The Senate met at 9:30 a.m. and was called to order by the Honorable JOHN E. SUNUNU, a Senator from the State of New Hampshire.

PRAYER

The Chaplain, Dr. Barry C. Black, offered the following prayer:

Let us pray:

Lord, we thank You for touching our Senators' lives. Continue to guide and inspire them. Help them to stand up for truth. Instill in them courage to lead us toward peace and unity. Fill their minds with wisdom and compassion as they strive to give You their best. Protect them from danger. May the desire to do Your will become their highest priority.

RECOGNITION OF THE MAJORITY LEADER

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The majority leader is recognized.

SCHEDULE

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, this morning, we have set aside 2 hours of morning business in 30-minute increments. At the conclusion of morning business, we will begin the U.S.-Oman free trade agreement, which has a 20-hour debate limitation. However, we are expecting to yield back much of that time. Senators can expect a vote on final passage of that bill when we finish all debate on the measure.

We also will be trying to clear some nominations this afternoon as we finish our work before the Fourth of July recess.

SEX OFFENDER REGISTRATION AND NOTIFICATION ACT

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I will take a few moments to address legislation to create a national sex offender registry and to protect our children from sexual predators.

On May 4, the Senate unanimously passed S. 1086, the Sex Offender Registration and Notification Act. This bill, which was introduced by our colleague, Senator HATCH, would create a national sex offender registry and would do what you would suspect, and that is protect our kids from these child predators.

A similar bill has also passed the House of Representatives. Over the last several weeks, the House and Senate have been working diligently to bridge the differences between those two bills. I am pleased with the progress that has been made so far, but I am concerned that the time is running short in the legislative session.

Because time is of the essence, I sent a letter to Chairman SPECTER and Chairman SENSENBRENNER in the House asking them to have such legislation ready for signature by the President no later than July 27, 2006. That is about a month from now. That particular date is in honor of the 25th anniversary of the tragic abduction and murder of Adam Walsh, the 6-year-old son of John and Revé Walsh, who are the founders of the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children.

I ask unanimous consent that the full text of the letter be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

U.S. SENATE,
OFFICE OF THE MAJORITY LEADER,
Washington, DC, June 27, 2006.

Hon. ARLEN SPECTER,
Chairman, Committee on the Judiciary,
U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

Hon. JAMES SENSENBRENNER, Jr.,
Chairman, Committee on the Judiciary,
House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

DEAR CHAIRMAN SPECTER AND CHAIRMAN SENSENBRENNER: Thank you for your diligent efforts to bring the Senate and the House of Representatives together on legislation to create a national sex offender registry and protect children from sexual predators. While I am pleased with the progress made so far, I remain concerned that time may be running short in this legislative session. So today, I urge you to join me in setting a clear goal to have sexual predators legislation ready for signature by the President no later than July 27, 2006—in honor of the 25th anniversary of the tragic abduction and murder of Adam Walsh, the 6-year-old son of John and Revé Walsh, who are the founders of the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children.

John and Revé have transformed the tragedy of Adam's death into a lifelong commitment to protecting children from abduction, abuse, and exploitation. They have been at the forefront of most major child protection legislation passed by Congress over the last quarter century—from the Missing Children's Act in 1982, which improved law enforcement information sharing in missing child cases, to the Protect Act in 2003, which established a nationwide Amber Alert network to coordinate rapid emergency responses to missing child alerts. Their tireless dedication has been an inspiration to parents of child victims and millions of American families.

I know we share a commitment to strengthen laws that protect our children from sexual predators lurking in our neighborhoods or enticing our children online. Currently, there are more than 550,000 registered sex offenders in the United States and at least 100,000 are missing from the system. The loopholes in the current system allow some sexual predators to evade law enforcement and put our children at risk. In addition, we must do more to address an emerging global crisis in child pornography, an estimated $20 billion commercial industry fueled by the Internet. The Internet has become an anonymous gateway for sexual predators to initiate contact with children, win their confidence, and attempt to victimize them. By passing legislation that establishes a national sex offender registry, toughens criminal penalties for sexual predators, and cracks down on child pornography, we can take another step forward in making America safer.

The Senate and the House have both passed bills addressing these issues. It is time to bridge any remaining differences and finish the job. We should not allow extraneous issues to delay the bill.

I look forward to working with you in the weeks ahead.

Sincerely,

WILLIAM H. FRIST, M.D.
Majority Leader.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I am pleased to join with my colleague, Senator REID, who is endorsing this July 27 date as a goal as well. The reason why it is important for us to speak to this now is that there are a number of issues out there that are unrelated to the sex offender registry bill, which are important issues in and of themselves, but in some ways they impede or lessen the likelihood that we are going to get this particular bill through.

The registry is important. By creating a national registry, we are going to make it easier for law enforcement to act if they get a tip and to be able to identify and stop these offenders before they can commit repeat crimes and victimize more children.

Many States, including my State of Tennessee, have registries, but that information is not shared with other States. Therefore, you have these sex offenders simply going from State to State. If a sex offender is registered in Florida and then moves to Tennessee, there is no way to track him today. Under the new law, Florida would have to notify Tennessee law enforcement that the sex offender is moving. It is a big problem.

There are currently 550,000 registered sex offenders in the U.S. and at least 100,000 of them are missing from the system. Every day that we don't have this national sex offender registry, these missing sex predators are out there somewhere. We don't know where they are or whether or who they are victimizing.

So there is a lot we can do. Now is the time for to us do it. The national sex offender registry will save the lives of thousands of children. By passing this legislation, we can take another major step forward to making the country safer. I thank Senator HATCH, and especially Senator REID, for their leadership.

I urge our colleagues in the Senate and in the House to act quickly and get this bill done by July 27. It is for law enforcement officers, it is for parents, and it is especially for our Nation's children.

RECOGNITION OF THE MINORITY LEADER

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Democratic leader is recognized.

SEX OFFENDER REGISTRATION AND NOTIFICATION ACT

Mr. REID. Mr. President, first of all, I appreciate very much the statement of the majority leader. I understand that he has other matters, and I will speak to him later about a number of other things.

On the issue of sex offender legislation, yesterday, rightfully so, the majority leader sent a letter to Chairmen SPECTER and SENSENBRENNER asking them to bridge their differences and finish the legislation. I commend Senator FRIST for making this bill a priority.

I agree that this is important legislation, and it should not be stalled by disagreements over controversial, extraneous matters. Specifically, the leader asked the two chairmen to complete work on the bill by the end of July. That timetable seems perfect for me. The Senate passed its version by unanimous consent on May 4. There should be no further delay. I believe this is an urgent matter.

I remind my colleagues that when the Senate passed this version of the bill 2 months ago, Senator KENNEDY—even though he felt very strongly about the hate crime bill—agreed to set that aside. That was a major concession by all of us who favor the hate crimes bill. We made the decision that the sex offender bill should not be delayed by unrelated matters.

Since that time, I am sorry to report that some Members of the House have held up the sex offender bill by trying to add their own pet projects related to the death penalty, habeas corpus, and other matters. They are all important matters, but we have to move forward with this sex crime legislation.

As the majority leader correctly wrote in his letter, ''We should not allow extraneous issues to delay this bill.''

Why is the sex offender bill so important? Because the safety of children is at stake. The national sex offender registry will make it easier for local law enforcement to track sex offenders and prevent repeat offenses. The bill authorizes much-needed grants to local law enforcement agencies to establish and integrate sex offender registry systems.

Is it going to take another news story about yet another brutal assault and murder of some young child to make it clear that we need to act now? I hope not.

Obviously, there are still issues to work out between the House and Senate. I understand that. I favor, of course, the Senate-passed bill, S. 1086, which I think did a better job of distinguishing among types of offenders. We need to move forward without delays or distractions on unrelated issues.

Finally, if anyone ever doubts that one person can make a difference in our country and our world, one only need to look at John Walsh. Because of the tragic event dealing with his son Adam, we now have a National Center for Missing Children. We have a TV program called ''America's Most Wanted,'' and because of that program, we have gotten scores of felons who have done very bad things. I have never met John Walsh, but a former Governor of Nevada was a good friend of his. He told me years ago about this good man. I applaud John Walsh. It is because of him that we are moving forward on this legislation.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I know the Democratic leader has other statements to make. I think the signal that we are both sending is that this is significant legislation. It will directly impact families all over the United States of America. It is an obvious need. We have made huge progress and, as the Democratic leader said, much of that is to be attributed to John Walsh, his family, because of the tragedy they suffered with the loss of their child.

Again, the Democratic leader and I are joined at the hip pushing this through in the Senate. We, working together, agreed to have a focused bill, a targeted bill, that would accomplish the specific objectives here. And our appeal today is that the House do likewise so we can pass this by July 27.

IMMIGRATION BILL CONFERENCE

Mr. REID. Mr. President, we saw the Senate at its best a few weeks ago when we passed comprehensive immigration reform. Democrats and Republicans, working together, passed a very complicated bill in a relatively short period of time, with dozens of amendments. We passed a bill. People are looking for us to do things together and we did something together. The President was involved in this and I appreciate that very much. We did good border security. We did something to deal with guest workers. We did something to put the 12 million people who are here on a proper pathway to legalization. Even though they have the opportunity to do that, they will not go to the front of the line. It is something we have to do. They will have to have jobs, pay taxes, make sure they stay out of trouble, and learn English. We also put in the bill excellent provisions so that employer sanctions will be enforced.

So we did a good job on this bill. We passed a bipartisan, comprehensive bill that will address the urgent national security issue facing us, and that is immigration and border security. In contrast, the House passed a bill that would make felons out of 12 million people. In addition, potential felons would be a Catholic priest giving eucharist to his parishioners or a health care worker trying to help someone who is homeless or a social worker and many examples where they would become felons.

The bill in the House is mean-spirited and it is wrong. People who run soup kitchens should not be felons. People who are domestic violence counselors should not be felons. Certainly, members of the clergy should not be felons.

A little over 3 weeks ago, I proposed a unanimous-consent agreement that would allow us to move forward a House-Senate negotiation on the immigration bill. I asked consent that we take up the House immigration bill, substitute the text of the Senate bill, and then appoint conferees. My friend, the majority whip, Senator MCCONNELL, objected due to a threat of the House Republicans to ''blue slip'' the bill. Senator MCCONNELL asked that we take up and appoint conferees to H.R. 4096, a House-passed tax bill that is here in the Senate to address the House's constitutional concerns. I think they are unfounded, but I accept Senator MCCONNELL's objection. Therefore, I had no choice but to object because I was concerned that House leaders would use this tax bill as an opportunity for mischief and would insert many items that are repugnant to what we are trying to do with taxes in an immigration bill.

Since then, I have asked the majority leader for some assurances that this procedural maneuver would be used solely to get around the blue slip problem and that the conference report would not be used as a vehicle for tax provisions that have nothing to do with the immigration bill.

The majority leader has provided such assurances to me orally. In addition, Senators SPECTER, GRAHAM, and MCCAIN have given me written assurances that they will not sign a conference report that contains tax provisions unrelated to the immigration bill.

Among other things, this letter says:

As chairman—

That is Senator SPECTER—and likely members of the immigration conference—

That is Senators MCCAIN and GRAHAM—

we would not sign any conference report that contains tax changes not related to immigration. We simply will not allow the use of the tax bill as a vehicle for comprehensive immigration reform to be abused in conference.

I very much appreciate these three fine men giving me this letter. I think this is a way to move forward.

Based on the oral assurance of the majority leader and the written assurance from these three Republican Senators, we as Democrats stand ready to appoint conferees and to move forward on this bill at any time the majority leader allows that to happen. We are willing to move forward under the terms previously suggested by the majority whip. We would consent to using the House-passed tax bill as a vehicle for this immigration conference based on these new assurances. I hope we can do that as soon as possible.

I express my apology to my friend from Kansas and thank him for being so patient waiting for Senator FRIST and I to complete our morning statements.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Kansas is recognized.

Mr. BROWNBACK. Mr. President, I thank my colleague from Nevada, the Democratic leader, for his last statement of willingness to appoint conferees and use other vehicles that will not have the blue slip problem on the House side. Comprehensive immigration reform is a critical and most important piece of legislation we will pass in conference if we can get it done. I appreciate my colleague doing that.

It is a tough topic. He has been willing to work with us along the way, not without difficulties at different steps. I really appreciate his willingness to work on such a difficult topic with us.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, will my friend yield for a question?

Mr. BROWNBACK. Yes, I will.

Mr. REID. The Senator heard the statement I read into the RECORD in the letter from Senators SPECTER, GRAHAM, and MCCAIN. I am confident that the Senator from Kansas agrees that the immigration bill should not contain any extraneous tax matters; is that correct?

Mr. BROWNBACK. Mr. President, I do, and I appreciate the opportunity to say so on the Senate floor as well. I don't want to see this process manipulated and the Senator put in a position where he is not comfortable with trying to get done what we all want. I don't think that is right. I don't think that is the comity of the Senate, and I stand with my colleagues who signed that letter as well.

Again, I thank the Senator for moving this forward. If we can get this immigration bill moving forward, it would be a major accomplishment for us and for the Nation.

STEM CELL RESEARCH

Mr. BROWNBACK. Mr. President, I stand to deliver some good news today to the Senate and hopefully contribute to the debate we are going to have probably in July on the overall issue of stem cells, embryonic stem cells, human cloning, adult stem cells, and cord blood.

I wish to start by saying I think everybody is of good heart and good mind in this body and that they want to try to do something to help people in this country. While we have some differences of opinion on embryonic stem cells and on human cloning, there is strong bipartisan support in the adult stem cell and cord blood area.

The differences come down to the basic view of the youngest of human life. This is a long debate. It has been going on for some time. We have differences of opinion. I view human life as sacred at all of its stages and all of its places. Period. It is unique, it is beautiful, it is a child of the living God. It deserves our respect and protection under law at the very earliest stages of life and at the very latest stages in life. It is life in this country and a life in other countries. It is life seeking to come to this country in whatever form it may be. This life is unique and sacred.

We can try to divide it under law. We can say it is property at this stage of life; it is not worth living at that stage of life. All of those, I think, are false distinctions. Life is sacred, period, per se because it is human and it is sacred, period, because it is human. That is the point of view from which I come. That is the point of view from which I think a lot of Americans come.

When people think about it, when they look at this issue they say: How else would you divide a baby? It is pretty hard to do unless you start where life begins and you end where life ends and you don't draw distinctions in between.

Others are willing to draw that distinction in between and say a human life is not sacred, per se, at certain early stages, or if it is so decrepit at other stages of life. I think those are false distinctions. I don't think they stand the test of science. I don't think they will stand the test of time. I don't think they will stand the test of reason if one really thinks it through.

That is really where we get to the point of distinction on this debate, on human embryonic stem cells, on cloning humans for stem cells. Scientifically, it may be doable. Ethically, is it moral? Is this human life a person or a piece of property? In our jurisprudence system, they are one of the two: They are either a person or a piece of property. Everything in this room—the Presiding Officer is a person; what he has on is property. People in this room are people, everything else is property.

What is the youngest of human life? Is it person or property? We have had this debate before in this country. We have looked at it; we have drawn distinctions. At points in time, even in our Constitution, we have said a person was only three-fifths of a person, and yet we knew at that time: How can you be three-fifths of a person? That didn't stand the test of time and reason then, and it doesn't stand the test in this country now.

Some will say that the youngest of human life is property and at some point in development it becomes a person. Yet in our jurisprudence system, we don't recognize the transition that you can go from property to personhood and, if so, where on Earth would you draw that line? When would it happen?

The biology is quite clear on this point. If you start out a person, you end up a person. If you start out a human being, you don't become a plant. If you start out a human being, you don't become a desk. If you start out a human, you end up a human. The biology on this is clear. If you are a human embryo and you are given nurture, you end up, by anybody's definition, a full-scale human being. You don't transition. You don't start out as a piece of property or an egg that is going to become an eagle and end up a person. It is one person.

At one point in time, we have all started out as an embryo. Whether you are SAM BROWNBACK, the Presiding Officer, or anybody in this room, we all started out being a human embryo. We didn't start another way. If you destroy us at the earliest stage, you never end up with us at this stage. That is a basic fundamental of the argument.

It is an old, old, old debate for human societies. We have had this debate. Typically, in fighting around the world, people try to dehumanize the other side.

I remember watching a film on Rwanda, ''Hotel Rwanda,'' about the Rwandan genocide. I was just in Rwanda last year and in the Holocaust Museum. The one side persecuting the other side, killing nearly 800,000 in 3 weeks, in the very typical fashion of human beings demonizing the other side and calling them less than human, they were subhuman—they were roaches is what they actually referred to them as.

One can look at old war propaganda and typically one side tries to demonize the other side, calling them something less than human, they are subhuman. That is a very old human debate about whether this is really a person.

The truth is, the debate never stands up under any examination. Of course, the Hutus and Tutsis are humans. Of course, in our earliest Constitution, a slave was treated as three-fifths of a person; they are a full person. They are entitled to personhood. They are entitled to legal status in this Nation.

Of course, any time in the history of mankind when we have deemed somebody less than a full person, we have always lived to regret it, and we always said later on: Wasn't that a horrific episode in human history where somebody was treated less than a human?

Now we are back at that old debate. People are of different minds. They are not of ill will toward anybody. Many are seeking cures to very difficult diseases, to very difficult problems and human maladies and saying: If we can only go here, if we can only research on human embryos that are just frozen; they are not going to come out of the Cryovac; they are going to stay frozen; if we can only do that, if we can just take an egg and fuse it with a cell from my body and create a clone just for a little period of time, we are going to be able to solve all these human maladies; we are going to solve cancer, and we are going to fix Parkinson's disease, and we are going to solve spinal cord injuries.

Then, it comes back, back, back to the same old debate: What is the human embryo that is frozen? Is this a human embryo created by the cloning process? Is it a person or piece of property?

People of good will differ on that division. It is an old debate, and I think the only place to stand is that this is a person and deserves our respect.

That debate is renewed in this bioethics issue. We have been going at it about 6 years now. In August of 2001, the President articulated a strategy of funding both embryonic stem cell research and adult and cord blood research, funding both of them. We have since that time funded embryonic stem cell research to the tune of half a billion dollars, $500 million. So this isn't something people can say we haven't done. We have. Those are Federal funds. No private or State money is included in that money. This is just Federal money, half a billion dollars.

When we started this debate 6 years ago, I stated that for us to research on young human beings is illegal under our law, immoral under our rationale, under our legal system and, really, the law we know in our hearts and unnecessary because we have another way. We can go through adult stem cell work, we can go through cord blood work, and we can come at conclusions that will be successful in treating these human maladies.

The illegal and immoral remain today. We do not allow people to research on the youngest of human beings. It is immoral how you treat the youngest of human beings because if you destroy me at that stage of embryo, I never get to become a full-scale human and realize the potential I have or other people have.

Today, I want to emphasize the unnecessary part of this debate. When we started this debate in 2000, they said there was a lot of promise with adult cord blood, but we don't know if you are right. We actually think we are going to be able to come up with conclusions and solutions using embryonic stem cells or cloning, but you can't come up with them using adult stem cells. There is not enough malleability. They are not what they call in the terminology, pluripotent. In other words, if it is a nerve adult stem cell, it can't make bone. It can't make fat tissue.

It turns out there is a lot more pluripotency or plasticity to these adult stem cells than originally thought, to the point where we have 70 peer-reviewed publications, treating 70—we just celebrated this 2 weeks ago—70 different human maladies with adult stem cells or cord blood.

My good news today is on the illegal, immoral, and unnecessary, we now have a lot of information on the unnecessary side of this debate so that we can go forward full scale in saying we are going to successfully treat these human maladies, and we have 70 treatment areas. Some of these are nothing short of miraculous.

I have a very busy chart here, but that is because this is very busy subject. This is a chart indicating 70 current human—these are not animals—human clinical applications using adult stem cells today. These are the various areas: anemias, autoimmune diseases, bladder diseases. We now have people growing bladders from their own stem cells, taking them out of the body—I believe this is a Florida researcher—putting them on a skeleton and then growing artificial bladders so that people, instead of having pouches on their side, can now have their own bladder grown. This is really taking place.

Cancers, cardiovascular: I want to talk about a group having their hearts regenerated by their own stem cells, but will save that for another day.

Immune deficiencies, liver diseases, neural degenerative diseases, including spinal cord injuries—I will talk about a specific example today: a young lady walking again with the use of braces.

Ocular, wounds and injuries, and metabolic disorders: Those are the general categories that I want to put forward to show the unnecessary side of embryonic stem cells. This is a good news topic with which we can move forward. I have been challenged by some of my colleagues about the scientists who oppose embryonic stem cell research. I have submitted a list of 57 scientists and doctors for the RECORD in a previous speech who oppose destructive human embryonic stem cell research—oppose it. Embryonic stem cell research is not the right way to go, as a moral issue, for a number of reasons, but there are also a number of reasons why it is unnecessary for us to move forward in this particular category.

There is also the problem—and we saw this on the use of tissues from aborted fetuses, the fetal tissue debate, and, unfortunately, when you use these young stem cells, embryonic stem cells, they tend to form tumors. Embryonic stem cells are very fast-growing, and they form tumors instead of the type of tissue we want. They too frequently are uncontrollable, and they will form tumors. That continues to be the problem in that particular area.

I want to point out this chart to my colleagues regarding this issue. It is not necessary. It is unnecessary for us to do embryonic or cloning research. On the moral issue, it is illegal. But it is also unnecessary because we are getting human treatments to the very things my colleagues said that we needed to do embryonic stem cell research for and that they say we needed to do human cloning to get all of these cures. I am saying it is not necessary. We don't have to go that route, because we are getting the treatments using this ethical route.

So we have this big ethical debate and quagmire, and we have a legitimate route with adult stem cells where we are getting successful treatments for people. Why would we engage in and go the unethical route when we have this big debate and divide? Why would we not just go very aggressively where we are getting human clinical trials with adult stem cells, especially when we are not getting any in the embryonic area? Why wouldn't you fully engage that and say, Well, OK, then we don't have to engage the moral debate. We don't have to say somebody is subhuman and to get to a point in our research. We can say we have a legitimate route to go.

Now I want to talk about the good news highlights here. I want to put up some real patient stories for my colleagues. We had a press conference last week where we had five individuals independently treated with adult stem cells or with their cord blood. This is umbilical cord blood from mother-child that has been saved and preserved and people are being treated successfully in these areas.

I want to put up a picture of Ryan Schneider from Batavia, IL. This is a miraculous story. A beautiful Christmas picture you can see here. It is a picture of him last Christmas, taken just 10 weeks after Ryan's stem cell treatment. There is already a noticeable improvement that he has. This is a young man who has an incredible story. I met him last week and his parents, and I want to say God bless him to him and his parents who really fought through a tough problem of cerebral palsy with him.

His medical problems began at birth. His parents, Mary and Steve, noticed that he was having difficulty with feedings. He was falling behind in his motor skills. His mother is a very sensible woman. She heard the usual arguments of, ''Well, every kid is different, let's wait and see.'' But based on her experience, including raising Ryan's older sister, Katie, his mother knew that something wasn't right.

By the age of 2 he only had two words and he was not gaining weight at all. She writes:

> Pointing, whining, and screaming were his only method of communication. I had him evaluated through the early intervention program and he started speech therapy. So she starts working.
> Nine months later he had only gained 1 pound, and after he started speech therapy he spoke only 40 words with no sentence structure, and only close family understood the words.
> His upper body strength was weakening. His hands were in fists most of the time. It hurt him to straighten out his hands and arms. It is the little things that only a parent would notice that set the bells off ringing. I presented these concerns to Ryan's pediatrician who referred us to a neurologist.

Having five children, I can just see this developing, and I can see a mother looking at this child and knowing something is not quite right here.

> On July 21, 2005, we got the diagnosis of cerebral palsy. My husband and I felt like we had been punched in the stomach. Who wouldn't, as a parent. Ryan Schneider was diagnosed with cerebral palsy, a disease that affects close to half a million Americans.

Mayoclinic.com describes cerebral palsy as:

> a general term describing a general group of disorders which affects the child's ability to coordinate body and movement. These disorders are caused by damage to a child's brain early in the course of development. Damage can occur during fetal development, during the birth process, or during the first few months after birth.
> The group of disorders range from mild to severe. Physical signs of cerebral palsy includes weakness and floppiness of muscles, flaccidity, and rigidity. In some cases neurological disorders such as mental retardation or seizures also occur in children with cerebral palsy.

This doesn't sound like something you would want to confront in your family. Mayoclinic.com also cites that it is not curable—is not curable.

Well, the Schneider family has a story to tell today. Thanks to their persistence and the work of Dr. Joanne Kurtzberg at Duke University, young Ryan has a new outlook on life. Thanks to the amazing work of cord blood adult stem cells. Ryan's mother, on the birth of Ryan, saved the cord blood. That is something I would urge anybody who is watching or thinking about it, to save the cord blood. This is a valuable asset.

Ms. Schneider continues about what she did:

> The light went on the morning following Ryan's diagnosis. I sat up in bed, looked at my husband and said, the doctor said brain injury. We saved his cord blood. I wonder if they are using it to treat cerebral palsy.

This is the day after. The mother sits up in bed: We saved it. What can we do?

> After days of net researching and many phone calls to leading researchers in stem cell therapy, I found very little hope or information and a lot of, ''No, I won't do the transfusion.'' No one would give my son his own cord blood. You can get donated blood products from strangers in time for surgery or trauma. This is absurd. I called Dr. Harris at the cord blood bank where Ryan's stem cells were banked. He suggested I get in touch with Dr. Kurtzberg at Duke University.

I have had Dr. Kurtzberg in to testify—an amazing lady, great stories, and she works with these impossible cases. Remember, cerebral palsy was incurable. Was—was incurable.

> She agreed to do the transfusion, and the transfusion took place on October 11, 2005. Given this opportunity, I set up a protocol system of my own. Pre- and post-infusion evaluations and progress monitoring is being done by Easter Seals. I requested extensive metabolic and chromosomal blood work to be done to rule out any other possibilities with his pediatrician.

So this is a mother working with this doctor saying, OK, we are going to really measure it and see if this is what is happening. Ryan's mother continues:

> My thought was if this works for Ryan, it could change his life and the lives of many other children in the future. Although my efforts were applauded, this should not be the job of a parent, but of the medical community and the Federal Government to allocate research dollars. Until this is a proven treatment, insurance companies typically will deny benefits, leaving a huge financial burden on the family and precious few places to receive hope.
> Six months post-infusion, the progress Ryan has made is more than remarkable; it is phenomenal. He is no longer in need of any physical or observational therapy, as his dexterity in his hands and arms has returned. His feeding issues are gone—were gone within 30 days. He is now at a normal rate of growth. He speaks clearly for a 3 year old, and he does so in sentences. His vocabulary is on target and age appropriate, and he is totally engaged in his surroundings. His pediatrician, neurologist, behavioral psychologist, Easter Seals OT, physical therapist and the feeding clinic are in agreement that these changes have occurred post cord blood transfusion. They can offer us no other explanation, yet we must all err on the side of caution, preventing false hope until proper research is completed.

So you basically see a mother looking for any researcher in the country who will do this. When I talked to the mother last week, she said Dr. Kurtzberg said to her, Yes, I will do the transfusion. The worst thing that can happen here is nothing. This is his own cord blood. The worst thing that can happen is nothing. But without it, he is going the wrong way. Let's try it.

> The OB–GYN that delivered Ryan and collected his cord blood asked me, ''What in the world made you think of that? It is wonderful and very exciting news.'' I got that kind of reaction from the other doctors in Ryan's case and thought, ''How could I not think of it?'' When your child is in trouble, you use all available resources to fix the situation to the best of your ability.
> All of Ryan's doctors are given updates and progress reports as they come. I have come in contact with Dr. Mindy Lipson-Aisen, the National Director of the United Cerebral Palsy Foundation. She would like to see a study begin with this treatment and has offered a grant to make that happen. The Easter Seals Dupage have been very accommodating with Ryan's needs. Based on conversation with them, I am sure that additional funding would be available.

Clearly, more adult stem cell work in this area is something that we need to do, with half a million CP patients in the country and more coming all the time. Why not head this off?

We owe our thanks to the mice and men that helped us get this far, but it is not about them, it is the children and others that may benefit. The resource and treatment accessibility needs to be changed. Funding research for children in need who have access to their cord blood in either a private or public bank will be a low-risk, high-yield and ethical place to start. Ryan and others should not be referred to as an anecdotal response as a society. We all deserve better than that.

Part of my point in mentioning Ryan's story is that as we divert resources from these areas that are working in adult cord blood research and putting half a billion dollars in very speculative, embryonic stem cell research that is still producing tumors, or even in more speculative cloning research, kids like Ryan don't get the treatment from a protocol that has been developed and is actually working. So why do we take a half a billion dollars from Ryan to put it over here in this speculative area that has moral questions as well, and kids like Ryan don't get treatment or we don't develop a protocol or we don't expand it across the country? What sense does that make that we would do that? For the sake of research?

I am for research, but I am more for treating kids like Ryan and getting more of them cured from CP and other diseases. Funding adult stem cells which are working is more important than saying, OK, we are going to prove that something doesn't work over here. We are going to prove that this doesn't work with embryonic stem cells or we are going to prove that this doesn't work with cloning when I could instead be really treating a bunch of kids like Ryan. Why would we do that?

Ryan was on the cover of The Hill newspaper last week flexing his muscles. His mother said his arms used to retract. Now he is on the front cover of The Hill, he has his arms outstretched, and he is showing his muscles like a good 3-year-old. His sister complains that he bugs her all the time, which to a parent is usually a very healthy sign that this is working. These are real people getting real treatments and real cures.

I want to go now to an example that is another miraculous example of a treatment area. I am only giving you two stories of the five that were in last week, and these are only two areas in the 70 that are getting treated with adult cord blood.

This is Jacki Rabon, a paraplegic, an amazing case and amazing young lady. She lives in central Illinois. I have a picture of Jacki here. This is a picture after her adult stem cell treatment. I want to give you the background on her.

Jacki Rabon is an 18-year-old paraplegic. She was on Capitol Hill last week with her mother and sister touting adult stem cell advances in the area of spinal cord injuries. Three years ago, Jacki was a very active 16-year-old who played volleyball in school, and was an outstanding player. In fact, she had hopes of going to college on a volleyball scholarship. All that changed.

She was riding in an SUV on a gravel road when it flipped multiple times. She landed on her back on that country road. She spent the next month in the hospital. Jacki writes:

That day changed my outlook. I was living a nightmare after this tragedy. I really thought my life was over. I couldn't imagine not playing volleyball anymore, jumping on my trampoline with my young nephew, chasing after my niece, or just taking a walk around my small community. Not only does something like this change the victim, but it also seriously disrupts and affects your family. I am a paraplegic with no feeling below the belly button. I had to learn to become independent again; to dress, bathe, transfer from place to place, and take care of my personal hygiene and toiletry issues. It was so difficult, and I struggled with these once simple tasks. After I accomplished these, I was released and allowed to come home. I was simply told, You will never walk again. That was my prognosis.

A 16-year-old paraplegic, an accident, ''You will never walk again.''

Jacki continues:

I got back to school a few months later and that was another adjustment. Everything looks and works differently when you are sitting in a wheelchair. I had to deal with a lot of depression and sadness, but I tried to continue with my life the best that I could. I truly believe that my faith got me through. If it wasn't for this amazing love of God, my strong will and determination, I don't know if I could have proceeded with what my life had become. But I have great determination along with the comforting faith and I didn't intend on giving up that easily. I wanted to give life another opportunity with my new ''lifestyle.''

I would like to pause in the telling of Jacki's story for just a moment. I have asked my colleagues to imagine what goes through the mind of a 16-year-old in this predicament. Beyond the physical pain, try to imagine the mental anguish. You have your life in front of you—endless opportunities in America—and it is taken up in a snap, in an accident—gone. You wake up one morning; all is normal. You get up and you brush your teeth, put on your clothes; you go for a jog and continue on with the day. The next morning you wake up and you cannot move, cannot brush your teeth, cannot put on your clothes or go for a jog. Your entire life has changed.

You desperately long for a cure. You would follow almost anyone or believe almost any story if it seemed credible, if it might produce a cure, if the person had the right credentials and respect.

Unfortunately, some people are putting forward stories and saying we are going to cure this with embryonic stem cells or human cloning, but these areas are not working. You hear, ''If only we have more Federal research money it will work.'' But I want to point out here, in Jacki's particular case, that she had a place to go and an area to try. I want to point out this work was done by a Portuguese doctor, Dr. Lima, and talk to you about Jacki finding Dr. Lima in Portugal and what happened.

Jacki continued, after going through this despair and depression. She writes this.

My world changed again in the fall of 2004. My pastor was watching a PBS show when the special called ''The Miracle Cell'' was aired. It was about a procedure called ''Olfactory Mucosa Transplantation'', being done in Portugal by Dr. Carlos Lima. It involved removing tissue from a patient's olfactory sinus area and transplanting it into the spinal cord at the initial injury site. My pastor called the house and urged us to turn on the show. We did and were glued to the story. I listened to amazing recovery of returned sensation and even the ability to walk again with continued rehab from others after having this surgery. I remember thinking, ''There's my chance!'' I knew I wanted to pursue this possibility for me.

My mom and I started researching this procedure on the Internet and collected as much information as we could. We discovered a Spinal Cord Injury Institute getting ready to open in Detroit, Michigan that summer. This institute was closely associated with Dr. Lima. We called to see if we could get an appointment to go and meet Dr. Steve Hinderer and asked about the procedure in depth and inquire about my chances of getting it done.

I did go to Detroit and was told that I could well be a good candidate. I was given the guidelines and criteria for having this done. After many months of additional testing, x-rays, etc. I was accepted.

This was very exhilarating for me. I had read about the success stories of the individuals that have gone before me. Their various success stories gave me so much hope!!

I had so much support from my family, friends, church, community and surrounding areas to raise the $50,000.00, needed to have this surgery. Without this overwhelming support I could not have gone forward with this incredible opportunity.

I went to Portugal in October 2005. I had the procedure done on October 29th. My experience in Portugal was not all pleasant. My mom and I had to deal with the language barrier and the unfamiliar culture. I returned to the states on November 5th. I rested at home for a few weeks, then went to Detroit to the Institute for aggressive rehab. Rehab was very tiring and indeed very aggressive. It was an exhausting experience but a very rewarding one. It was there that I took my first steps on the parallel bars. I was up!!!

My progress since undergoing this surgery has been amazing!! I have a lot of hip movement, some tingling and heaviness in my legs. I have continued with my rehab regimen at home. I have leg braces that were fitted to me. I can walk on parallel bars and have begun walking with a walker. I am up on my feet again!!!! That's the most satisfying feeling. Unless you have been confined in a wheelchair for an extended amount of time, you can't really know how rewarding it is to be standing again.

This brings me to the ongoing debate over adult stem cell research. I did not think a lot about this issue before the accident but now it has sparked a great interest within me. First, I am very much against embryonic stem cell research and advancement. I do not support this aspect at all. The killing of human life is appalling to me. But with adult stem cell and non-embryonic stem cell research I have become an advocate. My personal experience with adult stem cell transplantation should awaken the United States to the unlimited possibilities. This technique is simply ''your body healing itself''. Medical research in the United States has always been respected and admired for the advances toward cure for cancer, arthritis treatments and medication, heart disease and other well-known diseases and ailments. But when it comes to spinal cord injuries, the U.S. is very much in the negative category. We as taxpayers pay more money in the daily care of a spinal cord injury victim than we do on a cure. Now why is that???? The medical society treats the injury at the onset, then teaches the individual to live in a wheelchair and function accordingly. Then they are sent home and told, ''You will never walk again''. I experienced that first hand.

But I am walking again. I have goals of walking by the end of the year with my braces and crutches. This was made possible by the procedure in Portugal and aggressive rehab. But I had to leave the comfort of my home and country and travel to a foreign area to get this done. Now that is sad, isn't it?

This tragedy that happened to me can happen to anyone. It could be your wife, husband, son, daughter or friend. What would you want for them? Simply a statement, ''You'll never walk again'' or ''Never give up hope—there is a better option for you.''

Wake up, United States!!!! We are missing out. Let's look at the issue in a more personal level—I can walk again.

Sincerely,

JACKI RABON,
Waverly, IL.

Jacki was up last week. She now has feeling in her hips. She is out of the wheelchair. She can walk with braces. She needs more of these treatments.

My point in saying this, why are we sending her to Portugal to do this procedure when this should be done in the United States and researched in the United States? She is probably going to need more of these treatments to get the spinal cord to fully fuse. They take these cells out of the base of the nose, grow them, put them right in the spinal cord area where it has broken, and they start to knit the spinal cord back together. But it is probably not going to be just one treatment. It is probably going be multiple treatments.

She had to do fundraising to raise $50,000 to go overseas to do this. It was not covered by an insurance company. Why wouldn't we develop protocols here to get this done with adult stem cells instead of diverting research money into speculative areas like embryonic stem cells and human cloning? We should put funding into areas to help people like Jacki.

I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a table on the level of funding we have done on embryonic and nonembryonic areas.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Mr. BROWNBACK. I thank the Chair for this time. I also note to my colleagues we are going to have, I hope, a full-scale debate on this in July, and I hope my colleagues would look at where the science is taking us. The moral questions I think are clear. To others they are not. This is illegal and immoral.

The bigger question in front of us now is, is embryonic fully unnecessary? Why would we proceed on this route?

I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Ms. MURKOWSKI). The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DURBIN. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DURBIN. Madam President, what is the order of business?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate is in morning business.

Mr. DURBIN. And the minority side has?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The minority side has 30 minutes.

EMBRYONIC STEM CELL RESEARCH

Mr. DURBIN. Madam President, I would like to follow up on the statement just recently made on the floor by my colleague and friend from the State of Kansas, Senator BROWNBACK. I deeply respect his personal, strong, moral, and religious convictions when it comes to this issue. But I respectfully disagree with his conclusion.

In August of 2001, just a few weeks before the 9/11 attacks, President George W. Bush made an announcement which was virtually unprecedented. The President made the announcement that he was, by executive order, going to restrict medical research in America.

I can't recall that ever happening before. Perhaps there had been decisions made at lower levels that could parallel this, but this was unprecedented, that our leader, our President, would announce that as a matter of policy the Federal Government, the U.S. Government, would limit research, medical research.

Of course, his announcement on how he was going to do it left many people puzzled. It was all over the question of embryonic stem cell research. It is a complicated area that I don't profess any special expertise in speaking to. But my understanding is that when a husband and wife are unable to conceive a child in the normal way, they turn to a process known as in vitro fertilization where they try to replicate in a laboratory what happens in normal human life. They bring together the egg from the woman, the sperm from the man, and join them into a life which is then implanted into the womb of the mother.

I think it is miraculous and a source of great happiness and joy for couples who otherwise would not have children.

There are some religions which believe that this whole process is immoral, that we should not allow anyone to engage in this kind of in vitro fertilization. I happen to believe from an ethical viewpoint that if a husband and wife in a loving relationship are so determined to have a child that they will go to this length and this extent and then God blesses them with a child, that is a good thing. That is my conclusion. That is how I come down on it. So I would not ban this process. I think this process is a positive thing, a positive family value.

But the process, much like the ordinary human process of conception and creation, is not one that is absolutely perfect. In the ordinary process of human conception not all of the communions of this sperm and egg result in human life. Neither do they in the in vitro fertilization process. So at the end of the day when these couples are seeking to have a baby there is left over these potential lives in this little glass dish in a laboratory.

Our debate is about those potential lives. They will never become children. They never have a chance to become children or babies, obviously, unless they are implanted in a mother's womb.

That is the reality. What happens is that many of these couples, after spending extraordinary amounts of money, end up freezing these leftover embryonic stem cells in case their effort is unsuccessful so they can try again.

When they are successful the question then arises, what happens to these embryonic stem cells? If there is no purpose for them, many of these couples say, Discard them; we don't need them anymore. And they are discarded and thrown away

So the question which we face is whether or not those stem cells should be taken and used in medical research. Why would we want to? Because they are special. Because of the nature of these stem cells, they have the greatest potential to be helpful in curing diseases and in dealing with medical challenges that no other branch of research has been able to address.

This stem cell research was addressed by President George W. Bush in August of 2001. He came up with a morally curious position. He said that all of the stem cell lines that had been created to the date preceding his speech could be used for medical research, but no others in the future.

I don't follow the moral argument of how some stem cells can be used with immunity and from that date forward no others can be used. Sadly, the stem cell lines that he identified were very limited. Some had been contaminated. Their potential for medical research is extremely restricted. So the debate has moved from the President's decision to Capitol Hill.

The House of Representatives has passed legislation. If you would pick up the calendar of the Senate, you would find H.R. 810. H.R. 810 is a legislative measure that has passed the House of Representatives and has come to the Senate and has been sitting on this calendar for 1 year. In the course of that period of time, we have received the assurance of the Republican leader, BILL FRIST, a medical doctor, that he will support the passage of stem cell research. For 1 year we have been waiting, 1 year in which thousands of Americans suffering from diabetes, Parkinson's disease, Alzheimer's, Lou Gehrig's disease, spinal cord injuries have been waiting. They have been waiting to get on the political calendar of the United States Senate. I don't understand why we have not called up this bill for consideration.

Look at what we have done in the month of June. We have considered two constitutional amendments which have been defeated, neither of which are high priorities for Americans. Don't take my word for it. In a poll of Americans they said, pick out the most important things you think the Senate can work on, and out of 40 choices that people volunteered, No. 32 on the list was gay marriage—out of 40 choices—and the flag amendment didn't even make the list. We ate up the precious time of the Senate during the month of June on these measures which were defeated. Weeks went by when we could have considered stem cell research, medical research that offers an opportunity for cures for people who are suffering across America.

Then the Republican majority leader said, it isn't enough that we are going to spend time on constitutional amendments going nowhere; we are now going to consider a change in the estate tax which will give extraordinary tax breaks to the richest people in America. The estate tax affects 3 out of every 1,000 Americans who die. Only 3 out of 1,000 pay any Federal estate tax. They are very wealthy people. By and large they make a lot of money. America has been very good to them. They have enjoyed a comfortable life because of their own talents and perhaps the good fortune of being born into a wealthy family.

Senator FRIST has suggested that rather than focus on the tens of thousands of Americans who would be benefited by stem cell medical research, we need to focus on a handful of Americans who are well off and give them a bigger tax break.

I am afraid that is why most Americans are losing hope in this Congress. They look at this Republican-led Congress and wonder, What are they thinking? Why aren't we debating an energy policy for America when gasoline prices are going through the roof? Why aren't we talking about health insurance for the 46 million Americans without health insurance and for the millions who have health insurance that isn't worth much? Why aren't we spending time passing the stem cell medical research bill, which passed on a bipartisan basis in the U.S. House of Representatives?

There is no explanation. The only explanation is, it doesn't fit into the campaign game plan of the Republican leadership. Do you know why? Because when you ask the American people, do you want us to move forward on medical research involving stem cells, 70 percent of the American people say yes.

It is an overwhelmingly popular bipartisan issue which the Republican side is scared to death of. That is unfortunate. We need to call on this.

I guarantee that when we return after the Fourth of July recess, the month of July is going to be stem cell month in the Senate. We are going to, with regularity, come to the floor and not only speak to this issue but ask unanimous consent to move to this issue. And every single day, the Republican leadership will have a chance to say, yes, to give hope to millions of people across America who want to see this medical research go forward or, no, to stick to their narrow political agenda in the hopes that the American people won't notice. I think they will. I think a lot of people will notice this one.

I have had a chance to meet with people in Chicago and across Illinois suffering from these diseases. They are heart-breaking meetings. Sit down with the parents of a child suffering from juvenile diabetes and let them tell you what their life is like as they wake up their little girl two times in the middle of the night to take a blood sample to see if perhaps her diabetes is out of control. Talk to the family of that young man suffering from Lou Gehrig's disease who looks like the picture of health but confined to a wheelchair and can no longer speak. His wife speaks for him while tears roll down his face. Talk to my friend suffering from Parkinson's disease, including my great friend and colleague, Congressman LANE EVANS from Rock Island, IL, a young man suffering from Parkinson's and decided that he must step aside from Congress because of this battle.

Speak to those people and tell them that we have higher priorities than this medical research. I don't think you can. I can't. That is why stem cell month is going to be the month of July. This Senate is going to have its chance. We are going to continue to bring this up until Senator FRIST keeps his promise to bring this measure before the Senate before he leaves at the end of this year.

We are running out of time. America is running out of time. We need this medical research, and we need it now. There are no good excuses left.

MEDICAID DOCUMENTATION REQUIREMENT

Mr. DURBIN. Madam President, it has been less than 4 months since passage of the Deficit Reduction Act. That bill cut Medicaid health benefits for our Nation's low-income children, seniors, pregnant women, and people with disabilities.

One provision of the bill requires Medicaid beneficiaries to present a passport or birth certificate as proof of citizenship before they are eligible for benefits or to renew their benefits.

All States had the legal authority to require beneficiaries to furnish these documents before we passed the Federal law. However, 47 States have made the decision not to require that identification of Medicaid recipients.

Many low-income Americans don't have these documents, and most States have decided that requiring them would create a hardship and a barrier to health care for some of the poorest people in America.

Instead, States allowed written self-declaration of citizenship and had what are called prudent person policies in place if State personnel were suspicious and wanted further proof.

The inspector general of the Department of Health and Human Services conducted a review of these self-declaration policies and found that most States that conducted post-eligibility quality control measures have not found any problems with self-declaration of citizenship. The system was working.

Nevertheless, Congress passed the documentation requirement which will go into effect on Saturday, only 3 weeks after the Department of Health and Human Services sent guidelines out to the States. That is hardly adequate time to implement a very difficult provision.

This is going to hurt a lot of vulnerable Americans. Foster children who met citizenship requirements to enter the foster care system will have to go out and prove that they are Americans.

The 850,000 Alzheimer's patients on Medicaid will have to somehow locate these documents or run the risk of losing Medicaid protection.

Nursing home residents, 75 percent of whom have some cognitive impairments, such as Alzheimer's or Parkinson's or dementia, are going to have to come up with citizenship documents or be cut off from Medicaid.

For example, Kevin Harris, who lives in Chicago, is blind and mentally impaired. Kevin does not have a birth certificate, and his legal guardian does not know where to begin looking because Kevin doesn't remember where he was born. As of Saturday, Kevin will have to find his birthplace or he will become ineligible for health benefits when it comes time to renew.

At the very least, States should have more time to work with these unfortunate individuals who are struggling with serious medical illnesses. Throwing these paperwork requirements at people who are struggling to live day to day is not right.

The Akaka bill, sponsored by the Senator from Hawaii, which I am proud to cosponsor, will allow States to delay implementation of this rule until January 31 of next year. It will give them an additional 6 months to at least get this in place. That will give all of those involved time to figure out how to avoid letting people like Kevin Harris lose health care protection in America

UNANIMOUS-CONSENT REQUEST—S. 3590

Mr. DURBIN. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of S. 3590, a bill to delay the effective date of the amendments made by the Deficit Reduction Act of 2005 requiring documentation evidencing citizenship or nationality as a condition for receipt of medical assistance under the Medicaid Program.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. On behalf of the leadership, I object.

Mr. DURBIN. I thank the Chair. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nebraska.

JAPANESE BAN OF U.S. BEEF IMPORTS

Mr. NELSON of Nebraska. Madam President, I rise today to discuss the devastating Japanese ban on imports of American beef and a bill that I have introduced that would ban imports of Japanese beef until such time as fair trade is resumed and Japan is once again importing U.S. beef. I am raising this issue because of its importance in my State of Nebraska and to the entire American beef industry.

Today, Japanese Prime Minister Koizumi visits with President Bush—in fact, they are together right now. I hope they are talking about the beef ban, but if they are not; I am. It is important that this devastating and unfair ban on U.S. beef does not get ignored.

Japan has now banned imports of U.S. beef for over 5 months. This ban has had significant affects on the U.S. beef industry and it has hit home in Nebraska.

First, Japan used to represent a $1.4 billion market every year for U.S. beef, which equals about $115 million every month—and Nebraska was the leading beef exporting State to Japan. That means Japan's most recent ban has directly cost the U.S. beef industry at least $575 million.

But this is only part of the problem. In December of 2003, Japan closed its borders to U.S. beef over purported concerns about BSE or mad cow disease. Their borders remained closed for over 2 years, until December 2005 and were opened barely a month before closed again in January 2006. This in spite of the low prevalence of BSE in the U.S. herd, especially compared to its prevalence in the Japanese herd.

Second, my home State of Nebraska has been hit especially hard. The beef industry is a big part of Nebraska's economy—we were one of the top States in cattle fed and cattle slaughtered in 2005 and Japan imported $350 million of Nebraska beef products in 2003.

We have estimated that both Japanese bans on U.S. beef imports have caused great damage in the State—up to $875 million and more than 1,300 jobs, including two plants in West Point and Norfolk that were closed due in part because of this ban.

Because of this I write to Japanese Ambassador Kato every week to urge Japan to end the ban as quickly as possible. Each time, I emphasize two main points: (1) That American beef is the best and safest in the world and (2) that Japan needs to end its ban on U.S. beef immediately. Unfortunately, I have now written 18 letters with more on the way.

Because the beef industry cannot tolerate this unfair ban much longer, I have introduced a bill that will ban all U.S. imports of Japanese beef until such time as the U.S. Trade Representative reports to Congress that Japan has actually resumed imports of U.S. beef.

My bill is about fairness and I urge my colleagues to become cosponsors.

I want to emphasize that my bill is about fairness in our trade relations: Japan's ban on U.S. beef simply cannot be considered a fair trade practice.

Last December Japan finally agreed to lift its initial ban on U.S. beef after a long series of negotiations and overwhelming evidence of the safety of American beef.

In January, the very first shipment of U.S. beef to Japan was found by Japanese inspectors to contain a few boxes of beef that did not comply with the export protocol that Japan and the U.S. had agreed to; the very first shipment!

It is extremely important to note that this shipment posed absolutely no risk to human health, it was merely in violation of the strict export agreement between the U.S. and Japan.

And how did Japan react? They immediately banned all imports of U.S. beef. They didn't send the shipment back or even de-list the company that sent the non-compliant shipment.

No, they punished the entire U.S. beef industry for a single instance of noncompliance—a situation that came about because of human error in the implementation of the export procedures—and their actions have caused great harm to a $1.4 billion industry.

I agree that mistakes were made by U.S. officials and facilities. But fair trade requires a reasonable and fair response to mistakes.

Japan's total embargo is not, in my opinion, a fair and reasonable response.

Because of that, I am bringing this matter to the attention of my colleagues on the day that Prime Minister Koizumi meets with President Bush, as a reminder of this unfair trade practice.

I have met with Ambassador Kato multiple times and I greatly appreciate all of his efforts to resolve this situation and end Japan's ban. Unfortunately, the Japanese bureaucracy has dragged this process out entirely too long.

Let me set out a timetable of events and discuss what this slow process has cost the U.S. beef industry in real dollars:

On January 20, 2006, Japan instituted the current ban on U.S. beef imports;

Within the first month of this second ban, two beef processing plants in Nebraska were closed, costing these communities over 1300 jobs and an untold amount of money;

I wrote my first letter on February 22 and by that time USDA had already conducted a thorough investigation of the incident and delivered a report to Japan with its findings and the steps it would take to correct the mistakes;

By the time of that letter, the U.S. beef industry had lost an estimated $116 million in exports;

By the end of March, when Japanese officials finally met with a technical team from the USDA to answer lingering concerns Japan had about beef safety—even though the noncompliant shipment posed no danger to human health—the ban had cost the beef industry an estimated $264 million;

In April, Japan held a series of public meetings to communicate to Japanese consumers that there were no risks to health from American beef. These meetings were held over the course of 14 days at a cost to the U.S. beef industry of an estimated $56 million and the ban now causing about $348 million in lost exports;

On the 4-month anniversary of the Japanese ban, Japan announced that it had reached a basic understanding with the U.S. on the resumption of beef imports, but had not reached any formal agreement to resume imports. The damage to the beef industry topped $460 million when Japan finally reached this basic understanding;

Lately, we have been told that all that is left for Japan to resume importing U.S. beef is for its own inspectors to audit each of the 35 U.S. facilities permitted to export to Japan—and previously re-audited by USDA officials in April. This round of audits just began and will continue through July 21—or just past the 6-month anniversary of the ban when the cost to the beef industry will reach $700 million;

In the time that it takes Japan to re-audit the U.S. facilities, the loss in exports to the beef industry will be $116 million;

And Japan has recently said that they will not resume imports until after they submit a report on their audits—so each day that Japan takes to complete this report, the beef industry loses about $4 million.

Those numbers are only part of the real cost to an important U.S. and Nebraska industry of this slow, drawn-out process; most of the costs we are unable to estimate at this point in time. But the above timeline should serve as a real reminder of what unfair trade practices cost American industries.

I was given another real reminder of the damage caused by this ban at the end of last month. On May 31, I flew around Nebraska to meet with producers, packers and other members of the Nebraska beef industry. They all told me that the Japanese ban has been hard on them and they encouraged me to continue pushing Japan.

I talked to folks at a beef processing plant in Grand Island, where foreign beef sales once made up 16 percent of the company's sales—half of which once went to Japan. They have been hit hard by Japan's ban.

I talked to farmers and ranchers whose livelihoods have been threatened by this ban. Some of them were set to ship beef to Japan when it reopened in December. These producers couldn't emphasize enough the problems this ban has caused them and how it has affected their planning and businesses.

These Nebraskans were clear: our trade arrangements must be fair. They must be based on sound science and not on politics or emotion.

And they all supported my bill. Their message to me was clear: if Japan won't take our beef, there's no reason why we should continue to accept their beef. I couldn't agree more.

Recently the National Cattlemen's Beef Association unanimously voted to support my bill. They too emphasized that fair trade was the driving force behind their support for my bill. The cattlemen's message to Japan was simple: Enough is enough.

The Nebraska cattlemen have also recently stated that they welcomed my bill. They support this effort because they are frustrated that we have not obtained fair trade with Japan. Japan imported $350 million of Nebraska beef products in 2003 and that market has now been unfairly closed for far too long.

Japan's ban on U.S. beef has unfairly damaged the beef industries in Nebraska and the United States. This ban is not based on scientific evidence. It is not the result of real health concerns. It is based on politics and emotion. It is not a fair manner to conduct trade.

That is why I am doing all that I can to push this process along and that is why I will continue to push until trade is actually resumed and U.S. beef is once again on the shelves in Japan and available to Japanese consumers.

That is why I am speaking on the Senate floor this morning while the Japanese Prime Minister is at the White House—as a reminder that our trade relationship with Japan must be conducted fairly.

There has been progress made and I do not wish to discount that. It has come too slowly and at a high price to the beef industry. But progress has been and continues be made.

I do want to mention that I applaud Japan's agreement to refrain from closing down all trade over any future instances of noncompliance. The shared understanding reached last week between the U.S. and Japan includes a provision whereby Japan, upon finding a noncompliant shipment, will only take actions that are commensurate with the nature of the violation.

I believe that. fair trade between our countries requires that action only be taken against noncompliant shipments or, at most, against the facilities responsible for the noncompliant shipment. I do not believe that it is fair to hold the entire industry at fault. I welcome Japan's agreement to conduct trade in this fair manner.

I will wrap up by again asking my colleagues to support my bill and to help send a message to Japan that trade between our nations must be fair.

It is my hope that together our efforts will continue to speed along the process for resuming the beef trade with Japan and will help ensure that when trade resumes between our nations it is conducted fairly.

I close today by reiterating what I keep telling Ambassador Kato: That U.S. beef is the best and safest in the world and that Japan's ban on it should end immediately. I am cautiously optimistic that Japanese consumers will again be able to enjoy U.S. beef before the end of July, but this ban has gone on too long and I am worried about the lingering damage it has caused—to the U.S. beef industry in particular.

I yield the floor.

UNANIMOUS-CONSENT REQUEST—527 REFORM ACT OF 2006

Mr. MCCAIN. Madam President, at the conclusion of my remarks, I will ask unanimous consent to move to consideration of S. 2511, legislation that requires that the law be enforced. That is, that the so-called 527s be made illegal and banned as they properly should be. I will be making that unanimous consent request after the conclusion of my remarks. I have been told the Democrat side will be objecting to moving to the legislation. I regret that very much.

The legislation is pretty straightforward. It requires any organization—including the so-called 527s—that falls under campaign finance contribution limits, as is any objective observer's reading of the law, to follow the law.

I regret we will be unable to move this important piece of legislation. It is simple and straightforward and designed to overcome the Federal Election Commissions's inexcusable failure to interpret properly the original Federal Election Campaign Act of 1974.

I point out to my colleagues that these 527s are a violation of the original Federal Election Campaign Act, now BCRA, known by some as McCain-Feingold. The Federal Election Commission, as in many cases, inexcusably fails to properly interpret the original Federal Election Campaign Act which would halt the illegal practice that has sprung up whereby 527 groups are now spending soft money on ads and other activities to influence Federal elections.

I understand fully the politics surrounding this issue, which unfortunately is going to cause some of my colleagues to oppose any reform. But the time has come to address this issue. We should put political prerogatives aside and do what is best for the American electorate. We need to have this debate. I am committed to working with my colleagues to resolve our differences. Let's bring this bill up, have a debate, and consider amendments.

As my colleagues know, a number of 527 groups raised and spent a substantial amount of soft money in a blatant effort to influence the outcome of the 2004 election. These activities are illegal under existing laws, and yet, the FEC has failed to do its job and has refused to do anything to stop these illegal activities. Therefore, it is now up to Congress to pursue all possible steps to uphold FECA and overturn the FEC's misinterpretation of the campaign finance laws, which is improperly allowing 527 groups, whose purpose is to influence Federal elections, to spend soft money on these efforts.

In McConnell v. FEC, the Supreme Court noted wisely that money, like water, will look for ways to leak back into the system. With the enactment of the Bipartisan Campaign Reform Act of 2002, BCRA, the national parties were taken out of the soft money business. It did not take long before efforts were underway by some to bring soft money back into Federal elections through the vehicle of groups that operate as ''political organizations'' under section 527 of the IRS Code, or so-called ''527s.''

The soft money game is the same with these groups; they are raising multi-million-dollar donations from wealthy individuals, as well as large contributions from corporate and union contributions, and spending that soft money on broadcast communications that promote or attack Federal candidates, and voter mobilization efforts intended to influence Federal elections. We saw, firsthand, how a number of 527 groups raised and spent huge amounts of soft money in order to influence the outcome of the last Presidential election. These activities were prohibited under longstanding campaign finance law but, again, the FEC failed to properly enforce the law. As a result, federally oriented 527s spent over $400 million on the 2004 elections.

It turns out that almost half of the financing for 527 groups in the 2004 elections came from a relatively small number of very wealthy individuals who made huge soft money contributions. According to campaign finance scholar Tony Corrado, 25 wealthy individuals accounted for $126 million raised by 527 groups active in the 2004 Federal elections. This included 10 donors who gave at least $4 million each to 527s involved in the 2004 elections and two donors who each contributed over $20 million. If that doesn't make a mockery of both campaign finance laws, nothing does. Two donors, $20 million each. Over $20 million each poured into the 2004 Presidential campaign.

Opponents of campaign finance reform like to point out that the activities of these 527s serve as proof that BCRA failed in its stated purpose to eliminate the corrupting influence of soft money in our political campaigns. Let me be perfectly clear: The 527 issue has nothing to do with BCRA. It has everything to do with a 1974 law and the failure of the Federal Election Commission to do its job and properly regulate the activities of these groups. The new campaign finance law, BCRA, has successfully accomplished its goals.

Last year, David Broder wrote in the Washington Post:

> As one who has been skeptical of the claimed virtues of the McCain-Feingold campaign finance law, I am happy to concede that it has, in fact, passed its first test in the 2004 campaign with flying colors.

It is important to point out that this was accomplished despite all of the predictions at the time about how the national political parties would be financially undermined without soft money. That was the major source of opposition. This would destroy the national political parties. The national political parties raised more hard money in the 2004 election cycle than they raised in hard and soft money combined during the Presidential election cycle in 2000. In fact, Republican and Democratic national parties raised a record $1.2 billion for the 2004 elections. What is really good about that is the majority of that came from small donors, not large, huge, soft money contributions. They increased that donor base. Again, the Democratic National Committee has more than 2.5 million new donors; the Republican National Committee, more than 1 million new donors; Republican senatorial and congressional campaign committees, 700,000 new donors; Democratic congressional campaign committee, 230,000 new donors. That was the intent of the law. That is what happened.

According to Tony Corrado, the DNC has more than 2.5 million new donors, as I pointed out; the RNC more than a million new donors.

What is the problem? The problem is, the Federal Election Commission, even though directed by the Supreme Court, will still not enforce existing law.

The fact that the overwhelming majority of Federal 527s were created after the enactment of BCRA is no coincidence. Of the 68 Democrat-leaning 527 committees involved in the 2004 cycle, 54 of them were organized after BCRA. Of the 26 Republican-leaning 527 groups in the 2004, 13 were organized after the enactment of legislation which banned the use of soft money in Federal elections.

These groups were set up with every intention of circumventing the law. They could not circumvent the law if the Federal Election Commission would enforce the law. That is why we have to go to court again and again.

For the record, in order to enforce, to write regulations to enforce the BCRA, 13 of the 15 original regulations were thrown out by a Federal court judge—a remarkable performance on their part, remarkable.

S. 2511, the bill I would like to see brought before this Senate, voted on and passed, requires that 527s register as political committees and comply with Federal campaign finance laws, including Federal limits on the contributions they receive unless the money they raise is spent exclusively in connection with non-Federal candidate elections, State or local ballot initiatives, or the nomination or confirmation of individuals to nonelected offices. And it upholds the hard-fought victory of BCRA.

The legislation also sets new rules for Federal political committees that spend funds on voter mobilization efforts affecting both Federal and local races and, therefore, use both the Federal and non-Federal account under FEC regulations. The new rules would prevent unlimited soft money from being channeled into Federal elections through abuse of the Commission's allocation rules.

Under the legislation, at least half of the funds spent on voter mobilization activities by Federal political committees would have to be hard money from their Federal account. More importantly, the funds raised for their non-Federal account would come only from individuals and would be limited to no more than $25,000 per year per donor. Corporations and labor unions could not contribute to these non-Federal accounts.

To put it in simple terms, a George Soros could give $25,000 per year to a single political action committee as opposed to the $22 million he spent to finance these activities.

Let me be perfectly clear on one point. This proposal would not shut down 527s. It would simply require them to abide by the same Federal campaign finance rules that every other Federal political committee must abide by in spending money to influence Federal elections, nor is this bill intended to affect 501(c)(3) or (4) tax-exempt organizations.

Under the Internal Revenue Code, a 527 group is a ''political organization,'' which is a group whose primary purpose is to influence candidate elections or the appointment of individuals to public office. In other words, the 527 groups by definition are in the business of influencing campaigns and have voluntarily sought the tax advantages conferred on such political groups. These groups cannot be allowed to shirk their responsibilities to comply with Federal campaign finance laws when they are spending money to influence Federal elections.

The use of soft money by 527 groups to pay for ads attacking and promoting the 2004 Presidential candidates was not legal. This is not a matter of the new campaign finance law, BCRA; it is a requirement of longstanding Federal campaign finance laws that go back to 1974. That law, as construed by the Supreme Court in Buckley v. Valeo, requires any group that has a ''major purpose'' to influence Federal elections, and spends $1,000 or more to do so, to register with the Federal Election Commission as a ''political committee'' and be subject to the contribution limits, source prohibitions, and reporting requirements that apply to all political committees.

Section 527 groups need to play by the rules that candidates, political parties, and all other political committees are bound by—the rules that Congress has enacted to protect the integrity of our political process. They need to raise and spend money that complies with Federal contribution limits and source prohibitions to pay for ads that promote or attack Federal candidates or otherwise have the purpose to influence Federal elections. They need to spend Federal funds for voter mobilization activities that are conducted on a partisan basis and will influence Federal elections—just like every other political committee.

Some have raised questions about whether it is constitutional to limit contributions to political committees that operate supposedly independent of parties and candidates.

I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD, Madam President, a detailed analysis of these constitutional questions prepared by Professor Daniel Ortiz, the John Allan Love Professor of Law at the University of Virginia School of Law. The memo thoroughly explains the constitutional basis for the legislation we have introduced.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Memorandum

Re: Constitutionality of Limits on Contributions from Individuals to 527 Organizations That Make Only Independent Expenditures

This memo addresses whether S. 271's limit on contributions from individuals to §527 organizations that make only independent expenditures (''527 IECs'') is constitutional. McConnell v. FEC, 540 U.S. 93 (2003), makes clear that it is. In that case, the Supreme Court not only explicitly made this point, id. at 152–53 n. 48, and upheld bans on soft money that were inconsistent with any other result, but also reaffirmed the first principles of Buckley v. Valeo, 424 U.S. 1 (1976)(per curiam), which compel it.

Any doubt that Congress can limit contributions to 527 IECs stems largely from a single source: dicta in the Supreme Court's fractured decision in California Medical Ass'n v. FEC, 453 U.S. 182 (1981) (CalMed). In CalMed, the Supreme Court upheld the Federal Election Campaign Act's (FECA's) $5,000 limit on individual contributions to multicandidate political action committees. At one point, however, the plurality appeared to avoid considering ''the hypothetical application'' of FECA to political committees that make only independent expenditures. Id. at 197 n. 17 (opinion of Marshall, J.). And in a separate opinion, Justice Blackmun, whose fifth vote was necessary for the decision, appeared to suggest that FECA's $5,000 limit could not apply to such committees. He wrote:

''[a] different result would follow if [the $5,000 limit] were applied to contributions to a political committee established for the purpose of making independent expenditures, rather than contributions to candidates. . . . [Political action committees like the California Medical Association are] essentially conduits for contributions to candidates, and as such they pose a perceived threat of actual or potential corruption. In contrast, contributions to a committee that makes only independent expenditures pose no such threat.''

Id. at 203 (Blackmun, J., concurring in part and concurring in judgment). Since independent expenditures could pose no threat of actual or potential corruption, Justice Blackmun thought contributions used for that purpose could not corrupt either. The corruptive potential of contributions, he suggested, depended solely on the ultimate use to which an organization would put them. Dissenting on jurisdictional grounds, none of the remaining justices reached the merits. Id. at 204–09 (Stewart, J., dissenting).

CalMed necessarily decided more, however, than the plurality and Justice Blackmun suggested. Justice Blackmun's own vote (as well as the plurality's) undercut his dictum. The political committee in CalMed argued not just that the $5,000 contribution limit was generally unconstitutional but that it was unconstitutional in a particular way. Even if Congress could limit contributions that the committee would ultimately use for candidate contributions, it argued, Congress could not limit those ultimately used for administrative expenses and possibly for independent expenditures. Brief of Appellants at 34–35, California Medical Ass'n v. FEC, 453 U.S. 182 (1981) (''Like other political committees, CALPAC may make independent expenditures as well as direct contributions to candidates. To the extent it makes independent expenditures CALPAC engages in first amendment activity that cannot be limited given the result in Buckley.'') Indeed, on the court below, several judges would have invalidated the $5,000 limit precisely because of its effect on political committees' independent expenditures. California Medical Ass'n v. FEC, 641 F.2d 619, 647 (1980) (Wallace, J., dissenting) (''A limitation on donations to committees restricts not only funds available for contributions by the committees to candidates, but also the funds available for independent expenditures through the committee framework. It is by repeatedly forgetting this incontestable fact that the majority erroneous likens the . . . donation restriction to the contribution limitations upheld in Buckley.'').

These other uses, however, did not trouble the Court in CalMed. It upheld the $5,000 limit without regard to how the political committee would ultimately use a contribution—a position flatly inconsistent with Justice Blackmun's stated misgivings. If Justice Blackmun's view—that a contribution's ultimate use determined whether Congress could limit it—had controlled, the Court would necessarily have struck down the $5,000 limit at least in part. That limit would clearly have been overbroad insofar as it applied to contributions to political committees that would not be used in ways that counted as contributions to candidates. Congress could have addressed any fear of corruption from candidate contributions in a much more limited and focused way—by limiting only those contributions that political committees would use to contribute directly to candidates. That the Court (with Justice Blackmun's vote) did not strike down the limit on this ground necessarily undercuts Blackmun's own stated position. Despite his misgivings, he himself actually voted to support a broad limit which covered contributions that could be used for purposes of making independent expenditures.

In McConnell, the Supreme Court made clear that this reading—that CalMed necessarily upheld limits on contributions to independent expenditure committees—is correct. In rejecting Justice Kennedy's ''crabbed view of corruption,'' 540 U.S. at 152, which held that only concern for traditional quid pro quo corruption could support campaign finance regulation, McConnell pointed to CalMed as precedent for recognizing ''more subtle but equally dispiriting forms of corruption,'' id. at 153. The Supreme Court made clear first that CalMed upheld limits on exactly those contributions that Justice Blackmun had questioned:

''[In CalMed), we upheld FECA's $5,000 limit on contributions to multicandidate political committees. It is no answer to say that such limits were justified as a means of preventing individuals from using parties and political committees as pass-throughs to circumvent FECA's $1,000 limit on individual contributions to candidates. Given FECA's definition of contribution, the $5,000 . . . limi[t] restricted not only the source and amount of funds available to parties and political committees to make candidate contributions, but also the source and amount of funds available to engage in express advocacy and numerous other noncoordinated expenditures.''

Id. at 152 n. 48 (emphasis added). As the last sentence states unmistakably, CalMed held that Congress could limit contributions to entities that would use them solely for independent expenditures. McConnell then made clear why: CalMed necessarily found that such contributions pose a danger of actual or apparent corruption. As the very next sentence in McConnell explains, CalMed could not have upheld FECA's broad limit on contributions to party and multicandidate committees without necessarily deciding this point. With respect to party committees, the type of committee at issue in this portion of McConnell itself, the next sentence argues:

''If indeed the First Amendment prohibited Congress from regulating contributions to fund [express advocacy and numerous other noncoordinated expenditures], the otherwise-easy-to-remedy exploitation of parties as pass-throughs (e.g., a strict limit on donations that could be used to fund candidate contributions) would have provided insufficient justification for such overbroad legislation.''

Id. at 152–53 n. 48. In other words, if contributions ultimately used to make independent expenditures had no corruptive potential, the overall limit on contributions to multicandidate committees would have been unsustainable. Congress could have justified the limit only insofar as it remedied so-called ''pass-through'' corruption and much more narrowly tailored remedies, like ''a strict limit on donations that could be used to fund candidate contributions,'' could have addressed that. Thus, the overall limit on contributions to multicandidate committees would have been unconstitutionally overbroad if Justice Blackmun's view had been correct. CalMed, then, despite its ambivalent dicta, stands for two propositions: (i) that contributions can corrupt independently of their ultimate use and (ii) that Congress can limit contributions to political committees that the recipients would use to make independent expenditures. Any other reading of CalMed supplants its holding with dicta that no one on the CalMed court itself followed.

McConnell's own treatment of FECA's soft money provisions reinforces both these CalMed holdings. If contributions that were eventually used as independent expenditures on federal elections posed no corruptive potential—if they were always and necessarily sacrosanct—then the Court would have had to strike down many of the soft money provisions it upheld in McConnell, particularly §323(a), the ''core'' soft money provision. Id. at 142. This provision provides that ''national committee[s] of a political party . . . may not solicit, receive, or direct to another person a contribution, donation, or transfer of funds or any other thing of value, or spend any funds, that are not subject to the limitations, prohibitions, and reporting requirements of th[e] Act.'' 2 U.S.C. §441i(a)(1)(Supp. 2003). It makes all funds that the national party committees solicit, receive, spend, or direct—regardless of how the committees intend to use them—subject to FECA's amount, source, and disclosure requirements. Contributions that would be spent in coordination with candidates, contributions that would be spent independently on candidates' behalf, and contributions that would be spent on advertisements that do not even mention the party or its candidates are all subject to FECA's requirements.

In themselves, however, these different party activities pose very different threats of corruption. Coordinated expenditures create a significant danger of corruption, FEC v. Colorado Republican Federal Campaign Comm., 533 U.S. 431, 457–60 (2001)(Colorado II), independent expenditures create less danger, id. at 441; Colorado Republican Federal Campaign Comm. v. FEC, 518 U.S. 604, 615 (1996) (Colorado I) (opinion of Breyer, J.), and speech on pure issues that does not refer to any candidates still less. Yet, those different threats of corruption made no difference to the Court. No matter how a national party committee would put a soft money contribution to use, Congress could ban it. The contribution's ultimate use did not determine its corruptive potential. Rather, the corruptive potential stemmed from the party's ability to give donors access to and influence over its candidates. 540 U.S. at 147–50, 153–54 (influence), 150–54 (access). In upholding FECA's central soft money provision, then, McConnell necessarily found that even though independent party expenditures on behalf of candidates could not directly corrupt, see Colorado I, 518 U.S. 604 (1996), contributions to party political committees for this purpose could. The corruptive potential of the one was a sufficient but not necessary condition for that of the other.

The same analysis applies to McConnell's treatment of FECA's ban on the use of soft money contributions by state and local party committees for federal election activities. Section 323(b) restricts the use of nonfederal funds by state and local party committees to help finance ''Federal election activity.'' 2 U.S.C. §441i(b)(1) (Supp. 2003). As the Court noted in McConnell,

''[t]he term 'Federal election activity' encompasses four distinct categories of electioneering: (1) voter registration activity during the 120 days preceding a regularly scheduled Federal election; (2) voter Identification, get-out-the-vote (GOTV), and generic campaign activity that is 'conducted in connection with an election in which a candidate for Federal office appears on the ballot'; (3) any 'public communication' that 'refers to a clearly identified candidate for Federal office' and 'promotes,' 'supports,' 'attacks,' or 'opposes' a candidate for that office; and (4) the services provided by a state committee employee who dedicates more than 25% of his or her time to 'activities in connection with a Federal election.' §§431(20)(A)(i)–(iv).''

540 U.S. at 162. Significantly, none of these four categories necessarily involves contributions to candidates and categories 1, 2, and 3 necessarily do not unless there is coordination. Thus, if Congress could restrict the use of only those contributions to state and local party committees that the committees in turn contribute to candidates, §323(b), just like §323(a), would have necessarily been overbroad and unconstitutional. McConnell held, however, that Congress could restrict the use of all nonfederal contributions by state party committees ''for the purpose of influencing federal elections.'' Id. at 167. The reason was clear. Although these activities might not pose a threat of state and local parties themselves corrupting federal candidates, they would allow the contributors to corrupt through these committees. As the Court explained it,

''Congress . . . made a prediction. Having been taught the hard lesson of circumvention by the entire history of campaign finance regulation, Congress knew that soft-money donors would react to §323(a)[, the national party committee ban,] by scrambling to find another way to purchase influence. It was neither novel nor implausible for Congress to conclude that political parties would react to §323(a) by directing soft-money contributions to the state committees, and that federal candidates would be just as indebted to these contributors as they had been to those who had formerly contributed to the national parties. . . . Preventing corrupting activity from shifting wholesale to state committees and thereby eviscerating FECA clearly qualifies as an important governmental interest.''

Id. at 165 (internal citations and quotation marks omitted). Section 323(b) is premised on the simple ''judgment that if a large donation is capable of putting a federal candidate in the debt of the contributor, it poses a threat or corruption or the appearance of corruption.'' Id. at 167. McConnell identified, moreover, precisely which contributions ''pose the greatest risk of this kind of corruption: those contributions . . . that can be used to benefit federal candidates directly.'' Id. (emphasis added).

Contributions to 527 IECs pose exactly this same ''greatest risk'' of corruption. Since these organizations must necessarily have the ''major purpose'' of nominating or electing candidates for federal office, Buckley v. Valeo, 424 U.S. at 79, contributions to them, even more than those covered by §323(b), will likely be used ''to benefit federal candidates directly.'' It does not matter how the political committee actually uses them. Contributions used for direct candidate contributions, coordinated expenditures, and independent expenditures all represent ''contributions . . . that can be used to benefit federal candidates directly.''

This is not to say, of course, that all funds ''used to benefit federal candidates directly'' necessarily pose this risk. As McConnell makes clear, ''Congress could not regulate financial contributions to political talk show hosts or newspaper editors on the sole basis that their activities conferred a benefit on the candidate.'' 540 U.S. at 156–57 n. 51 (first emphasis added). Something more is needed. In the case of political parties, the added risk comes from their ''close relationship . . . [to] federal officeholders and candidates.'' Id. Parties, the Court thought, were ''entities uniquely positioned to serve as conduits for corruption.'' Id.

527 IECs pose two special dangers long recognized by the Court that make them more like parties than like ''political talk show hosts or newspaper editors.'' First, just as in the case of §323(b), it is safe to ''ma[k]e a prediction . . . [that] soft-money donors w[ill] react to §323(a) [and §323(b)] by scrambling to find another way to purchase influence.'' Id. at 165. If the law does not cover 527 IECs, they will become the primary means for donors to circumvent FECA's new soft money provisions. Donors seeking to influence federal officeholders—donors who previously would have contributed large amounts of soft money to party committees for use in independent campaign advertising and other federal election activities—will contribute instead to independent expenditure committees for exactly the same uses. Such circumvention, all members of the Court agree, ''is a valid theory of corruption.'' Colorado II, 533 U.S. at 456.

It is, moreover, an extremely powerful theory of corruption. In McConnell, the Court employed it to uphold §323(f), which bars state and local candidates and officeholders from spending soft money to fund communications promoting, supporting, attacking, or opposing a clearly identified candidate for federal office, see 2 U.S.C. 441i(f) (Supp. 2003). In particular, the Court invoked the theory to dispel the argument that soft-money contributions to state and local candidates for such communications could not corrupt or appear to corrupt federal candidates. At first glance, this argument appears a strong one. Without evidence that contributors to state and local candidates were gaining influence and access to federal candidates and officeholders—of which there was none—how could such contributions corrupt? The Court saw an easy answer, however, in ''[t]he proliferation of sham issue ads.'' 540 U.S. at 185. As the Court described things:

''The . . . argument[s] that soft-money contributions to state and local candidates for [the covered] communications do not corrupt or appear to corrupt federal candidate[s] ignores both the record in this litigation and Congress' strong interest in preventing circumvention of otherwise valid contribution limits. The proliferation of sham issue ads has driven the soft-money explosion. Parties have sought out every possible way to fund and produce these ads with soft money: They have labored to bring them under the FEC's allocation regime; they have raised and transferred soft money from national to state party committees to take advantage of favorable allocation ratios; and they have transferred and solicited funds to tax-exempt organizations for production of such ads. We will not upset Congress' eminently reasonable prediction that, with these other avenues no longer available, state and local candidates and officeholders will become the next conduits for the soft-money funding of sham issue advertising. We therefore uphold §323(f) against plaintiffs' First Amendment challenge.''

Id. (internal quotation marks omitted). In other words, the record developed in McConnell showed that sham issue ads had become such a powerful tool of corruption that contributions for this purpose to any entity were necessarily corruptive—even without formal evidence that the contributor expected influence over or access to federal officeholders in return for the contributions. Nothing in the Court's reasoning mentioned, let alone rested on, any special connection between state and local candidates and their federal counterparts. Indeed, the contribution's corruptive potential stemmed entirely from its purpose: to fund sham issue ads that would benefit federal candidates. This is, of course, one of the primary purposes for which 527 IECs put their contributions to work.

The circumvention rationale applies with special force to independent expenditure committees that accept money from the general treasuries of corporations and unions. Independent expenditures from these sources have such great corruptive potential that the First Amendment allows them to be banned completely. Austin v. Michigan State Chamber of Commerce, 494 U.S. 652 (1990); but see FEC v. Massachusetts Citizens For Life, Inc., 479 U.S. 238 (1986) (defining narrow category of ideological corporation not constitutionally subject to expenditure ban).

Thus, corporate and union contributions to 527 IECs would represent direct circumvention of the corporate and union expenditure bans and so could clearly be banned in turn. The ''independence'' of an independent expenditure committee has no power to launder away the contribution's original source.

Second, 527 IECs share with parties—and not with talk show hosts and editors—a central characteristic that increases the corruptive potential of contributions made to them. As the Supreme Court has explained, political ''parties' capacity to concentrate power to elect is the very capacity that apparently opens them to exploitation as channels for circumventing . . . spending limits binding on other political players. And some of these players could marshal the same power and sophistication for the same electoral objectives as political parties themselves.'' Colorado II, 533 U.S. at 455. 527 IECs, like parties and unlike talk show hosts and wealthy individuals, have this same ''capacity to concentrate power to elect.'' As the Court recognized in Colorado II, by pooling individual resources and monitoring, rewarding, and punishing more effectively than can any individual the behavior of federal candidates and officeholders, 527 IECs can ''marshal the same power and sophistication for the same electoral objectives as the political parties themselves.'' This ability heightens the risk of corruption inherent in their power to serve as conduits.

To ignore the relevance of this ''capacity to concentrate power to elect'' would take exactly the ''crabbed view of corruption'' that McConnell rejected. It held instead that factors like a contribution's ''size, the recipient's relationship to the candidate or officeholder [it would support], [the contribution's] potential impact on a candidate's election, its value to the candidate, [and the donor's] unabashed and explicit intent to purchase influence,'' 540 U.S. at 152, are all relevant to determining a contribution's corruptive potential. Indeed, according to these McConnell factors, contributions to 527 IECs would easily qualify as corruptive. Some contributions are so large that they would certainly be remembered vividly by candidates and cast doubt in the public's eye that the contributor enjoyed no special influence over or access to them. The sham issue ads and other activities that these contributions generate, moreover, can have a great impact on a candidate's election—witness the Swift Boat ads in the last presidential campaign—and thus are of inestimable value to candidates. Nothing suggests, in fact, that 527 IEC spending is much less effective than spending by the candidates and parties themselves. It is simply naíve to believe that 527 IEC spending cannot create influence over and access to federal candidates. As George Soros admitted in talking to a reporter, this is the point: ''I've been trying to exert some influence over our policies and I hope I'll get a better hearing under Kerry.'' BCRA and the 527 Groups at 8.

McConnell supports the constitutionality of applying reasonable amount, source, and disclosure requirements to 527 IECs in another important way. It strongly reaffirms the basic principles the Supreme Court laid down in Buckley v. Valeo, 424 U.S. 1 (1976) and later cases, which permit appropriate regulation to prevent corruption and the appearance of corruption. In these cases, the Supreme Court has consistently held that ''contribution limits, unlike limits on expenditures, entail only a marginal restriction upon the contributor's ability to engage in free communication. . . . Because the communicative value of large contributions inheres mainly in their ability to facilitate the speech of their recipients, we have said that contribution limits impose serious burdens on free speech only if they are so low as to prevent candidates and political committees from amassing the resources necessary for effective advocacy.''

McConnell, 540 U.S. at 134–35 (internal quotation marks and citations omitted). And, although the Court has found that ''contribution limits may bear more heavily on . . . associational right[s]'' than on free speech rights, id. at 135, here too it has found their impact limited. Since ''[t]he overall effect of dollar limits on contributions is merely to require candidates and political committees to raise funds from a greater number of persons. . . . [A] contribution limit involving even significant interference with associational rights is nevertheless valid if it satisfies the lesser demand of being closely drawn to match a sufficiently important interest.''

Id. at 136 (internal quotation marks and citations omitted).

Subjecting 527 IECs to the reasonable contribution limit that applies to other political committees satisfies both these tests. First, it does not in any way affect 527 IECs' ability to make independent expenditures. They can spend all their available funds making such expenditures and can make them however they like. All such regulation does ''is simply limit the source and individual amount of donations.'' [Id. at 139. That this requires 527 IECs to seek contributions from a wider range of people causes no constitutional difficulty. See id. at 140 Second, such contribution limits in no way ''preven[t] . . . committees from amassing the resources necessary for effective advocacy.'' [Id. at 135. Again, all they do is change the committees' fund-raising strategy so that they aim for a broader group. Third, bringing 527 IECs under reasonable regulation would ''satisfy[y] the lesser demand of being closely drawn to match a sufficiently important interest.'' [Id. at 136 (internal quotation marks omitted). It would both prevent donors from circumventing §323 (a) and (b)'s ban on soft money contributions to political party committees—money which the parties used, in part, to fund the same activities 527 IECs would engage in—and avoid making federal officeholders subject to improper influence by those who contributed the money that 527 IECs used to aid the officeholders' elections. Both of these governmental interests, the Supreme Court has held, are sufficiently important to justify reasonable amount, source, and disclosure requirements, id. at 144–45, which is what S. 271 would place on 527 IECs.

DANIEL R. ORTIZ,
John Allan Love Professor of Law.

Mr. MCCAIN. As the memo points out, the Supreme Court in the McConnell case spoke directly to this issue and said that such limits are constitutional. The Court specifically noted that in an earlier case, California Medical Association v. FEC, it had upheld the $5,000 limit on contributions to political committees even as to a committee's spending for ''noncoordinated expenditures.'' The constitutional rationale in the California Medical Association v. FEC, as in the case of the soft money ban upheld by the Supreme Court in McConnell, is equally applicable to S. 2511. It is designed to prevent the evasion and circumvention of Federal contribution limits and prohibitions.

It is unfortunate we even need to be talking about this situation today. This legislation would not be necessary if it were not for the abject failure of the FEC to enforce existing law. As I noted earlier, some 527s raised and spent soft money to run ads attacking both President Bush and Senator KERRY. The use of soft money to finance these activities is clearly illegal under current statute, and the fact that they were allowed to continue unchecked is unconscionable.

The blame for this lack of enforcement does not lie with the Congress, nor with the administration. The blame for this continuing illegal activity lies squarely with the FEC. This agency has a duty to issue regulations to properly implement and enforce the Nation's campaign finance laws; and the FEC has failed, and it has failed miserably, to carry out that responsibility.

Let's consider two recent court rulings. First, in its decision upholding the constitutionality of BCRA in McConnell v. FEC, the U.S. Supreme Court stated that the FEC had ''subverted''—''subverted''—the law, issued regulations that ''permitted more than Congress had ever intended,'' and ''invited widespread circumvention''—those are not my words; those are the words of the U.S. Supreme Court in a majority decision—of FECA's limits on contributions.

Additionally, when Judge Kollar-Kotelly threw out 15 of the FEC's regulations implementing BCRA, among the reasons for her actions were that one provision ''severely undermines FECA'' and would ''foster corruption,'' another ''runs completely afoul'' of current law, another would ''render the statute largely meaningless,'' and, finally, that another had ''no rational basis.''

No wonder a Los Angeles Times editorial stated that:

[H]er decision would make a fitting obituary for an agency that deserves to die.

We cannot allow the destructive FEC to continue to undermine the Nation's campaign finance laws.

An article published just yesterday in the Hill points out that the FEC ''is being accused of attempting to intimidate soft-money donors to 527s by targeting the donors for questioning.''

The article also makes note of ''the FEC decision last month not to implement new regulations for 527s this election cycle. That was widely interpreted as a green light for 527s to act without restriction.'' What is going on here? The job of the FEC is to write regulations to properly implement campaign finance laws—not to bully and intimidate those who choose to donate to groups the FEC refuses to regulate.

Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the article form the Hill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Hill, June 28, 2006]

INTIMIDATION SEEN AS COMMISSION EYES 527S' SOLICITATIONS

(By Alexander Bolton)

The Federal Election Commission (FEC) is being accused of attempting to intimidate soft-money donors to 527s by targeting the donors for questioning.

The agency, which is tasked with policing national and congressional political campaigns, is targeting some of the wealthiest Republican and Democratic donors.

Typically such people have escaped tough scrutiny unless suspected of deliberately evading contribution limits through the use of straw donors or other tactics. But recently the FEC appears to have aimed at donors even though it is the 527s that are suspected of evading campaign-finance law.

One prominent GOP strategist has charged that the new tactic is intended to scare big donors away from giving to 527s, which Congress and the White House have struggled to curb.

This is happening despite the FEC decision last month not to implement new regulations for 527s this election cycle. That was widely interpreted as a green light for 527s to act without restriction, as groups such as America Coming Together and Swift Boat Veterans for Truth did during the 2004 election. This was expected to mean such groups would spend even more money this year and in 2008.

But the FEC has not left the same rules in place that allowed 527s to spend $400 million in the 2004 cycle. Late that year, it subtly modified its rules, which would apparently bolster investigations of 527s in response to a series of complaints filed against the groups in 2004.

The new regulation, which took effect in January 2005, stated that 527s would be subject to regulation if, when seeking money, they ''indicated'' to donors that the money would be spent to support or oppose a federal candidate.

Election-agency commissioners such as Ellen Weintraub and Hans A. von Spakovsky declined to discuss the investigations. But strategists close to the 527s say donors are being targeted.

''I know for a fact that the FEC has subpoenaed donors who may have contributed to 527s in past election cycles and believe that technique is more rooted in preventing future donation to other 527s than anything else,'' said Chris LaCivita, a former senior adviser to Swift Boat Veterans for Truth and former head of Progress for America, both right-wing groups.

Another strategist connected with a prominent conservative 527 group, the Club for Growth, confirmed that the FEC is targeting donors.

''I've heard that lots of other groups have gotten subpoenas and requests for depositions of donors,'' said David Keating, the executive director of the Club for Growth, which is tied up in litigation with the FEC. Keating said he was not talking about donors to his group.

''If you look in the 2004 cycle, complaints were filed against virtually every group out there,'' Keating said. ''None of these matters under review have been dismissed.''

In 2004, a coalition of pro-campaign-finance-regulation groups including Democracy 21, the Center for Responsive Politics and the Campaign Legal Center filed at least five complaints against the major 527s: America Coming Together, the Media Fund, the Leadership Forum, Progress for America Voter Fund, Swift Boat Veterans for Truth and Texans for Truth.

Fred Wertheimer, president of Democracy 21, said that he believes all of his group's complaints are pending but that he had no further knowledge of the probes.

Because the complaints, which are 2 years old, have not been dismissed, it is assumed that the FEC has given its lawyers the go-ahead to investigate them.

One Democratic lawyer said the FEC general counsel's office is asking donors to recall the specifics of their conversations and other interactions with 527s to determine whether those groups indicated that donations would be used to support or oppose federal candidates such as President Bush and Sen. John Kerry (Mass.), the Democrats' presidential nominee.

''They're asking a lot of questions of donors about what they were told when they were asked to contribute,'' the lawyer said. ''Who knows what the six-member commission will do with whatever is presented them? There's little doubt that the general counsel's office feels responsibility to show evidence of a violation and this is the route to get there.''

Once the general counsel presents his case to the commission, its members must vote on whether there is probable cause to believe the law was broken. It is not known if the commissioners specifically approved subjecting donors to subpoenas and depositions.

''Their attorneys have been let loose to look into whether . . . the entities violated the law,'' the Democratic lawyer said. ''They're out there trying to gather the evidence. You don't have the FEC as a six-person office approving these inquiries.''

Former FEC Chairman Scott Thomas, who retired last year, declined to comment on an ongoing investigation but said scrutinizing donors would fit the legal approach that the FEC has adopted in regulating 527s. Citing the newly enacted Section 100.57, Thomas said commissioners agreed in 2004 that 527s could be policed most effectively case by case by looking at how they solicited donors.

Thomas said solicitation is a key element in the FEC's litigation against the Club for Growth. He said FEC investigators are likely to look at ''whether there was some indication given to donors in the solicitation process that the funds would be used to support or oppose federal candidates. The focus is what was said when the money was coming in.''

Thomas said past enforcement actions focused on what groups communicated to voters to determine whether they should have political-committee status, a designation that would subject them to contribution limits. Thomas said that approach created gridlock.

Thomas said the regulation change in January 2005 could be used to prosecute groups for activity in 2004. He said it would not apply retroactively in the technical sense but could be held up as a point of consensus among the FEC commissioners about how the laws on the books before 2004 should be interpreted.

''It's going to be arguing that the same analytical concept can be applied for figuring out what happened in '04 cycle,'' Thomas said in response to claims that the general counsel is focusing on conversations with donors. ''That's probably why the FEC was digging for this information, because four commissioners agreed that concept was the best way to analyze these political-committee cases.''

Mr. MCCAIN. The track record of the FEC and its continued stonewalling proves that the Commission is incapable of upholding its responsibilities. The time has come to put an end to its destructive tactics. The FEC has had ample and well-documented opportunities to address the issue of the 527s' illegal activities, and each time it has taken a pass, choosing instead to delay, postpone, and refuse to act.

BCRA has demonstrated that, on a bipartisan basis, we care about making sure that political power in this country does not lie solely in the wealth of big corporations, labor unions, and the wealthiest of the wealthy. We need to uphold and build upon past reforms and not endorse the pursuit of ways to get around or unravel them.

I again point out with this chart that the predictions, when we passed BCRA, were that it would be the end of national parties; that it would prohibit people from any way to be able to contribute to political campaigns, and the parties would suffer mightily. Well, here is the amount of money. Here is the amount of new donors that both parties got. I have to say, in fairness, the Internet had a lot to do with the encouragement of, and ability of, millions of new donors to engage in contributions.

But let me also point out, for those who were worried about the destruction of the political parties and some kind of diminution of their capabilities, the Democratic Party raised $580 million as opposed to $212 million. This is hard money alone, with the elimination of soft money. And Republicans raised $632 million. So millions of new donors took part in the political process. The parties were strengthened.

No longer is it legal for a powerful Member of Congress to call up a labor union leader, a trial lawyer, or a corporation head and say: I need a soft money donation in six figures. And, by the way, your legislation is up before my committee. That is no longer legal and has stopped.

Do we have problems still with too much money washing around Washington in the form of campaign contributions? Yes. And do we have additional measures that need to be taken? Yes. But the first thing that needs to be done is to make the 527s fall in line with the same restrictions placed on any other organization that engages in activities to attempt to influence the outcome of an election.

I want to emphasize, we are not trying to ban them. We are trying to make them subject to campaign finance contribution limits, which are clearly, clearly called for in the 1974 law.

Again, the performance of the Federal Election Commission is really a great national disgrace. And how they can continue to fail to write regulation to enforce existing law that the Congress has passed since 2002 and enforce laws that were passed in 1974 is absolutely beyond comprehension.

Mr. President, I note the presence of my friend, the Senator from Nevada, on the floor of the Senate at this time, so I will proceed with the unanimous consent request at this time.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that at a time to be determined by the majority leader, after consultation with the Democratic leader, the Committee on Rules and Administration be discharged from further consideration of S. 2511, and the Senate proceed to its immediate consideration; I further ask that there be 4 hours of debate equally divided with no amendments in order; provided further that following the use or yielding back of time, the bill be read a third time and the Senate proceed to a vote on passage, with no intervening action or debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ENSIGN). Is there objection?

Mr. REID. Reserving the right to object, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Democratic leader.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, first of all, I want the RECORD spread with the fact of the work Senator MCCAIN did with my friend, and his friend, Senator FEINGOLD, in the now famous legislation, McCain-Feingold.

In my 1998 race that I was involved in with the Presiding Officer of the Senate, I spent $10 million, in the small State of Nevada. My friend, the junior Senator from Nevada, spent the same amount of money. It was equal spending. But the vast majority of that money we spent in Nevada in that hotly contested race was corporate money.

McCain-Feingold solved that problem. When I ran in 2004, as I have told other people, it was as if I had just climbed out of a shower and was clean and fresh. I did not have to accept corporate money, which I believe did not corrupt me, but it was corrupting when you could get these large sums of money, legally, and run them through the State parties and then run these negative ads that we all did around the country.

So I think McCain-Feingold personally was a tremendous blow for freedom and civility in this country. And I will always be grateful to Senators MCCAIN and FEINGOLD for that work.

I have listened to—I was not able to listen to all of my friend's remarks, but most of them I listened to in my office and here. And I say that I believe we have to have a full review of all campaign finance laws. Mr. President, 527s is only part of what I think we need to take a look at. There are foundations that need to be looked at. Some of the things going on with political action committees we need to take a look at. There are a lot of things we need to take a look at. I think at the appropriate time that should be done.

Now, I say to my friend who makes this unanimous-consent request, we have a bill pending in the Rules Committee requiring 527s to register as political action committees.

Now, we have a letter dated June 9 to Senator FRIST, the majority leader, from one, two, three, four, five, six, seven Republican Senators who say, among other things: We oppose taking any action on this bill, S. 2511. And they state specifically that they do not like it. So I am not sure it could be cleared on your side. It cannot be cleared on our side.

I would, on that basis, object and look forward to working with my friend to see if we can do a better job in looking at all the campaign finance problems that we have all at one time, not just 527s. So I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the letter to the majority leader dated June 9 of this year be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

U.S. SENATE,
Washington, DC, June 9, 2006.

Hon. BILL FRIST,
Majority Leader, The Capitol,
Washington, DC.

DEAR MAJORITY LEADER FRIST. As Republicans, we strongly believe in freedom, including freedom of expression and association. We campaigned for office on the principles of a limited and constitutional government. As elected officials we took an oath of office to ''support this Constitution.''

The First Amendment's dictates are a model of clarity: ''Congress shall make no law . . . abridging the freedom of speech.'' Yet the House of Representatives approved a bill (H.R. 513) that proposes new restrictions on speech about politicians and policies to be enforced under the threat of criminal penalties. The House then added the provisions of H.R. 513 to the Senate's lobbying reform bill.

One of the four pillars of a free and just society is freedom of speech. As George Washington once said, ''If the freedom of speech is taken away then dumb and silent we may be led, like sheep to the slaughter.''

The targets of the bill's speech restrictions are nonprofit advocacy groups organized under section 527 of the tax laws. The groups pose no threat of corruption as they are required to disclose all donors, barred from urging voters to support or oppose a candidate, and prohibited from coordinating with political parties or elected officials. Rather than restrict others, we should expand people's freedom of association and speech to political organizations and committees.

While many rightly criticized the McCain-Feingold bill for banning TV and radio ads within 60 days of an election, what justification is there to prohibiting any communication costing over $1,000 that mentions a congressman's name in any medium, 365 days a year, if done through one of these independent citizens' groups?

Some say this bill is needed to stop the wealthy from funding propaganda, but the bill appropriately places no limits on the wealthy to fund speech on their own. Instead, it foolishly restricts the ability of hundreds of thousands of citizens to join together to speak out about the nation's future.

Republicans do not need, and should not attempt, to muzzle their opponents. The increase in free speech over the last two decades made possible by the growth of talk radio, cable TV and the Internet has benefited our Party, which allowed us to promote individual freedom and opportunity that has led to unprecedented prosperity for our nation.

We strongly oppose adding the anti-free speech provisions of H.R. 513 to the lobbying reform bill, or any other bill.

If such provisions are added to legislation scheduled for a Senate vote, we would give serious consideration to supporting extended debate on the bill. It is important that the American public have the opportunity to learn that their freedoms are at stake and have the sufficient time to express their opinions prior to a vote of the Senate.

Sincerely,

GEORGE ALLEN,
JIM DEMINT,
NORM COLEMAN,
DAVID VITTER,
MICHAEL B. ENZI,
JOHN E. SUNUNU,
SAM BROWNBACK.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arizona.

Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, I, obviously, am not surprised at the objection of my friend from Nevada. We need to address this issue. As I mentioned, I do not think we would have to if it were not for the Federal Election Commission's failure to carry out their responsibilities.

I have observed the role of money in politics for a long time. And unless these 527s are brought under control, we are going to see ever-enlarging activities and more and more money being spent through this loophole that has been carved out, unfortunately, and allowed, as I mentioned, two individuals to contribute as much as $22 million each in the 2004 campaign.

I worry very much about one individual donor contributing millions of dollars that would come into a House or a Senate race in the last couple or 3 weeks of a campaign. Obviously, that would be a credible distortion of the process and undue influence. By the way, 99 out of 100 of these 527s come from outside the State or district in which the money is spent. So I hope we can move forward on this legislation. I think it is compelling that we do so

I hope that we can sit down with others and get this legislation debated. As to the unanimous consent request I propounded, I would be glad to have amendments to it, other debate, depending on the will of Senators. We need to take up this issue and bring it under the control for which it cries out. I regret we were not able to do so at this time.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Washington.

WESTERN ENERGY CRISIS

Ms. CANTWELL. Mr. President, last night consumers in Washington State received welcome news; that is, that the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission decided, after 5 long years, that the ratepayers of Snohomish County, WA, do not have to pay Enron $120 million for power that it never delivered during the western energy crisis, for which it sought to charge exorbitant power rates.

The western energy crisis was certainly a tragic chapter, demonstrating corporate greed and the need to make sure we have regulatory fairness. This fight goes back to the spring of 2001. Since then, I have been working, along with my colleagues from the Pacific Northwest and other parts of the country, to make sure that ratepayers were treated fairly. There were many stops and starts in the process. There were times when our faith in the process began to erode.

But one of the high points came last summer when the Senate Energy Committee came together in an unprecedented effort to debate and pass an amendment that basically protected ratepayers throughout the country, to make sure they had a fair shot at justice. This was an important amendment I offered, which made sure that everyone understood that the federal energy regulatory authority was the proper place to decide whether utilities such as Snohomish County PUD should have to pay Enron for power at exorbitant rates, resulting from Enron's market manipulation.

I know the Chair knows this issue well and knows there were many other parts of the country that also were impacted by the same issues. That is why I want to make sure that we give thanks to all the people who played a constructive role in the debate: Certainly, I thank Senator ENSIGN, whose ratepayers in Nevada were facing a similar situation; of course, Senator REID; Chairman DOMENICI, who ran the Energy Committee in a fair and open way that allowed us to have a serious debate. The chairman deserves credit, along with the ranking member, Senator BINGAMAN, for his focus on consumer protection; Senator SMITH, Senator CRAIG and Senator ALLEN, Senators WYDEN and MURRAY, and all my Democratic colleagues on the Committee.

We also had some incredible help and support from the Energy Committee counsel and staff: Chief counsel Sam Fowler and Judy Pensabene, along with other in-depth analysis from Leon Lowery and Lisa Epiphane. These staff people helped us wade through a very challenging legal issue but, in the end, made sure that federal authority stayed where it was, and that that Federal entity gave the ratepayers a chance at the important relief they needed.

The other side of the story is that of the Snohomish County PUD, this is a David and Goliath story, of a small utility that did the job of taking on a big power company. This utility said that it was not going to be forced to pay manipulated power rates. They fought for the ratepayers of their State and for justice to make sure that this never happens again to consumers in America. It shows that sometimes the little guy can win. It shows that the Snohomish County PUD fought back against this fraudulent $122 million bill, and was vindicated in the process.

It was an important battle for them to fight, for the average Snohomish County resident who would have been forced to pay over $400 additional to Enron in utility rates; and for the county's school districts that would have seen a $2.5 million increase in electricity costs. That is money that can otherwise go to hiring teachers or paying for books. And for the businesses and other ratepayers in this county who were impacted economically by the exorbitant rates we have been paying from the western energy crisis and Enron's manipulation, last night's announcement will bring a big sigh of relief.

Now we need to make sure that we get on with the task of making sure that this never happens again. When it comes to energy markets that drive our economy, aggressive consumer protection must be part of Federal regulators' overall objective, when overseeing the wholesale electricity markets. It is far better that we continue to make sure the Federal regulators do their job. If that is what Congress needs to do by passing amendments such as the Cantwell amendment, we will continue to do so.

We also took some important steps in the Energy bill last year by saying that there is a Federal ban on market manipulation; that is, when it comes to electricity markets and natural gas markets. This Senator believes there is still more to be done in other energy markets. Just this morning we woke up to news that BP North America has been indicted for manipulation of propane markets. This is a case that is just starting to be made, but we will hear the evidence.

Our work is not done until we make sure that the Commodity Futures Trading Commission, the Federal Trade Commission, and other Federal agencies have all the tools they need to make sure there is transparency in energy markets; to make sure that propane, jet fuel, oil, diesel, gasoline markets, all are protected with the transparency and oversight necessary to make sure consumers aren't impacted by market manipulation. In the end, it is the American consumer and the American economy that suffer when we don't have functioning energy markets.

I look forward to working with my colleagues to continue to make sure that we protect consumers from exorbitant energy rates, that we do our job at the Federal level to enforce the law and uphold those standards that make these markets work and continue to help our economy grow.

Again, I thank all those who were helpful in the long process to bring justice for ratepayers in the State of Washington and all those who sought to give a good helping hand in the effort to make sure that our Federal laws were held up, implemented, and that we didn't allow this issue to continue to be punted around a variety of bankruptcy courts. But instead, we made sure that justice was delivered to the ratepayers.

I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

TRIBUTE TO NIKKI KIMBALL

Mr. BAUCUS. I rise today to recognize my friend and fellow Montanan, Nikki Kimball. Starting in the early morning hours on June 24, for 19 hours, 26 minutes, and 50 seconds, Nikki put her body through one of the most grueling endurance races in the world.

The Western States Endurance Run is a 100-mile trek through the picturesque mountains of northern California.

Since the 1970s, runners from six continents have traveled to Squaw Valley to push their bodies to the limit.

Following the Western States Trail, once used by the gold and silver miners, the runners traverse some of the most diverse terrain the mountains have to offer.

However, this run is more than just a physical challenge, it is a battle of wills between the determined runners and Mother Nature. When I talked to Nikki, the first thing that she mentioned was the excruciating heat.

The searing heat not only resulted in intense dehydration, it also caused her shoe leather to constrict on her feet resulting in horrendous blisters. Yet, she forged on.

This race became a battle against oneself. As a fellow distance runner, I know the agony that comes with these types of races. Your legs are cramping, your lungs are on fire, and everything in you says stop, sit down, quit. Yet, in the back of your mind there is the little , voice saying keep going, one more mile, you can make it. Nikki listened to that voice, and turned in an epic performance.

Though challenged by hundreds of runners, including many professionals, Nikki coupled her elite physical prowess with an iron will, and won the female division, and placed second overall.

Her performance at Western States is just another addition to her phenomenal athletic resume.

Nikki's running has taken her all over the world and awarded her many honors. She has been selected as the UltraRunning Magazine's North American Runner of the Year, represented the United States on the 100K World Cup team, and has also won the U.S. national snowshoeing championship.

Currently, Nikki is training for the White River 50 mile race in Washington, which is a national championship event.

Yet, Nikki is defined by more than just her running. For all the effort she puts into sports, she puts just as much time into helping the Gallatin and Park County communities as a physical therapist.

Nikki has used her intimate knowledge of athletics to provide accurate insight into many ailments that hinder the citizens of the Gallatin Valley, as well as Paradise Valley, I might add, and all over Montana.

Nikki is an inspiration to all of us. She represents the dedication, iron will, and determination that has come to define our great State of Montana. When you talk with Nikki, you see the spirit and energy in her and also the determination and the will. She is a wonderful person. I am so honored she has graced our State with this win.

Mr. President, is there any remaining time in morning business?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is 15 seconds remaining.

Mr. BAUCUS. I will let that time expire.

CONCLUSION OF MORNING BUSINESS

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Morning business is closed.

UNITED STATES-OMAN FREE TRADE AGREEMENT IMPLEMENTATION ACT

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senate will proceed to the consideration of S. 3569, which the clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 3569) to implement the United States-Oman Free Trade Agreement.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, in 1833, a merchant named Edmund Roberts piloted the U.S. warship Peacock to the port of Muscat, the capital of today's Oman. Roberts bore a letter from President Andrew Jackson to the Sultan Said. Three days later, Roberts and the Sultan signed a Treaty of Amity and Commerce. This was the first treaty between America and Oman, 1833. That treaty with Oman was part of a bigger picture, of course. That bigger picture included Siam, today's Thailand, and Cochin China, today's Vietnam. Edmund Roberts also traveled to those countries to initiate broader commercial ties.

Today we are considering implementing legislation for another treaty with Oman, a free-trade agreement. Today I ask again, what is the bigger picture? From where I stand, the bigger picture is a grim one. It is a picture colored by resentment, frustration, and broken promises.

This agreement, as others in the past, will be overshadowed by the unfair process by which the agreement was considered. The substance of the Oman agreement, like others, is largely good. The Omanis have made real progress in liberalizing their economy, ensuring their markets are open and fair, and improving their labor laws to meet internationally recognized norms. Yet the memories of this agreement that will linger will not be tariffs, labor laws, or intellectual property rights protection. Regrettably, what will linger will be a feeling that these trade agreements were pushed through Congress without appropriate consultation. I don't say that lightly, and I don't say that for partisan purpose because I, frankly, don't regard myself as a partisan; rather, someone who is trying to get the job done, working the Senate's business for the good of all Americans.

The Senate considers trade agreements under what is called the fast-track process. Congress agreed to this fast-track process in exchange for the assurance that the Finance and Ways and Means Committees would have an opportunity to influence these trade bills in what is called a mock markup. In these mock markups, the Finance Committee and the Ways and Means Committee can offer amendments to the bills. Under a fast-track process, that is the last time anyone in Congress gets a chance to change the bills.

During the mock markup of the Oman agreement—we call them mock markups because they are not traditional markups in which members of the committee can offer amendments which are then passed. Rather, the amendments that are offered and passed are really not part of legislation. Again, they are indications of what should be in the trade agreement, indications to the administration that when it sends up a trade agreement, it would be wise to include these amendments which members believe should be included.

During the mock markup of the Oman agreement, the Finance Committee voted 18 to 0 to approve an amendment offered by Senator CONRAD. The committee later approved the amended language unanimously.

But rather than consider these unanimous actions by the committee, this administration simply stripped the amendment from the implementing legislation that is before us today. There was no consultation. There was no mock conference to fairly consider all views.

This kind of process cannot continue. The sad truth is that at the end of the day, it won't. If the administration continues to disrespect the constitutional authority Congress exercises over international trade, there won't be any fast-track process at all. Once trade promotion authority expires mid-next year, it simply won't be renewed. That is not the result I want, but that is where we are headed. I have been warning for years that the process failures threaten to undermine support for the fast-track procedures that allow us to negotiate free-trade agreements, and that is exactly where we are today. Good trade agreements will not receive the support they might because of a widespread failure in the Congress and the administration to listen to the concerns of Congress. And the chance of renewing trade promotion authority when it expires mid-next year is a long shot at best.

As I said during the markup in the Finance Committee yesterday, this disrespect for congressional power and prerogatives—after all, it is the Congress under the Constitution which sets trade policy—is not confined just to trade agreements. It runs to other matters as well, an accumulation of matters. It runs to other pressing issues of national concern.

The administration dismisses congressional inquiries as unnecessary or harmful—legitimate inquiries—and the administration issues Presidential signing statements indicating the administration's intent to ignore whatever provisions of the law it chooses. I believe the Senate has not been sufficiently aggressive in asserting its authority as a coequal branch of Government. I commend Senator SPECTER for holding a hearing in the Judiciary Committee on Presidential signing statements. As an institutional matter, and for the good of the country, the Congress must act as a check on the power of the executive branch. Our Founding Fathers set the Constitution up that way. We were set up for one to check the other, not for one to run roughshod over the other, which is beginning to happen.

After much consideration and deliberation, I have decided to support this Oman Free Trade Agreement. It was not an easy decision, but I will do so because I believe that Oman and the Omani people should not be punished by the unfair process that tarnishes an otherwise good agreement.

Let me assure you that I will not forget these shortcomings and process failures after this vote. Let me assure you as well that the effects of these shortcomings and failures will continue to be felt when we consider further trade agreements and when we consider trade promotion authority next year.

The administration must understand that its action on this agreement will have effects far beyond and long after this agreement. I would like to work with the administration to repair the damage done. It will be a difficult job, but for the sake of the Senate and the Nation's economic well-being, we must begin that work.

Mr. President, I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I yield myself such time as I might consume on the Oman Free Trade Agreement.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is recognized.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a unanimous consent request?

Mr. GRASSLEY. Yes, I will.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I be recognized at such time the Senator completes his statement.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, before I speak to the issue of the Oman Free Trade Agreement, I wish to take advantage of the opportunity to remind the public that trade agreements are not treaties, as we usually think of treaties, with just the Senate approving treaties with a two-thirds vote and the House of Representatives having nothing to do with a treaty. A free-trade agreement is negotiated by the President but must be approved by both Houses of Congress the same way that legislation is passed, except it is done under a time agreement under law with the idea that the agreement will be voted up or down and not amended But when the dust settles, it is the law of our land, just like any other law that Congress would pass.

Taking that into consideration then, the rationale behind that is the fact that the Constitution gives the Congress of the United States, as one of its specific 17 powers, the power to regulate interstate and foreign commerce. A free-trade agreement is foreign commerce. Congress has the authority completely—no questions asked—about what our trade laws are going to be.

Until the 1930s, for the most part, Congress passed those pieces of legislation, and that was the law after the President signed them. But starting in the 1930s, Congress would, to a greater extent or lesser extent from time to time, give the President the authority to negotiate certain agreements, and then Congress would approve them.

Since World War II, we have had a regime for 45 years that we called the General Agreement of Tariffs and Trades. Since about 1993, it has been referred to as the World Trade Organization, or WTO.

In not exactly the same way, but from time to time, Congress, in order to negotiate agreements since World War II, has extended authority to the President to negotiate those agreements, not because Congress wanted to give up any congressional authority as the Constitution prescribes over foreign trade, but, as a practical matter, if you are going to negotiate with another country, rather than unilaterally setting policy, Congress, as a body of 535 people, can't negotiate with another country or, for sure, with the World Trade Organization that has 149 members very efficiently, and never even tried. So from time to time we have negotiated—or we have delegated—to the President of the United States, under strict guidelines, the authority to negotiate for Congress with an understanding that—well, under the Constitution with the practical end result that it has to be passed by the Congress of the United States by a majority vote in both Houses to become the law of the land.

Congress doesn't just willy-nilly say to the President: You negotiate any sort of an agreement you want. In the basic law, there are some stipulations—not very many but some—but, more importantly, for the Congress to preserve its power and not give the President of the United States free reign. We have a consultation process within what we now call Trade Promotion Authority where, during the process of negotiating multilaterally under the World Trade Organization, or negotiating bilaterally with another country, that the President and his negotiators would come to Congress whenever we would invite them, or even on their own initiative, and sit down and talk, sometimes in informal sessions, sometimes in regular committee meetings, to find out how the negotiations are going and what the problems are.

But the most important thing is for that negotiator and that agency to hear what Congress says needs to be done, what our input is, with the idea that if they don't negotiate something that Congress can pass, what good is doing the negotiation? So that consultation process is very important.

Now, sometimes I feel that there has not been enough consultation, and because I am chairman of the committee that has jurisdiction over that, sometimes I can legitimately claim fault for not having enough consultation, although we have considerable. And any members of the committee should likewise—the other 19 members of the committee should likewise feel that if there is not enough consultation, then maybe they have not been forward enough in preserving the constitutional power of the Congress and the specific authority of our committee to make that consultation happen.

Now, what sometimes happens—maybe every time—in bringing a Free Trade Agreement before our committee before it comes to the floor, there is an outburst on both sides of the aisle about not having consulted enough and that the process might be a sham. Well, the extent to which people feel that is the situation, then I guess I plead with myself as chairman of the committee, I plead with members of the committee, that we need to make more specific requests of the administration to come and talk to us about these agreements.

That can be going on right now in regard to the Doha round of negotiations that are going on between the United States as part of the World Trade Organization involving another 148 countries, or it can be going on right now anytime the committee members want it to happen in our process of negotiations with Thailand bilaterally, South Korea bilaterally, Egypt bilaterally, and there are other countries as well.

So I hope that each one of us in Congress feels that we are adequately safeguarding our constitutional authority. But I hope nobody lives in the wonderland that somehow Congress ought to be negotiating directly with these other countries because we don't have that capability or the time. But we ought to make sure that we don't compromise one iota the constitutional power that we have been given and that w have to cherish and protect.

I rise in strong support of the United States-Oman Free Trade Agreement. The agreement will help cement our ties with a strong ally in the Middle East. It will contribute to greater economic opportunity and prosperity in the region. It will serve as a strong model for other economies in the region, and it will create new market access openings for farmers, manufacturers, and service providers in the United States. So I urge my colleagues to support the agreement in a strong bipartisan fashion.

We have enjoyed beneficial relations with Oman for nearly 200 years. In 1833, Oman was one of the first Arab states to sign a Treaty of Amity and Commerce with the United States. It was also the first Arab country to send an ambassador to our country. Our agreement with Oman is the fifth trade agreement that we concluded with a country in the Middle East.

It brings us one step closer to our President's vision of having a Middle East free trade area by 2013. The President's goal is very simply the same as every other free-trade agreement: to foster economic growth. But it isn't just an economic issue. It has something to do with promoting democracy, and millions of people every day doing business agreements around the world is going to do more for world peace than what we who are elected and our diplomats can do. So you ought to see a free-trade agreement not only economically in our interests, but promoting moral principles of democracy and peace through enhanced commercial ties with the world generally; in this case, to a greater extent with the Middle East.

The fact is, open economies that are actively engaged in international commerce tend to grow at much higher rates than closed economies, and that translates into greater economic opportunity. So a free trade area is in the best interests of the people of the Middle East, and it is in our best interests as well, but it is also in the interests of stabilizing that area and having peaceful relations and greater peace around the world.

This agreement enjoys strong support in the business community and in the agricultural community. It has been endorsed by a number of groups. I can't name them all, but I think it is important to note that the American Farm Bureau Federation, the American Chemistry Council, the Association of Equipment Manufacturers, the National Foreign Trade Council, and the U.S.-Middle East Free Trade Coalition are among those of over 110 companies and associations supporting trade expansion in the Middle East, including this agreement.

These groups recognize that this is a commercially meaningful agreement that is leveling the playing field for U.S. businesses. In the United States, Omani products already receive a substantial market access, with most duties ranging from zero to 5 percent. Without this agreement, U.S. exports won't have a level playing field, and haven't up until now had a level playing field, because they would continue to face those steep tariffs that Oman now has and will be giving up with this agreement.

While the economic effect of the agreement may be small in total world trade, it will certainly be possible. Upon entering into force—in other words, when it becomes the law of our land—this agreement will have Oman grant immediate, duty-free entry to virtually all U.S. industrial and consumer products. As examples, in agriculture, 87 percent of Oman's tariff lines will go to zero for U.S. agricultural exports on day one of the agreement and the remaining tariffs will be phased out over 10 years. U.S. service providers will also receive substantial improvement in market access. I have constituents who are interested in seeing this agreement implemented, and I expect many of my colleagues do as well.

I will give you just a few examples. A small business located in Cedar Rapids, IA, Midamar Corporation, will benefit from new opportunities and low costs for specialty food exports that are specifically processed for Muslim diets. The HNI Corporation in Muscatine, the second largest manufacturer of office furniture in North America, will benefit. It has a fast-growing market in the Middle East. HNI expects to forge new business ties in Oman once the agreement enters into force.

Another company is Lennox in Marshalltown, IA, manufacturing heating and cooling products. This agreement will promote increased exports for Lennox.

In sum, I expect this agreement will have a real and positive impact for my constituents in Iowa, preserving or establishing good-paying jobs, because exporting jobs pay 15 percent above the national average, and if it does that in the State of Iowa, it will be the same across the United States.

In addition to pointing out the benefits of the agreement, I would respond to just a few criticisms. Some are alleging that this agreement will provide foreign port operators an absolute right to establish and acquire operations to run port facilities in the United States. That is just plain wrong.

The truth is, nothing in our agreement with Oman diminishes our right to determine for ourselves whether to block or unwind any foreign investment in the United States when the protection of essential security interests are at stake That includes any potential investment in land or site aspects of port activity in the United States. So our ability to advance our national security and promote it and protect it as we see fit remains fully protected under this agreement.

Separately, some colleagues have been critical of the process by which this agreement has come before the Senate. In this respect, I am repetitive of how I opened my remarks. In other words, I want to make it clear that this has received substantial consideration by the Congress of the United States. We concluded our negotiations with Oman on October 13, 2005, with 7 months at the negotiating table and opportunities for Congress to be consulted during that period of time. The administration did that, both at the Member and staff level, throughout negotiations. The agreement was signed January 19, this year, and our own Government's agency, called the International Trade Commission, issued its report on likely economic effects of the agreement in February of this year.

The International Trade Subcommittee of my Finance Committee held hearings on this agreement on March 6. The Finance Committee met May 18 to informally consider proposed legislation implementing this agreement—the proposal that is pretty much as we have it before our body this very minute.

During the committee's informal consideration, I introduced a chairman's modification to the proposed statement of administrative action. My modification called upon the administration to monitor and report on the Omani efforts to prohibit compulsory or coerced labor.

The administration took my modification and broadened it. The statement of administration action that accompanies the bill to the floor of the Senate this very day contains a commitment from the administration to update Congress periodically on the progress that Oman achieves in realizing all commitments made to labor law reform. I believe that is an improvement, even on my own modification. It is an example of how the process of trade promotion authority worked in this case and is a specific case of what I was trying to describe in the opening of my statement.

In sum, this is a strong trade agreement with an important ally. I urge my colleagues to enthusiastically support the implementation of legislation before the Senate.

I yield the floor under the previous unanimous consent agreement so that Senator DORGAN can have it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. GRAHAM). The Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I regret I do not agree with my colleague on the merits of this issue. But I do not regret coming to the Chamber to speak on behalf of American workers, on behalf of our country's interests. I come, once again, to talk about a trade agreement that I believe is not consistent with what our country should be doing.

Let me talk about priorities. We have so many issues in front of us.

The other day, I read that the price of prescription drugs has risen triple the rate of inflation in the first 3 months of this year with the advent of this new Government prescription drug program for Medicare recipients. Is there any action on that? No. That provokes a very big yawn here in the Senate.

We have the highest budget deficits in history. We are going to add about $1.4 trillion in debt to this country's shoulders this year—$700-plus billion of trade deficits this year. We are going to borrow, increasing the Federal debt $600-plus billion this year.

We have significant challenges in education and health care.

We have enormous challenges abroad. Obviously we are involved with respect to the war on terrorism. There is a war in Iraq. There is no proposition that anybody should pay for that war. Hundreds of millions of dollars have been brought to the floor of the Senate to pay for it, with the entire cost being added to the Federal debt. We send men and women to risk their lives in Iraq. Some make the ultimate sacrifice on behalf of their country and lose their lives. But there is no discussion here about whether anyone else should probably sacrifice some and be paying for the cost of this. In fact, the administration does not even put money in their budget, when they send their budget to us, for the operations in Iraq and Afghanistan. They do not put the money in because they know then they can ask for emergency funding and just add it to the top of the debt.

We have a lot of challenges. We cannot get action on the floor by this Congress on the subject of stem cell research which will begin, I hope, to unlock the mysteries of dreaded diseases—Parkinson's, Alzheimer's, cancer, heart disease, diabetes, and more. Unlocking the mysteries of those diseases is saving lives. It is pro-life. We can't get a bill on the floor of the Senate to deal with that because we are blocked from considering stem cell research on the floor of the Senate.

We need reimportation of prescription drugs so we can put pressure on the drug companies to lower the price of prescription drugs for the American people. We pay the highest prices in the world for prescription drugs, and it is unfair. The U.S. consumer pays double, triple, in some cases 10 times the price of prescription drugs that is charged to virtually every other consumer in the world, and we can't get a piece of legislation on the floor of this Senate to consider allowing the reimportation of the identical drug, often a drug that was made in this country and then shipped to Canada.

We can't do those things. Those are not priorities for those who schedule the floor of the Senate. But we can bring to the floor of the Senate today a trade agreement, a free-trade agreement with the country of Oman. Here we have another chapter in a book of failures—a free-trade agreement with Oman.

Oman is a country with 3 million people run by a Sultan. I don't come to the floor to in any way cast aspersions or to denigrate the country of Oman. I have not been to Oman. But I do know a lot about trade agreements. I have studied them. And this is what they are ultimately about: the exporting of American jobs to countries where people work for 30 cents an hour and you can work them for 12 to 14 hours a day, 7 days a week. This has caused at least 3 to 4 million jobs to be eliminated from this country.

These free-trade agreements—and this Oman deal is yet another—these free-trade agreements have given the green light to say: Yes, let's ship American jobs overseas; and by the way, even as you ship American jobs overseas, you can bring in low-wage labor from our southern border; and by the way, you can run your income through the Cayman Islands so you don't have to pay taxes.

My colleagues are tired of hearing about the Ugland House, but I am reluctant to mention it again. There is one little house on Church Street in the Cayman islands. It is, I believe, four stories. It is called the Ugland House. It is home to 12,748 corporations. They are not there, of course. That is their official address in order to avoid paying U.S. taxes.

At any rate, these trade agreements, the so-called free-trade agreements, are agreements that in most cases are reached in secret negotiations, are then brought to the Congress under a procedure called fast track. The Congress has actually voted on it. I voted against it. It is absolutely preposterous that Congress decided to say, let's wake up in the morning and put ourselves in a straitjacket and pass legislation that makes sure we can't offer amendments to a trade agreement. That is unbelievable, that Congress has done that, but it has. So we now bring this to the floor under something called fast track.

Fast track means this: Take it or leave it. Here is the agreement. You didn't have any participation in drafting this trade agreement, you have no ability to alter this trade agreement, but take it or leave it, vote up or down, yes or no. That is the process.

With respect to this trade agreement, they actually have begun to do a procedure called a mock markup. In my hometown, you would know what a mock markup is: it is not a markup, it is just a mockery. So they had a mock markup here in the Senate Finance Committee.

My colleague, Senator CONRAD, and I believe Senator BINGAMAN, offered an amendment to the mock markup of a free-trade agreement that is going to be brought to the floor under fast track. That doesn't even sound like English, does it—a mock markup brought to the floor under fast track? So the mock markup is held, and my colleagues offer an amendment that would ban products coming into this country that is produced from sweatshops or slave labor. It passed unanimously in the Finance Committee, in the so-called mock markup.

It turns out that the markup was a mock, or a mockery, because even though that provision passed unanimously, it is not in the trade agreement that emerged on the floor of the Senate. The question is, What has happened to that amendment which was offered in the Senate Finance Committee? Where in the world is Carmen San Diego? Where is this amendment? Maybe we ought to send teams out to look for this amendment. The amendment passed. It was unanimous. But it has just disappeared. Another famous disappearing act.

This trade agreement with Oman is not the largest trade agreement. This is not CAFTA, this is not NAFTA, this is not the free-trade agreement of the Americas. Oman is a relatively small country, and in saying that I do not mean to offend Oman. This is not about whether I think Oman is a wonderful country or not a wonderful country. I want to talk about the ingredients of this trade agreement.

Let me talk a bit about the major concerns I have with this particular trade agreement with Oman. First of all, let me talk about the organizations that oppose this trade agreement. The AFL–CIO, Communications Workers of America, Teamsters, League of Rural Voters, National Farmers Union, Presbyterian Church USA Washington Office, Sierra Club, United Methodist Church, United Steel Workers, Western Organization of Resource Councils, and many more.

Like NAFTA and CAFTA and all the other acronyms that describe recent failures, this agreement fails to put any meaningful protections or any meaningful labor or environmental provisions in the labor agreement. So the lack of any effective provisions dealing with labor or the conditions under which goods will be produced to be sent to America means that it is just ''Katey, bar the door''; whatever happens, happens; we are not going to care much about that.

But particularly recent revelations of massive labor abuses in Jordan should give everyone some pause. The agreement with Jordan was supposed to represent the gold standard with respect to labor standards. Now we have seen recent examples of what has happened in parts of Jordan; that is, human trafficking, 20-hour workdays, widespread failure to pay wages.

Let me talk about last month's New York Times story, which described how a free-trade agreement with the country of Jordan was used to produce sweatshops all over Jordan. It turned out when the agreement was signed in 1999, companies began to fly in so-called guest workers to Jordan from countries such as Bangladesh and China to make products in Jordan to sell at stores in this country—Wal-Mart, Target, and so on. The conditions of these so-called guest workers can only be described as slave-like. Let me read from the New York Times piece:

> Propelled by a free trade agreement with the United States, apparel manufacturing is booming in Jordan, its exports to America soaring twentyfold in the last five years. But some foreign workers in Jordanian factories that produce garments for Target, Wal-Mart, and other retailers are complaining of dismal conditions—of 20-hour days, of not being paid for months, and of being hit by supervisors and jailed when they complain.

Those are the conditions of sweatshop labor that manufacture products in Jordan—by the way, products that used to be produced in this country when we had a textile industry providing jobs to Americans, but that has all migrated.

The question is, Should this sort of thing exist in sweatshops—not only in Jordan but in other parts of the world—to allow products to be produced under these conditions and sold in the United States? The answer to that is clearly no.

Now, consider this: this agreement with Oman provides weaker labor provisions than existed with respect to Jordan.

So with the supposedly good agreement in Jordan, we ended up seeing workers from countries like Bangladesh being flown to Jordan, and forced to work not a 40-hour workweek, but a 40-hour shift, $50 for 5 months of work for one worker, and frequent beatings of workers who complain.

Let me show you some pictures—pretty ugly pictures—from Bangladesh. I will show them for a reason, because it relates to trade agreements that don't have labor protections, and it shows you the face of this global economy. These pictures were taken by a journalist who witnessed firsthand the beating of workers in Bangladesh. Here is an example of a picture taken by a journalist of the beating. This, tragically, is a man shot through the head—a worker subjected to violence and killing. This is another picture of the beatings. Let me show a picture of four young women, if I might, very young girls. You will notice that they are tied together—working in factories, tied together to prevent them from escaping.

Should there be labor standards in trade agreements? Do we give a damn about this? Does this country care about this? I hope it does. But there is no evidence of it because we are going to pass another trade agreement today with no labor standards at all.

So all of the folks in this country who lost their jobs because they wouldn't work for 30 cents an hour, all the folks in this country who saw their jobs moved to Bangladesh, Indonesia, to Sri Lanka, to China, and elsewhere because those who want to produce can find a way to produce it there for 30 cents an hour, not pay health care benefits, work people in unsafe factories, and work them in conditions of sweatshop labor, to all of those people, I ask this question on their behalf: Is this what competition is about? Is this what this country should allow—allow the import of jobs in these circumstances? The answer is clearly no. Yet this Congress will not put labor standards in a trade agreement. It will not require an administration to put labor standards in a labor agreement. The only one which included labor standards was Jordan.

I just described to you the sweatshops in Jordan by which Bangladeshis and others were flown by the planeload into Jordan to work in sweatshops that produce products to be sent to American shelves. I believe it is an outrage. It ought to be corrected. But it is not going to be corrected with this kind of trade agreement.

I recall the movie ''Casablanca.'' I guess everybody understands the famous words in ''Casablanca'' when the French police chief said he was ''shocked.'' He said: I am just shocked to find gambling in Rick's Café. Of course, he wasn't shocked. Everybody knew there was gambling in Rick's Café in ''Casablanca.''

These pictures ought to shock the sensibilities of everybody. But on some level, we all understand this is going on. It's just a question of whether we are willing to do something about it. Is this country willing to do something about it? And if so, when? If not now, when? Yet this trade agreement does not do a thing about it.

The country of Oman has 3 million people, and half a million people in Oman are so-called guest workers. In fact, the majority of Oman's workers involved in manufacturing and construction are not from Oman at all. The majority of the workers in Oman are brought in from Bangladesh, Sri Lanka, and other poor countries under labor contracts to work in construction and factories.

The State Department's 2004 Report on Human Rights cited Oman for cases of forced labor. And I quote:

> The law prohibits forced or compulsory labor, including children. However, there were reports that such practices occurred. The government did not investigate or enforce the law effectively. Foreign workers at times were placed in situations amounting to forced labor.

They have changed the report just a little bit in anticipation of having an Oman free-trade agreement brought to the floor, but the fact is that this happens in Oman, and we know it happens in Oman.

There are no labor unions in Oman. In 2003, the Sultan of Oman issued a Sultanic decree which categorically denies workers the right to organize and join unions of their choosing. Under some circumstances, I am told that workers in Oman can join ''representative committees,'' but they are not independent of employers. The Sultan of Oman has written to the USTR, our trade ambassador, and promised that he will improve Oman's labor laws by October of this year; that is, after the Senate has voted to approve a free-trade deal with Oman.

The labor provisions in the Oman Free Trade Agreement are much weaker than the labor provisions in the Jordan trade agreement, as I indicated. They simply ask Oman to follow its own laws and its own self-policing. If the supposedly model agreement on labor with Jordan was such a disaster, think of what it will be with respect to the country of Oman. But under fast-track rules, no one has an opportunity to offer any amendment under any of these provisions.

Now, let me describe another point with respect to Oman. After going through a heated debate some months ago over whether Dubai Ports World should be able to manage a half dozen of America's major seaports, we now find that there is a provision buried in annex II of this trade agreement with Oman, which says that Oman has the right to acquire companies that operate U.S. ports, and there is not a thing we can do about it. This provision in the agreement was added to a list of U.S. infrastructure functions that Oman can't be precluded from acquiring: It is as follows:

> [L]andside aspects of port activities, including operation and maintenance of docks, loading and unloading of vessels directly to or from land, marine cargo handling, operations and maintenance of piers, ship cleaning . . .

There was a great deal of controversy about whether the United Arab Emirates and a company owned by that government called Dubai Ports World should be able to take over the management of a half dozen of America's seaports. The answer from this Congress was absolutely not; this country ought to have the capability to manage, for national security purposes and other purposes, its own seaports.

Well, guess what. We have a trade agreement that comes to the floor of the Senate which says, it is going to be all right if Oman takes over our ports. Or for that matter, if a company from the United Arab Emirates that has a subsidiary in Oman takes over our ports.

The folks at USTR say: Don't worry, be happy. There is an exception in the Oman trade agreement that allows us to block acquisitions for national security reasons.

Well, sure, that national security provision is in the agreement. But it means nothing if the President is determined to let the deal go through.

Here is what the President said about the managing of U.S. ports by the United Arab Emirates. He said this on February 2, 2006:

> Brushing aside objections from Republicans and Democrats alike, President Bush endorsed the takeover of shipping operations at six major U.S. seaports by a state-owned business in the United Arab Emirates. He pledged to veto any bill Congress might approve to block the agreement.

The President quite clearly has told the American people that he thinks it is fine to have the United Arab Emirates run America's seaports. Do you think he would think it was not fine for a company owned by the Government of Oman to run America's seaports? It doesn't seem to me he would have great objection to that. What do the supporters of this agreement have to say to this point?

So this is where we are. They have a mock markup and then create a mock trade agreement and have a mock disappearance of a provision dealing with sweat labor, sweatshop labor, and then you bring it to the floor, and we have a mock debate. Everybody is very quiet about it. Then we have a vote on the floor of the Senate, and then it passes. It always passes because there are not enough Senators here who care about this question.

We import $2 billion a day from around the world above that which we export. Each and every day, we are going $2 billion more into debt to the rest of the world. Said another way, each and every day, we sell $2 billion worth of America to foreigners. Each and every day. And $700-plus billion a year in trade deficits. We shuffle around here like there is no hurry, no rush, no worry, be happy. It is unbelievable to me. This is a very serious, unsustainable problem. We cannot sustain this. It will cause a collapse of the dollar, and it will cause economic difficulties you can't imagine unless this Congress gets serious and this administration and this President get serious and decide this is a serious issue which must be solved.

I have spoken often on the issue of trade, and I know there are disagreements about these things. Let me describe the other side of it because I can describe it easily.

They say that all who raise these questions are a bunch of xenophobic, isolationist stooges; you do not have the foggiest idea what is going on. You can't see over the horizon. This is a globalized economy. The world is flat. Are you crazy? You want to build walls around our country? What are you thinking about? That is the other side. Therefore, they say, let's have free trade agreement after free trade agreement because it is a global economy and it will all turn out just fine. Of course, after each and every agreement we have reached, we have had bigger and bigger problems.

We had a small trade surplus with the country of Mexico. We have a trade agreement with Mexico, and it turns into a huge deficit. So we are able to turn a small surplus into a huge deficit.

By the way, those hotshot economists who gave us all that advice—I didn't take that advice, but the majority of my colleagues did—all that advice saying this is going to be just fine; you should understand this is a division of labor. What is going to happen in Mexico under NAFTA is the low-skilled jobs are going to migrate to Mexico and then we will get high-skilled, high-wage jobs back here as a result. Guess what our three largest imports are from Mexico: automobiles, automobile parts, and electronics—all products of high-skilled, high-wage labor. That is what migrated out of this country. We turned a small surplus with Mexico into a huge deficit.

We turned a modest deficit with Canada into a large deficit. We turned almost a balanced trade deficit with China a couple of decades ago into the largest deficit in humankind. It is unbelievable what we have done. Europe, very large deficit; Japan, an $80 billion-a-year deficit; every single year with Japan, we have a large, recurring deficit. This country had better understand the consequences of this.

This chart represents the trade deficit, and one would have to be colorblind to not understand the consequence of this. You would have to be in a situation where you can't see red. This is red, red, red, growing in a dangerous way, giant trade deficits It is not getting better, it is getting worse. This is simply one more chapter of a book of failures.

What we have been doing is sinking this country into a sea of debt. All of this debt reflects, by the way, the shipment of American jobs elsewhere. We have nearly decimated our textile industry. We are taking apart our manufacturing industry. And it doesn't end there.

I have told the story of Natasha Humphreys who was a software engineer, Stanford graduate. Her last job for her company was to train her replacement in India because an Indian engineer worked for about one-fifth of the price of a U.S. engineer. So she lost her job.

This is not just textiles and manufacturing. Half of the Fortune 500 companies have been outsourcing software development.

That is what the lines on the chart mean. It started with textiles. Everyone knows Fruit of the Loom underwear: T-shirts, shorts, underwear. They would advertise with green grapes, red grapes, dancing down the street. Everyone was happy. Underwear was made here. People had jobs here. The grapes got jobs dancing on television.

Now, however, we do not see dancing grapes talking about American jobs because there is no Fruit of the Loom underwear made in America. That is all gone. There is not one pair of Levis made in America. Huffy bicycles. That is all gone.

I could go on forever, and I have gone on forever, as a matter of fact, in previous discussions about all of the brands. You may be wearing Tony Lama boots, but if so you may be wearing boots made in China. The list is endless.

We built in 100 years in this country something very unusual, and we did it through pain and suffering and through agonizing and debate in the Congress. Part of it was to decide: What kind of country are we? How do we improve the standard of living? How do we build something here that is unique? It was encouraging entrepreneurs, helping people who had a vision to start a business, to take risks, to say go for it, absolutely, to create a hospitable environment where people started businesses and created jobs, and to say on behalf of workers: You have a right, too, a right to organize unions, a right to have a safe workplace, child labor laws. You cannot dump chemicals into the air or water as you produce those things.

James Fyler was shot 56 times—56 times this man was shot. Do you know why? Because in 1917 he believed the people ought to be free to form a labor union to protest the conditions of coal miners deep in the coal mines of Colorado. For that he was shot and killed; 56 times that man was shot.

This history of our country is replete with the people who have decided to exercise the bravery to help build this country and create the standards, the work rules, and the opportunities that we enjoy. Men and women who start businesses, men and women of the labor movement, and Members of Congress decided what the rules are.

Now, in one swoop we can decide a company can move those jobs to China, just like that, shut their American plant, move the job to China—and, by the way, this Congress gives them a tax break for doing so—ship the product back to be sold in this country, run the income through the Ugland House on Church Street, and not pay taxes to the United States.

None of that adds up. So today we have a trade agreement from Oman which persuades me to show, once again, a chart with dancing grapes. Does it relate? Yes, it does, because this is one more chapter in a book of failures.

The question is, Will this country stand up for its economic interests?

I say to Japan—we have had robust trade with the country of Japan for decades. Yet every single year we have these large deficits with Japan and the growing deficits with China which even dwarf the Japanese deficits, yet our country does not seem to care.

All these deficits translate to lost jobs, they threaten this country's economic future and whether we progress and improve the standard of living and expand the middle class. Our government says, you know something, this is a global economy. Whatever happens, happens, and we do not want to offend anyone. We do not want to tell China: Look, the way we will trade with you is this: our trade must be fair trade; you open your markets to us, we open our markets to you; but the methods of production must be fair.

We do not do that. We do not do any of that because we do not have the nerve and the backbone or will to stand up for this country's economic interests. Frankly, it baffles me that this will be passed this afternoon. There is no question about it. This Congress will, once again, snore through this discussion, and we will pass a trade agreement with the country of Oman.

At the end of this year, we will see another record, the highest trade deficit in history.

Alan Blinder is the former Vice Chairman of the Federal Reserve Board. He is not some nut way off on the edge of the political debate. This is a guy who is a mainstream economist. He has written in the Foreign Affairs Journal that there are 42 to 56 million American jobs that are subject to outsourcing.

Let me say that again: 42 to 56 million American jobs in manufacturing, and especially the service sector, that are tradeable jobs, subject to outsourcing. Not all of them will be outsourced, for sure, but even those that remain here will be subject to competing with those in other parts of the world who can do the job for less.

Does that matter to anyone? Doesn't that say to all of us what this is really about? This is about reducing the standard of living in this country. It is not about raising other countries up, it is about pushing us down. That is why this trade strategy is wrong. I don't believe in building walls. I don't believe we ought to decide we should withdraw from the global economy. I just believe there ought to be rules with respect to the global economy that stand up for this country's interests.

For the first 25 years after the Second World War, we were the biggest, the strongest, the toughest. We could beat anybody at almost anything, and we knew it. With one hand tied behind our backs we could trade with anybody and give concessional circumstances and win. It was not a problem.

Then we saw the emergence of shrewd international competitors—yes, Europe, Japan, and others—things changed. But our notions did not change. Our trade policy is still a heavy dose of foreign policy that is, in my judgment, soft headed. We still are concessional. We still do not have the willingness to stand up for this country's economic interests. And we now are seeing the results of that with the highest trade deficit in history.

If I might show that chart one more time, the trade deficits on this chart are the result of these trade agreements. Republicans and Democrats, together—administrations run by both political parties—have failed to do what they should do.

We have a trade deficit with almost every country. And those with whom we do not have a deficit, if we can just get an agreement with them, we will have a deficit. Every single agreement we have made produces a deficit.

We have a huge trade deficit with Korea, which is another country with which we are negotiating a free trade deal.

Here are the cars in Korea: 99 percent of the cars on the road in Korea are Korean-made cars. Why? The Korean government doesn't want other cars in Korea; 99 percent of the cars on the streets in Korea are Korean made.

In Korea, they exported 730,000 Korean cars to the United States last year; 730,000 Korean vehicles were put on ships and sent to America. We were able to export 4,251 into Korea. We almost had a success with the Dodge Durango pickup, but they shut that down. And 95 percent of the cars on the road in Japan are Japanese-made cars in that country. Why? That is the way they want it.

Our country says: That is fine. It does not matter to us. I suppose it is fine because nobody wearing a blue suit and suspenders is losing their jobs. I don't see any CEOs losing their jobs. I don't see any Members of the Senate losing their jobs. The folks making cars are losing their jobs. The textile workers are losing their jobs. Family farmers are having the rug pulled out from under them with bad trade agreements, but folks here are safe. And this administration is, I guess, probably the worst we have had for some while on trade.

But having said that, the Democratic administration that preceded it was not particularly good on trade issues, and no one is very interested in doing anything to address a serious and growing trade problem, which if not addressed will cause havoc with this country's economy and will affect every American worker in a very serious way.

It is probably clear to at least those hearing me that I will vote against the Oman Free Trade Agreement. I think it is a serious mistake. While I think it will pass today, we will await the next bad trade agreement and continue this fight. At some point there will be a tipping point on this issue. The American people will demand the Congress to finally start doing the right thing. No, not building walls, but demanding trade be fair, fair trade on behalf of this country.

I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CHAMBLISS). Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I rise today to speak in opposition to the Oman Free Trade Agreement.

International trade, if reached through the right paths, can confer tremendous benefits on all of its participants. Through this practice and agreements like this one, we have the opportunity not only to open up market access for American business but also to improve economic conditions for all participants.

Unfortunately, the Oman Free Trade Agreement fails to live up to that potential. This agreement does not provide for American business, while at the same time it fails workers both here, I believe, and potentially in Oman.

In 2001, the United States entered into a similar trade agreement with the country of Jordan. At that time, the agreement was heralded for its progressive labor standards. However, we have recently seen in Jordan instances of foreign workers forced into slave labor, stripped of their passports, denied their wages, and compelled to work for days without rest.

These incidents have been occurring in Jordan because Jordanian labor laws are only applicable to its own citizens and preclude protections for foreign workers.

What I sense is happening is that we have allowed, unwittingly, I believe, individuals and corporations in Jordan to exploit this agreement, to actually move people from countries outside of Jordan into Jordan, and to set up conditions that are not only horrible for the individuals but continue to put pressure on American working men and women in terms of reduced wages, and also do not act to raise the standard of living in Jordan.

One of the points of our agreement with Jordan was to provide the kind of conditions that would raise the standard of living for Jordanian workers. So I am terribly concerned about what could happen in Oman.

My fear in Oman is that they have far weaker labor standards, and that would lend itself to even worse conditions than in Jordan. In fact, the potential for seeing these types of abuses is much higher in Oman, where up to 70 percent of its workforce is comprised of foreign workers already.

During the ''mock markup'' of this agreement last month—the practice of the Finance Committee where they would go through and, in theory and concept, make the changes they would like to see take place—the Finance Committee unanimously approved an amendment to explicitly prohibit products made with slave labor or through human trafficking from benefitting from this deal, conditions similar to those in the Jordanian Free Trade Agreement. However, the administration chose not to include this simple, commonsense provision in the final implementing legislation before us today.

When our trade partners are held to different, less stringent standards, no one is better off. When Omani firms can employ workers in substandard conditions, the Omani workers and American workers both lose. The playing field is not level. The enforceable provisions of this free-trade agreement require only that Oman and the United States enforce their existing labor laws.

In Oman, this means that workers can be denied the right to collectively bargain and to strike. More egregious, Omani law is vague in its forbiddance of forced labor. I appreciate the commitments of Oman to clarify these provisions and to improve enforcement. However, the timeline for doing this is far too long. If we implement this agreement, and Oman fails to live up to its promises, then this agreement will benefit a few while hurting many.

I would note that part of the problem with all of these agreements is that they are considered under the President's fast-track authority, under which Congress is forced to take or leave even the most imperfect deals. And when the President ignores valuable input from Congress, particularly on issues such as labor standards, we are put in a position where our only choice is to vote against it.

I am a supporter of free trade, but that does not require me to support bad deals from an administration that is more concerned about getting a deal than getting the deal right.

We cannot allow other countries to break the rules. Our foreign trade partners must play by the same rules as we do because American companies and workers cannot compete with countries that engage in substandard labor practices. We have seen it again and again: trade policies that don't establish a real threshold for labor standards do not work.

So, Mr. President, I will vote against the Oman Free Trade Agreement.

Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DODD. May I inquire of the Chair, what is the pending matter before the Senate?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Oman Free Trade Agreement.

Mr. DODD. I thank the Chair. I gather at some point the Senate will be asked to vote on the trade agreement; is that correct?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is correct.

Mr. DODD. I thank the Chair.

Mr. President, this legislation effecting the U.S.-Oman Free Trade Agreement is an important one. Implementing legislation for this agreement is currently pending before the Senate and will likely come up for a vote later this afternoon. Regrettably, I will be opposing this proposal.

In the past, I have voted for many free-trade agreements. I think they are very important. If well constructed, free-trade agreements are essential if we are going to have a growing economy, and if the role of the United States is going to be a positive one in the 21st century. But too often these trade agreements neglect critical points when it comes to how they affect American workers, as well as workers in the country with whom we are entering into the agreement. As I said, I have been supportive of a number of free-trade agreements over the years. I have also opposed a number of them. I will explain why and why I think this particular agreement needs further work and consideration before it is to be adopted.

Properly constructed, I believe that free trade agreements are in the long-term interests of the United States and our trading partners. Today's world is interconnected in ways we couldn't even imagine a generation ago—even 5 or 10 years ago. Faster and more efficient means of transport and communications have made it relatively easy to conduct transactions of all types and in all corners of the globe.

Today, with Internet access, people in the most remote places are better informed about what is happening than ever before.

Globalization has affected countries all around the world. From Latin America to India, Africa to China, no nation has escaped the impact of this process. The difference is that while globalization has helped lift some nations up, it has left others way behind. While it has helped certain entities in various countries, it has left many people in those same nations staggeringly behind in their chances to enjoy greater economic opportunity.

The march toward a more globalized world has significantly affected our own Nation as well. On balance, I believe free trade has benefitted our country in many respects. But quite simply, we haven't done enough in many areas, especially during the past few years, to help ease the transition for many Americans who are struggling. I know the Presiding Officer comes from a part of the country where trade agreements can have a huge impact on major sectors of the economy, as in our Southern States where textiles have been a huge part of economic growth. If not handled properly, for people in these States, many of whom are working for businesses that not many years ago came from New England, trade agreements can have a very negative impact.

Nor have we done enough to ensure a level playing field to ensure that American businesses and workers are protected from would-be violators of the rules.

Ultimately, trade agreements should be designed to lift up people in both countries. I believe in free trade because in order to compete in the global marketplace, America has to keep up and adjust to the changes around us.

We can't just sell goods and services to ourselves and expect to have a growing economy. It is critically important that we have access to these foreign markets. Barriers and tariffs that prevent goods and services from ending up on the shelves in those countries ultimately do great damage to our Nation.

So free and fair trade is critically important to our own economic success. Job loss would be staggering, if we were not able to open up markets around the globe for U.S. products and services.

But for free trade to be beneficial and worthwhile, our trade agreements must also adjust to changes that are occurring around the world.

Much as I regret to say it, the U.S.-Oman Free Trade Agreement does not reflect this reality. Although negotiators had a real opportunity to learn from the past, to raise the standards and to produce a better agreement, we can see in the agreement before us many of the same problems that plagued previous free-trade agreements such as CAFTA–DR.

The issue of labor rights is one key example of how this agreement falls short. I have long been an advocate of vigorous enforcement of U.S. trade laws, especially with respect to those provisions that require our trading partners to respect internationally recognized rights of workers in their countries. Workers rights violations not only give other nations an unfair trade advantage, they also hurt U.S. workers by depressing wages here at home and causing American jobs to be shipped overseas.

Certainly, Oman is not the egregious violator of workers rights that some of our other trading partners are. Indeed, Oman has ratified the International Labor Organization's Convention 29 on forced labor, Convention 182 on the worst forms of child labor, Convention 105 on the abolition of forced labor, and Convention 183 on minimum age of employment. Oman has also ratified the United Nations protocol to prevent, suppress, and punish trafficking in persons, especially women an children.

On the surface, therefore, one might think that there is little to worry about with respect to this agreement, which requires Oman to enforce its labor laws. But this notion overlooks a simple fact—that Oman's labor laws and its enforcement thereof is lacking. Collective bargaining is still not legally enshrined in Oman, nor is the right to strike. Existing law dealing with forced labor is vague. So asking Oman to uphold its own laws is not holding that country to the high standards necessary to protect U.S. workers.

While I understand that Oman is committed to improving its labor laws and enforcement, we should first see some significant action on their end to make sure that both United States and foreign workers are going to be protected. Or better yet, use the ILO standards, not domestic laws, as the benchmark for workers rights provisions in this and other free-trade agreements.

Right now there is an October deadline that Oman has agreed to as a target for achieving some reforms. Besides the late date, I have serious doubts as to what incentives Oman will have to carry out these reforms once this agreement is in place. If this agreement passes before those reforms take place, as may be the case today, many of the incentives for Oman to reform will be gone.

My colleagues should also be aware that we are not just talking about how Omani laws will protect Omani workers.

The fact is that guest workers from impoverished Asian countries perform much of the labor in Oman. These guest workers need to enjoy the same worker protections as Omani citizens. To that end, we have learned in the last 2 months of rampant labor abuses of foreign workers in Jordanian sweatshops.

I don't mean to malign our friends in Jordan. They have been wonderful allies, and very helpful on a number of issues that affect the United States in that part of the world. I am hopeful that abuses by unscrupulous employers in Jordan will be punished and prevented in the future because even the best intentioned countries can never prevent all occurrences of abuses. But given that the Oman Free Trade Agreement has much weaker labor provisions than the Jordanian agreement, the Oman deal certainly seems like it will be a recipe for similar abuses in the future.

I also have concerns about a small provision included in the second annex to the Oman Free Trade Agreement, in the section governing U.S. rights and obligations. In that annex, it is stated that the ''United States reserves the right to adopt or maintain any measure . . . '' except ''landside aspects of port activities, including operation and maintenance of docks.''

Simply put, this raises questions as to whether the United States would be able to prevent Oman from acquiring companies that run U.S. port operations without essentially being sued in the World Trade Organization.

Why are we including provisions such as that in a trade agreement and leaving ourselves vulnerable to legal action if we decide that it is in our own self-interest, because of our concerns about terrorism and national security, to prevent Oman from acquiring port operations in the United States?

The only caveat to this section of the Oman Free Trade Agreement is that Oman must provide similar market access to the United States. Now, according to the U.S. Trade Representative, all of our trade agreements include an article on essential security which basically provides that nothing in the agreement can prevent us from applying measures that we consider necessary for the protection of our essential security interests.

That is all fine and well and would seem to indicate that the President or the Committee on Foreign Investment in the United States could still review proposed acquisitions. But why should our trade agreements contain language such as this that is legally confusing at the least and potentially opens us up to being sued, if we decide that something is in our national security interest?

There are other issues I could raise about the content of the U.S.-Oman Free Trade Agreement, but I believe that the two issues I have mentioned are critically important and reason enough to oppose this agreement.

Once again, the Bush administration had an opportunity to use fast-track authority to promote a trade agreement that would be in the best interest of our Nation, of our workers and businesses. I wish that this was the case when it comes to the Oman Free Trade Agreement. Unfortunately, we are instead seeing more of the same disregard for American workers in the pending proposal.

As a result, I intend to oppose this agreement and urge my colleagues to review it very carefully, review the provisions dealing with labor standards and review the standards when it comes to port operation activities included in this free-trade agreement.

I should mention as well, another reason why I support strong labor provisions in these agreements. It is critically important that our trading partners have enough people who can afford to buy the goods and services that we produce here in the United States. Even if countries open up their borders to our goods, what percentage of their population could ever afford our goods and services if they mainly receive low wages and little or no benefits? The only alternative to strong labor protections is that we drop the prices of our goods tremendously, which would obviously be disadvantageous to our future economic prosperity.

The rationale for insisting that there be labor standards and decent wages provided to these people is a wealth creation idea. Labor protections, therefore, are not only about human rights, which is legitimate enough, but are also about enlightened self-interest.

For those reasons, this agreement should not be approved. When the vote occurs, I will be urging my colleagues to vote against it.

I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. VITTER). The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, I come to the floor today to oppose the Oman Free Trade Agreement. There are two primary reasons that I oppose this agreement.

First, this trade agreement is part of the administration's failed trade policy. I believe strongly that we need to change direction, and we need to change direction now, before our trade and budget deficits cripple our economy.

This chart shows how badly off target our trade policy is. Our trade deficits have exploded. In 1992, our trade deficit was just $40 billion. Thirteen years and 10 trade deals later, our trade deficit last year was $718 billion—$718 billion.

NAFTA provides one example of how these trade deals have affected our trade deficits. In 1993, the year before NAFTA took effect, we had a trade surplus with Mexico of about a little less than $2 billion. Last year, after 12 years of NAFTA, our trade deficit with Mexico had mushroomed to $50 billion. So we went from a trade surplus with Mexico to a massive trade deficit with Mexico.

Agriculture provides another example. When this administration took office, we had a healthy trade surplus of $15 billion in agriculture. But that surplus has been shrinking every year since then. This year the surplus is expected to fall to just $2 billion, the smallest agricultural trade surplus in 35 years. Yet we keep going down the same path, trumpeting each agreement as a resounding success.

If this set of policies is a success, I would hate to see a failure. How can anybody suggest that this is a success? We have gone from being the biggest creditor nation in the world to being the biggest debtor nation in the world, and a key reason are these failed trade policies that over and over have promised the American people that they were going to turn the tide, that they were going to make a difference, that they were going to change the circumstance. And over and over they have failed, not in the world of theory, not in the world of make-believe, but in the real world, in the real world where we can measure the results, and the results have been clear: We mushroomed the trade deficit with this set of trade policies.

There is an old saying that the definition of insanity is doing the same thing over and over again expecting a different result. Under that definition, our trade policy is certifiably nuts. We need to stop giving more than we are getting in trade agreements. We need to stop sending American jobs overseas. We need to reduce our trade deficits. And we need a trade strategy that will boost incomes for American workers and farmers.

The agreement before us is a continuation of this failed trade policy. We are not getting more than we are giving. When we read the fine print and the study done by the United States International Trade Commission, the nonpartisan U.S. agency in charge of analyzing trade agreements, we discover that this agreement will increase our trade deficit with Oman—will increase our trade deficit with Oman.

Why are we entering into more trade agreements that make our trade deficit that is at record levels even worse? What kind of a plan is this?

Imports of apparel from Oman will increase by $42 million annually, according to the International Trade Commission. But the ITC says our exports of all products to Oman will only increase by $14 million to $41 million, depending on how responsive our exports are to tariff reductions.

So this agreement, as I have said, actually makes our trade deficit with Oman worse, not better. Perhaps it should not be surprising that this agreement would increase our trade deficit. It is produced by an administration that says that outsourcing jobs to other countries is a good thing. It is produced by an administration that does not believe in having other countries improve their labor standards so that American workers don't have to compete with workers who are paid pennies an hour to work in abusive conditions. In fact, this administration has repeatedly rebuffed the efforts of my colleagues to strengthen labor laws in Oman so that they meet international labor standards.

I don't think this is a good agreement on its merits, but the process by which it has come to the floor is even worse. The way this bill has been brought to the Senate floor makes a complete mockery of the fast-track process.

The fast-track process is now revealed, for anyone who cares to look, as a complete sham. How so? As all Members of this body already know, the Constitution gives the Congress, not the President, the responsibility for regulating foreign trade. Yet in recognition that we cannot have 535 trade negotiators, the Congress has agreed to the fast-track process for considering trade agreements.

By the way, I have supported that approach in the Senate Finance Committee. I thought it was the right approach to take, given the commitments that were made to us on how these trade agreements would be negotiated, how these talks would be conducted. But what we have seen in this agreement is a flagrant failure to keep the agreement.

In agreeing to fast track, each Senator gives up their most fundamental rights as a Senator. We give up our right to amend. We give up the right to extended debate. In essence, we are giving up our right to protect the interests of our individual States. In return, there is supposed to be detailed consultation with the Congress throughout the process of negotiating trade agreements and developing implementing legislation.

In practice, the Finance Committee, of which I am a member, is the focus of this consultation because the Finance Committee has jurisdiction over trade policy. In theory, the committee has extensive input during the process of negotiating trade agreements and developing the legislation to implement it. Theoretically, it does not then need to amend the implementing bill once it is formally introduced.

When it comes to developing the implementing bill, this consultation occurs through what is known as a mock markup process. The mock markup is the Finance Committee's opportunity to amend the implementing bill before it is formally introduced, and then cannot be amended under fast-track rules.

This informal process has a long history. During consideration of previous trade agreements, the process has lasted months and produced a host of changes.

On the Oman agreement, I offered an amendment in the Finance Committee to prevent products made with slave labor or under sweatshop conditions so egregious to be tantamount to slave labor from benefiting from the agreement. I did so because current law has failed to prevent horrific sweat shops in Jordan under the Jordan FTA. I did so because it is not free trade when foreign workers are locked in factories and forced to work 100 hours a week for pennies an hour. That is not free trade. That is not what Members of this body support when they vote in favor of free trade.

This story from the New York Times entitled ''An Ugly Side of Free Trade: Sweat Shops in Jordan'' tells the story. The recent study in Jordan found that the use of what amounts to slave labor is precisely what has happened. Workers from Bangladesh, China, and other parts of Southeast Asia were promised much greater pay than they could earn in their home countries. They paid hundreds of dollars to recruiters to get a job in a Jordanian apparel factory. When they got to Jordan, their passports were taken away so they could not leave or change jobs. They were then forced to work 90 to 120 hours a week. They were paid far less than Jordan's minimum wage, and if they complained, they were beaten or jailed.

Here is what workers reported, according to the news stories:

> We used to start at 8 in the morning, and we'd work until midnight, 1, or 2 a.m, 7 days a week. When we were in Bangladesh, they promised us we would receive $120 a month, but in the 5 months I was there in Jordan, I only got 1 month's salary, and that was $50.

Mohammed Saiful Islam, a Bangladeshi, said that several times the workers had to work until 4 a.m. and then sleep on the factory floor for a few hours before resuming work at 8 a.m.

> The workers got so exhausted they became sick. They could hardly stay awake at their machines.

Several workers said when they were sick, they did not receive medical care but were instead punished and had their pay docked.

Hazrat Ali said he sometimes worked 48 hours in a row—48 hours in a row—and received no pay for 6 months. ''If we asked for money, they hit us,'' he said.

Nasima Akhter said the western factory gave its workers a half glass of tea for breakfast and often rice and some rotten chicken for lunch. ''In the 4 months I was in Jordan,'' he said, ''they didn't pay us a single penny. When we asked management for our money and for better food, they were very angry at us. We were put in some sort of jail for 4 days without anything to eat, and then they forced us to go back to Bangladesh.''

Mr. President, these conditions are appalling. We should not be asking American workers to compete with these practices, and we should not be giving special trade benefits to products made under these conditions.

In the case of Oman, its labor laws fall far short of the core International Labor Organization standards. Oman, like Jordan, relies heavily on guest workers who are often at a serious disadvantage in trying to assert their rights. Oman has been cited by our own State Department for human trafficking. According to the International Trade Commission, the Oman Free Trade Agreement is expected to greatly increase apparel production and exports to the United States.

This means there are significant reasons to be concerned about the same thing that happened in Jordan. There is good reason to be concerned that they might happen in Oman as well.

That is why I offered the amendment in the Finance Committee. It simply clarified that goods produced with slave labor or de facto slave labor will not get the benefits of the agreement. The administration raised objections in the committee, but the committee rejected the organization's advice and unanimously adopted my amendment—unanimously. It did so because the members of the committee believed that products manufactured in these sorts of abusive conditions should not get special benefits under this trade agreement.

The Finance Committee spoke loudly and clearly. By an 18-to-nothing recorded vote, the committee disagreed with the administration and said that we needed to add protections in this agreement because, clearly, local labor laws and U.S. laws did not work in the case of Jordan. Yet the bill before us today does not include these protections. It does not include my amendment.

This process says that a unanimous vote in the Senate Finance Committee means nothing. It says that adopting an amendment by a unanimous vote is tantamount to rejecting the amendment because the outcome is exactly the same. This makes a complete mockery of the markup system for trade legislation in the Finance Committee. It demonstrates how completely broken this process is. No matter what the Finance Committee says, no matter how strongly it says it, the administration is free to ignore it.

Two years ago we debated the Australia Free Trade Agreement and the Finance Committee adopted an amendment I offered at that time. It then went through procedural contortions to drop the amendment. I said at the time:

> This precedent strikes me as dangerous. It opens the process for abuse, and it reduces the committee's role in crafting trade policy and trade legislation. It may have been expedient, but I believe we will come to regret this precedent. It invites a future President to ignore any recommendations made by the committee on future trade implementing legislation.

Mr. President, that is what has happened here today on the Oman Free Trade Agreement. The administration has concluded that it is free to ignore the unanimous recommendation of the Finance Committee.

I believe this action has serious consequences for the fast-track process itself. If consultation is without meaning, there is no reason Senators should give up their rights under Senate rules to amend and debate trade agreements.

Fast track is up for renewal next year. This egregious abuse of the process is just another nail in the coffin of fast track. It is becoming crystal clear to me that consultation promised in the fast-track process is completely a sham.

Let me conclude. The Oman Free Trade Agreement promises few, if any, benefits to the U.S. economy and will make our trade deficit with Oman worse. Moreover, the safeguards that were supposed to protect against imports made under abusive sweatshop conditions and slave labor have been dropped from the bill.

Finally, the process that the Finance Committee followed sets a terrible precedent. No Senator should welcome the precedent that the administration can simply ignore the will of the Finance Committee on a particular trade issue very important to the people we represent, secure in the knowledge that a trade implementing bill can be pushed through as part of a larger take-it-or-leave-it package.

So I hope my colleagues, even those who generally support free-trade agreements, will think long and hard about this vote. If you believe the Senate and the Finance Committee should not have a voice in trade agreements and trade implementing bills, if you support the use of slave labor and human trafficking and egregious, abusive sweatshops, you should vote for this bill. But if you believe that consultation under fast track should be meaningful, if you believe that the markup process should not be a mockery, and if you oppose slave labor, you should oppose this bill.

I urge my colleagues to stand for a new direction in trade policy, to stand for agreements that benefit America and to vote against the Oman Free Trade Agreement.

I thank the Chair, and I yield the floor.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, the Senator makes some good points, but I don't think we should saddle Oman with what happened in Jordan. Saddling this agreement with that accusation, it seems to me, is not quite fair.

Mr. President, whenever I begin my examination and analysis of a proposed free-trade agreement, my first question is always: How will this agreement affect my folks, my people in Utah?

Any objective analysis would indicate that the passage of the United States-Oman Free Trade Agreement will have only a de minimis effect on the State of Utah, since Oman only has a gross domestic product of $24.8 billion.

The second question I ask is whether an agreement will have a positive effect on the American economy. According to the U.S. International Trade Commission, the FTA will have a small, but it will be a positive, impact.

Specifically, trade between our two nations totaled over $1 billion in 2005, with the U.S. exporting $593 million worth of goods and services to Oman and importing $555 million from that country. This is a trade surplus for us of $38 million, which is a positive development, since our Nation bore a $48 million trade deficit with Oman as recently as 2004. Yet despite this positive trade balance, trade with Oman only accounts for 0.04 percent of all U.S. trade.

So what is the advantage for the American people and the people of Utah?

The United States-Oman Free Trade Agreement, as does the Bahrain FTA that preceded it, sends a very important message that the United States strongly supports the economic development of moderate Middle Eastern nations. This is a vital message in the global war on terrorism.

As you well know, since the end of the Second World War, the United States has, on a number of occasions, accepted nonreciprocal trade concessions in order to further important Cold War and post-Cold War foreign policy objectives. Examples include offering Japan and Europe nonreciprocal access to American markets during the 1950s and 1960s in order to strengthen the economies of our allies and prevent the spread of communism. At the time, this policy was affordable due to the tremendous size of the trade surpluses the United States enjoyed. However, those times have passed.

Our Nation has not enjoyed a trade surplus since 1975, and last year's deficit widened to a record $726 billion, increasing to 5.8 percent of the gross domestic product, from 5.3 percent in 2004 and 4.5 percent in 2003.

My colleagues may look at these hard truths and question the need for any further trade agreements, including the United States-Oman Free Trade Agreement. But I must remind my colleagues that we have a trade surplus with Oman and this agreement will permit more American companies to have full access to the Omani market.

Further, Oman is quickly running out of oil and, as a result, has launched a series of measures to reform its economy. Those measures will require American products, and this free-trade agreement immediately removes Oman's uniform tariff of 5 percent ad valorem on U.S. goods and phases out other tariffs on U.S. goods. Now, this means that the Omanis will have more money to buy what they are buying from us now: machinery, transportation equipment, and measuring instruments—products that provide good jobs for our fellow Americans.

I have also become aware of media reports that state the agreement provides Omani port operators an absolute right to establish or acquire operations to run port facilities within the United States. This, of course, is not accurate. The Oman FTA preserves the right of the United States to determine for itself whether to block a foreign investment in the United States in order to protect our essential security interests, including any potential investment in port authorities and activities. I also should point out this agreement does not affect current U.S. law that authorizes the President to block proposed foreign investment in the United States that threatens U.S. national security.

Mr. President, these Middle Eastern nations such as Oman are countries who work with us in the global war on terrorism. They are people who have taken care of our troops. They are people who help us with our military. They are people who are moderate in nature, and, for the most part, do a lot of good things and have a constructive view of the world. Therefore, I think a free-trade agreement with Oman is very important.

I also want to thank the vast majority of the people of the United Arab Emirates for the friendship they have shown to our country and, really, to the world at large.

Therefore, Mr. President, I will continue to support such agreements as the United States-Oman Free Trade Agreement, and I urge all of our colleagues to join us in supporting this agreement. Let's not give too much credibility to some of these arguments that are being made against this agreement.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ALEXANDER). The Senator from New Jersey.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, I ask to be permitted to speak as in morning business for up to 10 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

ISRAEL AND THE PALESTINIANS

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, I rise now to discuss the tense situation we are witnessing in the Middle East between Israel and the Palestinians. It has been said that governing is about choices. Right now, Hamas has to make a choice that can determine the future of the Palestinian people and the Palestinian state.

Hamas is, at its roots, a terrorist organization. That has been established in the view of the United States and in the view of the European Union. So we can't kid ourselves about what it is that we see in front of us. They used a strategy to usurp power in the Palestinian territories. First, Hamas offered some social services among the Palestinian people by running social service programs even as it pursued its terrorist objective, to destroy Israel.

But now Hamas has a choice. Does it really care about the Palestinian people or is it simply too dedicated to its terrorist ways? If Hamas is really concerned about the Palestinian people, they would release, promptly and safely, the Israeli soldier they now hold hostage. We have seen them brag—crow about the fact that they killed a young settler they abducted, 18 years of age.

We see a new tactic being used by terrorists over the last few weeks—by terrorists in general. We saw what happened in Iraq when they kidnapped two of our soldiers, Private Kristian Menchaca and Private Thomas Tucker. They were mutilated and tortured before they were killed. So brutally handled by these terrorists in Iraq. I know our troops are working very hard to find these terrorist killers, and I hope we will.

But now Hamas, replicating that kind of terror behavior, has kidnapped an Israeli soldier, a young corporal—Gilad Shallit his name is—and Israel has been on the search to try to rescue him while trying to get the Palestinian people to understand they cannot win this fight for peace with a government composed of terrorism advocates.

Hamas shows their hand choosing this confrontation. To make matters worse, they then abducted this young man, 18-year-old Eliyahu Asheri—they showed pictures of him—and shot him in the head.

The events of these past few days are vividly illustrating to the world that Hamas is not a valid governing body. They can't be taken seriously as a civilized leader of its people. That has to be understood by the people in those communities. There is so much to be gained by a peaceful resolution of the differences. No, it is probably true that neither side can fully gain all of its own interests. But Hamas, a terrorist organization, cannot be taken seriously as a civilized leader of its people. It is a terrorist organization masquerading as a government.

But now they are faced with a critical choice. If they have decided that the path of violence is the one that they would like to follow, it dooms the Palestinian people to isolation and economic hardship. Or now they can make a humanitarian gesture on behalf of the people they purport to represent.

I have had a deep interest in the area. Israel is a very important ally. They provide us with a degree of presence that we otherwise would have to gain ourselves with more ships, more troops, more airplanes. But this democratic society survives in a sea of totalitarianism.

It has to be understood that we want to work with the Palestinian people. Believe me, when I see pictures of Iraqi children or Palestinian children, families torn apart, a father or mother lost with a child weeping, sobbing alongside the dead parent, brother or sister, we don't want any violence to come to any side in these attempts to govern. But Hamas is a terrorist organization. Suggesting that they represent the view of the people there presents a very sad picture.

Violence is not helping any cause in the Middle East. But Hamas seems intent on continuing the downward spiral of violence and death. One cannot blame the Israelis for fighting to save their people. That is their responsibility as a government.

We have reached out to Iraq, ostensibly, as is said by the administration, to protect our freedoms in this country. We have come face to face with terror, and it has changed life in America. The downing of the World Trade Center and the attack on the Pentagon, the violation of our territorial borders, the violation of life and the pursuit of regularity by our people—it is all different now.

I happened to visit a community of Native Americans in New Jersey. One man was complaining that he can't fish in the reservoir anymore. He can't put a boat in there because they are afraid that he might be a terrorist. But they still depend on that for sustenance, hunting animals, fishing. When you see that kind of reach—that is not the most terrible thing that has happened in our world, but it just tells you about the extent that terror can inflict punishment on the free world.

So this situation then between Israel and the Palestine territories really exemplifies what can be. They have this young man captive, threatening to kill him. My advice is, return him promptly and safely, and show the real face of the Palestinian people. They are essentially a hard-working, industrious people who ultimately want to have peace for their families and a chance for them to exist with a standard of living that is reasonable.

The United States and the European Union already know Hamas is a terrorist organization. The rest of the world now knows it, too.

The reach of terror is beyond anything that might have been anticipated, whether it is an attack in a Japanese subway or a train in Great Britain or Spain or wherever; everybody is on guard. We are all looking at how horrible examples of terror are. We are going to see tense days in Israel and Gaza. My hope, and I think the hope of everybody who knows anything about the situation, is that Hamas comes to its senses and quickly releases Corporal Shallit.

Some time ago I was with other Senators on a trip to Iraq. On the way we stopped in Israel to meet with Prime Minister Sharon when he was in power. While we were sitting around the table, I and the four other Senators suddenly saw activity, hustle-bustle in the conference room. The Prime Minister, Sharon then, looked like he was suddenly deflated. He slumped in his chair. He said he had bad news. There was a suicide bombing attack in a port just south of Tel Aviv and 10 people were killed and many others wounded.

I volunteered for the five of us that we could adjourn the meeting and permit the Prime Minister to go on and conduct his necessary function.

He said to me: Senator, when you are the Prime Minister of Israel, you must continue to function no matter what the circumstances are. And we will continue our discussions here.

Israel as we know it is going to fight back against terror with every ounce of energy and blood that it can muster. It is not going to let the Palestinians or any other terror come into their country and kill or injure its citizens without paying a terrible price. The price not only is to the people where the perpetrators come from but the tensions that spread throughout the world.

Let's hope that Hamas comes to its senses and quickly returns the young soldier they are holding.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The assistant Democratic leader.

THE HAMDAN DECISION

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, we are a nation at war. There is no doubt that America must devote all of its energy and resources to defeating terrorism and stopping those who attacked us on 9/11 and would attack us again.

But we are also a nation of law. No one from the highest ranks in America to the lowest is above the law—even during a war. That is what makes America special and in many ways different from other nations.

Today, across the street from where we meet in the Senate, the United States Supreme Court handed down a decision reminding the Bush administration that no President is above the law. The Court rejected the Bush administration's decision to turn its back on treaties and laws that have served America so well for generations. The Supreme Court held that the Bush administration must comply with the Uniform Code of Military Justice and the Geneva Conventions in its treatment of suspected terrorists.

Why did this matter come before the Supreme Court? Because, with no input from Congress, the Bush administration set aside our treaty obligations and agreements and created new rules for detaining, interrogating, and trying detainees. They claimed that the Congress had no voice in the matter and the courts had no right to review what this President decided.

The administration claimed that it could act as legislator, executive, and judge when it came to the treatment of these prisoners. But today the Constitution prevailed. The Supreme Court made it clear that it is Congress's responsibility to make the laws and the President's responsibility to follow the laws, just as the Constitution provided.

Our Founding Fathers understood that it is a human and a natural political reaction for Kings and Presidents and those in power to try to be more powerful. They warned us.

In writing our Constitution over 200 years ago, they warned us that we needed to separate power in America so no one branch of Government would become too powerful. In the Federalist Papers, James Madison, our fourth President and the primary author of our Constitution, wrote:

The accumulation of all powers, legislative, executive, and judiciary, in the same hands may justly be pronounced the very definition of tyranny.

You do not hear the word ''tyranny'' much anymore. It meant a lot to the men and women who waged the wars and risked their lives in the great revolution creating this Government.

But the decision of the Supreme Court today is entirely consistent with that goal in our Constitution, to make certain that no President, no branch of our Government, becomes so powerful that it isn't held to check by our Constitution and our laws.

Today, the Supreme Court ruled against the Bush administration and for James Madison and for the rule of law. Here is what Justice Anthony Kennedy said:

> Concentration of power (in the executive branch) puts personal liberty in peril of arbitrary action by officials, an incursion the Constitution's three-part system is designed to avoid.

This is a historic decision—a decision that reminds this President and every President to come that they must answer first to the Constitution of the United States. It says to President Bush and all of those who promulgated these policies that they must answer to our Constitution.

The Supreme Court has taken the same position that former Secretary of State Colin Powell took almost 5 years ago when the President and his administration first decided to set aside the standards and values of the Geneva Conventions. The Geneva Conventions, of course, were agreements entered into by civilized nations which said we should guide our conduct by common principles. The Geneva Conventions applied until this administration after 9/11 felt we could no longer hold to those standards. They were reminded today by the U.S. Supreme Court that they were wrong.

Secretary of State Colin Powell suggested we could live up to the Geneva Conventions and still fight terrorism and still make America safe. He pointed out that the Geneva Conventions do not limit the ability to hold detainees and do not give POW status to terrorists. That was a straw man created by this administration to avoid generations of legal precedents.

Secretary Powell also said that setting aside the Geneva Conventions ''will reverse over a century of U.S. policy and practice . . . and undermine the protections of the law of war for our own troops . . . It will undermine public support among critical allies, making military cooperation more difficult to sustain.''

These are the words of Colin Powell, a man who dedicated his life to our military, to our country, and to public service.

When you look at the negative publicity about Guantanamo and Abu Ghraib today, you understand that Collin Powell's remarks were prophetic. He was right. Ignoring the law of war hurts our efforts to fight terrorism, and sadly it puts our troops at risk. And it is not the American way.

Unfortunately, the President did not follow Secretary Collin Powell's counsel when it came to this decision. He listened to others within his administration. That led to this confrontation before the Supreme Court. That led to this decision today.

I hope this decision will set a standard for us when it comes to dealing with this war on terrorism—that we can win this war without losing our souls. The Supreme Court reminded us today that America—this great and strong Nation—can be a safe nation without compromising the values that make us different.

I urge the President to use today's decision to move on a bipartisan basis to establish a standard consistent with our values, consistent with our laws, and consistent with the treaties that we have signed for the treatment of prisoners.

Anyone who is dangerous to America should be held and should not be released. Anyone who has real value to America, in terms of intelligence, should be interrogated properly to find out what they know and how it could help protect us. But the Supreme Court makes it clear today that we have to move beyond where we are holding hundreds of prisoners at Guantanamo and other places without charges and without any clear disposition under the law.

Several of my friends have volunteered to be attorneys for those who are detained at Guantanamo. I have met with my friends in Chicago. They are men who have spent a lifetime in the practice of law, one a former U.S. Attorney for the Northern District of Illinois, another a defense counsel for many decades in the city of Chicago.

They went down to Guantanamo to meet with the detainees that they volunteered to represent and came back to Chicago begging me for a meeting. We got together and they told me the stories. First, they couldn't understand how this could happen, how the United States of America would not be following basic standards of conduct, which everyone assumed we would follow when it came to legal procedure. They asked me how this could happen. I couldn't answer it, but I knew the Supreme Court would have to answer it.

When Chief Justice Roberts, who recused himself from today's decision, and Justice Alito came before the Judiciary Committee, we reminded them that Sandra Day O'Connor, in an earlier decision concerning the treatment of prisoners, made it clear that even during time of war no President is above the law. In the Hamdi decision, she said, ''A state of war is not a blank check for the President.'' We asked each of these nominees if they agreed, and they said they did, without any equivocation.

The decision today by the Supreme Court, this majority decision, is a reminder of the greatness of this Nation. It is a reminder that following the rule of law we can keep America safe. We can treat these prisoners properly and legally. If they are a danger, we can hold them. But there comes a time when this President and every President must be held accountable to our Constitution.

Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, I strongly support the United States-Oman Free Trade Agreement and urge my colleagues to support this legislation.

Two-way trade between the U.S. and Oman stands at nearly $1 billion, and it is projected to grow under the terms of this new agreement. Upon enactment, 100 percent of industrial and commercial products and 87 percent of agricultural products will be duty free. The agreement, which covers textiles, telecommunications, intellectual property rights, investment, and other sectors, will promote economic growth and prosperity in both countries. American producers, consumers, and investors will benefit from the FTA.

Not only is this free-trade agreement good for the economic prosperity of Americans, it will promote growth and employment in Oman. Given Oman's long strategic ties to the United States and the efforts of Sultan Qaboos to reform the economy and the political process, this agreement is an important sign of our support.

Since 1833, when the United States signed a treaty of friendship with Oman, our ties to that country have been close. The U.S. used Oman's Masirah Island air base during the attempt to rescue U.S. Embassy hostages in Iran during the Carter administration. Oman hosted thousands of U.S. personnel during Operation Enduring Freedom in Afghanistan and during Operation Iraqi Freedom. Our governments have cooperated in the nonsecurity aspects of the war on terror, and Oman has made important strides toward greater democratization. The Sultan has made women's rights an important part of his reform plans. While work remains, the liberalization project in Oman remains on a positive trajectory.

In recognition of this deep cooperation, and to further enhance our economic and security ties, this free-trade agreement should win quick approval by the U.S. Senate. I urge my colleagues to support it

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, we have a failed trade policy and the United States-Oman Free Trade Agreement, OFTA, implementation legislation the Senate is being asked to consider today is a continuation of that failed trade policy. This failure is reflected in a trade deficit that reached a record $717 billion last year and in the loss of 2.8 million manufacturing jobs over the past 5 years.

The OFTA implementing legislation fails to insist on basic internationally recognized labor standards, yet this agreement is being rushed through the Senate under fast-track procedures that only allow Members of Congress an up-or-down vote and no chance to amend or improve it one day after it was voted out of the Finance Committee and with no report. Although I support free and fair trade, as well as increasing our economic ties with Oman, I believe any trade agreement entered into by the United States should include commitments to international labor standards.

Writing labor and environmental standards into trade agreements is an important way to ensure that free trade is fair trade. But unlike the 2001 Jordan Free Trade Agreement, the OFTA fails to include internationally recognized, core labor standards supported by most countries in the world. Those standards include the right to organize/associate; the right to bargain collectively; a prohibition on child labor; a prohibition on discrimination in employment; and a prohibition on forced labor.

In the case of Oman, its laws do not meet core International Labor Organization, ILO, standards, and therefore the agreement's requirement that Oman simply ''enforce its own laws'' is inadequate.

Rejecting the OFTA implementing legislation as currently drafted would be a sound rejection of the failed and flawed trade policies of the past and a signal of support for a better approach to trade that is a two-way street and trade that supports the rights of workers.

I am disappointed that the administration ignored the Senate Finance Committee amendment forbidding any goods produced with slave labor or benefiting from human trafficking from benefiting from the agreement. This amendment passed the committee unanimously, yet the administration did not include it in the legislation it sent to Congress. This is especially unfortunate in light of recent revelations that such labor abuses are occurring in Jordan despite a United States-Jordan FTA that included labor and environmental protections unlike the agreement under consideration today. It also shows a blatant disregard on the part of the administration of the advice and input of Congress in developing trade agreements.

I do not support the agreement before us as crafted, and without the chance to improve it, I must oppose it. Trade should not be a race to the bottom in which U.S. workers must compete with countries that do not recognize core international labor standards and basic worker rights.

Mr. LUGAR. Mr. President, I rise today to speak in support of the U.S.-Oman Free Trade Agreement. At a time when commerce routinely crosses national borders, the United States should be positioned to compete in all arenas. Bilateral free trade agreements facilitate this goal. The FTA with Oman is significant for many reasons. Foremost, it encourages trade and economic cooperation with a friend and partner in the Middle East. FTAs are vital tools in providing new opportunities for our domestic companies as well as shaping our international business and foreign policy. Cooperation on the commercial front enhances our ability to work with nations in other matters, including security and intelligence.

FTAs promote trade and growth which in turn support overall government stability and cooperation in this region. Continued cross-border trade ties will ensure the emergence of new capital markets and provide U.S. firms with new business partners. This agreement with Oman is also a further step in the direction of the goal to have a Middle East Free Trade Area by 2013.

Oman acceded to the World Trade Organization in 2000, and entered into a Trade and Investment Framework Agreement, TIFA, with the U.S. in July 2004. The TIFA provided a foundation upon which the U.S. and Oman were able to begin discussing areas of increased cooperation in trade that could be achieved. Subsequently, this FTA was signed in October 2005 and sent to Congress on June 26 under Trade Promotion Authority timelines.

This agreement will provide for greater market access in services, consistent legal protections for investors, effective enforcement of labor and environmental laws, and protection of intellectual property. There has been some debate over strengthening of labor laws in Oman. The government there passed significant labor reforms in 2003 and has made a commitment to implement further reforms by October of this year. Additionally, the Omani government has committed to increased protections for intellectual property. It has indicated that existing intellectual property protection laws will be enforced and enhanced civil and criminal penalties will be instituted for violators of these protections. Further, in addition to commitments not to relax environmental standards in order to attract investment, there was a separate agreement signed establishing a Joint Forum on Environmental Cooperation, through which ongoing assessments of environmental issues will be addressed.

In 2004, U.S. goods exports to Oman totaled $330 million, and two-way trade was $748 million. Of these amounts, U.S. agriculture comprised $20 million. The stock of U.S. foreign direct investment in Oman in 2003 was $358 million. Enactment of this agreement will further expand the market for U.S. exports which currently include machinery, automobiles, medical instruments, and agricultural products such as vegetable oils, sugars, sweeteners, and beverage bases. In addition to greater market access for agriculture and consumer goods, this agreement will also specifically create greater opportunities for service industries such as banking, insurance and securities.

FTAs provide benefits that enable American companies and workers to compete effectively around the world. I encourage my colleagues to support the U.S.-Oman FTA.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I oppose the proposed U.S.-Oman Free Trade Agreement. This agreement is not fair to American workers, plain and simple.

The theory behind free trade agreements is that two nations will agree to the free flow of goods as long as there is a relatively even playing field in terms of labor and environmental standards.

Without that even playing field, we face a worldwide ''race to the bottom,'' where the nations that pay their workers the least and offer them the fewest rights and protections, wins.

Sadly, the Bush administration has entered this particular race with gusto.

The Sultanate of Oman does not have much of a track record on worker's rights. There is no right to form independent unions or bargain collectively. The Omani constitution and labor laws do not prohibit the use of forced labor for public services and child labor is still permitted in law and practice.

The country of Oman has only 3 million people—and half a million of them are foreign ''guest workers,'' mainly from Bangladesh, Sri Lanka and other Asian countries. And there have been numerous reports about how guest workers in that region have been exploited and underpaid, enabling their employers to turn out extremely low-cost products.

Unfortunately the trade agreement we are considering today offers no guarantees that Oman will not treat its ''guestworkers'' in the same way, and then be able to sell the products of their labor, duty free, to U.S. companies.

And we are asking American workers to compete against that? That's not free trade, defined as a mutually beneficial arrangement between two nations that raises living standards and general prosperity for the citizens of both countries. That's merely pitting American workers against the poorest, most desperate workers in the world, who work as foreign contract workers and have few legal or institutional protections.

I cannot support that approach to free trade. I proudly join with 400-plus labor, environmental, religious, human rights, consumer, business and family farm organizations, to oppose the U.S.-Oman Free Trade Agreement.

Mr. OBAMA. Mr. President, the Oman Free Trade Agreement is not a threat to American workers, and it could help us build better relations in the Middle East. I believe that the administration has handled its relationship with Congress on this agreement poorly, but our foreign policy interests in the region require greater engagement with it. For this reason, I am voting for this agreement.

The economics of the agreement are negligible. U.S. exports entering Oman today face tariffs that this agreement will remove. As a result, American sales to that country will increase by about 14 percent, or $41 million. This increase is a very small share of U.S. exports to the world—less than .05 percent—making the effect on U.S. output and employment minimal. On the import side, according to the International Trade Commission, ''the expected changes in U.S. trade with Oman . . . would likely be very small and, therefore, have almost no effect on U.S. imports, employment, or welfare.'' In other words, imports would be so small that they don't even register.

Because the economic impact on the United States is not a compelling factor, I believe that we must base our vote on the kind of message it sends about our approach to trade generally and the potential effects of trade agreements on our foreign policy. In general, I believe that more trade between the U.S. and other countries is good. It helps build constructive political relationships and can create wealth both here and abroad. And I would like to see us build better relationships with countries like Oman and its neighbors.

I have been informed by the State Department that Oman has been a valuable partner for the United States in a volatile part of the world. I will not take the time to list all of the areas of cooperation between our two governments, but this relationship is important and is the main reason I am voting for this agreement today. I believe we have a strategic interest in working to enhance our relationships with friendly governments in the region.

I should also point out that Oman, with respect to the Arab world, is forward leaning on a range of economic and political issues, including women's suffrage. This is not to gloss over some of the problems in Oman, including restrictions on the press and a lack of a free and independent judiciary; one only needs to look at the State Department's Human Rights Report to know that there is room for improvement. With this vote, I want to send a signal to the government of Oman that we respect the progress it is making, but expect that there is much more to come.

I would caution the administration, however, not to take for granted Congress' support for trade agreements. We give the President streamlined authority to negotiate trade agreements and send them to Congress to make it easier for Presidents to conclude negotiations. We do that to encourage trade. But that does not mean that he can or should ignore this co-equal branch of government.

The Senate Finance Committee specifically directed the administration to exclude from the Oman agreement goods that were produced with slave labor or benefited from human trafficking. The administration refused to do so. That sends a loud message to Congress that the administration believes fast track authority is the authority to ignore Congress. It is not, and I caution the President that such an approach to trade policy will lead to the death of Trade Promotion Authority and a wave of protectionist policies.

I support this agreement because I believe in the potential of the Middle East and our responsibility to engage and build partnerships in the region.

But I will continue to work to make trade agreements better for workers and the environment as we move forward with the Nation's trade agenda.

Mr. KOHL. Mr. President, I rise today to express my opposition to the Oman Free Trade Agreement implementing legislation before us. I am concerned about shortcomings in Oman's labor laws, in particular the lack of any provisions allowing workers to form independent unions or to bargain collectively. Also, Oman has no legal prohibitions of sweatshop labor.

Some have argued during today's debate that Oman has made improvements in their labor laws and are willing to make more. And it is true that recent labor law reforms in that country have moved the situation for workers from criminal to just terrible. But we should have learned from our experience with Jordan—a country with which we have a free-trade agreement, one that was justified by promised improvements in their labor laws. Just recently, the New York Times published an expose of the dreadful conditions in Jordan's sweatshops. What makes us think that Oman, with weaker labor standards than Jordan, will behave any better after they get their free-trade agreement? Congress needs to stand up for the workers in countries with which we trade before we reward them with unfettered access to our markets—and that means Congress must reject against trade agreements that do not demand strong labor laws and respect for fundamental workers' rights.

My ''no'' vote on the Oman Free Trade Agreement is also a vote against the way in which the Bush administration has handled trade negotiations. A year ago, Congress debated and ratified CAFTA. I voted against CAFTA because I could not see offering trade concessions to countries with labor standards so far below our own. I challenged this administration to negotiate trade agreements with countries that have strong labor laws. So far, they have not responded.

I also voted against CAFTA—and will vote against the Oman agreement today—in protest of a trade policy that is ignoring our rising trade deficit and the job drain that accompanies it. Instead of finding ways to pander to countries with deplorable human rights and worker protection records, the President and his trade negotiators ought to get tough with China and make them play by the rules. In the past 8 months, the President has met with President Hu of China twice. Each meeting was seen as an opportunity to begin to develop policies to respond to China's unfair trade practices, and each time this administration has been eerily silent.

In the meantime, our trade deficit has ballooned to $805 billion, and our trade deficit with China alone has risen to $201 billion. What is the President's plan? The U.S. Trade Representative wants to push through as many trade agreements as it can before fast-track Presidential trade negotiating authority expires in 2007. Peru, Columbia, United Arab Emirates, Thailand, and Korea are all in the queue. When is enough, enough? When will this administration focus on keeping jobs at home rather than handing out trade concessions abroad?

Workers in this country are looking to the President for leadership and answers on how we can keep jobs in the United States. Unfortunately, the Oman Free Trade Agreement offers neither. I urge my colleagues to reject the Oman Free Trade Agreement—and reject the misguided, disastrous trade policy it represents.

Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, today the Senate is considering a free-trade agreement with Oman. And here we are, once again, facing a free-trade agreement with an important ally that is the product of a failed process, an inattentive administration, and a basic neglect of the will of Congress.

I think this is a decent agreement with Oman, and I am not interested in harming relations with an important Middle East ally because of my frustration with the administration. Economic integration of the Middle East is too critically important a goal and vital to our efforts in the war on terror. I understand that deficiencies remain in this agreement. I will monitor Oman's remaining commitments on worker rights very closely. We must continue to engage this volatile region of the world economically if we expect to make progress on a number of fronts.

I have said repeatedly to the administration that our trade agreements must include the basic International Labor Organization, ILO, standards within the four corners of the trade agreement and that those standards must be enforceable. I have said that we must address other abuses such as the recent reports of abhorrent working conditions in Jordan. So what have we done? On CAFTA, I offered an amendment calling on the administration to require equivalent dispute resolution procedures for workers' rights as we provide for patent violations. And even though that vote failed on a 10 to 10 tie, the administration did not even consider strengthening the standards.

On Oman, Senators CONRAD, BINGAMAN and I offered an amendment to strengthen slave labor laws. The committee adopted the amendment unanimously. Inexplicably, the administration has returned the implementing bill without the language—without an explanation—without justification. It is absolutely inconceivable that the administration would not support a ban on the importation of goods produced with slave labor. At a time when America is attempting to restore its image around the world, this certainly sends the signal that as long as this administration is in place, we should not anticipate common sense in Government.

But I will say that the intransigence demonstrated by the administration this week does not bode well for renewal of fast-track authority. Under the Constitution, Congress is empowered to manage our economic relationships. We grant that power to the administration so that we may present the world with one voice in our economic diplomacy. But we must evaluate under what conditions we grant this authority in the future—if we grant it at all. There is no doubt that the system is broken. And I will be actively engaged as we reevaluate this strategy.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Mr. President, consistent with my longstanding record of supporting trade as good for America's economy and economic development in Arab and Muslim countries as important for peace in the world, I am supporting the Oman Free Trade Agreement. However, I do so with some reluctance because of my concerns about its labor provisions.

For me, trade must be fair. This agreement is flawed in its failure to provide the tools necessary to ensure rigorous labor protections. I have been pressing for some time for the inclusion of stronger labor protections in our trade agreements. While the agreement would bind Oman to enforce its own laws regarding slave labor, I am disturbed by the administration's decision to ignore the bipartisan views of the Finance Committee by not including a unanimously approved stronger provision against slave labor.

Serious labor violations now occurring in Jordan, despite the stronger labor provisions contained in the Jordan FTA, demand that this administration insist on stronger labor protections in our trade agreements and stronger enforcement of the labor protections that do exist.

I will vote for this FTA because Oman is a strategically important nation in the Middle East, with which we enjoy excellent relations. The failure of Congress to pass this agreement would threaten our future relations with Oman and our allies in the Middle East generally. I will also support this FTA because trade helps to open the economies of countries in the Arab world and provides a better path up for its people than the fanaticism and violence al-Qaida offers. In that sense, these trade agreements represent progress in the war for the hearts and minds of the people in the Arab world which is a critical part of our larger war against Islamist terrorism.

But today I want to lay down a marker. I will not continue to support future free-trade agreements unless the administration becomes serious about negotiating labor and other improvement that build on our experience rather than continue to produce a series of FTAs that in the end penalize too many of our workers here at home and do not adequately protect workers overseas.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I want to respond to some of the points made by my colleagues today.

First, I have heard concerns that the United States-Oman Free Trade Agreement will give foreign port operators an absolute right to establish or acquire operations to run port facilities in the United States. As I explained earlier, that is just wrong. The United States clearly has the right to prohibit foreign investments in the United States that would harm our national security. Nothing in the United States-Oman Free Trade Agreement changes that.

Some of my colleagues have also expressed concerns about the process by which the bill we are considering was brought to the Senate floor. They focus on a proposed amendment adopted by the Finance Committee during its informal consideration of proposed legislation to implement our trade agreement with Oman. This amendment was offered by Senator CONRAD. It was meant to withhold benefits under the agreement to products made with the benefit of forced or indentured labor. I voted for the amendment because I shared some of Senator CONRAD's concerns, and I subsequently transmitted the text of the adopted amendment to the U.S. Trade Representative.

In addition to voting for the Conrad amendment, I introduced a chairman's modification to the proposed statement of administrative action which was approved by the committee. My modification called upon the administration to monitor or report on the efforts of the Government of Oman to prohibit compulsory or coerced labor.

Separately, the House Ways and Means Committee had approved the same draft implementing legislation but without approving any amendments. So we had a situation where the Finance Committee and the Ways and Means Committee sent different versions of informal nonbinding recommendations to the President. In this case the differences were limited and discrete. They were not of the type and degree that would warrant a mock conference.

The administration made the determination that existing law already precluded the legal importation of products made with forced or indentured labor. The administration therefore concluded that the Conrad amendment was not necessary or appropriate to implementation of the agreement. I received a letter from the general counsel of the Office of U.S. Trade Representative articulating the legal basis for the administration's position. I distributed this letter to all members of the Finance Committee prior to the committee's formal markup of this implementing legislation. I will ask unanimous consent that this letter be included in the record with my remarks.

I understand that some of my colleagues are upset that the proposed Conrad amendment isn't included in S. 3569. I believe that the process concerns raised by my colleagues could have been avoided if we had had more consultations by the U.S. Trade Representative with members of the Finance Committee. I am going to make it a point to see that there is better dialogue between the Finance Committee and the U.S. Trade Representative in the future. I want to see improved dialogue both during the negotiation of a trade agreements and prior to the point that the administration sends implementing legislation for a trade agreement to the Congress. I am confident that improved consultation and communication will help avoid such process concerns in the future.

With that, Mr. President, I say again that this is a very good trade agreement for both Oman and the United States. I urge my colleagues to lend their enthusiastic support to the bill before the Senate to implement this agreement.

I ask unanimous consent that the letter to which I referred be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

EXECUTIVE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT, THE UNITED STATES TRADE REPRESENTATIVE,
Washington, DC, June 22, 2006.

Hon. CHARLES GRASSLEY,
Chairman, Senate Finance Committee, Washington, DC.

DEAR CHAIRMAN GRASSLEY: During the Finance Committee hearing on May 18, Senator CONRAD introduced an addition to the draft implementing legislation for the United States-Oman Free Trade Agreement (FTA) to ''add a provision to prevent goods made with slave labor (including conditions of de facto indentured servitude), or with the benefit of human trafficking, from benefiting from the agreement.'' At the hearing, I promised to provide you with a letter detailing our views on this proposal.

The proposed addition is neither necessary nor appropriate because the FTA already deals effectively with products of forced or indentured labor. In addition, U.S. law prohibits the importation of products produced with convict, forced, or indentured labor under penal sanctions. Moreover, we are aware of no evidence suggesting that goods are produced in Oman using slave labor or with the benefit of human trafficking.

First, Oman already prohibits forced labor and Oman has promised to take steps to clarify and strengthen its laws further. Article 12 of Oman's Basic Law provides that ''Every citizen has the right to engage the work of his choice within the limits of the law. It is not permitted to impose any compulsory work on anyone except in accordance with the Law and for the performance of public service, for a fair wage.'' Oman has further committed in writing to ''issue a Royal Decree, no later than October 31, 2006, specifying the forms of public service that could be required in the event the Government were ever to exercise its power under Article 12, consistent with Convention 29.'' Oman is, in fact, already a signatory to ILO Conventions 29 and 105, which prohibit forced labor. At your request; the Administration has committed to update the Congress periodically on the progress that Oman achieves in realizing all its commitments made to labor law reform.

Second, Article 16.2.1(a) of the FTA requires Oman to enforce its labor laws. If it fails to do so, then the United States is entitled to resort to the FTA's dispute settlement procedures, and if the United States prevails, Oman may be required to pay up to $15 million per year in fines that can be used for appropriate labor initiatives in Oman, including enforcement.

Third, U.S. law already prohibits the importation of products produced with convict labor, forced labor, and indentured labor under penal sanctions. Specifically, 19 U.S.C. 1307 states as follows:

All goods, wares, articles, and merchandise mined, produced, or manufactured wholly or in part in any foreign country by convict labor or/and forced labor or/and indentured labor under penal sanctions shall not be entitled to entry at any of the ports of the United States, and the importation thereof is hereby prohibited, and the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to prescribe such regulations as may be necessary for the enforcement of this provision. The provisions of this section relating to goods, wares, articles, and merchandise mined, produced, or manufactured by forced labor or/and indentured labor, shall take effect on January 1, 1932; but in no case shall such provisions be applicable to goods, wares, articles, or merchandise so mined, produced, or manufactured which are not mined, produced, or manufactured in such quantities in the United States as to meet the consumptive demands of the United States.

''Forced labor'', as herein used, shall mean work or service which is exacted from any person under the menace of any penalty for its nonperformance and for which the worker does not offer himself voluntarily. For purposes of this section, the team ''forced labor or/and indentured labor'' includes forced or indentured child labor.

Notably, the statute is not limited to prison labor, but extends to products manufactured with forced or indentured labor. In fact, the statute was specifically amended in 1930 to add forced and indentured labor.

The statute is also not limited to involuntary labor. The term ''indentured labor'' is understood to mean labor undertaken pursuant to a '' 'contract entered into by an employee the enforcement of which can be accompanied by process or penalties.' '' China Diesel Imports, Inc. v. United States, 855 F. Supp. 380, 384 (CIT 1994) (citing 71 Cong. Rec. 4489 (1929) (statement of Senator Blaine)).

While the statute provides for an exception in the case of goods that are not produced in the United States, we cannot envision a situation where this exception would be applied in practice. Given the broad economic base of the United States, we do not anticipate a situation where the United States would be obliged to import an otherwise banned product from Oman to satisfy domestic demand because it cannot be obtained in the United States.

In determining whether importation of a product should be prohibited, Customs will look closely at the circumstances of the case. For example, the Forced Child Labor Advisory issued by the Department of Treasury and U.S. Customs Service in December 2000 lists several ''red flag'' factors indicating the existence of forced or indentured child labor. These red flags may alone provide evidence of forced/indentured labor, and include, e.g., slave labor conditions, employment to discharge a debt, financial penalties that eliminate wages, etc. The Advisory also lists several ''yellow flag'' factors that may indicate the need for further investigation. These yellow flag factors include, for example, employment in violation of local laws and regulations, or employment in hazardous industries or under extreme conditions.

Other agencies have interpreted the statute in a similar way. Pursuant to Executive Order 13126, the Department of Labor applies the Section 1307 standard in developing a list of products produced by child labor that are not eligible for federal government procurement. According to the Department of Labor, ''The essential elements of the definition [of forced or indentured child labor] are either the presence of coercion or the existence of a contract enforceable by penalties.'' The Department has listed illustrative factors it will look at in making this determination, including, e.g., confinement, little or no pay, deprivation of basic needs, etc. Bureau of International Labor Affairs; Notice of Preliminary List of Products Requiring Federal Contractor Certification as to Forced or Indentured Labor Under Executive Order No. 13126; Request for Comments, 65 Fed. Reg. 54108 (Sept. 6, 2000).

Fourth, Congress recently affirmed that goods made with forced or child labor in violation of international standards cannot be imported into the United States. On February 17, 2005, the President signed into law the Trafficking Victims Protection Reauthorization Act of 2005 (P.L. 109–164). Specifically, section 105(b) of that Act requires United States Government departments and agencies to ''consult with other departments and agencies of the United States Government to reduce forced and child labor internationally and ensure that products made by forced labor and child labor in violation of international standards are not imported into the United States.''

For these reasons, the Administration does not consider the proposed addition to be ''necessary or appropriate to implement'' the Oman-trade agreement under the terms of 19 USC §3803(b)(3)(B)(ii) and the Administration will not include the proposed addition in the text of the legislation implementing the United States—Oman Free Trade Agreement.

Sincerely,

JAMES E. MENDENHALL,
General Counsel.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I rise to express my deep disappointment over the legislation to implement the U.S.-Oman Free Trade Agreement. When sending this legislation to Congress, President Bush inexplicably deleted an amendment that would have barred goods made with slave labor or forced labor from benefiting under the FTA.

This amendment was originally proposed by Senator CONRAD and other Democrats on the Finance Committee, but ultimately received unanimous bipartisan support from the Finance Committee in a recorded vote.

The amendment was very simple it would have ensured that goods produced with slave labor, goods produced from forced labor, and goods produced based on human trafficking could not come into the U.S. under the preferential rules established by the agreement. I do not know how anyone could oppose this amendment. I think the American public would be united in support for the concept that they do not want to help support slave labor, forced labor, and human trafficking. President Bush really has some explaining to do.

The genesis for this amendment was a report revealing that companies in Jordan were importing workers from Bangladesh, Pakistan, and other poor countries, confiscating their passports, forcing them to work 80 to 100 hours per week, paying them inadequately, if at all, and subjecting them to physical intimidation and in some cases violence. Many of these workers actually paid recruiters thousands of dollars to get these ''good jobs'' and could not leave until they had earned enough money to pay off their debts.

Admittedly, these problems were in Jordan, not Oman. There are important reasons, however, why we need to be even more vigilant about this type of problem in Oman.

First, Oman's basic economic structure is currently based on the use of foreign workers—about 70 percent of Oman's workforce is foreign. Pretty much anywhere in the world, foreign workers are a particularly vulnerable lot.

Second, Oman already has a record on related issues that is cause for concern the International Confederation of Free Trade Unions has stated that migrant workers ''suffered extreme exploitation'' in Oman. And, the U.S. State Department has criticized Oman for inadequate efforts to stop human trafficking:

> Oman is a destination country for men and women primarily from Pakistan, Bangladesh, and India who migrate willingly, but may subsequently become victims of trafficking when subjected to conditions of involuntary servitude . . . as . . . laborers. Oman is placed on Tier 2 Watch List because of a lack of evidence of increasing efforts to combat severe forms of trafficking in persons over the last year.

Third, Oman's labor laws, enforcement, and history are much weaker than Jordan's. Oman's labor laws do not currently meet basic international standards. Oman is to be applauded for making numerous changes to its laws in the run up to the FTA to try to improve them. And, it has committed to making additional changes. Still, as I understand it, a few important areas remain where Oman's laws and enforcement fall short of standards that virtually every country in the world has accepted as a minimum.

Negotiations with some Democrats had been ongoing to resolve the continuing labor issues, but the administration appears to have decided that it will ignore their concerns. That was a regrettable decision. I have heard a lot of people lament the decline of bipartisanship in trade policy. I think if you were to date this decline, it would have started in 2001. The administration cannot just roll Democratic concerns one day and then expect a great working environment the next.

I am not sure why President Bush thinks we need excuses to ban goods made from slave labor and forced labor, but if we do, then I think I have just outlined a pretty good rationale.

I have heard some argue that we do not need to ban goods made with slave labor from Oman because U.S. law already bans all goods made with slave labor. People who make this argument are either misinformed or being misleading. The law at issue unfortunately has a ''consumptive demand'' exception—it does not block imports of products made with slave labor if there is not sufficient U.S. production to meet U.S. demand. The Court of International Trade just last year confirmed that the consumptive demand exception applies. Given that our trade deficit stands at over $700 billion, the exception clearly swallows the rule. So, again, anyone making a defense of this indefensible position by pointing to existing law is just plain wrong.

The President's decision to undermine Senate Democrats' efforts to curb slave labor and forced labor is not the only reason that I oppose this bill. As I noted above, Oman's labor laws—while much improved from 3 years ago—are still not up to international norms. The Bush administration has steadfastly refused to incorporate these minimum standards into the text of the agreement itself. There are minimum standards for intellectual property, for protecting the rights of foreign investors, for certain regulatory decisions, and in numerous other areas—as there should be. But the Bush administration has refused to include minimum standards for workers.

Finally, I want to restate my serious concerns about the Arab League Boycott against Israel. For decades now, the United States has had a policy to oppose the Arab League boycott against Israel. There is an entire office in the Department of Commerce tasked with implementing this anti-boycott policy. Congress has also directed USTR to ''vigorously oppose'' WTO admission for countries that engage in the boycott. In my view, it is an implicit corollary of this latter rule that the U.S. should not enter into bilateral trade agreements with countries that participate in the boycott.

Here, Oman has traditionally been one of the good guys. It renounced the boycott—primary, secondary, and tertiary—in 1994. The Government of Oman has stated numerous times that it does not apply any aspect of the boycott.

So, it was confusing to say the least that the Jerusalem Post reported earlier this month that an interview with two separate senior Customs officials in Oman revealed that Oman does in fact enforce the primary boycott. An official from Oman's Directorate of Customs stated, ''Products from Israel are not permitted because of the boycott. . . . You might put yourself in problems if you do that [i.e., if you try to bring in products from Israel].'' The chief of Customs Officers at the capitol airport stated, ''No products from Israel are allowed.''

The Government of Oman quickly sought to correct the record. I again applaud these efforts. Still, it certainly raises a serious question when you have nonpolitical people with no agenda whose very job it is day in and day out to enforce the Oman customs law claiming that the boycott exists. There seems to be a major disconnect here.

The administration should be able to lift the cloud of confusion, but unfortunately, the administration lacks credibility on this issue. Unwittingly or not, USTR has helped obfuscate the issue by giving incomplete, inaccurate, and on occasion misleading information to Congress on the boycott. In light of this lack of credibility, there is too much uncertainty on whether Oman has indeed terminated all aspects of the Arab League boycott. Accordingly, until this uncertainty is cleared up, I cannot support giving Oman the most preferential trade treatment under U.S. law.

I yield the floor. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, in a few minutes, we will be voting on the United States-Oman Free Trade Agreement

This agreement is a model for free trade in the Persian Gulf region and will become America's fourth agreement with an Arab country.

We struck similar deals with Jordan in 2000, Morocco in 2004, and Bahrain in 2005. Like these earlier deals, the Oman agreement will open and expand opportunities for exports of many American products to the benefit of America's workers, manufacturers, consumers, farmers, ranchers, and service providers.

As soon as the agreement takes effect, Oman and the United States will provide each other immediate duty-free access on virtually all products in their tariff schedules, including all consumer and industrial products, and will phase out tariffs on the remaining products within 10 years.

Former Trade Representative Rob Portman calls it ''a high quality, comprehensive free trade agreement that will contribute to economic growth and trade.''

America's relationship with Oman dates back to the early years of our Republic, when a treaty of friendship and navigation was signed with Muscat in 1833.

Since then, relations between our two countries have continually expanded. Today we enjoy a close and cooperative partnership.

Although not a formal member of the coalition, Oman has been a committed, dependable ally in the global war on terror. Oman has been a solid partner on terrorist finance issues and has reached out to work with partner nations in the region on trans-border terror threats.

Oman cooperates closely with us and other allies on counterterrorism and has publicly supported the democratic transition in Iraq. It has also supported stabilization operations, and the democratic and economic transition in Afghanistan. And its government and religious leaders consistently and courageously denounce acts of terror and religious intolerance.

Unfortunately, some have sought to undermine the agreement with myths that do not stand up to the scrutiny of the facts. For example, despite claims to the contrary, Oman does not implement any aspect of the boycott of Israel, a position they publicly reaffirmed in a letter from its commerce minister in September of 2005.

Moreover, Oman does not tolerate or allow the use of slave labor. To the contrary, Oman has also substantial commitments to the United States on labor reform and has promised to enact additional reforms by October 31, 2006.

The agreement before us builds on the progress already made and strengthens our relationship with a key friend and ally in the region. Indeed, rejection of the trade agreement would send a strong negative signal to our friends in the Middle East.

I urge my colleagues to vote for this measure. As the 9/11 Commission advised, expanding trade with the Middle East will ''encourage development, more open societies and opportunities for people to improve the lives of their families.''

Passing the free trade agreement will promote economic reform and development in the gulf and advance President Bush's broader goal of freer and more open Middle East. It will help both our allies and America move forward.

I yield back all time for both sides.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, all time is yielded back.

The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading and was read the third time.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill, having been read the third time, the question is, Shall the bill pass?

Mr. FRIST. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there a sufficient second?

There appears to be a sufficient second.

The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll

Mr. MCCONNELL. The following Senators were necessarily absent: the Senator from Rhode Island (Mr. CHAFEE) and the Senator from New Hampshire (Mr. GREGG).

(B) receives preferential tariff treatment under paragraphs 8 through 11 of article 3.2 of the Agreement.

(2) OMANI TEXTILE OR APPAREL ARTICLE.—The term ''Omani textile or apparel article'' means an article that—

(A) is listed in the Annex to the Agreement on Textiles and Clothing referred to in section 101(d)(4) of the Uruguay Round Agreements Act (19 U.S.C. 3511(d)(4)); and

(B) is an Omani article.

(3) COMMISSION.—The term ''Commission'' means the United States International Trade Commission.

Subtitle A—Relief From Imports Benefiting From the Agreement

SEC. 311. COMMENCING OF ACTION FOR RELIEF.

(a) FILING OF PETITION.—A petition requesting action under this subtitle for the purpose of adjusting to the obligations of the United States under the Agreement may be filed with the Commission by an entity, including a trade association, firm, certified or recognized union, or group of workers, that is representative of an industry. The Commission shall transmit a copy of any petition filed under this subsection to the United States Trade Representative.

(b) INVESTIGATION AND DETERMINATION.—Upon the filing of a petition under subsection (a), the Commission, unless subsection (d) applies, shall promptly initiate an investigation to determine whether, as a result of the reduction or elimination of a duty provided for under the Agreement, an Omani article is being imported into the United States in such increased quantities, in absolute terms or relative to domestic production, and under such conditions that imports of the Omani article constitute a substantial cause of serious injury or threat thereof to the domestic industry producing an article that is like, or directly competitive with, the imported article.

(c) APPLICABLE PROVISIONS.—The following provisions of section 202 of the Trade Act of 1974 (19 U.S.C. 2252) apply with respect to any investigation initiated under subsection (b):

(1) Paragraphs (1)(B) and (3) of subsection (b).

(2) Subsection (c).

(3) Subsection (i).

(d) ARTICLES EXEMPT FROM INVESTIGATION.—No investigation may be initiated under this section with respect to any Omani article if, after the date on which the Agreement enters into force with respect to the United States, import relief has been provided with respect to that Omani article under this subtitle.

SEC. 312. COMMISSION ACTION ON PETITION.

(a) DETERMINATION.—Not later than 120 days after the date on which an investigation is initiated under section 311(b) with respect to a petition, the Commission shall make the determination required under that section.

(b) APPLICABLE PROVISIONS.—For purposes of this subtitle, the provisions of paragraphs (1), (2), and (3) of section 330(d) of the Tariff Act of 1930 (19 U.S.C. 1330(d) (1), (2), and (3)) shall be applied with respect to determinations and findings made under this section as if such determinations and findings were made under section 202 of the Trade Act of 1974 (19 U.S.C. 2252).

(c) ADDITIONAL FINDING AND RECOMMENDATION IF DETERMINATION AFFIRMATIVE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—If the determination made by the Commission under subsection (a) with respect to imports of an article is affirmative, or if the President may consider a determination of the Commission to be an affirmative determination as provided for under paragraph (1) of section 330(d) of the Tariff Act of 1930 (19 U.S.C. 1330(d)), the Commission shall find, and recommend to the President in the report required under subsection (d), the amount of import relief that is necessary to remedy or prevent the injury found by the Commission in the determination and to facilitate the efforts of the domestic industry to make a positive adjustment to import competition.

(2) LIMITATION ON RELIEF.—The import relief recommended by the Commission under this subsection shall be limited to that described in section 313(c).

(3) VOTING; SEPARATE VIEWS.—Only those members of the Commission who voted in the affirmative under subsection (a) are eligible to vote on the proposed action to remedy or prevent the injury found by the Commission. Members of the Commission who did not vote in the affirmative may submit, in the report required under subsection (d), separate views regarding what action, if any, should be taken to remedy or prevent the injury.

(d) REPORT TO PRESIDENT.—Not later than the date that is 30 days after the date on which a determination is made under subsection (a) with respect to an investigation, the Commission shall submit to the President a report that includes—

(1) the determination made under subsection (a) and an explanation of the basis for the determination;

(2) if the determination under subsection (a) is affirmative, any findings and recommendations for import relief made under subsection (c) and an explanation of the basis for each recommendation; and

(3) any dissenting or separate views by members of the Commission regarding the determination and recommendation referred to in paragraphs (1) and (2).

(e) PUBLIC NOTICE.—Upon submitting a report to the President under subsection (d), the Commission shall promptly make public such report (with the exception of information which the Commission determines to be confidential) and shall cause a summary thereof to be published in the Federal Register.

SEC. 313. PROVISION OF RELIEF.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Not later than the date that is 30 days after the date on which the President receives the report of the Commission in which the Commission's determination under section 312(a) is affirmative, or which contains a determination under section 312(a) that the President considers to be affirmative under paragraph (1) of section 330(d) of the Tariff Act of 1930 (19 U.S.C. 1330(d)(1)), the President, subject to subsection (b), shall provide relief from imports of the article that is the subject of such determination to the extent that the President determines necessary to remedy or prevent the injury found by the Commission and to facilitate the efforts of the domestic industry to make a positive adjustment to import competition.

(b) EXCEPTION.—The President is not required to provide import relief under this section if the President determines that the provision of the import relief will not provide greater economic and social benefits than costs.

(c) NATURE OF RELIEF.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The import relief that the President is authorized to provide under this section with respect to imports of an article is as follows:

(A) The suspension of any further reduction provided for under Annex 2–B of the Agreement in the duty imposed on such article.

(1) IN GENERAL.—Subject to paragraph (2), any import relief that the President provides under this section may not, in the aggregate, be in effect for more than 3 years.

(2) EXTENSION.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—If the initial period for any import relief provided under this section is less than 3 years, the President, after receiving a determination from the Commission under subparagraph (B) that is affirmative, or which the President considers to be affirmative under paragraph (1) of section 330(d) of the Tariff Act of 1930 (19 U.S.C. 1330(d)(1)), may extend the effective period of any import relief provided under this section, subject to the limitation under paragraph (1), if the President determines that—

(i) the import relief continues to be necessary to remedy or prevent serious injury and to facilitate adjustment by the domestic industry to import competition; and

(ii) there is evidence that the industry is making a positive adjustment to import competition.

(B) ACTION BY COMMISSION.—

(i) INVESTIGATION.—Upon a petition on behalf of the industry concerned that is filed with the Commission not earlier than the date which is 9 months, and not later than the date which is 6 months, before the date any action taken under subsection (a) is to terminate, the Commission shall conduct an investigation to determine whether action under this section continues to be necessary to remedy or prevent serious injury and to facilitate adjustment by the domestic industry to import competition and whether there is evidence that the industry is making a positive adjustment to import competition.

(ii) NOTICE AND HEARING.—The Commission shall publish notice of the commencement of any proceeding under this subparagraph in the Federal Register and shall, within a reasonable time thereafter, hold a public hearing at which the Commission shall afford interested parties and consumers an opportunity to be present, to present evidence, and to respond to the presentations of other parties and consumers, and otherwise to be heard.

(iii) REPORT.—The Commission shall transmit to the President a report on its investigation and determination under this subparagraph not later than 60 days before the action under subsection (a) is to terminate, unless the President specifies a different date.

(e) RATE AFTER TERMINATION OF IMPORT RELIEF.—When import relief under this section is terminated with respect to an article, the rate of duty on that article shall be the rate that would have been in effect, but for the provision of such relief, on the date on which the relief terminates.

(f) ARTICLES EXEMPT FROM RELIEF.—No import relief may be provided under this section on any article that has been subject to import relief under this subtitle after the date on which the Agreement enters into force.

SEC. 314. TERMINATION OF RELIEF AUTHORITY.

(a) GENERAL RULE.—Subject to subsection (b), no import relief may be provided under this subtitle after the date that is 10 years after the date on which the Agreement enters into force.

(b) PRESIDENTIAL DETERMINATION.—Import relief may be provided under this subtitle in the case of an Omani article after the date on which such relief would, but for this subsection, terminate under subsection (a), if the President determines that Oman has consented to such relief.

(2) SERIOUS DAMAGE.—In making a determination under paragraph (1), the President—

(A) shall examine the effect of increased imports on the domestic industry, as reflected in changes in such relevant economic factors as output, productivity, utilization of capacity, inventories, market share, exports, wages, employment, domestic prices, profits, and investment, none of which is necessarily decisive; and

(B) shall not consider changes in technology or consumer preference as factors supporting a determination of serious damage or actual threat thereof.

(b) PROVISION OF RELIEF.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—If a determination under subsection (a) is affirmative, the President may provide relief from imports of the article that is the subject of such determination, as described in paragraph (2), to the extent that the President determines necessary to remedy or prevent the serious damage and to facilitate adjustment by the domestic industry to import competition.

To the extent a party submits confidential business information to the President in a proceeding under this subtitle, the party shall also submit a nonconfidential version of the information, in which the confidential business information is summarized or, if necessary, deleted.

TITLE IV—PROCUREMENT

SEC. 401. ELIGIBLE PRODUCTS.

Section 308(4)(A) of the Trade Agreements Act of 1979 (19 U.S.C. 2518(4)(A)) is amended—

(1) by striking ''or'' at the end of clause (iv);

(2) by striking the period at the end of clause (v) and inserting ''; or''; and

(3) by adding at the end the following new clause:

''(vi) a party to the United States-Oman Free Trade Agreement, a product or service of that country or instrumentality which is covered under that Agreement for procurement by the United States.''.

Mr. GRASSLEY. With today's passage of S. 3569, the U.S.-Oman Free Trade Agreement Implementation Act, we have solidified our commercial relations with Oman, a longstanding friend and ally for over 200 years. The agreement will result in new economic opportunities for U.S. farmers, manufacturers, and service providers.

None of this would have been possible without the support of my colleagues. In particular, the Senator from Montana, ranking Democrat of the Committee on Finance, Senator MAX BAUCUS. I want to thank Senator BAUCUS for his cooperation and good faith in moving this legislation through the Senate with bipartisan support. We would not be here today without his strong commitment to raising the living standards of people in the United States and abroad.

Senator BAUCUS's trade staff deserves recognition. The Democratic Staff Director on the Finance Committee, Russ Sullivan, and the Deputy Staff Director, Bill Dauster, worked well with my staff and provided helpful insight throughout the process. I also appreciate the efforts of Brian Pomper, Chief International Trade Counsel, as well as Demetrios Marantis, Anya Landau, Janis Lazda, and Chelsea Thomas.

I would also like to thank President Bush for his leadership. His commitment to improving the U.S. economy through increased access to foreign markets has made this agreement a reality. Oman is just one of his latest successes on this front.

The dedication of two former United States Trade Representatives, Robert Zoellick and Rob Portman, merits special thanks. Their efforts at the negotiating table produced a comprehensive, commercially-meaningful agreement. I would like to recognize the current United States Trade Representative, Susan Schwab. Ms. Schwab was confirmed in her current position after negotiations of the agreement were concluded. Her consultations with the U.S. Congress are appreciated. Her negotiating skills and experience make her well suited for future talks. I also appreciate the service and hard work of Assistant United States Trade Representative for Europe and the Middle East Shaun Donnelly.

My trade staff on the Finance Committee deserves recognition. First, my Chief Counsel and Staff Director, Kolan Davis, merits special mention. His legislative expertise has been instrumental in moving countless bills. The work of the Finance Committee's International Trade Counsel, David Johanson and Stephen Schaefer, is invaluable. Their depth of knowledge, dedication, and ability to juggle several policy issues at that same time is key in advancing the Committee's trade agenda. Their long hours are much appreciated. I would like to recognize my former Chief International Trade Counsel, Everett Eissenstat. While on my staff, he worked diligently on this agreement and others. I want also want to thank Tiffany McCullen Atwell, International Trade Policy Advisor on the Committee for her hard work that produces results behind the scenes. Claudia Bridgeford, International Trade Policy Assistant, has also contributed significantly to the Committee's work. Russ Ugone, my detailee from Customs and Border Protection, has lent us his technical expertise.

I am grateful to Justin McCarthy, Assistant United States Trade Representative for Congressional Affairs, and Andy Olson, Deputy Assistant United States Trade Representative for Congressional Affairs, for their work with Congress on the U.S-Oman Free Trade Agreement.

Finally, I would like to thank Polly Craighill of the Office of the Senate Legislative Counsel for the long hours she put into working on this legislation. Without her patience and hard work, today's vote would not have been possible.

I look forward to the signing of this legislation into law by President Bush.

Mr. CARPER. Mr. President, it is with great disappointment that I cast a ''nay'' vote on the Oman Free Trade Agreement today.

Last summer, when we were debating the Central America Free Trade Agreement, or CAFTA, I expressed frustration with the direction of free-trade agreements and free-trade policy, in general. I expressed a hope that the administration would do more to consult with Congress and, particularly, with moderate, free-trade Democrats.

Many times, representatives of this administration have said that they want to bring back the strong bipartisan support for free-trade agreements and ''make it easier for Democrats to support free-trade agreements.'' Well, one of the ways they can do that is by consulting with and responding to concerns expressed by Democrats and moderates in Congress—before we are asked to vote up or down on those agreements.

When the Oman Free Trade Agreement was considered in the Finance Committee, 18 members voted in favor of an amendment offered by Senator Conrad that would ban the import of goods made by slave labor or by workers trapped in abusive conditions through human trafficking. And with that amendment approved, all 19 members of the Finance Committee were able to support the free-trade agreement. Clearly, supporting that language was a way to make it easier for Members of Congress to support this agreement.

Yet the administration decided to ignore that strong signal. They did not try to address the concerns voiced through the adoption of the Conrad amendment. They chose to omit the amendment from the implementing language they sent to the Congress for its approval.

This action may not backfire today: the Oman agreement may still pass. However, it will backfire one day, and I expect it to be in the not so distant future.

Next year, Congress will be asked to reauthorize trade promotion authority. But trade promotion authority is about trust, and the actions taken by this administration in agreement after agreement have not inspired trust. And at this point, they have very little time to reestablish that trust before the vote on trade promotion authority next summer.

Lowering trade barriers and promoting free trade is about more than just economics. It is about increasing opportunities and improving quality of life both here and abroad. In offering access to our markets, we can help to peacefully spread democracy and encourage developing countries to increase transparency in government, strengthen their judiciary, improve conditions for their workforce, and protect their environment. But this administration does not seem to recognize this opportunity, even when strong supporters of trade—like myself—tell them that this is an important part of our support for free-trade agreements.

So today we have been sent a free-trade agreement that does not reflect an understanding of the concerns expressed by Members of Congress. This bill is not amendable. All I can do is vote yes or no. Last summer I voted yes, giving the administration the benefit of the doubt and hoping that they would listen to the concerns expressed by moderates in Congress. Today, I am going to vote no and hope that the administration will recognize that they must listen to the concerns expressed by the legislative branch and that they cannot take our votes for granted.

I invite the administration to use the time between now and the consideration of the Peru Free Trade Agreement to show that you are listening, to incorporate our ideas into that agreement, and to prove that you deserve the trust we showed in granting trade promotion authority.

I believe in lowering trade barriers, and that is why I have supported every trade agreement that has come before me, until today. But that will become considerably more difficult without trade promotion authority. I sincerely hope we can work together over the next year to save it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Pennsylvania is recognized.

Mr. SPECTER. I thank the Chair.

(The remarks of Mr. SPECTER pertaining to the introduction of S. 3614 are printed in today's RECORD under ''Statements on Introduced Bills and Joint Resolutions.'')

Mr. SPECTER. I thank the Chair. I thank my distinguished colleague from West Virginia for waiting. I know he has an important speech to give. I just conferred with the Senator from West Virginia, and it is his Fourth of July speech. It is a little early for the 4th, but there may not be too many people in the Chamber on the 4th or the 3rd or the 2nd or the 1st or even tomorrow, the 30th of June. I compliment Senator BYRD in advance.

I yield the floor.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I thank my distinguished friend, my longtime friend, the Senator from Pennsylvania, Mr. SPECTER, for his kind reference to me. I value his friendship. I value his views on the Constitution. I do, indeed, always.

Mr. SPECTER. I thank my colleague

A PATRIOTIC FOURTH

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, this coming Tuesday is the Fourth of July. Two hundred and thirty years ago, in 1776, our Founding Fathers declared independence from Britain, establishing a nation on fundamentally new principles of government. Those principles, laid out in ringing tones in the Declaration of Independence and given flesh and substance in our Constitution, have stood us well for these last 230 years. That is 84,007 days, including leap years, and we are still going strong.

Already, one can see the red, white, and blue bunting decorating stores, and one can see the fireworks for sale in those places where they are permitted. People are purchasing picnic and barbeque makings at the grocery stores and filling the propane tanks that will fuel the backyard grills. Next Tuesday, the Nation's air will be filled with the sizzle and aroma of good old hot dogs and hamburgers, steaks and shishkebobs, and barbeque of infinite regional variety. Sweet, luscious corn on the cob may lay atop the grill, roasting in its own leafy wrapping. Picnic tables will groan under the weight of creamy potato salad—potato salad like they make in Tennessee—tart coleslaw, egg salad or macaroni salad. Cold slabs of watermelon—Mr. President, cold slabs of watermelon—and fresh cherries will tempt some to initiate seed spitting contests. It is hard to imagine a more all-American feast. Even Thanksgiving, with its formality and fine china, does not capture the American spirit in the same manner as a barefoot feast like a Fourth of July picnic.

And the entertainment, too, is all-American. In the morning, we line the sidewalks of countless small towns and communities to watch the parades of fire engines and floats. Small children ride on father's shoulders to get a better view, and dogs—yes, like my little dog—circle below, tangling leashes around legs as they bark happily at the passing show. We wave at bands and we wave at the beauty queens, too, and local politicians before heading home to go boating, fishing, swimming, or just visiting with family in the cool shade of a tall tree. Americans celebrate the Fourth outdoors.

In the evening, we gather after our picnics to listen to concerts and wait for the fireworks. The air now is filled with whizzing acceleration followed by an anticipatory pause, then the bursting pop of the exploding sparks. We ooh and ahh and clap. We are, generally, filled with a pride and love of our nation on the Fourth of July. We feel patriotic—yes, we do—in a general and fuzzy sense—a patriotism borne of a full stomach and stirring martial music, tinged with the scent of black powder and wrapped in red, white and blue bunting.

This general sense of patriotism and this general sense of love of country is, of course, a good thing. We are the very fortunate few, just 299,062,710 or so of the world's 6,524,438,583 citizens as of June 25, 2006, according to the U.S. Census Bureau. That is just 4.6 percent or so of the world's population. We live in a nation richly endowed by nature, generally temperate in climate, and sparsely populated, though that may not seem true to anyone seeking to leave Washington for the beach this weekend. For 230 years—yes, two centuries and two decades—America has expanded geographically, economically and intellectually, literally reaching the moon and the stars. We have made great discoveries in the sciences and in medicine. We look after our own and reach out to help others. Our Nation is far from perfect, to be sure, but I doubt that many of us would willingly trade it for another.

George William Custis wrote that ''A man's country is not a certain area of land, of mountains, rivers, and woods, but it is a principle and patriotism is loyalty to that principle.'' I think he is only partly correct patriotism is loyalty to that principle as well as to the homeland over which that principle governs. We love our Nation for all that it is physically, the collection of geography and peoples that we know and love.

But it is also the principles upon which our Nation was founded 230 years ago—principles to which we must always hold fast, lest they be eroded away.

Our Nation was founded on the principles of equality and the rights of man to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. It is the job of government to ensure and protect these rights, and governments should only be based upon the consent of the people, not some powerful elite. Those fundamental principles should never be taken for granted. Even after 230 years of hearing them, they are not tired, run-of-the-mill, banal, or ordinary. Most of the other 96 percent of the world's population does not enjoy the blessings of those principles. Much of the rest of the world's population must live in the shadow of fear. Their governments have greater power and fewer restraints, and need not pay much attention to public opinion or internal dissent. In too many nations, dissenters can be jailed or simply ''disappeared'' if they dare to raise their voices to question their government's actions or policies.

We are blessed to live under a system of government established to serve all of the people. Mark Twain wrote that ''The government is merely a servant merely a temporary servant; it cannot be its prerogative to determine what is right and what is wrong, and decide who is a patriot and who isn't. Its function is to obey orders, not originate them.'' The orders that it is to obey should come from the people, and from a consensus of what constitutes the common good. That is rare in this world, a treasure to be guarded jealously.

Our Founding Fathers drafted our Constitution to defend individual freedom and to provide opportunity for all. It is a government expressly designed to balance power so that no one person can ever become a tyrant unless the people, in their foolishness or their apathy, allow it. Abraham Lincoln once said that ''America will never be destroyed from the outside. If we falter and lose our freedoms, it will be because we destroyed ourselves.''

In his book, Notes on Virginia, Thomas Jefferson wrote that, ''If once [the people] become inattentive to public affairs, you and I, and Congress and Assemblies, Judges and Governors, shall all become wolves. It seems to be the law of general nature, in spite of individual exceptions.'' We the people are the guardians of our own liberty.

Power and the trappings of power are as addictive as the strongest drug. When people in power come to believe that they know the interests of the Nation better than the people who are the Nation, and when people cease to listen to the people or to remember the folks back home, a dangerous situation is created.

The historian, Henry Steele Commager, said that ''Men in authority will always think that criticism of their policies is dangerous. They will always equate their policies with patriotism, and find criticism subversive.''

Each of us, as citizens of this great land and benefactors of our system of government, must serve as its defenders, against invasion from without, of course, but also against erosion from within. We must be prepared to criticize when government strays from our fundamental principles, when it ceases to be the servant of the people. In doing so, we must be prepared to be called unpatriotic. That is hard to do when we are fired up on barbeque and fireworks and patriotic music. That is hard to do when we have troops in the field and anxious families back home. But criticism is not unpatriotic. Far from it. When we speak up, we emulate our Founding Fathers, who were not afraid to spread criticism where it was warranted.

On the Fourth of July and on every day, Americans should feel patriotic in every sense of that word. We have every right to be proud of our Nation and our history. We Americans have every reason to look forward to a bright future, as long as we protect and encourage the right of every American to express his or her views and keep this Nation on the track that has carried us so well for so long.

I close with a poem Arthur Nicholas Hosking, ''Land of the Free.'' I wish everyone a Happy Fourth of July.

America, O Power benign, great hearts revere your name, You stretch your hand to every land, to weak and strong the same; You claim no conquest of the sea, nor conquest of the field, But conquest for the rights of man, that despots all shall yield.

America, staunch, undismayed, your spirit is our might; No splendor falls on feudal walls upon your mountain's height, But shafts of Justice pierce your skies to light the way for all, A world's great brotherhood of man, that cannot, must not fall.

America, in God we trust, we fear no tyrant's horde; There's light that leads toward better deeds than conquest by the sword; Yet our cause is just, if fight we must until the world be free Of every menace, breed, or caste that strikes at Liberty.

America, home of the brave, our song in praise we bring—Where Stars and Stripes the winds unfurl, 'tis there that tributes ring; Our fathers gave their lives that we should live in Freedom's light Our lives we consecrate to thee, our guide the Might of Right.

Mr. President, I hope that all the Senate family will have a safe, joyous Fourth of July

THE BUILDING OF THE SHIP

Thou, too, sail on, O Ship of State!
Sail on, O Union, strong and great!
Humanity with all its fears,
With all the hopes of future years,
Is hanging breathless on thy fate!
We know what Master laid thy keel,
What Workmen wrought thy ribs of steel,
Who made each mast, and sail, and rope,
What anvils rang, what hammers beat,
In what a forge and what a heat
Were shaped the anchors of thy hope!
Fear not each sudden sound and shock,
'Tis of the wave and not the rock;
'Tis but the flapping of the sail,
And not a rent made by the gale!
In spite of rock and tempest's roar,
In spite of false lights on the shore,
Sail on, nor fear to breast the sea!
Our hearts, our hopes, are all with thee,
Our hearts, our hopes, our prayers, our tears,
Our faith triumphant o'er our fears,
Are all with three,—are all with thee!

Mr. ALLEN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

SECURING OUR INDEPENDENCE

Mr. ALLEN. Mr. President, as we all depart in celebration of our Declaration of Independence, our secession from the British monarchy, let us, as Senators and as Americans, assess what should be accomplished to secure our independence and, most importantly, the ideals and the freedom that need to be secured, as was expressed in our Declaration of Independence, authored by Thomas Jefferson 260 years ago.

The people of America are the owners of our Government, and they expect us to do certain things. I hope when we return, after the Independence Day celebration, one of the first things we will recognize is we are a nation of laws, we are a nation of immigrants. We will recognize that at Monticello, Mr. Jefferson's home where there is always an Independence Day naturalization ceremony there, which is always so inspiring. For those of us who believe we should have immigration reform, that is how people should become citizens in this country—legally.

The American people have noticed our country has, for far too long, neglected to secure our borders. The first thing we need to do, when we get back, is to find the funds for border personnel, for detention center capacity, for a fence, for sensors. We need to make sure this is Nation of laws, and a Nation of immigrants, that has been built by immigrants, and improved by immigrants.—My mother is an immigrant, so I appreciate the value and the improvements and the promise of America that have been born by so many people who have come to this country from some other land.

But the American people expect us to do our job. The first responsibility of a government is security. And we need to secure our borders.

Secondly, dealing with independence, is our energy. We are far too dependent as a country on foreign sources of energy. We need to—and I think we can do it—help out not just short term but long term in a policy that has our country less dependent on foreign sources of energy. We need more production of oil and natural gas here at home. Some of it can be in deep waters far off our coast. I would like to share some of those royalties and revenues with the people in the States so they can share in some of the benefits while also making sure we have more oil and natural gas from this country.

For my Commonwealth of Virginia, on a bipartisan basis, our legislature, 2 years running, has passed a measure to allow the Commonwealth of Virginia to opt out of the moratorium or the prohibition of deep sea, deep water offshore exploration. Georgia may want another approach; Louisiana would take a different approach—but if a State were able to share in the royalties. For Virginia I would like to have one-quarter of those royalties go to colleges and universities; and it could be used for scholarships for, young people who have attributes or desires to study and be proficient in science, in technology and engineering, where there is such a great demand for people with those talents and skills in our country.

Then, I would take 50 percent and use it for transportation and roads. There are great needs for roads. And if we were getting hundreds of millions of dollars, 50 percent of it ought to go for transportation and roads and highways in the Commonwealth of Virginia.

And then a quarter of it would go to coastal communities, say, Virginia Beach, for example, that would probably use the money they get for sand or beach replenishment on our coast.

In addition to developing more oil and natural gas in this country, we also ought to recognize that we are the ''Saudi Arabia'' of the world in coal, and we ought to be using clean coal technology for electricity generation. Clean coal technology, in fact, can be used in a way that could be gasified to be like a natural gas and could be used as a fuel similar to diesel fuel.

Natural gas is so important for us for the manufacturing of everything from tires to plastics, to chemicals and fertilizers and forestry products. To be using natural gas for baseload electricity generation, as I have said, is like using bottled water to wash our dishes. It will do the job, but why would you want to use such a clean-burning fuel—which is so important for jobs and manufacturing jobs here in this country, as well as for heating our homes—for electricity generation when we can be using clean-coal technology?

We also ought to be using advanced nuclear technologies for electricity generation.

Beyond that, there are other advancements in technology. With nanotechnology, there are solar powers, solar photovoltaics, which makes more sense now and are much more efficient. There are lithium ion batteries. We can also grow some of our fuels, biofuels, particularly soy diesel. Ethanol in some areas of the corn belt makes a great deal of sense. But I think soy diesel as well as cellulosic biofuels also make a great deal of sense.

My colleagues, not any one of these will solve our energy dependence situation. But if we have diversity of fuels, and more of these fuels and more of this energy grown in America—explored and developed and produced in America for American jobs and American competitiveness and American security—that will improve this country's energy independence rather than having to worry about the whims of some mullah 8,000 miles away.

So let us resolve on this Independence Day week to find ways and actually adopt energy independence policies. We also need to recognize who the owners of the Government are; and that is the people. We ought to be working to lessen the burden, the tax burden, on working people, on families, on family businesses, and on family farms.

REAUTHORIZATION OF THE VOTING RIGHTS ACT

Mr. ALLEN. Mr. President, I also want to speak at length on a very important matter that I hope will also come to a vote on the floor of this Senate shortly; and that is the reauthorization of the Voting Rights Act. I am pleased this bill is moving through the committee process, and I commend Chairman ARLEN SPECTER, who is moving on yet another important piece of legislation this session.

The enactment of the Voting Rights Act was absolutely necessary 41 years ago and was initially passed during a very tumultuous time in our country's history. In fact, the Voting Rights Act should have been passed many years before then. But history has proven that the law was just and appropriate to provide equal opportunities and protections to persons with the desire to express themselves at the ballot box.

This is completely consistent with the spirit of the Declaration of Independence. And I believe we are all better off for the choices that were made back 41 years ago. And that has strengthened the fabric of our country. It has helped make us a more perfect union, and made us stronger as a country as we face challenges presently.

The present legislation before us reauthorizes several key sections of the Voting Rights Act that will expire next year if no action is taken. The expiring parts are section 5, section 203, and sections 6 through 9.

This legislation helps ensure the fundamental right of all eligible citizens to vote. It sends a strong message that no matter what your race, religion, gender, or national origin, if you are a law-abiding citizen you have the right to vote. At the core of representative democracy is the participation of informed people. The people are the owners of this Government.

While the U.S. Constitution surely guarantees the right to vote, legislation was and is still necessary to ensure that in practice that guarantee is never diminished. My Commonwealth of Virginia has come a long way since this law was first enacted, and a reauthorization is necessary to ensure this progress continues throughout the United States, from Florida to New York to Alaska.

Now, some will argue that counties and cities and States cannot be removed from or ''bail out'' of the preclearance aspects of this if they so desire and have a good record on voting rights. Now, the facts are, though, that—and I am just speaking for the Commonwealth of Virginia—11 cities and counties in Virginia have been able to ''bail out'' of the Voting Rights Act by proving that ''no [racial] test or device has been used within such State or political subdivision for the purpose or with the effect of denying or abridging the right to vote on account of race or color.'' The counties in Virginia that have been removed from preclearance review are—in alphabetical order—Augusta, Frederick, Greene, Pulaski, Roanoke, Rockingham, Shenandoah, and Warren, and the cities of Fairfax, Harrisonburg, and Winchester.

Renewal of the act does not mean that the reauthorizing States still engage in voter discrimination on the basis of race. Renewal should instead be viewed as a continued unflagging commitment to ensuring the protection of a law-abiding persons's right to vote without subversion or unwarranted interference.

The Voting Rights Act is a real and visible commitment made to ensure that voter discrimination will be stamped out and effectively prohibited if and when it does occur. Great strides have been made in ending voter discrimination in all of its forms since the Voting Rights Act was passed. It should also be noted that recognizing and addressing these problems is the appropriate prudent approach. It is responsible rather than ignoring those problems.

Thanks in part to the Voting Rights Act, Virginia was the first State in the Nation to popularly elect the first Governor who is an African American. I hope after this November's elections, Virginia is not still the only State with this record, and that there will be two States that have elected Governors who are African Americans.

Now, the election in Virginia, represented an inspirational success for a person, L. Douglas Wilder, who persevered and won that election. It was also an achievement for a State that only decades earlier had counties that closed their public schools rather than integrate them to comply with the U.S. Supreme Court ruling in Brown v. Board of education.

My friend and colleague in the other body, Representative JOHN LEWIS, and I recently returned from a pilgrimage to Farmville, VA, as part of a group organized by the Faith and Politics Institute. During this pilgrimage, and previous pilgrimages I have taken to Birmingham, Montgomery, and Selma, AL, we heard first-hand stories from still-living civil rights leaders and also personal heartbreaking stories from people about the impediments faced by African Americans as they grew up with the racial discrimination that existed at that time.

Now, as we strive for a society where all people are judged by the content of their character rather than by the color of their skin, we must join together in our great country of promise to make sure that everyone has an equal opportunity to participate and to succeed. Reauthorization of the Voting Rights Act is a tool that has, can, and will help achieve this goal of fairness. I am committed and dedicated to ensuring that the voting rights of all law-abiding Americans are protected, and the Voting Rights Act has proven to be an able vessel for accomplishing this important objective.

I urge my colleagues to bring this important piece of legislation to the Senate floor as soon as practicable this summer so we can debate the issues and amendments and ultimately renew the Voting Rights Act.

Mr. President, I wish my colleagues and all Americans a happy, safe, and patriotic Independence Day. With our friends and families, let's reflect on our foundational values that must be preserved. And a lot of these values need to be preserved from monarchical judges who prevent the pledge of allegiance in schools because of the words ''under God,'' but, on the other hand, allow the desecration of the flag.

We have judges who redefine the institution of marriage, but allow local government officials, in a place like New London, CT, to act like lords—the reason we seceded from the monarchy—among those lords in New London, CT, to take people's homes—the American dream—using eminent domain, not because there was a public purpose of a school or a road to be built, but because they wanted to derive more tax revenue off of that property and that land.

As Senators, let us return to act to secure our borders, develop energy independence, confirm sound judges, and renew the Voting Rights Act to make sure this is a land of opportunity for all.

MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. ALLEN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate now proceed to a period of morning business with Senators permitted to speak for up to 10 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

TRIBUTE TO DR. GENE SIMON

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, I rise today to pay tribute to a man for whom I have great respect: Dr. Gene Simon.

Tomorrow, June 30, Dr. Simon will retire after 31 years of exceptional service as chief executive officer of Chaddock, a nationally acclaimed, faith-based, child welfare agency in Quincy, IL.

In the New Testament, James, the disciple of Jesus, tells us, ''Suppose a brother or sister is without clothes and daily food. If one of you says to him, 'Go, I wish you well; keep warm and well fed,' but does nothing about his physical needs, what good is it? In the same way, faith by itself, if it is not accompanied by action, is dead.''

Gene Simon has taken that Bible lesson to heart his whole life. He has taken action. For more than 30 years, he has provided a home and food and clothing for children who might otherwise have had nowhere to turn.

Chaddock serves more than 6,500 people a year—children and families. Many of the young people Chaddock helps are at-risk. Some have endured serious abuse or neglect. Chaddock provides outpatient and residential treatment and the help young people and their families need to heal.

Chaddock was founded in 1853 as a college. Over the years, it has been a boys school and a treatment center for at-risk young people. It opened its doors to girls in 1982.

Chaddock is proud of its history, but it is not bound by that history.

One of the hallmarks of Gene Simon's leadership is his commitment to continual learning and innovation. You can see that at Chaddock.

Chaddock's school and treatment programs are national models for dealing with changing emotional and behavioral needs of children and their families. Chaddock offers a residential treatment program for adolescents with severe trauma and attachment disorders—one of only a handful of such centers in America.

Chaddock also has an outstanding program that works with families who have adopted children, helping the children and their new families to develop strong, loving bonds. I understand that this program has helped families from more than 20 States.

In recent years, Chaddock has risen to meet another critical need: helping children and adolescents move from foster care to adoption.

Gene Simon was born and raised on a family farm in Farmersville, IL. His parents, Eldon and Beryl Simon, owned a grain and livestock farm.

Dr. Simon holds a bachelor of science degree in agriculture from Southern Illinois University in Carbondale, a master's degree in human development counseling from the University of Illinois-Springfield, a master's of divinity degree from Garrett Evangelical Theological Seminary at Northwestern University in Evanston, IL, and a doctoral degree from Nova Southeastern University in Fort Lauderdale, FL.

From 1959–1971, he served as a United Methodist minister in the Illinois communities of Iroquois, Pontiac, Moweaqua, and Decatur.

With the importance Gene Simon places on family, it should come as no surprise that he is deeply committed to his own family, including his wife Peggy, who has been a constant partner in his work at Chaddock. Gene and Peggy Simon take great pride in their two sons, Chris and Paul, and four grandchildren.

The outstanding work of Gene Simon and the Chaddock staff has brought the agency much praise and many awards.

In 2001, the United Methodist Association of Health and Welfare Ministries honored Dr. Simon as one of the association's Administrators of the Year. And this year, the United Methodist Association named Chaddock its Organization of the Year—so Dr. Simon is going out on a high note.

But the testimonials that mean the most to Gene Simon are not from professional committees; they are from the young men and women who have found new hope at Chaddock.

I would like to close with a quote from one of those testimonials—from a former student of Chaddock. ''Gene Simon and this Chaddock family were here for me when I needed them most. The lessons I learned at Chaddock, such as dealing with emotions and just the everyday needs for love, care, and concern for myself and others, have helped me to become me . . . a good husband, father, employee, and a great friend to many.''

Imagine thousands of similar testimonials and you begin to see the tremendous amount of good he has done and the positive difference he has made in the lives of so many young people and families who have walked through the doors at Chaddock over the years.

On a personal note, Gene has been a source of friendship and inspiration to me for many years. He has helped me understand the reality of the human condition and he has reminded me never to give up on a person in need.

I wish Gene Simon well in his retirement, and I know that the difference his life has made will continue to be felt by the many people he has helped

HONORING OUR ARMED FORCES

SPECIALIST JEREMY JONES

Mr. HAGEL. Mr. President, I rise to express my sympathy over the loss of U.S. Army SPC Jeremy Jones from Nebraska. Specialist Jones died of wounds received from a roadside bomb in Iskandariyah, Iraq on June 27. He was 25 years old.

Specialist Jones was a resident of Omaha and graduated from Millard West High School in 1999, where he competed in football and wrestling. He enlisted in the Army in 2003, shortly after being married to his wife Jenny. He was deployed to Iraq in November, serving with the Army's 1st Battalion, 67th Armored Regiment of Fort Hood, TX. Specialist Jones hoped to make a career in the Army. In April, he reenlisted for another 6 years.

In February, Specialist Jones flew from Iraq to Omaha to see his newborn daughter Mackenzie for the first time. He was a proud father, and he was proud of his service to his country. Thousands of brave Americans like Specialist Jones are currently serving in Iraq.

In addition to his daughter and wife, Specialist Jones is survived by his son Anthony; his mother Diane; his father Scott; and his sister Abbi. Our thoughts and prayers are with them at this difficult time. America is proud of Specialist Jones' heroic service and mourns his loss.

I ask my colleagues to join me and all Americans in honoring SPC Jeremy Jones.

HAMDAN V. RUMSFELD

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, today the Supreme Court ruled in the case of Hamdan v. Rumsfeld that Congress did not intend to strip Federal courts of jurisdiction over pending habeas corpus cases when it passed the Detainee Treatment Act of 2005. The Court got it right.

The original amendment offered by Senator GRAHAM on the Senate floor, and which passed the Senate by a vote of 49 to 42, contained language that would have stripped the Federal courts of habeas corpus jurisdiction in both pending and future cases brought by detainees at Guantanamo. The amendment specifically stated that the jurisdiction-stripping provision ''shall apply to any application or other action that is pending on or after the date of the enactment of this Act.''

However, this language was removed from the provision by the subsequently adopted Graham-Levin amendment. The Graham-Levin amendment passed the Senate by a vote of 84 to 14, and replaced the earlier Graham amendment in the bill. The legislative history makes clear that the jurisdiction-stripping provisions did not apply to pending habeas corpus cases.

The day before the Senate adopted the Graham-Levin modification, I said on the Senate floor: ''The amendment will not strip the courts of jurisdiction over [pending] cases. For instance, the Supreme Court jurisdiction in Hamdan is not affected.'' Despite efforts by the House of Representatives during our conference with the House to reinsert language stripping the courts of jurisdiction over pending habeas corpus cases, the final text of the Detainee Treatment Act retained the language of the Graham-Levin amendment.

In today's decision, the Supreme Court, applying ''ordinary principles of statutory construction,'' determined that Congress did not intend to strip the courts of jurisdiction in pending habeas cases. The Court held that ''Congress' rejection of the very language that would have achieved the result the Government urges here weighs heavily against the Government's'' argument that the jurisdiction-stripping language should be interpreted to be retroactive. That was, indeed, the only conclusion that is supported by the language and legislative history of the Detainee Treatment Act.

The substance of the ruling in Hamdan establishes that the President, acting alone, lacks the power to unilaterally determine the legal rights of detainees at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba. Only Congress and the President, acting together, have the power to make such a determination, the Court ruled. Today's decision demonstrates once again the vital constitutional role of the Supreme Court as a check on the actions of the executive and legislative branches of Government.

I believe that Congress should give this issue careful deliberation, including full committee hearings, before we act. I look forward to thorough hearings in the Armed Services Committee this summer in anticipation of consideration of possible legislation in the fall.

IMPORTANCE OF CRIME GUN TRACE DATA

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, over the past decade, through the gathering and dissemination of crime gun trace data, the need has been highlighted for stronger measures to stem the flow of guns into the illegal market and too often, into the hands of criminals.

One of the responsibilities of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives, ATF, is to trace firearms recovered by local law enforcement at crime scenes. The gun is traced from its manufacturer to the first purchase using records maintained by firearms manufactures and sellers. The process begins when law enforcement recovers a gun in the course of a criminal investigation and contacts the ATF with information on the crime being investigated, the name of the gun's manufacturer, the caliber and serial number. The ATF first checks its records of out-of-business dealers and its multiple sales records. If the traced gun is not located in these records, the ATF will then contact the manufacturer for the name of the dealer or distributor to whom the manufacturer first sold the gun. The dealer is then contacted for information on who originally purchased the gun.

This information provides an invaluable investigative tool for law enforcement. Analysis of crime gun traces allows the ATF, as well as State and local law enforcement, to not only investigate specific gun crimes but also to work to identify the sources of guns used in crimes. Crime gun traces can link a suspect to a firearm in a criminal investigation, identify gun traffickers whether they are licensed or unlicensed sellers, and detect both instate and interstate patterns in the sources and types of crime guns.

It was not until the most recent decade that law enforcement agencies have routinely traced guns recovered in crimes. Initially, crime gun traces amounted to about 100,000 a year. Today, gun tracing has resulted in a database of over 2 million crime guns. The database has become a rich source of information for guiding public policy and the work of law enforcement officers.

The rapid expansion of crime gun tracing and the resulting trace database has produced a great deal of valuable information on how the illegal gun market is supplied. It is this information that helps point the way to policies to keep guns out of the hands of criminals.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I want to make the Senate aware of a report I recently became aware of by the Advocacy Forum, a respected organization which documents human rights violations in Nepal by both government security forces and the Maoists.

The Forum's latest report, released this week, describes the widespread use of torture on persons in custody. The overwhelming majority of documented cases are attributed to the Nepalese police, military and armed police. There are also cases attributed to the Maoists.

The descriptions of the use of torture in this report are difficult to read. It is appalling that such barbaric acts of cruelty occur in the 21st century. Unfortunately, we know that this is not unique to Nepal. Torture is routine in dozens of countries.

Nepal today is at a crossroads. Since popular demonstrations forced King Gyanendra to back away from his foolhardy power grab last February 1, there has been progress towards strengthening Nepal's fledgling democratic institutions and beginning a dialog to resolve the conflict. The future is unpredictable, however, and we continue to receive disturbing reports of extortion and abductions by the Maoists, and of resistance by the Nepalese military to much needed reform.

Addressing these issues, and ending the use of torture and other human rights violations, will require new laws to protect the rights of detainees in accordance with international norms, reform of the judiciary so it is fully independent and has the resources to effectively carry out its responsibilities, reform of the military and police so they are placed fully under civilian authority and subject to the rule of law, and prosecutions of those responsible for violations. The international community can and should help support Nepal in taking these difficult, essential steps.

All Senators should be aware of the cases documented by the Advocacy Forum, and I ask unanimous consent that a summary of the report be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[Advocacy Forum—Nepal]

SHARING EXPERIENCES OF TORTURE SURVIVORS—SUMMARY OF DATA

Advocacy Forum is a non-profit making non-governmental organization working to promote the rule of law and human rights in Nepal. Our core activities are documentation of cases of human rights violations, monitoring of detention centres, providing legal aid to the victims of human rights violations and involving advocacy in contesting impunity. As part of our on-going work to address human rights violations and denials of access to justice, through our central, regional and district-based offices, we make daily visits to a number of police detention centres in 9 districts and document and monitor human rights violations. We do not have access to military detention centres, but victims of torture at these centres have contacted us to report their experiences, as have victims of the Maoists. Evidence of human rights' abuse is systematically and thoroughly documented.

Over a period of five years (July 2001 to April 2006) Advocacy Forum documented 5682 cases of human rights violations focusing on extra-judicial killings (198), forced disappearances (335), torture (2,271), rape of women (41); and illegal detention (2,837) committed by the state security forces and the Maoists. During this period we were put under extreme threatening pressure by the State, Maoist and vigilantes in carrying out our activities. Similarly we observed the great security risk experienced by victims and witnesses.

Last year Advocacy Forum issued a press statement on 26 June covering the cases that we had documented up to March 2005. Because of the political situation we could not provide details of the torture and experiences of the victims. Between March 2005 to April 2006, we documented 951 cases of torture and 17 cases of rape committed by the State and Maoists. This report sets out some of the experiences of those torture victims who managed to survive and want to share their experiences. Some of the victims' names have been changed to protect their safety.

When Advocacy Forum intensified the challenge against illegal detention, last year alone (March 05–April 06) through habeas corpus, 418 people who had been detained illegally for a prolonged period of time were released from different detention centres. We were shocked to learn that every single person arrested by army soldiers and held in military detention reported that they had been severely tortured. Their torture experiences varied from deprivation of food to electric shock and rape of women. We do not have the capacity to measure the psychological torture and its effect on the victims and their families. Many of the victims reported that they were threatened not to share their experiences with anyone, in particular human rights groups. Many said that they were ordered to report to the barracks regularly. There was a complete absence of any protection for the victims. So, they were forced into silence, and no survivor could dare to challenge these atrocities.

Despite all these difficulties, even putting their lives at risk, some victims who had been released from detention played a significant role in the release of others who were languishing in different detention centres undergoing severe torture for a prolonged period of time. By sharing their experiences as to how other fellow detainees were treated in detention and their conditions, they helped us to coordinate our efforts and publicize the whereabouts of some missing people and to release many others.

From July 2001 to April 2006 Advocacy Forum documented 2271 cases of torture. Last year alone (March 2005–April 2006), we documented 951 cases of torture and 17 rape cases. Out of these 951 torture cases, 511 were committed by the police, 371 by the military and 11 by the armed police. We also documented 12 cases of torture by the state sponsored vigilantes and 46 cases of torture inflicted by the Maoists. Because of the security risk, 177 survivors released from military detention did not want to share the full details of their torture with us. Excluding those cases, we have thoroughly documented the details of torture in 774 cases. Children as young as 14 years old were also arrested and detained. Out of 951 torture survivors 349 (37%) were juveniles (below the age of 18 years old).

It should be borne in mind that, due to the limitations on our access to victims, our records only cover a small proportion of the victims of torture. It is impossible to estimate how many victims of torture there are in total in Nepal, but we would guess that we have recorded only 10% of the current cases.

Analyzing the 774 cases documented last year, we have found that the commonly used methods of torture in barracks include blindfolding for a prolonged period of time (up to 21 months), electric shocks, suffocating the victims by pouring water into the nose and mouth, hanging upside down, rape and sexual abuse, piercing under nails, burying, keeping in an abnormal position, tying hands and feet around a stick and swinging the body around, random beatings, fake executions and threats of killing.

The commonly practiced methods of torture in police detention centers are beatings on soles by plastic pipes, rolling the muscles of thighs, random beatings and forcing victims to sit in an abnormal position.

We also documented 46 cases of torture inflicted by the Maoists. They have also been practicing torture systematically to punish and to terrorize people. The commonly used methods of the Maoists are breaking the legs and bones of different parts of the body by hitting with heavy objects, wounding and random beatings. They have also put people for a prolonged period of time in ''labor camps''.

Out of 371 reported cases of torture in the barracks, Bhairabnath Battalion, Maharajgunj Barracks, Kathmandu, Youdha Bhairab Battalion, Maharajgunj Barracks, Kathmandu, Jagadal Battalion, Chauni Barracks, Kathmandu, Mahabirgan Battalion, Chauni Barracks, Kathmandu, Bhimkali Battalion, Chisapani Barracks, Banke, Rajdal Barracks, Lalitpur, Fulbari Barracks, Pokhara, Kaski, Bijaypur Barracks, Kaski, Shivadal Battalion, Gorusinghe Barracks, Kapilvastu, Dhulikhel Barracks in Kavre, Devi Dutta Battalion, Suparitar Barracks in Makawanpur, and Bhawani Box Battalion, Dailekh Barracks in Dailekh are the ones where most of the victims were tortured.

Out of 511 torture cases by the police, Valley Crime Investigation Branch, Hanumandhoka, Gausala Ward Police Station, Boudha Ward Police Stations, Kalimati Ward Police Stations, Balaju Ward Police Stations, District Police Office Morang, District Police Office Banke, District Police Office Kanchanpur, District Police Office Udapur, District Police Office, Kapilbastu, District Police Office, Kaski are the police stations where most of the victims were tortured. Of those people we interviewed in police detention centres, 35.5% in Nepal, 43.8% in Kathmandu said that they had been tortured. However, Advocacy Forum only has access to those people detained by the police who are then taken to Court for remand. If statistics for people released before being taken to Court were included, we consider the percentage of those who have been tortured by the police may be considerably higher.

Torture is also a result of the failure of the criminal justice system. Though the political context of the country has been changed, the practice of torture has not. Torture is routinely practiced in detention even today. In May 2006 alone we documented 72 cases of torture in 21 different police detention centers. The pattern, ways and techniques of the police remain the same as before. Likewise, the judges and the prosecutors continue with their previous prejudices and practices. Neither the judges nor the public prosecutors are adequately sensitized on the issue.

The existing system forces victims of torture to remain silent. What happens in practice is that if a person is arrested, generally that person will be detained for some days without any custody record, the authority does not even acknowledge the detention of that person, and there is no mechanism that allows inspection or scrutiny of the detention records of the police. During this period the detainee is tortured. When his or her wounds and bruises are healed, the police prepare a paper that shows that the detainee was arrested less than 24 hours previously, 24 hours being the legal limit within which a detainee should be presented to a judge. The detainee is then escorted by the police from the same office to the court. In the presence of the police the judge extends the remand. During this period, detainees are rarely given access to medical services or lawyers. When a detainee goes to prison or comes out of custody only then does he or she share the incidences of torture with others. If a case for compensation is filed, the victim is likely to lose the case as he or she will be fail to prove evidence of torture. In the absence of medical reports, it is hard to convince a judge!

The whole issue of torture is also related to the issues of an independent and professional police system, independent judiciary and the office of the Attorney Generals. So, it is important that we have a wider discussion about making the criminal justice system more functional and efficient in eliminating torture and for the promotion of rule of law and fair trial.

Since 2001, Advocacy forum has helped 40 torture victims to bring a case challenging their torture and demanding compensation. Out of 40 cases, 11 have been already been quashed as the victims were unable to provide sufficient evidence of torture, in particular any medical report proving the claim. Victims have also lost their cases because they were unable to establish that they were in custody when they were tortured. For example, Mainya Tamang was arrested on 7 November 2004 by the police of Ward Police Station, Bouddha. Following her arrest, she was then taken to the same ward police station where she was detained for two days illegally and for two days she was severely beaten and tortured. On 9 November 2004 she was transferred to Kalimati Women's Cell where she was again beaten. On 11 November 2004 the police prepared a paper showing that she was arrested that day and produced her to the District Court of Kathmandu for remand. On 27 December 2004, Advocacy Forum filed a case on her behalf demanding compensation for the torture inflicted upon her while she was in detention. Her case was quashed both in the District Court and on appeal in the Appellate Court as both Courts said that at the time when she claims that she was tortured, there was no evidence to prove that she was in detention!

Out of the 40 cases that we have represented, only 4 victims of torture by the police have so far been awarded compensation of 10,000 Nepali Rupees (approximately US$ 135), but they still have not received this compensation. Other cases are still subjudice of the court.

Advocacy Forum has faced a number of difficulties in bringing cases of torture. In the beginning, the Court would not even let us register a complaint where military were the accused. The Court asks a victim to prove that he or she was tortured rather than the accused having to prove that the victim was not tortured while in their custody. Those people who remained in custody for many weeks and months without any records of their detention, without access to medical services, lawyers or families have very little chance of proving that they were tortured. In addition, the Torture Compensation Act provides that if the complaint is filed with ''malafide'' intention, the victim will be fined up to 5,000 Nepali Rupees. As it is very difficult to prove the case of torture, many victims are discouraged from doing so as the chances of being found guilty of bringing the case with malafide intention and being fined are very high. Thus, the victims have no protection. In many incidents they reported to us that they were put under pressure to retract their complaint. No witness could dare to testify in their favor as they also have no protection. Thus, the whole system is hostile against the victims and favors the perpetrators.

One of the major problems in the case of torture is the failure of the State to criminalize the act of torture. Since 1996 the UN Committee against Torture has been asking the Government of Nepal to criminalize the act of torture, but the State has failed to do so. Furthermore, the existing Torture Compensation Act does not comply with Nepal's international obligations. To make it compatible with Nepal's international obligations, the Torture Compensation Act of Nepal has to be amended in such a way that criminalizes the act of torture, puts the burden of proof on the custody taking officers, includes provisions for the protection of victims and witnesses, ensures lawyers and families have access to detainees right from the beginning of arrest, makes it mandatory for the list of detainees to be made public and put under public scrutiny, if anyone is found to be detained without record, the officer incharge is accountable, makes provision that ensures perpetrators of torture from other countries are extradited or prosecuted, and ensures that no-one will be extradited to any country if there is a risk of torture in that country.

In addition, the following changes to the law are necessary:

Mechanisms of transitional justice to deal with past cases of human rights violations including torture;

An increase in the current maximum amount of compensation, which is currently 100,000 Nepali Rupees (approximately US$ 1,350) plus a change to allow the recovery of medical expenses; and

Changes to the laws of evidence to ensure that evidence produced under torture or duress is inadmissible by making prosecutors provide proof that evidence was voluntary.

In conclusion, the State has the obligation to investigate all past cases of human rights violations including torture and to prevent violations in the future. A functional mechanism has to be set up to address past violations of human rights including torture and to take measures to prevent such occurring in the future. One way to prevent the future occurrence of such violations is to prosecute those responsible for violations committed in the past. It is also urgent to amend the existing Torture Compensation Act to make it compatible with the provisions of the U.N. conventions against torture.

MANUFACTURING EXTENSION PARTNERSHIP

Mr. KOHL. Mr. President, since 2001 America has lost 2.5 million manufacturing jobs, eroding an industry that was once the pride of the United States. Manufacturing represents the cornerstone of our economy and the best in American values. It creates the cars we drive to work, the computers our children use to learn, and the household appliances we use each day. I rise today to talk about the Manufacturing Extension Partnership, MEP, one of the few Federal programs that has provided tangible assistance to the manufacturing sector, keeping companies in business and retaining jobs.

MEP is a public-private partnership working with small and medium sized manufacturers, helping them streamline operations, integrate new technologies, shorten production times, and lower costs. MEP clients surveyed in fiscal year 2004 reported 43,600 jobs created or retained and $1.889 billion in additional sales.

In Wisconsin, where manufacturing employs 512,000 people and contributes 22 percent of the State's gross product, MEP has assisted 1,700 small and medium sized manufacturers to improve their productivity and profitability. One example is the Jor-Mac Company, a metal fabrication company in Grafton, WI, which was beset by fierce Chinese competitors. After working with MEP, Jor-Mac improved its production efficiency, increasing sales by $5 million.

Since its inception in 1988, the Manufacturing Extension Partnership has been an invaluable resource to manufacturers. Without strong Federal support, MEP will be unable to maintain its mission of serving America's small manufacturers. At a time when we want to increase economic activity, expand U.S. exports, and strengthen the manufacturing base of our Nation, MEP is a fiscally sound investment of Federal resources.

RENEWABLE FUELS

Mr. DAYTON. Mr. President, this week is the long-anticipated Energy Week over at the House of Representatives. It is the response of that Chamber's leadership to the soaring energy prices which are hurting this Nation's consumers, families, and businesses.

After hearing the House Energy Week touted for months, I was naturally curious about what would be on the agenda. A plan to put more alternative fuel vehicles on the road? Incentives to make renewable fuels available to more consumers? A plan to rein in the Federal Government's vast consumption of fossil energy?

No, Mr. President, none of those worthy initiatives are being discussed during House Energy Week. In fact, I am told that their only initiative is a plan to weaken a quarter-century ban on offshore drilling. That is it. That is evidently the House's plan to provide relief for Americans from the high cost of energy. Not the slightest mention of the role that renewable fuels might play in solving this energy crisis.

For most American families who drive passenger cars, ethanol is this country's most promising alternative to foreign oil. Ethanol is not merely an additive to gasoline, it is a replacement for gasoline, which is why major oil companies have sought to block its entry into the marketplace.

I have heard from gas station franchise owners in my State of Minnesota that the major oil companies have prevented them from selling E85 with a requirement that only branded products be sold under the company's branded canopy. This means that, rather than selling E85 from one of several existing pumps, a station owner must dig a new hole in the ground somewhere in the parking lot, and install a new pump, often at costs of up to $75,000.

Perhaps this explains why, of the estimated 170,000 service stations in the country, just 800, or less than 5 percent, offer E85 fuel. And of those 800 stations, over one-fourth, or 210 stations, are located in my State of Minnesota.

I have introduced legislation, the Renewable Fuels Promotion Act, that would prohibit oil companies from restricting where E85 and biodiesel can be sold on the premises of franchised gas stations.

E85 is a very popular fuel, where it is available. This year, first quarter sales in Minnesota increased 320 percent over last year, as the price of gas soared. Americans all over the country should have access to E85, and my bill would ensure that every gas station owner who wants to sell it has the ability to do so.

My legislation also targets the Federal Government's failure to embrace renewable fuels. In his State of the Union address, the President said our Nation is addicted to oil. What he failed to mention was that the Federal Government is the biggest addict of them all. The Federal Government is far and away the largest consumer of energy in the United States. In fact, the Department of Defense alone is the single largest consumer of petroleum fuel in the world. So what would happen if the largest consumer in the most energy-hungry nation in the world used its tremendous market power to purchase renewable fuels?

Consider this: In 2004, the Federal Government consumed 2 billion gallons of petroleum diesel fuel. If every gallon of that diesel had been a blend of 20 percent biodiesel and 80 percent diesel fuel, the Government would have consumed 400 million gallons of biodiesel—a great boost for the nascent industry. Instead, the Federal Government is using its massive purchasing power to buy petroleum fuel—a windfall for the oil companies. In 2004, the Federal purchases of ethanol and biodiesel fuels combined amounted to a paltry 3 million gallons, less than two-tenths of 1 percent of the total fuel consumption.

According to the Department of Energy, ''One reason for the relatively low alternative fuel use rate is the lack of sufficient alternative fuel infrastructure.'' ''The Renewable Fuels Promotion Act'' would require every Federal fueling station to be equipped with a renewable fuels pump. On May 17, I sent a letter to President Bush asking him to accomplish the same thing with an Executive order.

In the world of renewable fuels, infrastructure is half the battle. If you don't have the pumps, you can't sell the fuel. My bill addresses the fundamental problem underlying the Federal Government's failure to embrace biofuels: the fuels are not available at Federal fueling stations. In Congress, we can't control the private energy markets, but we do have some sway over the Federal Government. My bill would ensure that the tremendous purchasing power of the Federal Government would take us in the right direction: toward a stronger biofuels industry, and away from reliance on foreign oil.

In conclusion, I wish our House colleagues the best as they proceed with their Energy Week agenda. However, I would caution them that a plan to drill offshore is not really a plan for relief from high energy prices. Even if legislation were passed today, no new oil would come online for a decade or more. Americans don't have a decade to wait.

Ethanol and biodiesel are here today. They are ready for consumers, and automakers are ready with the vehicles. The Renewable Fuels Promotions Act would help bring biofuels to the customers that need energy security today.

INTERNATIONAL POLAR YEAR

Ms. MURKOWSKI. Mr. President, I rise to take this time to speak about the Arctic and the upcoming International Polar Year. The Arctic is still a new frontier for many in Congress. For many, it is too far away, too dark and too cold to merit much attention. But whether you represent Florida, Iowa, or any other State, Americans around the country are connected to events in the Arctic. From climate change and the development of our natural resources, to international treaties and maritime rights, more knowledge about each of these issues is needed to help us formulate and shape the policies that will impact the Arctic and our country for future generations.

It has been nearly 14 years since the United States last developed an Arctic policy. The world was a different place 14 years ago. The Cold War had just ended. Climate change was barely being considered as an issue. An accessible, navigable Arctic Ocean was nowhere near as real a prospect as it is today. The Arctic Council, an intergovernmental organization that addresses many of the common concerns and challenges faced by the Arctic states, was just getting started. And we had nowhere near the sensitivity to the changes life is bringing to indigenous residents of the Arctic.

Times have changed, and we need a new Arctic policy. The upcoming International Polar Year will be the 50th anniversary of the International Geophysical Year of 1957–1958 and continues a tradition of international science years that began in 1882–1883 and again in 1932–1933.

The purpose of the International Polar Year is to spark an interest in those whose expertise may not be in the Polar Regions. Most importantly, the theme is international.

IPY is being led by the International Council for Science, ICSU, and the World Meteorological Organization, WMO. Participating nations so far include Argentina, Australia, Austria, Belgium, Brazil, Canada, Czech Republic, Chile, China, Denmark, Finland, France, Germany, Greenland, Iceland, India, Ireland, Italy, Japan, Korea, Malaysia, New Zealand, Norway, Poland, Portugal, Russia, South Africa, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, the Netherlands, Ukraine, United Kingdom, United States of America, Uruguay, and others.

The International Polar Year is actually 2 years, from March 1, 2007, until March 1, 2009, allowing two field seasons of research in both the Arctic and the Antarctic. The timeframe was selected to encourage an intensive burst of effort that can be coordinated among many nations. During this time, scientists will lay the groundwork for sustained assessments of environmental change and variability. In addition, the resulting enhanced infrastructure and observation systems will provide an improved foundation for ongoing science.

In the United States, the administration has asked the National Science Foundation to lead U.S. IPY activities. NSF allocated roughly $13 million for this fiscal year for research opportunities. The announcements for these research grants will occur sometime in late July or August of this year.

Another round of grants is expected in February or March of 2007, as the President requested $62 million for fiscal year 2007 just in time for the start of the IPY.

Other agencies are contributing to IPY, including the National Institute of Health, NASA, the State Department, and the Department of Energy. In fact, the Department of Energy is sponsoring a summit on energy development and rural power as it relates to the Arctic. The core of the summit will be a technology conference held in Anchorage, AK, the week of October 14, 2007. Leading up to the technology conference and following the summit to its completion will be an education and outreach effort with the goal of capturing the interest of the public and decisionmakers and attracting and developing the next generation of scientists, engineers, and leaders.

Despite the many events and research projects that will be happening around the world, it is important that we not lose focus on why we are having IPY: to make a contribution that will not only serve as a benchmark in understanding the polar regions but also help leave a legacy for future scientists and researchers. The worst-case scenario for IPY is for great scientific achievements to happen over the next 2 years, and nobody knows about it. Showcasing IPY is essential.

As scientists work to achieve breakthroughs in their respective fields, they will also be increasing their collaboration with local communities and indigenous people as partners in research from designing the projects and collecting and interpreting the data to disseminating the results.

There are already projects trying to achieve a greater partnership. For example, The STUDENT-PARTNERS Project, SPP, headed by the Woods Hole Research Center in Massachusetts, unites students, teachers, and scientists to study the role of rivers in the Arctic system and create an innovative and effective education and outreach program. By partnering with K–12 grade students and teachers living beside the largest Arctic rivers in Russia, Canada, and Alaska, the high frequency river water samples that are needed to understand hydrologic and biogeochemical fluxes in the river systems will be obtained. In the process, the capability we seek in a multinational Arctic river observing network will be developed.

In the Bering Strait School District in Alaska, teachers are trained to educate students in grades K–12 about climate change data collection and scientific study. The project blends modern science with Native tradition, language, and subsistence needs. Full community involvement has been achieved in 13 of the 15 villages in the school district.

Scientists from the Geophysical Institute at the University of Alaska work with teachers and students to collect data on weather, erosion, sea ice movement, and wave and wind action. Native elders are involved in teaching the students using the Native language, culture, and historical observations. The elders use the data to assist them in predicting dangerous weather and sea conditions as the plan for subsistence activities. What they are doing not only benefits the community and sustains Native traditions, it also generates a new generation of individuals interested in Arctic science.

The upcoming International Polar Year can play a significant role in focusing our Nation, and for that matter the world, on the work that is being done, and needs to be done, in the Arctic. I plan to use the occasion of the International Polar Year to bring more of my colleagues to the north. When I say the north, I mean going to the Permafrost tunnel in Fairbanks or the Toolik Field Station on the North Slope of Alaska to see for themselves what the Arctic is really like.

The IPY is also an opportunity to craft greater coordination and cooperation among Arctic nations so that those who live in the Arctic benefit. And perhaps most important of all, it is an opportunity to develop the next generation of Arctic researchers to carry on this important work.

I look forward to further discussions on the Arctic as the International Polar Year draws closer and the relevance of the Arctic to the Nation and the world as a whole.

CAPE VERDE INDEPENDENCE DAY

Mr. REED. Mr. President, today I recognize the 31st anniversary of the independence of Cape Verde. On July 5, 1975, this island nation gained independence from Portugal and since then has established itself as one of the most politically stable and economically viable countries in Africa.

After discovery by Portuguese explorers in 1457 and then again in 1462, Cape Verde was incorporated into the Portuguese Empire as the first European settlement in the tropics. Over the next several hundred years, it was a lucrative trading post between Europe, Africa, and the Americas.

A few years after World War II, with a growing nationalist movement, Portugal granted Cape Verde overseas province status. Within 5 years a group of Cape Verdeans and neighboring Guinea-Bissauans organized a coalition for the independence of Guinea-Bissau and Cape Verde. After the 1974 Portuguese revolution, the new government signed an independence agreement with all of Portugal's overseas provinces, including Cape Verde. After six centuries of colonial rule, Cape Verde formally gained independence on July 5, 1975.

Since the beginning of its independence, Cape Verde has strived for a democratic government. In 1991, the first multiparty elections in Cape Verdean history were held. Today, the Cape Verdean government is stable, with four parties sharing seats in the National Assembly. It has established market-oriented economic policies that are attracting foreign visitors, ensuring Cape Verde a strong service and tourism economy.

Cape Verde has also been an essential part of international security. Over the past month, Cape Verde has served as the proving grounds for the latest testing of the emerging NATO Response Force, NRF. With over 7,000 soldiers, sailors, and airmen, Exercise Steadfast Jaguar 2006 is a major test of the NRF's ability to operate quickly, strategically, and at distance. Facing a variety of environmental conditions, the NRF is able to execute its largest military maneuvers since its creation exercising a wide array of missions. The archipelago's terrain provide challenging beaches for amphibious assault, arid flatlands for ground warfare, and a mountainous volcano for humanitarian relief after a fictitious eruption. These exercises, while still ongoing, can only be measured as a success and a true representation of international cooperation.

Today there are close to 350,000 Cape Verdeans living in the United States, almost equal to the population of Cape Verde itself. Many of these Cape Verdeans make their home in Rhode Island. On behalf of the residents of my State, I wish to thank them for their contributions to our country.

Finding its place in the international community, Cape Verde has stood up to assist the world's peacekeeping force in their infancy. It is fitting we honor Cape Verde's independence along side of our own. They understand the importance of a democratic society and international responsibility. I send all Cape Verdeans in Rhode Island and around the world my best wishes as they celebrate their homeland's independence

NATIONAL LITERACY DAY

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, I rise today to commemorate the 21st anniversary of National Literacy Day, designated on July 2, 1985, by President Ronald Reagan.

In 1986, Caryl Mackin-Wagner, the executive director for Focus on Literacy Inc., worked with Congress to establish recognition by a Senate resolution of a National Literacy Day, which Congress has honored each year since.

Caryl Mackin-Wagner established Focus on Literacy, Inc., to bring a greater awareness to the problem of illiteracy in our Nation and to promote effective ways to address this problem while improving the reading skills of children and adults in America.

Developing one's reading and writing skills is a necessary tool to succeeding in this world today. It is extremely important that Americans continue to advance in order to bring about a more successful nation as a whole. We must not ignore the fact that there are many individuals who are not well educated and who are not contributing to society in ways that they could. What is cause for concern is that with inadequate education, people don't reach their full potential and contribute all that they can to our Nation. On Sunday, July 2, Congress will recognize the significance of improving the literacy of individuals, which further contributes to the growth of our society.

Each year, Congress honors National Literacy Day to celebrate literary accomplishments, which have contributed to developing a better and more educated society. As Caryl Mackin-Wagner has said, ''Illiterate individuals are our untapped resource for they possess underutilized talents and abilities.''

Through hard work and a commitment to helping others, Focus on Literacy, Inc. has made remarkable strides in the battle for literacy and I am proud to salute its efforts on National Literacy Day.

2005 SLOAN AWARD WINNERS

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. President, I rise today to congratulate the 2005 winners of the Alfred P. Sloan Award for Business Excellence in Workplace Flexibility, which recognizes companies that have successfully used flexibility to meet both business and employee goals. The Sloan Awards are presented by the When Work Works initiative, which is a project of the Families and Work Institute in partnership with the Center for Workforce Preparation, an affiliate of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, and the Twiga Foundation. The When Work Works initiative is sponsored by the Alfred P. Sloan Foundation.

I would like to draw your attention to the Sloan Awards because I think these companies are to be commended for their excellence in providing workplace flexibility practices which benefit both employees and employers. Achieving greater flexibility in the workplace—to maximize productivity while attracting the highest quality employees—is one of the key challenges facing American companies in the 21st century.

During the inaugural phase of the Sloan Awards in 2004–05, businesses in the following eight cities were eligible for recognition: Brooklyn, NY; Chicago, IL; Dallas, TX; Detroit, MI; Durham, NC; Long Beach, CA; Providence, RI; and Salt Lake City, UT. The Chamber of Commerce in each city hosted an interactive business forum to share research on workplace flexibility as an important component of workplace effectiveness. In these same communities, businesses applied for, and winners were selected for, the Sloan Awards through a process that included employees' views as well as employer practices.

I would like to take this opportunity to congratulate the inaugural winners of the Alfred P. Sloan Award for Business Excellence in Workplace Flexibility. These businesses are to be commended for their excellence in providing workplace flexibility.

In Long Beach, CA, the winners are Dun & Bradstreet, PeacePartners, Inc., and Ward's Furniture.

In Chicago, IL, the winner is Accenture.

In Detroit, MI, the winners are Accenture, Amerisure Mutual Insurance Company, Brogan & Partners Convergence Marketing, Detroit Regional Chamber of Commerce, Plexus Systems LLC, and Rossetti.

In Brooklyn, NY, the winner is Urban Monster.

In Durham, NC, the winners are the Durham Convention & Visitors Bureau and Durham Family Court.

In Providence, RI, the winners are Atrion Networking Corporation, Citizens Financial Group, Inc., KPMG, LLP, North Star Marketing, Quality Partners of Rhode Island, Rhode Island Housing, Rhode Island Legal Services, Inc., and Sojourner House, Inc.

In Dallas, TX, the winners are Accenture, CareerLink Companies, Center for Housing Resources, Inc., Community Council of Greater Dallas, Lee Hecht Harrison, McQueary Henry Bowles Troy, LLP, Medical City Hospital, Texas Instruments, and TravisWolff & Company, LLP.

In Salt Lake City, UT, the winners are ARUP Laboratories, Enterprise Rent-A-Car, McKinnon-Mulherin, Inc., and Radius Engineering Inc.

2005 was the inaugural year for these awards. Building on the success of the first year, Phase II of the When Work Works initiative will extend the number of participating communities to 17 in 2006 and 24 in 2007. Again, I congratulate the 2005 winners and look forward to the expansion of this exciting initiative.

COMMENDING VOLUNTEER FIREFIGHTERS AND EMERGENCY RESCUE TEAMS

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, I rise today to commend the efforts and extraordinary dedication of the volunteer firefighters and emergency rescue teams throughout New Mexico who have been working tirelessly to assist in fighting fires and meeting the needs of citizens throughout the State as they cope with the worst fire season in decades.

It has already been an incredibly difficult fire season for the people of the Southwest. New Mexico is suffering a drought of historic proportions. The State spent the winter preparing for a summer fire season they hoped wouldn't happen. Unfortunately, the worst fears of the State are quickly becoming a reality. By the end of June, more than 100,000 acres of land will have burned and the State will have already faced more than 20 named fires and countless unnamed fires of varying size and intensity. Hundreds of people have been evacuated, property lost, and communities changed forever. Bear Paw, Rivera Mesa, Energen, Martinez, Skates, Bear, Eicks, Wilson, and Malpais, are the names of just a few of the large fires that the State has already faced this year.

Throughout this time I have been deeply impressed by the work of Federal, State, Tribal, and local fire fighters. But the work of these professionals would be impossible without the commitment of the volunteer firefighters and rescue teams who have unfailingly answered the call to service. These volunteers exemplify the best spirit of New Mexico. They have courageously worked the fire lines, offered their support and a shoulder to cry on, provided a bed and warm meal to evacuees, and helped to corral and move pets and livestock out of harm's way. They do all this while some of their own families and homes face the same fire danger. While I am not surprised at the selflessness of my fellow New Mexicans, I am forever grateful to these volunteers.

The work of these volunteer firefighters and rescue teams has been essential in meeting the challenges of a very active fire season. Throughout New Mexico volunteer firefighters and rescue teams have responded at all times of the day and night. Some have worked for many days in a row to ensure that all the needs of their community were met and the necessary resources were in place. Their bravery and selflessness has been an example to all New Mexicans, and I strongly commend them for their work.

I know that I am joined today by every New Mexican in saying thank you to our volunteer firefighters and rescue teams and in the hope for their continued safety in the face of the fire dangers they face.

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

HANDS-OFF TELEPHONE BAND TEAM

● Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, today I wish to recognize an exceptional group of students with disabilities in southern California from Hesperia Junior High School. Kattie Greene, Emilee Landon, David Perez, and Eric Coldwell have achieved outstanding success in science and problem solving.

These students formed the Hands-Off Telephone Band Team. Together, they developed an apparatus that allows a cellular telephone to be mounted to a wrist or arm—creating an effective and simple assistive technology device that enables some individuals with disabilities to independently use a cellular phone.

The Hands-Off Telephone Band Team's ingenious creation was chosen as one of eight projects from nationwide to be judged by the renowned Christopher Columbus Foundation, which, along with the National Science Foundation, strive to improve America's middle school students' literacy in mathematics and science. Despite facing formidable competition, the Hands-Off Telephone Band Team's project was deservedly selected as the Gold Medal Award Winning Team. Kattie, Emilee, David, and Eric's commitment to excellence, coupled with their mastery of the scientific process, enabled them to return to Hesperia Junior High School as heroes of the community.

I commend these students not only for their success in this prestigious competition but also because they are the first team comprised of students with disabilities to win this national competition. Each of these incredible young people utilized their abilities and coordinated their efforts to succeed. Eighth grade instructor Barbara Jacobs deserves commendation on her successful mentorship of these young students.

I applaud the dedication of the Hands-Off Telephone Band Team from Hesperia Junior High School. Their success has provided an example of determination to us all.●

TRIBUTE TO PETE WHEELER

● Mr. CHAMBLISS. Mr. President, it is my honor today to pay tribute to a man who has passionately spent his career in service to the United States and past members of its Armed Forces. Mr. Pete Wheeler has served with the Georgia Department of Veteran Services since 1949 and as chairman of the National Veterans Day Committee since 1954. From the beginning of his work, he has served as a dedicated advocate and friend to veterans and their families. For his nearly 60 years of service, Commissioner Wheeler will be honored by the Veterans Council of the Golden Isles as ''Veteran of the Century.''

Pete was born in Albany, GA, in 1922. At the age of 20, he enlisted in the Army as an infantry soldier just a year prior to his 1943 graduation from the University of Georgia. He married Geraldine Odenweller, and the couple raised three children: Chip, Jane Watkins, and Frances Jones. Pete and Geraldine are now the proud grandparents of six grandchildren.

After his graduation from John Marshall Law School in 1948 and his admission to the Georgia State Bar in 1949, Mr. Wheeler began his career with the Georgia Department of Veterans Services. He was appointed the Georgia chairman of the National Veterans Day Committee in 1954 and has served in the office for over 50 years. Commissioner Wheeler has worked on a wide spectrum of Veterans Affairs panels, associations and programs, but in addition to his civilian services, he retired in 1978 as a brigadier general from the Georgia Army National Guard.

Among State directors and commissioners, Pete is known as the ''Dean of Veterans'' because of his influential leadership in State and national veterans affairs. He served as president of the National Association of State Directors of Veterans Affairs from 1964 to 1965. Two years later, President Lyndon B. Johnson appointed Mr. Wheeler to the U.S. Veterans Advisory Commission. His national work has continued since then to include serving as chairman of the 1994 World War II Memorial Advisory Board commissioned by President Clinton and President Bush.

In addition to Mr. Wheeler's national influence in veterans affairs, Georgia is especially proud of Mr. Wheeler's work as State chairman. During his tenure, Mr. Wheeler worked tirelessly to assist veterans and their families throughout Georgia. He was instrumental in the development of innovative programs such as the ''State Supermarket of Veterans Benefits'', a one-stop information service on veterans' benefits, and the ''Georgia Veterans Bulletin,'' a quarterly publication dedicated to keeping veterans and their families informed of law changes, benefits, and special events. Commissioner Wheeler also worked to found the Annual Service Officer School, an event which brings together veterans' benefit counselors and leaders from the State and National veterans groups and offices for veterans issues. Under Mr. Wheeler's leadership, Georgia is still the only State to provide free nursing home and domiciliary care to its eligible veterans. To honor past veterans, he has also helped to establish two veterans cemeteries, including the Georgia National Cemetery in Cherokee County.

Pete Wheeler has lived by his statement that ''there is little that cannot be accomplished if one doesn't care who gets the credit.'' Considering his invaluable contributions to veterans and veterans affairs, it is no wonder that others are quick to pay tribute to Pete for much of what has been accomplished for Georgia veterans.

These tributes among many others, illustrate the tremendous impact of Pete Wheeler's work in veterans affairs. His enduring dedication to his fellow veterans has shown through his nearly 60 years of service to the community, the State of Georgia, and the Nation. I am very proud to join the Georgia Department of Veterans' Services and the Veterans' Council of the Golden Isles in honoring Pete Wheeler as one of the century's finest examples of service to our Nation's veterans.●

125TH ANNIVERSARY OF LARIMORE, NORTH DAKOTA

● Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, today I wish to recognize a community in North Dakota that will be celebrating its 125th anniversary. On July 13–16, the residents of Larimore will gather to celebrate their community's history and founding.

Founded in 1881 by Anthony Clark and named for Newell Green Larimore, Larimore is located just north of Grand Forks. Many of Clark's descendents still live in Larimore and are part of the tight knit community. Larimore's post office was established on October 31, 1881, with Lyman P. Goodhume as its postmaster.

Today, Larimore continues to thrive with a bustling downtown area that has a grocery store, a flower shop, and an appliance store. During the summer, citizens of Larimore head out to the Larimore Dam for swimming, boating, camping, and fishing. In the winter, the Men's Club of Larimore and the American Legion hold an annual ice fishing derby.

An annual highlight is the celebration of Larimore Days. Each year Larimore holds festivities that are meant to bring the community, family, and friends together. Larimore celebrates with parades, school reunions, and family events. This year, the 125th anniversary of the town will be held in conjunction with the Larimore Days celebrations.

Mr. President, I ask the Senate to join me in congratulating Larimore, ND, and its residents on their first 125 years and in wishing them well through the next century. By honoring Larimore and all the other historic small towns of North Dakota, we keep the great pioneering frontier spirit alive for future generations. It is places such as Larimore that have helped to shape this country into what it is today, which is why this fine community is deserving of our recognition.

Larimore has a proud past and a bright future.●

100TH ANNIVERSARY OF NEWBURG, NORTH DAKOTA

● Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, today I wish to recognize a community in North Dakota that will be celebrating its 100th anniversary. On July 8–9, the residents of Newburg will gather to celebrate their community's history and founding.

Newburg is a vibrant community in northern North Dakota. Newburg was established when the Great Northern Railroad built a station in the town and named it after an early settler to the area, Andrew Newborg. About a year after the railroad station opened, the town's post office was established. Newburg is also home to a local inventor and businessman, Frederick Sund. Sund began Sund Manufacturing Company, which employs many community residents.

Along with Sund Manufacturing Company, Newburg is home to several other businesses, many of which support farming business in the town and surrounding area. The town also has many recreational activities, including fishing and duck hunting. Guide services are available to assist wildlife enthusiasts in the area.

The residents of Newburg are proud of all of their accomplishments over the past 100 years and have planned a celebration that includes a parade, a car show, a variety show, a street dance with fireworks, a community-wide pot-luck meal, and an ecumenical church service.

Mr. President, I ask the Senate to join me in congratulating Newburg, ND, and its residents on the first 100 years and in wishing them well through the next century. By honoring Newburg and all the other historic small towns of North Dakota, we keep the great pioneering frontier spirit alive for future generations. 100TH ANNIVERSARY OF MCVILLE, NORTH DAKOTA

● Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, today I wish to recognize a community in North Dakota that will be celebrating its 100th anniversary. On July 7–9, the residents of McVille will gather to celebrate their community's history and founding.

McVille is a small but welcoming community located in the northeastern part of North Dakota. In 1906, McVille, like many rural towns, relocated to a new townsite along the Great Northern Railroad. McVille has a rich history. It is one of the oldest settled areas in North Dakota outside of the Red River Valley. The name McVille was coined from the many families in the region whose surname began with ''Mc.''

Today, McVille is a great place for outdoor enthusiasts. McVille Dam offers great opportunities for sports fishermen, and is stocked with walleye, northern trout, large mouth bass, blue gills, and perch. McVille also hosts ''McVille Days,'' an annual three-day community celebration that offers residents and visitors many fun and exciting activities to participate in.

McVille is a close-knit community that fosters unity and cooperation among its residents. The citizens of McVille have many exciting events planned to celebrate their centennial, including a dance, art show, basketball tournament, pig race, canoe race, car show, golf tournament, and parade.

Mr. President, I ask the Senate to join me in congratulating McVille, ND, and its residents on their first 100 years and in wishing them well through the next century. By honoring McVille and all the other historic small towns of North Dakota, we keep the great pioneering frontier spirit alive for future generations. It is places such as McVille that have helped to shape this country into what it is today, which is why this fine community is deserving of our recognition.

McVille has a proud past and a bright future.●

MAX SCHUMACHER'S 50TH ANNIVERSARY WITH THE INDIANAPOLIS INDIANS

● Mr. LUGAR. Mr. President, today I wish to celebrate an important milestone in the life of my fellow Hoosier, former classmate, and close friend, Max Schumacher. On July 15, I will have the opportunity to join Max's family and many friends in Indianapolis at Victory Field to celebrate his 50 years of important leadership with the Indianapolis Indians baseball team.

Since I came to know Max while we were both students at Shortridge High School, I have always been impressed by his commitment to leadership and public service. During our time at Shortridge, I admired his remarkable athletic and journalistic abilities. Max went on to study at Butler University where he was a member of the baseball team and editor of the school's newspaper, The Collegian. After receiving a bachelor of science degree in journalism in 1954, Max joined the U.S. Army, where he served until 1956. Butler recently recognized his accomplishments when he was inducted into the Athletic Hall of Fame.

For the past 50 years, Max has worked in several different capacities within the Indians organization, including ticket manager, publicity director, general manager, and now president and chairman of the board. His leadership has helped the Indians achieve 31 consecutive years of profits and business success. In 1988 Max received the John H. Johnson President's Award to recognize him as the individual who ''best exemplifies the standards of a complete baseball franchise.''

Another milestone of Max's leadership of the Indians was the opening of Victory Field 10 years ago. Fans from across the country have marveled at this beautifully modern facility, which has been recognized as one of the premier baseball stadiums in the country. Victory Field has been an important addition to downtown Indianapolis, enabling families to enjoy memorable experiences together in such a welcoming atmosphere.

Max's leadership in the Indianapolis community goes far beyond his work with the Indians. Max has served as president of the Indianapolis Downtown Kiwanis Club, the Indianapolis Kiwanis Foundation board of directors, the board of directors of the Boys and Girls Club of Indianapolis, and is a member of the board of directors of the Greater Indianapolis Chamber of Commerce. As a recognition of this service, Governor Bowen named Max a ''Sagamore of the Wabash'' in 1980, and he was designated a member of the Honorable Order of Kentucky Colonels.

I also congratulate Max's wife Judy and their three children, who have been such an integral part of the Indians family for these many years. I was honored to be an usher in the wedding ceremony when Judy and Max were married, and Max was an usher when Charlene and I were married.

I appreciate this opportunity to congratulate my friend Max Schumacher, and I look forward to many more adventures with him, his family and friends, and the entire Indians organization as we cheer the Indians on to victory.●

HONORING A GREAT COLORADAN

● Mr. SALAZAR. Mr. President, I wish to recognize the work of a great Coloradan, Randy Rusk, and share some thoughts about the role that conservation easements can play in protecting Colorado's open spaces and rural way of life.

Mr. Rusk was recently named one of ''15 People Who Make America Great'' by Newsweek Magazine for the contributions he has made to the protection of Colorado's Wet Mountain Valley. The Wet Mountain Valley is near my own San Luis Valley in southern Colorado. It is known for its lush pastures, for the jagged mountains that flank it, and for the men and women who ranch its lands.

Mr. Rusk's family raises cattle on their 1,500 acres, but it would be a prime setting for second homes, 35–acre ranchettes, or a subdivision. Clearly he could sell his land to a developer if money was his primary concern, but Mr. Rusk would rather that his grandchildren be able to enjoy and work the ranch as he has.

As someone who comes from a ranching family, I can tell you, that ranchers generally don't like to be told what they can or can't do on their lands. But Mr. Rusk decided that the best way to protect his land was to put its development rights in a trust. With a conservation easement on his land, he can be certain that the property will remain intact in perpetuity.

Mr. Rusk has taken this idea beyond his own ranch and has convinced other ranchers in the Wet Mountain Valley to place conservation easements on their land, too. Some get reimbursed for parting with their land's development rights, while others simply donate them. Thanks to Mr. Rusk's leadership, around 11,000 acres of the Wet Mountain Valley will be protected from development.

Knowing how useful conservation easements are to ranchers and farmers across Colorado how much good they have done for preserving our open lands and rural way of life, I am troubled by proposals that would punish those who use conservation easements to protect their lands.

Our current tax law says that donated conservation easements can be claimed as a deduction. This is how it should be. If a rancher donates development rights to a nonprofit, to be held in trust, he or she should be able to claim a Federal tax deduction. This deduction, in conjunction with State and local incentives, is a valuable tool in protecting Colorado's natural heritage.

There have been some instances of fraud in the use of conservation easements. The IRS should punish those responsible and Congress should explore ways of tightening up our laws to avoid abuses of the system. But, by and large, those who place easements on their lands are like Randy Rusk, and they do so for the right reasons.

Mr. President, I am proud of the innovative ways that Coloradans are finding to protect open spaces, strengthen rural economies, and continue traditional ways of life. We have a common interest in supporting the work of ranchers like Mr. Rusk, whose stewardship of his lands yields benefits for all of us. I encourage this body to stand behind these wise conservation practices by protecting the Federal tax deduction for conservation easements.●

STATEMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Mr. ROCKEFELLER:

S. 3598. A bill to clarify the effective date of the modification of treatment for retirement annuity purposes of part-time service before April 7, 1986, of certain Department of Veterans Affairs health-care professionals; to the Committee on Veterans' Affairs.

Mr. ROCKEFELLER. Mr. President, today, I am introducing legislation to correct an unfair decision that hurts aging, retired VA nurses. This legislation is designed to correct a problem from a bill we passed in 2001, to help VA nurses. That legislation improved nurses' pensions, and Congress intended it to be retroactive. Unfortunately, administrative officials took a very narrow view of that law. Currently VA nurses who retired between 1986 and 2002, do not get the full pension benefits as current retirees do.

In the 1980s, VA aggressively recruited nurses to fill a huge need at VA medical centers by promising full retirement for part-time work. Sadly, the VA and the Office of Personnel Management, OPM, does not want to fulfill that promise. This legislation would explicitly require the Federal Government to honor its commitment to our retired VA nurses. Pension benefits are a vital promise. It is disturbing when we do not fulfill our obligations, and we simply must correct this error.

Nurses play a critical role in our health care system, including the VA. Recruiting and retaining nurses is important, and this pension shortfall does not help. It is time to deliver full pension benefits to the nurses who cared for our veterans.

By Mr. BINGAMAN (for himself and Mr. DOMENICI):

S. 3599. A bill to establish the Prehistoric Trackways National Monument in the State of New Mexico; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, I am pleased to introduce legislation today to protect a site of worldwide scientific significance in the Robledo Mountains in New Mexico. The bill, which is cosponsored by my colleague from New Mexico, Senator DOMENICI, would create a national monument to preserve and allow for the continuing scientific investigation of a remarkable ''megatracksite'' of 280,000,000 year-old fossils and trackways.

The vast tidal mudflats that made up much of modern New Mexico 60 million years before the first dinosaurs preserved the marks of some of the earliest life on our planet to make its way out of the ocean. The fossil record of this time is scattered throughout New Mexico but, until this discovery, there were few places where the range of life and their interactions with each other could be studied.

Las Cruces resident and paleontologist Jerry MacDonald first brought the find to light in 1988 when he revealed that there was far more to be found in the Robledos than the occasional fossil that local residents had been seeing for years. The trackways he hauled out on his back, some over 20 feet long, showed that there was a great deal of useful information buried in the rock there. The trackways include footprints of numerous amphibians, reptiles, and insects, including previously unknown species. These trackways help complete the puzzle of how these ancient creatures lived in a way that we cannot understand from only studying their fossilized bones.

Senator DOMENICI and Representative Skeen joined me in sponsoring legislation, passed in 1990, to protect the area and study its significance. In 1994, the Bureau of Land Management, along with scientists from the New Mexico Museum of Natural History & Science, the University of Colorado, and the Smithsonian Institution, completed their study and documented the importance of the find. Particularly owing to the quality of the specimens and the wide range of animals that had left their imprint there, the study found that the site was of immense scientific value. The study concluded, in part, ''[t]he diversity, abundance and quality of the tracks in the Robledo Mountains is far greater than at any other known tracksite or aggregation of tracksites.'' The study also described the site as containing ''the most scientifically significant Early Permian tracksites'' in the world. However, despite the recognition of the significance of the site, it has remained essentially unprotected, and many of the trackways and fossils have been lost or damaged. This bill would take the next logical step to follow up from these efforts and set in place permanent protections and allow for scientific investigation of these remarkable resources.

In addition to permanently protecting the fossils, the bill would authorize the continuation of existing uses in the area, such as motorized recreation, as long as the trackway resources aren't harmed. The bill would also help ensure that local residents get the opportunity to see these unique specimens and participate in their curation. This should provide a unique scientific and educational opportunity to Las Cruces and the surrounding community.

I look forward to working with my colleagues to protect these important resources and allow for their continuing contribution to our understanding of life on the ancient Earth.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the text of the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 3599

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the ''Prehistoric Trackways National Monument Establishment Act''.

SEC. 2. DEFINITIONS.

In this Act:

(1) MONUMENT.—The term ''Monument'' means the Prehistoric Trackways National Monument established by section 4(a).

(2) PUBLIC LAND.—The term ''public land'' has the meaning given the term ''public lands'' in section 103 of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976 (43 U.S.C. 1702).

(3) SECRETARY.—The term ''Secretary'' means the Secretary of the Interior.

SEC. 3. FINDINGS.

Congress finds that—

(1) in 1987, a major deposit of Paleozoic Era fossilized footprint megatrackways was discovered in the Robledo Mountains in southern New Mexico;

(2) the trackways contain footprints of numerous amphibians, reptiles, and insects (including previously unknown species), plants, and petrified wood dating back approximately 280,000,000 years, which collectively provide new opportunities to understand animal behaviors and environments from a time predating the dinosaurs;

(3) title III of Public Law 101–578 (104 Stat. 2860)—

(A) provided interim protection for the site at which the trackways were discovered; and

(B) directed the Secretary of the Interior to—

(i) prepare a study assessing the significance of the site; and

(ii) based on the study, provide recommendations for protection of the paleontological resources at the site;

(4) the Bureau of Land Management completed the Paleozoic Trackways Scientific Study Report in 1994, which characterized the site as containing ''the most scientifically significant Early Permian tracksites'' in the world;

(5) despite the conclusion of the study and the recommendations for protection, the site remains unprotected and many irreplaceable trackways specimens have been lost to vandalism or theft; and

(6) designation of the trackways site as a National Monument would protect the unique fossil resources for present and future generations while allowing for public education and continued scientific research opportunities.

SEC. 4. ESTABLISHMENT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—In order to conserve, protect, and enhance the unique and nationally important paleontological, scientific, educational, scenic, and recreational resources and values of the public land described in subsection (b), there is established the Prehistoric Trackways National Monument in the State of New Mexico.

(b) DESCRIPTION OF LAND.—The Monument shall consist of approximately 5,367 acres of public land in Doña Ana County, New Mexico, as generally depicted on the map entitled ''Prehistoric Trackways National Monument'' and dated June 1, 2006.

(c) MAP; LEGAL DESCRIPTION.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—As soon as practicable after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall prepare and submit to Congress an official map and legal description of the Monument.

(3) CONFLICT BETWEEN MAP AND LEGAL DESCRIPTION.—In the case of a conflict between the map and the legal description, the map shall control.

(4) AVAILABILITY OF MAP AND LEGAL DESCRIPTION.—Copies of the map and legal description shall be on file and available for public inspection in the appropriate offices of the Bureau of Land Management.

(d) MINOR BOUNDARY ADJUSTMENTS.—If additional paleontological resources are discovered on public land adjacent to the Monument after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary may make minor boundary adjustments to the Monument to include the resources in the Monument.

SEC. 5. ADMINISTRATION.

(a) MANAGEMENT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall manage the Monument—

(A) in a manner that conserves, protects, and enhances the resources and values of the Monument, including the resources and values described in section 4(a); and

(B) in accordance with—

(i) this Act;

(ii) the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976 (43 U.S.C. 1701 et seq.); and

(iii) other applicable laws.

(2) NATIONAL LANDSCAPE CONSERVATION SYSTEM.—The Monument shall be managed as a component of the National Landscape Conservation System.

(3) PROTECTION OF RESOURCES AND VALUES.—The Secretary shall manage public land adjacent to the Monument in a manner that is consistent with the protection of the resources and values of the Monument.

(b) MANAGEMENT PLAN.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 3 years after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall develop a comprehensive management plan for the long-term protection and management of the Monument.

(2) COMPONENTS.—The management plan under paragraph (1)—

(A) shall—

(i) describe the appropriate uses and management of the Monument, consistent with the provisions of this Act; and

(ii) allow for continued scientific research at the Monument during the development of the management plan; and

SEC. 6. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

There are authorized to be appropriated such sums as are necessary to carry out this Act.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, the fossilized trackways near the Robledo Mountains in Dona Ana County came to my attention in the early 1990s. During the 101st Congress, I cosponsored Senator BINGAMAN's legislation that directed the Bureau of Land Management to study and report on the prehistoric sites.

I understand the very difficult challenge we face in managing our public lands in a responsible and environmentally sensitive manner. I believe our Federal lands are truly National treasures that demand our most thoughtful management. Local leaders, special interest groups, multiple users, New Mexico State University, and the Bureau of Land Management, BLM, have identified numerous land issues in the Las Cruces area that need to be addressed. The trackways are but one of these issues that can and should be addressed in the context of a broader lands bill. I believe that introduction of comprehensive or omnibus legislation is a preferable approach, rather than the introduction of individual bills to deal each separate issue.

I support the intent of this bill, as the trackways are remarkable artifacts that need and deserve protection. While I am very supportive of the overall goal to protect these prehistoric trackway sites, there are several particulars in this bill that I do not fully embrace and on which I want to continue to work with Senator BINGAMAN, such as ensuring that we authorize all uses in the area that are not inconsistent with the purposes of the bill, and reworking the section regarding BLM authority with respect to hunting activities. As we work through the committee process, I look forward to working with Senator BINGAMAN to accomplish the objective of protecting the prehistoric trackway sites, while at the same time addressing some of the broader Federal land issues that need to be addressed in Dona Ana County.

By Mr. HARKIN:

S. 3600. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to allow the allocation of the alternative fuel vehicle refueling property credit to patrons of agricultural cooperatives; to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, today I am introducing the Agricultural Cooperative Renewable Fuel Stations Act of 2006. This legislation closes a gap in the existing tax incentive for installing alternative refueling stations. The bill extends the existing alternative fuel vehicle refueling property credit to patrons of agricultural cooperatives.

Our continued dependence on foreign oil is extremely worrisome. Today, about 60 percent of our oil comes from overseas. Last year, Americans imported almost 5 billion barrels of oil. Our Nation's overreliance on oil-derived gasoline poses a threat to National security and places a heavy economic burden on the citizens of our Nation. In addition, this heavy dependence on oil negatively impacts the environment.

That is why Senator LUGAR and I, with strong bipartisan support, have pushed to replace foreign oil with more home-grown biofuels and biobased products. We recently introduced the Biofuels Security Act to aggressively ramp up the production and use of ethanol and biodiesel, ensure greater E–85 availability as well as what are known as flex-fuel cars, those that can run on E–85, a blend of 85 percent ethanol and 15 percent gasoline. Last year I authored critically important biomass research, development and deployment provisions to the energy bill. This new measure complements such efforts.

Cooperatives play an important role in the marketing of agricultural products. According to the USDA, there are over 3,000 agricultural cooperatives in America today representing millions of American farmers and investors. The production and distribution of bioenergy offers a new and lucrative economic opportunity for these organizations.

This year the ethanol industry alone will add more than 5 billion gallons of clean burning, renewable fuel to our energy supply. Between now and 2012 ethanol is expected to contribute $200 billion to the GDP. Not surprisingly, many cooperatives are eager to participate in the budding bioeconomy. One way for them to do this is to offer E–85 to their customers. This is a natural fit for farmer cooperatives, given that they already often produce the feedstocks as well as the ethanol itself that goes into E–85.

Section 30C of the Internal Revenue Code—26 U.S.C. §30C—provides a tax credit of 30 percent of the cost of qualified alternative fuel vehicle refueling properties up to $30,000. This legislation would simply allow agricultural cooperatives to pass the section 30C tax credit through to their members. It parallels pass-through provisions we have enacted previously, such as the small-producer ethanol tax credit and the wind power tax credit of the Energy Policy Act of 2005. The section 30C credit is fostering the creation and expansion of alternative fueling infrastructure and this legislation would bolster its effectiveness.

The benefits of this legislation are clear. By supporting the production, distribution and use of renewable fuels such as E–85 we can help reduce pollution, increase farm income, create jobs, bolster economic growth and promote energy and national security. Farmer owned agricultural cooperatives can and will be leading the way in the months and years ahead.

By Mr. BUNNING:

S. 3602. A bill to provide duty-free treatment for certain parts of motor vehicles; to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. BUNNING. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce a bill to provide for relief from duties on the import of certain parts of motor vehicles. It is my intention that this duty suspension bill will be considered for inclusion in the Miscellaneous Tariff Bill, MTB, that the Senate Finance Committee is expected to consider this year.

As the Members of the Senate are aware, Congress on occasion passes a bill, known as the Miscellaneous Tariff Bill or MTB, as a vehicle for enacting pending noncontroversial duty suspensions. The rules for the inclusion of a duty suspension in the MTB are straight forward. First and foremost, in order to be included in the MTB, a bill must be noncontroversial. A bill will be controversial if it is objected to by a domestic producer of the product for which the duty reduction is being sought. Secondly, the cost for each bill must amount to less than $500,000 of lost revenue per year.

As my colleagues are aware, the MTB provides an opportunity to temporarily eliminate or reduce duties on narrowly defined products that are imported into the United States because there is not available domestic source for the products. These duty suspensions reduce input costs for U.S. businesses and thus ultimately increase the competitiveness of their products.

I have been approached by a number of manufacturers in Kentucky that use imported inputs while making their products. These manufacturers have represented to me that, to their knowledge, there currently exists no American-made source for these inputs.

In an effort to assist these Kentucky manufacturers, I have introduced in the past month a number of these duty suspension bills so that the items they address will be able to be considered for inclusion in the MTB prepared by the Senate Finance Committee.

My intention in introducing these bills is to begin the process of public comment and technical analysis by the International Trade Commission, ITC, on the items addressed by the bills. During this review, the ITC will determine which of these bills are necessary and meet the selection criteria. My support for a duty suspension for the items is contingent on a determination by the ITC analysts that the items in question are proper candidates for inclusion in the noncontroversial MTB.

I look forward to working with Chairman GRASSLEY, Ranking Member BAUCUS and my colleagues on the Senate Finance Committee as the process for assembling a final MTB package continues.

By Mr. LEVIN (for himself and Ms. STABENOW):

S. 3605. A bill to enable the Great Lakes Fishery Commission to investigate the effects of migratory birds on sustained productivity of stocks of fish of common concern in the Great Lakes; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I join my colleague, Senator STABENOW, in introducing the Great Lakes Migratory Bird Research and Management Act to learn more about a potential problem regarding double-crested cormorants.

Cormorants are dark-feathered water birds with voracious appetites for alewives, perch and other fish in the Great Lakes. The double-crested cormorants reside throughout North America, but according to the U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service, the largest concentration of double-crested cormorants is in the Great Lakes. The Great Lakes cormorant population migrates south, along the Atlantic coast and Mississippi River drainage to the southeastern States and Gulf of Mexico.

The Great Lakes population of cormorants was once in great jeopardy. By the early 1970s, the population had been severely harmed by chemical exposure and human contact. The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service reports that around that time the Great Lakes population fell sharply, with few birds remaining or breeding successfully. Since then, however, there has been a huge turnaround due to conservation and pollution reduction efforts. And today the Great Lakes population of double-crested cormorants is at an historically high level.

Double-crested cormorants are very skilled at diving for fish. The increased population have led many people to believe that cormorants are at least partly responsible for declining fish populations near several northern Michigan communities.

To help provide better information on the impact of cormorants on the fish populations in the Great Lakes, we are introducing this legislation, which authorizes the Great Lakes Fishery Commission to develop a coordinated double-crested cormorant research program. As part of that research program, the Commission will recommend measures that will provide maximum sustained productivity of fishery stocks.

Under this legislation, the Great Lakes Fishery Commission would establish a committee that represents the multiple jurisdictions engaged in cormorants management to identify all of the existing control tactics and strategies in the Great Lakes region, determine the effectiveness of those tactics and strategies, and compare the tactics and strategies to the known life history of cormorant populations in the Great Lakes. In determining the effectiveness of existing control practices, the Commission will examine the impact that cormorants have on the Great Lakes fisheries.

Congress has authorized tens of millions of dollars for programs designed to restore and protect fish in the Great Lakes. Those efforts are in jeopardy because of our ignorance about the impact of double-crested cormorants on the Great Lakes fisheries. Having the best possible information about this unique problem is critical for ensuring a healthy balance between the cormorant and the fish populations.

By Mr. BINGAMAN:

S. 3606. A bill to amend title XVIII of the Social Security Act to provide fair payments for care provided in a hospital emergency department; to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce legislation entitled the Save Our Safety—SOS—Net Act of 2006. This legislation will help repair the fraying safety net that provides critical health care to patients throughout the United States. This legislation is important to the continued survival of many of our Nation's emergency departments and rural hospitals that provide services to millions of American's on a daily basis. It is these facilities that are there for us in the most remote regions of the country, it is these facilities that are there for us at all times of day and night, and it is these facilities that will be there for us in time of disaster. We need to take the steps to ensure the survival of this safety net.

This week, The Institute of Medicine's—IOM—Committee on the Future of Emergency Care in the United States Health System released a series of reports detailing the problems facing emergency care in the U.S. These reports make it clear that emergency departments—EDs—struggle daily with overcrowding, ambulance diversion, the boarding of admitted patients in the ED, limited staffing, and poor reimbursement. They face all of these challenges while continuing to provide access to safe, high-quality care without regard to ability of the patient to pay for their care. Similarly, rural hospitals face shortages of staff and specialists, poor reimbursement, and the isolation that sometimes complicates medical care. This system is stressed and is poorly prepared to accept the additional burdens that could occur in a disaster or terrorist attack. These safety net systems and the people who work within them deserve our support and yet the trends are not promising.

The demand for emergency departments has been growing fast. In the recent study conducted by the Institute of Medicine, emergency department visits grew by 26 percent between 1993 and 2003, but due to lack of funding 425 emergency departments have closed resulting in almost 200,000 less hospital beds in the U.S. In my own State of New Mexico, we have seen a decrease from 4.2 to 3.6 beds per 1,000 population from 1990 to 2002. Ambulances are frequently diverted from overcrowded emergency departments an average of once every minute. With the growth of the number of elderly patients and the growth of uninsured patients seeking care in the ED, these statistics will only worsen if nothing is done.

There are approximately 535 sole community hospitals in 46 States. Congress has long recognized the special role of these facilities, because they serve as safety net providers offering hospital services to isolated communities and regions. These hospitals struggle with poor reimbursement and difficulty finding staff. Despite the service they provide, these facilities face the possibility of closing on a yearly basis.

To improve the ability of our safety net facilities to function, this bill proposes several steps. By improving Medicare payments for emergency department services, this bill would provide SOS payments to physicians and hospitals for the care that is provided in the emergency department. It would improve reimbursement to emergency departments by an additional 10 percent for outpatient services delivered to Medicare beneficiaries.

This legislation will also permanently extend outpatient hold harmless payment protections to some of the Nation's most vulnerable institutions, small rural hospitals and sole community hospitals that serve as safety net providers in rural communities.

Finally, to further strengthen the rural hospital safety net, this bill will improve disproportionate share hospital—DSH—payments to these facilities. Congress has historically provided additional payments to health care providers who treat large numbers of indigent patients. Disproportionate share hospital payments are made in addition to the base payments hospitals receive from the Medicare and Medicaid Programs for inpatient services. This bill will eliminate the cap that is present on DSH add-on payments to rural hospitals. This will remove some of the inequities between urban and rural hospitals.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the text of the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 3606

By Mr. BAYH (for himself and Mr. OBAMA):

S. 3607. A bill to amend title IV of the Social Security Act to ensure funding for grants to promote responsible fatherhood and strengthen low-income families, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. OBAMA. Mr. President, today, I wish to join my good friend, Senator BAYH, in introducing the Responsible Fatherhood and Healthy Families Act of 2006. This bill addresses a crisis afflicting too many communities and shortchanging the opportunities of too many kids in America: the absence of supportive fathers.

If we are serious about breaking the cycle of poverty in America and raising healthy kids, we have to get serious about the breakdown of families. We can do that without blame or fingerpointing. We can do it an openness to new ideas.

It is the same story all across America. More than a quarter of all families with children have only one parent present, and more than a third live without their father. And 40 percent of children who live without their father have not seen him their father in over a year.

Many single mothers are doing a heroic job raising their kids. They are working two and three jobs, dropping the kids off at school and daycare, and, quite simply, being both a mother and a father to their children. I appreciate the work of single mothers, because my own father was not around during my life, and my mother and grandparents had to step up to the plate to fill my father's role. But most people would agree that children are almost always better off with a father contributing his fair share, and the data shows this. Children are more likely to be poor and to do worse in school without a father in their life. And a healthy relationship between children and their father is important to healthy growth and development.

The Responsible Fatherhood and Healthy Families Act addresses these problems by removing government barriers to healthy relationships and responsible fatherhood. It improves the economic stability of parents who accept their parenting responsibility. Our bill sets a high standard for parents and helps them to reach it with incentives, support, and tougher enforcement of child support obligations.

We can't simply legislate healthy families and expect all parents to get and stay married. We can't legislate good parenting skills or good behavior role models. We can't legislate economic success for all families. But we can eliminate some of the roadblocks that parents face, roadblocks often created by the government. And we can provide some tools to help these parents succeed.

The first way this act removes governmental roadblocks is by eliminating a perverse disincentive to marriage in the Temporary Assistance to Needy Families Program. Congress is now telling States that they may be penalized for serving married couples. That is the wrong message to send. There should be equality for two-parent families receiving TANF, and States should not be required to meet a separate work participation rate for the two-parent families in their caseload.

Second, this act makes important improvements to the child support system which affects noncustodial fathers as much or more than any other government program. We restore funding for child support enforcement and we require States to pass the full amount of child support collected along to the family. A father is more likely to pay child support if he knows that the money is going to his kids. Research from States that have implemented a ''full pass through'' confirm this.

We also require States to review the amount of child support arrears that are owed to the State and we clarify existing State authority to forgive such arrearages. A father who earns only $10,000 per year, and who has $20,000 of child support debt because the State billed him for the Medicaid birthing costs of his child, is probably going to work underground and avoid paying child support altogether. He needs an incentive to get a legitimate job and to begin taking care of his family. It is in everybody's best interest.

States are also providing funding to assess any other barriers to healthy family formation or sustainable employment created by their child support and criminal justice systems. They are encouraged to establish commissions to propose State law changes that would be in the best interest of children.

Another important aspect of this act is fostering economic stability for fathers and their families. This act establishes three employment demonstration programs. One program is supervised by courts or State child support agencies that serve parents who are determined to be in need of employment services in order to pay child support obligations. The court can arrange temporary employment services for the father rather than throwing him in jail for nonpayment of support. The second is a transitional jobs program that combines temporary subsidized employment with activities that help fathers develop skills and remove barriers to employment. The third program establishes public-private partnerships to provide fathers with ''career pathways'' that help them advance from jobs at low skill levels to jobs that require greater skills and provide family-sustaining wages and benefits.

These programs are modeled on successful initiatives in Indiana and Illinois and will be subject to rigorous evaluations to ensure the goals are being achieved.

This bill fixes the earned-income tax credit to increase the incentive for fathers to engage in full-time work and paying child support obligations. The EITC is one of the most successful anti-poverty programs because it rewards work and supplements wages that may be too low to support a family. Our bill ensures that the work incentives under the EITC also apply to noncustodial parents who pay child support. To be eligible for the enhanced credit, a low-income parent must be working and current on all child support obligations. We also accelerate marriage penalty relief for families who receive the earned-income tax credit. Perversely under the U.S. Tax Code, these families have been the last to get such relief.

Finally, this bill improves the Responsible Fatherhood and Marriage Promotion Programs that were funded by the Deficit Reduction Act. Funding is increased and all fatherhood and marriage programs are required to coordinate with domestic violence prevention services to reduce instances of domestic violence and promote healthy, nonviolent relationships.

This bill takes these steps because Congress needs to get serious about the problem of family breakdown. This is a problem that cuts across all income levels, religions, races and ethnicities, and communities across this country. There is no segment of our population that is immune to these challenges.

But some segments of the population are worse off than others. I would like to speak specifically, for a moment, about family breakdown in the African-American community—and not just because I, myself, am an African American. I am addressing this because I know, as Senator BAYH knows, and as most of my colleagues know, that a problem for one community is a problem for all of America. Hope deferred for one group is hope delayed for us all.

Around 70 percent of Black children are born outside of marriage. Of the 30 percent born to married parents, more than half experience a divorce. That means that about 85 percent of Black children spend some or all of their childhood in a home without their father. Fewer than 6 of every 10 young Black men are employed, and in some of our urban and rural areas the rate of unemployment is over 50 percent. Roughly one-third of young Black men are involved in some way with the criminal justice system. And young Black men have the lowest educational attainment among Black and White men and women.

These factors contribute to low marriage rates among African-American men. But by age 34, nearly half of Black men are fathers. And roughly two-thirds of all Black men leaving prison are fathers. I could quote statistics all day, but the bottom line is, as hard as some of these men try, it is likely that their children will also be denied the advantages of healthy parental relationships and married families. Their children will be more likely to live in poverty and to become young, unmarried parents themselves. Their children's life chances will be limited. The cycle of despair will continue.

But there is reason for hope. At the time of the birth of the child, most fathers are close to both the mother and their child. The challenge is to maintain healthy relationships between parents and to strengthen the early bonds between fathers and their children. The challenge is to improve economic opportunity for all parents so they can support themselves and their families. The challenge is to break the cycle by strengthening America's most vulnerable and fragile families.

That is what this bill does, and it is fully paid for by revenue raised by closing abusive corporate tax loopholes and blocking the exploitation of tax havens. This is a solid first step forward in removing government barriers to healthy family formation, and addressing the crisis of fatherhood among our Nation's low-income populations. I urge you to support the Responsible Fatherhood and Healthy Families Act of 2006.

By Mr. ALLARD:

S. 3608. A bill to modify the boundary of Mesa Verde National Park, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

Mr. ALLARD. Mr. President, I rise today on the 100th anniversary of Mesa Verde National Park to offer legislation that would expand the boundary of this national treasure. Mesa Verde is one of our Nation's most impressive national parks. In addition to its role preserving the home of some of our Nation's earliest inhabitants, it also serves as an impressive educational resource. The park also acts as the preeminent example of heritage tourism in the Nation. Allowing visitors to actively experience the rich historical and cultural history our Nation has to offer. The park is able to draw people with over 4,400 recorded archeological sites, including the impressive cliff dwellings which number more than 600. People travel from all around the world to see what we in Colorado are fortunate to have at our fingertips: one of the most well preserved and exhibited active archeological sites in the world. Mesa Verde also represents an impressive example of collaboration; they work with everyone from local elementary school students to international scholars. Mesa Verde, like its former inhabitants who flourished here for more than 700 years, has displayed an impressive resiliency and mystique over the years. The fire the park experienced a few years ago even revealed to us more of the area's secrets with newly discovered archeological sites.

I am pleased to be able to introduce this legislation today, because this legislation shows how the Government should preserve public lands. This is a good example of finding public support and working with outside groups and private property owners to find mutually beneficial ways to preserve our land. The majority of the land that will be added to the park will come from the Henneman family, who has owned this land for generations. During this time the Henneman family have been great stewards of their land. I commend them for their work as land managers. I would also like to commend the Conservation Fund for their willingess to work with the Henneman's and the park to protect this land. In addition I would like to thank the Mesa Verde Park Foundation for the land that they are generously donating to the park.

Mesa Verde National Park protects some of the best preserved and notable archeological sites in the world and this legislation will not only expand its boundaries but also its ability to preserve an important part of our history.

By Mr. KOHL (for himself and Mr. FEINGOLD):

S. 3612. A bill to amend the Federal antitrust laws to provide expanded coverage and to eliminate exemptions from such laws that are contrary to the public interest with respect to railroads; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. KOHL. Mr. President, I rise to introduce the Railroad Antitrust Enforcement Act of 2006. This legislation will eliminate obsolete antitrust exemptions that protect freight railroads from competition. The unneeded exemptions stand in stark contrast to the historical basis for antitrust law and once again allow railroads to abuse their dominant market power and raise rates for those who rely on them.

Antitrust law was born out of these same circumstances. Rail barons abused the power they had over shippers—especially farmers. Any American history student can describe the anti-consumer policies that led to the birth of the Sherman Act and later the Clayton Act—the building blocks of today's antitrust law.

The historical ties between the railroads and the birth of antitrust law make the situation we face today remarkable. I have heard from a growing number of shippers in Wisconsin—and I know many of my colleagues have heard from their shippers in their States—about the monopolistic practices in which the freight railroads are currently engaged. Consolidation in the railroad industry, allowed under antitrust exemptions my legislation would repeal, has resulted in only four class I railroads providing over 90 percent of the Nation's rail transportation.

Many industries—known as ''captive shippers''—are served by only one railroad. These captive shippers face constantly rising rail rates. They are the victims of monopolistic practices and price gouging by the single railroad that serves them, price increases which they are forced to pass along into the price of their products and, ultimately, to consumers. And in many cases, the ordinary protections of antitrust law are unavailable to these captive shippers—instead, the railroads are protected by a series of exemptions from the normal rules of antitrust law to which all other industries must abide.

In Wisconsin, victims of a lack of railroad competition abound. In fact, a coalition has formed, consisting of more than thirty affected organizations—Badger CURE. From Dairyland Power Cooperative in La Crosse to Wolf River Lumber in New London, companies in my State are feeling the crunch of years of railroad consolidation. The reliability, efficiency, and affordability of freight rail have all declined, and Wisconsin consumers feel the pinch.

There is no better example than Wisconsin's electric utilities. Dairyland Power serves the electricity needs of more than 575,000 people. As of January of this year, they faced a 93 percent average increase in rail rates. According to Dairyland, it will now cost about $80 million to ship $35 million worth of coal, costs that Wisconsin consumers will absorb if Congress does not take action soon. And this problem is not unique to Wisconsin—shippers across the Nation suffer from monopolistic practices of the dominant railroads in their regions.

That is why I am introducing the Railroad Antitrust Enforcement Act of 2006. This legislation will force railroads to play by the rules of free competition like all other businesses.

The current antitrust exemptions protect a wide range of railroad industry conduct from scrutiny by governmental antitrust enforcers. Railroad mergers and acquisitions are exempt from antitrust law and are reviewed solely by the Surface Transportation Board. Railroads that engage in collective ratemaking are also exempt from antitrust law. Railroads subject to the regulation of the Surface Transportation Board are also exempt from private antitrust lawsuits seeking the termination of anti-competitive practices via injunctive relief. Our bill will eliminate these exemptions.

No good reason exists for them. While railroad legislation in recent decades including most notably the Staggers Rail Act of 1980—deregulated much railroad rate setting from the oversight of the Surface Transportation Board, these obsolete antitrust exemptions remained in place, insulating a consolidating industry from obeying the rules of fair competition.

Our bill will bring railroad mergers and acquisitions under the purview of the Clayton Act, allowing the Federal Government, state attorneys general, and private parties to file suit to enjoin anti-competitive mergers and acquisitions. It will restore the review of these mergers to the agencies where they belong—the Justice Department's Antitrust Division and the Federal Trade Commission. It will eliminate the exemption that prevents FTC's scrutiny of railroad common carriers. It will eliminate the antitrust exemption for railroad collective ratemaking. It will allow state attorneys general and other private parties to sue railroads for treble damages and injunctive relief for violations of the antitrust laws, including collusion that leads to excessive and unreasonable rates.

In sum, by clearing out this thicket of outmoded antitrust exemptions, railroads will be subject to the same laws as the rest of the economy. Government antitrust enforcers will finally have the tools to prevent anti-competitive transactions and practices by railroads. Likewise, private parties will be able to utilize the antitrust laws to deter anti-competitive conduct and to seek redress for their injuries.

As ranking member on the Antitrust Subcommittee, I have found—in industry after industry—that vigorous application of our Nation's antitrust laws is the best way to eliminate barriers to competition, to end monopolistic behavior, to keep prices low and quality of service high. The railroad industry is no different. All those who rely on railroads to ship their products—whether it is an electric utility for its coal, a farmer to ship grain, or a factory to acquire its raw materials or ship out its finished product—deserve the full application of the antitrust laws to end the anti-competitive abuses all too prevalent in this industry today. I urge my colleagues support the Railroad Antitrust Enforcement Act of 2006.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

By Mrs. CLINTON:

S. 3613. A bill to designate the facility of the United States Postal Service located at 2951 New York Highway 43 in Averill Park, New York, as the ''Major George Quamo Post Office Building''; to the Committee on Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs.

Mrs. CLINTON. Mr. President, I am proud to introduce legislation which would designate the United States Postal Service located at 2951 New York Highway 43 in Averill Park, NY, as the Major George Quamo Post Office Building.

MAJ. George Quamo was a highly decorated Green Beret who served in the Special Forces Unit of the Army in the Vietnam war. In the years George Quamo served, he established himself as one of the Army's most highly respected field commanders. Quamo commanded three reconnaissance teams, leading a number of covert missions and saving the lives of 14 of his men. During his distinguished career he was awarded 26 medals which included the Distinguished Service Cross, Two Silver Stars, Bronze Star, Legion of Merit and Presidential Unit Citations. While conducting a mission in Vietnam, Major Quamo's helicopter crashed. He was killed at the young age of 27. He was the youngest major ever to have served in the Special Forces Unit.

MAJ. George Quamo was a Class of 1958 graduate of Averill Park High School in upstate New York. A natural leader, he was president of his high school junior class and a quarterback on the football team. After joining the Army he attended Officer Candidate School. While he died at a young age, it is clear that his presence was profound on those around him. ''I still receive phone calls from guys who served under him,'' said his brother James Quamo, now of Spencerport, Monroe County, NY. ''Some of them even cry telling me how they felt about my brother.''

I ask that the Senate come together and honor this brave American hero for his service to our Nation.

By Mr. SPECTER:

S. 3614. A bill to provide comprehensive procedures for the adjudication of cases involving unprivileged combatants; to the Committee on Armed Services.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I have sought recognition to discuss the case of Hamdan v. Rumsfeld which was decided by the Supreme Court of the United States today and to address the question as to where we go from here. There have already been many inquiries as to what is the import of this Supreme Court decision and what are the next steps in order to establish a framework to deal with the people who are detained at Guantanamo Bay.

Since the opinions were released this morning, my staff and I have been reviewing them: 177 pages, 6 opinions. The essence of the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States on a 5-to-3 vote is that the President did not have the authority to establish the military commissions and that the authority rests with the Congress under the Constitution.

The Court dealt with the issue of the resolution that authorizes the use of military force, a resolution which the administration has sought as authority for amending the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act, and when the Court dealt with the resolution authorizing the use of military force, the Court said that it did not give the President the authority to establish the military commissions. The Court did not deal with any issue of inherent authority. But the decision that the President lacked the authority to establish the military commissions makes it obvious that the conclusion of the Supreme Court is that there is no inherent authority, an inference and a proposition which may have some weight as we consider collateral matters, for example, on the electronic surveillance under NSA.

The Constitution of the United States is explicit in article I, section 8, which states, and I am leaving out some of the irrelevant language: Congress has the authority ''to make rules concerning captures on land and water.'' So it is a congressional matter.

In reaching its conclusion, the Supreme Court of the United States found that the military commissions violated the Code of Military Justice and also violated the terms of the Geneva Convention. The Court found that the military commissions violated the Code of Military Justice because they did not provide for very basic due process considerations. The Court said that the military commissions violated the Geneva Convention, which the Court found applicable, reversing the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia where the Supreme Court said: The Geneva Convention, common article 3, plainly affords some minimal protection to individuals, associated with a signatory or even a nonsignatory, who are involved in a conflict.

The Court dealt with the issue of jurisdiction by saying the Government contention that the Supreme Court had no jurisdiction was wrong. The Supreme Court referred to a provision of the Detainee Treatment Act of 2005, which provides:

> No court shall have jurisdiction to hear or consider an application for habeas corpus filed by an alien detained at Guantanamo Bay. . . .

There was a reference to the statutory provision which gave exclusive jurisdiction, according to the statute, to the District of Columbia court.

The statute provided specifically:

> . . . the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit shall have exclusive jurisdiction to determine the validity of any final decision of a Combatant Status Review Tribunal which determines that an alien is properly detained as an enemy combatant.

I argued as forcefully as I could when that amendment was considered, that it was really atrocious—without any hearings, without any extended floor debate, and I had 2 minutes to speak under the rules governing the amendment—that we would be taking away jurisdiction of the Federal courts except for the District of Columbia. On its face, that language would say that the Supreme Court of the United States had no jurisdiction.

The Supreme Court made short shrift of that point, saying that it did have jurisdiction. When you deal with a constitutional issue, it is hard for this lawyer to understand how you can take away jurisdiction from the Supreme Court of the United States. How can you do that, when we know since Marbury v. Madison in 1803 that the Supreme Court of the United States is final arbiter of the Constitution? But this language, this clumsy language sought to vest exclusive jurisdiction in the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia. The Supreme Court made short shrift of that.

On a personal note, and relevant to this consideration as well, in Justice Scalia's dissent he cites my floor argument in a footnote saying, at page 12 of his opinion:

> An earlier part of the amendment provides that no court, justice or judge shall have jurisdiction to consider the application for writ of habeas corpus. . . .Under the language of exclusive jurisdiction in the D.C. Circuit, the U.S. Supreme Court would not have jurisdiction to hear the Hamdan case. . . . Id., at [Senate Congressional Record] S12796 (statement of Sen[ator] Specter).

Interesting that Justice Scalia, who doesn't believe in congressional intent or congressional deliberation, would make that citation. But when I made the point that the statute, on its face, took away jurisdiction from the Supreme Court of the United States, I made it plain that I did not think it had any validity. A statute can not do that.

What the statute was trying to do, in part, was to look to a favorable court. The DC Circuit was a favorable court—they engaged in a little court shopping—and there was an effort to take away the jurisdiction of the district court from habeas corpus proceedings.

Under the logic of Hamdan, where you have a statutory provision that the DC Circuit has sole jurisdiction and the Supreme Court interprets that as not taking away jurisdiction of the Supreme Court, inferentially the same conclusion would follow for the district court.

It doesn't say the district court does not have jurisdiction, just like it does not say the Supreme Court does not have jurisdiction. It just says exclusive jurisdiction is in the DC circuit. It is a little hard to see how that would work out if you filed a petition for a writ of habeas corpus in the DC Circuit. That would be anomalous. Those petitions are filed in the district court.

In any case, the Supreme Court claimed jurisdiction over the case and found that the procedures which the administration has prescribed do not comport with law.

The Judiciary Committee held a hearing on Guantanamo and made a field trip there. A number of us, including myself, went to take a look at Guantanamo, to see it firsthand and to question people there. I had gone there with the expectation of having a field hearing there. I wanted to hear from the officials at Guantanamo. When I got to Guantanamo, after the flight in, I was told there would be no field hearing—which was a disappointment, and really contrary to what I had understood the arrangement to be. But we held a hearing and devoted a considerable amount of work to the issue. Knowing, or thinking that, the administration's military commissions would be struck down because they did so little and had no real relationship to due process, we prepared legislation.

I had it put in final form last week when we considered the Department of Defense authorization bill, and one Senator did talk about legislation. I considered offering it at that time but decided that it was not a good time to do so. But we have it ready to go, ready for introduction.

Senator DURBIN and I introduced a bill to handle the Guantanamo detainees on February 13, 2002. The issue was not picked up again until the Judiciary Committee held hearings last June, and this bill, which I am introducing today, I believe, will satisfy the requirements of the Supreme Court of the United States.

This bill provides for two divisions. One is for the people who are charged with specific offenses. We retain the description of a military commission. We provide that there would be three officers on the commission, one president—a presiding judge from the Judge Advocate General's Office. Also an attorney will be provided for the accused, there will be competent evidence, there will be cross-examination and a unanimous verdict.

In the event of the use of classified information, we prescribe that the provisions of the Confidential Information Protection Act would govern, which is a statute which has been used in our courts for many years, which authorizes the presiding judge to sift through the information and make available to the defense whatever is appropriate and not classified. And if it is classified, then to make it available at the discretion of the judge to the attorney.

The attorney for the accused would be cleared through regular channels to deal with classified information so that we would be protecting the classified information by having it viewed only by someone authorized to take a look at it, so that the defense lawyer would be able to use it in the defense of his client. That is not a perfect situation, but that is the way we have dealt with confidential information under the so-called Confidential Information Protection Act.

In our legislation, we also deal with the enemy combatants. These are the individuals who have been detained at Guantanamo under an arrangement where there is no limit as to the length of their detention. That has caused considerable angst, considerable objection. But it is a very difficult matter. When we are in a war, fighting terrorists—and we should never lose our focus that we are in that war and that there are continuing dangers and we have to protect Americans—until somebody has a better idea, they are going to be detained. Some have been released and some of those released have been found on the battlefields killing Americans, so the detention of enemy combatants is an ongoing issue.

Our legislation provides that there would be a classification tribunal so that there would be a review of their status, to make a determination on a periodic basis that they continue to be a threat to the United States, either on the continent or because they will go back and fight a war. We provide for an attorney, again, an attorney who would be cleared to view classified information.

The issue of evidence is much more difficult because these enemy combatants are frequently taken into custody in a battlefield situation where competent evidence is not present, so we allow for hearsay.

In the Supreme Court opinion, if there is a showing of necessity, there is leeway granted in terms of defining sufficient due process. The Supreme Court found, for example, that the President had demonstrated sufficiently that there could not be trials in the U.S. Federal district courts, so ruling that out was fine. It was acceptable. And leeway, too, for some deviation from all of the generalized rules might be acceptable. The Supreme Court really didn't reach the issue of granting leeway because they didn't have a specific situation, but there would have to be a showing of necessity, a showing that no other system would work.

So in dealing with the enemy combatants, we are still struggling with how to handle the issue of indefinite detention, recognizing that they continue to be a threat.

The legislation which I am introducing today has received considerable thought and considerable analysis. As I say, it picks up on legislation which Senator DURBIN and I introduced on February 13, 2002. But it still requires a great deal more analysis and a great deal more thought, which we will give it in due course on the legislative process. We have altered our schedule in the Judiciary Committee to reserve July 11 for a hearing, the second day we are back—on that Tuesday we really swing into action—we will take up an analysis of Hamdan v. Rumsfeld in greater detail than we could do this afternoon in a short floor statement and with only a few hours to digest the 6 opinions and 177 pages. We will consider this legislation at that time.

I ask unanimous consent that the full text of the bill be printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD at the conclusion of my comments, and a short summary of the bill, which will enable the reader to follow without going through the extended text.

There being no objection, the text of the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 3614

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE; AUTHORITY; FINDINGS.

(a) SHORT TITLE.—This Act may be cited as the ''Unprivileged Combatant Act of 2006''.

(b) AUTHORITY.—The requirements, conditions, and restrictions established by this Act are made under the authority of Congress under clauses 1, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, and 18 of article I, section 8 of the Constitution of the United States.

(c) FINDINGS.—Congress finds the following:

(1) Article I, section 8, of the Constitution provides that the Congress has the power to ''constitute Tribunals inferior to the Supreme Court; ... define and punish ... Offenses against the Law of Nations; ... make Rules concerning Captures on Land and Water; ... make all Laws which shall be necessary and proper for carrying into Execution the foregoing Powers and all other Powers vested by this Constitution in the Government of the United States, or in any Department or Officer thereof''.

(2) The Supreme Court has repeatedly recognized military tribunals, as stated in Madsen v. Kinsella 343 U.S. 341, 1952, ''[s]ince our nation's earliest days, such tribunals have been constitutionally recognized agencies for meeting many urgent governmental responsibilities related to war....They have taken many forms and borne many names. Neither their procedure nor their jurisdiction has been prescribed by statute. It has been adapted in each instance to the need that called it forth.'' Madsen, citing In re Yamashita, 327 U.S. 1 (1946).

(3) The President has inherent authority to convene military tribunals arising from his role as Commander and Chief of the Armed Forces under article II of the Constitution and from title 10 of the United States Code. Due to the extraordinary circumstances of the ongoing war on terrorism, it is appropriate for Congress to provide additional and explicit authorization of and procedures for military tribunals to adjudicate and punish offenses relating to the war on terrorism.

(4) This Act is in direct response to the United State Supreme Court's ruling in Rasul v. Bush. With the passage of this Act, the 109th Congress will have addressed the concerns of the Supreme Court's Rasul majority, and therefore alien enemy combatants detained or prosecuted under this Act may not challenge their detentions in the Federal courts of the United States via the habeas or any other statute.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

The Unprivileged Combatants Act of 2006 is a follow-up to the Military Commissions Procedures Act of 2002 (S. 1937, 107th Congress) which you cosponsored with Senator DURBIN in February 2002. The goal of this bill is to balance the need for national security (interrogations and detention of combatants) with the need to afford detainees with sufficient due process so that nations such as Great Britain and Australia will not place undue pressure on the United States to release their citizens from Guantanamo Bay. This bill addresses only those combatants currently held at Guantanamo Bay. The Act clarifies the procedures used in Combatant Status Review Tribunals and establishes procedures for the trial of detainees. These procedures constitute ''a meaningful opportunity to contest the factual basis for that detention before a neutral decisionmaker.'' (Hamdi v. Rumsfeld, 542 U.S. 507, O'Connor, J.) This bill does not address the issue of unprivileged combatants contesting their detentions through habeas appeals. Although the Graham-Kyl-Levin amendment to the 2005 DoD appropriations bill has addressed this issue, a forthcoming Supreme Court decision (Hamdan v. Rumsfeld, 04–5393) will probably require additional legislation on this matter.

Section 301: Findings: This title is in direct response to the United States Supreme Court's ruling in Rasul v. Bush.

Section 302: Definition Section: Definition section of the bill which defines primary terms such as field tribunal, classification tribunal, military commission, and unprivileged combatant.

Section 303: Authorizing Military Commissions: The President is authorized to establish military commissions for the trial of individuals for offenses as provided in this title.

Section 304: Jurisdiction Over Unprivileged Combatants: This title establishes exclusive jurisdiction to hear any matter involving an unprivileged combatant who has been detained by the Department of Defense at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba. These detainees may be tried via laws of war or pursuant to the Department of Defense's Military Commission Instruction Number Two.

Section 305: Appellate Jurisdiction: The U.S. Courts of Military Appeals shall have exclusive jurisdiction over appeals from all final decisions of a classification tribunal board or military commission under this tide. These decisions are then subject to review by the Supreme Court by writ of certiorari.

Section 306: Military Commission: The Commissions shall consist of three military officers, at least one of whom is a Judge Advocate General. These Commissions shall decide the guilt or innocence of detainees charged under section 304 of this Act. This is basically what happens now.

Section 307: Persons in Custody: Not more than 60 days after the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense is required to develop a list of all persons who are being detained at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, and whom the government wishes to continue to detain as an unprivileged combatant. The Act requires that the original list and subsequent lists, updated at least once every 60 days, be submitted to the appropriate House and Senate committees.

Section 308: Field Tribunals: Not more than 30 days after a suspected unprivileged combatant has been detained by United States forces, the Department of Defense shall conduct a field tribunal (''FT'') in order to determine whether the detainee is an unprivileged combatant and whether the detainee is entitled to the rights afforded under the Geneva Convention. The procedures governing a field tribunal shall be promulgated by the Department of Defense.

Section 309: Classification Tribunals: A Classification Tribunal (''CT'') is very similar to the current Combatant Status Review Tribunal. The CT shall be composed of three military officers, one of whom shall be an attorney. Pursuant to a hearing before a CT, a designee shall be released and repatriated to an appropriate country unless a CT finds by a preponderance of the evidence that—(1) the detainee is a threat to the national security interest of the United States; or (2) there are reasonable grounds to believe that if released the person would take up arms against the United States. Decisions of the CT shall be repeated every six months. Detainees may be released only when the CT or the Administrative Board determines the detainee is no longer a threat to national security. This section also expressly states that a detainee who is also a United States citizen may not be held or tried under this act.

Section 310: Classification Tribunal Procedures: Procedures for CT's are the same as those of Combatant Status Review Tribunals except detainees shall be represented by counsel and are permitted to view unclassified discovery that the prosecution plans to present before the tribunal.

Section 311: Continuance of Classification Tribunals: Classification tribunals may be continued in order for the government to continue their interrogation of a detainee. Upon a motion from the Government, the classification tribunal board may grant a continuance for up to a 6-month period, if the classification tribunal board determines that: 1) the individual being detained is a high level individual in the planning or financing of terrorist activities, or 2) the individual possesses information vital to the safety of the United States or its citizens. The Government may obtain more than one continuance if it demonstrates that such continuances are necessary for information gathering purposes as it relates to national security. Said applications for Continuances shall be made ex parte and before a detainee is given an attorney. Accordingly, a detainee is only given an attorney once the tribunal is informed that the interrogation efforts have been exhausted.

Section 312 & 313: Criminal Prosecution Procedures: Military Commission procedures will be the same as the current procedures afforded detainees under the current system.

Section 314: Communication with Persons in Custody: Limits communications by any detainee indicted or convicted under this Act to the individual's interpreter, assigned counsel, prison personnel, and any other individual(s) approved by the Secretary of Defense.

Section 315: Commission Counsel: Provides the following criteria for persons to be admitted to practice before a commission: 1) U.S. Citizen, 2) has been admitted to practice law in a State, district, territory or possession of the United States or before Federal Court, 3) has not been disciplined by any court, bar or other competent governmental authority for misconduct, 4) maintains a minimum of ''secret'' clearance and 5) signs a written agreement to comply with all applicable regulations aid instructions for counsel during the course of proceedings. It further provides persons admitted to practice will not confer with any colleague who does not have at least a ''secret'' clearance. This section provides that individuals seeking to practice before a commission will be expedited in consideration for obtaining the necessary security clearance. The decision of the Secretary of Defense regarding the granting or not of the security clearance is final and is not eligible for appeal or review. Finally, this section provides that persons practicing before the commission are eligible to have their travel expenses reimbursed.

By Mr. HARKIN:

S. 3615. A bill to amend the Federal Meat Inspection Act, the Poultry Products Inspection Act, and the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act to provide for improved public health and food safety through enhanced enforcement, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, today, I am introducing the Safe and Fair Enforcement and Recall for Meat, Poultry, and Food—SAFER—Act. This legislation will protect consumers from contaminated meat and poultry by giving the Department of Agriculture, USDA, and the Department of Health and Human Service's Food and Drug Administration, FDA, greater authority to remove unsafe products from the market.

If enacted, the bill would give USDA and FDA the following three key tools in keeping food safe for consumers: authority to mandate that a company recall unsafe meat, poultry, and food products if a company fails to voluntarily recall unsafe or unwholesome food; require companies to notify USDA or FDA if they know a product is adulterated or misbranded; and authority to USDA and FDA to levy civil penalties if a company violates federal meat, poultry, or food laws. USDA and FDA are lacking fundamental authorities to maintain a safe and secure food supply. This legislation would change that.

Foodborne illness continues to be a far too common problem in the United States. The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, CDC, estimate that each year 76 million illnesses, 325,000 hospitalizations, and 1,800 deaths can be attributed to foodborne diseases. USDA's Economic Research Service estimates that the cost of foodborne illness is $6.9 billion a year in medical costs, productivity losses, and premature deaths. Even in the face of such numbers, companies say USDA and FDA do not need more effective tools to enforce food safety standards. They say the food industry is compliant with voluntary recalls. It is true most companies do comply, but there have been problems and delays in recalls. The problem is, USDA and FDA have no backup authority to order a recall if the company refuses. What happens then? Without this legislation, USDA and FDA have to lose precious time to get unsafe product off the shelves. Another criticism of this legislation is that it would give USDA too much power to mandate recalls, and may even push the Department to go too far. However, the bill has a procedure for due process, so that if a company has evidence that a recall or civil penalties are unjustified, they are appealable before an administrative law judge.

In addition to mandatory recall authority, the authority to levy a financial penalty if a company does not comply with our food safety laws is crucial to enforcing the standards. Civil penalties are an effective deterrent to stop violators and are already used to enforce analogous federal safety standards. Currently, USDA and FDA can only withdraw inspectors and shut down a plant that repeatedly or willfully violates our meat, poultry and food laws, which can often be a lengthy and costly process. Such drastic action is very seldom even taken. The ability to levy civil penalties gives USDA and FDA a much-needed tool for ensuring compliance with our food safety laws.

USDA recently proposed a rule to provide the public with valuable information about meat and poultry that is voluntarily recalled. The rule will disclose the names and locations of stores where such products have been sold. While I believe this is a step in the right direction, it is not enough to protect consumers. This USDA rule does little more than place the burden on consumers to protect their families or themselves from foodborne illnesses. The SAFER Meat, Poultry, and Food Act would act as a complement to this USDA proposal, and would give USDA, as well as FDA, the power to enforce the food safety standards they have set. I urge my colleagues to support this legislation to protect the American consumer.

By Mr. SCHUMER (for himself, Mr. SMITH, Mr. BOND, Mr. REED, Mrs. MURRAY, and Mr. SARBANES):

S. 3616. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to provide an incentive to preserve affordable housing in multifamily housing units which are sold or exchanged; to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, today I rise to introduce mine and Senator GORDON SMITH's bill, The Affordable Housing Preservation Act of 2006. Our bill provides a solution to preserve federally assisted affordable multifamily housing.

I want to thank all of our colleagues— Senators BOND, REED, MURRAY, and SARBANES—for realizing the importance of this issue and agreeing to cosponsor our legislation.

I have often said that few Federal programs have helped mothers and fathers keep their families together more than our low income and public housing programs. And while I always fight to make sure New York and the country at large gets all the money it can from Washington, frankly I am not the kind of elected official who believes that all government programs are equally good. But low income housing programs are some of the best things our government has ever done to help families, mothers, the elderly, and the disabled.

Unfortunately—the current housing climate has reached a crisis point and the good that we are doing just is not enough anymore. Consider that in 2001, 95 million people—a whopping one third of the nation—had housing problems: ranging from high cost burden, to overcrowding, to poor quality, or worse to homelessness.

In the same year, 41 million people, 14.6 percent of the U.S. population, were without health insurance and 12 percent of all people in the U.S.—33.6 million—lacked food security. These are all interrelated. If rent is too high—you go without health insurance. Maybe you trim down spending on groceries.

Sixty-five million Americans with housing problems are low income, and 87 percent of them face high housing cost burdens. In New York, the numbers are even worse. New York State ranks 47th out of the 50 States in renter affordability.

Across the board, housing problems are plaguing low income people who live in both renter and owner households, and by people in all age groups, including children and seniors.

The bottom line is that twice as many people who lack health insurance and three times more people who struggle on a regular basis to put food on their table have housing problems.

But for whatever reason, the housing issue does not attract the same level of public concern and political attention as other programs. And that's why housing programs have been cut back by more than just about any other program over the last decade.

Whenever I speak to New Yorkers—there is a common refrain: from gas prices to milk costs to rent hikes, the cost of living in New York keeps going up and up.

It is a demonstrated pattern and we have worked diligently to try to defend every penny. We have had some successes but it is a yearly battle and I unfortunately have no doubt that we will continue to fight to defend every penny of funding for housing programs.

But scraping our pockets for money is not enough. I served on the Housing Subcommittee for my entire 25 years in Congress and I'm tired of just playing defense and preventing things from happening.

If we want to actually get something done to improve the housing market and prospects for millions of low income families we've got to not just be satisfied with a good defense.

What we need right now is a good offense. As the newest member on the Senate Finance Committee in addition to my current post on the Banking, Housing and Urban Affairs Committee, I intend to use this position to help fight for housing and particularly new funding for housing for New York and America.

Today I am introducing legislation with my fellow Finance Committee member, Senator GORDON SMITH—proposing that we bring this fight to a playing field many more are comfortable on. We should focus on housing tax incentives rather than just relying solely on new spending to expand the number of affordable housing units.

Since its inception the Tax Reform Act of 1986, the low-income housing tax credit, for example, has helped build and convert 1.6 million apartments with rents affordable to low income families, by providing investors in affordable housing developments with a dollar-for-dollar reduction in their Federal tax liability.

We anticipate that the Affordable Housing Preservation Act of 2006 will afford renters and developers similar benefits. Our legislation will work to ensure that we can preserve the current supply of affordable housing by providing tax relief to owners.

At the moment the inadequate present stock of affordable housing might shrink even further—much of it was built in the 60s and 70s and is aging and needs to be rehabilitated.

Under normal circumstances—developers who own this housing and have no interest in rehabilitating it themselves would sell it to another developer who would refinance and rehabilitate it for affordable housing.

But because a so called ''exit tax'' is placed on any developer who plans to sell their subsidized property—more and more are deciding not to sell and to just sit on the property until they die.

Let's say back in the 70s Developer Dan purchased a plot of land in Queens for $200,000 and built $800,000 worth of affordable housing on it—for a total investment of $1 million.

At the time, Developer Dan was able to secure tax benefits as part of the accelerated tax depreciation program and was able to deduct 70 cents on every dollar invested in affordable housing over a 15-year period.

So now in 2004 his accelerated depreciation has expired and Dan is getting on in his years and wants to sell the property—simply to break even and get out of the business.

But he can't do it very easily. If Dan sells the property for $1 million he must then pay an exit tax. The exit tax for Dan will be 25 percent applied to the building that was subsidized. So Dan must pay a $200,000 tax when he sells the building. That is not a very appealing situation for our friend Dan.

So Dan entertains two other options—instead of keeping the units as affordable housing he sells his property into the traditional housing market where he can garner a greater price which includes the amount of the exit tax but removes the units from the affordable housing market.

Or even more likely, Dan holds onto the property and neglects its upkeep at a detriment to his tenants and waits until he dies because then the tax consequence is erased. The property is likely sold in the traditional market and lost to the affordable housing community.

The Local Initiatives Support Coalition estimates that there are 1 million housing units held in this manner because owners are unwilling to sell and take on the new tax burden.

That is 1 million housing units—many of which are rapidly deteriorating and not providing good homes for the people who are living in them and one million units that will eventually be removed from the affordable market if we don't do something to make it easier and more attractive for affordable housing owners to sell their properties to other affordable housing developers.

So today, we are proposing a plan to waive exit taxes for owners who sell their properties to buyers who agree to keep the properties affordable for no less than 30 years. It is a simple fix—and one that could save us 1 million affordable housing units.

While we await a full scoring of our proposal from the CBO, our back of the envelope estimate shows that waiving the exit taxes to preserve this supply of affordable housing represents a $422 million incentive program over a 10-year period.

We hope this bill will move quickly, especially since we have clear support in both the House and the Senate. Congressman JIM RAMSTAD has introduced a similar bill on the House side. In addition, we have widespread support from the housing, real estate and investment community

Before I close I want to make clear—this and similar types of housing tax proposals are not meant to replace funding for current housing programs. We will still fight for full funding of every housing program—from section 8 to CDBG. We just need to modify our strategy and operate more on the offense rather than the defense.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, I rise to join Senator SCHUMER in offering legislation that will help maintain our Nation's affordable housing inventory. Our country's stock of affordable rental housing is shrinking. Every day, we lose affordable units to rent increases, deterioration, and conversions to market-rate housing or commercial use. For millions of Americans, this means that it is getting harder to put a roof over their family's heads and food on the table.

In 2000—recognizing that we had a looming crisis—Congress established the bipartisan Millennial Housing Commission. The Commission was tasked with studying the importance of affordable housing to the infrastructure of the United States as well as the various methods to increase the effectiveness and efficiency of the private sector's role in providing affordable housing.

The bill Senator SCHUMER and I are introducing is based on a recommendation by the Millennial Housing Commission. Our bill would waive the depreciation recapture tax liability if investors sell their property to owners who will preserve the property as affordable housing for 30 years. Through a simple change in the Tax Code, our bill will help preserve the federally assisted affordable housing stock of the United States at a minimal cost to the Federal Government. This proposal is supported by a broad coalition of affordable housing advocates, including the National Housing Conference, the National Housing Trust, the National Low-Income Housing Coalition, and the National Council of State Housing Agencies.

According to Oregon Housing and Community Services, OHCS, there are approximately 4,000 households at risk of losing their homes in the OHCS portfolio alone. There are another 6,000 households at risk in section 8 projects not currently in the OHCS portfolio. All of these properties could benefit from the change Senator SCHUMER and I are proposing.

The Neighborhood Partnership Fund of Portland estimates that an additional 215 Rural Housing Service properties with more than 6,000 units in Oregon could also benefit.

I thank the Senator from New York, Mr. SCHUMER, for working with me on this bill. I believe this is important legislation and will help stem affordable housing losses in the United States. I look forward to working with my colleagues to see the legislation passed and signed into law.

By Mrs. CLINTON (for herself, Mr. LEAHY, Mr. JEFFORDS, and Mr. SCHUMER):

S. 3618. A bill to establish the Champlain Quadricentennial Commemoration Commission, the Hudson-Fulton 400th Commemoration Commission, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

Mrs. CLINTON. Mr. President, it gives me pride and pleasure to introduce revised legislation to establish the Champlain Quadricentennial Commemoration Commission and the Hudson-Fulton 400th Commemoration Commission.

I began this effort with legislation I introduced 4 years ago during the 107th Congress. Because my colleagues in the other body and I were not able to enact our bill that time, we returned in the 108th Congress with new legislation including needed revisions. I now lay down the next version of the bill that incorporates welcomed input and reflects a consensus reached among key leaders who share the goal of honoring important events in our Nation's and New York State's history.

The United States of America has long been celebrated for its leadership in innovation, exploration, and ingenuity. These qualities have been evident dating back as far as 1609 when Englishman Henry Hudson became the first European to sail up the river later named for him in the vessel Half Moon. Also in 1609, French explorer Samuel de Champlain became the first European to see the lake later named for him, as well as the shores in Northern New York and Vermont.

These explorations led to the establishment of trading posts, military posts, and settlements as far south as Lake George. From these early establishments came trade, commerce, cultural, and religious impact deep into the Mohawk Valley and as far west as Lake Erie. These settlements influenced our Nation's history, culture, law, commerce, and traditions of liberty that extend to the present day.

Almost 200 years later, in 1807, Robert Fulton navigated the Hudson River from the city of New York to Albany in the steamboat Clermont, successfully inaugurating steam navigation on a commercial basis. This event helped revolutionize waterborne commerce on the great rivers of the United States and fostered international relations through transoceanic travel and trade.

We are now almost 400 years removed from the voyages of Hudson and Champlain and 200 years removed from the voyage of Fulton. If America intends to continue in its role as a world leader in innovation, exploration, and ingenuity, it is important that we provide a suitable observance of those before us who have contributed to what our nation is today.

The Champlain Quadricentennial Commemoration Commission and the Hudson-Fulton 400th Commemoration Commission represents a unique opportunity to celebrate New York, Vermont and America's glorious heritage. In 1909, Americans celebrated the 300th anniversaries of these events with maritime celebrations and art exhibitions. The Dutch built the first replica of Hudson's ship, the Half Moon, and sent it up the Hudson River for the observance. In 1959, Congress recognized the 350th anniversary by establishing a similar commission to coordinate federal participation in the celebrations.

I ask that the Senate come together not only to honor these events that have contributed to our past, but to celebrate the effects they will have on our future.

By Mr. LEVIN (for himself, Mrs. DOLE, Mr. REED, Mr. JEFFORDS, Mr. VOINOVICH, and Mr. MARTINEZ):

S. 3620. A bill to facilitate the provision of assistance by the Department of Housing and Urban Development for the cleanup and economic redevelopment of brownfields; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, today I introduced the Brownfields Redevelopment Enhancement Act of 2006 with Senators DOLE, REED, JEFFORDS, VOINOVICH, and MARTINEZ. This bill would allow the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development to assist communities in transforming idle brownfield sites into productive uses. Brownfields are abandoned or underused industrial and commercial properties where redevelopment is complicated by real or perceived environmental contamination. More than 450,000 of these sites taint our Nation and limit the economic growth of communities. Brownfields redevelopment can provide new opportunities for businesses, housing, and recreational spaces such as urban parks.

Brownfields redevelopment is a fiscally sound way to bring investment back to neglected neighborhoods, clean up the environment and maximize use of existing infrastructure. My home State of Michigan has benefited from hundreds of brownfields redevelopment projects, and this bill would help to ensure that federal tools are in place to continue with these successes in Michigan and throughout the Nation.

The Brownfields Redevelopment Enhancement Act would provide the Department of Housing and Urban Development with new tools to spur brownfields redevelopment. This bill would provide local governments with increased accessibility to HUD's Brownfields Economic Development Initiative grants by allowing HUD to make brownfields grants without requiring that communities pledge their future community development block grant funds as collateral. Removing this restriction from the HUD Brownfields Economic Development Initiative program would allow many more communities, especially smaller communities, to participate in the program. The bill also adopts the definition of brownfields used by the EPA, which would bring greater consistency and clarity to the federal government's brownfields programs.

The bill authorizes $50 million annually for this important Federal program, which provides funding for a wide variety of brownfield redevelopment activities—from site remediation to construction. Supporters of this bill include the U.S. Conference of Mayors, the National Association of Home Builders, the National Association of Industrial and Office Properties, the Real Estate Roundtable, the National Association of Development Organizations, the Northeast-Midwest Institute, the National Association of Local Government Environmental Professionals, the Associated General Contractors of America, the National Association of Real Estate Investment Trusts, and the Environmental Bankers Association.

I want to thank my Senate colleagues for working with me on this bill, and I want to especially thank JACK REED who played a key role in the early drafting of the bill.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the text of the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 3620

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the ''Brownfields Redevelopment Enhancement Act''.

SEC. 2. FINDINGS AND PURPOSES.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds that—

(1) grants under the Brownfields Economic Development Initiative of the Department of Housing and Urban Development provide local governments with a flexible source of funding to pursue brownfields redevelopment through land acquisition, site preparation, economic development, and other activities;

(2) to be eligible for such grant funds, a community must be willing to pledge community development block grant funds as partial collateral for a loan guarantee under section 108 of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974, and this requirement is a barrier to many local communities that are unable or unwilling to pledge such block grant funds as collateral; and

(3) by providing grants for the economic development of brownfield sites independent from section 108 loan guarantees and the related pledge of community development block grant funds, more communities will have access to funding for redevelopment of brownfield sites.

(b) PURPOSE.—The purpose of this Act is to provide units of general local government and Indian tribes with increased accessibility to brownfields redevelopment funds by permitting the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development to make grants for brownfields development independent from section 108 loan guarantees.

SEC. 3. BROWNFIELDS DEVELOPMENT INITIATIVE.

''SEC. 123. BROWNFIELDS DEVELOPMENT INITIATIVE.

''(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary may make grants under this section, on a competitive basis as specified in section 102 of the Department of Housing and Urban Development Reform Act of 1989 (42 U.S.C. 3545), only to eligible public entities (as such term is defined in section 108(o) of this title) and Indian tribes for carrying out projects and activities to assist the development and redevelopment of brownfield sites, which shall include mine-scarred lands.

''(b) USE OF GRANT AMOUNTS.—Amounts from grants under this section—

''(1) shall be used, as provided in subsection (a) of this section, only for activities specified in section 105(a) in connection with a brownfield site;

''(2) shall be subject to the same requirements that, under section 101(c) and paragraphs (2) and (3) of section 104(b), apply to grants under section 106; and

''(3) shall not be provided or used in a manner that reduces the financial responsibility of any nongovernmental party that is responsible or potentially responsible for contamination on any real property and the provision of assistance pursuant to this section shall not in any way relieve any party of liability with respect to such contamination, including liability for removal and remediation costs.

''(c) AVAILABILITY OF ASSISTANCE.—The Secretary shall not require, for eligibility for a grant under this section, that such grant amounts be used only in connection or conjunction with projects and activities assisted with a loan guaranteed under section 108.

''(d) APPLICATIONS.—Applications for assistance under this subsection shall be in the form and in accordance with the procedures established by the Secretary.

''(e) SELECTION CRITERIA.—

''(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall establish criteria for awarding assistance under this subsection.

''(2) CRITERIA.—The criteria established under paragraph (1) shall include—

''(A) the extent of need for such assistance;

''(B) the level of distress in the community to be served and in the jurisdiction applying for assistance;

''(C) the quality of the plan proposed and the capacity or potential capacity of the applicant to successfully carry out the plan; and

''(D) such other factors as the Secretary determines to be appropriate.

''(f) DEFINITION OF BROWNFIELD SITE.—For purposes of this section, the term 'brownfield site'—

''(1) has the meaning given such term in section 101(39) of the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act of 1980 (42 U.S.C. 9601(39)); and

''(2) includes a site that meets the requirements under subparagraph (D) of such section for inclusion as a brownfield site for purposes of section 104(k) of such Act (42 U.S.C. 9604(k)).

''(g) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated for grants under this section $50,000,000, for each of fiscal years 2007, 2008, 2009, 2010, and 2011.''.

SEC. 4. TECHNICAL AMENDMENT TO ALLOW USE OF CDBG FUNDS TO ADMINISTER RENEWAL COMMUNITIES.

Section 105(a)(13) of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974 (42 U.S.C. 5305(a)(13)) is amended by inserting ''and renewal communities'' after ''enterprise zones''.

SEC. 5. APPLICABILITY.

The amendments made by this Act shall apply only with respect to amounts made available for fiscal year 2007 and fiscal years thereafter for use under the provisions of law amended by this Act.

Mrs. DOLE. Mr. President, across North Carolina and our Nation, many local communities face the challenge of what to do with blighted lands where factories and businesses once thrived. Though abandoned, these sites still hold great promise for prosperity. In fact, around the country, deserted, contaminated industrial facilities, called brownfields, are being reclaimed, cleaned up and redeveloped. Communities are partnering with the private sector and State and Federal agencies to turn brownfields into productive sites that promote economic growth and job creation.

With nearly 1 million brownfields remaining in the United States, we need to strengthen these important public-private partnerships. That is why I am very pleased to introduce the Brownfields Redevelopment Enhancement Act with my colleagues, Senators MARTINEZ, LEVIN, REED, VOINOVICH, and JEFFORDS. This legislation will enable more local communities to use grant funding from the Department of Housing and Urban Development's Brownfields Economic Development Initiative, BEDI, program to literally unearth opportunity.

For several years, HUD has provided more than $200 million to local governments in BEDI grants of up to $3 million to support demolition, site clearance, site preparation, infrastructure upgrades, and redevelopment activities that are needed to transform brownfields into productive sites once again. This HUD support for brownfields projects is critical because redevelopment requires more than the environmental assessment and cleanup funding that is provided by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

BEDI grants generate tremendous private investment in brownfields redevelopment. In fact, every dollar in BEDI grant funding generates 10 dollars in private sector support for brownfields projects. Still, these funds could be provided in a much more effective way. Currently BEDI grants are available only if they are coupled with HUD section 108 loan guarantees, typically in a high loan-to-grant ratio. These section 108 loans must be backed and collateralized by the local government's future allocations of HUD community development block grant, CDBG, funds. This requirement is unworkable for many communities. For smaller localities that do not have an entitlement to CDBG funds, BEDI funds are very difficult to obtain. And larger CDBG entitlement communities also have great difficulty in obtaining BEDI funding, either because they have reached their allowable CDBG borrowing limit or because the demand for scarce CDBG funding is so great.

The legislation we introduce today would amend the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974 by untying the BEDI program from the requirement to obtain Section 108 loans, thus making BEDI funding more accessible for communities large and small. The legislation also would authorize $50 million in annual HUD grant funding for brownfields projects.

Communities around the country, including many in my home State of North Carolina, would benefit tremendously from this adjustment in BEDI grant requirements. For example, Wilson, N.C. wants to clean up and redevelop 30 acres of vacant tobacco warehouses in the downtown district. But because Wilson is not a CDBG entitlement community, these BEDI funds currently are unattainable under the section 108 requirement. And in Winston-Salem, city leaders seek to make a corridor of underutilized brownfield land into part of the Piedmont Triad Research Park, a global center for life science and medical technology. Winston-Salem, though a CDBG entitlement city, cannot access any additional BEDI funding because the city is nearing its CDBG debt guarantee limit. The legislation we propose today would remove these barriers for places like Wilson and Winston-Salem and enable our communities to turn great visions for economic development into reality.

The House of Representatives has already approved a similar measure to spur brownfields cleanup, and this legislation is broadly supported by many localities and private sector organizations, including the U.S. Conference of Mayors, the National Association of Development Organizations, the National Association of Local Government Environmental Professionals, the National Association of Homebuilders, the Associated General Contractors of America, the National Association of Industrial and Office Properties, the National Brownfield Association, the Real Estate Roundtable, the National Association of Real Estate Investment Trusts, and North Carolina-based Cherokee Investment Partners.

With such strong support—in Congress and in communities across the Nation—for this improvement to the BEDI program, I urge the Senate to act swiftly on this legislation. Brownfields revitalization projects are models of successful public-private partnering, and we at the Federal level must do our part to encourage and enable these endeavors to continue.

By Mr. REID:

S. 3621. A bill to permit certain local law enforcement officers to carry firearms on aircraft; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I rise today to reintroduce legislation I originally introduced last Congress, a bill to make air travel safer by allowing local law enforcement to carry their firearms on aircrafts, the Safer Skies Act of 2006.

This legislation is needed to increase the safety of our airplanes, as well as to make it easier for local law enforcement to travel across the county. Whether on official travel or personal travel, Federal law enforcement officers are allowed to carry firearms with them throughout their flights. The legislation I am introducing today would extend the same privilege—and responsibility—to local law enforcement officers.

Ever since the horrific terrorist attacks that occurred on September 11, 2001, we have seen how our local emergency responders, including local law enforcement officers, play a vital role in protecting not just their local communities, but the entire Nation. Hurricanes Katrina and Rita are the most recent examples. We think of local law enforcement officers as our Nation's first responders, but they are also the Nation's early preventers. They are the first to identify local crimes that could turn into national attacks. They are the first to report suspicious behavior that could thwart a future terrorist attack. And they are the ones who can keep our nation safe by stopping a terrorist threat before it becomes an attack. Their eyes, ears and experience are critical to our national security, and that includes on airplanes.

Hundreds, thousands of police officers use the Nation's airlines each day. Authorizing certain qualified local police officers to carry their weapons onto planes, whether on or off duty, will give airline personal access to additional assistance if needed. The unique, long-term training in handling various disturbances including hostage situations, barricaded subjects, drunken persons and the mentally ill will provide added security to our Nation's flights and enhance passenger safety. Authorizing qualified local officers to carry their duty weapons on aircrafts is a way to be proactive in enhancing the security of our Nation's air travel. It will also have a deterrent effect on potential hijackers, knowing their may be more armed law enforcement on any given flight.

A terrorist attack in any city is a national concern. Local law enforcement officers are a crucial element of the plan to protect our Nation. I want to thank the Las Vegas Police Protective Association and the National Association of Police Organizations for their support of this important legislation. In particular, I would like to thank Detective David Kallas, Executive Director Las Vegas Police Protective Association, Detectives Chris Collins and Michelle Jotz, and John Dean Harper for their input and advice.

With their help, we have produced legislation that will keep our country safe, by giving law enforcement the standing they deserve as they continue to protect our hometowns and the nation. I ask unanimous consent that both this letter of support from the National Association of Police Organizations and the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the text of the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the ''Safer Skies Act of 2006''.

SEC. 2. AUTHORITY OF LOCAL LAW ENFORCEMENT OFFICERS TO CARRY FIREARMS ON AIRCRAFT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subchapter I of chapter 449 of title 49, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''§ 44926. Authority of local law enforcement officers to carry firearms on aircraft

''(a) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 30 days after the date of the enactment of the Safer Skies Act of 2006, the Under Secretary of Transportation for Security shall prescribe regulations that permit qualified local law enforcement officers to carry accessible weapons while onboard an aircraft to the same extent and subject to the same limits as Federal law enforcement officers are permitted under section 1544.219 of title 49, Code of Federal Regulations, or any successor regulation.

''(b) QUALIFIED LOCAL LAW ENFORCEMENT OFFICER.—In this section, the term 'qualified local law enforcement officer' means any full-time State or local enforcement officer, whether or not on official travel, who—

''(1) is a direct employee of a government agency that—

''(A) employs more than 400 employees; and

''(B) is accredited by a nationally recognized law enforcement accreditation program;

''(2) is armed in accordance with an agency-wide policy established by the employing agency by directive or policy statement; and

''(3) otherwise complies with the requirements relating to Federal law enforcement officers.''.

(b) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of sections for chapter 449 of title 49, United States Code, is amended by inserting after the item related to section 44925 the following:

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF POLICE ORGANIZATIONS, INC.,
Washington, DC, June 29, 2006.

Hon. HARRY REID,
U.S. Senate,
Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR REID: On behalf of the National Association of Police Organizations (NAPO), representing 238,000 rank-and-file police officers from across the United States, I would like thank you for introducing the ''Safer Skies Act of 2006,'' and advise you of our support for the legislation. If enacted, this legislation would provide additional protection to those flying our nation's skies by permitting qualified local law enforcement officers to carry accessible weapons while onboard an aircraft.

NAPO was actively involved in fighting for the passage of the ''Law Enforcement Officers' Safety Act,'' which rightly allows off-duty and retired police officers to carry their firearms for the protection of themselves, their families and our nation's communities. NAPO stands by this law and firmly believes that allowing an officer the right to carry an accessible weapon on a plane is a natural and appropriate extension of this law.

''Safer Skies Act of 2006'' is necessary and beneficial for the general welfare of the public, especially after the events of September 11, 2001. NAPO supports the bill and looks forward to working with you to expand its coverage in the future. Ultimately, we feel it is important to include all of our nation's law enforcement officers in order to provide greater protection to the officers and our nation's citizens flying the American skies. If you have any questions, please feel free to contact me, or NAPO's Legislative Assistant, Andrea Mournighan.

Sincerely,

WILLIAM J. JOHNSON,
Executive Director.

By Mr. CORNYN (for himself and Mr. COLEMAN):

S. 3622. A bill to authorize the President to negotiate the creation of a North American Investment Fund between the Governments of Canada, of Mexico, and of the United States to increase the economic competitiveness of North America in a global economy; to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. CORNYN. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce legislation—previously introduced in the 108th Congress—which I believe is important to the long-term competitiveness of North America. And I would like to thank my distinguished colleague, Mr. COLEMAN, for his support and recognition of the value of this legislation. He is an original co-sponsor of the bill, and I look forward to working with him and others to ensure its success.

Currently, a significant development gap exists between Mexico and the United States and Canada. I believe it is in our best interests to find creative ways to bridge this development gap.

As my colleagues undoubtedly are aware, Mexico will elect a new President this weekend. When President Fox was elected in 2000 it was a watershed event for Mexico because the election was fair and the transfer of power was peaceful. I hope that the same fair, peaceful process takes place this weekend. So I wish all the candidates well and I look forward to working with the new Administration and the new Congress on issues of mutual importance to our countries.

Considered in the context of history, Mexico has—particularly within the past decade—made significant strides related to its system of government and its trade policies. However, much work remains to be done, and I think it is important that we explore ways to help our neighbor move their development efforts to the next level, to assist them as they continue on a path of prosperity and growth.

I have come to view the creation of a North American Investment Fund as both central to our relationship with Mexico and necessary to ensure the economic prosperity of North America as part of an ever-changing and growing global economy. I hope that this legislation will be a useful vehicle to help jump-start discussions on this very important topic.

My bill authorizes the President to negotiate the creation of a North American Investment Fund with the governments of Canada and Mexico. The fund can only be created if Mexico satisfies two conditions.

First, the Government of Mexico must raise tax revenue to 18 percent of the gross domestic product of Mexico. Their current tax rate is approximately 9 percent.

Second, Mexico must develop and execute a program of economic reforms to increase private investment and economic growth, while also maintaining economic stability in Mexico.

These steps are of the utmost importance because any lasting changes in Mexico must start from within.

The purpose of this fund is to reinforce efforts already underway in Mexico to ensure their own economic development. The funding would make grants available for projects to construct roads in Mexico to facilitate trade, to develop and expand their education programs, to build infrastructure for the deployment of communications services and to improve job training and workforce development for high-growth industries.

As I have mentioned on several occasions, I have heard from Mexico leaders who say they want desperately to ''export goods and services, not people'' to our country. Well, I think we all recognize that opportunity in one's home country and immigration are linked, and I believe we should be more involved in helping to promote the strength and stability of our neighbors.

Development provides a positive and stabilizing influence on economies, on government institutions, and also on immigration. We've seen, in past years, a steady flow of immigrants—particularly undocumented workers—coming across our borders. A vast number of these immigrants are here to work hard so they can send money home to their families and relatives. They may be well-intentioned, but at the same time, these hard workers are doing nothing to help their own economies.

Mexico does not want the most entrepreneurial members of its society to permanently leave. What it wants most of all is for economic development to grow in their region, so that citizens would have real opportunities to stay and grow the economy there. But with the entrepreneurs and risk-takers coming to the United States, Mexico cannot hope to improve its own economy.

Economic growth creates new jobs and raises incomes. This growth lifts people out of poverty even as it spurs positive economic reform. The potential for good is nearly limitless; as with such a fund we could spur sustainable development, strengthen private property rights, while also encouraging competition, regional integration, the open flow of technology.

So the best solution for all of us is a Mexico economy that is vibrant—and one important way is to ensure its continued development of infrastructure and resources. The legislation I am proposing today would encourage this development, and I urge my colleagues to support it.

I have no illusions that Congress will move quickly to approve the idea of a North American Investment Fund. In fact, I think it will likely take some time to make our case regarding the important role this fund would play in helping spur much-needed reforms in Mexico. But this investment in Mexico's future will only serve to contribute to a more stable and prosperous North America, which should be a goal we all work to actively support.

It is important that we consider not only what is immediately feasible, but also what is ultimately desirable—the ultimate goal—in terms of the relationship between our three countries, and so I urge my colleagues to cosponsor this important legislation.

By Ms. LANDRIEU:

S. 3626. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to provide estate tax relief and reform, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Finance.

Ms. LANDRIEU. Mr. President, this is a bill that will reduce the estate tax and reform a system that needs to be reformed. It is an issue that many of us have been working on for several—not only several months but for several years. Leaders on both sides of the aisle and Members on both sides of the aisle have been trying to come up with a compromise position that would be respectful of the fiscal situation of our country and also mindful that this tax in its current form, at least the rates and the way it is applied in its current form, can simply not be sustained. It makes no sense for this tax to be in place 1 year and go completely away the next year and then come back in the next year at a completely different rate.

We have been trying to make this much more simple for taxpayers who have to comply with it and much more fair so that it is not a discouragement for people who want to start businesses at later years. We want to try to be fair to the Federal Treasury and to the many demands.

At one point, I supported the total repeal of this tax. That one time was when we were running a surplus and before we were engaged in the wars in Afghanistan and Iraq. The war in Iraq is costing this country approximately $4 billion to $6 billion a month. It has been going on for 3 years. Unfortunately, there does not seem to be an end in sight because things are not going as well as many of us had hoped. We must continue to make a priority of this Nation supporting our men and women in uniform—whether they are here at home or in Iraq in the frontline or in Afghanistan in the frontline or other frontlines around the world. So we simply cannot afford to repeal this tax. It takes too much money out of the Treasury at a time when we need it to support our troops. Most Americans, regardless of how they feel about the war, realize we need the money to support our troops and keep them safe and help bring them home as soon as possible.

I offer this bill in the spirit of compromise. Hopefully, it will give some guidance to those who may be looking for something they can support, that costs significantly less than what Chairman THOMAS has proposed, what Senator KYL has proposed, and what others have proposed, yet gives that assurance to businesses that they will not have to pay a fluctuating rate.

The most important thing I think my bill does is it completely eliminates the estate tax for 99.9 percent of the people in Louisiana and a great percentage of people throughout the country. If you are an estate of less than $10 million, you will pay no tax. If you are a single person with $5 million or an estate worth $10 million, you have to pay income tax, you will pay capital gains tax, you will pay payroll tax, you will pay a lot of other taxes that come with the rights and privileges of being an American citizen, but you will not pay an estate tax. Only those estates over $10 million will pay the tax. And those over $100 million—which I would call superstates—would pay a little more than those that are in the middle.

As a Democrat and as a Senator, I believe in a free enterprise system where people can make money and benefit from their hard work. We need to balance between the individual's right to keep as much money as they can make and the Nation's needs to conduct wars, to protect our borders, to protect our coasts, to build our highway system—which is 50 years old today and certainly did not get built on a wish and a prayer. It got built with good design, good political will, and a lot of money that went into building that highway system that we can be proud of. It needs to be improved.

So for those who say every American should be able to keep all the money they make, I don't know who would keep the public sector that does so much good—from the men and women in uniform, to building the highways, to keeping our air clean and water clean, and other things that we depend on Government to help operate and collect in a sensible way.

I offer this in a spirit of compromise. It is something I certainly can support, and I look forward to working with my colleagues as we move through this recess to come to terms with something that is fiscally responsible and also cognizant of trying to get this tax leveled so people can plan on what they are going to have to pay and it will not become a burden on anyone and so everyone can plan, even those with a great deal of money.

By Mr. OBAMA:

S. 3627. A bill to prohibit the Department of Defense and the Department of Energy from selling, distributing, or transferring elemental mercury, to prohibit the export of elemental mercury, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

Mr. OBAMA. Mr. President, last December, the Chicago Tribune published an in-depth report on the extent of mercury contamination in the fish eaten by the American people.

As I am sure my colleagues know, mercury is a potent neurotoxin that can cause serious developmental problems in children, ranging from severe birth defects to mental retardation. As many as 630,000 children born annually in the U.S. are at risk of neurological problems related to mercury.

In adults, mercury can cause major neurological problems affecting vision, motor skills, blood pressure and fertility. As many as 10 percent of women in the U.S. of childbearing age have mercury in their blood at a level that could put a baby at risk.

Mercury, in short, is a poison, and it often reaches humans through the fish that we eat.

Sampling conducted by the Tribune showed surprisingly high levels of mercury concentrations in freshwater and saltwater fish purchased by Chicago area consumers—fish like tuna, swordfish, orange roughy, and walleye. The Tribune series also reported on how existing programs at the Food and Drug Administration and the Environmental Protection Agency have failed to adequately test and evaluate mercury levels in fish.

As someone who regularly eats fish, I was surprised at the range of species with high mercury levels in the Tribune tests. Fish is an excellent source of nutrients and other compounds indispensable for good health. More of us should eat more fish. But for all Americans—and especially pregnant women and other at-risk groups—there are risks to eating fish with high mercury levels. That's why we need to work harder to get at the root causes of mercury contamination.

You see, the long-term solution isn't eating less fish, or issuing consumption advisories, or printing labels on tuna cans, or posting placards at the supermarket. If we're really serious about making fish safer to eat, we need to reduce the amount of mercury in fish, which means reducing the amount of mercury used in industry.

But, the solution can't be just a U.S. one. Half of mercury settles near where it is emitted and the other half gets transported around the globe—often settling in oceans, lakes, and rivers nowhere near mercury sources. For that reason, we need a comprehensive, global strategy, and the two bills I am introducing today are designed to be part of that strategy.

My first bill, the Mercury Market Minimization Act, or M3 Act, establisbes a ban on U.S. exports of mercury by the year 2010. Such a ban, when coupled with a European Union proposal to ban mercury exports by 2011, will constrain global supply of commercially available mercury in sufficient quantities that developing nations that still use mercury will be compelled to switch to affordable alternatives to mercury that are already widespread in industrialized nations.

My second bill, the Missing Mercury in Manufacturing Monitoring and Mitigation Act, or M5 Act, requires the remaining eight of more than 30 chlor-alkali plants in the United States to complete the transition from mercury to alternative technologies.

Chlor-alkali facilities manufacture chlorine gas and caustic soda, important chemicals that serve as the building blocks of many of the products and plastics essential to modem everyday life. For decades, mercury was a key component in the chlorine process, but today, more than 90 percent of the chlor-alkali industry has switched to an alternative catalyst. Only eight chlor-alkali plants remain in the U.S.

that still use mercury. The chlorine industry has instituted voluntary policies to help capture and reduce mercury missions into the atmosphere—with laudable success. The time has come, however, to finish these upgrades and end the use of mercury in the chlor-alkali process.

The amount of mercury emitted or lost by these eight chlor-alkali plants rivals the amount of mercury emitted by all of the coal-fired plants in the United States. In 2003, the average chlor-alkali facility released 1,055 lbs. of mercury into the air—six times as much as the 183 lbs. of mercury released by the average coal-fired powerplant. And it is likely that the actual amount of mercury released by chlor-alkali plants is even higher because of emissions that escape through unmonitored ventilation systems and other leaks.

The M5 Act also solves another gap in the current system; it puts procedures in place to track and report mercury input and output statistics in the chlor-alkali industry. The evidence suggests that between 2000 and 2004, the industry could not account for more than 130 tons of mercury, in addition to the 29 tons that were released into the environment. The EPA calls this ''an enigma.'' The M5 Act puts an end to this enigma and requires documented tracking of mercury.

Although this bill deals with chlor-alkali plants, it's important to acknowledge that coal-fired powerplants are a significant contributor to the mercury in our atmosphere. We must continue to pursue balanced policies that address those emissions, but our policy approaches on mercury cannot single out coal-fired power plants alone. In truth, the largest source of global mercury contamination is the continued worldwide use of mercury in developing countries, particularly in gold mining and general industry, even thought there are proven and economically viable mercury substitutes.

Mr. President, I believe these two bills will go a long ways towards improving the health of the American people. I urge the swift enactment of these bills.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the text of the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 3627

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the ''Missing Mercury in Manufacturing Monitoring and Mitigation Act''.

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

Congress finds that—

(1) mercury and mercury compounds are highly toxic to humans, ecosystems, and wildlife;

(2) as many as 10 percent of women in the United States of childbearing age have mercury in their bloodstreams at a level that could pose risks to their unborn babies, and as many as 630,000 children born annually in the United States are at risk of neurological problems relating to mercury exposure in utero;

(3) the most significant source of mercury exposure to people in the United States is ingestion of mercury-contaminated fish;

(4) the Environmental Protection Agency reports that, as of 2004, as a result of mercury contamination—

(A) 44 States have fish advisories covering more than 13,000,000 lake acres and more than 750,000 river miles;

(B) in 21 States, the freshwater fish advisories are statewide; and

(C) in 12 States, the coastal fish advisories are statewide;

(5) the long-term solution to mercury pollution is to minimize global mercury use and releases of mercury to eventually achieve reduced contamination levels in the environment, rather than reducing fish consumption, since uncontaminated fish represents a critical and healthy source of nutrition for people worldwide;

(6) an estimated additional 24,000 to 30,000 tons of mercury are used at mercury cell chlor-alkali plants worldwide;

(7) mercury pollution is a transboundary pollutant that—

(A) is deposited locally, regionally, and globally; and

(B) affects bodies of water near industrial areas, such as the Great Lakes, as well as bodies of water in remote areas, such as the Arctic Circle;

(8)(A) of the approximately 30 plants in the United States that produce chlorine, only 8 use the obsolete ''mercury cell'' chlor-alkali process; and

(B) the 8 plants described in subparagraph (A) that use the mercury cell chlor-alkali process release or lose a quantity of mercury that rivals the mercury emissions of all coal-fired power plants in the United States;

(9)(A) only about 10 percent of the total quantity of chlorine and caustic soda produced comes from the chlor-alkali plants described in paragraph (8) that use the mercury cell chlor-alkali process; and

(B) cost-effective alternatives are available and in use in the remaining 90 percent of chlorine and caustic soda production, and other countries, including Japan, have already banned the mercury cell chlor-alkali process;

(10) as of the date of enactment of this Act, the chlor-alkali industry in the United States possesses approximately 2,500 tons of mercury at facilities using the mercury cell process and historically has used substantially greater quantities of mercury because many more facilities in the past used the mercury cell process;

(11) the chlor-alkali industry acknowledges that—

(A) mercury can contaminate products manufactured at mercury cell facilities; and

(B) the use of some of those products results in the direct and indirect release of mercury;

(12) despite those quantities of mercury known to have been used or to be in use, the chlor-alkali industry and the Environmental Protection Agency have failed—

(A) to adequately account for the disposition of the mercury used at those facilities; and

(B) to accurately estimate current mercury emissions; and

(13) it is critically important that the United States work aggressively toward the monitoring and mitigation of domestically-used mercury.

SEC. 3. STATEMENT OF POLICY.

Congress declares that the United States should develop policies and programs that will—

(1) reduce mercury use and emissions within the United States;

(2) reduce mercury releases from the reservoir of mercury currently in use or circulation within the United States; and

(3) reduce exposures to mercury, particularly exposures of women of childbearing age and young children.

''Sec. 6A. Use of mercury in chlorine and caustic soda manufacturing.''.

By Ms. SNOWE (for herself, Mrs. FEINSTEIN, and Mr. KERRY):

S. 3628. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to improve and extend certain energy-related tax provisions, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Finance.

Ms. SNOWE. Mr. President, today I am introducing another piece of legislation with Senator FEINSTEIN that addresses the critical issue of the Nation's energy policy, the EXTEND the Energy Efficiency Incentives Act of 2006. The Senator from California and I have come together once again—given where we are as a Nation in terms of reliance on foreign oil, the historically high costs of energy, the state of our environment, and the status of our technological know-how—to introduce realistic, doable legislation that represents one of the best opportunities for developing bipartisan consensus on tax policy to further securing our Nation and its future.

The EXTEND Act, also cosponsored by Senator KERRY, takes a comprehensive and practical approach to assure that America gets the maximum possible energy savings and relief from high energy prices at the lowest cost. It builds on the incentives for efficient buildings adopted in the Energy Policy Act of 2005, EPAct 2005, and modifies them where necessary to achieve these policy goals.

The bill extends the temporary tax incentives for energy efficiency buildings established in EPAct 2005, providing 4 years of assured incentives for most situations, and some additional time for projects with particularly long lead times, such as commercial buildings. A sufficient length of time is needed by the business community to make rational investments. The bill is meant to incentivize not discourage. I want to encourage businesses to make investments to qualify for energy efficiency tax incentives. Commercial buildings and large residential subdivisions have lead times for planning and construction of 2 to 4 years. This is why the EXTEND Act provides 4 years of assured incentives for most situations, and some additional time for projects with long lead times.

I am pleased to have the support of Finance Committee Chairman GRASSLEY for crafting the correct policy for large-scale commercial projects, recognizing that these large commercial building projects take years to design and build. As a mater of fact, I entered into a colloquy with the chairman the day EPAct 2005 passed the Senate and received his assurance that he will continue to work with me to make this a long-term policy of the Tax Code.

Also, the EXTEND Act makes modifications to the EPAct 2005 incentives so that the incentives are not based on cost but based on actual performance. These are measured by on-site ratings for whole buildings and factory ratings for products like solar water heaters and photovoltaic systems as well as air conditioners, furnaces, and water heaters. The EXTEND bill provides a transition from the EPAct 2005 retrofit incentives, which are based partially on cost and partially on performance, to a new system that can provide larger dollar amounts of incentives based truly on performance.

The Snowe-Feinstein legislation also extends the applicability of the EPAct 2005 incentives so that the entire commercial and residential building sectors are covered. The current EPAct 2005 incentives for new homes are limited to owner-occupied properties or high rise buildings. Our bill extends these provisions to rental property and offers incentives whether the owner is an individual taxpayer or a corporation. This extension does not increase costs significantly, but it does provide greater fairness and clearer market signals to builders and equipment manufacturers.

I have worked hard over the past 5 years for performance-based energy tax incentives for commercial buildings—one-third of energy usage is from the building sector, so there are great energy savings to be made with the extension of these incentives. My energy efficiency tax incentives provisions for commercial buildings that came to fruition in the EPAct 2005 were tasked to Treasury to promulgate regulations to harmonize with the law. On June 2, 2006, the Internal Revenue Service issued guidance on how to comply with section 179D of the Internal Revenue Code establishing a deduction for commercial buildings that achieve a reduction in energy consumption of 50 percent.

Unfortunately, the guidance is inadequate, according to energy efficiency experts, which may stem from the fact that we are into some uncharted territory and there may be a basic lack of understanding of what it takes to make energy efficiency tax incentives work, and specifically those based on performance, not cost. It is critical that the IRS guidance is written correctly so as to actually incentivize greater energy efficiencies while making sure any guidance promotes the best use of taxpayer dollars. I brought these issues to the attention of the now Secretary of the Treasury Paulson at his nomination hearing in the Senate Finance Committee on June 27, and I look forward to working with his people at Treasury to resolve these important issues relating to the IRS guidance.

It is reasonable to expect many annual benefits after 10 years if we put into place the appropriate incentives. For instance, direct savings of natural gas would amount to 2 quads per year or 7 percent of total projected natural gas use in 2017. And, to this figure must be added the indirect gas savings from reduced use of gas as an electricity generation fuel. Total natural gas savings would be 35 quads per year, or 12 percent of natural gas supply. Total electric peak power savings would be 115,000 megawatts; almost 12 percent of projected nationwide electric capacity for the year 2017.

In addition, reduction in greenhouse gas emissions would be 330 million metric tons of carbon dioxide annually, about 16 percent of the carbon emissions reductions compared to the base case necessary to bring the U.S. into compliance with the Kyoto Protocol; or roughly 5 percent of projected U.S. emissions in 2017. Also, importantly, the bill will result in the creation, on net, of over 800,000 new jobs.

The value of energy savings should not be overlooked as both business and residential consumers will be saving over $50 billion annually in utility bills by 2017, as a direct result of the reductions in energy consumption induced by the appropriate incentives. Also, the projected decrease in natural gas prices will be saving businesses and households over an additional $30 billion annually.

I would also like to take this opportunity to comment on the Feinstein-Snowe 10 in 10 CAFE standards legislation introduced this past week as the bill is yet another piece for solving the Nation's energy crisis.

The ten in ten measure is straightforward—we increase the average mileage of each company's vehicles fleet by 10 miles per gallon in 10 years—10 in 10. This would save 2.5 million barrels of oil a day by 2025—the same amount we currently import daily from the Persian Gulf—while eliminating 420 million metric tons of carbon dioxide emissions, a climate change-causing greenhouse gas, from entering the atmosphere.

Certainly, we ought to be able to at least meet these goals. Yet, thus far, Congress and the administration have regrettably sent exactly the wrong message at a time when we have already witnessed a crisis—and that is, a ''can't do'' attitude, rather than the ''can do'' spirit that has defined progress in America since our fledgling days as a nation. We have the means, we have seen the demonstrated necessity, we possess the entrepreneurial spirit, what exactly is there left not to get?

There should be no question that increasing fuel economy standards an average of 1 mile per gallon across a manufacturer's fleet for the next 10 years is a challenge to which this country can rise—in fact, it is long overdue. We are long past the point of watching and waiting it out while the U.S. auto makers dither—Congress has a responsibility to provide leadership on this issue by refusing to accept the notion that ''this is as good as it gets.''

We must reject the administration's request that we just cede to the Department of Transportation our statutory authority to reform CAFE standards for passenger cars—especially as DOT has had the opportunity to increase CAFE standards for SUVs, minivans, and light pickups, but only incrementally increased the miles per gallon to 22.2 mpg by model year 2007 that is an increase of less than 1 mile per gallon. This minimal increase will save less than 2 weeks worth of gasoline each year for the next 2 decades. We can do better and under our legislation we will do better.

A wide variety of experts, including some of those who took part in the 2001 congressionally mandated National Academy of Sciences report on CAFE standards, agree that the most effective action we could take today to decrease the price of gasoline is to increase fuel economy standards for all vehicles—passenger cars and light trucks. Yet the only time we raised fuel economy standards for passenger cars was back in 1976. Think about it—in 1976, our computers were about the size of cars—and now we hold them in the palm of our hand—are we really saying the United States of America doesn't have the technological wherewithal to provide 10 more miles-per-gallon over the next 10 years, at a time when the transportation sector accounts for fully 40 percent of all the Nation's fossil fuel consumption?

Morever, we give manufacturers the flexibility to develop an entire fleet that accomplishes the overall fuel economy standard in the most cost-effective manner—it can be done and it must be done. And with a third of American drivers now considering trading their current vehicle for another that gets great fuel economy, frankly, if our auto makers had embraced higher fuel economy standards when our SUV loophole bill was first introduced in 2001, or way back in the early 1990s when an increase in CAFE was a compelling argument for that decade's energy bill, perhaps the U.S. industry would be in better shape today. Consumers certainly would be.

And how can there be any question—at this time when our reliance on foreign oil has skyrocketed from 44 percent 3 decades ago to 72 percent this year—and prices hover at near historic highs of $70 per barrel—that we must take a page from America's greatest quests—like putting a man on the Moon—to finally reduce our consumption of precious fossil fuels. We are financing the ambitions of radical leaders in some of the most volatile regions of the world to supply the energy to power America's future. This makes no sense—not when our bill, through its resulting fuel savings, would effectively develop Middle Eastern oil production within our own country within just the next 19 years.

Mr. President, these two bills, the EXTEND Act and the 10 in 10 Act, are synonymous with the security of America's future. These bills are two pieces of an overall national energy picture that we need to address now. Consumers throughout the United States, from small businesses to families, are demanding leadership on energy prices. Congress should advance past rhetoric, gimmicks, and photo-ops and move to substantive legislation such as the EXTEND Act and the 10 in 10 CAFE bill. It is imperative that Congress begin these policy discussions—we cannot wait for yet another crisis.

I look forward to working with my Senate colleagues and the administration to provide the American people the leadership they deserve on these issues.

Mr. CORNYN (for himself and Mr. ROBERTS) submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary:

S. RES. 524

Whereas on June 22, 2006, news organizations publicly disclosed the existence of an ongoing, highly classified national security program to track terrorists' financial transactions, known formally as the ''Terrorist Finance Tracking Program'';

Whereas the President condemned the unauthorized leak and subsequent publication in the strongest possible terms, calling those acts ''disgraceful'' and explaining that public disclosure of the Terrorist Finance Tracking Program ''does great harm to the United States of America'';

Whereas the Secretary of the Treasury noted that this unauthorized leak of classified information and subsequent publication ''undermined a highly successful counter-terrorism program and alerted terrorists to the methods and sources used to track their money trails'';

Whereas similar to the leaks and public disclosure of the National Security Agency's Terrorist Surveillance Program, the disclosure of the Terrorist Finance Tracking Program puts America's terrorist enemies on notice of tactics used to hunt them down and makes defending against further terrorist attacks more difficult;

Whereas Administration officials and the co-chairmen of the 9/11 Commission (a Democrat and a Republican) urged news organizations to refrain from publicly disclosing the existence of the Terrorist Finance Tracking Program because of the probable harm to America's national security;

Whereas there have been no credible allegations of abuse or infringements on civil liberties in the execution of the Terrorist Finance Tracking Program;

Whereas the 9/11 Commission in its Final Report concluded that ''information about terrorist money helps us to understand their networks, search them, and disrupt their operations'';

Whereas the 9/11 Commission had given the Administration high marks in its pursuit of terrorist-finance networks, and recommended that ''vigorous efforts to track terrorist financing must remain front and center in U.S. counter-terrorism efforts''; and

Whereas the United States must remain vigilant in its War on Terror: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That—

(1) the Senate joins the President in condemning the damaging leaks and subsequent publication of vital national security information about the Terrorist Finance Tracking Program and the National Security Agency's Terrorist Surveillance Program; and

(2) it is the sense of the Senate that the Department of Justice should vigorously and tirelessly investigate and prosecute any and all persons responsible for the unauthorized disclosure to news organizations of the Terrorist Finance Tracking Program, the National Security Agency's Terrorist Surveillance Program, and other vital counter-terrorism programs.

NATIONAL DEFENSE AUTHORIZATION ACT FOR FISCAL YEAR 2007

On Thursday, June 22, 2006, the Senate passed S. 2766, as follows:

S. 2766

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE; FINDINGS.

(a) SHORT TITLE.—This Act may be cited as the ''John Warner National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2007''.

(b) FINDINGS.—Congress makes the following findings:

(1) Senator John Warner of Virginia was elected a member of the United States Senate on November 7, 1978, for a full term beginning on January 3, 1979. He was subsequently appointed by the Governor of Virginia to fill a vacancy on January 2, 1979, and has served continuously since that date. He was appointed a member of the Committee on Armed Services in January 1979, and has served continuously on the Committee since that date, a period of nearly 28 years. Senator Warner's service on the Committee represents nearly half of its existence since it was established after World War II.

(2) Senator Warner came to the Senate and the Committee on Armed Services after a distinguished record of service to the Nation, including combat service in the Armed Forces and high civilian office.

(3) Senator Warner enlisted in the United States Navy upon graduation from high school in 1945, and served until the summer of 1946, when he was discharged as a Petty Officer 3rd Class. He then attended Washington and Lee University on the G.I. Bill. He graduated in 1949 and entered the University of Virginia Law School.

(4) Upon the outbreak of the Korean War in 1950, Senator Warner volunteered for active duty, interrupting his education to accept a commission in the United States Marine Corps. He served in combat in Korea as a ground officer in the First Marine Air Wing. Following his active service, he remained in the Marine Corps Reserve for several years, attaining the rank of captain.

(5) Senator Warner resumed his legal education upon returning from the Korean War and graduated from the University of Virginia Law School in 1953. He was selected by the late Chief Judge E. Barrett Prettyman of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit as his law clerk. After his service to Judge Prettyman, Senator Warner became an Assistant United States Attorney in the District of Columbia, and later entered private law practice.

(6) In 1969, the Senate gave its advice and consent to the appointment of Senator Warner as Under Secretary of the Navy. He served in this position until 1972, when he was confirmed and appointed as the 61st Secretary of the Navy since the office was established in 1798. As Secretary, Senator Warner was the principal United States negotiator and signatory of the Incidents at Sea Executive Agreement with the Soviet Union, which was signed in 1972 and remains in effect today. It has served as the model for similar agreements between states covering the operation of naval ships and aircraft in international sea lanes throughout the world.

(7) Senator Warner left the Department of the Navy in 1974. His next public service was as Director of the American Revolution Bicentennial Commission. In this capacity, he coordinated the celebration of the Nation's founding, directing the Federal role in all 50 States and in over 20 foreign nations.

(8) Senator Warner has served as chairman of the Committee on Armed Services of the United States Senate from 1999 to 2001, and again since January 2003. He served as ranking minority member of the committee from 1987 to 1993, and again from 2001 to 2003. Senator Warner concludes his service as chairman at the end of the 109th Congress, but will remain a member of the committee.

(9) This Act is the twenty-eighth annual authorization act for the Department of Defense for which Senator Warner has taken a major responsibility as a member of the Committee on Armed Services of the United States Senate, and the fourteenth for which he has exercised a leadership role as chairman or ranking minority member of the committee.

(10) Senator Warner, as seaman, Marine officer, Under Secretary and Secretary of the Navy, and member, ranking minority member, and chairman of the Committee on Armed Services, has made unique and lasting contributions to the national security of the United States.

(11) It is altogether fitting and proper that his Act, the last annual authorization Act for the national defense that Senator Warner manages in and for the United States Senate as chairman of the Committee on Armed Services, be named in his honor, as provided in subsection (a).

The Secretary of the Air Force shall ensure that the number, if any, of B–52H bomber aircraft of the Air Force that is retired in fiscal year 2007 does not exceed 18 such aircraft.

SEC. 145. RETIREMENT OF B–52H BOMBER AIRCRAFT.

(a) LIMITATION ON RETIREMENT PENDING REPORT ON BOMBER FORCE STRUCTURE.—No funds authorized to be appropriated for the Department of Defense may be obligated or expended for retiring or dismantling any of the 93 B–52H bomber aircraft in service in the Air Force as of June 1, 2006, until 30 days after the Secretary of the Air Force transmits to the Committees on Armed Services of the Senate and the House of Representatives a report on the bomber force structure of the Air Force meeting the requirements of subsection (b).

(b) ELEMENTS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—A report under subsection (a) shall set forth the following:

(A) The plan of the Air Force for the modernization of the B–52H bomber aircraft fleet.

(B) The plans of the Air Force for the modernization of the balance of the bomber force structure.

(C) The amount and type of bombers in the bomber force structure that is appropriate to meet the requirements of the national security strategy of the United States.

(D) A justification of the cost and projected savings of any reductions to the B–52H bomber aircraft fleet as a result of the retirement or dismantlement of the B–52H bomber aircraft covered by the report.

(E) The life expectancy of each bomber aircraft to remain in the bomber force structure.

(F) The date by which any new bomber aircraft must reach initial operational capability and the capabilities of the bomber force structure that would be replaced or superseded by any new bomber aircraft.

(2) AMOUNT AND TYPE OF BOMBER FORCE STRUCTURE DEFINED.—In this subsection, the term ''amount and type of bomber force structure'' means the number of B–2 bomber aircraft, B–52H bomber aircraft, and B–1 bomber aircraft that are required to carry out the national security strategy of the United States.

(c) PREPARATION OF REPORT.—A report under this section shall be prepared and submitted by the Institute of Defense Analysis to the Secretary of the Air Force for transmittal by the Secretary in accordance with subsection (a).

SEC. 146. FUNDING FOR PROCUREMENT OF F–22A FIGHTER AIRCRAFT.

(a) PROHIBITION ON USE OF INCREMENTAL FUNDING.—The Secretary of the Air Force shall not use incremental funding for the procurement of F–22A fighter aircraft.

(b) MULTIYEAR PROCUREMENT.—The Secretary of the Air Force may, in accordance with section 2306b of title 10, United States Code, enter into a multiyear contract beginning with the fiscal year 2007 program year for procurement of not more than 60 F–22A fighter aircraft.

The Secretary of the Air Force may, in accordance with section 2306b of title 10, United States Code, enter into a multiyear contract beginning with the fiscal year 2007 program year for procurement of the following:

(1) Not more than 120 F–119 engines for F–22A fighter aircraft.

(2) Not more than 13 spare F–119 engines for F–22A fighter aircraft.

SEC. 148. MULTI-SPECTRAL IMAGING CAPABILITIES.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Senate makes the following findings:

(1) The budget of the President for fiscal year 2007, as submitted to Congress under section 1105(a) of title 31, United States Code, and the current Future-Years Defense Program adopts an Air Force plan to retire the remaining fleet of U–2 aircraft by 2011.

(2) This retirement would eliminate the multi-spectral capability provided by the electro-optical/infrared (EO/IR) Senior Year Electro-optical Reconnaissance System (SYERS–2) high-altitude imaging system.

(3) The system referred to in paragraph (2) provides high-resolution, long-range, day-and-night image intelligence.

(4) The infrared capabilities of the system referred to in paragraph (2) can defeat enemy efforts to use camouflage or concealment, as well as provide images through poor visibility and smoke.

(5) Although the Air Force has previously recognized the military value of Senior Year Electro-optical Reconnaissance System sensors, the Air Force has no plans to migrate this capability to any platform remaining in the fleet.

(6) The Air Force could integrate such capabilities onto the Global Hawk platform to retain this capability for combatant commanders.

(7) The Nation risks a loss of an important intelligence gathering capability if this capability is not transferred to another platform.

(b) SENSE OF SENATE.—It is the sense of the Senate that the Air Force should investigate ways to retain the multi-spectral imaging capabilities provided by the Senior Year Electro-optical Reconnaissance System high-altitude imaging system after the retirement of the U–2 aircraft fleet.

(c) REPORT REQUIREMENT.—The Secretary of the Air Force shall submit to the congressional defense committees, at the same time the budget of the President for fiscal year 2008 is submitted to Congress under section 1105(a) of title 31, United States Code, a plan for migrating the capabilities provided by the Senior Year Electro-optical Reconnaissance System high-altitude imaging system from the U–2 aircraft to the Global Hawk platform before the retirement of the U–2 aircraft fleet in 2011.

SEC. 149. MINUTEMAN III INTERCONTINENTAL BALLISTIC MISSILES.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress makes the following findings:

(1) In the Joint Explanatory Statement of the Committee of Conference on H.R. 1815, the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2006, the conferees state that the policy of the United States ''is to deploy a force of 500 ICBMs''. The conferees further note ''that unanticipated strategic developments may compel the United States to make changes to this force structure in the future.''.

(2) The Quadrennial Defense Review (QDR) conducted under section 118 of title 10, United States Code, in 2005 finds that maintaining a robust nuclear deterrent ''remains a keystone of United States national power''. However, notwithstanding that finding and without providing any specific justification for the recommendation, the Quadrennial Defense Review recommends reducing the number of deployed Minuteman III Intercontinental Ballistic Missiles (ICBMs) from 500 to 450 beginning in fiscal year 2007. The Quadrennial Defense Review also fails to identify what unanticipated strategic developments compelled the United States to reduce the Intercontinental Ballistic Missile force structure.

(3) The commander of the Strategic Command, General James Cartwright, testified before the Committee on Armed Services of the Senate that the reduction in deployment of Minuteman III Intercontinental Ballistic Missiles is required so that the 50 missiles withdrawn from the deployed force could be used for test assets and spares to extend the life of the Minuteman III Intercontinental Ballistic Missile well into the future. If spares are not modernized, the Air Force may not have sufficient replacement missiles to sustain the force size.

(b) MODERNIZATION OF INTERCONTINENTAL BALLISTIC MISSILES REQUIRED.—The Air Force shall modernize Minuteman III Intercontinental Ballistic Missiles in the United States inventory as required to maintain a sufficient supply of launch test assets and spares to sustain the deployed force of such missiles through 2030.

(c) LIMITATION ON TERMINATION OF MODERNIZATION PROGRAM PENDING REPORT.—No funds authorized to be appropriated for the Department of Defense may be obligated or expended for the termination of any Minuteman III ICBM modernization program, or for the withdrawal of any Minuteman III Intercontinental Ballistic Missile from the active force, until 30 days after the Secretary of Defense submits to the congressional defense committees a report setting forth the following:

(1) A detailed strategic justification for the proposal to reduce the Minuteman III Intercontinental Ballistic Missile force from 500 to 450 missiles, including an analysis of the effects of the reduction on the ability of the United States to assure allies and dissuade potential competitors.

(2) A detailed analysis of the strategic ramifications of continuing to equip a portion of the Minuteman III Intercontinental Ballistic Missile force with multiple independent warheads rather than single warheads as recommended by past reviews of the United States nuclear posture.

(3) An assessment of the test assets and spares required to maintain a force of 500 deployed Minuteman III Intercontinental Ballistic Missiles through 2030.

(4) An assessment of the test assets and spares required to maintain a force of 450 deployed Minuteman III Intercontinental Ballistic Missiles through 2030.

(5) An inventory of currently available Minuteman III Intercontinental Ballistic Missile test assets and spares.

(6) A plan to sustain and complete the modernization of all deployed and spare Minuteman III Intercontinental Ballistic Missiles, a test plan, and an analysis of the funding required to carry out modernization of all deployed and spare Minuteman III Intercontinental Ballistic Missiles.

(7) An assessment of whether halting upgrades to the Minuteman III Intercontinental Ballistic Missiles withdrawn from the deployed force would compromise the ability of those missiles to serve as test assets.

(8) A description of the plan of the Department of Defense for extending the life of the Minuteman III Intercontinental Ballistic Missile force beyond fiscal year 2030.

(d) REMOTE VISUAL ASSESSMENT.—

(1) ADDITIONAL AMOUNT FOR RESEARCH, DEVELOPMENT, TEST, AND EVALUATION, AIR FORCE.—The amount authorized to be appropriated by section 201(3) for research, development, test, and evaluation for the Air Force is hereby increased by $5,000,000.

(2) AVAILABILITY OF AMOUNT.—Of the amount authorized to be appropriated by section 201(3) for research, development, test, and evaluation for the Air Force, as increased by paragraph (1), $5,000,000 may be available for ICBM Security Modernization (PE #0604851) for Remote Visual Assessment for security for silos for intercontinental ballistic missiles (ICBMs).

(3) OFFSET.—The amount authorized to be appropriated by section 103(2) for procurement of missiles for the Air Force is hereby reduced by $5,000,000, with the amount of the reduction to be allocated to amounts available for the Evolved Expendable Launch Vehicle.

(e) ICBM MODERNIZATION PROGRAM DEFINED.—In this section, the term ''ICBM Modernization program'' means each of the following for the Minuteman III Intercontinental Ballistic Missile:

(1) The Guidance Replacement Program (GRP).

(2) The Propulsion Replacement Program (PRP).

(3) The Propulsion System Rocket Engine (PSRE) program.

(4) The Safety Enhanced Reentry Vehicle (SERV) program.

SEC. 352. NATIONAL ACADEMY OF SCIENCES STUDY ON HUMAN EXPOSURE TO CONTAMINATED DRINKING WATER AT CAMP LEJEUNE, NORTH CAROLINA.

(a) STUDY REQUIRED.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Navy shall enter into an agreement with the National Academy of Sciences to conduct a comprehensive review and evaluation of the available scientific and medical evidence regarding associations between pre-natal, child, and adult exposure to drinking water contaminated with trichloroethylene (TCE) and tetrachloroethylene (PCE) at Camp Lejeune, North Carolina, as well as other pre-natal, child, and adult exposures to levels of trichloroethylene and tetrachloroethylene similar to those experienced at Camp Lejeune, and birth defects or diseases and any other adverse health effects.

(2) ELEMENTS.—In conducting the review and evaluation, the Academy shall review and summarize the scientific and medical evidence and assess the strength of that evidence in establishing a link or association between exposure to trichloroethylene and tetrachloroethylene and each birth defect or disease suspected to be associated with such exposure. For each birth defect or disease reviewed, the Academy shall determine, to the extent practicable with available scientific and medical data, whether—

(A) a statistical association with such contaminant exposures exists; and

(C) The known and suspected health effects of exposure to the drinking water impacted by trichloroethylene and tetrachloroethylene at Camp Lejeune.

SEC. 353. REPORT ON AERIAL TRAINING AIRSPACE REQUIREMENTS OF THE DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress makes the following findings:

(1) Access to and use of available and unfettered aerial training airspace is critical for preserving aircrew warfighting proficiency and the ability to test, evaluate, and improve capabilities of both personnel and equipment within the most realistic training environments possible.

(2) The growth of civilian and commercial aviation traffic and the rapid expansion of commercial and general air traffic lanes across the continental United States has left few remaining areas of the country available for realistic air combat training or expansion of existing training areas.

(3) Many Military Operating Areas (MOAs) originally established in what was once open and uncongested airspace are now encroached upon by a heavy volume of commercial and general air traffic, making training more difficult and potentially hazardous.

(4) Some aerial training areas in the upper great plains, western States, and Gulf coast remain largely free from encroachment and available for increased use, expansion, and preservation for the future.

(b) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that the Department of Defense should—

(1) establish a policy to identify military aerial training areas that are projected to remain viable and free from encroachment well into the 21st century;

(2) determine aerial training airspace requirements to meet future training and airspace requirements of current and next generation military aircraft; and

(3) undertake all necessary actions in a timely manner, including coordination with the Federal Aviation Administration, to preserve and, if necessary, expand those areas of airspace to meet present and future training requirements.

(c) REPORT.—Not later than 120 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to the congressional defense committees a report setting forth a proposed plan to preserve and, if necessary, expand available aerial training airspace to meet the projected needs of the Department of Defense for such airspace through 2025.

SEC. 354. REPORT ON ACTIONS TO REDUCE DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE CONSUMPTION OF PETROLEUM-BASED FUEL.

SEC. 355. REPORTS ON WITHDRAWAL OR DIVERSION OF EQUIPMENT FROM RESERVE UNITS FOR SUPPORT OF RESERVE UNITS BEING MOBILIZED AND OTHER UNITS.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress makes the following findings:

(1) The National Guard continues to provide invaluable resources to meet national security, homeland defense, and civil emergency mission requirements.

(2) Current military operations, transnational threats, and domestic emergencies will increase the use of the National Guard for both military support to civilian authorities and to execute the military strategy of the United States.

(3) To meet the demand for certain types of equipment for continuing United States military operations, the Army has required Army National Guard Units to leave behind many items for use by follow-on forces.

(4) The Governors of every State and 2 Territories expressed concern in February 2006 that units returning from deployment overseas without adequate equipment would have trouble carrying out their homeland security and domestic disaster duties.

(5) The Department of Defense estimates that it has directed the Army National Guard to leave overseas more than 75,000 items valued at approximately $1,760,000,000 to support Operation Enduring Freedom and Operation Iraqi Freedom.

(6) Department of Defense Directive 1225.6 requires a replacement and tracking plan be developed within 90 days for equipment of the reserve components of the Armed Forces that is transferred to the active components of the Armed Forces.

(7) In October 2005, the Government Accountability Office found that the Department of Defense can only account for about 45 percent of such equipment and has not developed a plan to replace such equipment.

(8) The Government Accountability Office also found that without a completed and implemented plan to replace all National Guard equipment left overseas, Army National Guard units will likely face growing equipment shortages and challenges in regaining readiness for future missions.

(b) REPORTS ON WITHDRAWAL OR DIVERSION OF EQUIPMENT FROM RESERVE UNITS FOR SUPPORT OF RESERVE UNITS BEING MOBILIZED AND OTHER UNITS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 1007 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by inserting after section 10208 the following new section:
