Democrat side chooses to fili- bust, chooses to obstruct, chooses to terest groups. We have the DNC Chair- man Howard Dean saying the fol- lowing, from Reuters, November 13:

Despite early signals to the contrary, U.S. Senate Democrats must keep open the op- tion of blocking a vote on U.S. Supreme Court nominee Samuel Alito, Democratic Party leader Howard Dean said on Sunday . . . Dean, asked if Democrats should keep the possibility of a filibuster on the table, said, ‘Absolutely. Of course we should.’
stop this Nation’s business, I will use all the tools. If they pull that sheath out, if the other side pulls that sheath out, I will use all the tools I have to simply get an up-or-down vote on the floor of the Senate for the President’s judicial nominees. That is what the Senate is for.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. FRIST. Yes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. THOMAS). The Senator from West Virginia?

Mr. BYRD. I am sorry to hear the distinguished majority leader say what he just said. In the first place, I hear no talk of a filibuster. But who knows? If something should come up that we have not seen heretofore or have not heard heretofore about the nominee, which is entirely possible—not probable, I don’t think—if that should happen, I can understand how Senators would say they are not going to give up the rules in such an event. I do not foresee that. The threat itself is a threat against freedom of speech.

Now, the distinguished Senator from Tennessee is a great physician. But this is the Senate. And the Senate talks about our forefathers. Our forefathers did not design to stoop to a King or a President. And this Senate is a forum, probably the only forum that is left in this country, where freedom of speech reigns. That is the purpose of this Senate. That is why we have a Senate. The filibuster in such an event and that the distinguished Senator, who is a distinguished physician, would not have it on his scutcheon that he threatened freedom of speech in the Senate and threatened the filibuster.

The filibuster has been around a long time. It has a bad name in some instances, but filibusters have sometimes been the tool by which free men and women in this Senate have exercised their right to oppose something. And I detect this mention of a nuclear option, the constitutional option. There is nothing constitutional about it, nothing. Nothing constitutional about that.

Freedom of speech is underwritten in the Constitution and the Bill of Rights—freedom of speech—and that also includes the Senate. Freedom of speech, we have always had freedom of speech in the Senate. And as I say, any person who fell off a turnip truck could think what he wishes. Well, we have not the freedom of speech, if we just go against the rules and throw reason to the winds, we can stop a filibuster. We can take that away from the Democrats. How terrible that would be.

I hope I will never hear the Senator from Tennessee say this again. He is a Senator, and the right of freedom of speech is his as the majority leader, and he should embrace that right with the intention to die if necessary if anyone sought to take that freedom of speech away from the Senate.

We are here as emissaries of the people who send us here. And the people out there in West Virginia, they cannot speak on this Senate floor. Young people out there in West Virginia or in Tennessee cannot speak on this Senate floor. But their representatives in the Senate—I am one of those—have a right to speak as long as I can stand on my feet. And if I cannot—

Now, I am not threatening a filibuster. But I have filibustered in the past. And I would do so again. I will say to the distinguished Senator, I have been in the Senate 47 years. Now, the distinguished Senator if ever he have that—I would suggest the Senator not even use the threat again. I do not mean to be lecturing the Senator of what he can and cannot do. He can do that. He has freedom of speech, as I have. He can threaten anything he wants. He is the majority leader. And he may have the power to carry it off. But he might not have.

Now, I will guarantee you one thing, I say, Mr. Leader, when somebody tries to kill freedom of speech in the Senate, they are going to have the American people to deal with—the American people. That is what our Constitution is all about: freedom of speech, freedom of the press, freedom of religion. And freedom of speech obtains here in the Senate. It has always been fine Republican leaders. Howard Baker, a former Republican leader, was a real statesman. The Panama Canal treaties would not have been approved by this Senate had it not been for Howard Baker. And the others, Everett Dirksen—my goodness, they never threatened freedom of speech in the Senate.

Republicans as well as Democrats have seen the wisdom of being able to filibuster if they are trying to protect the people of their State or the people of the country from some violation of their constitutional rights.

I thank the Senator. He has been very respectful toward me. I hope I am just as respectful toward him. If he wants to say anything now, he has the floor.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I thank my distinguished colleague from West Virginia. Citing headlines, I guess to score political points, is useful. But I think the headlines you cite, without citing the headlines I cited—I had eight or nine that basically say Democrats are threatening filibuster, at least to our colleagues or to the American people, and Mr. Baker, the—he had that, where Democrats—and I named six Senators on your side of the aisle who are talking about filibuster. So we cleared that up. I appreciate my distinguished colleague saying that while I was on the floor so we can clear that that other side of the Senate—Bob Dole and the others, Everett Dirksen—my goodness, they never threatened freedom of speech in the Senate.

Republicans as well as Democrats have seen the wisdom of being able to filibuster if they are trying to protect the people of their State or the people of the country from some violation of their constitutional rights.

I thank the Senator. He has been very respectful toward me. I hope I am just as respectful toward him. If he wants to say anything now, he has the floor.

Mr. BYRD. And I am against any filibuster. That is why I joined the 14. We stopped it. I thought we were past that. I hope the Senator will forgive me. I do not mean disrespect to him, but he is talking about freedom of speech. I respect the Constitution and I respect freedom of speech more. And that is why I was so interested in knowing why the Senator was talking about killing the filibuster and killing freedom of speech and killing a Senate rule. We have ways of changing the rules. If we do not like the rules, there is a way, under the rules, that one can change them. But never has anybody threatened to stop this constitutional right to freedom of speech. The Senator knows, if he ever really tries to pull that tool—and he can do so; he is the leader, he has a right; if he wants to do that, but I will tell you one thing. This will not make a Senator’s name in history. It will not be etched in stone. Future generations will not rise up to bless a Senator who tries to destroy freedom of speech in the Senate.

I say this with great respect to the Senator. I will tell you, he is a physician. I am not. He can do things I cannot do with a knife. He has saved many lives, I am sure. And I praise him for that. But I know he is the type of person who is going to help the people. Even as a Senator, he goes out there and uses that fine brain of his in helping people. But for God’s sake, this is the Senate. I have been here 47 years. I did not come here to see freedom of speech curtailed in this Senate. And when there is an effort to curtail it, they have ROBERT C. BYRD and a whole group of persons on both sides of the aisle—I would say there are Republics in here who would not stand for that. I have said enough. I do not intend to carry this on. But I am glad we had an opportunity to discuss this because I hope the Senator from Tennessee fully understands that is not to be talked about in this Senate. Republicans do not want to do that. It has been fine Republican leaders. Howard Baker, a former Republican leader, was a real statesman. The Panama Canal treaties would not have been approved by this Senate had it not been for Howard Baker. And the others, Everett Dirksen—my goodness, they never threatened freedom of speech in the Senate.

we are talking about, this outstanding individual, and you could move to talking about the filibuster, which I certainly didn’t start talking about but Democrats started talking about. Then you could move to what my response would likely be, which is saying filibusters thought we had been through that. We said unless it is an extraordinary circumstance, filibusters are off the table. Yet you still hear about it. Then you move to, Well, if they do filibuster, Senator Frist, what are you likely to do? Then you can move off to freedom of speech. I think that was a useful discussion and conversation, but let’s come back to what we are talking about.

We ended pretty much saying that my distinguished colleague from West Virginia doesn’t expect a filibuster, that he is not going to participate in a filibuster, I don’t expect a filibuster, with the hearings starting on the 9th, with time on the floor, full hearings—and we have waited until after the Christmas holidays so people can actually be studying papers and all the 3,000 cases and 300 opinions—we are giving plenty of time for the process to work. So we don’t expect a filibuster. I think we can logically go through all of these potential happenings and occurrences. But all that does come back to the fact, and it centers on the Alito nomination, there is no reason for a filibuster. I don’t believe, I believe a Democratic colleague doesn’t believe that.

Clearly, there is no reason at this juncture. A lot of the attacks, which are coming from the political left and the extreme left, are part of sort of a spaghetti strategy of throwing spaghetti against the wall and hoping something will stick and maybe that will precipitate votes against Alito for that reason, I don’t think they are going to stick. A lot of the criticism we are hearing is Judge Alito, he is not extreme. He is not an ideologue. He did not prejudge cases that came before him. As I was reading this weekend, I came across one of Alito’s former law clerks who said this week—and he happens to be a registered Democrat; he still has the “Kerry For President” bumper sticker on the back of his car—he said: Until I read his 1985 Reagan job application, I could not tell you what his politics were. When we worked on cases, the same was true, not about 95 percent of the time. It was my experience that Judge Alito was and is capable of setting aside any personal biases he may have when he judges.

Mr. BYRD. I believe that.

Mr. FRIST. The final words: He is the consummate professional.

I think all these attacks that are going on, since that really is the issue at hand, we need to put aside all of these unfair attacks by either extremist groups or Senators, and let’s look at his qualifications. Let’s go through the hearing process. Let’s come to the floor, let’s have an orderly debate, and then let’s, at the end of all of that, not deny people, the American people, the opportunity, the right to be able to vote yes or no after we go through that process. Mr. BYRD. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. FRIST. I am happy to yield.

Mr. BYRD. I see nothing in the Constitution that requires an up-or-down vote on any nominee. The Constitution just says that the Senate shall have the power, and the Senate uses that power. It is in the Constitution.

Mr. FRIST. And my response would simply be that the Constitution says advice and consent. Mr. BYRD. Yes.

Mr. FRIST. And I think advice and consent for somebody who has gone through the nomination process, the commitment the Judiciary Committee, hearings, recommendations to this floor, I would argue, not written in the Constitution, but under advice and consent, you can’t vote with your hands in your pocket. You can’t say yes or no.

Mr. BYRD. The Constitution doesn’t say that.

Mr. FRIST. I would argue that the dignity of this institution has worked for 214 years. So why deny it? Especially why deny it with a qualified nominee like Alito.

Mr. BYRD. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. FRIST. I would be happy to.

Mr. BYRD. All this business about us working for 214 years, there have been a lot of misquotations of history when people talk like that. I say that a Senator has a right under the Constitution to object for whatever reasons—they may not be plausible reasons—to object to any nominee he wishes. The Constitution says the Senate has the power of advice and consent. So it doesn’t say how that consent will be measured. It doesn’t say it has to be an up-or-down vote. Nothing in the history, nothing in the Constitution says that. If you can’t say that out in the Constitution to me, where it says that a nominee shall have the right to an up-or-down vote—can the Senator point that out in the Constitution to me? Can the Senator point that out in the Constitution to me?

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, if the distinguished Senator from West Virginia would let me answer, I would be happy to.

Mr. BYRD. Yes.

Mr. FRIST. The same power is not in the Constitution that a Senator specifically has the right for an up-or-down vote. I am saying the dignity of the institution to give advice and consent deserves an up-or-down vote on the floor of the Senate. What the Constitution does say—which is why it is called the constitutional option, not because it is written in the Constitution—is that this body makes its own rules. The Constitution is basically just that. You take it to this body and you say: Do these Senators deserve an up-or-down vote on the floor of the U.S. Senate? Let’s vote on that.

Mr. BYRD. No. Mr. FRIST. That is what the constitutional option is.

Mr. BYRD. He doesn’t have a right to an up-or-down vote. A nominee doesn’t have a right to an up-or-down vote.

Mr. FRIST. That is where we disagree.

Mr. BYRD. The Senator can’t find that in writing anywhere in the Constitution. I can vote against a nominee just because, any Senator can vote against a nominee just because—

Mr. FRIST. But you get a vote.

Mr. BYRD. The nominee doesn’t part his hair on the right or left side. The Senator doesn’t have to explain why he votes against. That is his right.

Mr. FRIST. But he voted, and that is the point.

Mr. BYRD. May or may not vote. The Constitution doesn’t require that, and the Senator can’t find it in the Constitution. He can say all he wants.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, it doesn’t say in the Constitution that you can vote; it says you can give advice and consent, and that the Senate makes the rules as to whether you vote or not. We just disagree. Obviously, this goes back to the whole filibuster argument for judicial nominees. I simply believe in the principle that once someone comes to the floor, they deserve, in order to give advice and consent, an up-or-down vote.

Mr. McCONNELL. Will the majority leader yield?

Mr. FRIST. I am happy to yield.

Mr. BYRD. Will the leader yield to me?

Mr. FRIST. Let me yield to my distinguished colleague, and then I will be happy to yield to the Senator from West Virginia.

Mr. BYRD. I will be glad to take on both Senators in defense of the Constitution.

Mr. McCONNELL. Did the majority leader yield to me?

Mr. FRIST. Yes.

Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, I have listened with great interest to the exchange on the television monitor back in my office and thought I might come down and join you both.

Let me suggest that it could be argued that you are both right. What I believe, I say to my good friend from West Virginia, the majority leader is talking about is what is precedent in the Senate. There is a lot of discussion about “stare decisis.” Lawyers use that term to refer to respect for the precedent.

Mr. BYRD. Yes, let the decision stand.

Mr. McCONNELL. The precedent in the Senate for 214 years prior to the last Congress was the judges who came to the floor got an up-or-down vote.

Mr. BYRD. I am not sure about that.

Mr. MCCONNELL. Is that not the case, I ask the majority leader?

Mr. BYRD. I am not sure about that history.

Mr. MCCONNELL. — that when nominees came to the floor who enjoyed major- ity support in the Senate, they got an up-or-down vote? Has that not been what the leader argues for? And to the substantial credit of our friend from West Virginia, this whole controversy was largely defused last summer, was it not?

Mr. BYRD. Yes.

Mr. MCCONNELL. We have not been filibustering judges during this first session of Congress, and we have been giving judges an up-or-down vote as a direct result of the Senate’s collective decision to sort of step back from the brink and honor the traditions of the Senate. Has that not been the case, I ask my friend, the majority leader?

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, that is my understanding. This is exactly where we were about a year ago, after this long period of 214 years. We were about a year ago, after this long period of 214 years, as my colleague from West Virginia was saying earlier, where we were talking about filibustering — this is important to say for the people watching, not so much for colleagues — it is a very important tool for this body to use, for the minority to use, and it has been used really all the time for legislative issues.

As we design legislation, which can be shaped, manipulated, defeated, and approved, these nominees who come from the executive branch, the President, are different. Ultimately, you cannot cut a person in half. You can operate on them, but you cannot cut them in half. You cannot move them aside. Ultimately, the only way to give that advice and consent — and the way it has been done for those 218 years — is that once they come to the floor, hav- ing gone through committee, they get the courtesy, the dignity, consistent with the principles of this body, of an up-or-down vote.

Mr. BYRD. That is not history. That is not even recent history.

Mr. FRIST. And then it changed about 3 years ago, where for all of this period of time, it didn’t occur; that is, a nominee who had majority support being killed in committees. The Senator is a U.S. circuit judge, vote on cloture on March 8, 2000, the distinguished Senator from Tennessee, Mr. FRIST, voted to filibuster. The question was on a cloture motion to end a filibuster. Cloture was agreed to by three-fifths vote, but the distinguished Senator from Tennessee chose to exercise his right, and he voted against cloture. He voted to filibuster. So the worm turns. The day may come when the Senator may want to filibuster. He will never find me on the side of saying I will cut off your right to talk.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I will not reclaim the floor. But what happened to those judges? Not with my principle as an up-or-down vote, but I ask my distinguished friend from West Virginia what the leader argues for? And to the distinguished Senator from Tennessee chose to exercise his right, and he voted against cloture. He voted to filibuster. So the worm turns. The day may come when the Senator may want to filibuster. He will never find me on the side of saying I will cut off your right to talk.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I still not reclaim the floor. What happened to those judges? Not with my principle as an up-or-down vote, but I ask my distinguished friend from West Virginia what the leader argues for? And to the distinguished Senator from Tennessee chose to exercise his right, and he voted against cloture. He voted to filibuster. So the worm turns. The day may come when the Senator may want to filibuster. He will never find me on the side of saying I will cut off your right to talk.

The day may come when the Senator may want to filibuster. He will never find me on the side of saying I will cut off your right to talk.

Mr. BYRD. Of some of them?

Mr. FRIST. The Senator cited Paez. He got an up-or-down vote on the floor of the Senate. All I am arguing for is an up-or-down vote. It is simple. Vote for or against them, and they win or they lose, and you start over or not.

Mr. BYRD. That has never been the rule here. Senators have a right to talk, to filibuster.

Mr. MCCONNELL. Will the majority leader yield?

Mr. FRIST. Yes.

Mr. BYRD. The distinguished Senator from Tennessee, may I say, is wrong when he cites history. History is not on his side. I tell you something else. Not all nominees have had up-or-down votes. A lot of them are bottled up in committees. That is one way of denying them their right, as the Senator says, to an up-or-down vote. They are killed in committees. The Senator is a member of the Republican Party, the Grand Old Party, and I respect that party, but this principle is not mine. If I will tell you, the Senator doesn’t come into court with clean hands when he talks about the right of an individual to have an up-or-down vote. The Republicans have killed lots of nominees in committees, not letting them have an up-or-down vote. At least 61 nominees did not get out of committee. Not all nominees have had up-or-down votes.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I yield to my colleague from Kentucky.

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, would the majority leader not agree with the Senator from Kentucky that the Paez and Berzon nominations to which our good friend from West Virginia refers — in both instances, you were not the leader at the time; you were a Member but not the leader. The majority leader and the leader of the other side jointly filed cloture, not for the purpose of defeating the nomination but for the purpose of guaran- teeing that the nominees got an up-or-down vote. So in that particular instance, Senator Daschle and Senator LOTT used the device of cloture, not to kill the nomination but to advance the nomination, move it to final passage.

I say to my friend, the majority leader, it is largely irrelevant how he may have voted on cloture as a rank-and-file member of the Republican Conference on that particular day. The leader of our party at the time and the other party at the time were honoring this principle to which we have been speaking, guaranteeing that those nominees got an up-or-down vote by the only device they could, by filing cloture and moving forward.

So that is entirely consistent with the principle that the majority leader, has been making here on floor, and the end result was that those two nominees — very controversial on this side — ended up getting an up-or-down vote and being confirmed by the Senate, and the two nominees called Judge Paez and Judge Berzon.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I am going to close by saying I very much appreci- ate the colloquy, the back and forth we have had over the last hour. These are important issues when you are talking about nominations for the Supreme Court, which will far outlast, once confirmed, many of us in this body, and the importance of this process. I believe what is important for the American people to understand is that we are committed to a fair process and a process that should be dignified; that we need to have civil debate, and we will have that on this particular nomination, which is where the focus is, where I want to rest so we are not talking about what we will do from that side or this side, but focus on the fact that among all the responsibilities that we have, that we are given in the Constitu- tion, that we have an opportunity to fulfill a process and have it unfairly blocked as we go forward.

I think it is important again, not as Democrats or Republicans or party or partisan issues — to make sure the debate to get so hot, high, and heated that we interrupt the process. We are about midway through the time Judge Alito has been nominated. I am very pleased by our leadership at the Judiciary level, with Senator LEAHY, Senator SPECTER, and the committee, in terms of their approach. They have a tremendous working relationship, which is very important as we go through these hearings and begin on the floor.

Those hearings will be several days. They will be thorough; they will be exhausting. It is important to this body to have the information to know how to vote—not whether to vote but how to vote. It is important. I am sure that will arise from the hearings—and that we be able to have both the appropriate amount of time for discussion and then come to the floor and have a full debate, and then approve or disapprove of that nomination.

Again, I appreciate the chance to have this discussion. I know the distinguished Senator from Massachusetts has been waiting an hour to speak. We will continue the dialogue. I very much respect the comments of my distinguished colleague from West Virginia. He teaches me all the time. I listen, and he knows I listen as we go through. We disagree on certain principles. I know, is an unconstitutional option, respect for the Constitution, or respect for this institution. I yield the floor.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, the Senator has yielded the floor. Let me say, as the Chair recognizes me, to the distinguished Senator, I say again, I respect him, but I hope he will never leave as part of his legacy the destruction of freedom of speech in the U.S. Senate. I say to him once finally, that if he ever tries to exercise that so-called constitutional option, which is an unconstitutional option, he flies in the face of history, he flies in the face of our forefathers, he flies in the face of the Constitution, the right to freedom of speech. If he ever tries that, he is going to see a real filibuster if I am living and able to stand on my feet or sit in my seat.

I respect him as a Senator, but I respect freedom of speech more. I respect freedom of speech even more. And if the Senate wants a fight, let him try it. I am 88 years old, but I can still fight, and fight I will for freedom of speech, for the constitutional right of freedom of speech. I haven’t been here 47 years to see that freedom of speech whittled away and undermined. I haven’t been here that long, I haven’t been here 47 years to see that.

I hear the hour will take what I say as being in the spirit of friendship. But with something so important—and it was here a long time before I came here. It is the Constitution of the United States and freedom of speech, and we are going to have freedom of speech here.

If I elect to filibuster against a nominee, it will be for good reason. I don’t intend to join a filibuster. That is why I joined the group of 13, and I made the 14th. I think we avoided a filibuster. I don’t expect to filibuster on this.

I tell you one thing, I am tired of hearing this threat thrown in our faces that this so-called nuclear option will be used if we decide we want to filibuster. If there is good reason to filibuster an individual, why, let a Senator filibuster him. There are some of the names around, and I hope the President will listen up, but there are some around on which there will be a filibuster. I compliment the President on avoiding that. We don’t need that kind of disruption here. We don’t need that kind of divisiveness. We will have togetherness.

I thank the Senator for his courtesies. I respect him, but I tell you, I expect, if the Lord lets me live, to continue to fight for this Constitution and for this institution and for freedom of speech against all comers on either side of the aisle—either side. I would not stand still a minute if a Democratic leader over here threatened to kill freedom of speech in the Senate, I would not stand still for that. No, no, I wouldn’t do that, Democrat or Republican.

I thank the Senator. I respect him. When I meet him in the corridors, I will meet him with friendliness and respect. Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, once again I thank my distinguished colleague from West Virginia for his insightful comments. I do want to keep the focus at this point—I have a feeling he is going to want to say something after I close, but I think it is time to put partisanship aside.

Mr. BYRD. Yes, amen.

Mr. FRIST. To put threats of filibuster aside before we have even had the hearings. I am not bringing up filibuster.

Mr. BYRD. That is freedom of speech.

Mr. FRIST. That is freedom of speech.

Mr. FRIST. I didn’t bring it up yesterday. I responded to a question, and then I did cite what six Democratic Senators have said and what eight newspapers have said about what is coming from the other side. But I think it is time to put it aside and to focus on the nomination. Freedom of speech, which is important, which I love, I cherish, that is why I am here, we can debate that. I am not sure what we are debating. We can debate that. I thought we finished that. We talked about filibusters 6 months ago. It is time to focus on this nomination, which is what the American people want us to do.

Mr. BYRD. We are wrong about one of the most fundamental responsibilities in this body, and that is looking at an individual—and I would argue a very qualified individual—having a process that is fair, that is dignified, that is respectful and, of course, I appreciate the comments from the distinguished Senator.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, may I say to the majority leader, there are those who filibuster sometimes, but they, too, can be dignified. I have seen filibusterers who were dignified. The late Senator Richard Russell and some of my friends on that side of the aisle when I came here filibusted with dignity. Talking about dignity, you can be against something, you can still do it with dignity. I thank the Senator. I thank the Senator.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I know not many of our colleagues are here at this time, but I certainly hope a number of Americans are listening to a very important history lesson and a real lesson about the rules and some fundamental issues and rights that have been debated over the last hour in the Senate, I think it has been enormously helpful and very informative.

I am a member of the Judiciary Committee. I have attended some 22 of these nominations. I have spent a good deal of time since the Senate went into recess in preparation for these hearings and will continue to do so. But I join with my friend and colleague from West Virginia in saying that I do not know a single member, certainly of the Judiciary Committee, who has said they are going to filibuster this nominee. Nor do I know a single member of this side of the aisle who has stated they were going to go ahead with a filibuster.

A number of our colleagues, including myself, have been asked, Does this mean under any circumstances you will not? The appropriate answer is, as the Senator from West Virginia stated so clearly and compellingly, we are not going to give up any of our rights prior to consideration of a nominee until there has been a completion of the hearings and until we make a balanced and informed judgment.

That is the responsibility we have before the Constitutional Convention, our Founding Fathers considered on four different occasions who would have the right to nominate judges to the Supreme Court.

On three of the four they gave the complete power and authority to the Senate, but it was only in the last 10 days of the Constitutional Convention they decided that it would be a shared power: One, the President would nominate and, second, we had a constitutional responsibility to give our judgment whether we believed that nominee was committed to constitutional rights and liberties. That is the responsibility we have, which is an enormously important one.

I do not think anyone could have listened to the debate in the last hour or so and not understood the strong feeling not only from West Virginia but all of us have on this particular judgment. I do not think there is a decision outside of the issues of war and peace that is more important than the votes we cast for a nominee to the Supreme Court of the United States.

The debate is closed, but as a member of the committee I do want to correct a few items. We can go through it, but the record is very clear that Republicans have filibustered Democratic nominees. I was here at the time of Judge Fortas. So they have filibustered Democratic nominees in the past and denied them the right of a vote.

As Senator BYRD has pointed out, I have been a member of the Judiciary Committee where President Clinton’s nominees were effectively killed by denying them the opportunity to have a hearing. I have been in the Senate when we have had what they call secret holds and that is when Republicans put a hold on a nominee so that we do not even get a chance to consider the nominee.

All of that is history and we should not be bothering about debating it. We can go back and debate whether it is history or it is not, but as a member of the Judiciary Committee and one who has been participating in these various debates and discussions, the record is very clear. It has been exhibited on the floor of the Senate in recent times in the discussions of it.

I want to join my colleague and friend from West Virginia. The last thing we need now is threats about the process and the procedure. What we need to have is an informed hearing on this nominee. As nice, decent, and fine a nominee as we might have, that in and of itself is not enough to promote this individual to the Supreme Court of the United States. Any nominee has to demonstrate his or her core commitment to constitutional values. Those are the most precious rights and liberties we have. The essence of the Constitution is to protect the rights and liberties of individuals, as has been pointed out by the Senator from West Virginia, from tyrannical governments, kings and monarchies. This is enormously important. We take our responsibilities extremely seriously.

Reference was made during the consideration of the 1985 memorandum that Judge Alito had written, and I am not going to spend a great deal of time this afternoon going through it, but there are troublesome aspects of statements he made when he was applying for a job in the Justice Department. He has pointed out that it was just applying for a job in the Justice Department. He was not a member of the Warren Court that made judgments and decisions that guaranteed the rights of counsel in the Gideon v. Wainwright case, also the one-man, one-vote case which has been so fundamental against the background and history of this country which has excluded the rights of people, on those two important decisions—or the rights of a defendant in Miranda—when these decisions now are bedrock in terms of jurisprudence, we have to ask what was so troublesome to him in 1985 about those particular judgments and decisions?

He says he was just applying for a job. He was not. Now he is applying for another job. So there are important issues and questions which we have every right to go into. As to the Varga case, Judge Alito mentioned he would recuse himself from any decisions in the Varga case. There is the common core decision in his court and he does not recuse himself. Then he writes to the Judiciary Committee some time later—after he had been to the Judiciary Committee and gave the Judiciary Committee the assurance he would recuse himself, he decided himself he would no longer recuse himself. Is that not interesting? Who did he notify? Did he notify the Judiciary Committee he changed his mind? Did he notify the White House saying court? Was it the reason he did it because of a computer glitch?

Then he says to the members of the Judiciary Committee that he did it because it was a pro se case, so it did not make much difference. Yet a pro se case is probably the most important. Those are cases which involve such individuals where they do not involve a whole battery of lawyers or law firms. When he gives his word to the Senate Judiciary Committee, when he changes his mind, is it not worth finding out something about this nominee?

So we are looking forward to this hearing. These hearings are enormously important. As one who has gone through the cases in which he has dissented—a good part of the cases he has been a part of the majority, a good part of the cases he has been excluded, they are unpublished cases—I am certainly concerned about certain patterns of proclivity toward the powerful and less interest in protecting the smaller person, the little guy, on many of these cases. I am not prepared to make a judgment or decision on this.

This is an enormously important consideration, and I could not agree more with the Senator from West Virginia. Why do we need to divert focus and attention on the process and the procedure when there is not a single member of the Senate who has said they were going to filibuster? Why attempt to chill debate and discussion? The only effect of this kind of comment is basically to threaten or to chill debate and discussion about a nominee.

The Senator from West Virginia is not going to be intimidated, nor myself, but I do not think that serves the process well. It was entirely appropriate for the Senator from West Virginia to point out these comments that were on the front section of a newspaper, the New York Times, but wherever it was, wherever it was said, it was being said by the majority leader and the message was very clear. I certainly received the message, although I did not accept it. I do not think I would have been as clear and as eloquent as the Senator from West Virginia, but the message was very clear, do not you dare take too much time in considering this nominee to change the rules of the Senate in ways that are going to deny free speech. That is not where we should be in terms of giving fairness to this nominee and to give him the kind of thoughtful hearing the Judiciary Committee is capable of doing and which it did under Chairman SPECTER during the Roberts hearings.

I thank Americans who followed that would feel the nominee was treated with respect and dignity and that members of the Judiciary Committee had opportunities to inquire and also to hear from other outside witnesses. That is the way it should go. I am confident that is the way it will go.

I agree with my friend and colleague from West Virginia, the less talk about the threats about changing the rules of the Senate and particularly by the leadership, the better off we are going to be.

Mr. BYRD. Would the distinguished Senator yield?

Mr. KENNEDY. I would be glad to yield.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, first, I apologize to the distinguished Senator for imposing on his patience. He sat back in that chair and he was in the Senate Chamber before I was today. He sat patiently through that long, drawn-out discussion, and I apologize to him for my part in imposing on his time and patience.

Secondly, let me thank him for his clear, lucid, reasonable, and thoughtful comments concerning the subject matter that has been discussed. He has always taken advantage of the opportunity to serve the people of the county, to serve the country, and to serve the Senate. If someone asked right or seemed wrong, he was willing to speak out. I will always admire him for those things. I thank him for what he has said today. I think, again, it reflects great dignity upon the Senator and his thoughtfulness. He is a Senator sui generis, in the fact that he speaks his mind—he is never backward about that. He can do that with me, too. And he has done that with me in the past. I respect him for it.

Thank the Senator for his comments. He certainly has engaged in a discussion today that I think makes a great contribution, not only to this discussion and this subject matter, but he continues as he has for years, so many years during my time, to contribute greatly as a statesman who has been worthy of a seat in the Constitutional Convention or a seat in the first Senate calling that Congress. He could have been in any of those debates and any time in the history of this country.

I respect him for it. He is an outstanding Senator and one upon whose services history will certainly report with great support. I thank him so much. I thank Senator Kennedy very much.

Mr. Kennedy. I thank my friend from West Virginia. That is what that previous hour was about, and what it was so important, because it was about preserving this institution. I know I speak for all of us, I think pretty generally across both sides of the aisle, in saying that there is no individual who is more dedicated to the preservation of this institution and the magnificent framework in which our Founding Fathers had conceived of it. It was really that issue that was talked about in that previous hour.

It is important, as all of us go through the process of pressing our own views and our own vision about the future of this country, that we hear the clear and persuasive and knowledgeable voice, the voice of history, that speaks about the institution and its importance to the American people. That is what we just heard with the exchange of the Senator from West Virginia. That is why I was so pleased to have an opportunity to listen. I just wish the other 98 Senators had that opportunity to be so informed as well. I thank the Senator for his kind words.

Mr. Byrd. I thank the Senator again. I feel pretty well today. I have had the flu over the weekend, but I am glad I came to the Senate today.

Mr. Kennedy. I thank you. Mr. Byrd. I thank the Senator and I thank all Senators. Mr. Kennedy. I thank Senator Byrd.

Mr. President, I know we are in the morning hour of business; am I correct? I would like to be able to speak until I conclude. The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is no limitation.

PENSIONS, RECONCILIATION AND EDUCATION FUNDING

Mr. Kennedy. Mr. President, as Congress meets for a final session before we adjourn for the holidays, we should be focused on the true meaning of Christmas and the special thoughts that Americans of many faiths have at this time of year regarding their families, their friends and neighbors, and the rest of humanity.

Christmas is a season of great hope—a time of goodwill and special care for others. That’s what we should remember as we celebrate the birth of Christ, and the glad tidings of great joy that came to us that day.

There are those in America who urge the return of the word “Christmas” to this holiday season. I believe that Christmas is more than that. It is a belief of all tax breaks for the rich and poor has been widening in recent years. Mr. President, 37 million Americans now live in poverty, up 19 percent during the Bush Administration.

As families across America struggle to make ends meet with higher health costs, higher college costs, higher gas prices, higher heating costs, and higher housing costs, Congress is about to make things worse for them.

Millionaires will be given tens of thousands of dollars in new tax breaks, but Medicaid cuts could mean that 22 million poor Americans will face a reduction in help from that lifesaving program and two million others may lose their health care entirely.

Proposed budget cuts would mean that 750,000 poor preschoolers who are eligible for Head Start won’t be able to get into the program.

More than a quarter of a million poor Americans could lose their food stamps, and could face hunger. These cuts are proposed just as the Department of Agriculture reports that 38 million Americans face hunger, an increase of 5 million in 5 years.

Hundreds of thousands of children could lose their child support because of Republican proposals to cut enforcement against delinquent fathers.

Three million poor children could be left behind in school. They won’t get the quality teachers and after-school help and supplemental services they need to catch up and succeed.

Hundreds of thousands of airline workers—the ones who are helping us get home for the holidays—could see their pensions hanging in the balance, and millions of other Americans could lose their pensions, too.

That is what is at stake in Congress this Christmas. Are these actions consistent with the spirit of this holiday season? Here’s another question: If the word “Christmas” should appear in our stores and on our greeting cards, shouldn’t we be living out the hope that came from the first Christmas and do more for our fellow citizens than greater tax breaks for the rich and greater hardship for the poor and struggling middle class?

As Christian leader Reverend Jim Wallis said last week: “The Bible does not condemn prosperity. It just insists that it be shared.”

The economic trends are very disturbing for anyone who is willing to look at them objectively. The gap between rich and poor has been widening in recent years. Mr. President, 37 million Americans now live in poverty, up 19 percent during the Bush Administration. One in six American children lives in poverty and 14 million children go to bed hungry each night.

The silent slavery of poverty is not so silent anymore. Katrina focused the nation’s attention on the immensity of hardships that low-income Americans face each day, and presented us with a historic and challenging opportunity to find better ways to lift up the most vulnerable among us.

This is Christmas. Surely, the American people deserve better.

In the Senate, we did our best to respond to the needs of average Americans by helping to expand access to a college education. We cut the fat out of bank profits and put it back where it belongs—helping students afford the cost of college. Our bill included a virtually unprecedented increase in need-based aid—over $8.25 billion over 5 years.

All together, it provides $12 billion in new aid and additional benefits for needy children who have the ability to go to schools and colleges all across this country—bipartisan, unanimous, out of our committee and on the floor of the Senate, all in jeopardy this afternoon. Hopefully, our good chairwoman, Chairman Enzi, will be able to fight for those provisions. But that is now in jeopardy from those who believe that tax breaks are more important than our children’s future.

Americans know that education is the great equalizer. When young people work hard, study, play by the rules to be well qualified academically, they should be able to attend college. The cost of public college tuition fees has skyrocketed 46 percent since 2001. That leaves the lowest income students at 4-year public colleges with an average of $5,800 in unmet need.

Too many qualified students, 400,000 each year, do not go to a 4-year college. They can’t afford it. They have the academic ability to succeed in those schools and colleges. They will not do that, and we won’t do that, because they can’t provide and look after their children any longer.

This is not acceptable, and we should be able to do better.

In addition, the Republican plan, as we found in the bill funding education and health care, will cut funds for public schools for the first time in a decade, leaving 3 million children behind. It provides no new funds for after-school programs. It strips funding for technology in our schools.

The bill covers even less of the cost of meeting the educational needs of students with disabilities. Instead of meeting our promise to parents and communities to do more, we are doing less.

Remember when we passed the IDEA program, we said we would establish that the Federal Government would get 40 percent to pay for disabled children and that we expect the States and localities to pick up the difference. Now we are retreating.

We have attempted, under the leadership of Senator HARKIN, to be able to meet that responsibility. And now we are finding that 18 percent is slipping and going in the wrong direction rather than helping States, local communities and parents, particularly the parents that have disabled children.

It leaves Pell grants frozen in place for the fourth year in a row, even as college costs are rising.

That is in the Republican proposal.

The Republican proposal cuts job training, even as the number of good jobs is shrinking, and fails to provide adequate increases for programs to ensure worker safety.

We have 161,100 unemployed workers in my State of Massachusetts. Yet funds for unemployment insurance offices and to help unemployed workers with job-seeking are being cut.

The number of job training, even as the number of good jobs is shrinking. We have 73,000 jobs that are going, that are vacant by employers all over our State. But we are missing is the linkage between training these workers so they can get these jobs and so they will be taxpayers contributing to their community and making a difference. We are cutting back on that program.

The House bill cuts the child support enforcement program by $5 billion over 5 years, resulting in a $24 billion reduction in child support collections in the next ten years. The House bill will reduce child support collections in Massachusetts by $140 million over the next five years. This is an enforcement program to make those who have an obligation to children take personal responsibility and help their children grow and learn. The House bill cuts this necessary and successful support program.

There are currently over 13,500 children in Massachusetts waiting for child care. Do you know what? We are cutting back the number of Child care subsidies for low income families. Who knows how many more thousands of families can put off the possibility they can not provide and look after their children any longer.

Does that particularly make sense with regard to the child and the parent in terms of the family? Clearly, it does not.

Funding for unemployment insurance has been cut by $141 million, and funds for programs to help unemployed workers with job seeking have been cut by $89 million, even in the wake of Hurricane Katrina, with 8 million Americans unemployed.

We know those within the administration would like to pretend Katrina never existed and the devastation that took place in Mississippi and New Orleans certainly not. People should disappear, deny that those States are part of the United States of America. We are one country. We do have one history. We are one Nation. And now we pretending, evidently, that disaster never took place.

Finally, I want to go into the area of health care. We live in an era of medical miracles. This is the life science century. We have had the mapping of the human genome, the DNA, the sequencing of the gene. These breakthroughs which were unheard of 10, 15, 20, 30 years ago, bringing together the transplants which were unheard of 10, 15, 20, 30 years ago, bringing together the latest new technologies in engineering, with the latest in terms of the possibility of research—and the possibilities are virtually unlimited in our lifetime—to see major breakthroughs for new cures for multiple sclerosis, cancer, diabetes, Parkinson’s disease, and Alzheimer’s disease.

What do we do after the Congress and Senate doubled the NIH budget? We see the possibilities, but we are basically cutting back on those possibilities and cutting back for giving help and assistance to our fellow citizens.

Finally, I am deeply concerned about what happened to the millions of other retirement savings of our fellow citizens who are looking to retirement and looking to pensions. We know there is effectively a three-legged stool for retirees. If you look at what has happened to their savings, they have been effectively eviscerated, wiped out because of the sudden increased costs that working families have been affected by. If they had been in the 401(k)s, they have had virtual stability and very little growth in recent years.

The major part is the pensions, and 700 companies have dropped their pension plans, and an estimated $8 billion in future benefits has been lost to American workers in the period of the last 5 years—$8 billion that has been paid in by American workers who sacrifice; who say: No, we will not take more resources to provide for our family and our children. We will not sacrifice in terms of additional time. We will work overtime, and we will continue to work overtime and then some in the last 5 years—and those numbers are going to continue unless we pass a pension bill.

We can’t get in conference with the House of Representatives. Do you want to know why? Because House Leadership is holding a bill effectively hostage in the House of Representatives.

What are you going to tell those airline workers? You talk about abuse of power and abuse of authority. It is absolutely outrageous.

The Senate moved toward a pension bill last month. We passed that with two dissenting votes—not everything that Senator Enzi would have wanted, not everything that I would have wanted. Certainly not what others would have wanted. Our leaders in this, Senators Mikulski, Tom Harkin, Jeff Bingaman, and many others, bipartisan in nature, Republican and Democrats alike, got together and passed that legislation under the leadership of Senator Enzi, and we are being effectively stonewalled.

The House could have engaged in a bi-partisan process. But instead they chose to forge ahead with a bill that has no Democratic support and that threatens our manufacturing companies, cutting off benefits for workers whose plants close; leaves older workers without protections when their companies switch to new plans; and leaves processors at risk of conduced investment advice. That is why they are unable to pass legislation this year.

I urge members of the House to take a page from the Senate’s book. It is not too late to reach a consensus on a bill that can be passed quickly with Democratic support.

We are talking about the holiday season. We are talking about the Christmas time. Hundreds of thousands of workers, retirees of airline companies, see their retirement on the line.

That includes the retired mechanic, Randy Daly, of Apple Valley, MN, who spent 40 years as a mechanic at Northwest Airlines. At 61, he thought his best years were ahead of him. But now he has learned, if his company’s pension plan fails, he stands to lose over 40 percent of his retirement benefits. Most of his fellow retirees fear a similar fate.

Our airline companies are under tremendous financial pressure from terrorism, the recent catastrophes of Hurricane Rita and Hurricane Katrina, and increased jet fuel costs. Some of these companies have filed for bankruptcy. The list goes on, as the Senator from West Virginia knows.

The whole challenge is for many manufacturers, the hundreds of thousands of workers in companies such as Bethlehem Steel and many others, and coal and other companies where workers have paid the price and lost their pensions. We should not be waiting more time for the brink of failure before we act. This legislation helps nearly millions of workers and retirees. We should not at this time turn them down.

In the pension bill we also included the key reforms to respond to the Enron, the WorldCom, and other corporate scandals where employees were the key reforms to respond to the down.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President, I have a
I guess it has been a year and a half since I have been in Iraq, but certainly I think some real progress has been made. I felt as if there had been great progress when I was there. And as to the polls, in the preliminary election, ABC News shows that three-fourths of the Iraqis sampled said that they approve of the new Iraqi constitution. In a country that has never done those kinds of things before, that is an excellent movement.

As to the Iraqi forces, we all want them to shoulder a greater share of security efforts. In fact, that is happening. Now, I am also one who believes the system we have used, the military system, has to change as the situation changes. It was one kind of a military opportunity to be moving into Iraq to get rid of Saddam, and having troop movements, routing, normal military activities. Now the time has changed.

I was very impressed with the conversation I had with a police officer from Cheyenne, WY, who was there on a contract to help train police who said: That has all changed now. Instead of having platoons and companies moving around, we are having two or three insurgents over here, and we need more of a police kind of a system rather than a larger military system. I think certainly that is true.

And the Iraqis are moving forward. There are now 97 Iraqi army battalions conducting operations. Thirty-three Iraqi army battalions have assumed their own areas of responsibility. This is a good thing. The Iraqi navy is guarding its coastline and protecting offshore shipping. The Iraqi air force is moving supplies throughout the country. Iraqi border police are manning 170 border forts and 22 ports of entry.

Certainly, there is a lot to do yet, probably more in the support—the supply support, the management from the background—as there is in being on the front lines as far as the military of the United States is concerned. I hope and think that movement and that change of role is indeed taking place. There are some change police who are there. So we are making some progress.

Again, some time ago, when I was there, I was real pleased. We would go down the road in a military vehicle and all the little kids would be waving their arms. We went to some schools. We went to some hospitals.

Now we are getting a report that 762 out of 834 schools are back in place. That is a good move—not complete, of course, not perfect. It is also reported that 12 out of 29 hospitals are back in place; 5 out of 12 major airports are functioning. So there is a great deal going on. It is reported that 144 out of 222 water treatment stations are functioning. There is still work to do, but, nevertheless, a substantial amount of work has been done.

So the fact is, of course, the road from tyranny to freedom is not an easy one to walk. We have not always experienced in the past. So as we see new challenges, then we have to face them in different ways. Having been in the military, I know sometimes it is difficult to sort of change the methods that are accustomed and trained to do. But these are different sorts of challenges. I am very proud of the military in doing what they have done.

The al-Qaida terrorist leader has indicated that Iraq is a central battlefront for this war, certainly in terms of terrorism. And our people continue, of course, to do well in spite of the deadly insurgency. That is a tough thing. The insurgents are coming out of nowhere with bombs, roadside bombs in cars.

So I guess really what I am trying to say is there is good evidence that things are going well—not as well as you would have hoped. There are improvements being made. We are moving towards our goal. The goal is to be able to turn this back over to the Iraqis, to return our folks home as soon as possible. Everyone agrees with that; as soon as possible. There is always room for disagreement as to what is necessary, of course, to be able to do that.

But despite the naysayers we hear here, the Iraqis are generally optimistic. A recent ABC News poll showed that 70 percent of Iraqis sampled said life in Iraq was “good.” So in addition to that, of course, the actions that are being taken are being felt in Egypt, Libya, Lebanon, Kuwait, and Saudi Arabia. So we are having some sort of an impact in that whole Middle East area, which is, of course, what we had hoped to be able to do.

So these are some of the things that are happening here. I think there is a surprising amount of optimism about the living conditions improving. Time magazine and others did some analysis and showed living conditions were rated positively for 7 out of 10 Iraqis. I presume that is a legitimate sort of sample. At any rate, it certainly sounds so. Average household income has soared some 60 percent in the last 20 months. It is only $263, but nevertheless that is substantially more than they had.

So in any event, we have a challenge yet before us. I think there is increasing recognition that we are there until our job is finished; that our job is to help the Iraqis; that we ought to indeed move and continue to move towards doing that as soon as we can; that the reduction of our troops, as soon as possible, is the goal of all of us. I think the change in the role certainly is a goal as well. And that, too, is happening.

So I guess the bottom line of what I have read here and what I am saying is that even though, for various reasons, it seems as if there is a great difference, I think you can see, as you hear about the difference in the parties here, and so on, that there is not that kind of a spread. Sure, there is room for discussion. But the fact is, the majority of people here want to see the job turned over to the Iraqis. The majority wants to remove our folks as soon as we can. And that includes the administration and the folks in opposition.

Mr. President, I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum. THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll. The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

THE PATRIOT ACT

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I have sought recognition to describe the conference report on the PATRIOT Act, which was agreed to by conference in the House of Representatives and the Senate last Thursday. This is the first time the Senate has been in session since that time, and the first opportunity for me to make a floor statement outlining the provisions of the conference report.

I begin by thanking the distinguished chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, Congressman JAMES SENSENBRENNER, for his cooperation and cordiality in working through many very difficult issues to come to agreement between the House and Senate conferences.

There has been general agreement that reauthorization of the PATRIOT Act is necessary as an important tool in the fight against terrorism. One item which the PATRIOT Act accomplished, which was enacted shortly after 3,000 Americans were killed and many wounded on 9/11, was elimination of the so-called wall, so that evidence gathered under the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act could be used in a criminal prosecution. Prior to the enactment of that provision, if there was evidence obtained under the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act, which has a slightly lesser standard than probable cause used for a criminal search warrant, it could not be used for a criminal prosecution without a special court agreement. To my knowledge, with the proposition that this provision is very important and ought to be retained.
Similarly, other provisions of the PATRIOT Act have been conceded to be important: the provisions on obtaining records, the provisions on wiretaps—although subject to some limitations, and I voted against that provision when the bill was up shortly after the 9/11 attacks in 2001—and provisions on delayed notice warrants. And there are many provisions which there has been general agreement ought to be retained.

There have been questions raised, and appropriately so, about the sweep of the PATRIOT Act and whether it could accomplish its designed purposes while providing more protection for civil rights and civil liberties. A good bit of the public debate—most of the public debate—has been focused on those provisions. The conference report makes vast improvements on existing law on items such as obtaining business records, the so-called library record provision; on the delayed notice provision, on roving wiretaps. There are limitations now imposed on national security letters, which have been in effect for decades. They were not created by the PATRIOT Act, but the reauthorization of the PATRIOT Act has provided a forum for reconsideration of the way national security letters are used and to provide safeguards for civil liberties.

The principal concern expressed publicly about the PATRIOT Act is the ability of law enforcement to obtain business records—it has been commonly referred to as the “library records provision.” There is great concern about obtaining somebody’s library records by an agent unilaterally, who makes the certification that the records are sought for an investigation, and the agent on his or her own goes and obtains the records. The conference report is a vast improvement on existing law because the conference report imposes judicial review, not merely a standard; that is, the American way of doing things. The judicial review is somewhat limited in that there is a presumption that the certification by high-ranking officials of the Department of Justice or the FBI or the requesting agency will be conclusive unless the court finds that the certification was made in bad faith.

So the conference report is more protective of civil rights than was the Senate bill, which was so widely praised, because in the Senate bill you had a certification by the head of the FBI or the Department of Justice or any department head or Assistant Attorneys General, all of whom are subject to Senate confirmation. So the conference report imposes judicial review, not merely a standard. That is, the American way of doing things.

The conference report makes an important change to the standard from the one that was made after a closed-door briefing with the Department of Justice was able to show strong reasons to allow the judge to authorize obtaining records where one of those three conditions had not been met. Where there was terrorism investigation underway, and those records were crucial to moving ahead with that terrorism investigation. I believe, while it would be preferable to have the Senate version, that this provision is reasonable and realistic and is certainly not a substantial basis, not really any basis at all, for rejecting the conference report.

The next most highly publicized concern has been on the so-called national security letter. I repeat, the national security letter was not created by the PATRIOT Act passed shortly after 9/11 but has been an investigative tool for decades. Under current law, there is no explicit right on the part of someone who has been served with a national security letter to go to a lawyer and challenge the national security letter. I repeat, the national security letter was not created by the PATRIOT Act. But in the conference report, the conference report imposes judicial review, not merely a standard. That is, the American way of doing things. The judicial review is somewhat limited in that there is a presumption that the certification was made in bad faith. That is, the American way of doing things.

The conference report is a vast improvement. I have used the word “vast” repeatedly because it makes a very extensive improvement by enabling the recipient to go to a lawyer. It explicitly says you can go to your lawyer and you can challenge the national security letter and you can go to court. You can have the national security letter quashed if it is unreasonable, oppressive, or otherwise contrary to law. When you go to court, you can get permission to tell the target of the investigation about the national security letter, if the judge finds that doing so would not harm national security, interfere with an investigation or diplomatic relations, or risk death or bodily injury to another person. The judicial review is somewhat limited in that there is a presumption that the certification by high-ranking officials of the Department of Justice or the FBI or the requesting agency will be conclusive unless the court finds that the disclosure will be harmful to national security or diplomatic relations.

What was not understood, really misunderstood, during the course of the deliberation in the conference, was that the Senate bill, which was widely heralded as being a remarkably good bill, agreed to by all 18 members of the Judiciary Committee—and it is very unusual to have the Judiciary Committee agree unanimously on anything, let alone on a matter of civil rights, but that was the case. Then when the bill was forwarded to the floor, it went on our so-called unanimous consent calendar, which means it was passed by unanimous consent without any floor debate. It is highly unusual and perhaps unprecedented on a bill of this magnitude to be on the unanimous consent calendar because people all thought it was fine. That requires the consent of 100 Senators, and I think it is highly unusual and perhaps unprecedented for a bill to pass without the consent of 100 Senators. It shows strong reasons to allow the judge to authorize obtaining records where one of those three conditions had not been met. Where there was terrorism investigation underway, and those records were crucial to moving ahead with that terrorism investigation.

The conference report makes an important change to the standard from the one that was made after a closed-door briefing with the Department of Justice was able to show strong reasons to allow the judge to authorize obtaining records where one of those three conditions had not been met. Where there was terrorism investigation underway, and those records were crucial to moving ahead with that terrorism investigation. I believe, while it would be preferable to have the Senate version, that this provision is reasonable and realistic and is certainly not a substantial basis, not really any basis at all, for rejecting the conference report.

The judicial review is somewhat limited in that there is a presumption that the certification was made in bad faith. That is, the American way of doing things. The judicial review is somewhat limited in that there is a presumption that the certification was made in bad faith.

So the conference report imposes judicial review, not merely a standard. That is, the American way of doing things. The judicial review is somewhat limited in that there is a presumption that the certification was made in bad faith. That is, the American way of doing things. The judicial review is somewhat limited in that there is a presumption that the certification was made in bad faith.
there would be a warrant to search someone’s house or apartment surreptitiously; that is, without giving notice to the individual.

Under existing law, under the PATRIOT Act, the Government must notify the target within a reasonable period of time. Reasonable has no definitive limit, is vague and indefinite; it is open to very wide interpretation as to what constitutes reasonable. The conference report imposes a maximum time limit of 30 days, which can be extended to 60 days if certain specific criteria were met.

The Senate bill had a 7-day notice requirement. The House bill had a 180-day requirement, and the compromise was 30 days. So most of the provisions of the Senate bill or most of the substance of the Senate bill was agreed to. Now you have a set time limit, unless cause is shown to extend it; again, what I would characterize fairly as a vast improvement. Then there are provisions for a roving wiretap law. I have always been concerned about the invasion of privacy under wiretaps. In my days as district attorney, I was the sole district attorney among the 67 Pennsylvania counties to oppose legislation affecting wiretaps. When the PATRIOT Act bill came to the Senate shortly after September 11, I was one of the few Senators who voted against the wiretap provision.

Law enforcement has made a case in support of a roving wiretap and the PATRIOT Act conference report protects civil liberties additionally by requiring that there be an identification of the individual, a description, and that there be a showing that the individual will seek to try to evade detection of the wiretap so that on that provision, as well, there is an enhancement of civil liberties.

Perhaps the most contentious issue that was taken up during the conference was the issue of the sunset. The House of Representatives asked for a sunset of 10 years in their bill. The Senate bill has a sunset of 4 years. The House proposed, in a very forceful way, a compromise at 7 years, splitting the difference. The sunset provision is very important because all of the provisions of the PATRIOT Act expire at the end of the sunset unless there is a renewal. This puts law enforcement on notice that there will be oversight by the Judiciary Committees of both Houses, and the Senate Judiciary Committee has been very diligent on oversight and is committed to extensive oversight on this bill however it comes out.

There were very long, detailed, extensive negotiations. I thank the White House. I thank the President, who was personally acquainted with this issue. I had the opportunity to travel with him to Philadelphia earlier today where he made a speech about Iraq. He said to me, in advance of my expectation if it was fulfilled your need for assistance in getting a 4-year sunset, there would be a little more receptivity for the bill. I am paraphrasing what was involved.

This issue went to the highest level of the Federal Government. We had tremendous assistance from the White House on the sunset provision. Not only was the President conversant with it, as I have stated, but the Vice President was involved in the negotiations, the Chief of Staff, Andrew Card, whom I talked to on a number of occasions, and others in the White House. This 4-year sunset is a major, major, major improvement for civil liberties interests in that these provisions will be in existence for 6 years, 5 years, 4 years, but only for 4 years.

In essence, we have a bill which is not perfect. I don’t know that we deal in perfection in the legislative process. The whole art of politics and legislation is the art of accommodation, conciliation, and compromise, which is a worthwhile concept. That is the way we work in a democracy. No one gets their way entirely.

If I had my preference, we would have taken the Senate bill lock, stock, and barrel, and have been it. But we have a bicameral legislature and considerations and issues raised by the House of Representatives. I think again, fairly raised and fairly stated. I explicitly compliment Chairman SPECTER for his cooperation and his good work on this bill.

That is, believe it or not, a somewhat abbreviated version of this legislation, this complex legislation.

We had a letter from six of our colleagues—Senators SUNUNU, Senator MUKOWSKI, Senator DURBIN, Senator FEINGOLD, Senator SALAZAR—and I ask you unanimous consent that a copy of their letter to me and a copy of my letter to them be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

U.S. SENATE,
COMMITTEE ON THE JUDICIARY,

Hon. Arlen Specter,
Chairman, U.S. Senate Committee on the Judiciary,
Dirksen Senate Office Building, Washing, D.C.

Hon. Patrick Leahy,
Ranking Member, U.S. Senate Committee on the Judiciary,
Dirksen Senate Office Building, Washington, D.C.

Hon. Pat Roberts,
Chairman, U.S. Senate Select Committee on Intelligence,
Hart Senate Office Building, Washington, D.C.

Hon. John D. Rockefeller IV,
Ranking Member, U.S. Senate Select Committee on Intelligence, Hart Senate Office Building, Washington, D.C.

Dear Chairman SPECTER, Chairman Roberts, Ranking Member Leahy, and Ranking Member Rockefeller:

We write to express our deep concern about the draft Patriot Act reauthorization conference report made available to us early this afternoon. As you know, the Senate version of the bill, passed by unanimous consent in July, was itself a compromise that resulted from intense negotiations by Senators from all sides of the partisan and ideological divides. Unfortunately, the draft re-treats significantly from the bipartisan consensus we reached in the Senate. It does not accomplish what we and many of our colleagues in the Senate believe is necessary—a reauthorization bill that continues to provide law enforcement with the tools to investigate possible terrorist activities while making reasonable changes to the original law to protect innocent people from unnecessary and intrusive government surveillance.

If this law were to see significant movement back toward the Senate position in the following areas:

1. SECTION 215

The draft conference report would allow the government to obtain sensitive personal information without a warrant. This would allow government fishing expeditions. As business groups like the U.S. Chamber of Commerce have argued, the government should be required to convince a judge that the records they are seeking have some connection to a suspected terrorist or spy.

The draft conference report does not permit the recipient of a Section 215 order to challenge its automatic, permanent gag order. Courts have held that similar restraints violate the First Amendment.

The draft conference report does not provide meaningful judicial review of NSL’s gag order. It requires the court to accept as conclusive the government’s assertion that a gag order should not be lifted, unless the court determines the government is acting in bad faith. The recipients of NSLs are entitled to meaningful judicial review of a gag order.

The draft conference report makes it a crime, punishable by up to one year in prison, for individuals to disclose that they have received an NSL, even if they believe their rights have been violated. An NSL gag order should only be a crime if the NSL recipient intends to obstruct justice.

3. SUNSETS

The draft conference report includes seven-year sunsets, which are too long. Congress should have the opportunity to review the controversial provisions of the Patriot Act before the final year of the next presidential term. Four-year sunsets would ensure accountability and protect freedom.

The draft conference report does not set the NSL authority. In light of recent revelations about possible abuses of NSLs, the NSL provision should not last longer than four years so that Congress will have an opportunity to review the use of this power.

4. SNARK AND PEEK WARRANTS

The draft conference report requires the government to notify the target of a “snark and peek” search no earlier than 30 days after the search, rather than within seven days, as the Senate bill provides and as Pre-PA神秘50-judicial orders. The conference report should include a presumption that notice will be provided within a significantly shorter period in order to better protect Fourth Amendment rights.

The availability of additional 90-day extensions means that a shorter initial time frame should not be a hardship on the government. In the past few years, the bipartisan coalition has been working together to highlight and fix the civil liberties problems posed by the Patriot Act. We introduced the S.1344 Act to address these problems, while still maintaining important law enforcement powers needed to combat terrorism. We cannot support a conference report that would essentially extend the weakened civil liberties that were agreed to unanimously in the Senate.
The conference report, in its current form, is unacceptable. We hope that you, as members of the conference committee, will consider making the changes set forth above. If further study is made; we will work to stop this bill from becoming law. Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely,

LARRY E. CRAIG.
JOHN E. SUNUNU.
LISA MURKOWSKI.
DICK DURBIN.
KEN SALAZAR.

U.S. SENATE.
COMMITTEE ON THE JUDICIARY.
Washington, DC.

Hon. LARRY E. CRAIG.
Hon. JOHN E. SUNUNU.
Hon. LISA MURKOWSKI.
Hon. DICK DURBIN.
Hon. RICHARD J. DURBIN.
Hon. RUSSELL D. FEINGOLD.
Hon. KEN SALAZAR.

DEAR COLLEAGUES: I am in receipt of your November 17 letter outlining your concerns about the draft Conference Report reauthorizing the USA PATRIOT Act. My purpose in writing today is to state the final Conference Report addresses the issues you have identified; or, where the issues are not addressed, to explain why I am nonetheless supporting the bill. Ultimately, my aim is to demonstrate to you that the bill is one civil libertarians can, and should, support.

Addressing each of your concerns in turn:

1. SECTION 215

The draft Conference Report would allow the government to obtain sensitive personal information on a mere showing of relevance. This would allow government fishing expeditions. As business groups like the U.S. Chamber of Commerce have argued, the government should be required to convince a judge that the records they are seeking have some connection to a suspected terrorist or spy. Although the Conference Report does authorize the FISA court in certain narrow circumstances to issue an order under Section 215 upon a showing of relevance, it respectfully is to overstate the significance of the fact that the FISA court, in extraordinary circumstances only, will allow a 215 order upon a showing of relevance to a terrorism investigation. The relevance standard will apply only in extraordinary circumstances because the Conference Report channels all applications for Section 215 orders through the FISA court. The conference obtained all of these additional protections without sacrificing the critical improvements over the current Section 215 that made the Senate’s PATRIOT Act attractive to so many: (1) the requirement of a statement of facts to accompany an application for an order under Section 215; (2) the requirement that the FISA judge review and reject the FBI’s application for a 215 order; (3) the express right of recipients to consult legal counsel and seek judicial review of 215 orders; (4) the requirement of approval by senior FBI officials before the government can seek library records, medical records, educational records, gun records, and other sensitive documents; (5) the enhanced reporting to Congress on the use of Section 215, including specific information concerning requests for the nondisclosure requirement, the certification by the Attorney General, the Director of the FBI, and the special agent in charge of the office to which the records were sought; and (6) the inclusion of a four-year sunset provision to guarantee that Congress will revisit Section 215 at a later time.

The draft Conference Report does not permit the recipient of a Section 215 order to challenge its automatic, permanent gag order. Courts have held that similar restrictions violate the constitutional right to one’s day in court. The recipient of a Section 215 order is entitled to a meaningful judicial review of the gag order. Furthermore, the conference adopted an important additional safeguard ensuring that the presumption will be used only sparingly. Under the Conference Report, the Attorney General, the Deputy Attorney General, and the Director of the FBI, or an official of similar stature in another agency must personally make the requisite certification in order to obtain the conclusive evidence of the international espionage. The provision at issue by FISA, I was able to conclude that the statutory scheme that the Conference Report establishes would permit adequate judicial review of the nondisclosure requirement. Primarily, this review occurs because an order under Section 215 cannot issue without advance approval by the FISA court. This review is not only important as a practical matter, but it demonstrates that the FISA court is the appropriate forum to determine the constitutionality of the confidentiality provision in each 215 order; but, in such cases, it might well prove dispositive of the case.

2. NATIONAL SECURITY LETTERS

The draft Conference Report does not provide meaningful judicial review of the NSL’s gag order. It requires the court to accept as conclusive the government’s assertion that a gag order should not be lifted, unless the court determines the government is acting in bad faith. The recipients of NSLs are entitled to meaningful judicial review of a gag order.

In this instance, the ability to challenge the issuance of an NSL remains the same as that for challenging a grand jury subpoena. A party challenging an NSL statute is not entitled to deference because the government would comply with the NSL with or without judicial review. It is clear that this provision will not prevent you from seeking judicial review in cases where the nondisclosure requirement might endanger the national security of the United States or interfere with diplomatic relations. Even so, the court is able to issue the nondisclosure in the event the government acts in “bad faith.” In all other circumstances, the Conference Report makes no provision for any special deference to the government.

Furthermore, it is important to note that substantially identical language was included in the Senate bill, which passed this body by unanimous consent. See S. 1389 §8(b)(2) (“In reviewing a nondisclosure requirement, the certification by the Government under the disclosure of the manner in which the national security of the United States or interfere with diplomatic relations shall be treated as conclusive unless the court finds that the certification was made in bad faith.”); see also H.R. 3199 §16.

The conference adopted an important additional safeguard ensuring that the presumption will be used only sparingly. Under the Conference Report, the Attorney General, the Deputy Attorney General, an Assistant Attorney General, the Director of the FBI, or an official of similar stature in another agency must personally make the requisite certification in order to obtain the conclusive evidence of the international espionage. The provision at issue by FISA, I was able to conclude that the statutory scheme that the Conference Report establishes would permit adequate judicial review of the nondisclosure requirement. Primarily, this review occurs because an order under Section 215 cannot issue without advance approval by the FISA court. This review is not only important as a practical matter, but it demonstrates that the FISA court is the appropriate forum to determine the constitutionality of the confidentiality provision in each 215 order; but, in such cases, it might well prove dispositive of the case.

Thus, the conference committee worked to stop the bill from becoming law. Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely,

LARRY E. CRAIG.
JOHN E. SUNUNU.
LISA MURKOWSKI.
DICK DURBIN.
KEN SALAZAR.
The final Conference Report addresses this concern in full. After intensive negotiations involving various Senators and House Members and the Senate and House leadership, the conferees for knowledge that disclosure of an NSL was struck from the bill. Consistent with your request, violation of the NSL nondisclosure provision is only a crime if the Special NSL recipient intends to obstruct justice. At the same time, I did want to take the opportunity to clarify some facts about the NSL nondisclosure requirement, which will not have the onerous impact on individual rights that is implied. First, in contrast to current law, NSLs will not automatically carry a one-year time limit as required only when the government certifies that disclosure may result in a danger to national security or to the physical safety of an individual. Civil trials. Four-year sunsets would ensure accountability and effective oversight. The final Conference Report addresses this concern in full. After intensive negotiations involving various Senators and House Members, the Senate and House leadership, and the Administration, the seven-year sunsets were reduced to four years.

In addition, Section 106A of the Conference Report, which does not have an analogue in either the Senate or House bill, provides that the Inspector General of the Department of Justice will conduct two comprehensive audits of the use of Section 215; one by the Inspector General of the FBI and the other by the Inspector General of the Treasury Department. The audits, which must be complete by December 31, 2007, are designed to address the concerns expressed by many of you regarding Section 215. The Inspector General of the FBI is required to provide a report on the audit conducted by the Inspector General of the FBI to the Committee on the Judiciary by March 15, 2007. The Inspector General of the Treasury Department must provide a report to the Committee on Finance and the Senate Finance Committee by March 15, 2007. A third, and also in contrast to current law, the Conference Report includes a detailed mechanism for judicial review of the nondisclosure requirement. The effect is that any individual whose rights may have in fact been violated will have a forum in which to petition for relief.

3. SUNSETS

The draft Conference Report includes seven-year sunsets, which are too long. Congress should have the opportunity to again review the controversial provisions of the Patriot Act before the final year of the next presidential term. Four-year sunsets would ensure accountability and effective oversight.

The final Conference Report addresses this concern in full. After intensive negotiations involving various Senators and House Members, the Senate and House leadership, and the Administration, the seven-year sunsets were reduced to four years.

The most controversial provision of the PATRIOT Act has been Section 215, the so-called “library records” provision. The conference report includes new safeguards to prevent the abuse of Section 215 that neither the Senate bill nor the House bill contained. First, the conference report requires a comprehensive audit by the Justice Department’s independent Inspector General of law enforcement use of Section 215. Second, the conference report will permit, for the first time, public reporting of the total number of Section 215 orders sought and granted. A third safeguard is the conference report’s provision that Section 215 orders may not be used in P多种形式的监控。 though this period is longer than the 7-day time limit from the Senate bill, it is considerably shorter than the 180 days permitted in the House bill and is a significant improvement over the current PATRIOT Act, which imposes no limits on the period of delay beyond what is “reasonable.” And, like the Senate bill, the conference report permits renewal only upon an updated showing of the need for further delay. As in the Senate bill, these extensions are limited to 90 days, unless the facts justifying the original request remain the same. As in the Senate bill, the conference report requires a public reporting of all delayed notice warrants.

SECTION 206: MULTIPONT WIRETAP ORDERS

Many, including myself, have discussed the need for changes to Section 206 of the PATRIOT Act, which authorizes multipoint or “roving” wiretap orders. I think the conference report successfully meets that need. The ability of the Justice Department to obtain multipoint wiretaps is in part a result of changes in communications technology that have made the use of cell phones ubiquitous. Terrorists have taken advantage of those changes to cover their tracks by using multiple phones. Borrowing elements from both the House and Senate bills, the conference report limits the use of roving wiretaps to those cases in which the government’s application includes a “specific” description of the target and “specific facts in the application” that show the target’s actions may thwart surveillance efforts. Furthermore, the conference report adopts the Senate bill’s requirement that the FBI notify the court within 10 days of moving its surveillance of a target from one telephone number to another. As an additional safeguard, the conference report requires that the FBI report periodically to Congress on the number of times it uses the roving wiretap authority. Finally, like the Senate bill, the conference report includes a four-year sunset for Section 206 so that Congress will revisit this provision in the near future. I believe these important modifications will go far in preventing abuse of this provision.

Much of the criticism has really involved complaints about the current PATRIOT Act without understanding the improvements in the conference report. Numerous hearings have determined that the PATRIOT Act has been effective in enhancing homeland security and terrorism detection and prevention. The conference report represents a balanced compromise designed to maintain our ability to investigate—and hopefully preempt—terrorist attacks, while ensuring that the rights enshrined in our Constitution are not violated.

Very truly yours,

ARLEN SPECTER

Mr. SPECTER. The schedule which is currently anticipated is that the House of Representatives will take up this bill and vote on Wednesday and the Senate will take up a motion to proceed to vote on Wednesday. There is talk of a filibuster. Whatever Senators on either side of the issues they have, we will see, but I thought it would be useful in talking to a number of colleagues today, the request was made to see something in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD which goes into some detail in hitting the hot spots, but I add to that a couple of things that may be listening or staffers of my colleagues who may be listening or who may read this in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD which will be in print today, my staff and I are ready, willing, and able to elabo-rate further on the substance of the conference report. This report has been the subject of negotiations between the House and Senate for weeks and has consumed all of last week’s and the staffs on both the House and the Senate for extraordinarily dill- gent work, working around the clock. This was a full-time venture for me, personally, and other Members for the past many days. We have moved ahead because this bill expires on December 31. For those who want to reargue it and reargue it and reconsider it, it will not get any better. If we go back to conference, were that course to be followed, there are a lot of limitations in the wings that could be added. With only that one provision about the conclusion presumption having been an issue, and it having been in the Senate bill which, again, I repeat, we were mis-informed about and the vast improvement in the conference report. I have mentioned, it is a bill that ought to be ac- cepted so we can move on.

We have a very heavy schedule in the Judiciary Committee. When we return in early January before the Senate goes into session, we will have confirmation hearings of Judge Alito for the Supreme Court scheduled on the 9th of January. We then have scheduled as the first item of legislative business asbestos reform when we go back into session on the 23rd. The first item of legislative business scheduled on January 24. Then we have the issue of immigration reform, which is very high on the agenda. We have backing up the matter of reporters’ privilege or reporters’ shield and a long list of items of other confirmation proceedings to take up the time of the Judiciary Com- mittee.

I invite my colleagues’ careful con-sideration, and I repeat the availability of staff and myself personally to an-swer any questions or make any elabo-rations. I yield the floor and suggest the ab-sence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

HUMAN RIGHTS DAY

Mr. COLEMAN. Mr. President, in recognition of Human Rights Day on December 10, I rise to pay tribute to some of the bravest human rights advocates in this hemisphere Cubans who have dared to raise their voices to protest a regime they rightfully see as anti-democratic and harshly repressive.

Fidel Castro has served as dictator for over four decades, and his regime does not permit free speech or free enterprise. What is particularly reprehensible is the treatment Castro doles out to those who desire freedom on the island.

This week, the EU will present its Sakharov Prize for Freedom of Thought to the Ladies in White, the mothers and wives of Cuban political prisoners who hold peaceful demonstrations to protest the imprisonment of their husbands and sons, some for more than 20 years, for political reasons. I extend my congratulations to these worthy award recipients and to the Sakharov Prize selection committee for their continuing attention to Cuba.

Three years ago, the same prize was awarded to Oswaldo Paya, organizer of the Varela Project, which seeks a referendum on open elections, freedom of speech, an end to political prisoners, and free enterprise. Despite the imprisonment of more than 50 organizers and continuous government harassment, the Varela Project continues to gather more signatures. To date, more than 35,000 ordinary Cubans have signed the petition at great personal risk and joined a historic national grassroots movement. Mr. Payá also continues to work with other dissidents to plan for Cuba’s transition to democracy. I have met with Mr. Payá and found him to be an extraordinary individual.

All this is happening in a context of increasing demands for freedom by the Cuban people. This year’s edition of the report entitled “Steps to Freedom” by the Miami-based Directorio chronicles 1,805 acts of nonviolent civil protest and 1,371 vigils for the freedom of political prisoners throughout Cuba, including one major conference on May 20. This represents for the first time since the first such report in 1997, which found only 44 acts of civil protest, all of which were limited to Havana only. The increasing courage of the Cuban people to stand up for their human rights is all the more remarkable since it is happening in the midst of continuing arrests and “actos de repudio” organized by the Castro government.

In 2003, I traveled to Cuba with an open mind about U.S. trade and travel policy. During my trip I was touched by the stories I heard of people imprisoned by the Castro government. By the time I left the mayor’s office in 1988, funds allocated for AIDS programs in San Francisco had grown to over $20 million, more than that of the Federal Government. At that time, the crisis had exploded. AIDS cases reported in the United States had ballooned exponentially from 189 in 1981 to a staggering 32,311. Today, there are over 1 million Americans living with HIV, and the damage this disease continues to inflict across the globe is shocking.

Worldwide, some 40 million people are living with HIV: 95 percent of those 40 million reside in developing nations. Tragically, only 12 percent of those infected and or affected by the disease have access to antiretroviral drugs needed to significantly extend and improve the quality of their lives. It costs an estimated $300 per person per year to purchase the drugs to treat someone with HIV in the developing world, which is less than the dollar per day. As Americans, it is imperative that we acknowledge the AIDS crisis and its causes both globally and locally but our current efforts are simply not enough.

In Botswana, a staggering 39 percent of the population is HIV positive, and the average life expectancy for a baby born in 2010 will be 27 years—a figure not seen since the end of the 19th century. Although some countries have been remarkably proactive in preventing the spread of the virus, HIV remains rampant in others. In most countries, women are disproportionately affected by HIV, in some African nations outnumbering men by more than a 3 to 1 margin.

Sadly, our plight in America continues as well. New advances in antiretroviral drugs show promise in helping many, but AIDS remains an incurable, fatal disease. Especially disconcerting in this country are the disproportionate numbers of minorities and gay men contracting HIV.

African-American women comprise some 72 percent all women diagnosed with HIV in the United States. While African Americans make up only 12 percent of the population, they account for about 40 percent of AIDS cases diagnosed since the pandemic began.

Perhaps most disturbing, a recent study revealed that 45 percent of Black gay men tested were HIV positive, and of those tested, two-thirds were unaware of their status.

In my home State of California, 45 percent of Los Angeles nursing homes reported that OBGYNs would not provide treatment for an HIV-positive patient, and one-third of the city’s OBGYNs would refuse to treat a mother with HIV.

As a Senator representing the State with the second-highest cumulative number of persons living with AIDS in the United States, I have taken a proactive approach to securing funding for those who so desperately need help battling this deadly disease by consistently supporting increased funding and reauthorization of the Ryan White CARE Act.

I have been a cosponsor of the Early Treatment for HIV Act since the 107th Congress, a bill to expand, intensify, and coordinate research and development of microbicides to prevent the transmission of HIV and other sexually transmitted diseases. Today’s prevention options such as condoms and mutual monogamy are not feasible for millions of people around the world, especially women. Many women lack the economic power to insist their partners use condoms. Microbicides are user-controlled products in the form of gels, creams, or films that kill or inactivate the bacteria and viruses that cause HIV/AIDS and other sexually transmitted diseases. Today’s prevention options are simply not enough.

Sub-Saharan Africa, for example, accounts for only 10 percent of the global population but is home to 60 to 70 percent of the worlds reported cases of HIV. Those infected in the region comprise some 25 million of the 40 million people worldwide stricken with the disease.

In Botswana, 39 percent of the entire population is HIV positive, and the average life expectancy for a baby born in 2010 will be 27 years—a figure not seen since the end of the 19th century.

Although some countries have been remarkably proactive in preventing the spread of the virus, HIV remains rampant in others. In most countries, women are disproportionately affected by HIV, in some African nations outnumbering men by more than a 3 to 1 margin.
ensure that our prevention dollars use the comprehensive “ABC” approach, Abstinence, Be Faithful, use Condoms to prevent the spread of HIV.

In the 24 years since AIDS was first diagnosed, America and the world have made tremendous strides in battling HIV. The average life expectancy of someone infected with HIV has risen dramatically since the disease was first identified. Despite our best efforts, the war on AIDS is still not won. Even the most optimistic estimates predict a vaccine may be another 10 years away. As Americans, we must do everything in our power to expedite the defeat of this disease.

I urge my fellow senators and the Bush administration to do everything in their power to find a cure for the AIDS pandemic and adequately fund research and treatment of HIV/AIDS. While our efforts have been great, the toll AIDS has taken on the world has been far greater.

It is my hope that our unwavering dedication to helping the countless victims of HIV/AIDS will continue well beyond World AIDS Day. It should be our goal to band together to work to find the cure for this deadly illness which transcends gender, race, and nationality.

On this day, I encourage people around the world to take time to ponder the vast scope of the AIDS pandemic, and remember those we have lost. But let us not remember them in sorrow but, rather, let their memory inspire our efforts to prevent any further devastation from this virus. Amidst our many domestic and international problems, let us remember that AIDS has cruelly cut short tens of millions of lives, more than that of any warlord, dictator, or natural disaster in human history. This disease has ravaged a continent, orphaned innumerable children, and torn apart entire communities. Millions more will die of AIDS this year, and millions more, including newborn infants, will become infected. Until the day when this virus no longer threatens the lives of millions of innocent people, we all must pledge to keep this fight alive.

It is our responsibility as representatives of the people to take action now to eradicate this deadly disease. Each day we wait is another day when someone’s loved one will fall victim to this virus. Silence is approval, and it is our duty to raise our voices for those whose voices have been silenced. It is our duty to further the strides taken since the first case was diagnosed in 1981, so our generation can celebrate the day when the last case is cured. As I have said before, “I was there in the beginning, and I plan to be there in the end.”

HONORING THE COMMUNITY HARVEST FOOD BANK OF NORTH-EAST INDIANA

- Mr. BAYH. Mr. President, I rise today to pay tribute to a remarkable organization in my home State, the Community Harvest Food Bank of Northeast Indiana. Each day, nearly 600,000 Hoosiers go to bed hungry, including 390,000 children. The numbers are heartbreakingly, particularly during the holiday season, but thanks to the Community Harvest Food Bank of Northeast Indiana, our State is making strides to end this terrible tragedy.

The Community Harvest Food Bank of Northeast Indiana has been a leader in the efforts to eliminate hunger across Indiana. Each year, Community Harvest collects and distributes more than 7 million pounds of donated surplus food through a network of more than 500 locations. Each of these agencies offers invaluable assistance to hungry children, the working poor, and the elderly and helps ensure that every Hoosier has access to a healthy meal. Recently, the organization was named the 2005 Food Bank of the Year by America’s Second Harvest—an honor never before awarded to an Indiana food bank. This award recognizes the hard work, dedication, energy, and efficiency of the organization, as well as its inspired leadership under Jane Avery.

With Jane at the helm, Community Harvest has achieved organizational excellence, while continuing to do God’s work, making sure that all our neighbors are cared for and fed. One of the lessons I learned from my parents was that life is not about what you take out of it, but what you put back in. Jane lives that sentiment to the fullest every day. Her work has made Indiana a better place to live for all of us.

This year has been particularly hard on many Hoosier families and communities, making the work of Community Harvest especially critical. Businesses across the State have suffered layoffs, and families have lost their homes in recent tornadoes and storms, while gas and heating prices have continued to increase. The Community Harvest Food Bank allows families to stretch their budget further, so they don’t have to face the impossible decision of choosing between paying bills and putting food on the table. Each week, between 50,000 and 54,000 children and adults in 9 counties in Indiana are able to sit down to a hot meal because of Community Harvest’s work.

It is part of the fabric of life in Indiana that we all look out for our neighbors, aiding them through tough times and celebrating in good times. The Community Harvest Food Bank of Northeast Indiana is the kind of organization that keeps the Hoosier tradition of compassion alive and makes me proud to be a Hoosier.

CONGRATULATING MASON CORINTH ELEMENTARY SCHOOL

- Mr. BUNNING. Mr. President, today I rise to congratulate Mason Corinth Elementary School of Williamstown, Ky. Mason Corinth Elementary School is recognized as the recipient of the Fitness for Life Around Grant County. FFLAG, Silver Award for the Worksite Wellness Program.

FFLAG was created in 2002 to raise awareness about physical activity and proper nutrition. In September of 2005, FFLAG expanded their program to focus on worksite wellness by inviting Grant County businesses and organizations to take part in the Worksite Wellness Program.

Sadly, the State of Kentucky is suffering from a health epidemic. Over two-thirds of adults in our State suffer from obesity. And this epidemic is not only hurting our waistlines, but also our checkbooks. In 2005, over $1.1 billion was spent by Kentuckians on health problems caused by obesity. That is why programs which promote healthy living, such as FFLAG, are so important for the future of our Commonwealth.

Mason Corinth Elementary School is a shining example of how our Kentucky schools can help Kentuckians lead better, healthier lives.

I congratulate Mason Corinth Elementary School on this achievement. The administrators, teachers, parents, and students of this school are an inspiration to the citizens of Kentucky. I look forward to all that Mason Corinth Elementary School accomplishes in the future.

CONGRATULATING CRITTENDEN-MOUNT ZION ELEMENTARY SCHOOL

- Mr. BUNNING. Mr. President, today I rise to congratulate Crittenden-Mount Zion Elementary School of Dry Ridge, Ky. Crittenden-Mount Zion Elementary School is recognized as the recipient of the Fitness for Life Around Grant County. FFLAG, Silver Award for the Worksite Wellness Program.

FFLAG was created in 2002 to raise awareness about physical activity and proper nutrition. In September of 2005, FFLAG expanded their program to focus on worksite wellness by inviting Grant County businesses and organizations to take part in the Worksite
Wellness Program. The program focused on budget allocation for worksite wellness programs, employees’ personal dedication to fitness, communication about wellness in the workplace, and on environmental changes that can help make our offices, stores, schools, and hospitals healthier places to work. I am proud to say that Crittenden-Mount Zion School is one of the worthy recipients of the Silver Award.

Sadly, the State of Kentucky is suffering from a health epidemic. Over two-thirds of adults in our State suffer from obesity. And this epidemic is not only hurting our waistlines, but also our pocketbooks. In 2003, over $1.1 billion was spent by Kentuckians on health problems caused by obesity. That is why programs which promote healthy living, such as FFLAG, are so important for the future of our Commonwealth.

I congratulate Crittenden-Mount Zion Elementary School on this achievement. The administrators, teachers, parents, and students of this school are an inspiration to the citizens of Kentucky. I look forward to all that Crittenden-Mount Zion Elementary School accomplishes in the future.

Performance Pipe Manufacturing is a shining example of how our Kentucky businesses can help Kentuckians lead a better, healthier lives.

I congratulate Performance Pipe Manufacturing on this achievement. The employees of Performance Pipe Manufacturing are an inspiration to all of Kentucky.

IN MEMORY OF DR. JOHN V. WEHAUSEN

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, I rise today to honor a pioneering scientist and mathematician—Dr. John V. Wehausen. Considered one of the world’s leading researchers in the field of hydrodynamics, Professor Wehausen passed away on October 6 of this year. I wish to send my sincerest condolences to his family, friends, and colleagues.

A professor emeritus of engineering science at the University of California, Berkeley, Dr. Wehausen left behind a monumental body of work and vast pioneering contributions to a number of academic fields. Some of his work, now recognized as an important resource for scholars and students.

Professor Wehausen was born in Duluth, MN, and grew up in the suburbs of Chicago. He matriculated at the University of Michigan, where he earned B.S. and Ph.D. degrees in mathematics as well as an M.S. in physics.

He left Ann Arbor for Brown University in Rhode Island where he not only began a long and prestigious teaching career, but also met his wife, Mary Katherine Wertime. Ms. Wehausen preceded her husband in death in 2001 after 62 years of marriage.

After Brown, Professor Wehausen spent teaching stints at Columbia University and the University of Missouri before working for the U.S. Navy during World War II in operations analysis and research and development.

In 1956, Professor Wehausen accepted a position at the University of California, Berkeley, where he taught until 1984 and where he remained an active researcher thereafter. Shortly after arriving at UC-Berkeley, Professor Wehausen helped form the Department of Naval Architecture, one of the first programs of its kind in the nation.

During the decades he spent at UC-Berkeley, Professor Wehausen not only produced volumes of influential scholarship but also garnered a reputation as a faculty member who respected and cared for his students. A respect reciprocated by his many students.

More than a prodigious researcher and instructor, Professor Wehausen held a great love for languages, music, and literature. He gained proficiency in a number of languages and also was an accomplished pianist and lutenist.

Professor Wehausen has left behind a great legacy of scholarship. His many awards testify to his abilities and his determination. Among his many honors were the Davidson Medal from the Society of Naval Architects and Marine Engineers, an honorary doctorate degree from the Joseph Fourier University in France, and the International Lifetime Achievement Award from the American Society of Mechanical Engineers.

His four children all live in my home State of California, and I send them my deepest condolences at the passing of their father. Professor Wehausen made monumental contributions to the fields of math and science, and the influence of his life’s work will surely live on for many generations to come.

RECOGNITION OF NORMAN SCARBOROUGH

Mr. GRAHAM. Mr. President, today I wish to recognize Mr. Norman Scarborough of Clifton, SC, who has been named the South Carolina Professor of the Year by the Council for Advancement and Support of Education, CASE. The Professor of the Year awards are the nation’s highest recognition of college and university professors for excellence in undergraduate teaching and mentoring. Professor Scarborough is to be commended for this exceptional honor, and I wish to extend my personal congratulations.

Professor Scarborough is currently a member of the Department of Economics and Business Administration at Presbyterian College in Clinton, where he has served since 1979. He teaches classes on business law, small business management, management information systems, and business statistics. Professor Scarborough has numerous publications having either authored or coauthored 7 books and 6 papers on every continent from academic journals to the Internet. His professional and scholarly affiliations include Phi Kappa Phi, the American Management Academy, the United States Association of Small Business Entrepreneurship, and the Society for the Advancement of Management. Professor Scarborough also founded the student business club at Presbyterian College.

In the classroom, Professor Scarborough is known for his preparation and enthusiasm. He prizes himself on encouraging his students to think critically about his lessons instead of simply memorizing them. Professor Scarborough also emphasizes the practical application of the subjects he teaches, preaching to his students about how his lessons can be used in life.

Professor Scarborough has garnered the personal and professional respect of his students, colleagues, and neighbors. He is well-deserving of recognition for his efforts and work. I commend Professor Scarborough for his achievements, and I wish him great success in his future.
HONORING HUGH SIDEY

- Mr. HAGEL, Mr. President, on November 21, America lost a great journalist and a wonderful human being when Hugh Sidey passed away at the age of 78. Hugh Sidey was a man I admired and read for many, many years. He was an observer of the world and a prescient chronicler of our times. It was one of the great joys of my life that since coming to the Senate 9 years ago, I had the opportunity, from time to time, to sit down with Hugh Sidey and get his sense of the world. He understood the intricacies of politics and policy but he also understood the human dynamic of our business. He understood people.

Hugh Sidey approached the world with a Midwestern sensibility and a simple decency. Raised in a newspaper family in Greenfield, IA, he learned his craft at the Omaha World-Herald among other stops early in his career. At Time Magazine he covered every American President from Dwight Eisenhower to George W. Bush. He understood the presidency because he understood America. In a 1979 Time Magazine Presidency column, Hugh Sidey said this about our political system:

- Politics, when all is said and done, is a business of belief and enthusiasm. Hope energizes, doubt destroys. Hopelessness is not our heritage.

That observation hangs on the wall of my Senate office. In three simple sentences, Hugh Sidey summed up what is good about our country and what American politics can be at its best.

President Gerald Ford paid an eloquent tribute to the life and legacy of Hugh Sidey in a November 26th Washington Post op-ed. Mr. President, I submit President Ford’s tribute to this great American for the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD. America will miss Hugh Sidey. The tribute follows.

[From the Washington Post, Nov. 26, 2005]

THE FRIENDSHIP, AND TOUGHNESS, OF HUGH SIDEY

(By Gerald R. Ford)

It wasn’t supposed to be this way. Like most men my age, I have given a thought or two to my funeral. As a former president, I’m almost required to, since the military periodically updates its plans, and each presidential family is solicited for personal touches. Among these is a choice of eulogy or epitaph, a few months ago, that I called Hugh Sidey.

We’d known each other forever, Hugh coming to Washington just a few years after the voters of Michigan’s 5th Congressional District sent me there. Maybe it was our shared Midwestern background, his transparent decency or the tough but fair coverage he accorded the other American Presidents; in any event, I had always regarded Hugh as a friend. So I asked him if he would do me the honor of speaking at Washington’s National Cathedral when the time came. I did so in part for symbolic reasons. I like reporters, even if I haven’t always liked what some wrote about me. I figure that’s a pretty decent way to pay for a free press in a free society. But I also hoped to remind people in our often overheated era that it is possible for a politician and a journalist to enjoy mutual respect, admiration and, yes, friendship, all the while understanding the necessarily adversarial relationship that often exists in power and those who report on their activities.

Hugh Sidey died this week at the age of 78. Anyone who read him knew America’s presidents. Anyone who knew him knew America. In a very real sense, he never left Greenfield, Iowa, where four generations of Sideys practiced journalism with integrity and the perspective that uniquely supplies. “A sense of humor . . . is needed armor,” he once wrote of the presidency. “Joy in one’s heart and some laughter on one’s lips is a sign that the American deep down has a pretty good grasp on life.”

Hugh had a sure grasp of life. An insider who never forgot those on the outside, he was warm and wise about Washington and its rituals. He appreciated Woodrow Wilson’s observation that men who arrive in our nation’s capital—presidents included—have a tendency to either grow or swell. But he was incapable of cynicism. Hugh scored more than, his share of scoops, but along with the ability to pierce with an empathy that enabled him to see the White House and its occupants first and always as very human beings.

While writing of the U-2 crisis, the Missiles of October or the 22nd of November; Vietnam or Watergate; Richard Nixon’s opening to China, or Jimmy Carter’s high-risk diplomacy; Ronald Reagan’s years of renewal; the tumult of the ’90s followed by the shattering events of Sept. 11—Hugh put readers at the center of events. At the same time, he made it possible for millions who might never visit the White House to experience it, in good and not so good times, through a President’s eyes and ears.

Over the years he became something of a Washington institution himself, seemingly as much a part of the presidency as Air Force One or Camp David. Yet he never behaved like an institution, and I suspect he never stopped pinching himself over his extraordinary good fortune.

For his friends, and they are legion, the good fortune was to know and learn from and simply enjoy Hugh’s company. Now he is forever part of the old house whose history he understood and read for many, many years. Anyone who knew him knew America. In a very real sense, he never left Greenfield, Iowa, where four generations of Sideys practiced journalism with integrity and the perspective that uniquely supplies. “A sense of humor . . . is needed armor,” he once wrote of the presidency. “Joy in one’s heart and some laughter on one’s lips is a sign that the American deep down has a pretty good grasp on life.”

Hugh Sidey also embodied the best of America in Washington.

CONGRATULATING THE MASSACHUSETTS LATINO CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

- Mr. KERRY, Mr. President. I wish to congratulate the Massachusetts Latino Chamber of Commerce, La Cámara de Comercio, on the opening of their new Business Center in Springfield, MA. The Business Center will be the home of a number of Latino-owned businesses as well as providing owners with workshops and trainings for members to gain knowledge in their perspective business area. In addition, the center will establish a computer lab to assist members with business research and planning. The new center will serve as a resource able to provide support, referral, and resources to small business owners. La Cámara de Comercio will establish a computer center to assist members with business research and planning, as well as business language seminars. Latino businesses across the Commonwealth from Springfield to Boston are helping us to better compete in the global market. It is my privilege to congratulate La Cámara de Comercio on this new endeavor.

STATEMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Mr. NELSON of Florida:

S. 3850. A bill to amend title XVIII of the Social Security Act to prohibit physicians and other health care practitioners from charging a membership fee or any other incidental fee (or requiring purchase of other items or services) as a prerequisite for the provision of an item or service to a Medicare beneficiary; to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. NELSON of Florida. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce the Equal Access to Medicare Act of 2005 to combat the growing practice of health care often called “concierge” medicine. As my colleagues may recall I introduced similar legislation in the past two sessions of Congress to deal with the growing problem of doctors shutting down their practices and opening new ones, only accepting those patients willing to pay a membership fee. These fees range from $50 to $15,000 annually. By charging these extraneous and unwarranted dues or requiring patients to purchase non-Medicare covered services, doctors can shrink their practices, maintain a high profit margin, and continue billing Medicare, all on the backs of low and middle-income beneficiaries.

This is a dangerous model that causes significant disparities in the care available to Medicare beneficiaries. A doctor receiving Medicare reimbursement should not be allowed to turn away Medicare beneficiaries who cannot or choose not to pay membership fees or other Medicare covered services. My bill simply prevents Medicare beneficiaries from requiring payments to doctors who charge their patients membership fees or any other incidental or extraneous fees, or who require the purchase of non-Medicare covered services as a condition for the provision of Medicare covered services.

Since the introduction of this bill in 2001, the practice has been expanding with versions in many States. According to a recent GAO report, the number of physicians practicing concierge medicine has increased by more than 10 times in the last five years. As an increasing number of Medicare beneficiaries voice their concerns, it is time for Congress to act. Should this practice proliferate, a doctor shortage for low and middle-income Medicare beneficiaries is likely, exacerbating an already ailing health care marketplace.

I must emphasize that this bill does not interfere with the ability of doctors to limit the size of their practices or to be membership based; it simply applies the same standard private insurance companies apply to their providers—that doctors may not select patients based upon willingness or ability to pay an entrance fee. I hope my colleagues will join me in helping Medicare keep its promise of accessibility to seniors who have paid a lifetime of “premiums.”

I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 3850

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE. This Act may be cited as the “Equal Access to Medicare Act of 2005”.

SEC. 2. PROHIBITION OF INCIDENTAL FEES AND REQUIRED PURCHASE OF NON-COVERED ITEMS OR SERVICES UNDER MEDICARE.

(a) IN GENERAL. Section 1842 of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395u) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection: “(1) A physician, practitioner, or other individual described in subsection (b)(1)(C), or other individuals, (A) charge a membership fee or any other incidental fee to a Medicare beneficiary (as defined in section 1802(b)(5)(A)); or (B) require a Medicare beneficiary (as so defined) to purchase a noncovered item or service as a prerequisite for the provision of a covered item or service to the beneficiary under this title.

(2) CONSTRUCTION. Nothing in this subsection shall be construed to apply the prohibition under paragraph (1) to a physician or practitioner, or other individual described in such subsection who does not accept any funds under this title.”

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE. The amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply to membership fees and other charges made, or purchases of items and services required, or on after the date of enactment of this Act.

By Mr. SUNUNU (for himself, Mr. LEAHY, Mr. CRAIG, Mr. ROGERS of Texas, Mr. ANUKOSKI, Mr. KENNEDY, Mr. LEVIN, Mr. DURBIN, Ms. SABENOW, and Mr. SALAZAR):

S. 2082. A bill to amend the USA PATRIOT Act to extend the sunset of certain provisions of the lone wolf provision of the Intelligence Reform and Terrorism Prevention Act of 2004 to March 31, 2006; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, After September 11, 2001, the Senate and the House moved swiftly to pass anti-terrorism legislation. The legislation was aimed at strengthening the frontline guard against terrorism at our borders and airports, at our financial institutions, and in New York City.

One of the fruits of that bipartisanship was the PATRIOT Act’s sunset provisions. These key provisions set an expiration date of December 31, 2005, on certain government powers that had great potential to affect the civil liberties of the American people. Republican House Majority Leader Dick Armey and I insisted on these sunsets to ensure that Congress would revisit the PATRIOT Act within a few years and consider refinements to protect the rights and liberties of all Americans more effectively, and we prevailed.

Sadly, the Bush administration and the Republican congressional leadership have squandered key opportunities to improve the PATRIOT Act. The House-Senate conference report filed last week by Republican lawmakers fails short of what the American people expect and deserve from us. The bipartisan Senate bill, which the Senate Judiciary Committee and then the Senate adopted unanimously, struck a far better balance.

The reauthorization of the PATRIOT Act must have the confidence of the American people. The Congress should not rush ahead to enact flawed legislation to meet a deadline that is within our power to extend. We owe it to the American people to get this right.

The way forward to a sensible and workable bipartisan bill is clear. Today I am pleased to join with Senator Sununu and others to introduce a bill to extend the sunsets on the expiring PATRIOT Act powers until March 31, 2006. Our bill also extends for three months the so-called “lone wolf”. FISA surveillance authority, which Congress enacted last year as part the Intelligence Reform and Terrorism Prevention Act.

The deadline that Congress imposed to ensure oversight and accountability should not be now become a barrier to achieving bipartisan compromise and the best bill we can forge together. This is a vital debate, and these are vital issues to all Americans. If a brief extension is needed to produce a better bill that will better serve all of our citizens, then by all means, let us give ourselves that time. I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 2062

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

Section 232(a) of the Unitig and Strengthening America by Providing Appropriate Tools Required to Intercept and Obstruct Terrorism (USA PATRIOT ACT) Act of 2001 (Public Law 107-56; 115 Stat. 208) is amended by striking “December 31, 2005” and inserting “March 31, 2006”.

Mr. NELSON of Florida (for himself and Mr. TALENT) submitted the following concurrent resolution; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary:

S. CON. RES. 68

Whereas even though African Americans were excluded from playing in the major leagues of their time with their white counterparts, the desire of many African Americans to play baseball could not be repressed; Whereas Major League Baseball did not fully integrate until July 1949; Whereas African Americans began organizing their own professional baseball teams in 1865; Whereas the skills and abilities of Negro League players eventually made Major League Baseball realize the need to integrate the sport; Whereas six separate baseball leagues, known collectively as the “Negro Baseball Leagues”, were organized by African Americans between 1920 and 1960; Whereas the Negro Baseball Leagues included exceptionally talented players who played the game at its highest level; Whereas on May 20, 1920, the Negro National League and the successful Negro League, played its first game; Whereas Andrew “Rube” Foster, on February 13, 1920, at the Paseo YMCA in Kansas City, Missouri, founded the Negro National League and also managed and played for the Chicago American Giants, and later was inducted into the Baseball Hall of Fame; Whereas Leroy Robert Paige, who began his long career in the Negro Leagues and did not make his Major League debut until the age of 42, is considered one of the greatest pitchers baseball has seen, and during his long career thrilled millions of baseball fans with his skill and legendary showboating, and was later inducted into the Baseball Hall of Fame; Whereas Jackie Robinson, whose career began with the Negro League Kansas City Monarchs, became the first African American to play in the Major Leagues in April 1947, was named Major League Baseball Rookie of the Year in 1947, led the Brooklyn Dodgers to 6 National League pennants and a World Series championship, and was later inducted into the Baseball Hall of Fame;

Whereas John Doby, whose career began with the Negro League Newark Eagles, became the first African American to play in Major League Baseball, and was an All-Star 9 times in Negro League and Major League Baseball, and was later inducted into the Baseball Hall of Fame;

Whereas Larry Doby, whose career began with the Negro League Newark Eagles, became the first African American in Major League Baseball with the Cleveland Indians in 1946, served on the Veterans Committee of the National Baseball Hall of Fame, and is the American League Baseball Museum of Board Members, and has worked tirelessly to promote the history of the Negro Leagues;

Whereas by achieving success on the baseball field, African American baseball players have broken down color barriers and integrated African Americans into all aspects of the societies in the United States; Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That Congress—

(1) designates May 20, 2006, as “Negro Leaguers Recognition Day”; and

(2) recognizes the teams and players of the Negro Leagues for their achievements, dedication, sacrifices, and contributions to baseball today.

Mr. NELSON of Florida. Mr. President, I, along with Senator TALENT, proudly submit a resolution recognizing May 20, 2006 as, “Negro Leaguers Recognition Day.”

Since 1965, long before Major League Baseball was integrated in 1947, African Americans were organizing their own professional leagues. These leagues did not succeed because of racial prejudice and the lack of adequate financial backing. However, this changed dramatically with the inception of the first successful Negro League. On May 20, 1920, the Negro National League played its first game. Its creation was the result of the efforts of an African American player and manager named Andrew “Rube” Foster. Mr. Foster’s success inspired the formation of other leagues.

As a result, on October 3, 1924, the first Negro League World Series game was played between the Kansas City Monarchs of the Negro National League and Hilldale of Philadelphia of the Eastern Colored League. This historic and exhaustive first series lasted ten games, covered a span of almost three weeks, and was played in four different cities. In the end, Kansas City claimed the championship.

But the lasting legacy of the Negro leagues, as the six separate leagues between 1920 and 1960 are collectively known, are the tremendous baseball talents between 1920 and 1960 are collectively known, are the tremendous baseball talents that we know and some we don’t. Among them is Jackie Robinson, the first African American to break the Resolved, That the Secretary of the Senate communicate these resolutions to the House of Representatives and transmit an enrolled copy thereof to the family of the deceased.

Resolved, That when the Senate adjoins today, it stand adjourned as a further mark of respect to the memory of the Honorable Eugene J. McCarthy.

COMMEMORATING THE LIFE, ACHIEVEMENTS, AND CONTRIBUTIONS OF ALAN A REICH

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Judiciary Committee be discharged from and the Senate proceed to the consideration of S. Res. 321, the PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The bill clerk read as follows:

A resolution (S. Res. 321) commemorating the life, achievements, and contributions of Alan A. Reich.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the resolution. Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the resolution be agreed to, the preamble be agreed to, and the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The resolution (S. Res. 321) was agreed to.

The preamble was agreed to.

The resolution, with its preamble, reads as follows:

Whereas Alan Reich—

(1) served in the Department of State from 1970 to 1975 as a Deputy Assistant Secretary for Educational and Cultural Affairs;

(2) later served as Director of the Bureau of East-West Trade for the Department of Commerce;

(3) was named the President of the United States Council for the International Year of Disabled Persons in 1978; and

(4) was the first person to address the United Nations General Assembly from a wheelchair when the United Nations opened its International Year of the Disabled in 1981;

Whereas in 1982, Alan Reich transformed the Special Unit for the International Year of Disabled Persons into the National Organization on Disability, an organization that actively seeks on national, State, and local levels full and equal participation for individuals with disabilities in all aspects of life; and

(1) founded the Bicentennial Foundation in 1984 to encourage national leaders to set goals aimed at improving the lives of people with disabilities for the year 2000;

(2) served as past Chairman of the People-to-People Committee on Disability; and

(3) worked to advance research in regeneration of the central nervous system as Chair- man of the Paralysis Research Foundation and as President of The National Paraplegia Foundation;

Whereas Alan Reich, who used a wheelchair for 43 years, led an effort that raised $1,650,000 to add the statue of Franklin Delano Roosevelt in a wheelchair to the memorial of the former President in Washington, D.C.;

Whereas Alan Reich stated in 2001, “The unveiling is a major national moment, the removal of the shroud of shame that cloaks disability. The statue will become a shrine to people with disabilities, but it also inspire everyone to overcome obstacles. When you see the memorial that follows the statue, what will be in your mind is that he did all this from a wheelchair.”;

Whereas in July 2005, Alan Reich received the George H.W. Bush Medal, an award established to honor outstanding service under the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990 (42 U.S.C. 12101 et seq.);

Whereas Alan Reich is survived by his wife, partner, and best friend, Gay, their 2 sons James and Jeffery; their daughter Elizabeth, and 11 grandchildren; and

Whereas Alan Reich passed away on November 6, 2005, and the contributions he made to his family, his community, and his Nation will not be forgotten: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate—

(1) honors the life, achievements, and contributions of Alan Reich;

(2) extends its deepest sympathies to the family of Alan Reich for their loss of this great and generous man; and

(3) respectfully requests the Secretary of the Senate to transmit a copy of this resolution to the family of Alan Reich.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

NATIONAL AERONAUTICS AND SPACE AUTHORIZATION ACT OF 2005

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, I ask that the Chair lay before the Senate a House message to accompany S. 1281.

The Chair laid before the Senate a message from the House of Representatives insisting upon its amendment to the bill (S. 1281) entitled "An Act to authorize appropriations for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration for science, aeronautics, exploration, exploration capabilities, and the Inspector General, and for other purposes, for fiscal years 2006, 2007, 2008, 2009, and 2010", and asking a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon.

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate disagree with the House amendment and agree with the request for a conference. I further ask that the Chair be authorized to appoint conferees on the part of the Senate with a ratio of 3 to 2.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Presiding Officer (Mr. SUNUNU) appointed Mr. STEVENS, Mr. LOTT, Mrs. HUTCHISON, Mr. INOUYE, and Mr. NELSON of Florida conferees on the part of the Senate.

MEASURES READ THE FIRST TIME—H.R. 4096, H.R. 4388 and H.R. 4440

Mr. MCCONNELL. I understand there are three bills at the desk and I ask for their first reading en bloc.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The clerk will report the bills by title.

The bill clerk read as follows:

A bill (H.R. 4096) to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to extend to 2006 the alternative minimum tax relief available in 2005 and to index such relief for inflation.

A bill (H.R. 4388) to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to extend certain expiring provisions, and for other purposes.

A bill (H.R. 4440) to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to provide tax benefits for the Gulf Opportunity Zone and certain areas affected by Hurricanes Rita and Wilma, and for other purposes.

Mr. MCCONNELL. I ask for second readings and in order to place the bills on the calendar under the provisions of rule XIV, I object to my own request, all en bloc.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The objection is heard. The measures will be read again on the next legislative day.

APPOINTMENT

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair, on behalf of the majority leader, pursuant to Public Law 108–109, title VI, section 637, appoints the following individual to serve as a member of the Helping to Enhance the Livelihood of People (HELP) Around the Globe Commission: Jerome F. Climer of Virginia.

ORDERS FOR TUESDAY, DECEMBER 13, 2005

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that when the Senate completes its business today, it stand in adjournment until 11 a.m. tomorrow, Tuesday, December 13. I further ask that following the prayer and pledge, the morning hour be deemed expired, the Journal of proceedings be approved to date, the time for the two leaders be reserved, and the Senate proceed to a period for morning business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

PROGRAM

Mr. MCCONNELL. Tomorrow the Senate will debate the Bahrain Free Trade Agreement under the previous order. The Senate will also begin debate on the motions to instruct conferees with respect to the deficit reduction bill. Members are reminded that we will have stacked votes on Wednesday morning and they should plan their schedules accordingly. We have a lot of work to finish this week and we will need the cooperation and patience of all Members to complete our work before Christmas.

ADJOURNMENT UNTIL 11 A.M. TOMORROW

Mr. MCCONNELL. If there is no further business to come before the Senate, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate stand in adjournment under the provisions of S. Res. 330 as a further mark of respect to the late Senator McCarthy.

There being no objection, the Senate, at 5:41 p.m., adjourned until Tuesday, December 13, 2005, at 11 a.m.
The House Energy and Commerce Committee, on which I serve, unanimously reported this legislation during the last Congress.

Here are some facts underlying the importance of this legislation:

The Office of Refugee Resettlement of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services currently funds 27 treatment centers in 16 States, while other similar programs are funded in State health departments. Many centers do not have enough resources to meet existing demand from torture survivors in their communities.

Not surprisingly, few programs engage in outreach to refugee communities since they would not have the capacity to absorb the increased client load that such outreach might generate. Consequently, many torture victims are not receiving the rehabilitation treatment they need.

There has been no increase in funding levels since fiscal year 2001. At the same time, the number of survivors seeking treatment at U.S. centers has steadily increased. The client base at 14 centers increased from 935 in 1999, to 1,550 in 2000, and to 2,579 in 2001. In 2002, a subsequent survey showed that 23 federally-funded centers had treated 3,664 clients that year.

Despite the high need and demand for torture survivor services, the Office of Refugee Resettlement was forced to reduce funding to existing programs last year in order to open additional needed centers. One program had to close its doors, while others laid off employees or reduced the number of torture victims that can receive treatment.

The network of treatment centers in the United States still needs to be expanded, especially in areas with significant refugee and immigrant communities. For example, there are no treatment centers in Miami, New Orleans, Cleveland or Seattle.

Current funding does not provide for evaluation and research to strengthen the effectiveness of treatment programs for victims. In order to reach a greater number of torture survivors in the United States, training on the identification and treatment of victims of torture should be provided to general health care providers and hospitals.

Torture victims are often targeted for persecution by repressive regimes because of their independent political, religious or labor activities. Even after a dictatorial regime has fallen, justice and redress for torture victims are often lacking.

The Office of Refugee Resettlement, USAID, Victims of Torture Fund, and $15 million over two years for the United Nations’ Voluntary Fund for the Victims of Torture, which supports almost all U.S. centers.

The Torture Victims Relief Reauthorization Act of 2005, which supports almost all U.S. centers.

‘‘Pawlak vote No. 622: I would have voted “no” on the motion to table H. Res. 591, Leader Pelosi’s Privileged Resolution on the culture of corruption surrounding the Republican’s Prescription Drug Bill.’’

Mr. BLUMENAUER. Mr. Speaker, had I been present for the final vote on Thursday, December 8th, 2005, I would have voted as follows:

‘‘Pawlak vote No. 622: I would have voted “no” on the motion to table H. Res. 591, Leader Pelosi’s Privileged Resolution on the culture of corruption surrounding the Republican’s Prescription Drug Bill.’’ such as Alzheimer’s, autism and bipolar disorder. “I was pretty ecstatic,” Shieh said. “I was in shock because I didn’t expect to win.”

Lee was equally surprised. “They gave us this big check. It was amazing, because all the other projects were really good,” Lee said. The TGen internship program is in its second official year.

“Our goal is to make Arizona the best in K–12 bioscience education nationwide,” said Dietrich Stephan, director of the neurogenomics division at TGen. “There’s a long way to go but this proves we can do it here.”

During the summer, Lee and Shieh were a part of the institute’s 63 unpaid interns from high school and college. About 10 students continue to work a couple of days a week after school during the school year. It’s real life exposure to what it means to be a biomedical researcher, Stephan said.

“The students work side by side with a Ph.D.-level mentor. They’re working on real research problems that we have ongoing.” TGen is providing Arizona students a venue of excellence that will put them at the top of the field, Stephan said. “They’re getting a graduate level education in high school,” he said.

Lee’s research identified the causes for the neurological disease called Salla disease. This was Lee’s second summer as an intern and “she blew the doors off of this,” Stephan said. “She figured out the one gene that was broken that causes the disease.”

Her work was published in the American Journal of Medical Genetics. “Albert did a similarly impressive job,” Stephan said. Shieh was the first author on a paper published in the HMG Genomics journal. He worked on scanning the 3 billion-letter genetic code to find disease-causing mutations.

On Monday, the Arizona teens, along with the top individual winner, Michael Viscardi, 16, of San Diego, got to ring the closing bell at the New York Stock Exchange.

SENATE COMMITTEE MEETINGS
Title IV of Senate Resolution 4, agreed to by the Senate on February 4, 1977, calls for establishment of a system for a computerized schedule of all meetings and hearings of Senate committees, subcommittees, joint committees, and committees of conference. This title requires all such committees to notify the Office of the Senate Daily Digest—designated by the Rules Committee—of the time, place, and purpose of the meetings, when scheduled, and any cancellations or changes in the meetings as they occur.

As an additional procedure along with the computerization of this information, the Office of the Senate Daily Digest will prepare this information for printing in the Extensions of Remarks section of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD on Monday and Wednesday of each week.

Meetings scheduled for Tuesday, December 13, 2005 may be found in the Daily Digest of today’s RECORD.
