Empower our Senators today to do Your will. Touch them with Your presence and embrace them with Your love.

Make them content to sow good seeds in the knowledge that the harvest is certain.

Help each of us to be led by You beyond the portals of selfishness to the spaciousness of service. Love us until we can live and love as we have been loved by You. We pray this in Your loving Name. Amen.

RECOGNITION OF THE MAJORITY LEADER

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The majority leader is recognized.

SCHEDULE

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, this morning, after 30 minutes of morning business, the Senate will resume consideration of the PATRIOT Act conference report. At approximately 11 a.m., the Senate will vote on the motion to invoke cloture on the PATRIOT Act. It is my hope cloture will be invoked and that we could then adopt the conference report during today's session. Senators should anticipate additional votes on legislative and executive items we must complete action on before breaking for the holidays, including a number of judges and other nominations. As all of our colleagues know, we have a lot of work to do and a lot to accomplish over the next several days before we break for the holidays.

I thank our colleagues for their patience and their hard work. We are working in a bicameral way. As our colleagues know, much of this legislation has to originate now and pass through the House before coming to us. We are working with the House to get that legislation appropriately.

THE PATRIOT ACT

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, later this morning the Senate will vote on the issue of whether to limit debate on the USA PATRIOT Act. I urge my colleagues to support the cloture motion. The PATRIOT Act passed with near unanimous support 4 years ago. Since its passage, this commonsense law has proved to be one of the most useful, important tools we have in our antiterror arsenal. If we can take ourselves back to that morning on September 11, many people were at work, many others on the way to work when we all heard and soon saw that shocking news that 19 young men had hijacked four passenger planes and slammed them into the World Trade Center and into the Pentagon, 3 or 4 miles away. A fourth plane was en route, and its fate was unknown.

The oceans separating us from them suddenly vanished and America was struck with a horrific force we had never seen before. Three thousand innocent Americans lost their lives, and we learned on that dark day that out there, hiding in the shadows, is a patient and brutal enemy, determined to inflict colossal violence on our shores.

This enemy does not wear a uniform or march under a national banner. It hides among us as neighbors and coworkers, at subway shops and at cyber cafes. It hides in plain sight, plotting and planning until the moment comes to inflict its massive and terrible cruelty.

On 9/11, our enemy declared war on the American people, and war is what they got. We toppled the Taliban in Afghanistan. We brought down Saddam Hussein and dismantled his tyranny. Yesterday, under the protection of brave American and Iraqi soldiers, 11 million Iraqi people streamed to the polls to freely choose, for the first time in the country's modern history, a permanent, democratically elected government of and by the people. It was a historic milestone for the Iraqi people. It was a historic milestone for freedom. It proved once again that every day we are making progress.

We are fighting the terrorist enemy at home and in the mountains of Afghanistan, on the worldwide Web and in the streets of Baghdad. We are coordinating our efforts both inside and outside our borders so that we never have to suffer another terrorist attack.

In the days following 9/11, we learned that the enemy had been able to elude law enforcement, in part because our agencies were not able to share key investigative information. Once we understood this awful reality, we swiftly took action. Within 6 weeks of the attacks on America, the Congress passed the USA PATRIOT Act with overwhelming bipartisan support. The Senate vote was near unanimous, with 98 Senators voting in favor. The PATRIOT Act went to work tearing down the information wall between agencies and allowed the intelligence community and law enforcement to work more closely in pursuit of terrorist suspects.

Since then, it has been highly effective in tracking down terrorists and making our country safer. Because of the PATRIOT Act, the United States has charged over 400 suspected terrorists. More than half of them have already been convicted. Because of the PATRIOT Act, law enforcement has broken up terrorist cells all across the country, from New York to California, Oregon, Virginia, and Florida.

In San Diego, officials were able to use the PATRIOT Act to investigate and prosecute several suspects in an al-Qaida drug-for-weapons plot. The investigation led to several guilty pleas.

The PATRIOT Act also allowed prosecutors and investigators to crack the Virginia Jihad case, involving 11 men who had trained for Jihad in northern Virginia, Pakistan, and Afghanistan. It specifically encourages information sharing among the many branches of Government so that our crime-fighting officials can adapt and respond more effectively to the terrorist threat. It also levels the playing field, so that law enforcement utilizes the tools they already have in other kinds of criminal cases, such as drug trafficking and mob activity. It is now easier for law enforcement at all levels to appropriately investigate and track suspected terrorists already in the United States.

The conference report to reauthorize the PATRIOT Act includes all of these provisions and goes further to strengthen and improve America's security. It enhances vital safeguards to protect our civil liberties and privacy, and it contains new provisions to combat terrorist financing and money laundering, to protect our mass transportation systems and railways from attacks such as the ones on the London subway last summer, secure our sea-ports, and fight methamphetamine drug abuse, America's No. 1 drug problem.

The clock is ticking. We do need to take action now. In just 15 days—December 31—nearly all of the provisions of the PATRIOT Act expire. If they do, we are right back to where we were pre-9/11. The information walls go right back up. We cannot let this happen. We cannot lose ground.

The House, as we all know, acted last week. They passed a conference report with a bipartisan vote of 251 to 174. Now is the time for the Senate to follow suit.

The choice is clear. Should we take a step forward in making America safer or should we go back to the pre-9/11 days when terrorists slipped through the cracks? I believe the answer is clear, and I believe we have only one choice.

I ask my colleagues who are threatening to filibuster to take a closer look at that PATRIOT Act conference report. This reasonable compromise reached by Senate and House negotiators may not contain everything that each and every Member in this body would like, but it is much closer to the Senate bill that passed unanimously than it is to the House bill. It includes 4-year sunsets on the most controversial provisions, just as in the Senate version. And like the Senate version, it includes extensive privacy and civil liberty safeguards, as well as enhanced congressional oversight.

As we prepare to vote on cloture later this morning, I urge my colleagues to join in support of this essential legislation.

The FBI, the intelligence community, and our law enforcement need us to act. The American people want us to act. American national security demands that we act. A nation in fear cannot be a nation that is free.

I urge my colleagues to stand up for freedom and security for the United States of America.

I yield the floor.

RECOGNITION OF THE MINORITY LEADER

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. MARTINEZ). The minority leader is recognized.

THE PATRIOT ACT

Mr. REID. Mr. President, in approximately an hour and a half, there will be a vote on the motion to invoke cloture on the PATRIOT Act conference report. Rather than terminate debate on this flawed piece of legislation, the Senate should work harder to achieve a strong, bipartisan PATRIOT Act that strengthens national security while protecting the privacy of innocent Americans.

Earlier this year, after negotiations that went late into the night, the Senate Judiciary Committee unanimously approved a bill to reauthorize and improve the PATRIOT Act. Soon after, the full Senate passed this bill by unanimous consent. Every Senator, Democrat and Republican, approved this reauthorization of the PATRIOT Act. Every Democrat and every Republican in the Senate—every one of us—is firmly on record in support of giving law enforcement the appropriate tools to fight terrorism.

We all know the House of Representatives is in shambles. Leadership is in a state of disarray.

The spirit of bipartisanship that led to passage of the Senate bill, because of the problems in the House of Representatives, did not prevail in the conference. Not long after the House appointed conferees, Democratic negotiators were shut out of discussions. In fact, Senator LEAHY's staff was directed by the chairman of the Judiciary Committee in the House to leave the room.

The final bill was written by Republican-only conferees working behind closed doors with Justice Department lawyers. The result was an imbalanced conference report that departed significantly from the bipartisan Senate bill.

Chairman SPECTER, to his credit, joined other conferees in refusing to sign the conference report. Over the next few weeks, he and Senator LEAHY worked hard to improve it and succeeded in eliminating some of the worst provisions.

I commend and applaud the efforts of the chairman and our ranking member to work to improve this conference report.

But I am sorry to say, in my view—and in the view of many of my colleagues on both sides of the aisle—the conference report still does not contain enough checks on the expanded powers granted to the Government by the PATRIOT Act. It simply is not acceptable.

I supported the passage of the original PATRIOT Act in 2001. This was enacted in the days immediately following the vicious attacks on September 11, 2001. I do not regret my vote. Much of the original act consisted of noncontroversial efforts to update and strengthen basic law enforcement authorities. More than 90 percent of the 2001 act is already part of permanent law and will not expire at the end of this year.

We are currently considering renewal of these provisions that were considered so expansive and so vulnerable to abuse that Congress wisely decided to subject them to 4-year sunsets, meaning that after 4 years they had to be renewed or they would fall. The authors of the act wanted Congress to reassess these in a more deliberative manner with the benefit of experience.

The act of 2001 came, as I mentioned, when the country was feeling the devastation of the terrorist attacks of 2001. I, frankly, don't think we took enough time at that time to do it the right way. That is why a number of us demanded the sunset provisions.

Now, more than 4 years later, we are presented with the opportunity to do it right.

While the conference report before us makes certain improvements over the original PATRIOT Act, it still does not strike the right balance.

We can provide the Government with the powers it needs to investigate potential terrorists and terrorist activity and at the same time protect the freedom of innocent Americans.

Liberty and security are not contradictory. Additional congressional and judicial oversight of the Government's surveillance and investigative authorities need not hamper the Government's ability to fight terrorism.

I say to the Presiding Officer, someone whose heritage is from the island of Cuba, where there is very little liberty and very little security, we are in the United States of America. We are not a dictatorship like Cuba. We can have liberty and we can have security.

As I said, additional congressional and judicial oversight of the Government's surveillance and investigative authorities need not hamper the Government's ability to fight terrorism. These checks are needed to ensure that the Government does not overreach or violate the privacy of ordinary American citizens who have nothing to do with terrorism.

Is there any reason to be concerned? Yes. There is a reason to be concerned.

For example, the need for such checks is based on a number of things, not the least of which is the story that ran in the Washington Post in early November of this year after the Senate passed the bill. The story reported that the FBI issues more than 30,000 national security letters a year—30,000. These letters go to businesses. And they say: I want you to tell everything you know about Ron Weich, Gary Myrick, Russ Feingold, Herb Kohl. It doesn't matter who it is. And that person—the names I have mentioned—does not know that they have had this request to give all information about them or any information about them. The person who has been requested to give the information can't tell them. It is against the law to tell them.

These national security letters are issued by FBI agents without any judicial supervision. The third party recipients of these orders, such as banks, phone companies, and Internet service providers, are prohibited, as I have said, from telling anyone that they have been served. The customers whose records are seized will never know that the FBI has gathered their personal information.

For example, the article described an incident at the end of 2003 in which the Department of Homeland Security compiled information of hundreds of thousands of New Year's visitors to Las Vegas. They obtained the records of everyone who had rented a hotel room, car, or storage unit, and every airplane passenger who landed in the city of Las Vegas. They obtained records, how much they paid for their hotel room, did they order any X-rated movies. I don't know what other information they got.

When Las Vegas businesses objected to this effort to gather unprecedented amounts of information on their customers, the FBI responded by serving them with national security letters. According to one law enforcement source quoted in this piece, agents encouraged voluntary disclosure of information by threatening to demand further records, further profiles from the casinos about their guests.

Perhaps worst of all, what happened in Las Vegas did not stay in Las Vegas, but, instead, stayed in Federal databanks. It is still in the Federal databanks. None of the information gathered in that investigation has been purged to this date. The rental and travel records of hundreds of thousands of innocent Americans remain in Government hands.

Las Vegas first; was there any place else? Did they go to the New Year's Eve celebration at Times Square in New York? Did they go to the warm beaches of Florida snooping and spying?

I have three major concerns about this conference report. First, I am disturbed the conference report provides neither meaningful judicial review nor a sunset provision for those provisions regarding national security letters. Instead of protections, this conference report effectively turns these NSLs, as they are referred to, national security letters, into administrative subpoenas. For the first time, the report authorizes the Government to seek a court order to compel compliance with one of these letters. Recipients who do not comply could be found in contempt, fined, or even sent to jail.

A third-party recipient, such as one of the Las Vegas hotels, could theoretically challenge an NSL in court in order to protect the privacy of its customers, but the conference report makes it unlikely such judicial review will matter because the court is not required to find any individualized suspicion that the records sought are connected to a terrorist.

Second, I have significant concerns about section 215, often referred to as the library provision. Under a key provision in the Senate compromise reached this summer, the Government would have been required to show that the records sought under this provision had some connection to a suspected terrorist or spy. But under the conference report we have now before the Senate, the Government may demand sensitive personal information of innocent Americans merely upon a showing that the records are "relevant" to a terrorism investigation.

For example, the Government may be broadly suspicious of individuals in a particular immigrant community. Under section 215, the Government could go to the library in that community and demand the records of library cardholders to see which individuals are reading what. What about someone reading scientific texts, maybe even Smithsonian or one of the magazines people read dealing with automobiles, or Scientific American? Are these people considered terrorist threats?

A court challenge to a section 215 order must be conducted in secret. At the Government's request, the recipient is not permitted to review Government submissions regardless of whether the Government has any national security concerns in that particular case. Moreover, the conference report does not permit any challenge to the automatic permanent gag order under section 215.

Third, the conference report contains sections not included in either the House or Senate bills limiting the right of habeas corpus in cases that have nothing to do with terrorism. These provisions have not been passed by the Senate or the House. One provision would eliminate judicial review of whether a State has an effective system in providing competent lawyers in death penalty cases. That does not belong in this. Such a far-reaching change should not be inserted in an unrelated conference report.

There are many other problems with the conference report that leaves largely in place a definition of domestic terrorism so broad it could be read to cover acts of civil disobedience. For example, a few days ago we had members of the clergy who, believing that the budget before the House and the Senate is immoral, were protesting, saying it is a bad budget. There were a number of arrests. Are these individuals to be deemed domestic terrorists? They could be under the conference report.

The conference report still contains a catchall provision that authorizes a government to conduct a sneak-and-peek search upon a showing that notice would seriously jeopardize an investigation. Sneak and peek, what does it mean? It means they can go into your home, look around, see if there is anything that is incriminating, and then come back out and seek permission to use what they have obtained all without telling you—which I believe is un-American.

As many critics of the bill have observed, a good prosecutor could fit about any search under this provision. I say "good" prosecutor any prosecutor. He wouldn't even have to be good.

The Justice Department reported 90 percent of the searches that have taken place under sneak and peek under this act have nothing to do with terrorism. For these and other reasons, this conference report does not meet the American standard. It certainly should not merit Senate approval.

Fortunately, we do not face the choice of accepting this conference report or allowing the 16 PATRIOT Act provisions to expire. I am a cosponsor of S. 2082, introduced by Senator SUNUNU, to enact a 3-month extension of the expiring PATRIOT Act so we can take the time we need to produce a good bipartisan bill that will have the confidence of the American people.

The majority leader said previously he won't accept such a 3-month extension. I hope, if we fail in invoking cloture, he would reconsider this. I am confident in the end that it would be so much better that we extend this for 3 months to see if we can reach an acceptable goal.

Based on that, I ask unanimous consent the cloture vote be vitiated, the Judiciary Committee be discharged from further consideration of Senator SUNUNU's bill, S. 2082, the 3-month extension of the PATRIOT Act, the Senate proceed to its immediate consideration, the bill be read the third time and passed, and the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there an objection?

Mr. FRIST. Reserving the right to object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority leader.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, with regard to the unanimous consent request, I need to be clear once again, and I have over the last couple of days, that I absolutely oppose a short-term extension of the PATRIOT Act. The House of Representatives opposes such an extension and the President will not sign such an extension. Extending the PATRIOT Act does not go far enough.

It is time to bring this to a vote this morning. We will see what the outcome of that vote is in terms of ending debate. I don't understand why opponents of the PATRIOT Act want to extend legislation at this juncture that has been fully debated, that has been the product of reasonable compromise and in a bipartisan way over the last several weeks and months.

With an extension, if that were to be the case, we would not be able to take advantage of the civil liberty safeguards that have been placed in the conference report, the additional provisions on protecting our ports, on addressing money laundering by terrorists, protection of our railways and mass transit systems, fighting methamphetamine abuse.

The PATRIOT Act represents a historic choice, a clear choice: Should we take a step forward or should we take a step backward in keeping America safe?

I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The objection is heard.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I will continue to work to reauthorize the PATRIOT Act in a way that gives the Government needed tools to protect national security while placing sensible checks on those expanded powers.

I apologize to all my colleagues. I am sorry I took more time than I should have. I know there is a lot to do. I appreciate everyone's courtesy.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ISAKSON). Under the previous order, the next 15 minutes is supposed to be controlled by the minority leader or his designee.

The Senator from Mississippi.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I be able to proceed to a piece of legislation before we go to morning business. I think we have it agreed to and worked out.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to proceeding?

Hearing none, the Senator is recognized.

UNANIMOUS-CONSENT REQUEST— H.R. 4440

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of Calendar No. 328, H.R. 4440.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, reserving the right to object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The minority leader.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, through the Chair to the distinguished junior Senator from Mississippi, it is my understanding this is the Katrina matter we spoke about last night.

Mr. LOTT. It is, Mr. President.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I would say to my friend, we are very close to being able to have that cleared on this side. In fact, I have been very busy since early this morning. I have not had a chance to check with even my staff on this yet. But I think we are close to being able to do something very quickly. So, therefore, I object.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, let me say to Senator REID, I have been working with the Senator and both sides of the aisle, and we are trying to make sure everybody understands what we are doing here. This is very critical legislation to aid the Katrina victims in all the affected States, including Texas, Louisiana, Mississippi, and Alabama.

I hope we can get this agreed to shortly before we get into the extended debate with regard to the other legislation, the PATRIOT Act. So as soon as we could get notification from the Democratic leader, we are ready to proceed. I will be standing by waiting for that opportunity because there are thousands of people waiting for this help, and they need it now.

I thank Senator REID. And since he has objected, I will withhold at this time but will be on standby ready to go momentarily.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

The Senator from New Hampshire.

ORDER OF PROCEDURE

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, what is the regular order now? Are we in morning business for 15 minutes to the minority and 15 minutes to the majority?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The first 15 minutes of morning business is to be controlled by the minority, the second 15 minutes by the majority.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, therefore, ask that at the end of the minority's time I be recognized for 5 minutes. I ask unanimous consent to be recognized for 5 minutes of the period that the majority has.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Wisconsin.

FORMER SENATOR WILLIAM PROXMIRE

Mr. KOHL. Mr. President, I rise today to mourn the passing and celebrate the life of William Proxmire—a great Senator, a great Wisconsinite, and a great man. It is particularly fitting that we pay tribute to Senator Proxmire during this first part of morning business—time he virtually always controlled during his over 30 years in the Senate. He was a giant in the Senate in a time when this Chamber was filled with giants. He followed his conscience, lived his principles, said what he thought, and thought more actively and deeply than most.

Senator Proxmire came to the Senate in 1957, winning a special election to fill the seat of Joseph McCarthy. Overjoyed at a Democratic pickup in a narrowly divided Senate, Majority Leader Lyndon Johnson met Proxmire at the airport to shake his hand. Two years later, Senator Proxmire was on the floor of the Senate calling LBJ a “dictator” in a speech dubbed by the press as “Proxmire’s farewell address.”

But that was Prox: independent, outspoken, and not at all afraid to challenge conventions or conventional wisdom. In fact, there was very little that was conventional about William Proxmire.

He was a Democrat but not a reliable vote for the Democrats—or the Republicans, for that matter. He was fiercely protective of consumer rights, civil liberties, and oppressed minorities all over the world—a true liberal Democrat on social issues. But he also had a legendary frugal streak, perhaps a product of his Harvard business school background. He believed in the free market and business competition, and hated to see money wasted. His Golden Fleece awards and relentless scrutiny of Department of Defense procurement were renowned—and shamed the powers-that-be into saving many hundreds of millions of taxpayer dollars.

He did not accept sloppiness or waste in Government or in the conduct of his own business and personal affairs. He started each day with hundreds of push-ups and a 5-mile run. He demanded of his office the same sort of efficiencies he demanded from the rest of Government and returned one-third of his office budget to the Treasury every year.

He was as disciplined as he was determined. He still holds the record for most consecutive rollcall votes: 10,252 between April of 1966 and October of 1988. And there are colleagues still serving today who remember his daily morning business speeches on the Senate floor.

Most of these speeches were on the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide. This convention languished in the Senate for over 20 years, viewed as a lost cause by its few supporters. But not William Proxmire. He gave a speech about the convention every day the Senate was in session from 1967 to 1986, when the convention was ratified by the U.S. Senate by a vote of 83 to 11—3,211 speeches in all. One former staff member remembers that Senator Proxmire was often the only Member on the floor during his speeches, so he concentrated on the Presiding Officer. So one by one, he reasoned and cajoled his captive colleagues into supporting this seminal human rights measure.

William Proxmire didn’t only fight for his principles, he lived them. He was the last of the true populist politicians, who took no campaign contributions, spent virtually nothing on his campaigns, and shook the hand of almost everyone in the State of Wisconsin—whether they supported him or not. Though he broke every rule of modern campaign strategy, he won his reelections in landslides and was beloved by the people of Wisconsin.

Senator Proxmire leaves behind his wife Ellen, five children, and nine grandchildren. He also is mourned by his Senate family, both those Senators who served with him and the members of his staff renowned for their professionalism, intelligence and loyalty. Neither Wisconsin nor the Senate will see his equal again, and both are the poorer for his passing.

Mr. President, I yield the floor to my colleague from Wisconsin, Senator FEINGOLD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Wisconsin is recognized.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I thank the senior Senator from Wisconsin, my friend.

Mr. President, anybody who grew up in Wisconsin in the second half of the 20th century regarded William Proxmire as a consummate Wisconsin political figure.

I rise, too, with great sadness to pay tribute to one of Wisconsin’s and the Nation’s great public servants. Senator Proxmire passed away early yesterday morning at the age of 90. He was, simply put, a legend in Wisconsin, a man who represented the very best of our State, and who will be remembered as one of the greatest advocates for a better government, and a healthier democracy, to ever serve in this body.

On this very floor he rallied against Government waste, and against corruption. I think the American people can be grateful to Bill Proxmire for so many things. But, perhaps most of all, we owe him a debt of gratitude for his work to change the culture in Congress when it comes to wasteful spending.

He didn’t buy into a culture that treats Government spending like a tab that someone else will pick up, that tucks pork-barrel spending into bills late at night, or lets boondoggles slip by unnoticed. He knew that sunlight was the best disinfectant, and he wasn’t afraid to tear down the drapes, throw open the windows, and let the sun shine in on the legislative process. He didn’t shy away from public outrage about what was wrong with the system—he brought that outrage to bear as he fought to change the system for the better. Anyone who comes to the floor today to try to put the brakes on a wasteful project, or to try to push for budget discipline, can thank Bill Proxmire for the example he set, and for the way he challenged the status quo.

I am not just grateful for what Bill Proxmire did for our State, and our country, but, frankly, for the many things that he taught me. He was a tireless representative for our State. Watching Proxmire, you couldn’t help but learn how important it was to listen—really listen—to the people you represent, and how much you can learn from that genuine exchange of ideas. When Bill Proxmire hit the campaign trail, it wasn’t about a barrage of expensive ads. It was about connecting with voters and giving them a chance to have their say—even when they said something you didn’t agree with. As he once joked, “The biggest danger for a politician is to shake hands with a man who is physically stronger, has been drinking and is voting for the other guy.” And he knew that from experience because nobody—nobody ever in the history of American politics, I believe—shook more hands than Bill Proxmire.

And the people of Wisconsin loved him for it. After an early career of some tough defeats, once he won, he just kept on winning, with reelection margins of 71 percent of the vote in 1970, 73 percent in 1976, and 65 percent in 1982, when he ran for a fifth 6-year term. Incredibly, in those last 2 reelection campaigns he was reelected despite refusing contributions altogether. A lot of the money he did spend in his campaigns was on postage to return donations.

As somebody who wanted to run for public office myself, and as somebody who kept being asked again, “where are you going to get the money to run?” Bill Proxmire gave me hope. His example helped me to believe that you can run on ideas, not just on money. And that example didn’t just help me in my run for office, it helped inspire me in the fight for the McCain-Feingold campaign finance reform bill, and the ongoing fight against the undue influence of money in politics.

His example of real shoe-leather campaigning went hand in hand with his work on open Government. He didn’t just want to be accessible himself, he thought all of Government should be open and responsive to the people it served.

In this, as in so many things, he represented the true spirit of Wisconsin, which pioneered laws in this area. He once said that "Power always has to be kept in check; power exercised in secret, especially under the cloak of national security, is doubly dangerous." Today, as we struggle for openness and oversight on national security issues, I think his words have never been more true, and open, accountable government has never been more important.

And then there's Bill Proxmire's lesson in courage. How many times did he stand on this floor and say what needed to be said, truly representing the people back home, saying what they would say if they stood here themselves, about boondoggle projects, or the importance of open government? Here was a man who knew what mattered, and knew how to bring attention to a cause no one else was championing.

He was perhaps most famous for his Golden Fleece Awards, where he put the spotlight on the kind of waste that, unfortunately, we still see too much of in the Senate today. While most members just let waste pass by unnoticed, Proxmire was unrelenting. Here are a couple choice examples of Golden Fleece winners: To the National Institute of Dental Research in 1984, for sponsoring a $465,000 study on the "effects of orthodontia on psycho-social functioning"; to 190 Federal officials in September 1982, for door-to-door chauffeur service costing $3.4 million; and to the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration in February 1977, for a $27,000 study of why prison inmates want to escape.

I think that last one says it all about why the Golden Fleece awards struck such a chord with the American public. There's a lot of numbness in Washington to wasteful spending, but Bill Proxmire wasn't numb to it. He was outraged by it. He had the innate aversion to waste that the American people have, people who have to sit down at their kitchen tables, work out a budget, and decide what they can afford, and what they can't. They think that if they have to do this, we should to. So Senator Proxmire stood up and demanded a little common sense, and a measure of discipline for the Federal budget. It was very courageous and very representative of the people who sent him here, I can tell you.

This is a very sad day for our State. But it is also a day to reflect on the Proxmire legacy, and to be proud of the impact he made on our state, and on the Nation. He was a fighter, literally and figuratively. He was a college boxing champ who managed to hold off two people who tried to mug him near the Capitol, and then helped in a drag-net that led to their arrest. He was a proud veteran, a newspaper reporter, and a dogged campaigner who lost three races for office and was written off by a lot of people in Wisconsin politics before he won the race to fill the seat of Senator Joe McCarthy after McCarthy died in 1957.

He was as determined as they come, it was that quality that served him so well during his years in this body. It continued to serve him all his life, even as he fought a long and difficult battle against Alzheimer's disease.

His wife Ellen, his children and grandchildren are in all of our thoughts today. As we remember William Proxmire, and all that he did, I feel deeply proud that he represented my State. He did great honor to the State of Wisconsin by personifying the highest standards of public service in this country. So I humbly honor his memory, and express my gratitude for his outstanding service to our Nation to our democracy.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Pennsylvania.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I join the Senators from Wisconsin in praising the late Senator William Proxmire. Neither of the Senators currently representing Wisconsin was in the Chamber when Senator Proxmire was here. The distinguished senior Senator, Mr. KOHL, was elected in 1988, when Senator Proxmire retired. Senator FEINGOLD was elected in 1992. I had the opportunity to serve 8 years with Senator Proxmire. He was a powerful figure. He sat in the last row on the extreme right-hand side, the seat now occupied by Senator ROCKEFELLER. He was on the floor every day talking about genocide. He was the conscience of the Senate, the conscience of the Congress, the conscience of the country, really, the conscience of the world speaking on that subject every single day.

He never missed a vote. I don't recollect exactly how many consecutive votes he had, but I think it was in the range of 17,000 that he never missed.

He had a record for minimal expenditures on campaigns for his own reelection. I recollect the average figure was about $173. That figure sticks in my mind as to what he spent to be reelected. There is some variance on what it costs to be reelected today to the U.S. Senate, but he was a towering figure. There ought to be more Senators on the floor commenting about him. Even our senior Senator, Mr. LOTT, was not elected until 1988 and Senator GREGG until 1992, so most of the Senators who are around today didn't have the advantage of working with Bill Proxmire. There is a difference between knowing about him and actually seeing him in action and seeing him work. But he is a legend.

The Senators from Wisconsin have spoken eloquently about him. I wanted to add my voice in tribute to Bill Proxmire. He is still sitting in that chair. I still hear talk about the necessity to eliminate genocide. That voice, once lonely, is now the predominant voice. A good bit of what he has said has been accepted around the world to the benefit of humanity.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senator from

New Hampshire is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the 15 minutes which was to go to the majority for morning business be expanded a little bit and that 7 minutes be yielded to the Senator from Florida, then 5 minutes to the Senator from New Hampshire, and then 7 minutes to the Senator from Oklahoma.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. KENNEDY. Reserving the right to object, and I don't intend to, what is the business before the Senate now?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate is currently in morning business.

Mr. KENNEDY. And what time do we start the 1 hour prior to the cloture vote?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, there is 15 minutes to be controlled by the majority at the present time. Then the Senate will proceed to the debate on the PATRIOT Act.

Mr. KENNEDY. At that time, after this consent agreement, then the hour tolls prior to the cloture vote; am I correct?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The hour begins.

Mr. KENNEDY. And the time is divided?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

Mr. KENNEDY. So just as a point of information, what time do we expect that time will begin, if the pending request for time is agreed to and whatever time the floor leaders agreed to?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If the pending request is agreed to, that would be 20 minutes from now.

Mr. KENNEDY. I thank the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the unanimous consent request?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Florida is recognized for 7 minutes.

IRAQ ELECTION

Mr. MARTINEZ. Mr. President, yesterday we saw a historic day in Iraq. For the third time in less than a year, the people of Iraq did what only a couple of years ago would have been a dream: they voted in free elections. For those of us who have the appreciation of democracy as a result of having lived where that is denied, the ink-stained finger, the smiles, the celebratory atmosphere akin to a wedding is something to give us all hope.

Yesterday was a relatively trouble-free day. Seventy percent of Iraqis voted. Poll stations were open for an extra hour because of such long lines. The turnout was so good that ballot shortages were reported. This was clearly a successful day.

How does a date like this come to be? How do we go from a brutal dictatorship that threatens its citizens to a society of free elections? The answer is that it is about choices. Do people want a way of life built around tyranny, oppression, and terrorism, or do they want to embrace democracy, freedom, and prosperity? Clearly, the people of Iraq have chosen the latter. Yes, they have chosen the more difficult path, but the rewards will be enormous.

I congratulate the people of Iraq for yesterday's historic elections. History will judge these elections to be pivotal, vital to building democracy, and part and parcel of our efforts in the war on terror.

As President Bush has highlighted in several recent statements, in an unbelievably brief period of time, Iraq has made tremendous gains in democracy and freedom. I commend the Iraqi people for these unprecedented strides.

The administration has outlined a clear strategy for going forward: three key tracks—political, economic, and security—with realistic terms that avoid imposing unrealistic expectations and very dangerous time frames.

I want to mention the story of a constituent of mine, a man who saw his son go into the service of his country, who saw his son called to war, and then sadly was here in Washington this week to lay that son to rest at Arlington National Cemetery.

Bud Clay of Pensacola shared a letter from his son, SSG Daniel Clay of the U.S. Marine Corps. Dan was one of 10 marines killed in Iraq by a roadside bomb in Fallujah. Knowing the danger he faced, knowing the unpredictability of war, Staff Sergeant Clay wrote a letter to his family to be opened only in the event of his death.

He wrote in part:

What we have done in Iraq is worth any sacrifice. Why? Because it was our duty. That sounds simple. But all of us have a duty. It has been an honor to protect and serve all of you. I faced death with the secure knowledge that you would not have to.

Staff Sergeant Clay writes:

As a marine, this is not the last chapter. I have the privilege of being one who has finished the race. I have been in the company of heroes. I now am counted among them.

He concludes by saying:

My race is over, my time in the war zone is over. My trials are done . . . Semper Fidelis.

SSG Daniel Clay was laid to rest Wednesday at Arlington National Cemetery. He is a hero. We honor his sacrifice, just as we honor the sacrifice of all those who have given so much in this war.

I conclude by again offering congratulations to the people of Iraq. Congratulations for going to the polls, for taking another significant step forward for your own future, and for embracing that glimmer of hope that your country can be as free, peaceful, and prosperous as any other society that rejects tyranny and entrusts its government to its people.

Soldiers such as Staff Sergeant Clay are sustaining the development of Iraqi forces. We owe them our respect, gratitude, and undying honor as we demonstrate unwavering determination to complete this mission.

Thank you, Mr. President. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Hampshire is recognized for 5 minutes.

NEW HAMPSHIRE PRIMARY

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, there is an irony today as we look at Iraq. As democracy is flourishing, the Democratic Party in the United States has tried to contract the democratic process by attempting to mute the New Hampshire primary.

The New Hampshire primary is sort of the last best hope for the dream that anybody can become President in this country. It is the last opportunity in this country for a person who is underfunded and who has not been chosen by the Washington talking heads as a potential candidate of purpose to have the opportunity to go somewhere and actually make an impact. Underfunded, nonrecognized candidates who have legitimacy can succeed in New Hampshire and, therefore, interject themselves into the opportunity to become President. And it has happened time and again.

The argument that New Hampshire is not representative is belied by the facts. Again and again, New Hampshire has reflected an opportunity for people to come to New Hampshire, participate in the process, make a name for themselves, and move forward in the process.

Henry Cabot Lodge upset Nelson Rockefeller and Barry Goldwater there. Eugene McCarthy and George McGovern upset the candidates who were perceived to be the sure-fire winners of their nomination, in fact, in one case, a sitting President. Jimmy Carter and Bill Clinton not only came to New Hampshire and made a name for themselves as people not recognized nationally but moved on to become President of the United States. Even Ronald Reagan, arguably, might not have become President of the United States had he not had the opportunity to come to New Hampshire and participate in the national debate where he said:

I paid for this microphone, Mr. Green.

More importantly, New Hampshire gives the people of this country the only opportunity they have to test candidates for President one on one. Without any script, without any prescreening, Presidential candidates have to come to New Hampshire and go into living rooms, they have to go into VFW halls, they have to go to Rotary clubs, and they have to go to union halls. They have to answer questions from everyday American citizens, and those questions are tough. Regrettably, time and again, candidates have not lived up to that test.

So what we have today in the Democratic Party is an attempt by the kingmakers of that party to try to eliminate the threat of having the American people actually meet their candidates and be tested by those questions as they try to mute the New Hampshire primary process.

This was said extraordinarily well in an article ironically written by a professor in England who is a specialist on the American political process. He looks at New Hampshire as the last best hope to maintain a populist approach to how we pick our Presidents in this country. Rather than having to have lots of money to pay for campaigns in big States or large groups of primary States or have a national name recognition that comes through having cozier up to the national press, a candidate can come to New Hampshire with very little money, without national name recognition, but with ideas, with purpose, with fire in their belly, and they can succeed in putting themselves and injecting themselves into the Presidential process.

It would be a huge detriment to a fundamental element of the American dream, which is that if you have purpose, if you have substance, and if you have a track record of success and have been a producer in our Nation, you can continue that course and pursue the Presidency. It will undermine fundamentally the capacity of the American people to participate in the picking of a President if they don't have one place in this country where people who want to be President have to actually answer questions from everyday Americans.

I certainly hope the Democratic Party will relent in its efforts to try to crush this one element of democracy which is so critical to our entire democratic process.

I ask unanimous consent that the article written by Roddy Keenan, a professor of American studies in England, be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Concord (NH) Monitor, Dec. 16, 2005]

EVEN FROM ACROSS THE POND, PRIMARY'S BEAUTY IS PLAIN TO SEE

(By Roddy Keenan)

Gary Hart had just won New Hampshire. The race for the Democratic nomination had been turned on its head. And it was all because of New Hampshire. To a 14-year-old watching the news in Ireland, this was all unfamiliar to me. But on that night in 1984, a fascination was born for a nation's politics and for a picturesque snow-covered state in New England.

Now, 21 years later, the New Hampshire primary is under attack. Watching from afar, I believe that attempts by Democratic powers-that-be to dilute the primary come with little justification, minimal forethought and an absence of logic.

I can only imagine that those looking to create such mischief have never witnessed the process or are fitted with the blinkers of self-interest.

For these reforming politicians and officials deeming themselves to be redressing an absence of inclusiveness and decrying the unrepresentative nature of the primary, there can be no greater example of being divorced from reality.

In a nation where voter turnout is a major issue, the New Hampshire primary has no such problem. Those casting aspersions on the democratic relevance of New Hampshire should look at their own states' turnout before denigrating others. Moreover, the state's primary provides for a greater show of grassroots democracy than caucuses do.

The proposals to add more early caucuses will only serve to exacerbate the problem of front loading.

But it is the nature of the primary that I believe will be the greatest loss to the nation's political and democratic culture. In a college here in the United Kingdom, I teach U.S. politics to students who receive their view of the U.S. political system from various media. Big money, stadium rallies and nonstop tarmac campaigns comprise the portrayal they are presented with.

That's until I tell them of New Hampshire—of town hall meetings, coffee klatches and earnest discussion, of living rooms and factory gates in the snow, of genuine democracy in action—the politics of people.

It is deeply ironic that in the week that saw the passing of Eugene McCarthy, the future of the New Hampshire primary is being challenged. His insurgent campaign in 1968 was a key factor in the democratization of the system of presidential selection.

It was only because of the unique character of New Hampshire, its people's desire for serious political dialogue and the democratic character of the state's primary that such a challenge proved to be possible.

Long may it continue. Looking forward to seeing you in '08, '12 and '16.

IRAQ

MR. INHOFE. Mr. President, I returned 2 days ago from Iraq. There was an article in yesterday's Hill magazine that was erroneous—there will be a correction printed—where they inaccurately stated the number of times I have been over to Iraq. It has actually been 10 times. I have been doing this not because I am a member of the Senate Armed Services Committee, but because I believe it is our constitutional responsibility to see firsthand that our guys over there are getting the equipment they need to prosecute the war, and they have been.

I want to share with you what happened the first of this week because even though the vote took place yesterday, on Thursday, the vote for the Iraqi security forces actually took place on Monday and Tuesday. We had a chance to go up there and visit with them.

The interesting point is, we saw this coming. There have been a lot of politicians coming back and talking about how bad things are over there. I can't figure out where they get their information because as we have been approaching these elections over the last few months, we have noticed the IED incidents have been down 30 percent and suicide bombs have been down 70 percent.

There is a road that goes from where we get off the C-130s to go into the Green Zone. Mr. President, you have been there. We were averaging about 10 terrorist incidents on that road each week up until June. We haven't had one since June. So we see all these good things are happening, and then the unexpected quality of the training we are getting for the Iraqi security forces. These guys right now—and I think this is significant because people keep asking, What is the exit strategy? I can tell you what I believe. One Senator believes we are going to be out.

Right now there are 214,000 Iraqi soldiers who are trained and equipped. At the end of this month, while we are drawing down—we are drawing down probably 15,000 to 20,000 of ours troops—they are going to increase to 220,000. By the end of 2006, it is anticipated they will be at 300,000. The goal is to get 10 divisions of Iraqi security forces. Ten divisions of Iraqi security forces equal 325,000 troops. That will happen by July of 2007.

In terms of the way we are functioning now, we will be out of there, but there will still be some troops there. We still have troops in Kosovo and in Bosnia, but the heavy lifting will be over. They will be taking care of themselves.

I see the incredible courage of these people. Up in Fallujah 3 nights ago, I had all of the Iraqi security forces that had voted that day come in. They were all rejoicing, and I said to them—this is kind of funny. I said to them, through an interpreter: When is it going to be that you are going to be able to be on your own without our support? Is that going to be in the near future?

And they said: No, no—which broke my heart when I heard this. Then I found out, in the Iraqi language, "yes" means "na'am." So they are saying, "Yes, yes," and when they shake their head this way, it also means "yes." Anyway, a little advice in case that happens to anyone.

These people are ready. They are so proud of the level of training they have had. Keep in mind, this is in the Sunni triangle. These are the Sunnis who are supposed to dislike us.

Several weeks ago, I was there and I met General Mahdi, who is in charge of the Iraqi security forces in Fallujah. He had been in charge—under Saddam Hussein he was a brigade commander. He hated Americans until he started working with the Marines. He said he learned to love the Marines so much that when they rotated them out, they all got together and they cried. That guy right now, General Mahdi, is now over the eastern one-third of the entire city of Baghdad. We do not have our military there. It is all under Iraqi security. We have half of the city under security now. It is going to be up to 75 percent in a very short period of time.

I think, when we see the successes—and even if that were not true, if one stops and realizes the bloody regime of Saddam Hussein, yes, the targets for the terrorists right now are not Americans, they are Iraqis, and they are killing some of the Iraqis, but when one stops and puts it on a chart, during the 10 years that Saddam Hussein had his bloody regime, on a monthly basis he was torturing to death more people than the terrorists are killing today. When one looks at the way that they have done it, the forms of torture, include gouging out of eyes, severe beatings, electric shocks—there is a testimonial here about a 3-month-old baby girl who was taken, and they gouged her eyes out in front of the father, smashed her head and broke it open against a concrete wall.

There is a lot of talk on the other side of this issue about prisoner abuse. We do not have prisoner abuse. The documentation is right here about what they do with their prisoners. They will put them in shredders. If they are lucky, they will shred their head first. If they are unlucky, they will put their feet in there. This is what has been happening over there, but it is all over now, and they are in charge of their own destiny.

I have enjoyed so much visiting with the members of Parliament who were going to be up for election. This would have been on Wednesday, and they were going to be up the next day. One lady was quite outspoken and quite negative in terms of what her people were saying to her. I said: Did it ever occur to you 5 years ago that there would be an opportunity for a woman to serve in Parliament, let alone to talk the way you are talking? She stopped and said: You know, I think that is right.

So we are seeing such a change now in the attitudes. The polls look so good. The polls are showing that 70 percent of the people in Iraq are appreciative of the Americans being there. They want them to stay and get out when they are able to stand up on their own.

I met with the election commission, and to handle the election the way they did was totally unprecedented. We could never have predicted how smoothly things would go. We talked to the people, and I want to particularly pay tribute to IFES, the International Foundation of Electrical Systems. They have done a great job. They had people on the ground, and they have truly been able to conduct an election that is actually comparable and better than many other mature countries, maturing democracies. It has been a great success. I am rejoicing with all the people of Iraq today and with the people of America.

Lastly, I pay tribute to the brave people of Iraq who for the third time this year have gone to the polls in record number to vote for a brighter and more democratic future in Iraq. The early reports indicate that across the 18 provinces of Iraq, Iraqis again turned out in massive numbers to vote in favor of a democratic Iraq. In doing so the Iraqis demonstrated to us all the importance of voting.

Earlier this week I was in Iraq and had the opportunity to see first hand the preparations for the historic election on December 15. I even had a chance to witness some of the early voting that took place in Iraq. It was a moving experience and one that demonstrated that the great sacrifice that America has made in Iraq helped to free people from tyranny and start them on the road to a democratic future.

While in Baghdad, I met with the Chairman of the Independent Election Commission of Iraq, IECI, Isadin Al Mohamaady and the members of the commission. I had an opportunity to see first hand the extensive preparations that were being undertaken by the Iraqis. I was impressed by the sacrifice made by the members of the commission and their staff, many of whom have paid the ultimate price for democracy with their lives. However, the spirit that I found in Baghdad, Fallujah, and everywhere I went, was one of determination, professionalism, and a dedication to making sure that Iraqis could freely select their future leaders at the ballot box.

It is important also to recognize the work of the International Foundation for Election Systems also known as IFES that has played a critical role in helping advance free and fair elections in Iraq and in 120 countries around the world. With the support of U.S. taxpayers, IFES was able to provide critical assistance that helped to make these elections possible.

I stand here to salute the brave Iraqis who at great personal risk sent an important message to the world about the triumph of the ballot over the bullet. Iraqis of all ethnic groups have joined together with unity and determination to freely choose their leaders in a free and fair election. They have sent a message around the world that the best way to defeat tyranny is at the ballot box, the source of power of the people, by the people and for the people.

CONCLUSION OF MORNING BUSINESS

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Morning business is closed.

UNANIMOUS CONSENT REQUEST—H.R. 4440

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I have a unanimous consent request that we have been working on, and I think we are ready to go with. We would like to get that done before we go to the hour of debate on the PATRIOT Act. I wish to see if we can confirm that with the minority.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I object.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, could I inquire what the anticipated time is on when we could get this done? I know the Democratic leader has indicated we are very close and should be able to get this done momentarily. Do we have any information on that?

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, my understanding is that colleagues are working to clear this continued Katrina tax relief issue and that there is progress being made. That is the reason we are objecting. As soon as we can get it cleared, we will interrupt what we are doing to take it up.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Mississippi.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I must say my patience is wearing thin. I have been going through this for several days now and have been assured by the Democratic leader himself that we would get this done this morning. I am expecting that to occur. I am going to be standing right here waiting for that signal from the Democratic leader.

The people of the area that have been damaged by Hurricane Katrina cannot wait any longer. I expect this to be done momentarily, and if it is not, there is going to be hell to pay this day.

I yield the floor.

The Senator from Oklahoma.

NATIONAL BORDER NEIGHBORHOOD WATCH PROGRAM

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, yesterday I introduced S. 2117, which is a bill engaging our Nation to fight concerning our right to control entry. It is legislation that covers many aspects of the problem we are having on our very porous borders. One part of this is utilizing retired law enforcement officers. As many people know, national law enforcement officers have to retire at age 57. We learned of their availability after 9/11 when the Transportation Safety Administration and our office was inundated with calls from these brave law enforcement officers who are retired, saying that they wanted to participate in this activity, and they are willing to do it for costs. The legislation I have introduced does include the very sophisticated type of a fence that goes along the border between Mexico and the United States and also with an army of people who can join those who have already demonstrated very clearly that if we have enough people down there, we will be able to secure our borders.

I am cautioning any of our colleagues who are concerned about this issue not to be tempted to use military because right now our military is stressed. We have an OPTEMPO that is unacceptable as it is right now. It should not be taking on other duties. Besides that, with the enactment of S. 2117, that would not be necessary.

Illegal immigration is at an all-time high, with around 1 million illegal aliens infiltrating our borders each year.

My legislation focuses on empowering our citizens and law enforcement officers to fight this flood of illegal immigration.

First of all, I want to make it clear that I honor the millions of immigrants that have come to this Nation, waited their turn, and gone through all the requirements to become American citizens to make our great country what it is today. I have spoken at many naturalization services and seen what these people have gone through to become American citizens.

I agree with the 1997 U.S. Commission on Immigration Reform that measured, legal immigration has "led" to create one of the world's greatest "multiethnic nations."

I also agree with the Commission that immigrants who are "Americanized" help cultivate a shared commitment to "liberty, democracy and equal opportunity" in our Nation. However, I cannot stand idly by and watch this great Nation collapse under the pressure of uncontrolled illegal immigration.

Roy Beck, Executive Director of Numbers USA, a non-profit organization dedicated to immigration reform, stated that "a presence of 8 to 11 million illegal aliens in this country is a sign that this country has lost control of its borders and the ability to determine who is a member of this national community . . . a country that has lost that ability increasingly loses its ability to determine the rules of its society—environmental protections, labor protections, health protections, safety protections."

Beck goes on to say, "In fact, a country that cannot keep illegal immigration to a low level quickly ceases to be a real country, or a real community. Rather than being self-governed, such a country begins to have its destiny largely determined by citizens of other countries who manage to move in illegally."

My bill, the ENFORCE Act, works to solve the illegal immigration problem in several ways. It will provide a way for more civilians and retired law enforcement officers to help the Border Patrol in stopping illegal border crossings and reduce the illegal immigration rate.

Through the creation of the National Border Neighborhood Watch Program, NBNW, retired law enforcement officials called the Border Regiment Assisting in Valuable Enforcement, BRAVE, Force agents, will come and work alongside Border Patrol agents. Civilian volunteers, much like the now well-known Minutemen, will be able to report immigration violations to assigned BRAVE Force agents.

The NBNW Program is modeled after the National Neighborhood Watch program, a collaboration between law enforcement, businesses, and concerned citizens who watch for and report suspicious criminal activity in neighborhoods to the local police.

The Neighborhood Watch Program has proven effective in reducing the crime rate in areas where it is implemented. I am hopeful that the National Border Neighborhood Watch Program will have the same effect in reducing illegal border crossings as the Neighborhood Watch Program has had in reducing crime.

I also believe that the BRAVE Force will provide significant assistance to the Minutemen, who are sacrificing their time and energy as they work to preserve our liberties and enforce our laws.

Another provision of the ENFORCE Act will make it a felony to be illegally present in the U.S.

Under current law, it is only a misdemeanor to be unlawfully present in the U.S. This means that if illegal aliens are caught in the U.S. today and are deported, most of the time, they can turn around and come right back into our country legally, without consideration of the fact that they were previously in our country illegally.

By making unlawful presence a felony under the ENFORCE Act, when caught, illegal aliens will be entered into the National Crime Information Center, NCIC, database, a computerized index of criminal justice information (i.e., criminal record history information, fugitives, stolen properties, missing persons), available to Federal, State, and local law enforcement and other criminal justice agencies. They will also be banned from legally entering the U.S. for 5 years.

My bill will also establish another Immigration and Customs Enforcement, ICE, office in Tulsa, OK.

We only have one ICE office in the whole State of Oklahoma and this is not enough to do the job of enforcing our immigration laws. For example, in September 2004, 18 illegal aliens were riding in a van in Catoosa, OK. The police pulled them over and found several illegal minors, as well as cocaine in the van. When the police called the ICE office in Oklahoma City, ICE authorities told the officers to let the illegals go because ICE did not have the resources or manpower to take them into custody. So Catoosa police let them go.

This is outrageous.

This year alone, 12 agents of the Office of Investigations of the Bureau of Immigration and Customs Enforcement served the 3,500,000 people residing in Oklahoma.

Additionally, Highway I-44 and US-75 are major roads through Tulsa that are used to transport illegal aliens to areas throughout the country.

We must provide our States and communities with the tools to arrest and detain illegal aliens. Creating a second ICE office in Tulsa, one of Oklahoma's largest cities, will help improve the lack of immigration enforcement in Eastern Oklahoma.

I would also like to note that my colleague, Congressman JOHN SULLIVAN, has introduced similar legislation to create an ICE office in Tulsa. Not only do I believe adding another ICE office in Tulsa will help local and Federal law enforcement, I also believe providing specific immigration training for law enforcement officers will help solve our illegal immigration crisis.

Our State, local, and tribal law enforcement are experiencing increasing encounters with illegal and criminal aliens during routine police duties. The typical officer often does not know the law, policy, and procedures for determining immigration status or violations—apart from or in conjunction with other offenses—concerning alien lawbreakers.

As immigration continues to affect interior communities, a key to addressing situations that intersect with other law enforcement involves providing State, local, and tribal law enforcement officers with basic training in immigration law and policy. Rather than expending millions of dollars on traditional classroom training, this basic training can be cost-effectively accomplished using the Internet.

Knowledge of basic immigration enforcement can complement law enforcement's core mission; should a local officer have strong reason to suspect other law violations without sufficient evidence to hold or charge the alien on other offenses, immigration violations may constitute sufficient grounds to hold a criminal.

This requires basic familiarity with immigration matters; therefore, this provision authorizes $3 million for a demonstration project to establish such an on-line training program through Cameron University in Lawton, OK. These funds will be used to develop and facilitate on-line training in basic immigration enforcement for up to 100,000 State, local, and tribal law enforcement officers in 6 to 8 States, similar to the 4 hours of classroom training provided to all of Alabama's state troopers in 2003.

This system will also provide, at the end of the demonstration project, a "return on investment" study documenting the project's cost-effectiveness.

Not only are illegal immigrants increasing by crossing the border and dodging law enforcement officers, they are having "anchor babies" in rapid numbers.

Anchor babies are born to illegal aliens who come to our country and have a baby who is then treated as a citizen because it was born on U.S. soil. These babies are helping the immigration population grow more rapidly than the birth rate of American citizens.

In fact the Census Bureau estimates that at the time of the 2000 Census, the illegal immigration population reached approximately 8 million. Therefore, according to this estimate, the illegal-alien population grew by almost half a million a year in the 1990s.

These numbers are derived from a draft report given to the House immigration subcommittee by the INS that estimated the illegal population was around 3.5 million in 1990. In order for the illegal population to have reached 8 million by 2000, the net increase would be around 400,000 to 500,000 per year during the 1990s.

Furthermore, according to the Center for Immigration Studies, CIS, a non-profit immigration reform organization, based on numbers from the National Center for Health Statistics, in 2002 there were about 8.4 million illegal aliens, which represent about 3.3 percent of the total U.S. population. That same year, there were about 383,000 babies born to illegal aliens, which represents about 9.5 percent of all U.S. births in 2002.

In the Spring 2005 issue of the American Physicians and Surgeons Journal, Dr. Madeleine Pelter Cosman says, "American hospitals welcome anchor babies."

"Illegal alien women come to the hospital in labor and drop their little anchors, each of whom pulls its illegal alien mother, father, and siblings into permanent residency simply by being born within our borders."

"Anchor babies are, and instantly qualify for public welfare aid."

Between 300,000 and 350,000 anchor babies annually become citizens because of the Fourteenth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution which says: "All persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and the State wherein they reside."

These anchor babies are being used to enable their parents to skirt the law, cross our borders, and bring in additional, illegal aliens. As the law currently stands, because these children are considered citizens, it creates an incentive for more aliens to illegally cross into our country.

My bill will end this incentive by clarifying that only children born to citizens or legal permanent residents are considered citizens and "subject to the jurisdiction thereof."

The ENFORCE Act will also address several issues including clarification of acceptable identification documents, verification of Social Security numbers and benefits, clarification of the rights of local and state law enforcement officers concerning illegal immigration and construction of a fence along our southern border.

There is a growing problem regarding fraudulent identification, identity theft and foreign-issued consular cards in our country. Illegal aliens often steal a person's identification, such as the birth certificate of a deceased person, and use it to gain employment and other benefits.

My bill will help eliminate this fraud by establishing birth and death registries for localities to have the ability to check a person's identification to ensure they are truly who they claim to be. It will also require independent verification of birth records of people applying for a Social Security number.

The ENFORCE Act will clarify which identification documents can be used for official identification within the United States—such as driver's licenses, passports, etc.—eliminating the use of consular cards for identification.

Often, foreign embassies, within the U.S., will issue consular cards to their citizens who are in the U.S. These cards are unnecessary because the U.S. government either recognizes foreign passports or issues its own identification documents to foreigners who are legally in the U.S. The majority of consular cards have been found to be used as identification for illegal aliens and have been called an insecure document by the FBI and Department of Homeland Security.

Another provision in my bill will address Social Security benefits for work performed by illegal aliens.

Under current law, former illegal aliens, who gain legal status, are able to receive Social Security benefits for the work they performed while they were illegal.

My bill will end this practice by not allowing anyone to collect Social Security benefits for work performed while they were illegally present in this country. Our Social Security system is already strained and faces bankruptcy. Allowing work performed by illegals to be counted and used to further drain our Social Security system must stop.

The ENFORCE Act will also address fraudulent use of the Individual Taxpayer Identification Number, ITIN.

The IRS created the ITIN in 1996 to improve tax administration because it needed a more efficient way to identify and track the tax reporting of non-citizens, such as foreign investors, who could not obtain a Social Security number when filing tax returns and other tax documents. ITIN applications can be mailed to the IRS, submitted at an IRS walk-in, taxpayer assistance center, or submitted through an acceptance agent.

A GAO testimony by Michael Brostek before the House Subcommittee on Oversight and Social Security in March 2004 revealed that IRS controls for the ITIN could be easily bypassed and that it could be used for non-tax purposes, such as general identification. Mr. Brostek went on to testify that the "IRS concluded that most resident aliens who have ITINs and earn a wage income are not legally employed in the U.S."

This creates many concerns about use of the ITIN by illegal aliens, which is why my bill will make the ITIN look physically different than a Social Security number and not allow it to be used to obtain tax credits.

Another issue my bill addresses is building a fence along our southern border.

It is known, according to government reports, that foreign nationals from countries such as Syria, Iran and Saudi Arabia have crossed our southern borders, not to mention the high number of illegal aliens from other countries.

According to We Need a Fence, an organization dedicated to ensuring a fence is built along our southern border, a CNN poll has shown that 87 percent of its respondents support building a security fence along the U.S.-Mexico border.

The ENFORCE Act will direct a high security, state-of-the-art fence to be built along our southern border to prevent illegal border crossings. This fence will actually consist of two fences separated by a patrol road, ditches, barbed wire, and surveillance cameras. While the initial cost to build the fence is considered high by some, I firmly believe it will result in savings in the long run by preventing illegal border crossings and eliminating the cost of finding, arresting, detaining and deporting illegal aliens.

The ENFORCE Act will also make it illegal to establish day-laborer centers and to assist illegal aliens in finding employment, much like the sites that are set to be built for illegal aliens in Fairfax County, VA.

Earlier this year, the Fairfax County's Board of Supervisors voted unanimously to provide $400,000 in taxpayer funds to be used to build three day laborer sites to assist illegal aliens in finding employment. It makes no sense to not only ignore the large numbers of illegal aliens gathering in one place, but to enable them to continue to break the law by working in the U.S. and encourage others, such as employers, to break the law by helping illegals obtain jobs.

Another problem we face is educating illegal aliens.

Some states, such as Oklahoma, allow illegal aliens to receive in-state tuition at colleges and universities. This is a slap in the face to out-of-state students who must pay higher tuition than illegal aliens who have broken the law and do not even belong in our country. My bill will address this problem so that illegal aliens will not be able to receive this benefit.

I would like to conclude by sharing a personal story regarding illegal aliens who commit crimes in the United States and then flee across the border to Mexico.

Last May, my friend's son, Jeff Garrett, was tragically shot by an illegal alien while Jeff was turkey hunting in Colorado. After he shot Jeff, the illegal fled to Mexico, where he is hiding today.

I know this story is just one among many about innocent Americans murdered each year by illegal aliens who then find safe harbor in Mexico.

I believe the ENFORCE Act will not only help prevent these criminals from coming across our borders, but is a good start to ending our rampant problem of illegal immigration in general.

I ask my colleagues to join me in solving our immigration problem by cosponsoring the ENFORCE Act.

USA PATRIOT AND TERRORISM PREVENTION REAUTHORIZATION ACT OF 2005—CONFERENCE REPORT

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senate will resume consideration of the conference report to accompany H.R. 3199, which the clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

Conference report to accompany H.R. 3199, an act to extend and modify authorities needed to combat terrorism, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, there will be 60 minutes equally divided between the majority and the minority.

Who yields time? The Senator from Pennsylvania.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, we are approaching a vote to invoke cloture on the PATRIOT Act which will require 60 Senators to cut off debate so that we can move ahead to a vote up or down on the act. The act, as is well known, is set to expire on December 31, 2005. When the Judiciary Committee, which I chair, approached the reauthorization of the PATRIOT Act, we tackled it early in the year, and there was a committee bill, which I sponsored, which had remarkable success getting a unanimous vote in the committee, which has Senators from both ends of the political spectrum. It then came to the floor in a manner perhaps unprecedented: It went through by unanimous consent. There was no debate. Not a single Senator objected. It was heralded as uniquely well balanced, from the considerations of providing adequate tools for law enforcement to continue the fight against terrorism, which is vital for our national safety, and balanced to protect civil liberties.

Under our system of government, the Senate does not have the last word. I only wish that were so. We have a bicameral system. Then the legislation has to receive the signature of the President.

We then went into negotiations with the House of Representatives. I again thank and commend Chairman SENSENBRENNER, who is the chairman of the Judiciary Committee in the House of Representatives, for working through some very difficult proceedings to come to a conclusion that a conference report could be signed and filed and voted upon by both Houses.

The House of Representatives has supported the conference report with a 77-vote majority—very substantial. Now we have it in the Senate. The conference report was not signed by Senators when originally presented on November 18, 2005. I declined to sign it because I wanted to work through and try to get the joinder of Democrats. It has been my experience that the close relationship which Senator LEAHY and I have established, working on the Judiciary Committee on a bipartisan basis, has yielded significant positive results for the committee, for the Senate, for the Congress, and for the country. We have been able to work through major legislation this year, passing class action reform, passing bankruptcy reform, voting out and confirming the Attorney General very promptly, working through data privacy—a very tough legislative bill voted out of committee; voting out of committee asbestos reform. People said that could not be done. It is going to be the first item on the agenda next year.

It was apparent to me that we needed to have a bipartisan approach. As one Senator said on the floor yesterday in announcing that the Senator was going to vote against cloture—he had been a cosponsor of the bill, but in the absence of this bipartisan support there was too much public confusion. The public cannot understand all of the intricacies of the PATRIOT Act, and the shorthand signal is, when Democrats and Republicans agree, there is a modicum of confidence. Regrettably, we could not get it on this bill.

When the debate started earlier this week, I invited all Members to come to the floor to state what their concerns were. I called many Members to reach out to those I knew could use some elaboration and also discussion for my benefit, and then from the floor repeatedly urged my colleagues to come to the floor, raise their concerns, let us have a discussion. Perhaps we can satisfy their concerns. If not, we can describe the bill and explain it so the people and the Senators will understand it.

I do not think we have been successful in conveying to the public at large, and perhaps not even to the Senators, what this bill really provides. In this morning's paper, one of the most prominent newspapers in the United States, they described the bill this way:

... the bill gives the government far too much power to issue "national security letters," demanding private financial, medical and library records, without the permission or oversight of a judge.

The writer of this editorial does not understand the basic tenets of the bill. The writer of this editorial is mixing up section 215, which provides for obtaining records—library records, medical records—with national security letters. The bill is explicit in giving judicial review.

At the present time, an agent can go out and, unilaterally, on the agent's own authority, get library records or medical records. One of the principal safeguards in the PATRIOT Act, as passed by the Senate and as maintained by the conference report, has been to interpose the magistrate, the judge, in between the policeman and the citizen, to see to it that law enforcement does not overstep its bounds; that law enforcement could get access on a showing of reason to do so, but there is judicial supervision there.

One of the other most prominent newspapers in the country published a story about 30,000 national security letters being issued, which is false. I cannot tell you what the facts are because it is classified. I have tried to get the Department of Justice to come forward and say what the facts are. But repeatedly on the floor of the Senate we heard this quotation: 30,000 national security letters—which is absolutely false. I beg my colleagues not to base their votes on what they read in the newspapers but to get a briefing, find out what the facts are. Senators can find that out in a classified briefing, but do not rely upon the assertions in the newspapers or the assertion in today's editorial, which is just wrong as it describes what the act is.

On the floor of the Senate yesterday there were references to hometown newspapers saying hang tough.

Newspapers don't vote. Senators vote. Jefferson made one of history's great statements in saying if he had to choose between government without newspapers or newspapers without government, he would choose newspapers without government. We do not have to make that choice. We have both newspapers and government. And render under Caesar—the appropriate line. And let us look to the newspapers, let us consider what they have to say, but when they are wrong, let's not act on wrong information. Let's not act on wrong information. It is up to Senators to hang tough. We don't have to take instructions from the newspapers, as we heard yesterday, urging their United States Senator to hang tough. They don't vote. We vote.

A big, tough problem here has been to acquaint people with what this bill does provide. I am confident, if that has occurred sufficiently, that this bill will be passed.

I have been on the Judiciary Committee during my entire tenure in the Senate and have demonstrated a strong record to protect civil liberties on legislation which has come through the committee to the floor and in the confirmation process. Nobody has a stronger record in this body than I do. I will take second place to no one. There are many equals here. Many in this body, I would say all in this body, are concerned about civil liberties. But there is no mathematical equation where it can be established, as to the balance between law enforcement and the balance as to civil liberties. If you take a look at the specifics of this legislation, that balance has been achieved. It may not be as good a balance as the Specter-Leahy bill, which passed the Senate unanimously and without dissenting voice here, but it has balance.

I have already commented about section 215. There is judicial supervision. And, on national security letters, they were not created with the PATRIOT Act, but we took the occasion of the PATRIOT Act to put in safeguards on national security letters, which are in existence. If the PATRIOT Act goes out of existence, you will not have section 215 to get certain records by law enforcement, but the national security letters are still there. But we took this occasion to provide for judicial review.

The recipient may consult a lawyer, who moves to quash the national security letter if it is unreasonable. It may not be everything that everybody wants, but in legislation and the art of the possible, you don't get everything that everybody wants.

Then you have the delayed notice warrants. A delayed notice warrant means that the judge has examined the situation and has given special permission that the law enforcement officials do not have to notify the target when the search and seizure warrant is executed.

Ordinarily, if there is a search and seizure warrant, the law enforcement officers go to the premise or an office and it is known to the target, but where there are reasons to keep it secret because the disclosure would impede an investigation, our laws have permitted for decades a delayed notice warrant.

Then the concern was, How long should there be before notice is given? The Senate bill had 7 days, the House bill had 180 days, and we compromised on 30 days. The Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals said that presumptively 45 days would be adequate.

The delayed notice requirement is illustrative of the vagaries of how you have something in perfection. But when the Senate established a 7-day notice requirement, we knew we were going to meet in a negotiating session, and I thought 30 days was a tremendous achievement for prompt notification. The House came down 150 days, from 180 to 30, and we went up by 23 days.

Then there is the provision of the roving wiretaps which has been tightened up, as I explained in greater detail yesterday and earlier this week—twice. There has to be a description of the individual who has been intercepted, and there has to be a showing, to have a roving wiretap, that the person is going to resist the wiretap.

Then you have what is perhaps as important as any provision—I wouldn't say the most important, they are all important, but as important as any—sunset. The House wanted a 10-year sunset, the Senate said 4 years is what it ought to be, and the House was insistent on compromising in between at 7 years, and we held fast at 4 years. It had been my expectation with good reason to believe that some Democrats would sign the conference report if it came in at 4 years. It required assistance from the White House, and the President was personally involved in the 4-year decision—not to the satisfaction of the House conferees, but we got that done.

If you take a look at the specifics, if you don't get your facts from the newspapers but instead get your facts from the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, if you get your facts from reading the statute, I believe a fair conclusion would be that it is balanced. It is nice to be the heroes of the editorial pages. It makes great hometown reading. We have had quite a few comments on the floor of the Senate on the PATRIOT Act and on other acts citing the editorials and how pervasive, albeit subtle, that influence is.

I have only been chairman of the committee for less than a year, but I have come to see the vicissitudes of leadership. You don't have the freedom to be the dissenter, to stand up and articulate your own views and to accept nothing short of what ARLEN SPECTER has done or I am going to vote no. I have done that a few times when I have had greater freedom, but if you are the chairman of the committee, you have to carve out consensus.

In refusing to sign the conference report on November 18, 2005—to the dissatisfaction of many people—but waiting until December to sign it, that was an effort to gain more negotiations and to try to satisfy more people. My job was to get a consensus, was to work through what is the art of the possible, to get a bill.

The six Senators who opposed the bill issued their press releases not before the ink was dry on the conference report but before the ink was finished on the conference report. When I went to the press galleries on December 8, 2005 to announce the conference report, before I got there the dissenters had already issued their press releases. They weren't waiting to see what the conference report had to say. They did not issue their objections before the ink was dry; they issued their objections before the ink was finished. And you can do that if you are a dissenter and if you are an objecter. But if you are the chairman and you have the obligation to pull the parties together—and when I signed the report on December 6, 2005 I still couldn't get some members of my committee to sign the report. They thought it went too far.

The President has taken the position that this conference report goes as far as he is going to go. I am advised that he issued a statement earlier today that he will not sign a 3-month extension. The majority leader said yesterday that he would not bring up a 3-month extension. There may be ways to get it on the floor in any event. You can't amend the conference report.

If I am given instructions in my capacity as chairman to go back and negotiate, I will salute and go back and negotiate and try to work through whatever circumstances require. But where the President has said he is not going to sign a 3-month extension, if he means business, and I think he does, then in voting on cloture and in looking to a final vote up or down, this body is going to be faced with the alternative of either accepting the conference report, which is a balanced bill, or, if not, the PATRIOT Act is going to expire, and the responsibilities will be on those of us who vote and take positions.

Although we are a considerable distance from 9/11—more than 4 years—terrorism continues to be a problem. This bill gives important tools to law enforcement in a balanced way. This bill has provisions to protect subways, seaports, and airports. It is important that we have a balanced bill, and it is important that we have a bill. There is no mathematical formula, but this bill is a balanced bill.

How much time remains of my 30 minutes?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Eight minutes forty seconds.

Mr. SPECTER. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Vermont.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, before I start, with the distinguished senior Senator from Pennsylvania in the Chamber, I totally appreciate what he said about the problems of being the leader on a committee and having to make the decisions of how you are going to get a bill through.

I was chairman of the committee when we put through the first PATRIOT Act. I remember the balancing act we went through at that time and how difficult it was to get a bill through. And that PATRIOT Act is this PATRIOT Act. It contains a number of items that I wrote.

I also note that throughout, the chairman and I have kept in very close contact. We have spoken several times. I have considered during my 31 years in the Senate that one of the things which has given me the greatest sense of satisfaction is the relationship the distinguished chairman and I have in getting things through, and we have. I am concerned because we have come so close on this.

As Senator SALAZAR noted, yesterday was the anniversary of the adoption of the Bill of Rights of the Constitution.

Yesterday we engaged in debate seeking to protect and reserve those rights under the USA PATRIOT Act. I thank Senators SUNUNU, FEINSTEIN, CRAIG, WYDEN, FEINGOLD, SALAZAR, and OBAMA for their thoughtful remarks, their willingness to work in a bipartisan way which, after all, is the best tradition of the Senate.

Let all Members understand, this is a vital debate. The terrorist threat to America's security is very real. It is vital we arm the Government with the tools needed to protect American society and security.

At the same time, the threat to civil liberties is also very real in America today. I do read the papers. Today's New York Times reports that over the past 3 years, under a secret order signed by President Bush, the Government has been monitoring international telephone calls and international e-mail messages of people inside the United States—with no court approval, no checks and balances, one person's signature and that is it. This warrantless eavesdropping program is not authorized by the PATRIOT Act, it is not authorized by any act of Congress, and it is not overseen by any court.

According to the report, it is being conducted under a secret Presidential order based on secret legal opinions by the same Justice Department lawyers, the same ones who argued secretly that the President could order the use of torture.

It is time to have some checks and balances in this country. We are a democracy. Let's have checks and balances, not secret orders and secret courts and secret torture.

The debate is not about whether the Government should have the tools it needs to protect the American people. Of course it should. That is why, as I say, I coauthored the PATRIOT Act 4 years ago. That is why the act passed with such broad bipartisan support. When I voted for that PATRIOT Act, I did not think it was an ideal piece of legislation. I knew it would need careful oversight, but I was in favor of most of the PATRIOT Act. I am in favor of most of the PATRIOT Act now. That is why I voted for the bipartisan Senate bill in July. The distinguished chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee got it through our committee unanimously, with Senators from the right to the left voting for it.

This debate is not whether it should suddenly expire. Of course it should not. That is why Senators from both parties have offered a bill to extend it in its present form for 3 months in order to give us time to either return to the bipartisan compromise we reached, pass the Senate bill, or reach a new bipartisan compromise.

Our goal is to mend the PATRIOT Act, not to end it. None of us want it to expire. Those who threaten to let it expire rather than fix it are playing a dangerous game. This is a debate about reconciling two shared and fundamental goals—assuring the safety of the American people and protecting their liberty by a system of checks and balances that keeps the Government, their Government, our Government, accountable.

America can do better. And we should. Those goals are not the goals of any particular party or ideology. They are shared American goals.

How to balance security with liberty and Government accountability was the most fundamental dilemma with which the Framers of our Constitution wrestled. How to adjust that balance with the post-September 11 world is the most fundamental dilemma before this Congress.

No one should doubt those who vote for cloture on the conference report care deeply about the liberty of the American people. We all do. No one should doubt that those who vote against cloture are devoted to protecting both the security and liberty of the American people. We all care deeply.

However, let us have a Government of checks and balances. In the long run, we are more secure. Our liberties are more secure. Frankly, we are more American in doing that.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Senator from Nevada.

MILK REGULATORY EQUITY ACT OF 2005

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of S. 2120 introduced earlier today.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the bill by title.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 2120) to ensure regulatory equity between and among all dairy farmers and handlers for sales of packaged fluid milk in federally regulated milk marketing areas and into certain non-federally regulated milk marketing areas from federally regulated areas, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. REID. I ask unanimous consent the bill be read the third time and passed, the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table, and any statements be printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The bill (S. 2120) was read the third time and passed, as follows:

S. 2120

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Milk Regulatory Equity Act of 2005".

SEC. 2. MILK REGULATORY EQUITY.

(a) MINIMUM MILK PRICES FOR HANDLERS; EXEMPTION.—Section 8c(5) of the Agricultural Adjustment Act (7 U.S.C. 608c(5)), reenacted with amendments by the Agricultural Marketing Agreement Act of 1937, is amended by adding at the end the following new subparagraphs:

"(M) MINIMUM MILK PRICES FOR HANDLERS.—

"(i) APPLICATION OF MINIMUM PRICE REQUIREMENTS.—Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, a milk handler described in clause (ii) shall be subject to all of the minimum and uniform price requirements of a Federal milk marketing order issued pursuant to this section applicable to the county in which the plant of the handler is located, at Federal order class prices, if the handler has packaged fluid milk product route dispositions, or sales of packaged fluid milk products to other plants, in a marketing area located in a State that requires handlers to pay minimum prices for raw milk purchases.

"(ii) COVERED MILK HANDLERS.—Except as provided in clause (iv), clause (i) applies to a handler of Class I milk products (including a producer-handler or producer operating as a handler) that—"(I) operates a plant that is located within the boundaries of a Federal order milk marketing area (as those boundaries are in effect as of the date of the enactment of this subparagraph);

"(II) has packaged fluid milk product route dispositions, or sales of packaged fluid milk products to other plants, in a milk marketing area located in a State that requires handlers to pay minimum prices for raw milk purchases; and

"(III) is not otherwise obligated by a Federal milk marketing order, or a regulated milk pricing plan operated by a State, to pay minimum class prices for the raw milk that is used for such dispositions or sales.

"(iii) OBLIGATION TO PAY MINIMUM CLASS PRICES.—For purposes of clause (ii)(III), the Secretary may not consider a handler of Class I milk products to be obligated by a Federal milk marketing order to pay minimum class prices for raw milk unless the handler operates the plant as a fully regulated fluid milk distributing plant under a Federal milk marketing order.

"(iv) CERTAIN HANDLERS EXEMPTED.—Clause (i) does not apply to—

"(I) a handler (otherwise described in clause (ii)) that operates a nonpool plant (as defined in section 1000.8(e) of title 7, Code of Federal Regulations, as in effect on the date of the enactment of this subparagraph);

"(II) a producer-handler (otherwise described in clause (ii)) for any month during which the producer-handler has route dispositions, and sales to other plants, of packaged fluid milk products equaling less than 3,000,000 pounds of milk; or

"(III) a handler (otherwise described in clause (ii)) for any month during which—

"(aa) less than 25 percent of the total quantity of fluid milk products physically received at the plant of the handler (excluding concentrated milk received from another plant by agreement for other than Class I use) is disposed of as route disposition or is transferred in the form of packaged fluid milk products to other plants; or

"(bb) less than 25 percent in aggregate of the route disposition or transfers are in a marketing area or areas located in one or more States that require handlers to pay minimum prices for raw milk purchases.

"(N) EXEMPTION FOR CERTAIN MILK HANDLERS.—Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, no handler with distribution of Class I milk products in the marketing area described in Order No. 131 shall be exempt during any month from any minimum price requirement established by the Secretary under this subsection if the total distribution of Class I products during the preceding month of any such handler's own farm production exceeds 3,000,000 pounds.

"(O) RULE OF CONSTRUCTION REGARDING PRODUCER-HANDLERS.—Subparagraphs (M) and (N) shall not be construed as affecting, expanding, or contracting the treatment of producer-handlers under this subsection except as provided in such subparagraphs."

(b) EXCLUSION OF NEVADA FROM FEDERAL MILK MARKETING ORDERS.—Section 8c(11) of the Agriculture Adjustment Act (7 U.S.C. 608c(11)), reenacted with amendments by the Agriculture Marketing Agreement Act of 1937, is amended—

(1) in subparagraph (C), by striking the last sentence; and

(2) by adding at the end the following new subparagraph:

"(D) In the case of milk and its products, no county or other political subdivision of the State of Nevada shall be within the marketing area definition of any order issued under this section."

(c) RECORDS AND FACILITY REQUIREMENTS.—Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, or the amendments made by this section, a milk handler (including a producer-handler or a producer operating as a handler) that is subject to regulation under this section or an amendment made by this section shall comply with the requirements of section 1000.27 of title 7, Code of Federal Regulations, or a successor regulation, relating to handler responsibility for records or facilities.

(d) EFFECTIVE DATE AND IMPLEMENTATION.—The amendments made by this section take effect on the first day of the first month beginning more than 15 days after the date of the enactment of this Act. To accomplish the expedited implementation of these amendments, effective on the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Agriculture shall include in the pool distributing plant provisions of each Federal milk marketing order issued under subparagraph (B) of section 8c(5) of the Agriculture Adjustment Act (7 U.S.C. 608c(5)), reenacted with amendments by the Agriculture Marketing

Agreement Act of 1937, a provision that a handler described in subparagraph (M) of such section, as added by subsection (a) of this section, will be fully regulated by the order in which the handler's distributing plant is located. These amendments shall not be subject to a referendum under section 8c(19) of such Act (7 U.S.C. 608c(19)).

GULF OPPORTUNITY ZONE ACT OF 2005

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent the Senate proceed to immediate consideration of Calendar No. 328, H.R. 4440.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the bill by title.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (H.R. 4440) to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to provide tax benefits for the Gulf Opportunity Zone and certain areas affected by Hurricanes Rita and Wilma, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, this amendment 2680 acts on our commitment to provide rebuilding assistance to areas of the country devastated by this year's relentless hurricane season. It will benefit residents of the gulf region, as well as more recently impacted areas of Texas and Florida, and provides much needed relief and resources for economic rebuilding to those areas.

As promised, we have made our best effort to marry up our compassion for displaced persons and damaged communities with attention to fiscal discipline and the best use of taxpayer dollars. This bill represents an effort to most efficiently and effectively use the tax code to assist in the rebuilding and revitalization of those regions. I will reiterate the guiding principles of our hurricane relief legislation. First, because market forces will be the driver in getting these regions back on their feet, our bill includes only provisions that encourage and incentivize redevelopment. Second, our package provides resources only to those who incurred uninsured losses and does not provide for a bailout of those who assumed risk as an insurer in our capitalist, free-market system. Third, we have focused our limited Federal resources on those most in need—like the many devastated small business employers who were the backbones of these economies and who will be the engines of their future growth and prosperity. The amendment provides front-loaded incentives on a timely basis to encourage people and businesses to return to the region as quickly as possible.

I want to show my appreciation to my colleagues in the Senate and in the House for working to get this legislation to the President as quickly as possible. Before we go home to spend time with our families, it is important for us to help the many families who have had their lives overturned by the recent hurricanes. Hopefully they will think of this holiday season as a time of rebuilding and opportunity.

The amendment also includes tax technical correction provisions related to the American Jobs Creation Act of 2004 and other tax legislation. Technical corrections measures are routine for major tax acts and are necessary to ensure that the provisions of the acts are working consistently with their original intent, or to provide clerical corrections. Because these measures carry out congressional intent, no revenue gain or loss is scored from them.

The process and test for technical corrections ensures that only provisions narrowly drawn to carry out Congressional intent are included. Technical corrections are derived from a deliberative and consultative process among the congressional and administration tax staffs. That means the Republican and Democratic staffs of the House Ways and Means and Senate Finance Committees are involved as is the Treasury department staff. All of this work is performed with the participation and guidance of the non-partisan Joint Committee on Taxation staff. A technical enters the list only if all staffs agree it is appropriate.

The Senate Finance Committee and the Committee on Ways and Means, in consultation with the Joint Committee on Taxation and the Department of the Treasury, are continuing to assess proposals for other technical corrections which may be needed to achieve congressional intent. On that point, no double benefit is intended under the railroad track maintenance credit of code section 45G. If the current basis adjustment rule is not serving to carry out that intent, the provision may need to be clarified. Such a clarification might provide that basis or tax attribute reduction applies to the taxpayer taking the credit. I would like to ask the staff to work on this.

In conclusion, this package will show those affected by Hurricanes Rita, Wilma, and Katrina that their needs have not been forgotten, and that we will continue to help them rebuild their homes, communities, and lives.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, shortly, we will complete legislative business and adjourn for the year. Senators will leave to spend the holidays with our families. Senators will travel to the comfort of our homes.

But there are still those in the gulf region who do not have homes.

Hurricane Katrina struck almost 4 months ago. We cannot, in good conscience, conclude our action for the year without passing tax relief for the gulf region.

The legislation before us today is a good bill. We must pass it today.

In September, I was pleased that Congress could come together and quickly pass emergency tax relief for victims of Hurricane Katrina.

Prior to passing that legislation, I promised that I would work with my colleagues to draft a long-term tax relief package. And that is what we did.

We worked to create legislation that would help rebuild homes and businesses. We worked to create legislation that would pump money into local economies. And we worked to create legislation that would help distressed working families.

We must come together again. We must pass this legislation today.

On November 18th, the Senate passed the tax reconciliation bill. We included Hurricane tax relief. We included Alternative Minimum Tax relief. And we included more than a dozen important tax provisions that expire on December 31st, including the Work Opportunity Tax Credit and the Research and Development Tax Credit.

With the help of many, Chairman GRASSLEY and I fit all of that legislation within the constraints of the budget resolution's instructions.

But the House did not take up our bill. Instead, the House passed hurricane relief and Alternative Minimum Tax relief outside of the budget reconciliation process. Then the next day, the House passed a tax reconciliation bill.

Why did the House need three bills to achieve what the Senate succeeded in passing in one bill?

The reason is simple. The reason is the capital gains and dividends tax cut.

I am disappointed in the House. I am disappointed that Congress could not pass all the important tax relief that the Senate did in one bill.

And that is why we have the legislation before us today, the House hurricane tax relief bill.

The amendment that Chairman GRASSLEY and I have crafted to this bill recognizes that to revitalize the gulf region, the region must have a strong economy. We must encourage individuals to return. And that means that there must be jobs for them to return to. This legislation gives businesses help to create those jobs.

We would provide bonus depreciation. We would increase small business expensing limits. We would also provide new authority for tax-favored private activity and mortgage bonds.

We would also extend to victims of Hurricanes Rita and Wilma some of the tax relief that we provided to victims of Hurricane Katrina in September. This includes penalty-free early tax-free withdrawals from pensions and IRAs. We would allow victims to fully deduct casualty losses. And we would remove the cap on allowable corporate charitable contributions made in response to the hurricanes.

And thanks to the hard work and persistence of the good Senators from Florida and Texas, we have been able to forge an agreement to provide extra low-income housing benefits for the Rita and Wilma hurricane zones. My good friend from Florida, Senator NELSON, has made the convincing case that these devastated areas need more assistance with low-income housing, and I am pleased to say this bill will be providing that very help.

The substitute that Senator GRASSLEY and I offer today provides $8 billion in tax relief for the gulf region. We take the House bill, but we provide additional tax relief for employers and students to encourage people to return to the gulf region.

One item of particular importance to me is tax relief to employers who continued to pay their workers after the hurricanes struck. Employers located in the Katrina, Rita, and Wilma disaster zones will be able to take up to a $2,400 tax credit on wages paid to employees during the period the business was shut down. These business owners have tapped into their savings to help out their workers. They deserve tax relief. We provided this relief in our first bill, but it was limited to small employers. I have always felt and argued strongly that any employer that helps out their workers while the business is shut down deserves this assistance. I am very pleased that we were able to eliminate this cap, and extend this relief for the Rita and Wilma zones as well.

Another priority item for me is a provision to encourage students to return to the gulf region. Many colleges and universities were forced to shut down after Hurricane Katrina and students have been scattered across the country. To encourage these students, and new students as well, to come back to the gulf region, we double the Hope Scholarship and Lifetime Learning tax credits. Students from around the country would be able to take a credit up to $4,000 for tuition, room and board, books, and fees for attending college in the areas affected by Hurricane Katrina. I was very pleased that we could include this benefit in our Senate version and that we have retained it in this substitute. I think it will be extremely valuable to the colleges and universities who have really suffered from this hurricane.

One further priority item for me is the additional $1 billion in new markets tax credit authority for the Katrina zone. I fought to get this credit in our Senate version because I am convinced this program works. The program provides access to capital for small businesses through established community development entities. Entities with a significant mission of rebuilding in the hurricane zone may access these additional tax credits in order to help these struggling businesses rebuild. These businesses may not be able to utilize some of the other tax benefits in the bill, but access to capital will help many of them stay in business and stay in the zone.

One last item that I would like to highlight is an employer credit for providing housing for workers and their families. My good friend from Louisiana, Senator LANDRIEU, offered this provision during our floor debate last month. And if I could just take a moment to point out to our colleagues the tremendous work she has done on this bill. She has truly been our compass during these negotiations and has been essential in conveying the true plight of her constituents.

She has told me about the many hurricane victims who still do not have housing in the gulf region. Under her provision, workers and their families receiving housing from their employers could exclude up to $600 a month from their income for tax purposes, plus the business can receive a partial credit for this expense. Business leaders have told us that they simply cannot get back to work unless their workers have housing. The Landrieu housing provision helps them immensely.

Finally, this bill provides that soldiers in Iraq and Afghanistan may include combat pay when calculating their earned income tax credit. This has been a priority item for our friend from Arkansas, Senator PRYOR, who championed this fix for our military families serving in combat last year. We extend the benefit for another year in this substitute and I commend Senator PRYOR for his tireless work on behalf of military families.

We have a good bill before us. It has been nearly 4 months. We are set to adjourn the Senate for the year. We need to come together and help those most in need. I urge my colleagues to pass this legislation today.

ANIMAL RACING

Mr. BUNNING. Mr. President, I thank the chairman for working with me on an issue of importance regarding the applicability of the animal racing facility limitation contained in the Senate amendment to H.R. 4440. I understand that the legislative language creates new section 1400N(p) of the Internal Revenue Code which indicates that property directly related to animal racing is not eligible for certain benefits contained in certain subsections of new section 1400N. My understanding is that items not directly related to the racing of animals or the viewing of such races, such as barns, stables, practice facilities, restaurants, some administrative offices, gift shops, and parking areas are eligible for these benefits.

Mr. GRASSLEY. I thank the Senator for that clarification. His description is correct.

EMPLOYEE RETENTION CREDIT—TAX-EXEMPT FINANCING

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, because there is no committee report accompanying this legislation, I would like to engage Chairman GRASSLEY in a colloquy to clarify the intent of two provisions contained in this important legislation.

First, among the tax benefits contained in this package is the employee retention credit. This incentive will play a pivotal role in helping businesses retain their employees even if they are temporarily out of business while the gulf coast rebuilds. As I understand the committee's intent, the credit will apply both where a company is completely out of business, and where it did not suffer total devastation to its trade or business operations. For example, the credit would apply in cases where one part of the operation in the designated zone was rendered "inoperable" while another location of that same business continued to operate. Is that correct?

Mr. GRASSLEY. I agree with Senator LOTT's interpretation of this provision of the bill.

Mr. LOTT. Another provision of H.R. 4440 would make eligible for tax-exempt financing the costs of nonresidential real property located in the Gulf Opportunity Zone. It is my understanding that the intent of this provision is that nonresidential real property includes any tangible property other than fixtures and equipment that are movable, without regard to the class life of such property or its use as part of manufacturing, production, or extraction, or of furnishing services or property.

Mr. GRASSLEY. I agree with Senator LOTT's interpretation of this provision of the bill.

Mr. SANTORUM. Mr. President, I rise today to raise an issue of concern with the Katrina tax relief bill, known as the Gulf Opportunity Zone. This bill quite rightly provides incentives to bring back businesses and capital to the devastated regions of the gulf coast. This package is needed legislation that will continue to drive redevelopment and provide encouragement for businesses and others to come back and rebuild, creating jobs in the rebuilding and jobs in the businesses themselves and providing much needed revenues for the local communities.

However, I have raised a concern to my colleague from Mississippi regarding providing incentives to certain industries such as casinos. I read with interest an article in the New York Times on December 14, 2005, regarding the return of casinos to the gulf coast. The article noted that while the storm damaged 9 out of 10 casinos in Biloxi, MS 3 of the 9 damaged would be open again before the new year. In fact "[a]ll 10 Biloxi casinos have told the city they will rebuild, and most plan larger, more elaborate facilities." Clearly, the casinos and gaming industry do not need Congress to give them tax breaks to entice them to reopen.

More importantly, there are significant concerns about the impact of gambling on communities and families. In 2000, the Government Accountability Office found that "individuals suffering from pathological gambling engaged in destructive family behavior, committed more crime than other citizens, and had higher suicide rates." It also found the "destructive family behavior" included domestic violence, divorce, and homelessness. Additionally, GAO "also reported that children of individuals suffering from pathological gambling are often prone to suffer abuse and neglect." As we look at soaring costs for social programs and ever-increasing needs, it is most troubling that this report noted that "lifetime pathological, problem, and at-risk gamblers are more likely than low-risk or nongamblers to have been alcohol or drug dependent" and estimates that "15 million adults are at risk of becoming problem gamblers."

With the heartbreaking impact this industry has on some of our most vulnerable citizens, I am pleased that my colleague from Mississippi has recognized my concern and offered a package that ensures the necessary economic assistance for his State and communities without exacerbating the social toll on these already devastated communities and families.

I urge my colleagues to support the expeditious passage of this bill. I am hopeful our House colleagues will then adopt this bill and send it on to the President's desk so we can get this help out to these States, communities, businesses and families before the new year. Then hopefully the Congress can turn its attention back to the Tax Relief Act and enact its charitable incentives to help the countless nonprofits working day and night to heal the wounds in Katrina's wake. That element of the tax bill is critical, and we should move forward on this bill in short order.

EITC AND CTC FOR KATRINA VICTIMS

Mr. BAUCUS. As we consider this legislation to provide tax relief to respond to Katrina, it is particularly important that we recognize the impact of the hurricane on those struggling working families who are eligible for the earned income tax credit and the child tax credit. I am particularly concerned that the disruptions and displacement affecting these families in both their jobs and their homes may make it more difficult for them to receive these critical tax credits to which they are legally entitled—credits which they need more than ever. Some families will become eligible for these credits for the first time, yet may not be aware of these programs let alone how to apply for them. In addition, we have seen a tremendous outpouring of support for those hit by Katrina from families and friends of the victims, often at great cost. These relatives and friends may also qualify for assistance but find it more difficult to meet all the normal requirements.

For example, there are many families who have taken in nonrelative children displaced by the hurricane. They are essentially foster parents but may not be considered as such under current law. Due to the need to act quickly in response to Katrina, these foster children will not have been formally placed by an authorized agency but under current rules, such individuals could not claim these children for the EITC or the child tax credit. This would be true even if they continued to care for the children for more than 6 months in 2006 and thus meet the qualifying child residency requirement.

The only potential relief such individuals have is the $500 additional exemption in 2005 for housing a Katrina survivor more than 60 days provided in the Hurricane Katrina Emergency Tax Relief Act, HKTRA. However, this is a minimal support for a family taking in a child as a member of the family. In addition, the exemption is unavailable to low-income families with no income tax liability.

Taxpayers caring for such children may ultimately seek to formalize the arrangement with an authorized agency during 2006, but a placement decision may not be reached until later in the year. If only the time in residence with a child after the placement decision is considered for the purposes of meeting the residency test, the taxpayer may be unable to meet that test for the EITC and CTC. Some low-income taxpayers, unaware of the EITC or CTC rules, may simply continue to care for the child in their family and not pursue a formal arrangement until a later point and yet may be counting on the income from these credits.

Clearly the IRS needs to address this problem.

Mr. GRASSLEY. I share concern with the impact that Katrina will have on the ability of low wage working families who qualify for the child tax credit and the earned income tax credit to receive them for the 2005 tax year. In addition, I certainly agree that something must be done to address this problem for families who generously gave of themselves and took in a child displaced by Katrina but may lack the proper formal authorization that would prevent them from receiving the EITC they qualify for and would otherwise get.

To help address this problem, I would urge the IRS to accept a child placement decision by an authorized agency as being retroactive to the earliest point in 2006 when the taxpayer first took in the child. This would apply only to children who had resided in a hurricane disaster zone in 2005 as defined under HKTRA and under any subsequent legislation extending HKTRA provisions to Rita and Wilma survivors.

I have been advised that the IRS has the ability to adopt this approach under section 407 of HKTRA and any equivalent extension to Rita and Wilma survivors—that enables the Secretary to make adjustments in application of rules to ensure that hurricane survivors do not lose tax benefits. I know my colleague from Montana joins me in urging the IRS to use this authority to help these foster care families who so generously took in children displaced by Katrina.

Mr. BAUCUS. I wholeheartedly agree with my friend from Iowa.

I would like to raise another concern regarding these tax credits and the Katrina families.

As we approach the next filing season, there are so many families affected by the hurricane who previously received the EITC and the CTC but now face significant confusion about whether they will get the credit and how much they will receive. And, of course, some of the normal sources of taxpayer assistance in the gulf are not available now. Accordingly, it is exceedingly important the IRS do everything it can to maximize information and assistance provided to the public to help those eligible secure these credits.

While we wrote section 406 and section 407 of the Hurricane Tax relief bill to help eligible hurricane survivors receive the benefits of the EITC and CTC, it is really up to the IRS to effectively inform taxpayers and the tax preparation community of how the provisions are being implemented. In particular, section 407 provides that the IRS “. . . may make such adjustments in the application of the internal revenue laws as may be necessary to ensure that taxpayers do not lose any deduction or credit or experience a change of filing status by reason of temporary relocations by reason of Hurricane Katrina.”

I understand that the IRS is working to decide how this “adjustment authority” will be implemented and is preparing a new Publication 4492. However, low-income taxpayers and those who assist them in the preparation of their 2005 tax returns will need to understand the nature and limits of the adjustments IRS is willing to make so that returns are prepared properly. It will take a very thorough and comprehensive public education program to make sure that nontechnical information is made available through various means to help educate the public and those who help prepare tax returns. I am very concerned that the IRS take every possible step it can to make sure eligible low-income working families affected by Katrina know about special temporary adjustments to these credits and what they need to do to ensure they receive these credits.

Mr. GRASSLEY. I agree that many eligible hard-working families who qualify for the EITC and the child tax credit but whose lives have been sharply affected by the hurricane may face particular challenges and hurdles in applying for and receiving these credits. I also concur that is incumbent upon the IRS to take all steps it can to ensure that the public and the tax preparation community have clear, detailed, and understandable information about any adjustments and modifications it makes to help Katrina victims who qualify for the credits get them.

I believe that the IRS should report to Congress within the next couple of weeks the action it has taken to implement the provisions of section 406 and section 407 HKTRA, pertaining to the EITC and CTC, including outreach and communication efforts undertaken by IRS to inform taxpayers, tax practitioners, and volunteer tax preparation programs of these provisions, including the guidance provided to them by IRS on how the flexible authority to IRS in section 407 is being interpreted and implemented. IRS should publish such guidance, including typical questions and answers, in formats that are accessible to taxpayers, commercial tax practitioners, volunteer tax preparer organizations and low-income taxpayer clinics, including but not limited to the IRS Web site.

Mr. BAUCUS. I thank the Chairman and join in his recommendations to the IRS.

Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, I commend Senate Finance Chairman GRASSLEY and Ranking Member BAUCUS for putting together a bipartisan bill that will provide tax relief to individuals and businesses who are struggling due to the aftermath of Hurricane Katrina. This legislation creates a gulf opportunity zone in those areas in Alabama, Louisiana, and Mississippi that were hardest hit by the hurricane. Businesses operating in this zone will be eligible for specified tax breaks. In addition, the legislation provides relief to help with housing and the cost of higher education.

I support providing businesses with the appropriate tax relief that will help them rebuild. However, I am concerned that this tax relief will not be helpful if we do not provide assistance to small businesses. If the assistance to small businesses continues at its present pace, tax relief will be somewhat meaningless. Currently, 74 percent of hurricane-related Small Business Administration, SBA, disaster business loan applications have not even been processed, and less than 10 percent of the approved business loans have been fully disbursed. I have introduced legislation that would allow the affected States to distribute $450 million in bridge loans to help businesses that are waiting for an SBA loan to begin rebuilding immediately. If we do not provide businesses with loans, they will not be able to rebuild and benefit from these tax incentives.

I am pleased that this legislation includes a provision that would extend the current law provision that allows military personnel the option of treating certain combat pay as earned income for the purpose of computing the earned income tax credit, EITC, for 1 year. I have introduced legislation that strengthens the EITC. It includes a provision to allow permanently military personnel to elect to treat certain combat pay as income for purposes of calculating the EITC. During the debate on S. 2020, the Tax Relief Act of 2005, I along with Senator OBAMA offered an amendment on the EITC that would have extended this provision through 2007, but it was subject to a point of order because it included outlays.

This provision should be made permanent, but it is important that we are not allowing it to expire. It is a commonsense provision that would prevent members of the armed services from losing their EITC when they are mobilized and serving their country. Military families are often faced with increased expenses when a loved one is deployed. Thousands of reservists, for example, take a cut in pay when they are called to active duty.

Without this extension, several military families that are benefiting from the EITC would not longer be eligible for the credit. Eligibility for the EITC is based on income, and certain combat pay does not count as income for tax purposes. The election included in this provision would allow military personnel to choose whether they want their combat zone pay to count as income for purposes of calculating the EITC.

This provision will help military families with some of their financial burdens. It does not repay the sacrifices that they are making for us, but it shows that we are supporting our troops at home as well as abroad.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I would like to thank Chairman GRASSLEY and Senator BAUCUS for their commitment to enacting a long-overdue tax bill that will help get cash back into the pockets of businesses and individuals who are rebuilding their lives and their communities in the wake of hurricane's Katrina, Rita, and Wilma.

By significantly lowering the cost of capital for small, medium, and large businesses alike, the provisions in this legislation will spur business investment on the gulf coast, increase the supply of affordable housing, and put dislocated employees back to work.

Specifically, this legislation includes roughly $8 billion in tax incentives to help the gulf coast. These provisions: 50 percent bonus depreciation for property acquired in the GO Zone; double small business expensing for small businesses in the Zone; increase the amount of tax-exempt bonds Mississippi is allowed to allocate by $4.8 billion; allow for an additional advanced refunding for bonds previously issued by Mississippi and by all local issuers within the GO Zone; increase the amount low-income housing tax credits available to Mississippi; increase the allocation of new markets tax credits available for companies investing in Mississippi businesses and construction; allows for a 5-year net operation loss carryback for businesses in the zone; allows for a 10-year NOL for public utility disaster losses; allows public utility disaster losses to be carried back 5 years; increases reforestation expensing from $10,000 to $20,000 for expenses incurred in the Go Zone for 2006; allows small timber growers a 5 year NOL carryback for losses incurred in the zone; allows increased expensing for demolition and clean up costs through 2007; and makes the employees retention credit available to all employers in the zone.

We have been at this for several months now. My constituents have been patient, and deserve action now. This is a vitally important bill. It is critical that we pass it today and that it is sent to the President for his signature before we adjourn.

This amendment modifies recent legislation introduced by Chairman Grassley by making clear that the business tax incentives in this legislation do not apply to the construction of private or commercial golf courses, country clubs, massage parlors, hot tub facilities or suntan facilities, racetracks or other facilities used for gambling, or any store the principal business of which is the sale of alcoholic beverages for consumption off premises.

However, it also makes clear that tax incentives do apply to the construction of hotels, restaurants, parking lots, and other attachments to gaming facilities.

I would have much preferred a clean bill, but in the interest of my constituents, I am offering this amended legislation today. I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be adopted.

Ms. LANDRIEU. Mr. President, the Senate has taken a big step forward in helping Louisiana and the other States affected by Hurricanes Katrina, Rita, and Wilma by passing H.R. 4440, the Gulf Opportunity Zone Act of 2005, also known as the GO Zone Act. I realize that there are a number of very important pieces of legislation pending before the Senate and the House of Representatives as we wind down this session. But I want my colleagues to know that I am grateful, and the people of Louisiana are grateful, for the Senate's passing this bill by unanimous consent. I must thank Chairman GRASSLEY and Ranking Member BAUCUS of the Finance Committee for their work on this legislation and for the tremendous support of their staffs.

The GO Zone Act contains a number of tax incentives to rebuild our economic infrastructure. Our State will be able to issue bonds to build housing, roads, bridges, and industrial plants. The bill increases the allocation of low-income housing tax credits in the GO Zone to $18 per person—more than nine times the amount we are currently allocated—to build housing to allow all of our citizens to return home. Businesses will be able to get favorable depreciation and enhanced deductions for investing in plant and equipment in the devastated areas. These tax incentives are aimed at helping our businesses stay in business. We also included an expansion of the Hope scholarship and lifetime learning credit for students who return to the GO Zone to continue their educations.

The bill also contains a housing provision that I offered as a floor amendment when the Senate considered this legislation. The amendment, cosponsored by Senator VITTER, will create reward employers who have provided housing for workers and their families in the hurricane disaster area. These dedicated employers have made it possible for their workers to live on company property so that their business operations could get going again. They have rented or purchased trailers and put them on their property, all hooked up to utilities. Our business leaders recognized that they could not get back on their feet if their employees had no place to live near where they worked. FEMA has been incapable and incompetent in getting people into housing, so our businesses have stepped in to fill the void.

Under this provision, employees working at firms in the GO Zone may exclude up to $600 per month from income for employer-provided housing assistance. Employers get a tax credit of up to 30 percent of assistance provided to employees. The provision is temporary, lasting only 6 months, but it was the right thing to do for companies that believe in Louisiana and the gulf as a great place to do business.

I must also note that the housing amendment had strong support from local and national business organizations, including the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, Greater New Orleans, Inc., and Michael Olivier, the Louisiana State Secretary for Economic Development. I ask unanimous consent that their letters of support be printed in the RECORD.

These tax incentives, however, are still only a beginning. Tax cuts will not build a levee, and without our levees, we will not rebuild New Orleans. I was pleased that the President recently announced his support for $3 billion in additional funding to restore our levees to true Category 3 protection, along with a down payment to get us to Category 5 protection.

Now our focus must be on passing Chairman THAD COCHRAN's hurricane relief package, which adds to the President's $17 billion request for Federal assistance another $17.5 billion in aid to Louisiana and Mississippi, including funding for levee repairs. The chairman's leadership has built up support for the measure in the Senate, but we need to urge the White House and leadership in House of Representatives to follow suit and commit to giving a hand up to the people of the gulf coast. We should not go home for the holidays without taking this step for the thousands still left without homes to go home to.

Mr. President, with the passage of the GO Zone Act, the Senate has taken a key step toward helping the people of the gulf rebuild our communities. We must finish the job for this year in the gulf before we adjourn for the year.

I ask that my complete statement and the additional letters in support of the Landrieu amendment be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE OF THE
UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

Washington, DC, December 14, 2005.

Hon. CHARLES GRASSLEY,
Chairman, Committee on Finance,
U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR CHAIRMAN GRASSLEY: On behalf of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, the world's largest business federation representing more than three million businesses and organizations of every size, sector, and region, I write to express our support for the Landrieu housing tax credit amendment included as part of the GO Zone tax incentive package in the Senate tax reconciliation bill (S. 2020). The proposal would give tax relief to employers in the Katrina disaster area who provide employees with housing so that they can return to work.

Many employers in Louisiana have made housing available to their employees in order to get their business operations up and running again. The tax reconciliation bill establishes a Gulf Opportunity Zone (GO Zone) with a number of additional tax incentive provisions to bring investment and to rebuild Louisiana and the Gulf Coast. The Landrieu amendment will encourage more employers to do the same.

The Landrieu amendment will allow employees to exclude up to $600 per month in employer-provided housing from their income. An employee will be able to take advantage of this exclusion for housing provided to the employee, the employee's spouse, as well as any dependents. Employers who make housing available to employees in the Katrina GO Zone will be allowed a tax credit of up to 30 percent of the value of such housing. The maximum monthly credit will be $180 per employee.

We urge you to include the Landrieu housing amendment in the final version of any hurricane tax relief bill that is voted on before Congress adjourns for the year.

Sincerely,

R. BRUCE JOSTEN,
Executive Vice President, Government Affairs.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE OF THE
UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

DEAR RANKING MEMBER BAUCUS: On behalf of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, the world's largest business federation representing more than three million businesses and organizations of every size, sector, and region, I write to express our support for the Landrieu housing tax credit amendment included as part of the GO Zone tax incentive package in the Senate tax reconciliation bill (S. 2020). The Landrieu amendment will allow employees to exclude up to $600 per month in employer-provided housing from their income. An employee will be able to take advantage of this exclusion for housing provided to the employee, the employee's spouse, as well as any dependents. Employers who make housing available to employees in the Katrina GO Zone will be allowed a tax credit of up to 30 percent of the value of such housing. The maximum monthly credit will be $180 per employee.

We urge you to include the Landrieu housing amendment in the final version of any hurricane tax relief bill that is voted on before Congress adjourns for the year.

Sincerely,

R. BRUCE JOSTEN,

Hon. CHARLES GRASSLEY,
*Chairman, U.S. Senate Committee on Finance,
Hart Senate Office Building, Washington,

DEAR SENATOR GRASSLEY: Louisiana Economic Development strongly endorses Senator Mary Landrieu's Housing Tax Relief Amendment to the Senate Tax Reconciliation Bill. This amendment will give tax relief to employers who provide their employees with housing so that they can return to work. It is a necessary and important financial benefit to those Louisiana employers who have tirelessly worked to bring their work forces back to our state and to the communities damaged by the Katrina disaster.

In doing so, the proposed Landrieu Amendment provides relief to employers and their employees who return to work in rebuilding Louisiana from the catastrophic disaster that occurred. This is essential so that our businesses can resume operations, our workers can return to their communities, and both businesses and their employees can have a stake in the recovery of their communities. Your endorsement of and the ultimate passage of the Act fulfills these important goals.

Sincerely,

MICHAEL J. OLIVIER,

GREATER NEW ORLEANS, INC.,
New Orleans, LA, December 9, 2005.

DEAR CHAIRMAN GRASSLEY AND RANKING MEMBER BAUCUS: On behalf of Greater New Orleans, Inc., the regional economic development organization for Southeast Louisiana, I want to thank you for all of your efforts to assist the people of Louisiana and the City of New Orleans in our efforts to rebuild our communities and our economy after Hurricanes Katrina and Rita. Under your leadership, the Senate recently passed a tax reconciliation plan, S. 2020 that included $7 billion in additional incentives for investment to rebuild the Gulf Coast. The House of Representatives has also passed a hurricane relief package, similar to the provisions in the S. 2020. Both the House and Senate Katrina packages will greatly help the people in the Gulf rebuild homes, businesses and communities.

During the Senate's consideration of S. 2020, it adopted an amendment, sponsored by Senator Landrieu and cosponsored by Senator Vitter, to provide tax relief to employers in the Katrina affected areas who are providing housing for their employees. Under the amendment, employees will be able to exclude up to $600 per month in the value of any housing assistance they receive from their employer. Employers will be eligible for a tax credit of 30 percent of the housing assistance they provide to their employees.

The lack of housing to bring back employees is one of the largest detriments in bringing back the local economy and serves as the base for establishing local commerce. The Landrieu-Vitter amendment addresses one of the most pressing needs in Louisiana, the need for housing while we rebuild our economy. Our employers would like to open up for business again, but their employees cannot return to work if they do not have a place to live. We have worked with hundreds of employers who have already taken steps to make housing available to their employees through trailers and temporary housing, but this amendment will encourage more employers to do the same. With their employees close by, our businesses can begin their operations helping to drive our economic rebuilding. The Landrieu-Vitter amendment will help give this growth a jumpstart.

We urge you to include the Landrieu-Vitter housing amendment in the final version of any hurricane tax relief bill before Congress adjourns for the year.

Sincerely,

MARK C. DRENNEN,

Mr. LOTT. I ask unanimous consent the substitute amendment at the desk be agreed to, the bill, as amended, be read the third time and passed, the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table, and any statements related to the bill be printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment (No. 2680), in the nature of a substitute, was agreed to.

(The amendment is printed in today's RECORD under "Text of Amendments.")

The bill (H.R. 4440), as amended, was read a third time and passed.

Mr. LOTT. Briefly, I express appreciation to Senator GRASSLEY, Senator BAUCUS, especially Senator REID for his efforts, my colleague from Mississippi, Senator COCHRAN, the input and the help and the determination of Senator LANDRIEU from Louisiana, and Senator VITTER, Senator HUTCHISON and Senator CORNYN. I will have my additional remarks. I thank all those involved. This is important legislation. This is almost $8 billion in tax incentives and relief for the people in the hurricane areas. It means so much. Now we will be able to pass this back to the House, and hopefully they will take it up and send it directly to the President.

Mr. REID. This is not the time for a long statement. I especially extend my appreciation to the chairman and the ranking member of the Committee on Finance—it has been tough sledding—and, of course, the delegation from Mississippi, that of the Senator from Louisiana.

I ask unanimous consent the Senator from Louisiana be recognized for 90 seconds.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Ms. LANDRIEU. Mr. President, it will only take 90 seconds to thank Senator LOTT for his leadership and the two managers, Senator GRASSLEY and Senator BAUCUS, who have literally worked tirelessly on this piece of legislation to help the people along the gulf coast. This is part of a relief package that will help us to help ourselves, get our people back home, our businesses back to work, and the gulf coast on its feet, so we can continue to support the needs of this Nation through energy and commerce and trade.

I thank Senator LOTT particularly for the extra effort he has put into this bill. I thank the leadership for passing it this morning.

USA PATRIOT AND TERRORISM PREVENTION REAUTHORIZATION ACT OF 2005—CONFERENCE REPORT—Continued

Mr. LEAHY. I yield up to 3 minutes to the distinguished Senator from Idaho.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Idaho is recognized for 3 minutes.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, I thank the ranking member of the Judiciary Committee for yielding. Let me also thank the chairman of the Judiciary Committee. I thought he gave a thoughtful overview of the progression of time and thought that has gone into the conference report that is before the Senate at this moment.

Of all that we do this year that is lasting beyond tomorrow, clearly the PATRIOT Act is one of those pieces of legislation. I say that because it deals with fundamental constitutional rights in this country. At the same time, it deals with our right to protect ourselves against foreign interests that might intrude upon our shores.

The chairman has said so well, it is a very precarious balancing act between the right of the free citizen and a civil society that is protected by law. That is what we as Senators are about at this moment. That is what I have always been about, along with my colleagues. That is why some of us joined well over a year and a half ago to say that when it came time to reauthorize the PATRIOT Act, here were some provisions that stepped us back toward the right of free citizens to be protected by their Government, in fact, against their Government's law enforcement capability; while at the same time not hand-tying the ability of law enforcement and intelligence to come together to review, to investigate, and to determine whether someone's acts were terrorist in nature and might put free citizens of our country in jeopardy.

I cannot, nor will I, vote for cloture today because I am here to defend what the Senate has already done so well in such a bipartisan and in such a thoughtful way. We will not adjourn this session of this Congress without a PATRIOT Act in place, whether it is the 3-month extension we offered or whether it is the chairman, as he said, and the ranking member sitting down with the House to once again shape, in limited ways, those areas we think are critically necessary to make sure the balance the chairman so clearly spoke to is adhered to within a reauthorized PATRIOT Act.

So I would urge my colleagues' calmness and sensitivity to the fundamental civil liberties of our country, as we worked so hard to balance them against our country's and our Constitution's and our Government's primary responsibility; and that is to keep us safe and secure in a free environment.

I thank the ranking member for yielding, and I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

The Senator from Vermont.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, we have only had 2½ hours of debate on this major matter. We have very little time. I yield up to 3 minutes to the distinguished senior Senator from Massachusetts.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts is recognized for 3 minutes.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, America deserves laws that protect both their security and their civil liberties. This conference report does not. After years of doubt about the PATRIOT Act, this morning Americans woke up to more startling reports. For the past 3 years, the administration has been eavesdropping on hundreds of calls without warrants or oversights. These are the newspapers: "Bush Authorized Domestic Spying." "Bush Lets U.S. Spy on Callers Without Courts."

Well, the administration is not responding to the article, but they tell us: Trust us. We follow the law. Give me a break. Across the country and across the political spectrum, no one is buying it anymore.

This administration feels it is above the law, and the American people and our Constitution pay the price. There is no accountability. There is no oversight. The President continues to ignore history.

In the 1970s, Big Brother spied on its citizens, and the American people stood up and said "no." President Nixon's program, the COINTELPRO, allowed broad spying on law-abiding American citizens. We stopped Big Brother then by establishing the FISA court to ensure proper oversight and protections. Now this administration believes it is above even those protections. This is Big Brother run amok. With these new developments, we must take a step back and not rush the PATRIOT Act, further risking our civil protections.

The entire world is watching to see how we strike the balance between intelligence gathering and the Constitution. We cannot protect our borders if we do not protect our ideals. We need a bipartisan consensus that protects both our security and our liberty while restoring the public trust.

Our country is at a new low. Not since Watergate has there been such a lack of openness and honesty in our Government. Americans deserve better. The leaking of a CIA agent's identity is the prime example. The President promised he would clean house of anyone in the White House who had anything to do with the leak in the Plame case or the coverup. It has been suggested that the President himself may know the identity of the source, and I urge him to set the record straight.

The President needs to answer three questions: One, what did he know and when did he know it? Two, did he tell the special prosecutor, Fitzgerald, the whole story? And, three, who else knows the facts? CHENEY? Gonzales? Ashcroft? If Novak knew and the President knew, then the American people should know, too.

Mr. President, answer these questions.

In the last few days, we have heard a lot about whether America will be safer if the Senate approves the PATRIOT Act conference report this week.

Let's set the record straight—our national security will not be 3 jeopardized—at all—if existing laws stay in place for 3 more months. These surveillance methods will expire only if the Republican leadership refuses to negotiate—even with Members of their own party.

We have unfinished business on the table. The conference report fails to do all we can to improve intelligence-gathering capabilities and legislative oversight.

Americans deserve a law that protects both their security and their liberties, and this bill does not.

We need to preserve the basic powers created by the PATRIOT Act, but we also need to improve the safeguards that are indispensable to our democracy. Civil liberty protections are a continuing source of our country's strength—not just fringe benefits to be abandoned in time of crisis.

We all agree on the need for law enforcement and intelligence officers to have strong powers to investigate terrorism, to prevent future attacks, and improve information-sharing between Federal, State and local law enforcement.

In the wake of the tragic events on September 11, Congress, the administration, and the country faced the urgent need to do everything possible to strengthen our national security and counterterrorism efforts, and the original PATRIOT Act was our response to that need.

Even at that time, many of us had concerns about whether the law went too far. In November 2001, Nancy Talanian and a small group of neighbors in western Massachusetts came together to launch the Bill of Rights Defense Committee—what has now become a nationwide movement to protect the Bill of Rights.

This small Massachusetts group encouraged similar community discussions across the country. Seven States and hundreds of local governments engaged in vigorous public debate on the scope of the PATRIOT Act. As of this week, 400 resolutions have been passed.

These efforts can't be casually dismissed because the administration claims there have not been any "verified abuses" of the PATRIOT Act.

The Republican leadership tells us that time has run out and this legislation must be passed without further debate. We are told that enough oversight has taken place.

But it took 2 years—2 years—for the Department of Justice to respond to questions from the Senate Judiciary Committee about the use of the PATRIOT Act tools. We didn't receive the significant written answers until after the committee approved its bill.

We then learned that the Federal Government has only reported three instances in which a U.S. person was informed of a search because there was no national security interest in keeping it secret. Only three times has the Attorney General notified a United States person that they have been searched.

Yet we read more newspaper stories about FBI mistakes. The FBI says it averages about 10 mistakes a year. As a result of litigation, the FBI has admitted publicly that unauthorized electronic surveillance has gone on for months before mistakes were caught.

Now, I don't doubt that the FBI is trying to do a good job—but how many mistakes does it take to count as an abuse?

This administration tells us to disregard such mistakes because the information is being collected only about individuals linked to terrorism. Clearly, that is not the case.

I know personally about mistakes in the war on terror. Not long ago, I was on the no-fly list, and had to make a number of calls to clear up the resulting confusion.

Countless others have had a similar experience. I received a letter from a man in California. He had gone to the airport with his family to begin a vacation to Disneyland. Arriving at the airport, they encountered an unexpected surprise. His nephew, Liam Collins—at that time just 7 years old—was on the government's no-fly list. Seven years old and on the no-fly list.

Liam and his family convinced airport officials it was a "mistake." Liam made it to Disneyland but he sent me a picture about his experience—which had become a memorable part of the trip.

Since then, Liam hasn't traveled by plane, so no one knows whether the "mistake" has been fixed.

What about other mistakes? The Justice Department tells us that the so-called libraries provision has never even been used to search a library.

That may be just a clever way of saying that it is happening in a different way. In 2002, Attorney General Ashcroft told Congress that "national security letters" would be the better tool for library searches anyway.

Maybe Ashcroft was right. The so-called libraries provision has only been used 35 times—but over 30,000 national security letters have been issued, according to the Washington Post. The public doesn't know if that number is accurate, because the administration refuses to confirm it.

The conference report will require public reporting on the use. It will also require the Inspector General to audit their use.

But under these authorities, the Government is not required to obtain a court order. Your local library has no clear right to challenge demands for computer records in court. For consumers, there is zero protection—much less notice—if your records are taken by mistake. The recipient of a national security letter is barred forever from talking about it—even if the need for secrecy no longer exists.

On these national security letters, the conference report has two major shortcomings. One of the most glaring omissions is the failure to include a sunset provision for national security letters, which would be consistent and logical given the new reporting and auditing provisions contained in the conference report. Without doubt, it is more meaningful to have a sunset on a provision used 30,000 times than one that is used 35 times.

What we anticipated 4 years ago is abundantly clear now: 4-year sunsets are the only means to ensure adequate congressional oversight of controversial law enforcement and counterterrorism activities.

In addition, recipients of these orders should have a meaningful right to judicial review. The administration's acquiescence in giving recipients the right to consult an attorney is not a meaningful concession. The Justice Department has already taken that position in litigation. The conference report does not advance civil liberties on that point. In fact, it makes it harder to win in court. Under the conference report, banks, phone companies, and libraries challenging these authorities will have to overcome an even higher threshold in court, and companies may have to turn over records even where there is not even an individualized suspicion of terrorism.

The Federal Government should focus on whether the country is doing enough to protect citizens from another terrorist attack, and is providing adequate safeguards to protect fundamental civil liberties.

What Americans want and deserve is responsible legislation. Our Senate bill included the necessary assistance for law enforcement, while maintaining fundamental protections in accord with the Bill of Rights. As a result, it received unanimous approval of the entire Senate.

At the first and only meeting of this conference, I urged my colleagues to support the Senate bill, keeping in mind the recommendations of the bipartisan 9/11 Commission, which made clear that the executive branch has the burden of proof to justify why a particular governmental power should be retained—and Congress has the responsibility to see that adequate guidelines and oversight are made available.

On the two most contentious surveillance methods, the executive branch has failed to meet the 9/11 Commissioners' burden of proof—much less the burden of persuasion. The American people are not convinced that these methods achieve the right balance between our national security and protection of our civil liberties.

This conference report, however, failed to meet the 9/11 Commissioners' recommendations. It is especially alarming that the Commissioners' report card gave five failing grades in key areas of need. Obviously, America is not as safe as it should be.

Snooping on library computers is no substitute for strong and effective steps to prevent terrorist attacks.

With this conference report, some harsh provisions were deleted, but other abusive provisions were added. Debate about extraneous provisions took priority over improvements in the core provisions. It appears that the PATRIOT Act can't get better without also getting worse.

The administration wants to get this bill done—but the American people want it done right.

I urge my colleagues to join in supporting our bipartisan bill to extend the deadline for the expiring provisions for another 90 days. With a March 31 deadline, we can deal responsibly with the major issues still on the table. Serious concerns about the standards and oversight of the most contentious surveillance methods can and must be addressed.

Our Senate bill contained fundamental protections in accord with the Bill of Rights. It passed with our unanimous support, and it is disappointing that this conference report fails to do the same.

We need an effective strategy to win the war on terror, a strategy that strengthens terrorism laws that work, corrects laws and policies that don't, and protects the rights and privacy of all law-abiding Americans.

The entire country is watching to see how we strike the balance between national security and the Constitution. We are very close to agreement on this bill. Let's take the necessary time to reach a bipartisan consensus that protects both our security and our liberty, and restores the public trust in Congress as an institution.

Mr. CORNYN. Mr. President, I come to the Chamber today to speak about the PATRIOT Act reauthorization conference report. While this agreement does not give everyone all that they want, it is the result of lengthy, difficult negotiations. It represents a reasonable compromise for all parties involved, and it extends tools important to our national security, while enhancing civil liberties protections.

It has been more than 4 years since the terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001. In the days, weeks, and months since that day, the American people have braced themselves for the possibility of another terrorist attack on our homeland.

After all, we know all too well that al-Qaida is a stealthy, sophisticated, and patient enemy, and its leadership is motivated to launch another devastating attack on American citizens and soil.

Outside the United States, al-Qaida and its affiliates have continued to be remarkably active, responsible for numerous attacks, spanning the globe from Pakistan to Bali, Spain to London.

It is precisely because al-Qaida is so aggressive, so motivated, and so demonstrably hostile to America that I am grateful that, to date, they still have not successfully launched another attack on our soil. There are undoubtedly many reasons for this. First and foremost: the brave men and women of our Armed Forces. They are fighting the terrorist abroad so that we do not have to face them at home. Also, our efforts to strengthen antiterrorism and law enforcement tools through the USA PATRIOT Act has had much to do with this record of success and peace to date.

This diligence that has kept us safe at home must continue. The war on terrorism must be fought aggressively—but consistent with the protection of civil rights and civil liberties. That is why I am disappointed when we witness false reports and scare tactics about phantom civil rights violations. Such reports and tactics serve no legitimate cause—but they do a grave disservice to the American people. Whenever real civil liberties problems do arise, we must learn about them right away, so that we can fix them swiftly. Congress works hard to strike both a careful and wise balance between national security and civil liberties. While this is not always easy, we do so with the best interests of our Nation in mind—and we do so in a manner that is both honest and in good faith. This conference report strikes a careful balance by both preserving the provisions that have made America safer since 9/11 and increasing congressional and judicial oversight—which should alleviate the concerns of those who believe the law enforcement tools endanger civil liberties.

Many who oppose this agreement do so because of concerns that law enforcement will abuse these tools. While a legitimate concern, it simply has not been borne out by facts. First, the reports issued by the Department of Justice's independent inspector general have repeatedly found no systematic abuses of any of the provisions of Patriot. Second, these provisions are carried out by professional and dedicated law enforcement officers in a way that respects the rights of all Americans.

It has been said that time is a great healer. And, as time goes by, the shock we all felt following the 9/11 attacks has abated, somewhat. But as we recall those terrible memories, we are reminded of the institutional failures of our Government that failed to prevent the attacks. And we as a Nation, and the Congress in particular, vowed to tear down the walls that prevented information sharing, and to enact other tools vital to defending this country. It is clear that the PATRIOT Act has played a significant role in this process, as it has been instrumental in dismantling terrorist cells from New York to Oregon.

The failure to pass this conference report will cause these critical tools to lapse. It will weaken our country by reverting to September 10th-era tools. We cannot allow that to happen. We are living in profoundly different times. There are obviously deep feelings about the PATRIOT Act from all quarters. I and others support the PATRIOT Act and have been vocal about making these provisions permanent. Because not everyone agrees with this view, negotiations and compromises took place to reach an agreement that achieves the dual goals of continuing these critical authorities and enhancing congressional and judicial oversight.

Some have proposed that we pass a 3-month extension to continue working on the reauthorization. I oppose that. The Congress placed a December 31, 2005, deadline for a reason. The President, the Attorney General and the House support this agreement. We should vote on this agreement, and I intend to vote for cloture and will support the conference report.

However, if we are searching for alternatives, I propose the Senate take up and immediately pass legislation that I cosponsored last Congress which would strike all of the sunsets contained in the PATRIOT Act. This would eliminate the deadline we face, those in the House and those in the Senate can offer what they consider improving legislation and work to move it through the regular legislative process. That way, none of the vital authorities will be allowed to lapse and any changes that majority of the Congress supports will be implemented through the regular order.

Beyond this proposal, I want to discuss some of the specific items addressed by the conference report and try to explain why I think this report should be supported, beginning with sunsets.

I have stated that I oppose sunsets for this important legislation. I believe that our intelligence and law enforcement officials should never again be left wondering whether the Congress will manage to agree to reauthorize the tools that protect our Nation.

But realizing that there are those who feel that these sunsets are important to the negotiations, I choose to support the sunsets, even though if we were going to have sunsets I would have preferred the 10-year sunsets included in the House-passed version. This conference report retains 4-year sunsets for two of the most controversial PATRIOT Act provisions, the multipoint or "roving" wiretaps and the business records provision.

It also includes a sunset for the "Lone Wolf" provision added to the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act by last year's Intelligence Reform Act. This guarantees the Congress will review these provisions and continue to conduct rigorous oversight.

Senator SPECTER and others on the conference attempted to address civil liberty concerns in many ways, for example, dealing with the delayed search warrant provision. As my colleagues know, this section is not to sunset. Nevertheless, recognizing the sensitivity to this provision certain Members had, the conference report requires the Government to now give notice of any search under this provision within 30 days of its execution, unless the facts justify a later date certain.

Although the 30-day period is a few weeks longer than the 7-day time limit contained in the original Senate bill, it is considerably shorter than the 180 days permitted under the House bill. The conference report allows for extensions but only "upon an updated showing of the need for further delay." Also, it limits any extensions to 90 days or less, unless the facts of the case justify a longer delay.

It also adds new public reporting on the use of delayed notice warrants, so that Congress and the American people will be better informed about the use of this provision.

My time is short today, but I want to briefly mention other civil liberties protections Chairman SPECTER negotiated. The report made explicit the ability of recipients of NSL letters and 215 orders to seek judicial review. Significantly, on both of these authorities, the conference report requires the inspector general to conduct two audits of these authorities, one audit covering 2002 through 2004; another covering 2005–2006. And, in recognition of concerns about NSLs, the conference report adds a new "sunshine" provision. Namely, it requires annual public reporting on NSLs, including the aggregate "number of requests made by the Department of Justice."

Additionally, this report gives the Senate Judiciary Committees access to significant FISA reporting currently provided to the Intelligence Committee. It also includes a provision cosponsored by Senators SPECTER and LEAHY requiring that rules and procedures of the FISA court be supplied to Congress. It further creates new reporting requirements to Congress for the use of emergency authorities under FISA and requires new reporting on the use of emergency disclosures of communications information made under Section 212 of the PATRIOT Act. And finally, it retains a modified version of the data-mining report contained in the House-passed bill which will require the Department of Justice to submit a report to Congress on the Department's data-mining activities.

I also want to mention another provision contained in the conference report because it is based on legislation that I introduced in the Senate. The Narco-Terrorism Prevention Act confronts the new reality and very real danger of the deadly mix of drug trafficking and terrorism.

Terrorists, like the old organized crime syndicates from the past, have recognized that illegal drug trafficking is a valuable source of financing and another way to threaten our country.

My State is experiencing the collateral effects of a drug war being carried out by modern day narco-terrorists in Nuevo Laredo, Mexico. News reports have described an ongoing battle between rival drug cartels over drug smuggling routes from Mexico into the United States. These organizations assassinate police officers and other government officials in a clear attempt to force the local government to allow these organizations to carry on their illegal activity, unimpeded. Our government needs every available tool at its disposal to combat this activity.

This new provision makes it a Federal crime designed to punish the trafficking of controlled substances which are intended to benefit a foreign terrorist organization or any one else planning a terrorist attack. It also carries stiff penalties for anyone convicted. Importantly, it provides for extraterritorial jurisdiction which allows law enforcement to reach beyond our borders to arrest and deter those who intend to carry out a crime of this nature.

Mr. President, I have opposed changing the core provisions of the PATRIOT Act and have opposed any increase in the burdens for terrorism or national security investigations or on terrorism or national security investigators because they should have the same tools available to them as do ordinary criminal investigators.

We must remain vigilant, and we must make sure that evidentiary hurdles do not creep back into the law in terrorism and national security investigations. We should avoid moving back to a pre-9/11 mindset. I believe that the package before us today continues the reforms we have made in the post-9/11 period, and I intend to vote in favor of this package.

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, since the beginning of our country's history, Americans have recognized the vital importance of balancing the safety and security of our people with the need to uphold civil liberties in our society. There have been times when the Congress has succeeded in achieving this fine balance, and there have been times when the Congress has failed to do so.

In 2001, I supported the passage of the PATRIOT Act because I believed the legislation that emerged from the conference between the House and the Senate had achieved this goal. However, this legislation has since been used for purposes beyond what we had envisioned 4 years ago, and that troubles me. As a result, I have cosponsored the Security and Freedom Enhancement, SAFE, Act, which would modify the law.

I was pleased to support the legislation to reauthorize the PATRIOT Act as it unanimously passed the Senate earlier this year. This version reflected many of the important changes contained in the SAFE Act. It would have restored the balance between security and civil liberties, while the House version would further tilt the balance away from civil liberties. I was hopeful the final conference report on this legislation would reflect the Senate version, but unfortunately, this is not the case.

This conference report falls short in restoring the balance between security and civil liberties, and therefore I cannot in good conscience support its passage. The conference report falls short because the legislation contains no sunset for controversial provisions like "sneak and peek" warrants; the legislation's standard for being able to obtain records is only mere relevance, rather than requiring an actual connection with a spy or terrorist; the legislation makes it nearly impossible to obtain a meaningful judicial review of production orders and the gag orders that accompany them; and the legislation allows for a disturbing lack of notice to individuals whose records are obtained under the law.

In short, this legislation fails to restore the critical balance between security and civil liberties, a balance that I believe all Americans consider a vital part of our democracy.

Therefore, I will oppose limiting debate on the conference report and final passage of the conference report in its current form. Given that the end of the session is fast approaching, we should pass a short-term extension of the expiring PATRIOT Act provisions, as advanced by Senators LEAHY, SUNUNU and others, to allow this conference report to be improved and ultimately strike the proper balance.

Mr. AKAKA. Mr. President, today I raise my strong concerns about news reports regarding the administration's blatant disregard for American's privacy rights and civil liberties. I am shocked by the recent revelation that President Bush secretly authorized the National Security Agency to eavesdrop on Americans and others inside the United States to search for evidence of terrorist activity without court-approved warrants. I am equally appalled by the Pentagon's dismal enforcement of guidelines that require deleting information on American citizens from a counterterrorism database within 3 months if they pose no security threats.

Government agencies are not following important rules and procedures designed to protect the American people. Just this summer, the nonpartisan Government Accountability Office issued a report at my request which found that agencies are not following privacy laws designed to protect personal information in Federal data mining systems. Considering that there are nearly 200 data mining systems in the Federal Government, these actions pose real threats to Americans' privacy.

Merely having policies and safeguards in place does nothing if agencies are not following the law. As such, I cannot vote to renew some of the most troublesome PATRIOT Act provisions that threaten civil liberties, including the Government's far-reaching powers to obtain personal, medical, library, and business records or conduct "sneak-and-peek" searches, without ensuring that meaningful checks and balances are in place.

I want to assure the people of Hawaii and all Americans that I am working on legislation to strengthen Federal privacy laws.

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, I rise today to speak in opposition to closing off debate on the PATRIOT Act conference report as it has come back to the Senate.

The events of September 11 demonstrated various deficiencies in our understanding of the terrorist threat and our capabilities in terms of combating terrorism. In response, Congress acted decisively and passed the PATRIOT Act to ensure that our Government has all the tools necessary to protect the American people. I supported that legislation.

The PATRIOT Act, as originally enacted, was 342 pages long and contained 10 titles and 116 sections. The bill improved our laws with regard to international money laundering, terrorism financing, intelligence gathering, surveillance, cooperation between law enforcement and intelligence authorities, and strengthened our criminal laws relating to terrorism. The vast majority of these provisions are not expiring. They remain the law of the land. Indeed, only 16 of the most controversial sections in the bill contained sunset provisions.

Congress recognized that we were extending to law enforcement and intelligence authorities expansive new surveillance powers and that it was important to go back and look at how these powers have been used and whether we needed to make any changes in the law to ensure that Americans' civil liberties are protected. While I support the reauthorization of these expiring provisions, I believe that there are changes that need to be made to address some of the problematic provisions.

Let me be clear. I support giving law enforcement the tools necessary to aggressively fight terrorism but believe that modest modifications are required to ensure that we protect constitutional rights and properly balance civil liberties with national security concerns. To this end, in July the Senate unanimously passed a bipartisan bill that would reauthorize the PATRIOT Act with important safeguards in place to protect the rights of Americans. Although this bill wasn't perfect, it struck a reasonable balance between giving law enforcement the tools they need and protecting civil liberties.

When the PATRIOT Act was originally passed in 2001, Congress provided that some of the controversial provisions, such as section 215 which allows the Government access to library and medical records, would expire in 2006.

One example of where the current version of the bill falls short is with regard to section 215, the so-called library provision which allows the Government to obtain sensitive personal records, including library, business, and medical records, of Americans by merely saying that they are relevant to a terrorism investigation. This provides the Government almost unfettered authority to look at the personal records of Americans. Under the Senate-passed bill, the Government would have to demonstrate that the person whose records they are seeking has some connection to a suspected terrorist or spy.

In particular, the Government would have to show that, No. 1, the records pertain to a suspected terrorist or a spy; or No. 2, that the records pertain to an individual in contact with a suspected terrorist or a spy; or No. 3, that the records are relevant to the activities of a suspected terrorist or spy. It is reasonable to require that if the Government is going to look at the private records of Americans without a traditional warrant that the Government show at a minimum that the request for records has some connection to a terrorist and isn't just part of a fishing expedition.

In addition, when a person receives a section 215 order requesting medical records or library records, the person who receives this request is subject to an automatic and permanent gag order that prevents them from speaking about the order or challenging the gag order in court. Similar restrictions on challenging gag orders have been found to be unconstitutional and a violation of the first amendment.

Another section of the bill that is of great concern relates to national security letters, or NSLs. These requests for documents are similar to section 215 orders except that they do not require any court approval at all. Although a section 215 order needs to be approved by the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Court, a NSL is simply issued by the FBI, without any judicial review, to a business to obtain certain records, such as financial records, that it believes are relevant to a terrorism or intelligence investigation.

The conference report does allow a NSL recipient to challenge the NSL in court, but it also stipulates that regardless of whether there are national security concerns, all of the Government's submissions are secret and cannot be shared with the person challenging the order. And to be clear, the business being denied knowledge of the "governmental submissions" is not the target of the investigation but the recipient of the order for the requested documents.

Also the recipient of the NSL is subject to an automatic gag order. Although the gag order can be challenged in court, the only way to prevail is to demonstrate that the Government is acting in bad faith, a burden that is almost impossible to prove.

I also have concerns about other aspects of the conference report, such as the "sneak and peek" provision which allows law enforcement to search homes without notifying individuals of the search for an extended period of time.

This bill has profound implications on the constitutional rights of Americans, and I strongly believe that we shouldn't be hastily approving a bill that falls short of adequately protecting civil liberties.

Simply reauthorizing the most controversial provisions and saying that we will take another look at the bill in 4 years when the new sunset provisions expire is not the appropriate way to deal with this issue. It has been 4 years since the bill was enacted and it is time that Congress addresses the substantive problems with the act.

The Senate has demonstrated that it is prepared to reauthorize all of the expiring provisions, and there is no need to pass this version of the bill in its flawed form. I agree with Senator LEAHY that we should temporarily extend the PATRIOT Act for 3 months to give Congress more time to work out the remaining issues in a thoughtful way. It is my hope that a solution can be reached that reflects the common-sense improvements that were included in the Senate-passed version of the bill.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I rise today to speak about the Combat Meth Act. I am proud to be a cosponsor of the Combat Meth Act because it addresses a problem that impacts every aspect of our society. I was excited when the Combat Meth Act was included as part of the Commerce, Justice, State Appropriation bill this year, and I was extremely disappointed that it wasn't included in the final conference report. Though Senator LEAHY requested that the Combat Methamphetamine Epidemic Act be presented to the Senate as a freestanding bill, it is unfortunately included at the end of the PATRIOT Act.

So much has been said on the PATRIOT Act's civil liberty provisions, yet little has been said about the very important section of the conference report, the Combat Meth Act.

The methamphetamine problem in this country needs attention. Methamphetamine abuse has increased dramatically in recent years, reaching all corners of the United States. It is a very large problem in the State of Montana.

That is why I was pleased when the Senate gave methamphetamine the attention it deserved. And we worked together to produce a bipartisan bill.

The Senate Combat Meth Act provided greater regulations for methamphetamine, just what law enforcement officers asked us for. The Senate bill focused on regulation, monitoring, treatment, and prevention.

The conference report does not provide the same provisions we negotiated in the Senate for the Combat Meth Act. Though I support the ideas behind many sections of the conference report, including the restrictions on the allowable quantity purchasable, the requirement for over-the-counter medicines containing pseudoephedrine to be sold by a licensed pharmacist, and the establishment of a log book for these products, I still do not believe we have done enough to solve the methamphetamine problem.

In addition, the conference report changed the drug kingpin statute and lowered the eligibility thresholds for death sentences and mandatory life sentences. This is not what we need most. We need to work more on prevention.

Though I voted to oppose cloture on the PATRIOT Act, I support the Combat Meth Act and the need for legislation on this important issue. We must help solve the methamphetamine problem. Law enforcement officers depend on us. Methamphetamine addicts depend on us. And children of methamphetamine users depend on us to work together to bring this piece of legislation to the floor again.

I will work with my colleagues to make sure methamphetamine is a high priority issue when we come back after the New Year.

Mrs. CLINTON. Mr. President, in the wake of the September 11 terrorist attacks, this body came together—Republicans and Democrats alike—around the shared goal of preventing a similar tragedy from ever occurring again on our soil. Toward this end, Congress worked in a bipartisan manner to pass the provisions of the USA PATRIOT Act, legislation that expanded many of our laws, providing our Government and law enforcement with the tools needed to ably combat these threats. We understood then, as we do now, that these tools are important in our fight against terrorism. And because there is no greater responsibility that we bear as Members of this body than ensuring the safety of our citizens, I voted in favor of the USA PATRIOT Act in 2001 and supported its reauthorization when the Senate considered its bill earlier this year.

But even in the immediate aftermath of the September 11 tragedy, Congress recognized that in its haste to give law enforcement these expanded powers, there was a risk that this new authority was coming at the expense of constitutionally guaranteed rights and liberties. And so in the wisdom of both Republican and Democratic legislators, several provisions of the PATRIOT Act included 4-year sunsets, allowing Congress the opportunity to revisit whether the PATRIOT Act strikes the proper balance between securing our safety and ensuring our freedom.

I have very serious concerns that the current PATRIOT Act reauthorization conference report, which was negotiated largely without the input of Democrats, does not do enough to strike this proper balance. I believe that we can be both safe and free. The conference report falls well short of achieving that goal. I am hopeful that bipartisan negotiations can result in a compromise bill like the one agreed to in the Senate in July, a bill which did a far better job of protecting our civil liberties.

The current conference report fails in many respects.

Section 215 of the PATRIOT Act gives law enforcement in domestic intelligence investigations nearly limitless power to obtain all types of personal records, including business, library, and medical records. Under current law, the Government merely needs to demonstrate that the records it seeks are "sought for" a terrorism investigation. Upon such a showing, a secret court is required to issue the order. This is an extremely lenient standard, one that for the first time gives the Government almost unchecked access to the sensitive personal information of innocent Americans. To compound matters, the third parties—business, libraries, hospitals, and the like—who are recipients of these orders are subject to an automatic gag order. They cannot tell anyone that they have been asked for these records, including the person whose documents the Government is seeking.

Given its broad scope, this provision has tremendous potential for abuse. Innocent Americans should not be subjected to these possible intrusions when adequate safeguards can be written into the law, ones that would not sacrifice the utility of these orders as a law enforcement tool. Americans should not have to hope that the Government will demonstrate self-restraint in its exercise of this power, nor should they fear that their personal records will be part of a Government fishing expedition.

The Senate bill, which I supported, not only required the Government to meet a higher standard before issuing these orders, it also gave recipients of a FISA order an explicit and meaningful right to challenge these orders and their accompanying gag orders in court. The conference report sadly retains a variation of the current law's exceptionally lenient standard of review, a standard that effectively turns the courts into little more than a rubberstamp. Further, the conference report does not give the recipient of a FISA order any express right at all to seek meaningful judicial review of its gag order. Quite simply, the conference report places inadequate checks on these orders.

Another failure of the conference report was exposed in an article appearing in the Sunday, November 6, 2005 edition of The Washington Post, which brought to light a very troubling practice by the FBI that underscores the importance of adopting proper safeguards.

National security letters, NSLs, are administrative subpoenas that allow the FBI to obtain sensitive information about ordinary Americans in national security cases. NSLs are issued by FBI agents without the authorization or approval of a judge, grand jury or prosecutor. While the FBI has long employed NSLs, the PATRIOT Act greatly expanded their scope, significantly lowering the standard for their issuance. The result has been, according to The Washington Post, a "hundredfold increase" in their use, with the FBI annually issuing thousands of NSLs demanding private information about ordinary Americans not necessarily suspected of any crime. These records include financial, library, credit card, telephone, Internet service provider, and e-mail records as well as customer transaction information. These NSLs are governed by strict gag orders that prevent companies from telling their customers that their records were given to the FBI.

As this description suggests, NSLs are very similar to section 215 FISA orders but with one very critical difference—NSLs do not require the Government to get any court approval whatsoever. While NSLs can be an important tool in our fight against terrorism, their unfettered and unchecked use makes them susceptible to abuse that infringes upon the privacy of innocent people. The Senate version of the PATRIOT Act reauthorization bill created important checks on the power to issue and enforce NSLs—protections absent from the conference report—without hindering the effectiveness of this law enforcement tool.

Other sections of the conference report give rise to additional concerns. The conference report would give law enforcement the free-wheeling power to impose roving "John Doe" wiretaps without the safeguards needed to protect innocent Americans from unnecessary surveillance, casting aside important checks on this power that were included in the Senate bill. The report would also give the FBI the right to enter and search a home or business without providing notice to the owner of the residence or business for a month or longer after the search. And the conference report contains a provision that seriously curtails the habeas corpus rights of prisoners to challenge their convictions in court. This provision was in neither the House nor Senate bills, and there has been practically no debate on the merits of this change.

Apart from the serious civil liberties concerns, perhaps the greatest shortcoming of the conference report is its failure to incorporate a threat-and-risk-based formula for the allocation of critical homeland security funds to our local communities, States, and first responders. This deficiency was emphasized just last week by the former 9/11 Commission, which issued a blistering indictment of our homeland security failures.

As I said earlier, I have long maintained that protecting the security of our citizens and our homeland is the most important responsibility I bear as a Senator. To that end, I believe that to truly make America safe, we need to carefully allocate our homeland security resources. We need to make sure that the money gets to where it is needed, that our American cities and States living under the greatest threat receive the funding they need to protect themselves. Unfortunately, up until now, a substantial portion of our homeland security money has been allocated according to congressionally mandated formulas that bear little relation to need and risk.

Our resources should be dedicated to addressing our most glaring weaknesses. During their negotiations, I encouraged my House and Senate colleagues considering the PATRIOT Act reauthorization bill to account for this reality in our homeland security funding. I have maintained—as the former 9/11 Commission reiterated in its report last week—that lawmakers should cease playing politics with the allocation of our limited resources by promoting distribution formulas that ignore risk and threat. The Commission's report card was a condemnation of this administration and the Congress, both of whom have demonstrated far too little urgency in enacting the reforms needed to properly secure our homeland and fight the war on terror.

The former 9/11 Commission sent a clear, discernible message to the entire Nation last week—reform is needed at all levels of Government. The failure to incorporate in the PATRIOT Act conference report a much-needed threat-based formula for the allocation of homeland security funds is a major shortcoming and needs to be corrected.

As I noted at the outset, apart from these concerns, the PATRIOT Act contains provisions that provide law enforcement with important tools in the war on terror. Because we cannot afford to be without these tools, I am supporting bipartisan legislation that will extend the sunset provisions of the PATRIOT Act by 3 months. Just because we are coming up against the end of the year does not mean we should have to compromise the rights of law-abiding Americans. This extension will preserve the current state of the law on a temporary basis, giving those working on the bill the opportunity to craft a compromise that both safeguards our liberty and gives our law enforcement the capabilities they need to effectively combat and investigate terrorist threats. I am also hopeful that during this 3-month extension, those working on the reauthorization bill will heed the call of the former 9/11 Commission and include provisions that mandate the distribution of homeland security funds on the basis of threat and risk.

While we all recognize the importance of equipping our law enforcement with the tools they need to effectively combat terrorism, we also must ensure that those tools are administered in a manner that does not unnecessarily restrict the freedom and liberty that are the hallmark of American life. Like all Americans, I am troubled by recent reports that the President signed an order in 2002 that authorized the National Security Agency to conduct domestic spying on U.S. citizens and foreign nationals in the United States, despite legal prohibitions against such activity. Likewise, I am disturbed by recent reports that the Department of Defense is maintaining a database in order to monitor the activity of peaceful antiwar groups. The balance between the urgent goal of combating terrorism and the safeguarding of our most fundamental constitutional freedoms is not always an easy one to draw. However, they are not incompatible, and unbridled and unchecked executive power is not the answer.

I believe the conference report falls short of this goal, and I am hopeful that with more time, those negotiating these provisions will find the proper balance.

Mr. PRYOR. Mr. President, I would like to state for the record that I am disappointed we were not able to pass a version of the PATRIOT Act today. My vote against cloture should not be viewed as a vote against the PATRIOT Act. It should be seen as a vote for balance.

I think most Americans want legislation that keeps us safer from the threat of terrorism, but they also want their civil liberties protected. The version of the PATRIOT Act, which passed the Senate earlier this year with my support, struck that balance. Unfortunately, the conference report we have before us today does not. This conference report is invasive and vague. It takes focus off of preventing terrorism instead permitting government fishing expeditions that invade the privacy of all Americans.

My vote against cloture should not be seen as a parliamentary move to kill this bill. I am voting today to allow conferees more time to get it right. I join my colleagues in a bipartisan push to extend the current PATRIOT Act 3 months so that the problems that brought this bill down can be resolved. It is my hope that the distinguished majority leader allows us to move forward with a vote on this extension.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Pennsylvania.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, let me agree with Senators who have spoken out very sharply in opposition to the disclosures in the press this morning about "President Bush Lets U.S. Spy on Callers Without Courts." That is wrong, clearly and categorically wrong.

If you read some of the fine print, there are some indications that there were some level heads within the executive branch. If you get down into the fine print—it takes a lot of reading beyond page 1 and the other headlines—this appears:

[I]n mid-2004, concerns about the program expressed by national security officials, government lawyers and a judge prompted the Bush administration to suspend elements of the program and revamp it.

Later the article says:

Several national security officials say the powers granted the N.S.A. by President Bush go far beyond the expanded counterterrorism powers granted by Congress under the USA PATRIOT Act. . . .

There is no doubt that this is inappropriate. The chief judge of the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Court stepped in and said: Don't provide this court with any information you got this way to get a warrant. Just don't do it.

So if you read the fine print, there were some parts of the system which were working. But it is inexcusable to have spying on people in the United States without court surveillance in violation of our law, beyond any question. And I can tell you that this will be a matter for oversight by the Judiciary Committee as soon as we can get to it in the new year—a very high priority item.

I might add, by way of addendum, that on a morning when we come to have a vote on the PATRIOT Act, it is a little disconcerting to see these headlines. It is not very good publicity with a broad brush as to what the Government is doing. The editorials are frequently published on the day the Senate is to vote. Somebody suggested that the news story, which had been held back by more than a year, was timed as well. I certainly would not want to suggest that.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Pennsylvania yields back.

The Senator from Vermont.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished Senator from New Hampshire, Mr. SUNUNU.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Hampshire is recognized for 3 minutes.

Mr. SUNUNU. Thank you, Mr. President.

As was indicated by Senator CRAIG, this is not a last-minute effort to derail a piece of legislation. These are concerns that began with the introduction of the SAFE Act nearly 2 years ago and our goal was and still is to make improvements to the PATRIOT Act, and to ensure that it better protects civil liberties without undermining law enforcement's ability to do their job in terrorist investigations.

I met with the Attorney General after he was confirmed. I know Senator CRAIG and others did the same thing. I spoke to senior White House staff not weeks, or months, but as long as a year ago and underscored the importance of sitting down and working through the legislation. I made very specific recommendations in just a few key areas of the PATRIOT Act and indicated that we could come to an agreement on a strong bipartisan bill.

I heard effectively nothing in response to that request. Moreover, even after all of our requests, no substantive material has been provided to argue how our specific changes would weaken or undermine law enforcement's ability to do its job in pursuing terrorists. A standard should be to put in place which will protect civil liberties no matter who holds the power in the executive, the legislative or the judicial branches.

So we are here today with a conference report that has many shortcomings, including a 215 standard that is too broad and could potentially be abused. There is no reason why we cannot clarify it to assure a connection to a specific spy or a terrorist. The conference report also has no meaningful judicial review of national security letters. Specifically there is a gag order requirement on national security letters that can only be overturned by a showing of bad faith on the part of the Federal Government. This is a requirement that will never be met by any individual or small business.

There is no judicial review explicit of the 215 gag order in the bill. This section requires that all evidence from the recipient of a 215 order is kept, even if that evidence is unclassified. It requires that if you are the target of one of these orders you must identify any lawyer you speak with to the FBI. To the best of my knowledge, this is a provision that exists nowhere else in law and could have a chilling effect on the individual's right to counsel. But more importantly it is unclear how eliminating this provision, and allowing one who receives a 215 warrant or national security letter to have the same right to counsel as anyone who is served with a normal subpoena undermines our ability to fight terrorism. We should not be afraid of a judicial review or setting the appropriate standards of evidence. We need to be mindful of Ben Franklin's words over 200 years ago: Those who would give up essential liberty in the pursuit of a little temporary security deserve neither liberty nor security.

We could pass a 6-month extension or take up the Senate bill which is on the calendar and still respect important freedoms. We need to be more vigilant and we can do better.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I yield up to 3 minutes to another member of the conference, the distinguished Senator from Michigan.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is recognized.

Mr. LEVIN. I thank my friend from Vermont.

Mr. President, when this bill left the Senate, under the leadership of Senators SPECTER and LEAHY, we had a balanced bill with provisions which protected both our security and our liberty. We are all very much in their debt for the bill that left the Senate a few months ago. But what now has come back to the Senate is a bill which contains provisions which could sweep into the net of a fishing expedition the most private records of innocent Americans. The conference report amends section 215 of the PATRIOT Act. This is one of many examples, and 3 minutes only allows one example. Section 215 permits the Government to seek court orders, to compel the production of any tangible thing, including library and medical records, in foreign intelligence investigations. Under the new provision, the Government need not describe, much less identify, a particular person to whom the records relate. The PATRIOT Act's standard in the conference report fails to narrow the scope of records that the Government can subpoena to less than the entire universe of records of people who, for instance, patronize the library or visit a doctor's office.

One example of that: The Government could seek all of a doctor's records, if it has an allegation that some unidentified patient of the doctor was sending money to an organization in the Middle East that was being looked at as part of a foreign intelligence investigation and the government thought that reviewing all of the records of that doctor might help identify that unidentified person.

Therefore, the Government argues, all of that doctor's records are relevant to a foreign intelligence investigation.

The same thing with library records; all of a library's records would be subject to being turned over to the Government if the Government has an allegation that somebody, one unidentified person, is using that library for some purpose; for instance, its computer, to have access to some organization in the Middle East that is involved in a terrorist organization. Everybody's library records would be swept into that net.

When this bill left the Senate, it had protective provisions against that. There had to be a showing, not just of relevance to a foreign intelligence investigation, there had to be a showing that the records sought were relevant and either pertained to a foreign power or an agent of a foreign power, were relevant to the activities of a suspected agent of a foreign power who is the subject of an authorized investigation, or pertained to an individual in contact with or known to be a suspected agent. In other words, the order had to be linked to some identifiable individual or suspected agent. Those protections are missing.

This is not the first time that Congress has addressed this issue. For instance, the Internal Revenue Code places limitations on what it calls "John Doe" summons for the production of certain taxpayer records.

Under 26 U.S.C. 2709 any summons which:

Does not identify the person with respect to whose liability the summons is issued may be served only after a court proceeding in which the Secretary establishes that—

(1) the summons relates to the investigation of a particular person or ascertainable group or class of persons,

(2) there is a reasonable basis for believing that such person or group or class of persons may fail or may have failed to comply with any provision of any internal revenue law, and

(3) the information sought to be obtained from the examination of the records or testimony (and the identity of the person or persons with respect to whose liability the summons is issued) is not readily available from other sources.

Some kind of narrowing language should be included in the Patriot Act for 215 orders. Without it, the PATRIOT Act authorizes the rankest kind of fishing expedition.

In addition to the problem with the standard for issuing 215 order, a gag order can be imposed by the FBI to prevent the library from telling people that their records were turned over. That means innocent Americans might never know that the government was looking into their reading habits or medical records. Further, while some argue that the recipient of a gag order in court, the conference report is not at all clear on this point. During staff negotiations, language that would have clarified the right to challenge a gag order was rejected. The idea of a permanent, unreviewable restraint on the First Amendment rights of American citizens is deeply troubling.

To add insult to injury, if the library wanted to seek legal advice, this conference report requires the library to tell the government who it had consulted even if the lawyer consulted had turned down the case.

The conference report is similarly flawed in its treatment of National Security Letters or NSLs. NSLs compel phone companies and banks, for example, to turn over certain customer records. The government can issue an NSL without going to court. And, like 215 court orders, NSLs can be issued without identifying anyone in particular that the government suspects is a terrorist or spy. Again, the government does not have to show any connection between the records sought and a person who the government thinks is a terrorist or spy. And like 215 orders, the government can impose a gag order on the recipient of an NSL.

While the conference report does permit recipients of NSLs to challenge gag orders in court, it severely constrains the court's discretion to review the gag order, potentially rendering the review meaningless. Under the conference report, if the Attorney General or another specified senior official certifies that disclosure may endanger national security or harm diplomatic relations, the court may modify or set it aside only if it finds "bad faith" on behalf of the government.

And, like 215 court orders, if the recipient of an NSL wanted to seek legal advice before turning over records, the conference report would require the recipient to tell the government who they had consulted.

Also troubling about the NSL authority is that there is no requirement that the government destroy records acquired with an NSL that are irrelevant to the investigation under which they've been gathered. These are records that relate to innocent Americans. The government should be required to destroy them if they contain no relevant material.

I outlined many of my concerns in a December 7th letter to the Chairman and Ranking member of the Senate Judiciary Committee. I'd ask consent that a copy of that letter be placed in the record.

As I and my fellow Senate Democratic conferees said in a December 8th letter to the Chairmen of the House and Senate Judiciary Committees, the conference report falls short of what the American people have every reason to expect Congress to achieve in defending their rights while advancing their security. Congress should not rush ahead to enact flawed legislation to meet a deadline that is within our power to extend. We owe it to the American people to get this right. If three more months are needed to make this an acceptable bill, then we should take and prudently use that time.

I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a letter dated December 7, 2005.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

U.S. SENATE,

Washington, DC, December 7, 2005.

Senator ARLEN SPECTER,
Chairman, Senate Judiciary Committee, Dirksen
Senate Office Building, Washington, DC.

Senator PATRICK LEAHY,
Ranking Member, Senate Judiciary Committee,
Dirksen Senate Office Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR CHAIRMAN SPECTER: The USA PATRIOT Act responded to the terrorist attacks of September 11th by giving law enforcement agencies important new tools to use in combating terrorism. However, as I said when the Senate passed the bill, the PATRIOT Act is not perfect. The bill's sunset provisions give us the opportunity to revisit the law so we can both protect national security and the civil liberties of American citizens.

As we have discussed, I am troubled that, in some important areas, the most recent draft of the conference report fails to achieve that goal. Some of my concerns are described below.

Standard for 215 court orders—The bill passed by the Senate achieved a reasonable middle ground between the standard that existed prior to the PATRIOT Act and that which the PATRIOT Act established for the FBI to access sensitive records of American citizens with Section 215 orders. These orders can compel things like library records that reveal the reading habits of American citizens and sensitive medical records. While technical changes to the Senate-passed language may be warranted, I am concerned that the draft conference report eliminates the nexus required in the Senate-passed bill between the records sought and the target of an investigation. I believe that the relevance standard, which the conference report would instead establish for access to these records, does not cure the problem.

Nondisclosure requirements for 215 court orders—The most recent draft conference report permits the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) to attach nondisclosure requirements to a 215 court order but does not permit recipients of such orders to challenge those nondisclosure requirements in court. I am troubled by what could amount to a permanent, unreviewable restraint on the First Amendment rights of American citizens. I am also troubled that, while the draft permits recipients of 215 orders to disclose the receipt of such an order to a lawyer to obtain legal advice, it requires recipients to tell the FBI, if asked, from whom they have sought or plan to seek legal advice on how to respond to the order.

Nondisclosure requirements for National Security Letters (NSLs)—The most recent draft conference report permits recipients to challenge nondisclosure requirements attached to NSLs. However, under the draft report, the court may only modify or set aside an NSL nondisclosure requirement if there is no reason to believe that disclosure may endanger national security, interfere with an investigation, diplomatic relations or endanger the life or physical safety of a person. In addition, if the Attorney General or another specified senior official certifies that disclosure may endanger national security or harm diplomatic relations, the court's discretion to modify or set aside the nondisclosure requirement is virtually eliminated. In addition, like 215 orders, the draft permits recipients to disclose the receipt of an NSL to a lawyer to obtain legal advice, but also requires recipients to tell the FBI, if asked, from whom they have sought or plan to seek legal advice on how to respond to the order.

Destruction of irrelevant NSL records—The latest draft conference report contains no requirement that the government destroy records acquired with an NSL that are irrelevant to the investigation under which they were gathered. The government should be required to "minimize" the records of innocent American citizens that are acquired through the issuance of an NSL.

Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely,

CARL LEVIN.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that an additional 5 minutes be given to each side.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to adding 5 minutes to each side?

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, if they need more time, I am glad to agree with the distinguished ranking member.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I yield 4 minutes to the distinguished Senator from Wisconsin.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Wisconsin.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Vermont, not only for yielding time but for his tremendous leadership on this issue. I am deeply grateful for it.

Let me echo what Senator KENNEDY said.

This morning we saw an astounding story in the New York Times. Since 2002, the Government has been reportedly wiretapping the international phone and e-mail conversations of hundreds, even thousands of people inside the United States without wiretap orders. If you want to talk about abuses, I can't imagine a more shocking example of an abuse of power, to eavesdrop on American citizens without first getting a court order based on some evidence that they are possibly criminals, terrorists, or spies. It is truly astonishing to read that this administration would go this far beyond the bounds of the statutes and the Constitution. We, as an institution, have a duty and the obligation to get to the bottom of this.

I hope this morning's revelation drives home to people that this body must be absolutely vigilant in its oversight of Government power. I don't want to hear again from the Attorney General or anyone on this floor that this Government has shown it can be trusted to use the power we give it with restraint and care. This shocking revelation ought to send a chill down the spine of every Senator and every American.

When we look at section 215 of the PATRIOT Act, remember this is the section where Attorney General Ashcroft once said that librarians concerned about the privacy rights of their patrons were "hysterical." But then the Attorney General conceded at his nomination hearing in the Senate Judiciary Committee that some changes would be justified. Unfortunately, the administration was not willing to make the real changes to that provision that are necessary to protect the rights and freedoms of innocent Americans.

The provisions of the bill related to national security letters are also deficient. There is no requirement that the records sought under that authority, which doesn't involve a court at all, have some connection to a suspected terrorist or spy. The judicial review that the conference report allows after the fact of the national security letter itself and the mandatory gag order is a mirage. After what the Times reported this morning, no one in this body should be comfortable with a government having this kind of unreviewable power.

This conference report is inadequate, and it should not be passed. I believe it will not pass.

Let me talk, finally, to what happens if the cloture motion fails. Do those who oppose the conference report want the PATRIOT Act to expire? Of course not. It is false to suggest that we do, and it is shameful to threaten that that is what will happen if the Senate does not approve this conference report. The only way the PATRIOT Act will expire at the end of this year is if the proponents of the conference report in this body or the other body block alternative reauthorization bills that can easily pass with widespread bipartisan support. Now is not the time for brinkmanship or threats. Now is the time to do the right thing for the American people and for the constitutional rights and freedoms that make our country great.

I am very proud to be part of a bipartisan coalition working together to strengthen protections for civil liberties in the PATRIOT Act. The demonstration of bipartisanship on this floor over the last few days has been simply remarkable. We have stayed together ever since our bill, the SAFE Act, was first introduced. We knew that a time would come when we would have to take a stand. Now we have. We are united today, as we were then.

This is not a partisan issue. This is an American issue. This is a constitutional issue. We can come together to give the Government the tools it needs to fight terrorism and protect the rights and freedoms of innocent citizens, and we can do this before the end of this year. But first we must keep this inadequate conference report from becoming law by voting no on cloture.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Vermont.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I yield up to 3 minutes to the distinguished Senator from Colorado.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Colorado is recognized for 3 minutes.

Mr. SALAZAR. Mr. President, once again I thank the distinguished Senator from Vermont and the distinguished Senator from Pennsylvania for their leadership on this effort. I wish to take this opportunity to once again express my serious concerns about the PATRIOT Act conference report that is currently before the Senate.

As I stated yesterday, as a former attorney general, I am very familiar with the needs of the more than 800,000 men and women working in law enforcement throughout our country, including those engaged in the fight against terrorism. For that reason, I support extending all the expiring powers of the USA PATRIOT Act.

I firmly believe we can extend those powers while at the same time providing sufficient checks on those powers to protect America's fundamental civil liberties. That is what the bipartisan SAFE Act did. That is what the bipartisan, unanimously supported Senate bill did. That is what this conference report could have done if it simply addressed the modest concerns my colleagues and I laid out in our letter to conferees with respect to section 215, national security letters, and sneak-and-peek searches.

Unfortunately, these concerns were not addressed in the conference report, and I am left with no choice but to work with my colleagues, both Democrats and Republicans, to defeat the bill before us.

This morning, the Washington Post and New York Times reported that President Bush signed an Executive order authorizing the National Security Agency to eavesdrop on American citizens without a warrant. These reports suggest that the phone calls and e-mails of hundreds, perhaps even thousands, of Americans have been monitored over the past 3 years without the approval of a judge or even the approval of the secret FISA court. These allegations, if true, are deeply troubling. If we needed a wake-up call about the need for adequate civil liberties protections to be written into our laws, this is the wake-up call.

The bill before us does not contain the needed protections. We still have the time to get it right. Several of my colleagues and I have introduced legislation to extend the current PATRIOT Act for 3 months so we can get back to the table and make the necessary and vital improvements that will protect our rights under our Constitution.

I urge my colleagues to vote against invoking cloture and in favor of giving Congress the time it needs to preserve the basic rights and freedoms of all Americans.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Pennsylvania.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, permit me to interject very briefly just to correct some of the misstatements which have been made that crop up again and again. This bill is not understood. This bill is not understood by Senators who are making representations on the floor which are not correct. I don't suggest they are doing it deliberately, but they don't know the bill.

The argument has been made that the recipient of a national security letter has to tell the FBI the identity of his lawyer. That is simply not true.

The conference report reads:

In no circumstance shall a person be required to inform the Director of the FBI or such designee that the person intends to consult an attorney to obtain legal advice or legal assistance.

The representation is made here again and again that in section 215, there does not have to be a connection to a terrorism investigation or someone suspected of being a terrorist. The conference report does add a provision to the three criteria for foreign power, but the court has to make a determination on a factual showing that there is a terrorism investigation that does involve foreigners and that records are sought from another person, albeit not identified with one of the three criteria, in order to carry on the investigation.

Again and again, the essence of the protection of civil rights traditionally has been that you interpose an impartial magistrate between the policeman and the citizen, and that protection is given under section 215.

The argument has been made repeatedly that under the national security letter, there is no review. That is simply not the case. The recipient goes to a lawyer who can challenge the national security letter in court and have it quashed, eliminated, dispensed with, on a showing that it is unreasonable.

If you get to the national security issue, then it is different with respect to a bad-faith showing. There is judicial review beforehand on the very broad term of being unreasonable, which is a hallmark of American law in auto accident cases and antitrust cases every time you turn around. The reasonable standard is traditional under our law.

I yield to the Senator from Arizona, who has requested 2 minutes, and he can take whatever time he chooses.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arizona is recognized.

Mr. KYL. Mr. President, I compliment the Senator from Pennsylvania on a job exceedingly well done in trying to find a way that we can reauthorize the PATRIOT Act, with very emotional feelings on all sides of the issue and working through very difficult compromises, especially after the conference committee in which it would appear to me—and I think even our colleagues who oppose the bill would agree—the end result is probably about 80 percent Senate product and about 20 percent House product.

This is a defining moment. There are no more compromises to be made, no more extensions of time. The bill is what it is now, and it is very unfair and unrealistic to expect that either the House of Representatives would concede to the Senate position 100 percent or that the President would do so after what he has now said. As a result, we are going to have an opportunity to vote yes or no.

One of my colleagues said this is not a partisan issue. If 90-plus percent of the Democrats vote against cloture and 90-plus percent of the Republicans vote for cloture, it is hard to argue that is not partisan. It is true that this should not be a partisan issue, but having worked through it to the extent we have, and having had the very strong support in the House of Representatives with over I think it was 44 Democrats in the House of Representatives voting for reauthorization of the PATRIOT Act, it seems to me that the Senate would do well to also try to act here in a more bipartisan way and not to have a partisan vote.

We need to reauthorize the PATRIOT Act. It is the tool for our law enforcement and intelligence agencies to help protect us from terrorists. Just as we send our men and women into battle with good training and equipment, we have to do the same thing with law enforcement and our intelligence agencies. If we deny them the key tool, the PATRIOT Act, they are not going to be able to do their job to protect us. And there is no more time to stretch this out with maybes or let's negotiate more, and so on. This act will expire on December 31. My colleagues either vote yes to reauthorize it or no, not to reauthorize it. There is no middle ground.

I will say this as directly and seriously as I can. I doubt there is anyone in this Chamber today who would argue with the proposition that we needed to tear down the wall between the law enforcement and intelligence agencies. The PATRIOT Act does that. The wall goes right back up again on January 1. Is that what we want? God help us if there is some kind of terrorist attack when we are not protected by the PATRIOT Act and the act could have enabled our law enforcement or our intelligence people to help protect us. We will have to answer for that if we don't vote to extend the PATRIOT Act.

I implore my colleagues to put partisanship aside, to consider the fact that not everybody can get 100 percent of what they want, to recognize that the House of Representatives has made a tremendous concession to us, whether you talk about the period of time, the section 215 concessions, and, of course, the sunset concessions.

I found it very difficult myself to sign the conference report because, frankly, we had made it so difficult for law enforcement to do its job with some of the compromises that were made, but they were made in order to achieve a consensus on which we could vote. Now we find that consensus in jeopardy.

Mr. President, I urge my colleagues to think very carefully about what they are about to do. If they vote against cloture, they are voting to allow the PATRIOT Act to expire. We will not have that tool available for law enforcement and intelligence agencies to protect us from terrorists. Is that what you want? I daresay the American people will hold us accountable if anything happens and we are not able to reauthorize the PATRIOT Act.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Pennsylvania.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, before the Senator from Arizona sits down, I wish to ask him a question to further elaborate upon a point he has made.

The President has said that he is not going to sign an extension of 3 months or, by implication, any extension of time. So if the conference report is not adopted so the President can sign it, there will be no PATRIOT Act in effect after December 31.

The Senator from Arizona has talked about the wall.

The Senator was on the Intelligence Committee the day he came to the Senate. He was elected in 1994. I chaired the Intelligence Committee of the 104th Congress. He has been on it. He has been on Judiciary. He has been a leader on this measure. As the Senator said, he had trouble signing the conference report. By the way, I thank him for signing the conference report. Without his signature, we could not have filed it.

As to the other provisions beside the wall, if the PATRIOT Act lapses, and there is none, what will the effect be on the fight against terrorism?

Mr. KYL. Mr. President, I thank the chairman for his remarks. We know of two stories that the 9/11 Commission wrote following the investigation into what went wrong. What they found was that there was not only the wall that separated our intelligence and law enforcement officials from being able to speak to each other, but other problems with the law that we corrected with the PATRIOT Act. Had the PATRIOT Act been in effect prior to 9/11, it is possible that not all of or even part of 9/11 would have happened.

There are two specific stories. One related to Zacarias Moussaoui, the other related to two fellows by the name of Hazmi and al Mihdhar. These were the fellows who used library computers to verify their airline reservations on 9/11. We knew that they were connected—well, one agency with the Government knew that they were connected with the al-Qaida. The other agency knew that they had tried to come into the United States and decided that maybe we should try to find them but had no idea how important it was to try to find them. And had we been able to be on their tail at this time and find out that they were verifying airline reservations on September 11, knowing that they were connected to al-Qaida and were up to no good, history might well be different than it is today.

How on Earth we could allow the corrections in the law that we put in place as a result of our investigation to lapse is beyond me. The terrorists have not stopped their efforts to attack us, and largely we have been free from attack because of things such as the PATRIOT Act.

So the chairman is exactly right. We corrected the errors that were brought to our attention that prevented us from doing what needed to be done before September 11. That is what this PATRIOT Act conference report is all about. The act needs to be reauthorized. Our people need that tool to protect us. Why would we allow it to lapse, especially on a partisan basis? We need to think very carefully about what we are about to do. I hope for the sake of the American people and our security that the Senate will act responsibly and ensure that the PATRIOT Act will continue to protect us and not allow it to lapse.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the mandatory quorum under rule XXII be waived.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Vermont.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, as I said earlier, I do not question the patriotism or the intent to stop terrorists of either those who vote for or those who vote against cloture. I hope others would not. If we wanted to make this a partisan thing, we could have brought out the fact that even under the laws that existed before 9/11, it was this administration's Department of Justice that ignored clear warnings and evidence that they had, which the 9/11 Commission and others have pointed out might well have prevented the terrorist attacks. That could have been done with or without the PATRIOT Act.

All of us rallied behind the administration, even though the attack occurred during this administration and the attack occurred even though this administration's Department of Justice had information which might have stopped the attack.

I yield 3 minutes to the distinguished Senator from New York, Mr. SCHUMER.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New York is recognized for 3 minutes.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, first I want to thank both my colleagues from Pennsylvania and from Vermont for their fine efforts on this legislation. I went to bed last night unsure of how to vote on this legislation. I want to give a lot of credit to my colleague from Pennsylvania. This is a significant improvement over present law. It is a significant improvement over the House bill and comes a lot closer to the Senate bill than many are giving it credit for. On the other hand, even before last night, I had real doubts that we did not correct the formula in terms of distributing aid which definitely hurts my State of New York. But as I said, I went to bed undecided.

Today's revelation that the Government listened in on thousands of phone conversations without getting a warrant is shocking and has greatly influenced my vote. If this Government will discard a law that has worked well for over 30 years, without a whit of discussion or notice, then for sure we better be certain that we have safeguards on that Government. The balance between security and liberty is a delicate one, and there is great room for disagreement as to where that ought to come down.

I do not question the motives of anybody. I tend to be fairly hawkish on these types of things, as my colleagues know. But there is one thing for sure: there ought to be discussion, there ought to be debate. Whenever there is discussion and debate, we usually come out right, and that is true on the wiretap law. When J. Edgar Hoover and other leaders of the FBI had unchecked power, there were abuses. We put in an independent arbiter, a judge. We put in a standard, probable cause, and neither the prosecutor community nor the defense community has complained.

So then why, with the flick of a wrist, did this administration ignore those laws and listen in on conversations of hundreds of people when it would have been so easy to obey the law? Today's revelation makes it crystal clear that we have to be very careful, and Senator LEAHY's suggestion that we renew the present law for 3 months and come to an agreement like we did in the Senate that all can live with is eminently sensible.

One final point. My good friend from Arizona and I respect the sincerity on this issue. We have written parts of this law together, particularly the lone wolf provision. But he says that we will have no law if we do not vote for cloture.

I ask unanimous consent for an additional 30 seconds.

Mr. LEAHY. Yes, with 30 given on the other side.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator is recognized for 30 minutes.

Mr. SCHUMER. Thirty minutes, I will take that.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is out of order. The Senator is recognized for 30 seconds.

Mr. SCHUMER. I thank the chair for his generosity.

If cloture is not invoked and the opportunity to renew this law for 3 months or 6 months comes before us, and the President vetoes it, it will be crystal clear that he is putting politics above safety because the bottom line is, the present law is, if anything, tougher than the law that is on the books.

Let us not invoke the threat that the President will not extend the PATRIOT Act. It would be a dereliction of his duty as Commander in Chief and chief law enforcement officer of this land.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Vermont.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, it has been claimed that somehow the so-called wall between law enforcement and intelligence would go back up if the PATRIOT Act expires. That is not true. Even if the relevant change made by the PATRIOT Act expired, there would be no legal barrier to information-sharing, and no wall would go back up, because FISA as it existed pre-PATRIOT Act contained no such barrier. So ruled the FISA court of review in November 2002 at the request of the government. It held that the change we made in the PATRIOT Act to take down the wall was not necessary, that FISA never required a wall, and that the Department of Justice unnecessarily imposed bureaucratic constraints on sharing information. So let us not delude ourselves into thinking that somehow the wall goes back up if PATRIOT expires. It does not. It was not legally required in the first place.

How much time do I have remaining?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has 2 minutes 48 seconds.

Mr. LEAHY. I yield it to the distinguished Senator from Illinois.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Illinois is recognized.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Vermont for yielding the time and for his leadership on this issue. I voted for the PATRIOT Act. It was a bit of a leap of faith because I was not sure. I did not know if we were giving the Government more authority and more power than it needed to keep America safe, but I felt, as most Americans did, that in light of September 11, we had to do more to make America safer.

The Senator from Vermont, along with the Senator from Utah, came together on a bipartisan basis and produced a PATRIOT Act to give the Government more tools to fight terrorism. In their wisdom, they understood that perhaps we had moved too far and too fast, and they said at the end of 4 years we would revisit this law and make sure that we had not given up more personal freedom in America than we had to be safe, and that is why we are here today.

In the meantime, I joined with a bipartisan coalition, an interesting coalition when one looks at our political spectrum in the Senate. I joined with my friend, LARRY CRAIG of Idaho, Senator JOHN SUNUNU, Senator LISA MURKOWSKI, Senator RUSS FEINGOLD, and Senator KEN SALAZAR in a bipartisan coalition that has been working to reform the PATRIOT Act for over two years. We studied the PATRIOT Act very carefully and came to the conclusion that certain provisions did not contain adequate safeguards to protect the rights and liberties of Americans. That is why we introduced the SAFE Act.

It was our efforts together in the Senate Judiciary Committee and the good leadership of the Senator from Pennsylvania as its chairman that resulted in a bill that came out of that committee unanimously. It was a bipartisan bill that came to the floor to reauthorize the PATRIOT Act and passed on the floor by a voice vote. It was not perfect, but it was a consensus, bipartisan, compromise bill. Then, sadly, it went into a conference committee where the most important safeguards were removed, which brings us to this moment in time.

Let me salute the Senator from Pennsylvania. He has argued this issue on its substance. He has not argued it politically. But he has said during the course of this debate that there have been no verified abuses of the PATRIOT Act. I would say to my friend from Pennsylvania, it is not the burden of the American people to prove that their rights have been violated. That's not how the American legal system works. We should build in checks and balances to ensure that abuses do not take place in the first instance.

Moreover, it is difficult to find verified abuses of the PATRIOT Act when so many provisions are cloaked in secrecy. In most cases, people will never learn that their medical, tax, or gun records have been seized. An individual who receives a Section 215 order or a National Security Letter is bound by a gag order so he cannot speak out, even if he believes his rights have been violated.

Now today's headlines suggest this administration went beyond the pale in authorizing hundreds and perhaps thousands of warrantless wiretaps on Americans in the United States. This violates the long-standing legal requirement that the government must obtain a warrant from a court in order to eavesdrop on Americans in the United States.

If these stories are true, it makes the PATRIOT Act reforms we have suggested even more urgent, and additional reforms may be necessary. But it is certainly premature to approve this flawed conference report before we learn more about these allegations.

The obvious question is this: Whether or not we pass the PATRIOT Act, will the administration argue they have the authority to go forward, anyway?

What we need to do is to defeat cloture, pass a 3-month extension of this PATRIOT Act, and move on to make changes to the law that are needed to protect our freedom while giving law enforcement the authority they need to fight terrorism. We can be both safe and free in America.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time of the Senator has expired.

The Senator from Pennsylvania has 47 seconds.

Mr. SPECTER. I shall use it. Another correction. The Senator from Illinois incorrectly says I have argued that there have been no abuses of the PATRIOT Act. I have never made that representation. I don't think you are entitled to credit for not being abusive. That is to be expected. If you have not been abusive, don't look for credit. That is what you ought to be: not abusive. I have not made that argument.

My arguments have been limited squarely to the threat of terrorism, and the balance of civil liberties on an itemized approach, one by one by one by one, that this is a balanced bill.

How much time do I have?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has 5 seconds remaining.

Mr. SPECTER. I yield the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. All time has been yielded under the previous order.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, on leader time?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority leader.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, the PATRIOT Act expires on December 31, but the terrorist threat does not. We have a clear choice before us today: Do we advance against terrorism to make America safer or do we retreat to the days before 9/11, when terrorists slipped through the cracks. Advance or retreat? It is as simple as that.

Some Members of Congress have called for a retreat-and-defeat strategy in Iraq, and that is the wrong strategy in Iraq, and it is the wrong strategy here at home. A vote against the PATRIOT Act amounts to retreat and defeat here at home, against terrorism. To those who still harbor concerns with this bill, I have a simple reply: We have more to fear from terrorists than this PATRIOT Act compromise.

The compromise includes more civil liberty safeguards than in current law, more congressional oversight, more judicial review. The same people who criticize the lack of civil liberties in current law are arguing for a 3-month extension. That makes no sense.

It is time to come together to advance, not retreat, from terrorist threats. I urge my colleagues to vote yes, to advance against terrorism, to make America safer, and to safeguard our civil liberties.

CLOTURE MOTION

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the clerk will report the motion to invoke cloture.

The bill clerk read as follows:

CLOTURE MOTION

We the undersigned Senators, in accordance with the provisions of rule XXII of the Standing Rules of the Senate, do hereby move to bring to a close debate on the Conference Report to accompany H.R. 3199: The U.S. PATRIOT Terrorism Prevention Reauthorization Act of 2005:

The PRESIDING OFFICER. By unanimous consent the mandatory quorum call has been waived.

The question is, Is it the sense of the Senate that debate on the conference report to accompany H.R. 3199, the U.S. PATRIOT Terrorism Prevention Reauthorization Act of 2005, shall be brought to a close?

The yeas and nays are mandatory under the rule. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk called the roll.

NOT VOTING—1

Dodd

The PRESIDING OFFICER. On this vote, the yeas are 52, the nays are 47. Three-fifths of the Senators duly chosen and sworn not having voted in the affirmative, the motion is rejected.

The majority leader.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I now enter a motion to reconsider the vote by which cloture was not invoked.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The motion to reconsider is entered.

The Senator from Vermont.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I discussed this with the distinguished majority leader. I will make this unanimous-consent request.

UNANIMOUS-CONSENT REQUEST—S. 2082

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Judiciary Committee be discharged from further consideration of S. 2082, the 3-month extension of the PATRIOT Act, that the Senate proceed to its immediate consideration, the bill be read a third time and passed, and the motion to reconsider be laid on the table. And I do that because that would keep the PATRIOT Act in existence after December 31.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. FRIST. Reserving the right to object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority leader.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, as I stated earlier this morning and yesterday, I oppose a short-term extension of the PATRIOT Act. The House opposes such an extension. The President will not sign such an extension. Why? Because extending the PATRIOT Act for a short period of time simply does not do enough. The same people who criticized the lack of civil liberties safeguards in current law are arguing for an extension. That does not make sense.

This compromise we have discussed over the last several days does address more civil liberty safeguards than current law, more congressional oversight, more judicial review. Thus, I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

The Senator from Vermont.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, we are at an interesting point. We have seen an enormous amount of work done by the distinguished senior Senator from Pennsylvania, who has worked in good faith with members on both sides of the aisle; and, I might say, it has been done with a great deal of work by myself, but also it has been done with a great deal of work by those who both supported cloture and opposed cloture.

Now, one thing that should unite all of us is our opposition to terrorism. We would not serve in this body, actually in this building that faced a possible devastating terrorist attack, if we did not care both for our country and for the Senate and for the Capitol.

But there are ways of securing our liberties and ways in which it can appear we are but, instead, we are taking them away. We saw this amazing step in today's news, where Americans are being spied on, not through any court order, not through any act of Congress, not with any oversight, not with any check and balance, but simply by a stroke of the pen of the President, following the advice of the same people in the Department of Justice who advised him that torture was legal.

We have rejected the concept that torture is legal. We should reject the concept that we can have Americans spy on Americans with no checks and balances in a free and democratic Nation such as ours. What we want—and I have written many parts of the PATRIOT Act—and what we should have is checks and balances. A democratic nation does not exist without them.

I would hope Republicans and Democrats would come together, and the administration, and find a way to go forward with those things that protect America. But ultimately, America is most protected when we have the checks and balances that protect our liberties, the liberties we fought a Revolution to gain, and fought a Civil War and two World Wars to preserve. We can do that. There are cooler heads here. There are distinguished Senators from both parties who can bring this about.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority leader.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, the PATRIOT Act remains on the floor. I switched my vote in order to recommend. So in essence, it is 53 to 47. I simply ask that debate continue. Let everybody look at what is in the bill. We have had excellent debate the last couple of days. What this vote has basically said is that we don't stop debating it. I encourage people, especially those who voted against cloture, to take advantage of this opportunity to discuss and debate and come forward. We remain on the PATRIOT Act, and the vote right now speaks for itself. We accept that. But the debate will continue on this very important bill. Again, we will not see a short-term extension.

I yield the floor.

Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, today I voted against cloture on the PATRIOT Act reauthorization conference report. I want to make clear that this vote was not about whether I support reauthorizing the PATRIOT Act—I do. This vote was about whether I thought that the significant and unnecessary invasions into the privacy rights of all Americans were necessary to protect our national security—I do not.

Last July, the Senate passed by unanimous consent a PATRIOT Act reauthorization bill. I supported that bipartisan, compromise bill. Even though it did not contain all the privacy protections I would have liked, it took a lot of steps towards improving the problems in the PATRIOT Act that have become evidence since its passage. If that bill was on the floor today, I would support it.

But it is not. What we do have on the floor is a conference report that fails to address some of the most serious problems with the PATRIOT Act. For example, its version of Section 215 allows the Government to obtain library, medical, gun records, and other sensitive personal information on a mere showing that those records are relevant to an authorized intelligence investigation. That is it. Relevance is all that is required. The Senate bill, on the other hand would have established a three part test to determine whether the records have some connection to a suspected terrorist or spy. This seemingly small change will help prevent investigations which invade the privacy of American citizens that may have no connection to any suspected terrorist or spy. This is an important restriction.

In addition, unlike the Senate bill the conference report provides no mechanism for the recipient of a Section 215 order to challenge the accompanying automatic, permanent gag order. The FISA, Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act, court reviews are simply not sufficient. They have the power only to review the Government application for the underlying Section 215 order. They do not have the power to make an individualized determination about whether a gag order should accompany it. So the recipient of a Section 215 order is automatically silenced forever. How is that fair? How is that consistent with our democratic principles?

The conference report doesn't provide judicial review of National Security Letters either. The Senate bill did. Judicial review is one of our best checks on unnecessary Government intrusion into individual privacy. Why deny it to our citizens?

Lastly, I would like to mention the problem with the conference reports provisions on the so-called sneak-and-peek search warrants. Unlike the Senate bill, the conference report does not include any protections against these warrants. Rather than requiring that the government notify the target of these warrants within 7 days, as the Senate bill did, the conference report requires notification within 30 days of the search. Thirty days. That is an awfully long time to go before learning that you have been the subject of a Government search.

These are just a few of the problems with the conference report. They are the most significant problems. Those in support know that it is flawed, but they are creating artificial time pressure to force us to approve the bill, flawed as it may be.

I realize that 16 provisions of the PATRIOT Act are set to expire. I certainly do not want that to happen. But passing this conference report is not the only way to prevent their expiration. That is why I have cosponsored legislation to extend those provisions by three months to allow us time to fix the problems with the conference report. If that effort fails and the PATRIOT Act expires, the blame rests only with the White House and leadership that controls the House and the Senate. There was and remains a simple, unified way to get this done, and they rejected it.

There is no reason why we cannot be safe and free. The Senate bill accomplished this. And, I will keep working with my colleagues in the Senate to ensure that whatever legislation we ultimately pass to reauthorize the PATRIOT Act also accomplishes this.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, today the Senate was presented with a false choice on the conference report to H.R. 3199, the USA PATRIOT Act. That is why I voted against the motion to invoke cloture. There is a better way that gives us the time we need to thoughtfully debate some very weighty constitutional and civil liberty issues. With 90 percent of the PATRIOT Act already permanently authorized, we can and should extend the provisions expiring on December 31, 2005, for 3 months.

Let me be clear, those of us advocating for a 3-month extension support reauthorizing the PATRIOT Act. What we want to do is keep the law intact, exactly as it is right now, so that we can more carefully debate these important matters without feeling rushed by the impending adjournment of this session of Congress.

Like almost everyone in this Chamber, I voted for the PATRIOT Act shortly after the September 11 terrorist attacks. I believed the PATRIOT Act would bolster the ability of Federal authorities to conduct criminal and intelligence investigations, to bar and expel foreign terrorists from the United States, to separate terrorists from their sources of financial support, to punish acts of terrorism, and to assist victims of the events of September 11. While I had reservations about some parts of this legislation, the need to address the obvious threat, combined with the fact that many of the more untested provisions in the act were set to expire on December 31, 2005, prompted me to vote for the bill.

The provision of greater investigative authority to our Nation's law enforcement officials is a matter that raises many issues, most particularly, the need to balance Government power and civil liberties. Certainly, there is a great onus upon the Department of Justice, DOJ, to utilize the awesome authority of the PATRIOT Act in a circumspect and cautious manner. At the same time, Congress has a responsibility to conduct vigorous oversight on the use of the PATRIOT Act's powers and to carefully debate any changes to these powers.

In the spring, in anticipation of the impending need to reauthorize the sunset provisions of the PATRIOT Act, I cosponsored S. 737, the Security and Freedom Enhancement, SAFE, Act of 2005. This thoughtful, bipartisan legislation was introduced by Senator CRAIG on April 6, 2005, and seeks to revise and improve—not eliminate—several of the more controversial provisions of the PATRIOT Act, including roving wiretaps, sneak-and-peek searches, and FISA orders for library and other personal records.

Many of the proposed revisions to the PATRIOT Act in S.737 were ultimately incorporated in some form into S. 1389, the Senate version of the PATRIOT Act reauthorization. S. 1389, the USA PATRIOT Act Terrorism Prevention Reauthorization Act, passed by unanimous consent in July and the Senate immediately appointed conferees so that the House and the Senate could begin discussing their very different visions of the reauthorization. Unfortunately, the House waited until November to appoint its conferees, which in large part is why we are now in the position of having very little time to debate and resolve the differences between the two bills.

The Senate's version of the PATRIOT Act attempted to deal with many of the civil liberties issues that have come to the fore since the passage of the PATRIOT Act. In particular, S. 1389 would require that the Department of Justice convince a judge that a person is connected to terrorism or espionage before obtaining their library records, medical records, or other sensitive information. It would require that targets of sneak-and-peek searches are notified within 7 days, instead of the undefined delay that is currently permitted under the PATRIOT Act. The Senate bill also would prohibit the issuance of "John Doe" roving wiretaps, which identify neither the person nor the place to be put under surveillance.

Additionally, S. 1389 would give the recipient of an order for sensitive personal information the right to challenge the order in court on the same grounds they could challenge a grand jury subpoena, as well as provide a right to challenge the gag order that currently prevents people who receive a request for records from speaking out even if they feel the Government is violating their rights. The legislation also requires increased reporting by the DOJ on its use of PATRIOT Act powers and sets a 4-year sunset on three provisions regarding roving wiretaps, business record orders, and "lone wolf" surveillance.

Unlike the Senate bill, the House version proposed to permanently reauthorize all but two of the expiring provisions—instead it sunsets FISA orders for library and other personal records and the roving wiretap provision after 10 years—and placed few, if any, limits on many of the expanded law enforcement powers in the PATRIOT Act.

Unfortunately, the conference report has removed or weakened some of the most important limits on enhanced investigative powers in the Senate bill, particularly those relating to FISA orders for library, medical, and other types of business records about people, National Security Letters, and notification of sneak-and-peek searches. We need to reauthorize the expiring provisions of the PATRIOT Act, but we need to do so with procedural safeguards like those in the Senate bill.

The Senate is known as the more contemplative body in Congress for a reason, and I think we should take the time we need to truly debate and discuss some important civil liberties issues that the conference report implicates. For this reason, I have cosponsored Senator SUNUNU's bill, S. 2082, which would extend the expiring provisions of the PATRIOT Act until March 31, 2006. I believe that 3 months is enough time for us to come back after the holidays and work out the differences between the House and Senate versions of the PATRIOT Act reauthorization. I would encourage all of my colleagues to do the same.

Mr. BAUCUS. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. DEMINT). The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, I rise to express my disappointment with the vote. This is a very important piece of legislation. It is important for our country. I wish to say how hard we worked to achieve bipartisan support. This bill came up in the Senate for reauthorization after 4 years and virtually no serious criticism of the workings of any of the provisions in it. There was a generalized view that we should, in fact, extend it.

We discussed it in the Judiciary Committee. Some of us who would like to strengthen a few provisions to protect this country from terrorists did not make much headway there, but we did achieve one thing: we achieved a unanimous vote in the Judiciary Committee—18 to nothing—to report this PATRIOT Act to the floor of the Senate. When it came to the floor of the Senate, we discussed it, and it was cleared by this Senate unanimously.

It went to conference. The House had a bill. We discussed it in conference. Senator SPECTER led our conferees. For those who wanted the Senate bill to win in toto, they were not perfectly happy. But as Senator SPECTER has said, 80 percent of the bill was the Senate bill. Only a few things were given to the House Members out of the differences in the two pieces of legislation. It comes back here to be voted on. It is blocked from an up-or-down vote so it could be passed and made law before it expires at the end of this year.

A tremendous amount of effort and work has been placed into making this a piece of legislation we could all unite behind. We thought we did so. We went to conference, and we came out with a bill that is far more like the Senate bill than the House bill.

As someone who served in law enforcement for many years, I urge my colleagues to look at the language of the legislation. I don't believe there is a single investigative law enforcement technique in this legislation that is inconsistent with what we have been doing for years. The average county attorney in any city and county in America today can issue a subpoena for library records. The average county attorney can get medical records on one basis—is it relevant to an investigation that office is conducting? They don't have to get prior court approval to issue those subpoenas. It is done every day. So there has been confusion. I urge my colleagues to think about it.

With regard to the delayed notice search warrants, this law in not one whit changes the standards for a search warrant. You still have to have all the proof you have to conduct a search of someone's private property or house. You have to have that. It simply says that you could delay notice to the terrorist organization about what is going on. That is law today.

As a Federal prosecutor, I have sought approval of a court to delay the notification of a drug dealer. I saw a story recently about a Mafia investigation in the Northeast. They got a delayed notice warrant under basically American common law. There were no legal standards. Whatever the judge said about how long you would delay in notifying the bad guys is what went on in that case.

This bill for the first time sets forth statutory standards that must be approved. You must prove to the judge that it is important to the safety of the country or important to the safety of enforcing the law that the notification is delayed. So you don't get that automatically just because you ask it; you have to convince a court in advance of that.

The section 215 provisions require FISA court prior judicial approval. They require reports made to the Congress. They allow objections to be raised.

I urge my colleagues to go back and think about the vote you just cast in favor of this bill and review and see if there is anything that occurred in conference that in any way significantly alters or erodes the liberties this country has known and loved and is determined to protect. I urge my colleagues to do that. If they do, I believe they will feel very confident that there is nothing here that goes against what we believe is necessary to preserve the liberties with which we are familiar. Please do that. If you do, I think you will feel a lot better about it.

I would be glad to discuss any particular point you would raise. As we go forward, I hope people will feel comfortable in casting a positive vote for this legislation. It is critical that we not allow it to expire. We need to do this bill while we are here. But to continue to weaken the legislation, as some have asked, for beyond what we agreed to in conference is a mistake. We don't need to continue to weaken it. If we weaken it so much that it is not effective, then it is not a good idea.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Jersey is recognized.

FAREWELL TO THE SENATE

Mr. CORZINE. Mr. President, I would like to give what I think will more than likely be the last speech I give on this great floor, this historic floor, in front of this deliberative body. I am grateful for your courtesies. It is with bittersweet feeling that I make these remarks.

I have been honored beyond words to be a United States Senator. I think all of us know that feeling in our hearts and souls. I will be forever grateful to the 9 million New Jerseyans who put their trust in me and asked Senator LAUTENBERG and myself, and others before us, to represent their hopes and dreams at this time and in this place.

In the 229 years of our Republic, fewer than 2,000 men and women have come to this floor and represented the voices of the people who elected them or selected them in previous times. And like each of my predecessors and those to follow, including Congressman ROBERT MENENDEZ, who will be sworn in to fill out my term, we have all been sworn to uphold and protect the Constitution.

I now look at the great Senator, ROBERT BYRD, who has so eloquently and so frequently represented the challenge that all of us take on as we are sworn in to be Senators to represent and carry forward those traditions of our Constitution and to serve the interests of our people. So there are really two purposes. I can only hope that the people of New Jersey will believe that has been my sole purpose here on this floor.

Now as I take my leave, I guess there will be some folks who will say some nice things about me, and they have. That is a little bit different than in the last days of the campaign. It reminds me of a Jack Benny story. He was giving a presentation and listening to the presenter praise him at length. He said, "I don't deserve this award, but I don't deserve diabetes either." I will take the compliments and the kind remarks. I very much appreciate it.

I want you to know that I cherish the friendships I have established with the men and women here. I admire the debates—I don't always agree with all of my colleagues—but I always respect and admire the commitments of the men and women who sit on this floor. And I add that it is on both sides of the aisle, not just my friends in the Democratic Party. Believe me, some of the remarks I have heard in the last few days are a little different than they were 6 years ago when I ran for my good friend Senator LAUTENBERG's open seat at that time. Ross Baker is a commentator on the national political scene, and he teaches at Rutgers. He told one reporter that the people in New Jersey don't know JON CORZINE from a cord of wood. Hopefully, we have gotten a little farther down the pike than a cord of wood.

This has been one of the most remarkable experiences anyone could ever dream of having. I came here for a clear purpose. I believe in American citizenship and the rights we have. We certainly have incredible opportunities in this Nation—I have experienced many of them—but it comes with responsibilities. To those of us whom much is given, much is required. I know that I had no chance to succeed in life without the kind of great support I have had from my community, my Nation, and my friends. That is why one comes here—to give back, to fight for fairness and the opportunity for all.

Senator DURBIN knows of the little town in which I grew up. Like so many of you, I have lived the American promise. It is a little town in central Illinois called Willy Station, with a population of less than 50. In fact, there are more cows than people there. My father was a corn and soybean farmer. He sold insurance. My mom was a schoolteacher. To have a chance to walk on the floor of the Senate and represent the interests of a great State that is really entirely different than the background from where I came represents the American promise. I believe in it, and I believe we have a responsibility to give back.

Both of my parents were good Republicans, Senator DURBIN. My mom still is, by the way. I am not sure if she voted for my friend. She had big dreams, and so did my father, about how life would serve us.

I grew up at a time when Adlai Stevenson was Governor and then ran for President. Paul Douglas and Paul Simon worked the circuits in central Illinois. We had great Democratic Senators who passionately stood for economic and social justice for all Americans. We had another great Illinois Senator who worked the same circuits, Everett Dirksen. Like my parents, he was a Republican, but he also stood up for the promise of justice and equality for everyone in America. He believed deeply enough in those promises to use his position as leader to help pass the Civil Rights Act of 1964.

Mr. BYRD. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. CORZINE. Yes.

Mr. BYRD. Lord Byron said, "Thank God I have done my duty." May I say to the Senator from New Jersey, he has done his duty. He is a good Senator. We will miss you. I will. Thank you for standing up for what you believe. Thank you very much. Bless your heart.

Mr. CORZINE. Mr. President, there is not much that means more than that coming from a great Senator who has served this Nation so much. Thank you.

I was talking about Senator Dirksen. He actually sat at this desk and worked at this desk. So did George Mitchell and a whole host of great Americans. It is remarkable what the history of this institution presents and the opportunities it affords. It has been a remarkable time. I think all of you know that.

In the last 5 years, it seems as if we have jammed more historic moments in than you could ever imagine, with an unprecedented Presidential election in 2000, where we all sat in this Chamber and confirmed the results of that election. We had a 50/50 Senate, and everybody was trying to figure out how it worked. And then, with a shift of one vote in the caucus, that changed the control of the Senate.

That dark day on September 11 changed the lives of Americans forever. I live in Hoboken, NJ. It looks out almost directly across the river where the Twin Towers once stood. New Jersey's heart has never fully healed from those losses. It never will. We lost 700 of our citizens. We have much to do, and it has stimulated even the debate we have on this floor today. There were kids who lost their lives on that day whom I coached in soccer when they were growing up in my previous hometown of Summit. We still have a lot to do.

Today, we are challenged with the war against terrorism and debate about our constitutional freedoms, which we are talking about today—the challenge of tradeoffs in security and freedom, and protecting what it is that the American Constitution stands for. This is a great institution for making sure the rights of our people are represented.

I came to the Senate to try to use my knowledge and experience to help work on some of those problems that are most important to our Nation—health care, economic and racial justice, education—there is a whole series of those things. I am proud of that progressive agenda. I see so many peers and colleagues who fight so hard on those every day.

Mr. President, 9/11 brought us together regardless of our political backgrounds in ways we could never have been imagined. I am proud of how our Nation responded and also how the leadership of this great body came together and acted, regardless of background or place, in ways I don't think any of us could have imagined. I am grateful to all of my colleagues for that leadership.

We also have great people in New Jersey. The Jersey girls, as a lot of my colleagues know, have been fighters for making sure we had the 9/11 Commission, the compensation fund, responses to human needs, as well as the strategic intelligence and homeland security needs that the American people deserve. I am proud of them. I am proud of the work we have all done because it encourages us.

We provided over $350 million to address New Jersey's unique security needs after the September 11th terrorist attacks.

There was an element of unity that I hope we can restore that was born in those moments because the challenges are just as great. The immediacy is a little different, but there is no reason we can't stand together.

I am proud of the opportunity to be a partner with my chairman, Senator SARBANES, CHRIS DODD, and others with regard to helping restore investor confidence that was also broken around that time where people lost their life savings, where people in the world I had come from had taken advantage of other human beings' savings, retirement securities, and their jobs. It is not a proud moment for those of us who believe in the capitalistic system.

With the kind of response that came through the Sarbanes-Oxley bill, I think we have actually made a major contribution to making sure that balance sheets and income statements are what they are, that people can have more confidence in our fundamental system. I was honored to be a part of the detail and the work that brought that back. We should protect it as we go forward.

There is more to do with our pension system. There are many things that are part of our financial structure which is such a fundamental defining element of what America is about. We need to make sure they have the integrity that was built into the theme of the Sarbanes-Oxley reforms.

I am proud to have represented the Democratic caucus for 2 years in the push back against the privatization of Social Security. We had a debate on the floor where Senator SANTORUM, Senator SUNUNU, Senator DURBIN, and myself, for a remarkable hour and a half, had dialog among Senators. All of those elements of debate are still in play. We need to make sure we protect the security of our seniors. I know folks on this side of the aisle feel so strongly in winning that battle, and we should continue.

There are many others issues: affordable drug benefits, college tuition. Senator KENNEDY and others have fought so hard to make sure everybody has access to the American promise. I am proud that I had a role—an amendment role, a voting role, a sponsorship role—to be a part of those agendas. We can do, and have done, a lot to protect our environment to make quality of life better.

Together with my colleagues from New Jersey, we protected people in our state from federal changes that would have weakened New Jersey's model prescription drug program for seniors and people with disabilities.

We lifted federal home loans mortgage limits to help more New Jersey veterans buy their own homes.

We fought the administration's effort to reduce the availability of student loans. We held them off for a year—long enough to enable many students to stay in school instead of having to drop out.

We preserved the unspoiled beauty and critical water supply in the New Jersey Highlands.

And we stopped a plan by the administration that would have paved the way for oil and gas drilling off the New Jersey shore. Because America needs a balanced energy plan that invests in conservation and alternative energy sources—not oil derricks lining our beaches.

In the highway bill that passed this year, we increased New Jersey's rate of return on the federal highway tax dollar from 90.5 cents to 92 cents. And we paved the way for the New Jersey Trans-Hudson Midtown Corridor.

There is a lot more to do. I have some challenges that I leave for all of my colleagues. Maybe the most important one, and the one I feel most passionately about, is the ongoing challenge to man's inhumanity to man in Darfur, Sudan. We have lost 300,000 lives, give or take. People don't really know the degree to which life has been lost. But we need to make sure that we don't revisit Rwanda and other places where we have turned our backs on the killing of one man and one woman, one at a time.

There is much to do. I am proud of the efforts that Senator BROWNBACK and I have done to make sure this body recognized for the first time that genocide was taking place, that there was much to do, that we had some financing to sponsor the African Union to do that which would bring an end to the rape, the killing, and the pillaging that is going on. There is much more to do. Please, please, make sure, whether it is in Darfur or other places, that this body speaks out for humanity, something I know all of my colleagues carry in their hearts. It is one of the great hopes and dreams.

I know a number of my colleagues—Senator OBAMA, Senator DURBIN, Congressman PAYNE on the other side of this great Capitol, communities of faith, concerned citizens—are really committed to these issues, particularly as it relates to Darfur. But we should stand up, and we should move forward.

I have a big hope that my colleagues will take the opportunity to move on chemical plant security, which is something I have hooted and hollered about and bored people to death with over the last 4 years. We are so close but yet so far and at such risk. Whether it is rail security,—and all of us have a number of other issues—it is painful for us to get such low marks in how we have addressed our homeland security.

Now I go to be a Governor of a State where the primary day-to-day practice and responsibility is to protect the lives of the people who live in these communities. I hope we will move forward in an expeditious manner to address some of those items that we all know are at great risk.

There is a lot of progress to be made in a lot of areas. I could go on. I am proud of the initiative on kids accounts, which I hope a lot of you will get behind. We can change the financial underpinnings and knowledge of so many folks. I am proud of this idea. I know there are a number of my colleagues who are interested in the idea of giving every child who gets a Social Security number a start in life. It is implemented in Great Britain. We ought to do it here. There is a real hope it can bring about a different opportunity and potential for every person.

And I'm proud of what we've done for financial literacy. It's mind-boggling to me that we live in a capitalist society, yet our schools provide students with few, if any, tools about how to navigate the system. We push our kids out into the world and say "You're on your own. Good luck." As more financial risk is shifted onto individuals, the consequences of bad financial decisions grow more dire. That's why I pushed to include basic financial literacy in the No Child Left Behind Act to teach young people the basic principles of capitalism and responsible money management.

I will look to this body to come up with answers on health care, Medicare, making sure our children are educated appropriately. The agenda is large. There are great disappointments, by the way. I close with a few of those. It is hard for me to imagine when I came here that we were running a couple hundred billion dollars in surpluses, and now we have created debt that is greater in the 5 years than was ever created in the history of the country. I think we are really in danger of going over the precipice on the twin deficits with regard to fiscal management of this country. It seems grossly unfair that we are placing that burden on future generations the way we are.

I can tell my colleagues, as it ripples down to our State levels, they are going to hear a former Senator hooting and hollering pretty high about how we are crowding out and crowding in responsibilities that will be very difficult.

The fact we haven't raised the minimum wage in the years I have been in the Senate is hard to imagine. There is a study out this week that if you earn the minimum wage, there is not a county in this country where someone can afford a one-bedroom apartment. It is time to move on some of these issues.

I know I am preaching to the choir, but it is time to move. We ought to ban racial profiling. There are a whole host of issues.

Since I came to the Senate in 2001, the number of uninsured Americans has swelled to over 45 million people. We have made some important strides in improving access to care for certain populations, but these piecemeal attempts to address our health care crisis have fallen far short of providing all Americans with quality, affordable health care. I would like to see us come together as a nation to guarantee health care to each and every American.

Senator LAUTENBERG and I would like to see Bruce Springsteen honored, too. We think we ought to step up and acknowledge both the poetry and the majesty of his fights for the working men and women of this world.

I wish to thank my colleagues and the people of New Jersey for this great opportunity. I leave the Senate with incredible excitement and optimism about the future. I am looking forward to my new job in a way I cannot even get my mind around half the time because it seems so profoundly interesting and applies to the day-to-day lives of folks.

I have no serious regrets. I have sadness about not being able to walk onto this great floor, but I love this place and look forward to coming back and working together on those issues that matter.

I close by especially thanking my colleague, Senator FRANK LAUTENBERG, who has just been a gem to work with, and my leaders, Tom Daschle and HARRY REID, who have been extraordinary.

Mr. President, I say to all of my colleagues, they have been great.

I mentioned ROBERT BYRD, a giant on this floor.

I cannot help but remember the man maybe I admired the most here, because he had the greatest courage, was Paul Wellstone and his incredible fire and commitment to equality and justice in every possible way.

It has been some run. I want to say thanks to my children, who supported me, Jennifer, Josh, and Jeffery; an incredible staff who have worked hard. I have a list of the names of the staff who have served the people of New Jersey with me. I do not think I will read them all, but I ask unanimous consent that they be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Mr. CORZINE. I would not be worth a darn without what they have been able to do. I want to say that the staff who works the floor has been remarkable. Without Lula Davis' help and people such as Marty and other folks who guide us through how we get things done, none of us would be in the same place, as well as the Parliamentarians, the clerks, and others. I am extraordinarily grateful for their support.

I would be remiss if I did not mention Jeri Thomson who has been so great.

To all of you and to all of those who go unmentioned but not unthought of, let me say thank you. It has been a privilege of a lifetime and I look forward to serving the people of the State of New Jersey and our great country in the years ahead.

I yield the floor.

(Applause.)

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, I wasn't here when JON CORZINE arrived in the Senate 5 years ago in fact, he actually took my place at the time. We met to share ideas on an agenda for New Jersey and America and I followed his progress closely. I was impressed by what I saw in JON's service in the Senate, where he has earned respect and affection. JON came from great success in the world of finance and industry, but he is able to communicate with ordinary people, as well.

Some people arrive here and immediately head for the headlines. But that isn't JON CORZINE's style. JON is a committed "workhorse," who works long hours with high intensity. He doesn't have a lot of flash, but he is very effective.

He came to Washington for one reason: to serve the people of New Jersey. Now, with some sorrow on my part, he is leaving us here for the same reason: to help New Jersey even more directly.

Even before the terrorist attacks on 9/11, work had been done to strengthen security at our chemical plants. JON recognized the importance of that issue long before most people, so when he arrived here in the Senate, he took the ball and ran with it. JON introduced a plan to overhaul security at chemical plants, and many people were surprised when he got it unanimously approved in committee. But those who know JON CORZINE weren't surprised. Even when that bill was blocked by lobbyists, JON didn't give up. He has continued to fight to make our chemical plants safer. He has raised awareness of the problem, which I will take up once again, because we are at risk across this Nation from the most horrible devastation to our people and communities.

JON CORZINE carried an agenda here that was so appropriate for New Jersey that he established a place for himself in the history of the State even before he becomes Governor.

I wasn't a Member of the Senate on that fateful day of September 11, 2001, when my State lost almost 700 people. But I knew we would have a strong advocate in JON CORZINE. And we did. JON listened to the families who had lost loved ones, and he knew they deserved answers. So he fought to establish the 9/11 Commission. I honestly don't think it ever would have come to pass without his efforts. He has been a great ally in my fight to make New Jersey and our Nation safer by directing homeland security resources to where they are most needed.

By the time I returned to the Senate almost 3 years ago, JON had earned a reputation as a hard worker who cares more about getting results than getting credit. People had learned that when you talk to JON CORZINE, he really listens. They had learned that he isn't in love with the sound of his own voice. And they had learned that when JON CORZINE does speak, he has something to say.

Three years ago our Nation was rocked by the Enron scandal, and by other incidents that undermined public confidence in the integrity of major corporations. With his background as the CEO of one of the largest financial services firms in the country, JON realized the importance of restoring public trust and confidence. Even though he worked mostly behind the scenes on the Sarbanes-Oxley bill the most far-reaching corporate reform law since the Great Depression he was recognized by the New York Times as the bill's "primary architect."

Sarbanes-Oxley improved business accounting standards, helped restore investor confidence, and protected the savings of millions of Americans. JON's name isn't on that bill, but his influence is.

JON has been a great teammate for me, working for New Jersey day in and day out. He has also worked with many of you, on both sides of the aisle.

I know how hard he has worked with Senator BROWNBACK, for instance, to stop genocide in the Darfur region of the Sudan. As a member of the Foreign Relations Committee, JON offered the first Senate resolution to classify this horrific situation as "genocide." The passage of this bipartisan resolution, coupled with other efforts to increase awareness of atrocities in Darfur, prompted then-Secretary of State Colin Powell to declare that genocide was in fact occurring. After traveling to Sudan personally, Senator CORZINE championed a successful bipartisan effort to provide $75 million for African Union peacekeeping troops. He also introduced a bill establishing sanctions against Sudan, which the Senate passed.

JON served in the Marine Corps Reserves, and he understands the burdens on our men and women in uniform especially the National Guard and Reserves, who have provided so many of the troops in Iraq.

After I served in World War II, I went to college on the G.I. bill. JON CORZINE has worked to update the G.I. bill for the 21st century, to meet rising education costs. He has fought for better health care for veterans and military families. And he sponsored a bill that will help 90,000 vets buy their own homes. For these reasons and many more, the Veterans of Foreign Wars gave JON their Congressional Award in 2004.

Over the past 3 years I have been proud to call JON CORZINE my friend and my colleague. Today, I am equally proud to call him the next Governor of my home State of New Jersey. I will miss him here in the Senate. But I will take comfort in knowing that he will be leading New Jersey in the right direction. I hope all of my colleagues will join me today in wishing Senator CORZINE a fond farewell and great success in the future.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I think the Senator from California had a unanimous consent request?

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. If I may, and I thank the Senator from Massachusetts, I ask unanimous consent that I be recognized when the tributes to Senator CORZINE have concluded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, it is a privilege to join my Senate colleagues in paying tribute to JON CORZINE, congratulating him on his election as Governor of New Jersey, and commending him for his skillful service to the people of New Jersey and to the Nation as a Senator.

For the past 5 years in the Senate, Senator CORZINE has stood up for working families, for affordable health care, for pension security, and on many other challenges. Again and again, he has demonstrated his commitment to the fundamental principle of fairness—that government should represent the interests of all Americans, regardless of race, income, or disability. It has been an honor to work with him.

JON is committed to helping others achieve the American Dream. He believes very deeply that through hard work and determination, people can make better lives for themselves and their families. He believes this so deeply, because he has lived it himself.

Growing up on a small farm in Illinois, JON dedicated himself to his studies and graduated from the University of Illinois. He then joined the Marine Corps Reserve and began his impressive career in business and banking.

His talents helped him rise in the business world too—from a bond trader at Goldman Sachs to chairman and CEO of the firm.

Once his hard work and talent helped him reach the pinnacle of his profession, JON decided to give something back by helping all Americans achieve their full potential.

When he came to the Senate in 2001, he made an immediate impact, bringing the same talents and commitment in the business world to his work for New Jersey and the country.

We could all see that JON was a committed and progressive public servant, motivated by a strong sense what's right and what's fair.

Not long after he was elected, the Nation faced a sudden challenge of massive corporate fraud, involving Enron, WorldCom, and others. Families' pensions were lost. Workers' savings went up in smoke because of cooked books and insider deals.

The administration dragged its feet, but Jon stood up for those workers and sent a clear message to those executives that if they defraud the American people, they must pay.

JON's compassion and invaluable business experience helped persuade Congress to pass the most sweeping corporate reforms since the Great Depression.

He brought that same knowledge of the financial markets and securities industry and that same sense of fairness to the battle to protect Social Security. When others tried to frighten the American people into undermining the most important social safety net program the Nation has ever had, JON stood firm, and the so-called reforms were not passed.

I was especially impressed by the way Senator CORZINE rose to the challenge of 9/11 and rallied the people of New Jersey after the terrorist attacks. He was only 9 months into his term, but he stepped up and provided real leadership at a time of enormous crisis and uncertainty.

He did his best to ease the grief of the survivor's families, and he did everything he could to see that the Federal Government lived up to its responsibility to provide relief to those families.

Month after month, year after year, JON also insisted that the 9/11 Commission get answers to their tough questions, no matter how entrenched the opposition.

For 5 years, he has been a driving force to improve homeland security, by making sure that our Nation's ports receive the resources they need, and by pressing the administration to protect chemical plants in New Jersey and across the Nation.

We will miss JON's leadership and eloquence here in the Senate. The people of New Jersey are fortunate to have him as their new Governor, and I know he will continue the outstanding leadership we have all come to know and admire. New Jersey is in good hands, and I wish him continuing success in the years ahead.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maryland.

Mr. SARBANES. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that following my comments, Senator STABENOW be recognized, then Senator SALAZAR and Senator REED be recognized. All of us seek to speak about our colleague, Senator CORZINE.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. SARBANES. I thank the Chair.

Mr. President, in a few weeks our good friend, JON CORZINE, will leave the Senate, where he so effectively represented New Jersey and its people over the past 5 years, to become Governor of his State. I have been privileged to serve with Senator CORZINE on the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs, to whose work he has brought an extraordinary combination of principle, vision, intelligence, and solid common sense. I wish to say a few words today about his spectacular work on that committee. For a while, I was privileged to serve as chairman of the committee, and I can tell you that no chairman could have a better fate than to have JON CORZINE as one of his members.

Prior to entering the U.S. Senate, JON CORZINE spent nearly a quarter of a century with Goldman Sachs, the New York investment bank, including five as its chairman and CEO. His long and wide-ranging experience in the financial markets made him especially well qualified to deal with the issues that came within the Banking Committee's jurisdiction. In very short order, it was apparent that whenever JON CORZINE's turn in a committee meeting came to put questions to witnesses, even the most confident and sophisticated among them listened more intently and responded more carefully.

Senator CORZINE's contribution to the accounting reform and investor protection legislation known as Sarbanes-Oxley was invaluable. Along with Senator DODD, who also serves on the committee, JON CORZINE was among the first members of the Senate to call for hearings on investor protection in the wake of the collapse of Enron Corporation. Those hearings took place in February and March of 2002, and Senator CORZINE, along with others on the committee, Senator DODD and others, played a critical role in shaping the reform legislation enacted 4 months later. I have done it before and I wish to again acknowledge the very substantial and significant contributions JON CORZINE made in helping to shape and develop that legislation. His work was invaluable.

Consistently in the work of the committee, JON CORZINE played a critical role in efforts to strengthen protections for investors in our capital markets. BusinessWeek, in fact, noted that his work in this area gave him "an unusually high profile for a junior Senator."

His contributions to the work of the committee were by no means focused only on these issues. Indeed, he touched virtually every issue in the committee's jurisdiction. He has worked vigorously to expand housing opportunities and the effectiveness of Federal housing programs. He has been a forceful spokesman for full funding for critical programs of the Department of Housing and Urban Development—section 8 vouchers, housing for the elderly, improved public housing, and other efforts to assist low-income homeowners and renters. It is indicative of his commitment, and in his statement here in the Chamber only a few minutes ago he again was making reference to how people who work at minimum wage can't afford an apartment in county after county across the country.

He led efforts to expand coverage of FHA insurance for multifamily housing, something especially relevant in States such as New Jersey where inflated housing costs affected previous program ceilings. He pressed for energy efficiency requirements in public and assisted housing, and he has remained committed to Federal action to assure secondary mortgage market liquidity and affordable housing.

JON CORZINE was an original cosponsor of the legislation to stop predatory lending practices and spoke forcefully in the committee's deliberation about the harsh and cynical techniques predatory lenders used to exploit vulnerable borrowers seeking mortgages and other credit. He has been one of the leaders in the Senate in the fight against Federal preemption of State consumer protection laws which are designed to protect our citizens against these practices.

He has been among the Senate's most outspoken advocates for public and private financial literacy programs to ensure that all Americans of all ages and all backgrounds have the skills to grasp the financial implications of the often complex credit card loans and other financial arrangements they are offered.

He has obtained Federal funding for financial education programs in elementary and secondary schools and was the leader in the ultimately successful efforts in 2003 to pass the Financial Literacy and Education Improvement Act, which incorporates many of his ideas. For his work on this issue, the JumpStart Coalition for Personal Financial Literacy named him "Federal Financial Literacy and Education Legislator of the Year."

Throughout his tenure, Senator CORZINE has been among our most articulate advocates for public transportation, whose importance in the day-to-day lives of his constituents he knows firsthand since he represents the most densely populated State in the Nation. He fought to preserve and enhance the Federal transit program as the new surface transportation authorization legislation was developed. As a result of his efforts, New Jersey will receive nearly $2.5 billion in transit formula funds from 2004 through 2009, a 50-percent increase over the amount the State received in the predecessor legislation.

He also succeeded in assuring priority treatment in terms of planning, funding, and execution under this new legislation for a new commuter rail tunnel under the Hudson River. This project, the Trans-Hudson Midtown Corridor, has been identified as a crucial investment for the region's mobility and security. As a result of his efforts, the National Transit Institute, which provides training, education, and clearinghouse services to support public transportation, will be maintained at Rutgers, the State University of New Jersey.

Senator CORZINE was a leader in the effort to develop a Federal backstop for terrorism insurance after the attacks of September 11, 2001. Those attacks left such insurance widely unavailable and put businesses and commercial property owners at risk of future losses from terrorism without having insurance coverage. He recognized immediately this situation would create a drag on economic activity and again brought his expertise to bear in helping to develop the Federal legislation under which the Federal Government would share the risk of future terrorism losses with the industry.

Senator CORZINE was one of the first to recognize the threat that identity theft poses both to consumers and to the integrity of the Nation's payment system. He has been a leader in the fight for safeguards on personal information, on protecting the privacy of our citizens.

Many of these things I have spoken about reflect a common theme, and that is JON CORZINE's concern for those left out and left behind. It has been a hallmark of his service in the Senate that he has sought to bring into the mainstream of American life those who have been left out of it. This concern for those, in a sense, who have been forgotten, was reflected in his work in the international arena, particularly the emphasis he placed on the situation in Darfur. Again and again, JON CORZINE took the floor of the Senate to bring to our attention the terrible things that were happening there and to push for measures to help alleviate that situation.

Finally, let me say what has distinguished Senator CORZINE's service in the Senate over and above his many specific accomplishments is the dedication and vision and principles that underlie all his work. Before coming to the Senate, he spent much of his professional life as an investment banker. But he brought to his responsibilities certain fundamental convictions about the nature of American society, a hopeful and optimistic vision of American life that first took place as he was growing up in a small farming community in central Illinois. It was there he has said he learned "the meaning of hard work and the opportunities afforded by a strong education system."

JON CORZINE went on to earn his B.A. as Phi Beta Kappa at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign, and enlisted in the Marine Corps Reserve where he served for 6 years. He attended the University of Chicago Business School at night, and not too much later he joined Goldman Sachs.

His many years in the financial markets have not dimmed JON CORZINE's vision of America as a nation grounded in opportunity—opportunity for a good education, for a decent job, a place to raise one's family and someday to retire with dignity, security, and self-respect. He has dedicated his efforts to advance programs that can make this vision a reality for all his fellow Americans.

When he announced his candidacy for Governor of New Jersey last December, Senator CORZINE pledged he would "fight like crazy to make sure that there is a view that government can be a partner in lifting up the lives of the rest of America." This is surely what he has done in the Senate.

In just 5 short years, notwithstanding his junior status in a body that sets a high premium on seniority—when I first came here I was very critical of the seniority system, but I have to admit that as time has gone by I have come to see the virtues of the system. JON CORZINE has had an impressive record of accomplishment. He has demonstrated the astute and principled leadership in the Senate that will most assuredly make him a distinguished Governor of the State of New Jersey in the service of all its people.

If I may be so bold as to address a word to the people of New Jersey, I simply say they have an extraordinary leader about to take over as the Governor of their State. I urge them to give JON CORZINE their backing and support so he can bring his vision to bear in the State of New Jersey.

When Woodrow Wilson became Governor of the State of New Jersey, he introduced a progressive agenda which became the model for the Nation. New Jersey went to the very forefront of the 50 States in addressing fairness and opportunity for its citizens and enhancing their quality of life. I say today, as we bid our dear colleague a fond farewell, JON CORZINE can provide that kind of leadership for New Jersey. He can move that State to the very forefront of the 50 States and make it a shining example of what can be accomplished when all of us pull together in order to enhance opportunity for each and every one. I wish him the very best as he leaves this body and in the years ahead.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Michigan.

Ms. STABENOW. Mr. President, I rise today to join my colleagues in honoring a man I have come to know as a colleague, a dedicated public servant, and a friend.

JON CORZINE is a shining example of the American dream—of what one can accomplish with hard work and the opportunity to obtain a good education.

Growing up in rural Illinois as the son of a corn and soybean farmer and a public school teacher, JON CORZINE learned early in life the importance of family, responsibility and service to his community.

These are the values that led him to serve his country as a member of the U.S. Marine Corps Reserves—and over the years, his strong values have guided his career in both in private industry and public service.

JON CORZINE started his career on the ground floor of American business. And even as he worked hard and achieved extraordinary success, he never lost sight of his values.

When he served as chairman and chief executive officer of Goldman Sachs, he led that company from a private partnership to a public offering. At the same time, expanded the company's philanthropic outreach efforts to better serve people in need.

He continued that important work here in the U.S. Senate, where he used his political power to fight for people without political influence. For the last 5 years, he has been a tireless advocate or veterans, seniors, students, women, children and families in New Jersey and across our Nation.

Senator CORZINE and I were sworn into the Senate on the same day—and I served with him on both the Budget Committee and the Banking, Housing and Urban Affairs Committee. There, we worked together to preserve funding for programs that help our Nation's most vulnerable citizens—programs such as Medicare and Medicaid, veterans health care, and education.

We also worked together to lead the fight to keep the security in Social Security.

His business expertise made him a strong advocate for fiscal responsibility. He fought to get the national debt under control so we could preserve and create opportunities for our Nation's young people—rather than saddle them with the burden of our government's debts.

He has lived the American dream and continues to work hard to ensure that others have a chance to live it too.

JON CORZINE is a thoughtful, hard-working man who worked with his colleagues from both sides of the political spectrum to do the right thing for the people of New Jersey and this Nation.

I am honored to have him as a friend and a colleague—and I wish him well in his new role as Governor of New Jersey.

I add my comments, along with my friends and colleagues in the Senate, for someone who has become a personal friend, as well as someone I admire greatly and that we are going to greatly miss. New Jersey is very lucky to have JON CORZINE coming in as Governor of that great State.

Senator CORZINE and I have worked together both on the Committee on the Budget and on the Committee on Banking. I can say it is true what Senator SARBANES said, that even though he sat at the end of the table at the Committee on Banking and we were squeezed in with our staff trying to make sure we did not fall off the end of the platform, I always knew when the person at the end was about to speak and ask his questions, there was going to be silence in the room and tremendous respect for what he was going to say and concern about whether they would be able to effectively answer his questions, as the witnesses were answering various questions concerning finances.

To watch Senator CORZINE work has been to watch an example of what we want in public service. To see someone who grew up in a small town—like I did in Michigan—growing up in a small town, serve his country in the Marines, as so many of my colleagues have. I am particularly proud of the people on the Democrat side of the aisle who have served in public service as it relates to our Armed Services and continue to bring that perspective and support today.

But certainly Senator CORZINE is one of them. And to go on to be so incredibly successful in business, and then to bring that expertise here on behalf of the people of New Jersey to work with all of us I think is an example of a tremendously great American success story. I am proud to have worked with Senator CORZINE and look forward to working with him as the Governor of New Jersey.

I will simply echo my colleagues in saying, when we talk about corporate responsibility and accountability, Senator CORZINE and his expertise has been there. Housing, public transit, homeland security, his passion for Social Security, addressing so many different issues that are important to people, important to communities, important to our democracy, have had the voice of JON CORZINE.

So I congratulate you on your service. I congratulate the people of New Jersey on the public service that is to come. And, mostly, I thank JON CORZINE for his generosity of heart and for his willingness to invest in so many ways to better the community with his own resources. This is someone who has been incredibly generous and caring and smart and compassionate and dedicated to the right values that we all care about deeply.

I know he is going to do an outstanding job as Governor and that we will all be better off for his public service.

With that, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Colorado.

Mr. SALAZAR. Mr. President, I stand here today to not only say thank you but to congratulate the Senator from New Jersey, the Governor-elect of New Jersey, JON CORZINE.

For me, my whole life has been touched by many people who have helped me live the American dream. But it is an American dream, too, that has come with challenges in dealing with the issues of poverty and in dealing with the issues of racism.

There was a time in my life when I thought anything was possible for anyone in America. There was also a time in my life when I thought there were limitations placed on myself personally that I could never overcome because of the history of racism and the effects of poverty within my own life.

Notwithstanding the fact that I was a proud son of that great generation of World War II, soldiers who fought in World War II, and steeped in the history of New Mexico and southern Colorado, there were many people who, when I decided to seek this position in the Senate, thought that it could not be done. There were many people who brought up reason after reason why this was not a place where I could serve.

One of the people who disagreed with those conclusions was JON CORZINE. JON CORZINE told me that, yes, it was possible to still believe in the American dream, that no matter what your background is and no matter what your economic circumstance might be, everything is still possible here in America. His inspiration and his vision and his leadership contributed to my serving today in the Senate.

When I characterize my friendship with JON CORZINE and look at him as a person and as a leader, the words that come to my mind are "an authentic leader." He is who he is. He is a very successful businessperson, but he is the kind of person whom we ought to have in the Senate all of the time; that is, people who care about our Nation and the people whom we represent here every day. He has put them and our Nation ahead of his own self-interest. That is the legacy that we now pass on to New Jersey, the legacy that New Jersey has grabbed for itself, as they take him as the next Governor of New Jersey.

I know he will continue to do great things in New Jersey as the Governor of that State, in the same way he has done great things in the Senate—those things my colleagues have spoken about on the floor of the Senate today.

I wish him well, and I know his continued leadership is something we will continue to see in the days and years ahead.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Rhode Island.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, it is a privilege to be here today to say a few words about my colleague and friend, JON CORZINE. He has honored this Senate and he has honored the people of New Jersey with his service.

I did not know JON before he came here. I heard about his campaign. I heard about his success on Wall Street. I, frankly, must confess, I did not know what quite to expect. Having seen the movie "Wall Street," I almost thought that Michael Douglas would walk in the door in a $3,000 suit and with expensive accoutrements.

JON surprised us all because he is not like that. He might have found his success on Wall Street, but his values were formed in the heartland of America and in the U.S. Marine Corps. He believes very deeply in values that are important and central to our party and to the people of this country: the notion of opportunity for all and the notion that this is a community, not just a collection of individuals.

His service in this body has exemplified those values and made us all extraordinarily proud. I served with JON on the Senate Banking Committee. As the chairman and ranking member at various times of the Housing and Transportation Subcommittee, I was familiar with all of JON's efforts in making real progress on issues of importance to the people of New Jersey and the people of this country.

My friend and colleague, Senator SARBANES, has pointed out some of these, and I would like to, for the RECORD, amplify again what JON has done.

The Federal Housing Administration Multifamily Housing Program provides insurance to those seeking to build multifamily rental housing. The program has played a critical role in the development of affordable multifamily rental housing. However, as the cost of building new housing has dramatically increased in recent years, Federal multifamily mortgage insurance loan limits have failed to keep pace with inflation.

In 2002, Senator CORZINE led the way to secure passage of a provision to raise FHA multifamily loan limits by indexing them to the annual construction cost index to ensure that the program keeps pace with inflation.

In 2003, Senator CORZINE further improved the FHA multifamily loan program by securing passage of legislation to boost those limits in high-cost communities around the country.

Specifically, his legislation raised the loan limits in high-cost areas to 140 percent of the statutory base limit and by 170 percent on a project-by-project basis.

These increases have been vitally important in the construction and rehabilitation of affordable rental housing in high-cost States such as New Jersey and my own State of Rhode Island where the shortage of affordable housing has become a crisis.

JON recognizes that at the heart of every family's efforts to educate their children, to find work, to hold work, is the need for safe and affordable housing. Senator CORZINE has been on the vanguard of that effort. I salute him for that.

He has also been particularly concerned about housing for veterans. The Veterans' Administration Home Loan Program provides access to home financing for veterans who often, because of their time spent serving our Nation, have not had the opportunity to build up the credit they need to qualify for a conventional mortgage. Senator CORZINE's legislation to increase veterans' home purchasing power, which became law as part of the Veterans Benefits Improvement Act of 2004, raised the loan limits available under the VA Home Loan Program to allow veterans to obtain mortgages of up to $333,700, the same level available in the traditional mortgage market.

Finally, the Senator from New Jersey has been a fierce advocate for mass transit funding, not in his home State of New Jersey but across this country. He has been particularly effective, though, in helping his home State.

Senator CORZINE was instrumental in providing legislation to help build a commuter rail tunnel under the Hudson River as part of the recently passed Safe, Accountable, Flexible, Efficient Transportation Equity Act: A Legacy for Users. The language that Senator CORZINE included will expedite the proposed rail tunnel under the Hudson River and require the Federal Transit Administration to sign a Full Funding Grant Agreement with New Jersey Transit that will provide the Federal funding needed to complete the tunnel, and in so doing not only will he assist the people of New Jersey, but he will assist the economy of this Nation, since so much is dependent upon transit access through New Jersey to the Eastern Seaboard, Boston, New York and down to Washington.

We all are going to miss Senator CORZINE immensely in the Senate, but he is going forth now to a mission that is equally important; that is, to serve the people of New Jersey as their Governor. I know he will be successful. And I know those values of opportunity and community and fairness and tolerance and decency that exemplified his service in the Senate will mark him as a remarkable Governor for the State of New Jersey.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, knowing JON CORZINE as I think I do, if he had known he was going to have to sit through all these speeches after he spoke, he would have come down here a lot later at night, I suspect, or certainly waited until we got out of town, because that is the nature of this Senator, Governor to be.

I have listened to my colleagues and I listened to his speech. He left us with some important warnings, some important pleas, which I hope colleagues will take seriously. I would incorporate into my comments about JON all of the things Senator SARBANES said. They were a wonderful summary of what he did and how he did it, his accomplishments.

He did veterans, and he has been a passionate advocate for public transportation. He was instrumental in housing. These are the sorts of signal accomplishments you can measure, which he can point to and colleagues have, that define the few years he has been here.

I say a word or two about the things that helped push him in the direction of accomplishing those goals. What has always struck me about JON CORZINE and the thing that has been singled out in a number of comments made by my colleagues is the quality of the person, almost an improbable quality when you measure it against the profession he chose for so many years.

Maybe a comment about Wall Street, certainly a comment that I know JON CORZINE would articulate any number of different times in different ways, that we don't think of people traditionally, with the obvious exceptions, a Bob Rubin, some others. JON CORZINE always kept, No. 1, a great sense of idealism; No. 2, a very strong moral compass that led him to always distinguish between right and wrong; and, No. 3, an integrity about the approach to public life that willingly disclosed great wealth, willingly submitted himself to unbelievable attacks in order to pursue a greater good. Most people would shy away from that today. When you talk to people in the private sector today about running for office, they are quick to say: Do that? Why would I want to do that? Why would I want to subject myself to that? Why would I want to put myself through that scrutiny?

JON CORZINE has always been driven by his sense that there is too much missing in governance today, that there is a bigger purpose than all of us individually, a noble purpose in what we are trying to achieve. He believes unabashedly that Government can be part of the solution, that Government actually helps people. And unlike so much of the rhetoric of the last years that has attacked everything Government does until you have a Katrina, when you understand why you need it, or until you see the potholes in the streets and the bridges falling apart and you begrudgingly acknowledge you need it, JON always believes you need it proactively. He understands the good it can do.

Every one of us who has had the privilege of being here for awhile was impressed by that passion and moral compass he brought to some of the issues. When business people in America were abusing their trust, JON brought this extraordinary credibility to that debate. There are huge provisions, as Senator SARBANES will tell us, and a great deal of guidance through that process that came from this freshman Senator.

Likewise, with respect to Darfur, an issue where the country ought to be providing a sense of moral outrage, JON doggedly and tenaciously pursued that issue without grandstanding, without trying to do it in a way that was sort of hit and run. He stayed at it and got the Senate ultimately to take some measures, though never what we ought to be doing, and the country has yet to do what he knows and understands we ought to be doing.

He always has had a sense of right and wrong. The minimum wage, the incomprehensibility of us being a country where people can live out work values and you can't live, and his sense of injustice at giving a tax cut to people such as him who have been blessed with the fruits of great wealth, who understand that there is a different set of priorities, a sense of outrage that we would be cutting children off of Medicaid, and so on down the list.

I am thrilled, and I know when I was privileged to be in New Jersey, I could feel it in the people of New Jersey who obviously were inundated with an onslaught of confusing and reprehensible kinds of claims in the context of a campaign, which we have seen too much of, but he plowed through that, because of that idealism and his sense of purpose for the State. Those folks are anticipating the same kind of excitement that he said in his comments he will bring to this new challenge.

The people of New Jersey have chosen wisely. They are going to have a leader who will do exactly what Senator SARBANES talked about. He has the opportunity to make that State one of the great laboratories in the country, to do what we are unsuccessful and unwilling to do too often at this moment in our history here in Washington. I almost envy him that opportunity to grab the executive reins and go out and do it. He is going to be an exceptional Governor. He is going to continue to have an impact on what Congress chooses to do because of those priorities that he sets in the State.

There is no question in my mind that our caucus, which has looked to him regularly as sort of the resident expert on issues of fiscal, trade, Wall Street matters, is going to miss that expertise enormously.

I thank this Senator for his service to us, to the country, and we look forward to the service he will provide as Governor of New Jersey.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, I rise to wish Senator JON CORZINE the very best as he goes from service in this body to become the next Governor of the State of New Jersey. I have had the privilege of serving with Senator CORZINE on the Budget Committee. He has been a valued member of that committee. He has made an extraordinary contribution there, always thoughtful and well informed. Senator CORZINE is deeply respected by colleagues on both sides. It is fair to say that no one on the Senate Budget Committee and no one in this Chamber has a better understanding of financial markets or economic issues than Senator JON CORZINE.

On the Budget Committee, Senator CORZINE has warned repeatedly of the risks of exploding deficits and debt. As someone who has been extraordinarily successful in the private sector, and as someone who has displayed in the real world a profound understanding of what moves markets, Senator CORZINE words have weight, especially when he says to the members on the committee and here on the Senate floor that we are running unacceptable risks as we run up the deficit and debt of the United States. Senator CORZINE has time after time alerted us to the risks to the economy of higher interest rates as a result of burgeoning deficits and debt.

Senator CORZINE has told this body and told the country that it is unsustainable to double the foreign holdings of our debt in 5 years. It is remarkable and terribly unfortunate that in 5 years, we have taken the external debt of the United States, which was $1 trillion 5 years ago, to $2 trillion today.

Mr. President, it took, as Senator CORZINE has pointed out, 224 years to run up a trillion dollars of external debt, and that amount has been exceeded in the last 5 years. Senator CORZINE has said consistently and firmly that these are risks that are being run that have the potential to lead to a dramatic increase in interest rates, which would have negative consequences—extremely negative consequences for the American economy. It would threaten economic growth, and has the potential to put us into recession.

Mr. President, we have been fortunate to have someone of JON CORZINE's character and wisdom serving with us in the Senate. I am going to miss Senator CORZINE very much. He has been such a strong member of the Budget Committee—someone to whom we could look for expertise that is highly regarded by all Members of this Chamber.

I know JON CORZINE will do a remarkable job as Governor of the State of New Jersey. As he leaves here, we wish him well. I thank the Chair.

Mr. DAYTON. Mr. President, I also want to join with my colleagues in paying tribute to our departing Senator from New Jersey, Senator JON CORZINE. I met him for the first time when we were both sworn in on January 3 of 2001.

Even before that time, I knew of his success but also his high caliber by virtue of the fact that he was cochairman of a great firm, Goldman Sachs, whose previous contributions to the U.S. Government included John Whitehead, Deputy Secretary of State under President Reagan, and Robert Rubin, the Secretary of the Treasury under President Clinton. Senator CORZINE followed in that tradition of very successful men who could do anything they wanted with their lives for the rest of their lives but had chosen to commit themselves to public service.

It has been an honor and a privilege and a pleasure to serve with Senator CORZINE these last 5 years, to learn from his own wisdom and experience as it relates to so many matters affecting the betterment of our country, and then to watch him forego what would have been a safe track and a relatively easy reelection next year as a Senator because he felt he could be of better service to his fellow citizens from New Jersey by acting as their Governor, going through the rigors and ordeals of another campaign, a challenging endeavor but where he sacrificed himself and his own resources in order to give greater service to the people of New Jersey.

Our loss in the Senate with his departure will be a gain for his fellow citizens from that State as he devotes full time in New Jersey to their better interests. I wish him well. We will miss him. He will carry out even further the great talents he has and his ability to improve his State and our country.

I yield the floor.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, when the Senate returns in January, we unfortunately will be without one of the finest Senators in this body. Senator JON CORZINE will be moving to New Jersey to serve as its Governor. I want to publicly congratulate Senator CORZINE on an impressive victory, and congratulate the people of New Jersey for making an outstanding choice. Their gain is the Senate's loss.

JON CORZINE has been an exceptional Senator largely because he is an exceptional person. It didn't take Senator CORZINE long to demonstrate to his colleagues his intelligence and his impressive knowledge of a broad range of political and economic issues. But perhaps even more important, he quickly convinced members on both sides of the aisle that he possessed a genuine decency and humility.

JON CORZINE surely has one of the most impressive resumes of any American anywhere. He has a remarkable record of accomplishment, both in business and public service. But success never went to his head. And if you are fortunate enough to meet him—no matter who you are or what your place in society—you can be sure that Senator CORZINE will treat you with respect. He is sincere. He listens. And he's humble. It's almost impossible not to like JON CORZINE.

When Senator CORZINE came to Washington just 5 years ago, it didn't take him long to earn both the admiration and the affection of his colleagues. But he wasn't just a nice, smart guy. He also worked on behalf of the citizens of New Jersey and the Nation like there was no tomorrow. And it didn't take long for him to make his mark.

Soon after coming to the Senate, Senator CORZINE played a critical role in efforts to respond to widespread abuses at corporations like Enron. At the time, Congress needed someone who understood corporate America and who could help find balanced solutions that made sense. JON CORZINE stepped to the plate and helped develop one of the most important corporate reforms in American history. That legislation, known as Sarbanes-Oxley, may not bear his name, but it surely bears his mark, and all Americans owe him a great debt of gratitude for his contribution.

Senator CORZINE's economic expertise also helped him become a real leader on budget and fiscal issues. Since coming to office, he has been an outspoken advocate for fiscal responsibility and a leading defender of Social Security. In the last Congress, he headed the Senate Democratic Task Force on Social Security, where he developed the case against privatization long before the issue was in the headlines. Democrats stopped the administration's misguided attempt to privatize Social Security dead in its tracks this year. Senator CORZINE's efforts last year laid the groundwork for much of what we were able to accomplish.

Senator CORZINE also has taken up another important cause that still fails to attract sufficient attention: the genocide in Darfur. After prior mass murders abroad, such as the one in Rwanda, many Americans looked back with regret at our Nation's failure to act. Yet today, in the midst of another terrible genocide, the U.S. response is again woefully and tragically inadequate. JON CORZINE has personally gone to Darfur and has worked hard to focus the Nation's attention on this crisis. It has been a thankless task with no apparent political benefits. For his willingness to pursue this moral cause, he deserves real credit from every American. It will be incumbent on all of us to remain focused on this terrible tragedy after he leaves.

Another cause of great importance on which Senator CORZINE has taken the lead is the effort to prevent terrorism at chemical plants. As Senator CORZINE has told us repeatedly, there are more than 100 chemical facilities around our Nation where a terrorist attack could endanger more than a million people. Unfortunately, security at too many of our plants is grossly inadequate. Senator CORZINE recognized the importance of addressing these security risks now before a catastrophe occurs. Each of us has a responsibility to push forward on this issue he has pushed so tirelessly.

I could go on about the many other issues on which Senator CORZINE has taken a lead from protecting prescription drug benefits of New Jersey seniors to promoting financial literacy to preserving our environment, blocking cuts in student aid and protecting workers against unsafe conditions. In his relatively short time in the Senate, Senator CORZINE has been one of our most active Senators and he has had an impact on a surprisingly broad range of issues.

I also want to take a moment on behalf of the Senate Democratic caucus to publicly thank Senator CORZINE for his work in the last Congress as head of the Democratic Senatorial Campaign Committee. Senator CORZINE had a tough job and was dealt a tough hand. But he worked extremely hard, as he always does, and he did an excellent job.

Let me also express my appreciation to Senator CORZINE for selecting an outstanding member of Congress to replace him. While we will miss Senator CORZINE greatly, BOB MENENDEZ is going to be an excellent Senator for New Jersey. It is a credit to Senator CORZINE to have chosen such a talented and committed public servant, who I am confident will not only represent New Jersey well but will also help this body better represent the great diversity of our Nation.

Now Senator CORZINE moves from Washington to Trenton, where he will take on some very difficult challenges. But, nobody should ever underestimate JON CORZINE. The people of New Jersey have selected a man who not only has extraordinary talent but someone who always give it everything he has. I know he will serve them well and I know at the end of the day, he will remain what he is today: a kind, humble, and principled person who represents the very best of our Nation.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, I just left a small farewell party for my colleague, JON CORZINE of New Jersey. He is, of course, leaving the Senate in a few days to become Governor of the State of New Jersey. Congressman BOB MENENDEZ will be appointed to fill his vacancy and stand for election in about a year.

I am going to miss JON CORZINE for a lot of reasons. First, we have a lot in common. JON was born and raised in the small town of Willy Station, which is just a few miles away from the bustling metropolis of Taylorville in Christian County, IL, just a few miles from where I live. I know a little about the Corzine family today, and I sense what his upbringing was all about. He grew up on a farm, with a dad who raised corn and soybeans. It was not a comfortable and wealthy existence, but it was a great upbringing. He was raised in the Midwestern tradition of working hard. He started at age 13 with his first job. He worked his way through college, going to the University of Illinois where he was a walk-on on the basketball team. He has assured me time and again he was no superstar. But the fact that he did that and served in the Marine Corps and went on to the University of Chicago for a master's degree in business tells me he is a person who had a good work ethic—not only that but a great deal of talent.

JON's career took him to the highest levels in the business world. He was a partner at Goldman Sachs at the age of 33. He was cochair and co-CEO of that investment banking giant at the age of 50. He started there fetching coffee for his superiors. He came up not only quickly but the right way. When he was first running, I remember reading accounts in the New York Times about what kind of a CEO he was. He knew the elevator operator's name, and he would go to the mailroom and talk to the workers there and try to provide financial assistance so that workers could go on to earn a college degree.

That is the same JON CORZINE I came to know in the Senate, a very caring and compassionate individual in so many different ways. He would fight tooth and nail for things he believed in, and he would also pick causes that were not quite that popular and put all of his energy and skill at work on them as well.

I can recall the terrible genocide in Dafur and how he made that his issue. Time and again, he came to the floor of the Senate to remind all of us about that tiny country on the other side of the world and the people being oppressed there. That is JON CORZINE. Time and again, he showed us that you could be both financially successful in life and not lose your bearings when it came to good moral conduct and good values.

When I think about his heroes in life, I share many of them. He used to talk about Paul Douglas, the first man I worked for in the Senate as a college intern. Paul Douglas was from the University of Chicago faculty, and he was a person who inspired many of us, not only because he worked hard and did his best to speak for the common man, but because he was all over the State appreciating the variety of life you can find in Illinois. Then, of course, was his successor and protege, Paul Simon, whom I was honored to succeed in the Senate, also a friend of JON CORZINE's. So we had the Paul Douglas and Paul Simon connection. And, of course, the admiration JON CORZINE had for them said it all.

When I look back at these heroes of JON CORZINE, I realize that we have that much in common—our Illinois roots and a lot more. We come from the same place. We share many of the same values. We fought on the same side of many of the same battles. We share many of the same heroes. Like JON CORZINE, I admired Senators Douglas and Simon. I had the privilege to know and work with them. Paul Douglas helped design Social Security. JON CORZINE helped to save it. Like Paul Douglas, JON CORZINE is a brave champion of civil rights, economic justice, and the environment. Like Paul Douglas, JON CORZINE is unafraid to speak his mind for the good of the country.

All in all, I am certain that Paul Douglas and Paul Simon would approve of the short, though important, Senate career of JON CORZINE. They would thank him, as we all do, for fighting hard and well for people and values of this great Nation. I will miss JON CORZINE. The people of New Jersey have made a wise choice. He will be a good, thoughtful, compassionate leader of their great State. I look forward to working with him for many years to come for the values that we share.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alabama is recognized.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, I want to share my thoughts about JON CORZINE. He had a great record at Goldman Sachs. I didn't really know he was a farm boy. That is something Senator DURBIN added to the mix. I think I had heard that but had forgotten it. He was successful in the financial world in an extraordinary way. He was a marine. Of course, every marine I have known has been shaped by that, and I believe Senator Zell Miller wrote a book saying that everything he ever needed to know he learned in the Marine Corps, or something to that effect.

JON CORZINE has been an active Member of the Senate. I remember the time we spent together in Montgomery, AL, on a civil rights trip. We were at the church that Martin Luther King preached in on Dexter Avenue, the Dexter Avenue Church. We had a discussion at that time about Rosa Parks, whom we have just honored and who recently passed away. At that very site, Martin Luther King led the efforts of the bus boycott that ended the concept that a person must go to the back of the bus because of the color of their skin. JON CORZINE didn't have to go to Montgomery, but he was interested in those issues and he believed strongly in equality and civil rights.

Senator CORZINE has been a strong advocate for the Democratic Party and its principles, heading its campaign committee. We didn't agree on those issues, but he was always courteous and professional. I cannot remember a single harsh word that we have had. In fact, I cannot remember him having a harsh word with any other Senators.

I have enjoyed the opportunity to know JON CORZINE and to gain respect for him. I wish him every success as Governor of the important State of New Jersey. That will be a challenge, but he has the gift and ability necessary to be successful in that job.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I rise today to congratulate and bid farewell to my friend and colleague, JON CORZINE.

Our world has changed quite drastically since JON first joined the Senate. It has been an honor to work with him on the many issues we were forced to confront following the terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001. We will miss JON's leadership and determination on behalf of his constituents in New Jersey and the American people.

While JON has served in the Senate for a relatively short period of time, he leaves an important legacy of leadership on issues ranging from protecting our homeland to crafting legislation that stabilized our financial markets.

Rarely in this body does one Senator see the enactment one of their first bills introduced as a freshman Member. But JON did just that when he called for mandatory Federal standards to protect our Nation's chemical plants and saw that become law.

When the entire corporate and financial community was rocked by pervasive accounting scandals, JON was instrumental in crafting extraordinary changes to accounting oversight that stabilized confidence in our markets when they were teetering. He recognized that Americans were at risk, and he worked tirelessly on their behalf, a legacy that will last well past his last day here in the Capitol.

JON also brought to the Senate an appreciation of open and accountable Government. He saw security and accountability as going hand in hand, a way for citizens to know what their chosen representatives are doing to ensure the health and safety of their own neighborhoods and communities. He recognized the need to balance the ever-changing need for security with the everlasting principles of openness that make our democracy the strongest in the world. I was pleased to work with him to protect the Freedom of Information Act which the current administration has sought to weaken at every turn of the road.

As further testament to JON's leadership and determination, he will certainly be remembered for his work to secure an end to the terrible genocide that the world has witnessed in western Sudan. As the ranking member of the Foreign Operations Subcommittee, I can personally attest that JON repeatedly brought the reality of this terrible tragedy to the attention of all of us. He knew that the solution would not be Democratic or Republican. Instead, he reached across the aisle, demanded a call for action, and spoke eloquently for those without a voice.

I will miss my friend JON CORZINE here in the Senate. I have enjoyed the time we shared working together in this body. Marcelle and I wish him all the best as he moves on to the new and exciting challenges that await him in Trenton. His service to the American people in the United States Senate has been selfless. His departure is a loss for the United States Senate but a great gain for the citizens of New Jersey.

Mr. JOHNSON. Mr. President, I rise today to pay tribute to my colleague, Senator JON CORZINE, who is leaving the Senate and will be sworn in as the Governor of New Jersey on January 17, 2006.

I have greatly appreciated working with Senator CORZINE during his time in the Senate. We have served together on the Banking, Housing and Urban Affairs Committee, the Energy and Natural Resources Committee, and the Budget Committee. His depth of knowledge and experience will be missed on these committees, and in the Senate as a whole.

While Senator CORZINE will be continuing in public service, he has already had a long and distinguished career. After serving in the Marine Corps, he received an MBA from the University of Chicago and began working in the private sector, rising to be the co-chief executive officer at Goldman Sachs. He decided to enter public service and was elected to the Senate in 2000 where he has worked tirelessly on behalf of the people of New Jersey. In November, Senator CORZINE was elected to be Governor of New Jersey and I am confident he will continue his outstanding public service work in this new position.

I am very pleased that while he served in the Senate, Senator CORZINE had the opportunity to visit my home State of South Dakota in 2002 during my re-election campaign. The trip gave him the opportunity to experience the beauty and friendliness of South Dakota, and I know that those who met Senator CORZINE were very impressed with him and pleased that he had visited the State.

Once again, I would like to thank Senator CORZINE for his extraordinary service in the Senate and wish him the very best on his new challenges and opportunities as Governor of New Jersey.

Mr. WYDEN. Mr. President, I rise to say a word or two about our good friend Senator CORZINE, who will be leaving the Senate to assume the governorship of New Jersey.

What I would like to do—because I have heard a lot about Senator CORZINE and his background in Illinois today—is to talk about when I saw him in action for the first time. It was when the Senate was working on the post 9/11 airline relief legislation. A lot of us were very troubled about how that ought to be done. We were sympathetic to the needs of the airlines after 9/11 but concerned about the very large sums of money that were going to be directed to one sector of our economy when many of our important economic sectors were hurt after 9/11; in that period when our country suffered tragically in New York but where there were economic ramifications across the country.

That legislation would not have passed if Senator CORZINE, along with help from our former colleague, Senator Fitzgerald, had not stepped in and figured out how to deal with the financing in a responsible way that protected taxpayers while providing some help to the airlines. Senator CORZINE took out a sharp pencil, using the expertise he had acquired in his years at Goldman Sachs and throughout his training in finance, and figured out how to make sure there was not a bail-out in effect for just one sector that would have taxpayers holding the bag and was sensitive to the needs of all concerned.

I was struck, as I watched him deal with that airline legislation, how in this individual a combination of compassion, fairness, and intelligence worked in a very quiet and dignified way to bring together different parties, different Senators who had widely diverse views, and tackled an issue of great importance.

I think that is exactly what he is going to do when he assumes the Governorship of New Jersey. He is going to bring exactly that combination of fairness, compassion, and brains, always done in a kind of low-key, understated way. I believe the people of New Jersey will benefit as they have in his service here in the U.S. Senate.

We hope Governor CORZINE will come to Oregon because he has expressed an interest in looking at some of our innovative approaches, particularly in the area of health care and the environment. We wish him well and know he is going to have a very distinguished career as the new Governor of New Jersey.

I yield the floor.

Mr. PRYOR. Mr. President, I rise today to pay tribute to the career of my colleague Senator JON CORZINE of New Jersey. This institution has benefited greatly from his presence, and the people of New Jersey can be proud that such an energetic and compassionate man will continue to serve them as their new Governor.

Senator CORZINE is a man that knows how to be successful, whether as a leader in the field of investment banking or as a champion on behalf of the interest of working families as a U.S. Senator. His commitment to public service is commendable, and he has set a positive example for his fellow lawmakers when it comes to establishing the right priorities for Government. His philosophy is one of inclusion, which seeks to ensure that no American is left out of the enterprise of this great Nation.

I am particularly grateful for Senator CORZINE's work on the Banking, Housing and Urban Affairs Committee. His was an early voice for revamping the laws governing corporate accounting practices, long before the events of WorldCom and other accounting scandals destroyed the savings of thousands of loyal employees and shareholders, tarnishing the reputation of corporate America. Before, during, and after the debates that produced the landmark Sarbanes-Oxley corporate accountability legislation, Senator CORZINE was there with the knowledge and energy to provide much needed solutions to a serious problem. He has also championed many other inventive policies to tackle our Nation's problems, including his "Kid's Account" lifetime savings plan, his work to protect individuals from identity theft, and his initiatives to promote financial literacy for all Americans.

In addition to finding creative solutions to the financial problems that our country faces, Senator CORZINE has also been a reliable defender of public education, affordable health care and prescription drugs, and support for our men and women in uniform. As a member of the Senate Budget Committee, he has championed the priorities of everyday, working Americans time and again. He consistently opposed the fiscal policies that have led our Nation to such a dangerous budget deficit, choosing instead to vote for sound economic and social policies that would keep America strong and healthy.

I wish my colleague from New Jersey the best of luck as he enters into this new chapter in his public life. His presence will be missed but his work on behalf of working Americans will not be forgotten.

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, I rise today to pay tribute to a great Senator and the Governor-elect of New Jersey, JON CORZINE. While Senator CORZINE has only been in the Senate for 5 short years, he has made an indelible mark on our Nation and on his Senate colleagues, myself included. I have had the opportunity and pleasure of serving with Senator CORZINE on the Senate Intelligence Committee, seeing firsthand his patriotism, his dedication to our Nation, and his work ethic.

Senator CORZINE has been an invaluable resource here in the Senate, especially as we confronted the corporate scandals of recent years. With his expertise as the former CEO and chairman of Goldman Sachs, we looked to Senator CORZINE during the reform process. He stepped up to the challenge, helping push through sweeping changes in our Nation's corporate governance. I know that he is proud of this accomplishment, and our Nation is better for his efforts.

While Senators come to Washington to represent their States, their actions have consequences for every American citizen. America has been well served by having JON CORZINE in the Senate and I know that the citizens of New Jersey could not have chosen a better man to serve as their Governor. He will bring not only his work ethic and intellect, but a unique blend of Government and corporate experience to bear on the challenges facing New Jersey.

I have been proud to call Senator CORZINE my colleague, and I congratulate him on his election. I also want to wish him luck on the new responsibilities he takes on and the new challenges he will face. Senator CORZINE, you will be missed.

Mr. AKAKA. Mr. President, I rise to join my colleagues in thanking the gentleman from New Jersey, Senator JON CORZINE, for his service to the people of the Garden State and the rest of our country. My colleague and friend brought his extensive experience from corporate America to bear on the business that we conduct here, and our country greatly benefitted from his expertise.

I enjoyed working with Senator CORZINE during the time when I served on the Banking Committee. Under the leadership of Ranking Member SARBANES, we shored up corporate governance through the enactment of Sarbanes-Oxley—the influence of which has been felt in corporate boardrooms, and even nonprofit boardrooms, across America.

The Senate and the Congress will especially miss the dedication of our colleague in the effort to promote economic and financial literacy. Senator CORZINE has been a stalwart in working with me, and Senators SARBANES, STABENOW, ENZI, ALLEN, and others, to bring to light the need to reverse economic and financial illiteracy in our country.

Senator CORZINE has been an important ally in supporting several of my initiatives in this area, including annual efforts to secure and increase funding for the Excellence in Economic Education Act for grades K through 12; efforts to work on college campuses through the College Literacy in Finance and Economics or LIFE Act, S. 468; and annual resolutions designating April as the month for highlighting the need for financial literacy.

I have been a proud cosponsor of his initiatives in this area, S. 923, S. 924, and S. 925. The TANF Financial Education Promotion Act, S. 923, requires a State to specify how it intends to establish goals and take action to promote financial education among parents and caretakers receiving Temporary Assistance for Needy Families assistance. The Education for Retirement Security Act, S. 924, authorizes grants for financial education programs targeted toward mid-life and older Americans, including striving to increase financial and retirement knowledge and reduce individuals' vulnerability to financial abuse and fraud. Finally, the Youth Financial Education Act, S. 925, authorizes grants to State educational agencies for the development and integration of youth financial education programs for students in elementary and secondary schools, as well as a grant to establish and operate a national clearinghouse for instructional materials and information regarding model financial education programs and best practices.

It is clear that my colleague from New Jersey cares about giving people access to additional tools that can help them make decisions about credit and debt management, spending and saving, and essential choices in a world of limited resources, in addition to helping increase their financial acumen so as to avoid being taken in by predatory credit offers and unscrupulous marketing. I commend him for taking this broad view, and wish him and his family well as he goes on to lead the Garden State as its Governor.

Mrs. LINCOLN. Mr. President, today I rise to pay tribute to my friend and colleague Senator and now Governor-elect JON CORZINE. With his election to the Senate in 2000, JON CORZINE has been a source of wisdom and a great friend to me and to many of my colleagues.

JON CORZINE was elected to the Senate after serving as cochairman and cochief executive officer of the investment company Goldman Sachs. During his time in the Senate, he has focused on serving the State of New Jersey, applying his financial expertise to major economic and regulatory issues and pushing a forward-looking, progressive agenda.

Senator CORZINE has pursued new safeguards to protect chemical facilities against terrorist attack, introduced legislation to improve access to education and health care, fought for stronger environmental policies, and lead the effort in Congress to crack down on corporate abuse.

The Senate recently adopted Senator CORZINE's resolution declaring the need for new safeguards at the Nation's vulnerable chemical plants. He also secured Federal funding toward the construction of a second railroad tunnel underneath the Hudson River, long sought by New Jersey's congressional delegation, and won Federal support for a wide variety of community and economic development projects throughout the State of New Jersey.

On a more personal note, it has been a great pleasure for me to work with such a gifted and dedicated public servant. He has never hesitated to put the people of New Jersey and the people of this Nation first. The people of New Jersey have made a wise choice in selecting Senator CORZINE to be the chief executive of their great State. He will take the same enthusiasm and professionalism to the Governor's mansion that he has exhibited here in the Senate.

I wish him well in his new responsibilities. I know that he will be a benefit to the people of his home State of New Jersey. We will miss his passion and insight here in the Senate. But our loss will be the people of New Jersey's gain. Farewell and Godspeed.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, although we will miss him greatly in the Senate, I join my colleagues in congratulating Senator JON CORZINE on his election as Governor of New Jersey. It has been a pleasure to serve with JON on the Intelligence Committee and to work with him on issues of corporate accountability. He has been a strong and determined leader here, and I know he will continue to make the people of New Jersey proud in his new position.

JON CORZINE has led a distinctly American life. He grew up on a family farm. He served his country in the Marine Corps Reserves. He had extraordinary success in business as a self-made man. And he has continued to serve his country in public life, first as a Senator and soon as a Governor. JON loves America and fights for what he believes is best for our people.

In the Senate, JON has used the financial expertise he gained at Goldman Sachs to become a singularly credible voice for corporate reform. He was a driving force on the landmark Sarbanes-Oxley legislation, which cracked down on corporate abuses such as those that led to the Enron and WorldCom scandals. He has been a leader on strengthening oversight of the mutual fund industry and on protecting the financial privacy of Americans. JON has also been at the forefront of promoting financial literacy, so that Americans can manage their personal finances wisely.

Working with JON on the Intelligence Committee, I have seen JON's piercing mental acumen and commitment to protecting our country. Following the September 11 attacks, which took a heavy toll on his State, JON recognized the weakness of our system of chemical plant security. He seized that issue and did not let go. In October, Congress finally passed mandatory security requirements at chemical plants based on JON's work. That this necessary improvement in our security will be substantially improved is due to his tenacity.

On every issue, JON has been outspoken in support of policies that benefit working Americans. He has fought for universal health care, for expanded student aid, and for full funding for education programs. JON has also been a passionate voice for human rights around the world. Just last month, the Senate approved the Darfur Peace and Accountability Act, which JON sponsored with Senator BROWNBACK, to help stop the genocide in the Sudan.

During his short time in the Senate, JON CORZINE has made a big impact. His is a unique voice that will be personally missed. I join my colleagues in saluting JON on his election as Governor and in wishing him well in his new position.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I am proud today to join in honoring JON CORZINE and congratulating him on his outstanding service here in the Senate. I have had the pleasure of working with him for 5 years and have found him to be a tremendous ally on a number of issues, as well as a great friend and colleague.

This Senate has benefited enormously from his hard work and commitment since he came to this body in 2001. I have served with him on both the Foreign Relations and the Budget Committees, and I have seen him work diligently and effectively, with members from both sides of the aisle, and always in the best interests of the American people.

Senator CORZINE has led the effort to stop the ongoing violence in Darfur with the bipartisan Darfur Peace and Accountability Act of 2005, of which I am a cosponsor. I applaud his efforts in this area, as well as his work to reaffirm support for the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide. This is a critically important legacy as the world faces the tragedy in Sudan. There has never been a more important time for the U.S. to recommit itself to ending the crime of genocide, and Senator CORZINE has taken a lead role in that effort.

We have also worked together on issues of great concern to us both—racial profiling and the death penalty. On both these issues, Senator CORZINE has been a courageous voice for justice and fairness. He has been steadfast in his efforts to ban racial profiling, a practice that runs contrary to the fundamental American value of equal treatment under the law. And he has been just as dedicated in focusing attention on the glaring flaws in the administration of capital punishment, and in calling for a thorough, nationwide review of the death penalty.

Finally, I want to say that I am deeply grateful for Senator CORZINE's support for the amendments I offered during the Senate's consideration of the PATRIOT Act in October of 2001. I was proud to have his support that night, and I have been proud to work with him as a cosponsor of the SAFE Act. I can't think of a better time to thank him for his work to protect Americans' freedoms than today, in the midst of a fight to make reasonable changes to the PATRIOT Act.

JON CORZINE has earned the utmost admiration and respect during his time in the Senate. I will miss him as a colleague and friend, but I am so glad that he will continue to serve the people of New Jersey with such dedication and integrity. I have no doubt that he will be an outstanding Governor, and that he will continue to be a national leader on the issues to which he was so committed in the Senate.

So today I join my colleagues in thanking Senator CORZINE for his work in this body. He is a great public servant and a good friend. I wish him all the best.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Mr. President, it is my honor today to pay tribute and bid a fond farewell to my colleague and friend Senator JON S. CORZINE of New Jersey. Senator CORZINE as we know will be leaving the Senate next month to serve as New Jersey's Governor, and before he leaves us to begin what I can only be certain will be a wildly successful and innovative tenure as New Jersey's chief executive, I thought it appropriate to take the time to celebrate not only Mr. CORZINE's fine service in the Senate but his inspiring life story as well.

In many ways, JON CORZINE's life is an example of the American dream fulfilled. Mr. CORZINE was born on New Year's Day, 1947, and grew up on his family's farm in Willey's Station, IL. His father ran the farm and sold insurance; his mother was a public school teacher. Through his own hard work and that of his family, Mr. CORZINE attended the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign, where he graduated Phi Beta Kappa in 1969. After graduating college, Mr. CORZINE served his country by enlisting in the U.S. Marine Corps Reserves, and he continued in the Reserves until 1975, rising to the rank of sergeant in his infantry unit.

After Senator CORZINE's Active Duty was up, he began what would become a long and successful career in the finance sector. His first job was with the Continental Illinois National Bank in Chicago, where he worked as a portfolio analyst. At the same time, Mr. CORZINE began taking night classes at the University of Chicago's Graduate School of Business, where he received his MBA in 1973.

In 1975, after working briefly at a regional bank in Ohio, Mr. CORZINE was recruited to go to work for the New York investment firm Goldman Sachs as a bond trader, beginning what would be a meteoric rise through the company's ranks. After only 5 years, Mr. CORZINE was named a partner in the firm. In 1994, Mr. CORZINE became both the firm's chairman and chief executive officer. Through hard work, Senator CORZINE rose from his family's farm in rural Illinois to being the chief executive officer of a New York investment firm.

But the story doesn't end there for Mr. CORZINE had a very successful tenure at the helm of Goldman Sachs. When he took over in 1994, the proud and respected firm was in a period of some decline. But Mr. CORZINE and his team turned the company's fortunes upwards. During his 5 years as chief executive, Mr. CORZINE also oversaw the firm's successful transition from a private partnership to a public company.

While serving as chief executive, Mr. CORZINE also demonstrated a passion for public service. Under his leadership, Goldman Sachs was a strong corporate citizen, expanding its community outreach and philanthropic programs. Mr. CORZINE also chaired a Presidential commission that studied how capital budgeting could be used to increase Federal investment in education.

It is this commitment to public service that I saw JON CORZINE bring to his work in the Senate everyday. Elected in 2000 by the people of New Jersey, Senator CORZINE has been a tireless advocate for corporate accountability, helping co-author the Sarbanes-Oxley Act, and has worked to protect our environment, where he has been a steadfast ally in the fights to prevent drilling in the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge and to tackle climate change. On the international front, Senator CORZINE has sponsored the Darfur Accountability Act, an act I am proud to cosponsor, which seeks to address the terrible genocide currently occurring in the Darfur region of Sudan.

What I will remember most about Senator CORZINE's tenure is his commitment to strengthening our Nation's homeland security. Having worked with Senator CORZINE on several homeland security issues, I know firsthand that he was determined to do everything in his power to protect the American people from another terrorist attack. Senator CORZINE and I worked together in passing legislation that created the 9/11 Commission, whose service to the American people we are all well aware of. In addition, Senator CORZINE has been a leader in legislative efforts to increase security at our Nation's chemical plants, which remain vulnerable to attack. Senator CORZINE crafted strong legislation aimed at protecting these facilities, and I remain hopeful that Congress will act on this area of great vulnerability. I will continue to be inspired by the dedication Senator CORZINE applied to this critical issue.

Let me end my statement, Mr. President, by taking the time to thank JON

CORZINE for his service in the Senate. I wish him, his wife Carla Katz, his daughter Jennifer, and his two sons, Josh and Jeffrey, nothing but the best for the future, and I look forward to seeing the fine things I know he will continue to do for the people of New Jersey, now as their Governor. Once again, thank you, JON CORZINE.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, I rise to speak briefly about our colleague Senator JON CORZINE, congratulate him on his recent election as Governor of New Jersey, and also thank him for his great contribution to the Senate and to the entire country during the time he served here.

JON came to the Senate from a very successful career on Wall Street. We are all aware of that. He came here for the best of reasons: his desire to make a difference, to improve the situation of average Americans in this country, to see that this country pursued an economic course that created opportunity and jobs for the people he represented in New Jersey and throughout this country.

On economic issues, I think all of us in the Senate came to believe—I certainly did—that no one was better able to read the tea leaves about what was happening economically in this country, what was happening in the various economic statistics which come out each week, than JON CORZINE. He could understand the economic circumstance we continue to struggle with in this country and the impact it is having on the lives of average Americans.

While he has been here, he has demonstrated a passion for fairness to all in our society. He has not been a representative of Wall Street. He has been a representative of the great mass of the American people. He has looked to raise the standard of living of all Americans and lift all boats. We all owe him a debt of gratitude for that passion he has brought to this job.

I serve as the ranking Democrat on the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee. We have been very fortunate that JON has served on that committee as well. He has been an active participant in the writing of energy legislation, which we passed earlier this year. He made a great contribution in that legislation. In short, JON has had a very distinguished career in the Senate. I am confident he will have a very distinguished career as Governor of New Jersey and will have a very long and successful career in public life.

Again I congratulate him on his victory. I thank him for his service and his friendship, and I look forward to opportunities to work with him again in his new capacity as Governor of New Jersey.

I yield the floor.

Mrs. CLINTON. Mr. President, I wish to take this opportunity to say farewell to the distinguished Senator from New Jersey, Mr. JON S. CORZINE. In January, he will resign his seat, bound for greener pastures. While he will be missed tremendously in this Chamber, I know that, as Governor, he will serve the people of New Jersey well.

Senator CORZINE and I were elected to the Senate in the same year, and I have since been glad to have his friendship and advice. I would also like to say, how fortunate New Jersey has been to be represented by Senator CORZINE. I am proud of the work that we did together in the time we shared in the Senate and am sad to see him go.

Along with his dedication to building a practical, progressive Government, Senator CORZINE always brought a fresh and original perspective to this body. His previous career as cochairman and CEO at Goldman Sachs allowed him the benefit of invaluable experience in helping to solve the problems that face our economy and our financial sector. His combination of principle and practice, are, more than anything, what the Senate will sorely miss.

Consider Senator CORZINE's role in crafting the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002. His work on this bipartisan legislation helped produce reforms that, in the wake of corporate abuse scandals, restored confidence in the markets, protected shareholders, and ensured that additional and more impartial oversight would act to prevent the damage to our economy that might flow from unchecked corporate malfeasance. Senator CORZINE stood by his principles, worked with Democrats and Republicans, and used his expertise to help craft legislation to promote ethics, accountability, and economic growth.

We can also look to Senator CORZINE's efforts to end the crisis ravaging Darfur, Sudan. I was proud to cosponsor the legislation by Senator CORZINE and Senator SAM BROWNBACK to expand aid to the African Union and provide a framework for tackling the ongoing violence. We can all be proud that Senator CORZINE was able to help usher the Darfur Peace and Accountability Act through the Senate. His dedication to the issue and commitment to stopping the genocide is admirable, to say the least. Senator CORZINE has stood by his values, and worked hard to see those values reflected in the work of the Senate, the Congress, and the Nation.

Recently, I joined Senator CORZINE in introducing legislation to help the victims of sexual assault receive the medical treatment they need and deserve. Senator CORZINE believes as I do that we have a duty to these women; a woman who has already suffered so much should not have to worry about whether she will be offered emergency contraception to prevent an unwanted pregnancy. Senator CORZINE's passion for protecting and improving access to health care and medical treatment, and to protecting the rights of patients, is truly exemplary.

Finally, Senator CORZINE served New Jersey and his constituents with compassion and dedication in the days, weeks, months, and years following the attacks on September 11, 2001. New Jersey and New York shared in so much grief and loss that day, and Senator CORZINE was tireless in his commitment to the citizens of New Jersey who bore the burden of that loss.

In the years since, he has remained steadfast in fighting for the families of 9/11 and fighting to strengthen our Nation to prevent future acts of terrorism. His hard work to secure our Nation's vulnerable chemical facilities serves as a noteworthy example. I was proud to cosponsor his legislation to safeguard our Nation's chemical plants, the Chemical Security Act, and share in his commitment to doing all we can to strengthen America's homeland security.

I would also acknowledge Senator CORZINE's tenure at the Democratic Senatorial Campaign Committee. In his leadership at the DSCC and throughout his time in office, Senator CORZINE served with honesty, integrity, and a passion for improving the lives of all Americans.

JON CORZINE's absence will long be felt in the Senate, as will his good work. He brought his expertise and values to bear on the challenges facing our economy, our security, and our country.

To the great benefit of the citizens of New Jersey, JON CORZINE—while retiring from the Senate will bring his values, his expertise, his passion, and his dedication with him to the Governorship of the Garden State. The citizens of New Jersey will no doubt continue to be fortunate to have JON CORZINE in their corner.

Mr. BROWNBACK. Mr. President, as Senator CORZINE spends his final days representing the people of New Jersey in the Senate, I wish to spend a few moments speaking about his commitment to human rights and the pressing crisis of genocide in Darfur, Sudan.

I have worked on the issue of war and humanitarian disaster in Sudan for several years. But nearly 2 years ago, as the Comprehensive Peace Agreement for Sudan was in its final negotiations, we became aware of the unfolding crisis in Sudan's western region of Darfur. It was Senator CORZINE who came to me to work together and champion this issue. We joined each other on the Senate floor in countless speeches showing photos of the anguish in Darfur. We joined each other in seeing the Darfur Peace and Accountability Act through the Senate. We joined each other to secure funding for the security and humanitarian needs of the people.

I have had the opportunity to work with many Members across party lines on human rights and humanitarian issues. I remember partnering with Paul Wellstone on the Trafficking Victims' Protection Act. Some called us strange bedfellows since we were at opposite ends of the political spectrum. But I have learned an important lesson: these issues are sufficiently urgent that ideological and partisan differences should not be allowed to impede cooperation, especially where lives and basic freedoms are at stake. And such has been true in the case of Darfur. I have no doubt that Senator CORZINE's commitment and perseverance to raise this issue to the highest levels has made a difference to the people of Darfur. I also saw firsthand his sincere compassion and commitment to the suffering of the world when we traveled to tsunami-ravaged South Asia together earlier this year.

I will always consider Senator CORZINE an ally and a friend on one of the greatest moral issues in foreign policy today. In his absence, I will look to my other colleagues to ensure that this crisis is not easily forgotten.

As we close out 2005, I urge my colleagues to secure additional funding for the African Union in the Defense Appropriations conference and I urge my colleagues in the House to pass the Darfur Peace and Accountability Act. Without continued action by the United States and the international community, more lives will be lost.

I would like to take this opportunity to formally and publicly thank Senator CORZINE for his partnership and his commitment to the people of Darfur. I express my very best wishes as he leaves this body to become the next Governor of New Jersey.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California is recognized.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, I believe I am to be recognized by unanimous consent directly following the tributes to Senator CORZINE. I would like to give my heartfelt thanks to the Senator from New Jersey. He has been indeed a good Senator. His tenure here has distinguished him. That is clearly recognized by people of New Jersey. I believe he is going to be a great Governor for that great State.

Mr. SARBANES. Will the Senator yield me 30 seconds?

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Certainly.

Mr. SARBANES. I thank the very able Senator from California for her yielding to allow these tributes to be paid to Senator CORZINE. I know she has been here quite a while waiting to speak on another issue. It was extremely gracious of her to do that. I wanted to recognize that and thank her very much.

Mr. CORZINE. Will the Senator yield for my last word?

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. I certainly will.

Mr. CORZINE. I am appreciative of the Senator's gracious and kind words as well. I follow with great interest her views and visions on a lot of major issues of the day. I know she is going to speak on one of the more important ones in a few minutes. I am particularly appreciative of her kindness.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California is recognized.

THE PATRIOT ACT

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, I rise today as a 12-year member of the Senate Judiciary Committee and a 5-year member of the Senate Intelligence Committee. I do so indeed with a very heavy heart. I have had, until now, great confidence in America's intelligence activities. I have assured people time and time again that what happens at home has always been conducted in accordance with the law.

I played a role in the PATRIOT Act. I moved one of the critical amendments having to do with the wall and the FISA court. Today's allegations as written in the New York Times really question whether this is in fact true. I read it with a heavy heart, yet without knowing the full story.

Let me be clear. Domestic intelligence collection is governed by the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act, known as FISA. This law sets out a careful set of checks and balances that are designed to ensure that domestic intelligence collection is conducted in accordance with the Constitution, under the supervision of judges and with accountability to the Congress of the United States.

Specifically, FISA allows the Government to wiretap phones or to open packages, but only with a showing to a special court—the FISA court—and after meeting a legal standard that requires that the effort is based on probable cause to believe the target is an agent of a foreign power.

Let me cite two sources. The first is a 1978 report by the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence. In the report is a comment by the then-chairman of that committee, Senator Birch Bayh. He is talking about the FISA bill that had just come to the floor in 1978:

The bill requires a court order for electronic surveillance, defined therein, conducted for foreign intelligence purposes within the United States or targeted against the international communications of particular United States persons who are in the United States. The bill establishes the exclusive means by which such surveillance may be conducted.

That is the bill, FISA, which was passed in 1978.

Second, in late 2001 this subject came up again on the Senate Intelligence Committee. The Senate Intelligence Committee discussed this subject and amended at that time in its authorization bill National Security Act section 502, which is the reporting of intelligence activities other than covert action.

Section 502 states:

To the extent consistent with due regard for the protection from unauthorized disclosure of classified information relating to sensitive intelligence sources and methods or other exceptionally sensitive matters, the Director of Central Intelligence and the heads of all departments, agencies, and other entities of the United States Government involved in intelligence activities shall:

(1) keep the congressional intelligence committees—

It doesn't say only the chairman and the vice chairman—fully and currently informed of all intelligence activities other than a covert action (as defined in section 503(e)), which are not the responsibility of, are engaged in by, or are carried out for or on behalf of any department, agency, or entity of the United States Government, including any significant anticipated intelligence activity and any significant intelligence failure.

And (2) furnish the congressional intelligence committees any information or material concerning intelligence activities, other than covert actions, which is within their custody or control, and which is requested by either of the congressional intelligence committees in order to carry out its authorized responsibilities.

At that time, we had this discussion about just the chairman and the vice chairman receiving certain information, and this act was amended, and section (b) was added to the National Security Act, called "form and contents of certain reports." It was to clarify what the form and content of the reporting to the committee would be. And the wording is as follows:

Any report relating to a significant anticipated intelligence activity or a significant intelligence failure that is submitted to the congressional intelligence committees for the purposes of subsection (a)(1) shall be in writing and shall contain the following:

(1) a concise statement of any fact pertinent to such report;

(2) an explanation of the significance of the intelligence activity or intelligence failure covered by such report.

And then section (c) was added, "standards and procedures for certain reports," that those standards and procedures would hereby be established.

What has happened is that it has become increasingly used just to notify a very few people. There are 535 Members of the Senate and the House of Representatives of the United States.

If the President of the United States is not going to follow the law and he simply alerts eight Members, that doesn't mean he doesn't violate a law. I repeat, that doesn't mean he doesn't violate a law. FISA is the exclusive law in this area, unless there is something I missed, and please, someone, if there is, bring it to my attention.

Section 105(f) of FISA allows for emergency applications where time is of the essence. But even in these cases, a judge makes the final decision as to whether someone inside the United States of America, a citizen or a non-citizen, is going to have their communications wiretapped or intercepted. The New York Times reports that in 2004, over 1,700 warrants for this kind of wiretapping activity were approved by the FISA Court. The fact of the matter is, FISA can grant emergency approval for wiretaps within hours and even minutes, if necessary.

In times of war, FISA section 111 states this:

Notwithstanding any other law, the President, through the Attorney General, may authorize electronic surveillance without a court order under this title to acquire foreign intelligence information for a period not to exceed 15 calendar days following a declaration of war by the Congress.

I would argue the resolution authorizing use of force was not a declaration of war. I read it this morning carefully. It does not authorize the President of the United States to do anything other than use force. It doesn't say he can wiretap people in the United States of America. And apparently, perhaps with some change, but apparently this activity has been going on unbeknownst to most of us in this body and in the other body now since 2002.

The newspaper, the New York Times, states that the President unilaterally decided to ignore this law and ordered subordinates to monitor communications outside of this legal authority.

In the absence of authority under FISA, Americans up till this point have been confident—and we have assured them—that such surveillance was prohibited.

This is made explicit in chapter 119 of title 18 of the criminal code which makes it a crime for any person without authorization to intentionally intercept any wire, oral, or electronic communication.

As a member of the Senate Judiciary and Intelligence Committees, I have been repeatedly assured by this administration that their efforts to combat terrorism were being conducted within the law, specifically within the parameters of the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act which, as I have just read, makes no exception other than 15 days following a declaration of war.

We have changed aspects of that law at the request of the administration in the USA PATRIOT Act to allow for a more aggressive but still lawful defense against terror. So there have been amendments. But if this article is accurate, it calls into question the integrity and credibility of our Nation's commitment to the rule of law.

I refreshed myself this morning on the fourth amendment to the Bill of Rights of the Constitution of the United States. Here is what it says:

The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects, against unreasonable search and seizures, shall not be violated, and no Warrants shall issue, but upon probable cause, supported by Oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the place to be searched, and the persons or things to be seized.

Clearly an intercept, a wiretap, is a search. It is a common interpretation. A wiretap is a search. You are looking for something. It is a search. It falls under the fourth amendment.

Again, the New York Times states that a small number of Senators, as I said, were informed of this decision by the President. That doesn't diminish the import of this issue, and that certainly doesn't mean that the action was within the law or legal.

What is concerning me, as a member of the Intelligence Committee, is if eight people, rather than 535 people, can know there is going to be an illegal act and they were told this under an intelligence umbrella—and therefore, their lips are sealed—does that make the act any less culpable? I don't think so.

The resolution passed after September 11 gave the President specific authority to use force, including powers to prevent further terrorist acts in the form of force. I would like to read it. I read Public Law 107-40, 107th Congress:

Sec. 1. Short title.

This joint resolution may be cited as the "Authorization for Use of Military Force".

Sec. 2. Authorization for Use of United States Armed Forces.

(A) In General.—That the President is authorized to use all necessary and appropriate force against those nations, organizations, or persons he determines planned, authorized, committed, or aided the terrorist attacks that occurred on September 11, 2001, or harbored such organizations or persons, in order to prevent any future acts of international terrorism against the United States by such nations, organizations, or persons.

Then it goes on to say:

Consistent with section 8(a)(1) of the War Powers Resolution, the Congress declares that this section is intended to constitute specific statutory authorization within the meaning of section 5(b) of the War Powers Resolution.

This is use of force. It is not use of wiretapping or electronic surveillance of American citizens or those without citizenship within the confines of the United States. That is the jurisdiction of the FISA Court. There is a procedure, and it is timely.

As a matter of fact, we got into this rather seriously in the Judiciary Committee. At the time we wrote the PATRIOT Act, I offered an amendment to change what is called "the wall" between domestic intelligence-gathering agencies and foreign intelligence-gathering agencies from a "primary purpose" for the collection of foreign intelligence to a "significant purpose." We had a major discussion in the committee, as is the American way. We were making public policy. We discussed what primary purpose meant. We discussed in legal terms what significant purpose meant.

So this was a conscious loosening of a standard in the FISA law to permit the communication of one element of Government with the other and transfer foreign intelligence information from one element of the Government to the other.

That is the way this is done, by law. We are a government of law. The Congress was never asked to give the President the kind of unilateral authority that appears to have been exercised.

Mr. BYRD. Right.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. I was heartened when Senator SPECTER also said that he believed that if the New York Times report is true—and the fact that they have withheld the story for a year leads me to believe it is true, and I have heard no denunciation of it by the administration—then it is inappropriate, it is a violation of the law.

How can I go out, how can any Member of this body go out, and say that under the PATRIOT Act we protect the rights of American citizens if, in fact, the President is not going to be bound by the law, which is the FISA court?

And there are no exceptions to the FISA court.

So Senator SPECTER, this morning, as the chairman of the Judiciary Committee, announced that he would hold hearings on this matter the first thing next year. I truly believe this is the most significant thing I have heard in my 12 years. I am so proud of this Government because we are governed by the rule of law, and so few countries can really claim that. I am so proud that nobody can be picked up in the middle of the night and thrown into jail without due process, and that they have due process. That is what makes us different. That is why our Government is so special, and that is why this Constitution is so special. That is why the fourth amendment was added to the Bill of Rights—to state clearly that searches and seizures must be carried out under the parameter of law, not on the direction of a President unilaterally.

So I believe the door has been opened to a very major investigation and set of circumstances. I think people who know me in this body know I am not led toward hyperbole, but I cannot stress what happened when I read this story. And everything I hold dear about this country, everything I pledge my allegiance to in that flag, is this kind of protection as provided by the Constitution of the United States and the laws we labor to discuss, argue, debate, enact, then pressure the other body to pass, and then urge the President to sign. That is our process.

If the President wanted this authority, he should have come to the Intelligence Committee for an amendment to FISA, and he did not. The fact that this has been going on since 2002—it is now the end of 2005. Maybe 8 people in these 2 bodies in some way, shape, or form may have known something about it, but the rest of us on the Intelligence Committees did not.

That is simply unacceptable.

I yield the floor.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Minnesota.

Mr. DAYTON. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from California for her remarks and associate myself with them. I commend her for taking on this vital issue affecting all Americans.

I ask unanimous consent that the previous order be modified to permit Senator BYRD to precede me in speaking order.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from West Virginia.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I thank the very distinguished Senator from Minnesota for his kindness and his courtesy in yielding to me. I want to say there is one thing I am sorry about with respect to the Senator from Minnesota. He made a bad decision some time ago. I wish he had not made it, and I begged him to retract on it and say he would not do it. He says he is not going to run again. I am sorry about that. He is one of the immortal 23 Senators who voted against that resolution that the Senator from California is talking about. I voted against it. I have been in the Senate for 47 years, and that is the vote of which I am most proud because in voting that way, I stood for this, the Constitution of the United States. That Constitution does not give any President the power to declare war. It says Congress shall have the power to declare war. I voted against that resolution, the best vote I have cast in 47 years in this Senate, and I am proud that the Senator from Minnesota can carry that tribute with him to the grave. I thank him and congratulate him. Again, I thank him for yielding to me.

Mr. President, I believe in America. Let me say that again. I believe in America. I believe in the dream of the Founders and Framers of our inspiring Constitution. I believe in the spirit that drove President Abraham Lincoln to risk all to preserve the Union. I believe in what President Kennedy challenged America to be—America, the great experiment of democracy.

Where the strong are also just and the weak can feel secure, the soul and promise of America stands as a beacon, praise God, of freedom and a protector of liberty which lights and energizes the people around the world. Today, sadly, that beacon is dimmed. This administration's America is becoming a place where the strong are arrogant and the weak are ignored. Fie on the administration.

Yes, we hear high-flung language from the White House about bringing democracy to a land where democracy has never been. We seem mesmerized with glorious rhetoric about justice and liberty, but does the rhetoric really match the reality of what our country has become?

Since the heinous attacks of September 11, I speak of the actions of our own Government, actions that have undermined the credibility of this great Nation around the world. These actions taken one at a time may seem justified, but taken as a whole they form an unsettling picture and tell a troubling story. Do we remember the abuses at Abu Ghraib? They were explained as an aberration. Do we remember the abuses at Guantanamo Bay? They were denied as an exaggeration. Now we read about this so-called policy of rendition—what a shame—a policy where the U.S. taxpayers are funding secret prisons in foreign lands. What a word, "rendition." What a word, "rendition." Shame. It sounds so vague, almost harmless. But the practice of rendition is abhorrent.

Let me say that again. It sounds so vague, almost harmless, but the practice of rendition is abhorrent—abhorrent.

The administration's practice of rendition is an affront, an affront to the principles of freedom, the very opposite of principles we claim we are trying to transplant to Iraq and to other rogue nations.

The administration claims that rendition is a valuable weapon in the war on terror. But what is the value of having America's CIA sit as judge and jury while deciding just who might be a threat to our national security? Such determinations receive no review by a court of law—none. The CIA simply swings into action, abducts a person from some foreign country and flies them off to who knows where, with no judicial review of guilt or innocence. A person can be held in secret prisons in unnamed countries or even shipped off to yet another country to face torture at the hands of the secret police of brutal governments.

Is that what we want? Is this the America that our Founders conceived? Is this the America that Nathan Hale died for, when he said I only regret that I have but one life to lose for my country? Is this the America that he died for? Is this the America that our Founders conceived? Is this the America of which millions of people dreamed? Is this, I ask the Senate, the beacon of freedom inspiring other nations to follow?

The United States should state clearly and without question that we will not torture prisoners and that we will abide by the treaties that we signed, because to fail to do so is to lose the very humanity, the morality that makes America different, that makes America the hope for individual liberty around the world.

The disgusting, degrading, and damaging practice of rendition should cease immediately. Is this what Patrick Henry was talking about—give me liberty or give me death? It is not about who they are. "It's not about who they are. It's about who we are." Those are the words of my colleague Senator JOHN MCCAIN, bless his heart. Senator MCCAIN is a senior member of the Senate Armed Services Committee. He is a former prisoner of war. He knows what it is all about. And he is exactly right. There is no moral high ground in torture. There is no moral high ground in the inhumane treatment of prisoners. Our misguided, thuggish practice of rendition has put a major blot on American foreign policy.

Now comes this similarly alarming effort to reauthorize the PATRIOT Act, retaining provisions that devastate many of our own citizens' civil liberties here at home. What is happening? What is happening to our cherished America? Let us stop and look and listen and think. What is happening to our cherished America?

Any question raised about the wisdom of shredding constitutional protections of civil liberties with roots that trail back centuries is met with the disclaimer that the world has changed and that the 9/11 attacks are, in effect, a green light. Get that, a green light to trash this Constitution, to seize private library records. Hear that.

Suppose I want to get a book out of the library. Suppose I want to read "Loves Labors Lost." The disclaimer that the world has changed and that the 9/11 attacks are in effect a green light to trash the Constitution, to seize private library records—suppose I want to read about "A Tale of Two Cities." They are going to seize those library records? To search private property—how about that—without the knowledge of the owner? If you want to go in my house without my knowledge, without my wife's knowledge, to spy on ordinary citizens accused of no crime in a manner is a sick—a sick, s-i-c-k, perversion of our system of justice and it must not be allowed.

Paranoia must not be allowed to chip away at our civil liberties. Don't let it happen. The United States of America must not adopt the thuggish tactics of our enemies—no. We must not trash the fourth amendment because the Senate is being stampeded at the end of a congressional session. No.

Government fishing expeditions with search warrants written by FBI agents is not what the Framers had in mind. It is not what Benjamin Franklin had in mind. It is not what Morris had in mind. It is not what James Wilson had in mind. Spying on ordinary, unsuspecting citizens—not with that in mind. Without their knowledge? No. That is not what the Framers had in mind. Handing the Government unilateral authority to keep all evidence secret from a target so that it may never be challenged in a court of law is not what the Framers had in mind.

Yesterday, I believe it was, we heard reports that the military has spied on Americans simply because they exercised their right to peaceably assemble and to speak their minds. What disgrace. What a shame. Today we hear, yes, we hear today that the military is tapping phone lines in our own country without the consent of a judge. Can you believe that? Here in this country, where liberty is supposed to prevail.

Go and ask that Statue of Liberty. Is that what it stands for?

No. Labeling civil disobedience and political dissent as domestic terrorism is not what the Framers had in mind.

Read history. What is the matter with us? Have we gone berserk? Read history. That is not what they had in mind.

Our Nation is the most powerful nation in the world. Why? Because our Nation was founded on a principle of liberty. Benjamin Franklin said "those who would give up essential Liberty, to purchase a little temporary Safety, deserve neither Liberty nor Safety." Our Founding Fathers, intent on addressing the abuses they had suffered at the hands of an overzealous government, established—yes, it did—established a system of checks and balances, ensuring that there is a separation of powers—there is a separation of powers. Read it in the Constitution, article I, article II, article III—a separation of powers so that no one body may run amok with its agenda. These checks are what safeguards freedom for you, Mr. President, and for me and for all others in this land. These checks are what safeguard freedom, and the American people are looking to us—yes, they are looking through those lenses there, they are looking at us, yes. The people out on the broad prairies, out on the plains, out in the valleys, out on the great shores, the frozen wastes of the North Pole, and, yes, that liberty extends everywhere. That American liberty extends everywhere. And nobody may run amok with its agenda.

These checks are what safeguard freedom, and the American people are looking to us—you, and me, Senator, you, Senator, and you, Mr. President—looking to us now to restore and protect that freedom.

So many have died protecting those freedoms. And we owe it to those brave men and women to deliberate meaningfully and to ultimately protect those freedoms that Americans cherish so deeply. The American people deserve nothing less.

Earlier today, the Senate voted to stop a bill that would have allowed the abuses of American civil liberties to continue for another 4 years. Shame. The message of this vote is not just about the PATRIOT Act but the message that the Senate can stand up, the Senate can stand against an overreaching Executive of any party, any party, any party that has sacrificed our liberties and stained our standing before the world.

The PATRIOT Act has gone too far. It has gone too far. Secret renditions should be stopped. Torture must be outlawed. Our military should not spy on our own people.

The Senate has spoken. Let us secure our country but not by destroying our liberties.

Thank Almighty God for this Constitution and the Framers who wrote it, and the Founders of our Nation who risked their lives and their fortunes and their sacred honor. Thank God for checks and balances. Thank God for the Senate, and may it always stand for the right.

I thank all Senators. I again thank the distinguished Senator from Minnesota. I want to tell him that I wish he and his family and loved ones a merry Christmas, a merry Christmas. I thank him.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BURR). Under the previous order, the Senator from Minnesota is recognized.

Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, parliamentary inquiry: What is the order?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is notified that there is no order after the Senator from Minnesota.

Mr. MCCAIN. I ask my friend to indulge me. I ask unanimous consent I follow the Senator from Minnesota.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. MCCAIN. I thank the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Minnesota.

Mr. DAYTON. Mr. President, I want to associate myself with the remarks made by the great Senator from West Virginia, and he is a great Senator. His 47 years of experience here and wisdom have made him an invaluable Member of this body, a leader of this body, an invaluable mentor to newcomers such as myself, and his fidelity to the Constitution, his understanding of history, his understanding of the appropriate relationship of this body, as an independent branch of Government, with the executive branch has been patriotic, courageous, and right.

I thank him for his remarks and for his kind words.

I also want to share the outrage that he expressed, and the previous speaker, the distinguished Senator from California expressed, about these disclosures. Yet another one today, reading in the New York Times about the secret spying on American citizens by the National Security Agency, in contravention of law and in contravention of previous policy under Presidents, Republican and Democrat.

That, on top of the revelations about secret torture camps being conducted, again extra-illegally, by this administration, to the detriment of the great name of the United States of America.

I see that the outstanding Senator from Arizona is on the floor and will follow me with his remarks. To his enormous credit, he has been the champion of putting the United States back on track and assuring that we set the example, the proper example, for the rest of the world in how to conduct itself even under adverse circumstances.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senator from Arizona is recognized.

(The remarks of Mr. McCAIN, Mr. LIEBERMAN and Mr. DURBIN pertaining to the introduction of S. 2128 are located in today's RECORD under "Statements on Introduced Bills and Joint Resolutions.")

TORTURE

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, I salute Senator JOHN McCAIN. He achieved something this week which is historic. He achieved an agreement with the Bush administration on the issue of torture. That took a lot of hard work on his part. He took a 90-9 vote in the Senate with him to the White House, meeting with the President's representatives.

What Senator McCAIN was seeking is something fundamental. He wanted to reaffirm in law the fact that the United States would still stand by its word and by its values, that we would not engage in torture even though we are in this new age of terrorism and threat to America. He said: This is less about the enemy than it is about us, who we are and what we stand for.

I can recall during the debate on this issue, Senator McCAIN took the floor and gave one of the best speeches I have heard in this Chamber, a speech only he could give. As a former prisoner of war, a Navy pilot shot down over Vietnam, he was a victim of torture. No one else in this Chamber, fortunately, can speak to it as he spoke to it. But in speaking to it, he reminded us that torture is not American. It is not a good means of interrogating prisoners or coming up with information to make America safer. There was a lengthy debate about whether his provision would be included in the final legislation. Fortunately, the White House has agreed to include it.

I was happy to cosponsor that legislation. I have been raising this issue for the last several years. I know how controversial it can be. A few months ago I had the spotlight focused on me for some comments made at this same desk. But I believe that the issue of torture is one that we have to face forthrightly.

Last week I was traveling in northern Africa and visited with one of our ambassadors. He is an ambassador to one of the Muslim nations. We talked about the challenges he faces with our involvement in Iraq. He said: The controversy about our involvement in Iraq paled in comparison to the controversy in his country about America's role when it came to torture. He said: It is hard for the Muslim population and Arab populations to understand why the United States would abandon a long-term, multidecade commitment not to engage in torture once they were involved in a war involving Arabs and Muslims. He reminded me—and I didn't need to be reminded—that we issue a human rights scorecard each year from the Department of State. Some of the questions we ask of countries around the world are: have you incarcerated someone without charges? Are you holding them indefinitely? Are you torturing them? If the answers are affirmative, we give them low marks.

Today, obviously, those countries are asking whether the Americans live by the same standards they are imposing on others. JOHN McCAIN's leadership, along with Senator JOHN WARNER, chairman of the Armed Services Committee, resulted in an important agreement to restate the most basic and bedrock principle, that America will not engage in torture. We will not engage in cruel, inhuman, and degrading treatment of prisoners: First, because it is not American; second, because it invites the same treatment on our soldiers and Americans; and third, because it doesn't work. We have found time and again, if you torture a person they will say anything to make the torture stop. That doesn't give you good information to make America safe. Let me salute Senator McCAIN for his leadership.

EAVESDROPPING ON AMERICANS

Mr. President, I am troubled by the reports in the New York Times and Washington Post today that this administration, since 9/11, has been engaged in a practice which I thought had been clearly prohibited in America. That is the eavesdropping on individual American citizens, those in America, by major agencies such as the National Security Agency. This all started some 30 years ago during President Nixon's administration. It was an administration which created an enemies list. If your name was on that list, be careful; J. Edgar Hoover would be looking into every aspect of your life that he could. You might be audited by the Internal Revenue Service and you would be carefully watched and monitored.

We decided that wasn't a good thing for any President to do. We made it clear that if you had good reason to eavesdrop on an American in the commission of a crime, involvement in terrorist activity, that was one thing. But to say you could do it with impunity, without any legal approval, that was unacceptable.

Now we find it has been done for several years and several thousand Americans have been the subject of this wiretapping and eavesdropping.

Mr. President, that is a troubling development. It says that this administration has decided when it comes to basic rights of Americans, they are above the law, not accountable; they don't have to go through the courts, don't have to follow the ordinary judicial process. That is something that Congress has to stand up and fight. We have to make it clear that even in the age of terrorism, basic freedoms and liberties of Americans have to be respected.

I hope that as soon as we return from this holiday break the appropriate committees will initiate investigations, determine what has occurred, whether it has gone too far. I sincerely hope, on a bipartisan basis, that my colleagues will rally to once again assert the fundamentals when it comes to the right of privacy in America. We want to be safe in America but not at the cost of our freedom. That, unfortunately, has become an issue because of these most recent disclosures.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, I remain baffled by the failure today to move forward with the PATRIOT Act. That piece of legislation is exceedingly important. We know for an absolute fact, as Senator KYL and others have pointed out, that terrorist organizations and their movements and activities were not properly discovered by law enforcement because of a failure to share information and other restrictions that fell on those investigators. That has been demonstrated with clarity. In fact, some say had we not had the wall between the CIA and the FBI and they could actually have shared information, we may have even prevented 9/11.

I say this to my friends in this country. Federal agents follow the law. The law said the CIA, which is out dealing with international terrorist groups and others who want to harm the United States, and the FBI, which is given the responsibility of homeland protection and crime enforcement in this country, were not allowed to share information. And they did not do so. It was part of a governmental reform. I think the Frank Church committee thought they were doing something good, but they ended up creating a wall that prohibited the sharing of information that made it far more difficult for Federal investigators to do the job we pay them to do.

This afternoon, I saw a lady from New York who was touched by 9/11. She wants this bill passed. As a matter of fact, she was shocked that it was not. Why is she shocked? It just passed this Senate a few days ago 100 to 0, by unanimous consent, not a rollcall vote, but unanimous consent, without an objection. It came out of the Senate Judiciary Committee, 18 to 0. We have a host of libertarians on that committee—civil libertarians and libertarians. Chairman SPECTER is very proud of his heritage of civil liberties. All of us take it seriously in that committee, and it came out unanimously.

The bill went to the House, and they passed this very bill that we just blocked. The House passed it with a 75-vote majority even though, in fact, the House had to recede and give about 80 percent of the differences in the House and Senate bill over to the Senate side. The Senate bill was clearly the bill that was the model for the legislation on which we finally voted.

So we go over to the House. They have some provisions and we have some provisions and there is a good bit of discussion over the issues. Finally, a conference report is agreed to. It comes back over here, and all of a sudden we face a filibuster.

The PATRIOT Act will sunset December 31. It will be gone. We will not have the provisions that are in it. Those provisions have played a big role in helping us protect this country from another attack. Who would have thought we would have gone over 4 years since 9/11 without another attack on this homeland? I hope no one thinks that success to date—praise our Creator—has not been driven in large part by effective law enforcement activities by the FBI, the CIA, and other agencies that are charged with these responsibilities.

The compromises reached in the conference committee to work out the differences between the House and Senate bill, according to Chairman ARLEN SPECTER, tilted in favor of the Senate on the disputed provisions by about 80 percent. He said there is not a dime's worth of difference in terms of whether civil liberties were enhanced or not enhanced in the bill that we just voted on and the one that came out of committee 18 to 0 and passed the Senate unanimously.

So why would this Senate and the great Democratic Party, except for two of its members, vote to block us from an up-or-down vote on this? I don't understand. I think it is a serious matter.

There are provisions in the bill that are important. As I have tried to state, as a Federal prosecutor for 15 years nearly, I remain baffled by the concerns over the bill. I remain baffled because of the fact that every provision in the bill has already been a part of Federal law at some point in time and had never been overruled or found unconstitutional. But many of the law enforcement capabilities that the bill delineates and makes clear and actually creates frameworks for already exist in current law.

I knew from the beginning that there was nothing in the bill that was going to be held to be unconstitutional and, indeed, it has not because it was written in such a way that we would not violate the Constitution, and it would be within the principles of our commitment to civil liberties.

All of us are committed to civil liberties. One of our Senators, Mr. BYRD, said we don't need search warrants written by FBI agents. Absolutely we don't. We don't want an investigator being able to conduct a search of somebody without an independent order of a judge, and there is nothing in this bill that does that. We don't change the great protection that you have to have a court-approved search warrant, for heaven's sake. There is nothing in this bill that comes close to that. But these are the kinds of charges that have been made, upsetting people and making them think there is something strange or overreaching about this legislation. It passed with only one negative vote 4 years ago, 90-something to 1.

We need to get our act together on this bill. I urge my colleagues to read the legislation that Senator SPECTER has so carefully written so that anybody can understand what the complaints are, to consider what the Department of Justice has said, to listen to the debate, and actually read the legislation. I am convinced that if colleagues would take a moment to do so, they will find that all of our great liberties are protected and, in fact, we didn't give to FBI terrorist investigators the same powers an IRS investigator has this very day to subpoena bank records that relate to a person who may not have paid their income tax. IRS agents can do that on a daily basis.

I see my colleague. Maybe I have already utilized over 10 minutes. If I have, I will be pleased to wrap up and yield the floor. I am over 10 minutes.

I feel strongly about this mainly because I am so concerned that people have allowed this vote to become a vote on whether one believes in civil liberties or whether one believes in law enforcement.

The bill was written and came out of committee—Senator LEAHY approved it; he monitored its passage from the beginning—so as not to violate the Constitution, not to undermine our liberties, but to make sure that Federal investigators who are trying to keep another 9/11 from happening here have the same powers as IRS agents. And, indeed, we didn't even give them that much power, in many instances. They still have less in some instances.

We need to get our act together on this legislation. We need to move this bill. I don't think it needs to be any weaker. If we come back and water it down and pass it, it would be a mistake.

I thank the Chair, and I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senator from Oregon is recognized.

Mr. WYDEN. Mr. President, I would like to let the Senator from Georgia propound a unanimous consent request first.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Georgia.

Mr. ISAKSON. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Oregon. I ask unanimous consent that I be recognized to speak following the speech of Senator WYDEN from Oregon.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Oregon.

STOPPING INDECENT PROGRAMMING

Mr. WYDEN. Mr. President, as the session winds down this year, I wanted to take a few minutes and bring to the attention of the Senate a new development that I think will be of great interest to millions of parents and families across the country. As the distinguished President of the Senate knows from our service in the other body, parents are greatly concerned that their children are bombarded every day with obscene, indecent, profane, and violent entertainment on television. Parents come up to us as legislators and say: What are you going to do to stop this trash? What are you going to do to keep indecent programming away from our children's eyes and ears?

Of course, we all wish for an ideal world where parents would take the most direct action, which is simply to turn the television set off. That is something that can be done without any Government role. But with parents working—and very often both parents working two jobs each to try to make ends meet—that is not always possible.

So as I began to look at how to solve the indecency problem, I asked what could the Government do in this area to better protect our kids from indecent programming on television? I also asked how to do it in a way without a big government bureaucracy program, a one-size-fits-all approach or where the Federal Government would regulate the actual content of the programs on our television sets.

As I began the search to try to figure out a responsible approach to the problem of indecent programming for children, one of the things I found is one of the cable companies and the big television programmers have set up a special tier of programming for those people who are interested in sports and those people who are interested in movies. I looked at it and found that not only had cable companies done this, it seemed to be working as well.

They found a way to do it that the subscribers like and which was profitable. I said to myself, if that kind of approach works for sports fans and movie fans, why can we not do it for families as well? Why can we not have a special tier of programming that is appropriate for children and works for families, the way we have special programming for sports and movies?

So earlier in this session, I introduced the Kid Friendly TV Programming Act, which would require all video service providers to implement a tier of television programming that is appropriate for children. In my bill, a kids' tier is defined as a group of 15 or more television stations blocked off in a separate channel area with both programming and commercials on it that are purely kid friendly. Parents would be able to subscribe to this block of stations separate from their regular programming, knowing the programming on their television will not carry material that is obscene, indecent, profane, sexual, or gratuitously violent. In introducing this legislation, it seemed to hit the criteria that were most important to me: more wholesome choices for parents and families but not a one-size-fits-all Government mandate. The Government would put the focus where it ought to be, which is to give parents a block or tier of channels separate from regular programming where there would not be material inappropriate for our children.

After I introduced the legislation, Chairman STEVENS and the ranking minority member Senator INOUE of the Commerce Committee, also made an important effort in holding a roundtable discussion on the problem of indecency, which provided some very valuable exposure for the issue. I want to express my appreciation to both of them for their leadership on this matter.

I also want to express my appreciation to the chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, Kevin Martin, who has discussed this issue with me on a number of occasions. He gave a great boost to this effort several weeks ago at the forum that was held on indecent programming, where he came out and said that a kids' tier of programming would be a responsible, practical way to make sure our Nation's children had more wholesome choices on television.

This week, spurred on by the legislation, the work of Chairman Martin, and the good bipartisan work done by Senator STEVENS and Senator INOUE, the cable industry took a small step in the right direction when six cable companies, including Time Warner and Comcast, announced they plan to offer a kids' tier of programming in 2006.

Having listened for months to arguments that kids' tier is not going to be profitable and it is not going to be practical, we saw the industry finally come to an understanding that it was time to get serious about this problem.

Yesterday, Time Warner released the details of their kids' tier offer. I was pleased to see that their proposal included G-rated stations that run child friendly content 24 hours a day. However, it is unclear what will be included in the package that parents must purchase in order to purchase the kids' tier. Parents still may have to subscribe to a tier that includes stations that carry foul language, excessive violence, and inappropriate sexual content in order to subscribe to the kids' tier.

That is not what my legislation called for at all. It said we had to have alternatives to the kind of inappropriate programming that is out there now. But in order to subscribe to Time Warner's kids' tier, families might also have to subscribe to service which could include inappropriate programming for children.

I am pleased I can say on the Senate floor that at least some people in the industry have recognized the need for a kids' tier of cable programming across our country. For a long time, whenever I brought this up, they basically said western civilization would end if we have this kind of programming that meets the needs of parents and families. At least we have seen baby steps to address this issue.

What is needed is not different than what parents have at the candy-free checkout lane at the supermarket. Just like parents should not have to take their kids past all the candy to check out at the grocery store, parents should not be forced to surf through obscene programs in order to get to the programs for kids that are appropriate.

In the days ahead I want to make sure that children across the country have an opportunity to have access to this kind of good quality programming, that the kids' tier is implemented properly, and that it does not depend on which community one is in. While a family in Corvallis or Portland in my home State would have a kids' tier available to them because they are served by Comcast, a family in Pendleton or Hood River would not because they receive their cable through a different company. Until all video service providers are offering a kids' tier the job will be incomplete.

My legislation requires that all video service providers institute a kids' tier. I want to make sure families get this option. It is my intent to watch the developments we have seen in the last couple of weeks with respect to Time Warner and Comcast very closely. I am very appreciative of what Chairman Martin has done in this area because he has given great visibility to the question of improving children's programming.

I see Senator PRYOR is in the Chamber as well. He has done excellent work on the Commerce Committee on this issue of indecent programming for children.

If we do not see this kind of tier of kid friendly programming done right across this country, I am going to come back to the Senate and push for my original legislation. The private sector has taken baby steps in the right direction, but there is still a great deal left to do. With millions of kids being exposed to indecent, profane, and violent programming, it is important to do this job right, and the Senate ought to stay at it on a bipartisan basis until it is done.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senator from Georgia is recognized.

THE TAX CODE

Mr. ISAKSON. Mr. President, today is an anniversary of a day of great renown in American history. Two hundred and thirty-two years ago, on December 16, 1773, a band of colonists boarded three ships in Boston Harbor, dumped the cargo of tea into that harbor, and it became known as the Boston Tea Party. It was a protest of taxation without representation in that great injustice.

I rise today on the floor of the Senate to tell you that injustice still exists in our tax system, not in taxation without representation but in the complexity of our system. Think about it for just a second. It takes the average American filing the simplest form, 1040, 13 hours, the length of 6 college basketball games, just to fill out our simplest form. It takes 3 of 5 Americans the cost of hiring an outside accountant to consult with them just to meet the demands of the current tax system. It means the Tax Code is now 1,685,000 words long, which is exactly 380 times the number of words in the entire Constitution of the United States of America. As all of us on the floor of the Senate know, in months, 17 million more Americans will be brought under the alternative minimum tax, a tax that was allegedly started only to address the taxation of a few that now addresses the taxation of the many.

Earlier today, I introduced legislation to deal with this injustice and create a mechanism for us to forthrightly come before the people of the United States and develop a simpler, fairer, and flatter system of taxation. Simply put, we would sunset the current Tax Code on the Fourth of July, 2008, and command the Congress to take the next 3 years analyzing consumption taxes, progressive taxes, flat taxes, revenues of all sorts, and the effect each has on the economy and economic policy, and then come back to the American people prior to that date with a new, simplified, fairer, flatter tax system, or, if failing to do so, the Congress of the United States would then be forced to vote on this floor to extend the existing system we have and all the injustice that goes with it. Only by creating a deadline, only by being faced with the termination and the loss of revenue would this Congress forthrightly take the due diligence it needs to have the massive overhaul our system needs.

Today, the United States of America in the 21st century is operating under 20th century rules—1,685,000 words written as long as 100 years ago, when we are looking forward to a future that is brighter and better for all Americans.

I urge my colleagues in the Senate to join me in cosponsoring this legislation and for us to forthrightly set a time when we can truly have a second tea party, this one liberating us from the injustice of complexity and opening the door for simplicity in the American tax system.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kentucky.

VICTORY IN IRAQ

Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, I rise today to speak on Iraq's stunning march toward freedom and democracy and America's efforts to support her progress. I believe, as does President Bush, that it is squarely in our national security interest to help the Iraqis build a thriving and healthy democracy. Democracy is the ultimate antidote to terrorism.

We all know for democracy to flourish we must defeat the terrorists who still linger in Iraq. The mission facing our country is simple: We must defeat them by standing up the pillars of Iraq's democratic institutions so that country can become a hinge of freedom in the greater Middle East.

We know the terrorists cannot defeat us on the battlefield; our military might is absolutely unmatched. We know they cannot defeat our ideas, because when people are given a choice, they will choose liberty and democracy over terror and tyranny every time.

So this debate turns on just one simple question: do we have the will to win in Iraq?

This summer, American intelligence forces intercepted a letter written by Ayman al-Zawahiri, one of the leaders of Al Qaeda, to Abu Musab al-Zarqawi, the leader of Al Qaeda in Iraq. In his letter, al-Zawahiri said that al Qaeda's goal was quite clear: "Expel the Americans from Iraq." He went on to say this:

... [T]he mujahedeen[s] ongoing mission is to establish an Islamic state, and defend it, and for every generation to hand over the banner to the one after it until the Hour of Resurrection ... The Americans will exit soon, God willing.

So the terrorists' intent is plain. They are not only dedicated to driving us out of Iraq, they are also dedicated to turning Iraq into a breeding ground for terror and anarchy.

We must not let them succeed. That is why I am so concerned about the comments of those who suggest that the battle in Iraq is unwinnable. What signal does that send to the terrorists? What signal does it send to our troops who are putting it on the line every day in Iraq?

Here is what Congressman DENNIS KUCINICH, a leader of the House Democrats' "Out of Iraq Caucus," said: "It is time for a new direction in Iraq, and that direction is out." It's pretty clear where he stands. And he is not an outlier in his party.

The "Out of Iraq Caucus" is composed of about 70 Democratic House members. Their goal is America's complete withdrawal from Iraq. Personally, I don't think it makes sense to set an arbitrary withdrawal date, so the terrorists can circle that date on their calendars and wait for us to leave. It seems to me that the better course is to determine our troop needs based on military requirements on the ground, as determined by our military leaders.

House Minority Leader NANCY PELOSI herself has endorsed the immediate withdrawal of our troops from Iraq, and claims that her position represents the majority of her caucus. Leader PELOSI endorsed H.J. Res. 73, a resolution that states:

The deployment of United States forces in Iraq, by direction of Congress, is hereby terminated and the forces involved are to be redeployed at the earliest practicable date.

So that is the position of the House Democratic Leader, Ms. PELOSI.

Now, the chairman of the Democratic Party, Howard Dean, has said recently the United States can't even win in Iraq. He says, "The idea that we're going to win this war is an idea that, unfortunately, is just plain wrong."

Let me say that again. Howard Dean, the leader of the Democratic Party, believes that "The idea that we're going to win this war is an idea that, unfortunately, is just plain wrong."

That is Howard Dean's assessment of the situation.

Chairman Dean later tried to qualify his comments about the unwinnable nature of the battle in Iraq, but no matter what he says now, it still sounds like "cut and run" to me. If it is not "cut and run" it is at least "cut and jog."

Let me be clear. Proponents of immediate withdrawal certainly have the right to hold that view, and I believe they do so with patriotism in their hearts. But I must respectfully question their judgment.

Our goal should be to achieve victory in Iraq, not merely to pull out based on an arbitrary date on the calendar.

The fact is, we are already on the road to victory in Iraq. The transformation of Iraq from the tyrannical rule of Saddam Hussein to freedom and democracy in just two and a half years is a remarkable success story.

It took us 11 years in our country to get from the Declaration of Independence to the Constitution. And freedom took another giant step forward yesterday with the elections for the first permanent democratic government in Iraqi history.

Of course, the news we have now is still preliminary. But early news reports indicate that 11 million Iraqis went to the polls yesterday, once again staining their fingers with indelible purple ink to signify that they had voted.

That is an overall turnout rate of over 70 percent, compared to 60 percent here a year ago, which was a good turnout for us, higher than normal—70 percent of them going to the polls, proudly holding up their ink-stained fingers, many of them not certain they wouldn't be killed by exercising that right to vote. What is there not to admire about that, an extraordinary performance on the part of the Iraqi people?

As I indicated, that turnout rate exceeds that of their previous election, the constitutional referendum in October. And the turnout rate for that referendum exceeded the rate for the election prior to that, for the interim government in January. Most important, turnout among Sunnis yesterday appears to have been particularly robust, as with each election Sunnis have gotten more involved in the democratic process.

We may not know the results of the elections yet, but we know the Iraqi people are the winners. They have repeatedly defied the terrorists by voting for democracy over tyranny. Yesterday's elections have created a 275-member council of representatives, who will govern Iraq with the consent of the people.

It is odd to me that at such a moment of triumph in that country, there are still those who call for America to stop short. Granted, not everything in Iraq has gone just as we would have wanted it to.

Unfortunately, such is the nature of military conflict. We've all heard it said that no battle plan survives the first shot. But there can be no doubt that tremendous progress has been made. Maybe it would be a good idea to review the progress that has been made in Iraq in the last two-and-a-half years.

Back during the Saddam Hussein era—when he was in power from 1979 to 2003—in that period, over 4,000 political prisoners were summarily executed, 50,000 Kurds were killed, 395,000 people were forced to flee Iraq, there were no free elections whatsoever, no free newspapers, and Hussein, of course, stood above the law.

What has the situation been since 2003, since the fall of Saddam? Iraqis are now innocent until proven guilty, and Saddam himself is being given a fair trial, something he gave no one.

Seventy-five Kurds were elected to the interim Parliament, when during Saddam's regime, 50,000 of them were murdered. Over 270,000 people repatriated, when during Saddam's regime, 395,000 people left the country; 9.8 million Iraqis freely voted on the Constitution. There are over 100 free newspapers in Iraq. They have a robust free press there, and Hussein, as I suggested earlier, is now on trial, being given the kind of trial he gave no one.

So much has improved, much is left to do, but now we are heading in the right direction. Iraqis are feeling positive about the direction of their country as well. According to an ABC News study, 77 percent of Iraqis think the security situation in the country will be better in a year. Two-thirds of them expressed confidence in the Iraqi Army and the Iraqi police.

These people are on the ground in Iraq every day. They are living in the midst of the war on terror. I think we should give their opinions great weight.

Look at all the progress that has been made. The 24-year reign of terror is over, and a new democratic, free Iraq is emerging. Voter turnout in their national elections yesterday was reportedly very heavy, as I indicated. So Iraqis are optimistic about their future. They think the fight against the terrorists is worth fighting. They think democracy is worth fighting for.

We should stand by them and do no less. We need to complete the job, and our strategy is to stay and win—not cut and run.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arkansas.

TAX RELIEF FOR AMERICANS IN COMBAT ACT
EXTENSION

Mr. PRYOR. Mr. President, I rise today to commend and thank my colleagues for including a 1-year extension of the Tax Relief for Americans in Combat Act as part of the Gulf Opportunity Zone Act of 2005. This measure corrects a discrepancy in the Tax Code that penalizes certain service men and women serving in combat situations.

To give my colleagues a bit of history on this, in 2003, I approached the distinguished chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, Senator CHUCK GRASSLEY, and the ranking member of that same committee, Senator MAX BAUCUS, and asked them to join me in an effort to get a fresh look at the overall picture of how our Tax Code treats our military. I was very pleased when they agreed to work with me, and was delighted to jointly request an expedited study by the Government Accountability Office. It was an honor for me to work with them. I also must say their staff have been nothing but a delight to work with throughout this process.

The GAO made their study, and they had some interesting findings.

One of those findings was especially important and necessitated immediate attention. In a nutshell, what they found is service men and women who were serving in combat zones and receiving nontaxable combat pay were not able to also take advantage of the earned-income tax credit and the childcare tax credit. Imagine that. The result was thousands of our men and women serving in combat—in places such as Iraq, Afghanistan, and other places around the globe—were seeing a reduction or the elimination of their earned-income tax credit or child tax credit and, in effect, losing money. In other words, the Tax Code has the impact of penalizing them for serving in combat.

The GAO report characterized this as an unintended consequence. I say it is plain wrong. I was pleased to introduce legislation to try to fix this glitch. Back in 2004 we passed Tax Relief for Americans in Combat Act. The bill allowed men and women in uniform serving in combat to include combat pay for the purpose of calculating their earned-income and child tax credit benefits. In other words, they were able to continue receiving their rightful combat pay exclusions while also being able to take full advantage of other tax credits. However, what we passed in 2004 expires at the end of this year. So I am pleased today's action in effect extends the legislation for one more year.

I thank, again, Senator MAX BAUCUS for his leadership in helping extend it for another year. Also, I thank Senators JOHN KERRY and BARACK OBAMA for their leadership in taking up the fight when someone saw the opportunity to do so, to ensure our men and women in combat are fairly treated.

The urgency of this situation is highlighted especially when you focus on our troops whom it affects. We are talking about troops in combat for more than 6 months. They are at lower pay grades and tend to be married with children. They have little or no savings or spousal income. The GAO suggested the amount of tax benefit loss could be up to $4,500 for enlisted personnel and $3,200 for officers. That is real money. That is make-or-break money for a lot of these people. They are already under enormous stress.

I am glad we could come together in this bipartisan fashion and extend this for another year. The bill corrects the problem and lets our troops who are risking life and limb for us know that while they are away fighting for us, we are in the Senate fighting for them and for their families.

I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BURNS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BURNS. Mr. President, I inquire of the Chair, are we on the PATRIOT Act or what is the order?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct, we are currently on the PATRIOT Act.

Mr. BURNS. I ask unanimous consent I be allowed to speak for up to 15 minutes—and I don't think it will be that much—as if in morning business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

IRAQ

Mr. BURNS. Mr. President, I heard the words of our assistant leader on the majority side and wanted to come to the Senate. These words may get lost in the swirl of the times with the holidays, but yesterday was truly a historic time not only for the people of Iraq, but a historic time for the peace process in the Middle East.

There was not a doubt in anyone's mind around the world what that was about yesterday. They not only elected permanent representation in their government that will move on and try to finish their constitution, but it was a symbol of a people who voted for peace, security, and a new economic future. That is what that was all about yesterday.

I congratulate the people of Iraq who, with a great deal of courage, turned out and stood in lines and voted their will. This is what this whole exercise has been about.

I leave a message with not only this Congress but to some who fail to see how much hope was on display yesterday: there is hope for the future. Now we have little girls going to school in Iraq. Hope for families, that they can participate in a republican form of democracy, and to change the economic culture of those people who live in Iraq.

Think of the possibilities. The success in Iraq also has done another thing that will change not only Iraq, but it will change the whole area. For the first time since World War I there will be a transportation and communication corridor that will change the economic culture from Tel Aviv to Kuwait City. Think of what that does. It puts Amman back on the trade route, so to speak. King Abdullah, the leader of Jordan, understands this. And as he looks at that, it puts Amman back on the trade route.

But what about the future? Anyone who has visited Iraq has seen this, probably in Baghdad, or wherever. But I will tell you what this farm kid has seen on his visit to Iraq. When we were in Mosul we saw dry land, farming, good soil. There are two great rivers with irrigation systems from both of them. I saw the kind of dirt it takes in which to build an economy.

Let's don't talk about gas or oil. Let's talk about the very industry that contributes more to the GDP of any country in the world, and that is agriculture. They have the ability to be the breadbasket of the Middle East. As you know, most of the Middle East is desert. Most of it has soil that is very thin, and there are not many nutrients in it. And even where you find those areas where they have it, it is in need of water. Water isn't there.

I looked at the north of Israel one time, and I understood the problem there. The problem there has to do with water, the ability to irrigate out of the Jordan River. You have two great river systems in Iraq.

The next step in this budding new freedom is the cornerstone of freedom, and that is land ownership, making people productive, growing renewable resources, providing for your family, but also providing a great export out of Iraq and becoming a trading partner with their neighbors.

We cannot change the ethnic culture, nor can we change the Islamic culture, but we can change the economic culture to where more people of that society participate in the economic well-being of their country. Just think of the possibilities and the hope it brings to the next generations of those folks.

If you can find something to export—and I will tell you, I look at Jordan. There is a country that is not very wealthy. The only thing they have to export is potash, and the world can only use so much potash.

But they understand communications and transportation. So there is great hope there now. There is the hope of land ownership, the hope of participation in supplying food and fiber not only for their own people, but to export to other neighboring countries. That corridor is now established with the free movement not only of people, but also goods and services.

That corridor will widen. It will effect the way people do business in Syria and the way they do business in Iran. It will change even how they do business in Egypt. The Nile Delta, a very fertile delta, now will have some competition in the food business.

Also, it will have possibilities for our country when those economics take hold. And it is not going to happen by next week, or next year, or maybe not even for the next 5 years. But you are going to see it happen because of this taste of freedom, land ownership, independence, and to be able to participate in their own government, and, yes, even in their own provincial governments.

So the possibilities of peace and stability and economic advancement have never been greater than at any time in history since World War I. Yet there will be those who say we should not be there helping freedom-loving people achieve the same dream, having the same hopes we have for our next generation, our children, and our grandchildren.

Hope is eternal. Now they have a future, a future they have never had since almost 100 years ago. And the impact of that will spread throughout the Middle East. It will happen. The Presiding Officer comes from an agricultural State with land ownership, productivity, and exports. My good friend from Iowa, my goodness; they are the breadbasket of the world. They can grow more in Iowa with what falls out of their pocket accidentally than we can, on purpose, in Montana, I will tell you. What a great and blessed State, and the same for the State of my friend from Texas, who is on the floor.

But what makes it operate is land ownership and participation in the economy. Then the terrorists have nobody to recruit because there is hope.

Our Marines, our Army, and our Air Force paid a heavy price because they, too, believe this legacy of freedom, to be passed on from one generation to another, is worth dying for.

I had a lady say: "If you wanted to take a poll in Iraq, if you polled our military people, that poll would say they don't want to be there."

I said: Well, if you took a poll in the English Channel on June 6, 1944, they didn't want to be there either. What was that for? Countries had been overrun by a tyrant who brought nothing but tyranny. And they were an enemy of this country and our ideals and our principles.

They have those principles already. But what they have too is hope. And we have to nurture that hope because they cannot only feed themselves, with their renewables grown from Mother Earth, they can become a powerhouse in the Middle East for commerce. Just think of that corridor. Just think of the possibilities of changing an economic culture that will run from Tel Aviv to Kuwait City, and then you tell me: Was it worth it?

This President understands a vision of hope for freedom-loving people everywhere. And what it offers to their citizens is beyond some folks' comprehension. Freedom is not free. Hope is not free. There must be sacrifice.

Yesterday, those folks lined up by the droves to take advantage of changing their lives, sending a strong message to the rest of the world: Terrorists, you are not welcome here anymore.

That is the greatest enemy terrorists have, when the fires of freedom burn in the hearts of a people in a line where they stand, where they vote.

That is the vision I have for the Middle East. It is very clear. It is clear that with that reform comes land ownership, irrigation systems, dry land farming, and participation in the world of commerce. Not only in that, but in goods and services also. Iraqis are a very talented people, a people who have that fire of freedom in their heart. We wish them well, and we stand beside them as that fledgling democracy, that republican form of government, gets its kick-start. And it really got a kick-start yesterday. We wish them well. We congratulate them for their courage to stand up and be counted.

I yield the floor.

Mr. HARKIN. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

UNIVERSITY OF NORTHERN IOWA PANTHERS FOOTBALL TEAM

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, today I am here to congratulate the University of Northern Iowa Panthers football team and wish them the best of luck as they prepare to take on the Appalachian State Mountaineers today at 8 p.m. in Chattanooga, TN, for the 1-AA national championship. This is truly a historic occasion, as this marks UNI's first appearance in the national championship contest. In addition, UNI has the opportunity to be only the second Iowa NCAA school to win a national title in football. Central College in Iowa won the 1974 division III championship.

This has been a season full of highs and lows for the Panthers. Starting the season at 4 and 3, the outlook looked kind of bleak, but the team did not get discouraged. They did not give up. Instead, they rattled off seven straight wins. As a result of their tenacity and determination, the Panthers find themselves tonight in the championship game.

In 5 years, head coach Mark Farley has won 44 games, at least a share of three conference championships, and he has led the Panthers to three playoff appearances. Under his leadership, the Panthers have again become a national power in 1-AA football. And Coach Farley is a graduate of UNI. He was a member of the first UNI football team to play in the national semifinals. Twenty years later, after 10 playoff appearances and 5 semifinal appearances, he has led his alma mater to their first championship game.

Yesterday, the Des Moines Register ran a story titled "Panther Football A to Z." The article tells the story of the team's season, beginning with the letter A for adversity. As I mentioned, the Panthers record stood at 4 to 3, but after seven consecutive wins, which included five late-game comebacks, they have earned the trip to Chattanooga and the adoration of their fans. Much as linebacker John Herman stated in the article:

Text messages, e-mails, phone calls—it's crazy to see how many people are excited for us to get here.

The article concludes with the letter Z for zenith by quoting athletic director Rick Hartzell, who said:

There's never been a better time to be a Panther.

I congratulate the young men, their coaches, and the University of Northern Iowa for their tremendous season and wish them the best of luck tonight. I will be watching on ESPN2.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of the Des Moines Register article be printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(See exhibit 1.)

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I see my friend, RICHARD BURR, the outstanding Senator from North Carolina, on the floor. North Carolina, of course, is the home State of that great school, Appalachian State. I know that after their defeat tonight under the paws of the Panthers, it will continue to be a great school and a great football team.

My good friend and I have made a little wager on the game tonight: six North Carolina pork chops versus six Iowa pork chops. You see, I say to my friend, just as Iowa is No. 1 in pork production, and North Carolina is No. 2 in pork production, after tonight, Iowa will be No. 1 in 1-AA football, and North Carolina will be No. 2 in 1-AA football.

So, again, I look forward to dining on those great North Carolina pork chops.

I ask my friend, please, would you throw in some of that North Carolina barbecue sauce with them?

I yield the floor.

PANTHER FOOTBALL A TO Z

(By Rob Gray)

CHATTANOOGA, TN.—It's hard to describe, let alone explain.

Northern Iowa's stunning run from NCAA Division I-AA football playoff longshot to championship game participant ends Friday with a first-ever title hanging in the balance. Only Appalachian State stands in the way.

"I'm sure after the season's over I'm really going to be kind of in awe, but right now we're trying to get focused on the game, trying not to get caught up in the moment," said Panther quarterback Eric Sanders. "But in the offseason, I know I'm going to reflect and be pretty proud and go like, 'Wow. This really did happen.'"

The No. 7 Panthers' transcendence of high-profile injuries, daunting fourth-quarter deficits and taxing road trips may defy logic, but it can be loosely quantified, or encapsulated, within a quick spin through the alphabet. So it's on to Chattanooga, via the ABCs:

A is for Adversity. The Panthers (11-3) once stood 4-3, but seven consecutive wins followed, including five late-game comebacks, and overcoming obstacles has kindled adulation.

"Text messages, e-mails, phone calls—it's crazy to see how many people are excited for us to get here," linebacker John Hermann said.

B is for Balance. Northern Iowa running back David Horne has rushed for 1,039 yards and 16 touchdowns. Quarterback Eric Sanders has thrown for 2,748 yards and 23 touchdowns.

C is for Coaching. Mark Farley suffered along with teammates and fellow coaches in five Panther losses in the semifinals. This season, he helped orchestrate a breakthrough. "We've got the opportunity to represent our school, but also our state," Farley said.

D is for Defensive ends. Appalachian State (11-3) features two standouts at the position. Jason Hunter and Marques Murrell have combined for 22 sacks.

E is for Extra credit. Northern Iowa kicker Brian Wingert has drilled three consecutive game-winners.

F is for Finish. The Panthers have outscored foes, 63-14, in the fourth quarter over their seven-game win streak.

G is for Grounded. Northern Iowa's defense has allowed big games from highly rated quarterbacks Erik Meyer, Ricky Santos and Barrick Nealy in the postseason, but kept them from winning.

H is for History. Both Northern Iowa and Appalachian State make their first title-game appearances.

I is for Interception. Matt Tharp's pick of Nealy preserved Friday's 40-37 overtime win at Texas State.

"(He) made a good play with a cast on his hand," fellow defensive back Tanner Varner said. "It was just amazing."

J is for Jeff Bates. The Indianola senior center eased into the starting role when offensive line anchor John Schabillion suffered a season-ending injury.

K is for Krystal. Fans traveling to Chattanooga will encounter this southern version of White Castle.

L is for Linebackers. Northern Iowa's Darin Heideman and Brett Koebeke highlight a defense that gets stingy at precisely the right moment. Koebeke is questionable for Friday, though, with a high ankle sprain.

M is for Mountaineers. As in Appalachian State's nickname. The team has lost just once to a I-AA opponent this season.

N is for National. ESPN2 will broadcast a Panthers football game to a coast-to-coast audience for the second consecutive week.

O is for Overtime. The Panthers stand 2-0 in overtime games, beating Western Kentucky, 23-20, in double overtime and Texas State. "We've definitely caught some breaks to be at this point, but you kind of have to get this far," Sanders said.

P is for Pecan Bowl. Way back in 1964, the Panthers won this Division II bowl game, 19-17, over Lamar Tech at Abilene, Texas.

Q is for Quarterback(s). As usual, the Panthers will face a good one—whether it be Richie Williams, who could be out with a ruptured ligament, or backup Trey Elder, who led the Mountaineers to last week's 29-23 win over Furman.

R is for Receivers. Justin Surrency leads the Panthers with seven touchdown catches—including an end-zone grab in four consecutive games. Patrick Hunter and Jamie Goodwin furnish downfield speed. Brian Cutright excels at tight end.

"There's no doubt in this team at any time," Cutright said. (see item "A")

S is for Kevin Stensrud. The defensive lineman from Lake Mills has battled countless injuries to reach his final game.

T is for Two-point conversion. Surrency's leaping catch to tie the game at Texas State came amid three defenders. "I had just enough height on it, and not just enough height on it to get it over the first guy and in between the other two guys," Sanders said of the pass.

U is for Upsets. Northern Iowa has topped three teams this season ranked No. 1 at some point—with two wins on the road.

V is for Variety. Sanders has hit nine or more receivers in five of the past seven wins.

W is for Waffle House. This franchise dots the Tennessee landscape like Casey's General Stores in Iowa.

X is for X-Factor. Jason Breeland provides a spark in the Panther backfield and at wideout.

Y is for Yards. Expect plenty. The Panthers average 444 yards in the playoffs; the Mountaineers average 437.

Z is for Zenith. As athletic director Rick Hartzell said, there's never been a better time to be a Panther.

"For our type of institution, we've got the best athletic program in the country," he said.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Carolina is recognized.

Mr. BURR. Mr. President, we will learn tonight that being No. 1 doesn't mean that you win, and being the largest doesn't mean you are the best. In fact, North Carolina pork chops are better than Iowa pork chops, and North Carolina football is, in most cases, as good if not better than Iowa football.

I commend the Northern Iowa Panthers. They have had a miraculous season. They deserve to be in the championship game based on how they performed in the second half of the season.

Appalachian State was ranked fifth by the Sporting News and fourth by ESPN/USA Today in the I-AA polls. Appalachian has a record of 11-3, and they have reached the I-AA semifinals now for the third time. They did it in 1987, 2000, and now in 2005. But they have never reached the championship game until this year.

This is a magical year for Appalachian State. Over 10,000 of my constituents will make the trek today to Chattanooga, TN, for tonight's football game. I remind my good friend, Senator HARKIN, that almost all of the tickets turned back in by the Northern Iowa Panthers were purchased by North Carolina constituents who will be at that game.

Appalachian State advanced to the championship game with a 29-23 victory over rival Furman University. Appalachian took the lead with 2 minutes 17 seconds left, with an 11-play, 67-yard drive led by backup quarterback Trey Elder, who was filling in for a starting quarterback Ritchie Williams. They held off a last-minute threat and picked up a fumble by Furman and ran it back to Furman's 1-yard line, where that game ended.

Two of the team's three losses were to I-A teams—Kansas University and the tenth-ranked LSU Tigers. The Charlotte Observer named the Mountaineers the most successful college football program in the State over the past 20 years.

Among their famous alumni are Dallas Cowboys linebacker Dexter Coakley, and former Redskins runningback John Settles.

Coach Jerry Moore is the winningest coach in Southern Conference history, with a string of 16 winning seasons in 17 years, with a record of 139-67. This is his 13th playoff appearance as a head coach. Coach Moore perfected his coaching skills as an assistant under our colleague in the House, Congressman Tom Osborne.

When Appalachian wins tonight's showdown, it will be the first time a university from the State of North Carolina has ever won a national football championship.

Senator HARKIN doesn't need to take my word for it or the sports reporters or the commentators opining on the success of Coach Moore and his Mountaineers. Senator HARKIN needs to go no further than his own backyard to find someone who can attest to Jerry Moore's ability to prepare the Mountaineers for tonight's game. That is because Coach Moore counts as one of his closest friends a man synonymous with Iowa football—former Hawkeyes head coach, Hayden Fry, with whom Jerry Moore started his coaching career at SMU.

Mr. President, Appalachian State University was started as a teachers college in 1899. Its enrollment is slightly over 14,000 students. It is the sixth largest State university in our university system in North Carolina. It has one of the highest graduation rates of student athlete football players in the State, and a few years ago it ranked only behind Duke in that distinction.

I take this opportunity to congratulate the Northern Iowa Panthers. I congratulate Chancellor Peacock and Coach Moore but, more importantly, these two teams who have reached the final championship game tonight.

Tonight there will be only winners; there are no losers. Tomorrow there will be one loser, and that will be my colleague from Iowa as he prepares to send those pork chops to North Carolina.

With that, I yield the floor.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

CORD BLOOD LEGISLATION

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, yesterday afternoon, the majority leader offered a unanimous consent request to take up and pass, without any amendments or any further action, H.R. 2520, a bill to collect cord blood for use in therapies for various kinds of blood diseases. I objected to that unanimous consent request after quite a bit of talk on the floor.

As I explained yesterday, I support this bill. I am a cosponsor of this bill. In fact, I joined with Senator SPECTER 2 years ago to create the National Cord Blood Stem Cell Banking Program by including $10 million for that purpose in the fiscal year 2004 Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education appropriations bill, of which I am ranking member. We have been funding that program ever since. So I have been in the lead in championing cord blood therapies by getting the program funded and keeping it funded.

Nevertheless, I objected to the unanimous consent request because I believe the Senate should take up the cord blood bill at the same time we take up H.R. 810, which is the Stem Cell Research Enhancement Act.

That is what the House did, and that is what the House passed. The House approved both these bills on May 24 of this year, and we have been waiting and waiting and waiting in the Senate to do the same thing. We keep hearing from the majority leader that he wants to bring up H.R. 810. In fact, in what I thought was a very courageous speech the majority leader gave on July 29, he said he would vote for H.R. 810. But we can't seem to bring it up on the Senate floor.

Members on the Republican side keep coming up with new bills to try to confuse things. They want to vote on five or six or seven bills, some of which have absolutely nothing to do with stem cell research.

So a number of us on both sides of the aisle formed a bipartisan group to do what we could to try to bring both these bills, the same two the House passed, H.R. 810 and H.R. 2520, and do what the House did—bring them up, debate them, and pass them.

When this unanimous consent request was then offered by the majority leader yesterday, I was on the floor. I had not checked with all the other people who had been involved in that effort, so I objected because I felt strongly that the two ought to be together.

I said to the majority leader last night that I would take a look at it today and go over it with my staff. I have decided, after going over it and looking at it, to lift my hold—I can only speak for myself—but I have decided to lift my hold on H.R. 2520.

One of the reasons I am doing so is because, quite frankly, the bill doesn't accomplish anything that we are not already doing or about to do. In 2002, under the direction of the Appropriations Subcommittee on Labor, Health and Human Services, Education and Related Agencies, of which I am ranking member and Senator SPECTER is the chair, the registry on bone marrow units had to start including cord blood units as well.

Last year, there was a 24-percent increase in the number of cord blood units in the registry. This is because Senator SPECTER and I put this in the bill in 2003. Then, in fiscal year 2004, I helped secure $10 million to create the National Cord Blood Stem Cell Banking Program. Our subcommittee has appropriated $19.8 million in the last 2 years for that effort. That is for the banking of cord blood.

Yesterday, my colleague from Kansas, Senator BROWNBACK, said that "more kids will die if we don't take up the cord blood bill." That is simply not true. Cord blood units are being collected and saving lives as we speak today because of the funding that we appropriated through the Labor, Health and Human Services, Education appropriations subcommittee. Let's be clear, that money is there. We appropriated it. It is doing its job right now.

What will help save lives and help with cord blood is if Republican conservatives would stop cutting funding for the National Cord Blood Stem Cell Banking Program that we put in a couple of years ago.

In the Senate version of the fiscal year 2006 Labor-Health and Human Services appropriations bill, under the leadership of Senator SPECTER, we included $9.9 million for cord blood banking. To hear the talk last night, one would think we didn't have any money. We put $9.9 million in the bill. Guess what. The House had zero. The conference committee cut our $9.9 million down to $4 million. That means 3,900 fewer units of cord blood will be collected under the fiscal year 2006 appropriations bill than in last year's bill.

I would hope my good friend from Kansas will come to the floor and implore his colleagues not to go along with the Labor-Health and Human Services appropriations bill and get that money back in there, but I didn't hear anything said about that.

The cuts to cord blood banking do not stop at the $4 million level. We are told that when the DOD appropriations bill comes back, there will be a 1-percent, across-the-board cut for every Federal program. First, the cord blood funding is cut from $9.9 million to $4 million. Now, it is going to get another 1-percent cut for good measure.

As I said, if Senators want to do more for cord blood banking, they ought to increase the funding, at least not cut it in the Labor-Health and Human Services appropriations bill. But it is being cut. It shouldn't be cut. We put the money in there. So if my colleagues feel strongly about banking cord blood and using that cord blood to save lives, they ought to be out here demanding that we not cut it from what we put in the Senate bill. But I have not heard one person come on the floor and take that up and say: No, we are not going to agree to those cuts.

If Senators want to do more for cord blood banking, they should increase the funding, not cut it. But if Senators want to go ahead and pass H.R. 2520, fine, I have no problem with that. There is no harm in passing language that authorizes work that is already being done by the Appropriations Committee. At least Senators who come out and talk at least ought to thank Senator SPECTER for taking the lead on this.

There is another reason why I am lifting my hold. When we debate H.R. 810 next year—let me put it this way. The majority leader has kept saying he wants to make sure we bring up H.R. 810.

Senator HATCH from Utah said we are going to bring up H.R. 810. We are going to have that debate; we are going to vote on it. Well, when we bring it up next year and debate it, it will be crystal clear who supports medical research and who does not. The question will be very simple: Are my colleagues for stem cell research or are they not?

Cord blood transplants, while enormously beneficial to people with certain blood diseases, are no substitute for embryonic stem cell research. Cord blood cannot do a thing for people with Parkinson's, ALS, juvenile diabetes, Alzheimer's. These are the things we can address with embryonic stem cell research.

So I wanted to make it very clear today, No. 1, that I have taken off my hold on the unanimous consent. They want to bring it out again. Secondly, Senator SPECTER and I have taken steps in the Appropriations Committee both to put the money in there but also to set up the registry. We have already set up the registry. There was some talk yesterday that maybe there is not a registry out there. Of course there is a registry. As I said, it went up 24 percent last year.

H.R. 2520 basically authorizes what we are already doing, anyway. That is fine. But I implore my colleagues who are interested in this, as I am, come out and talk about the funding. Talk about the 3,900 fewer babies, young people, who will not get cord blood because of the cut in funding from $9.9 million now to less than $4 million. Let us hear some talk about that rather than being here and passing an authorizing bill, which does not do one single thing more than what we are doing already.

What it does is make sure the funding is there for the registry and to collect the cord blood and to bank it so that people and young people who have these terrible diseases can get the cord blood to help them.

I hope we do not make these cuts in the Labor-HHS appropriations bill. It is there, but we should not cut it. And if they do, I will have more to say about it next year when we return in January and February. I hope we can bring up H.R. 810, have a good debate on it, and let us vote it up or down, as the House did, and send it on to the President so we can get on with the vital research that is needed on embryonic stem cell research.

I conclude with this: There are some stories in the paper today—there were a few yesterday—a front-page story today about a South Korean research doctor and the fact that he may have—I do not know all the facts—falsified some stem cell lines. There are indications, at least in my reading of the medical journal, there is some reason to believe he actually did do that, that it was falsified. Then I heard some comments such as, well, see, there is the problem with stem cell research.

That points out the necessity for us to authorize it, to have the National Institutes of Health supervise it, have jurisdiction over it, so that it is done in an ethical way, where we can monitor it and make sure we do not have rogue elements riding off doing their own thing, so we have standards by which we can measure stem cell research, so we can have legitimate, ethical, moral guidelines which researchers can follow, and we can know who is doing the legitimate good work and know who the outliers are.

The fact that this story has come out today makes it even more imperative that we pass H.R. 810 and we have National Institutes of Health jurisdiction oversight over this kind of research.

I yield the floor.

Mr. BINGAMAN. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant Journal clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. WYDEN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION NOMINATIONS

Mr. WYDEN. Mr. President, in the final hours of this session of the Senate, the Senate is going to approve two nominees to the Federal Trade Commission. I take a few minutes tonight to describe why I want to be on record tonight against the nomination of both these individuals.

When it comes to energy, the Federal Trade Commission essentially is out of the consumer protection business. Well over a year ago, I released a report documenting the Federal Trade Commission's campaign of inaction when it comes to protecting our consumers at the gas pumps. My report documented how the Federal Trade Commission has refused to challenge oil industry mergers the Government Accountability Office says would raise gas prices at the pump by 7 cents a gallon alone on the west coast.

My report also documented how the Federal Trade Commission failed to act when refineries had been shut down or to stop anticompetitive practices such as redlining and zone pricing. Since then nothing has changed.

Despite what we saw recently—record high prices for consumers, and record profits by major oil companies—what we have seen is a record level of inaction by the Federal Trade Commission on behalf of energy consumers.

In the last few months, when we saw the price of gasoline soar to an all-time record high, the Federal Trade Commission was invisible. As far as I can tell, the Federal Trade Commission failed to take any action at all in the wake of the hurricanes in the gulf that sent the price of gas skyrocketing to over $3 a gallon across the country.

If you do a Google search on FTC and gasoline prices, nothing at all comes up to indicate that the Federal Trade Commission has taken any action on behalf of energy consumers. What you do find are statements by the Chair of the Federal Trade Commission arguing against giving the agency additional authority to protect consumers against price gouging at the pump.

For example, the Federal Trade Commission Chair recently made the statement opposing an effort here in the Senate to have a price gouging law because “they are not simple to enforce and they could do more harm to consumers.”

The fact, however, is a number of States do have price gouging laws. Two State attorneys general testified at a joint hearing recently here in the Senate that these laws are, in fact, beneficial.

In her testimony before a joint Senate hearing last month, the Chair of the Federal Trade Commission, Debra Majoras, described what I believe to be an astoundingly serious theory of consumer protection when she essentially said there is no need for a Federal price gouging law no matter how high the price of gasoline goes. The argument was by Ms. Majoras that gasoline price gouging is a local issue even if the price gouger is a major multinational oil company.

FTC officials also testified before the Congress that the agency has no authority to stop price gouging by individual companies.

Despite this clear gap in the agency's authority, the agency has refused to say what additional authority it needs to go after price gouging, and others have pressed them to do for years.

There are unquestionable efforts in the private marketplace to exploit consumers, and it didn't start with Hurricane Katrina. As the Wall Street Journal documented recently, gas prices for much of this recent period have increased twice as fast as crude oil prices. Clearly, a number of oil companies are not simply passing on higher crude oil costs but are also adding substantial increases to the cost of gas above and beyond the higher cost of crude oil.

Since the early 1970s and for much of this year, there has never been the kind of disparity between increases in the price of gas and increases in the price of crude oil. This was not seen even in the days of the long gas lines following the OPEC embargo.

Over the past 30 years, gasoline prices never rose more than 5 percent higher in a year than the cost of crude increase. But in the past year, gas price increases outpaced crude by 36 percent. After Hurricane Katrina, the price difference soared even higher to 68 percent.

Further evidence of price gouging could be found in what happened on the west coast immediately following Hurricane Katrina, when prices surged 15 cents per gallon overnight. For years, oil industry officials, the Federal Trade Commission, and others have maintained that the west coast was an isolated gasoline market from the rest of the country. West coast supplies were not affected by the hurricanes. The west coast gets almost none of its gas from the gulf. If the west coast was an isolated market, as the oil industry has claimed for years, then Katrina was not a justification for jacking up gas prices on the west coast immediately after the hurricanes.

The Federal Trade Commission is the principal consumer protection agency in the Government. It is the Federal agency that can and should take action when gasoline markets go haywire as they did after the hurricanes. But instead of action, what we have repeatedly seen were excuses.

In the past, the Federal Trade Commission often claimed that it was studying the problem or monitoring the gasoline markets as an excuse for inaction on gas pricing.

Recently, the Federal Trade Commission's campaign of inaction has even extended to the studies that the agency does. The Federal Trade Commission chair testified last week that a study of gas price gouging that Congress required the FTC to complete by this month would not be ready until next spring. In effect, the campaign of inaction is now approaching the point of paralysis where the agency won't even deliver promptly on commitments that it has made to study the issue.

The agency has continued its program with inaction on behalf of gasoline consumers despite the findings by the Government Accountability Office that the agency's policies are raising prices at the pump.

In May of 2004 the Government Accountability Office released a major study showing how oil industry mergers and the Federal Trade Commission allowed to go through in the 1990s substantially increased concentration in the oil industry and increased gas prices for consumers by as much as 7 cents per gallon on the west coast.

Specifically, the Government Accountability Office found that during the 1990s the Federal Trade Commission allowed a wave of oil industry mergers to proceed, that these mergers had substantially increased concentration in the oil industry, and that almost all of the largest of the oil industry mega mergers examined by the auditors each had increased gasoline prices. Essentially, the Government Accountability Office found that the Federal Trade Commission's policies on mergers had permitted serial price gouging.

Two years ago, when current Federal Trade Commission Chair Deborah Majoras last came before the Senate for confirmation, I asked a response to the report done by the independent government auditor. Despite her promise to do so, I have yet to receive any response from the Chairman of the Federal Trade Commission.

The Government Accountability Office is not alone in documenting how Government regulators have been missing in action when it comes to protecting our consumers at the gas pump. Since 2001, oil industry mergers totaling more than $19 billion have gone unchallenged by the Federal Trade Commission, according to a recent article in Bloomberg News. The article also reported that these unchecked mergers may have contributed to the highest gasoline prices in the past 20 years.

According to the Federal Trade Commission's own records, the agency imposed no conditions on 28 of 33 oil mergers since 2001. You can see the results of the Federal Trade Commission's inaction at gas stations in Oregon and across the country. Nationwide, the Government Accountability Office found between 1994 and 2002, gasoline market concentration increased in all but four States. As a result of the Government's merger policies, 46 States now have gasoline markets with moderate or high concentration, compared to only about half that just 10 years ago.

The Federal Trade Commission, oil industry officials, and consumer groups all agree in these concentrated markets oil companies do not need to collude in order to raise prices. The Federal Trade Commission's former general counsel, William Kovacic, has said:

It may be possible in selected markets for individual firms to unilaterally increase prices.

In other words, the Federal Trade Commission's general counsel basically admitted that oil companies in these markets can price gouge with impunity. Mr. Kovacic is one of the two nominees for the Federal Trade Commission who is now before the Senate.

Despite all of this evidence that gasoline markets around the country have become more concentrated and that in these concentrated markets individual firms can raise prices and extract monopoly profits, the Federal Trade Commission has failed to take effective action to check oil industry mergers. In the vast majority of cases, the Federal Trade Commission took no action at all.

The Federal Trade Commission's inaction on oil mergers is once again a front burner issue with the recent announcement that ConocoPhillips, an oil company formed from a series of mergers the Federal Trade Commission allowed, is acquiring Burlington Resources to create one of the largest U.S. natural gas producers. Many in the oil and gas industry expect this merger announcement will lead to a similar wave of consolidation in the natural gas industry. This, in turn, will lead to greater consolidation of the industry and fewer choices for consumers.

In addition to the inaction on merger issues, the Federal Trade Commission has also failed to act against proven areas of anticompetitive activity. Major oil companies are charging, in some instances, dealers' discriminatory "zone prices" that make it impossible for dealers to compete fairly with company-owned stations or even other dealers in the same geographic area. With zone pricing, one oil company sells the same gas to its own brand stations at different prices. The cost to the oil company of making the gas is the same. In many cases, the cost of delivering that gas to the service station is the same, but the price the station pays is not the same. And the station that pays the higher price is not able to compete, and eventually that station goes out of business and there is further concentration in that particular community's market.

Another example of anticompetitive practices that now occur in gas markets is a practice known as redlining. This involves oil companies making certain areas off limits to independent gas distributors, known as jobbers, who bring competition to a particular area. The Federal Trade Commission's own investigation of west coast gas markets found that the practice of redlining was rampant on the west coast, but the Federal Trade Commission concluded that it could only take action to stop this anticompetitive practice if the redlining was the result of out and out collusion, a standard that is almost impossible to prove.

In my home State, one courageous gasoline dealer took on the major oil companies and won a multimillion-dollar court judgment in a case that involved redlining. This dealer gave the evidence that was used to win his case in court to the Federal Trade Commission. The Federal Trade Commission, the premier consumer protection agency of the Federal Government, failed to do anything to help this dealer or to reign in the anticompetitive practices at issue.

In areas other than energy, the Federal Trade Commission, in my view, has made a significant contribution to protecting consumers. In other areas, the Federal Trade Commission has not hesitated to move aggressively on behalf of the consuming public. To give one example, the Federal Trade Commission created a Do Not Call Program to prevent consumers from being harassed at home. With its Do Not Call Program, the agency pushed to protect consumers to the limits of its authority and even went beyond what the courts say it had authority to do.

For some reason, in the case of energy, the Federal Trade Commission had a regulatory blind spot. That has been true, I am sad to report, in both Democrat and Republican administrations. It is a bipartisan blind spot that keeps the agency from looking out for the millions of Americans who consume gasoline and gas products every single day.

The Federal Trade Commission will not even speak out now on behalf of consumers getting gouged at the gas pump. The agency will not use its bully pulpit to even say that record high gas prices are an issue of concern that they will be looking at closely.

The FTC approach on gas prices is one, in my view, that must change. I do not intend to support the business-as-usual approach on energy that has been seen too long at the Federal Trade Commission. I have met with both the nominees to the Federal Trade Commission, Mr. William Kovacic and Mr. Thomas Rosch. I also asked them to provide me their views in writing in an effort to find out whether they would push the Commission to take a different approach from its long history of inaction in this area.

Unfortunately, neither of these individuals provided me with any compelling evidence that they are committed to and will, in fact, work aggressively to change the culture of inaction at the Federal Trade Commission with respect to consumer protection in the energy field.

Despite this prior statement about how oil companies with market power could gouge with impunity, Mr. Kovacic, the former Trade Commission general counsel, failed to identify any new authority the Federal Trade Commission needed to close the regulatory gap. On the question of whether the Federal Trade Commission needed added authority to address mergers in the petroleum industry that the GAO found had increased gasoline prices, Mr. Kovacic wrote:

I do not have any specific preliminary in mind at the moment.

Mr. Kovacic was more constructive on the question of whether there were other ways the FTC's statutory authority might be enhanced. He suggested Federal antitrust laws could be enhanced by encouraging whistleblowers to reveal illegal conduct by adding qui tam mechanisms that allow the whistleblowers to receive a percentage of the funds the government recovers from wrongdoers. I certainly agree a qui tam mechanism could provide a useful supplement to Government oversight in many areas. It is not a substitute for the Federal Trade Commission doing its job. And Mr. Kovacic did not identify any way the Federal Trade Commission's own approach to the oil industry would change. Given the Federal Trade Commission's record, given what they have done in the last few years, essentially being AWOL when it comes to energy, Mr. Kovacic's proposal essentially amounts to contracting out the Federal Trade Commission's enforcement authority in this area.

Now, I personally believe that the Federal Trade Commission itself needs to be an aggressive watchdog, looking out for consumers at the gas pump, not passively waiting for an industry whistleblower to come forward with smoking-gun evidence before taking action. That is why I find, at this point, no evidence that Mr. Kovacic would bring a different kind of outlook to the Federal Trade Commission's work in the energy field.

Now, the other nominee, Mr. Rosch, had a more interesting proposal. He suggests restoring the Federal Trade Commission's authority to challenge unilateral conduct affecting competition, authority that the Federal Trade Commission had prior to 1994. That would be a good first step toward closing the existing gap in the Agency's regulatory authority.

Had Mr. Rosch ended his letter to me at that point, I would have been willing to support his nomination. However, he went on to undercut his case when it came to anticompetitive practices in a key area: zone pricing. In effect, before taking any action to deal with this particularly egregious and anticompetitive practice, Mr. Rosch argued for waiting for the outcome of a pending court case and for recommendations of the Antitrust Modernization Commission. So he was, in effect, saying, as the Federal Trade Commission says again and again and again in the energy field, that he wants more time to study, which means more delay and more inaction as it relates to protecting consumers from anticompetitive practices.

It is my view that we have had enough delay and enough study when it comes to the anticompetitive practices of the oil industry. I do not intend to support business as usual at the Agency, and I am not going to support business-as-usual nominees to be FTC Commissioners. I intend to continue to raise my concerns as long as the Federal Trade Commission continues to duck aggressive consumer protection efforts in an area that, for reasons that I cannot fully explain to the Senate, they are simply unwilling to take up.

This Agency, which is willing to step in in a variety of areas, such as "do not call," stretches their authority to the limits and then even beyond, for some reason continues to sit on their hands when it relates to energy.

I want things to change at the Agency. I want to see a more aggressive approach on behalf of energy consumers. I am not convinced that anything will change if Mr. Kovacic or Mr. Rosch is appointed to the Federal Trade Commission. Both of these individuals are going to get approved by the Senate in the last few hours of this session.

It is my hope, in wrapping up—I see the Senator from Pennsylvania on the floor, who has patiently waited—it is my hope that these two individuals, Mr. Rosch and Mr. Kovacic, will prove that I am incorrect in the judgments I make tonight. I hope they will be aggressive. I hope they will look for opportunities to stand up for the consumer. I hope they will change this course of inaction that has been laid out by Ms. Majoras. If those two individuals, Mr. Kovacic and Mr. Rosch, take those kinds of steps, if they take the kinds of steps I have advocated tonight—to stand up for the energy consumer in this country—they will have my full support.

Mr. President, I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. COLEMAN). The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant journal clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. SANTORUM. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE APPROPRIATIONS AUTHORIZATION ACT, FISCAL YEARS 2006 THROUGH 2009

Mr. SANTORUM. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on the Judiciary be discharged from further consideration of H.R. 3402 and the Senate proceed to its immediate consideration.

I ask unanimous consent that the amendment at the desk be agreed to, the bill, as amended, be read a third time and passed, the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table, and any statements relating to the measure be printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment (No. 2681) was agreed to.

(The amendment is printed in today's RECORD under "Text of Amendments.")

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I am pleased that the Senate is finally passing H.R. 3402, as amended—a carefully crafted, bipartisan, bicameral compromise to provide for the comprehensive reauthorization of both the Violence Against Women Act, VAWA, and the programs and authorities under the jurisdiction of the Department of Justice, DOJ. It has been a long time in coming.

I thank Senator SPECTER, the Chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, and Senators BIDEN and KENNEDY for their hard work and steadfast support for crafting this compromise legislation. I want to especially recognize Senator BIDEN for his longstanding commitment to finding ways to help end violence against women and children, and his leadership in helping bring the Violence Against Women Act to the floor and in ensuring that its vital programs continue.

House Judiciary Committee Chairman SENSENBRENNER and Ranking Member CONYERS deserve much credit as well for working so closely with us in a bipartisan manner to pass legislation in the House of Representatives. It is no easy task to take two large legislative measures and combine them into a single bipartisan, bicameral agreement. That is exactly what we have done, and we have achieved this milestone because we had the willingness of everyone involved to negotiate in good faith to see VAWA and the Justice Department authorization bill ushered into law this year.

I would like to highlight several of the provisions of this bipartisan measure—a bill that combines the Violence Against Women Act, S. 1197, as passed by the Senate, and the Department of Justice Appropriations Authorization Act, for Fiscal Years 2006 through 2009, H.R. 3402, as passed by the House.

The enactment of the Violence Against Women Act more than a decade ago marked an important national commitment to survivors of domestic violence and sexual assault. I am proud to join Senators BIDEN, HATCH, SPECTER and others as an original cosponsor of our reauthorization effort. The bill that passed the Senate had 58 cosponsors. Enactment of this measure will further our goal of ending domestic violence, dating violence, sexual assault, and stalking.

Earlier in my career as a prosecutor in Vermont, I witnessed the devastating effects of domestic violence. Violence and abuse affect people of all walks of life, regardless of gender, race, culture, age, class or sexuality. Such violence is a crime and it is always wrong, whether the abuser is a family member, someone the victim is dating, a current or past spouse, boyfriend, or girlfriend, an acquaintance, or a stranger.

The National Crime Victimization Survey estimates there were 691,710 non-fatal, violent incidents committed against victims by current and former spouses, boyfriends or girlfriends—also known as intimate partners—during 2001. Of those incidents, 85 percent were against women. The rate of non-fatal intimate partner violence against women has fallen steadily since 1993, when the rate was 9.8 incidents per 1,000 people. In 2001, the number fell to 5.0 incidents per 1,000 people, nearly a 50 percent reduction, but still unacceptably high. Tragically, however, the survey found that 1,600 women were killed in 1976 by a current or former spouse or boyfriend, while in 2000 some 1,247 women were killed by their intimate partners.

According to the annual Vermont Crime Report, the number of forcible rapes reported in Vermont rose in 2004 to the highest level in seven years, while the amount of violent crime remained unchanged and overall crime fell by about 5 percent from 2003. Reported incidents of rape rose by 58 percent, from 117 in 2003 to 185 in 2004. The average age of the victim was 21, and 47 percent of victims were younger than 18 years old. In 74 percent of the cases the perpetrator was an acquaintance of the victim, and in a quarter of the cases the defendant was a family member or intimate partner of the victim. In only 1 percent of the cases was the perpetrator a stranger. These figures in my home state raise significant concern because violent crime has declined nationwide during that same time period. Numbers like these are why reauthorizing VAWA is so vital.

Our Nation has made remarkable progress over the past 25 years in recognizing that domestic violence and sexual assault are crimes. We have responded with better laws, social support and coordinated community responses. But millions of women, men, children and families continue to be traumatized by abuse, leading to increased rates of crime, violence and suffering.

The Violence Against Women Act has provided aid to law enforcement officers and prosecutors, helped stem domestic violence and child abuse, established training programs for victim advocates and counselors, and trained probation and parole officers who work with released sex offenders. Now Congress has the opportunity to reauthorize VAWA and make improvements to vital core programs, tighten criminal penalties against domestic abusers, and create new solutions to other crucial aspects of domestic violence and sexual assault. This is an opportunity to help treat children victims of violence, augment health care for rape victims, hold repeat offenders and Internet stalkers accountable, and help domestic violence victims keep their jobs.

Included in this bill are reauthorizations of two programs I initially authored that are vital to helping rural communities battle domestic violence in a setting in which isolation can make it more difficult for both victims and law enforcement. In a small, rural state like Vermont, our county and local law enforcement agencies rely heavily on cooperative, interagency efforts to combat and solve significant problems. That is why I sought to include the Rural Domestic Violence and Child Victimization Enforcement Grant Program as part of the original VAWA. This program helps make services available to rural victims and children by encouraging community involvement in developing a coordinated response to combat domestic violence, dating violence and child abuse. Adequate resources combined with sustained commitment will bring about significant improvements in rural areas to the lives of those victimized by domestic and sexual violence.

The Rural Grants Program section of VAWA 2005 reauthorizes and expands the existing education, training and services grant programs that address violence against women in rural areas. This provision renews the rural VAWA program, extends direct grants to state and local governments for services in rural areas and expands areas to include community collaboration projects in rural areas and the creation or expansion of additional victim services. This provision includes new language that expands the program coverage to sexual assault, child sexual assault and stalking. It also expands eligibility from rural states to rural communities, increasing access to rural sections of otherwise highly populated states. This section authorizes $55,000,000 annually for 2006 through 2010, an increase of $15 million per year.

The second grant program initiative on which I have focused is the Transitional Housing Assistance Grants for Victims of Domestic Violence, Dating Violence, Sexual Assault or Stalking. This program, which became law as part of the PROTECT Act of 2003, authorizes grants for transitional housing and related services for people fleeing domestic violence, sexual assault or stalkers. At a time when the availability of affordable housing has sunk to record lows, transitional housing for victims is especially needed. Today more than 50 percent of homeless individuals are women and children fleeing domestic violence. We have a clear problem that is in dire need of a solution. This program is part of the solution.

Transitional housing allows women to bridge the gap between leaving violence in their homes and becoming self-sufficient. VAWA 2005 amends the existing transitional housing program by expanding the current direct-assistance grants to include funds for operational, capital and renovation costs. Other changes include providing services to victims of dating violence, sexual assault and stalking; extending the length of time for receipt of benefits to match that used by Housing and Urban Development transitional housing programs; and updating the existing program to reflect the concerns of the service provision community. The provision would increase the authorized funding for this grant program from $30,000,000, to $40,000,000.

The reauthorization of VAWA is an important part of our efforts to increase awareness of the problem of violence, to save the lives of battered women, rape victims and children who grow up with violence and to continue progress against the devastating tragedy of domestic violence. I look forward to seeing it signed into law and thus strengthen the prevention of violence against women and children and its devastating costs and consequences.

In the 107th Congress, we properly authorized appropriations for the entire Department of Justice for the first time since 1979. We had extended that authorization in 1980 and 1981, but until 2002 neither had Congress passed nor the President signed an authorization bill for the Department. In fact, there were a number of years in which Congress failed to consider any Department authorization bill. This 26-year failure to properly reauthorize the Department forced the Appropriations committees in both chambers to reauthorize and appropriate money.

We ceded the authorization power to the appropriators for too long, but in the 107th Congress Senator HATCH and I joined forces with House Judiciary Chairman SENSENBRENNER and Ranking Member CONYERS to create and pass bipartisan legislation that reaffirmed the authorizing authority and responsibility of the House and Senate Judiciary Committees—the “21st Century Department of Justice Appropriations Authorization Act,” Public Law 107-273. A new era of oversight began with that new charter for the Justice Department, with the Senate and House Judiciary Committees taking more-active new roles in setting the priorities and monitoring the operations of the Department of Justice, the FBI and other law enforcement agencies, and that bill helped our oversight duties in many ways. And, as we have learned in recent years, the fight against terrorism makes constructive oversight more important than ever before.

Earlier this year, House Judiciary Committee Chairman SENSENBRENNER and Ranking Member CONYERS authored and shepherded through the House of Representatives a new Department of Justice Appropriations Authorization Act for Fiscal Years 2006 through 2009, H.R. 3402. I commend both Chairman SENSENBRENNER and Ranking Member CONYERS for working in a bipartisan manner to pass that legislation in the House of Representatives. It is on that comprehensive authorization of the Justice Department that the bipartisan, bicameral compromise the Senate now considers was built.

The bill we are considering today not only authorizes appropriations for the Justice Department for fiscal years 2006 through 2009, but also provides permanent enabling authorities to allow the Department to efficiently carry out its mission, clarifies and harmonizes existing statutory authority, and repeals obsolete statutory authorities. It establishes certain reporting requirements and other mechanisms intended to better enable the Congress to oversee DOJ operations.

In addition to the important oversight tools provided in the bill, there are many additional sound provisions designed to improve the administration of programs within the Justice Department. For example, in Section 1111 we eliminate duplication by consolidating the Local Law Enforcement Block Grant, LLEBG, program and the Byrne Formula Grant Program into one program—the Edward Byrne Memorial Justice Assistance Grant Program—with the same purposes and simplified administration. We authorize funding for this program at $1.095 billion in FY 2006, which is $678.5 million—or 62 percent—more than the actual amount appropriated, and such sums as may be necessary for each of fiscal years 2007 through 2009.

I am a longtime supporter of the Edward Byrne Memorial State and Local Law Enforcement Assistance Program and the LLEBG Program, both of which have been continuously targeted for elimination by this Administration. As a senator from a rural State that relies on these grants to combat crime, I have been concerned with the President's proposals for funding and program eliminations of these well-established grant programs. Our legislation makes clear that the same authorized funding levels and uses will be available under the new, consolidated grant program as under the previous ones.

When we began negotiations with the House on the Justice Department authorization portion of this package, I expressed to Congressman SENSENBRENNER my concerns that a combination of the merger of and drastic funding cuts to these programs will cause smaller states to lose the assistance on which they rely to prevent and control crime and improve the criminal justice system. In rural states, the State Administering Agency and state agencies are the local criminal justice resources; they are more than just state level actors. Additionally, more often than not our rural States are ground zero for the rapidly increasing methamphetamine manufacturing and distribution. It is on Byrne funding that rural States and small towns rely to stem the scourge of methamphetamine.

Byrne funding is the backbone of counterdrug enforcement and prosecution efforts in Vermont. Over the years, Vermont has been able to support a broad spectrum of projects within corrections, courts, training, forensics, and domestic violence and victim services. Chances are none of these initiatives will be possible under the new Byrne program formula because of the drop in funding level and funding distribution method. Since FY 2004, after which the new formula was applied, Byrne funds to Vermont have dropped by more than $1.2 million, or 61 percent. Clearly, the Byrne program affords States and communities the ability to use funding for a variety of crime-fighting activities, but unfortunately not the means.

I appreciate the willingness of Congressman SENSENBRENNER to work with me during our negotiations to find a solution to ease the loss of Byrne grants by small rural States during these tough fiscal times. The agreement we came to provides for reserved funds that allow the Attorney General to set aside up to 5 percent of the total amount made available for Byrne formula grants for States or local governments to combat, address or otherwise respond to precipitous or extraordinary increases in crime; or to prevent, compensate for or mitigate significant programmatic harm resulting from operation of the new Byrne formula.

We increase the authorization for grants to drug courts to $70 million for each of fiscal years 2007 and 2008. In addition, we provide for targeted technical assistance and training by the newly created Community Capacity Development Office to assist applicants in how to successfully pursue grants under the program, and to strengthen existing State drug court systems. Under that technical assistance and training, the Community Capacity Development Office will consider and respond to the unique needs of rural States, rural areas and rural communities that wish to implement and enhance drug court systems.

I am pleased that this compromise package provides an extension through 2009 for the Campbell-Leahy Bulletproof Vest Partnership Grant Program, an existing matching grant program authorized at $50 million to help State, tribal, and local jurisdictions purchase armor vests for use by law enforcement officers.

Our former colleague, Senator Campbell, and I authored the Bulletproof Vest Grant Partnership Act of 1998 in response to the tragic Carl Drega shootout in 1997 on the Vermont-New Hampshire border, in which two State troopers who did not have bulletproof vests were killed. The Federal officers who responded to the scenes of the shooting spree were equipped with life-saving body armor, but the State and local law enforcement officers lacked protective vests because of the cost. Two years later, we successfully passed the Bulletproof Vest Partnership Grant Act of 2000, and in the closing days of the last Congress we again successfully extended the program's authorization through 2007 by including it in the State Justice Institute Reauthorization Act, Public Law 108-372.

Year after year, the Bulletproof Vest Partnership Program saves the lives of law enforcement officers nationwide by providing more help to State and local law enforcement agencies to purchase body armor. Since its inception in 1999, this highly successful DOJ program has provided law enforcement officers in 16,000 jurisdictions nationwide with nearly 350,000 new bulletproof vests. In Vermont, more than 150 municipalities have been fortunate to receive funding for the purchase of 1,400 vests. Without the Federal funding given by this program, I daresay there would be close to that number of police officers without vests in Vermont today.

We know that body armor saves lives, but the cost has put these vests out of the reach of many of the officers who need them. This program makes it more affordable for police departments of all sizes. Few things mean more to me than when I meet Vermont police officers and they tell me that the protective vests they wear were made possible because of this program. This is the least we should do for the officers on the front lines who put themselves in danger for us every day. I want to make sure that every police officer who needs a bulletproof vest gets one.

I am also pleased that we include a $4 million authorization for SEARCH's National Technical Assistance and Training Program. SEARCH is the only no-cost service for small- and medium-sized criminal justice agencies nationwide to assist them in enhancing and upgrading their information systems, building integrated information systems that all criminal justice agencies need, and ensuring compatibility between local systems and State, regional and national systems.

I thank my colleagues again for supporting the final passage of this compromise package so that all of this bipartisan and bicameral work, as well as all the good that this legislation will do, will reach the President's desk and become law. And again I particularly want to thank Senate Judiciary Chairman SPECTER and Senators BIDEN and KENNEDY, who worked so hard to help construct a good, fair and balanced compromise. Likewise, I want to thank Chairman SENSENBRENNER and Representative CONYERS of the House Judiciary Committee for working with us to conclude these negotiations so successfully.

The staffs of these Members must also be recognized for their tireless work around the clock to bring so many pieces together into a winning package. In particular, the House Judiciary Committee staff has been enormously helpful, including Phil Kiko, Katy Crooks, Brian Benczkowski, George Fishman, Cindy Blackston, Perry Apelbaum, Sampak Garg, Stacey Dansky and Kristin Wells. The Senate Judiciary Committee staff has shown outstanding commitment to this legislation. I want to thank Mike O'Neill, Brett Tolman, Lisa Owings, Joe Jacquot, Juria Jones and Hannibal Kemerer with Chairman SPECTER; Louisa Terrell, Eric Rosen and Marcia Lee with Senator BIDEN; and Janice Kaguyutan and Christine Leonard with Senator KENNEDY. Last, but by no means least, I want to commend members of my own staff—Bruce Cohen, Ed Pagano, Tara Magner, Matt Nelson and Jessica Berry—for their unflinching support for these provisions, and for their hard work in bringing this compromise package to the floor.

I look forward to both Senate and House passage of this bipartisan, bicameral package to reauthorize the Violence Against Women Act and the Department of Justice. Mr. President, this is an important piece of legislation that will make a difference in the lives of millions of Americans, and it deserves our full support.

Mr. BROWNBACK. Mr. President, I applaud the sponsors of this bill to reauthorize the Violence Against Women Act for their tireless leadership in the campaign to end the abuse of women. In particular, I thank them for their foresight in incorporating the International Marriage Broker Regulation Act of 2005 "IMBRA" as one of its subtitles. This important piece of legislation, which I introduce with Senator MARIA CANTWELL in the Senate, is intended to address Congress' concerns about a significant and growing problem: the high incidence of violent abuse of foreign women brought to this country as fiancées or spouses by American men whom they meet through for-profit international marriage brokers "IMBs," commonly known as "mail-order bride" agencies.

After learning from the Tahirih Justice Center and other front-line experts about the terrible circumstances in which many of these women find themselves, I convened a hearing of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee in July 2004 to call attention to the abuse and exploitation of women and their children through this industry. Since it comes as a great surprise to many people that such agencies actually exist in the modern day, that are legal in this country, and that they are on the rise, not the decline, I want to share some further background that will explain why it is so important that Congress has acted today to compel the industry and its clients to clean up their act.

First, this is an increasing problem. The IMB industry has exploded in recent years, greatly facilitated by the Internet. According to statistics from the U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services, an estimated one-third to one-half of all foreign fiancées admitted to the U.S. each year—9,500 to 14,500 women in 2004 alone—and many thousand more admitted foreign wives, have met their American husbands through IMBs. The number of foreign fiancées admitted to the U.S. more than doubled between 1998 and 2002, and continues to climb.

Second, the industry bears significant responsibility for women's vulnerability to abuse, and has done little if anything on its own initiative to safeguard them. Over a half-decade ago, the then-Immigration and Naturalization Service concluded in a report to Congress that, "with the burgeoning number of unregulated international matchmaking organizations and clients using their services, the potential for abuse in mail-order marriages is considerable." The INS study further noted that American men who use IMBs tend to seek relationships with women whom they feel they can control. Moreover, the marketing and business practices of IMBs also heighten the risk of abuse by feeding this perception. Agencies often advertise the women they recruit as being submissive to male clients, who might pay up to several thousand dollars to gain access to those women. Other industry practices, from "satisfaction guarantees" or "shopping cart" features on agency web sites to so-called "romance tours" overseas that virtually line up several hundred women recruits for inspection by a dozen male clients during a single "mixer," make perfectly clear that the woman is the commodity provided for the male client's consumption. An inevitable and dangerous sense of ownership by the men in their costly investments can develop. Several highly publicized murders of women by husbands whom they met through IMBs highlight a growing nationwide trend of abuse. A 2003 survey conducted by the Tahirih Justice Center found that over 50 percent of programs providing legal services to battered immigrant women nationwide had served women battered by men whom they had met through IMBs.

Third, women who are recruited by IMBs are at a tremendous informational disadvantage that a brutal predator can exploit. These foreign fiancées and spouses often are unable to obtain reliable information about the criminal and marital histories of their American fiancées and spouses, and are unaware of the legal rights and resources available to victims of domestic violence in the U.S. An all-too-common result is that women from across the globe are exploited across this country, as a brief memorandum from the Tahirih Justice Center explains, and which I will have printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

The information requirements established by this subtitle are designed to require disclosure of the kinds of criminal convictions in the background of a petitioning American fiancé or spouse that indicate he could be prone to domestic violence. This will enable a foreign woman to make an informed decision about coming to this country for marriage to an American man, in advance, with her safety and that of her children in mind. The provisions of this subtitle would also provide her with information about where she can turn for help, including vital safety nets and social services available to domestic violence and sexual assault victims, if she experiences abuse at the hands of her American fiancé or spouse.

A simple but incredibly powerful premise drives these provisions: that this information can help a woman help herself, help her save herself or her child from becoming the next victim of a predatory abuser. Through this information and other safeguards, this important legislation will help prevent those intent on doing women harm from perverting and subverting both the institution of marriage and the immigration process to find new victims overseas.

So again, I thank my colleagues for their inclusion of these vital protections, and thank them, too, on behalf of the women and children whom they have spared today from tragedies tomorrow.

I ask unanimous consent the memorandum be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

ILLUSTRATIVE CASES OF WOMEN AND THEIR CHILDREN EXPLOITED AND ABUSED THROUGH THE INTERNATIONAL MARRIAGE BROKER INDUSTRY

Alabama: Thomas Robert Lane was charged with the murder of his estranged Filipina wife, Teresa Lane. Teresa's body was discovered in a bathtub filled with running water. Authorities found evidence that Lane drowned his wife by pinning her under the water with his foot. A forensic physician determined that Teresa was also subjected to blunt force trauma. During the couple's separation, Lane had been trying to arrange to marry yet another woman from the Philippines.

California: Marilyn Carroll married Steffan Carroll in the Philippines in 1988. One year later, he traveled to Thailand to marry another young woman, Preeya. Before marrying his second wife, Carroll assured her that it was legal in California to have two wives. The bigamous marriage ended when Marilyn called the police to report that Carroll had sexually assaulted her—restraining her with thumbcuffs and other devices during the attack. Carroll was charged with bigamy and false imprisonment.

Georgia: Shortly after Katerina Sheridan, a young woman from Siberia, married Frank Sheridan, he kept her a virtual prisoner, forbidding her to keep her own set of house keys, and taking away her visa, passport, and birth certificate. Later, he also took away her cell phone and cut all the phone lines in the house. He flew into violent rages, on one occasion beating Katerina and dragging her around the house by her legs. After several such incidents, Katerina told him that she wanted to go back to Russia. In retaliation, Sheridan stabbed himself and then accused her of doing it to get her thrown in jail. Later, Katerina managed to make it to a women's shelter, but Sheridan stalked her relentlessly and tried to get her detained and deported. When police went to arrest Frank for aggravated stalking, they discovered he was in Russia looking for a new bride. Months later, when an officer went to arrest Sheridan for another stalking-related crime, he shot the officer. The deputy returned fire and killed Sheridan.

Hawaii: The mutilated body of a young Filipina woman, Helen Mendoza Krug, was found in a garbage dumpster behind her high-rise apartment building. The murder was committed in front of her 2-year-old son by her husband, Robert Krug, whom she had met through an IMB. Krug was sentenced to life in prison.

Kentucky: "Dina" corresponded with her husband "Paul," an anesthesiologist, for several months before she agreed to marry him when he visited her and her family in Ethiopia. When she came to the United States, however, Paul took Dina's money and passport, brought her to a motel (the first of five), and kept her drugged and imprisoned for weeks while he subjected her to horrific physical, sexual, and mental abuse. Paul also threatened Dina that she, not Paul, would be arrested and jailed if she reported him to the police. Only when Paul left to attend a conference for a few days did she regain enough consciousness and strength to drag herself to the motel office for help. Paul killed himself before he could be prosecuted. Dina received protection under US trafficking laws.

Minnesota: Soon after "Medina," a Ukrainian college professor, married "Thomas," a well-respected doctor, Thomas turned controlling and violent. Among other outbursts, he threatened Medina with a knife; kicked her in the chest; and even attempted to push her out of a moving car. Thomas also slept with an ax in his drawer and threatened to have her deported if she ever called the police. Medina left Thomas after he broke her son's finger. Today, Medina continues to live in constant fear of Thomas, who stalks and harasses her. Despite knowing about Medina's abuse, the IMB facilitated a new match between Thomas and another Ukrainian woman who also later fled because of abuse. Medina was Thomas' third wife; he had also abused at least one of his prior wives.

New Jersey: A 26-year-old Ukrainian engineer named Alla bled to death on the floor of her car after her husband Lester Barney, 58, slashed her throat in front of the couple's 4-year-old son, Daniel. Barney fled with Daniel from the scene, the parking lot of the boy's daycare center, but after an Amber Alert was triggered he turned Daniel over to a friend and was himself taken into custody by police. Alla had been granted a restraining order against Barney a few months before and had been given temporary custody of Daniel.

New York: Andrew Gole, a former policeman from Long Island, was convicted of murdering Martha Isabel Moncada on a trip back to her home country, Honduras, after she told him she did not want to return with him to the United States. Martha had tried to leave the abusive Gole before, but had feared losing custody of their newborn son to him. Gole strangled and dismembered Martha in their hotel room in front of their baby and Martha's disabled son from her first marriage, then dumped her remains along the roadside. Police arrested Gole as he tried to flee the country after abandoning the older boy at a gas station.

Pennsylvania: Though she was trained as an accountant, Norman McDonald compelled his Ukrainian wife to take several waitress jobs and rely on him for transportation so he would have long stretches of time alone with her daughter, who was only 3 when the couple married. With his wife securely out of the house, McDonald showed the toddler pornographic videos of what he wanted to do to her and then raped her. Two years after the abuse started, his wife discovered what McDonald was doing and immediately contacted the police. Authorities found more than 10,000 images of child pornography in McDonald's computer and hundreds of video clips that depicted him having sex with his stepdaughter. McDonald's 28-year-old daughter from a previous marriage testified that her father had also abused her as a child.

Texas: Jack Reeves, a retired U.S. Army officer, was convicted of killing his fourth wife, Emelita Reeves, a 26-year-old from the Philippines whom he met through an IMB called "Cherry Blossoms." Emelita had confided to family and friends that Reeves physically and sexually abused her, and told friends she planned to leave him a day before she disappeared. Two of Reeves' previous wives also died under suspicious circumstances (drowning and suicide). During the investigation into Emelita's death, the State re-opened the investigation into Reeves' second wife's death, and obtained a further conviction against him. The State did not have enough evidence to re-open the investigation into the third wife's murder because Reeves had cremated her body. Reeves was also suspected in the mysterious disappearance of a Russian woman with whom he had lived with in 1991.

Virginia/Maryland: A young Ukrainian medical student named "Nina" married "John," a U.S. military officer residing in Virginia whom she met through a Maryland-based IMB with a "satisfaction guaranteed" policy. Throughout their one-year marriage, John repeatedly physically and emotionally abused Nina, shaking her violently and insisting that she repeat the commands he gave her. He choked, raped, and beat her on several occasions, ripped a tooth out of her mouth, and threatened her with a knife. When Nina informed the president of the IMB about the abuse, the president said that Nina's experience was normal and that many girls had the same problem. The president said domestic violence is "just the American culture," and abuse is "very hard to prove."

Washington: Susanna Blackwell met her husband through an IMB called "Asian Encounters" and left the Philippines to settle with him in Washington state in 1994. Blackwell physically abused Susanna, including one incident in which he choked her the day after their wedding. Susanna reported the abuse to the police and obtained a protection order against him. While awaiting divorce/annulment proceedings in a Seattle courtroom many months later, the pregnant Susanna and two of her friends were shot to death. Blackwell was convicted of murdering all three women.

Anastasia King, a young woman from Kyrgyzstan, was found strangled to death and buried in a shallow grave in Washington state in December 2000. At the age of 18, Anastasia was selected by her husband, Indle King, out of an IMB's catalogue of prospective brides. Two years later, wanting another bride and allegedly unwilling to pay for a divorce, King ordered a tenant in their Washington home to kill Anastasia. Weighing nearly 300 pounds, King pinned Anastasia down while the tenant strangled her with a necktie. Both were convicted of murder. King's previous wife, whom he had also met through an IMB, had a domestic violence protection order issued against him and left him because he was abusive.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I strongly support the Violence Against Women Act of 2005, and I commend Senator BIDEN, Senator SPECTER, Senator LEAHY and Senator HATCH for their bipartisan leadership on this very important legislation. The current authorization for the act expired on September 30, and it has taken far too long to build upon the successes of existing anti-violence against women programs and enhance the safety and security of the victims of domestic violence, dating violence, sexual assault, and stalking.

We have a responsibility in Congress to do all we can to eradicate domestic violence. Our bill gives the safety of women and their families the high priority it deserves, and I urge my colleagues in the House to support it.

This bill eases housing problems for battered women. It also includes new funds for training health professionals to recognize and respond to domestic and sexual violence, and to help public health officials recognize the need as well. The research funds provided by the bill are vital, because we need the best possible interventions in health care settings to prevent future violence.

Violence against women can occur at any point in a woman's life, beginning in childhood and taking place in a wide variety of circumstances and settings. It's essential for any bill on such violence to include girls and young women as well, and this bill does that.

Another important section of the bill provides greater help to immigrant victims of domestic violence, sexual assault, trafficking and similar offenses. This section will remove the obstacles in our current immigration laws that prevent such victims from safely fleeing the violence in their lives, and help dispel the fear that often prevents them from reporting their abusers to appropriate authorities.

Eliminating domestic violence is especially challenging in immigrant communities, since victims often face additional cultural, linguistic and immigration barriers to their safety. Abusers of immigrant spouses or children are liable to use threats of deportation to trap them in endless years of violence. Many of us have heard horrific stories of violence in cases where the threat of deportation was used against spouses or children—"If you leave me, I'll report you to the immigration authorities, and you'll never see the children again." Or the abuser says, "If you tell the police what I did, I'll have immigration deport you."

Congress has made significant progress in enacting protections for these immigrant victims, but there are still many women and children whose lives are in danger. Our legislation does much more to protect them, and I commend the sponsors for making domestic violence in immigrant communities an important priority.

The improvements in immigration protections in the bill are designed to help prevent the deportation of immigrant victims who qualify for immigration relief under the Violence Against Women Act (VAWA). It will consolidate adjudications of such immigration cases in a specially trained unit, enhance confidentiality protections for victims, and offer protection to vulnerable immigrant victims who had been left out of the protections in current law.

Overall, the bill represents major new progress in protecting women from violence, and I look forward to early action by the House in this important reauthorization.

I ask unanimous consent that a more detailed summary of the provisions on immigrants be printed at this point in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows.

SECTION 104

This section provides important improvements to legal services for immigrant victims of domestic violence, sexual assault, trafficking and other crimes. This provision authorizes organizations receiving funds from the Legal Services Corporation to use the funds including Legal Services funds to represent any victim of domestic violence, sexual assault, trafficking or other crimes listed under the U visa provisions of the Immigration and Nationality Act. Across the country, many immigrant victims have nowhere to turn for legal help. This section will allow Legal Services Corporation-funded programs to represent victims in any type of case, including family law, public benefits, health, housing, immigration, restraining orders, and other legal matters, regardless of the victim's immigration status.

SECTION 805

This section assures that self-petitioners under the Act and their children are guaranteed all of the Act's aging out protections and any benefits they qualify for under the Child Status Protection Act of 2002, which deals with the lengthy processing backlogs which made "aging out" a significant problem for child beneficiaries who turned 21 years old.

SECTION 813

This section deals with cases of immigrant victims of abuse who have been ordered removed, or who are subject to expedited removal if they leave the U.S. and attempt to reenter the country later. Once they are reinstated in removal proceedings, they cannot obtain relief under current law, even if they have a pending application for such relief. This section makes clear that the Secretary of Homeland Security, the Attorney General, and the Secretary of State have discretion to consent to a victim's reapplication for admission after a previous order of removal, deportation, or exclusion.

SECTION 814

This section gives the Department of Homeland Security statutory authority to grant work authorization to approved self-petitioners under the Act. This provision will streamline a petitioner's ability to receive work authorization, without having to rely solely upon deferred action as the mechanism through which petitioners receive work authorization.

The section also grants work authorization to abused spouses of persons admitted under the A, E-3, G, or H non-immigrant visa programs. These spouses have legal permission to live in the United States under their spouses' visas, but they are not entitled to work authorization under current law. The spouses and their children are completely dependent on the abuser for their immigration status and financial support, and they often have nowhere to turn for help. Financial dependence on their abusers is a primary reason why battered women are often reluctant to cooperate in domestic violence criminal cases. With employment authorization, many abused spouses protected by this section will be able to work legally, and can have a source of income independent of their abusers.

Requests for work authorization by these abused spouses will be handled under the procedures for petitioners under the Act and the specially trained VAWA unit at the Vermont Service Center will adjudicate these requests.

The VAWA unit employs specially-trained adjudicators who handle petitions filed by at-risk applicants for relief under the Act, for T visas, for U visas, for adjustment of status and employment authorizations, as well as protections under the Haitian Refugee Immigrant Fairness Act and Sections 202 and 203 of the Nicaraguan Adjustment and Central American Relief Act. The unit also deals with waivers for battered spouses, parole for their children granted VAWA cancellation, and parole for approved petitioners under the Act.

SECTION 818

This section extends confidentiality protections to the Department of Homeland Security, the Department of Justice, and the Department of State. Under these provisions, immigration enforcement agents and government officials may not use information furnished by an abuser, crime perpetrator or trafficker to make an adverse determination on the admissibility or deportability of an individual. One of the goals of this section is to ensure that these government officials do not initiate contact with abusers, call abusers as witnesses, or rely on information from abusers to apprehend, detain and attempt to remove victims of domestic violence, sexual assault, trafficking, or other crimes.

This section gives the specially trained VAWA unit the discretion to refer victims to non-profit non-governmental organizations to obtain a range of needed assistance and services. Referrals should be made to programs with expertise in providing assistance to immigrant victims of violence and can be made only after obtaining written consent from the immigrant victim.

The section also requires the Department of Homeland Security and the Department of Justice to provide guidance to officers and employees who have access to confidential information under this section in order to protect victims of domestic violence, sexual assault, trafficking and other crimes from harm that could result from inappropriate disclosure of confidential information.

SECTION 827

This section deals with issues under the Real ID Act of 2005 which imposes a new national requirement that all applicants for driver's licenses or state identification cards must furnish their physical residential address in order to obtain a federally valid license or identification card. The current requirement jeopardizes victims of violence who may be living in confidential shelters for battered women, or fleeing their abuser. The section instructs the Department of Homeland Security and the Social Security Administration to give special consideration to these victims by allowing them to use an alternate safe address in lieu of their residence. Our goal here is to guarantee the continuing protection and necessary mobility for these women and their families.

SECTION 831

This section is intended to deter abusive U.S. citizens from using the fiancé visa process and to help foreign fiancés obtain information about their prospective U.S. citizen spouse that can help them protect themselves against domestic violence. Citizens filing K visa fiancé petitions will be required to disclose certain criminal convictions on the K visa application for a fiancé or spouse.

In addition, this section requires the Secretary of Homeland Security, in consultation with the Attorney General and the Secretary of State to develop an information pamphlet for K visa applicants on the legal rights and available resources for immigrant victims of domestic violence.

Mr. COBURN. Mr. President, the Violence Against Women Act, VAWA, approved by the Senate today contains an important provision that is intended to protect women who have already been victimized once by sexual assault from being assaulted again by either the deadly AIDS virus or the legal system which may deny them potentially life-saving information.

Section 102 of VAWA now encourages States to implement laws that provide victims of sexual assault and rape the opportunity to know if the person indicted for the assault is infected with HIV. This new provision will require the Attorney General to reduce the amount of funding provided under Section 102 by 5 percent to a State or local government that has not demonstrated that laws are in place to allow a victim to request that a defendant, against whom an information or indictment is presented for a crime in which by force or threat of force the perpetrator compels the victim to engage in sexual activity, be tested for HIV disease if the nature of the alleged crime is such that the sexual activity would have placed the victim at risk of becoming infected with HIV. The defendant must undergo the test not later than 48 hours after the date on which the information or indictment is presented, and as soon thereafter as is practicable the results of the test must be made available to the victim. As medically appropriate, the victim may request follow-up testing of the defendant. If a State or local government does not currently allow victims of sexual assault such protections, assurances must be made to the Attorney General that the state legislature will bring their laws into compliance before the end of their next session or within 2 years. The 5 percent penalty will not go into effect until the expiration of the two year extension.

The bill will also now allow Federal VAWA funds to be used to pay for HIV testing of sexual assault perpetrators and notification and counseling programs.

These provisions are desperately needed to address a real, grievous injustice that victims of sexual assault are facing in many states.

In the summer of 1996, a 7-year-old girl was brutally raped by a 57-year-old aged man who later told police he was infected with HIV. The little girl and her 5-year-old brother had been lured to a secluded, abandoned building in the East New York section of Brooklyn. The man raped and sodomized the girl. Her brother, meanwhile, was beaten, tied up, and forced to witness his sister's rape. After the man's arrest, the defendant refused to be tested for the AIDS virus by the Brooklyn District Attorney's office. His refusal to take the test was permitted under State law.

In the spring of 2002, Ramell Rodgers repeatedly raped "Jane," a female New York cab driver at gunpoint. The New York Daily News reported at the time that "Rodgers is in jail awaiting trial, while 'Jane' spends her days vomiting from drugs she takes to stave off sexually transmitted diseases she may have contracted in the attack. Officials say DNA evidence links Rodgers to the March 31 assault. According to sources close to the case, he has even admitted guilt. But he is not required to be tested for diseases until he is formally convicted."

"Jane" is determined to change the law to protect others who have been victimized by rape and sexual assault. Disguised in a scarf, wig sunglasses, she spoke at a New York State Federation of Taxi Drivers press conference:

As a precaution, I have to take "four different medicines [to help protect against HIV, chlamydia, herpes and other STDs], and I was told that, unless this guy volunteers for the test, I had to wait until he was convicted." She added: "If you are assaulted, you should have the right to know whether or not this person has infected you with anything."

One November evening in 2002, Doris Stewart, who was then 64, was awakened from her sleep when she heard a knock at her front door. When she went to the door, a man forced his way inside, then raped, sodomized and robbed her. Stewart's assault was just the beginning of her emotional distress. She harbors fears that her assailant may have HIV, but she has no way of knowing with certainty because Alabama is another of the few States that do not require testing of rape suspects for HIV. Stewart, who was advised by rape counselors to wait about 2 months before being tested, lived with fear of the unknown for months because it can take at least 3 to 6 months for HIV to be detected after infection. "Everybody I talk to thinks it's so unfair that there's no law in Alabama," said Stewart who has attempted to change the state law to protect future rape victims.

There are countless stories of other women and children who have been victims of rape and sexual assault who have been denied access to this potentially life saving information. In some circumstances, rape defendants have even used HIV status information as a plea bargaining tool to reduce their sentences.

As a practicing physician, I believe that it is vitally important that those who have been raped do not also become victims of HIV/AIDS, and that requires timely medical attention including prompt testing of the defendant. Treatment with AIDS drugs in the immediate aftermath, usually within 72 hours, of exposure can significantly reduce the chance of infection. However, because of the toxicity and long-term side effects, these drugs should not be administered for long periods without knowing if HIV exposure has occurred.

Victims can not rely solely on testing themselves because it can take weeks, sometimes months, before HIV antibodies can be detected. Therefore, testing the assailant is the only timely manner in which to determine if someone has been exposed to HIV. Furthermore, rapid tests are now available that can diagnose HIV infection within 20 minutes with more than 99 percent accuracy.

The American Medical Association supports this policy because "early knowledge that a defendant is HIV infected would allow the victim to gain access to the ever growing arsenal of new HIV treatment options. In addition, knowing that the defendant was HIV infected would help the victim avoid contact which might put others at risk of infection."

While the HIV infection rate among sexual assault victims has not been studied, the National Rape Crisis Center estimates the rate is higher than the general population because the violent nature of the forced sexual contact increases the chances of transmission.

I was very disappointed that the National Center for Victims of Crime, NCVC and the American Civil Liberties Union, ACLU, opposed this provision. NCVC claimed that "mandatory testing of sex offenders may not be in the best interest of the victim/survivor." The ACLU claimed that "forced HIV testing, even of those convicted of a crime, infringes on constitutional rights and can only be justified by a compelling governmental interest. No such interest is present in the case of a rapist and his victim because the result of a rapist's HIV test, even if accurate, will not indicate whether the rape victim has been infected."

The medical facts are quite obvious why knowledge of HIV exposure is vital to victims of sexual assault and it is astonishing that anyone would argue otherwise.

Claims that providing this information to victims would compromise "privacy" are also quite shocking. Exactly whose rights are being protected by denying a victim of sexual assault the right to know if she has been exposed to the deadly AIDS virus when she was raped? If sufficient evidence exists to arrest and jail a rape suspect, the victim should have the right to request that the suspect be tested for HIV.

Finally, the claim that testing of indicted rapists is unconstitutional is also unfounded. Numerous court decisions, in fact, have concluded otherwise.

In 1997, the New Jersey Supreme Court unanimously upheld the constitutionality of two state laws that require sex offenders to undergo HIV testing. The ruling followed the case of three boys who forcibly sodomized a mentally-retarded 10-year-old girl. At the request of the girl's guardian, HIV testing was ordered for each of the defendants. The boys' public defender opposed such testing. The court ruled that the victim's need to know outweighed the defendants' rights to privacy and confidentiality.

In December 1995, a Florida appeals court upheld the constitutionality of a state law allowing judges to order defendants charged with rape to submit to HIV testing. Duane Fosman was arrested and charged with armed sexual battery. At the request of the accuser, a Broward County trial judge ordered Fosman to be tested for HIV antibodies. Under the Florida law, a crime victim can ask a judge to order HIV testing of a defendant who has been charged with any one of 12 offenses, including sexual battery. The test results are disclosed only to the victim, the defendant and public health authorities. Fosman argued that the testing and taking of his blood amounted to an unreasonable search that violated the fourth amendment of the U.S. Constitution. He also said the action violated Article I, Section 23, of the Florida Constitution, which guarantees a person's right to be free from Governmental intrusion in his private life. In addition, he asserted that the law is unconstitutional because it doesn't give him an opportunity to rebut the presumption of probable cause. A three-judge panel of the Court of Appeal, Fourth District, said Fosman's situation was analogous to blood and urine testing for drug or alcohol use. In 1989, the U.S. Supreme Court in Skinner v. Railway Labor Executive's Association ruled it was constitutionally permissible to test railroad workers who were involved in serious train crashes. In a companion case, National Treasury Employees Union v. Von Raab, the high court allowed mandatory drug testing, without probable cause, of customs employees. Under the same rationale, the Illinois Supreme Court upheld a law which required HIV testing of persons convicted of prostitution, and a California appeals court affirmed a law requiring HIV testing of defendants charged with biting or transferring blood to a police officer. In each of the cases, the "special needs" of the public outweighed the individual's demand that probable cause be established, the Florida court said. "Even if the petitioner had a reasonable expectation of privacy, society's interest in preventing members of the public from being exposed to HIV would be a sufficient compelling state interest to justify the infringement of that right," the court said. It found the law to be "the least intrusive means" to deal with HIV transmission because blood tests are routine and disclosure of test results are limited.

It is my hope that those States that do not allow victims of sexual assault the right to know the HIV status of their attacker will update their laws and begin protecting the rights of the victims rather than the perpetrators.

I also thank Chairman SPECTER and Senator BIDEN for including this important provision.

Mr. KYL. Mr. President, I rise today to comment on the Senate's passage of H.R. 3402, the Violence Against Women and Department of Justice Reauthorization Act of 2005. My comments are directed at Title X of the bill, the "DNA Fingerprint Act of 2005." This provision is nearly identical to S. 1606, a bill of the same name that Senator Cornyn and I introduced earlier this year. The DNA Fingerprint Act was added to the Senate version of VAWA reauthorization, S. 1197, in the Senate Judiciary Committee on a Kyl/Cornyn amendment that was accepted by voice vote. I am pleased to see that this provision has been maintained in the final bill.

The DNA Fingerprint Act will allow State and Federal law enforcement to catch rapists, murderers, and other violent criminals whom it otherwise would be impossible to identify and arrest. The principal provisions of the bill make it easier to include and keep the DNA profiles of criminal arrestees in the National DNA Index System, where that profile can be compared to crime-scene evidence. By removing current barriers to maintaining data from criminal arrestees, the Act will allow the creation of a comprehensive, robust database that will make it possible to catch serial rapists and murderers before they commit more crimes.

The impact that this act will have on preventing rape and other violent crimes is not merely speculative. We know from real life examples that an all-arrestee database can prevent many future offenses. In March of this year, the City of Chicago produced a case study of eight serial killers in that city who would have been caught after their first offense—rather than after their fourth or tenth—if an all-arrestee database had been in place. This study is included in the congressional record at the conclusion of my introduction of S. 1606, at 151 Cong. Rec. S9529-9531 (July 29, 2005).

The first example that the Chicago study cites involves serial rapist and murderer Andre Crawford. In March 1993, Crawford was arrested for felony theft. Under the DNA Fingerprint Act, the State of Illinois would have been able to take a DNA sample from Crawford at that time and upload and keep that sample in NDIS, the national DNA database. But at that time—and until this bill may be enacted—Federal law makes it difficult to upload an arrestee's profiles to NDIS, and bars States from keeping that profile in NDIS if the arrestee is not later convicted of a criminal offense. As a result, Crawford's DNA profile was not collected and it was not added to NDIS. And as a result, when Crawford murdered a 37-year-old woman on September 21, 1993, although DNA evidence was recovered from the crime scene, Crawford could not be identified as the perpetrator. And as a result, Crawford went on to commit many more rapes and murders.

On December 21, 1994, a 24-year-old woman was found murdered in an abandoned building on the 800 block of West 50th place in Chicago. DNA evidence was recovered. That DNA evidence identifies Crawford as the perpetrator. If the DNA Fingerprint Act had been law, and Crawford's profile had been collected after his March 1993 arrest, he would have been identified as the perpetrator of the September 1993 murder, and this December 1994 murder could have been prevented.

On April 3, 1995, a 36-year-old woman was found murdered in an abandoned house on the 5000 block of South Carpenter Street in Chicago. DNA evidence was recovered. That DNA evidence identifies Crawford as the perpetrator. If the DNA Fingerprint Act had been law, and Crawford's profile had been collected after his March 1993 arrest, he would have been identified as the perpetrator of the two earlier murders that he had committed, and this April 1995 murder could have been prevented.

On July 23, 1997, a 27-year-old woman was found murdered in a closet of an abandoned house on the 900 block of West 51st Street in Chicago. DNA evidence was recovered. That DNA evidence identifies Crawford as the perpetrator. If the DNA Fingerprint Act had been law, and Crawford's profile had been collected after his March 1993 arrest, he would have been identified as the perpetrator of the three earlier murders that he had committed, and this July 1997 murder could have been prevented.

On December 27, 1997, a 42-year-old woman was raped in Chicago. As she walked down the street, a man approached her from behind, put a knife to her head, dragged her into an abandoned building on the 5100 block of South Peoria Street, and beat and raped her. DNA evidence was recovered. That DNA evidence identifies Crawford as the perpetrator. If the DNA Fingerprint Act had been law, and Crawford's profile had been collected after his March 1993 arrest, he would have been identified as the perpetrator of the four earlier murders that he had committed, and this December 1997 rape could have been prevented.

In June 1998, a 31-year-old woman was found murdered in an abandoned building on the 5000 block of South May Street in Chicago. DNA evidence was recovered. That DNA evidence identifies Crawford as the perpetrator. If the DNA Fingerprint Act had been law, and Crawford's profile had been collected after his March 1993 arrest, he would have been identified as the perpetrator of the four earlier murders and one rape that he had committed, and this June 1998 murder could have been prevented.

On August 13, 1998, a 44-year-old woman was found murdered in an abandoned house on the 900 block of West 52nd Street. Her clothes were found in the alley. DNA evidence was recovered. That DNA evidence identifies Crawford as the perpetrator. If the DNA Fingerprint Act had been law, and Crawford's profile had been collected after his March 1993 arrest, he would have been identified as the perpetrator of the five earlier murders and one rape that he had committed, and this August 1998 murder could have been prevented.

Also on August 13, 1998, a 32-year-old woman was found murdered in the attic of a house on the 5200 block of South Marshfield. Her body was decomposed, but DNA evidence was recovered. That DNA evidence identifies Crawford as the perpetrator. If the DNA Fingerprint Act had been law, and Crawford's profile had been collected after his March 1993 arrest, he would have been identified as the perpetrator of the six earlier murders and one rape that he had committed, and this additional murder could have been prevented.

On December 8, 1998, a 35-year-old woman was found murdered in a building on the 1200 block of West 52nd Street. She had rope marks around her neck and injuries to her face. DNA evidence was recovered. That DNA evidence identifies Crawford as the perpetrator. If the DNA Fingerprint Act had been law, and Crawford's profile had been collected after his March 1993 arrest, he would have been identified as the perpetrator of the seven earlier murders and one rape that he had committed, and this December 1998 murder could have been prevented.

On February 2, 1999, a 35-year-old woman was found murdered on the 1300 block of West 51st Street. DNA evidence was recovered. That DNA evidence identifies Crawford as the perpetrator. If the DNA Fingerprint Act had been law, and Crawford's profile had been collected after his March 1993 arrest, he would have been identified as the perpetrator of the eight earlier murders and one rape that he had committed, and this February 1999 murder could have been prevented.

On April 21, 1999, a 44-year-old woman was found murdered in the upstairs of an abandoned house on the 5000 block of South Justine Street. DNA evidence was recovered. That DNA evidence identifies Crawford as the perpetrator. If the DNA Fingerprint Act had been law, and Crawford's profile had been collected after his March 1993 arrest, he would have been identified as the perpetrator of the nine earlier murders and one rape that he had committed, and this April 1999 murder could have been prevented.

And on June 20, 1999, a 41-year-old woman was found murdered in the attic of an abandoned building on the 1500 block of West 51st Street. DNA evidence was recovered from blood on a nearby wall, indicating a struggle. That DNA evidence identifies Crawford as the perpetrator. If the DNA Fingerprint Act had been law, and Crawford's profile had been collected after his March 1993 arrest, he would have been identified as the perpetrator of the ten earlier murders and one rape that he had committed, and this additional murder could have been prevented.

As the City of Chicago case study concludes:

In January 2000, Andre Crawford was charged with 11 murders and 1 Aggravated Criminal Sexual Assault. If his DNA sample had been taken on March 6, 1993, the subsequent 10 murders and 1 rape would not have happened.

The City of Chicago study goes on to discuss the cases of 7 other serial rapists and murders from that city. Each of these criminals had a prior arrest that could have been a basis for a DNA collection but had no prior conviction. Collectively, together with Andre Crawford, these 8 serial rapists and killers represent 22 murders and 30 rapes that could have been prevented had an all-arrestee database been in place.

The DNA Fingerprint Act eliminates current Federal statutory restrictions that prevent states from adding and keeping arrestee profiles in NDIS. In effect, the Act would make it possible to build a comprehensive, robust national all-arrestee DNA database.

Here is how the DNA Fingerprint Act works. First, the Act eliminates current Federal statutory restrictions that prevent an arrestee's profile from being included in NDIS at the same time that fingerprints are taken and added to the national database. Under current law, as soon as someone is arrested, fingerprints can be taken as part of the booking procedure and uploaded to the national database. But DNA cannot be uploaded until the arrestee is charged in an indictment or information, which can take weeks. Allowing local authorities to collect and upload DNA at the same time as fingerprints—as part of a unified procedure—establishes a clear and straightforward process, making it easier and thus more likely that states will move to an all-arrestee database.

Second, current law places the burden on the State to remove an arrestee DNA sample from NDIS if the arrestee later is acquitted or charges are dismissed. The U.S. Justice Department has criticized this as an unwieldy requirement to impose on State labs—it effectively requires lab administrators to track the progress of individual criminal cases. Under the DNA Fingerprint Act, an arrestee will be required to take the initiative to have his profile removed from NDIS if he does not want it compared to future crime-scene evidence. The arrestee will be required to file a certified copy of a final court order establishing that all indexable charges have been dismissed, have resulted in acquittal, or that no charges were filed within the applicable time period. This is the same system that some States use if an arrestee wants to have an arrest struck from his record. And it is more restrictive of law enforcement than the rule for fingerprints—there is no expungement of fingerprints from the national database, even if the arrestee is acquitted or charges are dismissed.

The bureaucratic burden imposed by the current system discourages States from creating and maintaining comprehensive, all-arrestee DNA databases. It also effectively precludes the creation of a genuine national all-arrestee database; only convicts' DNA profiles can be kept in the national database over the long term.

Some critics have complained that this expungement provisions in the DNA Fingerprint Act do not require expungement for State offenses that have no statute of limitations—i.e., for offenses for which the “applicable time period” does not expire. Others have complained that some States may not make certified court orders available for all of the scenarios under which expungement is contemplated under this bill. The answer to all of these complaints is that these are questions for the States to resolve. If a state chooses to abolish its statute of limitations for murder, rape, or other crimes, that is the State's decision to make. Certainly a person arrested for a serious crime in a State with no statute of limitation for the offense would be more significantly burdened the fact that he may be subject to further arrest and prosecution at any time than by the fact that his DNA is in the national database and may identify him if he commits a crime. Similarly, it is up to the States to decide when certified court orders should be made available to memorialize particular events. All that the DNA Fingerprint Act requires is that if the State does make such an order available to an arrestee—for example, for purposes of having an arrest struck from his record—then the arrestee could also use that order to have his DNA profile removed from NDIS.

Third, the DNA Fingerprint Act would allow expanded use of Federal DNA grants. Current law only allows these grants to be used to build databases of convicted felons. The DNA Fingerprint Act permits these grants to be used to analyze and database any DNA sample whose collection is permitted by State or local law.

Fourth, the DNA Fingerprint Act allows the Federal Government to take and keep DNA samples from Federal arrestees and from non-U.S. persons who are detained under Federal authority. (A “United States person” is a citizen of the United States or an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence. See 50 U.S.C. 1801(i).) The act gives the Attorney General the authority to issue regulations requiring the collection of such DNA profiles—including requiring other Federal agencies to collect the profiles. As the National Immigration Law Center noted in its October commentary on this section of the Act, “[u]nder this provision, the attorney general could authorize the Dept. of Homeland Security and its immigration agencies to collect DNA samples from immigrants who are arrested and ‘non-United States persons’ who are detained under the authority of the United States.” And as the NILC's commentary also notes, the word “‘detained’ covers a wide spectrum of circumstances. The dictionary definition of ‘detained’ is to keep from proceeding or to keep in custody or temporary confinement.”

Finally, the act tolls the statute of limitations for Federal sex offenses. Current law generally tolls the statute of limitations for felony cases in which the perpetrator is implicated in the offense through DNA testing. The one exception to this tolling is the sexual-abuse offenses in chapter 109A of title 18. When Congress adopted general tolling, it left out chapter 109A, apparently because those crimes already are subject to the use of “John Doe” indictments to charge unidentified perpetrators. The Justice Department has made clear, however, that John Doe indictments are “not an adequate substitute for the applicability of [tolling].” The Department has criticized the exception in current law as “work[ing] against the effective prosecution of rapes and other serious sexual assaults under chapter 109A,” noting that it makes “the statute of limitation rules for such offenses more restrictive than those for all other Federal offenses in cases involving DNA identification.” The DNA Fingerprint Act corrects this anomaly by allowing tolling for chapter 109A offenses.

Further evidence of the potential effectiveness of a comprehensive, robust DNA database is available from the recent experience of the United Kingdom. The British have taken the lead in using DNA to solve crimes, creating a database that now includes 2,000,000 profiles. Their database has now reached the critical mass where it is big enough to serve as a highly effective tool for solving crimes. In the U.K., DNA from crime scenes produces a match to the DNA database in 40 percent of all cases. This amounted to 58,176 cold hits in the United Kingdom 2001. (See generally “The Application of DNA Technology in England and Wales,” a study commissioned by the National Institute of Justice.) A broad DNA database works. The same tool should be made available in the United States.

Some critics of DNA databasing argue that a comprehensive database would violate criminal suspects' privacy rights. This is simply untrue. The sample of DNA that is kept in NDIS is what is called “junk DNA”—it is impossible to determine anything medically sensitive from this DNA. For example, this DNA does not allow the tester to determine if the donor is susceptible to particular diseases. The Justice Department addressed this issue in its statement of views on S. 1700, a DNA bill that was introduced in the 108th Congress (See Letter of William Moschella, Assistant Attorney General, to the Honorable ORRIN HATCH, April 28, 2004):

[T]here [are no] legitimate privacy concerns that require the retention or expansion of these [burdensome expungement provisions]. The DNA identification system is already subject to strict privacy rules, which generally limit the use of DNA samples and DNA profiles in the system to law enforcement identification purposes. See 42 U.S.C. 14132(b)–(c). Moreover, the DNA profiles that are maintained in the national index relate to 13 DNA sites that do not control any traits or characteristics of individuals. Hence, the databased information cannot be used to discern, for example, anything about an individual's genetic illnesses, disorders, or dispositions. Rather, by design, the information the system retains in the databased DNA profiles is the equivalent of a "genetic fingerprint" that uniquely identifies an individual, but does not disclose other facts about him.

In its September 29 Statement of Views on S. 1197, this year's Senate VAWA bill, the Justice Department commented favorably on the inclusion of the DNA Fingerprint Act in that bill. The Department noted:

Title X of the bill contains provisions we strongly support that will strengthen the ability of the Nation's justice systems to identify and prosecute sexually violent offenders and other criminals through the use of the DNA technology. These reforms have generally been proposed or endorsed by the Department of Justice in previous communications to Congress. See Letter from Assistant Attorney General William E. Moschella to the Honorable Orrin G. Hatch concerning H.R. 3214, at 3–7 (April 28, 2004); Letter from Assistant Attorney General William E. Moschella to the Honorable Orrin G. Hatch concerning S. 1700, at 5–6 (April 28, 2004).

Section 1002 would remove unjustified restrictions on the DNA profiles that can be included in the National DNA Index System ("NDIS"), including elimination of language that generally excludes from NDIS the DNA profiles of arrestees. Section 1003 is a parallel amendment to allow the use of DNA backlog elimination funding to analyze DNA samples collected under applicable legal authority, not limited (as currently is the case) to DNA samples collected from convicted offenders. Section 1004 would authorize the Attorney General to extend DNA sample collection to Federal arrestees and detainees. A number of States (including California, Virginia, Texas, and Louisiana) already have authorized arrestee DNA sample collection under their laws. Section 1004 would create legal authority to extend this beneficial reform to the Federal jurisdiction. Section 1005 would strike language in 18 U.S.C. section 3297 that currently makes that provision's statute of limitations tolling rule for cases involving DNA identification uniquely inapplicable to sexual abuse offenses under chapter 109A of the Federal criminal code.

In one respect, the amendments in section 1002, which are absolutely critical to the future development and effectiveness of the DNA identification system in the United States, fall short of our recommendations. They moderate existing expungement provisions requiring the removal of DNA profiles from NDIS in certain circumstances, but do not completely repeal the expungement provisions of 42 U.S.C. 14132(d), as we have recommended. Paragraph (2) of section 1002 should be amended so that it simply repeals subsection (d) of 42 U.S.C. 14132. We have previously observed:

"States usually do not expunge fingerprint records . . . if the defendant is not convicted, or if the conviction is ultimately overturned, nor are they required to remove fingerprint records in such cases from the national . . . criminal history records systems. There is no reason to have a contrary Federal policy mandating expungement for DNA information. If the person whose DNA it is does not commit other crimes, then the information simply remains in a secure database and there is no adverse effect on his life. But if he commits a murder, rape, or other serious crime, and DNA matching can identify him as the perpetrator, then it is good that the information was retained."

Letter from Assistant Attorney General William E. Moschella to the Honorable Orrin G. Hatch concerning H.R. 3214, supra, at 5; see 150 Cong. Rec. S10914–15 (Oct. 9, 2004) (remarks of Senator Cornyn).

We note with approval that the Committee has made the salutary reforms of title X that expand the collection and indexing of DNA samples and information generally applicable, and has not confined the application of these reforms to cases involving violent felonies or some other limited class of offenses. The experience with DNA identification over the past fifteen years has provided overwhelming evidence that the efficacy of the DNA identification system in solving serious crimes depends upon casting a broad DNA sample collection net to produce well-populated DNA databases. For example, the DNA profile which solves a rape through database matching very frequently was not collected from the perpetrator based upon his prior conviction for a violent crime, but rather based upon his commission of some property offense that was not intrinsically violent. As a result of this experience, a great majority of the States, as well as the Federal jurisdiction, have adopted authorizations in recent years to collect DNA samples from all convicted felons—and in some cases additional misdemeanor categories as well—without limitation to violent offenses. See, e.g., 42 U.S.C. 14135a(d)(1). The principle is equally applicable to the collection of DNA samples from non-convicts, such as arrestees. By rejecting any limitation of the proposed reforms to cases involving violent felonies or other limited classes, the Committee has soundly maximized their value in solving rapes, murders, and other serious crimes.

(Letter of William Moschella, Assistant Attorney General, to the Honorable ARLEN SPECTER, September 29, 2005.)

I note with pride that in addition to receiving the strong support of the Justice Department, the DNA Fingerprint Act is endorsed by the Rape, Abuse, and Incest National Network, Debbie and Rob Smith, and the California District Attorneys Association. I include in the RECORD at the conclusion of my remarks letters from these individuals and organizations supporting the DNA Fingerprint Act.

I would also like to comment on an issue that I chose not to address in the DNA Fingerprint Act but that I may need to address in future legislation. This matter concerns the efficient use of the limited Federal dollars available for offender DNA analysis. Some State crime laboratories recently have been required to remove criminal offender profiles from the national DNA database system because of Federal regulations that require a 100 percent technical review of offender DNA samples tested by private DNA laboratories, rather than review of a random sampling. Given that private laboratories must meet the same accreditation and quality assurance standards as public laboratories in order to test samples for CODIS, and given that these quality assurance standards include the same reviews of DNA analysis reports which are required of public laboratories, I question why the additional 100 percent review is required.

Moreover, offender DNA samples are not themselves considered evidence. After matched to an unsolved case on CODIS, regulations require that the offender sample be reanalyzed to confirm the match and then a new sample is collected from the suspect and tested anew to reconfirm the match. DNA cases with named suspects tested by accredited private laboratories are routinely brought directly to court without the duplicated public laboratory review requirement. If these private laboratories can be trusted to perform quality analysis for the thousands of DNA cases that have resulted in conviction for over 15 years, then it stands to reason that they could also be trusted with database samples which will be reanalyzed twice after a match is made.

While I understand the concern that potential incorrect results from an offender's sample could lead to a missed opportunity to solve a crime, I also am concerned about the potential for additional crimes to occur while an offender's profile is queued in a laboratory review backlog. It has been brought to my attention that there are other forensic disciplines, such as drug chemistry, in which laboratories use statistically based formulas to achieve a high degree of certainty without requiring a 100 percent review of all samples. I also am aware that the National Institute of Justice already requires that outsourced DNA samples include a requirement for five percent of a given batch to be blind samples.

This duplicated requirement for review of samples tested at private laboratories appears to be an inefficient use of federal funds and, more importantly, delays justice for victims seeking a name for their attacker. Before—and ideally, instead of—my introducing legislation to address what appears to be a non-statutory problem, I would suggest that the Attorney General and the FBI reevaluate the necessity for this regulation. The Justice Department also ought to consider the possibility of permitting accredited private laboratories limited but direct ability to upload data to the national DNA Index System, similar to the permission granted to private laboratories in the United Kingdom's DNA database system.

Finally, I would like to thank those who have made it possible to enact the DNA Fingerprint Act as part of this year's VAWA reauthorization bill. This includes my colleague, Senator CORNYN, with whom I introduced S. 1606 and who offered the Kyl amendment on my behalf at the Judiciary Committee's executive meeting; Chip Roy and Reed O'Connor of Senator CORNYN's staff; and Lisa Owings and Brett Tolman of Chairman SPECTER's staff. It is my understanding that absent some aggressive staffing by Mr. Tolman at various stages of the legislative process, the effort to have the DNA Fingerprint Act enacted into law as part of VAWA this year would not have succeeded. His contribution is duly noted and appreciated.

I ask unanimous consent that the following letters be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

RAPE, ABUSE & INCEST NATIONAL NETWORK,
Washington, DC, August 24, 2005.

Senator JON KYL,
Hart Senate Building,
Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR KYL: Thank you for introducing the DNA Fingerprint Act of 2005 and for your continuing leadership in the crucial effort to expand the use of DNA to fight crime. RAINN is pleased to offer its support for this important legislation.

The Rape, Abuse & Incest National Network (RAINN) is the nation's largest anti-sexual assault organization. RAINN created and operates the National Sexual Assault Hotline and also publicizes the hotline's free, confidential services; educates the public about sexual assault; and leads national efforts to improve services to victims and ensure that rapists are brought to justice.

The Debbie Smith Act provisions of the Justice for All Act, which Congress passed last year due, in large measure, to your leadership, made great progress in expanding the nation's use of DNA evidence to identify criminals. As the DNA evidence from 542,000 backlogged crimes is analyzed, and as states collect more DNA samples from convicted offenders, the FBI's Combined DNA Index System (CODIS) databases continue to grow. With each record added, the potential to identify the perpetrators of future crimes expands as well.

The DNA Fingerprint Act of 2005, as introduced by Senator CORNYN and yourself, will make it easier to include and retain the DNA profiles of criminal arrestees in the National DNA Index System (NDIS). The DNA Fingerprint Act will eliminate the current restrictions that prevent an arrestee's profile from being included in NDIS as soon as he is charged in a pleading. The legislation encourages law enforcement to take DNA from those arrested for violent crimes, and allows these profiles to be uploaded to NDIS.

By improving the value of NDIS, which can be compared to crime-scene evidence across the country, law enforcement will be able to identify—and apprehend, convict and incarcerate countless serial rapists and murderers before they commit additional crimes.

Your legislation makes other valuable changes to current law, by expanding the use of CODIS grants to build arrestee databases; giving the Attorney General the authority to develop regulations for collecting DNA profiles from federal arrestees and detainees; and tolling the statute of limitations for Federal sex offenses when DNA evidence is available, which will allow prosecution to proceed once a match is made to a perpetrator.

The bill is mindful of the fact that police, like everyone, occasionally make mistakes. For those times when an innocent person is mistakenly charged, the bill appropriately provides the exonerated person a means of expunging his DNA profile from the database.

RAINN believes that the DNA Fingerprint Act of 2005 makes important changes to current law, and will significantly enhance law enforcement's ability to identify and capture serial violent criminals. By making it easier to catch criminals, while still protecting the rights of the innocent, the DNA Fingerprint Act will make our nation safer. We will urge all members of Congress to support this legislation.

Once again, thank you for your important, and effective, work fighting violent crime. I would also like to offer a note of praise for your counsel, Joe Matal, whose work on DNA policy has been invaluable.

Best regards,

SCOTT BERKOWITZ,
President and Founder.

H-E-A-R-T, INC.,
Williamsburg, VA, September 19, 2005.

Senator JON KYL,
Hart Senate Building,
Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR KYL: My husband, Rob and I have truly come to appreciate the work you do on a continuing basis to help victims of crime. Most recently, your introduction of the DNA Fingerprint Act of 2005 is a wonderful addition to these efforts. Our organization, H-E-A-R-T, Inc., stands fully behind this important piece of legislation.

Your leadership was a major factor in the passage of the Justice for All Act of 2004, which with the provisions of the Debbie Smith Act portion of the bill, provided a boost to our nation's use of DNA evidence to fight crime.

Your legislation will help to expand the use of CODIS grants, which will help to build the arrestee database. It will improve NDIS which enables law enforcement across this great country to be more efficient in apprehending and convicting the "right" person. It will also limit the incidents of wrongful arrest, while enabling those who are exonerated to have their samples expunged from the database.

As a victim of rape, I salute both you and Senator CORNYN for introducing this legislation. There will also be countless other victims who will one day thank you both if you succeed in passing this very important bill.

H-E-A-R-T, Inc. will stand behind you and this bill and will encourage others in Congress to join in this fight against crime. Rob and I want to once again thank you personally for your efforts in putting away violent offenders.

With the highest of regards,

DEBBIE SMITH.

Re Request To Support the Federal DNA Fingerprint Act

The Hon. JAMES SENSENBRENNER, Jr.,
House of Representatives, Rayburn House Office Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR SENSENBRENNER: The California District Attorneys Association (CDAA) strongly supports the VAWA reauthorization bill. CDAA represents 58 elected district attorneys, eight elected city attorneys, and almost 3,000 deputy prosecutors throughout California. The VAWA reauthorization bill contains several provisions that are of critical need to prosecutors and the rest of law enforcement. In particular, the measure contains the "DNA Fingerprint Act" which would greatly enhance investigators' ability to identify suspects of violent crimes and prosecutors' ability to hold them fully accountable. Therefore, CDAA respectfully urges you to include this important public safety amendment in your final conference report.

DNA technology is one of the most powerful criminal justice tools available. This technology is able to positively identify criminal offenders, including murderers and rapists, who may be mere suspects in criminal investigations or who have not yet been linked to a crime due to lack of other evidence. DNA technology should be used to its fullest capability so that prosecutors are able to hold offenders accountable for their crimes and prevent innocent people from becoming victimized.

The Federal DNA Act will allow states to take advantage of such advances. It will expand the federal DNA database to include information collected from arrestees and convicted felons. The federal database will include both samples collected by federal investigators as well as samples that are uploaded by states like California into the National DNA index a suspect is arrested or convicted. The Act will significantly expand the DNA information that is available to states and to the federal government for the prosecution of state and federal crimes.

The Federal DNA Act is particularly important to California prosecutors. November 2005 marks the first year anniversary of a CDAA drafted and sponsored DNA initiative, Proposition 69, that passed by overwhelming support of voters and changed the landscape of the criminal justice system in California. This measure requires law enforcement officials to collect DNA samples from all convicted felons, from misdemeanor sex offenders, from all murder and violent sex offender arrestees and, beginning in 2009, from all felon arrestees. So far, this has increased the California database to nearly 500,000 DNA profiles. This means that more profiles are available to be compared to crime scene evidence, and since a great majority of convicted felons are repeat offenders, particularly sex offenders, this will enable more cases to be solved.

California now collects DNA samples from arrestee murder and rape suspects, and in 2009, will collect samples from all felon arrestees. The Federal DNA Act will give other states and the federal government access to the California's arrestee database. Furthermore, it will give California access to DNA profiles analyzed by other states with arrestee databases and to the profiles of arrestees analyzed by the federal government. Without the arrestee provision in the Federal DNA Act, arrestee DNA profiles can only be used by the state which collects them, so that the ability to maximize the benefits of this extraordinary national crime fighting technology will be completely wasted. This is a dangerous proposition considering many of the most violent sex offenders travel from state to state to commit crimes and avoid prosecution. The technology exists to identify and track these criminals and it would be a shame to not utilize it.

In drafting Proposition 69, CDAA included an expungement provision, giving criminal suspects the ability to make a showing to the courts to get their samples removed from the database. Furthermore, CDAA is in the process of creating an easy-to-use form for suspects to fill out and file with the courts to assist those who claim their samples do not belong in the database. This burden appropriately belongs on criminal suspects, who are the only ones aware of the entire breadth of their own criminal history.

If Proposition 69 included an expungement process that was automatic rather than triggered by a petition filed by a suspect, it would be a bureaucratic nightmare to enforce. Law enforcement officials would have to thoroughly investigate each and every aspect of a suspect's criminal history, which would include the burden to discover whether the suspect had ever committed any qualifying crime in any other state. This would increase the workload tremendously for law enforcement officials who are already struggling to do their jobs with limited resources. On the other hand, a suspect should be aware of his or her complete criminal background without this same burden and should be willing to bring this information forward with any claim that they should be excluded from the database.

If this burden were placed on the prosecution instead, these same dilemmas would exist. Furthermore, without any real justification the prosecution could be accused of delaying the expungement process in order to have the testing completed. If a "hit" were to occur during a legislatively mandated expungement process, it would likely cause recusal of the prosecution's office or possible suppression of DNA evidence—which would defeat the usefulness of DNA as a crime fighting tool. Placing the burden on the courts, presents the same sort of challenges. In fact, courts are not even aware of arrestee samples until a criminal case has been filed.

The Federal DNA Act was drafted with an expungement procedure similar to California's. The Act does not require states to expunge profiles unless suspects are able to make a showing that all charges against them were dismissed or resulted in an acquittal, or that no charges were filed within the applicable time period.

Lastly, the Federal DNA Act provides states with DNA backlog elimination grants so that states can clear backlogs of DNA samples that await analysis. These resources will help solve crimes that were committed even decades ago by matching DNA evidence left behind at crime scenes, like saliva from cigarette butts or strands of hair, to the database. Cold cases will be closed and those who have escaped justice will finally be prosecuted. Ultimately, this provision will identify and remove dangerous offenders from the streets and make our neighborhoods safer.

Thank you for your leadership in public safety. Please feel free to contact me anytime regarding this or any other criminal justice matter.

Very truly yours,

DAVID LABAHN,
Executive Director, California District Attorneys Association.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, I rise today to express my appreciation to my colleagues for passing for the second time this session, the Violence Against Women Act of 2005. Once again the Senate has spoken loudly and clearly that domestic violence and sexual assault are serious, public crimes that must be addressed. Today's bill is a tremendous compromise measure that merges the comprehensive, Senate-passed Violence Against Women Act, S. 119, with the House of Representative's Department of Justice Appropriations Authorization Act bill, H.R. 3402. This merger followed hours of bipartisan, bicameral negotiations. Compromises and edits were made, and what emerges is a balanced bill that strikes the right balance between rejuvenating core programs, making targeted improvements, and responsibly expanding the Violence Against Women Act to reach the needs of America's families.

The enactment of the Violence Against Women Act in 1994 was the beginning of a historic commitment to women and children victimized by domestic violence and sexual assault. While not the single cause, this commitment has made our streets and homes safer. Since the Act's passage in 1994, domestic violence has dropped by almost 50 percent incidents of rape are down by 60 percent and the number of women killed by an abusive husband or boyfriend is down by 22 percent. Today, more than half of all rape victims are stepping forward to report the crime. And since we passed the Act in 1994, over a million women have found justice in our courtrooms and obtained domestic violence protection orders.

This is a dramatic change from a decade ago. Back then, violence in the household was treated as a "family matter" rather than a criminal justice issue. Because we took action, the criminal justice system is much better equipped to handle domestic violence, and it is treated for what it is—criminal. The goal of the legislation passed here today is to usher the Violence Against Women Act into the 21st century. With this bill we attempt to look beyond the immediate crisis and take steps to not only punish offenders, but to also help victims get their lives back on track, and prevent domestic violence and sexual assault from occurring in the first place.

The bill contains much to commend. To that end, I will ask unanimous consent to include at the close of my statement a thorough section-by-section summary of H.R. 3402, but in the meantime, I would like to highlight some of the bill's provisions.

Title I, the bill's backbone, focuses on the criminal justice system and includes provisions to: (1) renew and increase funding to over $400 million a year for existing, fundamental grant programs for law enforcement, lawyers, judges and advocates; (2) stiffen existing criminal penalties for repeat federal domestic violence offenders; and (3) appropriately update the criminal law on stalking to incorporate new surveillance technology like Global Positioning System, GPS.

Notably, our bill reauthorizes the Court Appointed Special Advocates, "CASA," a nationwide volunteer program to help children in the judicial system. Children are doubly impacted by family violence—both as observers of, and recipients of abuse. Court Appointed Special Advocates fit uniquely into the mix of services for victims of violence. Judges overwhelmingly report that children and families are better served by the involvement of a CASA volunteer on their cases. I hope that my colleagues see fit to fully appropriate this effective program, and in the future, raise the program's authorization level.

The Violence Against Women Act has always included measures to help law enforcement and victim service providers reach underserved communities. Today's bill goes even further by creating a new, targeted culturally and linguistically specific service grant program. This provision is intended to ensure that the Act's resources reach racial and ethnic communities grappling with family violence and its enormous ramifications.

The Violence Against Women Act crafts a coordinated community response that seeks the participation of police, judges, prosecutors, and the host of entities who care for the victims. Title II helps victim service providers by: (1) creating a new, dedicated grant program for sexual assault victims that will strengthen rape crisis centers across the country; (2) reinvigorating programs to help older and disabled victims of domestic violence; (3) strengthening and expanding existing programs for rural victims and victims in underserved areas; and (4) removing a current cap on funding for the National Domestic Violence Hotline.

Sexual violence is a crime that affects children and adults across our country. Unfortunately, rape has been a crime shrouded in secrecy and shame. Sexual assault survivors can experience physical and emotional problems for years. Approximately 1,315 rape crisis centers across the country help victims of rape, sexual assault, sexual abuse, and incest rebuild their lives by providing a range of vital services to survivors. But unfortunately, many rape crisis centers are under funded and understaffed. They are constantly in a crisis mode, responding to the needs of all victims—male, female as well as children—and are incapable of undertaking large-scale prevention efforts in their communities.

In response to this overwhelming need, our bill will provide increased resources to serve sexual assault victims. It includes, for the first time, a dedicated Federal funding stream for sexual assault programs through the proposed Sexual Assault Services Program, SASA. SASA will fund direct services to victims, including general intervention and advocacy, accompaniment through the medical and criminal justice processes, support services, and related assistance.

Reports indicate that up to ten million children experience domestic violence in their homes each year. The age at which a female is at greatest risk for rape or sexual assault is 14. Two-thirds of all sexual assault victims reported to law enforcement are under 18, and national research suggests that 1 in 5 high-school girls is physically or sexually abused by a dating partner. Treating children who witness domestic violence, dealing effectively with violent teenage relationships and teaching prevention strategies to children are keys to ending the cycle of violence. This reauthorization takes bold steps to address the needs of young people by renewing successful programs and creating new programs to: (1) promote collaboration between domestic violence experts and child welfare agencies; and (2) enhance to $15 million a year grants to reduce violence against women on college campuses.

Critical prevention initiatives are contained in title IV, including programs supporting home visitations for families at risk, and initiatives that specifically engage men and boys in efforts to end domestic and sexual violence. We can no longer be satisfied with punishing abusers after the fact and trying to help a woman pull her life back together—we must end the violence before it ever starts. We must end it, not just mend it.

Violence against women is a health care issue of enormous proportions with one in three women expected to experience such violence at some point in their lives. It also has enormous health consequences for women and children, leading to serious injuries and disease, including substance abuse, chronic, serious pain and sexually transmitted infections including HIV/AIDS. We know pregnant women are particularly at risk for violence with increased levels of abuse accounting for injuries to the mother and developing fetus. In fact, homicide is a leading cause of death for pregnant and recently pregnant women.

Consequently, doctors and nurses, like police officers on the beat, are often the first witnesses of the devastating aftermath of abuse. Unfortunately, most health care providers are not currently trained on how to screen for, identify, document and treat or refer for violence-related illnesses or injuries. That's why the new health care programs in the Act are so essential—they provide an opportunity to intervene much earlier in the cycle of violence, before it becomes life threatening, and they provide a chance to reach out to children who may be growing up in violent homes.

In some instances, women face the untenable choice of returning to their abuser or becoming homeless. Indeed, 44 percent of the nation's mayors identified domestic violence as a primary cause of homelessness. Efforts to ease the housing problems for battered women are contained in Title VI, including (1) $20 million grant programs to facilitate collaboration between domestic violence organizations and housing providers; (2) programs to combat family violence in public and assisted housing, including new requirements that domestic violence victims may not be evicted or cut off from voucher services because of the violence; and (3) enhancements to transitional housing resources.

In some instances, victims of domestic violence who apply for or reside in public and subsidized housing are evicted or turned away because of the violence against them. A scream for help, a shot being fired, or the sound of police sirens is cited as a "disruptive sound" justifying eviction. In a recent nationwide survey, local housing and domestic violence attorneys across the country reported over 500 documented cases where victims were evicted because of the domestic violence committed against them.

Sections 606 and 607 of the Act provide important protections in public housing and the Section 8 program for victims of domestic violence and stalking. These sections prohibit denial of housing assistance based on the individual's status as a victim of domestic violence, dating violence, or stalking. With certain exceptions, they also prohibit terminating a victim's tenancy or rental assistance because of the violence against him or her. When women know they may lose their homes if their housing provider learns about the violence, they will seek to keep the abuse secret at all costs and thus, will often be unable to take the steps necessary to keep themselves and their families safe.

While protecting victims against retaliation, Sections 606 and 607 permit public housing authorities and private landlords to evict or end voucher assistance to perpetrators of domestic violence. It also ensures that landlords and housing providers can effectively manage their properties and maintain important discretionary authority. The Act allows landlords to bifurcate a lease to remove a perpetrator while maintaining a victim's tenancy and evict victims who commit other lease violations or if the tenancy creates an actual and imminent threat to the public safety. Further, the Act clarifies that landlords should not be held liable simply for complying with the statute. Sections 606 and 607 benefited greatly from the input by the national associations representing landlords and U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, including the National Association of Realtors, the National Multi-Housing Council, and the National Leased Housing Association.

It may be useful if the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development issues guidance or regulations to assist with the implementation of these sections. Certain nonprofit organizations and other government agencies that have expertise in domestic violence, dating violence, sexual assault or stalking, or in housing law and policy, could provide valuable guidance to HUD in creating such guidance and regulations.

Title VII helps abused women maintain economic security by establishing a national resource center to provide information to employers and labor organizations so that they may effectively help their employees who are victims of domestic violence. I had hoped that provisions from Senator MURRAY's Security and Financial Empowerment Act, SAFE, would have remained in the bill. This amendment would provide some fundamental economic protections for victims of domestic violence and sexual assault. Just as the Family Medical Leave Act protects individuals caring for a sick loved one, the SAFE Act would allow domestic violence victims to take time off from work to appear in court cases and other judicial proceedings without jeopardizing their employment at a time they need it the most. It is my hope that the Senate will revisit this issue soon.

Immigrant women often face a difficult time escaping abuse because of immigration laws, language barriers, and social isolation. Title VIII of today's bill builds on the progress of VAWA 1994 and VAWA 2000 to remove obstacles hinder or prevent immigrants from fleeing domestic abuse and participating in prosecutions. Further, the bill expands VAWA relief to: (1) elder abuse victims who have been abused by adult U.S. citizen sons or daughters; and (2) victims of child abuse or incest who are less than 25 and would have qualified as child self-petitioners. It will allow adopted children who have been abused by an adoptive parent to obtain permanent residency without having to reside with the abusive parent for 2 years. In an important move to help battered immigrant women achieve desperately-needed economic stability, the bill permits employment authorization to battered women and abused spouses of certain non-immigrants.

Title VIII enhances immigration protection for victims of trafficking by removing barriers that block some victims from accessing to T and U visas. Title VIII also facilitates the reunion of trafficking victims with their family members abroad who are in danger of retaliation from international traffickers, and will increase access to permanent residency for victims of severe forms of trafficking who are cooperating in trafficking prosecutions. Finally, title VIII will arm foreign fiancées with background information about their U.S. citizen fiancé, and will educate foreign fiancées about U.S. domestic violence laws and resources.

In an effort to focus more closely on violence against Indian women, title IX creates a new tribal Deputy Director in the Office on Violence Against Women dedicated to coordinating Federal policy and tribal grants. It also authorizes the Office to pool funds available to tribes and tribal organizations in various VAWA programs. In addition, Title IX authorizes tribal governments to access and upload domestic violence and protection order data on criminal databases, as well as create tribal sex offender registries, and strengthens available criminal penalties.

No doubt, today's bill is comprehensive; it speaks to the many complexities presented by domestic violence and sexual assault. I am indebted to a whole host of groups who worked on this measure and/or voiced their support throughout the journey from introduction to passage, including the American Bar Association, the National Association of Attorneys General, the International Association of Forensic Nurses, the American Medical Association, the National Sheriffs Association, the National Coalition Against Domestic Violence, the National Congress of American Indians, the National Network to End Domestic Violence, the Family Violence Prevention Fund, Legal Momentum, the National Alliance to End Sexual Violence, the National Center for Victims for Crime, the National District Attorneys Association, the National Council on Family and Juvenile Court Judges, the National Association of Chiefs of Police, and many others. I am grateful for the work each of you does each day to make our families safer and healthier.

The legislation being passed today also demonstrates Congress's commitment to the Office of Community Oriented Policing Services, COPS. This program has been widely credited for helping to reduce crime rates over the past 10 years. It was deemed a "miraculous success" by Attorney General Ashcroft, and law enforcement experts from top to bottom, including Attorney General Gonzalez, police chiefs, and sheriffs, have all testified to its effectiveness at combating crime. While many politicians have argued this point, the Government Accountability Office conclusively established a statistical link between COPS hiring grants and crime reductions. We know that the COPS program works, and the legislation we are passing today recognizes this fact by re-authorizing the COPS program for the next 5 years at $1.05 billion per year.

In addition, this legislation also updates the COPS program grant making authority by providing more flexibility for local agencies in applying for assistance. It still includes many of the hallmarks that attributed to its success, such as reducing redtape by allowing local agencies to apply directly to the Federal Government for assistance, and providing grants on a three-year basis to facilitate long-term planning. The major improvement is that agencies will now be able to submit one application for its various funding needs, including hiring officers, purchase equipment, pay officers' overtime, and other programs that will increase the number of officers deployed in community oriented policing services. Originally, agencies had to make separate grant applications for the various purpose areas of the program. In addition, it allows the COPS program to award grants for officers hired to perform intelligence, anti-terror, or homeland security duties. Providing local agencies with this type of flexibility is a step forward.

While re-authorizing the COPS program is important, the next step is for the appropriators to fund the program at authorized levels. Back in the nineties, we invested roughly $2.1 billion for state and local law enforcement each year. We are safer today because of these investments. Over the past 5 years, we have adopted a wrong-headed approach of cutting funding for our state and local law enforcement partners. And, the recently passed Commerce, Justice, Science budget allocated less than $800 million for state and local law enforcement assistance, and it zeroed out the COPS hiring program. I agree with the International Association of Chiefs of Police and the National Sheriffs Association that these cuts leave us more vulnerable to crime and terrorism. In this bill, the Congress demonstrated its support for the COPS program, but the real test will come when we make funding decisions in the future. For the safety and security of the American people, I will be fighting for the Congress to fully fund the COPS program at the newly authorized levels of $1.05 billion per year.

I have many partners here in the Senate and in the House of Representatives who have worked tirelessly on this bill. Chairman SENSENBRENNER and Ranking Member CONYERS were committed to reauthorizing the Violence Against Women Act, and spent countless hours working on a resolution. Our negotiations were model ones—I wish bicameral relations were always so easy.

Senator REED and Senator ALLARD were very helpful on the act's housing provisions, and Senator ENZI helped craft some of the victim service providers. I appreciate their assistance and help to move this bill forward. With respect to the Native American provisions, Senator MCCAIN and Senator DORGAN provided instrumental guidance.

Since 1990, Senator HATCH and I have worked together to end family violence in this country, so it is no great surprise that once again he worked side-by-side with us to craft today's bill. I am also deeply indebted to Senator KENNEDY for his unwavering commitment to battered immigrant women and his work on the bill's immigration provisions. Senator KENNEDY's staff, particularly Janice Kaguyutan, have been invaluable to this process. I also thank Senator LEAHY who has long-supported the Violence Against Women Act and, in particular, has worked on the rural programs and transitional housing provisions. As Ranking Member of the Judiciary Committee, Senator LEAHY has consistently pushed forward reauthorization of the Violence Against Women Act, and his staff, chief counsel Bruce Cohen, Tara Magner, and Jessica Berry have worked hard for passage. My final appreciation is for my very good friend from Pennsylvania for his commitment and leadership on this bill. It is a pleasure to work with Chairman SPECTER, and his staff Brett Tolman, Lisa Owings, Joe Jacquot, Juria Jones and chief counsel Mike O'Neill. From day one, Chairman SPECTER has been one of this bill's biggest champion. Chairman SPECTER is the reason a bipartisan, bicameral compromise measure is being passed today and I thank him.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the section-by-section analysis be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

SECTION-BY-SECTION SUMMARY OF THE VIOLENCE AGAINST WOMEN ACT OF 2005

Sec. 1. Short Title.

Sec. 2. Table of Contents.

Sec. 3. Universal Definitions and Grant Conditions. This section aggregates existing and new definitions of terms applicable to the Act. (Previously, relevant definitions were scattered in various Code provisions.) The section also sets forth universal conditions that apply to the Act's new and existing grant program.

TITLE I ENHANCING JUDICIAL AND LAW ENFORCEMENT TOOLS TO COMBAT VIOLENCE AGAINST WOMEN

Sec. 101. STOP (Services and Training for Officers and Prosecutors) Grants Improvements. This section reauthorizes the cornerstone of the Act, the STOP program, at $225,000,000 annually for 2007 through 2011 (it is currently authorized at $185 million annually). This program provides state formula grants that bring police and prosecutors in close collaboration with victim services providers. Technical amendments increase the focus on appropriate services for underserved communities and ensure victim confidentiality.

Sec. 102. Grants to Encourage Arrest and Enforcement of Protection Order Improvements. This fundamental Department of Justice program is reauthorized at $75,000,000 annually for 2007 through 2011 (it is currently authorized at $65 million annually). States and localities use this funding to develop and strengthen programs and policies that encourage police officers to arrest abusers who commit acts of violence or violate protection orders. Amendments will provide technical assistance to improve tracking of cases in a manner that preserves confidentiality and privacy protections for victims. Purposes are amended to encourage victim service programs to collaborate with law enforcement to assist pro-arrest and protection order enforcement policies. In addition, this section authorizes family justice centers and extends pro-arrest policies to sexual assault cases.

Sec. 103. Legal Assistance for Victims Improvement. This section reauthorizes the grant program for legal services for protection orders and related family, criminal, immigration, administrative agency, and housing matters. It allows victims of domestic violence, dating violence, stalking, and sexual assault to obtain access to trained attorneys and lay advocacy services, particularly pro bono legal services, when they require legal assistance as a consequence of violence. This program has been expanded to provide services to both adult and youth victims. Previously authorized at $40,000,000 annually, funding is set at $65,000,000 annually for 2007 through 2011, to be administered by the Attorney General. This provision also includes an amendment to ensure that all legal services organizations can assist any victim of domestic violence, sexual assault and trafficking without regard to the victim's immigration status. The organizations can use any source of funding they receive to provide legal assistance that is directly related to overcoming the victimization, and preventing or obtaining relief for the crime perpetrated against them that is often critical to promoting victim safety.

Sec. 104. Ensuring Crime Victim Access to Legal Services. This section eases access to legal services for immigrant victims of violent crimes.

Sec. 105. The Violence Against Women Act Court Training and Improvements. This section creates a new program to educate the courts and court-related personnel in the areas of domestic violence, dating violence, sexual abuse and stalking. The goal of this education will be to improve internal civil and criminal court functions, responses, practices and procedures, including the development of dedicated domestic violence dockets. This section will also authorize one or more grants to create general educational curricula for state and tribal judiciaries to ensure that all states have access to consistent and appropriate information. This section is authorized at $5,000,000 for each fiscal year 2007 through 2011 and it is administered by the Department of Justice.

Sec. 106. Full Faith and Credit Improvements. Technical amendments are made to the criminal code to clarify that courts should enforce the protection orders issued by civil and criminal courts in other jurisdictions. Orders to be enforced include those issued to both adult and youth victims, including the custody and child support provisions of protection orders. Amendment also requires protection order registries to safeguard the confidentiality and privacy of victims.

Sec. 107. Privacy Protections For Victims of Domestic Violence, Sexual Violence, Stalking, and Dating Violence. This section creates new and badly-needed protections for victim information collected by federal agencies and included in national databases by prohibiting grantees from disclosing such information. It creates grant programs and specialized funding for federal programs to develop "best practices" for ensuring victim confidentiality and safety when law enforcement information (such as protection order issuance) is included in federal and state databases. It also provides technical assistance to aid states and other entities in reviewing their laws to ensure that privacy protections and technology issues are covered, such as electronic stalking, and training for law enforcement on high tech electronic crimes against women. It authorizes $5,000,000 per year for 2007 through 2011 to be administered by the Department of Justice.

Sec. 108. Sex Offender Training. Under this section, the Attorney General will consult with victim advocates and experts in the area of sex offender training. The Attorney General will develop criteria and training programs to assist probation officers, parole officers, and others who work with released sex offenders. This section reauthorizes the program at $3,000,000 annually for 2007 through 2011.

Sec. 109. National Stalker Database and Domestic Violence Reduction. Under this section, the Attorney General may issue grants to states and units of local governments to improve data entry into local, state, and national crime information databases for cases of stalking and domestic violence. This section reauthorizes the program at $3,000,000 annually for 2007 through 2011.

Sec. 110. Federal Victim Assistants. This section authorizes funding for U.S. Attorney offices to hire counselors to assist victims and witnesses in prosecution of domestic violence and sexual assault cases. This section is reauthorized for $1,000,000 annually for 2007 through 2011.

Sec. 111. Grants for Law Enforcement Training Programs. This section would authorize a Department of Justice grant program to help train State and local law enforcement to identify and protect trafficking victims, to investigate and prosecute trafficking cases and to develop State and local laws to prohibit acts of trafficking. It proposes $10,000,000 in grants annually from 2006 to 2010.

Sec. 112. Reauthorization of the Court-Appointed Special Advocate Program. This section reauthorizes the widely-used Court-Appointed Special Advocate Program (CASA).

CASA is a nationwide volunteer program that helps represent children who are in the family and/or juvenile justice system due to neglect or abuse. This provision also allows the program to request the FBI conduct background checks of prospective volunteers. This program is reauthorized at $12,000,000 annually for 2007 through 2011.

Sec. 113. Preventing Cyberstalking. To strengthen stalking prosecution tools, this section amends the Communications Act of 1934 (47 U.S.C. 223(h)(1)) to expand the definition of a telecommunications device to include any device or software that uses the Internet and possible Internet technologies such as voice over internet services. This amendment will allow federal prosecutors more discretion in charging stalking cases that occur entirely over the internet.

Sec. 114. Updating the Federal Stalking Law. Section 114 improves the existing federal stalking law by borrowing state stalking law language to (1) criminalize stalking surveillance (this would include surveillance by new technology devices such as Global Positioning Systems (GPS)); and (2) to expand the accountable harm to include substantial emotional harm to the victim. The provision also enhances minimum penalties if the stalking occurred in violation of an existing protection order.

Sec. 115. Repeat Offender Provision. This section updates the criminal code to permit doubling the applicable penalty for repeat federal domestic violence offender—a sentencing consequence already permissible for repeat federal sexual assault offenders.

Sec. 116. Prohibiting Dating Violence. Utilizing the Act's existing definition of dating violence, section 115 amends the federal interstate domestic violence prohibition to include interstate dating violence.

Sec. 117. Prohibiting Violence in Special Maritime and Territorial Jurisdiction. This section tightens the interstate domestic violence criminal provision to include special maritime and territories within the scope of federal jurisdiction.

Sec. 118. Updating Protection Order Definition in 28 U.S.C. §534(e)(3)(B).

Sec. 119. Grants for Outreach to Underserved Populations. This grant program authorizes $2 million annually for local, national, and regional information campaigns on services and law enforcement resources available to victims of domestic violence, dating violence, sexual assault and stalking.

TITLE II. IMPROVING SERVICES FOR VICTIMS OF DOMESTIC VIOLENCE, DATING VIOLENCE, SEXUAL ASSAULT AND STALKING

Sec. 201. Findings

Sec. 202. Sexual Assault Services Provision. This section creates a separate and direct funding stream dedicated to sexual assault services. Currently, the Act funds rape prevention programs, but does not provide sufficient resources for direct services dedicated solely to sexual assault victims, primarily rape crisis centers. Under this new program funding will be distributed by the Department of Justice to states and their sexual violence coalitions. The formula grant funds will assist States and Tribes in their efforts to provide services to adult, youth and child sexual assault victims and their family and household members, including intervention, advocacy, accompaniment in medical, criminal justice, and social support systems, support services, and related assistance. Funding is also provided for training and technical assistance. This section authorizes $50,000,000 annually for 2006–2010.

Sec. 203. Amendments to the Rural Domestic Violence and Child Abuse Enforcement Assistance Program. This section reauthorizes and expands the existing education, training and services grant programs that address violence against women in rural areas. This provision renews the rural VAWA program, extends direct grants to state and local governments for services in rural areas and expands purpose areas to include community collaboration projects in rural areas and the creation or expansion of additional victim services. New language expands the program coverage to sexual assault, child sexual assault and stalking. It also expands eligibility from rural states to rural communities, increasing access to rural sections of otherwise highly populated states. This section authorizes $55,000,000 annually for 2007 through 2011 (it is currently authorized at $40 million a year).

Sec. 204. Education, Training and Enhanced Services to End Violence Against Women with Disabilities. This section reauthorizes and expands the existing education, training and services grant programs that address violence against women with disabilities. New purpose areas include construction and personnel costs for shelters to better serve victims with disabilities, the development of collaborative partnerships between victim service organizations and organizations serving individuals with disabilities and the development of model programs that situate advocacy and intervention services for victims within organizations serving individuals with disabilities. The program is authorized at $10,000,000 for each fiscal year 2007 through 2011.

Sec. 205. Education, Training and Services to End Violence Against Abuse of Women Later in Life. This section reauthorizes and expands the existing education, training and services grant programs that address violence against elderly women. Grants will be distributed by the Department of Justice to States, local government, nonprofit and nongovernmental organizations for providing training and services for domestic violence, dating violence, sexual assault and stalking victims age 60 and older. The program is authorized at $10,000,000 annually for 2007 through 2011.

Sec. 206. Strengthening the National Domestic Violence Hotline. Section 206 eliminates a current funding requirement that any funds appropriated to the Hotline in excess of $3,000,000 be devoted entirely to a non-existent Internet program.

TITLE III. SERVICES, PROTECTION AND JUSTICE FOR YOUNG VICTIMS OF VIOLENCE

Sec. 301. Findings

Sec. 302. Rape Prevention and Education. This section reauthorizes the Rape Prevention and Education Program. It appropriates $80,000,000 annually (its current authorization level) for 2007 through 2011. Of the total funds made available under this subsection in each fiscal year, a minimum of $1,500,000 will be allotted to the National Sexual Violence Resource Center.

Sec. 303. Services, Education, Protection and Justice for Young Victims of Violence. This section establishes a new subtitle that would create four new grant programs designed to address dating violence committed by and against youth.

(1) The Services to Advocate for and Respond to Teens program authorizes grants to nonprofit, nongovernmental and community based organizations that provide services to teens and young adult victims of domestic violence, dating violence, sexual assault or stalking. This section is authorized for $15,000,000 annually for 2007 through 2011 and will be administered by the Department of Health and Human Services.

(2) The Access to Justice for Teens program is a demonstration grant program to promote collaboration between courts (including tribal courts), domestic violence and sexual assault service providers, youth organizations and service providers, violence prevention programs, and law enforcement agencies. The purposes of the collaborative projects are to identify and respond to domestic violence, dating violence, sexual assault and stalking committed by or against teens; to recognize the need to hold the perpetrators accountable; to establish and implement procedures to protect teens; and to increase cooperation among community organizations. This section is authorized at $5,000,000 annually for 2007 through 2011 to be administered by Department of Justice.

(3) The third program established under Sec. 303 is the Grants for Training and Collaboration on the Intersection between Domestic Violence and Child Maltreatment program. It provides grants to child welfare agencies, courts, domestic or dating violence service providers, law enforcement and other related community organizations. Grant recipients are to develop collaborative responses, services and cross-training to enhance responses to families where there is both child abuse and neglect and domestic violence or dating violence. This section authorized at $5,000,000 annually 2007 through 2011 to be administered by the Department of Justice.

(4) The final program established under 303 is the Supporting Teens through Education and Protection program to be administered by the Department of Justice to eligible middle and high school schools that work with domestic violence and sexual assault experts to train and counsel school faculty and students.

Sec. 304. Reauthorization of Grants to Reduce Violence Against Women on Campus. This amends the existing campus program to be administered by the Department of Justice on a three-year grant cycle, provides more money and sets parameters for training of campus law enforcement and campus judicial boards. This section is authorized at $12,000,000 for 2007 and $15,000,000 for 2008 through 2011 (it is currently authorized at $10 million).

Sec. 305. Juvenile Justice. The overwhelming majority of girls entering the juvenile justice system are victims of abuse and violence, and the system must provide adequate services that are tailored to girls' gender-specific needs and to their experiences of abuse. These provisions amend the Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Act to permit grantees to detail gender-specific services.

Sec. 306. Safe Havens for Children. This section continues and expands a pilot Justice Department grant program aimed at reducing domestic violence and child abuse during parental visitation or the transfer of children for visitation by expanding the availability of supervised visitation centers. It reauthorizes the program for $20,000,000 annually for 2007 through 2011.

TITLE IV. STRENGTHENING AMERICA'S FAMILIES BY PREVENTING VIOLENCE

Sec. 401. Findings, Purpose and Authorization for three new, child-focused programs. This section creates: (1) Grants to Assist Children and Youth Exposed to Violence that authorizes new, collaborative programs, administered by the Office on Violence Against Women in the Department of Justice in collaboration with the Administration for Children, Youth and Families in the Department of Health and Human Services, to provide services for children who have been exposed to domestic violence, dating violence, sexual assault or stalking for the purpose of mitigating the effects of such violence. Programs authorized under this section include both direct services for children and their non-abusing parent or caretaker, and training/coordination for programs that serve children and youth (such as Head Start, child care, and after-school programs). It is authorized at $20,000,000 annually from 2007 through 2011.

This section also establishes the Development of Curricula and Pilot Programs for Home Visitation Projects. Home visitation services are offered in many states and on some military bases to provide assistance to new parents or families in crisis. Home visitation services, in addition to providing assistance to the parents, look for signs of child abuse or neglect in the home. This provision, administered by the Office on Violence Against Women in the Department of Justice in collaboration with the Administration for Children, Youth and Families in the Department of Health and Human Services, creates model training curricula and provides home visitation services to help families to develop strong parenting skills and ensure the safety of all family members. The program is authorized at $7,000 per year for 2006-2010.

The final new program engages men and youth in preventing domestic violence, dating violence, sexual assault and stalking. It authorizes the development, testing and implementation of programs to help youth and children develop respectful, non-violent relationships. The grant is administered by the Office on Violence Against Women at the Department of Justice in collaboration with the Department of Health and Human Services, and eligible entities include community-based youth service organizations and state and local governmental entities. It is authorized at $10,000,000 annually for 2007 through 2011.

Sec. 402. Study Conducted by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. This provision authorizes $2 million to the Centers for Disease Control to study the best practices for reducing and preventing violence against women and children and an evaluation of programs funded under this Title.

TITLE V. STRENGTHENING THE HEALTH CARE SYSTEM'S RESPONSE TO DOMESTIC VIOLENCE, DATING VIOLENCE, SEXUAL ASSAULT AND STALKING

Sec. 501. Findings.

Sec. 502. Purposes.

Sec. 503. Training and Education of Health Professionals. This section provides new grants to train health care providers and students in health professional schools on recognizing and appropriately responding to domestic and sexual violence. The provision authorizes $3,000,000 each year from 2007 through 2011 to be administered by the Department of Health and Human Services.

Sec. 504. Grants to Foster Public Health Responses to Domestic Violence, Dating Violence, Sexual Assault and Stalking. Section 504 provides grants for statewide and local collaborations between domestic and sexual violence services providers and health care providers including state hospitals and public health departments. These programs would provide training and education to health care providers and would develop policies and procedures that enhance screening of women for exposure to domestic and sexual violence, and encourage proper identification, documentation and referral for services when appropriate. This section is authorized at $5,000,000 annually from 2007 through 2011.

Sec. 506. Research on Effective Interventions in the Health Care Setting to Address Domestic Violence. Includes funding for the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention and Administration for Healthcare Research and Quality to evaluate effective interventions within the health care setting to improve abused women's health and safety and prevent further victimization. This section is authorized at $5,000,000 annually from 2007 through 2011.

TITLE VI. HOUSING OPPORTUNITIES AND SAFETY FOR BATTERED WOMEN AND CHILDREN

Sec. 601. Amends the Violence Against Women Act to include a title addressing housing needs of victims of domestic violence, dating violence, sexual assault and stalking.

Sec. 41401. Findings.

Sec. 41402. Purposes.

Sec. 41403. Definitions.

Sec. 41404. Collaborative Grants to Develop Long-Term Housing for Victims. Modeled after successful affordable housing, community development, and "housing first" programs across the nation, this section would provide $10,000,000 for the Department of Health and Human Services in partnership with the Department of Housing and Urban Development to fund collaborative efforts to: place domestic violence survivors into long-term housing as soon as reasonable and safe; provide services to help individuals or families find long-term housing; provide financial assistance to attain long-term housing (including funds for security deposits, first month's rent, utilities, down payments, short-term rental assistance); provide services to help individuals or families remain housed (including advocacy, transportation, child care, financial assistance, counseling, case management, and other supportive services); and create partnerships to purchase, build, renovate, repair, convert and operate affordable housing units. Funds may not be directly spent on construction, modernization, or renovations.

Sec. 41405. Grants to Combat Violence Against Women in Public and Assisted Housing. This section establishes grants to assist public and Indian housing authorities, landlords, property management companies and other housing providers and agencies in responding appropriately to domestic and sexual violence. Grants would provide education and training, development of policies and practices, enhancement of collaboration with victim organizations, protection of victims residing in public, Indian and assisted housing, and reduction of evictions and denial of housing to victims for crimes and lease violations committed or directly caused by the perpetrators of violence against them. The program is authorized at $10,000,000 and will be administered by the Office on Violence Against Women in the Department of Justice.

Sec. 602. Transitional Housing Assistance Grants for Victims of Domestic Violence, Dating Violence, Sexual Assault or Stalking. Section 602 amends the existing transitional housing program created by the PROTECT Act and administered by the Office on Violence Against Women in the Department of Justice. This section expands the current direct-assistance grants to include funds for operational, capital and renovation costs. Other changes include providing services to victims of dating violence, sexual assault and stalking; extending the length of time for receipt of benefits to match that used by HUD transitional housing programs; and updating the existing program to reflect the concerns of victim service providers. The provision would increase the authorized funding for the grant from $30,000,000 to $40,000,000.

Sec. 603. Public and Indian Housing Authority Plans Reporting Requirement.

Sec. 604. Housing Strategies.

Sections 603 and 604 amend the Housing and Urban Development (HUD) Agency reporting requirements imposed on public housing applicants. Pursuant to the amendment, HUD applicants must include any plans to address domestic violence, dating violence, sexual assault and stalking in their application.

Sec. 605. Amendment to the McKinney-Vento Homeless Assistance Act. This provision amends the Homeless Management Information Systems (HMIS) statute in the McKinney-Vento Homelessness Assistance Act to protect the confidentiality of victims of domestic violence, dating violence, sexual assault and stalking receiving assistance from HUD-funded victim service programs. It requires that these programs refrain from disclosing personally identifying information to the HMIS. HUD-funded victim service providers may disclose non-personally identifying information to the HMIS.

Sec. 606. Amendments to the Low Income Housing Assistance Voucher Program.

Sec. 607. Amendments to the Public Housing Program. Sections 606 and 607 amend the Low Income Housing Assistance Voucher program (also known as the Section 8 or Housing Choice Voucher program) and the Public Housing program to state that an individual's status as a victim of domestic violence, dating violence, or stalking is not an appropriate basis for denial of program assistance by a public housing authority. It also states that incidents of domestic violence, dating violence and stalking shall not be good cause for terminating a lease held by the victim. The amendments specify that the authority of an owner or PHA to evict or terminate perpetrators of abuse shall not be limited and gives landlords and PHAs the ability to bifurcate a lease to maintain the victim's tenancy while evicting the perpetrator. Victims must certify their status as victims by presenting appropriate documentation to the PHA or owner, and the language clarifies that victims can be evicted for lease violations or if their tenancy poses a threat to the community.

TITLE VII. PROVIDING ECONOMIC SECURITY FOR VICTIMS OF VIOLENCE

Sec. 701. Resource Center on Domestic and Sexual Violence in the Workplace. This provision authorizes the Attorney General to award a grant to a private non-profit entity or tribal organization for the establishment and operation of a national resource center to provide information and assistance to employers and labor organizations to aid victims of domestic violence, dating violence, sexual assault, and stalking. A million dollars would be appropriated annually for fiscal years 2007 through 2011 to support these activities.

TITLE VIII. PROTECTION OF BATTERED AND TRAFFICKED IMMIGRANT WOMEN

Sec. 801. Treatment of Spouse and Children of Victims. For some trafficking victims, providing assistance in the investigation or prosecution of the trafficking case can endanger or traumatize the victim or her family members. The ability to ensure safety of family members living abroad is crucial to trafficking victims' or crime victims' well being and ability to effectively assist in prosecutions. This section allows T and U visa holders' spouse, children, parents, and unmarried siblings under 18 to join them in the United States.

Sec. 802. Permitted Presence of Victims of Severe Trafficking. This section permits trafficking victims' unlawful presence in the United States only if the trafficking is at least one central reason for the unlawful presence. The limited exception to the unlawful presence provision is identical to that afforded to non-citizen survivors of domestic abuse.

Sec. 803. Adjustment of Status for Victims of Trafficking. This section shortens the adjustment time and allows trafficking victims to apply for lawful permanent residency 2 years after receiving a T visa.

Sec. 804. Protection and Assistance for Victims of Trafficking. This section clarifies the roles and responsibilities accorded to the Department of Justice and the Department of Homeland Security in addressing trafficking and supporting victims. Furthermore, this section clarifies that "assistance" by trafficking victims includes responding to and cooperating with requests for evidence and information.

Sec. 805. Protecting Victims of Child Abuse and Incest. This section clarifies language to ensure that children of VAWA self-petitioners abused by lawful permanent residents receive the VAWA immigration protection and lawful permanent residency along with their abused parent. It also assures that children eligible for VAWA immigration relief are not excluded from Child Status Protection Act protection. This section enhances protection for incest victims by permitting VAWA self-petitions to be filed until age 25 by individuals who qualified for VAWA relief before they were 21 but did not file a petition before that time if the abuse is at least one central reason for the delayed filing.

Under current law, adopted foreign-born children must reside with their adoptive parents for two years to gain legal immigration status through their adoptive parents. This section allows adopted children who were battered or subjected to extreme cruelty by their adoptive parent or the adoptive parent's family member residing in the household to attain legal immigration status without having to reside for two years with the abusive adoptive family member.

Sec. 811. Definition of VAWA Self-Petitioner. This section creates a term "VAWA self-petitioner" which covers all forms of VAWA self-petitions created in VAWA 2000 including VAWA Cuban Adjustment, VAWA HRIFA and VAWA NACARA applicants.

Sec. 812. Application in Cases of Voluntary Departure. Under current law, people who fail to comply with voluntary departure orders are barred for 10 years from receiving lawful permanent residency through adjustment of status, cancellation of removal (including VAWA cancellation), change of status, and registry. Denying lawful permanent residency to immigrant victims of domestic violence, sexual assault and trafficking undermines Congressional intent to provide immigration relief crucial to supporting crime victims cooperating with law enforcement and offering protection for battered immigrant spouses and children. This section exempts victims eligible for VAWA, T or U relief from the harsh consequences of failing to comply with voluntary departure orders as long as the extreme cruelty or battery is at least one of the central reasons for the overstay.

Sec. 813. Removal Proceedings. This section adds domestic abuse to the list of exceptional circumstances that allow immigrants to file motions to reopen in removal proceedings. VAWA 2000 allowed immigration judges in cancellation of removal and adjustment of status proceedings to waive ineligibility grounds for some VAWA eligible battered petitioners, who acted in self defense, violated their own protection order, or were involved in a crime that didn't result in serious bodily injury or where there was a connection between the crime and their own abuse. This section corrects drafting errors that have made these waivers procedurally unavailable to battered immigrant victims.

Sec. 814. Eliminating Abusers' Control Over Applications and Limitation on Petitioning for Abusers. The Violence Against Women Act enabled battered Haitian Refugee Immigration Fairness Act and Cuban Adjustment Act applicants to apply for VAWA immigration relief. In order for these applicants to access the relief, they need to file motions to reopen. However, due to a drafting oversight, the deadline for filing motions to reopen had already passed when VAWA 2000 became law. This amendment corrects the drafting and allows these battered immigrants to file motions to reopen and thereby access the relief that was created for them in VAWA 2000.

This section also makes approved VAWA self-petitioners and their spouses eligible for employment authorization. Providing employment authorization earlier in the application process gives battered immigrant self-petitioners the means to sever economic dependence on their abusers, promoting their safety and the safety of their children.

Section 814 also prohibits a VAWA self-petitioner or a T or U-visa holder from petition for immigrant status for their abuser.

Sec. 815. Application for VAWA-Related Relief. This amendment clarifies that certain battered spouses and children can access relief under the Nicaraguan Adjustment and Central American Relief Act that was specifically created for those groups in VAWA 2000. This amendment ensures relief even in cases where an abusive spouse or parent failed to apply to adjust the survivor's status to lawful permanent residency by the statutory deadline or failed to follow through with applications after filing. Thus, this amendment prevents abusers from controlling their non-citizen victims by blocking their ability to successfully access the relief that was intended under VAWA 2000.

Sec. 816. Self Petitioning Parents. This section expands the scope of VAWA immigration relief to include intergenerational abuse, allowing non-citizen parents who are abused by their adult U.S. citizen son or daughter to seek VAWA relief.

Sec. 817. Enhanced VAWA Confidentiality Non-disclosure Protections. This section amends VAWA's confidentiality protections so that they cover a range of immigrant victims eligible for the various forms of VAWA or crime victim related immigration relief including T visa victims, VAWA Cubans, VAWA HRIFAs, VAWA NACARAs and VAWA suspension applicants. This section also ensures that VAWA confidentiality rules apply to each relevant federal agency including the Department of Homeland Security and the Department of State.

Sec. 821. Duration of T and U visas. This provision would authorize issuance of T and U visas for a period of not more than 4 years.

Sec. 822. Technical Correction to References in Application of Special Physical Presence and Good Moral Character Rules. This section corrects two technical drafting errors. First it ensures that the provisions on physical presence and on good moral character apply to all VAWA cancellation applicants. Second it corrects an incorrectly cited section so that the "good moral character" bar applies to bigamy, not unlawful presence.

Sec. 823. Petitioning Rights of Certain Former Spouses Under Cuban Adjustment. This section would ensure that battered immigrants are still able to adjust under VAWA Cuban adjustment relief even if they are divorced from the abuser. This provision is necessary to prevent abusers from cutting their spouses off from potential immigration status adjustment by divorcing them.

Sec. 824. Self-Petitioning Rights of HRIFA Applicants. This amendment clarifies that Haitian abused applicants can access relief that was specifically created for them in VAWA 2000. Abusers could control battered immigrants by not adjusting their own status to lawful permanent residency pursuant to the Haitian Refugee Immigration Fairness Act ("HRIFA"). The abuser may not follow through with the lawful permanent residency application or fail to file an application at all. This technical correction remedies the problem to ensure that all abused spouses and children otherwise eligible for VAWA HRIFA are able to access this relief.

Sec. 825. Motion to Reopen. This section, a correction to VAWA 2000, gives domestic abuse victims the opportunity to file one motion to reopen to pursue VAWA relief, and exempts them from the special motion to reopen filing deadlines.

Sec. 826. Protecting Abused Juveniles. This section assures that immigration authorities are not required to contact abusive parents or family members in connection with the abused, neglected, or abandoned juvenile's application for special immigrant juvenile status. This prevents abusive parents from keeping their children from accessing help and support in the United States.

Sec. 827. Exceptions for the Protection of Domestic Violence and Crime Victims. This section carves out an exception to the current requirements regarding driver's license or identification cards for victims of domestic violence to ensure their safety.

Sec. 831. Short Title for the International Marriage Broker Regulation Act of 2005.

Sec. 832. International Marriage Broker Information Requirements. This section provides that a U.S. citizen filing a petition for a K visa for a fiancée from another country must provide information on criminal convictions for specified crimes. These include a list of violent crimes, including assault and battery as well as crimes relating to substance or alcohol abuse. The Department of Homeland Security will provide this criminal history information, along with results of their search for any criminal convictions to the foreign national beneficiary. The Department of State is prohibited from approving a fiancée visa if the petitioner has petitioned for more than 2 K visas in the past, or less than 2 years have passed since the petitioner filed for a K visa and that visa was approved. DHS can waive this bar, but if person has history of violent crimes, the bar cannot be waived unless DHS determined that there are extraordinary circumstances, or the individual's crimes were a result of domestic violence, the individual was not the primary perpetrator of the violence, and the crime did not result in serious bodily injury. DHS is directed to create a database to track repeated K applications and notify petitioner and spouse when second K is applied for in 10-year period. All future K applications will trigger similar notice, with domestic violence pamphlet being sent to K beneficiary. The fact that an individual was provided with this information and the domestic violence pamphlet for immigrants cannot be used to deny their eligibility for relief under VAWA.

Sec. 833. Domestic Violence Information and Resources for Immigrants and Regulation of International Marriage Brokers. This section directs DOS, DHS and DOJ to create a pamphlet on domestic violence rights and resources for immigrants as well as a summary of that pamphlet for use by Federal officials in the interview process. The pamphlet is to be translated into at least 14 languages and the required list of translations is to review and revised every 2 years based on the language spoken by the greatest concentration of K nonimmigrant visa applicants. The pamphlet is to be mailed to all K applicants with their visa application process instruction packet as well as a copy of the petition submitted by the petitioner. The pamphlet is to be made available to the public at all consular posts, and posted on the DOS, DHS, and consular post websites. The pamphlet will also be provided to any international marriage broker, government agency or non-governmental advocacy organization.

Sec. 834. Sharing of Certain Information. This section provides that there is no bar to the sharing of information between the relevant departments for the purpose of fulfilling the disclosure requirements of the U.S. petition.

TITLE IX. SAFETY FOR INDIAN WOMEN

Sec. 901 and 902. Findings and Purposes.

Sec. 903. Consultation Requirement. This section requires the Secretary of the Interior and the Attorney General to consult with and seek recommendations from tribal governments concerning the administration of tribal VAWA funds and programs.

Sec. 904. Analysis and Research of Violence Against Indian Women. This provision requests that the National Institute of Justice conduct a national baseline study to examine violence against Indian women and the effectiveness of Federal, State, local and tribal responses. It also requires the Attorney General to establish a task force to assist in the development and implementation of the study and report to Congress. Members of the study shall include tribal governments and national tribal organizations. The violence study is authorized at $1,000,000 for fiscal years 2007 and 2008. In addition, this section requires the Secretary of Health and Human Services to conduct a study of injuries to Indian women from incidents of domestic violence, dating violence, sexual assault and stalking and the costs associated with these injuries. The injury report shall be reported to Congress and is authorized at $500,000 for fiscal years 2007 and 2008.

Sec. 905. Tracking of Violence Against Indian Women. In cases of domestic violence, dating violence, sexual assault and stalking, the provision authorizes tribal law enforcement to access and enter information on to Federal criminal information databases (set out in 28 U.S.C. §534). Second, it permits tribes to develop and maintain national tribal sex offender registries and tribal protection order registries. To undertake the latter, the provision authorizes $1,000,000 for fiscal years 2007 through 2011.

Sec. 906. Safety for Indian Women Formula Grants. To better administer grants to Indian Country and enhance the responses of Indian tribal governments, this measure authorizes the Office on Violence Against Women to combine all Native American set asides appropriated under this Act and create a single grant source.

Sec. 907. Deputy Director in the Office on Violence Against Women. To coordinate and guide Federal, State, local and tribal responses to violence against Indian women, this provision establishes a Deputy Director of Tribal Affairs in the Office on Violence Against Women. The Deputy Director is charged with several duties, including, but not limited to, oversight of tribal grant programs and developing federal policies and protocols on matters relating to violence against Indian women. In addition, the Deputy Director is authorized to ensure that some portion of tribal funds distributed through VAWA programs will be devoted to enhancing tribal resources such as legal services or shelters for Indian women victimized by domestic violence or sexual assault.

Sec. 908 and 909. Enhanced Criminal Law Resources and Domestic Assault by Habitual Offender. Sections 908 and 909 make several changes to existing criminal law. Under current law persons who have been convicted of a qualifying misdemeanor crime of domestic violence under federal or state law are prohibited from possessing firearms. This amendment would expand that prohibition to those persons convicted of a qualifying misdemeanor crime of domestic violence under tribal law.

Under current law, federal courts have exclusive jurisdiction over domestic violence crimes committed in Indian country where the perpetrator is a non-Indian and the victim is an Indian, and concurrent jurisdiction with the tribal courts where the perpetrator is an Indian and the victim is a non-Indian. Under this scheme, federal officers can only arrest for misdemeanors that occur in the presence of the arresting officer. Most domestic violence offenses are misdemeanors not committed in the presence of a federal officer. Accordingly, this amendment will eliminate that requirement and allow a federal arrest if there is reasonable grounds that the offense was committed. Finally, the provision creates a repeat offender provision.

TITLE X. DNA FINGERPRINTING

Sec. 1001. Short Title.

Sec. 1002. Use of Opt-Out Procedure to Remove Samples from National DNA Index. Because this title expands the scope of the national DNA database to include DNA samples from arrestees, this particular section amends the current expungement protocols and directs the FBI to remove samples in the event of an overturned conviction, acquittal, or the charge was dismissed.

Sec. 1003. Expanded Use of COIS Grants. To reduce the extraordinary backlog of rape kits and other crime scene evidence waiting for DNA testing, the federal government makes available to States a targeted DNA grant program. Specifically, States may seek funding to reduce the backlog in crime scene evidence, to reduce the backlog in DNA samples of offenders convicted of qualifying state offenses, or to enhance the State's DNA laboratory capabilities. This section would expand the grant purpose regarding offender DNA samples to include all samples collected under applicable state law; accordingly, States could use federal funding to test samples collected from arrestees or voluntary elimination samples.

Sec. 1004. Authorization to Conduct DNA Sample Collection From Persons Arrested or Detained Under Federal Authority. Current law allows federal authorities to collect DNA samples from individuals upon indictment. This provision would expand that authority to permit the Attorney General to collect DNA at arrest or detention of non-United States persons.

Sec. 1005. Tolling of Statute of Limitations for Sexual Abuse Offenses. This amendment strikes a carve-out authorizing John Doe indictments in sexual assault crimes and makes uniform the federal law that tolls the statute of limitations for all federal crimes where DNA evidence is collected (§3297).

The bill (H.R. 3402), as amended, was read the third time and passed.

UNANIMOUS CONSENT REQUEST— S. RES. 336

Mr. SANTORUM. Mr. President, I am going to propound what I hope will be two unanimous consent requests about one particular issue. The issue is on the anti-Semitic statements made by the President of Iran, Mr. Ahmadinejad, who said, among other things, that the state of Israel should be wiped off the face of the Earth. We have been working cooperatively to try to get this resolution cleared, condemning those statements. We had some concerns raised with the resolution which I will discuss in more detail. We finally have a version cleared, and I will discuss in detail how we had to work through that. Suffice it to say that it is good to see that we are going to finally get strong bipartisan support to condemn this conduct and call for Iran to be a constructive partner in the peace process in the Middle East.

I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of S. Res. 336, a resolution to condemn the recent destructive and anti-Semitic statements of the President of Iran which I submitted earlier today. I ask that the resolution be agreed to, the preamble be agreed to, and the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table.

Mr. WYDEN. Mr. President, while I personally am vehemently opposed to the statements that have been made by the President of Iran, I have been asked by the Members on this side of the aisle to object, and I do so object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

CONDEMNING ANTI-SEMITIC STATEMENTS OF THE PRESIDENT OF IRAN

Mr. SANTORUM. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of S. Res. 337, a revised version of the same resolution.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the resolution by title.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A resolution (S. Res. 337) to condemn the harmful, destructive, and anti-Semitic statements of Mahmoud Ahmadinejad, the President of Iran, and to demand an apology for those statements of hate and animosity toward all Jewish people of the world.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the resolution.

Mr. SANTORUM. I ask unanimous consent that the resolution be agreed to, the preamble be agreed to, and the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The resolution (S. Res. 337) was agreed to.

The preamble was agreed to.

The resolution, with its preamble, reads as follows:

S. RES. 337

Whereas Mahmoud Ahmadinejad, the President of Iran, declared in an October 26, 2005, address at the World Without Zionism conference in Tehran that "the new wave that has started in Palestine, and we witness it in the Islamic World too, will eliminate this disgraceful stain from the Islamic World" and that Israel "must be wiped off the map";

Whereas the President of Iran told reporters on December 8th at an Islamic conference in Mecca, Saudi Arabia, "Some European countries insist on saying that Hitler killed millions of innocent Jews in furnaces...although we don't accept this claim";

Whereas Mr. Ahmadinejad then stated, "If the Europeans are honest they should give some of their provinces in Europe... to the Zionists, and the Zionists can establish their state in Europe";

Whereas on December 14, 2005, Mr. Ahmadinejad said live on Iranian television, "they have invented a myth that Jews were massacred and place this above God, religions and the prophets";

Whereas the leaders of the Islamic Republic of Iran, beginning with its founder, the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, have issued statements of hate against the United States, Israel, and Jewish peoples;

Whereas certain leaders, including Ahmadi Nezhad, and the Supreme Leader, Ali Khamenei, have similarly called for the destruction of the United States, and the Islamic Republic of Iran has funded, armed, trained, assisted, and sheltered leading terrorists, including terrorists in Iraq who use Iranian support to kill military personnel of the United States;

Whereas an estimated 6,000,000 Jews were killed in the Nazi Holocaust;

Whereas the remarks of President Ahmadinejad have been denounced around the world and condemned by among others, the political leaders of the United States, Arab nations, Israel, Europe, and the United Nations;

Whereas it is a crime in the Federal Republic of Germany to deny the existence of the Holocaust; and

Whereas the United Nations, in General Assembly Resolution 181 (1947), recommended the adoption of the Plan of Partition with Economic Union for Palestine, which called for an independent Jewish State: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate—

(1) condemns the recent statement by President Ahmadinejad that denied the occurrence of the Holocaust and supported moving the State of Israel to Europe;

(2) demands an official apology for these damaging, anti-Semitic statements that ignore history, human suffering, and the loss of life during the Holocaust;

(3) and

(6) reaffirms the need for Iran to—

(A) end its support for international terrorism; and

(B) join other Middle Eastern countries in seeking a successful outcome of the Middle East peace process.

Mr. SANTORUM. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Oregon. I know he personally believes in the original resolution. Before I get into the disparities between the two resolutions and some of the difficulty we have had over the last several days in trying to pass this resolution, it is important to understand how reprehensible these statements are and how dangerous they are in light of not only the conflicts within the Middle East but the frightening perspective of Iran having nuclear capabilities.

We hear mixed reports. We have heard reports from the overseas press in the last few weeks about fears that Iran is actually within months, potentially, of having nuclear weapons capability. The idea that a country with a President who says that Israel should be wiped off the map and then amends the statement, if you can call it that, to say, Well, maybe they could move it to Europe, Germany or Austria, as Charles Krauthammer recently noted:

... perhaps near the site of an old concentration camp.

This is the kind of ridiculous statement one would expect out of a street merchant who is out there spewing anti-Semitic statements but not from the President of a country. It is unbelievable. As unbelievable as that statement is, it is almost equally unbelievable, the silence of response from the civilized world in condemning this statement and calling for actions on the part of the United Nations to condemn Iran, sanction Iran, and a whole host of other remedies available.

This condemnation we passed is a mild condemnation. We tried to make it a little stronger. We didn't achieve that. But what we need to recognize is that Iran, as the President has said, is a real threat. It is a real threat because there are people in that country, not the average Iranian but people at the leadership levels of that government who have explicit designs to not only disrupt the process of democracy building in the Middle East but also disrupt any attempt for peace and finally eliminate millions of Israelis from the face of the Earth.

That is something that the civilized world should not stand for. The United Nations should not stand for it, should not countenance the continuation of Iran sitting where they sit without having to undergo some sort of sanction or reprimand.

It is important to understand how destabilizing Iran is in our fight to create stable democracies in the Middle East, how they foment anti-Semitic, anti-Zionist, as well as anti-democratic sentiment in the Middle East, and how they sponsor terrorism.

One of the pieces of legislation I am most proud of in my time in the Senate was the Syrian Accountability Act. Throughout the years, Iranian influence in Lebanon and Syria has oppressed fellow Arabs. Well, Iranians are not Arabs but oppress fellow Muslims and obviously some Christians. But it is important for us, as a Senate, as a people, to understand the threat that Iran poses to everything we believe in and the larger picture of what we are trying to accomplish in Iraq and the Middle East.

We are trying to do something that for a long time people in this country and even some today believe is not possible. Some have suggested we can't win the mission we have engaged in. The mission we have engaged in is to create a stable democracy in the Middle East, in the Arab world. The mission we have engaged in, more fundamentally, is to provide increased national security to this country. That is the first mission.

The strategy is to ensure security for this country. The tactic is to establish democracies in an area of the world that threatened this country. Iran stands starkly opposed to that objective and, further, with statements such as this, destabilizes the entire region and foments and uses sort of the lowest base, primitive instincts of the haters in the Middle East to undermine our objective.

We are succeeding in Iraq in spite of the Iranians. We are succeeding in Afghanistan in spite of the Iranians. We are moving democracy forward. But we dare not take our eye off what Iran is doing and is preparing. They are actively pursuing a nuclear weapons program under the nose of the rest of the world, with virtually no real attempt to limit that development.

When you see these statements combined with that, it is a flare that should be going up across the world of what we may be confronted with in the next months or years, with a nuclear bomb. This resolution is a statement that needed to be made. I am glad we passed this resolution. But we need to do more. I have authored a piece of legislation on Iran, which calls for the funding of pro-democracy groups within Iran. Others have offered ideas to provide increased sanctions on Iran.

If you look at people who study the country of Iran and tell you—we had a very good hearing that Senator COBURN chaired a few weeks ago. When you listened to the testimony at that hearing, which I had the opportunity to do for a little while, you hear that the Iranian street is one that is largely sympathetic to the United States and to the cause of freedom and democracy. They are oppressed people. Oppressed people generally do want and seek freedom. So we have, I believe, an opportunity, as we have had opportunities in the past, when we lent our ideas and our encouragement to help develop either exile movements or freedom movements within the countries that are a threat to the region and a threat to our country.

It is important for the Senate to speak out and say we stand with you—those of you who seek freedom, those of you who seek democracy, those of you who do not want to be threatening to your neighbors, or say, as the President of Iran has said, he wants to wipe Israel off the map. We have an obligation in the Senate, and I will be pressing very hard next year to pass my legislation on Iran.

I remember several years ago when Senator BOXER and I introduced legislation on Syria, and we did not get a lot of support in the committee and had trouble on the floor of the Senate. We had trouble at the White House. They were opposed to the bill. Eventually, the administration, the committee, and the Senate came along and we were able to pass the Syria Accountability Act. Literally, within a few months, we saw dramatic changes in Lebanon.

The Syria Accountability Act was a measure that called for Syria to get out of Lebanon and imposed sanctions on Syria for not doing so. The President, to my dismay, in some respects, didn't support it at first. Presidents don't often like Congress telling them what to do when it comes to foreign policy. But this President not only signed the Syria Accountability Act, he implemented the sanctions—a tough regime of sanctions—and it had a tremendous effect. I have had people come over from Lebanon and tell me of the importance of that particular legislation and the symbolism of America standing with the people of Lebanon against the evil dictator in Syria.

The symbolism of us passing this resolution today, and the more than the symbolism of passing the Iran Freedom and Support Act, is an important sign in a time now with these kinds of comments that Iran has popped its head up again—its rather unattractive head—in the area of influencing policy in the Middle East. We tried in this resolution to match the language of the Iranian bill I have introduced with the language, as I said, with this resolution, but unfortunately, we were not able to clear that language. I want to read the changes we had to make in the resolved section of the resolution that were struck as unacceptable for us to be able to pass it by unanimous consent. The portions we had to drop were two resolved sections. The three things that are in the final version that passed say:

Resolved, That the Senate

(1) condemns the recent statement by President Ahmadinejad that denied the occurrence of the Holocaust and supported moving the State of Israel to Europe;

(2) demands an official apology for these damaging, anti-Semitic statements that ignore history, human suffering, and the loss of life during the Holocaust;

(6) reaffirms the need for Iran to

(A) end its support for international terrorism;

(B) join other Middle Eastern countries in seeking a successful outcome of the Middle East peace process.

What was struck were two sentences:

The Senate supports efforts by the people of Iran to exercise self-determination over the form of government of their country.

That was not acceptable to some here in the Senate. And second is:

The Senate supports a national referendum in Iran, with oversight by international observers and monitors, to certify the integrity and fairness of the referendum.

So we could not adopt tonight in the Senate the Senate saying to the people of Iran that we support efforts of self-determination and a national referendum that was free and fair. That is, in my mind, a rather unfortunate occurrence. But I found, from my perspective, that it was so important to condemn these actions that we agreed to strike those two sentences from the resolved clauses. I don't necessarily understand why anyone would oppose either of those sentences, those resolved clauses. They state that we are for freedom and democracy for all people, including the people of Iran. Maybe it is because we are pursuing that and it becomes such an issue of partisan controversy in the country of Iraq—or saying we support that same thing in Iran would somehow taint their criticism of the current mission in Iraq. I don't know. I am still groping for answers as to why those two clauses were not acceptable.

What was not acceptable were the comments and the actions of developing nuclear weapons by the terrorist regime in Iran.

I appreciate my colleagues for agreeing to pass this resolution. I thank all of the cosponsors. There were some 20 cosponsors of this resolution. The first Democrat was Senator MIKULSKI. I also thank my colleague in the chair for his patience and allowing me the opportunity to speak here tonight. He is also a cosponsor of the resolution. No one is a stronger advocate for peace and the mission we are trying to accomplish in the Middle East, and as well for the protection of the state of Israel, than the occupant of the chair. It is a pleasure to have the Senator from Minnesota in the chair while I am delivering these remarks. The Senator from Minnesota is truly one of the great leaders on the Foreign Relations Committee in this regard. I commend him for his efforts. I know he will be working with me on the Iran bill, on which he is a cosponsor, in trying to send a statement from the Senate that Iran is a threat—a real threat—and we need to do something other than simply stand back and jawbone international organizations—feckless international organizations—in some respects, as the Senator from Minnesota knows, corrupt international organizations—to do something that they have shown no desire, willingness, or ability to accomplish, and that is to spread democracy, to lift people out of bondage into freedom.

We in the United States have to begin to take steps. The steps we are talking about in this resolution and the bill we hope to pass next year are not military steps. That is the last resort. But we need to start acting. Sitting silently by, doing nothing as a crazy man as president of a country, potentially developing nuclear weapons in the most sensitive area of the world is not acceptable for the Senate and is not acceptable for this country.

I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. VITTER). Without objection, it is so ordered.

USA PATRIOT ACT

Mr. REID. Mr. President, this morning the Senate voted to continue debating on the conference report on the PATRIOT Act. Clearly, Senators believe we can do better in protecting the privacy of innocent Americans while we fight terrorism. No one seriously believes that the expiring provisions of the PATRIOT Act should be allowed to lapse while this debate continues.

I am disappointed that our distinguished majority leader objected twice to a unanimous consent to extend the expiring provisions of the act for 3 months. I cannot believe that my distinguished friend, the majority leader, wants these authorities to expire. I do not believe the President of the United States would be willing to let these provisions expire when we all agree they are important tools for our Nation's law enforcement authorities. It would be irresponsible and a dereliction of duty for the administration to allow these provisions to expire. By refusing to reauthorize these parts of the PATRIOT Act, the President and the Republican leadership are playing politics with the American people's safety.

We have bipartisan support for reauthorizing the PATRIOT Act. That was proven in a unanimous vote in the Senate. We want a 3-month extension of the PATRIOT Act in its current form so that we can pass a better bill than the one that came before the Senate today in the form of a conference report, a better bill that will have the confidence of the American people. The American people are afraid. They are afraid of Big Brother. We, this great country, should not become Big Brother. We need more checks in this law to protect the privacy of ordinary American citizens who have nothing to do with terrorism. I support giving the Government the tools it needs to fight terrorism. I voted for the first PATRIOT Act, but we need more oversight and checks to protect against Government overreaching and abuse of these tools.

We have had these years to find out how the first PATRIOT Act worked. We know there were problems with the first PATRIOT Act. We need to correct these problems. Just as Senator MCCAIN persuaded the President, we needed to check potential excesses in interrogation tactics. We also need to ensure that we have put in place checks on the Government's power to trample on the privacy of innocent Americans.

I would hope people would understand that legislation is the art of compromise and that the Republican leadership in the Senate, in the House, and the White House should move to work on a compromise, accept our 3-month suggestion, giving Senators LEAHY and SPECTER, the leaders of our Judiciary Committee, time to work out the differences.

ARCTIC NATIONAL WILDLIFE REFUGE

Mr. President, I wish to quickly comment on another matter of vital importance to the country. It appears that the majority is strongly considering whether to hold our troops hostage at a time of war in order to sneak in a last minute special interest rider that cannot be passed within the Senate's rules. Senate Democrats support the Defense appropriations conference report, but it would be an egregious abuse of power on behalf of the oil and gas industry to allow the thing we call ANWR to violate the Senate rules and attach a special interest provision in this legislation. Because Republicans cannot get the support for this provision in the House, the Senate would be asked to violate our rules so that the majority can reward its friends in the oil and gas industry.

We had procedures in the Senate where we lost on ANWR. It was placed in a bill called reconciliation. The House stripped it out. We did not. Let us play by the rules.

I do not support ANWR. It is the most important issue in America to the environmental community. There is no issue more important than ANWR. It is a sign of what this country is all about environmentally. If the majority proceeds along this course and is permitted to abuse its power and run roughshod over the Senate rules, there will be no prohibition against exceeding the scope of conference on any conference report. To further show the cynicism of people who are pushing this, they are telling people: Do not worry about it, we will violate the rules today, change precedent, and we will change them right back tomorrow.

This is an abuse of power. It would have far-reaching consequences for this body. It would be a huge mistake for the Senate and the American people. We can do better than that. Let us have a fair fight where we have winners and losers. That is the way ANWR was done. I was disappointed when that was lost, but it was lost fairly and squarely. Do not violate the rules. That is what I tell my friends on the other side.

We realize that with the 45 votes we have, we cannot do it on our own. We need help from people of good will on the other side of the aisle. There are people who believe as fervently in this environmental standard as I do, and I would call upon them to vote their conscience, to do what is right for this body and do what is right for this country. This is a procedural vote that makes the Senate different from any legislative body in the history of the world. The Senate is the greatest deliberative body in the history of the world. Do not be playing fast and loose with the rules that govern this Senate.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to speak as in morning business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

THE PATRIOT ACT

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, we have been informed that President Bush's radio address tomorrow will be about the PATRIOT Act. It is not a surprise. This is an important issue. It is one we should discuss and should discuss as a nation.

We passed the PATRIOT Act because of our concern about the threat of terrorism. It is an act with over 100 different provisions in it. It was passed with only one dissenting vote in the Senate. It included sunset provisions on some controversial parts of it, so that 4 years after we passed it we could take another look to make sure that, in fact, we had done the right thing, we were not overstepping. We want to give our Government enough power to protect us, but we certainly don't want to surrender our basic rights and liberties if it is not needed.

So we had the reauthorization of the PATRIOT Act up before us and debated it in the Senate Judiciary Committee on which I serve. We reached a bipartisan consensus for reauthorizing that act, a unanimous vote at the Senate Judiciary Committee. I have never seen it on an issue of this magnitude, but it happened. I believe it was an indication that there is a reasonable way to craft the PATRIOT Act so that, in fact, it serves our needs of national security but does not go too far. That bill then passed the Senate on a voice vote. There was no controversy, no debate, because we had struck a legitimate bipartisan compromise.

Then the bill went to conference, and in conference other forces were at work. As a result of their work, the bill was changed. It was changed in significant ways, ways which I believe went too far, too far in giving the Government authority and power over our personal lives and privacy that is unnecessary. I believe that any person suspected of criminal or terrorist activity, any activity that is considered to be part of a terrorist network, should be treated in the harshest and most serious way. I want to keep America safe. I want my family, my children, everyone's family, to be safe. But I want to make certain that when we draw up this PATRIOT Act, we do not go too far.

As a result of the conference committee, a bipartisan group of Senators, Republicans and Democrats, came together in opposition to this conference report—a bipartisan group of Senators. Today, this morning, we had a vote on the Senate floor. This vote was what we call cloture, whether we will close debate, and as a result of the vote the matter is still open, still unresolved.

It is important to know one thing before the President's address. I hope the President will honestly tell the American people tomorrow what happened today in the Senate.

Early this morning, Senator FRIST, who is on the floor at this moment, the Republican majority leader, met with Senator HARRY REID, the Democratic leader, to discuss this important topic. At the time, Senator REID told him that we believed we were not going to close down debate on the PATRIOT Act and asked if there was a way that we could reach an agreement on a bipartisan basis to extend the bill, extend the PATRIOT Act for at least 3 months.

We were unable to reach an agreement at that meeting.

Then on the floor Senator HARRY REID of Nevada, on behalf of the Democrats, offered before the vote to the Republican side of the aisle to extend the PATRIOT Act as it is presently written for 3 months so that there would not be any possible gap in coverage for the security of America. There was an objection from the Republican side.

After the cloture vote on the PATRIOT Act—in fact, cloture was not invoked—another motion was made, this time by Senator PATRICK LEAHY of Vermont. Senator LEAHY asked for a 3-month extension of the PATRIOT Act so we could work out the differences.

Not once, not twice, but three separate times today on the Democratic side of the aisle we have reached out to the Republican side of the aisle and said let us try to resolve our differences in a bipartisan way, let us try to make sure that we extend the PATRIOT Act so there is no question about the security of America.

Tomorrow the President will address this issue. I hope in the course of addressing it the President acknowledges the obvious. We have tried our very best on a bipartisan basis to extend the PATRIOT Act, once informally and twice on the floor of the Senate today, and all three times it has been rejected.

We will continue to make that offer on the Democratic side. We want to work this out. We want a good PATRIOT Act that protects America and protects our freedoms. We believe we can be safe in America and we can be free.

I think a bipartisan vote today is a message to the White House and to the House conferees that the Senate bill that was passed, a carefully crafted bill, is a bill that should get us into the reauthorization of the PATRIOT Act.

We stand ready to work with our Republican colleagues on a bipartisan basis to make sure we have a good, strong PATRIOT Act reauthorized and protecting America, and take out those objectionable provisions which go too far in invading the personal rights of and privacy of innocent American citizens.

I hope that particular scenario I described, which is on the official record today, is part of the President's message tomorrow.

I yield the floor.

NATIONAL AERONAUTICS AND SPACE ADMINISTRATION AUTHORIZATION

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, the conference report on the authorization of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration is in its final stages of being approved. There are some things that are still to be worked out, but I am proud to have been the subcommittee chairman of the NASA

Science Subcommittee that produced—along with the House, of course, and the full Commerce Committee—what I think is an excellent authorization of our National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

I worked with my colleague, Senator NELSON of Florida, to produce a bill that does envision the flight to space, the flight to the moon again, and then to Mars. It is the vision laid out by President Bush in January of 2004. It is incumbent on Congress to lead the National Aeronautics and Space Administration and also to support it fully so that we will continue the vision that John F. Kennedy had when he said: We will put a man on the moon. Now we can take it the next step and put a man on Mars, a woman on Mars.

It is important that we understand that this is important not only because it is a huge feat and victory for the world that we can do this but also because we get so much basic science from making this commitment. It improves our quality of life right here on Earth.

This conference committee report does authorize funding for NASA at $17.9 billion in 2007 and $18.7 billion for 2008. That gets us on track to fund the shuttles that will continue to build out the space station and also to begin immediate work on the crew return vehicle that will be the next generation of vehicle going into space after the space station has been completed.

It is a congressional responsibility to set the parameters for what we do with NASA, and we are taking that responsibility seriously. We believe that we should finish the space station, finish the international commitment that we have made to our partners and allies who have put millions of dollars in the space station, and so that we can continue the basic science research necessary, not only for us to learn how we can live and work in space for those people who will be going to the moon again and then later to Mars but also for the basic geological findings we know we can find if we explore the Moon and hopefully Mars. And something that was said at one of our Commerce Committee hearings by Dr. Sam Ting of MIT, there is very important physics research that using the cosmic rays to determine how we might have alternative forms of energy is a very important purpose for the space station to be completed.

This report also designates the U.S. portion of the space station as a national laboratory so that we can bring other funds besides NASA funds, besides Government funds into the space station, and that will help make sure we are able to do the most possible research and make the best use of the space station. It demonstrates that Congress puts a great value on the research that can be done aboard the space station and also a great value on keeping our word to our international partners.

America must lead in the space exploration and science area, but we must do it in collaboration with other countries. I don't think we should just consider ourselves competitors with other countries. If we are going to be the leader, we should lead. We should go forward. We should break the barriers. And we should share with others what we have learned for the good of mankind. That is exactly what this bill envisions.

It also supports aeronautical research. This has been a fundamental part of NASA activities since its inception. It will allow us to continue the great work that has been done in the past. It will assure that we take the next step toward the crew return vehicle that will replace the shuttle at the earliest possible time. We will accelerate that process.

I am very proud of this conference report. The House and Senate worked together very well. It was a bipartisan effort and a bicameral effort. We are going to see a new impetus for NASA with the support of Congress and the President. That is exactly what this country should be doing at this time.

I yield the floor.

HONORING OUR ARMED FORCES

STAFF SERGEANT DAN CUKA

Mr. JOHNSON. Mr. President, I am saddened to report the passing of SSG Dan Cuka of Yankton, SD. Staff Sergeant Cuka, a member of the South Dakota National Guard, was killed on December 4, 2005, while serving in Operation Iraqi Freedom.

Staff Sergeant Cuka was assigned to Yankton's Charlie Battery, 1st Battalion, 147th Field Artillery Unit. Charlie Battery was mobilized in July 2005 and deployed to the Middle East in October 2005. Staff Sergeant Cuka died when multiple improvised explosive devices detonated near his military vehicle in Baghdad, Iraq.

Dan is survived by his wife of 5 years, Melissa, and their children, Abby and Alex. Melissa remembers him as, "living each day of his life the way he chose based on devotion to his family and his passion for the military. We all believe Dan died doing what he strongly believed in." He was regarded as taking his military duty very seriously, and his leadership in his battalion reflected that. Dan was a devoted father who would do anything for his kids according to Melissa, "It wasn't just as a provider. He would get on the floor and play with them. He would take them places and have a good time with them."

The lives of countless people were enormously enhanced by Dan's good will and service. Although he did not live to see his dreams realized, he continues to inspire all those who knew him. Our Nation and South Dakota are far better places because of his life, and the best way to honor his life is to emulate his commitment to our country.

Mr. President, I express my sympathies to the family and friends of Staff Sergeant Cuka. I know he will always be missed, but his service to our Nation will never be forgotten.

STAFF SERGEANT FIRST CLASS SCHILD

Mr. President, I am saddened to report the passing of SFC Richard Schild of Tabor, SD. He was killed on December 4, 2005, while serving in Operation Iraqi Freedom.

Sergeant First Class Schild was assigned to Yankton's Charlie Battery, 1st Battalion, 147th Field Artillery Unit. Charlie Battery was mobilized in July 2005 and deployed to the Middle East in October 2005. Sergeant First Class Schild died when multiple improvised explosive devices detonated near his military vehicle in Baghdad, Iraq.

Richard is survived by his wife of 14 years, Kayleen, and their children, Keely and Koby. His brother, SSG Brooks Schild, described him by saying, "Rich would always put others ahead of himself, even when he was in a dangerous situation." According to his brother, Richard had earned the respect and admiration of his fellow soldiers, not merely because of his rank, but because of who he was as a person. He served with great distinction and received numerous accolades for his service.

Richard lived life to the fullest and was committed to his family, his Nation, and his community. It was his incredible dedication to helping others that will serve as his greatest legacy. All Americans owe Richard, and the other soldiers who have made the ultimate sacrifice in defense of freedom, a tremendous debt of gratitude for their service.

Mr. President, I express my sympathies to the family and friends of SFC Richard Schild. I believe the best way to honor him is to emulate his commitment to our country. I know he will always be missed, but his service to our Nation will never be forgotten.

AVIATION WARFARE SYSTEMS OPERATOR TWO
JOHN N. KAYE, III

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I rise today for the purpose of honoring a fallen American. I learned this week that AW2 John N. Kaye III, from Traer, IA, died while in service to his country during counter narcotics operations off the coast of Colombia. I would like to take this opportunity to salute his patriotism and his sacrifice.

We can often tell a lot about the character of an individual by how they help the people around them. Petty Officer Kaye was a man who would willingly extend a helping hand to those around him and this week even extended his mission to help out a fellow sailor. Just before leaving the Navy, though, he extended his stay aboard the USS DeWert for one final mission so that another sailor could be with his family to mourn the loss of a brother. Sadly, Petty Officer Kaye gave his life in service to his country on Tuesday off the coast of Colombia.

John Kaye was looking forward the completion of his tour of duty in the Navy so that he could return to Iowa to be near family and friends and attend college. He was from a large family in central Iowa and attended North Tama High School where he played football. In his free time, he loved to hunt and fish or just spend time with his friends in the Traer area. In the Navy, he was one of the youngest people to ever graduate from the Search and Rescue Program where he received training as a rescue swimmer.

The primary mission for members of our military is to protect American citizens from outside threats. For John Kaye, the threat was drugs being grown and processed in South America, and he was actively involved in our effort to reduce the flow of illegal drugs into the United States. The Navy is an important partner in our efforts to track down and apprehend drug traffickers in the Pacific Ocean and the Caribbean Sea, and John Kaye deserves the highest gratitude of this body and the entire Nation. His sacrifice reminds us that freedom is so precious because of its incredibly high cost. This is an example of the patriotic contribution made by thousands of American service members and their families. The love of country and dedication to service shared by so many of its citizens is the great strength of our Nation, and we can all be very proud of patriots like John Kaye.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, today I rise to pay tribute to 31 young Americans who have been killed in Iraq since November 10. This brings to 508 the number of soldiers who were either from California or based in California who have been killed while serving our country in Iraq. #### VIOLENCE AND REPRESSION IN ETHIOPIA

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, on May 15, 2005, Ethiopia held the first open, multiparty, democratic elections in its 3,000-year history. It was an important milestone that gave the people of that country a sense of national pride and hope. Unfortunately, the elation that was so evident on election day was short lived. International observers cited serious vote counting irregularities and flaws in the electoral process.

Nearly 25 million Ethiopians—90 percent of eligible voters—went to the polls, and early counts indicated strong support for the opposition. As it became clear that the ruling party was in danger of losing its grip on power, the Government stopped the vote counting in a blatant move to manipulate the results. Accusations of vote rigging forced the National Electoral Board of Ethiopia, NEBE, to delay the release of the official results.

The controversy led to protests in Addis Ababa, the Oromiya regions, and other provinces. On June 8, in response to protesters challenging the provisional results of the elections, Ethiopian security forces are accused of shooting at least 40 protestors, killing 26, temporarily detaining over 500 student protestors and arresting at least 50 people. Ethiopia's main opposition political party, the Coalition for Unity and Democracy Party, CUDP, refused to take its seats in Parliament in protest of the election results. Just recently, 50 members of the CUDP took their seats in Parliament, but there is some concern that they were pressured into doing so.

Last month, the situation in Ethiopia took a further turn for the worse. On November 1, following street demonstrations that erupted into 4 days of violence when police started shooting, at least 46 protestors were killed in Addis Ababa and other towns, and some 4,000 were arrested. There have been numerous reports of widespread arbitrary detention, beatings, torture, disappearances, and the use of excessive force by police and soldiers against anyone suspected of supporting the CUDP detainees.

The detainees include distinguished Ethiopian patriots such as Hailu Shawel, president of the CUDP; Professor Mesfin Woldemariam, former chair of the Ethiopian Human Rights Council; Dr. Yacob Hailemariam, a former U.N. Special Envoy and former prosecutor at the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda; Ms. Birtukan Mideksa, CUDP vice president and a former judge; and Dr. Berhanu Negga, the recently elected mayor of Addis Ababa and university professor of economics.

Today, the entire senior leadership of the CUDP is reportedly in jail and has been held incommunicado in harsh conditions, without access to their families or legal representatives. Amnesty International considers these individuals to be prisoners of conscience who have neither used nor advocated violence. The government of Prime Minister Meles Zenawi is seeking to charge them with treason, a capital offense, for the "crime" of urging their supporters to engage in peaceful protest on their behalf. CUDP leaders are scheduled to appear in court today, presumably to be officially charged with treason.

Journalists and members of the media have also been jailed. According to the Committee to Protect Journalists, Ethiopian authorities have prevented most private newspapers from publishing, arrested or harassed local journalists and their family members, and threatened to charge journalists with treason. Thirteen journalists have been detained since last month's antigovernment protests, including two more who were just arrested this week.

It is particularly disturbing, when one considers these events, that since 1991, the government of Prime Minister Meles has received billions of dollars in foreign aid, including to strengthen democratic institutions and the rule of law in his country. Recently, the European Union suspended its aid to Prime Minister Meles' government and is seeking ways to channel it to the Ethiopian people through private voluntary organizations.

Last month, thousands of Ethiopians and their supporters in this country came to Washington to protest the violence and repression by the Meles government and to urge the Bush administration to help establish real democracy and the rule of law in Ethiopia. Ethiopia has been an ally of the United States in combating international terrorism, yet it is using similar tactics against its own people.

Over the past several years, Ethiopia has made progress in both political reform and economic development. But that progress has been overshadowed by the tragic events of the past 6 months. The Government's heavy-handed tactics to steal the election and persecute those who sought to play by the rules of democracy, should be universally condemned.

The Bush administration should make clear to Prime Minister Meles that if his government does not abide by the basic principles of democracy, due process and respect for human rights, including an end to the use of random searches, beatings, mass arrests and lethal force against peaceful protestors, and if political detainees are not released, that we will join with the European Union and suspend our aid to his government, including our support for financing from the World Bank and the African Development Bank other than for basic human needs. There should be severe consequences for such a flagrant subversion of the will of the Ethiopian people.

LOCAL LAW ENFORCEMENT ENHANCEMENT ACT OF 2005

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, I rise today to speak about the need for hate crimes legislation. Each Congress, Senator KENNEDY and I introduce hate crimes legislation that would add new categories to current hate crimes law, sending a signal that violence of any kind is unacceptable in our society. Likewise, each Congress I have come to the floor to highlight a separate hate crime that has occurred in our country.

On January 30, 1999, a 23-year-old disabled man was lured into an apartment in Keansburg, NJ. He was then subjected to three hours of torture at the hands of nine men and women. According to police, the abusers knew the man from their neighborhood, and ridiculed him constantly because of his disability.

I believe that the Government's first duty is to defend its citizens, to defend them against the harms that come out of hate. The Local Law Enforcement Enhancement Act is a symbol that can become substance. I believe that by passing this legislation and changing current law, we can change hearts and minds as well.

CAREGIVERS

Mr. OBAMA. Mr. President, across the country there are more than 6 million children living in households headed by a grandparent or other relative. Regardless of the reason children enter relative—care the death of a parent, neglect, abuse, military deployment, or poverty—it is never, ever the fault of the child. I commend grandparents and other relatives who step forward to care for these children, keeping the children out of foster care while providing safe, stable homes, often at great personal sacrifice.

In my state of Illinois, 9 percent of the children live with nonparent relatives. Grandparents and other relative caregivers often provide the best chance for a loving and stable childhood for the children in their care, but their hard work and dedication often goes unnoticed. Today I offer my formal acknowledgement and deepest appreciation for the ongoing service of these caregivers to our country and our Nation's most valuable asset—our children.

There are still far too many barriers preventing grandparent- and other relative-caregivers from accessing the services they need. For example, even though grandparent-caregivers are eligible for many housing programs through the Department of Housing and Urban Development, HUD officials on the ground often unwittingly exclude grandparents from accessing housing because of confusion over the relevant laws. For this reason, I recently worked with my colleague Senator STABENOW to obtain $4 million in new funding for grandparent-caregiver housing demonstration projects.

I look forward to working with my colleagues on both sides of the aisle to improve access to services for grandparent- and other relative-headed households. My grandparents played a central role in my upbringing, and without them I would not be standing before you today. I am certain that the same can be said of thousands of children and adults in Illinois and across the country. It is time that we recognize the contributions of these worthy relative-caregivers, and grant them the access to Federal services that they deserve.

CONFIRMATION OF SUSAN BODINE

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, today, I am releasing the hold I placed on the nomination of Susan Bodine for Assistant Administrator, Office of Solid Waste and Emergency Response based on the written commitment I have received from EPA to provide information and documents I have requested in connection with oversight of the Superfund program. I originally requested information on the Superfund program immediately after the Ms. Bodine's confirmation hearing in July.

To date, Ms. Bodine and EPA have provided only a partial response to my request. I want to be clear that every question I posed to Ms. Bodine and all the information I requested from EPA on this important public health program should have been provided to me without restriction as part of the Congressional oversight process. I ask unanimous consent that the original questions posed to Ms. Bodine be printed in the RECORD. EPA has now committed to provide additional information by January 31, 2006. And I ask that EPA's letter in this regard be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objections, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

QUESTIONS FROM SENATORS BARBARA BOXER, LAUTENBERG AND OBAMA FOR THE EPA NOMINATION HEARING

Questions directed to Susan Bodine who is nominated to be the Assistant Administrator of the Office of Solid Waste and Emergency Response, July 15, 2005.

(1) Please work with EPA to provide us with a complete list of Superfund sites in order of current health hazards.

(2) Please indicate how many children live near these sites and how they may be at risk. Please also indicate any daycares, schools, playgrounds or other similar places that are near these sites.

(3) Please indicate what emergency or other short-term steps EPA may conduct at each site to address the risks at that site, and the cost to take those actions.

(4) Please provide the cost to cleanup all 103 sites where EPA has determined "human exposure is not under control."

(5) Please work with EPA to ensure that EPA experts, including regional staff, are available and authorized to answer any of our questions relating to Superfund, including human health risks, cleanup costs and funding shortfalls.

(6) Please ensure that the information provided includes priority list of sites, like that provided to Senator Boxer while chair of the Superfund Subcommittee.

(7) Please work with EPA to ensure that we receive complete and detailed responses for each question in the Oct. 2004 letter that Senator Jeffords and Senator Boxer sent to then-Administrator Leavitt on Superfund, with updated responses to the present.

(8) Please work EPA to provide us with detailed information to date on clean-up work and activities that will not be performed at sites that could use additional funding to initiate new projects or to expedite work at on-going projects on those sites. Please include all regional requests for funding.

(9) Please work with EPA to provide us with complete information to date on the on-going remedial projects that could use additional funding and the dollar shortfall for each project. Please provide all regional requests for funding.

(10) Please work with EPA to provide us with complete information to date on the removal projects that could use additional funding and the dollar shortfall for each project. Please provide all regional requests for funding.

(11) Please work with EPA to provide us with complete information to date on the pipeline projects that could use additional funding and the dollar shortfall for each project. Please provide all regional requests for funding.

(12) Section 108(b) of the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation and Liability Act required EPA to promulgate regulations—"not later than five years after December 11, 1980", which required "classes of facilities [to] establish and maintain evidence of financial responsibility consistent with the degree and duration of risk associated with the production, transportation, treatment, storage, or disposal of hazardous substances." Please work with EPA to provide me with information that describes all activities that EPA has undertaken to meet this requirement to promulgate these regulations.

U.S. ENVIRONMENTAL PROTECTION AGENCY,
Washington, DC, December 16, 2005.

Hon. BARBARA BOXER,
U.S. Senate,
Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR BOXER: As a follow up to discussion with your staff, EPA is prepared to provide the following information and documents.

1. An electronic version of the document ("template") provided to the Committee in an enclosure to a letter signed by me on October 31, 2005 (available immediately);

2. An updated version of the list entitled, "Currently Projected Projects Ready for Construction Funding in FY05," previously provided to the Committee in an enclosure to a letter signed by John Reeder on July 19, 2005. The list will include a column displaying "actual" FY 2005 funds provided to each site on the list, and a column that provides a code characterizing the nature of human health or ecological risk at each site (available immediately);

3. In response to the Committee's question on site funding needs, EPA's CERCLIS database provides the most complete existing record. EPA will provide reports from the CERCLIS database (SCAP-4 "snapshot") from late summer of 2004 reflecting each regional office's planning estimates for funding prior to budget discussions with EPA headquarters. To determine the date of the "snapshot" that provides the best information on funding each region will be asked to identify the date that best reflects when the region loaded its assessment of planning data into CERCLIS, prior to changes based on discussions with headquarters. Also, EPA will provide a coversheet that summarizes relevant planning data and FY 2005 obligations, and EPA's operating plan and preliminary allocation memo for FY 2005 (available by January 31, 2006).

4. Additional information from Regional offices on opportunities for accelerated remedial actions at Superfund sites categorized by EPA as "Human Exposure Not Under Control" (available by January 31, 2006).

To collect information under this item, we will ask the regional offices the following: Explain the known opportunities for the use of additional FY 2005 funds to accelerate response actions, including removal actions, remedial actions, and any characterization or testing that could have accelerated remedial action. Include description of costs of these opportunities, if know. If action was not undertaken in FY 2005, explain why not, including funding limitations. Please indicate if the opportunity for accelerated response action still exists, or if conditions at the site present new opportunities for accelerated actions since FY 2005. Include the information in the attached template, and attach copies of supporting documentation.

Please contact me if I can be of further assistance, or your staff may call me on 564-5200.

Sincerely,

STEPHANIE N. DAIGLE,
Associate Administrator.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, while a complete response to my request remains outstanding, I have determined that with the additional commitments I received today, the confirmation of Ms. Bodine can proceed with the expectation and assurance from Ms. Bodine to work closely with me and provide cooperation on the oversight of this program.

In addition, the Chairman of the Senate Environment and Public Works Committee, Senator INHOFE, has agreed that the Superfund program and its critical missions are overdue for a comprehensive oversight hearing and that such a hearing shall be held in the Superfund and Waste Management Subcommittee of which I am ranking member. Senator THUNE, the chairman of the subcommittee, has also agreed to this request.

There have been no comprehensive oversight hearings of this important public health program in over 3 years. Ms. Bodine has agreed to testify at this hearing after her confirmation, and we will have other outside witnesses as well. We have also requested that Administrator Stephen Johnson be available as well. I want to thank my colleague, Senator INHOFE for agreeing to this critical hearing.

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, both subcommittee Chairman THUNE and I recognize the importance of oversight of the Superfund program. To that end, and consistent with Senator BOXER's request, Senator THUNE's subcommittee will be holding an oversight hearing of EPA's Superfund program once Susan Bodine, the President's nominee to head EPA's Office of Solid Waste and Emergency Response, is confirmed by the Senate with Ms. Bodine testifying on behalf of EPA. After Ms. Bodine is confirmed, we will begin to work on scheduling this hearing with a targeted time frame of the first quarter of 2006, but no later than the Memorial Day recess. Senator THUNE will work closely with Senator BOXER in scheduling the hearing.

I expect EPA to be forthcoming in this hearing about the program and look forward to Ms. Bodine's confirmation so that she may help ensure that the EPA is responsive to the Senator's requests for information about the management of the program and the impacts on communities throughout the country.

Mr. THUNE. I am in full agreement with the chairman of the Environment & Public Works Committee and I will be working closely with him and subcommittee ranking member BOXER on scheduling this hearing once Ms. Bodine is confirmed. I am committed to having Ms. Bodine, as the EPA witness, appear before the subcommittee before Memorial Day recess, 2006. I look forward to working with Senator BOXER on scheduling a date and filling out the witness list.

SECURITY CONTRACTOR PRACTICES IN IRAQ

Mr. AKAKA. Mr. President, I rise today, to discuss a matter of serious concern. On December 9, The Washington Post reported that the Department of Defense is investigating a video posted on an Aegis-employee affiliated Web site which contains scenes of violence and shooting against Iraqi civilians.

An estimated 25,000 private security contractors are currently working in Iraq, earning anywhere from $550 to $1,500 a day. Many of them are doing their best to help maintain security for the reconstruction of Iraq. However, if the events displayed in the video are accurate, the actions of these few contractors put our troops at tremendous risk. The video depicts the back window of a PSD, personal security detail, vehicle. In the video you can hear a machine gun being fired at cars which are clearly more than 50 meters behind the vehicle. The cars drift off the road after many shots, leaving one to assume the driver has been shot dead. During the entire video, the Elvis Presley song "Mystery Train" plays in the background.

This behavior is offensive. The actions of the individuals in the video put our troops at risk because such incendiary behavior only increases hatred towards Americans. Whether or not we agree with the troops' presence in Iraq, we all agree that the safety of our troops is paramount. Our troops in Iraq who wear uniforms are instant targets for retaliatory violence.

The U.S. service men and women who deploy to Iraq serve because of a sense of selfless service and duty. As members of Congress, it is our duty to conduct oversight into the questionable behavior of the private security contractors. While our troops continue to be deployed to Iraq and the security situation remains fragile at best, it is in our best interest to make sure civilian-contractors do not exacerbate the situation any further.

Therefore, I will be seeking a congressional inquiry into the operations and rules of engagement granted to private security contractors currently operating in Iraq. I will also recommend a review of the contract awarded to Aegis Specialist Risk Management. If these events are happening, we must stop them. We must take action so that our troops and the Iraqi people know that gratuitous violence on the part of the people we deploy or employ will not be tolerated.

INCLUSION OF IDAHO AND MONTANA IN THE RADIATION EXPOSURE COMPENSATION ACT

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, I rise in support of this bill to expand the Radiation Exposure Compensation Act, RECA, to include the States of Idaho and Montana. I am an original cosponsor of the legislation being introduced by Senator CRAPO.

The National Academy of Sciences, NAS, recognizes that citizens affected by fallout from atomic bomb testing in Nevada were not only the citizens of that State or Utah, but also citizens to the north, and east, and throughout much of the world. This bill, consistent studies showing that parts of Idaho and Montana were among the most affected, expands RECA geographically to include these two States.

My colleagues and I are in the business of making Idahoans eligible for RECA compensation as expeditiously as possible. Studies that take years will simply not do for citizens who would otherwise be eligible if they lived on the other side of a State line.

The NAS recommended that RECA should be overhauled, and I will make sure this happens. In the meantime, those Idahoans and Montanans who qualify for compensation today should be made eligible immediately.

BURMA

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, today I will discuss the disturbing situation in Burma.

I have consistently stressed my deep concerns regarding the repressive military junta in Burma that continues to commit severe human rights violations against the Burmese people. Despite consistent calls to halt abuses by the Burmese military such as rape, harsh political repression, torture, extrajudicial executions, forced labor, and human trafficking, the SPDC fails to address these egregious violations and permits violations to continue with impunity.

However, I am encouraged by ASEAN's rejuvenated efforts to hold Burma to long-promised democratic reforms. ASEAN's resolute calls for the release of Aung San Suu Kyi and other members of NLD and more than 1,100 political prisoners, and for real democratic reform, are vital to legitimate progress in Burma and regional stability and values. ASEAN has long pushed for these goals and its recent announcement that it will send an envoy to evaluate Burma's progress in democratic reform is an important step toward accountability.

It is far past time for the international community to begin a dialogue on Burma. I welcome the unanimous decision by the United Nations Security Council to discuss the situation there. The September 2005 report produced by Nobel Prize laureate Desmond Tutu and former Czech President Vaclav Havel provided a solid basis for these discussions. Burma's military junta has long prevented United Nations envoys from visiting, and I look forward to the international community engaging in a serious discussion of the situation there.

Those demanding real reform in Burma must not relent. The SPDC must take immediate steps to release Aung Sang Suu Kyi and other political prisoners and to create a broad-based democratic government that respects human rights and the rule of law.

WORK OUTAGE AT CALLAWAY NUCLEAR PLANT

Mr. TALENT. Mr. President, I rise to honor approximately 3,000 permanent and supplemental workers, who recently set a new world time record while conducting a safe and successful work outage on AmerenUE's Callaway Nuclear Plant. The Callaway Plant is located in my home State of Missouri and provides permanent jobs to more than 1,000 people. Since 1984, Callaway has generated an average of 8.9 billion kilowatthours of electricity per year—equal to the amount used annually by more than 750,000 average households.

The Callaway Plant is owned and operated by AmerenUE, a subsidiary of Ameren Corporation, which provides energy services to about 2.3 million electric customers in Missouri and Illinois. Callaway, along with 102 other nuclear powerplants in the United States, is a critical component of our Nation's energy mix, providing low-cost, reliable, and clean energy from an abundant fuel source.

Approximately every 18 months nuclear plants must be shut down for refueling, during which time the employees perform literally thousands of maintenance activities, modifications, and tests. In Callaway's case, the plant supplies nearly a quarter of Ameren's electricity production, thus it is critical that the work be done in a safe and timely manner so the plant can be brought back online as soon as possible.

The recent Callaway Plant outage was the most complex in its history, as it included not only refueling and the usual maintenance activities, but also replacement of four massive steam generators, which measure 70 feet tall and weigh 400 tons each, as well as main turbine rotors. The Callaway team set a new world record for such outages, accomplishing their work in 63 days and 13 hours, beating the previous record of 64 days and 17 hours. The combination of the new generators and rotors are expected to add about 60 megawatts of additional generating capacity to the plant using the same amount of fuel.

This summer Congress passed an energy bill, which recognizes the tremendous need for increasing our supply of clean energy while reducing our dependence on foreign sources of energy. The high-quality work of the Callaway employees plays a major role in carrying out the objectives of this important legislation. By not only completing the outage in a safe and timely manner, but also increasing its capacity to produce electricity, these workers are doing their part to meet Missouri's—and our Nation's—growing energy needs.

I offer my personal thanks and congratulations for a job well done to all of the dedicated employees and the temporary workers who, as a result of exceptional preparation, teamwork, and execution, successfully completed the most complex outage at Callaway Nuclear Plant.

I congratulate the AmerenUE workers and their partners on their achievement. They have set a new standard of excellence in safety and performance and have helped advance the future of the nuclear power industry as a whole.

MISSILE DEFENSE AGENCY'S RECENT TESTING SUCCESSES

Mr. ALLARD. Mr. President, I rise to comment on an event that may have understandably escaped the attention of my colleagues because our plate is full and the schedule is tight. I want to underscore the importance of what occurred on Tuesday night, December 13, shortly after 10 p.m. Washington time. It signaled a month of great achievement in our Nation's Missile Defense Program.

While many of us were turning on the late news that night, an operationally configured, ground-based interceptor missile, of the kind now emplaced in both Alaska and California, was launched out of its silo in the Marshall Islands and successfully completed all its major test objectives. It demonstrated smooth execution of the launch sequence, separation of the booster-kill vehicle, cryogenic cooling of the sensor, and positioning of the kill vehicle, among many other complex actions. For this test, there was a simulated target using data from previous launches. The interceptor successfully flew through its impact point, and had the target been real, it would have been destroyed.

This test was the latest in an extraordinary month. National attention had been focused on setbacks to our defense against long-range hostile ballistic missiles. However, this has been a month of successes for current and future elements of the Ballistic Missile Defense System that can provide a defense against both long-range and short-range threats. Perhaps these successes have flown under our radar screens, but now they deserve recognition.

In addition to this most recent test, there are at least three others that occurred in the past month worthy of note.

On November 17, an Aegis Ballistic Missile Defense SM-3 interceptor, launched by an operational crew from the USS Lake Erie off the coast of Hawaii, made a direct hit on an inert warhead that separated from a target missile 100 miles in space—a far more challenging scenario than previous tests.

This was the sixth successful intercept by a SM-3 in the last seven such tests since testing began in 2002. The successful intercept of a separating warhead advances our defense beyond simpler, unitary, Scud-like missiles.

Just as important was the return to flight of the terminal high altitude area defense, or THAAD, interceptor. After its last two successful flights in 1999, the program and the missile were completely overhauled to make it more reliable and easier to manufacture. On November 22, the revamped missile was launched from the White Sands Missile Range without a flaw. The test validated the interceptor's launch from canister, rocket booster operation, shroud and kill vehicle separation, and control system that guides it to the target for a kill.

And not least, just last week, on December 6, the Airborne Laser Program successfully completed a full duration lase at operational power. This involved linking the energy output of six large laser modules into a single beam, powerful enough to destroy a missile in its boost phase at the distances we need to shoot to kill. Now that the laser has successfully completed ground testing in a surrogate aircraft, it is being disassembled to load it onto its flight test Boeing 747 for further testing. The significance of achieving this milestone cannot be overemphasized—this is a revolutionary weapon with the potential to change fundamentally the ways in which we can protect our Nation, our troops, and our allies and friends from the growing ballistic missile threat.

These are the more visible Elements of the integrated Ballistic Missile Defense System. What ties all these parts together is the Global Command, Control, Battle Management and Communications System, the brain and the nerves. It is less visible than radars and rockets, but our missile defenses couldn't work without it. The integration of far-flung parts, new and upgraded, often made at different times by different contractors, has been a great challenge, but it is one we are steadily and remarkably overcoming.

There have been many naysayers and doubters on missile defense. But I am proud to have supported the Missile Defense Agency over the past year as it has grappled in an intensive effort to track down and eliminate or minimize risks that have contributed to setbacks in the past. There is an emphasis on quality that is paying off, as witnessed by these last four successful tests. We learn from our mistakes, and we now bear the fruit of the combined efforts of a wide range of dedicated military, civilian, and contractor personnel. Testing will continue, we will encounter difficulties, but the program will move forward. We are succeeding in building an integrated and layered Ballistic Missile Defense System, our defenses will continue to improve, and our citizens will be increasingly protected and grateful.

RADIATION EXPOSURE COMPENSATION ACT

Mr. BURNS. Mr. President, on April 28, 2005 of this year, just hours after the National Academy of Science released its report, I stood before this body and declared the importance of amending this law. On May 9, I introduced S. 977 which places Montana on equal ground with others who have suffered from nuclear testing fallout. Again, on May 10, I stood in this Chamber and talked about the importance of this legislation for the good people of Montana. Today, I am happy to be joined in my efforts by the Senator from Idaho, who introduced similar legislation for the people of Idaho. This bill is an important step forward in securing the justice that the people of Montana deserve. This bill combines my efforts with those of Senator CRAPO to extend RECA coverage to both Montana and Idaho in a single, simple bill.

Montana, more than any other State, was affected by the downwind radiation that came from the nuclear testing in Nevada during the 1950s. The statistics are eye-opening. Of the 25 counties in the United States with the highest exposure rates, 15 are in Montana. Meagher County in Montana has a rate of exposure greater than any other county in the United States. Fifty-five out of Montana's 56 counties experienced elevated levels of radiation exposure. And yet, Montana is the only State in the region that receives absolutely no compensation from the Radiation Exposure Compensation Act whatsoever.

The reported rate of thyroid cancer—which is the health affect most associated with the exposure to Iodine-131 from this testing—is 17.5 times the national rate. Between 1989 and 2003, while the national rate of thyroid cancer increased 38 percent, Montanans saw an increase of 127 percent.

When Congress passed RECA in 1990, it was an important step toward setting a grave injustice right. As a cancer survivor myself, I know that no amount of money can heal the wounds suffered by the victims of radiation exposure. Time and time again, I have heard from Montanans who tell me that it is not about the money. The people of Montana aren't coming to their Government with their hands out. They are demanding justice. They are demanding acknowledgement of their suffering. They are demanding that we do the right thing.

When RECA was passed in 1990, my colleagues did their best to do the right thing. For that, they should be commended. For the 9,117 Americans who have received compensation for downwind exposure since RECA became law in 1990, justice has been served. Responsibility has been taken, so that wounds can begin to heal.

And, it wasn't an easy journey. The first hearings for RECA were held way back in 1979, almost 30 years ago. The questions that needed to be asked took time to answer: Was there downwind radiation? Were people exposed to that radiation? Were there health consequences to that exposure? And while the Senate struggled with these questions, Americans that were affected waited. As my colleagues expressed 20 years ago, time is not on our side in this matter, and all too often justice delayed is quite literally justice denied.

When Congress passed RECA in 1990, the extent of the damage done from this radiation was not fully understood. New studies, by the National Cancer Institute and the National Academy of Sciences, decades in the making, have shown that for many Americans, like those in Montana, justice has been denied. They live in the most affected regions of the country, and yet they find the door of justice closed to them by lines on a map. For some of these people, it is too late. The clock is ticking, and many have not survived long enough for their Government to do the right thing.

That is why I stand adamant that the time to act is now. We did the right thing in 1990. It is time to do the right thing today.

LABOR—HHS APPROPRIATIONS

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, I rise today to oppose the fiscal year 2006 Labor, HHS, Education and related agencies conference report.

As my colleagues know, this is the second conference report to come out of the Labor-HHS-Education Subcommittee this year. This bill, which passed the House yesterday by two votes, represents a failure by the leadership of this Congress to adequately fund health, education, and workforce programs.

The first conference report—the one defeated by the House—contained drastic cuts to existing programs like the title VII health professions programs and No Child Left Behind.

So what is different between the bill before us today and the one that failed? Does the second conference report restore the harmful cuts to health and education that were supported by the Republican leadership in the House and Senate? Does the bill contain even one dollar more than the bill that was defeated by the House?

The answer to those questions is no.

The first conference report included $201 million worth of cuts to rural health programs identified by the National Rural Health Association. The bill before us restores a few of these programs but it still retains $137 million, or 68 percent, worth of those cuts.

The bill before us restores a provision costing $90 million that would have prohibited Medicare and Medicaid from covering prescription drugs for erectile dysfunction.

And how does this bill pay for these provisions? It is not with new money but, rather, with $120 million that was designated for the Public Health and Social Services Emergency Fund for pandemic flu preparedness and $60 million that was supposed to go to the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services' administrative account for implementation of the new Medicare prescription drug benefit.

At a time when seniors are struggling to understand and sign up for the new Medicare drug benefit, this bill cuts the account needed to run Medicare's 1-800 help line, run its Website Medicare.gov, conduct outreach and provide technical assistance to millions confused seniors.

And at a time when public health experts across the globe are warning countries to act now to prepare for a pandemic influenza, this bill cuts $120 million in pandemic flu preparedness funding.

In total, this bill cuts health funding by $466 million.

That includes a cut of $185 million for the Bureau of Health Professions title VII programs, making it harder to recruit and retain qualified health professionals, and the elimination of nine vital health programs including trauma care, rural emergency medical services, the geriatric education centers, health education training centers, and the health community access program.

In California, the elimination of the geriatric education program will eliminate funding for the Northern California Geriatric Education Center at the University of California San Francisco, the only source of Federal funding for geriatric education from the Bay Area to Oregon.

It provides a less than 1 percent increase in funding the National Institutes of Health, the smallest percentage increase to NIH since 1970. This bill cuts the number of new research grants that NIH can fund by 355, from 9,612 to 9,257.

Last September, 91 of my colleagues joined me in sending a letter to President Bush supporting the administration's goal of eliminating cancer death and suffering by 2015. The wholly inadequate funding for NIH in this bill dims the hope of reaching this 2015 goal.

The conference report harms all working American families.

First, the conference report slashes the Office of Disability Employment Policy to $20 million, close to half of the funding in fiscal year 2005. The disabled community will no longer have the training, employment, and education needed to earn a decent wage. This is a community that already faces a 68 percent unemployment rate.

Second, reducing job training programs, dislocated worker assistance, and employment services by $530 million will make it close to impossible for dislocated workers to re-enter the workforce. This is particularly appalling given the recent bankruptcy and layoff announcements by Delta, Northwest, and General Motors, just to name a few.

Lastly, the reduction in trade adjustment assistance will leave workers to fend for themselves when industries change and jobs shift overseas. This is vital to the Nation's economic stability. The fast-moving pace of innovation requires that we have a flexible workforce provided with the training needed to transition to the next opportunity. Reducing this type of program will leave American workers behind.

The ability to work is the path to financial independence, economic stability, and the key to earning a better life. This conference report shamefully denies that opportunity to dislocated and disabled workers wanting to earn a better life.

And finally, this bill hurts our Nation's schools, educators, and students.

It cuts total Federal education funding by $59 million for the first time in over a decade.

Within education, No Child Left Behind is significantly cut by $779 million or 3 percent that will ultimately result in an estimated $3 million loss for California schools.

Furthermore, this bill shortchanges the authorized funding level for No Child Left Behind programs by $13.1 billion.

This major cut and underfunding is being done when the required math and reading performance levels under the law are increasing for school districts and schools are struggling to find the funds necessary to meet the law's requirements.

This bill also fails to provide any increase to the Pell grant student aid award of $4,050 for the fourth year in a row, even though a $100 increase was promised in the budget resolution.

Federal Pell grants are the cornerstone of our need-based financial aid system ensuring that all students have access to higher education.

Pell grants help over 5.3 million low- and middle-income students attend college, over 500,000 of them in California.

There could not be a worse time for freezing student's financial grant aid as the costs of attending a 4-year public college or private college have dramatically increased both nationwide and in California.

According to the College Board, the average cost nationwide of attending a public university for 1 year has increased 66 percent to $5,132 within the last 10 years, and yet Pell grant aid continues to remain stagnant.

This bill also drastically cuts other important education programs, such as Even Start literacy programs that help disadvantaged children and their parents increase their English skills are cut by 56 percent, from $200 million to $100 million; education technology State grants are cut by 45 percent, from $496 million to $275 million; and State grants for keeping schools safe and drug free are cut by 20 percent, from $437 million to $350 million.

The bill before us shortchanges American families, and I believe America can do better. The cuts in this bill for vital health, education, and workforce programs are a direct result of the agenda of this administration and the leadership in Congress: to pass tax cuts and reconciliation bills that actually worsen the deficit, all the while doing nothing to address the long-term fiscal picture of entitlement spending.

As an appropriator, I recognize that tough decisions have to be made. However, the policy choices of this administration have put Members of this body in the position of having to vote on the elimination of health programs for the poorest and sickest of Americans and for cuts to education programs for low-income students. I reject that choice and believe we must rebalance our priorities.

The choice we should be making today is to improve our healthcare safety net, to fully fund our schools, and to help American workers find the path to financial independence and economic stability.

This conference report fails Americans on all those fronts, and I urge my colleagues to reject it.

• Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I strongly oppose the fiscal year 2006 Labor-HHS appropriations conference report because it undermines many of our Nation's highest priorities and jeopardizes our most vulnerable citizens and communities.

We have all heard the dire warnings about the avian flu pandemic. We know that we need to invest adequate resources to develop vaccines, stockpile medicines, and better prepare at the local, State, and Federal levels. That is why the Senate passed Senator HARKIN's amendment. Yet this conference report left out those vital funds and, in doing so, left us far less equipped to deal with a pandemic.

We know we must invest in the critical research that uncovers the secrets behind our greatest killers, saving the health and lives of our citizens. Yet this bill increases funding for the National Institutes of Health, NIH, by less than one percent, the smallest increase since 1970. Make no mistake: this will lead to cuts in the number of new research grants funded by NIH.

We know we have to invest in the education of our children at every level of schooling. We know our school districts, and our children, are being asked to meet tougher standards. Yet this conference report cuts education for the first time in a decade. No Child Left Behind, NCLB, programs have been cut 3 percent, now leaving them $13 billion below the authorized level. Fewer children will be served by after-school programs, which keep our children safe after school and improve their academic performance. At a time when the costs of college are skyrocketing, this bill once again freezes Pell grants, which help low-income students afford a college education.

Now, this bill doesn't just cut critical funds; it also adds provisions that endanger our neediest citizens. None is more troubling to me than the Weldon amendment. I am extremely disappointed that the conference report rejected the real conscience clause in the Senate bill and instead included the House bill's sweeping and dangerous refusal clause.

Unlike the Senate language authored by Senator SPECTER and Senator HARKIN, the provision in this conference report is not a conscience clause. It never mentions religion or morals. It forces States to choose between losing billions of dollars in funding or enforcing Federal and State laws ensuring reproductive health information and services for women. And it could have devastating consequences, including further endangering women in emergency situations, allowing doctors to be gagged, hurting victims of rape and incest, and seriously undermining state sovereignty.

Mr. President, if we want to really meet the great challenges we face in our country, we must reject this bill. The American people deserve better and we, as Senators, can certainly do better.●

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

HONORING CARL W. SMITH

• Mr. ALLEN. Today I would like to honor a great man, Mr. Carl W. Smith, a native of Wise, VA, and a resident of Charlottesville, VA, who, sadly, passed away earlier this week.

Carl Smith was a truly wonderful leader for Virginia, and my wife Susan and I were deeply saddened to learn of the passing of our friend. His lovely wife Hunter and his children Carl, Stuart, and Hunter, will remain in our thoughts and prayers, as will their loved ones during this time of great sorrow.

Throughout his life, Carl was a truly special, invigorating friend and remarkable, insightful leader who was always a lap ahead of everyone else. I will always appreciate his discreet advice, his impressive perspective and his strong support. And I will be forever grateful for his trusted friendship that helped me win elections to become a Delegate and, later, Governor of Virginia.

Like me, Carl attended the University of Virginia, when he played football. After graduating, he served in the U.S. Army and worked as an investment banker. Just last year, Carl retired as head of AMVEST Corporation, a diversified energy and finance corporation based in Charlottesville that he founded in 1961. Throughout his successful career, Carl was the best, most loyal fan of the University of Virginia Cavaliers, and his generosity to his beloved alma mater and all those in his life was boundless. He donated millions of dollars to advance Virginia's academic, athletic and arts programs, and to support the construction and preservation of its facilities. He also served on the Board of Visitors for 8 years. Carl was known for his business savvy but also for his loyalty, his kindness and his sense of humor.

Susan and I grieve with Carl's dear wife Hunter and their family over this heart-aching loss. May God continue to bless Virginia and America with people of Carl W. Smith's unflinching character.●

REMEMBERING CLIFFORD BROWN AND LARUE BROWN WATSON

• Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, October 30, 2005, marked the 75th birthday of Clifford Benjamin Brown, one of this Nation's great jazz musicians. Born into a large, middle-class, African-American family in Wilmington, DE, Clifford Brown was the youngest of eight children and inherited his love and passion for music from his father, Joe Brown. He began to show interest in the trumpet at a young age, and by the time he turned 12, he was engaged in private lessons. He attended Howard High School in Wilmington, where he was encouraged to play music by ear. He studied math at the University of Delaware and music at Maryland State College.

His career as a jazz trumpeter was monumental. He performed alongside such music legends as Miles Davis and Fats Navarro, while combining his sounds and style with those of Art Farmer, Dizzy Gillespie and Dinah Washington. Clifford played in Chris Powell's Blue Flames Band and the Brown-Roach Quintet. Sadly, Clifford Brown's promising and extraordinary career was tragically cut short when a car accident took his life on June 26, 1956. He was only 25 years old.

But the legacy of Clifford Brown extended far beyond his years through the efforts of his wife LaRue, whom he had married in 1954. LaRue helped to launch the Los Angeles Jazz Heritage Foundation's program which served underprivileged children, and founded the Clifford Brown Jazz Foundation.

LaRue Brown Watson passed away on Sunday, October 2, 2005 at the age of 72. She is survived by her children, Clifford Brown, Jr., Adrienne Traywick and Brian Watson, her son-in-law Clarence Traywick, and many grandchildren, cousins, nieces, nephews and friends.

Today, I stand and lead the Senate in paying tribute to the life of the great Clifford Brown and in lamenting the passing of his widow, LaRue Brown Watson.●

TRIBUTE TO SERGEANT MAJOR FRANK YOAKUM

• Mr. BOND. Mr. President, I rise to honor SGM Frank Yoakum, who serves as the enlisted congressional, liaison for the Chief, National Guard Bureau. Sergeant Major Yoakum is the only enlisted legislative liaison in the Army, facilitating communication flow between the Army National Guard, National Guard Bureau, and elected officials on Capitol Hill, as well as their staffs and professional committee staff. He is on the personal staff of the Chief, National Guard Bureau.

He began his military career by enlisting in the Regular Army in September 1971. He was trained in Infantry, Airborne, and Air Defense Artillery assignments, being released from Active Duty in July 1976. In June 1978, Sergeant Major Yoakum joined the Alaska Army National Guard and served in a military technician status as the administrative assistant to the state maintenance officer, and part-time as a flight operations coordinator with the 1898th Aviation Company, Attack. He moved to southeast Alaska and continued his service as a full-time Scout Battalion Attendant, Administrative Supply Technician, for Company B, 4th Battalion, 297th Infantry. He served in the Alaska Army National Guard until March 1981.

In August 1983, he rejoined the Army National Guard in Phoenix AZ, working as a unit administrator and battalion supply sergeant. In October 1985, he entered Federal Active Guard Reserve status and was assigned to the United States Property and Fiscal Office Guam, where he served as military pay supervisor and logistics NCO. He transferred his membership from the Arizona Army National Guard to the Wyoming Army National Guard in March 1996. Further assignments in Federal AGR status included instructor/writer, operations NCO, force structure NCO, first sergeant, manpower NCO, training center liaison NCO, G-1 personnel policy sergeant major, and congressional liaison.

Sergeant Major Yoakum holds an associate of arts degree in business administration from the University of Alaska and a bachelor of science degree in business administration from California Pacific University. He is a graduate of every level of NCO education up to and including the Sergeants Major Academy. Yoakum is a life member of the Enlisted Association of the National Guard of the United States and a life member of the Wyoming National Guard Association. He has been inducted into the Honorable Order of Saint Barbara by the Field Artillery Association and the Order of Samuel Sharpe by the Ordnance Corps Association.

As the former congressional liaison for the Chief, National Guard Bureau, my staff and I have found Sergeant Major Yoakum to be an invaluable resource and ally in advancing the interest of the Army National Guard. While his departure will be a major loss to the both NGB and the Federal Government, his new position as legislative director with the Enlisted Association of the National Guard of the U.S. is well deserved. It is with admiration that I honor Sergeant Major Yoakum today and congratulate him on his retirement. I wish him and his family all the best.●

CONGRATULATIONS TO SAINT JOSEPH'S HOSPITAL

● Mr. ISAKSON. Mr. President, I rise to memorialize in the RECORD of the Senate, one of the great institutions in the State of Georgia. This year, Saint Joseph's Hospital celebrates its 125th anniversary of providing the citizens of Atlanta and the Southeast with the highest quality and most compassionate health care services.

Let me speak for a moment on the significance of Saint Joseph's:

In 1880, 125 years ago, shortly after the Civil War, four young determined Sisters of Mercy traveled to Atlanta from Savannah with a meager 50 cents in their collective pockets to start a hospital. Hospitals were not common during this time. The Sisters' idea of creating a hospital that would serve the entire community, and not simply be a place to die, was truly bold and visionary.

With the goal of "extending the mission of healing mercy begun by Christ, showing a just and compassionate regard for all who suffer," Saint Joseph's Infirmary was established as a 10-bed hospital in an old house located on Courtland and Baker Streets in downtown Atlanta.

Saint Joseph's established Georgia's first school of nursing in 1900, an indigent ward to care for the poor and rural population during the depression, diagnostic outpatient clinics, and a $10,000 operating room to begin a legacy of state-of-the-art medical technology.

The hospital became a national leader in treating heart disease, performing the first openheart surgery in the Southeast, the first angioplasty as an alternative to bypass surgery, and operated the first comprehensive cardiac catheterization laboratory. And, Saint Joseph's became one of only six medical centers in the world to perform percutaneous transluminal coronary angioplasty.

In 1978, the hospital moved to north Atlanta in order to continue its growing mission of service and changed the name to Saint Joseph's Hospital. To maintain close ties with those it served downtown, Saint Joseph's Mercy Care Services began. Starting as a simple signup sheet for volunteers to visit women's and homeless shelters, teams used their own vehicles and worked out of tackle boxes filled with medical supplies donated by physician offices. Today, Saint Joseph's Mercy Care Services is truly an integral part of the community. They now provide comprehensive services to the chronically homeless of Atlanta.

In 2003, the hospital formed the Saint Joseph's Research Institute, a comprehensive research center to provide patients access to some of the newest and most innovative therapies available in the world. The Research Institute provides preclinical research and trials and clinical trials in cardiology, pulmonology, radiation, oncology, gastroenterology, orthopaedics and more.

Saint Joseph's is among only 10 non-teaching hospitals in the country to have earned the Distinguished Hospital Award for Clinical Excellence and Patient Safety by HealthGrades, Inc., the Nations' leading provider of health care quality information. It is also among a prestigious group of hospitals on Solucients 100 Top Hospitals for Cardiovascular care—Saint Joseph's has been named a 100 Top Hospital 5 times. J.D. Power and Associates also has recognized Saint Joseph's as a Distinguished Hospital for Service Excellence, providing an outstanding patient experience, for 2 consecutive years, the first hospital in Atlanta to earn the distinction.

But it is the people behind the awards and recognitions that make Saint Joseph's so unique. From the Sisters of Mercy who still are intimately involved with the hospital to the nurses, physicians and medical support staff—the spirit of mercy is alive and vibrant. That spirit transcends the entire organization and is the foundation for the superior medical services and programs, the unique compassionate care, the volunteers who raise money for the homeless and underserved, and the auxiliary who put in tireless hours at the hospital without pay. The spirit of mercy is in all employees who come to work year after year with smiles on their faces and compassion in their hearts.

It gives me great pleasure to recognize on the Senate floor the contributions of Saint Joseph's Hospital to the citizens of Atlanta, GA, and the Southeast.●

HONORING CHARLES R. ADAMS

● Ms. LANDRIEU. Mr. President, I would like to take a moment and honor a man who has greatly served his community and his Nation for more than 38 years.

Charles R. Adams retired from his position of National Employee Development Center Director for the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Natural Resources Conservation Service, NRCS, in Fort Worth, TX, on November 3, 2005.

Charles learned the importance of self-development at an early age while growing up on his family farm in Logansport, LA. His parents, the late Mr. T.C. Adams and Elneva Adams, gave him and his 10 siblings firsthand experience in working the land, and he still carries those experiences with him today.

After leaving Logansport, Charles graduated from Southern University at Baton Rouge with a bachelor of science in agronomy. He received his master's degree in public administration from Harvard University in Cambridge, MA, in 1983 and has Ph.D. studies in urban and public affairs at the University of Texas in Arlington.

His impressive career with USDA spans some 38 years, having held some of the top positions in his Agency, including regional conservationist for the NRCS Southeast Region, based in Atlanta, GA, from 1997 to 2004, director of the National Employee Development Center, based in Fort Worth, TX, from 1993 to 1997, South National Technical Center associate director, also based in Fort Worth, from 1992 to 1993, and water quality coordinator at the center from 1990 to 1992.

Before that Charles served as NRCS's State Conservationist for Arizona, based in Phoenix, from 1988 to 1990, after having been the State Conservationist for Nevada, based in Reno, from 1986 to 1988. He was the Deputy State Conservationist in New Mexico, based in Albuquerque, from 1985 to 1986, after having been the Assistant State Conservationist for Operations at that location from 1984 to 1985.

Charles worked as an area conservationist in Rio Rancho, NM, from 1983 to 1984, after working as an area conservationist in Flagstaff, AZ, from 1981 to 1982. From 1978 to 1981 he served as a district conservationist in Edinburg, TX, following service from 1976 to 1978 as a district conservationist in Eastland, TX. He was a soil conservationist for the agency in Abilene, TX, from 1973 to 1976. He began his full-time career with the agency as a soil scientist in Athens, TX, in 1969.

During his tenure with USDA, Charles founded some of the Agency's most innovative approaches to outreach, including the Student Trainees in Agriculture Related Sciences, STARS, program, an initiative to introduce underserved high school students in the Southeast to agriculture, as well as NRCS's American Indian Program Delivery Initiative, an annual conference linking USDA officials with American Indian leaders to promote tribal participation in USDA programs and services.

While working for NRCS, Charles Adams has received a number of awards and recognitions. Within the last few years alone, he received several USDA Honor Awards, including the Secretary's Award for his leadership of the Southeast Region American Indian Initiative Workgroup and the Sustainable Coffee Production Team, and his work in the Agency's Streamlining and Cost-saving Initiative. He received special recognition through a national volunteer award for his long-standing dedication to the NRCS Earth Team Volunteer Program and was the recipient of the Chief's Workforce Diversity Award which praised his encouragement and promotion of professional development among his employees. In addition, his extensive outreach efforts to minorities and women earned him a nomination for the Agency's highest Civil Rights Award in 2003.

Charles is married to the former Prenella Williamson of Port Gibson, MS. In his spare time, he enjoys raising horses on his ranch in Shreveport, LA, restoring his collection antique cars and fishing with his young grandsons.●

HONORING DR. ISAAC GREGGS

● Ms. LANDRIEU. Mr. President, I would like to take a moment and honor a man who has influenced the lives of so many students for more than 35 years.

A band director since 1969, Dr. Isaac Greggs has taken the half time show for Southern University to a different level, electrifying audiences with the band's energetic and precise performances. However, these performances could not have happened without a lot of hard work. Dr. Greggs' practices are legendary for being gruelling, but they paid off in the end.

In many ways, Dr. Greggs' practices are a metaphor for his life—when one demonstrates discipline and effort, one can succeed anywhere.

This motto certainly proved true for Dr. Greggs' band. Under his direction, the band performed around the world, including for three United States Presidential inaugurations, four Sugar Bowls, and five Super Bowls. The band has also appeared at the Astro Dome, Superdome, Yankee Stadium, and the Oakland Stadium Coliseum. For six weeks, the band played at Radio City Music Hall, and they have also made appearances on television shows such as the Bob Hope Show, Jim Nabors Show, Almost Anything Goes Show, Perry Como Show, Henry, The Fonz, Winkler Show, and the Telly Savalas Show.

In addition to the talent Dr. Greggs has brought as a band leader, he is also an accomplished musician and song writer and is the author of Southern University's fight song and alma mater. He is an honorary member of both Louisiana's House of Representatives and State Senate, and has won several major music festival awards for the marching division. Dr. Greggs has conducted honor bands throughout the country, and on behalf of Southern University he was presented with a special trophy by the National Football League for his band's outstanding performance at a Super Bowl.

Dr. Greggs' leadership is not limited to the sporting field. As president of the Louisiana College Band Directors Association, founder and president of the Lakeside Music Mart and School of Music, and State Chairman of the L.I.A.L.O. Band Festival, Dr. Greggs has proved his leadership skills and shown his commitment to the arts.

Dr. Greggs was presented with the Key of Life Award at the 31st NAACP Image Awards. The Key of Life Award was created in honor of musician Stevie Wonder and is presented to an individual or group who exemplifies Wonder's "inner vision." The award also recognizes extraordinary achievements in the areas of civil rights, human rights, and community. It is clear through all of his career, Dr. Greggs exemplified these attributes.

Dr. Greggs' power to move people through music is an amazing gift. If one is lucky in life, one improves the life of one's own children. However, Dr. Greggs has improved the lives of thousands and has left an indelible mark on African-American students and fans.●

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT

Messages from the President of the United States were communicated to the Senate by Mr. Thomas, one of his secretaries.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGES REFERRED

As in executive session the Presiding Officer laid before the Senate messages from the President of the United States submitting sundry nominations which were referred to the appropriate committees.

(The nominations received today are printed at the end of the Senate proceedings.)

REPORT OF GUIDELINES AND REQUIREMENTS RELATIVE TO IMPLEMENTATION OF THE INFORMATION SHARING ENVIRONMENT CALLED FOR BY SECTION 1016 OF THE INTELLIGENCE REFORM AND TERRORISM PREVENTION ACT OF 2004—PM 34

The Presiding Officer laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States, together with an accompanying report; which was referred to the Select Committee on Intelligence:

To the Congress of the United States

The robust and effective sharing of terrorism information is vital to protecting Americans and the Homeland from terrorist attacks. To ensure that we succeed in this mission, my Administration is working to implement the Information Sharing Environment (ISE) called for by section 1016 of the Intelligence Reform and Terrorism Prevention Act of 2004 (IRTPA). The ISE is intended to enable the Federal Government and our State, local, tribal, and private sector partners to share appropriate information relating to terrorists, their threats, plans, networks, supporters, and capabilities while, at the same time, respecting the information privacy and other legal rights of all Americans.

Today, I issued a set of guidelines and requirements that represent a significant step in the establishment of the ISE. These guidelines and requirements, which are consistent with the provisions of section 1016(d) of IRTPA, are set forth in a memorandum to the heads of executive departments and agencies. The guidelines and requirements also address collateral issues that are essential to any meaningful progress on information sharing. In sum, these guidelines will:

Clarify roles and authorities across executive departments and agencies;

Implement common standards and architectures to further facilitate timely and effective information sharing;

Improve the Federal Government's terrorism information sharing relationships with State, local, and tribal governments, the private sector, and foreign allies;

Revamp antiquated classification and marking systems, as they relate to sensitive but unclassified information;

Ensure that information privacy and other legal rights of Americans are protected in the development and implementation of the ISE; and Ensure that departments and agencies promote a culture of information sharing by assigning personnel and dedicating resources to terrorism information sharing.

The guidelines build on the strong commitment that my Administration and the Congress have already made to strengthening information sharing, as evidenced by Executive Orders 13311 of July 27, 2003, and 13388 of October 25, 2005, section 892 of the Homeland Security Act of 2002, the USA PATRIOT Act, and sections 1011 and 1016 of the IRTPA. While much work has been done by executive departments and agencies, more is required to fully develop and implement the ISE.

To lead this national effort, I designated the Program Manager (PM) responsible for information sharing across the Federal Government, and directed that the PM and his office be part of the Office of the Director of National Intelligence (DNI), and that the DNI exercise authority, direction, and control over the PM and ensure that the PM carries out his responsibilities under section 1016 of IRTPA. I fully support the efforts of the PM and the Information Sharing Council to transform our current capabilities into the desired ISE, and I have directed all heads of executive departments and agencies to support the PM and the DNI to meet our stated objectives.

Creating the ISE is a difficult and complex task that will require a sustained effort and strong partnership with the Congress. I know that you share my commitment to achieve the goal of providing decision makers and the men and women on the front lines in the War on Terror with the best possible information to protect our Nation. #### STATEMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Mr. BAUCUS:

S. 2119. A bill to reauthorize the Temporary Assistance for Needy Families block grant program through June 30, 2006, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I am here to introduce bill to provide a 6-month extension of the Nation's largely successful welfare program. It is known as the Temporary Assistance for Needy Families Program, or TANF.

Congress enacted the TANF program in 1996, to help welfare recipients gain work skills and to help low-income families become economically self-sufficient.

Welfare reform has mostly succeeded. States have adopted creative policies to support low-income families making the transition from welfare to work. Millions have moved to self-sufficiency.

But the TANF law expired in 2002. And Congress has failed to reauthorize it. Instead, Congress has extended TANF on a short-term basis, 12 times. The latest short-term extension expires in just over 2 weeks.

This bill is a simple extension of the current welfare program. It would provide stability for the States to operate their welfare programs. And it would continue our successful partnership with the States in supporting needy families as they move from welfare to work.

Earlier this week, the Senate voted 64-27 to keep the welfare program out of the budget cutting reconciliation bill that the House has passed. The Senate voted instead to build on the bipartisan Finance Committee bill that Chairman GRASSLEY and I worked diligently on this year. That bill is called the Personal Responsibility Individual Development for Everyone or PRIDE Act. The Finance Committee reported it out in March with near unanimous support. The PRIDE Act has been awaiting full Senate consideration since then.

Despite broad support in the Finance Committee, the Senate has not taken this measure up for debate. Despite the broad support of governors, the Senate has not taken this measure up for debate. The Republican Governors Association said that TANF reauthorization "is too important to leave to the limitations of the reconciliation process." But the Senate has not taken this measure up for debate.

This vote was a vote to debate this bill on the Senate floor. It was a vote to build on the broadly-supported bill from the Finance Committee. We are going to need some time to complete that debate.

The 6-month extension that I offer this afternoon will keep the welfare program operating. The 6-month extension will allow us the time to debate, pass, and go to conference on a fully considered PRIDE Act.

I urge my colleagues to do the responsible thing. I urge my colleagues to support this extension. I urge my colleagues to keep this important safety net program operating.

By Mr. OBAMA (for himself, Mr. BROWNBAC, Mr. DURBIN, and Mr. DEWINE):

S. 2125. A bill to promote relief, security, and democracy in the Democratic Republic of the Congo; to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. OBAMA. Mr. President, I rise today, on behalf of Senator BROWNBAC, Senator DURBIN, and Senator DEWINE to introduce the Democratic Republic of the Congo Relief, Security and Democracy Promotion Act.

As we try to conclude our business for the year here in the Senate, we are in the midst of sharp debates on a large number of issues. In the foreign policy arena alone, the Administration and Congress are consumed with nurturing a political process and defeating insurgents in Iraq, attempting to halt proliferation by Iran and North Korea, and trying to end the bloodshed in Darfur, Sudan.

But there is another country embroiled in conflict that has not yet received the high-level attention or resources it needs. It's the Democratic Republic of Congo, and right now it is in the midst of a humanitarian catastrophe.

An International Rescue Committee report from 2004 found that 31,000 people were dying in the Congo each month and 3.8 million—3.8 million—people had died in the previous 6 years. This means that this conflict, which still smolders and burns in some regions, has cost more lives than any other conflict since World War II.

Beyond the humanitarian catastrophe, resolving the problems in the Congo will be critical if Africa is to achieve its promise. The country, which is the size of Western Europe, lies at the geographic heart of Africa and borders every major region across the continent. If left untended, Congo's tragedy will continue to infect Africa—from North to South; from East to West.

I believe that the United States can make a profound difference in this crisis. According to international aid agencies, there are innumerable cost-effective interventions that could be quickly undertaken—such as the provision of basic medical care, immunization and clean water—that could save thousands of lives. On the political front, sustained U.S. leadership could fill a perilous vacuum.

The bill that we are introducing here today is an important step on the long road towards bringing peace and prosperity to the Congo. I am proud to be a part of a collaborative, bipartisan effort with some of the Senate's leading voices on Africa—Senators BROWNBAC, DURBIN and DEWINE.

This bill establishes 14 core principles of U.S. policy across a range of issues; authorizes a 25 percent increase in U.S. assistance for the Democratic Republic of the Congo; calls for a Special Envoy to resolve the situation in Eastern Congo; and urges the Administration to use its voice and vote at the United Nations Security Council to strengthen the U.N. peacekeeping force that is providing security in parts of the Congo.

The legislation has been endorsed by a number of faith-based and humanitarian nongovernmental organizations, including some with extensive field operations in Congo: CARE, Catholic Relief Services, Global Witness, International Crisis Group, International Rescue Committee, and Oxfam America. I ask unanimous consent that these letters of support be printed in the RECORD.

I want to stress something before closing. We are under no illusion that enacting the policies in this bill would be a panacea for Congo's many ills. But the one thing we do know is that the one way to ensure that a complex problem will not be resolved is to accept the status quo.

The other thing we know is that status quo in the Democratic Republic of Congo is unacceptable—unacceptable to the women and children caught up in the crossfire, unacceptable to the civilians being felled by preventable disease, unacceptable to a continent that is making great strides, and unacceptable to our country, the United States, which has the financial and diplomatic resources to make a profound difference.

I look forward to working with my colleagues and the administration to enacting this bill and working to promote peace and prosperity in the Congo.

There being no objection, the letters were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

CATHOLIC RELIEF SERVICES,
Baltimore, MD, December 2, 2005.

Hon. BARACK OBAMA,
U.S. Senate, Hart Senate Office Building,
Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR OBAMA: Catholic Relief Services would like to commend you for your leadership in writing in "Democratic Republic of the Congo Relief, Security, and Democracy Promotion Act of 2005". We also want to sincerely thank you and your staff for giving us the opportunity to comment on an early draft of the bill and for incorporating some of our recommendations.

As an agency active on the ground in the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC) for many years, we support this legislation as a vehicle for elevating the priority of the DRC among lawmakers and policy makers. The bill advances key U.S. policy objectives for promoting peace, justice, democracy, and development in the DRC, and also allocates much-needed additional funds for the DRC.

We look forward to working with you and your staff to gain support for the bill and advance its goals.

Sincerely,

KEN HACKETT,
President.

DECEMBER 9, 2005.

Hon. BARACK OBAMA,
Senate Hart Building,
Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR OBAMA: As representatives of humanitarian, civil society and conflict prevention organizations, we are writing to express our support for the Democratic Republic of the Congo Relief, Security, and Democracy Promotion Act of 2005, and our appreciation of your efforts to ensure that the longstanding conflict in the region receives the attention it demands.

As stated in the legislation, the conflict in the eastern Democratic Republic of the Congo touches every major region of the continent and is one of the deadliest since World War II. Some 3.8 million people have lost their lives due to the conflict in the last six years.

Despite these troubling statistics, the DRC is not without hope. Landmark elections are planned for next year and, with strong support from the international community, they have the potential to help end the longstanding violence and put the country on the path toward peace and stability. Your legislation would ensure the active participation of the United States and authorizes critical funding to address humanitarian and development needs, promote good governance and rule of law, and help ensure transparent management of natural resource revenues.

We look forward to continuing work with you and your staff on this important issue and in particular, would like to note the effort Mr. Mark Lippert has made to reach out to our community and incorporate our recommendations.

Sincerely,

CARE USA,
Global Witness, International Rescue Committee, Oxfam America.

INTERNATIONAL CRISIS GROUP,
Washington, DC, December 8, 2005.

Senator BARACK OBAMA,
U.S. Senate, Hart Senate Office Building,
Washington DC.

DEAR SENATOR OBAMA: The International Crisis Group strongly supports the Democratic Republic of Congo Relief, Security, and Democracy Promotion Act of 2005 and your efforts to raise the visibility of and define new policies to respond to this largely overlooked, longstanding, and deadly conflict.

The conflict in the Democratic Republic of Congo has had far reaching regional consequences and resulted in the loss of an estimated 4 million lives since 1998. The situation in the country, especially in the eastern region where armed groups continue to assault local communities, remains most precarious and in need of urgent action.

The country is now on the brink of landmark elections scheduled for next year. Crisis Group has advocated comprehensive action to stop the suffering of the Congolese people and ensure the success of the transition by June 2006.

Your legislation would ensure the active participation of the United States in this effort and help in promoting good governance and justice. It would further authorize critical funding to address development needs and provide life-saving humanitarian assistance to millions of conflict-affected civilians in the Democratic Republic of Congo.

Your leadership in introducing this legislation is greatly appreciated and we look forward to continue to work with you and your staff on this important issue.

Yours sincerely,

MARK L. SCHNEIDER,
Senior Vice President, International Crisis Group.

By Mrs. CLINTON (for herself,
Mr. LIEBERMAN, and Mr. BAYH):
S. 2126. A bill to limit the exposure of children to violent video games; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

Mrs. CLINTON. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce a bill to help parents protect their children against violent and sexual media. In rising, I stand with the parents and children of New York and of the Nation, all of whom are being victimized by a culture of violence.

As parents, we monitor the kind of people who interact with our children. We attend parent night at school. We meet our children's teachers. We look over their textbooks to make sure they are installing our values and attitudes in our children. We meet our children's friends and their parents to make sure they are a positive source of influence.

If somebody is exposing our children to material we find inappropriate, we remove our children from that person.

If you hired a babysitter who exposed your children to violence and sexual material that you thought was inappropriate, what would you do? If you are like me, you would fire that babysitter and never invite him or her to come back.

Yet our children spend more time consuming media than doing anything else but sleeping and attending school. Media culture is like having a stranger in your house, and it exerts a major influence over your children.

It is this attack on the sensibilities of our children that is the subject of the bill I introduce today. It is a bill that I consider to be of tremendous importance to our families.

This bill would take an important step towards helping parents protect their children against influences they often find to be inappropriate—violent and sexually explicit video games. Quite simply, the bill would put teeth into the video game industry's rating system, which specifies which video games are inappropriate for young people under 17. By fining retailers who do not abide by the ratings system, this bill sends a message that the ratings system is to be taken seriously.

I know many of my colleagues, myself included, don't play video games and aren't aware of exactly what is contained in these games. So, I hope you will listen as I describe a few scenes so we know what is at issue here today.

Consider the following scenario: You have been captured by a demented film-maker who drops you into a gang-infested slum. While the gangs think they are hunting you, they don't know the real plot: that you are hunting them, while the director records each act of murder on film. Since you are outnumbered and could easily be mobbed, you cannot just jump in and fight everyone. Rather, you must be silent and patient, tracking your prey so that you can strike from behind. You strangle a villain with a sharp wire, and a finely rendered mist of blood sprays from his severed carotid artery.

... This is just one scene from one game. It happens not to be a game that has gotten a tremendous amount of attention lately. Frankly, I don't know if it's one of the most popular games out there or not. But I do know, if my daughter was still young, I wouldn't want her playing it.

Here is another one: Carl Johnson long ago escaped the hardships of street life in San Andreas. Now his mother is murdered, his old buddies are in trouble, and Carl must come home to clean up the mess—San Andreas style. That means spraying people with uzi bullets, blowing them up, or sniper shooting them from the top of buildings. It also means killing police officers and visiting prostitutes.

No one doubts that this material is inappropriate for children. The video game industry itself developed and implemented the ratings system that parents rely on today. They are responsible for developing the "M" for Mature or "AO" for Adults Only labels, which signal to parents that the content is too violent and/or sexually explicit for a child to play.

Unfortunately, enforcement has been lax and minors can purchase Mature-rated games with relative ease. A 2001 study by the Federal Trade Commission showed that 85 percent of unaccompanied minors, ages 13 to 16, could purchase games rated Mature. A study by the National Institute on Media and the Family found that nearly half of children, as young as age 9, succeed in buying Mature-rated games. And close to a quarter of retailers did not understand the ratings system and half did not provide any training to their employees.

This is a terrible problem that needs to be fixed. And this bill does just that.

I want to be clear—this bill is not an attack on video games. Video games are a fun part of the lives of millions of Americans, young and old alike. They can teach coordination and strategy. They can introduce children to computer technology. They can provide practice in learning to problem solve and they can help children hone their fine motor and spatial skills.

This bill is also not an attack on free and creative expression. Relying on the growing body of scientific evidence that demonstrates a causal link between exposure to these games and antisocial behavior in our children, this bill was carefully drafted to pass constitutional strict scrutiny.

Furthermore, nothing in this bill limits the production or sale of these games beyond current practice. If retailers are following the rules—established voluntarily by the video game industry—then this bill will have absolutely no impact on them.

And this bill does not overlook or undervalue the critical role parents play in protecting their children, and instilling in them, their own values. This bill is designed to buoy the efforts of parents, who too often feel like they are fighting an uphill battle against the violent and sexually explicit messages that are just a trip to the mall away.

The unfortunate truth is there is a darkside to some video games, which has lead to a universal agreement—among parents, advocates, policy-makers, and the gaming industry—that some games are not suitable for children. What we are seeking to do today is to ensure that that value judgment is meaningful.

Much of the public concern about the exposure of children to M-rated games focuses on sexually explicit content. Parents are rightly worried about this content and we should come together to take steps to keep these games out of the hands of our kids. But let's not discount the awful effect of violence in the media because, frankly, the evidence on this point is overwhelming and deserves more of our attention.

Consider the Joint Statement on the Impact of Entertainment Violence on Children from the Congressional Public Health Summit in July of 2000. I quote: "Well over 1,000 studies—including reports from the Surgeon General's office, the National Institute of Mental Health, and numerous studies conducted by leading figures within our medical and public health organizations . . . point overwhelmingly to a causal connection between media violence and aggressive behavior in some children," states their report.

The American Academy of Pediatrics stated, in a report entitled Media Exposure Feeding Children's Violent Acts, "Playing violent video games is to an adolescent's violent behavior what smoking tobacco is to lung cancer." I ask to have printed in the RECORD a resolution adopted by the American Psychological Association about the effect of violence in video games and interactive media.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

RESOLUTION ON VIOLENCE IN VIDEO GAMES AND INTERACTIVE MEDIA

Whereas, decades of social science research reveals the strong influence of televised violence on the aggressive behavior of children and youth (APA Task Force On Television and Society; 1992 Surgeon General's Scientific Advisory Committee on Television and Social Behavior, 1972); and

Whereas, psychological research reveals that the electronic media play an important role in the development of attitude, emotion, social behavior and intellectual functioning of children and youth (APA Task Force On Television and Society, 1992; Funk, J. B., et al. 2002; Singer, D. G. & Singer, J. L. 2005; Singer, D. G. & Singer, J. L. 2001); and

Whereas, there appears to be evidence that exposure to violent media increases feelings of hostility, thoughts about aggression, suspicions about the motives of others, and demonstrates violence as a method to deal with potential conflict situations (Anderson, C.A., 2000; Anderson, C.A., Carnagey, N. L., Flanagan, M., Benjamin, A. J., Eubanks, J., Valentine, J. C., 2004; Gentile, D. A., Lynch, P. J., Linder, J. R., & Walsh, D. A., 2004; Huesmann, L. R., Moise, J., Podolski, C. P., & Eron, L. D., 2003; Singer, D. & Singer, J., 2001); and

Whereas, perpetrators go unpunished in 73% of all violent scenes, and therefore teach that violence is an effective means of resolving conflict. Only 16% of all programs portrayed negative psychological or financial effects, yet such visual depictions of pain and suffering can actually inhibit aggressive behavior in viewers (National Television Violence Study, 1996); and

Whereas, comprehensive analysis of violent interactive video game research suggests such exposure a.) increases aggressive behavior, b.) increases aggressive thoughts, c.) increases angry feelings, d.) decreases helpful behavior, and, e.) increases physiological arousal (Anderson, C.A., 2002b; Anderson, C.A., Carnagey, N. L., Flanagan, M., Benjamin, A. J., Eubanks, J., Valentine, J. C., 2004; Anderson, C.A., & Dill, K. E., 2000; Bushman, B.J., & Anderson, C.A., 2002; Gentile, D. A., Lynch, P. J., Linder, J. R., & Walsh, D. A., 2004); and

Whereas, studies further suggest that sexualized violence in the media has been linked to increases in violence towards women, rape myth acceptance and anti-women attitudes. Research on interactive video games suggests that the most popular video games contain aggressive and violent content; depict women and girls, men and boys, and minorities in exaggerated stereotypical ways; and reward, glamorize and depict as humorous sexualized aggression against women, including assault, rape and murder (Dietz, T. L., 1998; Dill, K. E., & Dill, J. C., 2004; Dill, K. E., Gentile, D. A., Richter, W. A., & Dill, J.C., in press; Mulac, A., Jansma, L. L., & Linz, D. G., 2002; Walsh, D., Gentile, D. A., VanOverbeke, M., & Chasco, E., 2002); and

Whereas, the characteristics of violence in interactive video games appear to have similar detrimental effects as viewing television violence; however based upon learning theory (Bandura, 1977; Berkowitz, 1993), the practice, repetition, and rewards for acts of violence may be more conducive to increasing aggressive behavior among children and youth than passively watching violence on TV and in films (Carll, E. K., 1999a). With the development of more sophisticated interactive media, such as virtual reality, the implications for violent content are of further concern, due to the intensification of more realistic experiences, and may also be more conducive to increasing aggressive behavior than passively watching violence on TV and in films (Calvert, S. L., Jordan, A. B., Cocking, R. R. (Ed.) 2002; Carll, E. K., 2003; Turkle, S., 2002); and

Whereas, studies further suggest that videogames influence the learning processes in many ways more than in passively observing TV: a.) requiring identification of the participant with a violent character while playing video games, b.) actively participating increases learning, c.) rehearsing entire behavioral sequences rather than only a part of the sequence, facilitates learning, and d.) repetition increases learning (Anderson, C.A., 2002b; Anderson, C.A., Carnagey, N. L., Flanagan, M., Benjamin, A. J., Eubanks, J., Valentine, J. C., 2004; Anderson, C.A. & Dill, K. E., 2000); and

Whereas the data dealing with media literacy curricula demonstrate that when children are taught how to view television critically, there is a reduction of TV viewing in general, and a clearer understanding of the messages conveyed by the medium. Studies on media literacy demonstrate when children are taught how to view television critically, children can feel less frightened and sad after discussions about the medium, can learn to differentiate between fantasy and reality, and can identify less with aggressive characters. on TV, and better understand commercial messages (Brown, 2001; Hobbs, R. & Frost, R., 2003; Hortin, J.A., 1982; Komaya, M., 2003; Rosenkoetter, L.J., Rosenkoetter, S.E., Ozretich, R.A., & Acock, A.C., 2004; Singer & Singer, 1998; Singer & Singer, 1994)

Therefore be it Resolved that APA advocate for the reduction of all violence in videogames and interactive media marketed to children and youth.

Be it further Resolved that APA publicize information about research relating to violence in video games and interactive media on children and youth in the Association's publications and communications to the public.

Be it further Resolved that APA encourage academic, developmental, family, and media psychologists to teach media literacy that meets high standards of effectiveness to children, teachers, parents and caregivers to promote ability to critically evaluate interactive media and make more informed choices.

Be it further Resolved that APA advocate for funding to support basic and applied research, including special attention to the role of social learning, sexism, negative depiction of minorities, and gender on the effects of violence in video games and interactive media on children, adolescents, and young adults.

Be it further Resolved that APA engage those responsible for developing violent video games and interactive media in addressing the issue that playing violent video games may increase aggressive thoughts and aggressive behaviors in children, youth, and young adults and that these effects may be greater than the well documented effects of exposure to violent television and movies.

Be it further Resolved that APA recommend to the entertainment industry that the depiction of the consequences of violent behavior be associated with negative social consequences.

Be it further Resolved that APA (a) advocate for the development and dissemination of a content based rating system that accurately reflects the content of video games and interactive media, and (b) encourage the distribution and use of the rating system by the industry, the public, parents, caregivers and educational organizations.

Mrs. CLINTON. In June, a groundbreaking study by researchers at the University of Indiana School of Medicine, which was published in the Journal of Clinical Psychology, concluded that adolescents exposed to high levels of violent media were less able to control and to direct their thoughts and behavior, to stay focused on a task, to plan, to screen out distractions, and to use experience to guide inhibitions.

A 2004 meta-analysis of over 35 research studies that included over 4,000 participants, found similar results. It concluded that playing violent video games significantly increases aggressive behavior, physiological arousal and feelings of anger and hostility, and significantly decreases pro-social helping behavior.

And according to testimony by Craig Andersen before the Commerce Committee in 2000, violent video games have been found to increase violent adolescent behavior by 13 to 22 percent. Eighty-six percent of African American females in the games are victims of violence. And, the most common role for women in video games is prostitutes.

Research also demonstrates the opposite—reducing exposure to violence reduces aggressive behavior. A 2001 study by Stanford University School of Medicine found that reducing TV and video violence consumption to under one hour per day reduces verbal aggression by 50 percent and physical aggression by 40 percent among 3rd and 4th grade children.

Now, if you don't find the scientists compelling, consider a child named Devon Thompson, who shot three police officers after being brought in under suspicion of driving a stolen car. He grabbed one of the officer's guns, shot three men and then jumped into a police car, a scene remarkably like one found in the game Grand Theft Auto. When Thompson was apprehended he said "Life is a video game. You've got to die sometime."

In the face of this mountain of scientific and anecdotal evidence, the same company that developed Grand Theft Auto is coming out with a new game called Bully. In Bully, the player is a student who beats up other students in school.

Again, I am not here to argue that these games shouldn't be developed or made available. But, I am here to ask, can't we as a society do better by our kids? Can't we give parents the tools to make sure they know what may fall into the hands of their children?

That is what this bill is all about and I urge my colleagues to join me in supporting it.

By Mr. MCCAIN (for himself and Mr. BURNS):

S. 2128. A bill to provide greater transparency with respect to lobbying activities, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs.

Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, today I introduce legislation to provide greater transparency into the process of influencing our Government and ensure greater accountability among public officials.

The legislation does a number of things. It provides for faster reporting and greater public access to reports filed by lobbyists and their employers under the Lobbying Disclosure Act of 1995.

It requires greater disclosure of the activities of lobbyists, including for the first time grassroots lobbying firms.

The bill also requires greater disclosure from both lobbyists and Members and employees of Congress about travel that is arranged or financed by a lobbyist or his client.

To understand more thoroughly the actions lobbyists take to influence elected officials, the bill requires lobbying firms, lobbyists, and their political action committees to disclose their campaign contributions to Federal candidates and officeholders, their political action committees and political party committees. It further mandates disclosure of fundraisers hosted, cohosted, or otherwise sponsored by these entities, and disclosure of contributions for other events involving legislative and executive branch officials.

To get behind anonymous coalitions and associations and discover who actually is seeking to influence Government, the bill requires registrants to list as clients those entities that contribute $10,000 or more to a coalition or association. The bill expressly keeps intact, however, existing law governing the disclosure of the identities of members and donors to organizations designated as 501(c) groups under the Internal Revenue Code.

To address the problem of the revolving door between Government and the private sector, the bill lengthens the period during which senior members of the executive, Members of Congress, and senior congressional staff are restricted from lobbying.

The bill also modifies the provision in current law that exempts from the revolving door laws former employees who go to work for Indian tribes by applying these laws to those employees retained by tribes as outside lobbyists and agents.

To ensure compliance with congressional restrictions on accepting gifts, the bill requires registrants under the Lobbying Disclosure Act to report gifts worth $20 or more. I repeat that: The person who gives the gift is now responsible for reporting a gift of $20 or more.

To accurately reflect the true value of benefits received, the bill also requires Members of Congress and staff to pay the fair market value for travel on private planes and the value of sports and entertainment tickets and skyboxes at the cost of the highest priced ticket in the arena. The legislation increases the penalty for violating the reporting requirements, and it contains other provisions on enforcement and oversight.

This bill is regrettably necessary. Over the past year and a half, the Committee on Indian affairs has unearthed a story of excess and abuse by former lobbyists of a few Indian tribes. The story is alarming in its depth and breadth of potential wrongdoing. It has spanned across the United States, sweeping up tribes throughout Indian country. It has taken us from tribal reservations across America to luxury skyboxes in town, from a sham international think tank in Rehoboth Beach, DE, to a sniper workshop in Israel and beyond. It involves tens of millions of dollars that we know about and likely more that we do not.

Much of what the committee learned was extraordinary. Yet much of what we uncovered in the investigation was, unfortunately, the ordinary way of doing business in this town.

The bill I am introducing today seeks to address business as usual in the Nation's Capital. How these lobbyists sought to influence policy and opinionmakers is a case study in the ways lobbyists seek to curry favor with legislators and their aides. For example, they sought to ingratiate themselves with public servants with tickets to plush skyboxes at the MCI Center, FedEx Field, and Camden Yards for sports and entertainment events. They arranged extravagant getaways to tropical islands, the famed golfing links of St. Andrews and elsewhere. They regularly treated people to meals and drinks. Fundraisers and contributions abounded. The bill casts some disinfectant on those practices by simply requiring greater disclosure. If there is nothing inherently wrong with such activities, then there is no good reason to hide them from public scrutiny. The American people deserve no less.

During its investigation, the committee also learned about unscrupulous tactics employed to lobby Members and to shape public opinion. We found a sham international think tank in Rehoboth Beach, DE, established in part to disguise the true identity of clients. We saw phony Christian grassroots organizations consisting of a box of cell phones and a desk drawer.

I submit that in the great marketplace of ideas we call public discourse, truth is a premium that we cannot sacrifice. Through these practices, the lobbyists distorted the truth not only with false messages but also with fake messengers.

I hope by having for the first time disclosure of grassroots activities in the financial interests beyond misleading front groups that such a fraud on Members and voters can be avoided. Many cast blame only on the lobbying industry. But we should not forget that we as Members owe it to the American people to conduct ourselves in a way that reinforces rather than diminishes the public's faith and confidence in Congress.

The bill thus requires more accurate accounting of the benefits and privileges that sometimes come with public office. Requiring lobbyists to disclose all gifts over $20 will cause not only the lobbyist but also the recipient to more scrupulously adhere to existing gift limits. Fair evaluation of tickets to sporting and entertainment events and for air travel aboard private planes is another way of giving real effect to the gift rules of Congress.

I have read news reports that the Department of Justice is investigating job negotiations that some public officials may have had with lobbying firms while still in Government, negotiations that may have compromised their job performance. I have long been concerned with the revolving door between public service and the private sector, how that door is spun to personal gain, and the corrupting influences that can creep through that door into Government decisionmaking. To address the problem, I am proposing to expand the cooling off period to 2 years for Members of Congress and senior staff and certain executive branch officials. And to ensure a level playing field, I am seeking to close a loophole that has existed in Federal conflict-of-interest laws for those who represent Indian tribes.

Informed citizenry is essential to a thriving democracy. A democratic government operates best in the disinfecting light of the public eye. The approach on this bill is thus one of greater disclosure of and transparency into the interactions of lobbyists with our public officials.

The bill is intended to balance the right of the public to know with its right to petition Government, the ability of lobbyists to advocate their clients' cause with a need for truthful public discourse, and the ability of Members to legislate with the imperative that our Government must be free from corrupting influences, both real and perceived.

We must act now to ensure that the erosion we see today in the public's confidence in Congress does not become a collapse of confidence. That is why I would hope my colleagues would carefully examine this measure. I have had conversations with numerous other Members of this body, and I hope that both Republican and Democrat can join together on this issue.

I noted in today's—Friday, December 16—Congress Daily, there is a little chart in the corner, and it says: "2005 Congressional Approval Ratings." I notice a very interesting trend. On February 1 of this year, approximately 40-some percent—about 44 percent—of the people approved, and about 43 percent disapproved. Those numbers have changed somewhat dramatically to a disapproval rating, in the last couple of days, of 64 percent, with a 26-percent approval rating. I repeat: 64 percent disapprove, 26 percent approve.

Now, I am not sure that is divided up between Democrats and Republicans. From my travels—and I have been traveling a lot lately in the last few weeks around the country—I find that disapproval is nonpartisan in nature. I think there are a number of reasons for that disapproval, and many of them I will not chronicle here. But one of them is that there is a deep perception that we do not act on the priorities of the American people, that special interests set our agenda here rather than the people's interest.

Now, I do not pretend that a lobbying reform bill will be the panacea for all the ills that I think beset this Capitol of ours, but I do believe it is part of an effort we all need to make—and seriously make—in order to try to turn these kinds of numbers around, not only for our individual well-being but for the well-being of the people of the United States because it will be more difficult to act effectively if we do not have at least a significant amount of support from the people whom we purport to represent.

I would like to say another word about lobbyists. Lobbying is an honorable profession. I have no problem with it. I have no problem with people working in order to bring the people's interests and agenda and priorities to the attention of Congress. Almost all of us who I know of rely on their input on various issues. Many supply us with policy papers, with data, et cetera.

But, Mr. President—Mr. President—when we have the behavior that we highlighted, what actually was brought to our attention during our Indian Affairs Committee hearings, it is not believable: luxury sports boxes, a sham international think tank in Rehoboth Beach, a sniper workshop in Israel, the list goes on and on. And, of course, the way the Native Americans were treated was especially insulting.

Congress, according to the Constitution, has a special obligation in regard to Indian affairs. But I will tell you what, I greatly fear that these practices we have uncovered concerning Native Americans are far more widespread than just lobbying efforts on behalf of Native Americans—or exploitation of Native Americans is probably the better description.

I do not think there is any doubt that one of the reasons the American people mistrust us is they think there is wrongdoing, if not corruption, in this town. We have an obligation to fix this system as well as we can, and I believe that one of the measures that needs to be taken is to have a lobbying transparency and accountability that can give us confidence.

I note the presence of my friend from Connecticut on the floor whom I have had discussions with on this issue. I have had them with my colleague, Senator FEINGOLD, and many others. I hope we can, over the recess, think about this issue and be prepared to address it as early as possible. We have a long way to go to restore accountability, transparency, and the confidence of the American people.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Mr. President, I thank the Chair.

Mr. President, I came to the floor to thank my friend from Arizona not just for the legislation he has just introduced but for his characteristically courageous investigation of the events surrounding a particular lobbyist, Jack Abramoff, and the way in which they demonstrate the extent to which the system has gone out of control.

The direct victims here, of course, are those whose money was essentially taken without cause, who were cheated. But the indirect, yet very real, victims of these abuses are the Members of Congress, and the extent to which there has been abuse of a classic and very critical function of our Government—lobbying—the extent to which there has been abuse of that role breaks the public trust in Congress itself.

Disclosures, investigations such as Senator MCCAIN and his committee have been involved in, fearlessly, are critically important, but these disclosures and revelations and abuses cry out to us now to take some legislative action. I have not had the opportunity yet to review fully the provisions of the legislation Senator MCCAIN has introduced. I look forward to doing that over the recess. I hope that will put me in a position to join him as a sponsor of this legislation. It would be an honor and a privilege to work with him on this matter, as it has been to work on so many other matters.

For today, I did not want this moment to go by without thanking him for coming forward with this legislation. It makes the point we are due—perhaps, in fact, overdue—for a review of our lobbying and disclosure laws. They need strengthening, and they need strengthening because it is right to do so and it is necessary to do so to restore the public trust in our Government.

Mr. President, I am privileged to serve as the ranking member on the Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs Committee. In the normal course of the Senate rules, I believe this legislation would be referred to our committee, and there I look forward, along with the chairman, Senator COLLINS, to reviewing it. But in a personal sense, I want to work with Senator MCCAIN and his staff and mine over the recess and hope that I can join him as a cosponsor of this legislation after the first of the year.

I thank my friend, Senator DURBIN, for yielding me these few moments. I yield the floor.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Illinois.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, I join in echoing the comments of the Senator from Connecticut about what we just heard from the Senator from Arizona. He has really touched an important issue. There is no doubt in my mind there is a crisis in confidence in terms of the integrity of Congress. Unless and until we deal with that directly, little else we might do will be noticed or believed. I believe he is on the right track.

But I would suggest to him there is something more to the story. It is not just a question of lobbyists larding Members of Congress with gifts, trips to Scotland for golf outings or lavish meals or whatever it happens to be. There is more to the story, and it really goes to the heart of the issue about how we get to Congress and how we get to the Senate.

It is no longer "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," if it ever was. It is no longer a matter of putting your candidacy before the people of the State and asking that they consider you and wait for the consequence. It is a money chase. It is a huge money chase. And unless you happen to be one of the fortunate few and independently wealthy, you have to spend an awful lot of time chasing it, an awful lot of time raising money.

If you come from a State, as I do, like Illinois, you know an ordinary Senate campaign in my State is going to cost anywhere from $5 million to $20 million to $40 million. Now, imagine, if you will, for a moment that you had to raise that sum of money, and the largest contribution was in the range of $4,000. It takes a lot of time, and it takes a lot of contacts, and it takes a lot of commitment. So what you find is that as people of the Senate are running for reelection, for example, they are spending more and more and more time on the road raising money. They are finding precious little time to dedicate to their constituents or to the work of Congress because they are out raising huge sums of money.

That is part of the reality of the relationship between Members of Congress and lobbyists. Many of these lobbyists also are fundraisers, so to have them on your side is to guarantee they will not only buy you dinner, if that is what you are looking for, but also help you in this fundraising effort. I think real, ethical reform, which gets to the heart of the issue, has to get to the issue of how we finance these campaigns.

Unless and until we bring campaigns for election and reelection to the U.S. Senate and the House of Representatives to a level where they are affordable for common people, I am afraid we are going to continue to be enslaved by the current system, which requires us to raise so much money from so many people.

I can recall when the Republican leader TOM DELAY announced he was starting something called the K Street project. He was a House leader, and he said he was going to set out to make sure that the lobbyists who came to see him were all loyal Republicans, loyal contributors. He didn't want to see Democratic lobbyists. He prevailed on major associations and organizations not to hire anybody other than a Republican who had met with his approval.

For those of us who have been around this Hill for a while, it was pretty clear what he was creating. He was creating a very generous network of people, who would lobby him on legislation, whom he would possibly reward and then find their support in his campaign. It had built into it some very perilous opportunities. I won't talk about his situation in Texas. Let that be decided in Texas. But unless and until we get to the heart of the issue, the financing of campaigns, I am afraid we are not going to be able to deal forthrightly with the charges of corruption against Congress.

Let me add why campaigns cost so much money. Certainly in Illinois and most other States, it is all about television. It is all about millions of dollars which I have to raise to then give to television stations in my State. It troubles me because what those television stations are selling to me is something I own, something all Americans own—the airwaves. So we are paying premium dollars to television stations to run our ads for election and reelection. We are raising millions of dollars to make sure that we transfer this money as if it were a trust fund from our contributors directly to TV stations. It is about time we change the fundamentals in America. In changing the fundamentals, we can bring real reform.

I supported McCain-Feingold. Senators MCCAIN and FEINGOLD talked about limiting soft money. That is the tip of the iceberg. It is insidious, the soft money that came into campaigns, but the real problem is the cost of campaigns and the millions you have to raise to pay for television. If we said basically that in our country incumbents and challengers will have access to a certain amount of television to deliver their message at an affordable rate, we would dramatically drop the cost of campaigns, dramatically reduce the need to fund raise, and dramatically reduce our dependence on the sources of funds, whether they are generous individuals, special interest groups, or lobbyists.

We have to get to the heart of the issue. It isn't an appetite for golfing in Scotland; it is an appetite for money you need to run your campaign.

S. 2129. A bill to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to convey certain land and improvements of the Gooding Division of the Minidoka Project, Idaho; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

Mr. CRAPO. Mr. President, I am pleased to introduce a bill today to formally convey title a portion of the American Falls Reservoir District from the Bureau of Reclamation to the National Park Service. The Minidoka Internment National Monument Draft General Management Plan and Environment Impact Statement proposes the transfer of these two publicly owned parcels of land, which are both within and adjacent to the existing 73-acre NPS boundary, and have been identified as important for inclusion as part of the monument. The sites were both within the original 33,000-acre Minidoka Relocation Center that was operated by the War Relocation Authority, where approximately 13,500 Japanese and Japanese Americans were held from 1942 through 1945.

The smaller 2.31-acre parcel is located in the center of the monument in the old warehouse area and includes three historical buildings and other important cultural features. The Draft General Management Plan proposes to use this site for visitor services, including a Visitor Contact Station within an original warehouse to greet visitors and provide orientation for the monument. The other, a 7.87-acre parcel, is on the east end of the monument and was undeveloped during WWII. The NPS proposes to use this area for special events and to provide a site for the development of a memorial for the Issei, first-generation Japanese immigrants. These two publicly-owned properties are critical for long-term development, visitor services, and protection and preservation of historical structures and features at Minidoka Internment National Monument.

I would like to add that this legislation was developed with and is strongly supported by both the agencies involved and the local communities. I ask my colleagues to join me in enacting this small land transfer that we might move a step closer toward properly memorializing an important, but often forgotten, chapter of our Nation's history.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

By Mr. GRASSLEY (for himself, Mr. FEINGOLD, Mr. HARKIN, and Mr. HAGEL):

S. 2131. A bill to amend title 9, United States Code, to provide for greater fairness in the arbitration process relating to livestock and poultry contracts; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I rise to re-introduce the Fair Contracts for Growers Act of 2005. This bill would simply give farmers a choice of venues to resolve disputes associated with agricultural contracts. This legislation would not prohibit arbitration. Instead, it would ensure that the decision to arbitrate is truly voluntary and that the rights and remedies provided for by our judicial system are not waived under coercion.

I certainly recognize that arbitration has tremendous benefits. It can often be less costly than other dispute settlement means. It can also remove some of the workload from our Nation's overburdened court system. For these reasons, arbitration must be an option—but it should not be a coerced option.

Mandatory arbitration clauses are used in a growing number of agricultural contracts between individual farmers and processors. These provisions limit a farmer's ability to resolve a dispute with the company, even when a violation of Federal or State law is suspected. Rather than having the option to pursue a claim in court, disputes are required to go through an arbitration process that puts the farmer at a severe disadvantage. Such disputes often involve instances of discrimination, fraud, or negligent misrepresentation. The effect of these violations for the individual farmer can be bankruptcy and financial ruin, and mandatory arbitration clauses make it impossible for farmers to seek redress in court.

When a farmer chooses arbitration, the farmer is waving rights to access to the courts and the constitutional right to a jury trial. Certain standardized court rules are also waived, such as the right to discovery. This is important because the farmer must prove his case, the company has the relevant information, and the farmer can not prevail unless he can compel disclosure of relevant information.

Examples of farmers' concerns that have gone unaddressed due to limitations on dispute resolution options include; mis-weighted animals, bad feed cases, wrongful termination of contracts, diseased swine or birds provided by the company, fraud and misrepresentation to induce a grower to enter a contract, and retaliation by companies against farmers who join producer associations.

During consideration of the Farm Bill, the Senate passed, by a vote of 64-31, the Feingold-Grassley amendment to give farmers a choice of venues to resolve disputes associated with agricultural contracts.

I have some letters supporting this legislation and ask unanimous consent that they be printed in the RECORD.

I also ask unanimous consent that the text of bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

ORGANIZATION FOR COMPETITIVE MARKETS,

Lincoln, NE, November 15, 2005.

Re: Fair Contracts for Growers Act.

Hon. CHARLES GRASSLEY,

U.S. Senate,
Washington, DC.

SENATOR GRASSLEY:

1. The Organization for Competitive Markets would like to express its support for your Fair Contracts for Growers Act. Arbitration has a role in dispute resolution in the livestock industry, and in other economic sectors. It should not be an abuse tool. Your bill will remedy this.

2. The U.S. Constitution, Amendment 7 says this: "... the right of trial by jury shall be preserved ...". The law says citizens can waive this right, but the law also says waivers should be knowing and voluntary.

3. It is a fact integrators and packers have more information and sophistication, and more power, when contracting with producers. Producers rely on integrator/packer representations when making business decisions including contract signing or rejection. Mandatory arbitration clauses are not explained or negotiated, but merely included in boilerplate language.

4. Producers are unable to knowingly and voluntarily waive their right to a court-resolved future dispute. This is true because they cannot anticipate the type of possible disputes which may arise. The American Medical Assn, American Arbitration Assn, and American Bar Assn have agreed with this principal in the context of consumer health care contracts.

5. Producers must be provided real, not illusory, choice. Your bill leaves producers free to agree to arbitration once a dispute arises, but prohibits this forced "choice" before. Thank you for your efforts for U.S. livestock and poultry producers.

Respectfully,

KEITH MUDD,
President.

IOWA FARMERS UNION,
Ames, IA.

Hon. CHARLES GRASSLEY,
U.S. Senate,
Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR GRASSLEY: I am writing on behalf of Iowa Farmers Union, Women, Food and Agriculture Network (WFAN) and the Iowa Chapter of National Farmers Organization to express our strong support for the Fair Contracts for Growers Act, and to thank you for your leadership in introducing this legislation.

Contract livestock and poultry producers are being forced to sign mandatory arbitration clauses, as part of a take-it-or-leave-it, non-negotiable contract with large, vertically integrated processing firms. These producers forfeit their basic constitutional right to a jury trial, and instead must accept an alternative dispute resolution forum that severely limits their rights and is often prohibitively expensive. These clauses are signed before any dispute arises, leaving farmers little if any ability to seek justice if they become the victim of fraudulent or abusive trade practices.

Because basic legal processes such as discovery are waived in arbitration, it becomes very difficult for a farmer or grower to prove their case. In these cases, the company has control over the information needed for growers to argue their case. In a civil court case, this evidence would be available to a grower's attorney through discovery. In an arbitration proceeding, the company is not required to provide access to this information, thus placing the farmer/grower at an extreme disadvantage. Other standard legal rights that are waived through arbitration are access to mediation and appeal, as well as the right to an explanation of the decision.

Many assume that arbitration is a less costly way of resolving dispute than going to court, but for the producer, the opposite is usually true. The high cost of arbitration is often a significant barrier to most farmers. The up-front filing fees and arbitrator fees can exceed the magnitude of the dispute itself, with farmers being required to pay fees in the thousands of dollars just to start the arbitration process.

Arbitration can be a valid and effective method of dispute resolution when agreed to voluntarily through negotiation by two parties of similar power, but when used by a dominant party to limit the legal recourse of a weaker party in a non-negotiable contract, it becomes an abusive weapon. Independent family farmers all over the U.S. will benefit from a law that stops the abuse of arbitration clauses in livestock and poultry contracts.

Sincerely,

CHRIS PETERSEN,
President.

CENTER FOR RURAL AFFAIRS,
Lyons, NE.

DEAR SENATOR GRASSLEY: I am writing on behalf of the Center for Rural Affairs to express our strong support for the Fair Contracts for Growers Act, and to thank you for your leadership in introducing this legislation.

The Fair Contracts for Growers Act is very timely. With the rapid rise of vertically integrated methods of agricultural production, farmers are increasingly producing agricultural products under contract with large processors. Under these contracts, it is common for farmers and growers to be forced to sign mandatory arbitration clauses, as part of a take-it-or-leave-it, non-negotiable contract with a large, vertically integrated processing firm. In doing so, the farmer is forced to give up their basic constitutional right to a jury trial, and instead must accept an alternative dispute resolution forum that severely limits their rights and is often prohibitively expensive. These clauses are signed before any dispute arises, leaving farmers little if any ability to seek justice if they become the victim of fraudulent or abusive trade practices.

Because basic legal processes such as discovery are waived in arbitration, it becomes very difficult for a farmer or grower to prove their case. In these cases, the company has control of the information needed for a grower to argue their case. In a civil court case, this evidence would be available to a growers' attorney through discovery. In an arbitration proceeding, the company is not required to provide access to this information, thus placing the farmer/grower at an extreme disadvantage. Other standard legal rights that are waived through arbitration are access to mediation and appeal, as well as the right to an explanation of the decision.

In addition, it is often assumed that arbitration is a less costly way of resolving dispute than going to court. Yet for the farmer, the opposite is usually true. The high cost of arbitration is often a significant barrier to most farmers. The up-front filing fees and arbitrator fees can exceed the magnitude of the dispute itself, with farmers being required to pay fees in the thousands of dollars just to start the arbitration process.

Arbitration can be a valid and effective method of dispute resolution when agreed to voluntarily through negotiation by two parties of similar power, but when used by a dominant party to limit the legal recourse of a weaker party in a non-negotiable contract, it becomes an abusive weapon.

The Center for Rural Affairs believes this is important because of the number of small and mid-size farms that enter into contract livestock production. Small and mid-size farms that don't have the capital to invest in starting their own livestock operations often look to contract production as mechanism for diversifying their farming operations as well as their cash flow. However, when these farmers and ranchers are not allowed equal legal protection, their entire farming operations lay at risk.

Moreover, farmers who enter into contracts with meatpackers and large, corporate livestock producers will never have the power or negotiating position that those companies will enjoy in virtually every contract dispute. Producers often lack the financial and legal resources to challenge vertical integrators when their rights are violated. A legal agreement between smaller farm operations and integrators should, therefore, provide at least as much legal protection for producers as it does for the integrator.

Although the impetus behind this legislation emanates from the poultry industry, the rights of farmers who raise hogs and other livestock under contract are also threatened. And the increased use of production contracts in these sectors has made this issue that much more important to farmers in the Midwest and Great Plains as well.

Thank you for your leadership in recognizing these concerns, and your willingness to introduce commonsense legislation to stop the abuse of arbitration clauses in the livestock and poultry contracts.

Sincerely,
TRACI BRUCKNER,

SUSTAINABLE AGRICULTURE
COALITION,
Washington, DC, November 17, 2005.

Senator CHUCK GRASSLEY,
Hart Senate Office Building,
Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR GRASSLEY: I am writing on behalf of the Sustainable Agriculture Coalition in support of the Fair Contract for Growers Act and to thank you for your leadership in introducing this legislation.

The Fair Contracts for Growers Act is necessary to help level the playing field for our farmers and ranchers who enter into production contracts with packers and processors. The rapid rise of vertically integrated production chains, combined with the high degree of concentration of poultry processors and meatpackers, leave farmers and ranchers in many regions of the country with few choices, or only a single choice, of buyers for their production. Increasingly, farmers and ranchers are confronted with "take-it-or-leave-it," non-negotiable contracts, written by the company. These contracts require that farmers and ranchers give up the basic constitutional right of access to the courts and sign mandatory arbitration clauses if they want access to a market for their products. These clauses are signed before any dispute arises, leaving the producers little, if any, ability to seek justice if they become the victim of fraudulent or abusive trade practices.

Arbitration can be a valid and effective method of dispute resolution when agreed to voluntarily through negotiation by two parties of similar power, but when used by a dominant party to limit the legal recourse of a weaker party in a non-negotiable contract, it becomes an abusive weapon. Many basic legal processes are not available to farmers and ranchers in arbitration. In most agricultural production contract disputes, the company has control of the information needed for a grower to argue a case. In a civil court case, this evidence would be available to the grower's attorney through discovery. In an arbitration proceeding, however, the company is not required to provide access to this information, thus placing the grower at an extreme disadvantage. In addition, in most arbitration proceedings, a decision is issued without an opinion providing an explanation of the principles and standards or even the facts considered in reaching the decision. The arbitration proceeding is private, closed to effective public safeguards, and the arbitration decisions are often confidential and rarely subject to public oversight or judicial review.

Moreover, there is a growing perception that the arbitration system is biased towards the companies. This private system is basically supported financially by the companies which are involved repeatedly in arbitration cases. The companies also know the history of previous arbitrations, including which arbitrators repeatedly decide in the companies' favor. This arbitration history is rarely available to a farmer or rancher involved in a single arbitration proceeding.

Arbitration is often assumed to be a less costly way of resolving disputes than litigation. But this assumption must be tested in light of the relative resources of the parties. For most farmers and ranchers, arbitration is a significant expense in relation to their income. One immediate financial barrier is filing fees and case service fees, which in arbitration are usually divided between the parties. A few thousand dollars out of pocket is a minuscule expense for a well-heeled company but can be an insurmountable barrier for a farmer with a modest income, especially when the farmer is conflict with the farmer's chief source of income. This significant cost barrier, when coupled with the disadvantages of the arbitration process, can effectively deny farmers a remedy in contract dispute cases with merit.

The Sustainable Agriculture Coalition represents family farm, rural development, and conservation and environmental organizations that share a commitment to federal policy reform to promote sustainable agriculture and rural development. Coalition member organizations include the Agriculture and Land Based Training Association, American Natural Heritage Foundation, C.A.S.A. del Llano (Communities Assuring a Sustainable Agriculture), Center for Rural Affairs, Dakota Rural Action, Delta Land and Community, Inc., Future Harvest-CASA (Chesapeake Alliance for Sustainable Agriculture), Illinois Stewardship Alliance, Innovative Farmers of Ohio, Institute for Agriculture and Trade Policy, Iowa Environmental Council, Iowa Natural Heritage Foundation, Kansas Rural Center, Kerr Center for Sustainable Agriculture, Land Stewardship Project, Michael Fields Agricultural Institute, Michigan Agricultural Stewardship Association, Midwest Organic and Sustainable Education Service, The Minnesota Project, National Catholic Rural Life Conference, National Center for Appropriate Technology, Northern Plains Sustainable Agriculture Society, Ohio Ecological Food and Farm Association, Organic Farming Research Foundation, and the Sierra Club Agriculture Committee. Our member organizations included thousands of farmers and ranchers with small and mid-size operations, a number of whom have entered into agricultural production contracts or are considering whether to sign these contracts. As individuals, these farmers and ranchers do not have the financial power or negotiating position that companies enjoy in virtually every contract dispute. We agree with Senator Grassley that, in the face of such unequal bargaining power, the Fair Contract for Growers Act is a modest and appropriate step which allows growers the choice of entering into arbitration or mediation or choosing to exercise their basic legal right of access to the courts.

Thank you for your leadership in recognizing these concerns, and your willingness to introduce commonsense legislation to stop the abuse of mandatory arbitration clauses in livestock and poultry contracts.

Sincerely,

MARTHA L. NOBLE,
Senior Policy Associate,
Sustainable Agriculture Coalition.

NATIONAL FAMILY FARM COALITION,
Washington, DC, November 17, 2005.

Senator CHARLES GRASSLEY,
Hart Building,
Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR GRASSLEY. I am writing as president of the National Family Farm Coalition to express our strong support for the Fair Contracts for Growers Act, and to thank you for your leadership in introducing this legislation. As you know, the National Family Farm Coalition provides a voice for grassroots groups on farm, food, trade and rural economic issues to ensure fair prices for family farmers, safe and healthy food, and vibrant, environmentally sound rural communities here and around the world. Our organization is committed to promoting food sovereignty, which is stymied by current practices that give farmers unfair and unjust difficulties when they wish to arbitrate a contract dispute.

Therefore, the Fair Contracts for Growers Act is very timely. With the rapid rise of vertically integrated methods of agricultural production, farmers are increasingly producing agricultural products under contract with large processors. Under these contracts, it is common for farmers and growers to be forced to sign mandatory arbitration clauses, as part of a take-it-or-leave-it, non-negotiable contract with a large, vertically integrated processing firm. In doing so, the farmer is forced to give up their basic constitutional right to a jury trial, and instead must accept an alternative dispute resolution forum that severely limits their rights and is often prohibitively expensive. These clauses are signed before any dispute arises, leaving farmers little if any ability to seek justice if they become the victim of fraudulent or abusive trade practices.

Because basic legal processes such as discovery are waived in arbitration, it becomes very difficult for a farmer or grower to prove their case. In these cases, the company has control of the information needed for a grower to argue their case. In a civil court case, this evidence would be available to a grower's attorney through discovery. In an arbitration proceeding, the company is not required to provide access to this information, thus placing the farmer/grower at an extreme disadvantage. Other standard legal rights that are waived through arbitration are access to mediation and appeal, as well as the right to an explanation of the decision.

In addition, it is often assumed that arbitration is a less costly way of resolving dispute than going to court. Yet for the farmer, the opposite is usually true. The high cost of arbitration is often a significant barrier to most farmers. The up-front filing fees and arbitrator fees can exceed the magnitude of the dispute itself, with farmers being required to pay fees in the thousands of dollars just to start the arbitration process.

Arbitration can be a valid and effective method of dispute resolution when agreed to voluntarily through negotiation by two parties of similar power, but when used by a dominant party to limit the legal recourse of a weaker party in a non-negotiable contract, it becomes an abusive weapon.

Thank you for your leadership in recognizing these concerns, and your willingness to introduce common sense legislation to stop the abuse of arbitration clauses in the livestock and poultry contracts.

Sincerely,

GEORGE NAYLOR,
President,
National Family Farm Coalition.

CAMPAIGN FOR CONTRACT
AGRICULTURE REFORM,
November 18, 2005.

Hon. CHARLES GRASSLEY,
U.S. Senate,
Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR GRASSLEY: On behalf of the Campaign for Contract Agriculture Reform, I would like to thank you for your leadership in introducing the Fair Contracts for Growers Act.

With the rapid rise of vertically integrated methods of agricultural production, farmers are increasingly producing agricultural products under contract with large processors. In many cases, particularly in the livestock and poultry sector, the farmer never actually owns the product they produce, but instead makes large capital investments on their own land to build the facilities necessary to raise animals for an "integrator."

Under such contract arrangements, farmers and growers are often given take-it-or-leave-it, non-negotiable contracts, with language drafted by the integrator in a manner designed to maximize the company's profits and shift risk to the grower. In many cases, the farmer has little choice but to sign the contract presented to them, or accept bankruptcy. The legal term for such contracts is "contract of adhesion." As contracts of adhesion become more commonplace in agriculture, the abuses that often characterize such contracts are also becoming more commonplace and more egregious.

One practice that has become common in livestock and poultry production contracts is the use of mandatory arbitration clauses, where growers are forced to sign away their constitutional rights to jury trial upon signing a contract with an integrator, and instead accept a dispute resolution forum that denies their basic legal rights and is too costly for most growers to pursue.

Because basic legal processes such as discovery are waived in arbitration, it becomes very difficult for a farmer or grower to prove their case. In these cases, the company has control of the information needed for a grower to argue their case. In a civil court case, this evidence would be available to a grower's attorney through discovery. In an arbitration proceeding, the company is not required to provide access to this information, thus placing the farmer/grower at an extreme disadvantage. Other standard legal rights that are waived through arbitration are access to mediation and appeal, as well as the right to an explanation of the decision.

In addition, it is often assumed that arbitration is a less costly way of resolving dispute than going to court. Yet for the farmer, the opposite is usually true. The high cost of arbitration is often a significant barrier to most farmers. The up-front filing fees and arbitrator fees can exceed the magnitude of the dispute itself. For example, in one Mississippi case, filing fees for a poultry grower to begin an arbitration proceeding were $11,000. In contrast, filing fees for a civil court case are $150 to $250. Lawyer fees in a civil case are often paid on a contingent-fee basis.

In addition, the potential for mandatory arbitration clauses to be used abusively by a dominant party in a contract has also been recognized by Congress with regard to other sectors of our economy. In 2002, legislation was enacted with broad bipartisan support that prohibits the use of pre-dispute, mandatory arbitration clauses in contracts between car dealers and car manufacturers and distributors. The Fair Contract for Growers Act is nearly identical in structure to the "car dealer" arbitration bill passed by Congress in 2002.

Thank you again for introducing the Fair Contracts for Growers Act, to assure that arbitration in livestock and poultry contracts is truly voluntary, after mutual agreement of both parties after a dispute arises. If used, arbitration should be a tool for honest dispute resolution, not a weapon used to limit a farmer's right to seek justice for abusive trade practices.

I look forward to working with you toward enactment of this important legislation.

Sincerely,

STEVEN D. ETKA,
Legislative Coordinator.

By Mr. CRAPO (for himself, Mr. BURNS and Mr. CRAIG):

S. 2132. A bill to Include Idaho and Montana as affected areas for purposes of making claims under the Radiation Exposure Compensation Act (42 U.S.C. 2210 note) based on exposure to atmospheric nuclear testing; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. CRAPO. Mr. President, I rise to introduce legislation on behalf of myself, Senator BURNS of Montana and my Colleague Senator CRAIG that would include the States of Idaho and Montana as affected areas under the Radiation Exposure Compensation Act, or RECA.

Since our goals of giving affected citizens in our States the opportunity to receive compensation under RECA, and the challenges faced by our constituents are the same, it is appropriate to combine our efforts toward rectifying the problem.

Nuclear testing in Nevada during the 1950s and 1960s released radiation into the atmosphere that settled in States far away from the original test site. Certain elements of this radiation such as the radioactive isotope Iodine-131 settled in States such as Idaho and Montana and found their way into the milk supply. After time, in some cases 25 to 50 years after the fact, this contamination manifested itself as various forms of cancer, leukemia and other illnesses, particularly thyroid cancer. Those affected in this way are often referred to as "downwinders," to denote their location downwind from the fallout.

In 1990, Congress recognized the need for the Federal Government to make amends for the harm caused to innocent citizens by nuclear testing and the Radiation Exposure Compensation Act was passed into law. Unfortunately, the science at the time did not recognize that radioactive fallout did not restrict itself by State lines.

This was highlighted in 1999, when a group of Senators, led by Senator HATCH, amended the law to include additional counties in Arizona. During debate on this legislation, Senator HATCH said, "Our current state of scientific knowledge allows us to pinpoint with more accuracy which diseases are reasonably believed to be related to radiation exposure, and that is what necessitated the legislation we are considering today." Since that time, even greater advances in science have been made in the area of radiation exposure.

When the RECA disparity was first brought to my attention by the Idaho downwinders, I met with them to discuss ways to help them. The National Academy of Sciences staff came to Idaho in 2004 to hear testimony from those affected and ensure that their concerns and comments were included in the process.

Their voices were heard; the NAS report released in April of 2005 recognized that, among the 25 counties with the highest per capita dosage of radiation, 20 of those counties are in Idaho and Montana. In fact, Idaho is home to four of the top five counties in this regard. The report also stated that, "To be equitable, any compensation program needs to be based on scientific criteria and similar cases must be treated alike. The current geographic limitations are not based on the latest science." Understanding these facts, it is of prime importance that we rectify the problem quickly.

The NAS report recognizes that the RECA program needs to be updated and that affected Idahoans and Montanans deserve equal treatment with those in other States. The report makes several specific recommendations, chief among them that Congress should establish a new process for reviewing individual claims, based on probability of causation, or "assigned share," a method which is used in the courts and for other radiation compensation programs. I am currently working with my colleagues to legislatively address the suggestions made by the NAS report and work out a long-term solution for the challenges currently posed by RECA.

We all recognize that this problem requires a two-part solution—expanding the current RECA program to include those left behind while at the same time working on the long-term fixes recommended by the NAS. These efforts must happen simultaneously and I am pleased that my colleagues are partnering with me on this course.

Tragically, for some, it is already too late. A long-time advocate for the downwinders, and personal friend, Sheri Garmon, passed away from cancer this summer. Others preceded her and some are sick right now. There are still a number of those affected who are still waiting for the Government to do the right thing and make them eligible for compensation for their injuries. The facts are in and the science shows that they should not have to wait any longer for their rightful opportunity to seek appropriate redress. Let's fix this while we still have some of those who are sick because of Government actions with us.

I would exhort my colleagues to join with me and Senators BURNS and CRAIG to take up this legislation we have introduced today and bring needed fairness to those in Idaho and Montana and extend them eligibility under the current Radiation Exposure Compensation Act.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

(1) in subparagraph (B), by striking “and” after the semicolon;

By Mr. ROCKEFELLER:

S. 2133. A bill to amend the Robert T. Stafford Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act to include foreseeable catastrophic events as major disasters, to permit States affected by an event occurring elsewhere to receive assistance, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs.

Mr. ROCKEFELLER. Mr. President, the massive devastation inflicted upon our southern States by hurricanes Katrina, Rita, and Wilma reminded all Americans how important it is that the Federal Government be able to respond quickly and effectively when disaster strikes. We also learned from those tragedies that we must assist in ways few of us had imagined—for example, to meet the needs of evacuees who were dispersed far from the disaster.

Other events of the past few years, both here at home and abroad, have taught us that we must prepare for more than just natural disasters. Accidents, acts of terrorism, and pandemic illnesses also threaten us with death, injury, and destruction. And while we work to minimize the threats, we must assume that such disasters will really happen.

I have concluded that the President's current statutory authority to respond to disasters is not sufficient to meet the threats that we all now recognize as real, though once they were unimaginable. Today, I am introducing the Disaster Relief Act 2005 to modernize our disaster response capability for the 21st century.

One of the principal authorities we have given the President for disaster management is the Robert T. Stafford Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act. This is the law that authorizes the President, at the request of a Governor, to declare an “Emergency” or a “Major Disaster,” which then enables various types of Federal assistance. Emergency is the lower level declaration. The President is given great latitude in the types of events that can be declared emergencies, but relief is generally limited to $5 million per declaration. A major disaster declaration allows much greater assistance, but can be made only for natural disasters or, from any cause, fire, flood, or explosion.

The Department of Homeland Security uses 15 disaster scenarios to guide planning for the types of catastrophes it has concluded threaten our country. Besides natural disasters, the list includes various types of terrorist attacks—chemical, biological, radiological, cyber—as well as major health disasters. Though the President could respond to any of these scenarios by issuing an Emergency declaration, only seven of the fifteen would currently qualify under the Stafford Act to be declared a major disaster.

This bill will modify the definition of a major disaster in the Stafford Act to direct the President to focus on the impacts of an event in determining whether to issue a declaration. It is indeed the suffering—deaths, injuries, destruction—and not the cause of that suffering, which should determine our response. Catastrophic events, foreseeable and yet unimagined, will be covered if the suffering exceeds the capacity of the State to respond.

Furthermore, under the Stafford Act it is not clear whether States affected indirectly by a disaster occurring elsewhere—for example, by receiving evacuees or by the spread of nuclear, toxic, or infectious agents—could receive a major disaster declaration. It became clear in the aftermath of Hurricane Katrina that meeting the needs of evacuees can be a difficult challenge. Four States received major disaster declarations following Katrina. Forty-four others received emergency declarations to assist evacuees, but not even Texas, which hosted over 200,000 evacuees, received a major disaster declaration to assist them. Even if it were possible to declare a major disaster in a State receiving evacuees, assistance to meet some of their needs—education, healthcare, long-term housing and resettlement—is not adequately authorized under the Stafford Act.

Being able to meet the needs of evacuees is an important issue for West Virginia. We hosted several hundred evacuees from Hurricane Katrina, just enough to understand the special needs of people who have lost their homes and livelihoods, have been moved to unfamiliar places without resources, have been separated from their families, and suffered in many other ways. A disaster in the Washington-Baltimore region, or in Pennsylvania or Ohio, could bring far more evacuees to West Virginia than we could assist with presently available resources.

This bill acknowledges the fact that the impacts of a major disaster can extend far beyond the location of the event, and enables the President to make major disaster declarations in affected States, wherever they may be located. Additional forms of assistance to evacuees, found necessary after hurricane Katrina—for education, healthcare, long-term housing, and resettlement—will be made available.

Several other aspects of the Stafford Act require our attention, and are addressed in the bill. Authorization for Predisaster Hazard Mitigation under Title II, set to expire at the end of this year, will be extended to 2010. The modest levels of direct assistance to individuals, though indexed to inflation, will be increased because of rapid increases in housing costs in recent years. The duration of assistance that can be provided by the Department of Defense, for the preservation of life and property, will be increased from 10 to 30 days, to meet needs following extreme disasters. It will be clarified that events occurring within the waters surrounding the United States are eligible for emergency and major disaster declarations. Efforts to recover costs of assistance when emergencies or major disasters are caused by gross negligence will be authorized. The process for appropriating funds for disaster relief will be improved. And other minor improvements will be made.

I ask my colleagues in the Senate to join me to pass this bill and improve our preparedness for disasters in the 21st century.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of this bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 2133

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the “Disaster Relief Act of 2005”.

SEC. 2. FINDINGS AND PURPOSES.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds that—

(1) the current definition of a major disaster in section 102 of the Robert T. Stafford Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act (42 U.S.C. 5122) is insufficient to enable the President to respond quickly and efficiently to foreseeable catastrophic events, including many types of potential terrorists attacks, accidents, and health emergencies;

(2) more than ½ of the disaster planning scenarios used by the Department of Homeland Security to evaluate preparedness would not be covered by that present definition;

(3) States affected by a event occurring elsewhere, such as through mass evacuations, the propagation of radioactive or toxic substances, or the transmission of infectious agents, may not be eligible for the declaration of a major disaster or for certain types of assistance;

(4) emergency declarations, widely used to provide assistance to evacuees following Hurricane Katrina, may not adequate;

(5) some types of assistance found to be necessary following the evacuations associated with Hurricane Katrina, notably assistance for providing public services such as education, healthcare, long-term housing, and resettlement, are not authorized to be provided under the Robert T. Stafford Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act (42 U.S.C. 5121 et seq.);

(6) the process for appropriating funds for disaster assistance is inefficient and often requires supplemental appropriations and certain assistance programs have been delayed by insufficient funds;

(7) authorization for the Predisaster Hazard Mitigation program, under title II of the Robert T. Stafford Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act (42 U.S.C. 5131 et seq.) will expire on December 31, 2005;

(8) while the Federal Government is authorized to recover the cost of providing assistance in the event of major disasters or emergencies caused by deliberate actions, costs resulting from negligent actions cannot be recovered;

(9) limits on assistance provided to individuals for repair or replacement of housing and total assistance, though indexed for inflation, do not adequately reflect increases in the costs of housing that have occurred in recent years; and

(10) the duration of assistance by the Department of Defense authorized under section 403(c) of the Robert T. Stafford Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act (42 U.S.C. 5170b(c)) for activities "essential for the preservation of life and property" may be insufficient to meet needs following major disasters that are particularly severe or for which the period of recovery is lengthy.

(b) PURPOSES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The purpose of this Act is to expand and enhance the authority and capacity of the President of the United States to alleviate suffering and loss resulting from large catastrophic events by appropriately amending the Robert T. Stafford Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act (42 U.S.C. 5121 et seq.).

(2) MAJOR DISASTERS.—In amending the definition of the term major disaster in section 102(2) of the Robert T. Stafford Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act (42 U.S.C. 5122(2)), Congress intends to expand the types of events that constitute a major disaster and does not intend to exclude any type of event that would have constituted a major disaster prior to the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 3. DEFINITIONS.

(a) MAJOR DISASTER.—Section 102 of the Robert T. Stafford Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act (42 U.S.C. 5122) is amended by striking paragraph (2) and inserting the following:

"(A) involves or results in—

"(i) a large number of human deaths, injuries, or illnesses;

"(ii) substantial property damage or loss; or

"(iii) extensive disruption of public services; and

"(B) in the determination of the President, is of such severity and magnitude that effective response is beyond the capabilities of the affected State or local government."

(b) UNITED STATES.—Section 102(3) of the Robert T. Stafford Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act (42 U.S.C. 5122(3)) is amended—

(1) by striking "United States" and inserting the following:

"(3) UNITED STATES.—The term 'United States'";

(c) AFFECTED STATE.—Section 102 of the Robert T. Stafford Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act (42 U.S.C. 5122) is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(10) AFFECTED STATE.—The term 'affected State' means any State—

"(A) that suffers damage, loss, or hardship as a result of an occasion or instance satisfying the criteria of paragraph (1) or a catastrophic event satisfying the criteria of paragraph (2);

"(B) regardless of location, that suffers indirect consequences due to an emergency or major disaster declared in another part of the United States, to the extent that, in the determination of the President, assistance provided for under this Act is required; or

"(C) that is included in a Presidential declaration of an Incident of National Significance under the National Response Plan (developed under Homeland Security Presidential Directive 5)."

(2) by adding at the end the following:

"(2) In the event the President declares an emergency or major disaster in more than 1 State as a result of an occasion, instance, or catastrophic event, the President may, as appropriate and efficient, appoint 1 or more regional coordinating officers, without regard to State borders. A regional coordinating officer shall report to the Federal coordinating officer appointed under paragraph (1) and the Principal Federal Official for the emergency or major disaster designated under the National Response Plan (developed under Homeland Security Presidential Directive 5)."

By Mr. SMITH:

S. 2134. A bill to strengthen existing programs to assist manufacturing innovation and education, to expand outreach programs for small and medium-sized manufacturers, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, I rise today with Senators KOHL and DEWINE to introduce the Manufacturing Technology Competitiveness Act of 2005.

The manufacturing sector is a critical component of our economy and an engine of job creation for millions of Americans. Investment and continued growth in this industry is vital in order to strengthen manufacturing in the United States and increase our global competitiveness.

Through a number of measures, my legislation is aimed at further improving productivity, advancing technology and increasing the competitiveness of the U.S. manufacturing industry.

My bill authorizes funding through fiscal year 2008 for the Manufacturing Extension Partnership (MEP) and the National Institute of Standards and Technology (NIST).

MEP is a nationwide network with centers in all 50 states that provide assistance to help small- and medium-sized manufacturers succeed by providing expertise and services customized to meet their critical needs.

Small and medium sized manufacturers in my home State of Oregon have benefited from the efforts of the Oregon MEP resulting in increased jobs, investment and overall productivity. In 2004, the Oregon MEP helped manufacturers generate new or retain sales of $6,835,400 and a save costs of $18,736,000. MEP's assistance has yielded similar success for countless manufacturers in states across the country.

In addition to authorizing funding for MEP, this bill will amend partnership to include a mechanism for review and re-competition of MEP Centers and establish an additional competitive grant program from which these centers can obtain supplemental funding for manufacturing-related projects.

The National Institute of Standards and Technology with its expertise in technology, measurement and standards helps U.S. industry manufacture leading products and deliver high quality services. NIST has aided U.S. companies in competing in domestic and foreign markets through technology-based innovations in areas such as biotechnology, information technology and advanced manufacturing. NIST's capabilities will allow them to make further valuable contributions with emerging technologies in the future.

My bill establishes programs aimed at enhancing research and advancements in the manufacturing industry including a fellowship program and a manufacturing research pilot program, which involves cost-sharing collaborations aimed at developing new processes and materials to improve manufacturing performance and productivity.

The Advanced Technology Program (ATP) which supports research and development of high-risk, cutting edge technologies is authorized funding in this legislation. ATP partners with private sector entities to invest in early stage, innovative technologies that enable U.S. companies to develop next generation products and services that improve the quality of life for all of us. These public-private partnerships lead to innovations that otherwise could not be developed by a single entity.

I urge my colleagues to support the Manufacturing Technology Competitiveness Act of 2005 and ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

By Mr. DURBIN:

S. 2137. A bill to amend title XXI of the Social Security Act to make all uninsured children eligible for the State children's health insurance program, to encourage States to increase the number of children enrolled in the medicaid and State children's health insurance programs by simplifying the enrollment and renewal procedures for those programs, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 2137

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "All Kids Health Insurance Coverage Act of 2005".

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

The Senate finds the following:

(1) There are more than 9,000,000 children in the United States with no health insurance coverage.

(2) Uninsured children, when compared to privately insured children, are—

(A) 3.5 times more likely to have gone without needed medical, dental, or other health care;

(B) 4 times more likely to have delayed seeking medical care;

(C) 5 times more likely to go without needed prescription drugs; and

(D) 6.5 times less likely to have a regular source of care.

(3) Children without health insurance coverage are at a disadvantage in the classroom, as shown by the following studies:

(A) The Florida Healthy Kids Annual Report published in 1997, found that children who do not have health care coverage are 25 percent more likely to miss school.

(B) A study of the California Health Families program found that children enrolled in public health coverage experienced a 68 percent improvement in school performance and school attendance.

(C) A 2002 Building Bridges to Healthy Kids and Better Students study conducted by the Council of Chief State School Officers in Vermont concluded that children who started out without health insurance saw their reading scores more than double after obtaining health care coverage.

(4) More than half of uninsured children in the United States are eligible for coverage under either the State Children's Health Insurance Program (CHIP) or Medicaid, but are not enrolled in those safety net programs.

(5) Some States, seeing that the Federal Government is not providing assistance to middle class families who are unable to afford health insurance, are trying to extend health care coverage to some or all children in the State.

(6) State efforts to cover all children may not be successful without financial assistance from the Federal Government.

S. 2138. A bill to prohibit racial profiling; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, today I will introduce the End Racial Profiling Act of 2005. I am proud to be joined again by my friend from New Jersey, Senator CORZINE, and a number of other cosponsors. It is fitting that this bill will be introduced in one of the final days of Senator CORZINE's service in this body. He has been a major force in efforts to advance this legislation from the day he joined the Senate 4 years ago.

Ending racial profiling in America has been a priority for me for many years. I worked with the senior Senator from New Jersey, Mr. LAUTENBERG, back in 1999 on a bill to collect statistics on racial profiling. In 2001, in his first State of the Union address, President Bush told the American people that “racial profiling is wrong and we will end it in America.” He asked the Attorney General to implement a policy to end racial profiling.

The Department of Justice released a Fact Sheet and Policy Guidance addressing racial profiling in 2003, stating that racial profiling is wrong and ineffective and perpetuates negative racial stereotypes in our country. Though these guidelines are helpful, they do not end racial profiling and they do not have the force of law. Unfortunately, more than 4 years after the President's ringing endorsement of our goal, racial profiling has not ended in this country. I am proud today, therefore, to introduce the End Racial Profiling Act of 2005. This bill will do what the President promised; it will help America achieve the goal of bringing an end to racial profiling. This bill bans racial profiling and requires Federal, State and local law enforcement officers to take steps to end it.

Racial profiling is the practice by which some law enforcement agents routinely stop African Americans, Latinos, Asian Americans, Arab Americans and others simply because of their race, ethnicity, national origin, or perceived religion. Reports in States from New Jersey to Florida, and Maryland to Texas all show that African Americans, Hispanics, and members of other minority groups are being stopped by some police far more often than their share of the population and the crime rates for those racial categories. Passing this bill is even more urgent after September 11, as we have seen racial profiling used against Arab and Muslim Americans or Americans perceived to be Arab or Muslim. The September 11 attacks were horrific, and I share the determination of many Americans that finding those responsible and preventing future attacks should be this Nation's top priority. This is a challenge that our country can and must meet. But we need improved intelligence and law enforcement. Making assumptions based on racial, ethnic, or religious stereotypes will not protect our nation from crime and future terrorist attacks.

Numerous Government studies have shown that racial profiling is entirely ineffective. Some police departments around the country have recognized the many problems with racial profiling. In response, those departments have developed programs and policies to prevent racial profiling and comply with the Department of Justice's policy guidance. In my own State of Wisconsin, law enforcement officials have taken steps to train police officers, improve academy training, establish model policies prohibiting racial profiling, and improve relations with our State's diverse communities. I applaud the efforts of Wisconsin law enforcement. This is excellent progress and shows widespread recognition that racial profiling harms our society. But like the DOJ policy guidance, local programs don't have the force of law behind them. The Federal Government must step up, as President Bush promised. The Government must play a vital role in protecting civil rights and acting as a model for State and local law enforcement.

Now, perhaps more than ever before, our Nation cannot afford to waste precious law enforcement resources or alienate Americans by tolerating discriminatory practices. It is past time for Congress and the President to enact comprehensive Federal legislation that will end racial profiling once and for all.

In clear language, the End Racial Profiling Act of 2005 bans racial profiling. It defines racial profiling in terms that are consistent with the Department of Justice's Policy Guidance. But this bill does more than prohibit and define racial profiling—it gives law enforcement agencies and officers the tools necessary to end the harmful practice. For that reason, the End Racial Profiling Act of 2005 is a pro-law enforcement bill.

This bill will allow the Justice Department or individuals the ability to enforce the prohibition by filing a suit for injunctive relief. The bill would also require Federal, State, and local law enforcement agencies to adopt policies prohibiting racial profiling, implement effective complaint procedures or create independent auditor programs, implement disciplinary procedures for officers who engage in the practice, and collect data on stops. In addition, it requires the Attorney General to report to Congress so Congress and the American people can monitor whether the steps outlined in the bill to prevent and end racial profiling have been effective.

Like the bills introduced in past Congresses, this bill also authorizes the Attorney General to provide incentive grants to help law enforcement comply with the ban on racial profiling, including funds to conduct training of police officers or purchase in-car video cameras.

This year's bill makes one significant improvement to ERPA. In past proposals, DOJ grants for State, local, and tribal law enforcement agencies were tied to the agency having some kind of procedure for handling complaints of racial profiling. This year, at the suggestion of experts in the field, the bill requires law enforcement agencies to adopt either an administrative complaint procedure or an independent auditor program to be eligible for DOJ grants. The Attorney General must promulgate regulations that set out the types of procedures and audit programs that will be sufficient. We believe that the independent auditor option will be preferable for many local law enforcement agencies. And such programs have proven to be an effective way to discourage racial profiling. Also, under this year's bill, the Attorney General is required to conduct a 2-year demonstration project to help law enforcement agencies with data collection.

Let me emphasize that local, State, and Federal law enforcement agents play a vital role in protecting the public from crime and protecting the Nation from terrorism. The vast majority of law enforcement agents nationwide discharge their duties professionally and without bias and we are all indebted to them for their courage and dedication. This bill should not be misinterpreted as a criticism of those who put their lives on the line for the rest of us every day. Rather, it is a statement that the use of race, ethnicity, religion, or national origin in deciding which persons should be subject to traffic stops, stops and frisks, questioning, searches, and seizures is wrong and ineffective, except where there is specific information linking persons of a particular race, ethnicity, religion, or national origin to a crime.

The provisions in this bill will help restore the trust and confidence of the communities that our law enforcement have pledged to serve and protect. That confidence is crucial to our success in stopping crime and in stopping terrorism. The End Racial Profiling Act of 2005 is good for law enforcement and good for America.

I urge the President to make good on his pledge to end racial profiling, and I urge my colleagues to join me in supporting the End Racial Profiling Act of 2005.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 2138

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, Sec. 601. Severability.

Sec. 602. Savings clause.

SEC. 2. FINDINGS, PURPOSES, AND INTENT.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds the following:

(1) Federal, State, and local law enforcement agents play a vital role in protecting the public from crime and protecting the Nation from terrorism. The vast majority of law enforcement agents nationwide discharge their duties professionally and without bias.

(2) The use by police officers of race, ethnicity, national origin, or religion in deciding which persons should be subject to traffic stops, stops and frisks, questioning, searches, and seizures is improper.

(3) In his address to a joint session of Congress on February 27, 2001, President George W. Bush declared that “racial profiling is wrong and we will end it in America.” He directed the Attorney General to implement this policy.

(4) In June 2003, the Department of Justice issued a Policy Guidance regarding racial profiling by Federal law enforcement agencies which stated: “Racial profiling in law enforcement is not merely wrong, but also ineffective. Race-based assumptions in law enforcement perpetuate negative racial stereotypes that are harmful to our rich and diverse democracy, and materially impair our efforts to maintain a fair and just society.”

(5) The Department of Justice Guidance is a useful first step, but does not achieve the President's stated goal of ending racial profiling in America, as—

(A) it does not apply to State and local law enforcement agencies;

(B) it does not contain a meaningful enforcement mechanism;

(C) it does not require data collection; and
(D) it contains an overbroad exception for immigration and national security matters.

(6) Current efforts by State and local governments to eradicate racial profiling and redress the harms it causes, while also laudable, have been limited in scope and insufficient to address this national problem. Therefore, Federal legislation is needed.

(7) Statistical evidence from across the country demonstrates that racial profiling is a real and measurable phenomenon.

(8) As of November 15, 2000, the Department of Justice had 14 publicly noticed, ongoing, pattern or practice investigations involving allegations of racial profiling and had filed 5 pattern or practice lawsuits involving allegations of racial profiling, with 4 of those cases resolved through consent decrees.

(9) A large majority of individuals subjected to stops and other enforcement activities based on race, ethnicity, national origin, or religion are found to be law abiding and therefore racial profiling is not an effective means to uncover criminal activity.

(10) A 2001 Department of Justice report on citizen-police contacts that occurred in 1999, found that, although Blacks and Hispanics were more likely to be stopped and searched, they were less likely to be in possession of contraband. On average, searches and seizures of Black drivers yielded evidence only 8 percent of the time, searches and seizures of Hispanic drivers yielded evidence only 10 percent of the time, and searches and seizures of White drivers yielded evidence 17 percent of the time.

(11) A 2000 General Accounting Office report on the activities of the United States Customs Service during fiscal year 1998 found that—

(A) Black women who were United States citizens were 9 times more likely than White women who were United States citizens to be x-rayed after being frisked or patted down;

(B) Black women who were United States citizens were less than half as likely as White women who were United States citizens to be found carrying contraband; and

(C) in general, the patterns used to select passengers for more intrusive searches resulted in women and minorities being selected at rates that were not consistent with the rates of finding contraband.

(12) A 2005 report of the Bureau of Justice Statistics of the Department of Justice on citizen-police contacts that occurred in 2002, found that, although Whites, Blacks, and Hispanics were stopped by the police at the same rate—

(A) Blacks and Hispanics were much more likely to be arrested than Whites;

(B) Hispanics were much more likely to be ticketed than Blacks or Whites;

(C) Blacks and Hispanics were much more likely to report the use or threatened use of force by a police officer;

(D) Blacks and Hispanics were much more likely to be handcuffed than Whites; and

(E) Blacks and Hispanics were much more likely to have their vehicles searched than Whites.

(13) In some jurisdictions, local law enforcement practices, such as ticket and arrest quotas and similar management practices, may have the unintended effect of encouraging law enforcement agents to engage in racial profiling.

(14) Racial profiling harms individuals subjected to it because they experience fear, anxiety, humiliation, anger, resentment, and cynicism when they are unjustifiably treated as criminal suspects. By discouraging individuals from traveling freely, racial profiling impairs both interstate and intrastate commerce.

(15) Racial profiling damages law enforcement and the criminal justice system as a whole by undermining public confidence and trust in the police, the courts, and the criminal law.

(16) In the wake of the September 11, 2001, terrorist attacks, many Arabs, Muslims, Central and South Asians, and Sikhs, as well as other immigrants and Americans of foreign descent, were treated with generalized suspicion and subjected to searches and seizures based upon religion and national origin, without trustworthy information linking specific individuals to criminal conduct. Such profiling has failed to produce tangible benefits, yet has created a fear and mistrust of law enforcement agencies in these communities.

(17) Racial profiling violates the equal protection clause of the fourteenth amendment to the Constitution of the United States. Using race, ethnicity, religion, or national origin as a proxy for criminal suspicion violates the constitutional requirement that police and other government officials accord to all citizens the equal protection of the law. Batson v. Kentucky, 476 U.S. 79 (1986); Palmore v. Sidoti, 466 U.S. 429 (1984).

(18) Racial profiling is not adequately addressed through suppression motions in criminal cases for 2 reasons. First, the Supreme Court held, in Whren v. United States, 517 U.S. 806 (1996), that the racially discriminatory motive of a police officer in making an otherwise valid traffic stop does not warrant the suppression of evidence under the fourth amendment to the Constitution of the United States. Second, since most stops do not result in the discovery of contraband, there is no criminal prosecution and no evidence to suppress.

(19) A comprehensive national solution is needed to address racial profiling at the Federal, State, and local levels. Federal support is needed to combat racial profiling through specialized training of law enforcement agents, improved management systems, and the acquisition of technology such as in-car video cameras.

(b) PURPOSES.—The purposes of this Act are—

(1) to enforce the constitutional right to equal protection of the laws, pursuant to the fifth amendment and section 5 of the fourteenth amendment to the Constitution of the United States;

(2) to enforce the constitutional right to protection against unreasonable searches and seizures, pursuant to the fourteenth amendment to the Constitution of the United States;

(3) to enforce the constitutional right to interstate travel, pursuant to section 2 of article IV of the Constitution of the United States; and

(4) to regulate interstate commerce, pursuant to clause 3 of section 8 of article I of the Constitution of the United States.

(c) INTENT.—This Act is not intended to and should not impede the ability of Federal, State, and local law enforcement to protect the country and its people from any threat, be it foreign or domestic.

Mr. CORZINE. Mr. President, I rise to in support of the End Racial Profiling Act a bill being introduced today by Senators FEINGOLD, OBAMA and myself. This bill addresses an issue that is critical to the people of my home State of New Jersey and to all Americans.

I start by recognizing two of my colleagues with whom I have been working to address the problem of racial profiling. Senator RUSS FEINGOLD has been a tremendous leader on this issue he held the first Senate hearings on racial profiling in 2001, and he and his staff have worked tirelessly to elevate the importance of this issue as a matter of civil rights. I also want to recognize Senator OBAMA he has been a constant champion of efforts to combat racial profiling. Senator OBAMA took the lead in writing one of the Nation's most innovative pieces of legislation on the collection of racial profiling data when he was in the Illinois State Senate, and he has been equally committed to the issue since joining the U.S. Senate. Both Senators FEINGOLD and OBAMA have worked tirelessly to make the bill we are introducing today a reality.

Racial profiling is anathema to the principles on which our Nation was founded, sowing division within our communities and striking at the heart of our democratic values.

Stopping people on our highways, our streets, and at our borders because of the color of their skin is simply wrong, and it is incompatible with the fundamental American belief in fairness, justice, and equal protection under the law.

Every American is entitled to equal protection under the law. Our Constitution tolerates nothing less, and we should demand nothing less.

There is no equal protection there is no equal justice if law enforcement agencies engage in policies and practices that are premised on a theory that the way to stop crime is to go after minorities on the hunch that they are more likely to be criminals.

Let me add that not only is racial profiling wrong, it is simply not an effective law enforcement tool. There is no evidence that stopping people of color adds up to catching the "bad guys."

In fact, empirical evidence shows that singling out Black motorists or Hispanic motorists for stops and searches doesn't lead to a higher percentage of arrests because minority motorists are no more likely to break the law than white motorists.

What is more, the practice of racial profiling actually undermines public safety, by contributing to the perception in minority neighborhoods that the criminal justice system is unfair, and eroding the trust between communities and the police that is so essential to effective law enforcement.

Nonetheless, racial profiling persists. Unfortunately, the practice is real and widespread throughout the Nation.

A 2005 report of the Department of Justice found that Blacks and Hispanics throughout the Nation were much more likely to be handcuffed and have their cars searched by law enforcement during traffic stops, even though they were less likely to be harboring contraband.

A Government Accountability Office report on the U.S. Customs Service released in March 2000 found that Black, Asian, and Hispanic women were four to nine times more likely than White women to be subjected to x-rays after being frisked or patted down.

But on the basis of the x-ray results, Black women were less than half as likely as White women to be found carrying contraband.

This is law enforcement by hunch. No warrants. No probable cause.

And what is the hunch based on?

Race, ethnicity, national origin, or religion plain and simple. And that is plain wrong.

Now—we know that many law enforcement agencies, including some from my home state, have acknowledged the danger of the practice and have taken steps to combat it. I commend them for their efforts.

That said, it is clear that this is a national problem that requires a Federal response applicable to all.

Our legislation is a strong but measured response to the destructive problem of racial profiling.

First, it defines racial profiling and bans it.

Racial profiling is defined in the bill to include routine or spontaneous investigatory stops based on race, ethnicity, national origin, or religion. This conduct is wrong and must be stopped. The President and the Attorney General have said just that. The legislation would be the first Federal statute to prohibit this practice at the Federal, State, and local level.

To guarantee that the statute does not impede legitimate and responsible policing, the statute is careful to exclude from the ban on racial profiling those cases where there is trustworthy information that links a person of a particular race, ethnicity, national origin, or religion to a particular crime.

Our bill also gives the ban on racial profiling teeth by allowing the Department of Justice or an individual harmed by racial profiling to obtain declaratory or injunctive relief from a court if the Government does not take steps to end racial profiling.

Next, the statute will require the collection of statistical data to measure whether progress is being made. By collecting this data we will get a fair and honest picture of law enforcement at work. And we will provide law enforcement agencies with the information they need to detect problems early on.

Our bill directs the Attorney General to develop standards for data collection and instructs the Attorney General to consult with law enforcement and other stakeholders in developing those standards. It also specifically directs the Attorney General to establish standards for setting benchmarks against which the collected data should be measured so that no data is taken out of context, as some in law enforcement rightly fear. Finally, we will require the Bureau of Justice Statistics in the Department of Justice to analyze these statistics on an annual basis so that the Nation can gauge the success of its efforts to combat this corrosive practice.

Finally, we will encourage a change in law enforcement culture through the use of the carrot and the stick.

First, the carrot: We recognize that law enforcement shouldn't be expected to do this alone. So this bill says that if you do the job right fairly and equitably you are eligible to receive development grants to help pay for the following: Advanced training programs; computer technology to help collect data and statistics; video cameras and recorders for patrol cars; establishing or improving systems for handling complaints alleging ethnic or racial profiling; and establishing management systems to ensure that supervisors are held accountable for the conduct of subordinates.

Further, we will direct the Attorney General to conduct a demonstration project that will give grants to police departments to help them collect racial profiling data and then work with an institution of higher learning to analyze the collect data.

But if law enforcement agencies don't do the job right, there is also the stick. Our bill will require law enforcement agencies to put in place procedures to receive and investigate complaints alleging racial profiling. The bill gives the law enforcement agencies the flexibility and the options to adopt the procedures that best fit the needs of their local communities. Further, the bill permits localities to cooperate with other communities and with the State in which they are located to develop shared procedures to invest racial profiling problems in the community.

If State and local law enforcement agencies refuse to implement procedures to end and prevent profiling, they will be subject to a loss of Federal law enforcement funds.

Let me be clear this bill is not about blaming law enforcement. Most law enforcement officers discharge their duties responsibly. But stopping people based solely on race, ethnicity, national origin, or religion will be outlawed.

We have introduced two bills in the last 5 years to eliminate racial profiling. The President of the United States has condemned racial profiling in his State of the Union address. There is a broad and bipartisan consensus that it is an unfair and destructive practice. And yet we have failed to act.

In the meantime, racial profiling has continued to breed humiliation, anger, resentment, and cynicism throughout this country.

It has weakened respect for the law by everyone, not just those offended.

Simply put it is wrong and we must finally end it. Today we pledge to do just that to define it, to ban it, and to enforce this ban.

By Mr. ROCKEFELLER (for himself and Ms. SNOWE):

S. 2139. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to simplify the earned income tax credit eligibility requirements regarding filing status, presence of children, investment income, and work and immigrant status; to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. ROCKEFELLER. Mr. President, today I am pleased to introduce the Earned Income Tax Credit Simplification Act. This legislation will greatly improve one of our Nation's most important antipoverty programs and streamline one of the most complicated sections of our income tax code. And I am extremely pleased that my good friend from Maine, Senator OLYMPIA SNOWE, has agreed to be an original cosponsor of this bill. I look forward to working with her, as members of the Senate Finance Committee, to enact this important tax simplification proposal.

In 2003, almost 21 million hard-working Americans benefited from the earned income tax credit, including 141,707 in my own State of West Virginia. Many of those serving in our Armed Forces benefit from the EITC. The EITC rewards hard work and helps these families make ends meet. However, the eligibility criteria for claiming the credit are so complicated that many people legitimately entitled to benefit from the credit do not even realize it. And unfortunately, too many erroneous claims occur. The tax credit should not be so complicated that cash-strapped families need the help of an accountant to file their taxes.

The Earned Income Tax Credit Simplification Act would make four important changes to the eligibility requirements of the credit. First, it would simplify the "abandoned spouse" rule so that custodial parents who are separated but not divorced would be able to claim the credit. Second, it would allow a taxpayer living in the same house with a qualifying child but not claiming that child for the EITC benefit to qualify for EITC benefits available to taxpayers without children. Third, the bill would eliminate the qualifying investment income test for EITC claimants. Finally, the bill would make sure that only immigrants who comply with all of the immigration rules would qualify for the EITC, preventing people who are not allowed to work in the United States from claiming the credit.

These are commonsense reforms based on recommendations in the budget submitted to Congress by the Bush administration. I hope that they can be enacted quickly so that taxpayers whom Congress intended to help with the EITC will be able to claim the benefits without unnecessary and intimidating paperwork. I look forward to working with my colleagues to enact this legislation.

BY Mr. HATCH (for himself and Mr. BROWNBACK):

S. 2140. A bill to enhance protection of children from sexual exploitation by strengthening section 2257 of title 18, United States Code, requiring producers of sexually explicit material to keep and permit inspection of records regarding the age of performers, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, joined by my friend from Kansas, Senator BROWNBACK, I am today introducing the Protecting Children from Sexual Exploitation Act of 2005.

This bill will strengthen an important tool for protecting children from the exploitation of child pornography.

Pornography is devastating communities, families, and individual lives.

On November 10, the Senator from Kansas chaired a hearing in the Judiciary Subcommittee on the Constitution titled "Why the Government Should Care About Pornography."

Witnesses at that hearing included authors and researchers documenting the devastation wrought by pornography.

Children are pornography's most vulnerable and most devastated victims.

Abusing children through early exposure to pornography has lifelong effects.

Even worse, however, is the actual use of children to make sexually explicit material.

This is perhaps the worst form of sexual exploitation because the abuse only begins with its production.

Children lack the maturity to choose participation in that activity and to accept its aftermath.

Everyone who intentionally copies, distributes, advertises, purchases, or consumes sexually explicit material involving children should be held responsible as part of the ongoing chain of exploitation.

For this compelling reason, Federal law prohibits using children to produce visual depictions of either actual or simulated sexually explicit conduct.

As an additional deterrent to this abhorrent practice, Federal law also requires those who produce sexually explicit material to keep records regarding the age of performers and to make those records available for inspection.

That recordkeeping statute is found in the United States Code in section 2257 of title 18.

Section 2257 is inadequate for its crucial task and the bill I introduce today strengthens it in four ways.

First, section 2257 defines actual sexually explicit conduct too narrowly, incorporating only four of the five. part definition found right next door in the definitional section 2256.

Our bill makes these definitions consistent.

Second, and more importantly, while Federal law prohibits using children to make depictions of either actual or simulated sexually explicit conduct, section 2257 applies only to those who produce depictions of actual conduct.

Our bill applies the same recordkeeping requirements to those who produce depictions of simulated conduct.

The purpose is obvious.

If you produce sexually explicit material, you have to keep age-related records.

Period.

Third, while section 2257 requires maintaining records and making them available for inspection, it only makes unlawful failure to maintain the records.

This implies that while making these important records available for inspection is a duty, refusing to do so is not a crime.

Our bill corrects that error by explicitly stating that refusal to permit inspection of these records is also a crime.

Eliminating such ambiguity is very important.

Maintaining records is necessary, but not sufficient, to ensure that children are not being exploited.

Because inspection of those records makes the circle of protection complete, we must make crystal clear that refusal to permit inspections is a crime.

Fourth, the definition in section 2257 of what it means to produce sexually explicit material is inadequate.

That definition must be guided by the nature of the harm that flows from this kind of sexual exploitation.

Filming or taking a picture of a child engaged in sexually explicit conduct is certainly sexual exploitation by itself. But the abuse does not end there.

Those whose actions constitute links in the chain of exploitation must be covered by this recordkeeping statute if it is to be an effective tool to protect children.

My friend from Kansas, Senator BROWNBACK, graciously allowed me to participate in the latest hearing in his subcommittee on the effects of pornography.

Witnesses highlighted how new technology can magnify those effects.

While the Internet can be a powerful tool for good, it can also be an insidious tool for evil.

It can compound the sexual exploitation of children by disseminating and commercializing child pornography.

And while we all know how difficult it is for sound public policy to keep pace with developing and changing technology, failing to do so in this area leaves children even more exposed to ongoing victimization and exploitation.

For that reason, our bill provides both a substantive definition of that important term, "produces," and lists five targeted exceptions, five specific categories of those who are not included in this definition.

The definition includes obvious activities such as filming or photographing someone but also activities such as duplicating or reissuing images for commercial distribution.

It also includes managing the sexually explicit content of a computer site.

At the same time, our bill does not include in the definition of the term "produces" activities that do not involve the hiring, managing, or arranging for the performers' participation.

It exempts provision of Web-hosting services when the provider does not manage sexually explicit content.

In strengthening section 2257, the bill we are introducing today meets three important objectives.

First and foremost, this bill will make the recordkeeping statute a more effective tool for protecting children from sexual exploitation.

Second, our bill strengthens the recordkeeping statute while minimizing unintended consequences.

I mentioned the care with which our bill defines key terms such as "produces."

Our bill also places the extension of recordkeeping requirements regarding depictions of simulated material in a separate section 2257A.

This step responded to a legitimate concern by the motion picture industry.

Third, our bill strengthens the recordkeeping statute in ways that make it a more workable and practical tool for the prosecutors who have to use it.

I believe that as the Congress deals with this difficult issue, we must keep all three of these objectives in mind.

Some might want to create a draconian statute that sweeps too broadly.

Others may want to water down the statute in ways that create obstacles for prosecutors and make the statute ineffective.

My bill strengthens this important tool for protecting children without sweeping too broadly and without needlessly hobbling prosecutors.

Finally, let me say just a few things about the process leading up to introduction of this bill today.

Two versions of this bill have been introduced in the other body, most recently last week as title VI of H.R.4472, the Children's Safety and Violent Crime Reduction Act of 2005.

Representatives of the motion picture industry and Internet companies have been working with us to refine this legislation.

I also commend my colleagues in the House, Representative MIKE PENCE and Chairman JIM SENSENBRENNER, for their leadership on this issue.

In addition, the Department of Justice has provided valuable input in this process. I applaud Attorney General Gonzales for making the prosecution of obscenity, child pornography, and other forms of child exploitation a real priority.

I understand that the Attorney General today announced arrests in several States as part of its Innocence Lost initiative against child prostitution.

I want to be very clear here.

Those who produce either actual or simulated sexually explicit material are breaking the law if that material depicts children.

The primary goal of protecting those children from such exploitation requires that all producers of sexually explicit material must keep age-related records, make those records available for inspection, and face criminal penalties if they refuse.

We have taken several concrete steps to respond to legitimate concerns from the motion picture industry and Internet companies.

We have already modified our bill several times and in several ways as a response to our meetings with the Department of Justice and affected parties.

We remain open to making further refinements in this language if it will strengthen the bill.

But that process of compromise must stop if it undermines the primary objective of protecting children from sexual exploitation or begins to make the statute unenforceable or feckless.

I hope that those who are affected by this legislation and have participated in helping us craft this bill will demonstrate their concern for protecting children by supporting this straightforward and commonsense bill.

Again, I want to thank my friend from Kansas for joining me in cosponsoring this bill and for his efforts in this area.

I hope all my colleagues will join us in strengthening this tool for protecting children.

Mr. BROWNBACK. Mr. President, I applaud my colleague from Utah for helping lead the fight against child pornography. This is an issue upon which all Senators can unite, and it is a battle we must not lose.

Pornography is no longer isolated to a small segment of society. It has pervaded our culture. As we learned in a recent hearing I chaired in the Judiciary Subcommittee on the Constitution, Civil Rights and Property Rights, pornography has infiltrated homes and families and is having devastating effects. According to recent reports, 1 in 5 children between the ages of 10 and 17 have received a sexual solicitation over the Internet, and 9 out of 10 children between the ages of 8 and 16 who have Internet access have viewed porn Web sites, usually in the course of looking up information for homework.

Perhaps the ugliest aspect of the pornography epidemic is child pornography. Children as young as 5 years old are being used for profit in this fast-growing industry. We have a duty to protect the weakest members of our society from exploitation and abuse. I believe this bill is the first step in that fight.

First, this bill will expand record-keeping requirements to those who produce soft-core, or simulated, pornography. Current law only requires that records be kept by producers of hardcore, or actual, pornography. Under this language, producers will now be required to verify the ages of their actors and keep records of such information, regardless of whether the material they produce contains actual sexual activity or only a simulation of such activity. Further, this bill will require producers of such materials to disclose such records to the Attorney General for inspection. It will make refusal to permit inspection of such records a crime. This will be effective not only as a tool in prosecutions as a means of deterrence. Producers will be less likely to use child actors if they know they may be required to disclose the ages of their actors.

Today, recordkeeping requirements apply only to "actual" sexual conduct, leaving a loophole for soft-core pornography. Such material is no less damaging to children than hardcore pornography and recordkeeping and disclosure requirements must apply to this material as well. This bill will close the current loophole.

Again, I appreciate the leadership of Senator HATCH, and I hope my colleagues will join us passing this legislation to protect children from victimization and abuse.

S. RES. 338

Whereas the basic liberties that all Americans enjoy are secured through the valor and dedication of the members of the Armed Forces of the United States;

Whereas over 1,000,000 members of the Armed Forces are currently serving on active duty in over 120 countries worldwide;

Whereas the United States initiated Operation Enduring Freedom on October 19, 2001, and as of December 15, 2005, 322 members of the Armed Forces have died and 652 have been wounded in that Operation;

Whereas the United States initiated Operation Iraqi Freedom on March 22, 2003, and as of December 15, 2005, 2,153 members of the Armed Forces have died and 15,568 have been wounded in that Operation;

Whereas, in the words of President Franklin D. Roosevelt, each of America’s fallen “stands in the unbroken line of patriots who have dared to die that freedom might live, and grow, and increase its blessings. Freedom lives, and through it, he lives—in a way that humbles the undertakings of most men”;

Whereas all Americans owe the fallen, the wounded, and their families a debt that can never be fully repaid; and

Whereas the sacrifices of members of the Armed Forces are often invoked in general but the fallen are seldom recognized and honored individually: Now, therefore, be it

SENATE RESOLUTION 339—URGING THE GOVERNMENT OF THE RUSSIAN FEDERATION TO WITHDRAW THE FIRST DRAFT OF THE PROPOSED LEGISLATION AS PASSED IN ITS FIRST READING IN THE STATE DUMA THAT WOULD HAVE THE EFFECT OF SEVERELY RESTRICTING THE ESTABLISHMENT, OPERATIONS, AND ACTIVITIES OF DOMESTIC, INTERNATIONAL, AND FOREIGN NONGOVERNMENTAL ORGANIZATIONS IN THE RUSSIAN FEDERATION, OR TO MODIFY THE PROPOSED LEGISLATION TO ENTIRELY REMOVE THESE RESTRICTIONS

Mr. MCCAIN (for himself, Mr. BIDEN, Mr. LIEBERMAN, and Mr. DURBIN) submitted the following resolution; which was considered and agreed to:

S. RES. 339

Whereas Russian Federation President Putin has stated that "modern Russia's greatest achievement is the democratic process (and) the achievements of our civil society";

Whereas the unobstructed establishment and free and autonomous operations and activities of nongovernmental organizations and a robust civil society free from excessive government control are central and indispensable elements of a democratic society;

Whereas the free and autonomous operations of nongovernmental organizations in any society necessarily encompass activities, including political activities, that may be contrary to government policies;

Whereas domestic, international, and foreign nongovernmental organizations are crucial in assisting the Russian Federation and the Russian people in tackling the many challenges they face, including in such areas as education, infectious diseases, and the establishment of a flourishing democracy;

Whereas the Government of the Russian Federation has proposed legislation that would have the effect of severely restricting the establishment, operations, and activities of domestic, international, and foreign nongovernmental organizations in the Russian Federation, including erecting unprecedented barriers to foreign assistance;

Whereas the State Duma of the Russian Federation is considering the first draft of such legislation;

Whereas the restrictions in the first draft of this legislation would impose disabling restraints on the establishment, operations, and activities of nongovernmental organizations and on civil society throughout the Russian Federation, regardless of the stated intent of the Government of the Russian Federation;

Whereas the stated concerns of the Government of the Russian Federation regarding the use of nongovernmental organizations by foreign interests and intelligence agencies to undermine the Government of the Russian Federation and the security of the Russian Federation as a whole can be fully addressed without imposing disabling restraints on nongovernmental organizations and on civil society;

Whereas there is active debate underway in the Russian Federation over concerns regarding such restrictions on nongovernmental organizations;

Whereas the State Duma and the Federation Council of the Federal Assembly play a central role in the system of checks and balances that are prerequisites for a democracy;

Whereas the first draft of the proposed legislation has already passed its first reading in the State Duma;

Whereas President Putin has indicated his desire for changes in the first draft that would "correspond more closely to the principles according to which civil society functions"; and

Whereas Russia's destiny and the interests of her people lie in her assumption of her rightful place as a full and equal member of the international community of democracies: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate, That the Senate—

(1) urges the Government of the Russian Federation to withdraw the first draft of the proposed legislation that would have the effect of severely restricting the establishment, operations, and activities of domestic, international, and foreign nongovernmental organizations in the Russian Federation, or to modify the proposed legislation to entirely remove these restrictions; and

(2) in the event that the first draft of the proposed legislation is not withdrawn, urges the State Duma and the Federation Council of the Federal Assembly to modify the legislation to ensure the unobstructed establishment and free and autonomous operations and activities of such nongovernmental organizations in accordance with the practices universally adopted by democracies, including the provisions regarding foreign assistance.

SENATE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION 72—REQUESTING THE PRESIDENT TO ISSUE A PROCLAMATION ANNUALLY CALLING UPON THE PEOPLE OF THE UNITED STATES TO OBSERVE GLOBAL FAMILY DAY, ONE DAY OF PEACE AND SHARING, AND FOR OTHER PURPOSES

Mr. INOUE (for himself, Mr. COLEMAN, and Mr. KENNEDY) submitted the following concurrent resolution; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary:

S. CON. RES. 72

Whereas, in the year 2005, the people of the world suffered many calamitous events, including devastation from tsunami, terror attacks, war, famine, genocide, hurricanes, earthquakes, political and religious conflict, disease, poverty, and rioting, all necessitating global cooperation, compassion, and unity previously unprecedented among diverse cultures, faiths, and economic classes;

Whereas grave global challenges in the year 2006 may require cooperation and innovative problem solving among citizens and nations on an even greater scale;

Whereas, on December 15, 2000, Congress adopted Senate Concurrent Resolution 138, expressing the sense of Congress that the President of the United States should issue a proclamation each year calling upon the people of the United States and interested organizations to observe an international day of peace and sharing at the beginning of each year;

Whereas, in 2001, the United Nations General Assembly adopted Resolution 56/2, which invited "Member States, intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations and all the peoples of the world to celebrate One Day in Peace, 1 January 2002, and every year thereafter";

Whereas many foreign heads of state have recognized the importance of establishing Global Family Day, a special day of international unity, peace, and sharing, on the first day of each year;

Whereas Congress desires to express and demonstrate its appreciation to the citizens of the more than 100 countries who offered aid to United States hurricane victims, to make tangible efforts to reverse the growing mistrust of the United States, and to improve relations with others; and

Whereas family is the basic structure of humanity, and we must all look to the stability and love within our individual families to create stability in the global community: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That Congress urgently requests the following:

(1) That the President issue a proclamation annually calling upon the people of the United States to observe Global Family Day, One Day of Peace and Sharing, a day which is dedicated—

(A) to eradicating violence, hunger, poverty, and suffering; and

(B) to establishing greater trust and fellowship among peace-loving nations and families everywhere.

(2) That the President invite former Presidents of the United States, Nobel laureates, and other notables, including business, labor, faith, and civic leaders of the United States, to join the President in promoting appropriate activities for the people of the United States and in extending appropriate greetings from the families of the United States to families in the rest of the world.

Mr. INOUE. Mr. President, I rise to submit a Senate Concurrent Resolution requesting the President to issue a proclamation annually calling upon the people of the United States to observe Global Family Day, One Day of Peace and Sharing, on the first of each January. This measure is co-sponsored by Mr. COLEMAN and Mr. KENNEDY.

The observance is dedicated to eradicating violence, hunger, poverty and suffering, and to establish greater trust and fellowship among nations and families everywhere. Global Family Day encourages families to reach out to each other on the first of January of each year. It is a day for sharing the idea and condition of peace, and the observance can take a concrete form such as sharing a meal or helping the needy.

The idea of Global Family Day originates from young supporters. In 1999, ninety nine children from Hine Middle School in the District of Columbia visited Capitol Hill, asking Congress to dedicate one day each year to a day of peace and sharing. In the following year, the footsteps of these intrepid young thinkers were followed by children from Brent Elementary School, also from the District of Columbia. Children from Stuart-Hobson Middle School also visited members of Congress on Capitol Hill.

The 106th Congress agreed with them, and in the year 2000, adopted a resolution similar to the one I am submitting today. However, with the onrush of events after the tragedy of September 11, 2001, a proclamation was not issued. Thus, there was little public knowledge that we have this important tool for peace, despite the international support from the United Nations General Assembly. We can remedy that today by showing our support for Global Family Day.

Many Americans are troubled by our deteriorating image in the world, by the dangers of terrorism and by the suffering of others, both at home and abroad. Yet they feel helpless to do anything about it. Global Family Day offers a potential solution. The observance of Global Family Day can lead to greater understanding among faith groups, people of different races and economic classes. Global Family Day provides a way in which every man, woman and child in the United States can help reduce suffering at home, repair our damaged image abroad, and help us remember that in the end, all peoples belong to the same family.

SENATE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION 73—URGING THE PRESIDENT TO ISSUE A PROCLAMATION FOR THE OBSERVANCE OF AN AMERICAN JEWISH HISTORY MONTH

Mr. SPECTER submitted the following concurrent resolution; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary:

S. CON. RES. 73

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That Congress urges the President to issue each year a proclama- tion calling on State and local governments and the people of the United States to observe an American Jewish History Month with appropriate programs, ceremonies, and activities.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, this year marked the 350th anniversary of Jewish life in America. The occasion has been commemorated with festivities and celebrations across the entire country. As this special year draws to a close, I am submitting a resolution urging the President to establish permanent recognition of the contributions the Jewish culture has made to life in America by annually issuing a proclamation for the observance of an American Jewish History Month.

Each year, we remember the achievements and contributions made by African-Americans and women to our Nation's development by designating February as African American History Month and March as Women's History Month. Similarly, Jewish American History Month would celebrate the legacy of the American Jewish experience and observe the many contributions Jewish-Americans have made in the areas of medicine, the arts, science, and technology.

American society is comprised of many cultures. Americans are proud of our history of acceptance and understanding. By establishing a Jewish American History Month, we will present an additional opportunity to raise our Nation's cultural awareness and celebrate our diversity.

An identical resolution was introduced in the House by Congresswoman WASSERMAN SCHULTZ, where it was co-sponsored by 250 Members and passed unanimously.

I hope that the Senate will join our colleagues in the House by agreeing to this resolution, urging the President to annually issue a proclamation for the observance of an American Jewish History Month.

TITLE II—IMPROVING SERVICES FOR VICTIMS OF DOMESTIC VIOLENCE, DATING VIOLENCE, SEXUAL ASSAULT, AND STALKING

SEC. 201. FINDINGS.

Congress finds the following:

(1) Nearly 1/3 of American women report physical or sexual abuse by a husband or boyfriend at some point in their lives.

(2) According to the National Crime Victimization Survey, 248,000 Americans 12 years of age and older were raped or sexually assaulted in 2002.

(3) Rape and sexual assault in the United States is estimated to cost $127,000,000,000 per year, including—

- (A) lost productivity;
- (B) medical and mental health care;
- (C) police and fire services;
- (D) social services;
- (E) loss of and damage to property; and
- (F) reduced quality of life.

(4) Nonreporting of sexual assault in rural areas is a particular problem because of the high rate of nonstranger sexual assault.

(5) Geographic isolation often compounds the problems facing sexual assault victims. The lack of anonymity and accessible support services can limit opportunities for justice for victims.

(6) Domestic elder abuse is primarily family abuse. The National Elder Abuse Incidence Study found that the perpetrator was a family member in 90 percent of cases.

(7) Barriers for older victims leaving abusive relationships include—

- (A) the inability to support themselves;
- (B) poor health that increases their dependence on the abuser;
- (C) fear of being placed in a nursing home; and
- (D) ineffective responses by domestic abuse programs and law enforcement.

(8) Disabled women comprise another vulnerable population with unmet needs. Women with disabilities are more likely to be the victims of abuse and violence than women without disabilities because of their increased physical, economic, social, or psychological dependence on others.

(9) Many women with disabilities also fail to report the abuse, since they are dependent on their abusers and fear being abandoned or institutionalized.

(10) Of the 598 battered women's programs surveyed—

(A) only 35 percent of these programs offered disability awareness training for their staff; and

(B) only 16 percent dedicated a staff member to provide services to women with disabilities.

(11) Problems of domestic violence are exacerbated for immigrants when spouses control the immigration status of their family members, and abusers use threats of refusal to file immigration papers and threats to deport spouses and children as powerful tools to prevent battered immigrant women from seeking help, trapping battered immigrant women in violent homes because of fear of deportation.

(12) Battered immigrant women who attempt to flee abusive relationships may not have access to bilingual shelters or bilingual professionals, and face restrictions on public or financial assistance. They may also lack assistance of a certified interpreter in court, when reporting complaints to the police or a 9-1-1 operator, or even in acquiring information about their rights and the legal system.

(13) More than 500 men and women call the National Domestic Violence Hotline every day to get immediate, informed, and confidential assistance to help deal with family violence.

(14) The National Domestic Violence Hotline service is available, toll-free, 24 hours a day and 7 days a week, with bilingual staff, access to translators in 150 languages, and a TTY line for the hearing-impaired.

(15) With access to over 5,000 shelters and service providers across the United States, Puerto Rico, and the United States Virgin Islands, the National Domestic Violence Hotline provides crisis intervention and immediately connects callers with sources of help in their local community.

(16) Approximately 60 percent of the callers indicate that calling the Hotline is their first attempt to address a domestic violence situation and that they have not called the police or any other support services.

(17) Between 2000 and 2003, there was a 27 percent increase in call volume at the National Domestic Violence Hotline.

(18) Improving technology infrastructure at the National Domestic Violence Hotline and training advocates, volunteers, and other staff on upgraded technology will drastically increase the Hotline's ability to answer more calls quickly and effectively.

TITLE III—SERVICES, PROTECTION, AND JUSTICE FOR YOUNG VICTIMS OF VIOLENCE

SEC. 301. FINDINGS.

Congress finds the following:

(1) Youth, under the age of 18, account for 67 percent of all sexual assault victimizations reported to law enforcement officials.

(2) The Department of Justice consistently finds that young women between the ages of 16 and 24 experience the highest rate of non-fatal intimate partner violence.

(3) In 1 year, over 4,000 incidents of rape or sexual assault occurred in public schools across the country.

(4) Young people experience particular obstacles to seeking help. They often do not have access to money, transportation, or shelter services. They must overcome issues such as distrust of adults, lack of knowledge about available resources, or pressure from peers and parents.

(5) A needs assessment on teen relationship abuse for the State of California, funded by the California Department of Health Services, identified a desire for confidentiality and confusion about the law as 2 of the most significant barriers to young victims of domestic and dating violence seeking help.

(6) Only one State specifically allows for minors to petition the court for protection orders.

(7) Many youth are involved in dating relationships, and these relationships can include the same kind of domestic violence and dating violence seen in the adult population. In fact, more than 40 percent of all incidents of domestic violence involve people who are not married.

(8) 40 percent of girls ages 14 to 17 report knowing someone their age who has been hit or beaten by a boyfriend, and 13 percent of college women report being stalked.

(9) Of college women who said they had been the victims of rape or attempted rape, 12.8 percent of completed rapes, 35 percent of attempted rapes, and 22.9 percent of threatened rapes took place on a date. Almost 60 percent of the completed rapes that occurred on campus took place in the victim's residence.

(10) According to a 3-year study of student-athletes at 10 Division I universities, male athletes made up only 3.3 percent of the general male university population, but they accounted for 19 percent of the students reported for sexual assault and 35 percent of domestic violence perpetrators.

“(2) studies suggest that as many as 10,000,000 children witness domestic violence every year;

“(5) a child's exposure to domestic violence seems to pose the greatest independent risk for being the victim of any act of partner violence as an adult;

“(6) children exposed to domestic violence are more likely to believe that using violence is an effective means of getting one's needs met and managing conflict in close relationships;

“(7) children exposed to abusive parenting, harsh or erratic discipline, or domestic violence are at increased risk for juvenile crime; and

“(8) in a national survey of more than 6,000 American families, 50 percent of men who frequently assaulted their wives also frequently abused their children.

TITLE V—STRENGTHENING THE HEALTHCARE SYSTEM'S RESPONSE TO DOMESTIC VIOLENCE, DATING VIOLENCE, SEXUAL ASSAULT, AND STALKING

SEC. 501. FINDINGS.

Congress makes the following findings:

(1) The health-related costs of intimate partner violence in the United States exceed $5,800,000,000 annually.

(2) Thirty-seven percent of all women who sought care in hospital emergency rooms for violence-related injuries were injured by a current or former spouse, boyfriend, or girlfriend.

(3) In addition to injuries sustained during violent episodes, physical and psychological abuse is linked to a number of adverse physical and mental health effects. Women who have been abused are much more likely to suffer from chronic pain, diabetes, depression, unintended pregnancies, substance abuse and sexually transmitted infections, including HIV/AIDS.

(4) Health plans spend an average of $1,775 more a year on abused women than on general enrollees.

(5) Each year about 324,000 pregnant women in the United States are battered by the men in their lives. This battering leads to complications of pregnancy, including low weight gain, anemia, infections, and first and second trimester bleeding.

(6) Pregnant and recently pregnant women are more likely to be victims of homicide than to die of any other pregnancy-related cause, and evidence exists that a significant proportion of all female homicide victims are killed by their intimate partners.

(7) Children who witness domestic violence are more likely to exhibit behavioral and physical health problems including depression, anxiety, and violence towards peers. They are also more likely to attempt suicide, abuse drugs and alcohol, run away from home, engage in teenage prostitution, and commit sexual assault crimes.

(8) Recent research suggests that women experiencing domestic violence significantly increase their safety-promoting behaviors over the short- and long-term when health care providers screen for, identify, and provide followup care and information to address the violence.

(9) Currently, only about 10 percent of primary care physicians routinely screen for intimate partner abuse during new patient visits and 9 percent routinely screen for intimate partner abuse during periodic check-ups.

(10) Recent clinical studies have proven the effectiveness of a 2-minute screening for early detection of abuse of pregnant women. Additional longitudinal studies have tested a 10-minute intervention that was proven highly effective in increasing the safety of pregnant abused women. Comparable research does not yet exist to support the effectiveness of screening men.

(11) Seventy to 81 percent of the patients studied reported that they would like their healthcare providers to ask them privately about intimate partner violence.

SEC. 502. PURPOSE.

It is the purpose of this title to improve the health care system's response to domestic violence, dating violence, sexual assault, and stalking through the training and education of health care providers, developing comprehensive public health responses to violence against women and children, increasing the number of women properly screened, identified, and treated for lifetime exposure to violence, and expanding research on effective interventions in the health care setting.

TITLE VI—HOUSING OPPORTUNITIES AND SAFETY FOR BATTERED WOMEN AND CHILDREN

SEC. 601. ADDRESSING THE HOUSING NEEDS OF VICTIMS OF DOMESTIC VIOLENCE, DATING VIOLENCE, SEXUAL ASSAULT, AND STALKING.

The Violence Against Women Act of 1994 (42 U.S.C. 13701 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end the following:

“Subtitle N—Addressing the Housing Needs of Victims of Domestic Violence, Dating Violence, Sexual Assault, and Stalking

“SEC. 41401. FINDINGS.

“Congress finds that:

“(1) There is a strong link between domestic violence and homelessness. Among cities surveyed, 44 percent identified domestic violence as a primary cause of homelessness.

“(2) Ninety-two percent of homeless women have experienced severe physical or sexual abuse at some point in their lives. Of all homeless women and children, 60 percent had been abused by age 12, and 63 percent have been victims of intimate partner violence as adults.

“(3) Women and families across the country are being discriminated against, denied access to, and even evicted from public and subsidized housing because of their status as victims of domestic violence.

“(4) A recent survey of legal service providers around the country found that these providers have responded to almost 150 documented eviction cases in the last year alone where the tenant was evicted because of the domestic violence crimes committed against her. In addition, nearly 100 clients were denied housing because of their status as victims of domestic violence.

“(5) Women who leave their abusers frequently lack adequate emergency shelter options. The lack of adequate emergency options for victims presents a serious threat to their safety and the safety of their children. Requests for emergency shelter by homeless women with children increased by 78 percent of United States cities surveyed in 2004. In the same year, 32 percent of the requests for shelter by homeless families went unmet due to the lack of available emergency shelter beds.

“(6) The average stay at an emergency shelter is 60 days, while the average length of time it takes a homeless family to secure housing is 6 to 10 months.

“(7) Victims of domestic violence often return to abusive partners because they cannot find long-term housing.

“(8) There are not enough Federal housing rent vouchers available to accommodate the number of people in need of long-term housing. Some people remain on the waiting list for Federal housing rent vouchers for years, while some lists are closed.

“(9) Transitional housing resources and services provide an essential continuum between emergency shelter provision and independent living. A majority of women in transitional housing programs stated that had these programs not existed, they would have likely gone back to abusive partners.

“(10) Because abusers frequently manipulate finances in an effort to control their partners, victims often lack steady income, credit history, landlord references, and a current address, all of which are necessary to obtain long-term permanent housing.

“(11) Victims of domestic violence in rural areas face additional barriers, challenges, and unique circumstances, such as geographical isolation, poverty, lack of public transportation systems, shortages of health care providers, under-insurance or lack of health insurance, difficulty ensuring confidentiality in small communities, and decreased access to many resources (such as advanced education, job opportunities, and adequate childcare).

“(12) Congress and the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development have recognized in recent years that families experiencing domestic violence have unique needs that should be addressed by those administering the Federal housing programs.

“SEC. 41402. PURPOSE.

“The purpose of this subtitle is to reduce domestic violence, dating violence, sexual assault, and stalking, and to prevent homelessness by—

“(1) protecting the safety of victims of domestic violence, dating violence, sexual assault, and stalking who reside in homeless shelters, public housing, assisted housing, tribally designated housing, or other emergency, transitional, permanent, or affordable housing, and ensuring that such victims have meaningful access to the criminal justice system without jeopardizing such housing;

“(2) creating long-term housing solutions that develop communities and provide sustainable living solutions for victims of domestic violence, dating violence, sexual assault, and stalking;

“(3) building collaborations among victim service providers, homeless service providers, housing providers, and housing agencies to provide appropriate services, interventions, and training to address the housing needs of victims of domestic violence, dating violence, sexual assault, and stalking; and

“(a) ALLOCATION AMONG STATES.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—Of the total amount appropriated for this subpart, the Attorney General shall, except as provided in paragraph (2), allocate—

“(A) 50 percent of such remaining amount to each State in amounts that bear the same ratio of—

“(i) the total population of a State to—

“(ii) the total population of the United States; and

“(B) 50 percent of such remaining amount to each State in amounts that bear the same ratio of—

“(i) the average annual number of part 1 violent crimes of the Uniform Crime Reports of the Federal Bureau of Investigation reported by such State for the three most recent years reported by such State to—

“(ii) the average annual number of such crimes reported by all States for such years.

“(2) MINIMUM ALLOCATION.—If carrying out paragraph (1) would result in any State receiving an allocation less than 0.25 percent of the total amount (in this paragraph referred to as a ‘minimum allocation State’), then paragraph (1), as so carried out, shall not apply, and the Attorney General shall instead—

“(A) allocate 0.25 percent of the total amount to each State; and

“(B) using the amount remaining after carrying out subparagraph (A), carry out paragraph (1) in a manner that excludes each minimum allocation State, including the population of and the crimes reported by such State.

“(b) ALLOCATION BETWEEN STATES AND UNITS OF LOCAL GOVERNMENT.—Of the amounts allocated under subsection (a)—

“(1) 60 percent shall be for direct grants to States, to be allocated under subsection (c); and

“(2) 40 percent shall be for grants to be allocated under subsection (d).

“(c) ALLOCATION FOR STATE GOVERNMENTS.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—Of the amounts allocated under subsection (b)(1), each State may retain for the purposes described in section 501 an amount that bears the same ratio of—

“(A) total expenditures on criminal justice by the State government in the most recently completed fiscal year to—

“(B) the total expenditure on criminal justice by the State government and units of local government within the State in such year.

“(2) REMAINING AMOUNTS.—Except as provided in subsection (e)(1), any amounts remaining after the allocation required by paragraph (1) shall be made available to units of local government by the State for the purposes described in section 501.

“(d) ALLOCATIONS TO LOCAL GOVERNMENTS.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—Of the amounts allocated under subsection (b)(2), grants for the purposes described in section 501 shall be made directly to units of local government within each State in accordance with this subsection, subject to subsection (e).

“(2) ALLOCATION.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—From the amounts referred to in paragraph (1) with respect to a State (in this subsection referred to as the ‘local amount’), the Attorney General shall allocate to each unit of local government an amount which bears the same ratio to such share as the average annual number of part 1 violent crimes reported by such unit to the Federal Bureau of Investigation for the 3 most recent calendar years for which such data is available bears to the number of part 1 violent crimes reported by all units of local government in the State in which the unit is located to the Federal Bureau of Investigation for such years.

“(B) TRANSITIONAL RULE.—Notwithstanding subparagraph (A), for fiscal years 2006, 2007, and 2008, the Attorney General shall allocate the local amount to units of local government in the same manner that, under the Local Government Law Enforcement Block Grants program in effect immediately before the date of the enactment of this section, the reserved amount was allocated among reporting and nonreporting units of local government.

“(3) ANNEXED UNITS.—If a unit of local government in the State has been annexed since the date of the collection of the data used by the Attorney General in making allocations pursuant to this section, the Attorney General shall pay the amount that would have been allocated to such unit of local government to the unit of local government that annexed it.

“(4) RESOLUTION OF DISPARATE ALLOCATIONS.—(A) Notwithstanding any other provision of this subpart, if—

“(i) the Attorney General certifies that a unit of local government bears more than 50 percent of the costs of prosecution or incarceration that arise with respect to part 1 violent crimes reported by a specified geographically constituent unit of local government; and

“(ii) but for this paragraph, the amount of funds allocated under this section to—

“(I) any one such specified geographically constituent unit of local government exceeds 150 percent of the amount allocated to the unit of local government certified pursuant to clause (i); or

“(II) more than one such specified geographically constituent unit of local government exceeds 400 percent of the amount allocated to the unit of local government certified pursuant to clause (i), then in order to qualify for payment under this subsection, the unit of local government certified pursuant to clause (i), together with any such specified geographically constituent units of local government described in clause (ii), shall submit to the Attorney General a joint application for the aggregate of funds allocated to such units of local government. Such application shall specify the amount of such funds that are to be distributed to each of the units of local government and the purposes for which such funds are to be used. The units of local government involved may establish a joint local advisory board for the purposes of carrying out this paragraph.

“(B) In this paragraph, the term ‘geographically constituent unit of local government’ means a unit of local government that has jurisdiction over areas located within the boundaries of an area over which a unit of local government certified pursuant to clause (i) has jurisdiction.

“(e) LIMITATION ON ALLOCATIONS TO UNITS OF LOCAL GOVERNMENT.—

“(1) MAXIMUM ALLOCATION.—No unit of local government shall receive a total allocation under this section that exceeds such unit’s total expenditures on criminal justice services for the most recently completed fiscal year for which data are available. Any amount in excess of such total expenditures shall be allocated proportionally among units of local government whose allocations under this section do not exceed their total expenditures on such services.

“(2) ALLOCATIONS UNDER $10,000.—If the allocation under this section to a unit of local government is less than $10,000 for any fiscal year, the direct grant to the State under subsection (c) shall be increased by the amount of such allocation, to be distributed (for the purposes described in section 501) among State police departments that provide criminal justice services to units of local government and units of local government whose allocation under this section is less than $10,000.

“(3) NON-REPORTING UNITS.—No allocation under this section shall be made to a unit of local government that has not reported at least three years of data on part 1 violent crimes of the Uniform Crime Reports to the Federal Bureau of Investigation within the immediately preceding 10 years.

“(f) FUNDS NOT USED BY THE STATE.—If the Attorney General determines, on the basis of information available during any grant period, that any allocation (or portion thereof) under this section to a State for such grant period will not be required, or that a State will be unable to qualify or receive funds under this subpart, or that a State chooses not to participate in the program established under this subpart, then such State’s allocation (or portion thereof) shall be awarded by the Attorney General to units of local government, or combinations thereof, within such State, giving priority to those jurisdictions with the highest annual number of part 1 violent crimes of the Uniform Crime Reports reported by the unit of local government to the Federal Bureau of Investigation for the three most recent calendar years for which such data are available.

“(g) SPECIAL RULES FOR PUERTO RICO.—

“(1) ALL FUNDS SET ASIDE FOR COMMONWEALTH GOVERNMENT.—Notwithstanding any other provision of this subpart, the amounts allocated under subsection (a) to Puerto Rico, 100 percent shall be for direct grants to the Commonwealth government of Puerto Rico.

“(2) NO LOCAL ALLOCATIONS.—Subsections (c) and (d) shall not apply to Puerto Rico.

“(h) UNITS OF LOCAL GOVERNMENT IN LOUISIANA.—In carrying out this section with respect to the State of Louisiana, the term ‘unit of local government’ means a district attorney or a parish sheriff.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, we will be finishing tonight. I say that because we will be leaving the floor tonight, but there is a lot of work going on here in the Nation’s Capital as we try to bring to closure the Nation’s business for this first session. So a lot of work is going on—productive work.

All of our colleagues are wondering when they will be able to leave and go back to their States. The Democratic leader and I were talking about that. As soon as we have some schedule, we will let our colleagues know.

I will have more to say on the schedule shortly.

STEM CELL THERAPEUTIC AND RESEARCH ACT of 2005

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate now proceed to the immediate consideration of Calendar No. 256, H.R. 2520, the cord blood stem cell bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the bill by title.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (H.R. 2520) to provide for the collection and maintenance of human cord blood stem cells for the treatment of patients and research, and to amend the Public Health Service Act to authorize the C.W. Bill Young Cell Transplantation Program.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment at the desk be agreed to, the bill, as amended, be read a third time and passed, the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table, and that any statements relating to the bill be printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment (No. 2688) was agreed to.

(The amendment is printed in today’s RECORD under “Text of Amendments.”)

The bill (H.R. 2520), as amended, was read the third time and passed.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, this bill, the Stem Cell Therapeutic and Research Act of 2005, is a hugely important bill that is now passed and, once signed by the President, will save lives.

There is amazing, remarkable work with these cord blood transplants. Cord blood is basically blood cells that are gathered from the placenta after birth.

The power of these cells is truly remarkable, as we treat diseases such as leukemia, sickle cell anemia, and a range of very rare genetic disorders.

This bill establishes a registry of about 150,000 units initially all over the country that people will be able to access instantaneously in order to have this tissue that will bring, literally, lifesaving therapy to individuals who are currently waiting for transplants. So it is with a great deal of pride that we pass this particular bill in the Senate.

TERRORISM RISK INSURANCE ACT OF 2005

Mr. FRIST. I ask unanimous consent the Chair now lay before the Senate the House message to accompany S. 467, a bill to extend the applicability of the Terrorism Risk Insurance Act of 2002.

The Presiding Officer laid before the Senate the following message from the House of Representatives:

Resolved that the bill from the Senate S. 467 entitled "An Act to extend the applicability of the Terrorism Risk Insurance Act of 2002," do pass with an amendment.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, make a few remarks about final passage of the Terrorism Risk Insurance Extension Act of 2005. Let me start by thanking Senators SARBANES, DODD, SHELBY and BENNETT for their tireless effort in the last several months to pass this critical piece of legislation. These Senators worked through significant differences on the substance of this bill and ultimately reached a compromise with the House that extends the basic structure of this important program for another 2 years, and I commend them for those efforts.

The Terrorism Risk Insurance Act, commonly referred to as TRIA, has proven to be an effective program that has made terrorism risk insurance available to commercial propertyholders and has provided businesses meaningful access to coverage in a post-9/11 world. The program has made sure that the American economy and markets function in the face of a still-present threat of a terrorist attack. In my home State of Nevada, large construction projects and jobs were threatened because of uncertainty in the terrorism insurance market created by TRIA's imminent expiration. Extending TRIA will eliminate that uncertainty and provide an economic backstop in the event of another terrorist attack in this country.

Our Nation's economy will be more stable now that TRIA will be extended, but I remind my colleagues that this legislation only extends the program through the end of 2007. Fortunately, the legislation mandates that the President's Working Group on Financial Markets consult with other stakeholders and come up with an analysis of the long-term availability and affordability of terrorism risk insurance. I look forward to future discussions and continued work on crafting a permanent solution to these problems.

Mr. SARBANES. Mr. President, I join my colleagues in support of the Terrorism Risk Insurance Extension Act of 2005. This legislation represents a bipartisan, bi-cameral compromise to extend the Terrorism Risk Insurance Act of 2002 for 2 years, through December 31, 2007. I want to take this opportunity to congratulate my colleagues, as it is through the hard work of Banking Committee Chairman SHELBY and Senators DODD and BENNETT, along with the House negotiators, led by Financial Services Committee Chairman OXLEY and ranking member FRANK, that we have been able to work out this compromise and ensure that TRIA continues.

As I said when the Senate first considered a TRIA extension bill in November of this year, the original TRIA was designed to address the adverse impact on the terrorism insurance marketplace of the sudden lack of terrorism reinsurance after the September 11th attacks. Reinsurance is a mechanism by which insurance companies spread their own risks, allowing them to write more policies; without it, insurers' capacity to offer coverage for losses due to terrorism shrank considerably. By all accounts, the federal backstop provided by TRIA achieved its goal of making terrorism insurance coverage available and affordable once again. The Treasury Department reported this summer, "TRIA was effective in terms of the purposes it was designed to achieve. TRIA provided a transitional period during which insurers had enhanced financial capacity to write terrorism risk insurance coverage. . . . More generally, TRIA provided an adjustment period allowing both insurers and policyholders to adjust to the post-September 11th view of terrorism risk."

However, after the Treasury Department released its report, serious disagreements emerged as to what would be the most efficient, effective, and equitable way to assure the continued availability of terrorism insurance. This is an issue that deserves careful analysis, which is why this extension bill contains a requirement for a study by the President's Working Group on Financial Markets on the long-term availability and affordability of terrorism risk insurance. I hope that this requirement will result in a thorough examination of the issues and will include input from all stakeholders, which will help us answer the question of how to insure against terrorism over the long-term.

To allow time for that examination to take place, this compromise legislation continues the TRIA program for 2 additional years, with certain modifications, which I will briefly summarize.

Following the model of the extension bill passed by the Senate in November of this year, this legislation narrows the scope of the TRIA program, further targeting the program toward the types of terrorism insurance that are the most difficult to provide. Under the terms of the extension, the federal backstop will no longer be available for insurance policies covering commercial automobiles, professional liability, burglary and theft, farm owners, multiple peril, and surety.

Just as the original TRIA did, this extension places more of the risk on the insurance industry, and correspondingly less on the Federal Government, in each year. For example, in 2005, under the current program, the amount of terrorism losses that an insurer must cover before federal assistance becomes available is 15 percent of the premiums collected by that insurer in lines covered by the TRIA program. Under this extension, this "insurance company deductible" will rise to 17.5 percent of premiums in 2006, and 20 percent of premiums in 2007. Moreover, the amount that insurers must pay above their deductible also increases, rising from 10 percent of losses in 2006, to 15 percent of losses in 2007.

In addition to the individual insurance companies' deductible, the insurance industry as a whole must cover a certain amount of losses before federal assistance becomes available. In 2005, the last year of the current TRIA program, that amount is $15 billion. Under this legislation, that amount will rise to $25 billion in 2006, and $27.5 billion in 2007, an increase from the amounts included in the legislation originally passed by the Senate in November.

Also, after March 31, 2006, no federal assistance will be available at all under the program for a terrorist attack in which total losses do not exceed $50 million, a level which rises to $100 million in 2007. The starting date for this increase in the trigger level is later than it was in the bill passed by the Senate in November, to allow the insurance industry and policyholders a grace period in which to adapt to the new level.

Finally, I want to emphasize that this compromise legislation, like the extension bills passed by both the Senate and the House earlier this year, retains a critically important piece of the current TRIA program: the requirement that insurers make terrorism coverage available to policyholders in all of the lines covered by TRIA.

These provisions follow the framework of the existing TRIA program, keeping the federal backstop in place so that insurers will continue writing terrorism policies, while placing progressively more of the costs onto the industry itself. As with any compromise product, no one would say that the legislation is perfect. But it is a serious effort to address the concerns we have heard raised regarding TRIA and the potential effects of its expiration, and I urge my colleagues to join me in supporting it.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, I express my unwavering support for S. 467, the Terrorism Risk Insurance Revision Act of 2005, introduced by my friend, Senator DODD of Connecticut.

I would like to commend Senators DODD, BENNETT, SHELBY, and SARBANES for getting a bill done that we can all stand here and be proud to support. A bill that is good for this country and good for the State of New York.

At long last builders and insurers of major projects in large cities, particularly New York, can breathe a sigh of relief; terrorism insurance will be renewed. It never should have taken this long, but at least we know this protection will be available for another 2 years.

We still live in America, and particularly in my city of New York, in the shadow of 9/11, of the terrorism that occurred. Obviously, the thousands of families who have had a loved one taken from their midst live with it every moment of their remaining lives, but the rest of us live with it too, not only in empathy for them but also in terms of the economic consequences of terrorism.

The bottom line is very simple, and that is, because of terrorism, the insurance industry, in terms of insuring risk of large structures in America—whether it be large buildings that make us so proud of the Manhattan skyline, or large arenas such as the football stadiums that dot America, or larger facilities such as Disneyland, Disney World, and amusement parks—all have difficulty getting insurance.

Insurers are worried that if, God forbid, another terrorist act occurs it will be so devastating that it will put them out of business.

So 2 years ago, the Senate, House, and the President got together at sort of the end of the day, just like today, and passed terrorism risk insurance.

It has been a large success. That no one can dispute.

Insurance rates have come down, terrorism insurance is available, and insurance companies know if, God forbid, the worst happens there will be a backstop, and they are willing to issue policies.

In turn, that meant developers, builders who wanted to build new large structures in America, did so, employing thousands and thousands of people, creating profits and new businesses as well.

Well today we are all here to do the right thing. Yesterday, the Banking Committee, of which I am member, passed unanimously a bill to extend the TRIA. In this bill we have kept the trigger levels manageable for the policyholder community. We kept the retention levels at a responsible level for the private market, retaining the public/private nature of the program.

The bottom line is that we have made some necessary modifications to the program without losing the major protections. We did not all agree what should have been in the bill. Many of us felt strongly about including Group Life and protections against nuclear, biological, chemical and radiological attacks. But the beauty of the process is that it is a negotiation where we all give and take.

This bill is a good compromise.

The continuation of this program is vital to our Nation's economic stability. By passing this bill on the floor today, we will be sending a message to the world that our financial markets will be protected. That our country will be able to bounce back in the event of any disruptions or financial dislocation caused by another possible terrorist attack.

It is still my strong belief that there needs to be a long-term solution—a permanent program. The President has continued to say that we are fighting a war on terrorism.

The bombing in Jordan last week, the London bombings this past July, and the recent threat to the New York subway system are a few examples of why we must continue fighting this war on terrorism.

It would have been my preference to get a bill that extended beyond 2 years. But I am at least pleased to know that there was a serious effort to address this concern by including a provision to create a commission that would begin to analyze the long-term availability and affordability of insurance for terrorism risk.

I would particularly like to thank Senators DODD and SHELBY for specifically including the language I requested which directs the President's Working Group to analyze the long-term affordability and availability of coverage for chemical, nuclear, biological and radiological events.

This is an issue of great importance to many New Yorkers. Many retailers and business owners in Lower Manhattan are afraid of a possible dirty bombs attack and the availability of insurance for such an event. This must be addressed and right away.

The bottom line is that financial dislocation caused by another possible terrorist attack—God forbid—is too much for our country to risk. I urge the entire Senate to pass this legislation today. It is only right that we let the markets, let the insurance world, and, most of all, let jobs and construction go forth.

(At the request of Mr. REID, the following statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD.)

• Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I rise to lend my strong support for S. 467, the Terrorism Risk Insurance Extension Act of 2005, which I originally introduced with Senator BENNETT and 34 cosponsors earlier this year. The product before the Senate today was amended in committee with the hard work and leadership of Banking Committee

Chairman SHELBY and Ranking Member SARBANES. Additionally, S. 467 addresses many of the ideas and concerns raised by the House in its version of the legislation. I would like to thank House Financial Services Committee Chairman OXLEY and Ranking Member FRANK for their hard work in finding consensus on this measure.

I would like to commend the members on the Banking Committee: Senators JOHNSON, REED, SCHUMER, BAYH, CARPER, STABENOW, CORZINE, HAGEL, BUNNING and DOLE as well as the other cosponsors of the legislation for recognizing—very early on—how important extending the Terrorism Risk Insurance Act, TRIA, was to our Nation's economy and for their efforts on this legislation.

I would also like to thank the staff who worked on this legislation, particularly Sarah Kline and Steve Harris from Senator SARBANE's staff, Mike Nielsen from Senator BENNETT's staff, Alex Sternhell from my staff and Jim Johnson, Andrew Olmem, Mark Oesterle and Kathy Casey from Senator SHELBY's staff.

Like many bills, this legislation is a document of compromise. We have carefully taken into consideration the recommendations of policyholders, insurers, consumers, academics, thinktanks, the Treasury Department and others to craft this important extension legislation.

Let me take a few brief moments to provide my colleagues with a little background on TRIA and why it needs to be extended today.

As a result of the tragic terrorist acts events of 9/11, we repeatedly heard from businesses, large and small, from labor unions and manufacturers, from hospitals to hotels, from professional sports teams to utility companies, from insurers and the insured about the need for the Federal Government to act to help them receive financial protection from future terrorist attacks.

Congress listened, and we acted—creating the Terrorism Risk Insurance Act, TRIA.

In November 2002, TRIA was passed by both the House and Senate by significant margins and was signed into law. It created a 3-year program establishing a Federal backstop against catastrophic losses in the property and casualty insurance marketplace.

And we heard an overwhelming response from policyholders across the country—TRIA has worked. It has achieved its primary goal—continued availability and affordability of insurance against future terrorist attacks.

Industries as diverse as commercial real estate, shipping, construction, manufacturing, and even “mom and pop” retailers require insurance to obtain credit, loans, and investments necessary for their normal business operations. TRIA was designed to do just that—restore “business as usual” in every State across our Nation.

I believe that the greatest indicator of the success of TRIA is what we have heard over the past 3 years since the enactment of TRIA—public outcry from businesses and workers whose livelihoods are threatened by their inability to purchase coverage against acts of terror.

Construction projects are no longer stalled, mortgages are no longer in doubt, jobs are no longer in jeopardy as a result of the inability to receive terrorism insurance.

Not only has TRIA been effective in ensuring that terrorism is available and affordable, and that our economy remains vibrant, it is also an incredibly important taxpayer protection law. With relatively little money necessary to fund the administration of the TRIA program, we have ensured that insurers and policyholders take the first $30 to $40 billion of losses of a potential terrorist attack.

Additionally, there is one provision in this legislation that I believe is an important component—the mandate for the President's Working Group—our Nation's Federal financial regulators—to do an analysis of the long-term availability and affordability of terrorism risk insurance.

This legislation provides for a 2-year extension of TRIA—and in these next 2 years we need to find a long-term solution to this issue. It may be determined that this is an unwritable risk for the private sector and that a continued Federal role is needed or we may find that insurers are able to return to underwriting this risk without a Federal backstop. But we need to start work on developing this information and potential solutions as soon as possible.

The enactment of this legislation will extend the TRIA program and will ensure that our Nation and its economy are best prepared to deal with a future terrorist attack. I urge my colleagues to support this important legislation.●

The bill (S. 467), as amended, was passed.

Mr. FRIST. This bill, the Terrorism Risk Extension Act, was enacted 3 years ago in the aftermath of the September 11 attacks and was intended at the time to provide temporary mechanisms to allow the marketplace to adapt after the economic dislocations that resulted from those attacks on September 11.

This summer, Treasury Secretary Snow issued a report highlighting the importance of allowing private insurance companies to regain their hold in the marketplace. As the report showed, TRIA successfully bridged that gap created by the September 11 terrorist attacks and very effectively enabled the insurance markets to stabilize.

The continued presence of the federally backed subsidy risked crowding out private market initiatives and slowing down, impeding the development of private market solutions. That is why I called for an extension of TRIA that was narrow, that was targeted and minimized interference with our markets.

The bill we just passed achieves that goal. The taxpayers' exposure is lessened by reducing the lines of coverage subject to the Federal backstop, and the insurance industry's exposure is increased.

I am gratified we passed the bill. Over the long term the Federal Government cannot be a substitute for market-based solutions.

I thank Chairman SHELBY and Senator DODD for their hard work on this very important bill. It hasn't been easy, but it has now been accomplished.

THE CALENDAR

Whereas members of the early Korean American community served with distinction in the Armed Forces of the United States during World War I, World War II, and the conflict in Korea;

Whereas in the early 1950s, thousands of Koreans, fleeing from war, poverty, and desolation, came to the United States seeking opportunities;

Whereas Korean Americans, like waves of immigrants to the United States before them, have taken root and thrived as a result of strong family ties, robust community support, and countless hours of hard work;

Whereas the contributions of Korean Americans to the United States include the invention of the first beating heart operation for coronary artery heart disease, development of the nectarine, a 4-time Olympic gold medalist, and achievements in engineering, architecture, medicine, acting, singing, sculpture, and writing;

Whereas Korean Americans play a crucial role in maintaining the strength and vitality of the United States-Korean partnership;

Whereas the centennial year of 2003 marked an important milestone in the now more than 100-year history of Korean immigration; and

Whereas the Centennial Committees of Korean Immigration and Korean Americans have designated January 13th of each year as “Korean American Day” to memorialize the more than 100-year journey of Korean Americans in the United States: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate—

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A resolution (S. Res. 339) urging the Government of the Russian Federation to withdraw the first draft of the proposed legislation as passed in its first reading in the State Duma that would have the effect of severely restricting the establishment, operations, and activities of domestic, international, and foreign nongovernmental organizations in the Russian Federation, or to modify the proposed legislation to entirely remove these restrictions.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the resolution.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the resolution be agreed to, the preamble be agreed to, and the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table.

The resolution, with its preamble, reads as follows:

S. RES. 339

Whereas Russian Federation President Putin has stated that "modern Russia's greatest achievement is the democratic process (and) the achievements of our civil society";

Whereas the unobstructed establishment and free and autonomous operations and activities of nongovernmental organizations and a robust civil society free from excessive government control are central and indispensable elements of a democratic society;

Whereas the free and autonomous operations of nongovernmental organizations in any society necessarily encompass activities, including political activities, that may be contrary to government policies;

Whereas domestic, international, and foreign nongovernmental organizations are crucial in assisting the Russian Federation and the Russian people in tackling the many challenges they face, including in such areas as education, infectious diseases, and the establishment of a flourishing democracy;

Whereas the Government of the Russian Federation has proposed legislation that would have the effect of severely restricting the establishment, operations, and activities of domestic, international, and foreign nongovernmental organizations in the Russian Federation, including erecting unprecedented barriers to foreign assistance;

Whereas the State Duma of the Russian Federation is considering the first draft of such legislation;

Whereas the restrictions in the first draft of this legislation would impose disabling restraints on the establishment, operations, and activities of nongovernmental organizations and on civil society throughout the Russian Federation, regardless of the stated intent of the Government of the Russian Federation;

Whereas the stated concerns of the Government of the Russian Federation regarding the use of nongovernmental organizations by foreign interests and intelligence agencies to undermine the Government of the Russian Federation and the security of the Russian Federation as a whole can be fully addressed without imposing disabling restraints on nongovernmental organizations and on civil society;

Whereas there is active debate underway in the Russian Federation over concerns regarding such restrictions on nongovernmental organizations;

Whereas the State Duma and the Federation Council of the Federal Assembly play a central role in the system of checks and balances that are prerequisites for a democracy;

Whereas the first draft of the proposed legislation has already passed its first reading in the State Duma;

Whereas President Putin has indicated his desire for changes in the first draft that would "correspond more closely to the principles according to which civil society functions"; and

Whereas Russia's destiny and the interests of her people lie in her assumption of her rightful place as a full and equal member of the international community of democracies: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate, That the Senate—

(1) urges the Government of the Russian Federation to withdraw the first draft of the proposed legislation that would have the effect of severely restricting the establishment, operations, and activities of domestic, international, and foreign nongovernmental organizations in the Russian Federation, or to modify the proposed legislation to entirely remove these restrictions; and

(2) in the event that the first draft of the proposed legislation is not withdrawn, urges the State Duma and the Federation Council of the Federal Assembly to modify the legislation to ensure the unobstructed establishment and free and autonomous operations and activities of such nongovernmental organizations in accordance with the practices universally adopted by democracies, including the provisions regarding foreign assistance.

PROGRAM

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, tomorrow we will return to session. As I stated this morning, we are waiting for additional legislative items to come from the House. The House may vote on the Defense authorization conference report later this evening or tomorrow morning. I am unaware of anyone who has requested a rollcall vote on that conference report and, therefore, we expect to debate that during tomorrow's session if that measure is received.

We also have a number of nominations we have been working on over the last several days. We expect to get those wrapped up tomorrow. At this point, we anticipate acting on those nominations without the need for rollcall votes.

Having said that, we will be in session working on the important business that remains. At this juncture, after discussion with the Democratic leader, we do not anticipate a need for rollcall votes tomorrow. I want to say that in a very careful way because we have so much happening right now and, as I said, we will be working through much of the night, and we want to continue to move forward on measures. Senators have been patient. We have said for some time that we would be in this weekend, Saturday and in all likelihood Sunday as well, working through our final business.

Tomorrow, I will continue to work with the Democratic leader to clear as much as we possibly can by unanimous consent. We also expect the Defense appropriations conference report to be ready at some point this weekend, and we will turn to that measure just as soon as we possibly can, as soon as it is ready.

We will remain in session to receive items from the House, and we will remain available to begin any necessary procedural options that are warranted. We will need to act on a continuing resolution tomorrow, and we will pass that when received from the House.

As I mentioned, Members continue to ask about the schedule. We are doing our very best to keep our colleagues apprised as we go forward. There is a lot of work going on with negotiations off the floor. We will monitor those discussions and alert all Members as we get closer to having these last bills ready.

Again, at this point, I do not see a need for rollcall votes tomorrow, although we will have to wait to see what we receive from the House.

With regard to a Sunday session and Monday session, just as soon as we make final decisions in terms of timing, we will let people know as quickly as possible. If we do not vote on Sunday—and we are not prepared to say that yet—we would notify people as soon as that decision could be made. We are going to have a very busy Monday and votes will in all likelihood begin early Monday morning. This will not be a typical Monday where we do not vote until late in the afternoon. Again, I will have more to say regarding Sunday's schedule tomorrow.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The minority leader is recognized.

Mr. REID. I understand the difficulties of the distinguished Republican leader, especially these last few days of this session of the Congress, but I would say that one way to expedite this is to get the Defense appropriations bill over here as quickly as possible and move in the ordinary course. I have said on the record and off the record, trying to stick this ANWR provision in a place it does not belong is going to create for this body untoward problems in the future.

I am a long timer of the Appropriations Committee and the rule that is now in effect dealing with the scope of the conference; that is, the matters in the conference report that come back to the Senate floor have to be pertinent to the subject matter of the legislation that is taken to conference.

We could complete the Defense appropriations bill in a matter of minutes but for this. There are people of goodwill on both sides of the aisle who do not like that process of trying to stick on this bill the unimaginable. I was not happy when earlier this year we lost on ANWR. The bill went out of here and the place where it could legally be put in a bill, that is reconciliation spending, was stripped by the House of Representatives. As a result of that, now we come back with this suggestion that they are going to stick it on the Defense appropriations bill.

This is a body that lives by rules. We cannot be changing them just because the other side has more votes. So I would simply say to the distinguished majority leader, I hope he would help us stop this mischievous thing. I hope we have more of my friends on the other side of the aisle join with us in this, which is the right thing to do.

I have heard the senior Senator from Arizona give speeches on this matter numerous times: Why did you put that in conference? Those are things within the scope. I cannot imagine how the Senator from Arizona must feel about putting something in a bill that has nothing relating to the scope.

I say to all Senators that one way to wind up this session in a very positive vein is passing the Defense appropriations bill, not having to go through steps that would take us to have to invoke cloture on the Defense appropriations bill, change the rules of the Senate, change precedence in the Senate.

I am terribly disappointed this is even being contemplated. I am willing to work with the distinguished leader and try to work things out this weekend. I do not contemplate any votes that would be necessary. We have to do the continuing resolution and we will complete that as soon as we get it. On my side I am not aware of any amendments on that. I spoke earlier this evening to the distinguished ranking member of the Armed Services Committee and he said he and the chairman, Senator WARNER, are at a point where they can complete that legislation very quickly, and I hope that is the case. If we could finish Defense authorization, Defense appropriations, we could be out of here on Sunday.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Virginia is recognized.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I rise to address the Senate on the status of the progress the conferees are making with regard to the Defense authorization bill. We have been in constant negotiations throughout the week and I am pleased to say that Chairman HUNTER, who has exhibited extraordinary leadership, together with myself, Senator LEVIN, and Congressman IKE SKELTON, we concluded our final conference with Members today. It was my understanding the bill would be filed in the House tonight.

Accordingly, I provided a signature sheet, which is the standard protocol. All 13 members of the Armed Services Committee on the Republican side signed the sheet and Senator LEVIN likewise authorized me to include his sheet of those Democrats which signed. So they are now in the possession of the House of Representatives again in anticipation that the bill will be filed.

Congressman HUNTER is a man I have dealt with for many years and have the greatest respect for, and because of our close working and trusting relationship, he called me tonight, about half an hour ago, to advise me there was some interest among some Members of the House to have that conference report on the House side reopened and another measure inserted. He described the measure, but as a matter of courtesy and privacy I will not describe it.

I indicated to Congressman HUNTER and other members of the House leadership that I would be in opposition; that I felt duty bound as chairman to withdraw the signatures of the 13 Republicans. I called Senator LEVIN and acquainted him with the status of this matter and he asked that I ask Congressman HUNTER to return his sheet with all signatures if the House, in its wisdom, opens that bill and inserts another provision in it. So that is the status.

In the very unfortunate event that we have our signature sheets returned to us and this particular provision is placed in the House bill, I would have to go to my Members on the Republican side and indicate to them that I could not support this measure if it were to be placed in this bill. I might support it in the context of other legislative means, but I would not on this. Therefore, there is a question of whether with my signature being withdrawn—Senator LEVIN said he expressed doubt that his members would join, so there would probably be insufficient signatures for the filing of this bill.

I do not take the floor by means of threatening those with good intentions to try every avenue to foster their interest in legislation, but our Nation is at war, and this bill has been, for various reasons, on a very long journey in getting to this moment in time. Many Members of this body, most especially the members of the Armed Services Committee, both sides of the aisle, have worked diligently on this bill. Our collective staffs have gone around the clock for days in this abbreviated session to try and produce the conference report, and I commend them for the work, and that report has been produced. It is our understanding that it was finalized about 2:30 today and the House was in the process of filing the bill tonight.

So I indicate that this Senator will not in any way allow this bill to come to the floor—I will exercise every right I have—with this provision in it. At this point in time, if, for example, for some reason—my colleagues and I do not in any way threaten my fellow colleagues who I presume might have an interest in this position—were to send over the report without my signature and such signatures that they may get on the other side and that comes over, then I am prepared to exercise my rights under rule XVIII and every available means not to allow this bill to contain this provision, because I think we are absolutely dutybound to the men and women of the Armed Forces and to their families and to the Commander in Chief, with whom I was privileged to meet yesterday, the President of the United States, on a matter that was of great importance to him and other members of our committee, most particularly one member, Senator MCCAIN, who was with me. It was understood that we were finally resolving what we considered the last major issue.

I commend the President on the manner in which he and his staff worked with me and Congressman HUNTER and others to resolve this question. So we had finally concluded and listened diligently today to the members of the committee who had some views and closed it out at 2:30.

Now this has arisen. Again, people over on the other side, the other body, have a perfect right to exercise their rights, but I have to indicate, and I think in fairness to the leadership of the Senate and the leadership of the House, my steadfast opposition to this procedure. There has to come a time around here when conference reports are closed, as it was indicated to us, signature sheets provided, and we should go forward.

This bill is vitally necessary to this Nation at this hour. When every day we are losing men, killed and wounded, and the horrific damages to them and their families, we must be steadfast in our resolve.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The minority leader is recognized.

COMMENDING SENATOR WARNER

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I wish I had the words to express the thoughts I have in my heart now. I love history. I love the Senate. I have spent a lot of my life here. The mere fact that I am a Senator is, every day, hard for me to comprehend. But I am, and I am so thankful to the people in Nevada for allowing me to serve.

But I want to say to the senior Senator from the State of Virginia that when the history books are written about this institution and someone flips through like a dictionary, wanting to have described what a U.S. Senator should be, JOHN WARNER has to be near the top of that list, if not at the top. He is a man who is a gentleman. I have served with him now for 23 years. He is a man who believes in this institution and has the record to prove it. He is a person who is a good member of his political party, but he is also a patriot. As important as the two-party system is to our country, to the Senator from Virginia, party comes second, country comes first.

As I said, I don't have the ability to express my conviction about this man. But the statement he just made, his off-the-cuff statement, is what the Senate is all about. It is about protecting this country, the individual rights of Members of the Senate, and that is why JOHN WARNER is a great Senator.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Virginia.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, with a deep sense of humility, I thank my colleague. I am undeserving of those remarks. Each day I am here, each day I grow a little older, I grow more humble and thankful to the good Lord for allowing me to greet each day and do what I feel is best in the interests of this country.

ADJOURNMENT UNTIL 4 P.M. TOMORROW

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, if there is no further business to come before the Senate this evening, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate stand in adjournment under the previous order.

There being no objection, the Senate, at 8:42 p.m., adjourned until Saturday, December 17, 2005, at 4 p.m.
